U. S. Will Refuse to Recognize Huerta

END IS SEEN OF MEXICO REGIME

Will Not Last Year Out, President
Says—Stronger Successor
Is Hoped For.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. It is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.
EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send troops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab On Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

Mobile Society Girl Held as Accomplice Of Burglar Husband

BIRMINGHAM, July 21.—Mrs. Madora Newton, daughter of S. H. McMaster, formerly president of a Mobile bank, is in jail here charged with being an accessory to alleged burglaries by her husband, Louis Kitter, alias Newton. It is said that the young wife, dressed as a man, aided her husband.

Kitter had confessed to seventeen burglaries in and about Birmingham, but steadfastly declares his wife was not concerned in any of them.

As a girl Mrs. Newton was a member of one of Mobile's most exclusive society sets.

Picnic Party Rescued As Launch Goes Down

MIAMI, July 21.—Impaled in submerged piling in Biscayne Bay a gasoline launch sank last night just as the last member of the party of picnickers was removed to the launch owned by A. A. Bunnell, City Sanitary Inspector. He was attracted by cries of the frightened excursionists. Mrs. John Staff is reported in a critical condition to-day as the result of fright. Other members of the party included John Staff, a shipbuilder, and child and George Lundberger, wife and child. The picnickers kept the launch afloat until help arrived by stuffing their clothing around the piling, which protruded through the bottom of the boat.

Thief Kills Trustee Of Arch Creek, Fla.

ARCH CREEK, FLA., July 21.—Ordered out of town by the Town Trustees for many thefts, N. Hanks, liberated last week from the county chain-gang, where he served three months for theft of lumber from a schoolhouse, last night choked H. L. Banks, one of the trustees, to death, and fired a shot through the door of the home of H. W. Wyatt, another trustee. He did not molest H. Robbins, the third trustee. At daylight Wyatt, armed with a shotgun, started out to find Hanks, but a Deputy Sheriff got Hanks safe in jail.

The murder of Banks is the third in Arch Creek in the last four years.

Tampa Makes Record Phosphate Shipment

TAMPA, July 21.—Board of Trade records compiled to-day show that 39,253 tons of phosphate were shipped through this port last week. This is more than any other week in the history of the port and more than 100,000 tons in the world ever shipped in like time. This is the world's leader in phosphate shipments.

Since June 1 there have been 239,000 tons of phosphate shipped out of Tampa.

SUSPENDED OFFICER JAILED.
MIAMI, July 21.—M. P. Merritt, suspended from the police force Friday for fighting, was jailed to-day by Chief C. R. Ferguson for threatening the chief. Ferguson is a candidate for re-election in to-morrow's primary.

HOUSE GIVES CANDLER A CHANCE

Reconsiders Adverse Action on New County After Hot Debate.
Hardeman Scores Lobby.

After one of the stormiest sittings of the present session, the House of Representatives to-day agreed to reconsider its previous adverse action upon Candler County by a vote of 92 to 59.

During the progress of the debate on Candler the House was bitterly arraigned by Mr. Hardeman, of Jefferson, for its slow progress to date, which charge was quite as vehemently resented by Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, and others.

Mr. Wohlwend, of Muscogee, whose call for the previous question on Thursday last was held responsible for Candler's slaughter then, in moving to reconsider to-day, explained to the House that he had made his motion in entire good faith, and if he had made a mistake, he wished that his mistake be not visited on Candler. If he had hurt anybody's feeling or said anything he ought not to have said, the gentleman from Muscogee begged everybody's pardon.

Dove of Peace Scaled.
This apparently paved the way for a peaceful vote, but it soon became plain that a peaceful vote was not in sight.

Mr. Hardeman vehemently protested reconsideration, and in doing so charged that the House was disgracefully far behind in its business, and that too much time already had been wasted on new county claims and constitutional amendments.

Mr. Hardeman's wholesale denunciation of the House for laxness and tardiness was quickly resented. It was contended that the present House, instead of being behind in its work, is really farther ahead as it enters its last 25 days than any House for many years past.

Bills' Status Made Plain.
The appropriations bill is ready for the House's consideration, and Chairman Wheatley has given notice that he will call it up Tuesday.

This will put it before the House at least ten days earlier than usual.

The tax act, it was contended, will reach the House in record-breaking time, and the House committees have worked overtime reporting bills.

Representative Blackburn challenged Mr. Hardeman to name any Legislature within the knowledge of either man, both of whom are veterans of the House, wherein any bill of general importance, particularly the appropriations bill and the tax act, was reported within the first 25 days of its session.

Mr. Hardeman did not name such a Legislature, but he held, nevertheless, that the present House had been unnecessarily slow.

The gentleman from Jefferson declared that the whole trouble lay at the door of the proposed new counties, and said that he had been "lobbied with so persistently and so vehemently that he could not even find places to eat and sleep in comfort in Atlanta."

