Despite Disputing Rumors, Situation Over Sugar and Wool Schedules Is Considered Favorable.

HOT FIGHT EXPECTED IN DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS

Reported That Senator Walsh Might Join Ransdell and Thornton in Vote Against Underwood Measure.

Washington, May 23.—Wool and sugar the stumbling blocks of the tariff bill held the attention of senate finance subcommittees and senators in general today, the legislative air being filled with rumors of contemplated changes and alliances and counter rumors of a further tightening of the administration forces for free wool and free sugar in three years.

Situation Favorable

Administration leaders declared today that the situation relating to the wool and sugar schedules is very favorable for the Underwood bill but they look forward to an interesting session in the party caucus when the southern and western representatives will have an opportunity to make a determined struggle against free wool and free sugar.

Asked if free raw wool would not prove beneficial to his interests Mr. Whitman said it might eventually be so, but he said his company had on hand a large supply of raw wool bought under tariff rates and that he would be at a disadvantage in working this off while other manufacturers were buying and manufacturing with wool purchased on a free duty basis.

LEADING FIGURES IN CHARGES OF BRIBERY IN PHAGAN CASE

COLONEL THOMAS FELDER

JAMES L. BEAVERLS Chief of Police

NEWPORT LANFORD Chief of Detectives

Career of A. S. Colyar Reads Like Some Story In the Arabian Nights

Nashville Tenn. May 23.—(Special)—The criminal career of A. S. Colyar reads like a story from the Arabian Nights. Probably no man in Tennessee has imposed so successfully upon the public and has escaped so lightly.

MAYOR WOODWARD REPORTED CAUGHT BY THE DICTAGRAPH SEEKING POLICE EVIDENCE

The little dictagraph cunningly hidden in Detective Colyar's room in the Williams House No. 2 is said to have caught a conversation between Mayor James G. Woodward Secretary G. C. February of the detective department and Edward Miles, Wednesday afternoon, between 3 and 4 o'clock.

Mayor Had No Money to Give.

They were the only ones who spoke about money, Mayor Woodward said. "I told them that if they were looking for money from me I had none to give, but I suggested that if they would make out a list to show just what evidence they had to give there would be no trouble getting up the money to extend the investigation."

BRIBERY CHARGES FALSE DECLARES COL. FELDER; CALLS THEM "FRAME-UP"

Affidavits and Alleged Dictagraph Record Are Made Public, Accusing Prominent Lawyer of Offering Bribe of $1,000 to Secretary February, of Police Department, to Secure Affidavit Made for Police by J. W. Coleman, Stepfather of Mary Phagan, in Regard to Felder's Connection With Case.

ALLEGATIONS ARE MADE TO FORESTALL A PROBE OF POLICE, SAYS FELDER

Mayor Woodward Also Dictographed, According to Report—Admits He Was Called Into Conference by A. S. Colyar, Who Offered Him, He Says, Evidence That the Police Department Is Giving Protection to Disorderly Houses in Atlanta—"I've Done My Duty, It's Up to Grand Jury," Says Lanford.

Developments came thick and fast yesterday following the publication of affidavits, charging that Colonel Thomas B. Felder—the man who freed Charles Morse—had himself been dictographed, and had made an attempt to secure an affidavit in the Mary Phagan murder case now held by the police department, through bribing Secretary February by the offer of $1,000.

MY DUTY HAS BEEN DONE AND IT'S UP TO GRAND JURY, SAYS LANFORD

"I have proved Felder to be an attempted briber," said the chief. "My duty has been done. It's now up to the grand jury to take action."

Chief Beavers would not commit himself on the situation that has developed by the charges of his detective chief and the counter accusations by Colonel Felder. He seemed pleased, however, over the result reputed to have been obtained by Lanford, and said that he later would fully express his opinion.

Weather Prophecy SHOWERS AND COLDER

Table with 3 columns: Station, Temperature, Rain. Includes entries for Atlanta, Memphis, etc.

Colonel Felder's announced exposure of the detective and police department would be early he said, and exhaustive. He will have the support of a wide circle of business men and civic authorities he declared who have tired of tolerating the situation he accuses of existing.

Felder Wanted Affidavit, He Says

According to the charges made by the detective department Colonel Felder was anxious to get hold of an affidavit secured by the police from J. W. Coleman father of the dead girl, in which he denied that he had employed Mr. Felder to represent him in the investigation of the Phagan murder, declared he was satisfied with the police, and declared that Colonel Felder had made every effort to secure his consent for him to handle the investigation of the case and had promised to do so without cost to Coleman.

der denies the conversation, averring he was in the room only a few minutes. Chief Lantford insisted on a report for the Constitution last night that premature publication of his bribery charges had foiled an effort he was making to catch the well-known attorney in the act of giving money to the man in possession of the Mary Phagan evidence.

It had been planned, he said, to have Felder meet Febuary and Colyar at some point either in or near Decatur for the turning over of the desired evidence. As the attorney handed over the bribe money, as proposed, Lantford declared, headquarters detectives, who would have been eye-witnesses to the transaction, would instantly have nabbed him.

"The plans were to get Felder in Decatur—in DeKalb county, where he would be given speedy trial and be dealt with more severely. He had partly agreed to the meeting, Febuary would likely have met him there this coming Saturday. Colyar, however, grew mad over the delay. He did not agree to the idea of carrying the scheme to the extent of bribery. He thought that the case, in its present shape, was ripe enough for prosecution.

"We had a slight tiff with this man. As a result, he tipped off the paper which published the story, and our plans were sent to pieces. However, it is a case for them to act. For the present, I'm through with 'em. I've done my work. It's now up to them."

How Lantford Got Colyar.

Lantford says he obtained the services of Colyar through headquarters Detective Robert Z. Osburn, a friend of the chief, and showing a decided interest in the Mary Phagan mystery, hinted that he could be of valuable aid in the investigation.

He was visited personally by Chief Lantford, the latter stated, and asked to lend assistance in the case. Later, Lantford declares, he heard rumors of Felder's alleged connection with the suspected man's defense, and he immediately attached to Felder during his dispensary investigation in South Carolina.

The detective chief says Felder, through a source which he will not reveal, endeavored to become acquainted with some one connected with the detective department who was opposed to Lantford. Febuary, he says, was approached on the deal of obtaining all the Mary Phagan evidence possessed by the detective.

Febuary, according to Chief Lantford, went immediately to his chief, asking instructions. Lantford ordered him to confer with Felder regarding the turning over of the evidence, and Lantford insisted any terms named by the attorney, the chief says.

Willing to Take Brbe.

"I told Febuary," Lantford asserted, "to inform Felder that he would be willing to sell the Phagan evidence, if he was sure on me because I forced him to work overtime too often, and did not pay him enough. Also to tell him that, beside the chief, no one beside himself was able to obtain the evidence, as it was locked in the department vault."

"Colyar, as he once was a confidant of Felder's, was employed in the deal. He was to assist Felder, to be a kind of go-between for both parties, and everything was arranged. The conference was held in Colyar's room in the Williams house, and a meeting was planned to bribe Febuary for the desired papers.

Caution and Bitter.

The attorney's reply, he declares, that on Sunday he will issue to the Atlanta press a full and complete denial, and reply, and will submit affidavits in the police department. They have been in his possession, he asserts, for some time, and he had been withholding them for his planned probe into the police department.

Admittedly, that he went to the Williams house on the afternoon on the accused bribery attempt, Felder says he visited the place only for the purpose of obtaining "graft" evidence from Febuary, who had summoned him there. When the stenographer and adventurer asked $1,000 for their possession, as stated by the lawyer, he departed.

Colyar Felder in Phagan Case.

