Whisky Is a Good Driver.

It Drives Away Friends, Happiness, and from the Mind Drive Confidence and Courage.

Send the picture on this page to some man who needs it. Many men need it, unfortunately.

These are firmly compacted in the self-controlled man; they work together to make him what he should be.

But whisky, the drug and poison, has the subtle power to dissolve character and take away from the man who scarcely knows it the best element in his nature.

Whisky beggars a man! It finds him full of hope and courage and confidence in himself.

It finds him with friends, receiving and giving affection. And one by one it takes these things from him.

The friends are taken and affection is taken. His strength, his prospects go, little by little, as the whisky fills his tissues, conquers his nerves and rules in the foolish brain which often says so pitifully, "If I had just one more drink, I'd be all right."

Just one more drink, and then another, and dozens and hundreds following.

And at last the unhappy man on whom whisky has fastened its clutch sits like the man in this picture. Of all men he alone does not see his degradation, the brutal debasement of what was once a man.

Have you seen a buzzard, a vulture or a crow picking the skeleton of a horse?

Whisky does its work as vilely and as thoroughly as the meanest buzzard.

Bit by bit it picks from the man all he has that is worth while.

Saddest of all is the scene in this picture, when the two spirits that give man his chief hope leave him--when COURAGE AND SELF-RESPECT PASS OUT OF THE DOOR LEAVING THIS POOR WRECK ALONE AT THE TABLE.

Is it even then too late, and is the case hopeless? No, fortunately, it is never too late, and no man's case is hopeless.

HE CAN, IF HE WILL, RISE UP AND FOLLOW OUT OF THAT DOOR THE SPIRIT THAT HAS LEFT HIM AND OVERTAKE IT AND MAKE IT HIS OWN.

Some of the world's best work has been done and is done now by those that were once robbed by alcohol of all save the one spark that brings man back to his place WHEN HE WILL.

Many a man sits disconsolate, gazing into space, wondering what is to become of him, bitterly repentant, anxious for those that suffer.

And his hope and courage and confidence disappear in the distance.

Help him if you can. Lift him to his feet, start him in the right road.

He may overtake them, HE CAN IF HE WILL.

Portugal Will Never See King Manuel on the Throne--With Gaby Deslys on the Throne Steps.

The Trouble With Portugal Is Ignorance of the People, INABILITY TO READ, but the Republic Will Live.

News from Portugal, sent out by those that hate republican government and that like ignorance, is to the effect that the Republic of Portugal is in danger.

These reports need not seriously worry those that believe in republican government.

For a good many years there have been periodic reports of the same kind coming from France.

The world has been asked to believe that a French pretender, with a forehead one inch and a half high and the intelligence of a canary bird, would succeed in putting up a throne and ruling the French people.

Everybody knows that that is a pitiful joke.

The French pretenders have about as much chance of ruling in France as they have of ruling in Alaska.

The news from Portugal is disturbing only because of the fact that the system of tyranny, brutality and superstition that ruled there for so long, PURPOSELY KEPT THE PEOPLE IN IGNORANCE AND UNABLE TO READ.

Those that would mislead the people, those that hate the republic and hate government by the people, are helped by the fact that the poor peasants in the country, and the clerks and the workers in the cities and towns, are, as a rule, illiterate, unable to read or to sign their own names.

There is no real danger, however, for the Republic of Portugal. There may be a revolution again, but it will end IN AN OTHER REPUBLIC.

The interesting little Manuel will continue sitting at a little table on the French boulevard; he will continue to be a moving picture king--not a real one.

Never again will Portugal see him sitting on the throne, receiving the money of a people overruled and kept ignorant.

At the present rulers of Portugal are replaced by others, they will be the men of the King Manuel type, but men of greater intelligence than the present rulers, able to continue Portugal as a republicable to carry on the real business of a republic--THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS, THE ABOLITION OF IGNORANCE AND THE SUBSTITUTION AND THE RESTORATION OF THE REALITY OF THE PEOPLE.

Do You Know Any Man Ruined by Whisky?

Show him this picture and the two spirits, SELF-RESPECT and COURAGE, walking away from this unhappy victim of his own weakness. This picture may send some drunkard hurrying out of the door to catch up with the friends that have been driven from him. (See Editorial)

The Trouble with the World Is There Are So Many Teaching the Truth, So Few Living It--Let Your Life Illustrate Your Theories.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

ARE you a student of the power of mind over matter? Are you taking to every one you meet about "Universal Life Principles" and "vitality" and "mental and spiritual balance" and all the other expressions so in vogue to-day among advanced thinkers?

See to It That Your Life Illustrates Your Theories.

If you are, see to it that your life illustrates your theories. Do not let it all end in talk.

I have known a self-supporting woman to use all her income in literature and lectures and lessons on these subjects. "How to Control Destiny," "How to Grow Success," "How to Attain Self-Mastery" and "How to Be Well and Prosperous." Yet she was always ailing. She had not one penny saved, nor respectable clothing in her wardrobe; she neglected her work and forgot her duties and was altogether an unsatisfactory human being.

