HUFF FOUND IN CONTEMPT CASE

Judge Grubb Rules Against the Former Major in the Spear Controversy.

Colonel W. A. Huff, former mayor of Macon, has been found guilty of contempt of court for writing certain pointed letters to Judge Emory Spear in the famous Macon controversy. In the letters Colonel Huff expressed unfavorable opinion of the way Judge Spear had conducted the bankruptcy case in which Colonel Huff was interested.

Following receipt of the letters, Judge Spear filed charges, and Judge W. L. Grubb announced a decision today, holding Colonel Huff in contempt of court. Colonel Huff will take the case to a higher court.

Colonel Huff was formerly mayor of Macon. He is 53 years old. At his home in Macon this morning, after receiving notice from his lawyer, Attorney General T. B. Felder, that he had been found guilty of contempt, Colonel Huff made the following statement:

"I was what I expected, at the time I wrote Judge Spear those letters last summer I had a vague notion that perhaps I was committing contempt of court. However, I was not as familiar with the law on contempt as I am now. I wrote the letters simply and solely to let Judge Spear know what I thought about him and about the way he handled the bankruptcy case. He knows and the public know, and on that score I am satisfied. There was never any intention on my part to attack the judiciary. I was aiming exclusively at Judge Spear. But if another court, which I consider an absolutely fair and impartial tribunal, holds that I am guilty, then that settles it. I shall take whatever punishment is meted out to me without a murmur."

Judge Grubb will be in Atlanta tomorrow for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Felder in regard to passing the order of sentence.

CONLEY BEGS CHIEF TO LET HIM REPEAT STORY BEFORE FRANK

Negro Declares He Could Make Accused Slayer of Mary Phagan Tell All—Meeting Between Two Depends Upon Advice of Attorney.

James Conley, accused of Leo Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan, made a personal request of Chief of Detectives Lanford Monday morning to be taken to confront the factory superintendent.

"I think I could make him tell everything if I could just get there to his cell and tell my story again," said the Negro. Conley repeatedly urged upon Chief Lanford that he be allowed to face Frank. He declared he thought his presence would break Frank down.

The chief regarded Conley as sincere in his request, but said that he would make no further effort to bring the Negro and the factory superintendent together. All rested in the hands of Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, Lanford announced.

"I have made several attempts to take Conley to Frank's cell since the Negro began making his disclosures," explained Chief Lanford. "All efforts have been unavailing. Frank stands patly has refused to talk with the detectives or with anyone whom the detectives may bring to see him. At times I have arranged for a meeting of this sort, but the detective department has given it up."

Stop the Hold-Up Shipowners

If the Titanic Had Been Provided With Boats and Men to Handle Them There Would Have Been No Loss of Life

The last Congress, taking counsel of the shipowners' fears, spoiled the Democratic seamen's bill passed by the House. As it came from the sub-committee of the Senate it was calculated to strip from the traveler and shipper the last remaining liability yet resting upon the owners of vessels.

Congress should meet the issue fairly by enacting the bill which passed the House. The one fact clearly established in the loss of the City of Rio de Janeiro, General Bloom, Titanic and several others was that the vessels were undermined both as to numbers and skill.

Congress should remember that the sea is as dangerous this year as it was last; that we may at any time be compelled to contemplate another Titanic disaster, and that we are no more prepared and therefore more guilty than last year.

Let the obstruction cease. Let the bill pass. We owe it to the dead who bravely went to their end; we owe it to the living who go down to the sea, be it as passengers or as seamen. There can be no safety at sea unless the vessels are properly manned, and shipowners will not furnish efficient men unless compelled by law.

A Breath of Clean Air From Alaska

The Proper Season--Bah!!

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Writes on Daughter's Social Pleasures Investigate, She Says, as It Is Unwise to Take Too Much for Granted

Do you know all about your daughter's friends? About their social pleasures? Your daughter may be attending school, or she may be employed in an office, or in a factory, and she may tell you some morning that she will stay all night with one of her girl friends.

