Atlanta Charter Is Opposed by Senator

The new charter for Atlanta will be opposed by Senator G. M. Hule, of the Thirty-fifth District, which includes Atlanta. His objection will be based on the ground that the charter curtails the powers of the City Recorder.

"While I don't live in Fulton County, still as Senator from the Thirty-fifth I consider myself as much of a resident of Atlanta as the Fulton County delegation," he said. "I see where they want to cut the Recorder's authority from a limit of $500 and 60 days to $200 and 30 days. I don't think they ought to do this; therefore, I am going to hold the bill up in the Senate."

Urges Congressional Record Cartoonist

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A suggestion that the Congressional Record be made an illustrated daily and that a regular cartoonist be employed by Congress was made by Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, speaking jocularly during a debate as to whether illustrations should be inserted in the Record.

"Why could we not have a regular cartoonist," said Williams, "and a daily illustrated Record, with proper headlines and loving and lovable caricatures of our friends across the chamber?"

Nominations and Photos of All Types of Beauty Are Pouring In.

With the "Beauty Button" contest, to determine whose picture among the hundreds of Atlanta girls shall adorn the Greater Atlanta button, in full swing, nominations with photographs of all types of beauty are coming in.

Hundreds of votes are being cast, everyone in Atlanta having the privilege of nominating and voting for whomever they wish. The honor of leading the city in its quest for the 500,000 population mark by 1920 is being sought on all sides.

Every contestant is busy securing votes, and with the end of the race, the picture of the candidate securing the largest number of votes will be placed upon the button.

One of the latest entrants is Miss Estell McDonald, an extremely attractive young woman, whose friends are confident that no misfire will be made if she is chosen to represent fair Atlanta.

MOVE PENSACOLA POSTOFFICE.
PENSACOLA, July 22.—According to Postmaster A. G. Fell, the post-office here this week will be moved to other quarters until the remodeling now in progress in the Federal Building is completed.

Glass Tries to Quiet Money Board Strife

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina, the member of the House Banking and Currency Committee who suddenly quit the committee because Chairman Glass could not furnish copies of certain amendments to the currency bill that Ragsdale demanded, returned to the conference on the bill with his Democratic colleagues to-day.

Glass made strenuous effort to preserve harmony in the committee.

Said the Bulldog in Tree—Never Again!

CHICAGO, July 22.—"Whitey," a bullpup, loved to sink his teeth into a tire.

Yesterday he made one lunge at a revolving tire, caught it firmly in his teeth and sailed away into the air. Emil Klank, manager of Frank Gotch, wrestler, climbed into a tree, 20 feet high, and rescued "Whitey"—unhurt, but greatly puzzled.

More than 100 automobiles passed "Whitey's" home to-day. "Whitey" sat on the porch and watched them.

Wrestler Killed as He Falls on Dynamite

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 22.—Falling while wrestling with his brother near Germantown, Martin Funk, 18, was blown to pieces to-day. A stick of dynamite in his hip pocket exploded.

4 Jailed for Tampa Arson Plot DEMANDS INTERVENTION IN MEXICO

BILL GRANTS WAR POWER TO WILSON

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Huerta regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House to-day by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervene, "establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

Gives President War Power.

It is also demanded that in the event of intervention the President is empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican Government, prepare the Mexicans for self-government and restore law and order, "and the President is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of the resolution defends the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as well as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Mr. Murray's resolution refers to President Huerta as "the usurping marauder." Huerta, the resolution recites, "has nullified the Constitution, destroyed all lawful authority and government and has committed upon the persons of the President (Madero) and his family, a black-handed murder, paralleled in all history only by the cruelty of the dark ages, with all its superstitions and dastardly deeds of rapine and murder."

"There remains in Mexico neither rights of government nor of belligerent powers such as could be recognized," continues the Oklahoma's resolution.

Punishment for Guerrillas.

After warning the Mexican Government to restore order and protect the lives of Americans, it is stipulated that this Government "shall pursue to the ends of the earth" any military leader or band who disregards the warning.

With the arrival of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson only two days distant, Washington is on the qui vive for every shift in the Mexican situation.

Predictions are made that, by the time Ambassador Wilson arrives, the Huerta administration will be in such an unstable condition that the envoy will not recommend that it be recognized, no matter how favorably disposed he may be toward it.

Dispatches of the past two days have caused deep alarm to the State Department because of the insistent appeals for help coming from Americans in the demoralized country.

Tuxpam, on the southeastern coast of Mexico, is now the center of all official eyes. The town was captured by the Constitutionalists, and the battleship Louisiana, with Rear Admiral Fletcher aboard, is speeding toward the port from Vera Cruz to

Deadly Bomb Sent To Carnegie Will Be Dropped Into Ocean

NEW YORK, July 22.—So deadly was the bomb sent to the offices of the Carnegie Corporation addressed personally to Andrew Carnegie, in the opinion of the police, that the Bureau of Combustibles will to-day take the missile on board a launch and drop it in the sea as the only safe way of getting it out of New York.

So dangerous is believed to be the contents of the watermelon-shaped container of zinc that the bureau's chief bomb expert refused to open it, declaring that the destruction of two city blocks might result.

So far the police are without a clue to the sender of the bomb.

Bryan Naps in Depot; Buys 45-Cent Lunch For 5; All on $12,000!

CHICAGO, July 22.—For two hours early to-day Secretary of State Bryan sat nearly upright in a railroad station seat and slept. When his train was called he entered a drawing room and prepared to awake in Oelwein, Iowa, where he was scheduled to give a chautauqua lecture this afternoon.

Before his nap Secretary Bryan entertained four newspaper men at a midnight lunch which cost him 45 cents. He ate cantaloupe off a dairy lunch chair. Three others of the party ate cantaloupe and one reporter drank buttermilk.

Two New Militia Companies Forming

JACKSONVILLE, July 22.—Next Tuesday evening there will be a mass meeting at the Duval County armory when militia affairs will be discussed. The object of the meeting is the organization of a new company of militia for the First Infantry, National Guard of Florida.

Lewis Landes has been working up the new company. He believes the mass meeting will be the finishing touch.

Two other companies are being formed in Jacksonville at present and the meeting will be of such assistance to the organizers that this will give Jacksonville seven companies of infantry.

16 Considered for Mercer President

MACON, July 22.—Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church; the Rev. P. H. Mell, former president of Clemson College, and Professor M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, all of Atlanta, are among the sixteen ministers and educators considered for the presidency of Mercer University.

Others considered are Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville; Rev. John Roach Straton, of Baltimore; Rev. W. L. Pickard, of Savannah, and E. T. Holmes, president of Gordon Institute, Barnesville.

Hot Siege Broken, Says Weather Man

Hot weather is over in Atlanta for the next few days, and the weather man says there is no immediate prospect of another spell like that of last week. An east wind, bearing considerable moisture, is causing showers all over Georgia and the South Atlantic coast region.

The forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday is showers, with a maximum temperature of 82 or 83 degrees.

4 JAILED FOR ARSON PLOT AT TAMPA

Fifth, Wealthy Citizen, May Be Arrested as Result of Suspicious Blaze.

TAMPA, July 22.—Four men are in jail and a fifth, one of the city's wealthy citizens, may be jailed soon, as the result of a fire in the Hillsborough Dry Goods Company's store at 1 o'clock this morning, which Fire Chief Matthews declares one of the "rawest" attempts at arson he ever saw.

The men held are Frank and Max Richards, Frank Field and C. P. Hill. Richards and Field, who are both interested in the company, were arrested at the fire, after Chief Matthews had observed conditions surrounding the blaze.

Investigations to-day developed that the stock, alleged to have been worth not more than $15,000, was insured for $88,000. On Saturday several agents, suspicious of the heavy valuation, called for cancellations. They were told that the policies had been mislaid. One or two of the agents then mailed cancellation notices, under registered mail, which should have reached the company Monday morning. Under the law the insurance would have held for five days, so that there is significance in the date of the fire.

C. J. Hutchinson Involved.

Evidence of insurance agents is to the effect that C. J. Hutchinson, owner of the two buildings in which the fire took place, was to secure most, if not all, of the insurance and that it was all taken out within the last few weeks. Hutchinson explained his activity in the company by saying he was a silent partner, having an interest of $17,500, which is more than the insurance men claim the entire stock was worth.

Yesterday Hutchinson, who owns an all-night drug store next to the dry goods company, is alleged to have ordered chauffeurs who had maintained a night and day stand in the street near his place to leave.

Suspicion of Arson.

When the fire was discovered, Chief Matthews found the stairways clogged with mattresses, roped together; windows barred up; inflammable material stored in many places; evidence of two fires having been started, and a hole cut in the brick fire wall where the building inspectors had given permission only to cut an air shaft. County Solicitor Jackson has taken charge of the case and will hear a number of witnesses.

Miami Police Chief Blames Politics for Charge Against Him

MIAMI, July 22.—As a sequel to the arrest yesterday by Chief of Police C. R. Ferguson of M. P. Merritt, a suspended policeman, on a charge of disorderly conduct, the chief was to-day arrested on a warrant sworn out by Merritt, charging him with making undue advances to Merritt's wife. The warrant was issued after a lengthy hearing before County Judge Redmond B. Gautier, in which Mrs. Merritt testified to the truthfulness of the charge. The chief's trial is set for tomorrow.

In the meantime Merritt is making every effort to get Mayor Watson to remove Chief Ferguson, pending final decision in the case. Chief Ferguson, a candidate for reappointment to to-day's primary, declares the action is political chicanery in an effort to defeat him, and that he is innocent of all charges and will be so proven in court.

In to-day's primary there were seven candidates for chief of police, three for Mayor, ten for five Councilmanic positions and four for Municipal Judge. Mayor Watson, candidate for reappointment, was opposed by Captain G. Duncan Brossier and Mitchell D. Price, an attorney.

House Has 'Spank' Day; Olive Warms Breeches of Pages

Tuesday was official spanking day in the House, with genial Sam Olive, Representative from Richmond County, as "spanker" and the pages as "spankees."

During the recess the pages became unusually playful. In fact, they are the liveliest pages the House ever has known. One of them developed the idea of initiating the new members of their ranks, but ran a foul of Representative Olive, who decided to initiate the entire lot.

Ten slaps upon the western side of each of the pages' trousers were applied to each youngster. There was no escape, for as each boy's turn came the other pages seized him and held him firmly across genial Sam's lap, while the ten slaps were counted in unison.

'Bomb' for Wilson Was Cake of Soap; Doctor Brought It

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When Dr. Bernard Rachauer, who gave his address at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., called at the White House to-day and demanded to see President Wilson, the secret service men took him into custody long enough to examine a black bag the doctor carried.

The secret service operatives feared a bomb. They found a cake of soap and a roll of bandages.

Dr. Rachauer would not state his business with the President. He was told that the Chief Executive was "not at home."

VIENNA, July 22.—The Bulgarian Legation here this afternoon received the following dispatch from the home government at Sofia:

"The Government has decided to surrender Adrianople to the Turks."

BUCHAREST, July 22.—Roumania is willing to end the war with Bulgaria. In an official note issued to-day it accepts the Sofia Government's offer to cede territory above Turtukal and Dobrich.

Roumania suggests, however, that the peace negotiations proceed within the borders of its own country.

Militants Are Fined; Burn Another House

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.
LONDON, July 22.—Following the severe battle between the militant suffragettes and the police, when the latter arrested Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and six of her followers, the rioters were arraigned in police court to-day. Two were fined and two others were ordered to furnish bond to keep the peace.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 22.—The suffragettes' "arson squad" resumed operations here to-day. A house valued at $2,000 was destroyed by fire.

HEARING OF CRAWFORD CASE MAY CONFLICT

Conference Planned to Decide Which Shall Take Precedence.
Ready to Draw Venire.

Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Leo M. Frank, announced Tuesday that he proposed to seek a conference of the attorneys in the Frank case and in the Crawford case to determine which case should be postponed next Monday, the date set for the beginning of the trial of Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan.

Mr. Arnold, Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, both also are attorneys in the Crawford case, and it would be impossible on this account to conduct the two cases simultaneously. The Crawford hearing will resume Wednesday before a special auditor in a branch of the Superior Court, and undoubtedly will be in progress next week if it is not stopped by a postponement.

The will hearing, because of the fact that it already is under way, would have a natural precedence over the Frank trial. This may be waived, however, in order to take up the Phagan mystery.

None of the attorneys for the defense will say that they intend to ask for a postponement of the Frank trial, but the hot weather and the fact that the Crawford case is in progress at this time appear to be combining to bring about such a consummation.

Judge Roan has stated that the case would be called Monday, but he probably will accede to the request for a conference some day this week to discuss the matter.

Court Likely to Accede.

Attorney Arnold will ask that the juryman be not summoned until a definite decision is reached as to which of the cases is to take precedence.

When Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner arranged to install twelve large electric fans in the courtroom for the Frank trial Tuesday morning, he said there would be no excuse for a postponement on the grounds of the room being too warm.

"Spectators will not be allowed to crowd into the court," he said. "The fans will keep it much cooler than the average office building in the city. There are plenty of windows, and the place is always well shaded."

Despite the reported repudiation of her sensational affidavit that E. M. Frank had tried repeatedly on the night of the Mary Phagan murder to secure a room in which to bring a girl, Mrs. Nina Formby declared in Chattanooga Tuesday that she would be in Atlanta on July 28 to testify to her statements when the trial of the pencil factory superintendent opens.

Denies She Retracted.
According to a dispatch from Chattanooga, where the woman has been for several weeks, Mrs. Formby denies having ever retracted from her original declarations which she made to the police, and further stated that she would repeat them on the witness stand.

The police have asserted that Mrs. Formby has been eliminated from the case.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton prepared Tuesday to draw the 150 veniremen for the trial. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm. The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednesday.

day night, according to Judge Pendleton.

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicitor to Fight Move.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the procedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, will not return to Atlanta from Covington until Friday. He announced to a correspondent of The Georgian in Covington that the Frank trial would be called next Monday sure, but he would not commit himself as to whether he would consider any move for postponement after the case was called.

Before leaving for Covington he remarked that if the weather was as hot next Monday as it was last week he would welcome some sufficient ground for postponement.

Both Sides Are Ready.

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser admit they would like to see the trial postponed to escape the ordeal of a hard fight in torrid weather, but state they will be reluctant to ask for delay unless there is some very excellent reason why the case should not go to trial.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement, but the attorneys for the defense made it clear that if any move for postponement for any other reason than the absence of a witness was made, it would come from the other side, or the judge.