Debate Grows Personal.
As the vote was proceeding, at least 40 members arose to explain their votes, and at times the debate became very personal and full of feeling.

Mr. Wohlwend, of Muscogee, was the storm center of the talk as a rule, but it was evident enough that beneath it was another and far more important something—perhaps a direct fight upon the very House organization itself.

The reconsidered Candler County measure probably will go over to next session, and it is doubtful whether any other new county propositions will come up this year.

Sweethearts Visit Soldiers of Second At St. Simons Camp

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 21.—Sunday was a gala day for the Second Georgia Regiment, excursions bringing wives, sweethearts and friends of the men and officers from all over Middle Georgia. All day the camp was alive with visitors interested in seeing how the men lived. Many dinner parties were given in camp during the day. The surf was the chief attraction until the big dress parade in the afternoon. It was the best review so far held and was witnessed by magnificent crowds.

Drills are being held in combat formations to-day leading up to the hike, bivouac and battle of Friday. The men will leave Thursday in heavy marching order prepared to cook their own meals, sleep in pup tents and begin the big battle before day Friday.

To-day's officer of the day was E. W. Beck. The officer of the guard was J. H. Nutt. Both are of Griffin.

Four Women Caught In Vice Net Escape From Martha Home

Four young women, three of whom had been caught in Chief Beavers' vice dragnet last week, escaped from the Martha Home during chapel exercises Sunday night.

The women were Effie Drummond, who after being caught in a room on Mrs. Lula Bell's place at Peters and Fair streets, declared she was a minister's daughter from North Carolina, and had been the victim of a white slaver; Maude Dougherty, apprehended at the same house; Beatrice Renfro, companion of A. N. Trippie, a Whitehall street clerk, arrested on complaint of Trippie's wife, and Hyrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

Strike on Healey Building Settled

Work will be resumed Tuesday morning on the new Healey Building following a conference Monday between R. M. Walker, William Healey, owner of the building, and representatives of the Building Trades Council.

According to the terms of the agreement, only union men will be employed on the building. The strike was called because of the alleged failure of the painting and electrical contractors to employ union men exclusively.

Shoots Husband Who Stayed Out Too Late

SAVANNAH, July 21.—As a result of a quarrel with his wife, Joe Dare is in a critical condition in a hospital, with a bullet wound in his left breast, just over the heart, and his wife is in police station a nervous wreck from her experience. Both admit the wife fired the shot. Dare has been operated on and the bullet extracted, but his condition is so serious that his post-mortem statement has been taken.

The trouble between the couple seems to have followed the very late arrival of Dare at home.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

Here are the important developments of Monday in the Phagan case:

The decision of the Grand Jury of Fulton County not to bring at this time an indictment against James Conley.

The information that there is a strong probability of another postponement of the trial of Leo M. Frank.

The Grand Jury's refusal to reopen its investigation of the Phagan murder mystery was a decided victory for the Solicitor after that body had overriden his request that no session be called to take up the matter in any of its aspects.

A report that Judge L. S. Roan who will preside at the Frank trial had signified his desire that the case be put off until fall, gave rise to the expectation that another postponement will take place, and that the date probably will be set for some week in September.

Defense Said To Be Willing.
The defense also is said to be in favor of a continuance. Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, said Monday that he did not contemplate asking for further delay, but thought that it would be a hardship on the jurors to hear the case at this time of the year. He made it plain that he would not oppose any move for a continuance.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accused of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Solicitor issued this statement.

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED AFTER FIERCE RIOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.
LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hats and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ring-leaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

DOCTOR AND GIRL ARE TAKEN ON VICE CHARGE

Miss Luella L. Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hart Porter, of No. 282 Crumley street, is the newest nominee in the "beauty button" contest. She is of the blonde type with golden brown hair and gray eyes.

An unusual commentary on the beauty contest is that more blondes than brunettes have been nominated. But the contest is not closed yet, and what the final result will be no one can tell. Also the brunettes who have been nominated are keeping well up with the blondes in votes.

A letter has come to the contest editor stating that photographs flatter some types of beauty while they do not do others justice.

That is true, but it depends on the particular photograph. That all the photographs so far published have made a good impression is shown by other letters of nomination, in which the writers state they are reluctant to enter their candidates after seeing so many pretty faces entered in the race.

Well, every one to his own taste. All readers of The Georgian and American still have the privilege of nominating and voting for whom they please. The votes will decide what girl's picture is to adorn the "500,000 Club" booster buttons.

Nominate your candidate and send in her photograph. Then get your friends to vote for her.