Do you investigate the matter and know just who this girl friend may be? Do you take sufficient interest to find out what the entertainment was which these girls attended, and just where they went after the moving picture or the vaudeville show was over?

The working girls are particularly in danger, but school girls in good homes are not exempt from these dangers. In one of our lesser American cities a certain high school was obliged to close its doors last year because of the well-founded scandals which were circulated concerning the pupils.

A large percentage of these young girls had become corrupted by associating with one immoral young woman who had led them into vicious paths, unknown to the parents.

When the unsuspecting fathers and mothers were told by their wives that their girls were going to attend a party at the home of one of the pupils, the former made no attempt to learn the nature of the party, or to know more of the hostess, than that she was a friend of their daughters.

Did not they ask afterward for particulars they are and, as a result, the entertainment until it was too late. The most important duty of the mother is to be on hand with her children and to know all about their pleasures and all about their friends, and to guide them over the dangerous paths of youth by the light of love and knowledge.

Husband Who Forgets Wife for Baseball

By WINIFRED BLAOK. Use tobacco at all, and I don't seem to mind it a bit. "Ah," said the other woman, "but you don't belong to the stronger sex"--and then I laughed--I really had to, for not one of the women there had a single "queer." But observe the male of the species, sisters, he's younger than you, he's more generous than you, and he's happier than you--a whole lot, taken by and large; so if that's what his "habits" and "fads" do for him, why, I for one am glad he has them.

You aren't responsible for husband's follies--you are responsible for your own. No one is going to call you to account if husband loses his job because he's adding scores when he ought to be keeping books. You'll have to stand the misery of poverty with him, though. Of course, that's what you said when you married him, "for better or worse," don't you remember, "for richer or poorer?"

How beautiful it all sounded to you then. You didn't stop the preacher to cry out, "If it isn't his fault, it's his own fault when he's poor." You'd have died to even think of such a thing. Why do you think of it now?

Stop worrying, take a leaf out of his book; I'll warrant he looks ten years younger than you do right now--just for that--get up a fad of your own--something harmless and beautiful. You want him to be a man--well, then, you be a woman; that may attract his attention for a minute--and that sometimes helps--a little.

Washington's Inauguration

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY. THE United States Government is 124 years old. On April 30, 1888, at Federal Hall, George Washington was duly inaugurated first President of the United States, and the great experiment of self-government in these Western shores was begun.

The beginning was most auspicious. Than Washington no finer man ever stood at the forefront of a nation's life. Of Washington America is justly proud, and of Washington America has the right to be proud, for the "Father of His Country" was, in every sense of the word, a whole man. Time has somewhat disturbed the halo that for a long while held the place about the great man's head. It has been proven that Washington was human, and all the more thank for that. But after the closest scrutiny, from every part of the world, for a century and a quarter, it is still to be proven that anything mean, or mercenary, or dishonorable, or unprincipled ever came near the head or heart of our first President.

Washington loved his country with a whole heart. He was a patriot to the core. His highest and only ambition was to do what he could to promote the high ends to which the Republic was dedi-

NEAR DEATH, CONFESSES TO SLAYING GOVERNOR

MISSOULA, MONT., June 1.—That he assassinated General Thomas Francis Meagher, former Governor of Montana Territory, soldier, author, orator and statesman, whose death has always remained one of the mysteries of Montana's early history, was the astounding confession of Pat Hillier, alias Frank Diamond, made on what he believed was his deathbed at Plains, Mont., 60 miles west of here. The self-styled assassin declared that he got $2,000 for the murder and that the Vigilantes, Montana's famous volunteer law-enforcing organization, were anxious "to get rid of Meagher."

