

Fate of Burns' Agents Now in Hands of Jury; No Verdict Until Today

After Jurymen Had Been Out for One Hour, Judge Ben Hill Orders Them Locked in Kimball House for the Night.

PARTICULAR CARE URGED AS TO MATTER OF DOUBT IN CASE AGAINST LEHON

Jurymen Instructed to Consider Law and Evidence and Have No Thought of Any Other Crime Mentioned During Hearing.

A GREAT SPEECH!

Perhaps as great a compliment as Solicitor Dorsey ever had paid him was given to him last night by C. C. Tedder.

The case had gone to the jury. A group of men were talking to Mr. Victor Dorsey while waiting to hear from the jury. Mr. Tedder came into the group.

"Mr. Dorsey," he said, "your speech tonight was one of the best I have ever heard you make."

There was a general laugh.

Mr. Dorsey thanked Mr. Tedder for his frankness and assured him he had no malice against him personally.

"I am glad to see you take it like a sport," said Mr. Dorsey.

The case of Dan Lahan, attorney for the Burns detective agency; C. C. Tedder, a former Burns operative, and Arthur Thurman, the attorney, charged with subversion of justice in the R. L. Barber and R. C. Ragdale affidavits, incident of the Frank case, went to the jury last night at 10 o'clock. When the jury had been out an hour without reaching a verdict, the court announced it looked as though no verdict would be rendered until 3 o'clock Sunday morning.

The jury was sequestered in the Kimball house, where they spent the night.

The evening session of the trial, which began at 7 o'clock and concluded by the argument for the defense by Judge Arthur Thurman, and the argument for the prosecution by Solicitor General Hugh M. Douglass, was attended by a courtroom practically full of spectators, there being a number of ladies in the crowd. Nearly all of the spectators waited the full hour until the announcement that there would be no verdict before dispersing.

URGES CARE.

Judge Hill in his circumstantial evidence charge, instructed the jury to satisfy themselves very particularly as to the possibility of doubt in the evidence, asking them before returning verdict, "Are you sure?"

The judge instructed the jury that, while all three of the defendants are indicted jointly, if the jury deems any one or more of the defendants guilty and not the others, they may render a verdict. A verdict of "guilty" will be construed by the court to apply to all three defendants.

Judge Hill instructed the jury that, in considering the case they are to hear but two voices. The law demands the evidence. "You are to have no thought of any other crime mentioned," he said.

In his closing speech Solicitor Dorsey referred a number of times to the Frank case.

Judge Hill instructed the jury that, in considering the case they are to hear but two voices. The law demands the evidence. "You are to have no thought of any other crime mentioned," he said.

The two points to be decided by the jury was, in order to bring in a verdict of guilty, are:

First, that the Ragdale affidavit is false.

Second, that the witness was procured by the defendants by persuasion, promise of money or payment of money. Judge Hill stated that the jury may consider in their deliberations on the testimony of the affidavits of the jury believes that he had the truth.

In considering the Ragdale affidavit Judge Hill instructed the jury to confine itself to that portion of the affidavit explicitly set forth in the indictment.

SPEAKS FOR DEFENSE.

The evening session opened with the argument of Judge Powell for the defense. His speech was without pyrotechnics.

He declared that the defendants in this case, due to the fact they are expected to be pursued by guilty men, had made no attempt whatever to conceal their true identity. They had done everything in their power to keep all evidence bearing upon the case to light.

John C. Tedder, the defense attorney, was met at the door of the courtroom with an upsurgeon, which was just right. Tedder, however, said the evidence presented against the defendants is as strong against the man in the general's office as against the defendants.

This was based on the suggestion that Tedder might be the son of the Negro who was in the Burns office instead of vice versa, as the prosecution

WILL LEO FRANK BE TRIED AGAIN?

Lawyers Discuss Next Move in Case, Provided Prisoner Should Win in the United States Supreme Court.

In the event Leo M. Frank is given his freedom by the United States supreme court, will he be prosecuted in the Fulton superior courts on another charge?

This question is taking on wide significance, in view of the recent statement of the state that Frank is liberated on the habeas corpus appeal, Solicitor Dorsey and his associates will make a strong effort to have him indicted before the grand jury on one of two charges—rape or perjury.

The report has reached such a point that there is widespread speculation upon it wherever attorney general is concerned. It is generally agreed that the two persons can be legally arraigned a second time if either of the rumored charges are brought against him.

Flight Case to End.

The problem is now more apparent by the attitude of Solicitor Dorsey. Although non-committal, he declared that the state was determined to fight the Frank case to the end. He likewise made this additional statement:

"I do not care, however, to anticipate what may be done by the state in this case. It is up to the state to decide what to do in the proceedings now before the United States supreme court."

He would neither deny nor affirm the report, however, that the attorney general would prosecute him on each step against the convicted man if the United States courts interposed.

The residence of Paul C. Clegg, the police commissioner, and the two detectives who were named in the bill of indictment as prosecutor of Frank, were interviewed by the reporter. When asked if he had contemplated further prosecution of Frank if he got his freedom, Clegg said he did not know what he would do on these grounds.

The plan of former "Fapo" is still unknown. A new charge in such circumstances would have to be similar to the one on which he was indicted, and the state of former jeopardy could be invoked.

