MAYOR REPORTED BY DICTOGRAPH

PLOT TO ASSASSINATE CHIEF BEAVERS TOLD LANFORD BY COLYAR

A plot to assassinate Chief of Police J. L. Beavers is the amazing charge made by A. S. Colyar, Jr., the man who conceived and accomplished the alleged dictographing of Colonel T. B. Felder in connection with the $1,000 bribery accusations placed against the attorney.

This sensational disclosure came to light Saturday morning. The charge was laid before Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford by Colyar. He declared that he would produce a man who would make an affidavit to the effect that an attempt was made to employ him to "get" Chief Beavers and also Chief Lanford. Colyar declared that this man would swear that if it became necessary that he had been instructed to "provoke a quarrel with Chief Beavers and shoot him to death." This man, Colyar avowed, would swear that he had been promised immunity from punishment for his deed.

The name of this mysterious man has not been furnished detectives, but Colyar promised to take him Friday night to the office of Chief Lanford in the police station, where the affidavit was to be made. Up to a late hour Saturday morning, however, neither he nor Colyar had put in an appearance.

According to the story told by Colyar, this man is not a resident of Atlanta, but has been here several days. He is an old friend of Colyar. He said this man would swear positively that the murder plot proposition was made to him shortly after his arrival here, and that he would give the name of the man who engineered the deal.

Felder Charges Police Plot to Shield Slayer

Colonel Thomas B. Felder entered into an explicit and detailed denial to The Georgian of all the charges of attempted bribery contained in the affidavits signed by C. C. Febuary, secretary to Chief of Detectives Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, a private detective with a spectacular career.

Colonel Felder declared the alleged dictograph record of conversation he is alleged to have had with Colyar and Febuary in Williams House No. 2 a "frame-up" and a fabrication.

The report that he had offered $1,000 for the Coleman affidavit in the Phagan case and affidavits said to indicate graft in the Police Department he branded as absolutely false.

The whole plot had been concocted, he said, to discredit himself and W. J. Burns and drive them from the Phagan case so the guilty person might be protected.

"Every move made by the police in the Phagan case has been for the protection of the real criminal," said Colonel Felder. "The police have kept an innocent negro there in a cell for three weeks in the hope that they can crush a confession out of him and let the real culprit go free.

"Guilty Person Protected."

"If the desire were not to protect the guilty person, why should they desire to eliminate Burns and myself? Burns has a reputation for landing every criminal he goes after. He has a reputation for being absolutely merciless in the manner he hunts down his man. It is as certain as anything can be in the detection of criminals that he will be successful, once he gets started on a case. He is known to be unpurchasable. Everybody knows that he could have accepted a million dollars at any time during the chase for the McNamara brothers if he had been willing to say that he had not been able to find the dynamiters.

"As for myself, my professional reputation, at least, is that if I have not done a case in which I was interested any good, I certainly have not done it any harm.

"So, I repeat, what other motive could they have in trying to drive Mr. Burns and myself from the Phagan case except to protect the real culprit?

"That so-called dictograph conversation was a frame-up and a fabrication from start to finish. In a longer statement that I am preparing, I will show this conclusively. I will demonstrate it by the very conversation that is alleged to have been reproduced in the other room by the dictograph. I will show that things were written that never would have been said by persons in conversation.

"I will show its absolute absurdity with such clearness that no room will be left for doubt. It will be so plain that he who runs may read. It won't require any detective to show that it is a frame-up, and one of the clumsiest and crudest that ever was attempted.

Says Coleman Approved.

"That Coleman affidavit, in which the mother and stepfather of the murdered Mary Phagan are made to say that they never hired me or approved of me as an attorney to prosecute the Phagan slayer, was extorted, in my opinion. As a matter of fact, I never said I was employed by the Colemans. I announced that I had been engaged by residents of Bellwood who were friends of the bereaved family. It is true, however, that Mr. Coleman approved of my selection. I never offered $1,000 for the possession of this affidavit.

"Neither is it true that I went to Mayor Woodward and told him that there was lots of graft in the city, but that it would take a good deal of money to uncover it. I had only a brief conversation with the Mayor, and I told him at the time that I did not wish to undertake anything or become interested in anything that would take my time from the prose-

COLYAR CALLED CONVICT AND INSANE

Records Show He Has Been Confined in Numerous Prisons and Twice in Asylum.

Who is A. S. Colyar?

The records show that Colyar was once confined in the Middle Tennessee Insane Asylum, and that more recently he was sent to Lyons View, the East Tennessee Asylum. Information from Nashville is that he served time in prisons all over the State, as well as in Sing Sing, New York, and a jail in Virginia. Telegrams from Chattanooga paint him as a wild adventurer who spends considerable time in prison and is always in trouble.

In Prison Many Times.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 24.—A. S. Colyar is a son of the late A. S. Colyar, of this city, one of the most brilliant lawyers and statesmen Tennessee ever produced. When not violently insane his mind works brilliantly, but always to the wrong end. He has been in prison time after time, but always evaded long sentences through influence of his father's friends.

Young Colyar's most noted exploit, as it is understood here, consisted in connection with the famous Mollineux murder case in New York. He went from Nashville to New York, saw General Mollineux and offered to have his son acquitted for $20,000.

"Your son is innocent," Colyar is reported to have said. "One of my clients, now in the Tennessee penitentiary, is guilty. He confessed to me. For $20,000 I can get him out of the penitentiary, bring him here, induce him to confess and save your son's life."

Next day, so the story here runs, General Mollineux advanced him half the money. Colyar went back to Nashville, engaged a well-known pickpocket as a confederate, took him to New York with half a dozen guards and claimed the rest of the $20,000. The ruse might have worked, except for the fact that an assistant district attorney secured information about Colyar and blocked his plans.

Daniels 'Afraid' to Umpire Ball Game

WASHINGTON, May 24.—As soon as Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, announced that he was going to West Point to attend the Army-Navy baseball game on May 31, he was invited to be one of the two umpires.

"No, thank you; it's a bit too risky," declared Mr. Daniels. "I've gone up in aeroplanes and down to the bottom of the sea in a submarine, but I am not a brave enough man to attempt the job as arbitrator in a college baseball game. The job is too hazardous and too dangerous."

What Is in a Name? Gets Boy $2,000,000

SEATTLE, May 24.—Through the action of the Superior Court here, Henry Francis Shoemaker, aged five, regained his name, and his father, Henry W. Shoemaker, of Altoona, Pa., has promised that the boy shall inherit $2,000,000. The boy's mother, formerly Mr. Shoemaker's wife, gave the boy the name of Perry. Mr. Shoemaker wanted him to have the name given him before he and his wife separated.

Cemetery Sexton Dies Amid Tombs

COLUMBUS, GA., May 24.—T. D. Bartlett, sexton of Riverdale Cemetery, Columbus, was found dead in the cemetery last night. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict that death was due to natural causes.

Bartlett was 57 years of age and was well known as a lodge man.

STRANGULATION CHARGE IS IN INDICTMENTS

The Grand Jury resumed Saturday morning the Phagan murder case with indictments against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee charging strangulation.

While nothing definite could be learned, it was confidently expected at the office of the Solicitor Saturday morning the case of Frank might be completed during the day. Only a few more witnesses were to be called, it was learned, and these could tell what they knew in a few hours.

The indictments are the first of the kind to have been drawn in Fulton County in the recollection of the oldest court officials, and for this reason the exact verbiage is being kept secret. Fearing that if the indictments are not drawn in strict conformity to law, there would of course be some question of their validity, and there being so little law on this particular form of indictment, the Solicitor would not make public the phrasing of the bill until his assistant could find some precedent in the Supreme Court records.

It became known Saturday that none of the "star" witnesses for the State would go before the Grand Jury unless at the last moment the Solicitor thought it would be necessary to introduce them to secure a bill. Those who testified Friday were the detectives who appeared before the Coroner, and similar witnesses are awaiting their turn to be called upon Saturday.

The city detectives are the principal witnesses. From their investigation and examination of witnesses they are telling the Grand Jury everything they have found out. The Solicitor was confident this form of introducing evidence would not only greatly expedite matters, but would present the case in a more concise form.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said that he could prove Frank was not at his home the evening of the murder at the hours he said he was.

"I can prove that Frank was not at his home during the hours on Saturday night, the night of the murder, that he said he was. I will have witnesses to swear to this," was his statement.

The chief added that he had a great amount of other important evidence that has been more carefully guarded than some that had found its way into the papers.

Frank's statement at the Coroner's inquest was that he reached his home shortly after 7 o'clock the evening of Saturday, April 26, and did not leave it until the following morning. The testimony of his mother-in-law and father-in-law substantiated his evidence. They said that while they were engaged in a card game Frank was in the next room reading a magazine.

Huerta Threatens to Assume Dictatorship

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—Provisional President Huerta has threatened to dissolve Congress and assume dictatorship over the legislative branch of the government unless the deputies opposed to the $100,000,000 foreign loan cease filibustering against it.

This clash between the executive and legislative branch of the government has been expected for some time.

If the opposition is successful and the loan is not secured, a crisis will follow.

SEEK INSIDE EVIDENCE OF POLICE GRAFT IN PROTECTION OF VICE

Sensational dictograph conversations in which Mayor James G. Woodward, Charles C. Jones, former Tenderloin proprietor and present owner of the Rex saloon, E. O. Miles, a private detective, A. S. Colyar, accuser of Colonel T. B. Felder, and Chief Lanford's clerk, February, all figure are made public by The Atlanta Georgian to-day.

The conversations, all reported by a dictograph installed in the Williams House, in the same room and by the same man who figured in the "trapping" of Felder, tend to throw new and startling light on the alleged plot to "get" Chief of Police James L. Beavers, who wiped out the Tenderloin and Chief of Detectives Lanford.

As reported by George M. Gentry, who took down the conversation as it trickled over the thin spun wires through the door between Colyar's room, No. 31, and Room No. 32, Mayor Woodward seems to be supported in his assertion that he was merely after evidence of graft in the police department.

The Mayor was present at the conference with February, Colyar and Miles. The entire dictograph conversation in which he figured is given elsewhere.

Far more sensational is the conversation in which Jones, Miles and Colyar took part. Jones viciously attacked the police department, charging graft and crookedness, accused Marion Jackson, Men and Religion leader, of being the beneficiary of vice, and said he had been double-crossed in the wiping out of the Tenderloin.

Colonel Felder's name is mentioned time and again in the conversation of the three and more than one reference is made to the alleged offer of $1,000 for evidence.

The entire sensation resolved itself into an apparent effort to secure from within the police department itself, through Clerk February, evidence of graft and crookedness. Jones directly charges that there has been protection extended to certain houses now operating in Atlanta.

The conversations make clear that fact that the Phagan case was merely a means to an end—that the men accused as conspirators were after graft evidence and not Phagan evidence.

Jones Attacks Beavers and Charges Police Crookedness

The following conversation occurred in room No. 31, at Williams House No. 2, 34-36 N. Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock, between C. C. Jones, E. O. Miles and A. S. Colyar:

Colyar—It has been very warm to-day, hasn't it?

Miles—Yes, it has. I asked Mr. Felder if you mentioned Mr. Jones' name to him and he said no.

Colyar—He told me Monday night that Mr. Jones was a friend of his and he thought it an outrage the way they had done him.

Miles—You know I asked you this afternoon why you wanted to see Mr. Jones.

Colyar—If you don't want to talk, that's all right.

Jones—In what way?

Jones—Yes. They closed up the houses I had. I had a lot of property.

Colyar—He told me they framed up on you.

Jones—There is no doubt but what it was a frame-up.

Colyar—Tom told me he would like to see the gang out of business.

Jones—The record now is (voice very indistinct just then). They never grafted me. Wouldn't be any use for me to give them any money.

Miles—You told me you wanted to see Jones. It is not a question of lack of confidence, as what I told you was true as far as I know, but if he knows anything at all about it, I don't know just what it is.

Jones—I don't know anything. I just told them to go ahead and build them houses and move them across the street. Even some of them went and paid for them. Three or four days before they closed the houses, the Chief of the City of Atlanta ——— ——— ——— that it would never do to close this district and I was surprised one morning by a telephone message from someone at No. 18, that the Chief had given five or six days notice to get out, I don't remember which, and I never even went to the trouble to go out to this man to ask him what he meant, as I could not figure it out to save my life what he meant. That is all that I know of. I found out what he was doing. I understand that Jackson was holding conversation with him anywhere from one to three times a day.

Colyar—Who is Jackson?

Jones—Jackson is the man that owns the biggest ——— house in Atlanta now. ——— and the Chief was there and wanted to know what he had done about the license of the hotel, and the Chief ———. The people owe him $500 a month each. I understand he opened.

Colyar—Who is John Eagan?

Colyar—They certainly must have some kind of a pull.

Jones—They got something, I don't know what it is.

Colyar—What does Jackson do?

Jones—Jackson runs them religious bulletins. I know them to be the fact, for he owns this place and on one occasion after he told someone I made a remark to a man that was very close to him, I told him that he had better close his own mouth. TO BE EXACT, HE OWNS THE EMPIRE HOTEL. The man that was running the hotel had an engagement to introduce me to this man. John Dawson told me that he had just had the hotel for three or four months, and that he had cleaned the hotel out, and I looked at him and said, "Yest, you cleaned it out, no doubt of that, but run it different from what other people run it. The man went to one room and the woman to the other, with a door opening between it." So I will be frank with you, if I had anything that would convict Mr. Beavers I would tell it on the public streets. I think he is everything in the world but a man. I will be frank with you about that. If he takes my dollar and then goes to the other fellow and takes his dollar, he would tell me to go to hell, but, of course, I used to be a gambler; I run the Rex, and everybody knows it. I wouldn't trust Beavers as far as I could throw——

Colyar—I want to talk to you about——

Jones—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Colyar—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Jones—I don't think it is going to—— As far as my own knowledge is concerned, I have never been able to—well, I haven't tried to. Well, as I haven't slept much lately I think I will go. Well, I will see you to-morrow.

Miles—Well, I am much obliged to you for coming in.

Jones—I will try and ge there between 10 and 11. Will that suit

Dictograph Conversations in Which Mayor Took Part

Here is the entire dictograph conversation in which Mayor James G. Woodward took a part as it was reported to the police. A copy is in the police files today.

A. S. Colyar, the man who engineered the entire sensation, of coure takes a leading part. The conversation is first principally between him and Chief Lanford's clerk, February and E. O. Miles, a private investigator, and a friend of Charles C. Jones, who comes later into the conversation.

Jones owned a number of houses in the restricted district closed up by Chief Beavers, which were censervatively estimated to have given him an income of $40,000 a year. He is the owner of the Rex saloon, and is by no means poverty stricken, despite the huge dent Chief Beavers' reform made in his roll.

Mayor James G. Woodward, who has never hesitated to let it be known that he was not in sympathy with the Chief's vice crusade, comes into the conversation later and is reported in full.

The conversation took place on Wednesday afternoon in Colyar's room—the same room where Felder was trapped, and was taken down by George M. Gentry, a nephew of the president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company. Here is a copy of the record:

The following statements were overheard by me, by using a dictograph located in room 32 of the Williams House No. 2, 34-36 North Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga.; said dictograph being connected with room No. 31 of the said hotel, and I saw Mr. E. O. Miles, whom I am personally acquainted with; Mr. G. C. February, whom I have known for several years, and Mr. A. S. Colyar, with whom I have only been acquainted for a short time, enter room No. 31 of said hotel at about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 21, 1913.

On account of Mr. February having locked the door to room No. 32, I was delayed in getting in, after having witnessed the three parties above mentioned enter room No. 31 of said hotel. In the emergency, I used the key to my front door, which, with a little difficulty, opened the door. After closing the door and going to the instrument, I was unable to hear what was being said very distinctly on account of the windows of the said room being open. This necessitated another delay to close them, and after returning to my instrument I was able to hear the following. Several dashes indicate that the voice just at that point became inaudible:

Colyar—I can tell you some things. I am executive secretary (noise made sound indistinct).

Miles—Now, just wait a minute. I know (here noise made hearing indistinct). I have got several cases (sound indistinct).

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—I am satisfied you ought, but you know when they go into it they are going to put up a howl.

Colyar—(Conversation too low to catch.)

Miles—The Mayor will give us absolute assurance that he will protect us.

Miles—I think I can bring the Mayor up here right away. The evidence is in the (sound indistinct).

Colyar—You are not a Jew, are you?

Miles—No, I am not. I spell my name M-i-l-e-s.

Colyar—These sons of a gun down here can frame up anything on Decatur Street. I told Felder I would get the goods and go outside of the county and I would meet you and him at East Lake.

Miles—There is no occasion for your leaving town.

Colyar—But I mean afterwards. I am afraid to stay here.

February—If the Mayor and Felder will stay behind us like they said they would.

Colyar—I would like to have the Mayor's——

Miles—But right now he may be busy. Felder can get—— Mr. Felder is a good—— Now, it will take about ten minutes, in any case, but he may be busy. I will bring him if he can possibly get here.

(In a few minutes Miles returned.)

Miles—He was up to the City Hall. He will be over in a few minutes, he said.

Colyar—Where is your residence, Mr. Miles?

Miles—In Decatur. I used to live in Smyrna.

(Conversation here became inaudible for a short time on account of scraping of feet upon the floor, chairs, etc., which drowned the sounds through the instrument.)

Miles—If you will excuse me, I will take off my coat. It is very warm.

Colyar and February—Certainly.

(Mr. February was evidently the one addressed, as some one went out and the conversation continued between Mr. Miles and Mr. Colyar.)

Miles—We will have that fixed. If we have got the goods on these detectives their sphere of work will be over. It will take three or four days——

Colyar—Well, what do you think of this Phagan murder?

Miles—I think it is the most damnable—— They telephoned Craig, The Constitution man to come and go with them.

Colyar—Do you believe Frank murdered that girl?

Miles—I never have believed it. It looks a great deal more like he did than it did before from the affidavits. Also there is going to be pretty strong evidence that the girl was not raped.

(Conversation became very indistinct for a few minutes.)

Miles—I think the whole thing was handled badly. In my mind I am satisfied. They had an extra on the street at 6:30. They should never have allowed all the persons they did on the premises. Just after the murder there were only a few scents and tracks, and the man who did the murder could have easily been tracked, as no one else had been there but the negro and his tracks could have been very easily eliminated.

Colyar—Yes; that is right. It looks to me like they would have known better.

Miles—They should have looked for foot prints and finger prints. Instead of that they had over 500 finger prints—— (Conversation interrupted by knock at door.)

A moment or so later Mayor Woodward entered the room.

(After the general conversation of all had subsided I was able to distinguish Mr. Miles' voice.)

Miles—I really don't know it well enough—this is the first conference I have had.

Colyar—Well, Tom Felder told me that the Mayor wanted some evidence on these fellows down here at the city hall, Decatur Street, and the station house, and here's a man that works down there. He got disgusted doing three men's work. He can get the evidence for you, but he wants no one to know it. There are some terrible framers down there.

Miles—He is afraid they will throw him in jail, after they find it out.

Woodward—How can they throw him in jail?

Colyar—They can get a charge against anybody and throw him in jail. You don't know them like some other people do.

Woodward—What is the nature of the evidence he can get?

Colyar—Well, if he was to get the evidence that Mr. Felder wants, it would do the work, which I understand is what you want.

Woodward—All I want to—(voice too low and indistinct).

Colyar—They would throw him out of his job and put him in jail.

Woodward—I don't see how they could do it.

Miles—I don't—unless there are no sane people in the city any more.

Colyar—Well, you know they said they were going to close up the red light—(voice too low.)

Woodward—Well, they have got nothing to fear.

Colyar—I went up to your office to see you, and I found it was harder work to get in your office than when I was a newspaper reporter.

Woodward—Well, my secretary came in and I told him to tell them I would see you just as soon as I possibly could.

Colyar—But he said you couldn't see me until to-morrow.

Woodward—The reason I said that was because he said you said you were in a hurry, and I said tell him to come back to-morrow. If you could have waited there a few minutes you would have had no trouble. You said you were in a hurry and had some business to attend to, but I could not tell the other people to get out of the office.

Colyar—There wasn't anybody else in the office.

Woodward—Well, the secretary or somebody was. Oh, I had to sign up a lot of checks that had to go in before the bank closed.

Colyar—I have always heard you were a plain old politician.

Woodward—It is just my natural way.

Colyar—Well, this is the man that can give the evidence down at headquarters that you want, but he is afraid to.

Colyar—You don't know what police persecution is. They can prove that black is white and water will run up stream, and they can get a jury that will—

Miles—I take this view of it. It will only be—with the police force to be—until they won't be in position to get anyone into trouble.

Colyar—They tell me they got a majority in the force.

Miles—No, sir; I don't—

Woodward—Dozier. I—

Colyar—How many votes will it take to remove him?

Woodward—A majority.

Colyar—How many are on the board?

Woodward—Twelve.

Colyar—You have a vote in case of a tie?

Woodward—I have a vote anyhow.

Miles—He is a member ex-officio.

Woodward—I vote all the time.

Miles—February wants to know if we can promise him protection. I think we can safely do it in a matter of right, like this.

Woodward—Yes.

Miles—He has the graft list and knows who's on the list, who is to be protected and who is not to be protected. It looks to me like we have the same thing down there that they had in New York, only on a smaller scale, because Atlanta is a smaller town.

Colyar—Did you tell Tom Felder that you authorized Felder that if he got the proof for you you would see that he got paid for it?

Woodward—I told Felder that on matters of this kind (voice here indistinct) and he has a good deal to say, and I told him that I am satisfied that certain parties would be willing to pay the money for him, and if he got the evidence that would convict those people it would be paid, and it will be. There is no question about that.

Colyar—He said he would give him a thousand dollars for the evidence.

Miles—Felder said to me that February said that was the price.

February—Felder said that he would pay it to us, but he would have to see the papers. He said he would give me one thousand dollars.

Miles—He didn't say that anybody had authorized him to do it. He just said he would get it up.

Woodward—I don't know whether he had reference (voice too low). As to whether he could raise the money or not; but if he did, he knows that I have not authorized him to do anything of that kind.

Miles—What would be the nature of those documents?

Colyar—It is an affidavit from two people—both signed it—acknowledging threats, etc., graft and general corruption. Like you said a while ago.

Miles—There is no trouble to show the graft?

February—(Reply inaudible).

Miles—(Voice too low at first) a place like the Walton Inn has never been closed.

February—I don't know just about that one.

Miles—Now, my information is that the woman who runs it is a sister-in-law of an official in the Police Department. A woman gave me that information and said that she was operating under protection, and there certainly is a half dozen hacks around there at 1 o'clock at night, automobiles, and couples going in and out.

you? I am glad to have met you. Good-night.

Colyar—Have you seen Felder since you saw me?

Miles—Yes.

Colyar—What did he say about going out of town?

Miles—He will go.

Colyar—Well, we will get the papers.

Miles—I told him that was reasonable.

Colyar—Then I will get the papers at 2:30 to-morrow. What time will you get in in the morning?

Miles—I will get in at 8:30 to-morrow, and I have an appointment.

Colyar—I think it is best to go out there.

Colyar—Call me up at 2401, Atlanta 'phone, at the hotel, at 1 o'clock. I won't have anything to do with the transfer of them in Fulton County. As long as he—

Miles—Yes, it makes a great deal more—. He can bull — a Morse out. I think he owes him most of it.

Colyar—What was his fee?

Miles—A hundred thousand dollars.

Colyar—How much did he get?

Miles—Oh! Absolutely—

Colyar—How long have you known Felder?

Miles—I have known him 25 years, personally.

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—Did you hear him commit himself?

Colyar—(Answer incoherent). Now listen here, this boy needs protection. "Will you do all in your power to see that he gets protection? Will you promise not to use it any way as to jeopardize his position in any way?

Miles—* * * And I believe he would, because I have seen him tried. I have been through all his campaigns with him, and I have never known him to go back on his word. I can't convince my mind that the young man won't balk. He is liable to lose his nerve. He seems nervous and afraid.

Colyar—No, he won't balk; he is just timid.

Miles—In dealing with a rattlesnake I never think about (dictophone not clear) Do you?

Colyar—No.

Miles—I presume every man has his own code of honor, and mine is if the right is figured in the wrong that the right needn't hurt you. I don't mean to call him a rattlesnake, as I don't anything against him. By that respect I had in mind the general corruption in that department down there.

Colyar—He goes down there and gets the papers and brings them out there and they are the papers that you and Felder want and they would know that nobody could get them but Lanford, and him and Lanford would say that he didn't get them and they would know February got them and would fire him right away. Now, how is the Mayor going to put him back.

Miles—If they are the documents of the nature he understands they are, there will be another Chief in his office. They would put him back for the very reason it would insure a straight administration of the next Chief.

Colyar—Will you call me in the morning at 10 o'clock?

Miles—I will call you at 10 o'clock.

Colyar—We will make Tom spend his money now.

Miles—Yes. You don't want to give the Mayor any list of these things.

Colyar—I thought you wanted the papers.

Miles—I don't want them.

Colyar—Tom does. He can tell about the papers whether they are what he wants.

Miles—We agree with the Mayor that we get this list.

Colyar—I am willing to copy it.

Colyar—Tom said that the papers—

Miles—Between you and Tom, we have nothing to do with it. If you are going to sell them to him, we will drop out of it. You say you will see the Mayor?

Colyar—I will see him to-morrow.

Miles—Good-night.

Colyar—Good-night.

MIKADO'S FEVER FALLS, THEN GOES UP

Emperor Yoshihito's Temperature 101.48 Saturday Afternoon; Was 99.2 Friday Night.

TOKIO, May 24.—Although there was an abatement early to-day of approximately four degrees in his fever, the temperature of Emperor Yoshihito, who is ill of pneumonia, later rose more than two degrees. It was 101.48 degrees this afternoon.

"His majesty has passed a favorable night and shows encouraging improvement. His temperature is 99.2, pulse 76 and respiration 36."

News that improvement was shown in the condition of the Mikado caused great rejoicing throughout the empire, but especially in this city. Prayers of thanksgiving were offered up and a ministerial order was proclaimed allowing the theaters to reopen.

Empress Sadaka spent several hours at the bedside of her husband to-day. She insists upon ministering to him and was much rejoiced to learn of his change for the better.

Congratulations From U. S.

The bulletin expressing news of the Mikado's improvement was carried to the foreign office, where the Cabinet was in session discussing the diplomatic controversy with the United States over the California anti-alien land law.

Arthur Blanchard Bailey, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, conveyed his congratulations to the imperial family that the Mikado showed improvement and that he hoped it would continue.

Special services will be held in the Christian churches to-morrow.

COLONEL FELDER MAKES CHARGE OF FRAME-UP.

cution of the Phagan case. It was not understood that I was to probe into the city's graft conditions.

Will Expose Colyar.

"Along with my detailed statement to-morrow I shall make public some of the startling incidents in the career of this man Colyar. I have known his history for years. What I have to say about him—and practically every statement I make will be supported by affidavits—will cause a grave doubt as to his credibility.

"I am acquainted with his movements when he went into Mexico. I know of the humiliation he was to his father, who was a well-known public man. I will tell of these things when I make my formal statement to-morrow.

"Colyar came to me and said that he had evidence of graft in the Police and Detective Departments. He said he knew that hush money was being paid the police authorities by the proprietors of disorderly houses.

"I said to him: 'Don't you know, Colyar, that nobody would believe a word you had to say? If you've got any papers that you think are worth anything, you can bring them to me and I'll look them over.' It is from these conversations that we had in my office that he has framed up this so-called dictograph conversation, adding the conversation that gives it the appearance of an attempt to bribe.

Burns Fought, He Says.

"It is nothing but a plot to get me out of the Phagan case, but I am certain of one thing, and that is that Burns and Tobie, if they are not circumvented by this gang, will have the guilt fixed upon the right person within a very short time after Burns arrives here. They will have to work against difficulties, for as soon as it became known that Burns was going to enter the case all of the witnesses were instructed not to talk to any of the Burns operatives, although they had been allowed to talk to the Pinkertons, hired by the National Pencil Company, without reserve."

Colonel Felder is bitter in his attitude toward Colyar and the people he represents, and declares that he will have them "shown up" within another 24 hours.

He was so harassed by the constant ringing of the telephone Friday night that, with Mrs. Felder, he left home shortly after 7 o'clock with the intention, he said, of hiding himself somewhere up town. He found a group of his friends at one of the clubs and he stayed there until shortly after 10 o'clock when he met Mrs. Felder, who had been witnessing a rehearsal at the Grand Theater.

"If they're framing up on you, I want to tell you you've got my sympathy," said one of his friends, heartily.

"Thank you, old man," returned the Colonel, "but I don't need any sympathy. I'll have these fellows on the run so quick it'll make their heads swim!"

SUFFRAGISTS OFF FOR WORLD MEET

NEW YORK, May 24.—Delegates to the World's International Congress of the Woman Suffrage Alliance in Budapest, June 15 to 21, sailed today on the "Finland" for Antwerp. The itinerary includes Antwerp, The Hague, Amsterdam, Berlin, Dresden, Vienna and Budapest; and after the convention they will visit Venice, Florence, Pisa, Rome, Naples and other Italian points before sailing for America July 10.

At the convention 26 countries will be represented by 12 delegates from each.

The twelve delegates from the National American Woman's Suffrage Association are: Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Pennsylvania; Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. J. T. Bowen, Illinois; Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Massachusetts; Mrs. Henry Villard and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, New York; Miss Runtz Rees, Connecticut; Mrs. Crystal Eastman Benedict, Wisconsin; Mrs. Emma E. Sweet, Mrs. William Tod Helmuth and Mrs. Frederick Nathan, New York, and Miss Anna Maxwell Jones, Texas.

During the convention three languages will be spoken, French, German and English. The Chinese, Persian and Indian women take part in the convention for the first time. Other countries affiliated with the International Alliance are: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bohemia, Finland, France, Great Britain, Iceland, Norway, Portugal, Italy, The Netherlands, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, Servia, South Africa, Hungary and the United States.

Coincident with the suffragette convention, the International Men's League for Woman Suffrage will hold its second convention in Budapest. Sir John Cockburn will preside.

Among the American women who are going over as visitors and not as delegates is Mrs. T. L. Bush, Birmingham, Ala.

WILL CONTESTANT DECRIED IN COURT

Heated discussion, resulting in a charge by Henry Brewster, representing part of the original legatees and Mrs. M. B. Crawford under the will of Nancy E. Crawford and J. B. Crawford, that Joe James, representing C. E. Crawford, was disreputable, was heard Friday morning in the city hall when the two sides of the Crawford estate clashed in a wordy battle.

James was denounced in scathing terms by Attorney Henry Brewster, who charged that James had tried to make a settlement with one of the heirs and had got hold of one of his clients. Brewster said he had made a settlement after having seen James' clients and knew the complete circumstances after hearing the testimony. He said he was convinced beyond all doubt of the disreputable character of these people, and that their evidence was unreliable.

Brewster then proceeded to denounce James, characterizing him as being no better than his clients. He alleged that James also had obtained Charles Crawford, one of his clients, a man easily preyed upon because of his innocence of the law, and was now attempting to rob his man.

The hearing was before Judge James A. Anderson, who, under the present law, has no authority to punish for libel, as he is acting merely as a referee in the case.

The Crawford estate case involves $200,000 and has been in the county courts for several years.

Under the will of Nancy E. Crawford, L. Z. Rosser, Henry Brewster and J. J. Barr are counsel for the legatees; while Reuben R. Arnold and Burton Smith represent the widow, Mrs. Crawford.

Lawyers for the widow declare a settlement had been effected, granting an equal distribution of one-half to each side, but that James now was attacking the legality of J. B. Crawford's second marriage, and in search of personal gain sought to rob the heirs.

James declared the charges were unfounded and unjust. Carroll Latimer, an attorney retained by the heirs, said he did not agree with James' method of conducting the case.

It was this same case that caused the fist fight last Monday of which Burton Smith, brother of Hoke Smith, was the principal combatant, causing five men to take the count.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday morning.

Fear of Oysters to Be Effectually Allayed

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Oyster beds from Cape Cod to Texas are to be investigated by the Department of Agriculture.

When polluted beds have been located the department will bar their product from interstate commerce, and through publicity aid State and municipal authorities in preventing local sales.

GREEK-BULGARIAN SITUATION GRAVE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 24.—The utmost gravity attends the Graeco-Bulgar situation, for dispatches from Salonika to-day reported that fierce fighting is still in progress between an army of 66,000 Bulgars and 4,000 Greeks. Fear is felt in quarters that war will be declared between the two countries unless an amicable understanding is soon reached.

While the fighting was brought about by the action of the Bulgars in crossing the neutral zone, there has been ill-feeling ever since Greece laid claim to Salonika last year. An artillery and infantry battle is in progress near Panghaion in Southern Albania. An unofficial dispatch said that over 250 had been killed in 48 hours.

Consternation has been caused here by the break, which, it is feared, will have an adverse influence upon peace negotiations with Turkey.

Armour Knows of No "Serious" Meat War

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 24.—Ogden Armour, here on a pleasure trip, made the following statement on the meat situation:

"Although I understand there is keen conflict among American meat men at the Smithfield meat market, as a result of which there has been a great reduction in prices here, yet we have received no word to this effect from Chicago.

There has been a drop in prices of all meats at the present time, due to the rise and fall of the market; but otherwise I am not conscious of any serious situation."

Senator's Daughter Weds Her Rescuer

NEW YORK, May 24.—A romance which had its inception in a thrilling rescue of the bride by the groom while bathing along the Jersey coast four years ago, came to a culmination to-day in the wedding of John Anthony Maher, a street railway official, to Miss Dolorita O'Gorman, eldest unmarried daughter of Senator James A. O'Gorman and Mrs. O'Gorman.