For nearly 50 years the body of General Meagher has lain in the Missouri River, and despite the general belief that he stepped off a boat near Fort Benton, in the darkness of the night, there have ever since been death-keen rumors of foul play. Confesses Three Murders. Diamond's confession was made in the presence of three citizens of Plains, Jack Thompson, Dr. Coles and Frank Hammock and was kept secret until he was expected the man would die within a few hours. Later he showed signs of improvement and the witnesses to the confession, fearing that he would not hesitate to kill them, had him brought here. The confession is as follows:

I killed Francis Meagher near Cow Island on the Missouri River. Governor Meagher was with me and the Vigilantes had to get rid of him and Alex Potter gave me a pistol and I shot him in the river and swim ashore. I also killed George H. Ruggles in 1883 and threw him in the Willamette River. I also killed Bill Clark near The Dalles, Oregon in about 74; shot him.

Bill News George was hanged in '52. I should have been hanged instead for the crime, but George was a murdering scoundrel and deserved to be hanged. Thomas Irwin is the only man that knows me, and he is a rancher and lives near Parma.

FRANK DIAMOND, 45 years of age, is well known throughout Western Montana and has worked intermittently in the woods and at odd jobs around Missoula.

He told some of his details. "Talking to some friends after he signed the confession, he said he shot the former Governor first and then threw the body in the river. Supplies for the former Governor were made in a detailed statement of the alleged crime, and judging from the minutiae of the crime and his vivid recollection of dates, places and incidents, his auditors are convinced that he is telling the truth.

Girl Shot in Her Own Home Accuses Wealthy Clubman

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 1.—Accused of shooting a young woman under mysterious circumstances, Fred B. Kolb, a wealthy young clubman, is under arrest here to-day. The girl is Miss Irene Nobel, 22 years old. The girl was found by her brother lying on the floor in her home. Kolb was at the telephone summoning a physician.

SUE OF CONLEY PUT TO END BY GEORGIAN

That The Georgian played a conspicuous part in obtaining the latest and most important confession from Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, which he admitted his complicity in the crime, was the declaration of Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford. Chief Lanford, in telling of the cross-examination of Conley on Thursday afternoon which resulted in his confession, said that Conley for a long time persisted in maintaining that he knew no more of the crime than that which he had related previously.

All Questions Filled. "All lines of questions had been tried without avail," said the detective chief, in relating the incident. "We had put Conley through a rigid third degree, and still he declared that he knew nothing more of the crime. It seemed that all the cards the detective force had so carefully and painstakingly built up were about to be shattered."

After several hours of futile questioning the chief showed him a copy of The Georgian, quoting officials of the pencil factory to the effect that they believed Conley the guilty man. It was then that Conley made his startling admission of guilt.

Georgia's Story Breaks Him. "Struggling into an adjoining room, I secured a copy of The Georgian containing the interview. Carrying it to the factory, I showed it to a small group of detectives had been for several hours interrogating the man without result. He was being taken to Conley, remarking: 'You can read this, Jim,' and see what the people are thinking of you now.'

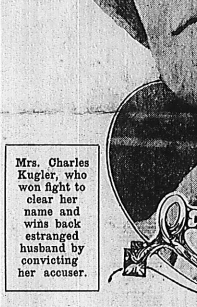

He looked up with the most worried expression on his face. He had signed since his arrest, 'Boss,' he said, 'some people are short bound to hang me if I don't tell the truth, and I ain't going to lie to you no longer.' And the confession as contained in this list follows:

SPENDS DAY WITH DORSEY STUDYING HUGE DIAGRAM OF SCENE OF THE CRIME

Important Developments Looked For, but Nothing Sensational Made Public--Insists He Has Told All, but Further Confession Is Expected.

For hours to-day James Conley, negro sweeper, whose sensational confession explained Superintendent Leo M. Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan, explained in detail to Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey the dread mysteries of the National Pencil Factory on April 26, explaining many things that had not been clear to the officials, but sticking tenaciously to the story he told the city detectives.

Conley was taken to the Solicitor's office at that official's request and put through a severe cross-examination. With an elaborate diagram, drawn for the Solicitor by Bert Green, a Georgian staff artist, to guide him, the negro traced the various scenes in the factory after the slaying of the girl.