The convention will be held at the Auditorium on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings.

Can Be Tried Again.

That Frank can be brought before the courts on either of the two above mentioned charges was admitted by Attorney General Douglass, who is in charge for Frank's defense and one of the principals in the famous trial. Like Mr. Dorsey, he declared that there was no question of averting a trial on these grounds.

The plan of former "Fapo" is still unknown. A new charge in such circumstances would have to be similar to the one on which he was indicted, and the state of former jeopardy could be invoked.

Mr. Arnold added, however:

"I hardly see where any attorney general would conduct Frank, or any other man, under such conditions. Prosecution would cease at such a point and become sheer perjury."

POPE BENEDICT PRAYS FOR THE END OF WAR.

Bordeaux, January 30.—(T. P. S.)—In reply to a letter from Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris, Pope Benedict has written the following:

"When we see each day the most terrible outrages committed with blood and bereavement, we cannot help being filled with anguish and looking forward to the future with the deepest anxiety."

"Consequently nothing seems to us more deplorable than the cessation of the long, cruel war. To the rapid attainment of that end, all our plans and efforts are directed."

"We, God, turn toward thoughts of peace the hearts of those who hold in their hands the destinies of the people."

THE FINISHING TOUCH

THREE girdled with black velvet is the evening frock of gold satin, illustrated on the left; though waistless in itself it has the appearance of being quite long-waisted. Delicately tinted tulle is tied around the arms in gay butterfly bows and folds of it fill in above the bodice in front. The skirt is scalloped and bound with a narrow fold of the material. A lovely big rose in deep orange satin at the girdle exactly matches the beaded tassel that tips the end of the saab.

The back view of this gown is shown on the seated figure.

THE blue brocade of the sleeveless gown, illustrated on the middle figure, hangs in graceful folds from a moyen age corsage of plain blue silk, fastened over the shoulders with ropes of crystal beads. The full skirt so short in front that the ankles are plainly visible, nevertheless in back is accompanied with a long, square train.

* In the Social Whirl *

By Isma Dooly

With society this week there has been an intermission of thoughtful entertainment, for many of the same people who attended the entertainments and social affairs of the winter have the three lectures delivered by Dr. William Norman Guthrie under the auspices of the Drama League and are studying their French that they may be better prepared to follow him when he lectures here in early February. Many Atlanta women are anticipating the interpretative lectures on the grand operas to be presented here, and hope to be present at the meetings at 11 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club. Miss Anna Tucker to give the first lecture. The Sunday Night club at the Georgia Terrace will begin later a series of lectures led by them.

The Atlanta Woman's club will also present this week an exhibition of American handicrafts in the clubrooms, the day to be announced later.

While the two meetings cover developments concerning the head of the cultural head of club work, the other movement along more commercial, but nevertheless practical and patriotic lines is the crusade the club women will inaugurate to get Atlanta women to increase their export trouser suits. Atlanta's surrounding Atlanta shows and dressmakers.

"In that way, we can co-operate with our merchants in their efforts to retain their employees instead of reducing their number, and in this way in retaining their help," explained Mrs. J. P. McGuire, president of the club, which is the department of home, commercial and social work.

Commenting on the fact that the Atlanta Woman's club has an organization of 1,000 members, Mrs. McGuire said: "It is unusual that the club takes an interest in the work of the Y. W. C. A. It is unusual, too, for other than educational purposes, but what could be more distinctly educational than grand opera?"

WOMEN GUARANTORS.

The response of many prominent Atlanta women to the illustrations of grand opera has manifested their unusual interest and co-operation in the public movements. A list of the women who have signed the petition that their names appear not only as patrons of art, but patrons of the city's welfare, is as follows: Mrs. T. S. Lewis, for example, Mrs. T. S. Lewis, who subscribed yesterday to the opera guarantee, is the first woman to be a patron of women becoming guarantors.

Commenting on the fact that the Atlanta Woman's club has an organization of 1,000 members, Mrs. McGuire said: "It is unusual that the club takes an interest in the work of the Y. W. C. A. FATHER AND SONS SHOT AT BREAKFAST TABLE

Sons Not Expected to Live and Father Seriously Wounded.

Andalusia, Ala., January 30.—John Pepper and his two sons, Frank and John Jr., were shot through a window in their home at a breakfast table today, and the son at the breakfast table. The sons are not expected to live, and the father is reported seriously wounded. The assassins used a shotgun. A few feet is thought to have been the range of the shooting. A shotgun's power with bloodbath has gone to the scene.

VICTIMS OF EARTHQUAKE CONCENTRATED IN ROME

Rome, January 30.—More than 20,000 injured persons, including 1,000 who were dead, were concentrated in the capital of Italy, where 1,000 persons were reported to have been killed. The number accounted for at five other cities—Naples, 1,000; Salerno, 1,000; Messina, 700; Teramo, 230, and Ancona, 470.

Washington, January 30.—An armed battle in the battle over the administration shipping bill began tonight at 11 o'clock when the Senate ended nearly forty-seven hours of continuous debate by recessing until 10 o'clock Monday.

Senator William Alden Smith, who had been speaking since afternoon, confessed at 11 o'clock that he was nearly exhausted by the long session.

