

STEVENSON IS ARRESTED

Phagan Evidence Goes to Detective Burns for Inspection SLEEPING REFORMS ORDERED IN STREET CAR SERVICE

STEELS BOY NO SLAYER, DECLARES FATHER

Son, Held by Chattanooga Police,
Was in That City When the Bodies Were Found.

Wade Stevens, son of William Stevens, whose wife and daughter were murdered and whose body was found in the charred ruins of a house, seven miles southeast of Atlanta, was arrested in Chattanooga at noon today. The DeKalb County coroner's jury had recommended that the young man be arrested and held for investigation.

The Governor to-day offered a reward of $200 for the arrest of the slayer.

At almost the precise minute when Wade Stevens was arrested in Chattanooga, William Stevens, his father, having just arrived in Atlanta, made a statement to The Georgian completely exonerating the boy. The elder Stevens said his landlady, who knew Wade, had seen him in Chattanooga early Wednesday morning. This was just about the time the crime was discovered and only a few hours after its completion.

Detective John H. Black, of Atlanta, who was in Chattanooga attending to the reunion, arrested Wade Stevens in the reunion city. His wife, Chief of Police Beavers and was told to find the young man, pending the arrival of reputation papers.

Chief of Police Beavers then announced he would confer with Sheriff J. W. Dwyale County, before taking further steps.

Father Exonerated.

The father of the boy, a 50-year-old Confederate veteran, was heartbroken when he arrived in Atlanta at 10 o'clock this morning and heard for the first time of the double tragedy.

Stevens left Chattanooga at 3 o'clock this morning, but the train was delayed en route. Several friends went to the Union Depot to meet him, but he came from a rear car and left the station without meeting them.

The only information given him in Chattanooga was that his house had burned. Leaving the depot here, he went first to the office of Carson & Treaswell, who handled his wife's real estate, where he learned all the details of the fire of Carson & Treaswell and that his son, Wade Stevens, was wanted for investigation. The old veteran was dumfounded. He sat in a chair and remained silent for several minutes, then dramatically expressed belief in the innocence of the son and declared he would spend the remainder of his days hunting the slayer.

Declares Boy Is Innocent.

All have to be for now is to try to catch the murderer, he said. "I'll catch the rest of my days hunting him."

RAIL BOARD ORDERS CARS FOR RUSH CROWDS

Many Changes in Schedules Also Directed in the State Commission's Mandate.

General improvement in the street car service in Atlanta, Birmingham, the Georgia Railway and Power Company was ordered by the State Railroad Commission shortly after noon Thursday. Practically every line operated by the company is included in the list.

On May 8 Chairman Murphy Candler addressed a letter to Mr. A. K. Wright asking him to make suggestions for the betterment of the service during rush hours. This letter was replied to on May 23 by Mr. A. K. Wright, his letter going much into detail.

Suggestions made by Mr. A. K. Wright were considered at sessions of the commission Tuesday and Wednesday, during which time they were in conference with the street railway officials. It is understood that the order of the commission is agreeable to the company. The improvement of service will begin within the next few days.

Improvements Ordered.

Here are the improvements ordered:

ROUTE NO. 2—Copenhagen to West-Hey. Rearrangement of schedules so as to space the roadway between cars now operated more nearly to four minutes and secure a more even distribution of the traffic loads.

ROUTE NO. 4—Inman Park, Georgia Avenue. A three and one-half minute headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, on Inman Park, with the Georgia Avenue end provided for by increased service on Route No. 5.

ROUTE NO. 5—West Peachtree and South Pryor. Additional cars between Ninth Street, crossing on West Peachtree and Bess Street, crossing on South Pryor, so as to give during the morning and afternoon rush hours a service with five minutes' headway.

ROUTE NO. 6—Porritt Avenue and altered Avenues. Actual cars to be made during morning and afternoon rush hours, at two peak points, to be made during next five months and filed with the commission, so as to restore accurate information as to whether there is excessive congestion.

BURNS HIMSELF TO MAKE INVESTIGATION OF PHAGAN SLAYING

Noted Detective Gets Evidence Unearthed by His Operatives—Negro Conley Deeper in Suspicion—Statements Conflict in Every Instance.

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the potent information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case, which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the professed attitude of the police in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil files representing the Burns' investigation will continue and from now on under the famous detective direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J. Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. It tends to show that Tobie, who has had charge of his agency's investigation here, does not consider the case as closed.

Tobie went on to say that he emphatically forbade any further contact with him, in which he was quite in declaring Frank to be the guilty man. "I am not a Southern man, but the new way of riding cross-saddle is much preferable."