Ever since the Phagan story broke, Colonel Felder has been a dominant figure in the investigation. He has a contract showing he was retained by two prominent business men of the Bellwood neighborhood several days that he was secretly in the employ of Frank. His answer to these rumors is that they were circulated by police detectives to distract attention from the practice of removing Phagan evidence which would have been damaging to Frank's defense.

The names of Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, Mayor James G. Woodward, Police Commissioner Charles Mason and Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex saloon, appear in portions of the alleged sworn diagraph record attributed to Colonel Felder. He is sharing all time substitution reporter the interview he held with Colyar and Febuary he did not mention the name of any of these men.

Already begun reforming plans for investigations that will result. But even with this new situation, the work of ferreting out the Mary Phagan mystery goes vigorously from the headquarters announced new evidence Friday which is published elsewhere.

Colonel Felder stated last night that Chief Tobie, the Burns man, will not be hampered any unduly by the new operations as witnessed as before. The grand jury resumes its investigation this morning at 10 o'clock.

The diagraph, with which names of the attorneys were included, was being held in Room 32 of the Williams house. It was concealed behind the dresser—that is, the transmitter—and the wires ran through the keyhole of the door connecting Room 32 with Room 31. In the latter apartment, W. Gentry, connected with the Southern Bell Telephone company, a shorthand expert, sat. It is charged, with the receivers clapped over his ears.

What Colonel Felder is accused of having done more than other papers locked in Lantford's vault, was a document purporting to have been attested to by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman, parents of Mary Phagan, who testified to the effect that they had never employed this connection with the investigation. Colyar, in an affidavit, avers that Felder had offered him $1,000 to steal this document.

Bleese to Make Reputation.

Typical of the militant reputation he bears, Governor Bleese has notified The Constitution's Augusta correspondent that on today he will unlose caustic opinions of Colonel Felder, and tell the public of dealings he declared he had with the Atlanta lawyer during the South Carolina dispensary controversy. It will be recalled that Bleese some time ago issued warning to Felder that if he ever ventured to South Carolina ground he would be arrested and tried for mispractice to which he is alleged to have resorted in the dispensary investigation.

Branding the adventurer Colyar as a crook, liar, degenerate and character of long criminal record, Colonel Felder says that during the investigation in South Carolina he was visited by the man, Colyar, who offered to place in his hands valuable evidence. Upon investigating Colyar's record, Felder says he found it so unsavory that he did not want to use him in any form, but suggested that he dispose of the evidence, and if it were available, he would purchase it.

Colyar, Felder states, procured three affidavits from women. The signature of each was signed on a sheet of parchment detached from an investigation. Mr. Felder says he revealed that the papers were false, and that the signatures had been attached to an agreement submitted by Colyar to take possession of increased relatives of whom they had never heard.

"He is a perjurer, a crook, a scoundrel," blazed the attorney in speaking of the man. He thrives on such crookedness as he is striving to practice on me."

Colyar's Offer to Felder.

The Accusing Colyar of being a character with a criminal record, a crook, a blackmailer and a perjurer, Felder declares that Colyar came to him several days ago to offer to obtain the reported police "graft" list for Felder's proposed exposure of the detective department.

"I knew he was crooked and irresponsible," said the attorney. "I had dealt with him during my dispensary to him so. He said that Chief Lantford had offered to employ him to help "frame-up" against Felder, and that Lantford wanted performing the "frame-up."

"It was to see the 'graft' list that I went to his room in the Williams house. He and Febuary showed me the list. One was the list of the bandwings of Beavers and one of Lantford. I recognized a number of names. They offered to sell both to me for $1,000. I told them I did not need them, but referred them to Mr. Miles, of the bureau of investigation, who I thought could use them.

"Both Febuary and Colyar declared they did not want to deal with anyone but me alone. I did not stay in the room more than five minutes. When they persisted in urging me to purchase the 'graft' list, I left the place. I do not believe they had a diagraph. The manufacturers of that instrument would not rent one to such irresponsible persons—to blackmaller, in fact."

Will Expose Detectives.

"I am going to expose the detective department, and I won't be long in doing it," Colonel Felder added. "It is redolent with vice, and graft and corruption. Atlanta has suffered the situation long enough. It is now entirely beyond endurance. The people will tolerate it no longer.

"Lantford knew of my plans along this line. He knew I was going to reveal him a grafter, a viper. That's why he wanted to forestall my efforts. He could conceive of no better way than this absurd mode of ransacking a crook to fake up a lot of perjured evidence and swear falsely to a lot of crowd affidavits.

"I know most of its contents, and will soon investigate that which I do not know. I could have bought it for $1,000, had it been the 'buying kind.' The time has come when he and Beavers must be exposed. I'm going to put an end to it."

Colonel Felder said that his primary intentions were not to expose the detective department in its alleged "paid protection" system, but to its conduct of placing the name of Chief Felder, Chief Lantford, had been paid by forces representing the suspected Frank, to destroy damaging evidence against him, and was daily pursuing methods to this end.

Determined on Full Exposure.

"That was my first plan," he said. "Later, when Lantford opposed me so vigorously, I became determined to make full exposure of his malpractice. He got wind of it. Probably through Colyar. I'm not sure. He learned of it some way. His neck was in jeopardy, his job and reputation in danger. He had to employ some means of intercepting me. And he tried this. What a miserable, stinking farce he has made of himself and department."

He also stated that he had positive evidence that Lantford and a number of headquarters detectives had been moving to frustrate the work of Chief C. W. Tobie, the William J. Burns man, who is investigating the Phagan mystery. This stealthy work, said, had been already to a great number of witnesses, cautioning them not to talk to the Burns man, intimating that he was secretly operating for Frank.

"Another thing which convinces me Lantford is employed by Frank," said Felder, "is a purported confession shown me by Colyar and Febuary in the former's room in the Williams house. The confession, they said, had been extracted from the negro, Colyar, whom Lantford has been holding illegally ever since his arrest. Both Febuary and Colyar admitted that the confession was forced from the negro and was untrue, but had been made to escape the investigation which the detectives had subjected him.

"Destroying Evidence."

"What I wanted from Colyar, and the prime reason of my visit to the Burns house, was to procure evidence to affect the investigation. His detectives were destroying damaging evidence to Frank. This confession, purporting to be from the Communist negro, was one of the first documents I was shown. Febuary denied it, but I know it was true, and that, although it was false, it had been extracted from the negro and would be used by the detectives."

That James W. Coleman, stepfather of Mary Phagan had been forced into signing an affidavit credited to him, was declared by Mr. Felder, who stated that a number of headquarters detectives, including Chief Lantford, had gone to both him and his wife, and told them that if they did not deny their connection with Felder, they would quit work on the investigation of their daughter's murder, and leave her death unavenged.

"I was not employed by either Mr. or Mrs. Coleman," Felder said. "They only sanctioned my connection with the case. My real retainers are twelve or more substantial residents of the Bellwood neighborhood, in which Mary Phagan lived. They offered me $1,000 to deny their connection with the contract signed by A. C. and G. H. Bradley, two prominent business men of the Bellwood community."

Implored to Take Case.

The contract was shown to a reporter for The Constitution. It held the signature of A. C. McCall and G. H. Bradley. Mr. Felder named twelve, or more, men of Bellwood, who, he said, had implored him to come into the Mary Phagan case. He also stated that a number of ladies of the city, all of whom were socially conspicuous, had donated money for his retainance.

Colonel Felder's proposed probe of the police and detective department, he said, will be relentless and immediate. He will have the support, he declared, of many of the city's leading business men and capitalists. Declaring that the practices of the detective department are glaring and rotten, through and through, he intimates that Atlanta is unconsciously fostering a police "system" as foul as that practiced in New York before the famous Rosenthal murder.