The Senate went into executive session to dispose of some nominations.

Heads of Clever Pairs Formed.

Later it was decided not to wait until midnight actually agreed to put into effect the transhipment provision.

In the evening the hands of the Senate clock were turned to mark 11, and the Senate declared in recess.

Senator Smith with his speech ended, the Democrats will be given another effort to hold the Senate in continuous session until the shipping bill is passed.

From 11 a. m. Friday, all through last night, and again to midnight, the two sides of the contested question were carried on with a spirit of determination in the short of desperation on both sides.

The great stake, a final vote on the contingent session, was taken on the floor.

TROUBLE WITH PONCE DE LEON WAS THEY WERE NOT DOING FOX TROT AND THE HESITATION IN HIS SAD DAYS

Elixir of Youth Isn't Anything to Drink, Says Britt Craig, It's Something to Dance—In These Strange and Eventful Days, Miss Debutante and What Goes With Her Aren't Two in the Shade Compared to Foxy Grandpa on a Ballroom Floor.

By Britt Craig.

Nobody has ever known me to drink an elixir. I have never cared of any particular ability that direction, although during that day I discovered that mixed drinks are conducive to equilibrium and that it is nothing on earth more beautiful than a beautiful woman. It's a beautiful girl.

Then I have discovered that mornings after I have avoided it by the right-hand path. The ice water furnishes one of the most striking examples of the infidelity of man. But all these do not put me in the Christian Columbian.

As for my exploring abilities, I will never make history. Alford and Abbott by a street car, however, and enough nerve to attend a formal dinner without a crease here and there, I accomplished something in the exploring line. I paid Ponce de Leon with his months of fruitless travel and hardship in quest of the fountain of youth he didn't find.

When he was a young man, several months off and an unlisted expense account, I took a trolley car. Our explorations likewise differ in that I found what Ponce de Leon didn't—a first-class hotel in the city.

It was an easy forth in volumes and there drinking from its effervescent depths were near-octogenarians who slapped ag in the face, scowled, snarled and cracked arms with youth.

THEY WEREN'T FOUNT NG IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

But the discoverer of this fountain cannot in anywise reflect upon the failure of Ponce de Leon. The fountain of youth—or, rather, this particular fountain of fountain—does not exist in this day.

Instead of the bath of water from a million springs, this fountain, of my discoveries entitled vehicles more and millions of beautifully gowned women—concrete beauties, stems in an impoter during noon. I was a dinner客 from 16 until "a m—youth's own chosen hours.

It is at this fountain that Atlanta's gay young men of affairs imbibe their elixir of youth.

The Sunday editor had said:

"Why is Atlanta's old men are so young?"

And I had promptly answered:

"Search me."

"I do as I ordered."

"Be out and find out."

"Had I been a major I would have replied."

"A newspaper man instead. I said."

"Sure."

As though it were a mere matter of going across the street and asking O'Leary.

I was consulted members of the society staff.

"On this particular night?" I asked.

"Where might I be able to find the representative of affairs of Atlanta who are too old to be ashamed to admit their birthday?"

SOCIETY STAFF MAKES STRATEGIC BLUNDER.

"At home," she informed me with the emphasis of one having made a startling revelation.

"It is not speaking of where they should be."

The confounded society editor's assignment book, if disclosed, many places, particularly an elaborate dinner-dance. The thought struck me amid-

"Ah! It must be the song of the butch and the wench of the dancers and the dinner cocktails, that restore their youth. We shall explore!

We shall explore!

Our trolley rolled on with Ponce de Leon's name on it. In due time we arrived. The lobby of the hotel, on floor gleamed from excessive scrubbing and naked of the men that had been employed for dressing purposes, would spoil an otherwise good truck driver.

But caution holds me steady with more boldness and doormen and a

Police detective who had tried to disguise himself in a dress coat.

A house detective hasn't any more business in a dinner suit than a croakfish in a chicken pie. The spectacle of a square-toed bull with a No. 18 collar quisitous house sleuth, I stole upstairs to the room where the society editor was a convenient spot to hide myself. There was no place to be found that did not offer conspicuosity. The mensonge looked as though the house detective himself had designed that room with a view to concentration of effort.

SOMETHING NEW—HIDING IN SPOTLIGHT.

Search as I might I could not find a dark nook in which I could not feel my eyes as red as mulberry eyes happened upon a spotlight erected in a corner of a balcony that extended out over the cafe.

I felt like embracing this "spot" rock and clinging to it for dear life.

In a time of dire need I launched a chair and sat down beside it. A few feet away sat the musicians who gazed with a kind of thrill upon the hurrying walkers under the moon.

The spot light was being used to light the path of a professional dancing team who pranced through the maza

lubub of exclamations mostly from men.

My nook was splendid for observations, as it commanded a view of every corner of the society's dining room. What a good time while it lasted!

ALREADY BEGGING FOR A TUNE.

The diners were hurrying through their final courses that they might speed the dancing. Even now further up the stairs were lifted to the balcony in time for a few dances.

The musketeers were contemplatively idle, resting upon their instruments as though they were stolid children.

