"The Ornament of a House"
Emerson said, "The ornament of a house is the friends who frequent it."
We have a large, beautiful, light, airy, comfortable—New—House—We try to make it at all times attractive and profitable to the public.
We measure our success of achievement by our patrons—our friends who enter here.
We invite you to come Monday.

This Great Annual Event Will Start Early Monday Morning Undermuslins---New Goods for the New Sale, This New Year!

How the women of Atlanta and vicinity will go for these beautiful Undermuslins is easily foretold in their irresistible charm and daintiness as they are spread in snowy array—veritable mountains of pretty laces, sheer embroideries, fluffy fabrics and ribbons—they will vanish like snow before the sun.

The sale this year is distinguished by two features which make it different from other January sales:

FIRST: The event is attended by the lowest pricing of any previous sale at this season of the year. In fact, the prices are such as are afforded in our annual June sales.

SECOND: The garments are all new, fresh—the varieties larger, with many new and improved ideas; muslins with new daintiness.

Every season brings forth marked improvement in merchandise. We aim always at the very best for our customers.

"How can we better serve people?" is the eternal question in this store.

Tomorrow we serve with important and opportune outclearings of these myriads of beautiful and GOOD undergarments offered at prices frankly intended to clear them out.

And may we say that those who come to share a very wonderful event will in no wise be disappointed?

But—Note the prices—They will assume double importance after you have examined the garments.

To Our Out-of-Town Customers

We want you to share every advantage of this January Undermuslin Sale, through the efficient service of our Mail Order Department. Go over the list and order anything needed or desired. Your order shall have prompt, personal attention.

CRACKERS SIGN NEW CONTRACTS

Names Are Withheld by Local Headquarters, But It Is Reported They Are Experienced Men.

There is a rumor circulating around baseball headquarters that the Crackers have purchased two new catchers for their 1915 team. The names of these two men are not given out, but it is pretty definitely known that both of them are of good worth have been purchased for the Crackers.

The rumor is entirely probable, inasmuch as the Crackers will have to have two new catchers for their team. One will be a catcher for next year, while Jeff Tye, the other catcher for the 1915 season, has been recalled by the Chicago Cubs and will not be returned this year. So it can be seen that the locals will have to have two new men, and the signing of these two is entirely probable.

The names of these men have already been given out, and it is expected that they will all be experienced men. An outfielder, two third basemen and a pitcher are also expected to be signed. He is at present negotiating with the Washington Americans, but has not reached an agreement as yet. The use of the Washington Americans has not reached an agreement as yet. Connie Mack's Great Team Establishes Unique Record; No Player Ejected in 1914

Don't fight the umpire, confine your efforts in that direction to the other team.

It is possible to be aggressive without resorting to rowdy tactics. The less you bother the umpire the better brand of umpiring he gives you in return.

Close decisions are bound to be given against you. On the whole it will just about even up for the season.

Every time a star player is put out of the game he weakens the chances of his team to win.

When a player is put out of the game he gives neither the public nor the club owner a run for his money.

The umpire will always be the ally, on every disputed point, for he is the exact center.

All umpires give the player just as they see them. The most strenuous protest never results in a reversal.

The public goes to the game to see the teams play ball, not argue with themselves and the umpire.

No team ever kicked itself into a championship. Several teams have kicked themselves into a losing position.

Umpires are human, learn to infatigable. The wise umpire listens to a player's protest, but he never lets it interfere with his decision.

When a substitute takes the place of a star in some big production on the stage the public always has the right to demand the money back at the box office. Some day such conditions will prevail in baseball.

When a majority of the crowd wants to see a player, is ejected from the game for some reason or other.

Does it pay to have your players constantly disputing with the umpire? Some managers are of the opinion that it does. Connie Mack, one of the great managers in the game, has a different opinion.

STOKES CASE POSTPONED.
Macon Murder Convict Moses for New Trial.