Affidavits to Be Used.

Affidavits from keepers of disorderly houses, it is said, are possessed by Felder and his sympathizers, and proposed exposure. These documents, according to reports, are to the effect that the resorts operated by the affiants are afforded police protection for graft money. It is even said that a scale of prices are attached to the affidavits. He also stated that Colonel Felder states this is a substance of his talk with Febuary, an attack of the detective department for the past five years.

Police Say Felder Wanted

(Staff of Georgia, Fulton County: The affiant, J. W. Coleman and wife, citizens of Atlanta, Ga., who reside at 146 Lindsay street.

The affiant is the stepfather of Mary Phagan, accused, the child who was foully murdered by a heinous brute on April 26, 1913.

The affiant is in the employ of the City of Atlanta in the Sanitary department.

The affiant, while at the police station during the coroner's inquest, the exact day he does not remember, was approached by a man somewhat under the influence of liquor, and said to the affiant, "I am working for the law firm of T. B. Felder, and I would like to have you go to his office, as he wants to see you, and I advise you to employ him." Affiant said, "No, I won't go to his office." The man then said, "Will you talk to Colonel Felder if I bring him here?" whereupon the affiant agreed to see him. He went off and came back in a few minutes with Felder. Colonel Felder then said, "I want you to employ me to prosecute this case. It will not cost you a cent, as certain people have promised to pay me my fee, but I have got to have your consent to the employment before I can get into the coroner's jury." Affiant told him he did not want to employ him and did not want to have anything to do with him, as the affiant did not know him and had never seen him before that day, and affiant did not employ him, nor did the affiant inform employ him, and the only information the affiant ever had that he was employed was what he read in the newspapers.

Affiant has many good neighbors, and he appreciates their sympathy for him and his broken-hearted wife, but he cannot see how they would come to employ Colonel Felder without his knowledge and consent.

A man met the affiant on the street and offered him one dollar to go upon the file of this astute counsel, but he declined to accept it and told the party he had not employed Felder.

Affiant is thoroughly satisfied with the great work done by Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lantford and the able men working under them, as he believes, as thousands of them, as he believes, that they have the real murderer in jail, and the affiant cannot reconcile himself to the conduct of Colonel Felder, who is posing as a prosecuting attorney, and is wanting $5,000 from the people of the city as set out in the afternoon's papers, to bring a noted detective here, and according to the press of the city, large amounts have been subscribed by people the affiant does not believe are anxious to prosecute the men under arrest.

The affiant means no reflection on the press of the city and the justice of Atlanta who are in favor of justice and fair play. Affiant will ever preclude the sympathy that has been shown him and his family by these good people, and he asks them if they have any money to spend to punish the murderer of his sweet, innocent child, to stand behind the Atlanta police department and let no one mislead them.

R. L. Wallis and A. L. Brook, of Atlanta, Also Elected Officers at Columbus Convention.

Columbus, Ga., May 23.—(Special.)—The two days' session of the Georgia-Florida division of the United Commercial Travelers came to a close tonight with a largely attended ball at the Hotel Racine.

At the business session today officers for the ensuing year were elected, and Pensacola, Fla., was selected as the next meeting place. The only other contestant for the place, Jacksonville, Fla., was expected to ask for the next convention, but did not. The date for the meeting was not fixed.

The officers elected were as follows: R. B. Cole, Jacksonville, past grand counselor; E. D. Weir, Athens, grand counselor; J. M. Kelly, Tampa, grand junior counselor; R. L. Wallis, Atlanta, grand secretary; A. L. Brook, Atlanta, grand treasurer; W. L. Stern, Savannah, grand conductor; A. J. Heinberg, Pensacola, grand page; J. M. Giddens, Columbus, grand sentinel.

The following executive committees were elected for a term of two years: G. F. Eyr, of Atlanta, and J. B. Eaton, of Macon; T. B. Lewis, of Atlanta, and D. K. Ugleman, of Pensacola, were named as representatives to the supreme council.

One-Cent Postage Indorsed.

The grand council adopted a resolution indorsing the bill now before congress introduced by Congressman Bartlett, of Georgia, to give to the people a one-cent letter postage. The bill, introduced by the Atlanta member of the "National One-Cent Postage association."

A resolution was also adopted indorsing the bill in congress introduced by Senator Burton, providing for changing the date for presidential and congressional elections from the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, to the first Monday in November. The traveling men assert that 600,000 commercial travelers would be more or less affected by such a change; that it would make it easier for this number to vote in these elections.

A committee, of which W. R. Webb, of Atlanta, is chairman, was appointed to draft an amendment to the present hotel law in Georgia, providing for the creation of a state hotel inspector.

Among the interesting features of the day was the parade late this afternoon of the "Babmen of Bagdad." About one hundred took part, many of them in full regalia, while others wore very fancy and ludicrous costumes.

WILL EXPOSE DETECTIVES.

The contract was shown to a reporter for The Constitution. It held the signature of A. C. McCall and G. H. Bradley. Mr. Felder named twelve, or more, men of Bellwood, who, he said, had implored him to come into the Mary Phagan case. He also stated that a number of ladies of the city, all of whom were socially conspicuous, had donated money for his retainance.

Colonel Felder's proposed probe of the police and detective department, he said, will be relentless and immediate. He will have the support, he declared, of many of the city's leading business men and capitalists. Declaring that the practices of the detective department are glaring and rotten, through and through, he intimates that Atlanta is unconsciously fostering a police "system" as foul as that practiced in New York before the famous Rosenthal murder.

Affidavits to Be Used.

Affidavits from keepers of disorderly houses, it is said, are possessed by Felder and his sympathizers, and proposed exposure. These documents, according to reports, are to the effect that the resorts operated by the affiants are afforded police protection for graft money. It is even said that a scale of prices are attached to the affidavits. He also stated that Colonel Felder states this is a substance of his talk with Febuary, an attack of the detective department for the past five years.

SOLICITOR GENERAL DORSEY TALKS OF THE BRIBE CHARGE

A merry laugh was the first comment made by Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey when told of the reported diagraph evidence in which Colonel T. B. Felder is quoted as saying that he could control the mayor, the criminal court judge and Hugh Dorsey.

Solicitor Dorsey was at his home at the time, endeavoring to find rest and recreation after the morning's work of placing the evidence in the Phagan case before the grand jury. Hugh Dorsey, Jr., was in his arms at the time and from the lad's continuous efforts to express his joy in billowing his father with him as the solicitor was to be at home and away from the strain of work in the case to which he has devoted his entire time for weeks.

"Why there is no use for me to deny any such remarks as those attributed to Colonel Felder, and I certainly do not wish to express my opinion in the matter. In fact, I know nothing whatever of the affair except what is generally known to the public."

"Colonel Felder never expressed to me any intention of taking steps to attempt to show graft or fraud on the part of the city police or detectives," replied the solicitor when asked if during his conferences in regard to the Phagan case, Colonel Felder had made any expression in regard to the present situation.

"The latest conference I had with Colonel Felder was when he came to my home last Sunday night to confer upon the Phagan case. As I announced publicly some time ago, I worked with him as I have done with others interested in probing the matter. I received what information I could from results of investigations to myself.

"As far as I know, there had never been any disturbing force in operation between the city detectives and Colonel Felder," he replied to a query on this point.

"I really would prefer not to discuss the matter at all," the solicitor insisted. "I have no connection with the affair whatever it may be, and I don't care to be drawn into it. I want to devote my entire time and thought to the Phagan case and to securing a conviction of the guilty parties."