He told just where he first claims to have found her and how he and the superintendent were called to dispose of the body. The drama he enacted in the factory Friday for the Solicitor was so convincing that the Solicitor in the little room at the county house with the artist's chart as a stage and his finger as the tracer of tragedy.

Dorsey Well Satisfied. The Solicitor was well satisfied with the results obtained in the secret conference behind closed doors and certain points that had been vague to him before were made clear. At Conley's own request, through William Smith, his counsel, the negro was transferred to the police station. The negro had been so berated by questioners at the county house that he had been nearly driven to the shelter of police headquarters, where he had been closely guarded and where no one but policemen had been allowed to interrogate him.

Conley intimated that he had been threatened at the jail, but little credence was put in his ramblings. It was plain that he wanted rest. He had told his story so often each time it may be noted, in almost the same words that he was tired. The police agreed that he had answered enough questions from outsiders and he was moved.

Police Urge New Test. A determined effort is being made by the police department to bring Frank face to face with his accuser. The detectives wish to learn how Conley will go through the ordeal of confronting the man he accuses of directing the disposal of the body of Mary Phagan, and dictating the notes that were found by her body.

They desire also to give Frank an opportunity to deny the negro's story as he is repeating it. Frank's story has been the man of allience in the Tower. He has had nothing to say in regard to the crime to anyone who has sought to talk with him on the subject, unless it was his most intimate friends, who have visited him in his cell.

He still refuses to have anything to do with Conley. Conley brought to his cell, except by the permission of his attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, and in Mr. Rosser's presence. The detectives propose to take the matter up with Attorney Rosser. They will represent that the case has reached a stage where it is necessary to give Conley a chance to tell his story. Conley went over the scene of the crime step by step on Friday and never showed his face involving Frank deeply.

Conley intimated that he had been threatened at the jail, but little credence was put in his ramblings. It was plain that he wanted rest. He had told his story so often each time it may be noted, in almost the same words that he was tired. The police agreed that he had answered enough questions from outsiders and he was moved.

Police Urge New Test. A determined effort is being made by the police department to bring Frank face to face with his accuser. The detectives wish to learn how Conley will go through the ordeal of confronting the man he accuses of directing the disposal of the body of Mary Phagan, and dictating the notes that were found by her body.

They desire also to give Frank an opportunity to deny the negro's story as he is repeating it. Frank's story has been the man of allience in the Tower. He has had nothing to say in regard to the crime to anyone who has sought to talk with him on the subject, unless it was his most intimate friends, who have visited him in his cell.

He still refuses to have anything to do with Conley. Conley brought to his cell, except by the permission of his attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, and in Mr. Rosser's presence. The detectives propose to take the matter up with Attorney Rosser. They will represent that the case has reached a stage where it is necessary to give Conley a chance to tell his story. Conley went over the scene of the crime step by step on Friday and never showed his face involving Frank deeply.

FORCE TRAITOR

Austrian Officers Gave Disgraced
Colonel a Loaded Pistol and a Book of Instructions

VIENNA, June 1.—Extraordinary sessions of treasury carried on for years by a colonel of the Austrian General staff, who sold secrets of vital importance to Russia, are made in the Military Gazette.

Colonel Redl, one of the chiefs of the military secret service department, was summoned to Vienna from Prague at the end of last week. During his absence his name was searched and a number of incriminating documents were found. Some of them showed that he had given to the Russian Government the plans of the Austrian and German armies against Russia in case of war.

The War Office here is receiving full confirmation of the report, sent to Redl two of his fellow-officers.
During the night they informed him of the charges against him. As he was unable to clear himself, they warned him that they would return at daybreak and arrest him.

On leaving the room one of the officers took a fully loaded pistol from his pocket, with a book of instructions to how to use the weapon. He opened the book and placed it in Redl's hands, with a menacing look.
The officers then mounted guard over him, and watched, as was usual, a shot told them that Redl, who was only 41 years old, had taken the only way out for himself.

