$1,700,000 HOUSE TO MOVE TAKE UP GEORGIA CROPS

Atlanta Gets $800,000 of United States Deposits—Asked for Larger Amount.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Georgia has been allotted $1,700,000 of the $50,000,000 which Secretary McAdoo will deposit in the banks of the South and West to assist in moving the crops.

Atlanta national banks will receive $800,000 deposits. The remaining $900,000 will be divided among Savannah banks and those of other cities, probably including Macon.

Six Atlanta banks are eligible to receive these deposits under the rule laid down by the secretary that any bank so favored must have a circulation equal to 40 per cent of its capital stock.

It is expected that the money will be deposited within the next few days. It will be withdrawn gradually, one-quarter at a time, over a period extending through February, 1914, so as not to create any disturbance of credits.

These funds are not loans in any sense of the word. They are deposits. The only difference between them and the deposits of any private concern is that the banks are required to give collateral of 10 per cent in Government bonds and 30 per cent in commercial paper at 40 per cent valuation, or municipal or State bonds at 75 per cent valuation. The banks must pay 2 per cent interest.

Banks Here Regret Amount Is Pared.

Disappointment is expressed by Atlanta bankers that Secretary McAdoo has seen fit to reduce the Atlanta appropriation from $1,000,000 to $800,000. The Crozier House Association had been advised of that fact, however, on Friday, three days before Monday's public announcement.

The committee necessary to pass on the local commercial paper offered as collateral for the deposits, has been appointed and consists of C. E. Currier, president of the Atlanta National Bank, chairman; T. D. Madoc, vice president of the Lowry National Bank; W. L. Peel, president of the American National Bank; Frank Hawkins, president of the Third National Bank, and Charles I. Ryan, chairman of the Fourth National Bank.

All six of the Atlanta national banks are eligible to receive an allotment of this $800,000. The one large bank having a circulation of less than 40 per cent of its capital stock, having recently increased its outstanding bank notes to the required amount.

B. H. Jones Is Named Atlanta Postmaster

Bolling H. Jones was appointed Monday to the Atlanta Postmaster's office, succeeding Isaac McKee. President Wilson sent the nomination to the Senate, which probably will be confirmed immediately.

The appointment of Mr. Jones caused no surprise in Atlanta, where rumors that he would be named have been going the rounds several weeks. Many friends and admirers of Mr. Jones have predicted all along that he would be the appointee of the President.

Mr. Jones is one of Atlanta's enthusiastic boosters and has taken an active part in the efforts of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

He is in the joint office of the Atlanta Globe Works.

Proba Huff charged.

The investigation of the offense conducted by Judge Spear in the trial of the controversy between the Judge and Colonel William A. Coffey of Macon, over a bankruptcy proceeding started more than ten years ago.

Colonel Huff, in an open letter, severely arraigned the actions of Judge Spear, for which a contempt case was ordered by the judge.

The complaint to the Department of Justice in Washington, and investigators from that Department were sent to each city in which Judge Spear holds court, and the records examined and affidavits secured.

The complaint and report of investigators resulted in the action of the committee to-day.

NO RECOMMENDATION TO COURT FOR MERCY IN VERDICT: 'M INNOCENT HE SAYS AGAIN; WIFE FAINTS AWAY AS SHE HEARS NEWS

Leo M. Frank was found guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan by a jury in Judge Roan's court at 4:56 Monday afternoon and a minute later a howling crowd was cheering its approval.

According to what appears to be reliable authority, the jury was unanimous in its verdict on the first ballot formally taken one hour and a half after the jury returned from its dinner.

All doors to the courtroom were locked as the verdict came in. No recommendation for mercy was made by the twelve men who listened to four long weeks of exhaustive evidence.

Thirty-five hundred people outside the courthouse yelled themselves hoarse as the verdict was announced. Juror Winburn, the foreman, escorted by a deputy, led the jury into the room. All twelve men seemed pale and nervous, oppressed by weight of their momentous task.

Frank's presence in the courtroom has been waived, according to an announcement made at 4:15, when it was reported that the jury had reached a verdict. The courtroom was to be cleared for the jury to make its announcement.

When informed of the jury's verdict in his cell in the county jail late Monday evening, Frank cried:

"My God, to think that even the jury was influenced by mob law!"

Frank shrank back for a brief moment as though struck when the one word "guilty" was uttered by a friend, but regained his composure immediately. He would not see newspapermen and his friends would tell little of what he said except that one of them vouched the information that he had asserted:

"I am just as innocent now as I was a year ago."

As the news was broken to Frank his wife uttered a cry of anguish.

"Oh, Leo," she wailed, "can't we get justice?" and broke down in tears. She was attended to by her family physician.

Frank said he would issue a written statement later, but only with the permission of his attorneys.

The jury was very nervous and pale as it entered the courtroom headed by Deputy Plennie Miner. For a time it hesitated before the twelve men entered the jury box. Only the order of Judge Roan of "Gentlemen, take your accustomed seats," caused the men to file in.

"Gentlemen, have you reached a verdict?" said Judge Roan, when the jury had become seated.

Foreman Winburn arose and said: "We have, your honor." The foreman then opened the piece of paper upon which the verdict was written and read:

"We have found the defendant guilty," the verdict read. "As the verdict was read the silence within the courtroom was broken only by the loud cheering outside."

When the foreman had resumed his seat, Solicitor Dorsey arose and asked each juror:

"Each Man Answers 'Yes.'" "Is that your verdict?" and in each case the response was "Yes."

Judge Roan then announced to the Sheriff that he would pass sentence upon Frank to-morrow.

Judge Roan then thanked the jury, saying:

"I want to thank you for your services. This is the longest criminal case I have ever known of in my life." The jury arose as if to leave the courtroom then, but resumed their seats.

Judge Roan was the first to leave the courtroom. He received an ovation from the throngs which packed the streets. He was lifted from his feet upon the shoulders of the enthusiasts and carried several hundred feet. Dorsey took his hat from his head and bowed to the acclamations of the crowd.

"Cheers for Hooper, too." Hunter street was blocked clear to Whitehall street, and Pryor was blocked for two blocks on either side.

As Frank G. Hooper left the courtroom at 6 o'clock, a lane was made for him across to the Kiewit building, directly opposite the courtroom and the cheers which went up rent the air.

When the jury was ushered in, Frank was not present. Judge Roan said to Dorsey:

"Mr. Dorsey, I understand that you have waived the presence of the accused."

The Solicitor General nodded his head. "I do," he answered. The verdict was read. The jury had deliberated for four hours and seven minutes.

After posing for several flashlight photographs, the jury left the box and was swarmed by newspapermen. Questions as to how the verdict was reached remained unanswered.

To each inquiry, the jurymen stated that they had taken an oath not to reveal the details under which the decision was arrived at. Cheers for the Jury.

The grim visage of each man, however, told of the hard battle through which they had gone. After a short time the jurymen left the courtroom. As they were recognized by the crowds outside the courthouse, they were wildly cheered. Probably no demonstration of this magnitude has ever been seen before in Georgia as a criminal trial.

Judge Roan left the courtroom at 5:15. He also was applauded. The jurymen made no response, but slipped quietly into an automobile and was whisked away.

The jury proceeded to the Thrower building to draw its pay, each man receiving $48.00.

First reports that Frank had been told of the verdict immediately after its receipt at the jail proved false. It was nearly 8 o'clock when his family physician, Dr. Rosenberg, and Dr. David Marx went up to the prisoner's cell to convey the tragic news.

Frank's wife was with him at the time and the physician was called in case she collapsed.

Attendants at the jail said Frank received the news of the verdict without a tremor. His wife fainted away, but was soon brought to by her physician and left the jail for the Seig home about 8 o'clock.

Frank's mother at the Seig home on Georgia avenue showed the most remarkable fortitude when the news was given to her. She wept bitterly for a few moments, then dried her eyes and announced that she would fight her boy's cause to the highest court, Outburst of Applause for Dorsey.

After leaving the courthouse, Attorney Dorsey retired to the Kimball house, where he remained in conference for 20 minutes. He left the building in company with Attorney Stephens and was again greeted with a tremendous outburst of applause. A double row of policemen forced a passageway to the Solicitor's automobile.

As Dorsey took his seat the crowd gathered around the machine and hundreds of congratulatory hands were thrust toward him. Mounted policemen had to go in front of the car to open the streets. From buildings on either side of the streets handkerchiefs waved and veen women in the windows cheered. The cheering continued until the automobile was out of sight.

At the Kimball House, to which the jurymen went to gather up the clothing and personal effects which they had used during their long stay, another large crowd had gathered and greeted the men with another ovation until the corridors resounded. Each man was swamped with persons, known and unknown to him, who wring his hand vigorously.

Solicitor Dorsey finished his speech at twelve o'clock and Judge Roan prepared to charge the jury. A brief recess was taken.

Courthouse officials, the attorneys in the case and newspapermen were the only ones present when the jury brought in its verdict. The dramatic scene that had been expected when the jury superintendent faced the men who held his life in their hands, was, of course, averted by the waiving of the prisoner's presence.

There was a thrill of tense anticipation when word came from the courtroom that the jury was ready to report. The rumor had been long abroad that the jury had arrived at a decision about 3:30 and had been merely holding off for the arrival of the attorneys.

Rosser and Arnold and Dorsey, all of whom had gone home for a brief nap, were summoned. Attorney Hooper was at the courthouse before the clearing of the scene of the great trial began and said he had no doubt of the jury's decision.

When the jury sent down word that it had arrived at a verdict, Sheriff Mangum mounted the judge's bench and tipped for order in the crowded courtroom.

Gentlemen, I would have to clear this room of all but those directly interested in the case," Sheriff said. "Gentlemen, that all spectators must clear out."

A murmur of protest greeted the Sheriff's order, but when going down the aisles directed the crowds to the door and they filed slowly out.

When the last spectator had left the room there remained about 50 persons in all. These consisted of the attorneys for the State and defense, Chief Clerk, Sheriff Mangum, the jury, the court reporter and several newspapermen.

GOOD CHARACTER OF MARY PHAGAN RECONSIDERED, ASSAYS JUDGE CHARGING DORSEY

MRS. FRANK ARRIVING AT THE COURTHOUSE

The wife of the defendant in the Phagan case has not missed a session of the trial of her husband.

Here is Judge Roan's complete charge to the jury verbatim: "Gentlemen of the Jury—This bill of indictment charges Leo M. Frank with the offense of murder. The charge is that Leo M. When the closing proceedings Saturday, I was giving you a brief analysis of the contents of the statement I am not going into an exhaustive study of that statement. It is far too far to burden you with it. But there are certain language and statements which merit some consideration.