Jacob Schiff Sees Prosperity Ahead

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 24.—Jacob Schiff declares that Americans can look forward to a good sound money market in the near future, after Congress has disposed of the tariff bill. He said:

"I have made a very careful study of European money markets while abroad, and I think money is on a more solid basis than ever. With the settlement of Balkan affairs, I find markets stronger and better than ever.

"We have a good, sound market which will improve surprisingly within the next few months."

GARY, IND., May 24.—The levee district of this city to-day was empty.

Every man and woman habitue had left the city in compliance with Mayor Knott's order to the Chief of Police to give the town "a real, not a fake, clean-up."

PRINCE AND ONLY DAUGHTER OF KAISER WED

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 24.—Love and diplomacy entered into the marriage today of Princess Victoria Luise, the only daughter of Emperor William and Prince Ernst August, youngest son of the Duke of Cumberland.

Proud Kings, monarchs of lesser rank and Crown Princes and Princesses saw the fair-haired, blue-eyed twenty-one-year-old daughter of the German Kaiser, become one with the strapping young 26-year-old Prince and with the ceremony was healed a breach between the House of Hohenzollern and Guelph which has existed for about half a century.

The marriage of the beautiful young German Princess took place upon the silver anniversary of the wedding of Prince Henry of Prussia. The ceremonies really began two days ago with the marriage ceremonies today as the climax. The civil ceremony took place in the new Marble Palace at Potsdam; the religious rites were celebrated in this city.

All Germany Interested.

Ever since the engagement of the Princess to the young scion of Cumberland was announced last February at Carlsruhe the German Empire has been vitally interested in the approaching nuptials. Thousands of persons came from all parts of the Empire to make a gala occasion of the day.

Princess Victoria Luise selected for her attendants three of the prettiest girls of her own caste in Europe. Those invited to act as her bridesmaids were Princess Mary, daughter of King George and Queen Mary of England; Princess Elizabeth, daughter of King Charles of Roumania, and Grand Duchess Olga, eldest daughter of the Czar of Russia. At the last minute it was decided to increase the number of bridesmaids to four so a belated invitation was sent to Princess Yolanda, of Italy. Princess Yolanda has been called the reigning beauty of Southern Europe.

As would be imagined the wedding gifts are fabulous. Their value is estimated at close to $3,000,000. The Kaiser's gift to his daughter consists of a number of articles, among them jewelry of his own design. Many German cities appropriated sums ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 for the purchase of gifts. The great courts of Europe sent costly and beautiful presents.

Wedding Gifts Costly.

Usually in marriage the wedding gifts are supposed to be shared equally by the bride and groom but in the imperial marriage to-day Prince Ernst gets one gift of which the bride shares no part.

The Kaiser was so glad that the old quarrel with the House of Guelph was settled that, after the marriage had been arranged, he promised to create a new German state and make the groom the ruler of it. Accordingly Prince Ernst to-day became the Duke of Brunswick and the Grand Duke of Luneburg. This gives the young husband a responsible job and makes him the equal in rank with the Kings of Saxony and Wurtemburg and the Prince Regent of Bavaria. A considerable portion of the Province of Hanover, which belongs to Prussia, was taken over and added to the new state.

Princess Victoria Luise and Prince Ernst August have known each other for nearly three years and in spite of the repeated assertions in anti-government quarters that it is purely a marriage for the sake of politics, those in court circles say that real love enters into the match. Pictures have been printed of the engaged pair walking holding hands.

The bride's full name is Victoria Luise Adelheid Mathilde Charlotte Hohenzollern, Princess of Prussia, and she was born in the Potsdam Palace, September 13, 1892, fulfilling a fond wish of her parents for they already had six sons. The Princess grew into a very beautiful girl, under the personal care of her mother who taught her the science of home making.

Princess Patriotic Girl.

In intimate circles Emperor William called her "one of my little ones" and innumerable pictures have been printed showing the deep filial love of the fair young Princess for her father and mother.

The Princess is a very patriotic girl and insisted that her magnificent trousseau should be made in Germany and it was.

Prince Ernst August was reared to the profession of a soldier. His full name is Ernst August Chretien George of the Brunswick-Luneburg branch of the House of Guelph. He is an officer in the Bavarian Cavalry.

The quarrel between the two houses has lasted forty-seven years. The blind King George V of Hanover maintained his right to the Hanoverian throne after Prussia annexed his kingdom, and was sent into exile. The Duke of Cumberland (father of the groom) swore at his dying father's bedside in Paris that he would never become reconciled to the Crown of Prussia and would never renounce his rights to the throne of Hanover.

Many Americans There.

But love and diplomacy found a way even if cupid is presumed to be blind and diplomacy moves with ponderous steps with absolutely no trace of sentiment.

The wedding celebration began Thursday with a gala opera evening; Friday a state banquet was held. To-morrow special religious services will be held throughout the Empire. To-night some of the guests will leave as state business at home calls them away.

Berlin has swarmed as never before with secret service agents and foreign police. With so many monarchs to protect the city has been policed with the regular gendarmes and soldiers day and night. Among the royal visitors were King George and Czar Nicholas.

Caruso is a One-Man Band

Every Bone is An Orchestra

Musical Ability Permeates Nearly Every Tissue, Surgeon Discovers.

If that gold bearing, silver toned voice of Enrico Caruso's ever fails him, all he will have to do, according to the latest medical lore, is to go around tapping himself on the bones and the vibrations that result will be musical. He can tap his knuckles and get a pleasing jingle, whereas, with most folk, the result would only be a discord.

Music, according to the new authority, is built into the frame. If one's chest and bones and throat are put together on a musical basis, there isn't any power on earth that can keep the owner of the melodiously built frame from being musical.

Dr. William Lloyd, the famous London throat specialist, found the advantage that Caruso has over the rest of mankind when he made a recent examination. He found that Caruso had physical characteristics that allowed him to produce musical sounds in almost unlimited volume and that the quality of the structure of the throat was just as much adapted for emitting sound as the shell of a fine violin.

Enrico Caruso, the Famous Tenor.

If he loses famous golden-toned voice, medical lore declares by merely rapping his bones a pleasing harmony can be developed, where, if tried on others, only discord would result.

Music in His Bones.

The chest capacity of the singer gave him unusual aid in work, while the peculiar construction of the entire throat machinery enabled him to let loose vibrations at a higher rate than almost any other subject.

Then the doctor found that Caruso had music in his bones.

The simple tapping of the Caruso knuckles resulted in a vibration that was different from that of an ordinary mortal. The pitch of the vibration produced by a blow is higher and more resonant.

The distance from the front teeth to the vocal cords is half an inch more than in most tenors, and the vocal tube, the doctor found, was of unusual length.

In other words, Caruso was just built that way when it came to singing.

The suggestion that comes from the doctor's report on the plans and specifications of the Caruso throat and mouth is one that might give the commercial age a chance to locate future singers without the slightest trouble.

All that would be necessary would be for the experts in throat construction to go around to the schools and examine the children, sort them out in bunches and let them develop.

Easy to Pick Artists.

It would be perfectly easy to pick out the boys whose bones, vocal cords and throat material had the tenor elevation, while the basso and baritone chaps might be known by the way their bones were set.

So little Willie Jones would not have any trouble knowing what his future will be. He could tell the teacher that there was no use trying to pound electrical engineering or cube root into him, because the school doctor had picked him out as a singer who could not escape his future even if he tried.

The veriest chump of a teacher would know that if the front teeth of one of her pupils had half an inch the start on the other pupils in the race from the vocal cords the owner of the unhandicapped teeth had a cinch on becoming great as a warbler.

On the other hand the young men and young women who have been spending their money at conservatories trying to cultivate voices that are not and never will be will have a chance to find out just where they stand in the realm of art.

They can go to the doctor and confess that they have spent $1,728 trying to get in the genius class and get an expert line of dope on the prospects of ultimately landing before the footlights with the bouquets coming over in bunches.

Great Aid to Critics.

The scientific statement is that there is a fixed and definite relation between the construction of the bones, cords, muscles and tissues and the volume and character of sound that the owner of the said bones can emit. Once in possession of the scale, a flexible foot rule will answer all of the purposes of a musical critic.

Naturally, the critic might profit by the development of science and place his art upon the exact status of mathematics by closing his criticism of a singer in some fashion like this:

"Miss Smith-Jones-Brown cannot sing. That we may not be accused of bias, we submit that it is only three inches and seven-sixteenths from the southwest corner of the eye tooth to the extended arc subtended by the vocal cord; hence, quod erat demonstrandum, she hasn't a ghost of a chance to sing because it would take four-sixteenths of an inch more of space to even get in the class where the lady could gargle songs through a megaphone at a moving picture show."

But that is getting science down to a point that is beyond the average man and woman, and, besides, it is all based upon the statement of a doctor, and doctors do not agree.

POPE TAKES KEEN INTEREST IN U. S.

ROME, May 24.—The Pope to-day received Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, in private audience. He greeted him most cordially and expressed the greatest satisfaction at his visit.

The Pope discussed the missionary congress to be held in Boston next October, and said he knew it would give a great impetus to the cause of missions and be a great success owing to the constant progress of the Catholic Church in America generally, and in Boston particularly.

He also referred to the loyalty of the clergy and the piety of the faithful in the United States.

After the audience Cardinal O'Connell said to the correspondent:

"I was surprised and gratified to see the wonderful recovery the Pope has made. Considering his age, his recuperative powers are astonishing.

"My audience lasted over half an hour. He had just finished another audience equally long.

"The Pope always takes the keenest interest in the Catholic Church in America, and I was able to give him very cheering news of our progress there."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"The Deep Purple" at the Atlanta.

"The Deep Purple," which has been the offering all week at the Atlanta by the Miss Bily Long Company, will be presented at a matinee this afternoon and for a final performance tonight. The play is by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner, and is full of action and dramatic situations. The lines are epigrammatic. It is an interesting play from start to finish. "St. Elmo" will be the offering at the Atlanta next week.

Maggie Cline in Headliner.

Maggie Cline, the famous "Irish Queen," will be the star headliner at the Forsyth all of next week, and this engagement can be counted as one of the real events of the season. In addition to the great character comedienne, there will be six other features of more than average good quality, with a good sound foundation of comedy, sprinkled with a quality of novelty and music. This week's bill has proved popular.

Bijou Patrons Pleased.

"A Trip to Joyville," the musical comedy tabloid success which is delighting Bijou patrons this week, is proving one of the strongest attractions that the popular Marietta Street theater has offered in recent years. The change from vaudeville to musical comedy is meeting with great favor, and patrons of the Bijou seem delighted with the change.

AKRON, OHIO, May 24.—Four students were seriously injured and a number of others less severely hurt when a temporary platform at the Central High School fell.

The accident happened at a rehearsal for an oratorio.

GEORGIAN INVENTS REAL 'KNEE JERK'

Man From Monk Offers to Tell Beavers Just How Far Patrolman Walks in a Night.

Georgia has produced another celebrity in Harry Winthrop, of Monk, Ga. Investigation shows that Monk is on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, near Fairburn, not a great distance from Atlanta. It now will take its place in the hall of fame as the home of a famous inventor.

The Monk man has invented the "knee jerk." This is not the knee jerk that alienists use in testing insane criminals, but is a mechanical device to record the distance walked by policemen on their beats. It is termed the "knee jerk," says the inventor, for the reason that it is strapped to the knee and registers every time a step is taken by the wearer.

All of this information came out Friday in a letter received by Chief of Police Beavers from Winthrop, who urged that his invention be tried out by the Atlanta police department. He explained that he has already taken up the matter with the New York police department, but, being a Georgian himself, he is anxious for Atlanta to "get in on the ground floor." He made the proposition to equip the entire police department of 250 men with "knee jerks" at $50 each. The regular price, he suggested, is $100 each. It will, therefore, cost Atlanta but $12,500 to ascertain the distance each policeman walks on his beat.

"The knee jerk registers only when the policeman is actually walking—there is no chance for him to make it register while sitting or lying down," writes the inventor.

He added:

"The knee jerk is something on the order of a speedometer, although not quite so heavy. It is an accurate gauge to show whether policemen are properly patrolling their beats."

As Chief Beavers chucked the letter in a waste basket, he laughingly remarked that he didn't think Atlanta quite ripe yet for the "knee jerk."

"I think I'll write to Mr. Winthrop, however, and suggest that he give Monk the honor of first trying out his wonderful invention."

Blow With a Glass Blinded Both Eyes

NEW YORK, May 24.—Joseph Doherty, sightless, was before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday to testify against former Policeman Thomas C. Flynn, of 1981 Southern Boulevard, following whose attack on July 21 last Doherty became blind. Flynn was convicted of second degree assault. He will be sentenced next week.

Flynn and Doherty were drinking at a table in Flanagan's Hotel, at 2013 Boston Road, it was testified, when a quarrel arose and Flynn threw a glass at Doherty, hitting him between the eyes.

It came out at the trial that Flynn had been an honor man in the Police Department.

Great Conclave Held By Knikgts Templars

Probably the greatest conclave of the local Knights Templars ever assembled was held Friday evening under the auspices of the Atlanta Commandery No. 9. Every living past commander of this commandery was present and participated in conferring the Order of the Temple.

Right Eminent Sir Joseph Kyle Orr, present grand senior warden of the Grand Encampment of the United States, was also present.

Judge Rules $1 Week Enough for Husbands

PORTLAND, OREG., May 24.—That $1 a week is enough spending money for any married man and that he should turn the rest of his salary over to his wife and allow her to attend to its spending without interference was the assertion made by Municipal Judge Taswell. He had found Fred J. Brooks, a waiter, guilty of beating his wife and paroled him with the instructions as to the disposition of his salary.

Cook School to Make DaughtersGoodWives

LONG BRANCH, N. J., May 24.—"A girl who marries a man expecting him to support her in a comfortable home should make return by caring for the home in an efficient and economical manner," said Mrs. Jacob Wertheim, of Long Branch, N. J., in explaining why she fitted up her kitchen at an expense of $3,000, as a cooking school for her two daughters.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Evelyn's great moment had come. She looked at the coffee service of gold—she thought of Neustadt Castle, the home of brave men and women of her race for long hundreds of years—she visioned the treasury of Taunus empty quite of gold. She was only a girl with a girl's longing heart—but this was the home of her ancestors—and Gustavus was the last of a race that must be preserved at any cost. She struggled for a light tone. "I could care a great deal if you were to dawdle here over your breakfast and miss your important engagement with the bankers of Frankfort. When the treasury is quite stocked with gold pieces, Gustavus, may I go to Paris to visit Klausthal, and bring back all the lovely Paris fashions?"

Gustavus looked at her with bitter scorn. "So you are scheming too—the one pure, good thing I had ever known. You caress with lying eyes that you may have Paris gowns. And for one wild moment I had thought I could give it all up—the old castle—the old home—and go to Paris like Klausthal—abdicate—for you."

The Prince strode from the room—the Frankfort business must not fall now, and because Evelyn was a princess and must never forget her royal dignity, she did not fling her sobbing body across the old mahogany breakfast table as a simple girl of our world might have done. Instead, walking with stately mien—and trembling knees and blinded eyes—to her old tower room, she sat there at her rose-hung window and watched her youth die, the while Gustavus, magnificent in royal uniform of cream and blue, rode away to Frankfort—and fortune.

. . . . . Down the Highway. . . . . .

Down the highway clattered Gustavus, Count Fehrenberg by his side and two grooms at the rear. In Neustadt Castle a girl lay crumpled across a canopied bed of old mahogany, and was fighting for the mere desire to live. In Jew's lane another girl stood merry-hearted and gay and watched the light play in prismatic color on the glory of her necklace—little unconscious Charlotte, into whose hands Destiny was soon to deliver the threads of many lives. What will you do, Charlotte? What can you do when your hour strikes? Evelyn met her hour—and you?

So many a man rides down the highway of life while a woman waits at either end of the road.

Playing the Game.

As they galloped through the spring sunshine Fehrenberg's eyes were alight with mischief at the great coup he had Gustavus had planned the night before, and when the first meetings had been concluded after their arrival at the lucky house in Jews' Lane, he reminded his sovereign of their little game.

Gustavus banished two tender, loving, lying eyes from his mind—those eyes had journeyed in his memory from Neustadt Castle to Jews' Lane, but now he must "play the game."

"Of course, quite right. Gentlemen, I wish to creat you knights of my family order. To your oldest I give the decoration generally conferred for valor on the field. The motto is "Undaunted." I choose this decoration for you, because you are so bold as to be about to lend me money. No soldier could display greater courage." He smiled whimsically as he turned from Amsche l to Solomon. "And you, Baron, I create a commander of this honorable order. I consider that your courage rose yesterday to supreme heights. Allow me to point out that the ribbon is so wide that in warm weather it will save the necessity of a waistcoat."

If this was indeed a game—even if he were being made game of—Solomon would play it too. He bowed low. "Your Highness, I thank you in the name of all of us for the manner in which it pleases and amuses you to honor us."

From the doorway a gentle voice spoke, and as his grandmother and cousin came into the room, the somber, wounded-animal look that had never left Jacob's face since the veiled insults of the Prince of Klausthal-Agorda had brought it there, suddenly cleared like the rising of a gray mist.

Held Out Her Hand.

Holding out her hand and bowing with dignified self-possession, Frau Gudula spoke to the Heir of Nestadt and Taunus: "You are welcome, Duke Gustavus, to my house. How do you do, Count Fehrenberg."

"Dear Baroness," said Gustavus to Charlotte, "if I do not speak my thoughts to you, it is because your beauty makes a pretty speech appear so plain!"

Charlotte chose to be demure. "I thank Your Highness for your reserve."

Even for pretty speeches, Solomon meant to brook no delay. If there was to be coquetry it might well come later, when the contract was duly signed and sealed. "May I propose that we settle our financial business at once?" and thereat, in solemn procession the four brothers followed the Duke and Count Fehrenberg to the unpretentious little offices upstairs, where lay the agreement and twelve million florins in gold and notes!

"What are you waiting for, Jacob?"

"I do not like this business—nor will I share its profit."

"My boy, we always share our duties when the family is decided, whether they are pleasant duties or not. You must take your place with them. I have no wish to entertain the Duke in this house—but I must do so now he is here. I am going now to choose some of your grandfather's old Burgundy with which to do honor to the unwelcome guest who is in my house. Think it over while I am gone, my little Jacob."

Charlotte went after her grandmother and shut the door with a great show of importance. With girlish eagerness, and merrily withal, she entered on the interview that must make or mar four lives.

"Cousin Jacob—why are you so much against lending money to the Duke?"

To Be Continued Monday.

PUBLIC, FLEECED BY BROKERS, DANGEROUS

It Behooves Wall Street and Its Affiliations to Reform Some of Its Ways.

By B. C. FORBES.

Certain happenings have come to my ears which demand this warning:

Brokers—members of the Stock Exchange, as well as non-members—had better refrain from taking advantage of innocent customers who come to buy, or sell, securities not dealt in on the Exchange.

If a person enters a store and bond or a stock, the broker is not entitled to say the price is $40 if the regular price is $30.

If an investor wants to buy a bond or a stock, the broker is not entitled to say the price is $98 if the current price is $96.

"Flessing"—in stronger language, swindling—has been indulged in over-frequently for some time.

If it is not checked, the penalty will have to be paid.

The public cannot be fooled all the time.

Legislation calling for the divorcement of the brokerage business from that of banking, the licensing of every broker, frequent examinations of books and the like is invited by the present ongoings of not a few dealers in securities.

* * *

Opportunities for filching dishonest "commissions" or "edges" from the public have been very frequent for months owing to the comparatively large volume of business done off the floor of the Stock Exchange. Standard Oil subsidiaries, Tobacco shares and the bonds and stocks of companies not recognized by the Exchange have brought hundreds of thousands of dollars to brokers whose operations were not those of brokers—as they ought to have been—but of speculators who did not hesitate to deal unfairly with clients.

* * *

When a customer engages a broker whom he believes to be a man of honor to buy a stock or a bond he expects the broker to pick it up at the lowest possible price and to charge the recognized commission for the service. If the broker is offered the desired security at $100 is he playing fair if he tells his trusting client that the security cost $102 or $105.

* * *

When I say that flim-flamming of this kind has been and is being practiced those familiar with the inner workings of Wall Street—not Stock Exchange—operations will not offer a denial.

* * *

In the advanced countries of Europe a broker must be a broker and nothing else. He must buy and sell securities on a commission basis. So far American brokers and "bankers" have enjoyed the widest latitude in dealing with the public. Laws are now being brought forward to regulate Stock Exchange dealings, but brokers not affiliated with the Exchange can do as they please. This wide privilege is being abused in a manner that means retribution. Let wrongdoers hug no delusion on that score. The mills of the gods may grind slowly, but they grind.

* * *

The whole Wall Street community and its affiliations are entering a period of probation. It behooves them to act honestly and circumspectly. The sins of some will bring punishment on the heads of all.

* * *

Are brokers aware I wonder, how little they are trusted by the public at large? Do they realize in what slight esteem they are held? I confess that first-hand experiences on this subject have caused me to feel sad—at first sad, but later indignant, for certain revelations have forced me to ask whether the reputation attaching to brokers as a class has not been earned by the gross misdeeds of some.

* * *

The Hearst papers are now deluged with letters from security holders as well as from prospective purchasers. There is evidenced a deep distrust of brokers. "Please advise me what to do," runs the tenor of many communications, "for I know you have no axes to grind and that your advice will be honest."

* * *

To-day's appeal to all classes of brokers to give the public a fair deal is not, be assured, uncalled for, nor does it apply exclusively to conditions in Wall Street.

First of Seaboard's Steel Diners Here

The first of six new steel dining cars purchased by the Seaboard Air Line Railway arrived in Atlanta this afternoon and was met at the Union Depot by Assistant General Passenger Agent Fred Geissler and Robert F. Maddox, one of the directors of the road.

The new cars, which are 73 feet long and seat 36 people, are equipped with the latest devices. Suction fans prevent all odors from the kitchen entering the car.

The cars will be run from New York and Washington to Birmingham and Florida. They cost $30,000 each and others will be put in service as soon as the Pullman Company can finish them.

FIRE RATE FIGHT LOOMING IN ASSEMBLY

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

The City of Savannah, through its Chamber of Commerce, has started an investigation into the question of fire insurance rates that may terminate in the State Insurance Department, if not in the Legislature itself.

The primary purpose of the investigation will be to determine whether the City of Savannah is being discriminated against in the matter of rates now prescribed by the Southeastern Tariff Association, which has its headquarters in Atlanta. In shaping its conclusions, the Savannah trade body will employ statistics gathered from all over the nation.

If rates in Savannah are found to be excessive in the judgment of the Savannah Chamber of Commerce, inquiry will be made as to excessive rates throughout all Georgia. And if the Chamber finds that Georgia is being unfairly treated in this matter, the case against the tariff body will be carried before the State Insurance Department, and it may be that Legislative relief will be sought.

The Savannah Chamber will employ numerous insurance experts to investigate conditions, and expects to be put to considerable expense in making its probe thorough and complete. The question is a broad one, of course, and the Chamber of Commerce expresses its determination to be fair and equitable to the tariff association no less than to itself in getting at the facts involved.

The investigation was brought about by reason of numerous complaints of excessive fire insurance rates charged in Savannah, and once the Chamber of Commerce made up its mind to get busy with the question, it further made up its mind to make its inquiry sweeping and effective in such directions as the findings suggest.

The inquiry will be started immediately with an idea of getting it through in time to go before the summer session of the Legislature for relief, if necessary.

It seems to be generally agreed that John P. Cheney, of Cobb, is to be the speaker pro tem of the next House of Representatives.

He is one of the veteran members of the House as veterans go nowadays, and is an experienced parliamentarian. Moreover, he is genuinely popular with his fellow members, and is sure to be acceptable as a presiding officer.

Besides being a member of the Legislature, he is a member of the city Council of Marietta, and a trustee of the Georgia Agricultural College, at Dahlonega.

Since Mr. Adams, of Hall, definitely announced that he not only would not be in the race for speaker pro tem, but would support Mr. Cheney, there have been no other announcements, and the presumption is that Mr. Cheney is to be elected without opposition.

According to an editorial in the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, "Governor Brown has suggested a monument to former Governor Smith!"

It should be carefully explained, however, that Governor Brown was referring to former Governor James M. Smith, and not to former Governor Hoke.

Representatives Garlington, Picquet and Olive of Richmond and Representatives Wright, Foster, and Nunnally, of Floyd, will introduce in the next Legislature bills prescribing commission forms of government for Augusta and Rome respectively.

Both measures will provide for a ratifying vote of the people of the municipalities affected, before becoming operative. So far, these two Georgia cities are the only ones reported ready to ask the Legislature for charter authority to set up a commission form of government, although it is expected that others will follow suit.

The North Georgia Citizen, of Dalton, says that Congressman Gordon Lee, of the Seventh District, some day will be Governor of Georgia, and adds: "Gordon Lee is the kind of man that makes good by accomplishment. There is nothing of the spectacular in him. He is not wordy and tiresome as are so many others who hold responsible offices. His record speaks, and Lee has sense enough to know it will do all the talking that is necessary."

One hears this talk of Lee for Governor around and about the hotel lobbies and the capitol corridors frequently. Whether Mr. Lee has a gubernatorial ambition and has expressed it himself, it is a fact that he has many friends who view the suggestion with genuine approval.

A member of the Legislature who will seek to have a dog muzzling law passed by the incoming General Assembly has gathered some striking figures for the Legislature's consideration with respect to the hydrophobia situation in Georgia.

Between the first of January and the first of May, this year, 392 cases of hydrophobia have been treated in Georgia. In 1912 there were 673 cases treated.

So far this year there have been 13 cases in Savannah, 84 in Atlanta, 3 in Americus, 4 in Columbus and 2 in Douglas.

These figures, so the Georgia Medical Society hopes, will go far toward convincing the Legislature of the great necessity of a dog muzzling law.

With the convening of the Legislature only about one month away, interest in its forthcoming work is growing every day.

The hotel lobbies are well filled daily with members of the new House and Senate, and already the Legislature, while almost entirely made up of new material, has managed to get pretty well acquainted with itself.

M'CUE TO GET FIGHTS WITH LEADING STARS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—No more slob fights for Matty McCue, Racine's sensation of the ring. After the little fellow has finished out the engagements he has at the present time, which include a battle in Fond du Lac, Wis., in Jack Brunkhorst's arena and one in Milwaukee with Patsy Brannigan, the Eastern featherweight, John McCue, his manager, is going to take on only the very best boys he can find as opponents of his protege. The veteran McCue is convinced that he has a champion in Matty and nobody is going to convince him otherwise until he sees the actual defeat of the little fellow. Hence he is canvassing the situation for boys that will be at once good drawing cards and at the same time fit opponents for a man of the McCue standard—as judged not only in Racine, but elsewhere.

* * *

JOHNNY DUNDEE, the young Eastern Italian who recently went twenty rounds to a draw with Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, and therefore is regarded as having at least half of the title, if that will get him anything, is adjudged by the elder McCue to be the best man in sight at the present time for his star. The machinery has been set in motion already and some definite announcement may be expected almost any time now of the match having been clinched. McCue would be willing to let Dundee come in at 124 pounds, the same as any of the rest of them, and as this is an easy figure for the hardy New Yorker there would be no hitch over the match as far as the poundage is concerned.

* * *

CHARLEY WHITE, the sensational local boxer, who is neither a feather nor a light weight, but liable to be a thorn in the side of boys of either class, also is spoken of as a corking good test for McCue. And the McCue party is not unwilling to listen to reason in the matter of weight. Recognizing that Charley would be a dandy draw with the Racine sensation the Wisconsin people are beginning to flirt with Nate Lewis regarding the proposed meeting. White is willing to make 126 pounds for Matty, which would not be much of a handship.

* * *

JACK BRUNKHORST is sending a young boxer named Johnny Sokol who is well known up in the Lake Winnebago District, against the punching star and there is a prospect that Johnny may do somewhat better against the Racine terror than did Jeff O'Connell and the remainder of them, who have tried to worry him lately. Up in Fond du Lac they seem to like Sokol pretty well, for he has put up some good contests there, the fiercest of which was a ten-round draw with Gene McGovern that had everybody yelling like mad before it was over. Since that time Sokol has spent all of his time in the East and was especially active in the neighborhood of Buffalo, where he whipped some of the best boys of his weight.

* * *

BRUNKHORST was at the Racine battle recently and saw the McCue threashing machine under a full head of steam against Jeff O'Connell. Even in the face of that exhibit Jack didn't weaken and said afterward that while McCue surely is one of the real bearcats of the day that Sokol and his hefty punch are liable to make Matty go to the very limit in order to get the decision. Jack has a good card on for his show, having matched Freddie Andrews and Sorenson, who fought Battling Nelson a hard ten-round go recently, in the semi-windup.

* * *

THE Patsy Brannigan that Milwaukee has matched up with McCue is the veteran bantamweight of the East, now filled out until he finds himself up among the feathers. Patsy had numerous turnups with Johnny Coulon and is one of those tricky old chaps with a long, wise head and quite capable of troubling any of them for a little while at least.

* * *

BUT after the Brannigan match there will be nothing but better things for the McCue boy. And the chances are most of his battling will be done in Racine.

ED WALSH WILL TEACH PITCHING BY LETTERS

CHICAGO, May 24.—Big Ed Walsh of the White Sox, is preparing to appear in a new role before the fans of the country. He is going to be a mail order teacher of the art of pitching to show inquiring youngsters and future greats how to throw the spitball that has made him famous.

According to Ed's plans, he is going to send out a course of lessons at one buck per course, in which he will go into detail regarding the use of saliva as applied to the horsehide. "I believe there are lots of young fellows over the country who would welcome such a course of instructions," said Walsh.

TWO MIDDLEWEIGHT BOUTS WILL BE HELD AT BUTTE

BUTTE, MONT., May 24.—Articles were signed to-day for two bouts in this city on June 13, which is Miners' Union Day, the biggest holiday in the mining regions. Bob Moha will meet Jack Dillon and Eddie McGoorty will battle with Jimmy Clabby in 12-round bouts.

FLYNN SHADES JIM COFFEY IN THRILLING BOUT

NEW YORK, May 24.—Fight fans here to-day are clamoring for another match between Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and Jim Coffey, the "Dublin giant," who engaged last night in one of the fiercest and most thrilling heavyweight bouts ever seen in the city.

Coffey, taller and heavier than Flynn, started at Flynn like a madman and for nearly four rounds rained punches into Flynn's face and body that staggered him and drove him back against the ropes. Just when it looked like a sure knockout Flynn came to life.

TRAVERS MEETS KAMMER IN METROPOLITAN FINALS

NEW YORK, May 24.—The final round for the Metropolitan golf championship title is on to-day between Jerome D. Travers, the present champion, and Alfred D. Kammer on the Fox Hills golf course. Travers, by steady playing, has easily defeated every one so far opposed to him.

In the third round yesterday, playing against Chisolm Beach, Travers, after winning 7-5, played out the bye-holes and made a new amateur competitive record of 70 strokes for the course.

$10,000 GUARANTEE FOR SMITH.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Tom Jones, fight promoter, to-day offered Gunboat Smith a guarantee of $10,000 for another battle with Jess Willard next month. The manager of Smith, however, has declared that he means to give his protege a rest for a few months.

SPORTS AND SUCH

By RIGHT CROSS

WE DON'T HAVE ANY LUCK. Here for three or four weeks we have been bearing with patience and restraint the advance dope on the mighty clash of those titans, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, soothing ourselves with the thought that this fight would be the finish of one of them.

Instead of which both of them will now be going about the country insisting on telling a lot of people who never did them any harm that all they want is another chance to get together with each other, with Lute McCarty or with anybody else.

They will clamor for vindication, and there doesn't seem to be any way to stop them, unless they can be nailed for inciting a riot. Reports of the stern encounter differ in everything but one point. All those present seem to be agreed on the fact that it was a very gloomy and cheerless occasion.

According to the referee Smith was the winner, but the consensus of opinion among the experts at the ringside was that a decision would be more difficult than picking the winner of a transcontinental auto truck durability run. Also that the latter event would be much more exciting.

They fought the full distance of twenty rounds without a knock-down or a crucial moment. According to one or two reports Smith was in a little trouble in the fourteenth round and Willard bled somewhat from the mouth after a right-hand punch had cut his machinery for torturing sporting writers. That was all. A twenty-round fight between high-class men is frequently slow and uninteresting, and it is easy to imagine what this must have been like.

To the conquering hero stalks

And bellows that he wasn't right

And when you make this bum decamp
He's followed by another tramp.

THE REVIVAL OF WRESTLING in New York will not probably get very far. Something tells us that even New Yorkers, who are gluttons for punishment, will not rush upon this good old bunk in maddened throngs.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON SAYS that he is greatly pleased with the splendid sportsmanship of the New York Yacht Club, and yet there are a lot of people who say that the Irish haven't a sense of humor.

BRITANNIA WILL NEVER RULE the wave as long as one rocking chair remains afloat in the raging committee room.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, is breaking his neck trying to get his protege a return match with Gunboat Smith. Jones has offered the Eastern heavyweight a guarantee of $10,000 for another bout, but Buckley has about decided to give Smith a rest for two months.

* * *

Most of the fans are of the opinion that Willard would have a great chance to defeat Smith in a return engagement. They point to the fact that Willard was making his first 20-round scrap and that Jones was handling him for the first time in a fight.

* * *

Jim Flynn, toughest of all heavyweights, will get into action Friday night. The Pueblo fireman will exchange wallops with Jim Coffey in a 10-round mill at New York and the fur should fly. This will probably be Flynn's last fight before he meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium here June 13.

* * *

Mike Saul will help train Flynn for the latter's set-to with Savage. Saul thinks that the experience gained by working with Flynn will put him in great shape for his bout with Eddie Hanlon.

* * *

If Matty McCue succeeds in defeating Patsy Brannigan at Milwaukee, Wis., Monday night he is to get a match with Abe Attell. The ex-featherweight champion has agreed to meet the Racine sensation on June 5.