Macon, Ga., January 2.—(Special).—The hearing on the motion of A. W. Stokes, the Macon lawyer convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of V. C. Thomason, for a new trial, was again postponed today because of the fact that there were too many other cases on the calendar. The motion is based principally on the ground that Judge Mathews did not charge the jury on manslaughter. Mrs. Stokes and her little son were in court this morning. Stokes' plea at his trial was that Thomason had wrecked his home.

Master Key

John Fleming Wilson

A Thrilling Story of Mystery and Romance

A special arrangement for this paper, a photo drama, corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key," may be seen at the Savoy and Alpha theaters tomorrow. By arrangement made with the Universal Film Co., it is not only possible to read "The Master Key," each week, but also afterwards to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

5TH INSTALLMENT

 SYNOPSIS—Dorr goes upon strange things. How many have doors are there in the world? How many people are there trying to find "The Master Key"? Thomas Gallon found the thing of his life. He found it in the desert, where he was a slave. He found it in the desert, where he was a slave. He found it in the desert, where he was a slave.

When Ruth Gallon did not call upon him and he found himself unable to locate her, Charles Everett was at a loss what to do. He had wired Dorr of his anxiety about her and had received word in reply that the young engineer had received conflicting messages.

Unhappily for the girl, Everett was called out of town. And so when he found himself forced to make a hurried trip to San Francisco, her predicament became the more pronounced.

The false Everett, George Drake, took it upon himself to call at the Ritz for her mail and returning with word that there was none for her, Ruth felt a strange premonition that matters were not progressing as they should.

Mrs. Darrell found her gazing out of the drawing room window, huddled in a pathetic little heap, dejection stamped on features and forehead.

"Darrell," purred the hostess, "you look as if you had lost your last friend on earth. Do cheer up. What is the trouble?"

Ruth turned her head but remained in the same queer little attitude, replying in a plaintive voice: "I do not understand why Mr. Dorr has not written or wired me. Really, Mrs. Darrell, I am beginning to fear that something has happened to him."

Mrs. Darrell looked at her searchingly, but recovered quickly under the questioning return gaze.

"Do not worry, Ruth. Everything will come out all right. Supposing we take a drive. The air and sunshine will do you a world of good."

Every minute was one of delight to the unspoiled girl and each new sight and vista opened a new world to her inexperienced mind. After a stop at Grant's tomb they sped down town, reaching Columbus circle after a run through Central park. A blowout of one of the tires caused a delay. Ruth tried to sit in the car and jump out she cried a frantic warning. Before Mrs. Darrell could think of the possibility of a miscarriage of her well-laid plans, the girl was inside. She purchased violets for both and was on her way out when she saw a telephone. Instinctively, rather than from any other motive, she hastily called up Mr. Everett's office. To her amazement she learned that he had gone west.

Her news was even more startling to Mrs. Darrell than it had been to Ruth. Quick action was needed, and leaving Ruth in the car with a prevaricated excuse, the older woman was soon phoning to Drake, telling him to go west at once and instructing him to meet them in San Francisco, where he was to pose as Everett and confound carrying out the plot to secure possession of Ruth's mining property.

And thus it came about that five days later found them in the metropolis of the Pacific coast, where they were met by Drake, still posing as Everett.

The greatest difficulty lay in reconciling Ruth's mind to the mystery of Everett's sudden departure, after she had seen him at Mrs. Darrell's sight before. But the cleverness of the schemer counterbalanced all doubts and the girl was therefore persuaded to listen to San Francisco to carry out her plans.

Accordingly she wired Dorr, but again "the wires crossed," for although he learned that she was going to the western city, he again learned that Everett had failed to connect with her.

Ruth had been gone many days when John Dorr received another telegram from Everett that made his heart stop in regular beat. Alone in his cabin he pored over it as if there must be some hidden meaning beneath the words. It was unbelievable after all his pain and his careful forethought for her comfort and safety something had gone wrong. Everett was brief:

"San Francisco 2nd April —"

"John Dorr, Silent Valley, Cal."

"Have been unable to find Miss Gallon."

EVERETT.

