PALMINE WELCH, actress-bride of "Bud" Fisher, famous creator of "Mutt and Jeff," who narrowly escaped death when she gashed her throat by falling upon the jagged edge of a broken water pitcher in an unlighted Piedmont Hotel bath room. She was rendered unconscious, and has been forced to cancel her vaudeville engagements.

'BUD' FISHER'S BRIDE HAS NARROW ESCAPE

That Mrs. Bud Fisher, who is better known to Atlanta as Palmine Welch, narrowly escaped death last Sunday night became known today. The wife of the famous creator of "Mutt and Jeff" has in her apartment at the Piedmont Hotel with a gash five inches long in her throat as the result of an accident which only a good fortune prevented from being fatal.

Mrs. Fisher, whose clever singing won great applause at the Forsyth Theater last week, retired about midnight Sunday night. About an hour later she arose and started into the bath room to fill a pitcher, containing some ice, with water. The lights were not turned on in the apartment, and as Mrs. Fisher entered the bath room she stumbled and fell against the bath tub.

The pitcher she held in her hand crashed against the tub, and she fell against a jagged piece of the glass, causing a deep gash in the throat. She screamed and fainted, and Mr. Fisher picked her up and carried her to a bed.

Twenty stitches in wound.

Mrs. Fisher lost a great deal of blood. There was considerable delay in getting medical assistance, and when Drs. W. S. Yankey and C. L. Houston arrived an hour later, she was unconscious. The flow of blood

Brown's Attack Stirrs Unions

Anderson Is Elected President of the Senate

Both Branches of the Legislature Get Down to Real Work--Flood of Bills Begins in Upper and Lower Houses Soon After Lawmakers Convene.

With the reading of a sensational message by Governor Brown flaying the labor unions, the election of J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, to the Presidency of the Senate, the election of William H. Burwell, of Hancock, to the Speakership of the House and the introduction of the preliminary draft of bills, the Georgia Legislature began its session Wednesday.

Plaged most by Senator Anderson had greeted the hostility of the "dry" throughout the State and quieted the opposition to his candidacy. He was elected to the Presidency by a unanimous vote of the members, Judge Allen's name being withdrawn.

Representative Burwell, in accepting his unanimous election to the Speakership, spoke of the need of tax reforms in the State and expressed the hope that bills would be passed which would remedy the present inequitable features of the system.

As soon as the House got down to work, the introduction of bills was begun. They had a wide range of subjects, and the indications from the first day of the session were that 60 days would be crowded with legislation.

Labor leaders issued a bitter reply to the charges made in the Governor's message.

LABOR LEADERS SCORE MESSAGE

Senator Brown's, spirited attack upon labor unions and their tactics in his message to the Legislature aroused widespread comment Wednesday, stirring up a hornet's nest among the labor union officials.

The Governor branded the unions as agencies for anarchy and said that they were a fruitful source of crime. He said that the unions were a menace to the people and to the principles of government. They struck their severest blows, he said, against the weak and the poor for whose protection they were supposed to be organized.

He said that the unions were a menace to the State and to the Constitution. He said that the unions were a source of crime and that they were a source of anarchy.

He said that the unions were a source of crime and that they were a source of anarchy.

LABOR LEADERS WITHOUT FIGHT

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 was organized in both branches Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, was elected president of the Senate, and Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock County, was named speaker of the House.

Neither man had any opposition in the balloting, and both were elected unanimously.

The rather unexpected termination of the heretofore uncertain and strenuous fight for the presidency of the Senate undoubtedly surprised the packed galleries and lobby.

Allen Withersaw His Name.

Henry Spinks, who was expected to nominate Judge Allen, arose immediately after the Senate had been called to order by Secretary Northen, and instead of nominating his name, withdrew his name.

The Senate was presided over by a friendly little speech, passed his own name and his opponent, and said that, while Judge Allen had 18 votes ready to hand by him, it was not sufficient to elect, and the Senator from the erstwhile Judge Allen referred to the graceful thing and retired, rather than proceed with his name.

When Senator Spinks set down Governor Stark arose and nominated Mr. Anderson as speaker, every eye as good natured as the one preceding it.

Rival Votes for Anderson.

When the roll was called, Allen's name came first, and when he started the balloting in favor of his opponent, he was generally applauded by his colleagues.

On assuming the chair, President Anderson delivered a brief address, particularly calling attention to the much necessary legislation that the new General Assembly likely would have to undertake.