Attorney Arnold stated that the failure of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to their case, because it had been built before any known move was made to bring about the indictment. "It made absolutely no difference to us," he said, "it was purely a technical point in the trial that would have been in our favor. As to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded jury whether he were indicted."

Bacon, Unopposed, Gets 29,529 Votes In Senate Election

A total of 29,529 votes were cast for Augustus O. Bacon for United States Senator in the special election held July 15. No one opposed Senator Bacon, but more than one-eighth of the State's electorate turned out to give him a complimentary vote.

The election was unique in that it was the first to be held under the new law requiring United States Senators to be elected by direct vote of the people.

The returns were canvassed before the House and Senate in a joint meeting Tuesday by a committee of five Senators and five Representatives. The senatorial committee was composed of Senators Jones, Tarver, Tyler, Turner and Bush. The House committee consisted of Representatives Miller, McCreary, Smith, Edmondson and Culpepper.

35 CONVICTS IN CAGE BURNED TO DEATH AMERICAN PLEAS FROM MEXICO ALARM U. S.

Fire Starts in Hay Under Sleeping Quarters on Mississippi Penal Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five convicts, sleeping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were buried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building in Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place, but neither saw the fire until the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Farmers in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but were unable to give any assistance. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building, quantities of hay, corn and molasses being in storage. The hay doubtless caused the fire to spread with added rapidity.

The Oakley farm is in charge of Sergeant S. T. Byrd. The prison hospital also is located at that place, but the convicts who lost their lives were not members of the hospital squad, all of them being employed in the cotton fields. Several notorious negro criminals were among those who lost their lives.

Coroner J. W. Beal, accompanied by a jury, went to Oakley this morning to hold an inquest, and endeavor to ascertain the cause of the fire.

Origin of Fire Mystery.
"I can't explain it," said Sergeant Byrd over the long distance telephone this morning. "As to the origin of the fire I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been a match carelessly dropped at the stairway. I can not believe it was of incendiary origin."

"There was never a chance to save any of the prisoners. The blaze was under good headway before anybody discovered it. When we reached the building it was to find that the fire centered around the only stairway leading to the upper floor of the cage. All of the upper windows were covered with heavy iron bars and it was impossible for the convicts to fight their way out."

Fight Was Useless.
"We did everything in our power, but the fight was useless. The building was doomed from the first and the piteous cries of the poor prisoners who were being roasted alive added to the demoralization of our forces. We have no sort of fire protection or fire fighting equipment here, and the buckets of water thrown by other prisoners on the building had no effect whatever."

The first news of the holocaust was received by Mrs. O. M. Spickard, secretary of the State Prison Board, in a telephone message from Mrs. Byrd, wife of the sergeant. Mrs. Byrd was almost hysterical and could give but few of the details. An hour later communication was secured with Sergeant Byrd and a list of the victims obtained. A number of the prisoners were life termers.

Under prison rules, all convicts must be in their cages and lights out by 9 o'clock. The prisoners had been sleeping several hours when they were awakened by the intense heat and clouds of smoke that poured out from below.

According to Assistant Secretary S. E. Birdsong, of the Prison Board, nearly all convict cages at the prison farm, except those at Parchman, are similarly constructed, having only one means of exit.

KODAKER KING OF ATLANTA FAME DIES IN CELL

Technicality Delays Pardon Until Too Late—Career Here Sensational—Jailed in Boston.

Cardenio F. King, Boston newspaper publisher and financier, who died a convict on the State farm at Bridgewater, Mass., Monday just before Governor Foss was ready to sign his pardon, had an Atlanta career almost as interesting as his pathetic death, according to Atlantans who knew him during his residence here more than ten years ago.

He came to Atlanta from North Carolina and was known as "Kodaker" King because of a column he ran in various Atlanta newspapers which was headed by a photograph of himself with a camera. His personal appearance marked him an unusual man, for he weighed about 300 pounds, had bright red hair and mustache and a rosy complexion.

His column was indicative of his character. It always began with a few breezy paragraphs of choice gossip, but a reader would not persevere far before he discovered himself buried in alluring advertisements.

Occasionally when advertisers refused to be convinced of the value of this column he would be sent out on regular assignments. It so happened that one day he was sent to the police station, the "beat" of Walter Taylor, the present City Clerk, but then a bright young reporter, "Kodaker" King was unfamiliar with the assignment, so he decided the best policy was to follow close on the heels of Walter Taylor. And thereby hangs a tale.

Walter Taylor "framed" with Detective Billy Crim, the famous policeman who passed away several years ago, to call him suddenly as though something startling had happened. Crim sprang the trick on hot August day while Taylor and King were walking down the street, and Taylor, lithe and young, darted up the steps.

He did not stop until he had gained the roof of the cupola of the police station. He did not even stop to look around, for he knew that King, 300 pounds net, was following him with all his might and main.

Several minutes later King, puffing and blowing, stuck his head through the manhole on the roof. His red face had turned pale and his perspiration streamed down his cheeks.

Soon afterward "Kodaker" King left Atlanta. He was flat broke and his friends did not know what would become of him. But a few years later he returned with his name changed to "Oil" King; and it was remarked that if his oil flowed as much as his money, he would be a second John D. Rockefeller.

As "Kodaker" he had gone to Boston. But he dropped that title with the discovery of oil at Beaumont, Texas. He went out there as an advertising man and soon owned a number of acres of rocky land.

Train Attached for Debt.
Back East he hurried and organized an oil company. When he struck Atlanta he was traveling in a special train. He advertised his stock in two-page spreads in each of the Atlanta papers. Sam W. Small, evangelist and newspaper man, was engaged as his press agent.

The only reminder of his former days of poverty and gloom was when all his possessions in the train were attached by a justice of the peace bailiff for an old debt of $40. But he paid that and was on his way.

The next Atlantans heard of King was that he was in the penitentiary in Massachusetts. He had been the owner of a daily paper, The Boston Daily Tribune. His financial career was ended when he was convicted of obtaining $25,000 under false pretenses.

Died in Sight of Liberty.
Only a technicality prevented his last words being those of a free man. His wife and four sons were at his bedside. Governor Foss had been wired that his condition was hopeless. The Governor had canvassed his counsel and decided to grant a pardon. But the council could not be called together to take formal action until Tuesday.

When Dr. Emerson, medical head of the State Farm, went to announce that a pardon would be granted Tuesday he found King dead. Chronic intestinal trouble was the cause.

TARVER BILL IS PASSED AFTER HOT FIGHT

Provides for Damage Suits in Homicide Cases—Was Issue in Senate Several Years.

Following a two-hour debate, in which charges of being in league with the railroads and counter charges of seeking to increase the earnings of damage suit lawyers were made, the Georgia Senate Tuesday morning, by a vote of 27 to 10, passed Senator Tarver's bill, as amended, providing for recovery by certain parties in cases of homicide. The bill has been before the Senate several years.

Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth District, who opened the fight on the bill in an hour's speech, declared the authors of the bill could not have drawn a better thing for the damage suit lawyers. He offered a substitute bill omitting the alleged drastic features, which was voted down. Judge Allen, of the Twentieth, also opposed the bill.

In rebuttal Senator Tarver declared the opposition had the interest of the railroads at heart. Following the vote Senator Miller gave notice of requesting reconsideration of the bill.

One Other Bill Passed.

In addition to Senator Tarver's bill, the Senate passed on other, a local measure offered by Senator Smith, of Ninth, amending the charter incorporating the town of Edison.

The Senate passed a resolution, offered by Judge Allen, extending sympathy to Speaker Burwell upon the death of his sister, Miss Rosa Burwell.

The General Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported adversely the bill for an amendment to the Code providing that the only grounds for total divorce shall be adultery.

The committee also reported in the negative on the bill providing for the rotation of judges of Superior courts. A favorable report was made on the bill providing for the appointment of a Notary Public for the State at large, as well as a bill providing for an amendment to the penal code making husband and wife competent as witnesses in criminal proceedings, but not compelled to testify one against the other.

Other Committees Report.

The Senate Finance Committee, headed by Senator Miller, recommended the bill forcing foreign fire insurance companies that have relinquished all policies to show cause for withdrawal from the State.

The Penitentiary Committee reported favorably the measure making it unlawful for any person with authority to deliver a prisoner to another.

Thomas Protested As Crawford Case Solicitor Pro Tem

Reuben R. Arnold, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, under heavy ball on the charge of poisoning her husband, Joshua Crawford, filed a protest Tuesday against the appointment of Attorney Lewis Thomas, former City Solicitor, as Solicitor Pro Tem in the prosecution of Mrs. Crawford.

The appointment was made by Judge W. D. Ellis because of the disqualification of Solicitor Dorsey. Attorney Arnold based his objection on the ground that Thomas already had been one of the attorneys in the case and therefore also was disqualified.

Attorney James said Tuesday he would go before Thomas and seek to have him indict Fred Lumb so that extradition papers might be obtained. He said he also would urge the immediate indictment of Mrs. Crawford.

Joseph E. Johnson Dies in Sanitarium

Joseph E. Johnson, 86 years old, father of George E. Johnson, the Police Commissioner, of No. 302 Luckie street, died Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock at a private sanitarium. He is survived by three sons, George E., Orle and W. L. Johnson.

For several years Mr. Johnson was active in various lines and well known by business men of Atlanta.

The funeral will be held from the residence Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be in Oak-land Cemetery.

NOVEL QUESTION FOR SUFFRAGE DEBATE

Speakers to Determine Difference in Meaning of "Suffragist" and "Suffragist."

Woman suffrage in all its phases will be discussed Tuesday night in Taft Hall. One of the important questions to be settled will be the distinction between a suffragist and a suffragette. Speakers who will take up this angle of the argument declare there is a wider gap in the meaning of the words than there is between sanitarium and sanatorium.

The debate will be under the auspices of the Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., and is the last of a series of entertainments arranged by the chapter to aid in raising funds for the new building which will be erected in Peachtree street.

"This will be an open discussion on the suffrage question, as one of the leading thoughts of the day," said Mrs. William Lawson Peel, outlining the plans. "It must not be thought for a moment, however, that the Daughters of the American Revolution are taking part in this discussion as an organization or even as individuals."

"For instance, our last entertainment was a Mother Goose affair, but it was not intended that the public suppose we were all geese."

"Our next venture will be the presentation of beautiful Indian legends, but it can not be inferred that we are Indians."

STORY OF PHAGAN CASE BY CHAPTERS

Slaying of Factory Girl, South's Most Baffling Crime Mystery, Reviewed in Detail.

LITTLE MARY PHAGAN AND HER CHUM

CHAPTER I.

Will the veil of mystery be lifted when the curtain rises next Monday on another scene in Atlanta's darkest tragedy?

A vast audience, shocked by the horror of Mary Phagan's fate on a Saturday of last April and held through the succeeding weeks in the thrall of the baffling crime drama, in keen suspense awaits this question's answer.

Will Fulton County's Solicitor General be able to point his finger at Leo M. Frank and exclaim, "That is the man who strangled Mary Phagan!" backing his damning accusation with such an abundance of evidence that there can remain no shadow of doubt?

Or will Luther Rosser, certain to be a toweing and masterful factor in the titanic struggle that is to be staged, unmask his strength, bring to bear the secret evidence that has been in his possession for weeks, beat down every bunk of suspicion that the State has erected about its prisoner and, as a dramatic finale, assail the negro, Jim Conley, covering in the witness stand, with a raking volley of questions that will leave the negro man shaken and terrified, a confession of the crime upon his lips?

Whole State Stirred.

All of Atlanta—most of the State—is hanging with the most intense interest on the outcome.

No other crime ever stirred Georgia to its depths as has the slaying of the little factory girl.

No murder ever has so gripped the hearts and aroused the sympathies of the people throughout the State. Georgia's criminal history reveals no other case in which the public's interest has remained at fever heat through three months filled with other exciting events. From the time the extras first flamed the details of the brutal killing in the National Pencil Factory until the present there has appeared to be no diminution in the desire to learn each day's developments.

There was in the early days of the tragedy a cry for summary vengeance upon the murderer, but time has tempered this into a universal demand for justice, which is none the less determined in that it is not so demonstrative as the first hot wave of indignation.

The Phagan case has remained in the public mind partly, of course, because it has remained as baffling a mystery as the local detectives ever have encountered. With the mystery solved its appealing interest gradually would have died out, but a review of the tragic features of the drama so far as it has progressed and a consideration of those who have part in it supplies an explanation of why the fate of Mary Phagan is still uppermost in the people's hearts.

The revealing circumstances of the crime—the attack, the pitiful struggle of the helpless child in the hands of her assailant, the blow and, finally, the garrote—all refuse, to be erased from the memory.

Two Principal Figures.

But standing out in stronger prominence than the remembrance of these abhorrent details are two of the principal figures in the tragedy.

They are Mary Phagan, victim, and Leo M. Frank charged by the State with her death. These two have made the appeal to the public imagination.

The contrast in their positions in life intensified it.

Mary Phagan was only a little factory girl whose happy and innocent laughter was stifled by one of the blackest crimes in Atlanta's history.

Leo Frank, a brilliant young man of position and family, was accused of this deed of a beast in human guise.

Mary Phagan was not rich. She was glad to get the $2 or $4 a week that her work at the pencil factory won for her.

Leo Frank's family had wealth. An uncle was a multimillionaire.

Mary Phagan had hardly the education to which her years entitled her. Times were not always easy in her family and she was driven to neglect her schoolbooks and work in the factory.

Frank was a Cornell graduate. He had a high technical education. He had been sent abroad to select the machinery for the Atlanta plant. His business associates placed every confidence in him. His friends knew him for an upright and moral young man, with a most promising career ahead of him.

That he would descend to the level of a criminal of the worst type was inconceivable to them. The possibility furnished to thousands of others a subject for daily conjecture.

Life of Slain Girl.

Mary Phagan's life began 14 years ago in Marietta. She was the petted "baby" of the family. She had three older brothers and a sister, now 18. Even in the early years of childhood she is remembered as having the pretty features and attractive ways that made her greatly liked by her girl friends later when she came to work in Atlanta.

For a playmate in the days at Marietta she had one who was to play a brief but sensational part in April's tragedy. It was J. M. Gantt. Within a few hours after her cold body was found in the gloomy basement of the National Pencil Factory her childhood playmate was arrested as he left a car in Marietta, to which place there seemed at the time every indication that he was fleeing.