At almost any gathering of people furnished with or interested in Mental, or Christian Science, or New Thought, or any kindred subject a large majority of the un-

DOUBT

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THERE is a devil and his name is Doubt! The country and the city know him well. He makes each human mind his citadel and many an honest aim he puts to rout.

He argues well, about it and about you. He kills more lives than any tongue can tell. He leads obedient mortals to his hell and mocks them when they seek a pathway out.

You do not know him, yet you doubt your friends. You trust at him, but doubt a neighbor's love. He came upon your trail until the end. As a snout with its nostrils as a dove in every trail, he builds his little den. He is the true, old devil Satan's heir.

Lack of Transportation and the Clutch of the Middleman. He Declares, Has Left Thousands of Carloads of Garden Produce Rotting on the Ground in Texas This Season.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

DOWN in the beautiful and peaceful Pecos Valley in Texas some months ago I saw tons of luscious strawberries rotting in the field because the markets of the North were congested and the berries were not worth the freight much less the cost of picking.

Southwestern Texas is the country that General Sherman had in mind when he made a certain sarcastic remark that has gone clattering down the centuries like a tin kettle to a dog's tail.

The application, however, of water and intelligent labor to the arid land of Texas has worked such miracles that William Tecumseh Sherman's phrase puts that gentleman's perspicacity in jeopardy.

On a single acre of irrigated land I have seen produced ten tons of onions, cabbages in proportion and spinach enough to fill a silo.

The amazing fertility of the soil and water produce crops which, if the truth were told about them, would qualify the parlor for the Amateur Club in any city of the North, and quickly.

The question, however, is to get these fruits and vegetables on the tables of the people who need them most. Lack of transportation and the clutch of the middleman has left thousands of carloads of garden produce rotting on the ground in Texas this season.

Here is a question so big and important, that it deserves the attention of the most able men in the United States to-day.

It is a somewhat curious fact that our lawmaking is largely the work of amateurs.

The men we send to Washington are not the men who have had experience in the matter of agriculture of great and important proportions.

They are for the most part men who have wormed themselves into office.

The business of government falls into the hands of the inexperienced and the untrained.

This thing of government by the selfish, the transient and the irresponsible is the most telling criticism to be made of our so-called Democracy.

There should be a method devised by the Government whereby the most highly trained men could be secured and utilized. As it is now, the crying needs of the people are being neglected.

Washington a Mason

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

IT WAS one hundred and sixty years ago that George Washington was given the well-earned right to look upon the "terrestrial" light, which some but not all men ever saw.

The venerable and venerated records of Frederick's Lodge show that Washington was initiated on November 4, 1732, and passed on March 3, 1799, and was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason August 5, 1787.

Strange to say, it appears to be a fact that the "Father of this Country" was initiated before he had reached the required age of 21 years. Daniel Crippen, Master of the lodge, applied the special dispensation which enabled the candidate to begin his sacred journey while still a minor.

Grand Master Crippen of the district of Columbia declared that no one supposed to inquire about Washington's age when his initiation was presented, that the majority proportion of the candidates, together with his well-known character and ability, made upon all concerned the impression that the right had been made by a thorough and correct dispensation.

It is interesting to note that the dispensation was based upon the fact that Washington was a member of the lodge at the time he was initiated.

The Bible that was used at the initiation of George Washington was that of the old Virginia lodge, and it is interesting to note that the same Bible was used at the initiation of the late President Lincoln.

Dancers Rush From Sinking Boat
White Engineer Holds Prods on Shore, Then Dies.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 8.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., today reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine through the hole. He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Birdson, a former inmate in the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was buried to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A dance was held in the room of the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was buried to death at his post.

WOMEN NEVER CAME INTO FACTORY OFFICE WITNESS TESTIFIED

The second week of the Frank trial ended Saturday with a bitter battle in progress over the testimony of Herbert G. Schiff, assistant superintendent of the National Penol Factory.

Schiff was called upon after court opened in the forenoon and was on the stand when the adjournment was taken until Monday.

Schiff, besides denying that Frank ever had women in his office, describes in elaborate detail the duties of the superintendent particularly his work on the afternoon the little Phagan girl came to her death.

Schiff testified that he never took less than 2 1/2 or three hours to complete the financial sheet. He testified that he never took less than 2 1/2 or three hours to complete the financial sheet.

Schiff went into the highly complex methods in which the financial sheet is made up, in order to show that the clarity of mind that was required in order to complete the sheet without mistake or confusion.

He narrated that costs and profits were estimated each week on thousands of pencils of different classifications and grades, on hundreds of gross of rubber plugs, on the various classes of pens, boxes, "retractors" on which the pencils were arranged and other items of material that entered into the manufacture of the pencils.

THE RIDDLE OF THE CLOCK IN THE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Jim Conley swears Mary Phagan went up the stairs of the National Pencil factory and was murdered before Monteen Stover arrived. He says he saw Miss Stover go up and leave. Monteen Stover, State's witness, swears she arrived at 12:05.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Here's the tale of an old clock. Tick-tock! Tick-tock! This is the tale of the clock. An English ballad. This is a tale of an office clock and a motorist's watch—an office clock in the National Pencil factory, the first results of which, it being a "time" clock, is accuracy, and a motorist's watch.