It got a good laugh when, in a facetious manner, he referred to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce's work on behalf of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property. He said "It evidently would not be the Legislature's work to do what the Chamber of Commerce has already done. As the Atlanta trade body seemingly proposed taking care of that little matter itself."

Senate Mopping Over Outcomes.

"The feeling in the Senate, after the balloting of the Allen-Anderson fight was very happy. The way in which that issue was solved evidently lifted a heavy load off many a member's mind, and Judge Allen's frank and manly attitude won him many friends."

Mr. Anderson, in accepting the presidency, said an eloquent tribute to the ability and integrity of his late opponent.

"The efforts of the prohibition league to get into the arena at legislative minutes seem to have been entirely futile, so far as results were concerned."

Both Spinks and Anderson had 18 votes.

CONLEY PUT ON GRILL STICKS TO STORY

Pursued by several of the statements of Jim Conley in regard to his part in the happenings the day that Mary Phagan was killed, the police have resumed the questioning from which the negro had been free since he was taken to the police station by the detectives.

One point that has not been cleared up is why Conley saw every one else that went into or left the factory and yet failed to see Mary Phagan.

Conley, on Sunday, was confronted by the police. He admitted that he saw the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 11 o'clock on the day of the crime.

Yet he will not admit that he saw Mary Phagan, although Mary Phagan was seen by several other witnesses who were in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State shows that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the times that the two girls were in the factory.

Want Clear Statement.

Conley has been asked to explain the apparently improbable circumstance. Conley at first denied that he had seen Lemmie Quinn in the factory on the Saturday of the murder. Later he said he had seen the negro for lying in regard to the matter that during the past two weeks much annoyance has been occasioned by the fact that citizens leaving the city on short vacation or business trips have neglected to supply the local postoffice with their forwarding or change of address orders.

Blank cards for this purpose can be obtained at the postoffice or from carriers, and the postmaster urges that everyone intending to leave the city supply him with notice as to destination of mail.

GOVERNING COUNCIL FOR WIFE BY WOMAN

Farmer's Spouse Located Georgia's Famous Cosmopolite After Sleuths Failed.

WAYNESBORO, Ga., June 25.—(1) devoted to-day that a woman, indignant at the red pills of Jones County, surrounded where detectives of the world's most famous agencies failed in inferring Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler of the whereabouts of her husband, Telemor Cuyler Smith-Cuyler, Georgia's most famous cosmopolite and dilettante, after sleuths had sought him in vain everywhere from the midland regions of war-torn Mexico to the great boulevards of Paris. The woman is Mrs. D. H. Chiles, neighbor of Cuyler, and she is a friend of Mrs. Cuyler in the divorce action inaugurated by her in California courts after the quest for the cosmopolite proved vain and his wife was compelled to serve notice of her suit by publication.

Mrs. Chiles is not a woman devotee of the type now so favored by fiction writers. She is the wife of a Jones County farmer and has probably never seen a sleuth, but she has well-developed power of reasoning.

She was in Atlanta when she received a letter from Mrs. Cuyler asking her to try to find from Jones County where the present abiding place of the much-sought-for husband, who took the rather positive method of gathering the information by going to Cuyler's home and seeing him with her own eyes. She then went to the Waynesborough office and informed Mrs. Cuyler by wire.

According to Mrs. Chiles' information, received from Mrs. Cuyler, Cuyler has been picking his way through with officers endeavoring to see him with the notice of divorce proceedings for months, but she does not know where he is hiding in Mexico, that he had caused letters of his to her to be mailed from San Francisco to throw the sleuths off the trail, that he had gone to Europe or was making a trip to the Orient.

Perhaps Mrs. Chiles reasoned that if a cosmopolite and a dilettante wanted to hide, obviously he would place for him to select himself with his Jones County cotton plantation, for a cosmopolite is supposed to be a cosmopolitan.

Perhaps she didn't dream at all, but she found the cosmopolite seated on the front veranda of his ancestral hall and he was turning his toes out to greet the glow of the sun, as is customary here Jones County farmers to do.

Couple Discussed Divorce. In a letter received from Mrs. Cuyler yesterday, Mrs. Chiles was told of the long chase of Cuyler. According to Mrs. Cuyler, the probability of divorce was first discussed at a conference between her husband and Attorney Powers, he counsel, in the latter part of 1912 in Atlanta, California, where Mrs. Cuyler now is with her mother, Mrs. John Barton. No action was reached at that time and Cuyler soon left for Calexico, Cal., on the Mexican border, where he had organized the Houston cotton company to grow long staple cotton in a vast plantation just across the United States line.