Her childish prattle had changed to the happy conversation of young girlhood when the family moved to East Point. There bereavement visited the family in the death of Mary's father. Hardship followed sorrow and it became necessary for little Mary to follow the example of her brothers and sisters and assist in providing a livelihood for the family. She could not do much, but she did her mite willingly and cheerfully.

A year ago Mrs. Phagan married W. J. Coleman and the family moved to No. 146 Lindsay street, Atlanta. Mary obtained work in the National Pencil Factory and soon made friends with all the children about her home and with the girls she met at the factory. Although she never had many of the luxuries of life, Mary was reared carefully by her mother and enjoyed the wise counsel that is sometimes denied the children of families in more pretentious circumstances.

All Loved Little Mary.

To the loving and painstaking home training, the attractive half-shy little maiden brought a naturally sweet disposition. In the few leisure hours she had she often played about her home with the children of the neighbors. The little people of Bellwood, on the outskirts of Atlanta, all grew to love the sweet-tempered, pretty little girl. When they returned to their homes after a frolic their conversation was of what Mary had said and what Mary had done.

The fathers and mothers began to take notice of her as she laughed and chattered among the other children. They came to watch for the "time" each morning when she boarded a car to go to work at the pencil factory. They took a sort of parental interest in the bright-eyed, light-hearted little girl.

The small community is a bit of a city in itself. Everyone knows everyone, and the neighborly spirit is exemplified in the manner in which the residents, most of them working people, struggle for each other and sympathize in each other's afflictions. They joined in their near worship of the little factory girl. She embodied in their minds pure and attractive young girlhood. They guarded her reputation almost as jealously as did their own. If anything should happen to her it would be a shock to every family in the little community.

On a Thursday, the last in April, Mary was playing with two of her dearest girl chums, Vera Epps and Lillian Wagnel. The back yards of the Phagan and Epps homes adjoined. The Wagnel girl lived just across the street from Vera Epps at No. 249 Fox street. An expected shipment of metal at the pencil factory had not arrived and a section of the plant was shut down temporarily, throwing Mary out of work until the metal should arrive.

A Strange Foreboding.

The three little girls ran and played about the whole afternoon, laughing and talking in their childish happiness. Toward evening, tired from their frolic, they rested on the embankment near their homes. In the hard red clay they dug out their initials as they rested.

"M. P." were the letters scratched out of the dirt by Mary.

"Let's keep them here always," cried Vera, clapping her hands.

"But if one of us should die?" suggested Mary.

"Then the other two of us would come back here and dig the initials out again when it rained," Vera replied, but a shadow had fallen over the gaiety of the little group.

Two days later several of the housewives of Bellwood, looking from their windows, saw Mary Phagan get aboard a car for Atlanta, and they never saw her return. Vera Epps waved her a good-bye as Mary hurried down the street without a thought that it was her last farewell.

When Vera looked upon her playmate the next time, there was no answering smile. The pink cheeks that flushed with happiness and health were ghastly white except where they were begrimed and pitifully bruised and swollen. The beautiful young body, once full of life, was cold and inanimate and mutilated.

The Confederate veterans were preparing to honor their dead when Mary came into town that day. It was a holiday and she had planned to go to the pencil factory to get the $1.20 due her for the short time she had worked that week and then to witness the parade of the boys in gray.

She got a word of greeting from Conductor W. T. Hollis when she boarded the car on its run into town. Motorman W. M. Matthews, who many times before had brought the little girl from her home in Bellwood to work in Atlanta, also noticed her as she slowed down to take her place at the crossing.

Conductor Hollis says that the car arrived at Broad and Marietta streets at 12:07 o'clock. He was relieved there by another conductor and he knows only that Mary stayed on the car. Motorman Matthews says that she left at Broad and Hunter and started toward the factory. Some time between 12:10 and 12:15 Mary Phagan entered the doors of the National Pencil Factory and went to the office of Leo Frank, where she drew her pay. She never was seen alive after that moment except by the brute that attacked her, beat her cruelly and completed his demonic crime by looping a cord about the tender flesh of her neck and strangling her to death.

No One Saw Her Alive Again.

From the moment that the little factory girl entered the office of Frank the mystery dated. She never left the presence of the young superintendent alive, the public does not know.

Whether she started down the stairs and there was attacked by a negro fiend lurking in the darkness, later paying out the toll of her young life to the fury of his bestiality, also is shrouded in a mystery as yet undisturbed by the searching investigation of three months.

Many pieces of evidence point to the latter surmise, but no one, so far as is known, is able to say with certainty that this is so, save possibly Jim Conley himself.

Conley and Frank, by their own admissions, were in the factory when Mary Phagan entered. Frank told freely of his presence there. Conley's confession was wrung from him after three weeks in a cell at the police station.

Upstairs on the fourth floor were Harry Denham and Arthur White. Mrs. White visited the factory to see her husband. She left shortly before 1 o'clock, when Frank came to the fourth floor to tell the men that if they wished to remain they would have to stay until about 3 o'clock, as he was going home for lunch and would look for them in the evening.

Frank Alone in Factory.

They stayed in the factory and Frank departed within a few minutes. Shortly before 3 o'clock he returned and the men came downstairs and left, after White had gone into Frank's office to borrow $2.

Frank was alone in the factory from this time until 4 o'clock. No one has any information as to when Conley left or how he left, except by his own statements. He says that he left shortly after 1 o'clock by the front door. If Frank's story of the time he quit the building is true, it is fairer to presume that the negro left some time after 1 o'clock and through the basement's rear door, which he forced open by pulling the staple.

Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, came to the factory at 4 o'clock. He unlocked the outside door and the door leading up to the second floor.

"All right, Mr. Frank," he shouted as he approached the superintendent's office.

Sent Negro Lee Away.

Frank appeared rubbing his hands and remarking that it was too bad Lee had come down at this time as he might as well have stayed at home and got more sleep. He told Lee he might go and return at 6 o'clock, the regular hour for reporting.

A few minutes after Lee came back to the factory, J. M. Gantt, a discharged employee, walked across the street and said he would like to go into the factory and get a pair of shoes he had left there, three weeks before. Frank gave him permission, but seemed a little doubtful of Gantt's real purpose. After the factory superintendent had gone to his home, he called Lee up on the telephone and asked if Gantt were gone.

and everything was all right at the factory. Lee replied that Gantt had left as soon as he had obtained the shoes and called up a girl friend from the office.

Lee made his regular rounds for several hours that night, shutting down all the windows and making his trip over the different floors, as was his custom.

He climbed down the ladder into the basement to see if everything was all right down there. He went no farther, however, than the flickering gas light at the bottom of the ladder. Peering through the darkness, he saw nothing out of the way.

Second Trip to Basement.

That night was no different than any other night up until shortly before 3 o'clock in the morning, if the negro's story is to be credited. At this time he made another trip into the basement.

Did he hear some sound that led him to go down the ladder and venture beyond the dim circle of light from the gas jet?

Was some other living being in the cellar when he clambered down the ladder?

He says not. With his dirty, smoky lantern he descended through the scuttle hole. This time he did not stop at the little area of light made by the gas jet. Swinging his lantern slowly back and forth in front of him, he made his way toward the rear of the basement. Near the boiler he stopped. After a few moments he looked about him.

What was that lying over there to his left on a pile of sawdust and other trash and dirt? Could it be that some of the rascally fellows in the plant were playing this ghastly joke on him?

Tremblingly he held the lantern in front of him. The black man's eyes dilated with horror. There could be no mistake about it. His impulse was to flee, but he pulled himself together.

He started toward the dark, inert object lying there on the trash heap (To Be Continued To-morrow.)

DEATH'S SHADOW CAST OVER HOUSE

Recess Taken Out of Respect to Speaker Burwell, Whose Sister Died Suddenly.

Confessions of love required were made and repudiated in Judge Broyles' court Tuesday when the trial of G. A. Vaughn on the charge of arson made by Mrs. A. C. Klapper following the burning of her home at No. 256 East Hunter street last Friday was heard.

Vaughn was bound over to a higher court under bond of $3,000, but not before he had emptied his heart of all its feeling for his accuser and declared that his love had not been spurned by her.

"Why she placed her arms about me and kissed me tenderly the morning of the fire," Vaughn, who was a boarder at Mrs. Klapper's home, declared. "And now she charges me with arson. It can not be true."

By this statement, Mrs. Klapper, who is past middle age, was considerably ruffled.

"I never did kiss him," she exclaimed. "One time he gave me $30 when I was sick to pay doctors' bills, and when I bought a coat with the money he got mad and said he would burn it up. And he did, and my house, too."

The fire was discovered in a closet in Vaughn's room on the top floor shortly after he had departed for downtown. Miss Bonnie Burns, another boarder, testified at the trial that Vaughn, in leaving the house, had looked up at the roof. Miss Burns' testimony proved the strongest against Vaughn.

LOBBY LETTERS A BONANZA FOR FOES OF T. R.

Mulhall Quiz Takes on New Political Importance, as Colonel Is Involved Deeper.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—With the statement of Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, that he drafted a drastic report in 1909 against an amendment of the Sherman anti-trust act for the secret purpose of upsetting President Roosevelt's whispered plan to so amend the law that railroads would be immune, the Overman Lobby Inquiry Committee took on new political importance to-day.

There are frequent references to Roosevelt in the Mulhall letters. In practically every instance these references are unfavorable. As long as Roosevelt is a political figure the Mulhall letters will be a mine from which the opponents may dig up sinister information.

The committee to-day continued reading letters in which Mulhall related to Secretary Schvedman's canvass of members with respect to a tariff commission convention to be held in 1909 in Indianapolis. Mulhall saw practically every member of Congress. From many of them he could obtain no expression of their attitude toward a tariff commission, and very few of them had time or inclination to attend the Indianapolis convention, which was being engineered by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Suggesting that the lobby investigation is drifting away from its original purpose and has assumed a political cast, Colonel Mulhall asked permission to employ counsel. The committee acceded, although later Senator Reed protested.

One of the Mulhall letters to-day threw light on the fight made in the winter of 1909 to make Senator Philander C. Knox eligible to be Secretary of State. James E. Watson was to have gone to Indianapolis to attend the tariff commission sitting, but he was unable to go because Speaker Cannon and Vice President Sherman demanded that he remain here until the Knox bill was passed. Knox's ineligibility grew out of the fact that he voted while a member of the Senate to increase the salary of the Secretary of State.

Goes for Five Beers; Quarter Gets Barrel

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—William Tipton, a laborer employed in the excavation work for a new city jail, found a quarter while digging in the rear of the Municipal Courts Building yesterday.

He immediately invited his nearest fellow worker to step across the street and help consume the five "big beers" the coin would buy. It bore the date 1865.

"Will you take enough to buy a barrel of beer for that quarter?" the bystander asked.

"Sure thing," was Tipton's reply. The stranger handed him $6.50 and pocketed the quarter.

'Make-Up' Stone Is Editor's Monument; Bears Epitaph Poem

JEFFERSON, OHIO, July 22.—One of the most remarkable gravestones on record was placed in the cemetery here to-day.

It stands at the head of the grave of J. A. Howells, veteran editor of The Ashland Sentinel, who died here recently. It consists of the "make-up" stone used by Mr. Howells for fifty years, during his successive evolutions as printer's devil, printer and editor. It is inscribed with these lines, written by William Dean Howells, a brother of the editor:

Stone, upon which with hands of boy and man,
He framed the history of his time until
Week after week, the varying record ran,
To his half-century tale of well and ill.

Remember now how true through all those days
He was—friend, brother, husband, son,
Fill the whole limit of your space with praise,
There needs no room for blame—blame there was none.

The boyhood of William Dean Howells was spent in the office of The Sentinel. The father of William Dean Howells and J. A. Howells was editor of the paper.

That is Mrs. Frank Wyncoff's idea of how to be happy though married. Mrs. Wyncoff, who was Miss Boss Wall before her recent marriage, is the wife of Frank Wyncoff, the well-known real estate operator.

"A wife is supposed to be a helpmate," continued Mrs. Wyncoff, with a bewitching smile, "and what is a helpmate but a person to help solve and cope with difficulties? And how can a wife help her husband if she does not understand and feel in perfect sympathy with him? If husband and wife start out by being frank and confidential with each other, there is little chance of their matrimonial craft being wrecked on the shoals of divorce."

"I believe a wife should be a companion and a chum to her husband. And she should always try to be different, and not fall into a rut. Flirt with him—don't let him think he knows you absolutely, and always keep him guessing a little. But be a chum to him, and make him know that he is the only man in the world. At meal time I think a wife should be bright and attractive, telling her husband cheerful, pleasant things. Avoid petty neighborhood gossip—no woman can be a good wife and a neighborhood gossip at the same time. And a man don't want to hear gossip on coming home from his office."

"It requires art to manage a husband, but if one is worth having, he is worth keeping. So study him, and what will charm and attract him, and one's married life will be harmonious, and not a series of wrangles."

DROWNED WHILE SWIMMING. SAVANNAH.—While swimming in the Savannah River, M. DeCosta, an engineer on the Ocean Steamship Company's steamer City of Augusta, was drowned a short distance from the company's wharves. Two other seamen, swimming near DeCosta, were unable to save him.

TARIFF BILL AIDS 'BEEF BARONS,' SAYS SMOOT

Declares Free Importation of Meats and Cattle Will Throttle Competition.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When the Senate met to-day the tariff debate was resumed, and Senator Smoot, of Utah, completed the address he began yesterday. He attacked first the action of the Democrats in placing meats, cattle, hides, wool, etc., on the free list, declaring that such action is only playing into the hands of the "beef barons" and throttling competition.

The importation of meats and cattle free of duty, he said, will give a tremendous advantage to Canada, Mexico and Argentina at the expense of the American farmer.

Senator Smoot argued that the chief advocates of the low rates of tariff, both before the House and the Senate, have been the importers. Of

T. R. Escapes Asking Hunting Permit by Killing Outlaw Game

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Officials of the forestry division of the Department of Agriculture to-day declared that Theodore Roosevelt has not been granted a permit to hunt for protected game in the Grand Canyon forest reserve, nor has he requested one, but that he is aiding Jim Owens to kill off predatory animals, such as mountain lions, coyotes and wildcats.

Jim Owens is a civil service employee of the Government, and is paid $1,400 a year to kill predatory animals, a string of homes and a pack outfit. Forestry officials have not been formally notified that Roosevelt is hunting in the Grand Canyon preserves.