All of this, according to Conley, before Monteen Stover entered the factory—that is, before 12:05 certainly—and, considering the things Conley swears happened, several minutes before 12:05, necessarily.

Motorman Remembers Time. The motorman who had, however, who swears he knew Mary Phagan, and who saw her board his car frequently, and remembers seeing her board that particular car on that particular day, says that the car arrived at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:07, and that he and Stover arrived at the latter hour next minute fixed in his mind.

Mary Phagan left the street car at 12:10, still a block behind the car, and she could not have reached there before 12:15, in any event.

There are two things about the Frank trial that entitle it to distinguished consideration. The first is that a single alienist has been called to bat, and only the common or domesticated type of the great Hypothetical Question has appeared.

The defense (the "A" case) expertly to the full way strength and ordered them to advance with caution. Including the defense, they reported that the prisoner was crazy beyond the shadow of a peradventure. They said he couldn't be any crasser without losing his mind.

They report that to the best of their several and collective knowledge and belief, which is considerable, the defendant is the happy possessor of one of the sanest little noddies they ever had the pleasure of sitting on. They say there is practically no chance that any such crassly-voiced aggregation of mental products ever slipped a cog.

HOW TIME HAS BECOME THE CRUCIAL POINT IN THE TRIAL OF LEO M. FRANK

Absence of Alienists and The Hypothetical Question Distinguishes Frank Trial

By O. B. KEELER. The intense surprise of everyone, including the defense, they reported that the prisoner was crazy beyond the shadow of a peradventure. They said he couldn't be any crasser without losing his mind.

When the "A" is sprung by the defense, an expert of considerable pedigree is expected to sit in the witness chair and, compelled to listen with the "A" and such of the audience as can stay awake to a detailed minute of incidents beginning some time before the death of the accused and extending to the date of the crime, with provisions and qualifications in the way of hours and a half and eleven columns of "A" and "B" text.

After which an expert for the other side listens to the same recital, reads and says: "Frank was sane at the time." The jury says never gets into print.

CONFUSION OF HOLLOWAY'S CASE OF GOOD DAY FOR THE DEFENSE

What promised to be a very interesting day for the defense in the trial of Leo M. Frank charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, was partly spoiled at the close Friday by the withdrawal of E. P. Holloway, day witness at the pencil factory. In a maze of conflicting statements...

Holloway's confusion under the fire of the witness giving testimony was intended to establish that Mary Phagan did not enter the National Pencil factory on the day of her death until after Monteen Stover had come and gone.

Street Car Man Testifies. W. M. Matthews and W. J. Hollis, the motorman and conductor on the car which Monteen Stover rode on the day that she met her death, testified that she did not leave the car before 12:10. Holloway's testimony, however, had entered the factory before Monteen Stover had entered and left.

Conley said on the stand that he saw Monteen Stover enter the factory at 12:05 and leave at 12:10. He said that he saw Mary Phagan enter the factory at 12:07 and leave at 12:10. He said that he saw Mary Phagan enter the factory at 12:07 and leave at 12:10.

HERE'S THE TIME CLOCK PUZZLE IN FRANK'S TRIAL; CAN YOU FIGURE IT OUT?

THE RIDDLE OF THE CLOCK IN THE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Jim Conley swears Mary Phagan went up the stairs of the National Pencil factory and was murdered before Montrose Stover arrived. He says he saw Miss Stover go up and leave.

Montrose Stover, State's witness, swears she arrived at 12:05.

George Epps, State's witness, swears he and Mary Phagan arrived at Marietta and Forsyth streets at 12:07.

The car crew, defense's witnesses, swear Mary arrived at Broad and Marietta at 13:07 1/2 and at Broad and Hunter at 13:10.

If Mary Phagan was at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:07, as the State says, or at Broad and Hunter at 12:10, as the defense says, how could she have preceded Montrose Stover, as Jim Conley says, up the factory stairs, when Miss Stover was in the factory at 12:05?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Tick-tock! Tick-tock! In the tale of the old hall clock. Tick-tock! Tick-tock! This is the tale of the clock!

This is a tale of an office clock and a woman's state-of-office clock in the National Pencil factory. The first requisite of which, it being a "time" clock, is accuracy, and a most accurate watch.

All of this, according to Conley, before Montrose Stover entered the factory. That is, before 12:05, certainly, and, considering the things Conley swears happened, several minutes before 12:05, necessarily.

2 CENTS, PAY NO MORE

Chairman of Investigation Committee Hints at Impachment Proceedings.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, who nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Finley committee of the Legislature, the evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frankley declared. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was accused from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as a naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $24,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more information.