"Let the galled judge witness," said Dorsey sarcastically, "and you will find that he has no right to make such a statement, and that he is guilty of the same offense as the defendant. He is guilty of the same offense as the defendant. He is guilty of the same offense as the defendant. He is guilty of the same offense as the defendant."

JUROR REVEALS HOW VERDICT WAS REACHED

The Georgian to-day reveals some of the innermost secrets of the jury that convicted Leo M. Frank of the murder of little Mary Phagan. This inside story of the greatest criminal case in the South's history is an intensely interesting revelation of the workings of men's minds. It covers three long weeks and more throughout which the evidence for and against the pencil factory superintendent was tediously unfolded, link by link.

It casts upon the various points made by the defense and the prosecution the light in which they were viewed by the twelve men who were chosen to act as the judges. It ends with the last memorable meeting of these men on the top floor of the courthouse Monday afternoon which culminated in the fateful verdict: "We the jury find the defendant guilty."

The information is given here with as it was obtained by a reporter for this newspaper from one of the jurors late Monday night while the full weight of his grim burden still rested upon him. It is told in his own impressive words.

"It was the only thing we could do. The evidence was against Frank from start to finish. And so we did our duty as we had sworn to do. Dorsey's Youth and Sincerely Won."

"It would be hard to say what, at the trial, made the greatest impression on the jury. It was probably the testimony of General himself. He was a marvel. His youthful appearance, coupled with his sincerity, made a wonderful hit. There wasn't a minute of the hours that he spoke that he didn't seem to mean every word that he uttered."

"Dorsey is a wonderful speaker. He puts complete faith in his words. And he drives his points clear in and sticks them on the other side. They stick behind them to make them true."

"His theory of the murder was the one we accepted. It was the one the

'Boll Weevil Wiggle' Newest Dixie Dance

MEMPHIS, Aug. 25.—Officers of Tennesse County, Miss., have issued an order prohibiting young society folk from dancing a strange waltz. The dance was originated by negro cotton pickers, and is dubbed the "Boll Weevil Wiggle."

"It is a combination of the 'white bear,' 'chicken waltz' and a waltz. The man takes the girl in his arms, holds her tight and glides along like skating. At the end of a long stride he bends her in front of him, lifts her by the hips and when the orchestra draws out a long chord, there is a kiss that can be heard all over the dance room."

The Kaiser Becomes A Total Absterain

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—The Kaiser has laid his embargo on beer. His favorite drink now is lemonade, with a dash of orange juice, but does not force this beverage upon his guests. The usual vias are served.

The Kaiser, it is said, did not use any alcoholic beverages while on his Northern cruise and became convinced that being a teetotaler gives him more energy. He believes, in moderate drinking is one of the greatest factors in retarding the development of nations.

South China Revolt Completely Collapses

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE Atlanta Georgian.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 25.—The Southern Chinese revolution, directed by Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Dr. Wu Tingfang, has collapsed completely. Dispirited rebels here to-day, stated that the last rebel stronghold at Sinking has fallen into the hands of President Yuan Shi Kai's Federal troops.

It is believed now that if there is any more fighting it will be of a doubtful guerilla character between small roving bands of rebels and outlaws and Federal soldiers.

THAW CHARGES JEROME WITH CONSPIRACY

Fugitive Says Former Prosecutor Shielded 'Vicious Rich' Men to Convict Him.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 25.—Following the arrival here of former District Attorney William T. Jerome, of New York, and the announced determination of the attorney to renounce his line of defense to give the case an international aspect, Harry K. Thaw, fugitive from the Mattawa, was (New York) Avium for the Criminal Inmate, issued an attack against his former prosecutor, charging that Mr. Jerome shielded the identity of "vicious rich men" during Thaw's trial in New York for the murder of Stanford White.

Mr. Jerome did not take Thaw's attack seriously, but plunged into his preparations for the part he will take in the fight which will be waged when arguments are heard to-morrow morning before Judge Glensheen in Superior Court on Thaw's petition for liberty on a writ of habeas corpus.

"I am not worrying over Thaw's threat to test the constitutionality of the immigration laws and attack the United States treaty governing aliens and deportation," said Mr. Jerome. "Speed and economy are the watchwords of the Canadian courts. They deal out justice that is not impeded and tangled with technicalities and complications."

Former Governor William Stone is a mighty poor weather prophet. It is predicted that Thaw would be on Canadian soil when the new snow field is heard of if snowing in August here. Thaw will be dumped over the border and raised in Vermont or New Hampshire without delay. Examination into New York will be slow.

Thaw's interview attacking Mr. Jerome was given under the same circumstances as that yesterday on his sanity. He insisted on writing all his questions and answers, and would brook no interference from the reporter.

WOMEN'S STYLES TO-DAY INSANE, SAYS EDISON

Inventor on His First Vacation in Two Years, Sleeps Seven Hours First Night.

LOWELL, MASS., Aug. 25.—Thomas A. Edison, while passing through his city on route to the White Mountains on his first vacation in two years, gave out an interview in which he branded women's dress of the present day as insane.

He also condemned the modern "rot-tango" dances, scored the architect in politics, and said the talking machine is in the final state of perfection.

He praised John Hays Hammond's plans for peace by making war impossible through wireless control of battleships and torpedoes.

Mr. Edison showed he was on a real vacation by sleeping seven hours last night.

He said:

"The modern dances such as the 'turkey trot,' 'tango,' 'bummy bug,' etc., are only a temporary state of mind, from which the sensible American public soon will recover."

"The peculiarities of dress and the yard-dancing that have of late come upon the world may probably be called only a 'crash.' There seems to be periodic waves which rise all over the world. They follow one another from time to time, and no one can account for them."

"The people of America and other advanced countries are far too intelligent to be swept altogether off their feet by this passing phase of insanity in dresses and dancing."

Rides 500 Miles to Buy Col. Oody's Pet Horse as Gift to Him

DENVER, Aug. 24.—Friends of Buffalo Bill could not get along at the auction sale of the Wild West show property, when "Sham," the famous white horse ridden by Colonel Cody at every performance for 23 years was offered by the auctioneer.

The bidding was spirited and every man was anxious to buy the animal to present the animal to his rightful owner, Colonel Cody.

Col. J. C. Hill, of Lincoln, Nebraska, rode 500 miles in an auto to be present. He started the bidding.

There was general joking when the animal was knocked down to Colonel Hill, who declare he would present the animal to his rightful owner, Colonel Cody.

KLAMATH FALLS, ORE., Aug. 25.—Sheriff Charles Law has been given the alternative of applying fifteen lashes to the back of William Fox, a convicted wife beater, or being punished by Justice R. W. Gowen for contempt of court.

The Sheriff said he would go to jail rather than carry out the sentence of the court, and that was not enough, he would resign his office.

JUDGE STAYS SENTENCE; NEW TRIAL TO BE ASKED

Luther Rosser, chief of counsel for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, announced Tuesday that he would make a motion before Judge L. S. Roan during the day taking a new trial for Mr. Frank.

Rosser declared that if the motion was denied, he would at once make preparations to carry the case to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia.

Judge Roan announced Tuesday that he had held up the sentence of Frank temporarily and that he had not definitely decided at what time he would pronounce the penalty for the crime of murder of which Frank was found guilty Monday afternoon.

It is known that Luther Rosser and Beuben Arnold, attorney for the convicted man, are preparing for a fight for his life through the highest courts, although they would issue no formal statement Tuesday.

The two lawyers are resting for a few days from the exhausting struggle in which they engaged for four full weeks, but within a short time they will resume their efforts to prove the young factory superintendent an innocent man.

The report that Attorney Rosser had collapsed proved untrue. He told the newspapermen Tuesday that aside from a severe hoarseness he felt as lively and belligerent as ever.

Emil Selig, the father-in-law of Frank, brought him his breakfast Tuesday morning. The convicted man, if he suffered any shock from the verdict Monday, was said to have recovered entirely from it by the morning. It was as stoical as ever and even while in the shadow of the gallows he expressed himself as just as certain that he ultimately would be exonerated of the terrible crime as he was on the first day he was arrested.

Mo's Influences
Jury, He Says.
 "My God! Even the jury is influenced by mob law," was the words with which he greeted the news of the verdict Monday afternoon.

Frank was with his wife at the Tower when the intelligence came. Rabbi Marx, Dr. Rosenberg, the Frank family physician, and a number of other doctors were in the office of Sheriff Mangum. Dr. Rosenberg receiving some minutes after the verdict was known at the courthouse.

Rabbi Marx and Dr. Rosenberg went with the news to the man and his wife.

"The jury has found me guilty," Leo said the physician.

"Mrs. Frank screamed and broke into hysterical weeping. It was her husband who calmed her and assured her that everything would be all right in the end."

Forwards Her

 Within a few minutes he proceeded to leave the jail in company with Rabbi Marx and Dr. Rosenberg.

Traces of the tears were still on her face when she came through the corridor. With the aid of the sheriff,

FRANK'S ATTORNEYS CARRY PLEA FOR A TRIAL TO HIGHER COURT

Judge Must, Under Verdict, Pass Sentence of Death

Just four months after the murder of Mary Phagan, Leo M. Frank was convicted of the slaying of the 14-year-old girl in the National Penitentiary.

Neither the prisoner, his relatives, friends nor any of his counsel appeared in the courtroom when the death verdict was rendered. The sole representative of the defendant was Attorney Joseph H. Ransel.

The jurors were quick in arriving at their verdict. The case was heard into their hands at 11:40. They went immediately to lunch and returned to the courtroom at 1:30.

At 1:58 the result was announced in the courtroom. To avoid any sort of a demonstration, the courtroom was cleared of all spectators when it became known that the jury was ready to render its verdict.

Frank was in the tower with his young wife when the verdict was rendered. "My God! Even the jury was in-"

Frank's Friends Hopeful; 'I'm Vindicated'—Lanford

Though he has been convicted of the most terrible crime in the history of the South, the friends of Leo Frank during the four long months since Mary Phagan's body was found have stood steadfastly by Leo Frank.

Chief of Detectives Newell Lanford, head of the department which aided in securing the evidence that convicted Frank, has issued a statement regarding the verdict.

Masons of Dalton Hear Grand Master

DALTON, Aug. 18.—Masons from this and adjoining counties assembled here Monday afternoon and night to meet Robert L. Collins, of Savannah grand master of the Georgia Grand Lodge, who was guest of Dalton Masons.

Frank would not talk at length to the newspaper men. His wife, who had shown the signs of the last hours of the trial throughout the day, collapsed in tears.

After the concluding words of the judge's charge Monday afternoon, the jury filed from the courtroom and several scores of persons took advantage of the lull in the court's activity to crowd inside the doors.