"I don't know who I did there," writes Mrs. Cuyler, "but I am told that his extravagance was shocking. Anyhow, I know that he left there in a hurry."

This she found from affairs she had sent to serve the divorce papers, having decided on this action after their Atlanta conference. A copy of the summons was sent to Calexico, but according to the officers Cuyler promptly disappeared across the border and the sheriff had to return with the papers not served.

He identified her as the girl he saw enter the factory shortly after 10 o'clock on the day of the crime. Yet he still maintains that he did not see Mary Phagan, although Mary must have entered the factory either just before or just after the Glover girl was in the building. The evidence in the possession of the State grows; that there could hardly have been more than three to five minutes intervening between the time that the two girls left the factory.

new president of Senate as he heard his opposition had withdrawn.

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14 was organized in both its branches at 10 o'clock this morning.

Randolph Anderson, of the First District, was named President of the House and William H. Harrow, of Hancock County, was named Speaker of the House, both without opposition.

The badly misled and uncertain fight between Anderson and Allen for the Presidency of the Senate was brought to a sudden and spectacular finish soon after the Senate was called to order, when Senator Sparks arose and withdrew Allen's name.

Allen votes for Rival.

The Senator said Judge Allen had in mind, but that he realized his inability to muster more. That was five short of enough to elect, and Allen's name, in the instant of the vote, accordingly was withdrawn.

Judge Allen's name was the first called, and when he voted, Anderson was generously applauded.

The two Houses were called to order by Secretary of the Senate Charles H. Norton and Clerk of the House John T. Hoffaull.

William H. Harrow, of Hancock, was named Speaker by acclamation, both of his opponents having withdrawn during the day yesterday.

"Ory's" Make Last Attack.

A last-minute effort to shake loose Anderson's strength was made by the Georgia Anti-Slavery League, through its president, the Rev. H. M. Dubois, who addressed a letter to both candidates asking them how they stood on the matter of legislation to perfect the Webb bill in Georgia.

"Ory's" Make Last Attack.

Several Senators, admittedly opposed between the Baldwin County man and the Chatham County man, went over to Anderson last night, thus clinching his victory.

Fight Leaves No Scar.

Notwithstanding the red-hotness of this fight, the heat of feeling prevails in the Senate to-day, and it seems likely that there will be no scars left to remind Senators unpleasantly of the contest as the session gets under way.

Charles H. Norton and John T. Hoffaull were named Secretary of the House and Clerk of the House, respectively. These two veteran officials have been on their job for years, and there was no opposition to either.

Senator R. K. Smith, of the Ninth District, was elected President of the Senate to-day, and within the past few days has achieved immense popularity among his constituents. His election is looked upon as a fine mark for the position.

Representative R. H. McMichael, of Atlanta, was elected Speaker Pro Tem. He is an old member and won his right handsly.

An immense crowd through the House met for business.

Old Flier Leads Miling.

While the race for the Presidency of the Senate was in progress, the contest that promised to be at all exciting, the galleries were packed yesterday when the House met. The present Legislature is composed almost entirely of new material, but the proportion has gone along about that rather about the average in previous years.

Outside of Harwell, the new speaker, and one or two others, the old four leaders of the House are expected to be present.

Frank's Counsel Subpnaes Dorsey, Beavers and Lanford. "Trick," Says Hooper.

His case has been practically complete for days. The defense has said that all its vital witnesses have been found. There has been no intimation that a continuance will be asked unless it be for some contingency as to whether Frank or of an important witness.

The defense has been no success. The attorneys have not said that they would ask for a postponement. They also have refused to say that they would not seek a delay.

Hooper's attorney, has carefully avoided answering the direct question whether he would be ready for trial on that day. Hooper, it is said, associated with him, said the case was complete, but he, too, evaded a statement as to whether he would consent for the trial to begin next week.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey is making his preparations for the trial on the supposition that the defense will be ready, and he will be there on the date set. He summoned the first witness on Monday.

Both the prosecution and the defense will have the court open next Monday. He will have the court open next Monday. He will have the court open next Monday.

Attorney Arnold openly admitted that if one of the important witnesses was not able to appear in Frank's behalf when the case was called, he would move for a continuance and would not consider going to trial on the chance of the witness appearing later.

M. Grant, one of the first to be arrested, is said to be one of the most important witnesses in the case.

Developments since he testified at the coroner's inquest, it is understood, have made his evidence the most important in the case.