Used Campaign Funds. The Governor's transactions with the other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Arranged chronologically, the testimony appeared to show that on January 1, 1912, there stood on the books of the stock exchange firm of Harris & Fuller an indebtedness of $48,239 against the purchase by Governor Sulzer of 500 shares of "Big Four," 200 shares American Smelting and Refining Company and 100 shares of Southern Pacific. This testimony was given by Melville B. Fuller, a member of the firm who on Wednesday had refused to answer the questions of the committee. Before testifying his counsel announced that the Governor had agreed that "Mr. Fuller's lips should be unsealed."

There were no other purchases of stock recorded on this account, according to the witness, until December 1, 1912, when the Governor bought 100 shares of "Big Four," making 600 in all. On December 11, he sold, according to a letter produced by the witness, made its first call upon the Governor for more margin. The books showed that on November 18 previous the Governor had paid in $10,000 against the account, and that on December 18, apparently in response to the call for margin, he had paid $5,000 more.

During Governor's Campaign. In October of the same year the evidence indicated that Frederick Colwell, the Governor's alleged "dummy," purchased for Mayor, Griswold & Co., 200 shares of "Big Four" railroad stock outright at $5, for $1,000, the $15 representing commission. This was at the height of Mr. Sulzer's campaign for the governorship and transcripts from the firm's books showed the stock bought on October 18 was paid for partly in checks, at least two of which were identified in the testimony as Bulzer campaign contributions. There were seven checks in all, and the others are charged by Eugene H. Richards, counsel for the committee, as having been also campaign checks.

EXPOSURE OF CONLEY STORY TIME FLAWS IS SOUGHT BY DEFENSE

Hammering away to show alleged glaring discrepancies in the story told by Jim Conley, the defense of Leo Frank Saturday morning recalled George Epps, the newsboy who testified to riding into town with Mary Phagan on the fatal day, in an attempt to show that the boy on the Sunday after the crime made no mention whatever of having seen Mary the day before in a talk with a newspaperman. Epps was called to the stand after C. B. Dalton had failed to respond to a call from the defense. Reuben Arnold questioned the boy.

Q. Do you recollect the Sunday the boy was found?—A. Yes. Q. Do you remember a gentleman, a Mr. Minar, coming to your house and talking to you and your sister?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he ask you when was the last time either of you had seen Mary Phagan?—A. Yes, he asked my sister, he didn't ask me.

Q. Weren't you there?—A. No, I wasn't there. I was in the house.

Q. Weren't you standing by your sister and she told the last time Mary Phagan was seen by her was Thursday before the murder and you stood there and said nothing?—A. No, I didn't hear that. I was in the house, but I didn't hear all he said to her.

"Come down," said Mr. Arnold.

Shows Lad Didn't Flee From Court. Mr. Dorsey interposed.

Q. "George, has there been any trouble to get you to come to court?—A. No, sir, I was playing ball when they sent for me yesterday and didn't get the message."

Mr. Arnold objected to the question and reply and Mr. Dorsey said:

"Your honor, Mr. Arnold made the impression on this court yesterday that this boy was fleeing from the court. The deputy said he couldn't find him. We just want to show that he was always willing to come."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. George you were always willing to come, weren't you?—A. Yes, sir. I got tired hanging around the court, and asked you if I could go. You told me you would send for me when you needed me. I came when I got your message.

Holloway Lost in Maze. What promises to be a very favorable day for the defense in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, was partly spoiled at its close Friday by the withdrawal of J. P. Holloway, six vicinities at the scene factory, in a mass of conflicting statements.

Holloway was confuted under the fire of the Solicitor General's more than 200 questions by the importance of the testimony which had gone before.

Madison giving the lead direct to Jim Conley's tale, this testimony, if it stands as the truth in the minds of the jurors, upsets the whole theory that Madison Stover violated the office of Leo Frank while the superintendent was in the mill room with the Phagan girl.

Conley said on the stand that he saw Lemmie Collins, Earl Mary Phagan and then Madison Stover go up to the second floor. The Stover girl said she entered the factory at 11:30 o'clock, it was 11:15 when the girl, she testified, had looked at the time clock back (page 1).

W. M. Matthews and W. T. Hollis, the motorman and conductor on the noon train, a girl named Mary Phagan, who was killed, testified that she did not leave the car before 12:10 o'clock, the defense attorneys being that she had entered the factory before Monday Stover and had received the testimony of George Epps, the newsboy, who testified that he saw her enter the factory at 12:05 o'clock.

Matthews' story contradicted that of Mary Phagan and a girl companion with whom she was riding to Boston and Hunter street. He said she rode at about 11:30 and walked to an address in the neighborhood of the factory, and that she saw Mary Phagan and a girl companion with whom she was riding to Boston and Hunter street. He said she rode at about 11:30 and walked to an address in the neighborhood of the factory, and that she saw Mary Phagan and a girl companion with whom she was riding to Boston and Hunter street.

HERE'S THE TIME CLOCK PUZZLE OF FRANK TRIAL; CAN YOU FIGURE IT OUT?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock! Tick-tock!

This is a tale of an office clock and a motorman's watch—an office clock in the National Penitentiary, the first requisite of which, it being a "time" clock, is accuracy, and a motorman's watch.