Several newspaper men sat on the sixth floor of the uncompleted new courthouse and calmly watched the proceedings of the jury on the fourth floor of the old building.

The two attorneys did not wish to speak publicly for the Belletton on the matter, but neither could see any objection to this procedure.

Pierce Loses Pinkerton Job By Actions in Phagan Case

As a result of the charges made by the police of unfair dealings by the Pinkerton operatives in the investigation of the Phagan case, H. J. Pierce, superintendent of the agency in Atlanta, tendered his resignation.

The report is founded on the withdrawal of Scott's appointment to the superintendency of the Houston, Texas, office, which was made shortly before the charges against Pierce were made public.

JONES WILL BARR POLITICS FROM POSTOFFICE

Declaring that here will be no politics in the postoffice where he takes charge, William H. Jones, who was nominated Monday to the Atlanta postoffice by President Wilson, Tuesday indicated the principles which he will apply to the department.

Following this explanation the official commission of office will be forwarded to the new postmaster, who immediately will assume his duties, emphasizing such matters.

Mr. Jones declared Tuesday that he would run the office on a strict business basis that he could not tolerate officials who measure up to the requirements of the office where those officials are answered by civil service, and that he would use to that effect.

Mr. Jones is a native of Virginia and one of Atlanta's most prominent business men. At present he is vice president of the Fulton National Bank, a director of the 'Continental Trust Company, a director of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, a director of the Atlanta Freight Bureau and secretary and treasurer of the Warehouse Store.

JURY REVEALS GRAPHIC STORY OF VERDICT

Interesting Account of Work of Frank's Judges is Unfolded by One of Them.

his lifetime there to make a wonderful speech when he opened the State's argument. We were half expecting some brilliant oratorical display to us. And when he ended there was some disappointment. We said he had not done his best.

Then we saw his sacrifice. He had only made a plain statement of the State's case and left for the defendant general whatever fame and fortune there was to be won by the State's counsel.

The jury heard none of the cheering for Dorsey outside the courtroom at any time. We heard the crowds in the courtroom laugh at times, and we laughed, too, but that had no effect.

Probably the hardest job we had was to sit there and face Frank's mother and his wife with the slowly growing feeling of the defendant's guilt. Some of the jurors cried when Frank's wife broke down following his speech, it was an impressive thing to us. Yet it didn't effect the verdict.

Frank's Speech Caused Wonder. The trouble with Frank's speech was the same as the trouble with the entire defense. The evidence declared to us that he was guilty and no words of his could disprove that fact.

Probably nothing else in the whole case was of more interest to us than the other witness's cross-examination of Conley. We thought it was a master's display of human enmity. Yet in the jury's mind it was like a war rocket, soaring up into the heavens to cast its fountain of brilliance about and then die out. The other's story remained as he had told it. That had a tremendous effect in the verdict.

When there was that cabbage, it was astonishing the amount of knowledge was displayed by the members of the jury when the technicalities of medicine were brought out. We understood it all. The specimen of cabbage taken from the little Phagan girl's stomach was named around around in the jury room and we could easily see that it had not been infected.

That also had its effect. There were men among us who luckily were well up on digestion. The expert said very little that we did not understand. But I will venture to say that few of the men of that jury will ever eat cabbage again.

Full Force of Duty Strikes Home. It is a terrific thing to be on a jury which holds a man's life in its hands. The weight seems heavier during the jury days of the trial. You are sick with the same anxiety of your fellow jurors; first, then in the mirror you see that your own life is as much at stake as the life of the full force of the duty in front of you strikes home. You realize that there you have a man in your hands, you shall have disposed of the life of a fellowman.

Yet strange to say, there wasn't one among us who tried to flinch from his full share of the work. Each seemed eager from the start to do what he had sworn to do, and the determination seemed to grow as the day passed. When we left the courtroom this afternoon with the jury's charge there wasn't a doubt in the mind of anyone of us that justice would be done. I think that thought in a great measure, was the cause for our quick decision.

Of course, we didn't dream that the case would last as long as it did. Some of us hadn't prepared for it. It meant a loss of a great deal of money to many of the men. Yet when this was brought up along in the second week, who so and who so might, I took only one mention of the task before us to make all else look insignificantly small. Jurors in a sphere where money is not known.

BUSINESS MEN ON LONG HIKE ON BET

Conyers Banker and Merchant Walk to Asheville in Ten Days, Winning Their Wager.

ASHEVILLE, Aug. 24.—Tramping through the mountains of North Georgia and Western North Carolina for just six hours less than ten days, E. Paul McDaniel, cashier of the Bank of Conyers, Ga., and Louis C. Summers, a merchant of that place, have arrived in Asheville.

Mr. McDaniel and Mr. Summers walked to Asheville following the route of a wager with two other Conyers residents that they would not resort to the use of train or automobile.

Upon their arrival here the Georgia men were tendered an informal dinner by J. P. McDonald and L. H. Pope, both of Atlanta, and other friends. While walking is fine, they will return home in a motor car.

The trampers left Conyers on August 16 and followed the mountain highways and byways in reaching Asheville. They had no maps for charts to guide them, relying to good fortune and advice from residents along the route. They stopped at several Georgia and North Carolina towns secured photographs along the line and getting testimonials from mayors and bankers to the effect that when they had been "topping it" and there wasn't a train of automobiles in sight.

Lind Leaves for Home as Wilson Frames Decisive Peace Terms. Break Believed Near.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The American proposals to General Huerta, as intimated at the White House today, are the following:

First, a definite armistice.

Second, a free and equal election in all parts of the country.

Third, General Huerta is not to be a candidate at this election.

Fourth, both factions must agree to abide by the result.

These fundamental propositions formulated by the United States will not be changed by any developments in Mexico City to-day. President Wilson has decided to make his stand on them, and while they should be modified in unessential details, their vital features must remain in any negotiations to be conducted further.

The supplementary suggestions spoken of in Secretary Tamm's statement to-day can not affect the fundamental propositions. Every Lind has left Mexico City, as appears in Mexico City press dispatches to-day. The White House has no information that he has left Mexico City, and is puzzled to understand how in view of the favorable reply sent by the President to Lind's message of last night, he could have left the Mexican Capital.

The State Department denied that Governor Lind was ordered out of Mexico, and further claimed that the Mexican situation remains unchanged.

It is understood that Governor Lind will leave Vera Cruz on board an American warship, probably the New Hampshire, within a short time. There are at present four American battleships at Vera Cruz—the New Hampshire, South Carolina, Michigan and Louisiana. One of them will be placed at Governor Lind's disposal, and the other three will remain in Mexican waters in a warlike attitude.

Sheriff Uses Train, Horse, Feet in Chaso

SIBTALA, Aug. 25.—After being a mile on train, riding horseback in miles and walking 18 miles, Sheriff J. P. Randall captured John Jackson and W. L. Thomas, white men, who escaped from Sibtala. Both were charged with robbery.

When Judge Reed had finished reading the sentence, Frank was taken into the chair between the two judges.

Still protesting his innocence, Leo M. Frank, college graduate and superintendent of the National Pencil Factory, was Tuesday sentenced "to hang by the neck until dead" on October 10, by Judge L. S. Roan before a small crowd of attorneys, newspapermen and a few friends.

torneys, Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, who had already branded the trial held for four weeks as a farce in which the jury was influenced by "mob sentiment." Judge Roan fixed October 4 as the date for hearing arguments.

A long and notable legal fight in certain over the effort to save Frank from paying the penalty fixed by his court. The case will be carried to the highest courts if Judge Roan refuses a new trial.

There was the hush of horror as the dreadful "Hanged by the neck until dead, and may God have mercy on your soul," were uttered by the judge. The signs of Frank's emotion were few and few. A few minutes later he was asserting, clearly and calmly his entire innocence.

Frank heard his sentence with but a slight show of nervousness. He stood leaning slightly against the railing in front of the judge's bench looking straight into Judge Roan's eyes. Occasionally he moistened his lips, but otherwise he was calm. His eyes, though were bloodshot and his skin more pronouncedly white than ever before.

Judge Roan addressed him: "The jury which has been trying you for the last several weeks has found you guilty. Have you anything to say why the sentence should not be passed on you at this time?"

Frank leaned slightly against the railing and placed one hand behind his back before replying. Then he said in a calm, even voice:

"Your Honor, I say now as I have always said: I am innocent. Further than that, I will state that my case is in the hands of my country."

The prisoner's voice was so low that for a moment his hearers were not aware that he had finished and a deathly silence reigned. Then Judge Roan spoke:

"Your counsel inform me that they will move for a new trial," he said, addressing Frank, "but in the meantime, it is my sworn duty to pass sentence on you."

"I have tried to give you a fair trial. I may have erred, but I have done my duty as my conscience dictated."

Judge Roan then picked up from his desk the sheet of paper upon which his sentence was written. As he did so, through some slight misunderstanding, the crowd arose to its feet.

"Take your seats, take your seats," said Judge Roan, then read the sentence. In legal form, it was this:

"The State against Leo M. Frank, indictment for murder, Fulton County Superior Court, May Term, 1913. Verdict of guilty; July term, 1913."

"Whereupon it is considered ordered and adjudged by the court that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be taken from the bar of this court to the common jail in the County of Fulton, and that he be ready there until the first execution in the manner fixed by law."

This sentence was further adjudged by the court that on the tenth day of October, 1913, that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be executed by the Sheriff of Fulton County in private, witness only by the executing officers; a sufficient copy of the sentence to be given to the relatives of the said defendant and such clergyman and friends as he may desire.

Such execution to take place in the common jail of Fulton County, and that said defendant on that day be and do stand on a cross at twelve and a clock, p. m., by the Sheriff of Fulton County named by the court, and that he be ready there until he shall be taken to the gallows to be hanged by the neck until he is dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

"In open court, this 25th day of August, 1913, L. S. Roan, Judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit presiding."

When Judge Reed had finished reading the sentence, Frank was taken into the chair between the two judges.

At 10:40 o'clock Frank took the place between two deputy sheriffs and was taken to the gallows. When Frank emerged from the building below and walked out to the street, he was met by a crowd of friends. At the doorway to the Fulton building another automobile containing Mrs. Leo Frank was waiting. When Frank emerged from the building he exchanged greetings with his wife, but no words were spoken.

When the machine with the prisoner moved out into the street toward the jail Mrs. Frank's automobile came to the curb and stopped.

Lind Leaves Capital To Sail for Home.

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN. MEXICO CITY, Aug. 25.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent here by President Wilson on a mission of pacification to President Huerta, left the capital at 7 o'clock this morning for Vera Cruz.

The failure of the mission here is considered a serious blow to the United States upon a warship on his arrival at Vera Cruz.