BLUE LAWS TOO DRASTIC. GADSDEN, July 22.—People of Atlanta have petitioned the Mayor and Council of that city to be more lenient in the enforcement of the blue laws. Recently all soft drink stands were closed on Sunday and people claim they suffered intensely, because of inability to get cold drinks.

Gave More Than Asked. He added that the Italian Chamber of Commerce in New York had asked merely for a reduction of 5 per cent on automobiles, but that the Democrats had conceded 15 per cent.

In the cotton schedule, Senator Smoot insisted that the Northern manufacturers had been discriminated against and the Southern producers had been favored. The Northern manufacturers make the finer grades of goods, he said. He declared that American mill workers must compete with the cheap Asiatic labor of Japan in manufacturing cotton goods.

Says Trusts Won't Suffer. American clock and watch manufacturers, manufacturers of window glass, of pottery and of gloves, all are treated harshly by the proposed law, said Senator Smoot. The action of the Democrats, he said, meant the loss of work to thousands employed at present in these industries. "The first industries to suffer from this bill will not be the great trusts, but the independent manufacturers having small capital and making goods requiring the highest type of workmanship," he said.

VATICAN GUARDS RIOT; MENACE POPE PIUS

Mutinuous Swiss Soldiers Threaten to Break Into Private Chamber of Pontiff.

SPECIAL Cable to The Atlanta Georgian. ROME, July 22.—After 24 hours of wild rioting by the Pope's Swiss guards, during which the men were shorn of their military powers at the Vatican, order was restored to-day.

The demands of the soldiers, which caused the mutiny, will not be granted. The soldiers had asked concessions raising the embargo against them visiting wine shops and other stores along the Tiber; the right to choose their own commander; the increase of the guards' quota, and a demand that no punishment be meted out to them for their mutinous conduct.

The guards, incensed at the official order depriving them of their military status, stormed the Vatican, and for a time it was feared that the Italian troops quartered in the city would have to be called out to quell the disturbance.

Great alarm was felt among the Vatican officials for fear that the soldiers would force their way into the Pope's private chambers.

Drastic measures were taken to guard His Holiness from the angry soldiers, as grave fears were entertained that the Pontiff, still weakened from the effects of his recent illness, would suffer a relapse should the soldiers force their way into his presence.

ATLANTA BALKS AT NOSE VEIL; MUST SEE ALL OF PRETTY FACE

Miss Nancy Reed, first girl to wear the nose veil here.

She says it will not do for Atlanta beauties at all.

Fair Sponsor of Arabian Style Admits New Fad Is Doomed Here.

At last Dame Fashion seems to have overstepped the line in freakish wearing apparel for women, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

The Arabian nose veil, an importation now much in vogue in Newport and other Eastern centers of all that is fashionable, has met a sharp rebuff here.

The veil in use is drawn taut over the tip of the nose and covers the mouth and chin. One sees but the eyes of the wearer. Mrs. French Vanderbolt, Mrs. William Gaudy and others are its sponsors in the East.

Miss Nancy Reed, a former Atlanta girl, now visiting Mrs. George Spier in Twelfth street, is among the first here to attempt the nose veil.

"It won't do for Atlanta girls," she declared, and her decision seems to have been sustained, especially by the men of the city, who enjoy seeing all of a pretty face.

FATHER SHIELDS GIRL ARRESTED WITH DOCTOR

Grief of Forgiveness Displayed When Effie McCalmon Meets Parent and Brother.

The grief of forgiveness was patriotically displayed in Chief of Police Beavers' office Tuesday morning when Effie McCalmon, the country girl from near Carrollton, arrested Monday with Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of that town, in a raid on the Scoville Hotel, met her father and brother, and begged to be taken home.

The girl's pathetic plight was more than the irate father and brother could endure. Simultaneously they clasped her in their arms. Then she was taken by them in an automobile to the station. The trio departed at 11 o'clock for home.

J. M. McCalmon, father of the girl, a prominent planter, and his son Emory, ticket agent at Bowden Junction, both told Chief Beavers they would return when the physician's case comes up to prosecute Lewis to the full extent of the law. They also declared they would bring the girl back to Atlanta and let her tell her story to the court.

"This man has cast shame on my home which can never be forgotten," declared the father. "He has blighted my daughter's future. Restitution by punishment of the law is a poor substitute, but I will have it."

Lewis was released Monday night, after he had secured the $1,000 bond under which he was bound over by Judge Broyles during the afternoon. Immediately afterward he disappeared.

Lewis and the girl were registered at the hotel as man and wife.

Photographers of U. S. May Come to Atlanta Next Year

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 22.—With a dozen boosters putting forth the brand of effort that captured the big Shriners' convention, Atlanta's chances of getting the next gathering of the Photographers' Association of America, now in session here, are growing better every hour.

The Atlantans have opened an office in the convention hall and a display in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore, where the delegates are entertained and provided with literature descriptive of the Gate City. There are about 800 delegates here now, with several hundred more coming.

Harry Goodhart, L. D. Hicks and Fred Houser, who head the Atlanta delegation, are confident that the Georgia city will secure the next convention.

Mr. Goodhart declared this morning that "there is nothing to it but Atlanta. I have talked to several hundred delegates and they all want to come to the 'New York of the South.'"

DIXIE IS DELUGED BY PROSPERITY, SAYS HARDY

Retailers' President Declares Business Is Better and Georgia Is Forging Into Lead.

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South when seen by The Georgian at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

"But we can better the present condition and our merchants in all parts of Georgia have come to the realization that by individual effort and plugging in the right direction we can make Georgia the foremost State in the Union," declared Mr. Hardy.

"To this end the convention was called," said Mr. Hardy, "to meet in Atlanta while the Legislature is in session, so that merchants can be in close touch with their Representatives and exercise every influence in their power to get them to support and vote for the garment and fraudulent check bills."

"This is a business meeting of business men, and in no sense is it for the purpose of boosting Atlanta interests. Its only purpose is to work for the best interests of the merchants of Georgia."

"We are in an era of good business that is unrivaled. Competition is keen, but it is also true that competition is the life of trade and progress."

"From all parts of the State come encouraging assertions that this year has been a little better than last. Even a little is better than no increase at all. But I am inclined to believe that business this year is infinitely more than a little better than last in all lines."

General Harris to Inspect Second at St. Simons Friday

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 22.—The Second Georgia Regiment is making extensive preparations for the visit to camp of Brigadier General Walter A. Harris and staff on Friday, when a special dress parade will be held in his honor.

The big battle of the maneuvers was fought this morning, the men having to cut their way with bayonets through the matted underbrush of a swamp to get to the firing lines, but, according to the instructors, they did it like veterans. More "casualties" were caused by the barbed points of sandspurs than by the enemy.

Rain fell yesterday for the first time and the men were compelled to drill in ponchos. Forsyth directed Columbus in a ball game, 14 to 4. To-day's officer of the day was Captain John T. Aycock, and the officer of the guard Lieutenant H. A. Dickens, both of Monroe.</

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill High Class.

First nighters at the Forsyth Monday evening were given a real thrill by the aquatic feats of John F. Conroy and his two diving girls. The act is exceptionally good and the scenery is striking.

The remainder of the bill is excellent. Diaro is the masterhand of the piano-accompanied. From the classic music to ragtime the musician is a wonder. He was repeatedly recalled for encores. A trio of comedians that handed over some very funny stuff included Smith Cook and Marie Brandon. Lester is an entertaining ventriloquist. Another big drawing card, especially for the children, was Jack Auger, "Jack the Giant Killer." The Beano, a novelty gymnastic act, opened the bill. Shriner and Richards, in songs and dances, were good.

"Les Miserables" a Hit.

In the pictured dramatization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," playing this week at the Grand Theater, Atlanta is offered another of the mammoth film productions like "Quo Vadis."

"Les Miserables" had its Atlanta premiere Monday night. In coloring the picture is perfect; however, its action in a few spots lacks a bit. As though the producer leaned too much to detail to bring forth realism. However, the play does not lack tenaciousness and thrills. Prospective auditors are advised to arrive before the first staff on the screen, as the presentation of the escape from the prison, in the first film, is, without doubt, the cream of all that is exciting in the play.

In the cast of characters are seen some of France's most noted actors. The stage setting is minute and lavish to the last detail. Manager Co-drea is to be congratulated upon his battle with the heat. The Grand Theatre weather is like an oasis in the desert.

at her home on Myrtle street. Miss Gertrude Jones, of Selma, Ala., will arrive Friday to be Mrs. Ayer's guest. At present she is visiting friends in Annapolis.

'OLD HOSS' JUDGE SAYS PONIES ARE GREAT

Pick of Mountain Herd Ordered to Make Out Prizes for Georgian Contestants.

Telegrams Monday ordered John G. Mobley, of Winnsboro, S. C., to ship the thirteen ponies necessary to complete the herd of 22 which The Georgian and American will give away after the close of its contest, July 31.

Within a few days, the special car bringing the Shetlands should arrive. According to the expert who went to Winnsboro and picked them out, they are a feast for the eyes.

Mr. Mobley has a plantation of 1,400 acres. Of this area, 450 acres of wood lot are used as a pony farm. Just now, he has 100 head of ponies, which have been roaming the woods and the rich pasture, and these hot days, seeking the shady tangles.

The Georgian and American were offered their pick of the entire five-score ponies. Twenty negroes, mounted on mules, started at 8 o'clock in the morning to round them up. By 1 o'clock they had the 100 little fellows on the summit of a hill where Mr. Mobley is accustomed to give them a walk. From this knoll they were driven to the pens, and the best fifteen were selected. All are sound, gentle, affectionate and well trained. They vary sufficiently in markings, colors and size to please all tastes. Perhaps the pick of the bunch is "Flash," who looks like a race horse, and is as fast as his name.

Every one of the ponies is worth well above $100, and with each goes a guarantee of good health and freedom from blemish. If the boys and girls are enthusiastic about the ponies already in Atlanta, they will be wildly excited over the newcomers, it is predicted, for they are believed to be, if anything, a little better than those first purchased.

The Amateur Gardener

A Complete Short Story

"THERE'S not much need for a watering can, any way, just now, is there?"

Corporal John Smith straightened his back and looked at his questioner. "You're only just moved in, haven't you?" he asked irrelevantly. "Your front lawn has been neglected for some time."

"Yes, I only came the other day. My name's Paley—Richard Paley. I have heard you spoken of already as Mr. Smith—Police Corporal Smith, I think. Several people told me about your skill as a gardener, and I have had a peep or two on the sly. They told me the truth, any way. But it is the grass that takes my eye so much. I've never seen a plot look so smooth and green—so velvety, I might say."

"Oh, I'm proud of that grass. It's really very simple when you get a start. It takes time, of course; but careful sowing and plenty of rolling will work wonders if you have anything like a decent bit of ground to begin with."

"I must have a lesson or two," said Paley, smiling. "It would just suit me to have a bit of green like that in front of the window."

"I'm sure I shall be pleased to help you," said Corporal Smith. "I'll make a start to-morrow, then. May I borrow your mower and roller for a day or two?"

"Certainly."

For the next few days Mr. Paley paid great attention to his garden.

"I don't see much difference in my lawn yet," he said, after about a week had passed. "Do you think the roller is heavy enough for my lawn?"

"Don't make a mistake and have the roller too heavy," said Smith. "I do sometimes put a brick or two inside for a bit of extra weight, but you certainly could do with it a bit heavier. Don't be in too big a hurry to get it done."

More Suggestions.

"I'll tell what I'll do, if you don't mind," said Mr. Paley. "I'll have the ends of your roller boarded up, with a hole left so that I can put in a quantity of sand."

"Well, I don't mind. It would perhaps be a better and more convenient way of getting what you want."

"Thank! I'll have it done, then," said Paley, turning away.

A day or two later he called his neighbor's attention to the roller in its new form, and the latter walked round into the next garden.

"I see you've got an evening paper. What's the latest score?"

"There's a paragraph that will interest you professionally," said Paley, referring once more to the paper.

"What's that?" inquired Smith.

"You remember that big robbery a week or two since?"

"Yes. They got away with about $4,000 worth of stuff, I remember."

"More than that, I should think. The paper says that the police have got some slight clew, which they are following up."

"I should like to get my fingers on some of that stolen property," said Corporal Smith.

"In cases like this, it seems to me," said Paley, "that the police are often outwitted in quite a simple manner. The safest method to hide such stuff as this would be to put it just under their noses. They get so full of fantastic theories, and look so far away, that they will miss what is just within reach of their fingers if they did but know it."

A Dollar Bet.

"Perhaps you may be right to some extent," said Smith. "You know, of course, that the information supplied to the papers is not all that the police have, and sometimes it is even published as a blind."

"Yes, that is so, certainly; but I still think that the police miss frequently what is quite close to them."

"Well," said Smith, "I must stick up for my own side. We'll take this as a test case if you like, and see what comes of it."

"All right," returned Paley. "I'm agreeable. As a bit of sport, we'll put a dollar on it, shall we? Besides, it will be of interest to us locally, as the report states that a suspected man has been traced into this district. So you may have a bit of luck after all. Who knows?"

"I should be very glad to. And if the man is down here I may even have a chance. I'll see what the paper has to say, though I expect to hear something officially."

"Well, good-night," said Mr. Paley. The clicking of the latch on the gate made both men look in that direction.

"Ah!" murmured Smith. "This is Detective Smart, who has charge of the very case we have been discussing. I shall be hearing something reliable now."

He noticed, with surprise, the start that Paley gave on hearing the name; but it was nothing to his astonishment when the detective walked directly up to Paley, placed his hand on him and arrested him in the strictly formal manner under the name of Robert Pearout.

"Why, sergeant," he gasped, "this is Mr. Richard Paley."

"He may have given you that name, but I know him as Robert Pearout," replied the detective.

Smith stared at the prisoner.

"It's quite true that is my real name," said the latter dejectedly. "And I have deceived you. It may look black against me, going under a false name, but I have a good excuse for that. I know they can't prove anything against me, and I'm sure to be at liberty again soon."

The house he had occupied was thoroughly searched, but nothing of importance was found. There was strong circumstantial evidence that he was in some way mixed up in the affair, even if he were not the moving spirit. All the efforts of the police to bring it home to him were futile, and he was at length released.

He greeted Smith at the earliest opportunity.

"Just what I told you!" he said. "Your men, with their far-fetched theories, made a wild guess at me, but were wrong again. I did get into trouble once, but have gone straight since. I am a marked man though now, and I shall soon be going."