For a while his mind refused to work logically. As he could think of was little Ruth Gallon, she of the slender hands and pure eyes, lost in the great city and pitilessly seeking a familiar face. But he pulled himself vigorously together and called up the agent at the station.

"Bill," he said over the telephone, "this is Dorr. I want to get a wire through to San Francisco."

"All right, John. What is it?"

John thought a moment and then dictated this message:

"Charles Everett, Call Building, San Francisco."

"Miss Gallon was to have gone to the St. Francis as I wired you before."

DORR.

After mulling over the problem he felt that he must confide in someone, of all the men in the mine he trusted only Tom Kane. He strode down the hill to the cook shanty and found the old man engaged in his task of preparing the noonday meal.

"Look here, Tom," John said abruptly, holding out the telegram. "I haven't said anything before but Ruth is lost in San Francisco. I've wired Everett before, he can't find her. I've reached for the yellow slip and read it slowly. He glanced up and said with the utmost simplicity: 'I reckon you'd better catch this evening's express.'"

But my work here—nobody has got to look after the mine and Wilkeson."

Tom Kane glanced at him and then at the bit of paper. "I know how you feel," he muttered. "But I've cooked years enough to know that if you leave things on the fire they'll burn. This business won't wait." He smiled magnificently. "And you just leave this to me. I've been here since the mine started and I guess I can attend to it from cook shanty to Wilkeson. The main thing is to find Ruth. I know she's safe, for nobody would hurt that little girl. But you've got to go to 'Frisco and help her. Likely she found herself pretty much a stranger. I got lost in New Orleans once and a reckoner 'Frisco is bigger."

"I'll go," said Dorr, promptly. "I'll leave my papers and my new plans in your charge, Tom."

The old man laid his warm hand on John's arm. "New plans?" he whispered. "Have you found the mother lode? Don't say anything to Wilkeson."

"But he is the superintendent!"

"Not of this shanty. I never trust an egg until I've broken it."

In Harry Wilkeson's dark heart there was what he might, in his twisted vocabulary, have termed happiness. His plans were working out to perfection. Jean Darrell had wired again that all was well and that she would have news for him in a few days. This meant that she and George Drake had done their part. He wondered why it was that John Dorr, who must certainly be anxiously awaiting word from Ruth, neither said anything nor displayed a sign of impatience.

It did not escape him that Tom Kane and the young engineer were in consultation several times. What were they planning? He determined to probe below. When Dorr came into the office in the afternoon and began to clear up his desk, Wilkeson asked quietly, "What's the news from San Francisco? Has Ruth wired?"

John had been expecting this perfectly natural question and was ready with his answer.

"Everything seems to be all right."

"Good!" said the superintendent dryly. "I'd like as they should."

With quick decision he turned his horse toward Vista Vista. He felt in his pockets to see how much money he had. He discovered that through an oversight he had put into his pocket before leaving the office the last San Francisco mine check for something like three thousand dollars. There was besides this a couple of hundred dollars.

So pulled this out, stared at it, laughed and went on. "Frisko for me!" said he.

The evening sun was pouring a pale blue light through a high Pacific fog when John Dorr came to his senses.

John Dorr Regained Consciousness.

Twenty feet away the machine was smoldering and the smell of oil and varnish lay like a miasma in the gulch. He could hardly breathe. He struggled painfully up the slope toward the road and then lost consciousness again. It was only for a moment, for Tom Kane, desert-wise, traveling in the cool of the evening, stopped his burro at the top of the declivity, wondering what the fire was. He saw that the bridge was gone—this might be due to tramps camped in the dry bed of the creek attending to their business. He led the burro over the road and down the slope, only to stop with an exclamation such as he had not used in years. John Dorr lay there with his fingers clutched into the gray mat.

He stopped over and saw that the body, belking heavily in the misty light, still held its vital spark.