A. S. Colyar Makes Answer To Charges of Col. Felder

A. S. Colyar, when seen last night by a representative of The Atlanta Constitution, gave out the following written statement:

"I have just read Colonel T. B. Felder's card in the bedtime edition of The Atlanta Georgian, in which he seeks to call me behind my back, a liar and a crook. Knowing the colonel as I do, and as his intimate friends know, he is a past grand master on explanations. The Atlanta Journal, in its Friday afternoon home edition, published every detail of the case with the sworn statement of Mr. Furber, Mr. Osburn, Mr. Gentry, Mr. Suries and myself, and I do not care at the present time to dignify this astute politician with any further controversy."

Chief Beavers Not Surprised At Col. Felder's Statements

"I am not surprised," said Chief Beavers when asked to give an expression on Colonel T. B. Felder's alleged statement regarding graft and immorality in the detective department. "I am not surprised in the least. I am very nice of him to have me ridden through the streets naked, as he is reported to have threatened. Besides being not nice, he might lay himself liable to prosecution for public indecency."

Further than this, Chief Beavers maintained the sphinx-like attitude which has characterized him ever since a certain memorable occasion when he closed the red light district.

CALIFORNIA SIDELIGHTS.

The ignorant Chinese in Charles Lamb's fable burned down the house that they might enjoy roast pig. If a correspondent of The Boston (Mass.) Transcript is correctly informed, Governor Johnson, of California, is willing to set the house of the nation on fire if he may thereby go to the senate. It is at any rate, according to this authority, the governor's senatorial ambitions that provoked the present crisis, and the story is told as follows:

In California, the politics back of the agitation for an anti-alien land law campaign to reach the United States senate, will be opposed in the campaign when it opens by Francis J. Heney, who works in the great prosecutions in San Francisco. He took up when Heney was shot. It is the belief of Governor Johnson that the sympathies of Colonel Roosevelt are with Mr. Heney. This would place Johnson in a serious disadvantage should it prove true, and in wanting about for an issue to offset this, Johnson seized upon the "yellow dog" implicated in the McNamara affair were renouncing their demands that the Japanese in the United States be allowed to constitute only about two per cent of the population, should be excluded from all land holding. The governor took up this issue and the legislature which he dominates, or rather his following in that body which is the majority, started off upon its passage a rigid bill prohibiting all aliens ineligible to citizenship from owning property. The outcry raised throughout the country and in Japan and the earnest protest of Colonel Roosevelt to Governor Johnson had the effect of modifying the original bill.

We hope this version is exaggerated. It is not reassuring to think that demagoguery can reach such sinister extremes that it will involve the entire nation in trouble that may end in war, cost thousands of lives and hundreds of millions of dollars, all in exchange for a senate seat! The disparity in the stakes is too tremendous, too appalling. But there is the story for what it is worth.

In this connection former President Roosevelt is completely exonerated from a rather general suspicion that his influence has been back of the persistency of Johnson. When the situation assumed a crisis in the California legislature, Colonel Roosevelt was asked the point blank question as to how he stood by eastern newspaper men. He responded that he had protested to Governor Johnson. When asked for a copy of what he said, he replied, "That is purely a personal matter between myself and Governor Johnson; if he cares to give out the correspondence he may do so." Johnson declined to make public Roosevelt's telegrams. It is known, however, that they constituted an emphatic protest against the proposed action and a stiff warning as to the consequences.

THE ANSWER--COME SOUTH.

The New York Herald laments that the long-continued and increasing tide of immigration is uprooting all our old dietary standards and replacing them with the peculiar tastes of many European countries. "Strawberry shortcake is fading fast away," it mourns, "pork and beans--cooked according to the ancient New England recipe, with a little molasses--is following in its wake, and corn beef hash is tainted with onions and even garlic. Meantime, the tide of immigration has carried with it foreign drink and cookery and developed the culture of many foodstuffs."

The good old dishes of our forefathers may be vanishing in the east and other sections of the country, but, bless your heart! they still reign supreme this side of the Potomac river. Don't think we're intolerant or dogmatic. The southern mind is receptive with regard to cookery as with regard to high finance, highbrow literature or futurist art. There is nothing small or snobbish about the south's gustatory inclinations. But in this section, we venture to boast, you will find more of the original American dishes and the American style of cookery than in any other part of the country.

It has often been said that the south contained the nation's largest percentage of pure Anglo-Saxon extraction. The influences that have militated to keep pure our racial strain--such as isolation, slowness in development, the civil war, etc.--have also operated to guard the diet list against foreign influence. As for shortcake? Well, had The Herald visited Georgia during the season just passed it would have seen no signs of decadence, either in the luscious product itself or in the native love for it. As for meats, it is likely the southern likes his roast and his pork in virtually the same style his Cavalier and Huguenot ancestors liked them--as if fresh from a turning spit, succulent and inviting. And where that king of breads, "corn pone," is concerned, it graces today the representative southern table. Go out on the myriad farms and you will find still supreme those bountiful and well-seasoned vegetable dinners that used to characterize the antebellum regime.

This doesn't mean that we haven't here and there fallen victims to the delicacies and refinements of foreign cuisine. But in the representative instance the south maintains the sturdiest of American standards as regards the table. So whenever our friends of the north, east and west want to sample again a genuine American dinner, let them catch the next limited in this direction. They'll find it worth the price!

CUBA'S CRISIS.

The republic of Cuba probably enters upon the critical period of its history with the inauguration of Mario G. Menocal as its third president. His predecessor, Gomez, narrowly grazed forcing American intervention by his weakness and inefficiency, and the option is growing that the next time our troops go to Cuba it will be on an expedition of permanent occupation.

Whether Menocal can merge all factions and give the island a far start on the road to stable government is an unknown quantity. He is said to be an excellent administrator, is certainly an adroit politician, and, not the least important of qualifications, has had military experience. It is also encouraging that he approaches his task with a full knowledge of its difficulties.

At present, as ever since its nominal independence, Cuba has been the stamping ground of differing cliques and of aspiring politicians. The people themselves have had little or no experience in the arts and restraints of self-government. The legacy of unrest and of force which was handed down from the Spanish regime has more or less persisted to this day. Each succeeding president has been confronted by a patronage problem by the side of which the quandaries of the American democrats are negligible. For if the American aspirant, however powerful, fails to receive an appointment, he can either nurse his grudge in private or keep a political hatchet whetted. But in Cuba the practice has been to fly to arms. This tendency, and the further tendency to loot the treasury on the slightest pretext, has made troubles for any man charged with administration. Further complications have been the scarcity of land, great estates being held in "cold storage." President Menocal has pledged himself to attack this abuse.

Should President Menocal succeed in weathering the next year and in bringing all elements in Cuba to a realization of the responsibilities ahead of them, he will have wrought historically for his country. Doubt still prevails in America as to the ability of the island ever to govern itself. Menocal's administration should answer the question one way or the other.

ALSO AN ATLANTA PROBLEM.

"Spotless Town" of familiar memory is to have a rival in "Noiseless Town," and, wonderful to behold, the candidate is to be none other than Chicago, second largest city of the nation. The casual visitor to Chicago who knows the racket-manufacturing possibilities of the "Windy City" will rise up and call these latest crusaders blessed, but will speculate as to how they will go about performance. The rest of the country is also likely to watch with interest this latest municipal experiment. Chicago's determination grows out of a conference recently between council's health committee and a delegation of lawyers, doctors, merchants, managers of hospitals and others. The latter represented to the guardians of the city's health that the noises made by autos, elevated trains, locomotive whistles, river boat sirens, peddlers and so forth were detrimental to health and business. The committee agreed with them. As a result, old ordinances regulating the city's noise will be revived and more stringent new ones enacted.