President Huerta had ordered Mr. and Mrs. Lind the use of his private coach to make the trip across to Vera Cruz, and Mr. Lind had accepted, but his morning the private car was not at the station. Consequently the Lind party had to travel upon an ordinary day coach, and the Vera Cruz train did not carry any Pullmans.

CHARGE, D. A. Bates, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, of the United States Embassy, was at the station to bid Mr. and Mrs. Lind goodbye, but there were no representatives of the Mexican Government on hand. Pierce Loses Out Because of Case

As a result of the charges made by the police of unfair dealing by the Pinkerton operative in the investigation of the Phagan case, II. H. Pierce, superintendent of the agency in Atlanta, tendered his resignation.

It is a fact that the young woman was dressed in black, pulled only by a white lace collar. She looked composed, but the traces of a night of weeping were in her eyes.

What no limitation was given by General Superintendent Cyclopedia as to who would be Pierce's successor. It is generally reported that Harry Scott would be appointed to fill the position.

Mr. Frank was with his wife at the home of Mrs. Henslee, Dr. Henslee, the family physician, and a number of other friends were in the office.

Mr. Frank screamed and broke into hysterical sobs. It was her husband who yanked her and assured her that everything would be all right in the end.

Trial a Farce, Say Attorneys

L. Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, counsel for Leo Frank, issued the following statement this morning: We deem it not amiss to make a short statement, as the attorneys of Leo M. Frank, to the public.

The temper of the public mind was such that it invaded the courtroom and invaded the streets an unmade itself manifest at every turn the jury made; and it was just as impossible for this jury to escape the effects of this public feeling as if they had been turned loose and had been permitted to mingle with the people.

Frank's Friends Hopeful; 'I'm Vindicated'--Lanford. Though he has been convicted of the most terrible crime in the history of the South, the friends who have stood steadfastly by Leo Frank during the four long months since Mary Phagan's body was found have not deserted him.

It is very gratifying to the members of my department that the jury, after careful deliberation, found Frank guilty. I am not surprised at the verdict, however, nor are any of the detectives who have worked on the case.

Wilson Delays Message; Lind Quits Mexico

President Huerta was asked for a postponement of the delivery of the Wilson message until Mr. and Mrs. Lind are safe on board a United States warship at Vera Cruz, that there could be no possible attempt at assassination.

FIGHT BEGUN TO SAVE FRANK
MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL FOLLOWS DEATH SENTENCE

U.S. TAKES ITS FINAL STAND ON MEXICO

Lind Leaves for Home as Wilson Frames Decisive Peace Terms. Break Believed Near.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The American embassy to General Huerta, as intimated at the White House to-day, are the following:
 First, a definite armistice.
 Second, a free and early election in all parts of the country.
 Third, General Huerta is not to be a candidate at this election.
 Fourth, both factions must agree to abide by the result.
 These fundamental preparations furnished by the United States will not be charged by any developments in Mexico City to-day. President Wilson has decided to make his stand on them, and while they might be modified in unessential details, their vital features must remain in their entirety to be conducted further.
 The supplementary suggestion spoken of in Secretary Tumull's statement should not affect the fundamental preparations. Embay Lind has left Mexico City, as appears in Mexico City news dispatches to-day. The White House has no information that he has left Mexico City, and is expected to understand how in view of the favorable reply sent by the President to Lind's message of last night, he would have left the Mexican capital.
 The State Department denied that Governor Lind was ordered out of Mexico, and further claimed that the Mexican situation remains unchanged.
 It is understood that Governor Lind will leave Vera Cruz on board an American warship, probably the New Hampshire, within a short time. There are at present four American battleships at Vera Cruz—the New Hampshire, South Carolina, Michigan and Louisiana. One of these will be placed at Governor Lind's disposal, and the other three will remain in Mexican waters, awaiting developments.

President Delays Message.
 President Wilson's continued reports that all hope of the success of the Lind mission was not lost when he postponed sending his message to Congress until 10 o'clock to-morrow. If the negotiations continue over a considerable period the message may not go to Congress for some time. If the American proposals are accepted it may be read at all.
 The belief that as the crisis approached was emphasized by the semi-official announcement of the American proposals made to Huerta through Embay Lind. That the White House was at all times their terms, and that the facts that they were fundamental proposals and would not be changed, was regarded as extremely significant.
 Reports are current here that Huerta intends to resign the presidency in favor of Treviño, one of his lieutenants, but to be a candidate for president.

 Crowded conditions in Atlanta schools is worrying the School Board. Every effort is being made to accommodate the pupils when the public schools open next month. Conferences by a committee of members of the board and Mayor Woodward are expected to result in temporary relief.

Pounds Package He Picks Up; Explosion Jars Neighborhood

A plumber was knocked unconscious and severely cut and bruised by an explosion of dynamite in a vacant house at No. 122 Tenth street, where he was working Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock.
 He picked up a small package wrapped in a newspaper, and not knowing what it was struck it with a sharp blow with a chisel. The explosion resulted. Several other workmen beside the plumber who were in the house were injured.
 The house is one in which Howard Burns, a negro, shot his wife and then committed suicide less than a month ago. Since the tragedy it has been vacant. Several days ago residents of the neighborhood found several sticks of dynamite in the place. It was thought all of it had been removed.
 The explosion created a great deal of excitement in the neighborhood, many of the residents of which are negroes.

McLoughlin Retains U.S. Tennis Title in Brilliant Match

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 25.—Maurice B. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, upheld his supremacy on the American tennis courts to-day by winning the all-comers' championship for the second consecutive time. In the final match of the tournament, the hero of the Davis cup matches defeated Norris Williams, II, of Philadelphia, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4.
 In every respect it was a great battle. Williams, also of the International team, handled the heavy side of the championship as no other players in the tournament had done. In the second set Williams temporarily had McLoughlin upon the defensive. But the champion, who has played throughout one of the greatest tournaments in the history of the game without the loss of a set, until to-day, simply swept Williams before his assault in the last game.

SPEER PROBE DELAYED IN HOUSE

Republicans Block Clayton's Move to Hasten Investigation of Georgia Judge.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—A resolution to investigate the charges against Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, was introduced in the House today by Chairman Clayton, of the Judiciary Committee.
 An effort to have it considered immediately, failed, on the objection of Minority Leader Mann, and the resolution went over until to-morrow.
 In presenting the resolution Mr. Clayton said:
 "The committee reached the unanimous conclusion that the charges were of such grave nature that further investigation was warranted. I may say that not only members of the Judiciary Committee, but other members of the House, have given this subject careful attention.
 "No member of the committee has had opportunity to talk with the witnesses, and so the committee did not feel like voting to impeach Judge Speer."
 Urges Fair Inquiry.
 "If Judge Speer is not guilty of the wrong conduct alleged against him, a committee of this House ought to vindicate him. If it reaches the conclusion that he should be impeached and removed, the House owes it to the people to take this course."
 "Several members of the committee have expressed the hope that the Judge is not guilty, but we felt it was only fair to the country to bring in this resolution."
 Minority Leader Mann said he had never heard of a similar case being started in such a manner, with no one making an actual charge on the floor of the House.
 "I doubt the propriety of the House having no charges before it, authorizing a committee to proceed with an investigation," said Mr. Mann. "I have seen no charge in the papers worthy of investigation."
 "Does the gentleman think I ought to give out the charges at this point?" asked Mr. Clayton.
 "I think the House ought to be informed," said Mr. Mann.
 Representative Harrell, of Georgia, pointed out that some of the most important charges, those made by Colonel Huff, had been thoroughly aired.
 Harrell, for Col. Action.
 "Justice demands this investigation," said Mr. Harrell. "You should be satisfied you should be quick to allow a quick investigation of charges made by reputable citizens. I hope no member will be so unjust to the people of that district as to do anything to impede an investigation."
 Mr. Mann persists in his objection, and the resolution went over.
 The procedure taken in this case, far as the resolution for an investigation is concerned, is the same as that in the impeachment proceedings against Judges Swaine, Hanford and Archibald.

PRISONER MUST HANG OCT. 10, JUDGE RULES; INNOCENT, HE REPEATS

Almost before the dread verdict of "guilty" had ceased ringing in his ears, Leo M. Frank, convicted of slaying Mary Phagan, heard Tuesday the still more terrible words, "sentenced to hang by the neck until dead," before the echo of his own words, "I am innocent!" had died away.

Frank will pay the penalty for the murder of Mary Phagan, which the jury Monday agreed he had committed, on October 10, unless the efforts of his two lawyers, who already have started a new fight for his life, are successful in postponing the execution or ultimately in clearing their client. There is little doubt that the execution will be put off, as an appeal will act as a stay.

Sentence had hardly been pronounced by Judge U. S. Roan at 10:40 o'clock Tuesday morning in his courtroom in the Throver building before Attorney Reuben Arnold was on his feet to make a motion for a new trial.

Judge Roan said that he would set Oct. 4 as the date for hearing the arguments on the motion. It is known that Solicitor Dorsey is most vigorously opposed to any movement looking toward the postponing of the case. He asserted repeatedly during the last days of the trial that the claim of the defense that Frank was not receiving a fair trial was ridiculous on its face.

Wife Waits Outside During Sentence.
 While the death penalty was being imposed upon the factory superintendent, his young wife sat outside the Throver building in an automobile. She had followed her husband in the car, waiting for him as he was taken into court between two deputies and again following him when he was conveyed back to the Tower.

Frank displayed no more emotion than he did during the progress of the long trial. He perhaps was a trifle paler than usual and his face a bit more haggard, but aside from this news would have known as he stepped firmly down from the Throver building steps that he was a man on whom the death sentence had just been pronounced.

The fight for Frank's life, which may consume many months, arouses a question as to the disposal of Jim Conley. It is the general supposition that Conley's case will be held in abeyance until Frank's fate definitely is determined by a new trial or the decision of the appeal to the Supreme Court.