I gazed across the way and beheld a judge of my acquaintance whose austerity on the bench was a picture of awesomeness.

Later, I was to observe conclusively that they not only searched, but found nothing. They had found it, Atlanta's own in search of youth, at least in name.

Later, I had once been a martini

Nicknames of Famous British Regiments

By

HAT'S in a name?

Fences not to be measured; life, death, divine courage; a relentless spirit of recklessness; abandon; these are in a name," comes the living, stirring answer to this right question—an answer which vibrates around the world to the accompaniment of a sonorous music from the plains of Flanders, where fighting British regiments are once more inscribed in blood on the scroll of fame their "names" won on many a shell-ploughed, sun-down field.

Because of its simple eloquence, the "Fighting Fifteenth" is one of the most striking of tick-taques of British regiments now at the front. The name is an intense concentration of the regiment's history. It is fighting now; it has always fought; there was a cause, and it has always pursued the cause—that it was Britain in—was enough.

This was the first regiment of light cavalry organized in the British army, and dates from 1719 when it was originally Fifteenth Light Dragoons and popularly known as Elliot's Light Horse, from Col. Elliot, whose defense of Gibraltar is one of the chief stories.

The Earl of Pembroke, Sir William Erskine and David Dundas were among the distinguished men who had commissions in the "Fighting Fifteenth" at the first. At Emsdorf, July 16, 1759, under Pr. de Friedland of Brunswick, the Fifteenth Hussars began to earn their nickname of the "Fighting Fifteenth."

The regiment performed notable achievements at Grouseholme, and at Friedberg it made first of a series of famous rescues when it saved Pr. Ferdinand, who had been surrounded by the enemy's cavalry.

Later, they were to rescue the Prince of Schwarzenberg. It was near Le Cateau and Landrecies that a squadron of the "Fighting Fifteenth," under Captain Packington, ad- dressed to support a reconnaissance made by the Prince of Schwarzenberg and a regiment of Chasseurs.

The most famous exploit of the "Fighting Fifteenth" was the rescue of the Emperor of Austria at Vil-les-en-Couhé in 1754. The regiment was then serving with the Austrians against the French revolutionary forces in Flanders, where some of the fiercest fighting is in progress to-day.

The "Black Watch" is another name famous throughout the United Kingdom and the colonies. The Forty-second Highlanders, the oldest Highland regiment, does not get this name from the performance of any particularly gallant action, but the name has come to stand for all that is glorious, dashing and courageous in battle. The "Black Watch" has an enviable reputation as a fighting regiment.

It was organized by combining several Highland companies raised in Scotland in 1725 to 1729, recruited first for the service of James II, in order in Edinburgh and its members were to be recruited from the clans of Campbell, Argyll and MacLean. These clansmen wore their own tartan, but when John, Earl of Crawford and Lindsey, welded them into one regiment, known as "The Highland Regiment," a new tartan was devised by abolishing the color from those worn by the men in the ranks. Crawford, being a lowlander, had no family tartan and it was from their black garments that the regiment got the name of the "Black Watch."

The "runners" means to the British the Royal Regiment of Artillery, whose record is the record of British arms in every quarter of the world.

It was not cavalry alone which attained immortality at Balaklava. The Second battalion of the Ninety-third regiment of Foot was there, and against it the Russians hurled the flower of their cavalry, a body of men in gallantry and dash rivals of the Light Brigade. In a thin red line, only two men deep, the Ninety-third, with bayonets fixed, sprang to their feet and charged the Russian horse, not waiting for the enemy to reach them. It is hard to ride horses onto cold steel, and the Tsar's cavalry wavered, but only for a second. Urged on spur and voice, the horses plunged forward again.

There was a furious clashing of steel, plunging horses, stabbing, slashing and shooting horses.

The thin red line swept onward, the wave of Russian cavalry rolled back.

That British regiment in the files of the War Office, but

"FIGHTING FIFTEENTH," THE 15TH (KING'S HUSSARS) SAVING THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA, 1754. FROM THE SKETCH

to Britons throughout the world it is simply the "Thin Red Line."

The Royal Welsh Fusiliers is a pretentious and elegant sounding name, but the men and officers of the regiment prefer the title which has been conferred upon them by admiring thousands, the "Nanny Goats." It was in 1685 at Ludlow that the "Nanny Goats" first became a regiment, being developed from thirteen companies of foot recruited three years earlier in the Welsh marches by Henry, fourth Lord Herbert.

Among the battles where the "Nanny Goats" earned distinction are the Boyne, Naseby, Schleissenberg, Blenheim, Ramilles, Wynnedale, Oudenarde, Malplaquet, the siege of Lille, Douai, Dettingen, Minden, Fontenoy, Bunker Hill, Corunna, Gibraltar, Copenhagen, Marquique, Torres Vedras, Bodmin, Sanmarcanda, Burgos, Vittoria, San Sebastian, Almada, Inkerman and Sebastopol. It has fought in Egypt, South Africa, Scotland, however, the Indian Mutiny, Ashburton, Burma and South Africa.

Quite a warlike record for a "Nanny Goat," which name was given to the regiment because of its mascot. In the officers' mess on St. David's Day the goat, accustomed to drum and fife, marched round the table while each officer and guest who has not done so before must stand on his chair and eat a teak while a drummer beats a long roll behind him.