"Where is Hickman, the driver?" The cook peered around and then once more bent over the motionless form of the young engineer. With great exertion he managed to lift him up and place him across one of the pack-saddles. John's arm automatically clasped the little animal's neck. Seeing him secure, and coming to his senses, Kane went down to the smoldering remains of the machine to search for his companion. One glance was sufficient; he quietly went back and started his journey toward the mine. His old hands, seared by years of cooking, patted the almost insensate form of Dorr.

They were almost to the Master Key mine when Dorr came to himself, slipped off the pack-saddle and stood up weakly.

"What happened?" he muttered.

"Nothing much," said Kane, putting his arm about him. "You had a bad fall; that bridge never was any too strong."

"Bridge?" said Dorr. "The bridge is gone?"

"Sure," said old Tom Kane, easily, whistling to his burro again. "You just came along with me."

"But I haven't got a cent of money!"

The cook looked at him with swift understanding.

burst of flame shoot up, a dense swirl of smoke. Then, like the faraway crackling of a fire came the noise of the yielding timbers, followed by a dull boom.

"My God!" whispered Wilkeson to himself. "The machine just exploded and the car is on fire." He crouched in the brush, waiting to see whether anyone emerged from the gulch. No one did. The bridge burned fiercely. At least no one could ever know the cause of this catastrophe and John Dorr would not go to San Francisco.

Instinct told him to flee the scene; but a stronger passion overcame him; he must see for himself what had happened. He mounted his horse and rode swiftly down the slope.

The track had turned completely over and lay broken and shattering across the waterway bowl. Wilkeson could not see two forms; all he discerned through the eddying smoke was the body of John Dorr, flung some distance from the track, his pallid face turned to the blazing sky.

"Dead!" muttered Wilkeson, chilled with the horror of the thing he had done. It bit into his very soul, that scene, until he could not stand it longer and rode furiously away toward the other side of the divide. He must go to San Francisco and look about the world and know nothing of this. On the crest of the mountain he halted and looked back. Far below him a thin curl of gray smoke marked the site of the murder. Knowing that he was safe, Wilkeson experienced a tremendous relief.

He raised himself exultantly in his stirrups. He was now master of the Master Key mine.

ing. His coat had been in the seat of the machine and was buried. "I'll get you another coat when we get back to camp," he said comfortingly. So they progressed the long and dusty road back to the Master Key. It was dark when they arrived and Kane was unable to take his share and much bruised charge into the cook shanty without being observed by any of the miners. Dorr was still but half conscious and willingly submitted to being put to bed, though he still protested that he wanted his coat.

"What do you want your coat for?" demanded Kane.

John opened his eyes widely, for the first time cognizant of his surroundings. Then he leaped from the bed. "All my money is in it!"

Tom Kane sat on the chair beside him, dithered in hand, as a sort of emblem of authority, and demanded in his careful tones, "There wasn't anything else in the coat, John?" He bent his white head, as if to catch a whisper; instead, Dorr gave a rancorous shout.

"There was that check from the mine!"

"I saw you myself give that check to Wilkeson," said the cook soothingly. "But that doesn't change matters any. You've got to get to San Francisco and you're busted."

Tom Kane pulled out an old deer skin robe and laid it spilled on the table a few hundred dollars.

"Just as soon as you get able, John," he said huskily, "you take this money and get to 'Frisco. Find Ruth. That's all that matters; find that little girl."

"I'm awfully glad to see you, Harry," was the cheery greeting he received from Jean. Her heart pounded with the joy of it!

After all, his scheming and plotting was worth while. He would win the mine and the woman also.

"The mine! The Master Key!" The thought brought him back like the snapping of a whip.

"Where is the girl?" he asked almost brusquely. "In there," Mrs. Darrell pointed to the curtains dividing Ruth's room from the other. Wilkeson started toward the ashway.

"Harry!"

"You mustn't go in there."

"Why not?"

"She's sleeping—you'll awaken her."

"Oh, all right," He paused and looked down at Mrs. Darrell. "Well, let's get down to business. Where are the papers? Have you gotten them yet?"

"Bah! Not so loud—" and Mrs. Darrell looked apprehensively toward the heavy plush hangings.