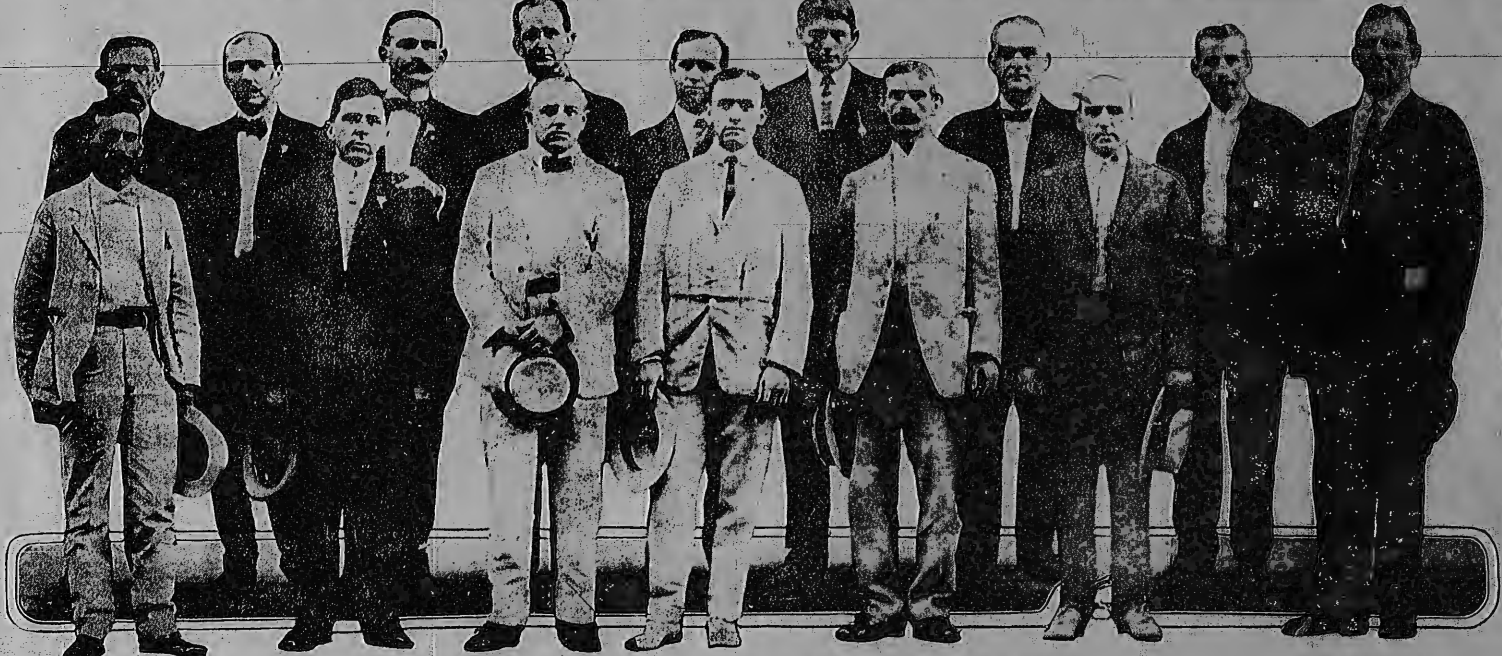

Newt Lee Released From Custody.
 Newt Lee, material witness in the Frank trial and at one time a suspect, was released from custody Tuesday morning after spending exactly four months in jail.

A long and hot legal fight is certain over the effort to save Frank from paying the penalty fixed by the court. The case will be carried to the highest courts if Judge Roan refuses a new trial.
 "There was the hush of horror as the dreadful 'Hanged by the neck until dead, and may God have mercy on your soul,' were uttered by the judge. The signs of Frank's emotion were few as ever. A few minutes later he was asserting calmly and coolly his entire innocence.

Frank heard his sentence with but a slight show of nervousness. He stood leaning slightly against the railing in front of the judge's bench looking straight into Judge Roan's eyes. Occasionally he moistened his lips, but otherwise he was calm. His eyes, though, were bloodshot and his skin more pronouncedly white than ever before.
 Frank Again Protests Innocence.
 Judge Roan addressed him:
 "The jury which has been trying you for the last several weeks has found you guilty. Have you anything to say why sentence should not be passed on you at this time?"
 Frank leaned slightly against the railing and placed one hand behind his back before replying. Then he said in a calm, even voice:
 "Your Honor, may now as I have always said, 'I am innocent.'"

WIFE, MOTHER EMBRACE FRANK AFTER SENTENCE

Continued from Page 1. Further than that, I will state that my case is in the hands of my counsel. The prisoner's voice was so low that for a moment his hearers were not aware that he had finished and a deathly silence reigned. Then Judge Roan spoke: 'Your counsel inform me that they will move for a new trial,' he said, addressing Frank, 'but in the meantime, it is my sworn duty to pass sentence on you. 'I have tried to give you a fair trial. I may have erred, but I have done my duty as my conscience dictated.' Judge Roan then picked up from his desk the sheet of paper upon which his sentence was written. As he did so, through some slight misunderstanding, the crowd arose to its feet. 'Take your seats, take your seats,' said Judge Roan, then read the sentence. In legal form, it was this: 'The State against Leo M. Frank, Indictment for murder, Fulton County Superior Court, May Term, 1913. Verdict of guilty, July term, August 25, 1913. 'Whereupon it is considered, ordered and adjudged by the court, that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be taken from the bar of this court to the common jail in the County of Fulton, and that he be safely there kept until his final execution in the manner fixed by law. 'It is further adjudged by the court that on the tenth day of this month, 1913, that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be executed by the Sheriff of Fulton County in public, witness only by the executing officer, a sufficient guard, the relatives of the said defendant and any clergyman, friends and as he may desire. 'Such execution to take place in the common jail of Fulton County, and that said defendant on that day, between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 2 o'clock p. m. be by the Sheriff of Fulton County hanged by the neck until he shall be dead, and may God have mercy on your soul, and may God give you your reward on the 26th day of August, 1913. I, S. Roan, Judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit, presiding. When Judge Roan had finished reading the sentence, Frank sank back into a chair between the two friends, Leo Strauss and Julian Bloem. His face had grown a bit paler, but the calm stolidity which characterized his attitude throughout the grim proceeding remained. 'Your honor,' he said, 'we make motion for a new trial. 'I will hear the arguments on the

by the neck till dead" still echoing to his ears, arrived back at the grim old tower at 10:45 o'clock. Frank stepped out between Deputies Burdette and Owens. His face was a bit paler, his eyes a little wider open. Otherwise he was the same astoundingly cool prisoner. The trio walked to the jail door and Frank asked his escorts to wait a moment. A minute later another car drew up and the devoted wife of the convicted slayer alighted, Deputy Stutler at her side. Frank's face lighted up. Mrs. Frank smiled—the tragic smile of courage and loyalty—and they were clasped in each other's arms, the young wife showering kisses on the man who had just heard his doom pronounced. They disappeared into the gloom of the jail corridor. Mrs. Frank's arm around her husband's shoulder, shielding, tenderly embracing that touched the men who walked with averted faces at Frank's side. A moment more and Frank was in his mother's arms at the cell entrance. From foreign eyes and words of hope showered upon him to drown the echo of the terrible pronouncement of a brief white bark. The young woman was dressed in black, veiled only by a white lace collar. She looked composed, but the traces of a night of weeping were in her eyes. The mother was pale and worn. Neither would talk to newspaper men. Mob Injuries. Paul Selig, the father-in-law of Frank, brought him his breakfast Tuesday morning. The convicted man, it is supposed, was shocked from the verdict. Monday was said to have recovered entirely from it by the morning. It was as stolid as ever

I'm as Innocent as I Was A Year Ago, Asserts Frank

Just four months after the murder of Phagan, Leo M. Frank, 37, was convicted of the slaying of the 13-year-old girl in the National Penitentiary. No recommendation for life imprisonment was made by the jury, according to the charge by Judge L. S. Roan, that a sentence of death by hanging be passed upon him. Neither the prisoner, his relatives, friends nor any of his counsel appeared in the courtroom when the final verdict was rendered. The sole representative of the defendant was Silas Hopkins, a member of the firm of Rower, Brandon, Slon & Phillips, who was designated to be present and waived for Attorney Rower and Arnold the presence of the prisoner. A motion for a new trial will be made by Rower and Arnold. The jurors were quick in arriving at their verdict. The case was given into their hands at 12:40. They went immediately to lunch and returned to the courtroom at 1:15. They proceeded to the election of Fred Win-directions from their offices, crying the extras on the verdict. Frank was in the tower with his young wife when the verdict was returned. 'My God! Even the jury was influenced by mob law,' was the exclamation with which the accused man met the news of the verdict of guilty. 'I am as innocent as I was one year ago,' he continued. Frank would not talk at length to the newspaper men. His wife, who had shown the strain of the last hours of the trial throughout the day, collapsed in tears. Rabbi Marx and other friends of the family were at the jail when the fatal news came. They declared that nothing had developed since the beginning of the trial to shake their belief in Frank's entire innocence. After the concluding words of the judge's charge Monday afternoon, the jury filed from the courtroom and several scores of persons took advantage of the leniency of the court deputies to crowd inside the doors. In a haze of smoke from innumerable cigars and cigarettes and from the explosion of flash-light powder, the motley rout of spectators waited impatiently for some sign that the jurors were ready to return to the room. Any unexplained move on the part of Sheriff Mangum or one

'What made you reject that man?' I asked an army sergeant on recruiting service, as a broad shouldered would-be soldier was turned away. 'Bad teeth!' replied the sergeant. You would be surprised to know that from six to eight per cent of the recruits rejected for enlistment in the U. S. Army within one year were rejected because of defective teeth. And that thirty-five per cent of the dental cases in the U. S. Army were directly traceable to diseased oral conditions. Perfect cleanliness of the teeth is absolutely essential to Good Health. A pleasant, sure way to perfect cleanliness is the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, and the best a man can give to his teeth. You too should use COLGATE'S RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

WE'VE ONLY GOT OUR DUTY, SAY MEN WHO HELPED CONVICT FRANK

Dorsey's Plea of Great Weight--Only Wondered at Prisoner's Statement

JURY'S STORY OF HOW EVIDENCE WAS WIGNED AND VERDICT REACHED

The Georgian to-day reveals some of the innermost secrets of the jury which convicted Leo M. Frank of the murder of little Mary Phagan. This inside story, of the greatest criminal case in the South's history is an intensely interesting revelation of the workings of men's minds. It covers three long weeks and more throughout which the evidence for and against the pencil factory superintendent was tediously unfolded, link by link.

It ceases upon the various points made by the defense and the prosecution the light in which they were viewed by the twelve men who were chosen to act as judges. It ends with the last memorable meeting of these men on the top floor of the courthouse Monday afternoon which culminated in the fateful verdict: "We the jury find the defendant guilty."

The information is given here with as it was obtained by a reporter for this newspaper from one of the jurors late Monday night, while the full weight of his grim burden still rested upon him. It is told in his own, impressive words.

"It was the only thing we could do. The evidence was against Frank from start to finish. And so we did our duty, as we had sworn to do. Dorsey's Youth and Sincerity Won."

"It would be hard to say what, of all the trial, made the greatest impression on the jury. It was probably the Solicitor General's himself. He was a marvel. His youthful appearance, coupled with his sincerity, made a wonderful hit. There was not a minute of the hours that he spoke that he didn't seem to mean every word that he uttered."