* * *

Arthur Pelky will have the chance of his young life when he stacks up against Luther McCarty in a 10-round affair at Calgary, Alberta, Saturday night. Should Pelky succeed in besting McCarty or holding him even he will become one of the greatest cards in the heavyweight division.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke wishes to challenge any lightweight on behalf of Billy Bennett, the Irish lightweight champion. O'Rourke is particularly anxious to sign his boxer for a match with Willie Ritchie or Freddie Welsh.

* * *

Chicago fans are boosting Eddie Murphy as a contender for the lightweight championship. Murphy's recent draw fight against Jack Britton has done much to put him back in the good graces of the windy city fans. Murphy put up a great battle and was fighting Britton off his feet at the finish, according to reports from the battle ground.

* * *

Pittsburg fans are expecting a real scrap Saturday night when Eddie McGoorty and Frank Klaus clash in a six-round bout. Klaus' friends have made him an even money choice against the Oshkosh boy.

* * *

After the McGoorty affair Klaus will travel to Indianapolis where he is billed to take on Jack Dillon in a 10-round battle later in the month.

* * *

Nothing has been heard of lately from Tommy Murphy, the New York lightweight. Murphy is certainly entitled to much consideration when the Coast promoters pick an opponent for Willie Ritchie.

Rivers Gets July 4 Date With Champion

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Joe Rivers is the lucky boy to get the July 4 date here with Champion Willie Ritchie.

Following the announcement to-day by Promoter McCarey that he had been unable to induce Ritchie to meet the Spanish boxer at Vernon on Independence Day and consequently he, McCarey, would release Rivers from his agreement to appear at Vernon on that date, Manager Joe Levy wired his acceptance of the terms offered by Eddie Graney, the San Francisco promoter.

McCarey to-day received a telegram from Nolan flatly refusing to fight at Vernon, and declaring that Ritchie would fight at San Francisco on the holiday date and nowhere else.

"If Ritchie does not box for Graney on July 4 we will accept a match in Victoria on Dominion Day, July 1," wired Nolan. "A syndicate of very wealthy Britishers is seeking to promote a match between Ritchie and Freddie Welsh for that date."

SMITH-WILLARD WOULD BE CINCH FOR OLD-TIMERS

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—It is said that one Theodore Roosevelt is going to Arizona to search for a certain lost tribe. After seeing the championship candidates, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, in action, the writer feels that Roosevelt or some one else should be commissioned to hunt for descendants of the lost tribe of heavyweights.

There is no shutting one's eyes to the fact that the big fellows of to-day don't begin to compare with the heavies of "yesteryear" in any department of the game. One doesn't have to go so far as to institute comparisons between present day championship aspirants and the men who were thought to be in line for the title in former times.

Take the cases of such boxers as Kid McCoy and Joe Choynski, pugilists who were never troubled with the championship bee. How long would Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard last with either of these? Or how long would Gunboat or Jess keep erect in front of clean hitting, hard thumping Peter Maher?

There will be another heavyweight bout at Calgary to-day, and then, if present plans hold, there will be a championship final, with Gunboat Smith pitted against the winner of the Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky go at Calgary.

Naturally the deciding contest will create some interest, for, low grade though they are, bidders for the blue ribbon are the best we have. Candor compels the observation that they are simply the best of a bad lot.

Thought Fight a Draw.

While the writer is among those who are of the opinion that Willard did every bit as well as Smith Tuesday night, I must own that the tall Kansan was a good deal of a disappointment. We are led to look for better things after reading of the way Jess acquitted himself with Luther McCarty, Soldier Kearns and others.

It will be hard to make a top notch man of Willard for the reason that he has so few natural fighting qualities. True, his straight left is a dependable quantity, but this is largely on account of his tremendous reach. It would be pretty hard for Willard to straighten his left without finding something unless the other fellow clambered through the ropes when he saw it coming.

Willard has poor ideas of distance and direction and he hits in a stilted pokey way. This, may be, comes of clinching his fists too tightly before lashing out.

He seems, too, to be deficient in ring sense. Several times after chasing Gunboat into a corner and having him off balance he smiled fatuously and stepped back. And it looks count, the Gunner was quite content to have it that way.

Willard a Game Fellow.

Willard is a game fellow and he assimilates well, and it may be that proper coaching will develop him to a stage where he can safely hold his own with modern heavies. That is, unless the breed suddenly improves. One thing to admire in Jess is the way a stinging clash arouses his battle ire. In this respect he resembles Tom Sharkey.

Gunboat Smith's fight was an improvement on some of his local exhibitions. He seemed to use his head more than he generally does, but whether this was an instance of present initiative or the result of careful coaching the writer has no means of knowing. Anyhow there was a method in the way Smith handled himself, even if his execution was faulty.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., the former national champion, is one of a fine golfing family, in which both men and women have attained considerable distinction in their favorite game. W. C. Fownes, the father of W. C. Fownes, Jr., is a golfer of considerable skill, and I venture to say there is not a golfer of his age in the country who can defeat him. Fownes, Sr., plays golf almost the year round and he never fails to attend each national championship.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., began playing golf in 1900 and therefore he has enjoyed more than a decade of excellent sport. His record is indeed an enviable one, for in addition to winning the premier event in 1910 he has many other notable victories to his credit. He has held the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association amateur championship from 1904 down through 1911, and this championship although limited in territory, is of the highest class, as is shown by the fact that it has furnished two national champions.

Has Won Many Honors.

In 1910 and 1912 Fownes won the Pennsylvania State championship and he has really held at various times all the golfing honors of his State and many from elsewhere. In fact, the only important title that has been denied him so far is the Western championship, where he has invariably encountered a bit of hard luck. Pittsburg marks the Eastern boundary of the big Western Golf Association territory, and yet in spite of the many fine players in the Smoky City, Chicago has always managed to hold fast to the big Western cup.

Fownes was a member of the Olympic team of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, which won the event in 1905 at Chicago Golf.

Fownes' game has not been quite so good during the last year or so, owing, I think, to a number of experiments, chiefly with wooden clubs. Fownes believes his wooden shots to be the weakest part of his game and in consequence he is given to many experiments with them. Sometimes he tries for distance and sometimes for direction, and his clubs and methods of playing vary with the object in view. Last year he came to the national at Wheaton with clubs about forty-six inches in length.

Nearly Wins Over Hilton.

Fownes plays a very thoughtful game of golf. Its high quality can be realized by the fact that he has been national champion. Furthermore, in a match with H. H. Hilton at the National Golf Links tourney in 1911 his game compared favorably with the British player's and he was only defeated at the nineteenth hole in the second round.

Fownes is perhaps the most popular member of the U. S. G. A. He is a regular attendant at its annual event and I think without him the competition would lose much of its savor for a great many of us.

BRITONS WILL SELECT TENNIS TEAM IN JULY

LONDON, May 24.—The Secretary of the British Lawn Tennis Association announced that the British team which will defend the Dwight F. The teams playing in the eliminations will represent the United States, Australia, Germany, France, Canada, South Africa and Belgium.

RUBE WADDELL MISSING; BIG CROWDS DISAPPOINTED

WINNIPEG, May 24.—Although the Virginia (Minn.) Northern League team has played two games here, Rube Waddell, the eccentric southpaw, has failed to appear on the field for either game. Just where he is is a question, and if Manager "Spike" Shannon knows he is not telling. Large crowds have attended both games in the hope of catching a glimpse of the former big leaguer.

No Class to Champions of To-day

Feather Title a Family Affair

By Otto C. Floto.

ONLY a short time ago Mr. Featherweight dwelt in an abode alone. He was master of all he surveyed. But things have suddenly changed, and the elusive little cuss now lives in a duplex building. In other words, Johnny Kilbane was the sole possessor of the title and in undisputed control of the same. Now along comes Johnny Dundee and battles him. Well, it's a fifty-fifty proposition now. As a reminder, Kilbane now only holds a working interest in the title. True, he didn't lose it; neither did he win it again. Dundee didn't win it, either, but he worked so well that Referee Eyton declared him in as a partner on the thing. So at best it's a muddled or rather queer condition that exists in that department of the game.

The firm title to the prize should now read Kilbane & Dundee, holders of the world's featherweight title. So that both boys must content themselves with a half a loaf—which, after all, is better than no loaf at all.

* * *

SPEAKING of championship titles, was there ever a time when the different emblems were in so chaotic a condition? Take them right down the line from the heavyweights to the feathers, and not a single representative of any of the departments holds an undisputed right to the title he covets. Never before has such a thing been apparent in pugilism, and it does seem rather astounding to those who have never given this angle a fleeting thought.

When we look back a few years and realize the hard-fought battles and the strenuous routes the champions were compelled to travel over to gain their positions, and then peek hurriedly over the present crop—well, deliver us from expressing our candid opinion, for it would not look well in print.

* * *

TO ALL intents and purposes, Luther McCarty is heavyweight champion. Of course, he never won the title from the man who held it, and probably still holds it. That's not particularly Luther's fault, because of queer circumstances that transpired in the life of the recognized champion. Still the fact remains that McCarty has a title he acquired without winning it as per the usual process required to annex the coveted emblem. True, he stands ready to defend it. But—

Nevertheless, we'll fall in line and look upon Luther as the champion under the circumstances. At the same time, much as we admire him, he is No. 1 of the champions that acquired his honors without meeting the predecessor of the high office in actual combat.

* * *

THEN we drop to the middleweights. Here's where we laugh long and loud, for if there is a single one in the bunch entitled to be crowned champion we are ready to be convinced. Stanley Ketchel, whose sudden death left the question of champion an open one, could have taken the whole lot of the present crop, beginning with Klaus and including McGoorty, Papke and the whole flock, and beaten them to a jelly all on the same night, and in the same ring, without even half trying. So here's a class without a representative in the exclusive class. Klaus, who claims the title, is therefore labeled No. 2 of the champions who failed to battle a titleholder for the honor.

* * *

THE welterweights are in the same disturbed condition. Jimmy Clabby, if he could make the weight (145 pounds), might be looked upon as a real contender. As he cannot make the weight, we claim that Rube "Wildcat" Ferns is the best. And while he does not hold the title, he is ready to fight the whole world for it and have his right disputed to the same. This class, like the middleweight division, is barren of a leader, a man the world will recognize as the top-notcher of the 145-pounders. Of all the classes we are mentioning we recognize the claims of Ferns to the honor to a greater extent than we would listen to anyone else claiming it.

* * *

IN THE lightweight ranks we have Willie Ritchie as champion. Yet, like the other classes, he comes to us with a flaw in the title. His championship was won by the punch of the other fellow instead of his own. There is no doubt he would have defeated Wolgast had the battle gone on. But he didn't knock Ad out. On the other hand, it was the transgression of the former champion in striking that foul blow that awarded the honors to Ritchie.

In this same class we have two other good boys—Packey McFarland and Jack Britton. McFarland, however, can't possibly make the weight, so that lets him out. Ritchie beat Britton when they met on a former occasion. And, say, why not take Freddie Welsh into consideration? Thinking it over, his claims are the very best. He defeated Matt Wells for the English championship and beat Willie Ritchie the only time he met him (that was before Ritchie met Wolgast.) But again we are confronted with the condition that the champion is not one of that undisputed sort.

* * *

IN THE featherweight realm we have the laughable condition of a divided or split title, with two men claiming it. It was originally won by Kilbane from Attell. But it was one of those decision affairs, without a decisive ending, that stamps the winner as a bona fide representative.

After reviewing the different classes about us, it's like a fresh spring breeze to recall the classes of a few years ago, and see the grand list of names that represented the different divisions. Each and every one a champion in the full meaning of the term, and each and every title won by actual conflict within the ring, with a knockout accompaniment to cinch it and keep it free from dispute.

Heavyweight Champion—James J. Corbett.
Middleweight Champion—Robert Fitzsimmons.
Welterweight Champion—Tommy Ryan.
Lightweight Champion—Joe Gans.
Featherweight Champion—George Dixon.
Bantamweight Champion—Jimmy Barry.

SPEECHLESS.

"What are the athletes howling for?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot talk! They cannot talk!" young Johnny Evers said.
"Why do they look so awful glum?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot get their names in print," young Johnny Evers said.

"You may knock a baseball player; you may tell him he's a mutt,
You may tell him of the ebony that constitutes his nut,
You may write of solid ivory and alabaster, but—
He will always grab the paper in the morning."

Far be it from one to perpetrate a pun with malice aforethought, but it strikes us that Charlie Murphy is the guy that put the boss in Boston.

Not that we have anything against Tom Jones, but who is going to be the next meal ticket?

Jess Willard once threw Charlie Cutler down. The equanimity which the latter gentleman displayed leads one to wonder whether he is a philosopher or a humorist.

Joe Cantillon has released Hobe Ferris. Hobe got flippant one night and led Joe to suspect that he was less than sixty years old.

The consensus of opinion on the Pacific coast is that if Jess Willard were tried on a charge of pugilism he would be declared absolutely innocent.

LINES TO C. WEBB MURPHY.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The baseball writer wends his weary way,
And says: "No baseball player talks to me."

How happy is the baseball writer now
If C. Webb Murphy only has his way!
No longer must he write with wrinkled brow
The slop that lowbrowed athletes have to say.

No longer must he lean against a bar
And say: "Come on and have another drink!"
No longer must he stay where athletes are

Oh, Charlie Murphy, chubby little runt,
Your name is always near and dear to me,
You up and got away with this here stunt
And saved a thousand writers from ennui.

THEY'LL KNOW THEY'VE BEEN IN GAME—NAYLOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—George W. Naylor, stud groom to the Duke of Westminster, and who has charge of the English polo ponies, came into town yesterday from the Piping Rock Club. He wanted to have a good square look at the lower part of the town, and incidentally to buy some things for the horses. A few of those who are interested in the international match got around him and tried to get him excited over the match.

One said that Larry Fitzpatrick, who is training the American ponies, would put it all over him. Naylor gave a sort of icy grin as he remarked, "He may put it all over me as you say, old chap, but his side will know that they have been in a game."

There was a report yesterday that the American team were suffering from staleness, and that was the reason they had such little practice for the past week.

To-day's Ball Game Begins at 3

Gulls Have Grand Pitcher in Hogg

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE pastiming this afternoon at the celebrated ball park of the well-known Georgia Railway and Power Company, said park yclept Ponce DeLeon, will settle the questfon of whether or not a mediocre club can beat a good club with pitching alone.

And lest somebody arise to ask which is the "good" club, we state without hesitation that it is the Atlanta delegation—and add positively that the Gull team ought to be a mediocre aggregation, considered on a man-by-man basis.

And before we forget it, the contest this afternoon will be called at 3 o'clock to enable the Mobile team to get an early train. There should be sufficient time for a full nine-inning contest, provided the umpires, the managers and the players do their respective and assorted duties.

* * *

REVERTING to the Gulls and their claims on distinction, we can only say that we can't see them at all. It is a good club. But is it a great club?

We don't even pause for an answer.

You can hand Mike Finn a lot of credit for the way the Gulls have been winning. He has gathered together a club that has balance. It hasn't a strong spot in fielding, but it hasn't a weak one. It is not a great hitting club, but it has a great slugger in D. Robertson, and a moderately reliable one in Jacobson. The rest of it must be team play, or maybe something even more intangible than that—a winning spirit, maybe; which is a hard thing to define, but a useful one to have.

* * *

A REALLY great performer on the club is Bradley Hogg, the ex-Mercer and ex-Brave pitcher. The former Baptist hurled unusually good ball Friday. Though the Crackers acquired six hits, they never came within miles of scoring. Hogg walked just one man, struck out but one—and looked like ready money and lots of it all the way.

It takes a pretty good pitcher to hold the Crackers safe. They are deadly sluggers. Any pitcher who can shut them out is a big leaguer at heart—or mighty lucky. And there was no luck about Hogg's work.

How in the mischief it happened that the Braves ever let go of Hogg is a mystery. He looks more like a pitcher than any five men of George Stallings' staff rolled into one.

To those who remember Hogg in his college days, his huge size proved a jolt. He is a whale now, while in his college days he seemed a man of hardly more than average size. To-day he has the ideal size and weight for a great pitcher. He will be a big man in the big leagues some day.

THANKS are hereby expressed to Bill Hart for his efforts to hurry along Friday's game. Bill kept right on the trail of the players, got them up to the plate in a hurry and managed to run the game off in less than an hour and three-quarters—which was especially appreciated, owing to the fact that the day was awfully cold and raw.

ALL Atlanta, beginning with Bill Smith and running down to the humblest bat boy, is raging because the Atlanta papers were inclined to saddle the blame for losing the last Memphis game largely on the shoulders of Pitcher Dent. The following communication expresses the views of a lot of fans:

Dear Sir:

I am a great lover of baseball and frequently attend the games. I want to ask if the blame of losing Wednesdays game to Memphis is not wrongly placed on Pitcher Dent. Up to the sixth inning he pitched well nigh perfect ball. In the beginning of the seventh, a batter made an infield hit and the ball was thrown to first base in ample time to get the batter out. The first baseman in his eagerness to make a double play, failed to touch the base and threw badly to second. The shortstop failed to hold the ball and both runners were safe. Then Memphis' best hitter came to bat, made a three bagger, brought in three runs and the pitcher, discouraged, could do nothing more. Now didn't the first baseman and shortstop lose the game? If the runners on first and second had been put out, as should have been done, would not Atlanta have won?

* * *

THE point that "Fan" seems to have overlooked is that before Agler made his misplay, three singles in succession had been made off Dent. Then came the bobble. Then two more hits. We disagree with Bill Smith and others that Agler had an easy double if he had made the play right.

A pitcher who allows three singles with none out starts something right there.

More than that, a pitcher has got to be able to keep steady even after an error.

BIGGEST BALLOON RACE EVER OUT OF KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 24.—The largest and most widely represented balloon race ever held on this side of the Atlantic will be that which is to start from Kansas City July 4. George M. MURPHY DENIES BRESNAHAN WILL REPLACE EVERS

By Davenport.

BOSTON, MASS., May 24.—Slowly but surely the mystery of Charles Webb Murphy's visit to Boston is beginning to unravel.

Murphy is after pitchers. He is wise to the fact the Cubs are woefully weak when it comes to pitching, so is every one else who has been watching the dope.

Murphy stated before leaving for the East that he had a deal on with an Eastern club, hence his trip to Boston. The president of the Cubs left his room bright and early this morning, and it is rumored he went for a conference with Mr. Gaffney, owner of the Braves.

Hub Perdue. Yep, that's the game, and it's big game Murphy's after. If he gets Perdue it will be only by giving in exchange two or three good players. Sweeney has been showing weak at second and Art Phelan would just fit in there.

Murphy refused to commit himself upon the result of his trip when he returned to the hotel at noon, but he wore that famous Murphy smile which means he met with success of some sort. The boss of the Cubs denies that he is contemplating the removal of Evers in favor of Bresnahan.

He said this morning: "Evers has a five-year contract and there is not the slightest chance of a change of managers."

Murphy stated to Boston scribes last night that he did not permit his players to talk with him, but he played pool with one of his men until nearly midnight and hobnobbed with the others.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA was kind of grouchy last nite. Ma & me knew he was going to be grouchy, beekaus sum old friends of Ma was going to visit us for a few days & they was to cum last nite, all the way from Colfax, Wisconsin.

I doant like to be a killjoy, sed Pa, & I will do my best to treet Mister & Missus Bing all rite, but you know as well as I do what it will be. Both of them will want to be took to all of the leading points of interest, such as the hoam of the widow wich entertained George Washington onst & the museum of art & the points of historical interest outside of those wich I have just menshuned. After I have dragged them & you & littel Bobbie all oaver the town for a few days, showing them a lot of stuff that I doant care a rap to see, they will say goodbye & tell us to be sure & cum to Colfax & stay a month. That is sum invitashun, issent it? sed Pa—cum to Colfax & stay a month. It sounds like cum to Sing Sing & stay thirty years.

Pa Gets Their Name Wrong.

Well, thay are my frends, anyway, sed Ma, & I want you to be nice to them, & please remember, sed Ma, that thare naim isent Bing, thare name is Ging G-I-I-N-G, Ma sed, with the accent on the two Gs.

Wen Mister & Missus Ging caim thay didn't look as if thay was happy at all.

I am glad to bid you both welcome to our home, sed Pa. I have offen heard my wife speek of her deer friends the Pings.

Ging, sed Mister Ging. G-I-N-G. That doesn't sound like a vary hard naim to reemember, he sed. He looked at Pa kind of cross & Pa handed the look rite back to him.

What do you think of Atlanta, deer? said Ma to Missus Ging.

I think it is perfeckly beestly, sed Missus Ging. We had to ride in that horrid trolley all the way from the depot to here, & I had to stand up. I wanted Mister Ging to maik a gentelman give me his seat, but you know how husbands are. He sed that perhaps the poor man was tired. Think of it, and fancy me, a Ging, having to stand up in a common street car. Why, at home we have our own carriage.

If it is anything like the carriages I used to see in Colfax wen I was courting you, Pa sed to Ma, I am afrade Mister & Missus Wing wuddent have reached our hoam till to-morrow morning. Colfax was noted for its pritty guris and its saddle backed skates, sed Pa. Thare was only one hansum horse in the town, & nobody cud drive it.

I beg your pardon, sir, sed Mister Ging There are sum magnificent horses in Colfax. I have two roans that I wuddent sell for a thousand dollars.

I wuddent give a thousand cents for them, sed Pa. Thare isen't any class to a roan horse. Who ever heard of a roan horse stepping out & winning the Brooklyn Handicap? sed Pa.

Never mind, deerest, Ma sed to Pa. I am sure Mister & Missus Ging will get to love Atlanta after they have had a chanst to git around. Thare is so much of interest to see here, & the shops are very butiful now. The windows are jest full of bargans.

Missus Ging Is Put Out.

The windows can stay full of bargans, sed Mister Ging. I toald my wife beefoar we left hoam that the stores in Colfax was plenty good enuff for her mother before her and plenty good enuff for her. Thare is going to be no extrava-gance on this trip. Hevings deliver me, sed Mister Ging, from a shopping & bargan hunting woman. I wish you would show us our room, he sed to Ma. My wife & I are vary tired. I suppose you have breakfast at seven, he sed.

Oh, deer no, sed Ma. We have breakfast at nine.

Oh, well, sed Missus Ging. I suppose my husband & I can go out to a resterant. Do you know a good cheap place nere here? she asked Pa.

Yes, sed Pa, I know a good cheep place. They have rooms thare too.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to hive Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess.

Now go on with the story.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

"Yes, this is the garage—yes, Miss Deery—Yes, I understand—I'll have a car around in five minutes."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Cain had no definite idea in view except to drive a considerable distance out of town and have it out with this stranger. Hitherto his money had enabled him to have his way in everything and he had ridden roughshod over every obstacle that presented itself in his path, so that the idea that he was a sort of demi-god had become firmly implanted in his nature. In the case in hand he did not stop to realize that his money was of little use to him. He was blind with rage. He attributed his misunderstanding with Mildred to the passenger in the back seat. Cain resolved to eliminate this stranger from his affairs. He tried to get more speed out of the car, but by this time the roads were growing worse and worse as they got further out of town. They had passed the limit of electric lights and except for the rays of the powerful headlights everything was in inky darkness.

They must have driven all of half an hour and were a good fifteen miles from where they started, when Cain, spying a road that branched off to the left, turned into it. Up to this point Gordon Kelly, in the back seat, had made no movement whatever. He might have been asleep, for all Cain knew. But the car had not traveled a furlong on the branch road before he gave evidence that he was very much awake.

With a spring as light as a panther he vaulted over the back of the front seat and landed lightly beside Cain. Reaching down he switched off the magneto, pulled out the plug and dropped it into his coat pocket. Almost instantly the motor stopped and the car came to a standstill.

CHAPTER VIII.

REACHING down to the coil box, Cain discovered the plug was not there.

"Where's that plug?" he demanded, fiercely.

"I have it in my pocket," replied Kelly, quietly. "Something is likely to happen pretty quick, but as I don't know just what it is, I thought I would be on the safe side, that's all."

"Who are you?" cried Cain.

"I will tell you who I am, but first I want to know if I am talking to a crazy man, a fool, or a joker," answered Kelly. While he was speaking he was fumbling in his pockets. He now drew forth a match which he held up to the other's face. Cain blew it out almost as quickly as it ignited, but Kelly had seen enough.

"Oh, you're the Deerys' chauffeur," he observed calmly. "You're the man who nearly ran over me the other day. Well, did your employer tell you to dive me out here, or did you do it on your own hook?"

"I'm not a chauffeur," exclaimed Cain hotly, "I'm a friend of the Deery family and, if you want to know, I brought you here on my own hook. What are you going to do about it?"

"You are certainly a queer sort. What is your object? Is this a hold-up game?" Did you bring me out here to rob me?"

"Rob you; no!" shouted Cain. "I can buy and sell you a million times!" The calmness of the man seated beside him acted as a kind of reverse English on Cain. He had been angry all along, but was now furious and gave every indication of losing control of himself entirely.

"I can't figure you out at all," said Kelly in an even voice. "I'm not much used to city ways and I thought at first you had been ordered to take me on a little drive, though it is a mighty queer night for it. I stood for it as long as you stayed on the main road, but when you turned off here I thought it was time to quit. Tell, me please, what this is all about? If you have been drinking, you ought to be sober enough by now. If it's a joke I'll take it as such and let it go at that."

Cain ignored the question.

"What were you doing in Deery's house to-night," he snarled.

"I was invited there, but—"

"You're a liar!" screamed Cain, making a movement as if to struggle out of his seat behind the wheel of the automobile.

Just Chastisement.

As quick as the stroke of a cat Kelly shot up his right hand and his fingers closed on Cain's collar with the strength of a vise. With the same movement he jerked Cain's head down to the floor of the car. He sent his left foot crashing through the side curtains which had been fastened on to exclude the rain, and thus clearing a passage, as it were, he jumped to the ground, dragging the struggling Cain after him like a sack of meal. Cain fell in the muddy road with a splash. Still holding his man by the collar, Kelly, ankle deep in mud, hauled him around in front of the car and deposited him there in the full glare of the searchlights.

"Now we can see what we are doing," he remarked and in spite of the effort he had made to drag a man of Cain's size, his respiration was hardly above normal.

Cain scrambled to his feet and with a vile epithet rushed at his antagonist. But Kelly, who had a reach like Bob Fitzsimmons, simply put out one hand and Cain ran blindly into it and stopped short. With one powerful shove Kelly sent the other man reeling backward and, losing his balance, Cain fell with another splash in the mud. In two jumps Kelly stood over him.

"There's only one thing to do to a man like you," he said "Get up."

"Get up," ordered Kelly again.

But Cain refused to move so, reaching down Kelly inserted his fingers in the collar of his foe and yanked him to his feet. Then, turning him around, and facing him up the road, Kelly stepped back one pace and delivered a solid kick in Cain's nether region.

There is nothing that will take the fight out of a man sooner than a weighty kick, placed where it will do the most good. There is nothing so humiliating to the recipient, nothing so mortifying, so abasing. Such was the effect on Cain. He started to run up the road, but Kelly followed him and executed a series of blows with the foot, of astonishing power and accuracy. At last, grabbing Cain by the collar once more, he turned him around and kicked him back to the headlights.

Cain was covered from head to foot with the red mud of Georgia and Kelly's clothing was so splashed with it that very little of the material showed. The rain had practically ceased and only a fine mist was falling. Away off in the distance could be seen the glow of the lights of Atlanta reflected above that city. The rays of the powerful headlights fell full on the two young men. It was a weird scene, but Kelly was ready to have done with it.

"Do you own this car," he asked.

"No."

"Who does own it?"

"The Davis Garage."

Kelly took the plug from his pocket, inserted it in the coil box and switched on the spark.

"Crank it," he ordered.

Without a word Cain gave the motor a whirl and the machinery started with a roar. Kelly jumped in the driver's seat and, evidently sure of every movement, eased in the reversed gear and backed the car off the road with a view of heading it in the other direction. This accomplished, he called Cain to the side of the car and said:

Might Lose Temper.

"This may appear a childish act on my part, but I'm going to leave you here to find your way back to town the best way you can. It will do you good to think the whole matter over carefully. I don't know yet what your object was in bringing me away out here. Is there anything you want to say to me?"

Cain made no answer.

"Very well," continued Kelly, "I will probably be able to figure it out for myself in the course of time. You are evidently one of those rich young fellows that have more money than brains. I never met one before, but I have read about them in newspapers. My name is Gordon Kelly and I live at the Imperial Hotel. It is possible that you will be seeking some kind of revenge on me, but let me warn you to leave me severely alone. If you annoy me any further I am liable to lose my temper and Lord help you if anything like that comes to pass."

This may sound like heroics delivered by a stage hero in a melodrama, but as a matter of fact Kelly spoke calmly and seriously. It was simply his way.

Waiting a moment longer and receiving no response from Cain, Kelly started the car and slowly plowed his way through the mud to the main road, where the going was much better, leaving Cain to shift for himself. He drove carefully back to the city and reached his hotel in about an hour. Instead of stopping there, however, he continued on three or four blocks and slowed down next the sidewalk in front of the Capital City Club and left the car standing there. Walking back to his hotel he went to the desk and asked for his key. He was splashed with mud from head to foot and Clerk McClendon eyed him suspiciously for a moment, but as Kelly did not seem disposed to offer any explanation, he silently passed over the room key.

When Kelly reached his room, he went to the telephone, called up Davis' garage and said:

"You remember sending a car to Mr. Deery's house about 9:30 to-night? Well, you will find the car in front of the Capital City Club and if you want to know anything more about it you will have to see the man you sent along as chauffeur Good night."

Gordon Kelly then peeled off his mud-bespattered clothes, threw them on the floor of his bathroom, took a bath, crawled between the bedsheets and five minutes later was sleeping the sleep of the just.

Who was this young man from the mountains who knew all about handling automobiles? How did he acquire his calm manner? Where did he gain that easy and confident bearing? Whence came the breeding that enabled him to enter one of the "best" houses in Atlanta and conduct himself as though he had been brought up in "society?"

* * *

Forrest Cain, chewing the bitter cud of reflection, walked for more than an hour in the direction of the city before he got a lift. Then a friendly milkman came along and he rode the rest of the way in. Going to his room, he kicked the sleeping George out of bed and made him attend to his wants. Cain remained in bed all next day. His trunks had gone to New York and that night he followed them to the metropolis.

To Be Continued Monday.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this sixth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

A Reward of Merit

A Complete Short Story

"HERE comes Johnny!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones, sighing disconsolately. "He must have been awfully good to-day—for he's as dirty as a little pig, and he's an hour late!"

Her caller opened her eyes in amazement. "Awfully good?" she repeated. "Why, when my Sammy comes home late and is dirty I usually know that he's been into some sort of mischief. It's never a sign of being particularly good to my eyes."

"Well, your Sammy doesn't go to the same school," returned Mrs. Jones. "Johnny has a pretty and stylish teacher, and, what's more, she knows how to make her pupils like her. They all fight to do things for her! I learned all about it when I went to call on her one day after Johnny had brought home a perfect report card. For a whole month he'd been coming home late and looking perfectly dreadful—you'd think he was a street Arab. I have never been able to get anything out of him, except that he'd stayed after school to clean the blackboards.

A Perfect Card.

"Even though he was my own angel child, I had my doubts as to the reason he stayed, and I thought I would have his father settle with him when his report came in. A was excellent when he has the privilege of ringing that bell, he's so anxious to get to school in time to see that it is done right! And as for my errands, he finds it quite impossible to do them in his limited time."

He Was Late.

"What makes you so late?" she inquired, as Johnny came in, brushing the chalk dust from his sleeves.

Johnny grinned happily, "I had 95 in geography and 100 in spelling—so she let me have all the boards to-night," he answered, triumphantly. "And last week Frank had the bell—and he came late, so she said if I'd come early to-morrow and he wasn't there I could have it. Anyway, he cheats! And I've a good mind to tell her!"

"Will you run to—" began Mrs. Jones, but Johnny interrupted her as he turned to go.

"Yes, but just wait. I've got to see a fellow that's waiting out here!" And Johnny was gone.

"My, I wish I knew her system," declared Mrs. Jones, enviously.

"And errands are such nice, clean work!" sympathized the caller, glancing at the coating of chalk dust that had settled on the rug. "Maybe if you tell him it's a reward?"

But Mrs. Jones smiled and shook her head. "I'm not a teacher!" she replied.

Natural History Lessons

No. 2—The Lamb

By Dorothy Dix

THERE are few more valuable animals than the Lamb, whether you consider it from the mint sauce or the Wall Street point of view. In either capacity it is our meat, and furnishes glad raiment and diamonds to those who, but for it, would not slain a dozen take its place. Indeed, against the cold blasts of Winter.

The name of the individual who discovered the first Lamb is lost in the mists of antiquity, but as a source of supplies he has got the individual who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before beat a city block. Thus are we called upon again to marvel at the wisdom of a beneficent Providence that has created just the proper thing to meet our every need.

Lambs are found in all parts of the known world, and appear to multiply with great rapidity, so that as one is slain a dozen take its place. Indeed the theory is held on Wall Street that a new batch of Lambs is born every second, but this probably exaggerates the situation. At any rate, the Lamb crop for the last year or two has been so poor that many brokers have been forced to prey on one another.

In appearance the Lamb is of a mild and pleasing aspect with a voice that sounds like the amateur soloist who kindly consents to sing at a club dinner. Originally the Lamb is of a snow white color, but after a short sojourn away from its native haunts it is apt to need a hurry trip to the laundry. It gets soiled very quickly.

In the matter of legs the Lamb is eclectic, some Lambs having four, one located on each corner, while other Lambs have only two, which are situated at the extreme northeast end of their anatomy, thus enabling them to stand upright after the manner of men. Also, some Lambs have alfalfa on their chins, while others have smooth faces, but this difference depends on whether they came from the middle West or not.