And this is the story of a clock that may or may not mean life and liberty and a restored good name to Leo Frank, or a fate, indubitably worse than mere death itself!

It is a story involving a young business man of repute and high standing, a college graduate and a husband, a brave, womanly little girl, foully murdered, a motorman known to many Atlantans, a newswriter, as we all know, a disintegrated working girl, a negro sweeper, a confessed accessory to murder, the dead and the mother—and an office clock.

What does the story demonstrate? That shall be for the reader to say. Here is the story:

What the State contends. The State of Georgia, in contending that Leo Frank murdered on April 26, before the hour of 12:05 in the afternoon, Mary Phagan, a 14-year-old working girl, employed in the National Penitentiary, of which Frank was the superintendent, and Miss Stover, an employee of the factory.

It cites, among others, to bear out its contention, James Conley, a negro sweeper in the factory, and Monteen Stover, an employee of the factory.

Miss Stover is a disintegrated witness—Conley not only is the witness against Frank, but is interested in fixing the murder upon Frank.

Jim Conley swears that a few minutes before Miss Monteen Stover came into the factory—Miss Stover herself swearing that she entered at 12:05—Mary Phagan entered and passed upstairs and into Leo Frank's office.

Miss Stover, asked how she was getting on at the time she went in, and the time she came out, stated that she looked at the time clock both as she came in and as she went out. That fixes the time of her coming and going definitely and exactly.

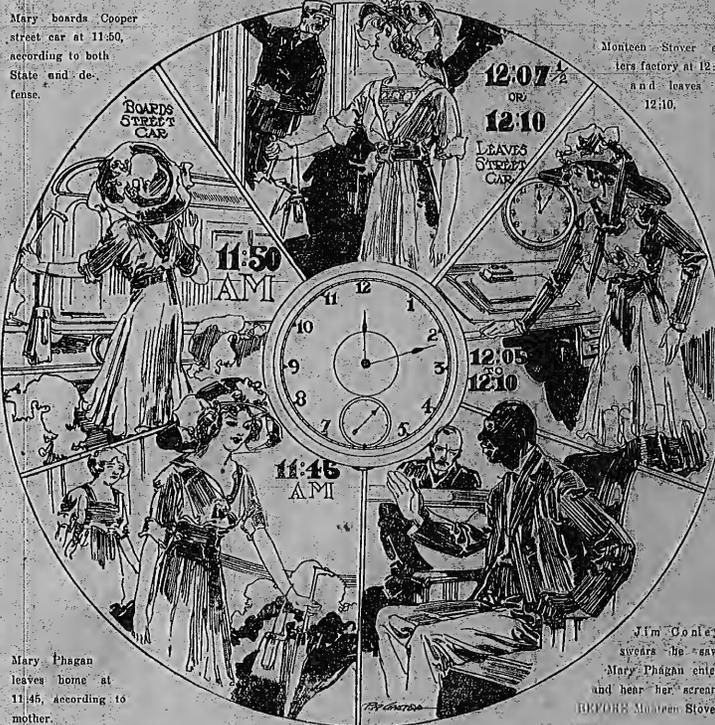

It was before Miss Stover came in that Conley swears Mary Phagan came in. Therefore, Mary Phagan must have arrived at the factory, according to Conley, at least before 12:05, the moment Miss Stover came in.

Before Miss Stover entered. But after Mary came in, and before Miss Stover came in, the murder, still according to Conley, had been effected.

For (a) after Mary went upstairs and before Miss Stover came in, Conley (b) heard pattering footsteps toward the rear of the building, which (c) he says the body was found by him later, and after that, (d) a scream, and then (e) a period of silence.

HOW TIME HAS BECOME THE CRUCIAL POINT IN THE TRIAL OF LEO M. FRANK

Mary leaves car at 12:07 by State's testimony and 12:10 by defense's witnesses.

Mary Phagan leaves home at 11:45, according to mother.

By O. B. KEELER.

There are two things about the Frank trial that entitle it to distinguished consideration.

This fact is not a single alienist has been called to bat, and only the common, or domesticated type of the dread hypothetical question has appeared.

In most of our great murder trials, the alienist is the last resort, or one of the last resorts. Usually he is introduced by the defense, anywhere from four to eight of him.

The prosecution promptly counters with an equal number of wheel inspectors.

The defense (who they saw) generally proves to its own satisfaction that the defendant was crazy when he did it, but since has recovered the equilibrium, his aims and all the rest of his scattered personal effects.

The four to eight experts for the State differ slightly with the findings.

They All Agree. They report that to the best of their several and collective knowledge and belief, which is considerable, the defendant is the happy possessor of one of the sanest little noddies they ever had the pleasure of sitting on.

They say there is practically no chance that if the defense insists on the accused having been non-compos at the time he did it, he most assuredly is in the same condition at present, or more so.

In short, the State contends that the defendant either should be hanged or remanded to the military hospital for the rest of his life, according to which is most highly objectionable to the defense.