"Oh, that's all right, Jean. But we must hurry this thing up."

In her bed Ruth stirred. The murmur of voices came to her as in a troubled dream. Whose were they? Where had she heard that voice before? The heavy one? She turned on her side and the moonlight shone on her in a white light.

"I tell you, Jean, you must do as I say! If we want to get possession of those papers and secure the mine, we must act!"

"Will you be quiet?" Mrs. Darrell's eyes blazed in anger.

With the unconscious form of the girl in his arms, he rushed across the hall and slipped the curtains—

"You'll do as I say or—" "Harry!"

"Oh, come, old man. What's the use of all this argument?" and Drake laid his hand on Wilkeson's arm restrainingly. They saw met. Wilkeson calmed himself.

"Oh, all right. As you say," and he stepped to Jean and turned her around to him.

"Blast!"

"Hello! Hello!"

With one rush the trio were upon her. Mrs. Darrell seized the affrighted girl and dragged her from the phone. She screamed!

"Stop her yelling! Stop her!" commanded Wilkeson.

"George! For God's sake, do something!"

With her hand over the girl's mouth, Mrs. Darrell held her by sheer strength, while the always cowardly Wilkeson screamed his commands in a louder tone than those of the girl had been.

Her head laid backward and her body became limp.

"She's fainted! Call a taxi at once! We must get her out of this hotel!"

In less than five minutes they were shooting down in the elevator. Another quarter minute and Wilkeson, with the unconscious form of the girl in his arms, her face covered by the cape of the maid, was rushing across the lobby preceded by Drake. Mrs. Darrell stopped at the desk long enough to throw down a twenty-dollar bill.

"The girl is sick and must hurry her to a hospital," she managed to gasp.

Before the dumfounded clerk or the amazed guests could run to fetch them, they were out of the hotel and in a taxi.

The house detective sprang from almost out of nowhere and in a second was speeding after the fleeing ones, accompanied by another plain clothes man.

They sighted the first taxi as it rounded the corner of Powell and Eddy streets.

"Keep that car in sight and catch it if you can!" The chauffeur made answer with his foot.

As the detective saw the course the other car was taking they both murmured "Chinatown!"

Into the realm of the yellow man came the suite. Before a doorway they stopped.

Rap! Pause! Rap! Rap! Pause! Rap! A face appeared as the door creaked open—the face of a Chinaman, deeply lined—the almond-colored eyes scarcely visible through the nearly closed lids.

A signal and a whispered word from Wilkeson and the door widened the opening and all passed through.

With a whisk it closed.

Around bends and corners and down steps—another bend and another flight of stairs. Then along a long corridor where scarcely a ray of light was visible. All the time the shuffling feet of the little yellow man could be heard in the advance.

Then a door stopped the procession. Another series of signals. Another long walk. The door opened with a peculiar rumbling sound. They entered a queerly arranged room. At first glance it seemed very small, but as the eye traveled around the walls its strange shape gave one a feeling of fearsome apprehension. It was completely cylindrical.

Wilkeson at a sign from the Chinaman, laid Ruth on the floor and a Chinese woman shuffled to her at the back of the interior man. Leaving her in the charge of the Chinaman, the others returned the way they had come.

Dorr Arrives in San Francisco.

On the arrival of Dorr in San Francisco he was met by Everett at the ferry and together they started the search for Ruth. First they began a round of the hotels. Failing to locate her at any of the smaller hotels, first inquiring at the St. Francis, where she was supposed to stop—they arrived at the Grand.

Wearily and sore from his narrow escape of the night before, Dorr was ready to retire to his room, intending to purchase wearing apparel the next day.

Desiring to put some of his personal effects away he tried to open the dresser drawers and discovered them to be locked. He sent for a key and to his amazement on opening one of the drawers he discovered Ruth's papers in the midst of them.

He made speedy inquiry at the office and from the clerk and the detective learned of the getaways of Mrs. Darrell and her party.