We may dismiss the quadruped Lamb in a few words, merely stating, in passing, that it has of late developed an ambitious and aspiring tendency to rise skyward under the tuition of Messrs. Armour and Swift, and that it has shown a coy disposition to stay in cold storage that every one who has the good of the country at heart must deplore. However, that great veterinarian Professor Wilson, late of Princeton University, we understand, has now undertaken the moral regeneration of the Lamb, and eke the beef, and the pig, and we may hope to see some needed reforms instituted in this line.

It is in the two-legged Lamb (genus suckibus) that the trained naturalist finds his most interesting study.

This amiable creature lives apparently only to give pleasure to others, which it does by the simple expedient of suffering itself to be sheared by any artistic trimmer that happens along.

This is great sport, and it is a matter of pride that our Wall Street brokers hold the world's record as the champion fleecers of Lambs.

Being so gentle and kind, the Lamb, especially the woolly ones from Pittsburgh, are held in great esteem by women as pets. There was once a chorus girl named Mary who had a little Lamb, with a fleece as white as snow, and everywhere that Mary went his money did surely go—but that's another story.

Lambs are generally of the masculine persuasion, though occasionally we observe an elderly female mutton dressed as Spring Lamb capering around at the dansant.

Not What He Meant.

Jones and Long had not met for years. Once—that is, in the days when both had been striving for fame in their different professions—they had been really good chums, and many a talk had they enjoyed together by the fireside as to the little places they would take in the country "when their ships came home."

The dream of Jones has been realized, and now, although a portly old fellow, it was with a sense of real pleasure that he prepared for a visit from his former friend.

"Ah, it's splendid seeing you down here, Long!" he said cordially, by way of greeting. "Quite like old times—what? And the missus, I know, is longing to shake you by the hand. But first—yes, you must come along and have a look at my greenhouse. You simply must!"

And Long went.

"Well, Jones," he said, "you've got a mighty pretty place down here; but, to my mind, it's just a bit bare."

"Oh," replied Jones cheerfully, "that's because the trees are so young! Next time you come—why, they'll be so big that you won't recognize them!"

.:. The Truth About England .:.

There is a large missionary school in Tokio where the teaching is given in English. One of the pupils not long ago wrote a composition on England, from which these are extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the emmenced mind and his chin is so strong as deserves iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully says, 'The sun are never set on our dominion.' The testimony of England say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit, though he has gained a complete world.' The English are cunning mention to establish a great Empire of the Paradise. As the Englishmen always confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy, and the reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men!"

The Drawbacks

"HOUSE HUNTING," said the man who is boarding with the Pikers until he can get a home and bring his wife and children to town, "is the worst and most depressing job that any man or woman ever had to tackle.

"You can never find a house anywhere that has not some terrible drawback," he went on. "You can take your choice between a poor house in a good neighborhood and a good house in a poor neighborhood.

"If you have a good house in a poor neighborhood your little Cedric and Kenneth and Quentin will be contaminated by contact with those common Awfulwaffle children and the horrid young Beansizzles. And if you take a poor house in a good neighborhood your children will hang wistfully upon the fence and watch the haughty Stalkswaggers children, exclusive young Manybridges and the stuck-up little Snippydoodles at play.

"If a house is perfect in every other respect the landlord will live too near. You are not at first suspicious of the fact that there is a handy little gate by which he can enter your back yard. At first he is just helping you move in. But after you are settled you find him on the premises every time you come home from anywhere.

"Next you note with concern that he and his wife are exceedingly familiar with the history of all the people who have occupied the premises before you. And presently you begin to realize that your idiosyncrasies will furnish considerable data for the edification of your successor.

"Every time you find the landlord at your house he is there merely in the capacity of a friend. He was afraid the cat was caught in the fly-paper or that the canary had escaped, or that mice had got in the piano. He just come to see that everything was as it should be. You are glad to find that you have such a solicitous friend who is always looking after your interests.

"But when you come home suddenly some day and find him taking a bath in your bath room his disinterested motives are not so clear. You become dissatisfied and begin getting ready to move."

GETTING MARRIED

By DOROTHY DIX.

MY DEAR ROBERT—Who was the wise guy that said "the remarriage of a widow or widower was the final triumph of hope over experience"? Anyway, he was there with the goods when it came to sizing up the nerve of those who, like yourself, are contemplating entering that Mendelssohn Rag.

Now, I am not knocking second marriages. I am strong for them. But I confess they always fill me with amazement. If a man or woman has been happily married the first time, I should think that he or she would not dare to even attempt to replace the angel he or she has lost with another husband or wife, because he or she would realize that no one can always make matrimonial ten-strikes.

On the other hand, if a man or woman has been unhappily married, it has always seemed to me that the very sound of wedding bells would be anathema to him or her, and that, having been mercifully delivered by death or divorce from the partner who made life a torment, such a one would no more rush back into the holy estate than the soul who has just won out of purgatory would voluntarily return to it.

Opinion of the Public.

However, the general public does not share in these opinions. Every day we see the truly bereaved consoling themselves by taking new partners, and the freed hastening to put their necks once more under the yoke; for marriage is the only human experience from which we learn no wisdom.

Perhaps this is just as well. If we weren't all plungers, none of us would ever get married, for matrimony is the big gamble of life. In it we stake our all on the turn of a card, and whether we win or lose is pure luck, since there is no earthly way of telling beforehand what sort of a husband or wife a man or maiden will turn out to be.

Your first venture into matrimony was so disastrous that you can at least comfort yourself with the thought that you have been through the worst disillusionment that domesticity can offer. Any other of the fifty-seven known varieties of wives must be better than the one you had, whose only claim to your gratitude was established when she packed her trunks and hiked for Reno.

As I said before, it is strange that your previous experience of matrimony should incline you to try it over again; but, since it does, let us hope that you are making a more fortunate choice in a wife this time and that luck will be with you.

Of Our Own Making.

But did you ever think, son, that luck in matrimony is a good deal like luck in business—principally of our own making? Opportunity and happiness knock on our door, but unless we are on the job, ready to welcome them in, they pass us by. They don't force their way in with a club. They have to be cajoled across the threshold.

So, if you want this second marriage of yours to turn out successfully, it's going to be up to you to strike the keynote, and make it either a grand, sweet song or a scream. What? That's right.

It's the husband's place to make the home happy. Of course, the wife is due to chip in with her little contribution to the general felicity; but no woman, working alone and unaided, can carry out that contract. It's too big for her. It's a man's size job.

To begin with, son, make of your divorce papers a torch to light you on the road of happiness with this marriage. Think back and remember the things that you and your wife quarreled about. Was there a perpetual conflict between you on the money question?

Tell Your Income.

Avoid that snag by telling the girl you are about to marry exactly what your income is, and what she will have to spend. Tell her that she will have to do without many of the things that rich women have, perhaps without many of the luxuries that she has been in the habit of having. That will start out fair with her and give her, at least, a chance to keep out of the box of becoming a poor man's wife, unless she loves you enough to prefer you to fine clothes and an automobile.

Then, when you are married, give her a definite allowance for the house and for her own personal expenses, and give it to her as her due, without making her come to you for it like a beggar. And make her live within her allowance. That's the way to train her into being a good business woman.

Did you and your first wife have a never-ending fight because you stayed out late at night? Don't marry, son, until you are done sowing your wild oats. If you dance attendance on chorus girls and joy-ride them around; if you want to play poker and drink with the boys, stay single, where you'll have perfect liberty to do so. Don't be selfish enough to take a girl away from her home and put her to watching through weary nights for the drag of a drunken husband's footsteps.

Dreary for Girl.

Aside from the heartbreak and the anguish and the anxiety of it all, think how dreary it must be for a woman to spend her evenings alone.

No girl would, marry if that was what she expected to get in matrimony, so be just and don't ask one to leave her happy home for you unless you are going to give her one just as happy in return.

A man's idea of doing his full duty by his wife is to give her food and clothes. That isn't enough. He owes her consideration and tenderness and comradeship besides. It's just as much his place to try to be entertaining to her, and meet her with a glad, sweet smile of an evening, as it is hers to try to interest and entertain him. And when a man does this, son, he never has to pay alimony.

Make your own matrimonial luck in the second marriage, son, and may heaven prosper the brave!

.:. The Exact Time .:.

"IF you are interesting in getting mother off on the train you'd better make some arrangement to set my clock right," suggested Mrs. Binkum.

"I certainly am interested," replied Binkum. "But you know, Betsy, that I have no way of setting your clock because my watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day. I never know whether it has lost eight or eighteen minutes and I do not like to gamble on any such important event as your mother's catching her train."

"My clock gains about thirteen minutes a day," said Mrs. Binkum. "Wouldn't that make it easier to get to set it by your watch?"

"Let me think—let me think," mused Binkum. "If a watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day and a clock gains thirteen minutes a day how can a watch be used in setting the clock? And at 12 o'clock fast watch time, what would be the hour by slow clock? I give it up."

"If they would only blow a whistle at noon in this town," said Mrs. Binkum. "I could tell the time at least once a day, and the rest of the time I should be able to tell about what time it was."

"The situation is serious I admit," said Binkum. "If we keep on this way you and I will be two or three days apart. There will come a time, in fact, when it will not even be the same year by our respective timepieces."

"The railroad clock is correct, I suppose?"

"Without a doubt. I can go down to the station, say at 12 o'clock, and start for home immediately. The station is eighteen blocks away. It takes me thirty minutes, about——"

"About! We want the exact time! And, besides, as likely as not you'll stop to talk to somebody. You do not know how long it takes you to walk eighteen blocks."

"I admit that I do not know how long it takes me to walk eighteen blocks. But there is one thing that I can time myself by. You know I was a bricklayer. I can lay just 60 bricks an hour. I am absolutely correct to a dot."

"But how does that help us?"

"It is the only thing I can time myself on."

"Then I will go to the railroad station and at 12 o'clock I'll give you some sort of signal, and you can begine to lay bricks. Then as soon as I get home we can count the bricks and know how many minutes have elapsed since I left the station."

"All right. I'll order the bricks and have the mortar ready. But what sort of signals are you going to give me?"

"I have read that the sound that carries farthest is the sound of a bass fiddle. I'll borrow Uncle John's bass fiddle. Then at precisely 12 o'clock I will get a good big sweep at the bow, and you'll hear it and begin to lay bricks. So when I get home I will know the exact time and set my clock and mother can catch her train."

"Fine!" ejaculated Binkum.

He's Too Kind

"I HAVE no use for the hospitable man!" declared the young architect, who had come in from dining out, and was at the moment engaged in rooting around in the pantry for something to eat.

"I hate a man who carries you proudly off to dinner when you don't want to be entertained. There's Robinson, the soul of hospitality! He's always trying to drag me home with him for dinner, and I have always managed to get away from him until to-night.

"This night he nailed me, and I couldn't get away. You should have seen Mrs. Robinson's expression when he shoved me in through the door.

"He shoved me right into the dining room, into the bosom of his family. His poor wife grabbed some things that were airing by the fireplace, and then hurried out and changed her dress. Then I heard the kitchen range rattling and knew that the unfortunate woman was cooking dinner all over again.

"Robinson was very entertaining for a while. He caught part of what I said, and I caught part of what he said. But he was uneasy and soon bolted out into the kitchen, where debate was immediately in order.

"In due time we had a very unfestive meal. Every once in a while Robinson gave his wife a dig, and she gave him a dig—sort of tennis fashion. I was the net for their little contest and every now and then I got the ball.

"The three kids got spanked and put to bed in relays. That was not exactly delightful for me!

"Robinson is one of the best fellows I ever saw! And I went to school with Emily, his wife. But I am blessed if I like to drop in there for a meal at night and have them play tennis across me in the manner described.

"I like to be treated formally. If a man wants to invite me to dinner, let him take me to the club or proceed to make adequate arrangements with his family ahead of time!"

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Do You Know That—

The longest hunger strike on record was carried out some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt as to his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to escape the guillotine, and from the day of his arrest refused to eat in spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell, and when that failed, attempted forcible feeding. Granie held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which time he died.

It is reported that all German submarines are to be fitted with guns. Two types have been selected—a 12-pounder, which can be housed and a 1-pounder, which will be permanently in position. The older boats will probably carry 1-pounders only. The 12-pounders are on special high-angle mounting for use against aircraft if necessary. The crew of these guns consists of four men, three to work the gun and one to hand the ammunition. The newer boats will carry two of these guns.

Farmers in the Boyertown district of Pennsylvania came for miles round to attend a sale held at Boyertown of a number of heavy rolled steel coffins. A burial casket company purchased the coffins fifteen years ago, but they were too cumbersome and could not be disposed of. The coffins, which were sold at prices ranging from ten cents to a quarter each, will be used by the farmers for watering troughs for their stock.

A new machine, called the stenotype, has been invented, which enables the shorthand writer to get from 400 to 600 words a minute upon paper in an absolutely correct and accurate form. The basis of operating the machine is phonetic spelling. While the work done is virtually the same as done by shorthand, it has the advantage of being recorded in plain English characters.

Nell Brinkley Says:

I WALKED with a sceptic who has scarcely a rag of a dream to his name to believe in, close under a garden wall, warmed by the sun and cuddled close by the fragrant arms of cherry trees in spring bloom. On the broad, flat top of it was a gypsy-like girl of ten, maybe, with a bowl of iridescent suds between her scratched, sun-tanned knees and a head as velvety black as the poplars in the garden must be when night comes. Up into the still scented air she was sending big elastic soap bubbles, hued like a box of loose gems with a shaft of sunlight lying on them, frail discs of perfect beauty which are the vanishing soul of a drop of crystal water. Idly they floated, some long breathless seconds, some but an instant, giving to the wind changing and glowing with swift-running rivers of color before they snapped into thin air with a tiny shatter of splintering light.

"There, by my new straw hat!" quoth the sceptic, "there is the stuff that dreams are made of: there the blowing of them, there the rainbow coloring, there the vanishing into thin air. What are they? Nothing. Why blow them through our little thin pipe in the first place? Only the veriest child takes joy in blowing soap bubbles, and only the simple-minded among grown-ups (your pardon, mad'moiselle) find the making of dreams delectable. They only snap and vanish, and where once our eyes saw a sphere of unutterable beauty there is nothing! Ah, ah, I don't dream any more, my child. They amount in the end to just a bit of elastic color that we cannot touch or breathe upon—pf!—there is nothing there. Dreamers are fools, out of a drop of ether, colorless it is true, but very real and material stuff which they can at least possess. Out of this tiny but satisfactory thing they insist on stretching a gorgeous thing that a breath will break."

"Nevertheless," quoth I in return, I who am so much less wise and who have so much a better time, "nevertheless, the little kid on the wall is having a better time than you. The bursting of one thin bubble is just nothing. There are countless more in the bowl between her knees. What is the vanishing of one lovely-hued thing when you have the making of endless more? What is the breaking of one little tiny dream of yours when you have the source of countless more in your head and heart? There is the big dream of all—wise man—the bowl—the bowl! Real it is, too—just soap and water. There is the big dream of all, wise man, the head and the heart that are the source of frail and lovely dreams! Real they are, too—red blood and brain. There is where you are poor, m'sieu. You have considered the bubble too deeply, and you haven't the bowl!"

The little black head on the wall went on blowing thin, lovely planets into the spring air, and her eyes were thoughtful enough to make me think she saw child dreams of the things that are to be in their opalescent sides. It looked lots of fun, and it IS fun to blow dreams, for without dreams (real dreams are ambitions) where would we be? After all, would we care about a bubble at all if we could hold it in our hand and play with it? For that matter, we can go buy us a big crystal or a pretty marble any day.

Hasn't Found It.

Jackson—Bunker has got himself into a nice fix.

Johnson—How?

Jackson—He wrote an article on "The Ideal Wife" for a ladies' paper last month.

Jackson—Somebody told his wife about it, and she's been reading the thing over during the past two days trying to discover a single trait wherein his ideal resembles her. She hasn't found it, and Bunker dines in the city now.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A minister in a small country village, who was noted for his absent-mindedness, was once observed to stop suddenly in the middle of his sermon and heard to mutter:

"I knew she would—I knew she would!"

After the service was over some one asked him the reason.

"Dear me," said he, "did I? Well, you know, from the pulpit I can just see old Mrs. Rogers' garden, and this morning she was out pulling up a cabbage, and I thought to myself, 'Now, if that cabbage comes up suddenly she'll go over,' and just then it came up and over she went."

Brown—I've got an excellent plan for getting rid of duns.

Green—Ah! That so?

Brown—I have. Never fails.

Green—Then, old fellow, you must let me into the secret, for I'm worried to death by 'em.

Brown—Well, I've tried it several times of late and I find the man never comes back again.

Green—Aye, aye! what do you do?

Brown—I pay him.

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see I'm rather busy just now. I hung Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your churchwarden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled-looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly remarked the woman as she counted the contents of her purse.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

The father looked at Mary with a reproach that was pathetic.

"See," he said, and his voice was for once thin with passion, "see what you've done to my boy!"

Mary had held her eyes on Dick. There had been in her gaze a conflict of emotions, strong and baffling. Now, however, when the father spoke, her face grew more composed and her eyes met his coldly. Her voice was level and vaguely dangerous as she answered his accusation.

"What is that compared to what you have done to me?"

Gilder stared at her in honest amazement. He had no suspicion as to the tragedy that lay between him and her.

"What have I done to you?" he questioned, uncomprehending.

Mary moved forward, passing beyond the desk, and continued her advance toward him until the two stood close together, face to face. She spoke softly, but with an intensity of supreme feeling in her voice.

"Do you remember what I said to you the day you had me sent away?"

The merchant regarded her with stark lack of understanding.

"I don't remember you at all," he said.

The woman looked at him intently for a moment, then spoke in a colorless voice:

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store. And perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy-jowled man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember. Yes? There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off—only you asked the judge to make an example of her."

The man to whom she spoke had gone gray a little. He began to understand, for he was not lacking in intelligence. Somehow, it was borne in on him that this woman had a grievance beyond the usual run of injuries.

"You are that girl?" he said. It was not a question, rather an affirmation.

Mary spoke with the dignity of long suffering—more than that, with the confident dignity of a vengeance long delayed, now at last achieved. Her words were simple enough, but they reached to the heart of the man accused by them.

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again, remorselessly.

"You took away my good name. You smashed my life. You put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. . . . Well, I've begun to collect."

Burke Shouts a Warning.

The man opposite her, the man of vigorous form, of strong face and keen eyes, stood gazing intently for long moments. In that time he was learning many things. Finally he spoke:

"And that is why you married my boy."

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

"It is not!"

Burke shouted a warning. Demarest, more diplomatic, made a restraining gesture toward the police official, then started to address the young man soothingly.

But Dick would have none of their interference.

"This is my affair," he said, and the others fell silent. He stood up and went to Mary and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you loved me."

The wife shuddered, but she strove to deny.

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not!"

"And you love me now!" he went on, insistingly.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated, bitterly.

But he was inexorable.

"Look me in the face and say that."

"Look me in the face and say that," he repeated.

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. The three watchers dared not interrupt this drama of emotions, but at last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly. Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I Do Not Love You."

"I do not love you."

"Just the same," he said cheerfully, "you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me."

Mary felt a thrill of fear through her very soul.

"You can't!" she cried harshly. "You are his son!"

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care a d—n what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll put all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart, because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke, with his rousing voice, spoke again:

"I tell you, she's a crook!"

Mary moved a little and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers?"

Gilder moved fussily.

"And you——"

Mary swayed a little, standing there before her questioner.

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago you took away my name—and gave me a number. . . . Now I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XV.

Aftermath of Tragedy.

THE Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger. Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. In these hours of grief the soul of him put out its strength. He learned beyond peradventure of doubt that the woman whom he had married was in truth an ex-convict, even as Burke and Demarest had declared.

Nevertheless, he did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim.

He Remained Loyal.

He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder. In his summing of her, he set as more than an offset to her unrighteousness in this regard the desperate struggle she had made after leaving prison to keep straight, which, as he learned, had ended in her attempt at suicide.

He knew the intelligence of this woman whom he loved, and in his heart was no thought of her faults as vital flaws. It seemed to him rather that circumstances had compelled her, and that through all the suffering of her life she had retained the more beautiful qualities of her womanliness, for which he reverenced her. In the closeness of their association, short as it had been, he had learned to know something of the tenderer depths within her, the kindliness of her, the wholesomeness.

Swayed as he was by the loveliness of her, he was yet more enthralled by those inner qualities of which the outer beauty was only the fitting symbol.

So in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers and abandon her. On the contrary, his only purpose was to gain her for himself, to cherish and guard her against every ill, to protect with his love from every attack of shame or injury.

To Be Continued Monday.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me, but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it, with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Maine.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Poultry Fertilizer Better than Chemical To Build Up Land

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The value of the poultry products in the country for 1910 was approximately $800,000,000, and the 1913 product will be around $1,000,000,000.

Much of this is attributed to the everlasting and persistent efforts of the American Poultry Association, an organization whose aims and efforts are to the building up and increasing of the thoroughbred poultry interests of this country. How well they have succeeded we will leave the reader to judge for himself from the wonderful building up of the industry in every nook and corner of the country.

But the very people who should receive the greatest benefits from this work are not reaping the benefits they should. I refer to the farmers of this country, and especially those of the South.

The raising of cotton by the means of chemical fertilizers seems to have a death grip upon them; so much so that they can not see over it into anything more profitable to them. They have been constantly ruining their land, but they have been turning it out to grow up in bushes and adding new land to keep up the supply. But that string to their bow is about worn out, and they must look to the building up or maintaining the fertility of the soil now in hand.

Chemical Fertilizers.

This can hardly be accomplished by the use of chemical fertilizers, for at best they represent little more than prods and stimulants, such as whisky, morphine and the like to the human body, requiring more and more at each succeeding dose to produce the results, the result of which is utter depletion. What they need are the natural elements, such as poultry manure, prepared in the way of a compost heap, can furnish to the soil. A thousand hens on the average small farm, with proper care of the droppings, will do wonders in enriching the soil. The land should then be cropped in rotation with peas, corn, clover, potatoes, etc.—with the careful deep plowing so essential to the conserving of all the elements of the soil and air, which will work wonders. If the hens are allowed to range at intervals during the day, they will do more toward destroying the insect enemies of the crops than all the insecticides you can buy.

About 175 days represent the working actually spent during the year upon the farm. If the farmer would devote at least a part of the remaining time to the care and management of a good flock of well bred chickens instead of remaining idle, much profit would result and his farm would improve in fertility each year.

The American Poultry Association stands for pure thoroughbred stock. It does not indicate to you what varieties you should keep. It leaves that to you. But whatever you do, discard the old mixed breed, and take up something that will show uniformity not only in color and breed characteristics, but in the production of eggs and meat. I have simply outlined a course that can be made profitable not only in the way of dollars and cents, but the improvement of your land in a permanent way. Get busy and work out the details, as every one must who makes a success of anything in this world.

Questions and Answers.

Judge Marshall—Some of my chickens have what seems to me to be rheumatism. They sit around on their hock joints a good deal of the time, and when they do attempt to get about they succeed with difficulty, hobbling about in a most ungainly manner. They seem to eat well and in many ways are all right. We have lost none so far with it, but of course will if they are not helped in some way. Can you suggest anything that might help them out? Thanking you in advance, I am yours truly—Mrs. M. M. H., Jackson, Miss.

Answer.—The first thing to do is to remove the cause if possible. It is no doubt rheumatism caused by roosting too low in a house or coop with a damp clay floor. Give the floor a coating of two inches of good dry sand or sawdust; something that will remove the results of the dampness. Have plenty of ventilation, but let it be pure and free from filth or dampness. Those afflicted should respond readily to treatment of some good liniment or a solution of witch hazel and arnica well rubbed in about the joints. We would also recommend the use of salts in the drinking water at the rate of a teaspoon to each two fowls. Give this one week and then use Douglass Mixture the next week.

The principal effort should, however, be made in protecting the well ones rather than in treating the sick.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Railroad Makes Move For Two Spur Tracks

Southern to Serve Big Factories in Marietta St. Section—West End Lots Bring $30,800.

An agreement entered into between the Southern Railway Company and Judge E. C. Kontz, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Kontz, Porter Langston and Philip Weltner, presages a considerable commercial development in the entire Marietta Street section. It will mean the erection of factories which will add greatly to the effectiveness of the Marietta Street neighborhood as a manufacturing center.

The agreement contemplates the construction of double spur tracks from the Southern's main line near Simpson Street to a point about a block and a half toward Mangum Street, between Simpson and Jones Avenue. The tracks will extend westerly 550 and 357 feet, respectively. Work on them is expected to start soon.

Persons in close touch with the improvement intimated that substantial commercial establishments were in contemplation, but refused to go into details.

This step is but another evidence of an industrial awakening in the neighborhood mentioned. Other interests, principally the railroads, are quietly working out plans of extension. Announcement of such plans is looked for shortly.

Most of the property in this direction on which developers have an eye for manufacturing is within the one-mile radius, which means close proximity to downtown activities.

West End Lots Bring $30,800.

Included in Friday's real estate announcements was the sale of approximately $30,800 in residence lots by the Dillin-Morris Company and J. S. Collins, of Collins Brothers & Davies for William J. Davis, developer of West End Park. The sale of 27 lots covered a period of 30 days, and it was also announced that about 25 houses are just completed or being built in this subdivision, and that the total in West End Park is now approximately 150. West End Park was opened up a year ago.

The lots just sold are on West Ontario Avenue, near Gordon Street, and averaged $1,100 to $1,250 apiece.

Sales on Durant Place.

Prominent citizens figured this week in two sales on Durant Place, 474 feet north of Ponce DeLeon Avenue. Edward M. Durant sold to Attorney Sam D. Hewlett, Legislator-elect; John Y. Smith and John T. Dennis a 44 by 109-foot lot, for $2,000, and an adjoining lot, 42 by 109 feet, for the same price. Mr. Hewlett and Mr. Smith got an undivided three-eighths interest each and Mr. Dennis two-eighths. The cash consideration was $500 in each sale.

Transfer of Ellis Parcel.

S. H. Phelan, of Crawford County, formerly of Atlanta, has conveyed to Mrs. Barry Wright, of Rome, the northeast corner of Ellis and Courtland Streets. This parcel is a block east of the Elks Club and in the vicinity of other valuable properties. The frontage on Ellis Street is 50 feet.

Cancellations on Increase.

Figures in The Fulton County Daily Report for the twentieth week of 1913 and the corresponding week in 1912 show a continued increase in the number and amount of mortgages canceled, which realty men consider a good sign. The number in 1913 was 45 and the total $59,445, and for last year 39 and $45,835. Real estate transfers gained in number, but fell off in amount, and building permits dropped back a little in both.

Auction Sale Successful.

Everything but the weather was favorable to a successful auction sale Thursday by the Foster & Robson Co. of bungalows and lots on the South Decatur car line in the Ninth Ward. Rain stopped the sale, but before it came the following sales, aggregating $5,530, were made:

Bungalow to J. A. Boatwright for $1,500.

Bungalow to M. Owen for $1,525, sold on the grounds for a profit.

Bungalow to Mrs. T. M. Johnson for $1,560.

Lot 36 to I. N. Ragsdale for $245.

Lot 37 to T. N. Bradshaw for $140.

Lot 19 to M. Owen for $270.

Oakland City Auction.

The Foster & Robson Real Estate Agency has become associated with the W. E. Treadwell Company in the sale Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock of bungalows and residence lots at Oakland City, on the East Point car line. These real estate agencies report many inquiries, and a large crowd of home-seekers is expected out. The property for sale is opposite the George W. Adair School and has undergone extensive improvements.

New Dry Goods Home.

The new home of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company will be started at once at 92 South Pryor Street, and the concern will move its stock from North Pryor, having sold out there some weeks ago to Luther Z. Rosser and J. H. Porter. Mrs. L. J. Bowie has applied for a permit to erect a four-story and basement brick building for the dry goods house at a cost of $28,000. Donaldson & Pierson are the contractors. The Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company will occupy the building under lease.

T. C. Hellbrauck has filed application to build a $2,000 dwelling of one story on West Tenth Street. Day labor will be used.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

Forrest & George Adair

Six New Bungalows and Sixteen Building Lots AT AUCTION Saturday, May 24, 3 P. M.

In the Tenth Ward on Warner Street and Allene and Woodrow Avenues. Just two blocks from the splendid car service to East Point, College Park and Hapeville. Also convenient to the Stewart Avenue car line.

This property is in a rapidly growing section, close to the new $40,000 "Adair" Public School, and only two blocks from Adair Park.

One of Atlanta's best citizens, Mr. I. N. Ragsdale, has developed this property, sparing neither time nor money to bring this property to a point of desirability that would make it acceptable to the better class of citizens for homes.

With this purpose uppermost in mind, he has built six attractive bungalows. Built them of good material and with day labor, exercising good taste and rare good judgment in all the details of arrangement and construction. These are not the usual "built to sell" affairs.

Each house has a small loan, which the purchaser assumes as part of the price. The balance will be paid in small monthly payments without interest. A small cash payment will be required, ranging from $100 to $250. This is an unusually easy arrangement that should appeal to every buyer of a home.

The lots will be sold on very easy terms, with 6 per cent simple interest.

The lots lie particularly well, many of them having nice shade. They will make desirable and valuable home sites. Several of them have the added value of two street fronts.

Take East Point or College Park cars. Get off at Gammages. A big sign will direct you to the property. Get plats from

GOOD NEW HOMES: Listen, on Moreland Avenue, corner of Albemarble, we are just completing a beautiful two-story, seven-room bungalow. This place has an abundance of large and roomy closets, tile bath, exposed ceiling beams, stone front, stone steps, and it is on a corner lot; birch doors, the best of hardware; will tint walls to suit your own taste. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. To see this is to buy it. Take a look and come to see us.

ON NORTH AVENUE, close to Highland Avenue, we have just completed a pretty six-room home with two baths; it is seldom that you find a place so well built and so complete in every detail as this one. Each bath has tile floor; large rooms, plenty of light and furnace heat. Will take a good lot in part payment for this. It is close to school and churches, within a stone's throw of Druid Hills; car just a block away. Or will sell on easy terms.

ON BEAUTIFUL Cleburne Avenue we are offering the best value in the city in a new six-room, hall and bath bungalow with tile floor on front porch and in bath room, dressing mirrors, stone steps, and automobile drive on side. This lot has a frontage of 70 feet. If you have been waiting for a large lot here it is. We will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. We know that you will like this.

Made in Atlanta--A Permanent Exhibition of Our Goods Would be a Liberal Education to the Whole Country--The Time to Act Is NOW.

The plan of the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta to install a permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods in this city is excellent.

Chattanooga has an exhibition along similar lines, and it is proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of this city that the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta shall study this exhibit in Chattanooga, and install an exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods here, so that people of the entire south, and other parts of the country as well, may know exactly what MADE IN ATLANTA goods really mean.

The Georgian suggests that the business men of Atlanta take up this question at once, with the idea of devoting a week during this summer or early fall to a SHOW THEM exhibition of the 1,000 or more articles that are now manufactured in Atlanta by the 600 manufacturers now engaged in such work.

An exhibition of this kind would attract the attention of business men and merchants from all over the south. The railroads would undoubtedly offer low rates to travelers; hotel accommodations are ample, and with the superb summer weather that Atlanta always enjoys, an exhibition week here would be beneficial to all concerned.

A permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods would be a liberal education. Atlanta needs that kind of an exhibition. MADE IN ATLANTA should mean the highest standard of merit. Articles made in Atlanta will undoubtedly find a ready sale all over the country, as soon as it is known what Atlanta really can do.

Every business man in Atlanta, no matter in what enterprise he is engaged, should help this movement along. It will mean much to the city. It will make for progress in every direction.

The Georgian congratulates the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the manufacturers and merchants of this city in taking up this permanent exhibition idea, and hopes it will be pushed forward in an active way.

What Is To Be Done for These Women and Others Like Them?

Who Will Answer the Questions That These Human Question Marks Permanently Represent in Our Civilization? Isn't It Time TO MAKE A BEGINNING?

Copyright, 1913.

AND THEY ARE THREE QUESTION MARKS.

They are the oldest question marks in the world, or at least in the world as long as men have lived on it, some two or three hundred thousand years.

From the beginning women have done the hard work, the dull work, the work that wears the brain, the body and the nerves, AND THE HORRIBLE WORK THAT HOLDS OUT NO FUTURE HOPE.

These question marks stand out on our so-called "civilization" of to-day.

You have the girl in her childhood bending over the machine. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to set her free?

You have the young woman bending over her child, in poverty, misery and anxiety. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to make your boasted civilization and prosperity free her from a life of sorrow, worry and want?

You have the older woman bending over the washtub, using up the last fragment of vitality and energy, painfully and slowly doing work which could be done quickly and easily by a machine—if it were "worth while" for men to use their intelligence and their machinery to free women from slavery.

How are you going to free these three slaves, straighten up their backs and answer the questions which they represent?

We have more than half a thousand solemn statesmen in Washington. And we have thousands in the Capitols of the States.

They are discussing laws and "economic questions," talking, advising, sometimes honestly urging, more often dishonestly selling their opinions.

When will they find time among other questions to take up the three questions at the top of this page?

Is it not almost time to make a BEGINNING?

And wouldn't the best beginning be the fixing OF A MINIMUM WAGE FOR WORKING GIRLS AND WOMEN?

That would be at least a start. It would stop or check the present profitable money making schemes of hiring and working girls and women for less than it costs to feed them properly.

It is true that you could not in this way free from misery the wives of underpaid workingmen, or the mothers, old and half worn out.

But you could at least BEGIN with the wages of women, making it a crime to force a woman by poverty and want to work for such wages as mean a life half starved.