The next morning he had disappeared, nor was any trace of him afterward discovered.

A Find.

Smith was prevented by the bad weather from pursuing his hobby. When at last the sun shone he found that the abiding Mr. Paley had not returned his gardening implements, and he had to fetch them himself.

The relief he found much too heavy for his purpose and he proceeded to empty it.

At length the running of the sand was interrupted by something inside.

Poking this out with a stick, he was astonished to find wrapped in a piece of newspaper a small jewel case, which he at once recognized as part of the stolen property.

With eager fingers he opened his prize; but his hopes were immediately dashed to the ground when he found the sole contents was a slip of paper addressed to himself.

"Dear Mr. Smith," it ran, "many thanks for your roller, of which I made good use. The police do miss things close under their noses and within reach of their fingers. Had you emptied the roller sooner your luck would have been better. You owe me a dollar. Please get some one to cut and roll the grass. I should not be contented if I thought that any money in that direction had been wasted. Gratefully yours,

"ROBERT PEAROUT,"
"RICHARD PALEY."

A Girl's Room

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day"

A GIRL'S character and individuality are very clearly shown by the condition and contents of her own bedroom. If she is neat and orderly, careful of her belongings, or careless, wasteful, destructive or extravagant, these traits are distinctly emphasized in her room. Tastes which are refined and cultivated, or tastes which are trivial and mean, are reflected there. Her surroundings show her culture, or the need of it.

The habit of keeping her room, desk and clothes in order, having a place for everything, and everything in its place, is an immense help toward training in method, accuracy and thoroughness. A girl may well practice these simple but necessary rules of orderliness. They will be an aid toward character building and an aid toward the making of a wider sphere of influence. It is generally acknowledged that those who are negligent of order are untrustworthy and incapable of method, accuracy and thoroughness.

A girl's room may be a place to help to mold her character to the ideal girl she wishes to be. "I used to be very sloppy about keeping my room in order," said a girl. "I waited until it was in frightful disorder; then I rearranged everything. But my experience is that the habit of putting my things in order, and the harder task of keeping them so, is a tremendous help in managing myself. If I can manage all the little external things, it is easier to sort out good thoughts from hurtful, wasteful thoughts, and keep character in order."

If a girl loves books and pictures a few of them, at least, will be in her room. She knows that a well-furnished mind is like a well-appointed room, and that by forming a habit of reading and arranging time for the companionship of a good book in the day's work, she will not only increase her intellectual power, but will make her an interesting woman. The girl who has a bright, wide-awake mind uses her talents and never ceases to be receptive. Her books are not the passing, ephemeral novels of the day. She does not spoil her taste by reading too much trash, but she gets the right start, learns to choose the books worth reading, and she cultivates reading, not as a task, but for the great enjoyment it gives. And so a girl has her bookshelf, where she accumulates gradually her collection of books. On the walls she has a few good pictures. These may be neatly-framed prints, or photographs of famous pictures of the world. They are within the means of most girls, and those who love beauty and culture will not fail to have them.

If possible, each girl in a family should have her own room, where she may have opportunities for being alone, and for cultivating her own resources; where she may read, study, paint or sew. In this way she is helped to depend on her individual interests rather than on the excitement of constant companionship. If a girl's room is merely a transient spot to sleep and dress in, and not a place to read and think in, she can not understand the pleasure of a room of her own. Facilities for solitude are not encouraged enough in home life, yet they should be recognized as a necessity for growth of character. In the quiet hours of solitude strength of soul is formed to face perplexities or temptations, to communion with one's own heart and conscience, and thus to solve hard problems.

THE DEATH TRAP IN THE CASTLE

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yes, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end nearest the wall rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

crumbled to the floor, less than half-conscious.

Jarvis dropped his useless revolver and picked up a chair, which was the nearest thing at hand. He swung it up in front of him just as the third blow descended. The chair was split, but chairs were made to stand rough treatment in the day it was constructed, and the brass-bound joints hung together and entangled the sword blade.

Instantly Jarvis recognized his one chance—to rush his foe as rapidly as he could, and give him no purchase for a strong wrench at the sword.

Suddenly Jarvis felt himself going forward on to his face and regained his balance by a mighty effort. The resistance was gone. He swung up the chair for a blow and—nearly stepped into the closing trapdoor.

There was a faint splash and—silence.

Warren darted back to the table and picked up his revolver. He leaned there for a few moments, weak and panting. It had all been so sudden, so unexpected and was over so quickly that but for the empty pedestal and the sword on the floor by the trap he would hardly have been able to believe it had happened at all.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"They're trying to scare us, Rusty," he cried, battling with a sudden panic that came upon him with an overwhelming rush. "They're trying to scare us, Rusty!"

"They're probably watching every move we make! That's where that pounding comes from—d-n-em! Why don't they shoot? They're trying to scare us—like they did the poor boob down in the village!"

He set his teeth hard and stood still until his manhood conquered. The running continued as before but there was no nervous strain in his voice now as he drove Rusty back to the fireplace, where the wall and floor looked solid.

"They want to get us out of this room—they want to get us out of here. Rusty, some one was working in this room! Now, where was he working? Where was he—"

"Marse Warren, look heah!"

Rusty, with great terror, had had a greater eye for details. His big black hand darted out along the mantelpiece and came back with a small mallet and chisel. Warren took them eagerly. He knew—he was certain the mantel was empty less than half an hour before.

"Good boy, Rusty!" he exclaimed, as he returned them. "Now I'll tell you something—these are his tools. Some one was working in this room and we have beaten him to it. Now, where was he working?"

He looked about him carefully.

The Portrait.

"Mortar on the floor—mortar on the mantel—look at that!"

A crevice between two of the big stones above the fireplace showed where the night worker had been busy.

"That's where he was working, Rusty! And we've beat him to it! We've beat—"

He stopped abruptly as if a voice had interrupted him. Both stood perfectly still for several seconds and then, simultaneously, they turned and stared at the picture of the old grandee. Each was unconscious that the other had made the same movement until Rusty looked at his master.

"Did you feel it, too, Marse Warren?" he asked in a hushed voice.

Warren did not reply. His eyes were shining like stars. He slowly raised the pistol to cover the ancient don, and then with slow, cautious steps he walked up to him.

Rusty watched in shivering silence. The swinging lantern and the fire-light threw long, grotesque, leaping shadows about the recesses of the dim and musty hall. Somewhere in the groined roof bats were squeaking and in the eerie hush even those fine notes were audible. Occasionally a faint sound from the walls or beneath the floor told of the presence of the dead night-walkers of the old castle. Rusty drew farther back into the glare of the fire and kept his round, terrified eyes on his master.

Jarvis advanced noiselessly until he was within easy arm's reach of the portrait. He held up his lantern and scrutinized its surface. Apparently the canvas was without a break. The old grandee held his marshal's baton on his hip and glared haughtily over the head of the irreverent child of the young people.

The ghost breaker had read of the habits of old pictures in feudal castles and he gave the frame particular attention. Seemingly it was set into the wall and had not been disturbed for a hundred years. He rapped the fierce old captain about the midriff with his knuckles. There was the usual wood backing of the canvas, but the sound was not hollow.

Warren backed away, still staring, and wiped his forehead with his handkerchief.

"By God, that's weird!" he muttered, in an uncertain voice. "You could feel that just as plain!"

He backed into the low pedestal of one of the steel-clad warriors at the side of the stairs and sat down, still staring at the picture.

"By God, that's weird!" he repeated, again and again. Rusty, oiled, gazed also.

"It sure is, Marse Warren; it sure is. It—"

Rusty turned his eyes to his master to offer an explanation and nearly dropped, speechless and dead. The figure in armor had turned halfway round on its pedestal and had raised the old two-handed Thirteenth Century sword on which it had been leaning to deal a blow on the young man's head that would have split him to the waist.

Ghost or ghost breaker never achieved the equal of the yell that burst from Rusty's mighty lungs. The very power and suddenness of it caused Jarvis to leap a half dozen feet forward into the room, and even as he jumped he realized that the danger was real and must be from his rear, and he wheeled, with revolver poised and cocked, as the sword blade came down on the stone with a ringing crash.

At the same instant Jarvis fired full into the steel cuirass. The next—and the man in armor sprang down the steps, raising his weapon for another blow. Again Jarvis fired and leaped to one side as the sword came down. So close was it that the flat of the blade brushed his coat sleeve. But, worse than this, he knew in a flash that the armored murderer was proof against soft-nosed bullets.

Weighted by his armor, the swordman wheeled slowly in pursuit. Jarvis was practically cornered between the great table and his adversary. Rusty was in the enemy's rear, but he had

Real Freedom

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A MOTHER assigned a trivial household task to her daughter, and the girl rebelled. She preferred to loiter in a chair and read the latest fiction.

"I detest housework," she snapped; "I despise that word 'Duty' you talk so much about; I hate being ordered around in this way. I will be glad when I am married and can do as I please."

And when the noble Bird of Freedom heard her make this speech, it hung its head on its breast, and drooped its tall feathers in shame.

It knew that no freedom comes with matrimony, but that freedom ends at its portals. It knew that the day was coming when the same girl would look back with a sigh at the liberty she enjoyed as a girl, and of which she now showed so little appreciation.

The mother also knew it, and her reply to her daughter's speech was a sigh. How many times a mother's answer is a sigh only the good Lord knows. It is an expression of pain that goes unheeded on earth, but that is recorded against the one who evoked it in Heaven.

Extravagances.

Though the amount is usually limited, there are few girls these days who do not have spending money with which to do as they please. Obsessed by the passion of possession they buy dovors, ribbons, hats, gloves, little necessities and more follies, few of which outlast their brief season. There is no one to object; no one to question; no one to scold when the bills come in. The girl who wants a pretty flower buys it without the nagging consciousness that it would be better to spend the money for potatoes. She is free, with her little or much, to do as she pleases.

The majority of girls are engaged in some sort of lucrative employment, and all their time is not their own. When the hour comes at last when the typewriter is closed, the loom is quiet, the sewing machine covered, and the books put back on their shelves. Often the day is too long, and the labor too arduous for the pay received, but it always ends at last and for a time the girl is free.

She has a few hours of sweet liberty when she may go for a ride, a swim, or to dance, or to be undisturbed in a corner and rest. Her life, for a brief period, is all her own, with to-day's work ended and no intrusion of the duties of to-morrow.

But when asked to do a little household task for which she lacks inclination, she says irritably, "I will be glad when I am married and can do as I please!"

The noble Bird of Freedom, my dear girls, is never an emblem of wifehood. That little gold band that is put on a girl's finger at the altar is a link in a chain which, in the great majority of cases, is as binding as that worn by a slave.

The married woman who has as much freedom as a girl is a creature existing only in fairy tale and imagination. Her time, her money, her thoughts, her soul and body are no longer her own. Free as a girl to serve herself, she condemns herself to life in the servitude of others when she marries.

She formerly purchased for one, and bought as she pleased. She now buys for two, often with less money to buy with, and must account for all she spends. In the same way that a dollar is not her own, neither may an hour be called hers to do with as she likes. If you doubt this, my dear girl, look at your mother.

What She Does.

How often does she say, "I want this for myself?" Do you ever hear her express the intention of going where SHE pleases? How many times in your whole life have you seen her at her ease without household task in her hands? When she takes a seat isn't it that she may hold the baby?

Marry, by all means, and may you marry well and happily. But don't enter that state believing that you will be as free as a bird once you are a wife.

Go into it knowing the sacrifices you must make. Go into it knowing that nothing is purchased in this world without its price, and the price of love is the ending of all the precious freedom of girlhood.

Perhaps this knowledge may make you better appreciate the liberty you enjoy to-day, and give you an understanding of matrimony that will rob you of all discontent and envy if your days of girlhood are indefinitely prolonged.

Perhaps, also—and this is my greatest hope—it may make you more tender and helpful with the burdens of the one in whose chain of slavery you are unconsciously a link—your mother.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA took Ma & me out on the lake fishing bullheads last night. We stayed out on the lake a long time & it was getting late when we got home. Ma was getting cross, too.

Wife, sed Pa, wen we started out, you may not know it, but a bullhead is better eating than any other fresh water fish. A bullhead isent the prittiest thing in the world to look at, Pa sed, beeing moar or less slimy, like a eel, & with a big head & two sharp thorns one on each side of its neck. Its eyes are vary small & fathomless. Pa sed, like the eyes of a fat German after a picnic, & it has long whiskers that look like strips of spaghetti, but wen you have caught yure bullhead & skinned him, & fried him ower a nice wood fire, there isent anything nicer to eat in the wide 'wurd. Wait till we git a boat load of the grand fish. Pa sed, & I will treat you & litle Bobbie to a feed fit for the gods.

I used to eat bullheads wen I was a litle gurl, sed Ma. My father used to catch them in the mill ponds out in Wisconsin, & if I remember rite they was awful hard to skin & thay certingly was good etting. He used to catch them with angelworms, Ma sed.

He was no sportman, sed Pa. I always catch them with flies. I cast for them, Pa sed.

I am going to try worms, I told Pa. Harry Mieser told me to always catch them here in this lake with worms. & I got sum worms from him for nothing. A lot of good worms will do you, sed Pa. You better talk off that hook & git one of these hackle flies on yure line.

No, I sed, I am going to try the worms. Wen we got to the place were Pa thought there wud be sum bullheads, we put out the ank & Ma bet Pa a cigar aggenst a box of candy that I wud catch moar bullheads than he caught.

It is like talking candy away from a child, sed Pa, but I will take the wager. I dont believe you will catch a bullhead with a fly, sed Ma. Dident I tell you my father always used worms?

The bullheads thought yure father was a older brother, sed Pa. I always thought he was a kind of bullhead anyway. He didnt seem to think that I wud amount to much as a son in law.

That was wen you were yung & wild, sed Ma. You have improved since you got older, & now he likes you vary much & I dont want you to call him a bullhead, eteur.

Just then I got a bite & pulled in a nice bullhead neerly a foot long. Good for you, Bobbie, sed Ma. Keep up the good work. Look at old Ike Walton, here, throwing that fly all ower the top of the water.

Never mind me, sed Pa. I will git moar & bigger dsh than Bobbie, & then wen he had thit I caught another one.

Poor, poor husband, sed Ma. Why dont you restle the bullheads that pece of poetry you rote for the bankwet of other nite. My father used to resitl peeces from Byron & Tom Moore wen he went bullhead fishing, & then I caught a awfu big bullhead, that made three.