Dr. In the historic second quarters of the quarter, and still leaving Ruth in the secure hiding, guarded by the watchful Wag Slag, a former valet of Wilkeson in the days of the "golden rule"—they walked to the lodging house and settled themselves to await further developments.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT OF "THE MASTER KEY" FULL OF INTEREST

Each Succeeding Reel Gains in Dramatic Intensity and Thrilling Escapades.

In the fifth installment of John Fleming Wilson's dramatic photoplay of love and adventure, "The Master Key," presented tomorrow at the Savoy and Alpha, the action of the drama is transferred to San Francisco. The story follows the life of the far western heroine, who is the latest episode of the serial, while a visit to Chinatown gives one a glimpse into the Oriental colony which has grown up in the coast city since the memorable fire of 1906.

The catastrophe which eight years ago laid waste the metropolis of the Pacific coast had done its work. The city was a mass of ruins. The survivors were scattered. The story of the catastrophe is told in the first two reels of the serial.

It is now reported that the Chinese, who have reconstructed their ruined city since the quake, have again built a city underground to flee to in case of another earthquake. This is the story of the serial, which is now being shown at the Savoy and Alpha.

Mr. Wilson, the author of "The Master Key," has surpassed himself in the dramatic construction of the Universal serial photoplay. His admirers, who have read "The Land Claimer," "The Man Who Came Back," "Across the Sky" and "The Land Claimer," will be unanimous in their opinion that "The Master Key" is a dramatic value far surpasses his previous works.

The Universal has given Mr. Wilson the privilege of directing the serial. He has not only directed the serial, but has also written the story. The serial is now being shown at the Savoy and Alpha.

"Stop Thief!"

It is officially announced that the week starting Monday, February 1, will be the last of the serial "The Master Key." The serial is now being shown at the Savoy and Alpha.

The Montgomery Secures Hearst-Selig War Films

Special Production in Five Reels—Also "The Pit" to Be Shown This Week.

In these days of war talk and unprecedented activity on the part of motion picture manufacturers, who endeavor to present the latest features of the world in time, a most unusual production has been released through the General Film company, by the Selig Polyscope company. It will be presented at the Montgomery Monday and Tuesday, January 5 and 6.

It is entitled "A History of the World's Greatest War Told in Five Reels of Motion Pictures."

Although coming from a source as the Hearst-Selig news pictorial, this five-reel special production is not to be identified with the two-week Hearst-Selig news pictorial series.

The five reels are of particular interest and show actual battle scenes with shot and shell, and all the carnage of war. The pictures were taken by Selig camera men, assisted by newspaper correspondents who worked together to obtain them. These five reels are a most unusual production, showing the battle lines of the world, the battle lines of the world, the battle lines of the world.

There were hundreds of feet of film showing the dead and dying, which were realistically horrible, but these were not shown in order to avoid appealing to the morbid sensibilities of the public. The pictures are a most unusual production, showing the battle lines of the world, the battle lines of the world, the battle lines of the world.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the management will present Wilson's "The Master Key," a five-reel serial, which is now being shown at the Savoy and Alpha.

The story is well and convincingly told. The interest is cumulative.

Lackaye has the role of Jaden, the messenger. Miss Gail plays the wife. Mr. Sills is the former lover. The work of each is just what it should be. Mr. Sills plays the villain without being villainous. There are no temperamental love scenes leading up to the proposed violence. It is done in cold blood—each with a full understanding of the gravity of the proposed step. But this is only an incident in a story of a hundred battles, for the relation of which all tracks are covered, with the exception of perhaps one other, that of a subsidiary character, which is not shown.

Mr. Francis is the broker who induces Jaden to join him in a big time-up. "Chas. Ogle" is the clerk. "The Master Key" is the story of the world's greatest war, told in five reels of motion pictures.

ALICE JOYCE MONDAY AT THE ALAMO NO. 2

In the months that follow, Ruth comes to find Lockwood and her husband. The gambler, on the other hand, is a monument of the terrible ferocity of the opposing forces and the fatal results.