Who cares now for these miserable women?

They can't put a judge on the bench or take him off the bench.

Living Questions

Here are three human question marks. When will the "statesmen" of the nation find time to answer, or try to answer, the questions that these three bodies ask?

What Is Ideal Love in a Man?

The Highest Type of Lover Is at Once Friend, Mate, Defender and Comrade to the Woman He Loves.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

WHAT is the highest ideal of man's love for woman?

It is a more difficult question to answer than its companion—woman's ideal love for man—because woman is a more difficult being to satisfy in the matter of the affections than man.

Given an orderly home, a well-supplied table and a tactful, cheerful woman to reign, and the average man is content with his domestic relations. But emotional woman wants more than these conditions grant. She wants continuous praise, a frequently recurring touch of sentiment, and even a misunderstanding, now and then, followed by a reconciliation, is sweeter to her than a monotony of unexpressed satisfaction.

The Ideal Lover.

The ideal lover takes into consideration all these peculiarities of feminine temperament, and adapts himself to them in a reasonable degree.

Almost every woman, the most ardent and romantic as well as the phlegmatic, realizes at times the maternal element in her love for a man. It is this which aids her in being his patient nurse in hours of illness and his stimulus in times of despondency, and it is that lack of graver and more paternal element in man's love which detracts from its ideality so often.

When he does possess it man is liable to overdo the matter and to become the slave of his lady's hysterical moods and to encourage her weaknesses and her selfish whims.

The lover who is at once kind, sympathetic and masterful is seldom found, yet he alone illustrates the highest order of love.

The ideal lover is he who commands his wife's or sweetheart's respect and admiration, together with her love; who makes her realize that his standards of womanhood and of life are high, and that he expects her to do her part toward maintaining them, and who is capable of drawing a fine line between devotion and servility.

The moment those elements enter into a love its standard is lowered.

I once heard a wife say that she would not live with a man who told her he thought another woman beautiful. She felt that his love for her should blind his eyes to the beauty of all others.

The man loved his wife, but while his lips were silent on the subject of others' charms, his furtive glances of admiration often bespoke the sentiments of his mind. That man's love was not ideal, since it lacked the courage to make his wife understand how she belittled herself in his eyes.

The ideal lover does not entertain his wife by expatiating on the charms of other women for hours, but he does express his respectful admiration on occasions.

It Lacked Courage.

He strives to bring out the very best and noblest qualities in the woman whom he has chosen for his life mate and to aid her developing into a perfect womanhood. He is her friend and her protector as well as her lover and admirer. He looks out for her best interests, but he never forgets that she has an individuality of her own which is to be respected and considered. She is his mate and his companion, not his chattel or his servant.

She is to be advised and guided, but not commanded or coerced.

The highest type of lover realizes that a woman has a spirit and a soul, as well as a body.

The man who hides a woman away and tries to keep her from all association with her kind and all pleasures not directly bestowed by him is not an ideal lover, however madly he adores her.

His love savors too much of that of the bear who carries the lamb to its cave to devour it at leisure.

Neither is that the highest type of love which encourages a woman's foolish ambitions and unworthy aims.

I have known a man to plume himself as a model husband because he gave his assistance to a silly wife—the mother of his children—who conceived an aspiration for a theatrical career. She possessed no atom of talent, and made herself only the object of ridicule and pity to all observers, while she left her husband—a good man, of ample means—and her children to the care of domestics.

Had the woman been a great genius, born to do some special work in life and no other, the husband's unselfishness would have been "ideal."

Highest Type of Lover.

A man must be a woman's truest friend in order to be also her ideal lover. He must possess appreciation of all her best qualities, sympathy for all her feminine weaknesses, the courage to warn her when her highest good demands it, and the wisdom to direct her when counsel is needed. He must be delicate enough never to make her feel her financial dependence upon him, and he must possess the will power and self-control to make his loyalty to her under all conditions that which he expects of her.

Yes, he must be strong enough to keep her from leading him into financial ruin, and lover enough to keep her responsive to his demonstrations of affection. Friend, defender, lover, comrade, mate—all these must be he who possesses "the highest type of love" for woman.

Pertinent Paragraphs

It is rather startling to read the initials R. I. N. G. after the name of an officer, but on reading along one may find that he belongs to the Rhode Island National Guard.

"The God-Blessed Macs"

Dr. White Says in the Storm the Presbyterians Are Oak and Rock, but in the Sunshine They Are Vine and Flower.

TWO good-natured witticisms at the expense of the Presbyterians by the late Sam Jones have just passed into oblivion beyond recall. He said that the only objection to be had against the Presbyterians was that there are so few of them, and that "The Presbyterians pay more for their religion and get less fun out of it than any people on earth."

The historic gathering of 1,500 commissioners in Atlanta, representing American Presbyterians, has abruptly made an end of the first complaint, and their lively proceedings in debate and the good cheer they have radiated on our streets and in our homes leaves no ground for the other.

The Presbyterians number nearly 5,000,000 in the world and constitute one-fifth of the evangelical force of Christianity. They have furnished their full share to the entertainment of history.

Definite Distinctions.

The English and Welsh names of Smith and Jones represent our largest American classification of surnames, but the folks whose names carry the handle of the "God-blessed Macs" belong to a class of quality incomparable in weight and achievement.

Next to the Jews the Macs have preserved through generations a distinctive character. They are not all Presbyterians, but there is a Presbyterian quality in them all.

Presbyterianism is only a denominational subdivision—a fragment broken off from Scotch granite; but the Presbyterian essence has gone with Scotchmen into every nook and corner of American character. Its leaven is pungent and penetrating, and if they could only monopolize it and secure a royal patent on all it permeates, the Presbyterians would lay claim to the most immense religious areas. But there is no monopoly in truth, and the Presbyterians are debtors also. Renan said "Jesus begat Paul, Paul begat Augustine, Augustine begat John Calvin, John Calvin begat John Knox."

It is with difficulty that Protestants are reminded that Augustine was Roman Catholic. Aside from theological heredity, the Presbyterians, taken as they are, constitute in the world an incalculable value to human character far beyond their numerical strength.

It is not generally known that the name Scotland was stolen from the little country now known as Ireland. Scotia, before the tenth century, was a territorial term, while Scotus was a race name and the generic term of Scoti embraced the people of that race, whether inhabiting Ireland or Britain.

After the tenth century the

principal stronghold of the people designated Scoti included nine counties in the North of Ireland as well as the Western part of Scotland.

The Scotch-Irish, therefore, are not a mixture of Irish and Scotch blood, but are the pure Scotch who happened to be geographically identified with Northern Ireland. The main contribution to American life from the Scotch came from this region. They brought their quality with them, and it was a fighting quality.

The first Scotch-Irish clergyman to land in America, in 1682, landed in jail immediately, charged with the offense of preaching the Gospel at a private house.

The first great Scotch-Irish lawyer spoke a piece in Virginia about "Give me liberty or give me death." At Mecklenburg, North Carolina, the Scotch-Irish raised the first standard of defiance to Great Britain.

At Alamance, in North Carolina, ten years before, they had fought the first skirmish of the American Revolution.

When George Washington saw red-coats landing at every seaport he said that if the worst came to the worst he would gather the Scotch-Irishmen around him and make a fortress of liberty in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

At King's Mountain the Scotch-Irish, under three Presbyterian elders, flung victory into the teeth of despair and saved the cause of Independence.

The Presbyterians may not claim them all, but we all claim them.

Good Soldiers—Good Brothers.

We have had a large flavor of this life for ten days in Atlanta. All our under-estimates are revised.

We have seen the Presbyterians as many and we know them as much. We have marked them as good soldiers, and we have felt them as good brothers. We have witnessed them in their conflicts, and we have warmed toward them in our homes.

If in the storm they are oak and rock, in the sunshine they are vine and flower.

JUST YOU

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

ALL the selfish joys of earth,
I am getting through—
That which used to lure and lead
Now I pass and give no heed:
Only one thing seems of worth—
Just you.

Not for me the lonely height,
And the larger view;
Lowlier ways seem fair and wide,
While we wander side by side.
One thing makes the whole world bright—
Just you.

Not for distant goals I run,
No great aim pursue;
Most of earth's ambitions seem
Like a shadow of a dream
All the world to me means one—
Just you.

GRAND JURY INDICTS LEO M. FRANK

Mayor's Conversation With Colyar Is Reported in Detail

NEGRO SWEEPER OWNS WRITING NOTES FOUND BY DEAD GIRL'S BODY

It was announced Saturday noon that Leo M. Frank had been indicted by the Grand Jury for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The authorities are of the opinion that they have a very strong case against Frank and Lee, and sufficient evidence to convict Frank of the murder.

Rumors about the Grand Jury room were definite to the effect that evidence produced against Frank convinced the entire jury that the case against Frank was very strong.

Of course the proceedings of the Grand Jury are secret and no member of the Grand Jury nor any member of Solicitor Dorsey's staff would give the reporters information as to what had taken place in the Grand Jury room, or what evidence had been disclosed against Frank or Lee.

That the authorities have very important evidence that has not yet been disclosed to the public is certain. The Georgian has maintained this from the beginning of the investigation.

The jury adjourned until Friday without indicting Lee.

Several most peculiar features mark the affidavit of James Connelly, and Solicitor Dorsey is chary about accepting its supposed admissions without a thorough investigation.

The fact that the negro sweeper places the date as the Friday before the murder that Frank asked him for specimens of his handwriting forms the first mystifying phase of the confession.

No theory that has placed the responsibility of the crime upon Frank has held that he planned it deliberately a day before it was committed. The unanimous theory of those who have believed Frank guilty is that he did it on the necessity of the moment to prevent the girl revealing the attack which is supposed to have preceded the killing.

The belief that the killing was planned as far ahead as Friday has entered no one's mind in respect to the circumstances of the mystery.

The negro also says in his affidavit that Frank muttered: "Why should I hang?" a very significant question if it could be regarded as likely to be made by a guilty person, but a question which appears entirely outside the realm of probabilities, in view of the careful watch Frank has kept on his tongue ever since the city was shocked by the news of the murder the morning of April 27.

The entire affidavit ie exceedingly peculiar.

Connally's testimony came as a surprise. Few persons knew of the weighty evidence which was being carried before the Grand Jury when the negro sweeper was taken before that tribunal except the prosecution.

Connally was arrested on suspicion the morning following the murder. He had been confined in the Tower since that time.

Sent for Detective.

Until Saturday morning his testimony had been considered by practically everyone connected with the case as of small value.

"Boss, I wrote those notes," said the negro in reference to the bits of note paper which were found in the basement of the factory and which had been practically the only clew the police had unearthed which would bear upon the personality of the murderer.

When the negro had finished his statement he was taken immediately to the court house. Samples of his handwriting had already been secured and these, it is said, compare favorably with those in the mysterious notes.

Negro's Affidavit.

Here is Connally's (or Conley's) affidavit:

STATE OF GEORGIA—

County of Fulton.

Personally appeared before the undersigned, a notary public in and for the above State and county, James Connally, who, being sworn on oath, says:

On Friday evening before the holiday, about four minutes to 1 o'clock, Mr. Frank come up the aisle and asked me to come to his office. That was the aisle on the fourth floor, where I was working, and when I went down to the office he asked me could I write and I told him yes I could write a little bit, and he give me a scratch pad and told me what to put on it, and told me to put on there, "Dear Mother, a long tall black negro did this by himself," and he told me to write it two or three times on there. I wrote it on a white scratch pad, single ruled. He went to his desk and pulled out another scratch pad, a brown looking scratch pad, and looked at my writing and wrote on that himself, but when I went to his office he asked me if I wanted a cigarette, and I told him yes, but they didn't allow any smoking in the factory, and he pulled out a box of cigarette that cost 15 cents a box, and in that box he had $2.50—two paper dollars and two quarters—and I taken one of the cigarettes and handed him the box back, and he told me that was all right I could keep the box, and I told him he had some money in the box, and he said that was all right I was welcome to that for I was a good working negro around there, and then he asked me where was Gordon Bailey (Snowball they call him), and I told him he was on the elevator, and he asked me if I knew the night watchman, and I told him no, sir, I didn't know him, and he asked me if I ever saw him in the basement, and I told him no, sir, I never did see him down there, but he could ask the fireman and maybe he could tell him more about that than I could, and then Mr. Frank was laughing and jollying and going on in the office, and I asked him not to take out any money for that watchman I owed, for I didn't have any to spare, and he told me he wouldn't, but he would see to me getting some money a little bit later. He told me he had some wealthy people in Brooklyn, and then he held his head up and looked out of the corner of his eyes and said, "Why should I hang," and that's all I remember him saying to me. When I asked him not to take out any money for the watch he said you ought not to buy any watch, for that big fat wife of mine wants me to buy her an automobile but he wouldn't do it; I never did see his wife. On Tuesday morning, after the holiday on Saturday, before Mr. Frank got in jail, he come up the aisle where I was sweeping and held his head over to me and whispered to me to be a good boy, and that was all he said to me.

A. S. COLYAR, who figures in the dictograph sensation. Records show he has been confined in two insane asylums and numerous prisons. His operations are alleged to extend from New York to Mexico. He is a member of a prominent Tennessee family.

M'CARTY KNOCKED OUT BY PELKY IN ONE ROUND

The outcome of the bout was the biggest surprise since James J. Jeffries defaeted Bob Fitzsimmons for the heavyweight championship.

The men had just reached the center of the ring when Pelky landed several stiff blows to McCarty's jaw and body. The big heavyweight tottered and then fell to the canvas.

McCarty was a 2 to 1 favorite.

Italian Lotteries Attacked.

ROME, May 24.—Although the system yields an income of $20,000,000 annually to the Government in taxes a strong attempt is being made by the Senate to break up lotteries.

Of six bills introduced to establish new lotteries, all but two were killed.

SENSATIONAL EFFORT TO OBTAIN REAL INSIDE GRAFT EVIDENCE

Sensational dictograph conversations, in which Mayor James G. Woodward, Charles C. Jones, former Tenderloin proprietor and present owner of the Rex saloon; E. O. Miles, a private detective, A. S. Colyar, accuser of Colonel T. B. Felder, and Chief Lanford's clerk, February, all figure, are made public by The Atlanta Georgian to-day.

The conversations, all reported by a dictograph installed in the Williams House, in the same room and by the same man who figured in the "trapping" of Felder, tend to throw new and startling light on the alleged plot to "get" Chief of Police James L. Beavers, who wiped out the Tenderloin, and Chief of Detectives Lanford.

As reported by George M. Gentry, who took down the conversation as it trickled over the thin spun wires through the door between Colyar's room, No. 31, and room No. 32, it is apparently made clear that the Mayor was not only after evidence of graft in the police department, but more directly after evidence on which Chief Beavers could be impeached and discharged. The Mayor has never hesitated to make plain that he was not in sympathy with the chief's attitude.

The conversation in which the Mayor figured seems to show that he promised protection to the man who would get the evidence if he should get in trouble doing it, and that he gave assurances the work would be well paid for.

The Mayor was present at the conference with February, Colyar and Miles. The entire dictograph conversation in which he figured is given elsewhere.

Far more sensational is the conversation in which Jones, Miles and Colyar took part. Jones viciously attacked the police department, charging graft and crookedness; accused Marion Jackson, Men and Religion Forward Movement leader, of being the beneficiary of vice, and said he had been double-crossed in the wiping out of the Tenderloin.

Colonel Felder's name is mentioned time and again in the conversation of the three, and more than one reference is made to the alleged offer of $1,000 for evidence.

Jones Attacks Beavers and Charges Police Crookedness

The following conversation occurred in room No. 31, at Williams House No. 2, 34-36 N. Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock, between C. C. Jones, E. O. Miles and A. S. Colyar:

Colyar—It has been very warm to-day, hasn't it?

Miles—Yes, it has. I asked Mr. Felder if you mentioned Mr. Jones' name to him and he said no.

Colyar—He told me Monday night that Mr. Jones was a friend of his and he thought it an outrage the way they had done him.

Miles—You know I asked you this afternoon why you wanted to see Mr. Jones.

Colyar—If you don't want to talk, that's all right.

Jones—In what way?

Jones—Yes. They closed up the houses I had. I had a lot of property.

Colyar—He told me they framed up on you.

Jones—There is no doubt but what it was a frame-up.

Colyar—Tom told me he would like to see the gang out of business.

Jones—The record now is (voice very indistinct just then). They never grafted me. Wouldn't be any use for me to give them any money.

Miles—You told me you wanted to see Jones. It is not a question of lack of confidence, as what I told you was true as far as I know, but if he knows anything at all about it, I don't know just what it is.

Jones—I don't know anything. I just told them to go ahead and build them houses and move them across the street. Even some of them went and paid for them. Three or four days before they closed the houses, the Chief of the City of Atlanta ——— ——— ——— that it would never do to close this district and I was surprised one morning by a telephone message from someone at No. 18, that the Chief had given five or six days notice to get out, I don't remember which, and I never even went to the trouble to go out to this man to ask him what he meant, as I could not figure it out to save my life what he meant. That is all that I know of. I found out what he was doing. I understand that Jackson was holding conversation with him anywhere from one to three times a day.

Colyar—Who is Jackson?

Jones—Jackson is the man that owns the biggest ——— house in Atlanta now. ——— and the Chief was there and wanted to know what he had done about the license of the hotel, and the Chief ———. The people owe him $500 a month each. I understand he opened.

Colyar—Who is John Eagan?

Colyar—They certainly must have some kind of a pull.

Jones—They got something, I don't know what it is.

Colyar—What does Jackson do?

Jones—Jackson runs them religious bulletins. I know them to be the fact, for he owns this place and on one occasion after he told someone I made a remark to a man that was very close to him, I told him that he had better close his own mouth. TO BE EXACT, HE OWNS THE EMPIRE HOTEL. The man that was running the hotel had an engagement to introduce me to this man. John Dawson told me that he had just had the hotel for three or four months, and that he had cleaned the hotel out, and I looked at him and said, "Yest, you cleaned it out, no doubt of that, but run it different from what other people run it. The man went to one room and the woman to the other, with a door opening between it." So I will be frank with you, if I had anything that would convict Mr. Beavers I would tell it on the public streets. I think he is everything in the world but a man. I will be frank with you about that. If he takes my dollar and then goes to the other fellow and takes his dollar, he would tell me to go to hell, but, of course, I used to be a gambler; I run the Rex, and everybody knows it. I wouldn't trust Beavers as far as I could throw——

Colyar—I want to talk to you about——

Jones—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Colyar—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Jones—I don't think it is going to—— As far as my own knowledge is concerned, I have never been able to—well, I haven't tried to.

Dictograph Conversations in Which Mayor Took Part

Here is the entire dictograph conversation in which Mayor James G. Woodward took a part as it was reported to the police. A copy is in the police files today.

A. S. Colyar, the man who engineered the entire sensation, of coure takes a leading part. The conversation is first principally between him and Chief Lanford's clerk, February and E. O. Miles, a private investigator, and a friend of Charles C. Jones, who comes later into the conversation.

Jones owned a number of houses in the restricted district closed up by Chief Beavers, which were censervatively estimated to have given him an income of $40,000 a year. He is the owner of the Rex saloon, and is by no means poverty stricken, despite the huge dent Chief Beavers' reform made in his roll.

Mayor James G. Woodward, who has never hesitated to let it be known that he was not in sympathy with the Chief's vice crusade, comes into the conversation later and is reported in full.

The conversation took place on Wednesday afternoon in Colyar's room—the same room where Felder was trapped, and was taken down by George M. Gentry, a nephew of the president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company. Here is a copy of the record:,

The following statements were overheard by me, by using a dictograph located in room 32 of the Williams House No. 2, 34-36 North Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga.; said dictograph being connected with room No. 31 of the said hotel, and I saw Mr. E. O. Miles, whom I am personally acquainted with; Mr. G. C. February, whom I have known for several years, and Mr. A. S. Colyar, with whom I have only been acquainted for a short time, enter room No. 31 of said hotel at about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 21, 1913.

On account of Mr. February having locked the door to room No. 32, I was delayed in getting in, after having witnessed the three parties above mentioned enter room No. 31 of said hotel. In the emergency, I used the key to my front door, which, with a little difficulty, opened the door. After closing the door and going to the instrument, I was unable to hear what was being said very distinctly on account of the windows of the said room being open. This necessitated another delay to close them, and after returning to my instrument I was able to hear the following. Several dashes indicate that the voice just at that point became inaudible:

Colyar—I can tell you some things. I am executive secretary (noise made sound indistinct).

Miles—Now, just wait a minute. I know (here noise made hearing indistinct). I have got several cases (sound indistinct).

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—I am satisfied you ought, but you know when they go into it they are going to put up a howl.

Colyar—(Conversation too low to catch.)

Miles—The Mayor will give us absolute assurance that he will protect us.

Miles—I think I can bring the Mayor up here right away. The evidence is in the (sound indistinct).

Colyar—You are not a Jew, are you?

Miles—No, I am not. I spell my name M-i-l-e-s.

Colyar—These sons of a gun down here can frame up anything on Decatur Street. I told Felder I would get the goods and go outside of the county and I would meet you and him at East Lake.

Miles—There is no occasion for your leaving town.

February—If the Mayor and Felder will stay behind us like they said they would.

Colyar—I would like to have the Mayor's——

Miles—But right now he may be busy. Felder can get—— Mr. Felder is a good—— Now, it will take about ten minutes, in any case, but

MAYOR ADMITS DICTOGRAPH IS CORRECT

Mayor Woodward Saturday admitted that the dictograph record of his conversation in the room of the mysterious Colyar was correct. After reading the report in The Georgian, he said:

"This is not as strong as the conversation I told you I had before I knew they had a dictograph on me.

"I did not offer them any money, but I will say now that I will subscribe to a fund that might unearth any graft in any city department. But I haven't got any $1,000 to give.

Denies Phagan Connection.

"Another thing I want to make clear is that my dealing with those men had nothing whatever to do with the Phagan case. They told me they had evidence of the corruption of Beavers and Lanford. I wanted to see what they had.

"I don't suppose anyone takes seriously the statement that Colonel Felder controls me. It is just as absurd to believe that he controls Solicitor Dorsey or the Governor."

"G. C. February, secretary to Detective Chief Newport Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, that long-haired mysterious investigator, talked to me about evidence they had proving that Chief of Police Beavers and Chief Lanford were protecting disorderly houses and blind tigers. They talked of protecting February's job and the need of $1,000 to pull off the affair.

Told Them to Get Proof.

"My reply was if February could show up any crooks in the police department I did not think the people of Atlanta would stand for him losing his job. I told them to produce the evidence. If it was worth anything I told them I did not think there would be any trouble about a just reward, but that I did not have any $1,000 to give them.

"The Phagan case was not mentioned.

Charles C. Jones, owner of some of the closed "houses in our midst," also said he was persuaded to visit the mysterious room of Colyar, No. 31.

"When he spoke about money to show up Beavers, and I told him I was not interested, the interview ended," said Jones.

Mayor Woodward said the first he knew of Colyar was one day last week. Colyar called at the City Hall and told the Mayor's secretary, Frank Hammond, he had some important evidence to submit to the Mayor When he was delayed in getting into the office, he grew impatient and declared that it was more trouble to see the Mayor of Atlanta than the President of the United States.

Felder Tells of Evidence.

"Monday," said Mayor Woodward. 'Colonel Felder came to my office. He told me that in working on the Phagan case he had unearthed some startling evidence of corruption in the police department.

"'Give me the evidence,' I said to him, 'and I will see that it is given proper attention and investigation.'

"He explained that it would take funds to employ a detective to get the evidence together, as the man he had employed was confined to the Phagan case.

"My reply was that if the evidence was sufficient to convict, I did not think there would be the least trouble about getting the money. His reply was that it was in documentary form.

"Just as he was about to leave, Charlie Jones came in. As I remember, Colonel Felder left immediately. Jones had been up to the meeting of Council Monday afternoon. I understood, and dropped by just for a minute."

Mayor's Next Experience.

Mayor Woodward said his next experience with the alleged plotters et. al. was on Wednesday afternoon when February and E. O. Miles, a private detective, came to his office in the Empire Building.

"It was a little after 3 o'clock," said the Mayor. "They told me they could show up Beavers and Lanford with unquestionable proof. I was reluctant to go, but they insisted, so I told them

Gibson Near Break As Trial Continues

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 24.—Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer on trial here on the charge of drowning Rosa Menschnik Szabo in Greenwood Lake July 16 last to secure her estate, looked to be on the verge of collapse when led into court to-day.

He had refused to eat any breakfast.

The big part that Mrs. Gibson played in the defense of her husband becomes more and more apparent. Gibson has been very down-hearted since she was removed from his side at the beginning of the second trial yesterday.

In the name and behalf of the citizens of Georgia, I charge and accuse Leo M. Frank, of the County and State aforesaid, with the offense of murder, for that the said Leo M. Frank, in the County aforesaid, on the 26th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1913, with force and arms, did unlawfully and with malace aforethought, kill and murder one Mary Phagan by then and there choking her, the said Mary Phagan, with a cord placed around her neck, contrary to the laws of the State and the good order, peace and dignity thereof.

HUGH M. DORSEY,
Solicitor General.

J. M. STARNES, Prosecutor.
Fulton Superior Court, 1913.

Leo M. Frank was confronted in his cell by the startling confession of the negro sweeper, James Connally.

"What have you to say to this?" demanded a Georgian reporter.

Frank, as soon as he gained the import of what the negro had told, jumped back in his cell and refused to say a word. His hands moved nervously and his face twitched as though he were on the verge of a breakdown, but he absolutely declined to deny the truth of the negro's statement or to make any sort of comment upon it.

His only answer to the repeated questions that were shot at him was a negative shaking of the head, or the simple, "I have nothing to say."

Solicitor Dorsey let it be known following the adjournment of the Grand Jury Saturday noon that Newt Lee's release within a short time was not unlikely.

It is also understood that James Connally, on the strength of his admission that he wrote notes at the dictation of Frank, probably will be held as accessory before the fact.

Atlanta Printers To Honor Dead in 2 Services Sunday

Union printers of Atlanta Sunday will hold annual memorial services in common with the union printers the country over. Two services will be held, a sermon and reading of a roster of deceased printers at 11, and decorating the graves in union printers' lot in Oakland Cemetery at 3:30 o'clock.

The morning services will be held in the Unitarian Church, in the Woman's Club rooms, in East Cain Street. Dr. Wade P. Conkling, the pastor, will preach the sermon.

The Woman's Auxiliary to Atlanta Typographical Union, No. 48, will have charge of the decoration of the graves. R. L. Whites is chairman of the committee making arrangements for the exercises.

These services have been held annually for about fifteen years.

Nearly 700 typographical unions will take part in services throughout the country.

Merchants' Parade Wednesday Greets Half Holiday Here

Plans for a monster parade of Atlanta jobbers, commission merchants, meat packers, retail grocers and market men will be concluded at a meeting of business men in Taft Hall Tuesday evening.

The parade, to be held Wednesday, will inaugurate the commencement of the half holiday for retail merchants through June, July and August. The procession will be more than two miles long and will be one of the most pretentious pageants ever seen in Atlanta.

At Tuesday evening's meeting R. A. Broyles, E. L. Adams, W. O. Stamps, John M. McCullough and Harry L. Schlesinger will speak.

PLOT ON LIFE OF BEAVERS TOLD BY COLYAR

But He Fails to Produce Man to Prove Charge, as He Promised.

A. S. Colyar, Jr., failed Saturday to produce the "mysterious man" whom he declared had been hired to "shoot to death" Chief of Police J. L. Beavers.

When Colyar gave the sensational information of the conspiracy to kill the police official he declared that he would bring to police headquarters the man who had been secured to commit the deed; that this person would make affidavit to bear out the plot charges, and would swear also that he had been promised immunity from punishment for his act.

Colyar asserted at the time of his charges that the man was at present in Atlanta and intended remaining here until he had killed Beavers. Colyar also declared that the person had intimated that he might also kill Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford. Colyar then stated that he knew of the person's whereabouts and would bring him before the police to prove the charges.

Disclosures of the amazing conspiracy came to light Saturday morning. Police officials have been quietly investigating it since the astounding information was given them.

The name of this mysterious man has not been furnished detectives, but Colyar promised to take him Friday night to the office of Chief Lanford, in the police station, where the affidavit was to be made. Up to a late hour Saturday, however, neither he nor Colyer had put in an appearance.

According to the story told by Colyar, this man is not a resident of Atlanta, but has been here several days. He is an old friend of Colyar. He said this man would swear positively that the murder plot proposition was made to him shortly after his arrival here, and that he would give the name of the man who engineered the deal.

'Hard Labor' Omitted, Banker Takes Appeal

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., May 24. Under plea that will win freedom for many Federal prisoners if he wins, Julius W Hopkins, former bank teller of Cleveland, Ohio, sentenced to seven years in the Federal Penitentiary here, for embezzling $115,000, will contend before the United States Court of Appeals at St. Paul next week that the sentence should have read at "hard labor," according to the law governing the sentencing of violations.

Senator's Daughter Weds Her Rescuer

NEW YORK, May 24.—A romance which had its inception in a thrilling rescue of the bride by the groom while bathing along the Jersey coast four years ago, came to a culmination to-day in the wedding of John Anthony Maher, a street railway official, to Miss Dolorita O'Gorman, eldest unmarried daughter of Senator James A. O'Gorman and Mrs. O'Gorman.

10-CENT STORE OWNERS CALLED IN VICE INQUIRY

MILES SAYS HE HAD MAYOR GO TO ROOM

Wanted Woodward to See Just What Sort of a Crook Colyar Was, He Declares.

Edward O. Miles, a private detective, assumes the responsibility for the presence of Mayor Woodward at the Williams House, resulting in the dictographing of the Chief Executive of Atlanta. He also says it was at his suggestion Colonel Thomas B. Felder discontinued even his acquaintance with A. S. Colyar, the wild-eyed investigator from Tennessee.

Miles' statement to a Georgian reporter follows:

"Colonel Felder had already been to see Colyar and he asked me to go and see what he had; to examine any papers, etc.

"I went, and as soon as I saw Colyar I was disgusted. The Lord doesn't make mistakes, and the Lord certainly put the brand of a crook on that fellow's physiognomy if He ever put it anywhere.

"Colyar wanted Mayor Woodward and asked me to get him. I went to the Mayor and said: 'I want to take you down to see the greatest freak and crook you ever saw in your life. I want you to hear his line of bunk. You don't have to say anything—just come along and listen to what he hands out.'

Though Someone Listened.

"That was Wednesday afternoon. I didn't think anything about a dictograph, but I knew, or at least thought, that he had somebody listening in the next room. I couldn't help knowing that, because every now and then Colyar raised his voice so they could hear. Anybody on the streets a block could have heard heard him had they listened.

"Colyar told me not to forget to bring Colonel Felder and the money next morning at 10 o'clock. I asked him what money, and he said the $1,000 for the papers. I told him I didn't want to buy any papers; that if Colonel Felder or anybody else did, that was their business, but I didn't believe they did.

"Then I went back and reported to Colonel Felder and advised him to have nothing more to do with Colyar; not to go back to the Williams House and even not answer his telephone calls.

Felder Quit Negotiations.

"They waited all day Thursday, and Colonel Felder didn't go back and didn't answer the telephone calls. That's why it was published in uncompleted form. They saw the jig was up, and I believe Colyar then sold the story.

"I know young Gentry, who took down the dictograph report, and I'll wager $100 he won't sign an affidavit it has been published in unexpurgated form. Nothing has been added, but some things have been left out. However, I can't say that the omissions made any material change.

"Yes, I am the one that caused Mayor Woodward to go there. He is all right. I just wanted him to hear the line of bunk that crook had to hand out.

Wilson Liberates 2 From Leavenworth

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., May 24. President Wilson's clemency in behalf of two men confined in the Federal Prison to-day resulted in a full pardon for James Moorehead, sentenced to life for murder, and release for Samuel J. Jumper, Paris, Texas, who has lost an arm in the prison laundry, and who was received in March, 1911, to serve five years for embezzlement of money order funds.

DR. JAMES W. LEE, FORMER ATLANTAN, VISITS MACON

Dr. James W. Lee, for many years pastor of Trinity and Park Street Methodist Churches in Atlanta, passed through the city Saturday on the way to Macon, where he will on Sunday preach the commencement sermon at Wesleyan Female College.

Dr. Lee's latest book, "Tre Religion of Science," has just gone into its third edition.

LANFORD'S SECRETARY WHO ACCUSES FELDER

He is a modest, unassuming young man, in whom Lanford and Beavers have complete confidence.

G. C. February Lanford's clerk, who alleges bribery offer.

February alleges that Felder offered $1,000 for police records.

Felder Charges Police Plot to Shield Slayer

Colonel Thomas B. Felder entered into an explicit and detailed denial to The Georgian of all the charges of attempted bribery contained in the affidavits signed by C. C. Febuary, secretary to Chief of Detectives Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, a private detective with a spectacular career.

Colonel Felder declared the alleged dictograph record of conversation he is alleged to have had with Colyar and Febuary in Williams House No. 2 a "frame-up" and a fabrication.

The report that he had offered $1,000 for the Coleman affidavit in the Phagan case and affidavits said to indicate graft in the Police Department he branded as absolutely false.

The whole plot had been concocted, he said, to discredit himself and W. J. Burns and drive them from the Phagan case so the guilty person might be protected.

"Every move made by the police in the Phagan case has been for the protection of the real criminal," said Colonel Felder. "The police have kept an innocent negro there in a cell for three weeks in the hope that they can crush a confession out of him and let the real culprit go free.

"Guilty Person Protected."

"If the desire were not to protect the guilty person, why should they desire to eliminate Burns and myself? Burns has a reputation for landing every criminal he goes after. He has a reputation for being absolutely merciless in the manner he hunts down his man. It is as certain as anything can be in the detection of criminals that he will be successful, once he gets started on a case. He is known to be unpurchasable. Everybody knows that he could have accepted a million dollars at any time during the chase for the McNamara brothers if he had been willing to say that he had not been able to find the dynamiters.