We mite as well try another spot were thay will rise to a fly, sed Pa. This spot is all rite for Bobbie, sed Ma. We will stay rite were we are. I caught so many bullheads that I got tired, & all Pa caught with his hackle fly was the rim of Ma's hat.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

NOT IF IT IS WORTH WHILE. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen, and deeply in love with a man eleven years my senior. He often asked me to go to a show, but I refused. Do you think I will lose his affection by not accepting his invitation?

X. Y. Z. If he cares for you in the right way, his love is not so easily lost. You do not say why you are refusing his attentions.

Use Cough Drops.

"Muriel," said the old gentleman, "that young man you had in the parlor last night is full of comprehension. All I had to do was to cough when the other chaps remained too late and they would take the hint and depart. Did this one say anything when I coughed last night?"

"Yes," replied the beautiful daughter. "He said the next time he called he was going to bring you some cough drops."

Beauty

Mile. Dazie Tells How to Mould Beautiful Shoulders, and Points Out the Value of Poise.

Mile. Dazie.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

I HAVE seen "La Belle Dazie" and she is! Just as bewitchingly pretty is Mademoiselle Dazie in her own dainty Hudson-breeze-swept apartment as when she twinkles her toes at you over the footlights. From her many charms, I singled out the wonderfully clear and well proportioned line of her lovely profile, the beautiful curve of the white shoulders and the soft, luxuriant hair.

"Will you tell me a short cut to the acquisition of these three allures, and the abettors of beauty, Mademoiselle Dazie?" I asked.

"I will be glad to tell you all I know about it—and I won't pretend that I think that is very little," said the honest star who twinkles under the joint management of B. F. Keith and Martin Beck. "For we women of the stage have to make a study of how to be just as lovely and appealing to audiences as a boarding of natural resources and a few additions thereto will make us."

On False Hair.

"About a profile—it is a good idea to own a hand-glass and to view one's self side-face once in a while, for the coil face that looks well from the front may make you look like a caricature of a leap-frog game or a door-knob from the side! Don't wear false hair if you can avoid it. It will cause your own locks to depart in wrath, and it will in all probability spoil the shape of your head. THE NATURAL CONTOUR OF THE HEAD IS GENEALLY WELL WORTH SHOWING—why won't more feminine persons remember that? A good massage to rub in a good tonic; a good brush, with your own arms to apply it faithfully, often and long, and you'll have luxuriant locks to aid and uphold poise in giving you a good profile. For 'carry the head high' is the first rule for a good profile.

"Oh, and brushing your hair is fine for your arms. Callisthenics and exercise will generally give you rounded contours where you want them. I am pretty slender, you know, and yet I have not scrawny arms or shoulders. JIU JITSU DID THAT. For two years I did a jiu jitsu dance with a man who weighed half again as much as I did, but I was really and truly able to throw him through my knowledge of the Japanese art, and from the beginning of that I noticed how my shoulders were rounding out and developing. JIU thought not to be an outworn fashion in this country. It is well worth the consideration of any woman who wants to develop into symmetry and strength. That and deep breathing gave me a broad, healthy singer's diaphragm, too. Oh, yes, jiu jitsu, of these I sing! It gives a woman confidence in her power to take care of herself, and it will aid the undeveloped woman to put a curve where she wants it and the woman of overluxuriant figure to take off a curve or two.

"I have two more little secrets that I will be glad to give you," went on the generous Dazie. "They are on the subjects of eyes and relaxation."

For the Eyes.

And very important subjects they are, so the interviewer's heart was duly rejoiced at what she was about to receive. "For eyes, which have dulled as much or as little as you like and applied with a bit of absorbent cotton whenever the eyes are tired or dusty. That cleanses and relaxes them.

"But about real relaxation, I have a theory that I most earnestly practice. Whenever fatigue threatens, I lie down flat on my back with no pillow to break the natural line of the relaxed body. Really, I fairly 'drop.' And there I lie with bodily tension all gone, and mind absolutely blank, and in a state of restful 'suspended animation.' And I get up rested, happy and ready to go on with the day's work.

"Utterly Crushed. It was a warm, radiant summer morning; the birds were singing sweetly, the flowers and dewy grass shimmered in the sparkling sunlight, and there, in the park, Robert Peeler—a very junior officer—was doing his utmost to make a favorable impression on the pretty nursemaid, whilst the latter's small charge, busily chased elusive butterflies. "Ah," sighed the dashing Robert. "I wish you were my governess!" "So do I," replied the girl. Hope sprang into Robert's heart. "And what would you do with me?" he asked. "Stop your smoking cigarettes, and get your hair cut—to say nothing of punishing you for talking nonsense during school hours!" Then Robert ponderously continued on his beat.

The Discontented Girls

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX (Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

DO you know what a wonderfully complicated thing a human being is? Every feature, every portion of your body, every motion you make, reflects your mental organization.

I know a woman past middle life who has always been on the opposite side of every question discussed in her presence.

She was agnostic with the orthodox, reverential with the liberals, liberal with the narrow, bigoted with the liberal.

Whatever belief any one expressed on any subject she invariably took the other extreme. She loved to disagree with her fellow men. It was her pastime.

Now, to walk with that woman in silence is merely to carry on a wordless argument.

You can not regulate your steps so they will harmonize with hers. She will be just ahead or just behind you, and if you want to turn to the left, she pulls to the right. A promenade with her is more exhausting than a day's labor.

She is not conscious of it, and would think any one very unreasonable and unjust who told her of her peculiarities.

I know a woman who all her life has been looking afar for happiness and peace and content, and has never found any of them, because she did not look into her own soul.

She was a restless girl, she married, believing in domestic life lay the goal of her dreams. But she was not happy there and sighed for freedom. She wanted to move, and did move, once, twice, thrice, to different points of the United States. She was discontented with each change. She is to-day possessed of all comforts and luxuries which life can afford, yet she is the same restless soul. She likes to read, but it is always the book which she does not possess which she craves. If she is in the library with shelves book-filled she goes into the garret and hunts in old boxes for a book or a paper which has been cast aside.

If she is in a picture gallery she wants to go to the window and look out on the street, but when she is on the street it bores her and she longs to go in the house. If a member of the family is absent she gets no enjoyment out of the society of those at home; yet when that absent one returns her mind strays elsewhere, seeking some imagined happiness not found here. I wonder if such souls ever find it, even in the spirit realm, or if they go on there seeking and always seeking something just beyond. It is a great gift to learn to enjoy the present—to get all there is out of it, and to think of to-day as a place of eternity. Begin now to teach yourself this great art if you have not thought of it before. To be able to enjoy heaven, one must learn first to enjoy earth.

"Good morning!" she broke off to murmur in velvet tones. "Is there something I can do for you?"

"Oh, yes, you were just looking around, I see. We are always glad to have people come in whether they buy or not. That Bulgarian dress in the window? Do you know, you certainly have an eye for style, to pick out something like that, which is the very latest thing—we just unpacked it this morning. The shipment was delayed, and it is a little beyond the season, so it is marked down awfully low, along with everything else.

"Only $22, and a month ago we'd have got fifty for it. Why, it is the very best material, madam! I assure you. This rattle is so stylish, but if it is new to you, of course, it does remind you of a thin bath towel. I sold six dresses on this order to a stylish customer the other day. She has a big summer home at Lake Geneva, and I tell you they wear clothes there! You had better let me show you how stunning you look in it."

"Mame, did you ever? It might have been made for her—see how it fits! Oh, my, no; you wouldn't want to take it in—everything is loose and baggy this year. You'll get used to it. Goodness, no! You wouldn't want to take off that collar and sash! You're not hit too old for such bright colors! That's really a joke when you can't be more than 20—well, you don't look it. I'm sure you wouldn't make a mistake in taking this."

"All right. I'll lay it aside for you. I want to show you something special that we keep for our best trade. Just a minute!"

"Mame, for goodness sake, rustle out those chiffon things that we've had a year—on the top shelf—and those blouses that every one always returns because something was wrong with the cut—under those boxes!"

"Now, here! Did you ever see anything prettier for a tea party or a meeting of the Literary Club—oh, I can tell when a woman is progressive just by looking at her! This chiffon will wear like iron and see how it's draped! Everything is so clinging, you know, and you have just the figure for it!"

The Gentle Art

"I DON'T know how you feel about it, Mame," said the tall, willowy creature in the clinging black gown, "but unless trade in this shop picks up it's me to look for another place! The way Mme. Cerise's business has slumped since folks went away for the summer is a caution."

"Look at the way we're stacked up with these here just from Paris glares that nobody would buy after they caught their breath and saw how awful they were! You'd think it was Philadelphia the way the women insisted on quiet little things just before the season closed! And these things marked down to next to nothing!"

"It's fierce!" agreed the other willowy creature in black. "I bet that's a customer—the one looking in at the window."

"You leave her to me!" hissed the first speaker, hastily patting her hair and straightening up. "My land! She's a find! She came in from Persimmon Center with her husband, who brought a carload of live stock, and he's given her a peck of to spend so she can go back and give the town a jolt! I could tell it a mile off!"

A Greeting. "Good morning!" she broke off to murmur in velvet tones. "Is there something I can do for you?"

"Oh, yes, you were just looking around, I see. We are always glad to have people come in whether they buy or not. That Bulgarian dress in the window? Do you know, you certainly have an eye for style, to pick out something like that, which is the very latest thing—we just unpacked it this morning. The shipment was delayed, and it is a little beyond the season, so it is marked down awfully low, along with everything else.

"Only $22, and a month ago we'd have got fifty for it. Why, it is the very best material, madam! I assure you. This rattle is so stylish, but if it is new to you, of course, it does remind you of a thin bath towel. I sold six dresses on this order to a stylish customer the other day. She has a big summer home at Lake Geneva, and I tell you they wear clothes there! You had better let me show you how stunning you look in it."

"Mame, did you ever? It might have been made for her—see how it fits! Oh, my, no; you wouldn't want to take it in—everything is loose and baggy this year. You'll get used to it. Goodness, no! "Doesn't she look sweet in this purple, Mame? The touch of pink and yellow around the neck just sets off her complexion. Oh, my, this isn't low neck—women wear blouses on the street nearly as low as this. By the way, Mame, bring me some of these new blouses—I want her to see them."

Only $10. "Isn't this dainty? And only $10. Perfect with your tailor suit! I'll put this with the purple chiffon and the Bulgarian dress. You would regret it to the last day of your life if you let such bargains slip! You can just take the blouse in here—and let it out a bit there—and it will be perfect!"

"Did you notice these hats? Aren't they dears? Marked down two-thirds, madam! I suppose that orange quill sticking up does seem odd to you, but our very best people are wearing them. Maybe you prefer this light blue canoe shape with the orange feathers in the back—doesn't that give her style, Mame?"

"Oh, you must have it! It is such a pleasure to get hold of a customer that fashionable things become as they do you! Now, if you will give me the hotel address—thank you! Ninety-one dollars and fifty cents! You certainly have some bargains! Good morning!"

"Catch me, Mame! I'm going to faint! What do you think of really selling all that junk? Come along—I'm going to strike Mme. Cerise for more pay!"

The Dowager Empress of Russia has always had a great idea of the decorative in regard to her personal attendants. When her husband, the late Czar, was on the throne, she had a bodyguard which made a brilliant pageant on great occasions. The only guard she now retains is the giant Cossack of 6 feet 4 inches in his stockings, who accompanies Her Majesty everywhere. On any official occasion he wears a magnificent white and gold uniform, and stands behind the Empress' chair when she is at the table.

The proceedings of the Marconi Committee are costing the English Government Stationery Department a good deal. The committee have been sitting for two solid months—putting all their days of work on end—and the talk to which they have listened fills 1,500 pages of closely-printed foolscap. In round figures, 30,000 questions have been asked and answered in at least a million and a half words.

How to Be Interesting

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

"I MET a girl about four months ago," writes Harry, "and since that time we have kept company and I love her very much and I think she loves me, too. We always spend our time together. Some time ago she told me that from the day we first became acquainted I have never told her anything that would interest her. We talk of incidents of the day, and I try to tell her of all I hear downtown. Will you please tell me what more I can tell to obtain her interest?"

Certainly, I will be glad to. I wish every young man in the world would come to me with a similar request. You told her of the fire next door; you recounted the accident an acquaintance had with his motor boat; you recalled incidents when you were in danger on the water; you asked her what she thought of the latest murder; you wondered if she thought as you do about a certain magazine; you told her every thing you could recall, from what the office boy said to the latest Congressional scandal, and she wasn't interested!

Of course not. She might be, if you began this tale of a day's events with a statement you have never made. She might be, if at any time in the months you have been keeping company with her you had ever made that statement.

And that is, "I love you!" Tell her that, and I am sure you will "obtain her interest." Tell her you love her, and I will vouch for it that you will find yourself talking to the most interested listener you ever had in your life, whether that life be long or short.

Tell her you love her, and while she hears she will not know there are others on the planet besides you two. Tell her that, and you are telling her something that will win her interest in you for the balance of your life.

If you were a woman, you would have known long ago why she has looked bored when you have speculated in forms or bugs make the best fishing bait. It was because she did not know that you had an interest in her greater than in your subject.

Tell her you love her, and thereafter, so long as you so conduct yourself that she believes it, your conversation will be as bright and scintillating as though it were made up of stars strung on moonbeams.

Tell her you love her, and prove it; and so long as love remains, the most commonplace remark you make will be received with an interest that will glorify it and give it rank (in her opinion) among the sayings of wit and wisdom that live forever.

And her opinion, my dear Harry, is the opinion of all the world to you if you love her.

PITCHER PRICE SENT HOME BY MANAGER SMITH

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 22.—Two things happened to Gilbert Price yesterday in this town. The Turtles got to him in the second inning of the ball game and hammered him fiercely to the bench. Then after the game, Manager Smith told the pitcher to pack his duds and get aboard a train for Atlanta.

The reason for the move is not known, but it must be a pretty sound one, or Billy Smith never would have dispensed with the services of one of his regular slammers with two tough series left to play after the Crackers are done with the Turtles.

JOE CONZELMAN went in after the game was hopelessly lost, as it turned out, and showed his usual class against the Turtles, stopping the scoring handily. He held them so close that had it not been for the air-tight work of Rube Kinsinger, who was having one of his good days, the Smithies might have overcome the handicap and won out even at that stage.