Power to this movement! It attacks an evil we had all grown to believe inseparable from cities and one that is becoming each day a more trying problem. And, incidentally, Atlanta has the same problem to solve. The government laundry for soiled money isn't working overtime. Fact is, few of us can spare any from our roll.

And some of them are saying it's all wool and less than a yard wide with the tariff.

Occasionally we hear from the Colonel, but Armageddon has vanished from the map.

The emperor of Germany is writing poetry. This is the last phase.

Where the Old Friends Used to Be. I. We are in that country that's wonderful to see, But still in dreams we're drifting where the old friends used to be. The old friends who loved us through sweet, remembered years, And all that now is left us is Memory's gift of tears.

II. The mockingbird was singing in the old mulberry tree Yonder, in that country where the old friends used to be; The bees were in the blossoms, the larks--they winged the loam There, where the old friends made glad the hearts of home.

III. The world is rolling far away and sudden scenes arise That seem to dim a far off day and sweet, serene skies, But Love that ever leads us to God's eternity Still whispers of the old place where the old friends used to be.

OFF YONDER.

I want to leave the trouble of the dusty, driving town-- I want to be off yonder where the cork is going down; For, at my desk, a-writing, I hear the rippled streams, The friendly flat are biting--I "land" 'em in my dreams!

II. I want to be off yonder where the world is smiling bright, And fade away in shadows, or lose myself in light; The green banks of a river, so quiet, cool, and deep, And let the fish tug at my line and wake me from my sleep!

Little Wayside Sermons. In getting out of the wilderness we sometimes fly so high that we dunno where to light.

It's mighty well that you can't see ten steps ahead of you, for if you could you'd fall over yourself going back.

A Love Song. I. Bright are the skies above you While I am lonely here, But tell me because I love you, Is sweet as rest, my dear.

II. You, where the kind God pities His roses, rimmed with dew; I, in the thunder-cities, Singing my soul to you.

III. I may not ever meet you There, where the lilies wait, And know the necklace of your arms In the starlight, at the gate.

IV. But O, that Fate, relenting, Might smile upon the strife, And Love would kiss the dying Back to eternal life!

In the Life Race. In the race of life, lad, if you lose or win, This world's the best world that ever you were in. Sweet, even in sorrow--rising over sin, This world's the best world that ever you were in!

The Fine Old Country. I. Bless the fine old country, She's comin' right along, Music on the highway-- Halleluia in a song!

II. Bless the fine old country Every joyous day, We're singin' on the hilltops, "Halleluia on the way!"

Beginning to Worry. "I told him I never wished to see him again."

"And what did he say?" "He didn't say anything. He just put on his hat and went away."

"When was this?" "More than an hour ago. Do you think I ought to write to him this afternoon, or would you advise me to wait until tomorrow?"--Chicago Record-Herald.

New News of Yesterday

How Federal Credit Was Strengthened During the Civil War.

By E. J. Edwards. (Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.) In the spring of 1864 a pamphlet was published bearing the title of "Our Burden and Our Strength." The publication became really a national sensation. Hundreds of thousands of copies were printed, and over 300,000 were sent to Great Britain and the continent of Europe. In this country men who thought themselves well informed about our natural resources discovered after reading this pamphlet that they really knew little about the magnitude and the almost inexhaustible nature of the resources of the northern and the western states and territories. The effect of this pamphlet upon Europe was immediately felt by the representatives of the government who had been commissioned to offer government bonds for sale abroad. Furthermore, one effect of the pamphlet was greatly to depreciate the credit of the bonds which were offered for sale in Europe by the Confederate government.

The author of this pamphlet was David A. Wells. Its publication gave him both a national and an international reputation. He E. J. Edwards, became one of the leading economic authorities of the United States and was for a time associated officially with the treasury department at Washington. Afterward Mr. Wells was called into consultation professionally by many of the important corporate and railroad interests of the United States.

It was my good fortune to become acquainted with Mr. Wells in 1873. I had many conversations with him. Sometimes he seemed absent-minded and I soon learned that his mind was on some important matter. At other times he was very communicative. I took advantage of a time when Mr. Wells seemed disposed to chat freely to ask him how he came to write the pamphlet entitled "Our Burden and Our Strength."

"Why," he replied, "that was almost accidental. The writing of it can be directly traced to my business association with Mr. George Putnam, the publisher, of New York city. When I was a young man I was for a time in business relations with Mr. Putnam. He was a very broad-minded and sagacious man."

"Mr. Putnam was informed that a representative of the Confederate government was having Holland had written a pamphlet for the purpose of showing that the Confederate cotton bonds were as good as gold, since behind every bond was the equivalent amount of cotton. The pamphlet, by implication, intimated that in this respect the Confederate government was very much stronger than the federal government."

"Mr. Putnam was greatly concerned when he read this pamphlet. Almost instantly his mind turned to me. He knew that I had made a special study of economic questions and of some of the natural resources of the northern and western states and territories. He remembered that I had told him that the natural resources of the north were sufficient to support an army of a million men for ten years and without greatly straining the credit of the nation and these resources."

"Mr. Putnam, therefore, suggested to me that I write a pamphlet setting forth in detail what the natural and many of the undeveloped resources of the north were, so that in this way I could show that the government of the United States could rely with confidence upon its unexampled resources for the maintenance of an army of at least a million men a year."

"I acted at once upon the suggestion. The work did not require a great deal of labor. I had most of the material ready at hand."

"I have been told that when Disraeli, who, with the exception of John Bryce, was the only prominent statesman who predicted ultimate victory for the north, read this pamphlet, he said that it was for the reason set forth in the pamphlet that he was confident that the union armies would ultimately be triumphant."

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON. The Famous Prose Poet

Open Confession.

"I have shooting pains in my diaphragm and a bad taste in my mouth, and I can't see straight," said Quigway, as he drifted into the corner drug store, "and I want some medicine that will make me as good as new. Some sort of a spring tonic. What do you recommend?"

"I don't recommend anything," replied the druggist. "I have a dozen kinds of spring medicines, but they are no good. They are composed of cheap rainwater and a few useless drugs. Five cents worth of assafras will make three barrels of the ordinary spring medicine, and I consider it highway robbery to put such dope in bottles and sell it for a dollar a throw. You'd better go to the woods and collect a basket full of yarbs and simples, and make your own medicine. A drug store is the last place you should go to for it."

The World's Mysteries

MYSTERIES of ANTIQUITY

WAS PISA'S TOWER BUILT TO LEAN?

One of the most curious structures in the world is the Leaning Tower of Pisa. No one has ever been able to ascertain whether the Tower was built in its present inclined position, or whether it has been tipping gradually during the centuries since it was constructed. An investigation that was started shortly after the fall of the famous Campanile of Venice in 1802 has revealed several interesting facts regarding this structure, but even the men who performed the task were not able to fathom the mystery of the great incline of this Tower.

For many years it was supposed that the Tower was founded upon a massive and solid base, but instead these investigators found that the real foundation simply consists of a ring of masonry exactly corresponding in girth to the huge cylindrical mass it bears. In fact, the diameter of the inner ring of foundation is precisely that of the space inside the Tower.

This discovery, with the further astonishing fact that the foundations are merely three meters beneath the surface, would appear to constitute almost incontrovertible proof that the Leaning Tower of Pisa was originally built peculiarly, and that its leaning propensities, which are becoming more and more accentuated, are due to other causes than the intention of its constructors.