"As for myself, my professional reputation, at least, is that if I have not done a case in which I was interested any good, I certainly have not done it any harm.

"So, I repeat, what other motive could they have in trying to drive Mr. Burns and myself from the Phagan case except to protect the real culprit?

"That so-called dictograph conversation was a frame-up and a fabrication from start to finish. In a longer statement that I am preparing, I will show this conclusively. I will demonstrate it by the very conversation that is alleged to have been reproduced in the other room by the dictograph. I will show that things were written that never would have been said by persons in conversation.

"I will show its absolute absurdity with such clearness that no room will be left for doubt. It will be so plain that he who runs may read. It won't require any detective to show that it is a frame-up, and one of the clumsiest and crudest that ever was attempted.

"That Coleman affidavit, in which the mother and stepfather of the murdered Mary Phagan are made to say that they never hired me or approved of me as an attorney to prosecute the Phagan slayer, was extorted, in my opinion. As a matter of fact, I never said I was employed by the Colemans. I announced that I had been engaged by residents of Bellwood who were friends of the bereaved family. It is true, however, that Mr. Coleman approved of my selection. I never offered $1,900 for the possession of this affidavit.

"Neither is it true that I went to Mayor Woodward and told him that there was lots of graft in the city, but that it would take a good deal of money to uncover it. I had only a brief conversation with the Mayor, and I told him at the time that I did not wish to undertake anything or become interested in anything that would take my time from the prosecution of the Phagan case. It was not understood that I was to probe into the city's graft conditions.

Will Expose Colyar.

"Along with my detailed statement to-morrow I shall make public some of the startling incidents in the career of this man Colyar. I have known his history for years. What I have to say about him—and practically every statement I make will be supported by affidavits—will cause a grave doubt as to his credibility.

"I am acquainted with his movements when he went into Mexico. I know of the humiliation he was to his father, who was a well-known public man. I will tell of these things when I make my formal statement to-morrow.

"Colyar came to me and said that he had evidence of graft in the Police and Detective Departments. He said he knew that hush money was being paid the police authorities by the proprietors of disorderly houses.

"I said to him: 'Don't you know, Colyar, that nobody would believe a word you had to say? If you've got any papers that you think are worth anything, you can bring them to me and I'll look them over.' It is from these conversations that we had in my office that he has framed up this so-called dictograph conversation, adding the conversation that gives it the appearance of an attempt to bribe.

Burns Fought, He Says.

"It is nothing but a plot to get me out of the Phagan case, but I am certain of one thing, and that is that Burns and Tobie, if they are not circumvented by this gang, will have the guilt fixed upon the right person within a very short time after Burns arrives here. They will have to work against difficulties, for as soon as it became known that Burns was going to enter the case all of the witnesses were instructed not to talk to any of the Burns operatives, although they had been allowed to talk to the Pinkertons, hired by the National Pencil Company, without reserve."

Colonel Felder is bitter in his attitude toward Colyar and the people he represents, and declares that he will have them "shown up" within another 24 hours.

He was so harassed by the constant ringing of the telephone Friday night that, with Mrs. Felder, he left home shortly after 7 o'clock with the intention, he said, of hiding himself somewhere up town. He found a group of his friends at one of the clubs and he stayed there until shortly after 10 o'clock when he met Mrs. Felder, who had been witnessing a rehearsal at the Grand Theater.

"If they're framing up on you, I want to tell you you've got my sympathy," said one of his friends, heartily.

"Thank you, old man," returned the Colonel, "but I don't need any sympathy. I'll have these fellows on the run so quick it'll make their heads swim!"

SEES HUSBAND'S LOVE WANING, TAKES ACID

Mrs. Janie Hazelbridge, 25, Attempts Suicide' Believing Herself an Unloved Wife.

Believing her husband did not love her any more, Mrs. Janie Hazelridge, 90 Brighton Street, attempted to end her life Saturday morning by taking carbolic acid. After taking the poison she ran to the home of Mrs. J. Coles, at 92 Brighton Street, and told of her deed.

While Mrs. Coles was summoning the neighbors, Mrs. Hazelridge fell unconscious. The Grady Hospital and police were notified and an ambulance rus'ied to the scene.

wing to the torn-up condition of Brighton Street, however, the automobile-ambulance could not pass over it and it was necessary for Call Officer Bailey to obtain a buggy and carry Mrs. Hazelridge in it for nearly a mile.

At the hospital it was said that she had a god chance for recovery.

Before taking the acid Mrs. Hazelridge wrote a note to her husband, J. V. Hazelridge, who works for the Exposition Cotton Mills, which read.

"Farewell, John. I have taken carbolic acid to kill myself, so you will be happy. Oh, God ,what I suffer.

"One That Loved You."

Mrs. Hazelridge is 25 years of age and attractive. It is said she developed melancholy over small differences between herself and husband.

U. S. Will Reindict 3 for Cotton Corner

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Government has decided to seek the reindictment of Frank Hayne and William P. Brown, of New Orleans; Eugene Scales, of Texas, and Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, on the charge that they conspired to corner the cotton crop of 1909 to obtain a profit of $10,000,000.

James A. Patten, of Chicago, pleaded guilty last February to the count of the indictment, and was fined $4,000.

Carnegie, Warlike, Ready to Fight Japs

NEW YORK, May 24.—Andrew Carnegie, one of the greatest living exponents of world peice, banged one fist into his other to-day and declared that, if war should come against Japan or any other country, he would shoulder a musket and go to the front. This statement was made just before the ironmaster sailed to-day for Europe.

"What are the Japanese thinking about?" asked Mr. Carnegie. "England is Japan's ally and yet England will not allow a Japanese to set foot in her territory. Yet they expect us to give them more than their own ally."

GOODWIN TO WED AGAIN; HOPPER REMARRIED

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Nat Goodwin and DeWolf Hopper are now running neck and neck in the great American marriage sweepstakes.

A dispatch from New York states that DeWolf Hopper, comedian, has just been married for the fifth time, having been divorced April 21 by Nella Bergen, his fourth wife. His bride is said to be Miss Edna Curry, of the Gilbert & Sullivan Company.

Nathaniel Goodwin, Jr., mining magnate and comedian, will be married here to-day by Justice Summerfield to Miss Marjorie Parrott Moreland, an actress, of Baltimore. Announcement was made to this effect at a private dinner at Mr. Goodwin's Ocean Park home last night. It was said the wedding would be very quiet.

Miss Moreland is a divorcee, her first husband being Charles N. Doughty. Mr. Goodwin said he is the happiest man in the world.

"For Love" This Time.

Further he declared:

"This time I am marrying for love. Miss Moreland is the only woman I have known who has the capacity for home-making added to beauty and talent. I consider her the coming representative American actress. Everything I have is hers. What I am to-day she made me—to her I owe my life. Since my accident last year she has constantly cared for me and looked after my interests with the ability of a man."

It's High Honor, She Says.

Miss Moreland gave the following reasons why she will marry Mr. Goodwin:

"I consider it a high honor to marry Mr. Goodwin. He is one of the few men who can be ranked as being absolutely honest. He is generous to a fault and lives up to his ideals. Despite certain rumors heralded as reasons why women marry Mr. Goodwin, I am marrying him for none of these. I am marrying him because I consider him the most interesting man alive. He is very, very interesting. He is a financier, he is clever, he is an author and he is a great actor. But the big reason why I am marrying him is because I love him."

Mr. Goodwin's former wives were Miss Elizabeth Weatherby, Miss Nellie Baker Pease, Maxine Elliott and Edna Goodrich.

Hopper Refuses to Talk.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Theatrical and intensive matrimonial circles heard with great interest to-day that DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, has been married for the fifth time. When asked about the report to-day, Mr. Hopper refused to talk, saying that he would not discuss his "personal affairs."

M'GOORTY AND KLAUS CLASH IN BOUT SATURDAY

DICTOGRAPH TALKS IN WHICH MAYOR FIGURED

he may be busy. I will bring him if he can possibly get here.

(In a few minutes Miles returned.)

Miles—He was up to the City Hall. He will be over in a few minutes, he said.

Colyar—Where is your residence, Mr. Miles?

Miles—In Decatur. I used to live in Smyrna.

(Conversation here became inaudible for a short time on account of scraping of feet upon the floor, chairs, etc., which drowned the sounds through the instrument.)

Miles—If you will excuse me, I will take off my coat. It is very warm.

Colyar and February—Certainly.

(Mr. February was evidently the one addressed, as some one went out and the conversation continued between Mr. Miles and Mr. Colyar.)

Miles—We will have that fixed. If we have got the goods on these detectives their sphere of work will be over. It will take three or four days——

Colyar—Well, what do you think of this Phagan murder?

Miles—I think it is the most damnable—— They telephoned Craig, The Constitution man to come and go with them.

Colyar—Do you believe Frank murdered that girl?

Miles—I never have believed it. It looks a great deal more like he did than it did before from the affidavits. Also there is going to be pretty strong evidence that the girl was not raped.

(Conversation became very indistinct for a few minutes.)

Miles—I think the whole thing was handled badly. In my mind I am satisfied. They had an extra on the street at 6:30. They should never have allowed all the persons they did on the premises. Just after the murder there were only a few scents and tracks, and the man who did the murder could have easily been tracked, as no one else had been there but the negro and his tracks could have been very easily eliminated.

Colyar—Yes; that is right. It looks to me like they would have known better.

Miles—They should have looked for foot prints and finger prints. Instead of that they had over 500 finger prints—— (Conversation interrupted by knock at door.)

A moment or so later Mayor Woodward entered the room.

(After the general conversation of all had subsided I was able to distinguish Mr. Miles' voice.)

Miles—I really don't know it well enough—this is the first conference I have had.

Colyar—Well, Tom Felder told me that the Mayor wanted some evidence on these fellows down here at the city hall, Decatur Street, and the station house, and here's a man that works down there. He got disgusted doing three men's work. He can get the evidence for you, but he wants no one to know it. There are some terrible framers down there.

Miles—He is afraid they will throw him in jail, after they find it out.

Woodward—How can they throw him in jail?

Colyar—They can get a charge against anybody and throw him in jail. You don't know them like some other people do.

Woodward—What is the nature of the evidence he can get?

Colyar—Well, if he was to get the evidence that Mr. Felder wants, it would do the work, which I understand is what you want.

Woodward—All I want to—(voice too low and indistinct).

Colyar—They would throw him out of his job and put him in jail.

Woodward—I don't see how they could do it.

Miles—I don't—unless there are no sane people in the city any more.

Colyar—Well, you know they said they were going to close up the red light—(voice too low.)

Woodward—Well, they have got nothing to fear.

Colyar—I went up to your office to see you, and I found it was harder work to get in your office than when I was a newspaper reporter.

Woodward—Well, my secretary came in and I told him to tell them I would see you just as soon as I possibly could.

Colyar—But he said you couldn't see me until to-morrow.

Woodward—The reason I said that was because he said you said you were in a hurry, and I said tell him to come back to-morrow. If you could have waited there a few minutes you would have had no trouble. You said you were in a hurry and had some business to attend to, but I could not tell the other people to get out of the office.

Colyar—There wasn't anybody else in the office.

Woodward—Well, the secretary or somebody was. Oh, I had to sign up a lot of checks that had to go in before the bank closed.

Colyar—I have always heard you were a plain old politician.

Woodward—It is just my natural way.

Colyar—Well, this is the man that can give the evidence down at headquarters that you want, but he is afraid to.

Colyar—You don't know what police persecution is. They can prove that black is white and water will run up stream, and they can get a jury that will—

Miles—I take this view of it. It will only be—with the police force to be—until they won't be in position to get anyone into trouble.

Colyar—They tell me they got a majority in the force.

Miles—No, sir; I don't—

Woodward—Dozier. I—

Colyar—How many votes will it take to remove him?

Woodward—A majority.

Colyar—How many are on the board?

Woodward—Twelve.

Colyar—You have a vote in case of a tie?

Woodward—I have a vote anyhow.

Miles—He is a member ex-officio.

Woodward—I vote all the time.

Miles—February wants to know if we can promise him protection. I think we can safely do it in a matter of right, like this.

Woodward—Yes.

Miles—He has the graft list and knows who's on the list, who is to be protected and who is not to be protected. It looks to me like we have the same thing down there that they had in New York, only on a smaller scale, because Atlanta is a smaller town.

Colyar—Did you tell Tom Felder that you authorized Felder that if he got the proof for you you would see that he got paid for it?

Woodward—I told Felder that on matters of this kind (voice here indistinct) and he has a good deal to say, and I told him that I am satisfied that certain parties would be willing to pay the money for him, and if he got the evidence that would convict those people it would be paid, and it will be. There is no question about that.

Colyar—He said he would give him a thousand dollars for the evidence.

Miles—Felder said to me that February said that was the price.

February—Felder said that he would pay it to us, but he would have to see the papers. He said he would give me one thousand dollars.

Miles—He didn't say that anybody had authorized him to do it. He just said he would get it up.

Woodward—I don't know whether he had reference (voice too low). As to whether he could raise the money or not; but if he did, he knows that I have not authorized him to do anything of that kind.

Miles—What would be the nature of those documents?

Colyar—It is an affidavit from two people—both signed it—acknowledging threats, etc., graft and general corruption. Like you said a while ago.

Miles—There is no trouble to show the graft?

February—(Reply inaudible).

Miles—(Voice too low at first) a place like the Walton Inn has never been closed.

February—I don't know just about that one.

Miles—Now, my information is that the woman who runs it is a sister-in-law of an official in the Police Department. A woman gave me that information and said that she was operating under protection, and there certainly is a half dozen hacks around there at 1 o'clock at night, automobiles, and couples going in and out.

Woodward—There will be no trouble about getting the money.

Miles—Yes, but * * * They might get the Council in their favor at some later date. * * * Of course, somebody would have to advance it now.

Woodward—Yes, I know it.

Miles—Isn't there another stenographer that works down there?

February—Yes; there is a man down there in Chief of Police's office. He works at night. He goes on about 4.

Miles—If they want anything after you go off, they get him to do it?

February—(Reply indistinct.)

Miles—You keep all the records of that department?

February—Yes; for Lanford.

(Traffic noise interfered with sound.)

Colyar—Only two men can get the evidence, February and Chief Lanford. * * * They have got him doing three men's work. They make him do the work of the judge down there. * * *

Miles—Well, Mr. Woodward, suppose we leave!

Woodward—I would like to have some kind of an idea or statement of what * * * so as to know what * * *.

Miles—Yes; that is, something specific.

Woodward—I don't know what to do.

February—Well, I will have to go through these papers and see what I can get.

Woodward—Get anything that looks like graft. I don't care who it hits, and especially Beavers.

February—Well, I will have to go through these papers and see what I can get.

Woodward—We are going to get up the money to pay for it. They'll want to know what you have got and what you can prove. Then I can give him an answer. Are you a stenographer?

Woodward—What do they pay you?

February—One hundred dollars. I am clerk of the detective office, and I spend a great deal of my time in working for Judge Broyles, which makes one man working in two different departments.

Miles—Are you married?

February—Yes, sir.

Miles—(Excessive noise rendered conversation inaudible.)

Woodward—I won't do anything until it is substantiated.

Miles—Yes; just forget it. You know you have never broken your word yet.

Woodward—I heard they charged me with some meanness.

Miles—I think that is a great compliment.

Woodward—I heard they said something of that kind down there.

Miles—That would tickle me to death if some woman would say that to me.

Woodward—The woman, I und the stand and swear to it. erstand, said she would not get on

Colyar—Well, I understood that the woman said she did not know you.

(Noise interfered with sound over dictograph.)

Woodward—I have a lot of fellows to come up to me and say: "Is this Mayor Woodward? I have seen your picture—" . . . Oh, I don't know that it is true about me.

Miles—Personally (on account of Mr. Miles talking so low, was unable to understand him).

Woodward—Well, they have pretty good evidence on him.

Colyar—On who?

Woodward—Beavers.

Colyar—I know one of the vice commission leaders was put out of a hotel in Birmingham three years ago with a prominent man's wife. . .

Woodward—I tell you what to do. You get this stenographer up there and see what he can do. You needn't let me know about it; just tell Miles.

Colyar—How about Lanford?

Woodward—We want Beavers first, then Lanford.

Miles—I agree with you, it is best that after we go into this and raise the money to pay for it, we go out of the county, and it will be turned over to be examined, to see that they are the papers and then the money is to be turned over. Now, this list you speak of. If February don't want it to go out in his own handwriting, I will take it and copy it in my own handwriting. And if he gets into trouble we will protect him. Still, in a thing like this I don't mind getting in trouble for the right. If he gets in jail I will promise that he will get out. . . .

Woodward—We have got lawyers here that will get you out pretty quick. And I have the pardon power still.

Miles—And when they see you have got them they are going to be mighty quick to quiet down. . . . Now suppose we arrange for another meeting. You set the hour and I will meet you at any time and place.

February—Well, we would better call you up.

Miles—I am so busy that I am not in my office very much, and you may not catch me.

Colyar—Can you meet me at 8 o'clock to-night, here?

Miles—Yes; I can meet you here.

(At this juncture someone knocked on the door and told Mr. Colyar that he was wanted at the telephone. Mr. Colyar replied by saying he couldn't come as he was busy.)

February—Well, we will call you up.

Colyar—He is coming here at 8 o'clock to-night. * * * My number up here is Atlanta phone 2401.

Miles—Yes, I will call for you. Now, that is to-night?

Colyar—Yes.

Miles—I will be here at 8 o'clock. That is all right?

Woodward—I am satisfied that if we can establish * * * Do you understand this much, that we have got something (voice too low and indistinct to hear).

Miles—Yes; it has got to be positive.

Colyar—Want a match?

Miles—I got one. Well, good luck.

Woodward—(Voice too low to hear.)

Colyar—They will frame up on anybody that you report.

Woodward—(Talked very low and indistinct.)

Colyar—What protection have we got?

Woodward—Well, I don't think there will be any trouble at all. * * * We could get together and establish * * * There is something wrong. It is simply a * * * Now, Mr. February, you get a list of the papers you can furnish me against those men and give them to me or Miles, and then we will know how to talk with you. As it is, we don't know whether you can get anything or not.

Colyar—What do you think of the Phagan case?

Woodward—Phagan case? I think it has been mighty mussed up. The only thing I know on that subject is what I see in the papers, and they have very little in connection with it. (Balance inaudible.)

Colyar—Tom Felder talks too much.

Woodward—I think so, too. I don't know what he said on the outside, but he talked some to me, not a great deal; I didn't see him five minutes.

Woodward—I only had a very few words. * * * Well, I will see you again.

Colyar and February—Well, good-bye, Mayor.

State of Georgia—County of Fulton.

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned notary public for the State and county aforesaid, George M. Gentry, a stenographer, who makes oath and says that the foregoing conversation between A. S. Colyar, James G. Woodward, Mayor of the city of Atlanta; E. O. Miles and G. C. February took place in room No. 31 of Williams House No. 2, at 34 and 36 North Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga., on May 21, 1913, and it is a true and correct transcript as taken down by the affient through a dictograph, which was stationed in room No. 32 of said hotel.

GEORGE M. GENTRY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 23d day of May, 1913.

CHARLES S. TYERSON,
Notary Public, Fulton County, Georgia.

State of Georgia—County of Fulton

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned notary public for the State and county aforesaid, A. S. Colyar and G. C. February, both of whom are personally known to me, who make oath that the above conversation between James G. Woodward, Mayor, and E. O. Miles and the affiants, as herein set out, took place in room No. 31 of Williams House No. 2, at 34 and 36 North Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Georgia, and that same was reported by George M. Gentry, a stenographer, in room No. 32 of said Williams House, and that the same is a true and correct transcription of said conversations.

A. S. COLYAR,
G. C. FEBRUARY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 23d day of May, 1913.

W. W. BROWN,
Notary Public, Fulton County, Georgia.

MAYOR JAMES G. WOODWARD, of Atlanta, who has been trapped by the dictograph in his hunt for police graft evidence. His conversation with others was taken in A .S. Colyar's room at the Williams House on the afternoon of May 21.

Well, as I haven't slept much lately I think I will go. Well, I will see you to-morrow.

Miles—Well, I am much obliged to you for coming in.

Jones—I will try and ge there between 10 and 11. Will that suit you? I am glad to have met you. Good-night.

Colyar—Have you seen Felder since you saw me?

Miles—Yes.

Colyar—What did he say about going out of town?

Miles—He will go.

Colyar—Well, we will get the papers.

Miles—I told him that was reasonable.

Colyar—Then I will get the papers at 2:30 to-morrow. What time will you get in in the morning?

Miles—I will get in at 8:30 to-morrow, and I have an appointment.

Colyar—I think it is best to go out there.

Colyar—Call me up at 2401, Atlanta 'phone, at the hotel, at 1 o'clock. I won't have anything to do with the transfer of them in Fulton County. As long as he—

Miles—Yes, it makes a great deal more—. He can bull — a Morse out. I think he owes him most of it.

Colyar—What was his fee?

Miles—A hundred thousand dollars.

Colyar—How much did he get?

Miles—Oh! Absolutely—

Colyar—How long have you known Felder?

Miles—I have known him 25 years, personally.

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—Did you hear him commit himself?

Colyar—(Answer incoherent). Now listen here, this boy needs protection. Will you do all in your power to see that he gets protection? Will you promise not to use it any way as to jeopardize his position in any way?

Miles—* * * And I believe he would, because I have seen him tried. I have been through all his campaigns with him, and I have never known him to go back on his word. I can't convince my mind that the young man won't balk. He is liable to lose his nerve. He seems nervous and afraid.

Colyar—No, he won't balk; he is just timid.

Miles—In dealing with a rattlesnake I never think about (dictograph not clear) Do you?

Colyar—No.

Miles—I presume every man has his own code of honor, and mine is if the right is figured in the wrong that the right needn't hurt you. I don't mean to call him a rattlesnake as I don't know anything against him. But that respect I had in mind the general corruption in that department down there.

Colyar—He goes down there and gets the papers and brings them out there and they are the papers that you and Felder want and they would know that nobody could get them but Lanford, and him and Lanford would say that he didn't get them and they would know February got them and would fire him right away. Now, how is the Mayor going to puth im back?

Miles—If they are the documents of the nature he understands they are, there will be another Chief in his office. They would put him back for the very reason it would insure a straight administration of the next Chief.

Colyar—Will you call me in the morning at 10 o'clock?

Miles—I will call you at 10 o'clock.

Colyar—We will make Tom spend his money now.

Miles—Yes. You don't want to give the Mayor any list of these things.

Colyar—I thought you wanted the papers.

Miles—I don't want them.

Colyar—Tom does. He can tell about the papers whether they are what he wants.

Miles—We agree with the Mayor that we get this list.

Colyar—I am willing to copy it.

Colyar—Tom said that the papers—

Miles—Between you and Tom, we have nothing to do with it. If you are going to sell them to him, we will drop out of it. You say you will see the Mayor?

Colyar—I will see him to-morrow.

Miles—Good-night.

Colyar—Good-night.

FRAME-UP AIMED AT BURNS' MEN, SAYS TOBIE

Denouncing A. S. Colyar as an "eagle-beaked crook," W. C. Tobie, the Burns detective who is here making an investigation of the Phagan case, declared on Saturday that the charges of bribery and double-dealing brought against Felder were a frame-up concocted by the Pinkerton Detective Agency and the Atlanta Police Department, with these three ends in view:

To discredit the Burns Agency.

To discredit Colonel Felder because he employed Burns men.

Tobie charges also that Colyar was used as the "capper" in the frame-up. He declares that Colyar tried to induce him to be a party to a fake frame-up on the Police Department and the Pinkertons, and that Colyar invited him to attend the conference at the Williams House No. 2 between Colonel Felder, G. C. February and Colyar. He declares that Colyar told him he had affidavits that proved crookedness and graft in the Police Department and that he heard Colyar, on last Sunday, offer to sell the evidence to Colonel Felder for a stipulated sum. He declares also that Colyar said he wanted to get even with the police because they had arrested him once.

Tobie's Complete Statement.

Mr. Tobie's complete statement, in which he outlines the position of the Burns Agency in the squabble, follows:

"The charges against Colonel Felder are a frame-up betwen the Pinkerton Detective Agency, the Atlanta police department and Colyar to discredit the Burns agency and drive us out of Georgia, and to discredit Colonel Felder because he employed the Burns people to work on the Phagan case. In my mind there is no doubt that Colyar is in the employ of the Pinkertons and the police department. His actions when he tried to inveigle me into the deal proves it.

"I was in Colonel Felder's office last Sunday night when Colyar made his proposition to sell out the police department, and when he framed the conference in the Williams House. He told Colonel Felder and myself that he had affidavits that Beavers and Lanford were getting rich by protecting resorts, and that there was a world of near-beer graft in the police department. Felder agreed to attend the conference, but I didn't like the looks of things and refused to have anything to do with it. I advised Colonel Felder to keep away from Colyar.

Called at Tobie's Room.

"On Monday morning Colyar called on me in my room at the Piedmont Hotel. The eagle-beaked crook sleuthed in like a fly cop out of a story book, and was very mysterious. He saw to it that there were no exits open, that there was no likelihood of our being overheard, and then old eagle-beak began throwing out hints. He said he felt it his duty to warn me of the difficulties I would encounter, and the things I would have to overcome if I tried to work out the Phagan case. He said the police department was jealous and sore that the Burns men had begun work on the case. He declared that the Pinkertons were just as sore as the city police, and that both of them were framing on me and Colonel Felder.

"Old eagle-beak Colyar cursed the police department for everything he could think of. He called them more vile names than I have ever heard before in my life. He said he had been put in jail by the Atlanta police once, and that now was his chance to get even. He said he had affidavits that proved that Beavers and Lanford were grafters, and that the whole police force was rotten to the core. He wanted to read extracts from these affidavits, and I told him I didn't care what he had, and what is more I wouldn't believe he had anything worth while if he swore it on a stack of Bibles a mile high.

Asked to Attend Conference.

"He tried to inveigle me into a frameup against the police, and wanted me to dig into the doings of the police department. He asked me to attend the conference at the Williams House, when he said he would show a bunch of evidence that would prove everything he had claimed.

"I shut him off short and told him I wouldn't have anything to do with him, or with any other eagle-beaked crook like him. I told him to get out.

"I told Colyar that I didn't care a hang about the Atlanta police department, or about anything it does. I don't care whether Atlanta has a police department or not. I have no grudge, private or otherwise, to work off on the police department. If there is graft in the police department here, it is none of my business, and I don't care if they run a resort and a joint on every corner. I am here to work on the Phagan case, and I'll continue to work on it to the best of my ability so long as the necessary money is forthcoming. The Burns Agency is not a charitable institution and requires fees to handle a case. I am not in Atlanta to investigate the police department or anything else but the Phagan case.

Here for Phagan Case Only.

"If, when we are through with the Phagan case, anyone wants to hire the Burns agency to investigate the Police Department, we'll do it, and get whatever evidence there may be. But now I'm here for the Phagan mystery and nothing else, and haven't time to listen to the ravings of an eagle-beaked crook who is trying to play both ends against the middle."

Mr. Tobie declared also that he has never been discharged from the Pinkerton agency.

"Colyar lied like the crook he is when he said that," declared the Burns man. "I quit the Pinkerton agency to start an agency of my own with Captain Tellison. We handled the work for Burns, and when Burns opened a branch in Kansas City I was made manager."

BLEASE IRONIC IN COMMENTS ON FELDER TRAP

I do not see that it is necessary for me to give out any interview or to have anything to say. It is not inside of my State and I do not suppose anybody that knows Tom Felder would be surprised if he is guilty, or if this is a scheme worked up by him to get a little cheap notoriety and advertisement.

However, I presume that the members of the Atlanta Bar will immediately furnish certificates of character for their darling Tommy and show that he is above suspicion and a gentleman of the highest character, with an unblemished reputation as a man and attorney, and if a court of Georgia should order his arrest that his friends will forthwith call out the militia and have him released, as they know of his character and reputation and will not for a moment allow Tommy to be interfered with. I am satisfied that poor little misled Joe Brown has had his pardon clerk already fixing up a release for his innocent darling in case of any conviction.

And, as a matter of course, the gutter snipes who went over to Augusta from South Carolina will hurry to offer their services to go on sweet Tommy's bond, and also to appear in the courts, along with Seaboard Bill and his friend, J. F. Lyon, who have heretofore been his bosom friends in his defense—all save Chairman Carlisle, who, I suppose, will be too busy "moseying" to leave his own State just now.

Consequently all will be well. Birds of a feather flock together, and of course if the lead buzzard rings his bell the congregation will assemble.

Huerta Threatens to Assume Dictatorship

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—Provisional President Huerta has threatened to dissolve Congress and assume dictatorship over the legislative branch of the government unless the deputies opposed to the $100,000,000 foreign loan cease filibustering against it.

This clash between the executive and legislative branch of the government has been expected for some time.

If the opposition is successful and the loan is not secured, a crisis will follow.

Daniels 'Afraid' to Umpire Ball Game

WASHINGTON, May 24.—As soon as Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, announced that he was going to West Point to attend the Army-Navy baseball game on May 31, he was invited to be one of the two umpires.

"No, thank you; it's a bit too risky," declared Mr. Daniels. "I've gone up in aeroplanes and down to the bottom of the sea in a submarine, but I am not a brave enough man to attempt the job as arbitrator in a college baseball game. The job is too hazardous and too dangerous."

What Is in a Name? Gets Boy $2,000,000

SEATTLE, May 24.—Through the action of the Superior Court here, Henry Francis Shoemaker, aged five, regained his name, and his father, Henry W. Shoemaker, of Altoona, Pa., has promised that the boy shall inherit $2,000,000. The boy's mother, formerly Mr. Shoemaker's wife, gave the boy the name of Perry. Mr. Shoemaker wanted him to have the name given him before he and his wife separated.

Cemetery Sexton Dies Amid Tombs

COLUMBUS, GA., May 24.—T. D. Bartlett, sexton of Riverdale Cemetery, Columbus, was found dead in the cemetery last night. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict that death was due to natural causes.

Bartlett was 57 years of age and was well known as a lodge man.

FIRE RATE FIGHT LOOMING IN ASSEMBLY

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

The City of Savannah, through its Chamber of Commerce, has started an investigation into the question of fire insurance rates that may terminate in the State Insurance Department, if not in the Legislature itself.

The primary purpose of the investigation will be to determine whether the City of Savannah is being discriminated against in the matter of rates now prescribed by the Southeastern Tariff Association, which has its headquarters in Atlanta. In shaping its conclusions, the Savannah trade body will employ statistics gathered from all over the nation.

If rates in Savannah are found to be excessive in the judgment of the Savannah Chamber of Commerce, inquiry will be made as to excessive rates throughout all Georgia. And if the Chamber finds that Georgia is being unfairly treated in this matter, the case against the tariff body will be carried before the State Insurance Department, and it may be that Legislative relief will be sought.

The Savannah Chamber will employ numerous insurance experts to investigate conditions, and expects to be put to considerable expense in making its probe thorough and complete. The question is a broad one, of course, and the Chamber of Commerce expresses its determination to be fair and equitable to the tariff association no less than to itself in getting at the facts involved.

The investigation was brought about by reason of numerous complaints of excessive fire insurance rates charged in Savannah, and once the Chamber of Commerce made up its mind to get busy with the question, it further made up its mind to make its inquiry sweeping and effective in such directions as the findings suggest.

The inquiry will be started immediately with an idea of getting it through in time to go before the summer session of the Legislature for relief, if necessary.

It seems to be generally agreed that John P. Cheney, of Cobb, is to be the speaker pro tem of the next House of Representatives.

He is one of the veteran members of the House as veterans go nowadays, and is an experienced parliamentarian. Moreover, he is genuinely popular with his fellow members, and is sure to be acceptable as a presiding officer.

Besides being a member of the Legislature, he is a member of the city Council of Marietta, and a trustee of the Georgia Agricultural College, at Dahlonega.

Since Mr. Adams, of Hall, definitely announced that he not only would not be in the race for speaker pro tem, but would support Mr. Cheney, there have been no other announcements, and the presumption is that Mr. Cheney is to be elected without opposition.

According to an editorial in the Columbus Enquirer-Sun. "Governor Brown has suggested a monument to former Governor Smith!"

It should be carefully explained, however, that Governor Brown was referring to former Governor James M. Smith, and not to former Governor Hoke.

Representatives Garlington, Picquet and Olive of Richmond and Representatives Wright, Foster, and Nunnally, of Floyd, will introduce in the next Legislature bills prescribing commission forms of government for Augusta and Rome respectively.

Both measures will provide for a ratifying vote of the people of the municipalities affected, before becoming operative. So far, these two Georgia cities are the only ones reported ready to ask the Legislature for charter authority to set up a commission form of government, although it is expected that others will follow suit.

The North Georgia Citizen, of Dalton, says that Congressman Gordon Lee, of the Seventh District, some day will be Governor of Georgia, and adds: "Gordon Lee is the kind of man that makes good by accomplishment. There is nothing of the spectacular in him. He is not wordy and tiresome as are so many others who hold responsible offices. His record speaks, and Lee has sense enough to know it will do all the talking that is necessary."

One hears this talk of Lee for Governor around and about the hotel lobbies and the capitol corridors frequently. Whether Mr. Lee has a gubernatorial ambition and has expressed it himself, it is a fact that he has many friends who view the suggestion with genuine approval.

A member of the Legislature who will seek to have a dog muzzling law passed by the incoming General Assembly has gathered some striking figures for the Legislature's consideration with respect to the hydrophobia situation in Georgia.

Between the first of January and the first of May, this year, 392 cases of hydrophobia have been treated in Georgia. In 1912 there were 673 cases treated.