From the evidence so far gathered in the Phagan case, which is being handled by Frank, the detective said with emphasis: "That was my statement. However, I was quoted as saying outright that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place his material into the noted detective's hands from then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives as to further investigation to be outlined by him. This information but shows another link in the chain of dramatic instances which The Georgian has so ably pointed out in its attempt to follow the case, possibly the crime and the more recent incidents of Conley.

Negro Drags in Suspect, by Will cross-examination of the negro by the police in their attempt to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley has only obtained himself in jail. His admitted presence in the Phagan case, which has been the blame to Frank, has been questioned as indicating the high official declarations of employees at the pencil files that Conley is the guilty man.

BURNS HIMSELF WILL TAKE UP INVESTIGATION OF PHOENIX SLAYING CASE

Noted Detective Gets Evidence Unearthed by His Operatives--Negro Conley Deeper in Suspicion--Statements Conflict in Every Instance.

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the positive information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the procedure of the State in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil factory superintendent, the Burns' investigation will continue and from now on be under the famous detective's direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J. Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. Tobie tends to show that his agency's investigation here does not consider the case as closed.

Mr. Tobie went so far as to deny emphatically the published information with him, in which it was quoted as stating that the guilty man was "Tate Evidence of Burns' Operatives." From the evidence so far developed in the Phagan case, quite as developed at Frank's trial, the detective said with emphasis, "I was quoted as saying that I thought that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Mr. Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place the material into the noted detective's hands.

From then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives in further investigations to be outlined by him. This information that proves another link in the chain of evidence, places which the Georgian has consistently pointed out in various intimations of Conley.

Negro Deeper in Suspicion.

With this cross-examination of the negro by the police, in the attempt to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley only has insinuated himself in guilt. His admitted falsehood in former affidavits has placed the blame to Frank in connection with the "murder" notes have been accepted as incriminating by the unqualified declarations of employees at the pencil factory that Conley is the guilty man.

Three responsible officials of the plant have outlined plausible theories as to how the negro could have committed the crime. These men, Herbert O. Smith, who is assistant superintendent; E. P. Holloway, timekeeper; and N. V. Darley, general foreman, are acquainted with Conley. On their knowledge of him and the opportunity offered for accomplishing the murder they have their statements that he is guilty. They have proven beyond a doubt that Conley was in the factory for several hours on the day of the murder, and connecting with this the negro's contradictory statements as to his whereabouts, they have compiled a most plausible explanation of how he did the Phagan act.

Wesleyan Warns of Social Dissipation

MIDDLETOWN, CONN., May 28.—"Undue attention, not to athletics, but to society, is responsible for the most serious dissipation of student energies to-day and for the majority of the failures in college work," says the Wesleyan University Bulletin.

The multiplication of social functions and their increasing expense during recent years is becoming a serious problem in student life, it adds.

Undue attention, not to athletics, but to society, is responsible for the most serious dissipation of student energies to-day and for the majority of the failures in college work,

First Photographs Showing Scott's Tragic Fate at South Pole
Last Picture of Explorer, Taken a Few Days Before His Death

Views Show Cairn in Frozen Wastes Where Heroics of the Antarctic Rest.

The Georgian publishes to-day the first photographs of the great disaster of the South Pole in which Captain Robert E. Scott and others of his brave crew lost their lives. The large figure at the top is the last photograph taken of Captain Scott. It was made a few days before his death by Lieutenant Bowers.

The photograph below shows the cairn in the frozen wastes of the Antarctic where today lie the bodies of Captain Scott, Dr. Edward A. Wilson and Lieutenant H. Bowers. The bodies were covered with the tent in which they were found by the rescuing party, and records identifying them were left in the tomb of ice.

Over the mass of ice and snow the cross erected by the rescuers in memory of the heroes is seen. In the background of the picture are to be seen the white cliffs of the Antarctic. They were situated upright in a small mound of frozen snow by the wind and storm would be likely to dislodge them. About the ice tomb may be seen the footprints of the rescuing party, as its members tramped through the snow while erecting the burial mound.

How Scott Found Pole. Captain Robert Falcon Scott and a party of more than a score left London on June 1, 1911, on board the Terra Nova for Antarctica and the first leg of a journey to the South Pole.

On September 1, 1911, winter quarters were set up in the Antarctic Circle. Shortly thereafter, Messers and Mims, two of Captain Scott's men, with dog teams, made their way to Hut Point, and telephonic communication was established between the winter quarters and the temporary headquarters of the accompanying party.