Its lean has been gradual, though marked, within the past hundred years. Two English architects who examined the Tower in 1817 noted that it was 12 feet 7 inches out of the vertical line, but since that time it has increased more than one foot, being at present 13 feet and 8 inches from the perpendicular. Including the cornice, it is 12 feet out of the perpendicular. Another English writer who visited the Tower about the middle of the last century, wrote as follows: "I am as much satisfied that this Tower was built in its present form as with any arguments I have read to the contrary."

He then refers to the statement of Messrs. Cressy and Taylor, which was published in 1829: "They have shown, to their minds, in a very satisfactory way, no doubt, that the Tower of Pisa was not built in a leaning position, as the scaffold holes incline just as the Tower does, and also that the settlement must have begun to show itself before the completion, from the attempts that were made to rectify it by increasing the height of the columns and cornices on the lower side in order to throw the upper part of the building in the opposite direction. I observe the same artifice in the tower at Bologna."

The base of the tower has always been immersed in water, which is one reason for its unsteadiness, and it has, no doubt, been affected at various times by seismic movements. It is stated that Galileo, who swung his pendulum from the overhanging south cornice in 1615, in his experiments to confirm the laws of gravitation, found nine years later that his pendulum reached further from the base by several inches, but in the meantime there had occurred the earthquake of 1620. It is also stated that after the earthquake of 1834 and 1859 the tower showed a very perceptible increased inclination.

When the Tower of Pisa was begun in 1174, one historian tells us, after the plans of the architects, Bonannus, of Pisa, and Wilhem, of Innsbruck, the structure was intended to stand erect. The third story, however, had scarcely been reached when it was found to incline towards the south. Work was stopped and for nearly a century it remained as it was. The five additional stories, completed in 1350, show a slight inclination of structure in the northerly direction, and this, added to the fact that the two heaviest bells of the seven in the tower are hung in the northern side, shows the attempts that were made in the fourteenth century to maintain the equilibrium of the tower, if not its permanent stability. These bells weigh 1,600 pounds, and are named the Assumption and the Crucified Christ.

There are good arguments that would appear to sustain both sides in this controversy, and the only fact upon which recent investigators have based their belief is that the tower was built crooked unintentionally, as its meager foundation would prove. A learned Frenchman of the sixteenth century suggested, and apparently with seriousness, that the architect was a hunchback and made the tower crooked to resemble himself.

GEORGIA, ROAD-MAKER

By Philip Weltner, Secretary Prison Association of Georgia.

Georgia has gone into the business of building roads. It has also gone into the business of building men. Georgia, busy at the task of building roads, can achieve the nobler task of building men. The men can build the roads, and the building in turn may serve to build the men.

Georgia will never make men by their wanton humiliation. Stripes will never do it; chains will never do it; the lash will never do it; the threatening glint of cold steel will never do it. Such methods may build roads. But the builders will be made brutal, both captives and guards and men. Every noble task ennobles the doer. You take joy in the job into which you liberate the best that is in you. The secret of building men is to make them love the work in hand. Do not be skeptical of the possibility of making "a black nigger" love to sweat at building roads. Let the convict feel that in building well he is building himself, and the trick is done.

Governor West, of Oregon, understands the secret. He writes, "First, we have given the boys a few cents for a good day's work. All of our outside men or 'trusties' receive twenty-five cents per day for their labor. A little bank account has the significance of a certificate of deposit in the great bank of character. Along with the few cents is our honor system. We pride ourselves that sixty per cent of the men serving time are out on honor. One of our trusties expressed a sentiment at a little dinner, given for the boys and me, which ought to be the guiding star of all our prison policies: 'The best we can do under such circumstances (referring to the honor system) is too little, but under the old regime, guarded by cold steel, the least we could do seemed too much.'"

Out in Oregon they have abolished the strap. Out in Oregon they have abolished the strap. It is not to be wondered at. And they make good roads. They need not employ human beings to perform the functions of watch dog. The shot gun is unheard of. A patrol is more than enough. If Georgia would make it worth while for a convict to do his best, brutalities would cease. Good will would take the place of hate. Honest work in making roads would pave the way to making honest men.

You see, I have to buy my sulphur and syrup from the manufacturers, and I have no way of knowing how badly it's adulterated. I suppose the sulphur is work by yellow ochre men or 'trusties' largely free of cents per day for their labor. A little bank account has the significance of a certificate of deposit in the great bank of character. Along with the few cents is our honor system. We pride ourselves that sixty per cent of the men serving time are out on honor. One of our trusties expressed a sentiment at a little dinner, given for the boys and me, which ought to be the guiding star of all our prison policies: 'The best we can do under such circumstances (referring to the honor system) is too little, but under the old regime, guarded by cold steel, the least we could do seemed too much.'"

"Well, I see you're dippy. No sane druggist would give you such a line of talk when a customer comes in. I'll go and buy what I want from some druggist who has his intellect on straight, but before I go I wish you'd tell me what happened to put you in this condition."

GALVESTON

By GEORGE FITZ. Author of "At Good Old Swabb."

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.) Most cities are like each other, varying only in the luxury of their new hotels and the size of their census figures and union depots. But Galveston made itself and there is no duplicate.

Galveston has 37,000 people. It used to have 38,000, but on September 8, 1900, the Gulf of Mexico rose up over it and drowned 6,000 of its people. The next morning Galveston was a soggy wreck and the nation began collecting enough money to bring the survivors to some safe place and let them start a new city.

The Galveston folks who were left were all Texas people and instead of being discouraged they got mad. Galveston lies on a long narrow island shaped like a fat pin and about as slender. It was so low that when there was an unusually high tide, the sea wandered down the main street and called for mail at the postoffice. Galveston built a sea wall 17 feet high and 17,500 feet long. Then she raised herself up to the top of the sea wall, twiddled her fingers at the gulf and dared it to come again. How are you going to discourage a town like that? Galveston is little but mighty important. The ships of the earth sneak in behind Pelican island on which Galveston stands and load cotton. It takes fifty steamship lines to carry away Galveston's cotton. The city is visited by more tramps than any other city in the world, but it doesn't mind it. Its tramps are tramp steamships and they make her tonnage figures bigger than those of any American city except New York.

Galveston has had quantities of history. It has been under six flags--Spanish, LaFitte's black flag, Mexican, Texas, United States and Confederate--and has dipped into four or five wars a little ways. Its citizens have grown rich and when they die they leave high schools, hospitals, libraries, war monuments and drinking fountains to the town. It has the finest beach in the country and the climate is so even that the merchants sell thermometers with the temperature painted on the glass and the citizens don't know the difference.

Galveston's six bridges to the main land were blown away in the great storm, so she built an isthmus instead. She has 13 square miles, but better than that, she has several square commissioners who govern the city on the commission plan and save $100,000 a year with which to pay interest on the sea wall bonds.

Galveston is little, but she has demonstrated to the world that she can't be lost even when the whole ocean jumps on her.

IF--

By George Matthew Adams

IF is the Biggest small word to be found in any Dictionary. IF is the hurdle which hurls more human beings into "The Slough of Despond." Disappointment and Failure than any other Barrier. IF is primarily destructive rather than constructive. Trivial and Innocent in appearance, yet it is the Great Divide word sitting at the seat of Separation where one man presses on and the other turns back. IF is the slogan of Sluggards. To you whose inertia carries you but to meet the word, to you whose habits are those of dissipation and mental disorder IF presents to you an Obstacle impassable. BUT-- In the Dictionary that the Deer owns there is no IF. For the King of the man who Does is the King of Will--and no thing or word or man ever conquered King WILL.

IN DOWNPOUR OF RAIN WALKER LAID TO REST

Every Business House in Monroe Closes During Hours of the Funeral.