The case of the One Notable Exception. There is only one case on record where a corps of alienist employed by one side agreed with those hired by the opposition.

It seems that the accused person without any advice or suggestion from his lawyers, broke out all over with chills and acute symptoms of delirium after he was arrested.

The defense ordered out the alienists.

They reported that the accused unquestionably was insane—remarkably so.

Then the prosecution recruited its experts to the full way strength and ordered them to advance with caution.

To the intense surprise of everyone including the defense, they reported that the prisoner was crazy beyond the shadow of a peradventure. They said he couldn't be any crazier without coming apart.

Well, that just about settled it. What prosecution could hold out against the combined forces of two kinds of alienists? It was the first time on record that the warring camps had agreed.

And this time they were both wrong.

Inside of a year the record-holder for craziness—epilepsy, in the distance and Marshall—had got himself out of the hot factory and was enjoying life in a more congenial climate that had no extradition provisions in the treaty, if any.

The Hypothetical Question. The hypothetical question is used rather more frequently than the alleged, because it is less expensive and embarrassing, while offering no more than an even break to the other side and confining the jury fully as much as the most complicated alienist explanations.

When the h. q. is sprung by the defense, an expert of considerable pedigree is propped up in the witness chair and compelled to listen, with the jury and such of the audience as can stay awake, to a detailed relation of incidents beginning some time before the birth of the accused and extending to the date of the crime, with professions and qualifications as full out four hours and a half and eleven columns of "six point."

Then the expert says: "Yes."

"After which an expert for the other side, of the same caliber, is propped up.

And he says: "Yes."

THE RIDDLE OF THE CLOCK IN THE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Jim Conley swears Mary Phagan went up the stairs of the National Penitentiary and was murdered before Monteen Stover arrived. He says he saw Miss Stover go up and leave, Monteen Stover, State's witness, swears she arrived at 12:05.

George Epps, State's witness, swears he saw Mary Phagan arrive at Marietta and Forsyth streets at 12:07.

The car crew, defense's witnesses, swear Mary arrived at Broad and Marietta at 12:07 1/2 and at Broad and Hunter at 12:10.

If Mary Phagan was at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:07, as the State says, or at Broad and Hunter at 12:10, as the defense says, how could she have preceded Monteen Stover, as Jim Conley says, up the factory stairs, when Miss Stover was in the factory at 12:05?

What's the answer?

Brand Whitlock May Get Diplomatic Post

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—President Wilson is seriously considering the nomination of another distinguished nominee to an important diplomatic post, according to information at the Capital. Mayor Brand Whitlock of Toledo, Ohio, is the latest prospective candidate for diplomatic honors, and if McQuinn declines the French ambassadorship, he may get that, or he may go to Belgium.

He had expressed a desire for the Swiss legation, but that was promised before he got into the fight.

DEFENSE PUTS ON MANY WITNESSES Five Called to Break Down Negroes' Stories

GEN. HUERTA'S ARMS ARMING JINGOES NO SET PLAN FOR NAVAL STORES

Hatred Against Americans in Capital Stirred by President—Lind Warned Not to Come.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The administration today decided to ignore entirely the note sent by President Huerta to the American government and to direct Special Envoy Lind to proceed to Mexico City without delay on his arrival at Vera Cruz to-night, unless he be held back by armed forces. "The president declines to be bluff," stated a prominent government official today.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.—MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—With the approval of President Huerta, arms were issued today to the students of the National Military Academy, who yesterday drafted a resolution protesting against the execution of Gen. Lind. The special American envoy, person non grata to the Mexican government.

A number of residents in the American colony, who have fortunes invested in Mexico, are planning to make a demonstration Sunday, which protest will be lodged against the action of President Wilson in sending a personal representative to Mexico City and urging that the Mexican Government be upheld.

Foreign Minister Adams and other members of the cabinet are doing all in their power to increase the intolerance and enthusiasm of the people. Meetings of young hot-bloods, who are standing up for President Huerta in the districts of the "Blues" and "Stripes," are being encouraged.

Mexican secret service agents have been detailed to watch every movement that Mr. Lind makes here and the envoy will be unable to constant surveillance.

The newspapers today carried glowing stories of "Yankee interference" and warned the State Department to recall Mr. Lind from Vera Cruz and not allow him to come to Mexico City.

Efficient consensuses are promised if President Wilson and Secretary Bryan continue their present course of trying to settle the internal affairs of Mexico while withholding official recognition of the Huerta administration.

All the papers carry warm words of praise for Huerta and promise that he will stand like a rock in behalf of his policy of "Mexican for Mexican affairs."

United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz were in wireless communication with the New Hampshire, upon which Mr. Lind is coming, and it is expected that the New Hampshire will reach Vera Cruz about 5 o'clock tonight.

Some would ignore Lind. There was a gathering of cabinet members and Huerta's advisers in Congress at the National Palace today, at which the existing American situation was thoroughly discussed. Some are for completely ignoring Mr. Lind, while the extreme insist that he shall be expelled.

Delegates at Jacksonville Meet Unable to Agree on Way to Better Prices.