So far this year there have been 13 cases in Savannah, 84 in Atlanta, 3 in Americus, 4 in Columbus and 2 in Douglas.

These figures, so the Georgia Medical Society hopes, will go far toward convincing the Legislature of the great necessity of a dog muzzling law.

With the convening of the Legislature only about one month away, interest in its forthcoming work is growing every day.

The hotel lobbies are well filled daily with members of the new House and Senate, and already the Legislature, while almost entirely made up of new material, has managed to get pretty well acquainted with itself.

'Church Needs Better Preachers'

Good Ones Scarce, Says Stelzle

Difficult Task for Seminaries

Job of Supplying Ministers for Congregations Hardest of All—Each Wants Best.

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

The Presbyterian Church needs 1,000 additional ministers to man its churches, according to the report of the committee on Christian life and work, which reported at the Northern Assembly Friday.

Among the many topics discussed at the Assembly meetings, few are of more importance than that of securing ministers—not more ministers necessarily, but better ministers, for the demand to-day is for the highest type of leadership in the church.

There never was a time in the history of the church when the chances for making good as a preacher were so great as it is to-day. The church is being asked to take the lead in the important social problems of the day, as well as the religious questions of the period. For a real man's man, here's the job of the twentieth century.

Many Men Needed.

But while better men are needed, we can't get away from the proposition that we need a good many of them. This is the problem which faces the church.

Dr. W. H. Houston, of Columbus, secretary of the committee on vacancy and supply, which has charge of finding preachers for vacant churches, gave a stirring address. He made the startling statement that there are 3,000 ordained ministers in the Presbyterian Church who are not pastors—that is, they are not in charge of churches. To be sure, many of these men are engaged in other forms of religious work, but the great mass of them are either without churches, but looking for positions as pastors, or else they are engaged in business.

How to tie up these men—at least, some of them, is the task confronting Dr. Houston's committee. The Assembly voted to give the committee "half a cent a member" to make the experiment of finding churches for the unemployed ministers and ministers for vacant churches. This means that Dr. Houston will have about $7,000 to spend this year for the purpose in question, as there are nearly 1,400,000 members in the church.

Half a cent a member per year may seem like a mighty small contribution for this purpose, but Dr. Houston believes he can make the demonstration with this amount.

For if he succeeds, he will render a great service not only for the Presbyterians, but for all other non-Episcopal churches which must depend upon the wisdom of their sessions and other boards or committees to find ministers.

In the churches governed by bishops these officials simply say to an unemployed minister: "You go to that church," and he goes. And to that church they say, "Here's your preacher," and he stays just as long as the bishop says so. Now the democracy of the Presbyterian Church is a fine thing. It gives each church the right to "call" just the preacher it wishes. But the system also holds some very serious disadvantages. However, men have always paid dearly for the benefits of democracy, and if they want it, they must pay the price.

Work for Seminaries.

Dr. A. H. Barr, of Baltimore, reported on theological seminaries. To many people here's the crux of the entire situation: If the seminaries can make good in training men and training them in the right way, so as to give their students the right kind of an outlook upon their tasks, it will help immensely.

Dr. Barr said it was quite a popular thing to criticise theological seminaries for their alleged shortcomings. That's easy. Few men can give us a program and a curriculum which will not only develop men of superior type—this they can do without much difficulty—but to take the ordinary man who comes to the seminary to become a preacher and really make a great preacher of him—there's the rub.

Usually, the $1,000 church wants a $10,000 preacher; so the job of supplying preachers is difficult at best. Dr. Barr reported that the enrollment in the junior classes in all Presbyterian theological seminaries this year is 30 less than it was a year ago, although there are 60 more men in the senior classes than there were last year. This proves that either students are holding on better in the upper classes or else some men are coming back to the seminaries and finishing their courses. No doubt, the seminaries are improving their curriculums. This will help in inducing more men to take the course.

Pay for Students.

Dr. William McKibbin offered a resolution that the Board of Education pay ordained ministers who wish to return to the seminary for additional work the same amount of money that is paid the regular student for the Gospel ministry. Dr. McKibbin is himself the president of a theological seminary—Lane, of Cincinnati—and he knows something of the difficulties in the way of securing men and training them.

The discussion of the day with reference to the entire subject revealed a decided interest in the matter, many of the commissioners speaking to it.

First of Seaboard's Steel Diners Here

The first of six new steel dining cars purchased by the Seaboard Air Line Railway arrived in Atlanta this afternoon and was met at the Union Depot by Assistant General Passenger Agent Fred Geissler and Robert F. Maddox, one of the directors of the road.

The new cars, which are 73 feet long and seat 36 people, are equipped with the latest devices. Suction fans prevent all odors from the kitchen entering the car.

The cars will be run from New York and Washington to Birmingham and Florida. They cost $30,000 each and others will be put in service as soon as the Pullman Company can finish them.

Roosevelt in Person To Push Libel Suit

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 24.—Arrangements were completed to-day by attorneys for the trial Monday of the libel suit for $10,000 brought by Theodore Roosevelt against George A. Newett, editor of Iron Ore, a weekly paper of Ishpeming, Mich.

Roosevelt is expected to arrive here Monday.

The defense of Editor Newett will be that he was criticising, in an editorial, a public man who was running for office. Many prominent men from all over the country will testify for Roosevelt.

Time Clock Accuses Man It Once Saved

CHICAGO, May 24.—The time clock in the Cook County jail, which saved James Dugan, a guard, from being prosecuted on the charge of complicity in the murder of his father-in-law on December 18, 1912, will be used in an effort to prove a charge of robbery against Dugan.

According to the clock record, Dugan did not punch the time clock on the night a number of freight cars were robbed. A man under arrest, who confessed his part in the robbery, said Dugan was one of the thieves.

Suffragists Called "Slaves to Clothes"

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Representative Stanley E. Bowdle, of Ohio, who succeeded Nicholas Longworth, aroused the ire of Washington suffragists by declaring that the suffragettes would do well to emancipate themselves from the slavery of clothes.

He also suggested that they stop the slaughter of rare and beautiful birds for the adornment of womankind, take better care of their servants and abolish the deadly hook and eye.

Dollar Diplomacy Called Necessity

CHICAGO, May 24.—"Dollar diplomacy" has become a necessity because the use of diplomacy has come to be more and more used to safeguard and advise traders who are pushing commerce into new quarters. This was the statement of William J. Calhoun, former Minister to China.

"Why should the United States spend $350,000,000 on the Panama Canal if it is the policy to sit on the bank and watch other nations' ships sail across the Pacific to trade expansion?" was his criticism of the Government's foreign trade policy.

WILL CONTESTANT DECRIED IN COURT

Heated discussion, resulting in a charge by Henry Brewster, representing part of the original legatees and Mrs. M. B. Crawford under the will of Nancy E. Crawford and J. B. Crawford, that Joe James, representing C. E. Crawford, was disreputable, was heard Friday morning in the city hall when the two sides of the Crawford estate clashed in a wordy battle.

James was denounced in scathing terms by Attorney Henry Brewster, who charged that James had tried to make a settlement with one of the heirs and had got hold of one of his clients. Brewster said he had made a settlement after having seen James' clients and knew the complete circumstances after hearing the testimony. He said he was convinced beyond all doubt of the disreputable character of these people, and that their evidence was unreliable.

Brewster then proceeded to denounce James, characterizing him as being no better than his clients. He alleged that James also had obtained Charles Crawford, one of his clients, a man easily preyed upon because of his innocence of the law, and was now attempting to rob this man.

The hearing was before Judge James A. Anderson, who, under the present law, has no authority to punish for libel, as he is acting merely as a referee in the case.

The Crawford estate case involves $200,000 and has been in the county courts for several years.

Under the will of Nancy E. Crawford, L. Z. Rosser, Henry Brewster and J. J. Barr are counsel for the legatees; while Reuben R. Arnold and Burton Smith represent the widow, Mrs. Crawford.

Lawyers for the widow declare a settlement had been effected, granting an equal distribution of one-half to each side, but that James now was attacking the legality of J. B. Crawford's second marriage, and in search of personal gain sought to rob the heirs.

James declared the charges were unfounded and unjust. Carroll Latimer, an attorney retained by the heirs, said he did not agree with James' method of conducting the case.

It was this same case that caused the fist fight last Monday of which Burton Smith, brother of Hoke Smith, was the principal combatant, causing five men to take the count.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday morning.

Miss Booth Catches, Then Converts Thief

LONDON, May 24.—Capt. Mary Booth, daughter of Gen. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, discovered a burglar in her bedroom at 2 o'clock this morning.

Instead of calling the police, she confronted her visitor and learning he was driven to crime by hunger, gave him a square meal and prayed with him. When he left he promised to turn over a new leaf.

MIKADO'S FEVER FALLS, THEN GOES UP

Emperor Yoshihito's Temperature 101.48 Saturday Afternoon; Was 99.2 Friday Night.

TOKIO, May 24.—Although there was an abatement early to-day of approximately four degrees in his fever, the temperature of Emperor Yoshihito, who is ill of pneumonia, later rose more than two degrees. It was 101.48 degrees this afternoon.

"His majesty has passed a favorable night and shows encouraging improvement. His temperature is 99.2, pulse 76 and respiration 36."

News that improvement was shown in the condition of the Mikado caused great rejoicing throughout the empire, but especially in this city. Prayers of thanksgiving were offered up and a ministerial order was proclaimed allowing the theaters to reopen.

Empress Sadaka spent several hours at the bedside of her husband to-day. She insists upon ministering to him and was much rejoiced to learn of his change for the better.

Congratulations From U. S.

The bulletin expressing news of the Mikado's improvement was carried to the foreign office, where the Cabinet was in session discussing the diplomatic controversy with the United States over the California anti-alien land law.

Arthur Blanchard Bailey, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, conveyed his congratulations to the imperial family that the Mikado showed improvement and that he hoped it would continue.

Special services will be held in the Christian churches to-morrow.

Caruso is a One-Man Band

Every Bone is An Orchestra

Musical Ability Permeates Nearly Every Tissue, Surgeon Discovers.

If that gold bearing, silver toned voice of Enrico Caruso's ever fails him, all he will have to do, according to the latest medical lore, is to go around tapping himself on the bones and the vibrations that result will be musical. He can tap his knuckles and get a pleasing jingle, whereas, with most folk, the result would only be a discord.

Music, according to the new authority, is built into the frame. If one's chest and bones and throat are put together on a musical basis, there isn't any power on earth that can keep the owner of the melodiously built frame from being musical.

Dr. William Lloyd, the famous London throat specialist, found the advantage that Caruso has over the rest of mankind when he made a recent examination. He found that Caruso had physical characteristics that allowed him to produce musical sounds in almost unlimited volume and that the quality of the structure of the throat was just as much adapted for emitting sound as the shell of a fine violin.

Enrico Caruso, the Famous Tenor.

If he loses famous golden-toned voice, medical lore declares by merely rapping his bones a pleasing harmony can be developed, where, if tried on others, only discord would result.

Music in His Bones.

The chest capacity of the singer gave him unusual aid in work, while the peculiar construction of the entire throat machinery enabled him to let loose vibrations at a higher rate than almost any other subject.

Then the doctor found that Caruso had music in his bones.

The simple tapping of the Caruso knuckles resulted in a vibration that was different from that of an ordinary mortal. The pitch of the vibration produced by a blow is higher and more resonant.

The distance from the front teeth to the vocal cords is half an inch more than in most tenors, and the vocal tube, the doctor found, was of unusual length.

In other words, Caruso was just built that way when it came to singing.

The suggestion that comes from the doctor's report on the plans and specifications of the Caruso throat and mouth is one that might give the commercial age a chance to locate future singers without the slightest trouble.

All that would be necessary would be for the experts in throat construction to go around to the schools and examine the children, sort them out in bunches and let them develop.

Easy to Pick Artists.

It would be perfectly easy to pick out the boys whose bones, vocal cords and throat material had the tenor elevation, while the basso and baritone chaps might be known by the way their bones were set.

So little Willie Jones would not have any trouble knowing what his future will be. He could tell the teacher that there was no use trying to pound electrical engineering or cube root into him, because the school doctor had picked him out as a singer who could not escape his future even if he tried.

The veriest chump of a teacher would know that if the front teeth of one of her pupils had half an inch the start on the other pupils in the race from the vocal cords the owner of the unhandicapped teeth had a cinch on becoming great as a warbler.

On the other hand the young men and young women who have been spending their money at conservatories trying to cultivate voices that are not and never will be will have a chance to find out just where they stand in the realm of art.

They can go to the doctor and confess that they have spent $1,728 trying to get in the genius class and get an expert line of dope on the prospects of ultimately landing before the footlights with the bouquets coming over in bunches.

Great Aid to Critics.

The scientific statement is that there is a fixed and definite relation between the construction of the bones, cords, muscles and tissues and the volume and character of sound that the owner of the said bones can emit. Once in possession of the scale, a flexible foot rule will answer all of the purposes of a musical critic.

Naturally, the critic might profit by the development of science and place his art upon the exact status of mathematics by closing his criticism of a singer in some fashion like this:

"Miss Smith-Jones-Brown cannot sing. That we may not be accused of bias, we submit that it is only three inches and seven-sixteenths from the southwest corner of the eye tooth to the extended arc subtended by the vocal cord; hence, quod erat demonstrandum, she hasn't a ghost of a chance to sing because it would take four-sixteenths of an inch more of space to even get in the class where the lady could gargle songs through a megaphone at a moving picture show."

But that is getting science down to a point that is beyond the average man and woman, and, besides, it is all based upon the statement of a doctor, and doctors do not agree.

Blow With a Glass Blinded Both Eyes

NEW YORK, May 24.—Joseph Doherty, sightless, was before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday to testify against former Policeman Thomas C. Flynn, of 1981 Southern Boulevard, following whose attack on July 21 last Doherty became blind. Flynn was convicted of second degree assault. He will be sentenced next week.

Flynn and Doherty were drinking at a table in Flanagan's Hotel, at 2013 Boston Road, it was testified, when a quarrel arose and Flynn threw a glass at Doherty, hitting him between the eyes.

It came out at the trial that Flynn had been an honor man in the Police Department.

Great Conclave Held By Knights Templars

Probably the greatest conclave of the local Knights Templars ever assembled was held Friday evening under the auspices of the Atlanta Commandery No. 9. Every living past commander of this commandery was present and participated in conferring the Order of the Temple.

Right Eminent Sir Joseph Kyle Orr, present grand senior warden of the Grand Encampment of the United States, was also present.

PAGE REFUSES COMMENT ON LABOR OPPOSITION

QUEENSTOWN, May 24.—Walter H. Page, American Ambassador to England, on his arrival here refused to discuss the protests of American laboring men against his appointment. His only statement was:

"My constant endeavor will be to maintain the more than friendly relations between the United States and the United Kingdom which have happily continued so long."

GEORGIAN INVENTS REAL 'KNEE JERK'

Man From Monk Offers to Tell Beavers Just How Far Patrolman Walks in a Night.

Georgia has produced another celebrity in Harry Winthrop, of Monk, Ga. Investigation shows that Monk is on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, near Fairburn, not a great distance from Atlanta. It now will take its place in the hall of fame as the home of a famous inventor.

The Monk man has invented the "knee jerk." This is not the knee jerk that alienists use in testing insane criminals, but is a mechanical device to record the distance walked by policemen on their beats. It is termed the "knee jerk," says the inventor, for the reason that it is strapped to the knee and registers every time a step is taken by the wearer.

All of this information came out Friday in a letter received by Chief of Police Beavers from Winthrop, who urged that his invention be tried out by the Atlanta police department. He explained that he has already taken up the matter with the New York police department, but, being a Georgian himself, he is anxious for Atlanta to "get in on the ground floor." He made the proposition to equip the entire police department of 250 men with "knee jerks" at $50 each. The regular price, he suggested, is $100 each. It will, therefore, cost Atlanta but $12,500 to ascertain the distance each policeman walks on his beat.

"The knee jerk registers only when the policeman is actually walking—there is no chance for him to make it register while sitting or lying down," writes the inventor.

He added:

"The knee jerk is something on the order of a speedometer, although not quite so heavy. It is an accurate gauge to show whether policemen are properly patrolling their beats."

As Chief Beavers chucked the letter in a waste basket, he laughingly remarked that he didn't think Atlanta quite ripe yet for the "knee jerk."

"I think I'll write to Mr. Winthrop, however, and suggest that he give Monk the honor of first trying out his wonderful invention."

Judge Rules $1 Week Enough for Husbands

PORTLAND, OREG., May 24.—That $1 a week is enough spending money for any married man and that he should turn the rest of his salary over to his wife and allow her to attend to its spending without interference was the assertion made by Municipal Judge Taswell. He had found Fred J. Brooks, a waiter, guilty of beating his wife and paroled him with the instructions as to the disposition of his salary.

Cook School to Make Daughters Good Wives

LONG BRANCH, N. J., May 24.—"A girl who marries a man expecting him to support her in a comfortable home should make return by caring for the home in an efficient and economical manner," said Mrs. Jacob Wertheim, of Long Branch, N. J., in explaining why she fitted up her kitchen at an expense of $3,000, as a cooking school for her two daughters.

ED WALSH'S DIGESTION WRECKED BY "SPITBALL"

CHICAGO, May 24.—Excessive use of the spitball has injured Ed Walsh's digestion and has thus affected his condition so that he has not yet reached his best form this year, according to Dr. James H. Blair, club physician of the Chicago Americans, in a report made on the pitcher's condition.

According to the doctor, saliva needed for Walsh's digestion has been used on the ball. With care the pitcher may be in his old-time form in a month.

PRINCE AND ONLY DAUGHTER OF KAISER WED

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 24.—Scenes of bewildering brilliance to-day marked the marriage of Prince Ernest August, of Cumberland, descendant of the Hanoverian kings and heir to a fortune of $200,000,000, to Princess Victoria Luise, only daughter of Emperor William, of Germany.

The capital was en fete and a gala day was made of the occasion throughout most of the German empire. The rain, which fell at intervals, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the thousands who packed all the streets.

Emperor William, Czar Nicholas, King George of England and lesser royalties were cheered to an echo as they drove to the chapel for the religious ceremony which followed the civil service in Brandenburg Hall, an adjunct of the Potsdam marble palace.

Gorgeous pomp attended the wedding, in which entered a large element of diplomacy as well as true love. By the marriage to-day is brought to an end the long feud which has existed between the reigning house of Hohenzollern and the house of Guelph, from which the Prince Ernest August comes.

Religious Rites Brilliant.

The religious ceremonies far outshone the civil rites in brilliancy. This service began at 5 o'clock in the presence of the greatest gathering of royalty for a decade or more.

At 5 o'clock the court marshal entered the chapel, which had already been filled during the procession of the bridal party from Potsdam to Berlin, and tapped three times with his staff to signify the approach of the wedding party.

First entered the Marshal of the Imperial Household, Count August Fulenburg, with his staff, followed by a long line of chamberlains. Next came the "bride's cavaliers," three young princelings selected for manly grace and beauty; immediately following the "cavaliers" came the bride leaning upon the arm of the stalwart groom, who wore the uniform of a lieutenant of the Bavarian army. Four bridesmaids carried the long train of the bride's gown. Next in line were a number of court functionaries and then came Emperor William and Princess Thyra, of Cumberland, mother of the groom.

The Duke of Cumberland, father of the groom, accompanied the Empress. King George of England followed with the German Crown Princess upon his arm. Following George was Czar Nicholas of Russia, with Queen Mary of England.

One American Present.

Followed then an innumerable array of generals, field marshals, admirals and others. But one American was present in official capacity. He was United States Ambassador Lieshman.

As the procession entered the chapel the Cathedral choir sang a double quartette from Mendelssohn's Oratorio of "Elijah." Then the famous silver trumpets (the Kosieck trumpet corps) accompanied the hymn, "Praise The Lord, Ye Heavens Adore Thee."

IT'S ALL IN THE

EXAMINATION

A pair of glasses are more than worthless if the lenses are not absolutely correct. The correct lenses cannot be properly fitted unless a careful examination is made by a competent and skillful operator, aided by the latest scientific eye-testing instruments and appliances. Of course, the comfort of a pair of glasses depends a great deal on the fit of the frames, the proper adjustment of eyeglass mountings to the nose, and upon the size and shape of lenses. But primarily and most important of all is the correct fitting of the lenses. The experience necessary to properly diagnose a difficult case of eye trouble requiring correction by glasses is not obtained in a day, and the longer these years of experience, the more you can depend upon the results obtained by your Optician. Our fifty years' growth has produced for you the very best optical service obtainable. We offer you the best-equipped fitting rooms, the very latest styles of frames and mountings, the newest shapes and tints of lenses, the Kryptok Invisible Bifocals, moderate prices, and we make every possible effort to serve you pleasantly and satisfactorily. M'CUE TO GET FIGHTS WITH LEADING STARS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—No more slob fights for Matty McCue, Racine's sensation of the ring. After the little fellow has finished out the engagements he has at the present time, which include a battle in Fond du Lac, Wis., in Jack Brunkhorst's arena and one in Milwaukee with Patsy Brannigan, the Eastern featherweight, John McCue, his manager, is going to take on only the very best boys he can find as opponents of his protege. The veteran McCue is convinced that he has a champion in Matty and nobody is going to convince him otherwise until he sees the actual defeat of the little fellow. Hence he is canvassing the situation for boys that will be at once good drawing cards and at the same time fit opponents for a man of the McCue standard—as judged not only in Racine, but elsewhere.

* * *

JOHNNY DUNDEE, the young Eastern Italian who recently went twenty rounds to a draw with Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, and therefore is regarded as having at least half of the title, if that will get him anything, is adjudged by the elder McCue to be the best man in sight at the present time for his star. The machinery has been set in motion already and some definite announcement may be expected almost any time now of the match having been clinched. McCue would be willing to let Dundee come in at 124 pounds, the same as any of the rest of them, and as this is an easy figure for the hardy New Yorker there would be no hitch over the match as far as the poundage is concerned.

* * *

CHARLEY WHITE, the sensational local boxer, who is neither a feather nor a light weight, but liable to be a thorn in the side of boys of either class, also is spoken of as a corking good test for McCue. And the McCue party is not unwilling to listen to reason in the matter of weight. Recognizing that Charley would be a dandy draw with the Racine sensation the Wisconsin people are beginning to flirt with Nate Lewis regarding the proposed meeting. White is willing to make 126 pounds for Matty, which would not be much of a hardship.

* * *

JACK BRUNKHORST is sending a young boxer named Johnny Sokol, who is well known up in the Lake Winnebago District, against the punching star and there is a prospect that Johnny may do somewhat better against the Racine terror than did Jeff O'Connell and the remainder of them who have tried to worry him lately. Up in Fond du Lac they seem to like Sokol pretty well, for he has put up some good contests there, the fiercest of which was a ten-round draw with Gene McGovern that had everybody yelling like mad before it was over. Since that time Sokol has spent all of his time in the East and was especially active in the neighborhood of Buffalo, where he whipped some of the best boys of his weight.

* * *

BRUNKHORST was at the Racine battle recently and saw the McCue threshing machine under a full head of steam against Jeff O'Connell. Even in the face of that exhibit Jack didn't weaken and said afterward that while McCue surely is one of the real bearcats of the day that Sokol and his hefty punch are liable to make Matty go to the very limit in order to get the decision. Jack has a good card on for his show, having matched Freddie Andrews and Sorenson, who fought Battling Nelson a hard ten-round go recently, in the semi-windup.

* * *

THE Patsy Brannigan that Milwaukee has matched up with McCue is the veteran bantamweight of the East, now filled out until he finds himself up among the feathers. Patsy had numerous turnups with Johnny Coulon and is one of those tricky old chaps with a long, wise head and quite capable of troubling any of them for a little while at least.

* * *

BUT after the Brannigan match there will be nothing but better things for the McCue boy. And the chances are most of his battling will be done in Racine.

FLYNN SHADES JIM COFFEY IN THRILLING BOUT

NEW YORK, May 24.—Fight fans here to-day are clamoring for another match between Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and Jim Coffey, the "Dublin giant," who engaged last night in one of the fiercest and most thrilling heavyweight bouts ever seen in the city.

Coffey, taller and heavier than Flynn, started at Flynn like a madman and for nearly four rounds rained punches into Flynn's face and body that staggered him and drove him back against the ropes. Just when it looked like a sure knockout Flynn came to life.

TRAVERS MEETS KAMMER IN METROPOLITAN FINALS

NEW YORK, May 24.—The final round for the Metropolitan golf championship title is on to-day between Jerome D. Travers, the present champion, and Alfred D. Kammer on the Fox Hills golf course. Travers, by steady playing, has easily defeated every one so far opposed to him.

In the third round yesterday, playing against Chisolm Beach, Travers, after winning, 7-5, played out the bye-holes and made a new amateur competitive record of 70 strokes for the course.

Later Travers defeated Oswald Kirkby, the New Jersey State champion, by 2 up in his semi-final match.

SPORTS AND SUCH

By RIGHT CROSS

WE DON'T HAVE ANY LUCK.

Here for three or four weeks we have been bearing with patience and restraint the advance dope on the mighty clash of those titans, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, soothing ourselves with the thought that this fight would be the finish of one of them.

Instead of which both of them will now be going about the country insisting on telling a lot of people who never did them any harm that all they want is another chance to get together with each other, with Lute McCarty or with anybody else.

They will clamor for vindication, and there doesn't seem to be any way to stop them, unless they can be nailed for inciting a riot. Reports of the stern encounter differ in everything but one point. All those present seem to be agreed on the fact that it was a very gloomy and cheerless occasion.

According to the referee Smith was the winner, but the consensus of opinion among the experts at the ringside was that a decision would be more difficult than picking the winner of a transcontinental auto truck durability run. Also that the latter event would be much more exciting.

They fought the full distance of twenty rounds without a knock-down or a crucial moment. According to one or two reports Smith was in a little trouble in the fourteenth round and Willard bled somewhat from the mouth after a right-hand punch had cut his machinery for torturing sporting writers. That was all. A twenty-round fight between high-class men is frequently slow and uninteresting, and it is easy to imagine what this must have been like.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, is breaking his neck trying to get his protege a return match with Gunboat Smith. Jones has offered the Eastern heavyweight a guarantee of $10,000 for another bout, but Buckley has about decided to give Smith a rest for two months.

* * *

Most of the fans are of the opinion that Willard would have a great chance to defeat Smith in a return engagement. They point to the fact that Willard was making his first 20-round scrap and that Jones was handling him for the first time in a fight.

* * *

Jim Flynn, toughest of all heavyweights, will get into action Friday night. The Pueblo fireman will exchange wallops with Jim Coffey in a 10-round mill at New York and the fur should fly. This will probably be Flynn's last fight before he meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium here June 13.

* * *

Mike Saul will help train Flynn for the latter's set-to with Savage. Saul thinks that the experience gained by working with Flynn will put him in great shape for his bout with Eddie Hanlon.

* * *

If Matty McCue succeeds in defeating Patsy Brannigan at Milwaukee, Wis., Monday night he is to get a match with Abe Attell. The ex-featherweight champion has agreed to meet the Racine sensation on June 5.

* * *

Arthur Pelky will have the chance of his young life when he stacks up against Luther McCarty in a 10-round affair at Calgary, Alberta, Saturday night. Should Pelky succeed in besting McCarty or holding him even he will become one of the greatest cards in the heavyweight division.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke wishes to challenge any lightweight on behalf of Billy Bennett, the Irish lightweight champion. O'Rourke is particularly anxious to sign his boxer for a match with Willie Ritchie or Freddie Welsh.

* * *

Chicago fans are boosting Eddie Murphy as a contender for the lightweight championship. Murphy's recent draw fight against Jack Britton has done much to put him back in the good graces of the windy city fans. Murphy put up a great battle and was fighting Britton off his feet at the finish, according to reports from the battle ground.

* * *

Pittsburg fans are expecting a real scrap Saturday night when Eddie McGoorty and Frank Klaus clash in a six-round bout. Klaus' friends have made him an even money choice against the Oshkosh boy.

* * *

After the McGoorty affair Klaus will travel to Indianapolis where he is billed to take on Jack Dillon in a 10-round battle later in the month.

* * *

Nothing has been heard of lately from Tommy Murphy, the New York lightweight. Murphy is certainly entitled to much consideration when the Coast promoters pick an opponent for Willie Ritchie.

Rivers Gets July 4 Date With Champion

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Joe Rivers is the lucky boy to get the July 4 date here with Champion Willie Ritchie.

Following the announcement to-day by Promoter McCarey that he had been unable to induce Ritchie to meet the Spanish boxer at Vernon on Independence Day and consequently he, McCarey, would release Rivers from his agreement to appear at Vernon on that date, Manager Joe Levy wired his acceptance of the terms offered by Eddie Graney, the San Francisco promoter.

McCarey to-day received a telegram from Nolan flatly refusing to fight at Vernon, and declaring that Ritchie would fight at San Francisco on the holiday date and nowhere else.

"If Ritchie does not box for Graney on July 4 we will accept a match in Victoria on Dominion Day, July 1," wired Nolan. "A syndicate of very wealthy Britishers is seeking to promote a match between Ritchie and Freddie Welsh for that date."

SMITH-WILLARD WOULD BE CINCH FOR OLD-TIMERS

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—It is said that one Theodore Roosevelt is going to Arizona to search for a certain lost tribe. After seeing the championship candidates, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, in action, the writer feels that Roosevelt or some one else should be commissioned to hunt for descendants of the lost tribe of heavyweights.

There is no shutting one's eyes to the fact that the big fellows of to-day don't begin to compare with the heavies of "yesteryear" in any department of the game. One doesn't have to go so far as to institute comparisons between present day championship aspirants and the men who were thought to be in line for the title in former times.

Take the cases of such boxers as Kid McCoy and Joe Choynski, pugilists who were never troubled with the championship bee. How long would Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard last with either of these? Or how long would Gunboat or Jess keep erect in front of clean hitting, hard thumping Peter Maher?

There will be another heavyweight bout at Calgary to-day, and then, if present plans hold, there will be a championship final, with Gunboat Smith pitted against the winner of the Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky go at Calgary.

Naturally the deciding contest will create some interest, for, low grade though they are, bidders for the blue ribbon are the best we have. Candor compels the observation that they are simply the best of a bad lot.

Thought Fight a Draw.

While the writer is among those who are of the opinion that Willard did every bit as well as Smith Tuesday night, I must own that the tall Kansan was a good deal of a disappointment. We are led to look for better things after reading of the way Jess acquitted himself with Luther McCarty, Soldier Kearns and others.

It will be hard to make a top notch man of Willard for the reason that he has so few natural fighting qualities. True, his straight left is a dependable quantity, but this is largely on account of his tremendous reach. It would be pretty hard for Willard to straighten his left without finding something unless the other fellow clambered through the ropes when he saw it coming.

Willard has poor ideas of distance and direction and he hits in a stilted pokey way. This, may be, comes of clinching his fists too tightly before lashing out.

He seems, too, to be deficient in ring sense. Several times after chasing Gunboat into a corner and having him off balance he smiled fatuously and stepped back. And if looks count, the Gunner was quite content to have it that way.

Willard a Game Fellow.

Willard is a game fellow and he assimilates well, and it may be that proper coaching will develop him to a stage where he can safely hold his own with modern heavies. That is, unless the breed suddenly improves. One thing to admire in Jess is the way a stinging clash arouses his battle ire. In this respect he resembles Tom Sharkey.

Gunboat Smith's fight was an improvement on some of his local exhibitions. He seemed to use his head more than he generally does, but whether this was an instance of present initiative or the result of careful coaching the writer has no means of knowing. Anyhow there was a method in the way Smith handled himself, even if his execution was faulty.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 127 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., the former national champion, is one of a fine golfing family, in which both men and women have attained considerable distinction in their favorite game. W. C. Fownes, the father of W. C. Fownes, Jr., is a golfer of considerable skill, and I venture to say there is not a golfer of his age in the country who can defeat him. Fownes, Sr., plays golf almost the year round and he never fails to attend each national championship.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., began playing golf in 1900 and therefore he has enjoyed more than a decade of excellent sport. His record is indeed an enviable one, for in addition to winning the premier event in 1910 he has many other notable victories to his credit. He has held the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association amateur championship from 1904 down through 1911, and this championship although limited in territory, is of the highest class, as is shown by the fact that it has furnished two national champions.

Has Won Many Honors.

In 1910 and 1912 Fownes won the Pennsylvania State championship and he has really held at various times all the golfing honors of his State and many from elsewhere. In fact, the only important title that has been denied him so far is the Western championship, where he has invariably encountered a bit of hard luck. Pittsburg marks the Eastern boundary of the big Western Golf Association territory, and yet in spite of the many fine players in the Smoky City, Chicago has always managed to hold fast to the big Western cup.

Fownes was a member of the Olympic team of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, which won the event in 1905 at Chicago Golf.

Fownes' game has not been quite so good during the last year or so, owing, I think, to a number of experiments, chiefly with wooden clubs. Fownes believes his wooden shots to be the weakest part of his game and in consequence he is given to many experiments with them. Sometimes he tries for distance and sometimes for direction, and his clubs and methods of playing vary with the object in view. Last year he came to the national at Wheaton with clubs about forty-six inches in length.

Nearly Wins Over Hilton.

Fownes plays a very thoughtful game of golf. Its high quality can be realized by the fact that he has been national champion. Furthermore, in a match with H. H. Hilton at the National Golf Links tourney in 1911 his game compared favorably with the British player's and he was only defeated at the nineteenth hole in the second round.

Fownes is perhaps the most popular member of the U. S. G. A. He is a regular attendant at its annual event and I think without him the competition would lose much of its savor for a great many of us.

BRITONS WILL SELECT TENNIS TEAM IN JULY

The teams playing in the eliminations will represent the United States, Australia, Germany, France, Canada, South Africa and Belgium.