By Ernest Camp. (Special).—The funeral of E. Sanders Walker, Jr., who died in Macon Thursday morning after a week's illness caused by his taking a bichloride mercury tablet through mistake, occurred from the First Baptist church of Monroe this afternoon at 2 o'clock, being conducted by his pastor, Dr. E. C. Dargan, of Macon, and Dr. D. W. Key, pastor of the First Baptist church of Monroe.

The funeral party arrived in a special car over the Georgia railroad at 12:30 o'clock and was accompanied by many relatives and friends of the dead man. A large number of sorrowing friends were gathered at the depot in a downpour of rain awaiting the train's arrival.

The remains of Mr. Walker were escorted from the train to the home of his father, E. S. Walker, Sr., a short distance away, where they remained until the funeral at 2 o'clock. Hundreds of sympathetic friends called at the Walker home to pay a last tribute of respect.

Every business house in the city was closed during the hours of the funeral from 2 to 3 o'clock, and a big throng turned out to attend the last services in honor of the beloved dead.

The floral offerings were exquisite, and came from Macon, Atlanta, Monroe and many other parts of the state. There were such an abundance of flowers in all of them that could not be placed in the church, and many of the designs were extremely beautiful.

The funeral services were beautiful and impressive. In his eloquent and tender eulogy, Dr. Dargan delivered a stinging rebuke to the irresponsible newspapermen which had entered the Walker home in its greatest hour of gloom and sent out outrageously false reports in connection with his death.

Following the funeral at the church the ceremonies were concluded with a brief service at the cemetery.

The local pallbearers were H. E. Nunnally, Arthur Mobley, Herbert and Harry Bredlow, G. M. Knight and E. W. Roberts, of Monroe, and W. M. Gowdin, of Sandersville, all close friends and former associates of Mr. Walker.

Visited Monroe in November. Sanders Walker's last visit to Monroe was during last November. Though he was in the full strength and power of promising young manhood, upon a brief visit to relatives and friends. Today he came with his life's book closed, the flowers upon his casket wet with the tears of the heart-broken relatives and friends accompanying him.

Residing at Macon in the old home of Sidney Lanier, young Walker was surrounded by all the sentiment and tender memories that cling to that loved and historic shrine, and the radiant light he made for life touched a pathetic chord in the hearts of men and kindled a sympathy which has swept all over the state.

The center of interest in his unusual case has switched from Macon, his adoptive home in Monroe, where he was born and reared, and where, after life's last chord was severed, he was brought back and laid to rest.

NINE STORES BURNED IN TALLAPOOSA FIRE

Entire Business District of the Town Threatened by 'Big Midnight Blaze.'

Tallapoosa, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—Fire at midnight last night destroyed nine stores in the heart of Tallapoosa. The long row of buildings on the south side of the railroad was almost completely destroyed.

The blaze originated in the rear of a barber shop, and when discovered was burning furiously and spread rapidly. The store buildings were burned and the flames attacked the Rambo office building, but were checked there and prevented from spreading to other business blocks. For a time it seemed that the entire business district was threatened.

The buildings were occupied by general store, restaurant, market, etc. W. L. Tomlin is the heaviest loser, with F. L. McMahan second. McMahan lost his building and entire stock of goods.

Several people were sleeping in the building but all escaped just in time to be unharmed.

The fire was near the tracks of the Southern railroad and all trains were delayed several hours, a number of them being forced to remain in the yard until the flames abated.

Plans are already being made for rebuilding some of the houses. The exact amount of the loss has not been determined, but it is large and not much of it covered by insurance.

Leap Over Windshield Saves Athens Machinist As Automobile Explodes

Athens, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—Yesterday evening, 8 miles from Athens, Paul Keller, a Frenchman machinist at a local garage, escaped death by leaping over a second and a few feet, when he made a flying leap over the windshield of a big, 7-passenger Stoddard touring car, which exploded and burned up behind him.

He was testing the machine for a defect which rendered the mileage for the amount of gasoline used abnormally low. He heard a hissing sound, looked back and saw a stream of flame issuing from the machine and enveloping the tank. He leaped and escaped with some minor scratches.

The machine was in a few seconds a mass of twisted scrap iron. Only the axles and radiator were left. S. Michael paid $5,000 for the car only a few days ago.

MAY CALL CONVENTION ON W. & A. RAILROAD

Chamber of Commerce Committee Suggests Gathering of Representative Men Here.

A convention of representative men from all over the state may be called at a not distant date by the Atlanta chamber of commerce for the purpose of considering the future of the Western and Atlantic railroad. The suggestion was made at the first meeting of the committee on the Western and Atlantic railroad, appointed by the chamber yesterday, and it seemed to meet with general favor.

While the present lease of the road does not expire until 1918, nearly six years off, the questions involved are of such importance not only to the people of Atlanta, but to the state, that it is not too early to begin a thorough study of the matter with a view to reaching a solution satisfactory to all interests involved. The committee invites other commercial bodies in the state to take up the problem and give it careful study.

Statement of Mr. Wimlish. In a carefully prepared statement which was read at the meeting yesterday, the chairman, W. A. Wimlish, discussed various phases of the problem such as the proposed extension of the road to the sea, the purchase by the state of the A. B. & A. railroad, the disposition of the Chattanooga terminals, the advisability of a long lease with a provision for doubling tracks and other improvements, of a short lease, etc. Mr. Wimlish said: "This committee has been raised by the chamber of commerce, not alone for safe-guarding the interest of the city of Atlanta, but also for promoting the welfare of the state with respect to the future disposition and use of the Western and Atlantic railroad."

"As you are aware, the present lease expires in the year 1918, and therefore has something less than six years within which to run. The question of what shall be done with this property at the expiration of the lease is of such consequence to the people of this city and of this state that it is none too early to begin definite work looking to the desired end."

The first question that presents itself is whether this property should be again leased or whether it would be better for the state to undertake its operation. If it should be decided to be the better policy for the state to operate the property, the question arises whether it will not be essential to provide for its extension to the sea. Whether the state should extend and operate the property, thereby coming into business competition with other railroads in the state, presents still another question.

"It is doubtful if the road should be extended from Atlanta to the sea, unless it is to be operated by the state, or unless such extension becomes necessary to preserve the value of the Western and Atlantic railroad. Should this extension be built, the road could not operate as a regulator against excessive freight rates, for the reason that the lessee company would, undoubtedly, establish the same rates as those charged by other competing lines."

Suggests Purchase of A. B. & A. "Should the extension be deemed desirable, it is then to be determined whether it should be accomplished by means of original construction or whether negotiations should be entered into for the purchase of an existing line, such as the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad. It would be essential that the state should have adequate terminals at the port, and that a regular line of steamships to the eastern cities should be established or encouraged."

"In the event it should be found best to again lease the property in question, whether this lease should be for a short term, should receive careful consideration. Should the lease be made for a short term at a flat rental, as in the past, it could not be expected that the lessee would make any very great permanent improvements in the property. A short-term lease had advantages which are obvious. On the other hand, the lessee for a long term might be required to double-track the line, reduce the grades, straighten out the curves and otherwise improve the property, as a part of the consideration of the lease; and the rental might be adjusted on a graduated scale of increase. A long term lease has its corresponding disadvantages."

COURT PAYS $50,000 TO HUFF CREDITORS

Mrs. Jennings and Edison Huff Decline to Accept $6,110 Awarded to Them.

Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—Under the recent decree of Judge Emory Spear of the United States district court, that portion of the claims against the Huff estate which have not been disputed, are being paid today, amounting to a little over $50,000. This represents about half principal and half interest, in some cases the interest having accrued during the fourteen years being as large as the principal.