But Kinsinger was mighty good. At that, the boys were hitting the ball right on the nose, only luck would direct it straight at some Memphis fielder. That is all in the breaks, however, and some time, when the breaks are our way, the other pitcher is going to pay for all of it.

The Turtles are going fine just now and are playing the kind of scrappy baseball that earns a fair share of the breaks.

WALLY SMITH still is in the grasp of one of the worst hitting slumps he ever has had, and we are missing his long wallops greatly. When he starts hitting again—and he is bound to do that—he is going to help the club out a lot.

Dent and Dunn are scheduled to work in the game to-day.

BAN WILL NOT RECOGNIZE COMPLAINT OF F. CHANCE

CHICAGO, July 22.—No official action will be taken by the American League in connection with Frank Chance's complaint charging the Chicago Americans with misrepresenting the physical condition of Borton, for whom Chance traded Hal Chase. Ban Johnson so announced yesterday.

CRACKED THUMB WILL KEEP WOOD OUT SEVERAL WEEKS

BOSTON, July 22.—Joe Wood, star pitcher of the Boston Americans, will be out of the game for several weeks. Examination of his injured right thumb under the X-ray to-day showed that there was a crack in the end of the big bone, and the indications are now that a piece of the bone has been chipped off.

Unusual care is being taken in the treatment of the injury to guard against stiffness in the joint, which would put an end to Wood's career.

MADE 103 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYES AT 300 YARDS

WAKEFIELD, MASS., July 22.—All records for consecutive bull's-eyes at 300 yards were broken here in the ninth annual meeting of the New England Military Rifleman's Association when Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Bay State team, made 103 perfect shots.

The previous record for consecutive bull's-eyes at 300 yards was made by J. W. Hession, of New York, at Seagirt last year.

Atlanta Wins Leifeld Argument Herrmann and Murphy Disagree

By O. B. Keeler.

COMES now the august Augustus Herrmann, of the Supreme Court of baseball, and hands down an opinion in the Leifeld controversy, decidedly favorable to our Major Frank E. Callaway. By the same token, the same opinion may be construed as somewhat of a reproach to our amiable little friend C. Webb Murphy, of the Cubs.

The idea is dual. It is granted (1) that if Mr. Lefty Leifeld doesn't choose to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to argue the question with Mr. Leifeld, and (2) that if Mr. Leifeld isn't going to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to pay Mr. Murphy for Mr. Leifeld. Which does look fair enough. And, anyway, that's the view the Hon. Herrmann takes of the case in a letter to Mr. Murphy, a copy of which was received by Major Callaway yesterday.

Incidentally, the Hon. Herrmann's opinion is of considerable weight in balancing the little problems of baseball.

HERE is a chronological sketch of the incidents: Rather less than two weeks ago, Mr. Murphy and Major Callaway were dickering about Leifeld, who (Mr. Murphy fancied) would be just the cog to round out a pennant racing machine in this town.

Mr. Murphy also fancied Mr. Leifeld's value as a cog would be about $3,500. Major Callaway revised that estimate downward somewhat and made the Cub owner an offer, conditional upon Leifeld's willingness to play with Atlanta at a stipulated salary.

The was the rub. Mr. Murphy accepted the offer, "with all conditions," and wired that he had ordered Leifeld to report. Then he added a message that an explanatory letter was on the way. The explanatory letter explained that Mr. Leifeld was talking; had balked, in fact, all the way to St. Louis, where he lived and where he proposed to remain.

In fine, it appeared that if Mr. Leifeld was to play in the Southern League, that institution would have to be moved over to St. Louis. Mr. Murphy suggested that Major Callaway write to the Missouri Balkan and try to reason with him.

ENTRIES AT TERRE HAUTE. TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 22.—Harness racing began here to-day with a field of good horses. The number of entries is unexpectedly large. In a number of events the purses are $1,000. Many of the 3-year-olds entered in this year's entries will make their first start at this meeting.

WOOD, HUNTER AND PHELPS LOW IN WESTERN TOURNEY FLORESMOOR CLUB, CHICAGO, July 22.—Three local players tied 18 holes in the eliminatory round of the fourteenth annual championship of the Western Golf Association this morning.

Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; Paul Hunter, of Midlothian, and Mason Phelps, another Midlothian player, were the players who led the 124 starters this morning. Warren Wood, as well as Paul Hunter, made the first nine in 37 and the last nine in 40, while Phelps negotiated the first nine holes in 39 strokes and the last nine in 38.

Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder, had the next best score, with a 78. He took 40 strokes for the first nine holes and 38 for the last half.

OMAHA RELEASES ARBOGAST. OMAHA, NEBR., July 22.—President W. R. Rourke, of the Omaha Western League club, has announced the release of Charles Arbogast, who has been manager of the Omaha team for the last two seasons. Rourke will manage the team himself. Arbogast goes to the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League.

JORDAN AGAIN TAKES LEAD IN VOTE CONTEST

Valdosta Manager Passes Manchester In Hot Popularity Race; Murphy Is Third.

OTTO JORDAN, the Valdosta manager, is again leading the Hearst Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian's contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League. After holding either second or third place for about a week, Jordan received a large bunch of votes yesterday and is now topping Dick Manchester, of Brunswick, by a few votes.

The spurt made by Jordan has brought glee to his many admirers. For a time it seemed as if Otto was doomed to drop in the contest, as both Murphy and Manchester were setting a terrific pace for the leadership.

Jordan Fans Hit Stride. Apparently the Jordan fans have hit their stride once more and his opponents will have to hustle to catch him. The race between Jordan, Manchester, Murphy and Holliday is a dandy and without a doubt the closest ever staged in any league.

Holliday has taken a slump lately and unless he takes a spurt he may be left at the post by his three rivals.

H. Champlin, of Thomasville, is now coming to the front rapidly and the Baseball Popularity Editor is looking for him to oust one of the "Big Four" before the week is over. He is right now on the heels of Holliday.

Others In Race. Baby Wilder, Muttis Gray, W. Walker, Dudley, H. Griffin and Frank are other Empire State League favorites who should be heard of before the contest is over.

If you are a real fan and want to help The Hearst Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian discover who is the most popular player in the Empire State League, the chance is yours.

Get Busy. Every day a coupon appears in this paper. Just clip them out, fill them in, and mail them to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga.

INTERSTATE BALL LEAGUE GOES TO SMASH AGAIN

ERIE, PA., July 22.—The reorganized Interstate League season came to an unexpected ending here, with the Erie team a second pennant winner, finishing the abbreviated schedule with a percentage of 1.000. The four-club circuit, composed of Youngstown, Akron, Wheeling and Erie, proved a losing proposition.

TORONTO GETS ALMEIDA; NASHVILLE WANTED HIM PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Almeida, the Cuban player who has been with the Cincinnati National League club for some time, has been released to the Toronto team of the International League.

Nashville, of the Southern League, was also after the Cuban.

J. STAHL.

Lives of managers remind us That we must stay on the job. Counting on the work behind us Means a swift slam on the knob.

THE BROWNS' PROTEST OF a recent game with the Yankees reminds us of the controversy over the "white heavyweight championship."

THE DEBUT OR MR. ARTHUR Pelky on the vaudeville stage ought to suggest something to young Mr. Mahoney, of Europe. "The Only Man Bombardier Wells Can Lick" would pack the house.

"THERE ISN'T ANYTHING I can do about it," says Ban Johnson, regarding the Stahl matter, as he speeds across Ohio. Which shows the difference between a man's conversation on Broadway at night and in the dairy farm country the next morning.

THE FURTHER WE GO INTO it the more the "ethics" of organized baseball resemble the code of the police graft ring. Mr. Comiskey says of the recent gold-bricking of the New York club in the Chase deal that "they ought to take their medicine gracefully." In other words, no matter what is handed to you, don't squeal, for the good of the game.

THIS GIVES RISE TO THE question as to whether Horace Fogel was kicked out of big league baseball for saying the umpiring was crooked when it wasn't or for making public the fact that it was.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON CABLES that "negotiations" ament his challenge for the America's Cup are still proceeding. As negotiators, the New York Yacht Club numbers the best yachtmen in the world.

"I EXPECT THE ATHLETICS to win barely half of the remaining games," says Clark Griffith, of the Senators. A modest little expectation and one certain of complete realization.

JOE RIVERS SAYS THAT HE is going to post $5,000 as a forfeit and offer a side bet for a return match with Champion Ritchie, but still stipulate that the weight must be 133 pounds at the ringside. This is an excellent way of showing that he is not afraid of Ritchie and at the same time cutting off any possibility of a fight with him.

"I INSIST THAT I DID NOT resign. I was fired," declares Jake Stahl. All right—but why boast about it?

MR. EBBETS WAS NOT TALKING loosely when he said that the high cost of baseball was increasing. If he has many more "openings" and "deductions" we should think it would be well-nigh prohibitive.

BILLY GIBSON THINKS THAT Cross-Ritchie would draw $25,000 in New York, and he says that he is certain Ritchie will box for him because they are old friends. It only shows what sacrifices even a champion is compelled to make in the name of friendship.

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is ready to don the padded mitts again. Britt is particularly anxious to get on with either Charlie Lee or Kid Young.

Eddie Hanlon, who recently defeated Terry Nelson, is anxious to get on with some other boy of his weight. A match between Hanlon and Mike Saul ought to prove a corker.

Charlie White, pound for pound the greatest little battler in this country, will probably be seen in action on the coast some time this fall. Tom McCarey has been thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Wogast-Dundee bout, scheduled to take place at Los Angeles next month.

Marcel Thomas, French welterweight, and Mike Glover will clash in a ten-round set at Boston on Tuesday night. Glover has made a good impression among the "Beantown" fans, where he has won his last five fights.

Tommy Buck, of Philadelphia, and Patsy Kline, the Newark featherweight, have been matched to box ten rounds at New York on August 1. They have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Cal Delaney, sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, has signed articles to box Kid Julien in a twelve-round fight Saturday night. Both boys are featherweights.

Bob McAllister has finally decided to give a crack at the twenty-round game. The Western midweight has agreed to take on Ed Petroskey before Jim Coffroth's club at Frisco some time next month.

Jake Abel has departed for his home in Chattanooga. He left Jake stated that Charlie White was without a doubt the heaviest puncher he has ever met. Yes, several other boys hold the same opinion as Abel. For reference apply to Joe Thomas.

Although Charlie Lee was given the verdict over Kid Young on a foul last week, there are many of the opinion that Young can take the measure of the tall featherweight if he would only get into condition. Young has promised to train as he never has before if given another chance at his conqueror.

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, is still keeping his press agent busy trying to force Willie Ritchie into a match. Ritchie is one boxer who is entitled to a chance at the title.

Carl Morris, the Sapulpa heavyweight, is to battle Al Benedict, of Hoboken, N. J., in a 15-round encounter at Joplin, Mo., Friday night.

Let us forget, Meyer Pries wishes us to announce that he is still alive. Meyer is yearning for a return engagement with Spider Britt. Pries is certainly one game youngster.

"ZEIDER SICK, IS BETTER THAN CHASE."—CHANCE

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Frank Chance, manager of the Yankees, in speaking of the Zeider-Chase deal, slips the following knock to Chase. "We're perfectly satisfied with this deal. I wouldn't give Zeider when right for three Chases. I think he's a better man than Chase at his best. And Zeider in a hospital or of more value to the New York club than Hal Chase would be to-day."

There's no chance in the world for us to ask that the trade by which we gave Chase for Zeider and Borton be canceled. We don't want the deal canceled, but we are asking that the Chicago club be required to pay the salary of Zeider and to pay his doctor's bills until such time as he is able to play."

COTTON GOSPI

New Crops Heavily Sold on Propitious Weather and Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 4 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December lost 5 points. During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull but steady. Following are the closing quotations: New York: July, 12.20; August, 12.06; October, 11.64; January, 11.47. Estimated cotton receipts, Wednesday, 1912: New Orleans, 900 to 1,300 bbls.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—The weather map presents very favorable conditions; cooler over the entire belt, with a splendid rainfall in the Eastern States, particularly in Georgia, South Carolina and parts of Alabama. In the States, particularly in the Central and Western States, while in the Atlantic area to-day the tendency will be for clearing weather. Liverpool was due 5 points higher, but failed to advance; spots were unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales, including 5,000 American bales. Private advices from Paris, Texas, report good rains in that section. Baltimore, Texas, also reported rain, and at Ardmore, Okla., over one inch July 20. This market opened lower on the favorable weather report, but later, under pressure to sell, owing to anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report at a m. and a disposition to advance the market reflected by New York quotations.

COTTON GOSPI

New Crops Heavily Sold on Propitious Weather and Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 4 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December lost 5 points. During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull but steady. Following are the closing quotations: New York: July, 12.20; August, 12.06; October, 11.64; January, 11.47. Estimated cotton receipts, Wednesday, 1912: New Orleans, 900 to 1,300 bbls.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—The weather map presents very favorable conditions; cooler over the entire belt, with a splendid rainfall in the Eastern States, particularly in Georgia, South Carolina and parts of Alabama. In the States, particularly in the Central and Western States, while in the Atlantic area to-day the tendency will be for clearing weather. Liverpool was due 5 points higher, but failed to advance; spots were unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales, including 5,000 American bales. Private advices from Paris, Texas, report good rains in that section. Baltimore, Texas, also reported rain, and at Ardmore, Okla., over one inch July 20. This market opened lower on the favorable weather report, but later, under pressure to sell, owing to anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report at a m. and a disposition to advance the market reflected by New York quotations.

The Beginning of Marriage

Haphazard Reflections on Grave Topics

(Copyright, 1913.)

At stated times we mortals have stated visitations. One day it is the gripe, next day the financial problem. Then it is the marriage and divorce question, with much learned expounding by the good and the pure, such as bishops and members of Sorosis.

What is marriage? How did it begin? Whence does it come?

Why is it a feature of human life wherever that life is found?

You must begin with such questions. Always study beginnings. Nothing can be learned by taking hold of a thing in the middle and examining its imperfections.

The first priest to join man and woman together was no benign being with lawn sleeves and soul-stirring words.

Marriage was brought about on this earth by the will and wisdom of God Almighty working through primitive babyhood.

In the old days, when the world was cruder, men and women ran wild through forests and swamps. They fought nature, fought each other, as savage as other beasts around them. There was no love; there was no marriage. The instincts of self-preservation and of reproduction worked alone to keep the race here through its hard childhood.