The "First Dragoons" are officially the Queen's Royal West Surrey regiment but they won their nickname by their defense of Tzaneus in 1690 to insure a free Parliament and the restoration of the Stuarts he took with him from Cossack to British Dragoon, this regiment of foot who were known throughout as "Coldstreamers." There is an unauthenticated story that when the escorting force met Charles II at Blackheath this regiment kept the still dislodged force from following the King on learning where they had come, dimly naming "My Coldstream Guards." To this day they are known as the Coldstream Guards.

There are several traditions concerning the origin of the name "Scots Guards." The most generally accepted one is as follows. When the Royal North British Dragoons, as the regiment was styled up to the time of the Crimean War, landed in the Le Havre in 1742 the British soldiers noticed that the men were mounted on mounts. He immediately ordered his own to turn over their gray horses to the Scottish corps.

When his error was pointed out to the King he exclaimed, "Well done, Young Buffs!"

"Grenadiers" were originally the Ninth Horse of the Queen Dowager's Carabiners, so called in honor of Catherine of Braganza, whose master of horse was her first colonel. The regiment dates from 1655 and won its nickname at the Battle of the Boyne, where it fought in the cause of William III, so effectively that he termed it "Carabiners" as a distinguishing complement. The present official title of the regiment is Sixth Dragon Guards.

At Albuera Colonel Ingall commanded the Fifteenth Foot, who were defending an artillery battery held wall. As the enemy pressed home their desperate assault to their revolution, the name has stuck.

At Albuera Colonel Ingall commanded the Fifteenth Foot, who were defending an artillery battery held wall. As the enemy pressed home their desperate assault to their revolution, the name has stuck.

"Die-Hards" were originally the Ninth Horse of the Queen Dowager's Carabiners, so called in honor of Catherine of Braganza, whose master of horse was her first colonel. The regiment dates from 1655 and won its nickname at the Battle of the Boyne, where it fought in the cause of William III, so effectively that he termed it "Carabiners" as a distinguishing complement. The present official title of the regiment is Sixth Dragon Guards.

The Master Key

By John Fleming Wilson

A Thrilling Story of Mystery and Romance

In visual arrangement for this paper, a photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key," may be seen at the Savoy and Alpha theaters tomorrow. By arrangement made with the Universal Film company, it is not only possible to read "The Master Key" each week, but also to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

9th Installment

BY JOHN FLEMING WILSON
AT BEVERLY HILLS, CALIFORNIA

How many locked doors are there in this world, how many people are there who have the key? Ruth, found dead, has the key to her husband's heart, and for that reason Talon died because his partner Wilkerson, a man of wealth and power, had the key to Ruth's heart, and demanded a share of it. Wilkerson's plan is to get the key to Ruth's heart, and then to get the engineer in whose charge Ruth was, for the right to the secret which Talon had given him. Ruth's Galton apparently took him to the start.

When the train pulled into Los Angeles the next morning John Dorr's party got off and John left Ruth with Tom Kane while he went to engage an automobile to take them to Beverly Hills, a summer playground. Everett as quiet and retiring for a chambered actress.

As they stood there Wilkerson, Mrs. Darnell and Estelle also got off the train, still disgruntled, and were hurrying away when Wilkerson observed Ruth and called Jean's attention to her.

For an instant she was nonplussed. Then she said to herself, "I think the better. We can keep an eye on them."

"I must find out where they are going to it," Wilkerson returned. "I don't like the looks of it."

He soon came back with word that they had ordered the car to take them to Beverly Hills.

Jean stood in deep thought a moment and then said decisively, "We have plenty to do. We know where they will be and Estelle can keep us informed. The place for us to go is to a quiet, comfortable hotel. I refuse to live in dog holes any longer."

After some inquiry Wilkerson found the address of a hotel that seemed to answer their requirements and they were soon on their way, though it was a tall climb. In the hotel Estelle had installed herself and her misses in a comfortable suite. Wilkerson took a room near by. They both were soon their real selves and sat down to a hearty breakfast in Mrs. Darnell's rooms.

This ended, Jean took out the papers and spent an hour going over them carefully. Wilkerson smoked nervously but did not interrupt her. When she laid the documents down he saw a queen glint in her eye.

"So it has come to the old game, eh?" she said in a low voice. "I thought you had had enough of that."

"Enough of what?" he demanded quickly.

She smiled maliciously. "She formed the word slowly and precisely."

"Very good," Wilkerson said. His dark face grew pallid and his eyes flashed ominously. "I did it for you that time—and no thanks! But this is all right. Those deeds are genuine."

"Certainly," she said mockingly.
"Well, what's the matter, then?"

"They merely assure the property to Thomas Galton, and that is all," Wilkerson said.

"Of course, that is all," Wilkerson said.

And when you found Tom Galton you last just and had him ready to do anything you wanted just as the price of your silence, I suppose it didn't occur to you to have him dead over the Master Key mine to you, did it?"

"The Master Key has done it," he burst out furiously. "He shot me once. He would have shot me again to save the mine for the girl."

Then what good are these papers?"