While there have been other releases of pictures and they have been taken on European battlefields while the fighting was going on.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the management will present Wilson's "The Master Key," a five-reel serial, which is now being shown at the Savoy and Alpha.

The story is well and convincingly told. The interest is cumulative.

"Should a Woman Divorce?" Sensation in New York

A Spectacular Photo-Play Touching Big Problem Is Booked by Grand for This Week.

The management of the Grand theater has booked a motion picture attraction for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week which is conceded to be one of the most sensational and spectacular films ever shown in this country concerning a big problem.

"Should a Woman Divorce?" is the title of the film. There is much interest apparent in this picture in view of the publicity which the eternal question, "Should a Woman Divorce?" has received in Atlanta in the last ten days. It is a topic that nearly everyone is asked about, and the production of one that nearly every person, especially a woman, will want to see.

The picture is replete with interesting situations, among which is a spectacular cabaret scene, where the wife accuses the dead life of the husband who is located dining with two strange women. His love for her and her exposure in the cabaret cap the climax, and the wife determines that there shall be no more of that sort of thing, and does the worst thing possible in the circumstance—slops with her child.

Possibly her youth and inexperience might excuse her in the minds of many persons, but there are others who will probably take the stand that to matter how strong the persecution by her husband, she should have put up with it for the sake of her child. But a matter that can be decided only when one sees the entire film and takes into consideration the attending circumstances.

"Should a Woman Divorce?" is shown at Weber's theater, in New York, at 25 to 75 cents each night. It is credited to Big Furor, there, and the "watching-room-only" sign goes out in front of the house each night. At the Grand patrons of the motion picture drama get the same film at Grand prices—5c at all seats at the matinee, and 10c at the evening.

ATLANTA FILM MAN JOINS ENGLISH ARMY

The great battle lines now tightly drawn in the Old World will continue to call upon the subjects of the respective empires and citizens in the deadly combat, and their "call to arms" is as particularly and timely as it is dramatic. The film is now being shown at the Grand.

Many additions and improvements have been made in the production of "Zudora," the great serial, and a decided improvement in the production of the serial.

The Thanhouser "Killer" has been added which will appeal to all who have seen a child actor.

The Strand's first choice on the entire output of the Mutual Film corporation, which means a great deal to the movie fans of Atlanta. These pictures are the best to be had, and from the increase in patronage, they are what the people want.

A complete change of program daily has been instituted by the new management, so there will be no repetition of the same picture day in and day out, and the best to be had.

Full Speed Ahead For 1915 Means Such High-Powered Merchandising as these Sales With Other Strong Sales to Come

Rich's is not a store of dreamers nor drones—it is a store of doers.

After taking stock Friday—and putting last year's business behind us—we started in to make 1915 a busy, booming year.

Loads of new goods fresh from the warehouses have been opened—most of them have been specially bought and are underpriced.

This page tells only in part of the 1915 stocks on sale—it says nothing of the 1914 stocks to be sacrificed at January Clearance prices; it says next to nothing of the 17th Annual Linen Sale that starts Tuesday.

Then, there are more stocks to tell of—look each day on the back page of The Constitution for news that will tickle your purse. But first read this splendid page of Economy news before you—not only read, but act—Monday.

A First Showing of Spring Styles For Southland Wear

Charming Prophecies of the Spring Modes. Hats for Florida, California or at Home.

THE hats fairly sing S-P-R-I-N-G. One feels the note of harmony in outline; one feels it in the rich color combinations.

Though we illustrate some of the styles, we can't begin to picture their piquant beauty.

—There are straws for the palm-shaded walks of Florida and California.
—There are silks and satins for immediate wear at home.
—There are delightful combinations of straw and silk for tourist wear.

Even though this is a first showing, there is no lack of styles. Here are the new draped veils, as shown, chic military motifs, large hats simply trimmed. Tiny little hats with bobtail streamers are dainty and becoming.

But, after all, the hats must be seen. May we have the pleasure of showing them to you—Monday?