"Dorsey is a forceful speaker. He puts emphasis behind his words. And he drives his points home with clinches that on the other side, they stuck with us. They had the evidence behind them to make them stick."

"His theory of the murder was the one we accepted. It was the one the evidence pointed to. That was the way Frank killed that girl. "While the negro watched downstairs, he took the little girl by the metal rods and struck her, and then with a cord strangled her to death. Then those negroes who were with the negro told us and placed beside the bed."

"In Dorsey's argument there was one little sentence which seemed to imbed itself in the minds of every man on the jury, when he was speaking of the agreement between Frank and Conley that the negro should come back to the factory and burn the body. "The sentence was this: "And if the smoke from that little girl's burning body goes swirling up into the air, did Jim Conley believe he had hangared for another man's crime."

Trial a Farce, Say Attorneys

L. Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, counsel for Leo Frank, issued the following statement this morning: "We deem it not amiss to make a short statement, as the attorneys of Leo M. Frank, to the public."

"The trial which has just occurred, and which has resulted in Mr. Frank's conviction, was a farce and not in any way a trial. In saying this, we do not make the least criticism of Judge Rahn who presided. Judge Rahn is one of the best men in Georgia, and is an able and conscientious judge."

"The time ought to come when this man will get a fair trial, and we profoundly believe that it will. "The final judgment of the American people is a fair one. It is sometimes delayed in coming, but it comes."

"We entered into this case with the profound conviction of Mr. Frank's innocence. The result has not changed our opinion. Every step of the trial has intensified and fortified our profound conviction of his innocence."

Pierce Loses Pinkerton Job By Actions in Phagan Case

As a result of the charges made by the police of unfair dealings by the Pinkerton operative in the investigation of the Phagan case, H. H. Pierce, superintendent of the agency at Atlanta, tendered his resignation. It was promptly accepted by A. L. Cowardin, general superintendent, of New Orleans, who arrived in the city Monday.

Insubordination to the agency's policy of co-operation of its operatives with the local police in criminal investigations was charged against the superintendent. The specific charge which brought about the removal of Pierce was that of the finding of the blood-stained stick on the first floor of the pencil factory by Pinkerton operatives. It was claimed by the police that the stick was withheld from them by Pierce, to whom it was turned by the finders, and the butt of a buggy who substituted. The stick itself was turned over to the defense.

"This action by Mr. Pierce was in direct opposition to the rules of the 'Pinkerton Agency,' said Mr. Cowardin. "Our charter to operate in Atlanta carries the same rules that our men without nothing from the city police which they may secure in investigations of criminal cases."

"Explicit orders demanding that this agreement be carried through to the letter have been in effect in the Atlanta office since the agency was started here, and when Mr. Pierce disobeyed them, there was but one thing left to do."

While no intimation was given by General Superintendent Cowardin as to who would be Pierce's successor, it is generally reported that Harry Scott would be appointed to fill the position. The report is founded on the withdrawal of Scott's appointment as the superintendency of the Houston, Texas, office, which was made shortly before the charges against Pierce were made public. This promotion of Scott was made as a result of his work in the Phagan case investigation, in which he was the field marshal for the Pinkertons.

Mr. Cowardin admitted that Scott would stay in Atlanta.

Cordele Cotton Men Fight Tax Ordinance

CONDELE, Aug. 18.—If the threat of local cotton buyers are carried out, Cordele will practically be without a cotton market for an entire week or more.

The buyers are angered at the City Council over the passage of an ordinance making their annual license fee and the license on transient buyers $1 per day. On the grounds that the ordinance is unconstitutional, the local cotton men requested the Council to rescind the action, which was refused.

Cordele, Ga., Aug. 18.—The threat of a tax touring car in broad daylight in the latest sensation in Cordele, the automobile belongs to Frank Truher. The stranger who attempted to get away with it is not known here. He told Mr. Truher he was going to start an automobile hack line, claiming to have had six machines already. He intended to run a line, which extended to Tifton, when the machine got out of order and he put his garage there. He has not been heard of since.

Senator's Kin Killed In Row Over Saddle

WINDY, N.Y., Aug. 18.—William Phillips, non-in-law of former Senator Plumb, of Kansas, was killed on a range 100 miles north of Reno, Nev., by Frank Huber, Huber was arrested.

Phillips took a saddle from Huber's stable, saying it was his property for a debt.

"The first week of the trial was longer than all the rest put together. It was a big difficulty for us to get acquainted. We were all a little bit suspicious of each other. Outside of the jury, some of the jurors were pretty friendly, nothing was said about the case. We didn't care to talk with any of the jurors."

"Then somebody brought in a checker board and someone else a box of cards. We took a little bit of time to get acquainted. On each Sunday we read from the Bible and sang some songs. In fact, we held regular services every Sunday. It didn't matter what churches we belonged to. That was all. The defense made a wonderful

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—Dr. Cassinetti, son of Anthony Cassinetti, convicted murderer, was today surrounded by four lawyers and conducted by the brother, Anthony Cassinetti, Jr., an attorney of Sacramento, watched the preliminary steps of his trial as a white horse before Federal Judge Van Fleet today.

"His wife and mother did not appear with Cassinetti today. The wife, Mrs. Cassinetti, has been ill since the conviction of Harry L. Dixon on the same charge for the attempted rape of Catherine Dixon, Martha Warrington and Lola Norris."

Dixon, who will be sentenced on September 5, was not in court today to watch the selection of a jury from the 50 men of the regular jury panel. It was assisted by special prosecutor Theodore Hooper and his associate, Matt Rollins, said that the jury would be completed by tomorrow evening.

Interest in the Cassinetti case apparently exceeds that shown in the case of Dixon. A large number of spectators was turned away from the courtroom doors to-day. Proprietors of the hotel where Cassinetti is held to cope with the enormous crowd when all the spectators are present. The hotel is the Alameda.

While no intimation was given by General Superintendent Cowardin as to who would be Pierce's successor, it is generally reported that Harry Scott would be appointed to fill the position. The report is founded on the withdrawal of Scott's appointment as the superintendency of the Houston, Texas, office, which was made shortly before the charges against Pierce were made public. This promotion of Scott was made as a result of his work in the Phagan case investigation, in which he was the field marshal for the Pinkertons.

Mr. Cowardin admitted that Scott would stay in Atlanta.

FRANK EMOTIONLESS AS HE HEARS SENTENCE TO GALLOW'S 'Am Innocent; My Case Is in My Lawyers' Hands,' He Tells Judge Roan

Continued From Page 2. of his depute was the plea for a little hurry and the rumor that a verdict had been reached.

Lanford Says He Is Vindicated. Though he has been convicted on the most terrible crime in the history of the South, the friends who have stood steadfastly by Leo Frank during the four long months since Mary Phagan's body was found have not deserted him.

Rabbi David Marx, one of Frank's staunchest supporters, who has been with the convicted defendant almost constantly since he was first arrested on suspicion of being connected with the crime, was one of the most surprised men in Atlanta when the verdict was returned.

Dr. Marx was with Frank when the latter was notified of the verdict, and he suffered almost as heavily as the convicted man.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, head of the department which aided in securing the evidence that convicted Frank, has issued a statement declaring that the trial of the factory superintendent was the fairest ever held.

"I have never flinched in a case where the prisoner was given more latitude and liberties than Frank has received," Chief Lanford declared.

Frank received the news with fortitude and appeared to be more concerned about his wife than himself.

The verdict of the jury was announced to Frank and his wife by Rabbi Marx and Dr. Rosenberg.

WIFE, MOTHER EMBRACE FRANK AFTER SENTENCE

Further than that, I will state that my case is in the hands of my counsel."

The prisoner's voice was so low that for a moment his hearers were not aware that he had finished and a deathly silence reigned. Then Judge Roan spoke:

"Your counsel informed me that they will move for a new trial," he said, addressing Frank, "but in the meantime, it is my sworn duty to pass sentence on you."

"I have tried to give you a fair trial. I may have erred, but I have done no duty as my conscience dictated."

Judge Roan then picked up from his desk the sheet of paper upon which his sentence was written. As he did so, through some slight misunderstanding, the crowd arose to its feet.

"Take your seats," he said, "and I will read the sentence."

When Judge Roan read the sentence, it was in legal form. It was this:

"The state against Leo M. Frank, defendant; Fulton County Superior Court, May Term, 1915. Verdict of guilty, July term, August 25, 1915.

"Whereupon it is considered ordered and adjudged by the court that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be taken from the bar of this court to the common jail in the County of Fulton, and that he be safely there kept until his final execution in the manner fixed by law.

"It is further adjudged by the court that on the fifth day of October, 1915, that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be executed by the Sheriff of Fulton County in private witness only by the executing officers a sufficient guard, the relatives of the said defendant and such other persons and friends as he may desire.

"Such execution to take place in the common jail of Fulton County, and that said defendant on that day between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 2 o'clock p. m. be by the Sheriff of Fulton County hanged by the neck until he shall be dead and may stay there upon your soul.

"In open court, this 15th day of August, 1915. L. S. Roan, Judge of the State Mountain Circuit, presiding.

When Judge Roan had finished reading the sentence, Frank sank back into a chair between his two friends, Leo Strauss and Julian Hooper. His face had grown a livid color, but the calm stolidity which characterized his attitude throughout the trial proceeded unaltered.

Attorney Heusen Arnold, who had defended Frank at the trial, arose and addressed Judge Roan.

"Your honor," he said, "we make a motion for a new trial.

"I will hear the arguments on the by the neck till death" still echoing in his ears, arrived back at the grim old Tower at 10:40 o'clock. Frank stepped out between deputies Purdett and Owens. His face was a bit swollen, his eyes a little wider open. Otherwise he was the same astoundingly cool prisoner.

The trio walked to the jail door and Frank asked his escorts to wait a moment. A minute later another man came up and the devoted wife of the convicted slayer alighted, Deputy Purdett, at her side.

Frank's face lighted up. Mrs. Frank smiled the tragic smile of courage and fortitude and they were clasped in each other's arms, the young wife showering kisses on the man who had just heard his doom pronounced.

They disappeared into the gloom of the jail corridor. Mrs. Frank's arm around her husband's shoulder—a clinging, motherly embrace that touched the men who walked with them, who were about to do the deed of the terrible pronouncement of a life white lock.

The young woman was dressed in black, relieved only by a white lace collar. She looked composed, but the traces of a night of weeping were in her eyes. The mother was pale and weary. Neither would talk to newspaper men.

Job Influences
Jury, He Says

Earl Selig, the father-in-law of Frank, brought him his breakfast Tuesday morning. The convicted man, if he suffered any shock from the verdict Monday, was able to have recovered entirely from it by the morning. He was as stoical as ever and even while in the shadow of the gallows he expressed himself as just as certain that he ultimately would be exonerated of the terrible crime as he was on the first day he was suspected.