Gradually he perceived the drift of her speech. He looked at her for a moment, dumbly, as if for instruction. But she was ruthless. "He must propose the crime himself. She handed him the papers.

"I'll have to go out and buy some blank deeds," he said laboriously. "I may have to look up some other points, too, about these papers."

Ruth Makes a New Acquaintance

Life at Beverly Hills was a welcome change to Ruth after the strenuous days that had passed since she left the Master Key mine. The very day after her arrival she insisted on walking out with John Dorr and Tom Kane, who were careful not to refer to subjects that might disturb her returning peace of mind.

There were not many at the hotel and the most prominent figure among the guests was a tall, care-free, fully dressed Englishman, so typically English that the old cook insisted on identifying him as "the man who has seen many of the new kinds of people," he explained. "I've been out in the mine so many years that the styles in real goods has kind of escaped me. I advise to know just what kind of birds I'm roosting with."

"Who is he?" laughed Ruth as she gazed out at the rising sun.

"He's marked down as Sir Donald Faversham and he's the British Ambassador," Tom Kane rejoined. "He is here for his health, they say. I suppose that's why he has to wear them white ankle warmers on his legs."

"Those are called pants," Tom said, smiling. "That eyeglass is a monocle."

"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I recollect he was nearsighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Oddly enough Ruth blushed at this. Sir Donald had seen her, and she had been made aware of it instantly.

John Dorr saw the blush and interpreted it rightly. He had observed the Englishman's sudden interest in the lovely girl. For the first time he felt a sharp twinge of jealousy.

There he did not count upon the other man's resourcefulness. Sir Donald was a man of the world and well accustomed to mingling with all kinds of people. He was also a careful observer and a shrewd reader of men. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tom they made no comment nor asked any questions.

Following their directions he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house. He knocked and there was shuffling of heavy boots, then the door opened and a wan, bloated-faced man asked him gruffly what he wanted.

Drake produced Wilkerson's wire and instantly the engineer showed ratiel.

"Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink."

The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his world decencies. But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and had a drink with his host. A few words served to put the situation before him.

There isn't no money to pay the man, the store's closed, the cook shanty isn't running. Wilkerson is away. Don't hasn't turned up with the stranger he promised."

That afternoon George Everett turned up and warmly greeted.

"I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth, in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine. I have the men, the horses and surveys first. And there's gone, I understand."

"Yes," Dorr replied bitterly, "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago."

Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the disconcerted look on her face. He went quickly on, "However, I've made temporary arrangements which will relieve you of trouble for the present. Miss Galton, I'll take over the business details with John and Tom Kane."

She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I know everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly.

For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. Occasionally a signal at the door would tell him that Jean was outside and would carefully open to her and together they would contemplate his handiwork. At last it was done.

"No one can ever prove that Old Tom Galton didn't draw that dead himself," Wilkerson said triumphantly. "And it makes me the owner of the Master Key mine, Jean" and once in charge I'll make us both worth millions! Then—"

She shrank back at the frown in his gaze upon her.

"Now, what are you going to do?" she demanded, attempting to bring the conversation back into business channels.

He bit his nails savagely. "Drake is out all right," he told her. "You see, Kane didn't turn up to prosecute the case and they turned him loose. What do you say to my wiring him to go and take charge of the mine while we decide just what to do?"

"What are you going to do?" came the demand.

"This," replied Drake, writing rapidly. He showed them the message.

"Harry Wilkerson, Los Angeles, Cal.:

"Come to mine at once. Trouble is brewing."

What is to Be Done?

Meeting John Dorr, Everett and Tom Kane were spending long hours in discussing what was to be done to save the Master Key to Ruth. Tom once more went over the exact situation at the mine and asserted that unless prompt action was taken not only would there be actual distress but likely rioting.

"I see," said Everett, at last. "Not having the power to do this, I'll put this deal through the way I want to eventually. But something must be done now."

"What is the way of money?" added Kane harshly.

"Precisely," Everett assented with all cheerfulness.

"Now, I'm going to loan John Dorr five thousand dollars today for the Master Key mine."

"What will you take charge of it?" Who will be in charge?"

The broken laugh at him. "Not you. You'd be in a fight in three minutes, especially if Wilkerson turned up. Tom Kane is our man." He turned on the old man abruptly. "Will you take this on Jean as far as she left the room?"

The old cook stared at the crisp bills and then at Dorr. "I ain't handled paper worth that kind of money," he remarked.

"But if you want me to go to work and feed them people and get 'em back to work and keep things going till John can fix things up here, I'll go."

So it was agreed. After an affectionate farewell to Ruth, Kane left the hotel for the train that was to take him to the mine. He was a tall, thin, graceful, but when action at last hit his seat, the train he mustered himself. "I'll tell this won't be any picnic for your Uncle Thomas. If I know skunks, there'll be a 'skull named Wilkerson around the camp mighty nigh the time I arrive."

He was not astonished the next day to find Wilkerson on the ground.

Trouble Brewing.

Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram.

San Francisco, he was told, was the place to go.

He was to go to the British Ambassador.

"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I recollect he was nearsighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram.

San Francisco, he was told, was the place to go.

He was to go to the British Ambassador.