JACKSONVILLE, Aug. 8.—After discussing the naval stores market from all angles for two hours, the 200 naval stores operators who met here this morning decided to return home and let each man do what he thought best toward working out a plan for better prices.

Different plans were proposed for increasing the price of naval stores. It was the consensus of opinion that a curtailment of production would be the only thing that would boost the price. The methods of bringing about this curtailment was the question they were unable to settle.

The independent producers in the West, who are making money and refuse to shut shipping. This spoiled the plan to suspend operations all over the country. It was suggested that the form be asked to reduce to a minimum any more expense money to their customers. This plan was thought too drastic and was abandoned.

Another plan was to dump all of the naval stores on the market, thereby cutting the price to such a point as to force the Westerners to suspend operations. Several operators objected to this plan, because they had not sold anything this year, and the present market price would not net them anything for the year's work.

Electric Co. Blamed For Lineman's Death

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 8.—An inquest over the body of J. R. Peterson, lineman for the Southern Bell Telephone Company, killed Thursday when he came in contact with a live wire of the electric light company, was held this morning.

Justice A. H. Emore, as coroner, rendered a verdict that the Gainesville Gas and Electric Light Company, "gross and culpable negligence," was to blame. This is the second case in which the electric company has been held liable for the death of a lineman for the Western Union.

The electric company is devoid of insulation in places. The company was ordered to pay damages at the last term of court for the injury to a child who broken live wire in the street.

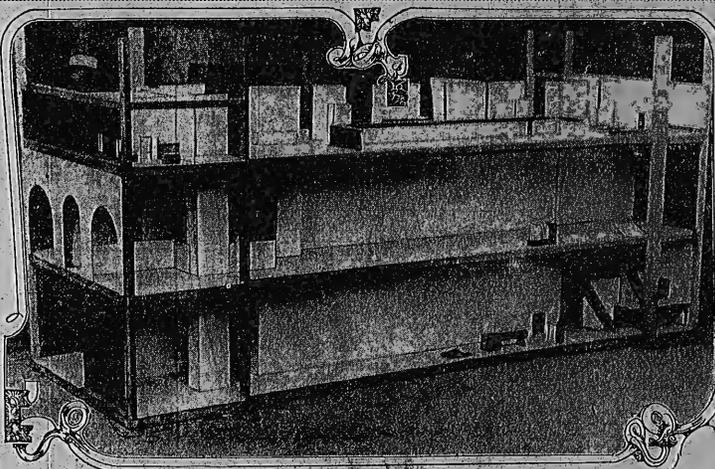

Peterson's body was committal by the widow and two daughters, was sent to Jacksonville this morning for burial.

Striker Fined $50 in Mobile Assault Case

MOBILE, Aug. 8.—Two warrants were sworn out in the Interior Circuit Court Friday against Joseph Maiber, one by Philip Shook charging threats to kill William Boddy, and the other by William Boddy charging that Maiber is interfering with persons engaged in lawful work.

The second warrant was issued under the boycott law. Mr. Shook is general foreman of a strike of 100 of 300 or 500 men in jail in Astoria, Oregon. Robert J. Shook, brother of the defendant, was not in court. Maiber had no witnesses. He did not testify.

Habeas Corpus to Free Lee Sought In Superior Court

CHARGING that Leo M. Frank charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, is being held in the custody of a "detention" while confined in prison, while the negro New Lee, who he had as a witness, is being treated as a criminal, Attorney Graham and "Chapell" representative Lee, late Friday afternoon, sought a writ of habeas corpus for the release of Lee.

The petition was filed with the Superior Court. The petitioners set forth that Sheriff Johnson is treating New Lee as an ordinary criminal, despite the fact that he is only a witness in the story. That in case having been released from the charge of murder by order of Judge Hill, who is a criminal, before the sheriff on the disposition of former writ not to confine Lee as a criminal but as a witness.

The petitioners set forth further that Frank, who is charged with the murder from which Lee was released, is being given all the liberties and privileges of a "detention" guest, even being allowed to visit the living room where he takes his meals.

There is a mass of testimony and the trial will be lengthy and probably sensational. It is said that three alleged victims are to be found in several States. The Grand Jury spent two days making the investigation.

It is said Drew successfully used the main to induce person to subscribe to stock in an oil company, he was promoting at Fort Payne.

Engineer Prevents Wreck by Wild Dash

RIFLETON, Aug. 8.—The morning train from Atlanta and Mexico was almost wrecked on a trestle two miles from Rifleton, which a few years ago was the scene of a wreck in which several persons were killed and numerous others injured.

The train, consisting of a passenger car, a tender, jumped the track and in order to pull the train to a stop the engineer, William J. Smith, sped the throttle wide and went full speed across the bridge. There the train was stopped.

Alabama Judgeship Is Sought by Three

ANNISTON, Aug. 8.—Much interest is expressed here in the appointment of a successor to Probate Judge W. H. Cooper, whose death at Birmingham Thursday created a vacancy.