"My God! Even the jury is influenced by mob law," were the words with which he greeted the news of the verdict Monday afternoon.

Frank was with his wife at the Tower when the intelligible names, Habel Marx and Dr. Rosenbergs, the Frank family physician, and a number of other friends were in the office of Sheriff Mansum, Dr. Rosenbergs arriving some minutes after the verdict was known at the courthouse.

Habel Marx and Dr. Rosenbergs went with the news to the accused man and his wife.

"The jury has found you guilty, Leo," said the physician.

Mrs. Frank screamed and broke into hysterical weeping. It was her husband who calmed her and assured her that presiding would be all right.

Within a few minutes he persuaded Leo to leave the jail in company with Habel Marx and Dr. Rosenbergs. The face when she came through the corridor. With the aid of her escort she avoided the newspaper men and entered the newspaper men and entered the building.

Mr. Woodward came down shortly after. "I am as innocent today as I was a year ago," was Frank's comment on the verdict, according to Dr. Rosenbergs.

directions from their offices, crying the extras on the verdict.

Frank was in the Tower with his young wife when the verdict was returned.

"My God! Even the jury was influenced by mob law," was the exclamation with which the accused man met the news of the verdict of guilty.

"I am as innocent as I was one year ago," he continued.

Frank would not talk at length to the newspaper men. His wife, who had shown the strain of the last hours of the trial throughout the day, collapsed in tears. Habel Marx and other friends of the family were at the jail when the fateful news came. They declared that nothing had developed since the beginning of the trial to shake their belief in Frank's entire innocence.

After the concluding words of the Judge's charge Monday afternoon, the jury filed from the courtroom and several scores of persons took advantage of the leniency of the court deputies to crowd inside the doors.

In a haze of smoke from innumerable cigars and cigarettes and from the explosion of flash-light powder, the motley crowd of spectators waited impatiently for some sign that the jurors were ready to return to the room. Any unexplained move on the part of Sheriff Mansum or one of the court deputies was noted.

'I'm as Innocent as I Was A Year Ago,' Asserts Frank

Just four months after the murder of Mary Phagan, Leo M. Frank made good his assertion that he is as innocent of the slaying of the 13-year-old girl in the National Penitentiary.

His recommendation for his imprisonment was made by the jurors, this circumstance making it imperative, according to the charge by Judge L. S. Roan, that a sentence of death by hanging be passed upon him.

Neither the prisoner, his relatives, friends nor any of his counsel appeared in the courtroom when the recommendation was rendered. The sole representative of the defendant was Silas Hopkins, a member of the firm of Hooper, Brandon, Stanton & Phillips, who was designated to be present and waive for Attorney Heusen Arnold, who had defended Frank at the trial, to appear.

The jurors were quick in arriving at their verdict. The vote was given two to one in favor of hanging. They went immediately to lunch and returned to the courthouse at 1:15. They proceeded to the election of Fred Win-

"What made you reject that man?"

I asked an army sergeant on his return from service, as a broad shouldered would-be soldier was turned away.

"Bad teeth!" replied the sergeant. You may be sure to know that from six to eight per cent of the recruits applying for enlistment in the U. S. Army within one year were rejected because of defective teeth.

And that thirty-three per cent of the cavalry cases in the U. S. Army were directly traceable to diseased oral conditions.

'WE ONLY WANTED OUR DUTY,' SAYS MAN WHO HELPED CONVICT FRANK DORSEY'S Plea of Great Weight--Only Wondered at Prisoner's Statement

JURY'S STORY OF EVIDENCE WAS RECORDED AND PERFECTLY REACHED

The Georgian to-day reveals some of the innermost secrets of the jury which convicted Leo M. Frank of the murder of little Mary Phagan. This is the story of the greatest criminal case in the South's history...

The information is given here as it was obtained by a reporter for this newspaper from one of the jurors late Monday night while the full weight of his grim burden still rested upon him. It is told in his own, impressive words.

It was the only thing we could do. The evidence was against Frank from start to finish. And so we did our duty, as we had sworn to do. Dorsey's Youth and Sincerity Won.

It would be hard to say what, of all the trial, made the greatest impression on the jury. It was probably the Solicitor General's cross-examination of the witness.

It was Dorsey's argument, there was one little sentence which seemed to imbed itself in the minds of every man on the jury, when he was speaking of the agreement between Frank and Conley that the negro should come back to the factory and burn the body.

Hooper's Action Had Its Effect. "These words went a long way toward keeping Jim Conley from joining the mob, probably. They drew a contrast between right and wrong which made me look again at the evidence before us.

There was another thing which impressed that jury. It was Frank Hooper's sacrifice of Dorsey. We called it that. Hooper had the chance of his lifetime there to make a wonderful speech when he opened the State's argument. We were half expecting one.

Frank's Speech Caused Wonder. "The trouble with Frank's speech was the facts as he stated them. The entire defense, the evidence declared to us that he was guilty and no words of his could dispute that fact. Yet his body felt the weight his wonderful calm and dispassionate manner carried while he was talking. Yet that marvel was that a guilty man could do it. That was all.

It was the only thing we could do. The evidence was against Frank from start to finish. And so we did our duty, as we had sworn to do. Dorsey's Youth and Sincerity Won.

Trial a Farce, Say Attorneys

L. Z. Rosker and Hubert Arnold, counsel for Leo Frank, issued the following statement this morning: "We deem it not amiss to make a short statement, as the attorneys of Leo M. Frank, to the public.

"The trial which has just occurred, and which has resulted in Mr. Frank's conviction, was a farce and not in any way a trial. In saying this, we do not make the least criticism of Judge Lewis or the jury. Judge Lewis is one of the best men in Georgia, and is an able and conscientious jurist.

"The tempo of the public mind was such that it invaded the courtroom and pervaded the streets and made itself manifest at every turn the jury made and it was just as impossible for the jury to escape the effects of this public feeling as if they had been turned loose and had been permitted to mingle with the people.

"It would have required a jury of stoics, a jury of Spartans, to have withstood this situation. The time ought to come when this man will get a fair trial, and we profoundly believe that it will.

"The final judgment of the American people is a fair one. It is sometimes delayed in coming, but it comes. We entered into this case with the profound conviction of Mr. Frank's innocence. The result has not changed our opinion. Every step of the trial has intensified and fortified our profound conviction of his innocence.

"L. Z. ROSKER, "H. B. ARNOLD."

As a result of the charges made by the police of unfair dealing by the Pinkerton operatives in the investigation of the Phagan case, H. B. Pierce, superintendent of the agency in Atlanta, tendered his resignation. It was promptly accepted by A. L. Cowardin, general superintendent of New Orleans, who arrived in the city Monday.

It was horrible that time we spent in deliberation. Everyone knew what was going to be done, though hardly a word was spoken until we had agreed. We were surrounded with dread. Then someone suggested a drink. That someone I lived us and began to breathe again.

FRANK TO DIE CRACKED; WILL A PEAL

'I AM INNOCENT,' HE SAYS; 'MY CASE IS IN MY LAWYERS' HANDS'

Almost before the dread verdict of "guilty" had ceased ringing in his ears, Leo M. Frank, convicted of slaying Mary Phagan, heard Tuesday the still more terrible words, "sentenced to hang by the neck until dead," before the echo of his own words, "I am innocent" had died away.

Frank will pay the penalty for the murder of Mary Phagan, which the jury Monday agreed he had committed, on October 10, unless the efforts of his two lawyers, who already have started a new fight for his life, are successful in postponing the execution or ultimately in clearing their client. There is little doubt that the execution will be put off, as an appeal will act as a stay.

Sentence had hardly been pronounced by Judge L. S. Roan at 10:40 o'clock Tuesday morning in his courtroom in the Thorow building before Attorney Reuben Arnold was on his feet to make a motion for a new trial.

Judge Roan said that he would set October 4 as the date for hearing the arguments on the motion. It is known that Solicitor Dorsey is most vigorously opposed to any movement looking toward the reopening of the case. He asserted repeatedly during the last days of the trial that the claim of the defense that Frank was not receiving a fair trial was ridiculous on its face.

Wife Waits Outside During Sentence.

While the death penalty was being imposed upon the factory superintendent, his young wife sat outside the Thorow building in an automobile. She had followed her husband in the car, waiting for him as he was taken into court between two deputies and again following him when he was conveyed back to the Tower.

Mrs. Frank remained with her husband throughout the remainder of the day in his cell at the jail. They received none of the many visitors who called during the afternoon.

Frank displayed no more emotion than he did during the progress of the long trial. He, perhaps, was a trifle paler than usual and his feet a bit more haggard, but aside from this none would have known as he stepped firmly down from the Thorow building steps that he was a man on whom the death sentence had just been pronounced.

The fight for Frank's life, which may consume many months, raises a question as to the disposal of Jim Conley. It is the general supposition that Conley's case will be held in abeyance until Frank's fate definitely is determined by a new trial or the decision of the appeal to the Supreme Court.

New Lee Released From Custody.

New Lee, material witness in the Frank trial and at one time a suspect, was released from custody Tuesday morning after spending exactly four months in jail.

A long and notable legal fight is certain over the effort to save Frank from paying the penalty fixed by the court. The case will be carried to the highest courts if Judge Roan refuses a new trial.

There was the hush of horror as the dreadful "Hanged by the neck until dead, and may God have mercy on your soul" were uttered by the judge. The signs of Frank's emotion were few as ever. A few minutes later he was asserting, clearly and calmly, his entire innocence.

Frank heard his sentence with but a slight show of nervousness. He stood leaning slightly against the railing in front of the judge's bench looking straight into Judge Roan's eye. Occasionally he moistened his lips, but otherwise he was calm. His eyes, though, were bloodshot and his skin more pronouncedly white than ever before.

Frank Again Protests Innocence.

Judge Roan addressed him:

"The jury which has been trying you for the last several weeks has found you guilty. Have you anything to say why sentence should not be passed on you at this time?"

Frank leaned slightly against the railing and placed one hand behind his back before replying. Then he said in a calm, even voice:

"Your Honor, I say now as I have always said; I am innocent."

Pounds Package He Picks Up Explosion Jars Neighborhood

A plumber was knocked unconscious and severely cut and bruised by an explosion of dynamite in a vacant house at No. 123 Tallmadge street, where he was working Tuesday morning about 5 o'clock.

He picked up a small package wrapped in a newspaper, and not knowing what it was started to open it with a chisel. The explosion followed. Several other workmen beside the plumber who were in the house were injured.