"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I recollect he was nearsighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Oddly enough Ruth blushed at this. Sir Donald had seen her, and she had been made aware of it instantly.

John Dorr saw the blush and interpreted it rightly.

He had observed the Englishman's sudden interest in the lovely girl. For the first time he felt a sharp twinge of jealousy.

There he did not count upon the other man's resourcefulness. Sir Donald was a man of the world and well accustomed to mingling with all kinds of people. He was also a careful observer and a shrewd reader of men. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tom they made no comment nor asked any questions.

Following their directions he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house.

He knocked and there was shuffling of heavy boots, then the door opened and a wan, bloated-faced man asked him gruffly what he wanted.

"Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink."

The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his world decencies.

But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and had a drink with his host.

A few words served to put the situation before him.

There isn't no money to pay the man, the store's closed, the cook shanty isn't running. Wilkerson is away. Don't hasn't turned up with the stranger he promised."

That afternoon George Everett turned up and warmly greeted.

"I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth, in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine. I have the men, the horses and surveys first. And there's gone, I understand."

"Yes," Dorr replied bitterly, "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago."

Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the disconcerted look on her face. He went quickly on, "However, I've made temporary arrangements which will relieve you of trouble for the present. Miss Galton, I'll take over the business details with John and Tom Kane."

She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I know everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly.

For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. Occasionally a signal at the door would tell him that Jean was outside and would carefully open to her and together they would contemplate his handiwork. At last it was done.

"Two miners entered and Tubbs introduced them to Drake.

"This is the new boy, boys," he said.

"Who sent you here?" was the first question asked.

"Wilkerson," responded Drake.

"What's he?"

"I'm just here to take charge temporarily," Drake went on hastily, not liking the ugly tone of the man's voice.

The other man took this information, and after digesting it, said, "Going to start up and pay wages?"

"I guess not acquainted with the situation yet" was the elusive reply. "I'll go over things with Mr. Tubbs tonight and then in the morning I'll see what is to be done."

"The first thing is to give us money and food," was the curt answer. The men stamped out, leaving Drake to think at Tibbs in some dismay.

The next morning did not bring cheer. Drake ached from the fumes of Bill Tubbs' whisky and the chill of the mountain air.

"The first thing is to give us money and food," was the curt answer. The men stamped out, leaving Drake to think at Tibbs in some dismay.

HOW YOU CAN OBTAIN A TRIP

The plan evolved by The Atlanta Constitution whereby you can take one of these wonderful trips as outlined is as simple in understanding as it is easy of execution. Although The Constitution has a large circulation, there are some who at present are not subscribers. They want the Daily and Sunday Constitution, but have put off ordering from day to day. The Constitution desires your assistance in locating and placing these people on its subscription list, and for this favor you are to be liberally rewarded.

Points will be given on each new subscription payment to The Atlanta Constitution according to the schedule given above and after you have obtained the required number of points a wonderful trip to the greatest of all expositions will be yours.

You may nominate yourself or a friend as a candidate for one of these trips. The names of all candidates nominated will be published in The Daily Constitution from time to time, giving their respective standing.

Each candidate on nomination will be credited with 100 points free, and will be provided with an authorized Constitution receipt book. These receipt books may be had by applying to the Circulation Department of The Constitution. Each candidate obtaining one of these free tours may take the trip to San Francisco any time during 1915 he or she may desire. The exposition opens on February 20, and closes December 4, 1915.

Special arrangements have been made with the McFarland Tourist Agency to furnish the various trips we are offering and the starting point of all the successful candidates will be Atlanta. If you want to go to the exposition this is your opportunity. Send in your nomination at once and request The Constitution Receipt Book, full description of "Itinerary" and complete instructions. FRENCH, December 1914. The present war has brought out that which until now
was to the resistance in the retreat and the defeat of monarchs a kind of grantless splendor has thrum to one side the triumphs of troops that one sees in the battle pictures; the variegated lives of the groups of staff officers, the length of the platoons, the camps, the times, the gallan-cy, the cruelties, the blunders.

comes the heating of the drama—all that which created the ardor, excitement and remorse of the combat. Warfare was fought because it was made between two parties who wanted each other. What would such men as Napoleon, Marceau, Wellington and others think about this clandestine war?

France's, a campaign consisted of one of great conflicts of half a day some times a whole day, then a joyous entry in the towns captured. Great ferocity and skill in the battles, but a cruelty to the prisoners of the enemy.

"It is impossible to recruit a battle," affirmed Wellington, "as to recruit a band."

But without wishing in the least to diminish the valor of the armaments, it must be recognized that each of their battles was a victory for the Germans, and for our soldiers of today. If Napoleon started from his "Grenadiers" (grenadiers such as those of iron, such insensibility, so contrary to the temperament of man), and which the modern troops face, if he had attempted what is impossible at the present time, to make another national bankruptcy, negotiate the famous armistice, he would have found the task too hard and could have said with out disillusionment that it did not please them.

He lay a hole in the ground, ordered several minutes under the rain that falls and the shrapnel that descends, under the noise of the cannon that shouts, under the single instant tree, in a dashing noise of the artillery, more or less near. On a front of four hundred in a extension the soldiers of the Alouette charge, and the French soldier commemorates himself with as much cheerfulness, gayety and good humor as the soldiers of today, who themselves in the light and rapid adventures of fortunes.