This will be the second time within about a year that Governor O'Neal will have had the opportunity of making an appointment to this office.

When the health of Judge E. C. Cook necessitated his sitting in the office Representative J. J. Arnold was named to fill the unexpired term. He was defeated by Judge Cooper in the primary last year and has himself been in bad health recently.

Dr. D. W. Willet (today eliminated himself from the race, leaving W. P. McCartney, Mr. Cook and Mr. Arnold in the field.

England Rapidly Is Besting Demon Rum, King's Doctor Avers

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN.—LONDON, Aug. 8.—In addressing the International Medical Congress today Sir Thomas Barlow, M. D., personal physician to King George and president of the congress, declared that England is rapidly becoming the most temperate nation in the world.

He declared that the use of alcohol in the army and navy is diminishing at a fast rate. The people of Texas, one of the American delegates, in speaking of England, said it cost 2,800 lives in America in 1912, and that there were fully 50,000 persons afflicted with the disease.

The doctor stated that the congress that the use of rum as a cure for cancer has proven successful and thereby will come into general use.

3 Negro 'Detectives' Are Nearly Lynched

PENSACOLA, Aug. 8.—According to a dispatch from Houston, Calhoun county, three negro "detectives" barely escaped lynching yesterday when it became known that they had "succeeded" authorities of that county. However, the sheriff took them into custody and protected them.

Two weeks ago it appears, the negroes were hired by the prosecuting attorney of Calhoun County to act as evidence of the sale of liquor and gambling. They were provided with a small amount of money.

DORSEY GOES AFTER HOLLOWAY, CALLED TO STAND FOR FRANK

Portions of E. F. Holloway's testimony were badly shaken. Solicitor Dorsey finished a grilling cross-examination of the National Pencil Factory timekeeper and watchman late Friday.

Holloway appeared a very willing witness for the defense and Dorsey went after him vigorously as soon as Reuben Arnold was through the direct questioning.

The Solicitor, by his line of questioning, first impugned that Holloway had sought to get Kendrick, a former night watchman, to swear that Frank had been in the habit of calling him up at night as he called New Lee. Holloway denied this indignantly.

Dorsey next asked Holloway if he had not told C. F. Whitfield, a Pinkerton operative, to come around the next day and he was sure the detective would find something. The next day the bloody club was found. Holloway also denied this.

Holloway testified that N. V. Darley left the factory at about 9:20 o'clock. Dorsey showed him his own affidavit saying that Darley left with Frank about 10:45.

Holloway gave Jim Conley the lie when he was recalled to the stand. Under the guidance of Reuben Arnold, he took up Conley's charges of grave misconduct against Frank and denied each one of them.

The day watchman declared that he always had been in the factory at the time Conley testified he had watched at the door for Frank and that he was positive such things never had taken place.

Holloway asserted that Frank never had brought women to his office and that women never were in his office, except members of his family.

Conley would not make his sensational charges of misconduct against Frank, cited Thanksgiving as one of the days that Frank had women in the factory. Holloway said Conley was not in the factory that day.

Reuben Arnold brought out the striking fact that it was snowing on Thanksgiving Day at a point against Conley's statement that a woman visited the factory that day and that she wore white shoes and white stockings.

Failure of George Epps, the 42-year-old negro boy, to appear in response to the call of the defense attorney, Attorney Arnold, to ask Judge Whitfield who he prepared to examine in the trial, threw a lightning bolt at the court and caused a sensation in the courtroom.

The door-bell rang from the entryway on the first floor of the National Pencil Factory, which had been called up during the first of January, was found broken open shortly after the murder of Mary Phagan was the starting testimony of N. V. Darley at the trial of Leo Frank Friday afternoon.

No testimony of this nature had been presented before and no attempt of such a discovery had been made during the investigation of the murder mystery. Its production, if the facts remain uncontroverted, opens up the possibility that the murderer of Mary Phagan attacked her on the first floor, broke open the door into the rear of the building, and threw the body down one of two trap doors, one of which opened onto a chute and the other onto a steep stairway.

The defense did not appear to be abandoning its theory that Conley might have attacked Mary Phagan and thrown her down the elevator shaft, only a few feet distant from the front door, by the door. On the contrary, Reuben Arnold, examining Darley and other witnesses, emphasized the case with which such a deed might have been accomplished. It seemed to be the effort of the defense at this time not to center upon any one theory, but to show the jurors that the negro might have perpetrated the crime and disposed of the body in any one of four or five ways.

Darley in advancing the striking possibility that the body had been carried through the door on the first floor into the rear of the building, and that the door had been called up during the first days after the crime as a by-product of the investigation, was examining Darley and other witnesses, emphasized the case with which such a deed might have been accomplished. It seemed to be the effort of the defense at this time not to center upon any one theory, but to show the jurors that the negro might have perpetrated the crime and disposed of the body in any one of four or five ways.

Darley said that the door on the first floor had been broken open by the murderer and that his suspicion immediately was fastened upon Conley because of the negro's peculiar actions. He said he had called the day watchman to mount an espionage over Conley.