Civic League to Change Name.
At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. P. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead. Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The coroner's verdict, following an autopsy over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

The Ghost Breaker

By Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey

IN THE HAUNTED CASTLE

SUDDENLY BOTH HEARD THE SOUND OF MUFFLED FOOTSTEPS, AS IF SOME ONE WERE RUNNING ON HEAVY CARPET, AND THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO CARPET IN ALL THE VAST STONE HALLS. BEFORE

THEY COULD ATTEMPT TO LOCATE THE SOUND THERE CAME TWO THUDS, ONE LIGHT AND ONE HEAVY, AS IF OF A BLOW AND A FALL, AND THEN A LOW HEART CHILLING MOAN THAT SEEMED TO COME NOT

FROM ONE OF ALL THE HALLS, BUT ALL OF THEM. THIS WAS IMMEDIATELY ANSWERED BY A MOAN THAT CAME UNMISTAKABLY FROM RUSTY.

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those round collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scared I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

"Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or anyone else—unless they pounce or carry a smoky lantern. It's a dew, Rusty. It's a dew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood in the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old dandy, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stove front and began removing his shoe with many groans.

"Now, what's the matter? What's happening?" Jarvis asked, peering through the other door.

"That's where that black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. I'm scared to death of the connection with some moonlight into you."

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. I'm scared to death of the connection with some moonlight into you."

A Bachelor's Diary He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arphax begat Shalah, and Shalah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begets.

For some reason that I do not know, I have been getting up and breakfasting in the morning, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic luncheon off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court guardian. I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hand, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is nervous, nagged and pampered so much. Now, if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't want you to forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all. I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown. "You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you at home."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for at that moment I was sitting on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumbly bits of bread that she would not leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Libeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over my head for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears toward the sound.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friendship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him, and you tell me what to do?

H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of your love, believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

LET THE MATTER END.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept.

When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place.

ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conductor suggested that they should "have a tune," but the band refused to do so.

"No tunes while I drive," he remarked. "But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away."

"Then why object?"

"Simply because the poor buggers could not stand the music. They were the grim reapers. Their running away days is over, and so long as I drives you ain't going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I see no tunes."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no tunes" on that journey.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 33 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother, and I am the only child left at home to

The Temper Curse

By DOROTHY DIX.

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The common troubles of everyday life are the ones that we must live with, and which we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high temper of the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high temper that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if the evil tempered kind that they would be checked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and amiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure at the sight of their wives' angry faces.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce court and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call him, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham was gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously, "I can't very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her ambition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!" Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends. There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bear-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. --- Fashions of the Moment ---

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of flimsy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the flimsiness at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bergamini, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from her better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shop-walker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?" "Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village bells."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinisterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids."

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside."

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies."

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum."

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER PIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID PIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him, and he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on? Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinisters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that her heart was in one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your life some day and neither name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the innkeeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat," said Brunier.

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing.

He felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard the creaking steps of the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two men were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found a siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which he had twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Skies stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie .. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow.

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told her she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

... The Head Waitress ...

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and—"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beautiful dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers are great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobies act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-licked swines."

"Swine? I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer, "Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys are great sticklers for correct pronunciation, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showed my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems too, real love ones. I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease, I'm really mad about you; You say you truly love me, dear, I'd hate to ever doubt you; Some day, we'll married be, and then Our lives we'll link together And travel down the broad highway No matter what the weather."

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I loved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that

Diamond News and Gossip

The fight for second place in both leagues is waxing hot. The Senators are right on the trail of the Naps, while the Pirates in their rush upward are likely soon to overhaul the Phillies.

The Yankees are continuing their mad fight to get out of the cellar position, opening up a series in Detroit with a victory.

Southpaw "Eddie" Plank pitched in world's series form yesterday and the Athletics shut out the Browns.

A fumble by Chapman in the ninth inning paved the way for the Red Sox victory over the Naps.

Big Jeff Tesreau and Walter Johnson are the strike out kings in their respective leagues. The Ozark bear has caused 11 batsmen to retire, the thirty-third game handicap separating them from the leaders.

Whether the Pirates will have a look-in on the pennant will be demonstrated in the series with the Giants. This beginning to-morrow. Four games are scheduled and the Pirates must get better than an even break in the cut-throat thirty-third game handicap separating them from the leaders.

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Ellensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the Battery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Ellensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Ellensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 150 pounds.

In an attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an infuriating tide for more than an hour.

LONDON, July 21.—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht which will try for the America's cup in a series of races in 1914, the conditions for which have been signed and forwarded by the Royal Yacht Club to the New York Yacht Club, will be named Shamrock IV.

Millions of Americans Are Saving— Millions of Americans Need to Borrow—Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1912.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kalnos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north. The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a traveling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the plane, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bison and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spinning about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's hand.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too; and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paul?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium, than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fad.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

Marshal D'Ancre

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravalliac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Fourth she brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wardrobe of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, warlike and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventures, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were: "What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime; From every source they crawl to lick his side. His home in Hell is wonderfully planned To welcome slaves that die from time to time. His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime. He has a solid throne in every land. And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand, He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives. Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build Were he to use the bones of starving wives. Who sigh to join the victims he has killed! Mockingly glow in his grim diadem Three bloody ruby letters—R-U-M.