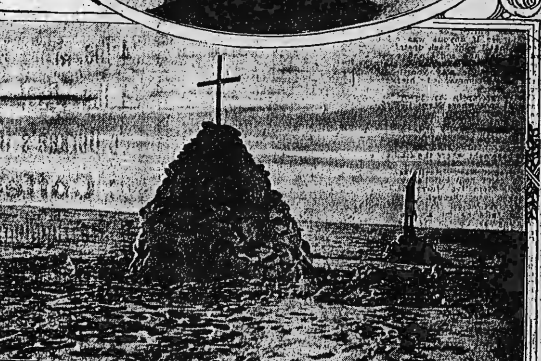

On November 1, 1911, accompanied by Dr. Edward A. Wilson, chief of the scientific staff; Lieutenant H. Bowers, of the Royal Navy; Cherry, Gerrard, Atkinson, Wright, Evans, and Kitchener, made their way to Hut Point, and on November 1, 1911, started for former camp, which, by marching, they reached on November 25. They established a depot at the foot of the mountain and ascended in latitude 81°15' seconds.

On December 4 the party had succeeded in reaching Mount Hogg, latitude 81, and on January 2, 1912, the party was 120 miles from the pole, in latitude 81°32' at a height of 2,800 feet, the very top of the great ice barrier.

Sends Some of Party Back. On New Year's eve in latitude 81 degrees 55 minutes, a depot for food and sledges was established. The depot, formed of crates of ice, was established from point to point as the party proceeded from the winter quarters. On January 17, 1912, Captain Scott announced to his followers that he and four men would endeavor to make the final dash to the pole.

He selected as his companions in this trying journey Dr. Wilson, Captain Oates, of the Inneskillin dragoon, who was in charge of the ponies and mules; Lieutenant Bowers, of the Royal India Marines, and Petty Officer Edgar Evans, in charge of the sledges. The five men were equipped with provisions calculated to last 3 months.

The others who had made the journey thus far proceeded strenuously against being forced to return to the winter quarters, but they were compelled to do so on January 18, 1912. Captain Scott and his men reached the South Pole. There they placed that all their struggles had been in vain for the main road Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, had preceded them, making the journey by a different route. The Norwegian expedition, led by Captain Amundsen, flying directly above it was the Norwegian sign. It was of the like of a return from the pole that Captain Scott and his party perished most miserably in a blizzard. For two months they struggled to reach One Ton Depot, which had been established 130 miles south of the winter quarters. During the month of February and March the members of the party died, one by one. Petty Officer Evans was the first to pass away. He died of consumption of the brain, the result of a fall on the ice. Captain Wilson died on March 11. He had suffered most intense agony for several days. His feet had become frozen and it had become necessary for the captain to carry him.

Parish in blizzard. Realizing that he was a burden upon the party and that his injuries might be the cause of the death of all he crept off into the darkness one night and when found had been frozen to death. This might have been termed suicide, but Captain Scott in his diary branded it an act of the greatest heroism. About March 23 a terrific blizzard overtook the three air-boys, the only protection against the three Antarctic storm being a tattered and wind-torn tent. In this tent Captain Scott, Dr. Wilson and Bowers camped. In the meantime the rescue party at winter quarters had organized a "rescue" party and it was sent by the crew, where it became evident that Captain Scott and the others must have either died or become lost somewhere between the ice and the South Pole. The search continued, and on November 12, eight months after the rescue, the bodies of three of the heroes were found.

TRAITORS CHOOSE DEATH TO SHAME

Austrian Officers Who Sold Army Secrets to Russia Kill Themselves When Discovered.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian. VIENNA, May 16.—While the Austrian Government investigated the alleged sale of army secrets to the Russian government by a clique of officers, headed by Colonel Redl, of the military secret police, who committed suicide following his exposure, it was reported to-day in army circles that two other officers involved in the scandal had taken their lives.

The facts make a sensational and dramatic story. What had been definitely learned that Redl was treacherously selling army plans to Russia together with documentary information as to the entire military plans to the Triple Alliance, two fellow officers visited Redl's apartments in the dead of night. They left a loaded revolver in Redl's hands at the same time informing him that they would return at dawn to arrest him. The hint was obvious and Redl took it. He shot himself while the officers were descending the stairs. The Government has refused to entertain a plea to keep the secret.

Audacious Suffrage Posters Stir Wales

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian. CARDIFF, Wales, May 16.—Suffragettes cut a number of telephone wires through the Cardiff valley to-day, interrupting communication in that part of Glamorgan. Posters bearing audacious inscriptions were left behind the women. The authorities are investigating, but have little hope of catching the culprits, as it is believed they came from London and are in hiding here at the home of a sympathizer with the cause.