Mrs. Jennings and Edison Huff, children of Colonel Huff, have refused to accept the $6,110 given to them by the decree of the court because it does not include interest for the last four years, while all of the other amounts awarded do. This is the principal point on which Colonel Huff has based his appeal.

After the money has been paid out today there will be $33,000 left in the registry of the court in addition to five and a half acres of improved property in South Macon known as the Armory property.

To Amend City Charter. Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—When the legislature convenes in June two amendments to the charter of the city of Macon will be offered. These are now under consideration by the chamber of commerce, a committee of council, and are being considered favorably.

The first will be to provide for the election of eight aldermen from the city at large and one from each of the four wards. At the present time three aldermen are elected from each of the four wards. The desire is to have a change have come from the fact that often it is not possible to find three men who are competent and desire to run for office from the same ward and by selecting eight of them from the city at large it is figured that the city can get the best of men whose knowledge will be valuable.

The other amendment is for the appointment of a permanent city tax assessor to replace the present board of three who work only about three months in the year.

The bill to be introduced in the legislature making it a violation of the law to empty sewers into the Ocmulgee river within the confines of Bibb county in order to prevent possible contamination of the water supply of Macon.

The water commissioners recently appealed to council to prevent the building of a private sewer to the river near the waterworks pumping station and council has decided that the best way to do this is through legislative enactment.

OLD DARKY GETS HIS GRANDSON OUT OF GANG

Comes All Way From Chattanooga With $40 to Pay $50 Fine Which Governor Commutes.

It is seldom that anyone has the power of giving so much happiness as Governor Brown gave yesterday to Clint Greene, an old negro and ex-slave, by a simple act of mercy involving only $10.

Allen Russell, a 17-year-old negro boy, was convicted some weeks ago of stealing a pistol from a blacksmith shop and sentenced by Judge Andy Calhoun to pay a fine of $50 or serve eight months on the county chain-gang. It was a case of simple larceny just like the hundreds of others that pass through the criminal court the course of the year. Moneyless and friendless, the lad went to the gang, apparently forgotten by all the world.

But it was not so. Away up in Chattanooga, lived old Clint, Allen's grandfather, bent with age and toll. When news reached him of the boy's distress, he at once began to save his money to pay the fine. At last, with great difficulty, he got together $40, and boarded a train for Atlanta.

Then he found that the fine was $50 and with $40 he could do nothing. Almost in despair, he at last thought of Mr. W. D. Greene, to whose family he had belonged before the war—his own family, in the old negro's mind—and to him he presented the case and made his appeal. Mr. Greene at once took the matter up with Judge Calhoun, whom he found willing to help, but who was not permitted by the law to reduce a fine once imposed, but the two took it up with the governor. When the case was explained to him the governor willingly commuted the fine to $40. Old Uncle Clint then gave up his board, got the boy out of the gang and returned to Chattanooga with him last night, grateful beyond his power to express.

Flight Against Receiver. Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—Judge Spear, in the United States district court, will tomorrow hear the application for the appointment of a receiver for the L. Carter company, of Oconee, Ga. The receiver has been filed by the company denying insolvency and asking for the discharge of the custodian now in charge of the books of the company.

L. Carter, the head of the company, is reported to be a millionaire, but is interested in many financial institutions of south Georgia.

Drum Corps to Reunion. Macon, Ga., May 23.—(Special).—The chamber of commerce has appropriated $100 for the purpose of buying a drum corps to assist that organization in its trip to the confederate reunion at Chattanooga. Recently the corps gave a minstrel show from which they cleared $7,500 of which was used in buying the new uniforms. The trip to Chattanooga will cost a little over $800.

Two special trains will be operated from this city for the reunion, one to and one from the special going over the Central of Georgia and the confederate veterans' special over the Southern railway. Both will be well filled with people from middle and south Georgia.

AMBASSADOR ARRIVES AT QUEENSTOWN

Queenstown, May 23—Walter Hines Page, United States ambassador to Great Britain, parried all attempts of newspaper men to obtain an interview when he arrived here today from New York. He contented himself with the remark that his constant endeavor while holding his office would be to "maintain the more than friendly relations between the United States and the United Kingdom which had, happily, continued for such a long time."

The American consul here went on board the Baltic and delivered a package of dispatches to Ambassador Page.

Chairman Murphy Candler said yesterday that he expected to have something definite to give out as to the railroad commission's action on the complaints looking to the betterment of the local street car service by next Tuesday. The schedules of the different lines in tabulated form and the plans of President Arkwright for the improvement of the system were placed in the hands of the chairman yesterday. These will be considered at a meeting of the commission, and definite action will be taken in the matter Tuesday.

LATEST REPORTS FROM ALL OF THE MARKETS

CLIMB IS CHECKED IN STOCK MARKET

Speculation Lacked the Vitality to Carry Further Upward Movement of Thursday.

New York, May 23.—Speculation lacked the vitality necessary to carry further yesterday's upward movement of stocks and the effect of today's trading on the average of quoted values was negligible.

There was renewed liquidation in some quarters of the list. Pennsylvania declined to 109 1/2, the low price for the movement. St. Louis and San Francisco securities continued their precipitate decline.

The cables reported hesitation in the foreign markets and London sold about 5,000 shares here on balance.

Conflicting reports were received as to the flotation of the Chicago loan, and it was assumed that the influence upon the investment situation was as indefinite as the New York city bond issue here, the direct stimulus power for having been imparted in neither case.

Another gain in cash by the banks as a result of the week's operations was predicted. Forecasts of tomorrow's bank statement pointed to a cash gain of about $5,000,000.

United States 5% coupon declined 1/4 and the four coupon 3/4 on call, the latter receding to 11 1/2. Later 1 1/2 was bid.

Atlanta, Ga., May 23.—The cotton market closed at 10 1/2, the low price for the movement.

There was a general feeling of uncertainty in the market, and the price of cotton was 10 1/2, the low price for the movement.

RAIN REPORTS LESSEN BULLISH ENTHUSIASM

Market Closes Heavy at Prices Varying from Thursday's Level to 5-8 Below.

Chicago, May 23.—Statements that rain within a week or so would correct much of the crop damage in Kansas served today to lessen bullish enthusiasm regarding wheat.

Latest estimates of the probable wheat yield in Kansas were 110,000,000 to 115,000,000 bushels, against a total of 90,000,000 bushels agreed upon early in the day by an influential authority.

Primary receipts of wheat today were 453,000 bushels; a year ago 308,000.

FALLING TEMPERATURE PREDICTED FOR TODAY

In Spite of Drouth Rainfall for May Now Only Slightly Below Normal.

Cool and fair weather for today and possibly tomorrow is promised Atlanta with a return to normal spring weather by Monday. In the meantime the temperatures are due to range from 50 to 70 degrees instead of from 60 to 80 degrees, as for the past week.

The change to slightly cooler weather was felt yesterday afternoon, and proved one of the most refreshing changes in the weather since spring came on. It was not cool enough to make anyone feel uncomfortable, and with the light summer suits that practically all of masculine Atlanta has adopted for the season the cool air was only invigorating.

The final heavy rainfall for several days came Friday morning when 5.1 inches poured over the city within the space of little more than an hour. A terrific downpour at 7 o'clock on the evening previous had added .87 inches to the rainfall for May and to date the record of rain for the month is 4.10 inches.

The normal or average amount of rain that falls in May is 3.40 inches, so that already, despite the extreme drought of the earlier part of the month, practically as much rain as usually falls in May has already come.

Farmers all over the state are rejoicing in the heavy rains which have fallen within the past week, and with new impetus added to the growing crops conditions are becoming more and more favorable.