The War Office determined to keep this a profound secret. It was announced that Redl had committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. He was buried in a secret place, not announced and he was interred in the simplest manner possible to the military honors due to his rank.

The facts were, however, revealed by members of Parliament. Demanded that the War Minister communicate to the House the details of Redl's order to clear his memory.
The Minister refused to do so, but admitted that Redl was dead, and that other military men are involved in the scandal.

TRY TO LYNCH SUSPECTS

NEGROES ARE SAVED BY DETECTIVES' FEATS

With the ropes around their necks, Ernest Maynard and Walter Wilkes, the negroes suspected of the murder of Mrs. William Stevens and her daughter, Nellie, who were found in the ruins of their home near Constitution, were saved from lynching late this afternoon at the point of detective's guns.

The negroes had been taken to the scene of the crime by Sheriff McCurdy and Detective Rosser and were tied to a tree while the officers scoured the neighborhood for clues.

A party of about twenty framers, determined on vengeance cut the suspects from the tree while the detectives were away and rushed them to a nearby barn. The two ropes were slung over a tree and the ends slipped about the negro's necks.

Chief of Detectives Lanford, heading another party arrived in an automobile just as the proposed lynching was about to be consummated. At the point of a revolver he held the would-be lynchers at bay and aided by Deputy Sheriff P. H. Lixsey, Sheriff McCurdy and Detective Rosser saved the two men, rushing them back to Atlanta in an automobile.

The men will be sheltered at police headquarters where they have been since their arrest Monday.

Vice Board Inquires Into Wages of Men

CHICAGO, June 2.—The Illinois white slave commission this week will concern itself with the wages of men and the cost of living in Chicago.

THE WEATHER

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Generally fair Monday and Tuesday.

Wilkes and Maynard Taken to Scene of the Crime for 'Third-Degree' Ordeal.

Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the negroes suspected of the murder of Mrs. William Stevens and her daughter, Nellie, were taken to the office of Chief Lanford Monday to be questioned in regard to their whereabouts the night the Stevens home was burned to the ground and Mrs. Stevens and her fourteen-year-old daughter were slain and left in the building.

Sheriff McCurdy came from DeKalb County and prepared to take the two negroes back to the scene of the crime, to put them through the third degree.

Both of the suspects, who were locked up Saturday afternoon on the identification of Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, have denied any knowledge of the crime.

Revolver Taken by Ben. The detectives' hunt for Mrs. Stevens' missing diamond ring, gold watch and revolver, which were supposed to have been taken by the murderer, came to a sudden halt Monday morning when young Wade Stevens explained their disappearance.

Stevens said that he sold the diamond ring and the watch in Chattanooga two years ago, letting the ring go for $10. He said he took the revolver away with him when he went to Chattanooga last Tuesday night, the date of the murder, and sold it there for 50 cents.

Despite the clearing of this phase of the mystery, however, the officers still are of the opinion that the motive for the crime may have been robbery, as the murderer may have had an idea that Mrs. Stevens kept a large sum of money in her home.

Wilkes and Maynard were kept in solitary confinement over Sunday. No one went near them to question them. It was thought that a day of almost absolute isolation would put them in a frame of mind where they would be more easily worked upon Monday.

They have been taken to the scene of the murder, it is probable that they will be removed to the DeKalb County jail in Decatur.

Caughy, John Lee, Says Sheriff. "The prisoners have said that they didn't have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Stevens and the girl," said Sheriff McCurdy, "but they already have been trapped in several instances or lies."

"I look suspicious that they were together when caught. They were in a hurry to say that they had just happened to meet a few minutes before Wilkes, when he was first taken, denied for a time that he was seen by young Stevens Tuesday night, as Stevens had claimed, but afterward admitted that this was true."

Young Stevens said that Wilkes asked whether anyone was with Mrs. Stevens and, finding that Mr. Stevens was in Chattanooga at the Confectionery section, said he believed he would go and see if he could get the girl's gun, although he expected to get much more positive evidence.