But in cold stone caves or in rough nests under fallen tree trunks savage children were born and nursed by their savage mothers with savage affection.

Through those infants of the stone age, or of ages much earlier, marriage and pure affection came into the world.

It is not hard to reproduce in our minds the picture of the first marriage.

A savage woman, half human, half ape, with rough, matted locks hanging round her face, sits holding her new-born baby, protecting it from wind and cold.

It is a queer baby, covered perhaps with reddish hair, its brow no higher than a rat's. Its jaw protrudes; its tiny, grimy hands clutch with monkey power all things within reach.

Along comes the father, full of plans to kill a mammoth or a cave bear; interested in his stone-tipped club, but caring nothing for the mother, who has been for some time only a whining nuisance.

He stops for a second to look at the small creature which he has added to earth's animal life.

Its misshapen skull, ferret eyes, miniature shoulders—something about it reminds him of his royal self, as studied in the pool. He stoops to look closer. His bristly hairs are grabbed, and a weird, insane, toothless grin lights up the little monkey face.

Then the savage takes a new view of life; there the marriage institution and the marriage problem are born simultaneously.

Says the mammoth hunter, with whistling words and hoarse throat sounds half articulated:

"I like this baby. He's like me. Let me hold him. Don't you go out with him looking for food, and don't leave him alone while I'm gone. I've got a bear located. No one can beat me killing bears. I'll bring the bear's heart to you this evening. You can give this baby some of the blood. It will do him good. Don't have anything to say to that mammoth hunter in the next swamp. I want you to stick to me. I'll look after you. I have taken a fancy to that baby. He looks very much like me."

Off goes the father, and that savage mother, in a primitive way, is a wife. Hereafter she is to be cared for. Bears will be killed for her, even while she has children to keep her busy and unattractive. Society takes a new turn and the red-haired baby has done it.

To childhood, helpless and beautiful, we owe marriage and all that growth of morality which is gradually making us really civilized.

The basis of all real growth is altruism; and altruism, the inclination to think more of others than of yourself, came into the world through the cradle.

The influence of childhood has transformed mere animal attraction into unselfish affection. It has substituted family life for savage life. The interests of childhood demand that marriage and its responsibilities be held sacred.

Duty to future generations demands that divorce be made difficult and considered a misfortune.

Marriage, brought into the world through the influence of children, should be dissolved only with due regard for the interests of children.

An unhappy marriage is earth's worst affliction. Quite true. But it is not affliction wasted.

Examples are needed to warn the young against the matrimonial recklessness which underlies most unhappy marriages.

Unhappy wives and husbands are human lighthouses—lonely, but useful.

A man who marries a woman undertakes to make her happy and keep her busy. If he keeps his contract, she will keep hers.

If he fails, he has no right to experiment on another unfortunate. The divorce class is a self-indulgent, malformed class, not worth notice.

As a matter of fact, there really is no marriage or divorce problem which sensible beings need consider.

At present men are not good enough to be trusted with liberal marriage or divorce laws. When they are good enough the laws will not be wanted. For the man fully developed and fully moral will know what he is doing when he goes into a marriage contract. His stability of character will insure permanency. There will be no need of laws.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes On Women Smokers

Smoking Is Serious Drawback to Equal Franchise, and in Addition Is One of the Greatest Beauty Destroyers Women Contend With.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

IT is unfortunate for the great and good cause of equal franchise that women are growing into ungraceful and unhygienic habits in the world we call civilized.

Smoking women are everywhere evident; and the habit once indulged in occasionally by the few daring ones is now indulged openly and almost constantly in European lands; and, of course, American women are following suit, as is their custom toward older countries.

A middle-aged woman or an old woman smoking in a public place is a sight to make angels weep and men sigh over the memory of their mothers.

The young girls who smoke in public or anywhere else ought to make men pause and hesitate before thinking of asking these young women to perpetuate their species.

And to perpetuate the species and bring normal, healthy and moral men and women into the world is the real business of every young woman, however we may regard other occupations for her, and however wide we are trying to make her sphere of usefulness.

Nerves and Nicotine.

Field Marshal Lord Methuen has now come to the front in an open denunciation of the smoking woman.

He declares woman has "not man's sense of proportion" and does not know when to stop. But he also believes the smoking habit, especially the cigarette habit, a serious detriment to men. Lord Methuen says:

"A man is constitutionally stronger than a woman, and his nerves will stand the strain of nicotine much better than hers will."

"Then, again, the throat, chest and lungs, which are some of the principal organs affected by excessive cigarette smoking, are more susceptible in the female sex, and consequently irritation is set up the more quickly."

"But I think it is the eyes which are most affected by the habit. After excessive indulgence, these organs generally become weak-looking and uncertain, and often assume a watery appearance."

"Another symptom of the habitual cigarette smoker is a nasty, troublesome cough, particularly in the morning, which arises from the irritation caused by the nicotine to the throat and chest. This is more often the case with the person who inhales the smoke—a habit which, I am sorry to say, is pretty general among cigarette smokers."

"I think you will agree that these ailments do not add to the attractiveness or the charm of the gentle sex; but then, in addition, you have to consider the deleterious effect cigarette smoking has upon the heart and the nerves."

"The cigarette habit among ladies is deplored by all doctors, but particularly in regard to the younger members of the sex."

"At middle age the effects are not so much pronounced, or, perhaps, not so noticeable, but in the case of a young girl her development is undoubtedly impeded, and this must have a detrimental effect upon the future of the race."

It is gratifying to lovers of the human race to have a man of brain and position take this stand toward the smoking habit, especially an Englishman, for it is English women of prominence who have made the unwholesome custom fashionable.

There are a million more women than men in England, and perhaps the habit first originated in woman's desire for man's society, and in her loneliness she found even the smell of his cigar smoke solace.

There was once a romantic girl living in a retired country place who asked her lover to smoke into a bottle that she might let the smoke escape some lonely evening during his absence and imagine him present.

Present Smoking Craze.

However the present smoking craze originated, it is most unfortunate. It is bad enough for posterity to have the vices of the fathers to combat, but what hope can the world have of a higher humanity when both parents have vitiated their blood and destroyed their nervous systems by nicotine?

A young woman on one of the large ocean liners was seen always with a cigarette between her lips. She remarked to some fellow passengers that she had taken the cure once at a sanatorium, but that the habit was too strong to overcome. Many women who are subject to nervous breakdowns and who are sent to "rest cures" and sanitariums to recover from "overwork" or "overpleasuring" are really suffering from nicotine poisoning, were the truth known.

It seems appalling that such a condition of society should exist; appalling that smoking among women has attained such a hold upon the community that men like Lord Methuen are alarmed.

But it is well that one such man has raised his voice in protest. The craze for smoking started with the English women, and it is befitting that Englishmen should make some effort at mitigating the evil.

For evil it is, and one which menaces the generations to come. If woman is to have the franchise, and use it to better the world, let her not emulate the vices of men to prove her worth and ability.

And let her value her beauty and health and attractiveness enough to enable her to give up the disgusting cigarette habit.

Let us hope Lord Methuen is a prophet when he says:

Should Give Up Smoking.

"I do not think the time is far distant when there will be as strong a crusade against smoking to excess as there has been against drinking to excess."

"I believe it will be the doctors who will lead the crusade against excessive smoking."

"They will tell a person plainly that it is ruinous to his nerves to smoke cigarettes, as some people do, from the age of 10 years onward."

Positions Wanted

By THOMAS TAPPER.

ABOUT this time, as the almanac used to say, there will be lots of young men looking for jobs.

They are graduates. Everybody loves to give a graduate advice, to tell him how and what to do that he may succeed.

The reason why people do this is not that they love to preach. It is because, having grown older, they have discovered what a precious thing it is to be YOUNG, what an amazing opportunity there is for anyone who is about to go to work with the STRENGTH AND FAITH OF YOUTH in the right hand.

The business world is a place of keen competition. To look at it from the outside makes one think that the effort to walk in, find a chance and make good is impossible.

But it can be done.

Once landed on the job, the graduate will probably be too busy to remember the advice he has received. This will do him no serious harm if he becomes a discoverer.

He must discover these facts: 1. Success never comes by parcel post. It is the blossom on the slow-growing plant which starts as a seed and is watched, watered and nursed for about half a century.

2. To stand up to the swiftness of the business game demands a clear mind, a clean body, an active imagination, the capacity for silent observation and a spirit of good nature that takes a blow the way a punching bag does.

3. At ten dollars a week these five qualities are being financed at two dollars each. The rate is low. But this standard of value is not fixed. It can be run up to any figure one likes.

4. There are no rules of success that apply equally in all cases. But no man ever lived who could get along, who could succeed in his own way, without the Great Five we have named.

5. But there are absolutely definite rules for failure. And the basis of them is an unclear mind, a body thrown out of tune by dissipation, affection bestowed upon a couple of bad habits, the inclination to tell shady stories and a tendency of dodging the truth.

These and their kind will put a young man on the scrap heap and keep him there.

And a scrap heap is a most uncomfortable substitute for a mattress.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Force of Gravitation Controls Cannon Balls, Baseballs, Moons, Planets, Suns and Stars Without Visible Means of Connection.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE mystery of mysteries in science is the attraction of gravitation—that very force of nature that is the most familiar to us all!

It seems strange that the most familiar thing in the world should be, at the same time, the most inexplicable—but so it is.

In order to see clearly wherein the mystery consists, let us first consider what gravitation appears to be. It is gravitation that gives the property of weight to all bodies. If there were no gravitation, we could float like thistle-downs, and infinitely better than thistle-downs; for they, too, are finally brought down by gravitation.

It is gravitation that brings a cannon ball eventually to the earth, no matter how swiftly it may be projected. The faster it starts the farther it will go, but during every second of its flight it drops the same distance vertically toward the earth, whether the speed imparted to it by the powder is 500 or 3,000 feet per second. Gravitation acts on a moving body exactly as well as on one at rest.

It is gravitation that curbs the motion of the moon and keeps it in an orbit of which the earth is the active focus.

Governs Earth's Motion.

So, too, it is gravitation that governs the earth in its motion around the sun, preventing it from flying away into boundless space. Astronomy shows that gravitation acts between all the planets and all the stars and controls their motions with respect to one another.

Now, this mysterious force appears to be an attraction, as if there were elastic cords connecting all the bodies in space and tending to draw them together. But space, as far as our senses can detect, is empty. There are no elastic cords and no physical connections whatever between astronomical bodies, or between a flying stone, or cannon ball, and the earth. How, then, can there be an attraction? In order that a body may be attracted or drawn, there must be something to draw it. Gravitation does the trick, but completely hides from us the mechanism through which it acts. We can discover no mechanism at all.

When an unfortunate aeroplane drops from his machine at a height of a thousand feet, he begins at once to fall toward the earth as if it were pulling him; but how can it pull if it has nothing to pull with? You may think at first sight that it is the air which acts as an intermediary; but that is not so, because the earth and the moon "pull" upon one another with a force equal to the strength of a steel cable five hundred miles in diameter; but there is no air, and no other tangible thing in the open space 240,000 miles across, that gap between the moon and the earth.

Then gravitation exerts the same force at every instant. No matter how fast the falling astronaut may be descending at any moment, gravitation will keep on adding speed as if he had just started. Disregarding the slight retardation produced by the resistance of the air, he will fall 16 feet in the first second, 48 feet in the second second, 80 feet in the third second, gaining 32 feet in his velocity during every second after the first.

Falls 10,000 Feet in 25 Seconds.

From a height of 1,000 feet he will come down in about eight seconds, and will strike the ground with a velocity of about 256 feet per second. From a height of 10,000 feet he would fall in about 25 seconds, and would strike with a velocity of 400 feet per second.

The same kind of calculation can be applied to the gravitation between the earth and the moon. If the moon were not in motion against the direction of the earth's "pull" it would fall to the earth in about 116 hours.

Now, to return to the mystery, how is this force exerted? Is it really a pull as it seems to be? The answer to which science is tending is that instead of being a pull, gravitation is a push; in other words that the falling astronaut is pushed toward the ground and the moon is pushed toward the earth.

On the face of it one might think that nothing was gained by this theory, because it seems as impossible that a push should be exerted without a tangible connection as a pull. But the clue is found in the supposed properties of that invisible, intangible, all-pervading medium called the ether.

Waves of Ether.

This, to be sure, is explaining one mystery by another, for we know nothing about the ether except that it conveys the waves of light and electricity, but, at any rate, it affords a conceivable explanation of gravitation. I have no space to go into this explanation, which has recently been developed by Dr. Charles F. Brush, but in idea of its nature may be formed from the statement that it regards the ether as being filled with a peculiar form of waves, and that material bodies may intercept these waves in such a way as to be pushed toward one another on account of the diminished effect of the ether waves in the space between the bodies.

A Basket of Figs

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was 266 years ago, in the city of Naples, that a basket of figs created a revolution which resulted in the death of 500 men, many of them members of the ancient nobility; the burning of scores of villas and palaces, and the elevation to power of a peasant whose entire possessions would not have brought the price of a decent suit of clothes.

The owner of the basket of figs was asked to pay the royal tax upon the fruit; he refused to do so, and emptied his basket upon the street. Closed by stood Masaniello, the fisherman, young, handsome, brave and "chock full" of the old eternal sense of justice and right. Poor and humble as he was, Masaniello possessed a commanding personality, the "gift imperial" of magnifying men, and outraged by the injustice he had witnessed he sounded the call of arms.

Arming themselves, the populace, with Masaniello at their head, drove out the Spanish Viceroy, liberated the prisoners of the customs, burnt the houses of the King's creatures, destroyed the offices of the tax collectors, and made short work of ridding the city of the tyrannical nobility and their henchmen.

In a trice Masaniello was master of Naples. The Viceroy was forced to remove the hated taxes, and in his rude shanty home the barefooted fisherman, in rude, democratic fashion, but with an eye single to justice and humanity, disposed of the petitions and complaints that were handed to him.

But Nature is inexorable, and in establishing her balances she is worse than a thousand Shylocks. For an entire week the entire care of a city of hundreds of thousands of inhabitants had fallen upon Masaniello. He was general, judge, legislator, and for the whole time he had hardly slept or eaten. The combined physical and mental strain was more than he could bear, and the fisherman's brain began to reel. He became a maniac and did all sorts of violent things; and instead of loving him and caring for him until he regained his sanity, the fools killed and buried him like a dog. But despite this the name of Masaniello will live forever in the memory of the lovers of liberty and justice.