The house is one in which Howard Burns, a letter, shot his wife and then committed suicide less than a month ago. Since the tragedy it has been vacant. Several days ago recent sticks of dynamite in the place it was thought all of it had been removed.

The explosion created a great deal of excitement in the neighborhood most of the residents of which are negro.

WIFE, MOTHER EMBRACE FRANK AFTER SENTENCE

Further than that, I will state that my case is in the hands of the court. The prisoner's voice was so low that for a moment his hearers were not aware that he had finished and a deathly silence reigned. Then Judge Roan spoke: 'Your counsel inform me that they will move for a new trial,' he said, addressing Frank, 'but in the meantime, it is my duty to pass sentence on you. 'I have tried to give you a fair trial. I may have erred, but I have done my duty as my conscience dictated.'

by the neck till dead" still echoing in his ears, arrived back at the grim old Tower at 10:45 o'clock. Frank stepped out between Deputas Harbitt and Owen. His face was a bit ashen, his eyes a little wider open. Otherwise he was the same astoundingly cool prisoner. The trio walked to the jail door and Frank asked his agents to wait a moment. A minute later another man came up and the deputed wife of the convicted slayer alighted, Deputy Stittes at her side. Frank's face lighted up. Mrs. Frank smiled the tragic smile of courage and loyalty—and they were clasped in each other's arms, the young wife showing those on the man who had just heard his doom pronounced. They disappeared into the gloom of the jail corridor. Mrs. Frank's arm around her husband's shoulder—whispering, motherly embrace that touched the men who walked with white faces at Frank's side. A moment more and Frank was in his mother's arms at the jail entrance from across the street. He was escorted down to an automobile waiting below and whisked off to the jail. At the doorway in the Thresher building another automobile containing Mrs. Leo Frank was waiting when Frank emerged from the building. He exchanged greetings with his wife, but no words were spoken. When the machine with the prisoner moved out into the street toward the jail Mrs. Frank's automobile fell in behind and followed.

No Women Hear Sentence Passed. But a few persons—not more than 20 in all—heard the passing of the sentence. Among them, there were two of Frank's friends, Strauss and Boehm. The other witnesses were made up of Sheriff Mangum, a half a dozen deputy sheriffs, numerous court attaches and newspaper men. There were no women in the courtroom. Frank came in before his counsel, smilingly he motioned to those in the room. Shortly after he had taken a seat Roseland Arnold came in and took seats beside Frank. The Atlanta Journal, Frank leaped over and whispered: 'What shall I say?' 'That your case is in the hands of your counsel,' replied the attorney. Sheriff Mangum escorted the judge to his bench and stood facing the defendant. The judge read the sentence of the sentence with his back to the window near the bench. Facing the crowd, he did not look at Frank throughout the proceedings. At the close of the sentence there was no demonstration of any kind. Quietly the crowd filed out behind Frank and waited until the elevator, descending from the fourth floor with the prisoner and his captors only returned for them. The automobile bearing Frank with the faithful words "sentenced to hang and even while in the shadow of the gallows he reassured himself as just as certain that he ultimately would be exonerated of the terrible crime as he was on the first day he was suspected. 'My God! From the jury he indicated by nodding his head with which he greeted the news of the verdict Monday afternoon. Frank was with his wife at the Tower when the intelligence came. Rabbi Marx, Dr. Rosenberg, the Frank family physician, and a number of other friends were in the office of Sheriff Mangum, Dr. Rosenberg arriving some minutes after the verdict was known at the courthouse. Rabbi Marx and Dr. Rosenberg went with the news to the accused man and his wife. 'The jury has found you guilty, Leo,' said the physician. Mrs. Frank screamed and broke into hysterical weeping. It was her husband who calmed her and assured her that everything would be all right in the end. Within a few minutes he persuaded her to leave the jail in company with the rest of the party still on the premises when she came through the corridor the newspaper man and entered the waiting automobile. Dr. H. Williams came down shortly after the verdict. He was a year ago was Frank's constant attendant at the trial, was announced by Dr. Williams. The wife of the Hells home at No. 48 East Georgia avenue, where Frank was held, was in the city. Her parents were close Tuesday morning. Neighbors said that Mr. and Mrs. Helle and their daughter had stayed with relatives overnight. Attorney Arnold left for Hot Springs, Pa., Tuesday afternoon for a month's rest. Mr. Arnold will return to Atlanta in time to participate in the argument for a new trial for the penitentiary superintendent, which has been set for October 4.

I'm as Innocent as I Was A Year Ago,' Asserts Frank

Just four months after the murder of Mary Phagan, Leo M. Frank stands convicted of the slaying of the 13-year-old girl in the National Penitentiary. No recommendation for life imprisonment was made by the jurors. The circumstances making it impossible for the jury to find a charge by Judge L. S. Roan, that a sentence of death by hanging be passed upon him. Neither the prisoner, his relatives, friends nor any of his counsel appeared in the courtroom when the death verdict was rendered. The sole representative of the defendant was Roseland Arnold, a member of the firm of Howe, Brandon, Blanton & Phillips, who was designated to be present and waive for Attorney Roseland Arnold and the presence of the prisoner. A motion for a new trial will be made by Roseland Arnold. Populace Cheers Verdict. The jurors were quick in arriving at their verdict. The case was on into their hands at 12:45. They went immediately to lunch and returned to the courtroom at 1:15. They proceeded to the election of Fred Win-burn as foreman and entered upon a formal discussion of the merits of the case. It was apparent that the jurymen were practically of one mind. 'They cast their ballot. At 3:15 it was known that the verdict was "guilty." At 3:45 the result was announced in the courtroom. To avoid any sort of a demonstration, the courtroom was cleared of all spectators when it became known that the jury was ready to render its verdict. Everyone was excluded except Solicitor Dursey, Attorney Hooper and Attaches of Dursey's office, several other members of the bar and the newspaper men. Hardly had Foreman Winburn read the words which branded the young factory superintendent a murderer before a mighty shout went up outside the building. The great crowds surging on all sides of the courthouse seemed to have had occult knowledge of the verdict at the very instant it was first uttered. 'The news spread like magic. While the crowds still were reading the verdict, the newsboys reported that the courthouse and radiated in different directions from their offices, crying the news on the streets. 'My God! From the jury was indicated by nodding his head with which he greeted the news of the verdict Monday afternoon. Frank was with his wife at the Tower when the intelligence came. What made you reject that man?

I asked an army sergeant on recruiting service, as a broad shouldered would-be soldier was turned away. 'Bad teeth!' replied the sergeant. 'You would be surprised to know that from six to eight percent of the recruits apply for enlistment in the U. S. Army within one year were rejected because of defective teeth alone. And that thirty-five percent of the castoral cases in the U. S. Army were directly traceable to diseased oral conditions.' Perfect cleanliness of the teeth is absolutely essential to Good Health. 'WE ONLY DID OUR DUTY' SAYS MAN WHO HE PE... CONVICIT FRANK Dorsey's Plea of Great Weight--Only Wondered at Prisoner's Statement

JUROR'S STORY OF HOW EVIDENCE WAS REACHED AND VERDICT REACHED

The Georgian to-day reveals some of the innermost secrets of the jury which convicted Leo M. Frank of the murder of little Mary Phagan. This inside story of the greatest criminal case in the South's history is an extremely interesting revelation of the workings of men's minds. It covers three long weeks and more throughout which the evidence for and against the penalty factory superintendent was tediously unfolded, link by link. It casts upon the various points made by the defense and the prosecution the light in which they were viewed by the twelve men who were chosen to act as the judges. It ends with the last memorable meeting of these men on the top floor of the courthouse Monday afternoon which culminated in the fateful verdict: "We the jury find the defendant guilty."

Trial a Farce, Say Attorneys

L. Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, counsel for Leo Frank, issued the following statement this morning. "We deem it not unwise to make a short statement, as the attorneys of Leo M. Frank to the public. The trial which has just occurred, and which has resulted in Mr. Frank's conviction, was a farce and not in any way a trial. In saying this, we do not make the least criticism of Judge Rusk who presided. Judge Rusk is one of the best men in Georgia, and is an able and conscientious judge. The temper of the public mind was such that it invaded the courtroom all pervaded the streets and made itself manifest at every turn the jury made; and it was just as impossible for the jury to escape the effects of this public feeling as if they had been turned loose and had been permitted to mingle with the people. "In doing this we are making no criticism of the jury. They were only men, and unconsciously this prejudice rendered any other verdict impossible. "It would have required a jury of stonics, a jury of Spartans, to have withstood this situation. "The time ought to come when this man will get a fair trial, and we profoundly believe that it will. "The final judgment of the American people is a fair one. It is sometimes delayed in coming, but it comes. "We entered into this case with the profound conviction of Mr. Frank's innocence. The result has not changed our opinion. Every step of the trial has intensified and fortified our profound conviction of his innocence. "L. Z. ROSSER, "R. R. ARNOLD."

CAMMELL SEES JURY POKED TO TRY HIM

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—F. Drew Cammell, son of Anthony Cammell, Commissioner General of Immigration, arrested by four law-enforcement officers, and escorted by the sheriff and accompanied by his brother, Arthur Cammell, Jr., an attorney at large, who had been arrested at every step of his trial as a white slave trader, yesterday said that he never before had been so closely watched by a jury as he is being watched now. His wife and mother did not appear with Cammell to-day. The elder Mrs. Cammell has been in some of the same charge for the defendant of Drew Cammell, Drew March and Walter and John Norra. Drew, who will be sentenced on September 2, was not in court today to watch the selection of a jury from the 40 men of the regular jury panel. It was reported by Special Investigator Theodore R. McElroy, who was present, that the jury would be composed by tomorrow evening. He stated in the courtroom on Saturday. Preparations were made by the marshal's office for the afternoon session when Mrs. Cammell and Mrs. Norra were to be present.

Pierce Loses Pinkerton Job By Actions in Phagan Case

As a result of the charges made by the police of unfair dealing by the Pinkerton operative in the investigation of the Phagan case, H. J. Pierce, superintendent of the agency in Atlanta, tendered his resignation. It was promptly accepted by A. J. Moran, general superintendent of the New Orleans, who arrived in the city Monday. Moran indicated to the agency's representatives the co-operation of his police investigations of criminal cases. The specific charges which brought about the removal of Pierce grew out of the finding of the blood-stained stick on the first floor of the pencil factory by Pinkerton operatives. It was claimed by the police that the stick was withheld from them by Pierce, to whom it was turned in by the mother, and the butt of a snuff whip submitted. The stick itself was turned over to the defense. "This action by Mr. Pierce, was in direct opposition to the rules of the Pinkerton Agency," said Mr. Moran. "Mr. Pierce is operating in Atlanta carries the agreement that our men without nothing from the police which they may secure in investigations of criminal cases.