COUNCIL TO BUY CITY PLANT NOW

City Council Monday afternoon started its proceedings of the finance committee to buy the crematory, for $250,000 and pay for it this year. The resolutions submitted by the committee were adopted with only one dissenting vote, that of Councilman O. H. Hall.

The resolutions provided that such appropriations as may be necessary to pay for the crematory in 1913 be made by the Finance Committee. The proposition, as ratified by the finance committee and the Destructor Company, of New York, is that the city buy the plant for $250,000, paying $125,000 of the amount at once and holding back $125,000 until the plant has demonstrated that it will burn garbage for 25 cents a ton and fulfill its other guarantees.

Provision is made also that if any of these payments be delayed the Destructor Company is to be paid 7 percent from the time the payment should have been made.

Councilman W. G. Humphrey, who submitted the resolutions to council, said that the city would be saved several thousand dollars by the new contract, a saving of $14,000 will be made on the face value of the contract, he said, the old one calling for a price of $23,400, and the new one for a price of $20,000.

NEGRO COOK AT HOME WHERE FRANK HELD BY THE POLICE

Woman Questioned by Dorsey, Becomes Hysterical; Solicitor Refuses to Tell Whether She Gave Important Information; Alibi for Defense.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, 68 Georgia avenue, with whom Leo M. Frank lived, was put through the severest sort of grilling in the office of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey Monday in an effort to break down Frank's alibi which tends to show that he was at home about the time James Conley swore the notes found by Mary Phagan's body were written.

The negro woman grew hysterical and her shrieks and protestations could be heard through the closed door. She maintained to the end of the two hours of rapid-fire questioning, however, that Frank had arrived had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock the Saturday afternoon of the crime.

She was taken into custody on information said to have been furnished by her husband. She later was taken to the police station to be held under suspicion. The details of her statements to the solicitor and the full import of the information said to have been disclosed by her husband have been shrouded with the utmost secrecy by Solicitor Dorsey. It is said, however, that she declared to the last that Frank had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock to her positive knowledge.

Her sobbing and hysterical cries were heard soon after she entered the office of the solicitor. Mr. Dorsey was able to quiet her for a few minutes at a time when it is supposed he obtained her statement of Frank's whereabouts on Saturday, April 18, so far as she knew. At the detective headquarters, the officers were non-committal as to the nature or value of the testimony that the negro woman had given.

It was on the negro cook that the defense had relied to assist in proving an alibi for Frank when she came home to trial this month.

The woman was hysterical at police headquarters and kept shouting, "I am going to hang but I don't do it. I don't know a thing about it."

Four other persons will be prepared to testify at the trial of Leo M. Frank for the arrival at home for lunch at 1:30 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was killed, which would have been an impossibility, the defense will assert. It had directed the disposal of the body and dictated the notes at the time the negro alleged.

Testimony before the Coroner's Jury by Frank and others indicated strongly that he was at home by 1:30 the afternoon of the crime. Conley, in his affidavit declared that he went to Frank's office at four minutes before 1 o'clock. He said that after a conversation of a few minutes Frank heard voices and showed Conley into a closet. Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark entered. Conley kept a prisoner in the closet, he said, for eight or ten minutes.

It was after this, he said, that Frank asked him if he could verify Conley's version in his affidavit that he answered in the affirmative, and that he was directed to write another note, most of which began: "Dear mother, a lynch rail back negro did this by..."

After this, followed the giving of $250 to the negro, according to his story, as well as the giving of the $100 which later was taken back by Frank.

Of the incidents that the negro has detailed in the minds of many interested in the case, would have been directed to write another note, but after the time that five witnesses will swear he arrived home.

Wife and Her Parents to Aid. These witnesses are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Mrs. Frank, the cook in the Selig household and an acquaintance of Frank who is said to have been his riding home in the street to-day at the family home here. The boys will be sent to Atlanta to-day for interview.