Let us judge of:

The trenches are long narrow ditches,
on the front border of which is arranged so as to enclose or project forward to the earth from the ditch. The trench is about a yard wide, a yard deep, has a depth of a half more than a yard and a pumpit of at east half a yard. The trench "for knelling" has a depth of a yard and nearly a yard. If there is the time to make a trench for "studying" it will be a yard and a half deep. That is to say, if one has only a few days with night, holes, doors and pieces of wood cover the ground, providing that one has time to place them.

These (submarine) shelters afford a means of protection, the importance of which does not at first imagine. In the first shelter, seated more or less comfortably in the earth in his trench, cauchs at the rifle shot that burst the ground, in their silent, silent, silent head. But he must take care not to show his head higher than the shelter not even an arm and is seen. As for the shelter, it makes much noise, but consider little, for the soldier, the shelter. A shell of four kilos (35 pounds) produces a tumult, but has a depth of six yards at the point where it falls, but only a lucky stroke can reach a trench. The combatant who is not exactly at the point where it burst runs no other danger than that of being covered with earth or mud.

Some dressing rooms and some towels hang on bayonets fixed in the partitions of earth these also serve as coat and coat racks. The water falls from hoses, and the carabiniers who had had the idea. A shell had hollowed out a large hole at this place. A large flask was placed at the bottom and a roof put on the top. It is a reservoir fed by rain water. A tap is put at the end of a hose to conduct the water. This is a bath to be used to turn one into a physical disease. With a rubbing a healthy reaction is quickly produced. It must not be thought that this is either luxury or amusement; this installation is very precious to all the regiment. And the regiment is clean. This cannot be said of those opposite, for our prisoners captured are in sad plight.

Certain trenches are only thirty-five yards from the enemy, and from each place, the severity changes not until the evening. But to pass days and weeks adoring these holes in the earth becomes monotonous. We busy ourselves in organizing to render the trenches more comfortable. Each day brings an improvement. There is a certain amount of attempts to heat them. A brick is a few weeks are tried by fire, for an instant, not dream of having anything with smoke, for that would be a sign for the enemy. responded with precision and ridged their bodies and thus. A little later our corporal pulled the rope, from the German another volly, nearer than the first. Silence: then again the dance of death. We could hear the sputters of the gun, the sudden invasions, the bursts of an accordeon. The French began at once to sing "Allons enfants de la Patrie," punctuated by a fusillade that closed the fire.

We are so close to one another that the number of neither side can fire on us for fear of hitting their own.

The proximity of the adversaries causes us such that it is dangerous to remain in the trench. Some have placed a mirror above and behind, so that by its help who passes in front can be seen while remaining in the trench.

of paper from the wires that defend our trenches." So it goes without saying that the Bavarians, at least, do not love the Prussians.

LEARN TO PLAY
PIANO OR ORGAN
IN A FEW HOURS
IN YOUR OWN HOME

A Detroit musician has invented a wonderful new system which enables any person or his child to learn to play the piano or organ in a few hours. You know absolutely nothing about music or have never touched a piano or organ yet you can play it in a few hours. People who do not know how to either are able to play their favorite instrument without any assistance whatever.

This new system is called the "Numerical Method." Write today for my free booklet which fully explains our special offer and tell us all about this successful method that has already brought pleasure and happiness to thousands of people in every state of the United States and Canada. Simply write us a postal card or letter, saying "Please send me your free booklet." We will cost you nothing but you owe an obligation to us whatever. Address Numerical Method Music Co., 1215 Budson Building, Detroit, Mich.

500 MEN GO BACK TO WORK IN MARIETTAMarietta Chair Co. and Brumby Chair Co. to Put Full Force to Work Monday.

The chief news comes from Marietta, where the Marietta Chair company's plant will be in operation again. It is also stated that the Brumby Chair Co. has taken up its operations back up the plant which has passed into the hands of the new owners. With these two big industries in operation, the Marietta business will go back to where it left off.

The Marietta business is not alone, for the hundred or so companies and with a full time has had practically out and is now getting back to work.

The news of the revival of business with much pleasure.

The Marietta business is, it is understood, employs about 300 men, and with the return of these men again it will help to boost the tide of industry now apparently well on the way to a full attendance.

Domestic Rugs:

Dropped Patterns at Deeply Cut Prices

IN bringing out new patterns each season, the rug manufacturer is forced to discontinue some of the present patterns. Inasmuch as we cannot re-order these patterns, we drop them from stock at these dropped prices.

PARTICULAR attention is focused on these rugs as being the Hardwick & Magee's Wilton's the finest machine-woven rugs in the world. All the rugs are 9x12 feet. Here are Hardwick & Magee's

For the Two Types of Women

CHARMINGLY feminine and picturesque is the sailor shape of tan velvet with its wide rolling brim. Uncurled ostrich encircles the crown, while across the front is placed a knotted fancy of the ostrich.

FOR the tailored girl is the severe sailor type of black silk beaver. Unusually high of crown and narrow of brim, it is bound with a narrow grosgrain ribbon, and simply adorned with a pheasant's head and a single upstanding feather.