RUBE WADDELL MISSING; BIG CROWDS DISAPPOINTED

WINNIPEG, May 24.—Although the Virginia (Minn.) Northern League team has played two games here, Rube Waddell, the eccentric southpaw, has failed to appear on the field for either game. Just where he is is a question, and if Manager "Spike" Shannon knows he is not telling. Large crowds have attended both games in the hope of catching a glimpse of the former big leaguer.

No Class to Champions of To-day Feather Title a Family Affair

By Otto C. Floto.

ONLY a short time ago Mr. Featherweight dwelt in an abode alone. He was master of all he surveyed. But things have suddenly changed, and the elusive little cuss now lives in a duplex building. In other words, Johnny Kilbane was the sole possessor of the title and in undisputed control of the same. Now along comes Johnny Dundee and battles him. Well, it's a fifty-fifty proposition now. As a reminder, Kilbane now only holds a working interest in the title. True, he didn't lose it; neither did he win it again. Dundee didn't win it, either, but he worked so well that Referee Eyton declared him in as a partner on the thing. So at best it's a muddled or rather queer condition that exists in that department of the game.

The firm title to the prize should now read Kilbane & Dundee, holders of the world's featherweight title. So that both boys must content themselves with a half a loaf—which, after all, is better than no loaf at all.

* * *

SPEAKING of championship titles, was there ever a time when the different emblems were in so chaotic a condition? Take them right down the line from the heavyweights to the feathers, and not a single representative of any of the departments holds an undisputed right to the title he covets. Never before has such a thing been apparent in pugilism, and it does seem rather astounding to those who have never given this angle a fleeting thought.

When we look back a few years and realize the hard-fought battles and the strenuous routes the champions were compelled to travel over to gain their positions, and then peek hurriedly over the present crop—well, deliver us from expressing our candid opinion, for it would not look well in print.

* * *

TO ALL intents and purposes, Luther McCarty is heavyweight champion. Of course, he never won the title from the man who held it, and probably still holds it. That's not particularly Luther's fault, because of queer circumstances that transpired in the life of the recognized champion. Still the fact remains that McCarty has a title he acquired without winning it as per the usual process required to annex the coveted emblem. True, he stands ready to defend it. But—

Nevertheless, we'll fall in line and look upon Luther as the champion under the circumstances. At the same time, much as we admire him, he is No. 1 of the champions that acquired his honors without meeting the predecessor of the high office in actual combat.

* * *

THEN we drop to the middleweights. Here's where we laugh long and loud, for if there is a single one in the bunch entitled to be crowned champion we are ready to be convinced. Stanley Ketchel, whose sudden death left the question of champion an open one, could have taken the whole lot of the present crop, beginning with Klaus and including McGoorty, Papke and the whole flock, and beaten them to a jelly all on the same night, and in the same ring, without even half trying. So here's a class without a representative in the exclusive class. Klaus, who claims the title, is therefore labeled No. 2 of the champions who failed to battle a titleholder for the honor.

* * *

THE welterweights are in the same disturbed condition. Jimmy Clabby, if he could make the weight (145 pounds), might be looked upon as a real contender. As he cannot make the weight, we claim that Rube "Wildcat" Ferns is the best. And while he does not hold the title, he is ready to fight the whole world for it and have his right disputed to the same. This class, like the middleweight division, is barren of a leader, a man the world will recognize as the top-notcher of the 145-pounders. Of all the classes we are mentioning we recognize the claims of Ferns to the honor to a greater extent than we would listen to anyone else claiming it.

* * *

IN THE lightweight ranks we have Willie Ritchie as champion. Yet, like the other classes, he comes to us with a flaw in the title. His championship was won by the punch of the other fellow instead of his own. There is no doubt he would have defeated Wolgast had the battle gone on. But he didn't knock Ad out. On the other hand, it was the transgression of the former champion in striking that foul blow that awarded the honors to Ritchie.

In this same class we have two other good boys—Packey McFarland and Jack Britton. McFarland, however, can't possibly make the weight, so that lets him out. Ritchie beat Britton when they met on a former occasion. And, say, why not take Freddie Welsh into consideration? Thinking it over, his claims are the very best. He defeated Matt Wells for the English championship and beat Willie Ritchie the only time he met him (that was before Ritchie met Wolgast.) But again we are confronted with the condition that the champion is not one of that undisputed sort.

* * *

IN THE featherweight realm we have the laughable condition of a divided or split title, with two men claiming it. It was originally won by Kilbane from Attell. But it was one of those decision affairs, without a decisive ending, that stamps the winner as a bona fide representative.

After reviewing the different classes about us, it's like a fresh spring breeze to recall the classes of a few years ago, and see the grand list of names that represented the different divisions. Each and every one a champion in the full meaning of the term, and each and every title won by actual conflict within the ring, with a knockout accompaniment to cinch it and keep it free from dispute.

Heavyweight Champion—James J. Corbett.
Middleweight Champion—Robert Fitzsimmons.
Welterweight Champion—Tommy Ryan.
Lightweight Champion—Joe Gans.
Featherweight Champion—George Dixon.
Bantamweight Champion—Jimmy Barry.

SPEECHLESS.

"What are the athletes howling for?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot talk! They cannot talk!" young Johnny Evers said.
"Why do they look so awful glum?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot get their names in print," young Johnny Evers said.

"You may knock a baseball player; you may tell him he's a mutt,
You may tell him of the ebony that constitutes his nut,
You may write of solid ivory and alabaster, but—
He will always grab the paper in the morning."

Far be it from one to perpetrate a pun with malice aforethought, but it strikes us that Charlie Murphy is the guy that put the boss in Boston.

Not that we have anything against Tom Jones, but who is going to be the next meal ticket?

Jess Willard once threw Charlie Cutler down. The equanimity which the latter gentleman displayed leads one to wonder whether he is a philosopher or a humorist.

Joe Cantillon has released Hobe Ferris. Hobe got flippant one night and led Joe to suspect that he was less than sixty years old.

The consensus of opinion on the Pacific coast is that if Jess Willard were tried on a charge of pugilism he would be declared absolutely innocent.

LINES TO C. WEBB MURPHY.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The baseball writer wends his weary way,
And says: "No baseball player talks to me."

How happy is the baseball writer now
If C. Webb Murphy only has his way!
No longer must he write with wrinkled brow
The slop that lowbrowed athletes have to say.

No longer must he lean against a bar
And say: "Come on and have another drink!"
No longer must he stay where athletes are
And hear their efforts as they try to think.

Oh, Charlie Murphy, chubby little runt,
Your name is always near and dear to me!
You up and got away with this here stunt
And saved a thousand writers from ennui.

THEY'LL KNOW THEY'VE BEEN IN GAME—NAYLOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—George W. Naylor, stud groom to the Duke of Westminster, and who has charge of the English polo ponies, came into town yesterday from the Piping Rock Club. He wanted to have a good square look at the lower part of the town, and incidentally to buy some things for the horses. A few of those who are interested in the international match got around him and tried to get him excited over the match.

One said that Larry Fitzpatrick, who is training the American ponies, would put it all over him. Naylor gave a sort of icy grin as he remarked, "He may put it all over me as you say, old chap, but his side will know that they have been in a game."

There was a report yesterday that the American team were suffering from staleness, and that was the reason they had such little practice for the past week.

To-day's Ball Game Begins at 3 Gulls Have Grand Pitcher in Hogg

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE pastiming this afternoon at the celebrated ball park of the well-known Georgia Railway and Power Company, said park yclept Ponce DeLeon, will settle the question of whether or not a mediocre club can beat a good club with pitching alone.

And lest somebody arise to ask which is the "good" club, we state without hesitation that it is the Atlanta delegation—and add positively that the Gull team ought to be a mediocre aggregation, considered on a man-by-man basis.

And before we forget it, the contest this afternoon will be called at 3 o'clock to enable the Mobile team to get an early train. There should be sufficient time for a full nine-inning contest, provided the umpires, the managers and the players do their respective and assorted duties.

* * *

REVERTING to the Gulls and their claims on distinction, we can only say that we can't see them at all. It is a good club. But is it a great club?

We don't even pause for an answer.

You can hand Mike Finn a lot of credit for the way the Gulls have been winning. He has gathered together a club that has balance. It hasn't a strong spot in fielding, but it hasn't a weak one. It is not a great hitting club, but it has a great slugger in D. Robertson, and a moderately reliable one in Jacobson. The rest of it must be team play, or maybe something even more intangible than that—a winning spirit, maybe; which is a hard thing to define, but a useful one to have.

* * *

A REALLY great performer on the club is Bradley Hogg, the ex-Mercer and ex-Brave pitcher. The former Baptist hurled unusually good ball Friday. Though the Crackers acquired six hits, they never came within miles of scoring. Hogg walked just one man, struck out but one—and looked like ready money and lots of it all the way.

It takes a pretty good pitcher to hold the Crackers safe. They are deadly sluggers. Any pitcher who can shut them out is a big leaguer at heart—or mighty lucky. And there was no luck about Hogg's work.

How in the mischief it happened that the Braves ever let go of Hogg is a mystery. He looks more like a pitcher than any five men of George Stallings' staff rolled into one.

To those who remember Hogg in his college days, his huge size proved a jolt. He is a whale now, while in his college days he seemed a man of hardly more than average size. To-day he has the ideal size and weight for a great pitcher. He will be a big man in the big leagues some day.

* * *

THANKS are hereby expressed to Bill Hart for his efforts to hurry along Friday's game. Bill kept right on the trail of the players, got them up to the plate in a hurry and managed to run the game off in less than an hour and three-quarters—which was especially appreciated, owing to the fact that the day was awfully cold and raw.

ALL Atlanta, beginning with Bill Smith and running down to the humblest bat boy, is raging because the Atlanta papers were inclined to saddle the blame for losing the last Memphis game largely on the shoulders of Pitcher Dent. The following communication expresses the views of a lot of fans:

Dear Sir:

I am a great lover of baseball and frequently attend the games. I want to ask if the blame of losing Wednesdays game to Memphis is not wrongly placed on Pitcher Dent. Up to the sixth inning he pitched well nigh perfect ball. In the beginning of the seventh, a batter made an infield hit and the ball was thrown to first base in ample time to get the batter out. The first baseman in his eagerness to make a double play, failed to touch the base and threw badly to second. The shortstop failed to hold the ball and both runners were safe. Then Memphis' best hitter came to bat, made a three bagger, brought in three runs and the pitcher, discouraged, could do nothing more. Now didn't the first baseman and shortstop lose the game? If the runners on first and second had been put out, as should have been done, would not Atlanta have won?

* * *

THE point that "Fan" seems to have overlooked is that before Agler made his misplay, three singles in succession had been made off Dent. Then came the bobble. Then two more hits. We disagree with Bill Smith and others that Agler had an easy double if he had made the play right.

A pitcher who allows three singles with none out starts something right there.

More than that, a pitcher has got to be able to keep steady even after an error.

BIGGEST BALLOON RACE EVER OUT OF KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 24.—The largest and most widely represented balloon race ever held on this side of the Atlantic will be that which is to start from Kansas City July 4. George M. Myers, president of the Kansas City Aero Club and manager of the race, has sent invitations to the clubs of practically every large city in the country asking them to participate. The St. Louis Aero Club has written that it will enter from three to five bags and Topeka is sure of one entry, but hopes to have two.

Other entries are: Dayton, Ohio, 1; Cleveland, Ohio, 1; San Francisco, 1; Salt Lake City, 1; Dana, Ill., 1; New York city, 1; Pennsylvania, 1; Peoria, Ill., 1; Akron, Ohio, 1; Cincinnati, Ohio, 1; Chicago, 1; Indianapolis, Ind., 1; Kansas City, 1.

MURPHY DENIES BRESNAHAN WILL REPLACE EVERS

By Davenport.

BOSTON, MASS., May 24.—Slowly but surely the mystery of Charles Webb Murphy's visit to Boston is beginning to unravel.

Murphy is after pitchers. He is wise to the fact the Cubs are woefully weak when it comes to pitching, so is every one else who has been watching the dope.

Murphy stated, before leaving for the East that he had a deal on with an Eastern club, hence his trip to Boston. The president of the Cubs left his room bright and early this morning, and it is rumored he went for a conference with Mr. Gaffney, owner of the Braves.

Hub Perdue. Yep, that's the game, and it's big game Murphy's after. If he gets Perdue it will be only by giving in exchange two or three good players. Sweeney has been showing weak at second and Art Phelan would just fit in there.

Murphy refused to commit himself upon the result of his trip when he returned to the hotel at noon, but he wore that famous Murphy smile which means he met with success of some sort. The boss of the Cubs denies that he is contemplating the removal of Evers in favor of Bresnahan.

He said this morning: "Evers has a five-year contract and there is not the slightest chance of a change of managers."

Murphy stated to Boston scribes last night that he did not permit his players to talk with him, but he played pool with one of his men until nearly midnight and hobnobbed with the others.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA was kind of grouchy last nite. Ma & me knew he was going to be grouchy, beekaus sum old friends of Ma was going to visit us for a few days & they was to cum last nite, all the way from Colfax, Wisconsin.

I doant like to be a killjoy, sed Pa, & I will do my best to treet Mister & Missus Bing all rite, but you know as well as I do what it will be. Both of them will want to be took to all of the leading points of interest, such as the hoam of the widow wich entertained George Washington onst & the museum of art & the points of historical interest outside of those wich I have just menshuned. After I have dragged them & you & littel Bobbie all oaver the town for a few days, showing them a lot of stuff that I doant care a rap to see, they will say goodbye & tell us to be sure & cum to Colfax & stay a month. That is sum invitashun, issent it? sed Pa—cum to Colfax & stay a month. It sounds like cum to Sing Sing & stay thirty years.

Pa Gets Their Name Wrong.

Well, thay are my frends, anyway, sed Ma, & I want you to be nice to them, & please remember, sed Ma, that thare naim isent Bing, thare name is Ging G-I-I-N-G, Ma sed, with the accent on the two Gs.

Wen Mister & Missus Ging caim thay didn't look as if thay was happy at all.

I am glad to bid you both welcome to our home, sed Pa. I have often heard my wife speek of her deer friends the Pings.

Ging, sed Mister Ging. G-I-N-G. That doesn't sound like a vary hard naim to reemember, he sed. He looked at Pa kind of cross & Pa handed the look rite back to him.

What do you think of Atlanta, deer? said Ma to Missus Ging.

I think it is perfeckly beestly, sed Missus Ging. We had to ride in that horrid trolley all the way from the depot to here, & I had to stand up. I wanted Mister Ging to malk a gentelman give me his seat, but you know how husbands are. He sed that perhaps the poor man was tired. Think of it, and fancy me, a Ging, having to stand up in a common street car. Why, at home we have our own carriage.

If it is anything like the carriages I used to see in Colfax wen I was courting you, Pa sed to Ma, I am afrade Mister & Missus Wing wuddent have reached our hoam till to-morrow morning. Colfax was noted for its pritty guris and its saddle backed skates, sed Pa. There was only one hansum horse in the town, & nobody cud drive it.

I beg your pardon, sir, sed Mister Ging There are sum magnificent horses in Colfax. I have two roans that I wuddent sell for a thousand dollars.

I wuddent give a thousand cents for them, sed Pa. Thare isen't any class to a roan horse. Who ever heard of a roan horse stepping out & winning the Brooklyn Handicap? sed Pa.

Never mind, deerest, Ma sed to Pa. I am sure Mister & Missus Ging will get to love Atlanta after they have had a chanst to git around. Thare is so much of interest to see here, & the shops are very butiful now. The windows are jest full of bargans.

Missus Ging Is Put Out.

The windows can stay full of bargans, sed Mister Ging. I toald my wife beefoar we left hoam that the stores in Colfax was plenty good enuff for her mother before her and plenty good enuff for her. Thare is going to be no extrava-gance on this trip. Hevings deliver me, sed Mister Ging, from a shopping & bargan hunting woman. I wish you would show us our room, he sed to Ma. My wife & I are vary tired. I suppose you have breakfast at seven, he sed.

Oh, deer no, sed Ma. We have breakfast at nine.

Oh, well, sed Missus Ging. I suppose my husband & I can go out to a resterant. Do you know a good cheap place nere here? she asked Pa.

Yes, sed Pa, I know a good cheep place. They have rooms thare too.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Cain had no definite idea in view except to drive a consilderable distance out of town and have it out with this stranger. Hitherto his money had enabled him to have his way in everything and he had ridden roughshod over every obstacle that presented itself in his path, so that the idea that he was a sort of demi-god had become firmly implanted in his nature. In the case in hand he did not stop to realize that his money was of little use to him. He was blind with rage. He attributed his misunderstanding with Mildred to the passenger in the back seat. Cain resolved to eliminate this stranger from his affairs. He tried to get more speed out of the car, but by this time the roads were growing worse and worse as they got further out of town. They had passed the limit of electric lights and except for the rays of the powerful headlights everything was in inky darkness.

They must have driven all of half an hour and were a good fifteen miles from where they started, when Cain, spying a road that branched off to the left, turned into it. Up to this point Gorden Kelly, in the back seat, had made no movement whatever. He might have been asleep, for all Cain knew. But the car had not traveled a furlong on the branch road before he gave evidence that he was very much awake.

With a spring as light as a panther he vaulted over the back of the front seat and landed lightly beside Cain. Reaching down he switched off the magneto, pulled out the plug and dropped it into his coat pocket. Almost instantly the motor stopped and the car came to a standstill.

CHAPTER VIII.

REACHING down to the coil box, Cain discovered the plug was not there.

"Where's that plug?" he demanded, fiercely.

"I have it in my pocket," replied Kelly, quietly. "Something is likely to happen pretty quick, but as I don't know just what it is, I thought I would be on the safe side, that's all."

"Who are you?" cried Cain.

"I will tell you who I am, but first I want to know if I am talking to a crazy man, a fool, or a joker," answered Kelly. While he was speaking he was fumbling in his pockets. He now drew forth a match which he held up to the other's face. Cain blew it out almost as quickly as it ignited, but Kelly had seen enough.

"Oh, you're the Deerys' chauffeur," he observed calmly. "You're the man who nearly ran over me the other day. Well, did your employer tell you to dive me out here, or did you do it on your own hook?"

"I'm not a chauffeur," exclaimed Cain hotly; "I'm a friend of the Deery family and, if you want to know, I brought you here on my own hook. What are you going to do about it?"

"You are certainly a queer sort. What is your object? Is this a hold-up game?" Did you bring me out here to rob me?"

"Rob you; no!" shouted Cain. "I can buy and sell you a million times!" The calmness of the man seated beside him acted as a kind of reverse English on Cain. He had been angry all along, but was now furious and gave every indication of losing control of himself entirely.

"Yes, this is the garage—yes, Miss Deery—Yes, I understand—I'll have a car around in five minutes."

"I can't figure you out at all," said Kelly in an even voice. "I'm not much used to city ways and I thought at first you had been ordered to take me on a little drive, though it is a mighty queer night for it. I stood for it as long as you stayed on the main road, but when you turned off here I thought it was time to quit. Tell, me please, what this is all about? If you have been drinking, you ought to be sober enough by now. If it's a joke I'll take it as such and let it go at that."

Cain ignored the question.

"What were you doing in Deery's house to-night," he snarled.

"I was invited there, but—"

"You're a liar!" screamed Cain, making a movement as if to struggle out of his seat behind the wheel of the automobile.

Just Chastisement.

As quick as the stroke of a cat Kelly shot up his right hand and his fingers closed on Cain's collar with the strength of a vise. With the same movement he jerked Cain's head down to the floor of the car. He sent his left foot crashing through the side curtains which had been fastened on to exclude the rain, and thus clearing a passage, as it were, he jumped to the ground, dragging the struggling Cain after him like a sack of meal. Cain fell in the muddy road with a splash. Still holding his man by the collar, Kelly, ankle deep in mud, hauled him around in front of the car and deposited him there in the full glare of the searchlights.

"Now we can see what we are doing," he remarked and in spite of the effort he had made to drag a man of Cain's size, his respiration was hardly above normal.

Cain scrambled to his feet and with a vile epithet flushed at his antagonist. But Kelly, who had a reach like Bob Fitzsimmons, simply put out one hand and Cain ran blindly into it and stopped short. With one powerful shove Kelly sent the other man reeling backward and, losing his balance, Cain fell with another splash in the mud. In two jumps Kelly stood over him.

"There's only one thing to do to a man like you," he said "Get up."

"Get up," ordered Kelly again.

But Cain refused to move so, reaching down Kelly inserted his fingers in the collar of his foe and yanked him to his feet. Then, turning him around, and facing him up the road, Kelly stepped back one pace and delivered a solid kick in Cain's nether region.

There is nothing that will take the fight out of a man sooner than a weighty kick, placed where it will do the most good. There is nothing so humiliating to the recipient, nothing so mortifying, so abasing. Such was the effect on Cain. He started to run up the road, but Kelly followed him and executed a series of blows with the foot, of astonishing power and accuracy. At last, grabbing Cain by the collar once more, he turned him around and kicked him back to the headlights.

Cain was covered from head to foot with the red mud of Georgia and Kelly's clothing was so splashed with it that very little of the material showed. The rain had practically ceased and only a fine mist was falling. Away off in the distance could be seen the glow of the lights of Atlanta reflected above that city. The rays of the powerful headlights fell full on the two young men. It was a weird scene, but Kelly was ready to have done with it.

"Do you own this car," he asked.

"No."

"Who does own it?"

"The Davis Garage."

Kelly took the plug from his pocket, inserted it in the coil box and switched on the spark.

"Crank it," he ordered.

Without a word Cain gave the motor a whirl and the machinery started with a roar. Kelly jumped in the driver's seat and, evidently sure of every movement, eased in the reversed gear and backed the car off the road with a view of heading it in the other direction. This accomplished, he called Cain to the side of the car and said:

Might Lose Temper.

"This may appear a childish act on my part, but I'm going to leave you here to find your way back to town the best way you can. It will do you good to think the whole matter over carefully. I don't know yet what your object was in bringing me away out here. Is there anything you want to say to me?"

Cain made no answer.

"Very well," continued Kelly, "I will probably be able to figure it out for myself in the course of time. You are evidently one of those rich young fellows that have more money than brains. I never met one before, but I have read about them in newspapers. My name is Gordon Kelly and I live at the Imperial Hotel. It is possible that you will be seeking some kind of revenge on me, but let me warn you to leave me severely alone. If you annoy me any further I am liable to lose my temper and Lord help you if anything like that comes to pass."

This may sound like heroics delivered by a stage hero in a melodrama, but as a matter of fact Kelly spoke calmly and seriously. It was simply his way.

Waiting a moment longer and receiving no response from Cain, Kelly started the car and slowly plowed his way through the mud to the main road, where the going was much better, leaving Cain to shift for himself. He drove carefully back to the city and reached his hotel in about an hour. Instead of stopping there, however, he continued on three or four blocks and slowed down next the sidewalk in front of the Capital City Club and left the car standing there. Walking back to his hotel he went to the desk and asked for his key. He was splashed with mud from head to foot and Clerk McClendon eyed him suspiciously for a moment, but as Kelly did not seem disposed to offer any explanation, he silently passed over the room key.

When Kelly reached his room, he went to the telephone, called up Davis' garage and said:

"You remember sending a car to Mr. Deery's house about 9:30 to-night? Well, you will find the car in front of the Capital City Club and if you want to know anything more about it you will have to see the man you sent along as chauffeur Good night."

Gordon Kelly then peeled off his mud-bespattered clothes, threw them on the floor of his bathroom, took a bath, crawled between the bedsheets and five minutes later was sleeping the sleep of the just.

Who was this young man from the mountains who knew all about handling automobiles? How did he acquire his calm manner? Where did he gain that easy and confident bearing? Whence came the breeding that enabled him to enter one of the "best" houses in Atlanta and conduct himself as though he had been brought up in "society?"

* * *

Forrest Cain, chewing the bitter cud of reflection, walked for more than an hour in the direction of the city before he got a lift. Then a friendly milkman came along and he rode the rest of the way in. Going to his room, he kicked the sleeping George out of bed and made him attend to his wants. Cain remained in bed all next day. His trunks had gone to New York and that night he followed them to the metropolis.

To Be Continued Monday.

YOU read the first five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this sixth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

A Reward of Merit

A Complete Short Story

"HERE comes Johnny!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones, sighing disconsolately. "He must have been awfully good to-day—for he's as dirty as a little pig, and he's an hour late!"

Her caller opened her eyes in amazement. "Awfully good?" she repeated. "Why, when my Sammy comes home late and is dirty I usually know that he's been into some sort of mischief. It's never a sign of being particularly good to my eyes."

"Well, your Sammy doesn't go to the same school," returned Mrs. Jones. "Johnny has a pretty and stylish teacher, and, what's more, she knows how to make her pupils like her. They all fight to do things for her! I learned all about it when I went to call on her one day after Johnny had brought home a perfect report card. For a whole month he'd been coming home late and looking perfectly dreadful—you'd think he was a street Arab. I have never been able to get anything out of him, except that he'd stayed after school to clean the blackboards.

A Perfect Card.

"Even though he was my own angel child, I had my doubts as to the reason he stayed, and I thought I would have his father settle with him when his report came in. I was confident that it would be a very poor one, since he was kept in almost every single evening.

"You can imagine my amazement when Johnny brought home a perfect card. Motherlike, I doubted his veracity. I even thought it was not impossible that he had doctored his card to show to us. So I put on my hat and went to school to see his teacher. I thought Johnny was singularly unconcerned about it—but, then, you know, you can never tell about boys.

"Well, it seemed that Johnny's teacher had had such a time trying not to seem to play favorites that she had adopted a system of rewards. The pupils are allowed to wash so many blackboards or beat out the dust from so many erasers or raise the windows so many times for certain grades in their studies.

"But the choice reward is ringing the bell. I do wish Johnny was bright enough always to ring the bell—or else dull enough just to open the windows or pass papers. But he's of that intermediate brightness that rewards him with blackboard cleaning. He scoffs at the windows and papers, but he's had the bell only a few times!

"Johnny will get up early, eat a cold breakfast and hardly allow me to see that he is properly washed when he has the privilege of ringing that bell, he's so anxious to get to school in time to see that it is done right! And as for my errands, he finds it quite impossible to do them in his limited time."

He Was Late.

"What makes you so late?" she inquired, as Johnny came in, brushing the chalk dust from his sleeves.

Johnny grinned happily, "I had 95 in geography and 100 in spelling—so she let me have all the boards to-night," he answered, triumphantly. "And last week Frank had the bell—and he came late, so she said if I'd come early to-morrow and he wasn't there I could have it. Anyway, he cheats! And I've a good mind to tell her!"

"Will you run to—" began Mrs. Jones, but Johnny interrupted her as he turned to go.

"Yes, but just wait. I've got to see a fellow that's waiting out here!" And Johnny was gone.

"My, I wish I knew her system," declared Mrs. Jones, enviously.

"And errands are such nice, clean work!" sympathized the caller, glancing at the coating of chalk dust that had settled on the rug. "Maybe if you tell him it's a reward?"

But Mrs. Jones smiled and shook her head. "I'm not a teacher!" she replied.

The Drawbacks

"HOUSE HUNTING," said the man who is boarding with the Pikers until he can get a home and bring his wife and children to town, "is the worst and most depressing job that any man or woman ever had to tackle.

"You can never find a house anywhere that has not some terrible drawback," he went on. "You can take your choice between a poor house in a good neighborhood and a good house in a poor neighborhood.

"If you have a good house in a poor neighborhood your little Cedric and Kenneth and Quentin will be contaminated by contact with those common Awfulwaffle children and the horrid young Beansizzles. And if you take a poor house in a good neighborhood your children will hang wistfully upon the fence and watch the haughty Stalkswaggers children, exclusive young Manybridges and the stuck-up little Snippydoodles at play.

"If a house is perfect in every other respect the landlord will live too near. You are not at first suspicious of the fact that there is a handy little gate by which he can enter your back yard. At first he is just helping you move in. But after you are settled you find him on the premises every time you come home from anywhere.

"Next you note with concern that he and his wife are exceedingly familiar with the history of all the people who have occupied the premises before you. And presently you begin to realize that your idiosyncrasies will furnish considerable data for the edification of your successor.

"Every time you find the landlord at your house he is there merely in the capacity of a friend. He was afraid the cat was caught in the fly-paper or that the canary had escaped, or that mice had got in the piano. He just come to see that everything was as it should be. You are glad to find that you have such a solicitous friend who is always looking after your interests.

"But when you come home suddenly some day and find him taking a bath in your bath room his disinterested motives are not so clear. You become dissatisfied and begin getting ready to move."

Natural History Lessons

No. 2—The Lamb

By Dorothy Dix

THERE are few more valuable animals than the Lamb, whether you consider it from the mint sauce or the Wall Street point of view. In either capacity it is our meat, and furnishes glad raiment and diamonds to those who, but for it, would not slain a dozen take its place. Indeed, against the cold blasts of Winter.

The name of the individual who discovered the first Lamb is lost in the mists of antiquity, but as a source of supplies he has got the individual who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before beat a city block. Thus are we called upon again to marvel at the wisdom of a beneficent Providence that has created just the proper thing to meet our every need.

Lambs are found in all parts of the known world, and appear to multiply with great rapidity, so that as one is slain a dozen take its place. Indeed the theory is held on Wall Street that a new batch of Lambs is born every second, but this probably exaggerates the situation. At any rate, the Lamb crop for the last year or two has been so poor that many brokers have been forced to prey on one another.

In appearance the Lamb is of a mild and pleasing aspect with a voice that sounds like the amateur soloist who kindly consents to sing at a club dinner. Originally the Lamb is of a snow white color, but after a short sojourn away from its native haunts it is apt to need a hurry trip to the laundry. It gets soiled very quickly.

In the matter of legs the Lamb is eclectic, some Lambs having four, one located on each corner, while other Lambs have only two, which are situated at the extreme northeast end of their anatomy, thus enabling them to stand upright after the manner of men.

Also, some Lambs have alfalfa on their chins, while others have smooth faces, but this difference depends on whether they came from the middle West or not.

We may dismiss the quadruped Lamb in a few words, merely stating, in passing, that it has of late developed an ambitious and aspiring tendency to rise skyward under the tuition of Messrs. Armour and Swift, and that it has shown a coy disposition to stay in cold storage that every one who has the good of the country at heart must deplore. However, that great veterinarian Professor Wilson, late of Princeton University, we understand, has now undertaken the moral regeneration of the Lamb, and eke the beef, and the pig, and we may hope to see some needed reforms instituted in this line.

It is in the two-legged Lamb (genus suckibus) that the trained naturalist finds his most interesting study.

This amiable creature lives apparently only to give pleasure to others, which it does by the simple expedient of suffering itself to be sheared by any artistic trimmer that happens along.

This is great sport, and it is a matter of pride that our Wall Street brokers hold the world's record as the champion fleecers of Lambs.

Being so gentle and kind, the Lamb, especially the woolly ones from Pittsburgh, are held in great esteem by women as pets. There was once a chorus girl named Mary who had a little Lamb, with a fleece as white as snow, and everywhere that Mary went his money did surely go—but that's another story.

Lambs are generally of the masculine persuasion, though occasionally we observe an elderly female mutton dressed as Spring Lamb capering around at the dansant.

Not What He Meant.

Jones and Long had not met for years. Once—that is, in the days when both had been striving for fame in their different professions—they had been really good chums, and many a talk had they enjoyed together by the fireside as to the little places they would take in the country "when their ships came home."

The dream of Jones has been realized, and now, although a portly old fellow, it was with a sense of real pleasure that he prepared for a visit from his former friend.

"Ah, it's splendid seeing you down here, Long!" he said cordially, by way of greeting. "Quite like old times—what? And the missus, I know, is longing to shake you by the hand. But first—yes, you must come along and have a look at my greenhouse. You simply must!"

And Long went.

"Well, Jones," he said, "you've got a mighty pretty place down here; but, to my mind, it's just a bit bare."

"Oh," replied Jones cheerfully, "that's because the trees are so young! Next time you come—why, they'll be so big that you won't recognize them!"

.:. The Truth About England .:.

There is a large missionary school in Tokio where the teaching is given in English. One of the pupils not long ago wrote a composition on England, from which these are extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the emmenced mind and his chin is so strong as deserves iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully says, 'The sun are never set on our dominion.' The testimony of England say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit, though he has gained a complete world.' The English are running mention to establish a great Empire of the Paradise. As the Englishmen all ways confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy, and the reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men!"

GETTING MARRIED

By DOROTHY DIX.

MY DEAR ROBERT—Who was the wise guy that said "the remarriage of a widow or widower was the final triumph of hope over experience"? Anyway, he was there with the goods when it came to sizing up the nerve of those who, like yourself, are contemplating entering that Mendelssohn Rag.

Now, I am not knocking second marriages. I am strong for them. But I confess they always fill me with amazement. If a man or woman has been happily married the first time, I should think that he or she would not dare to even attempt to replace the angel he or she has lost with another husband or wife, because he or she would realize that no one can always make matrimonial ten-strikes.

On the other hand, if a man or woman has been unhappily married, it has always seemed to me that the very sound of wedding bells would be anathema to him or her, and that, having been mercifully delivered by death or divorce from the partner who made life a torment, such a one would no more rush back into the holy estate than the soul who has just won out of purgatory would voluntarily return to it.

Opinion of the Public.

However, the general public does not share in these opinions. Every day we see the truly bereaved consoling themselves by taking new partners, and the freed hastening to put their necks once more under the yoke; for marriage is the only human experience from which we learn no wisdom.

Perhaps this is just as well. If we weren't all plungers, none of us would ever get married, for matrimony is the big gamble of life. In it we stake our all on the turn of a card, and whether we win or lose is pure luck, since there is no earthly way of telling beforehand what sort of a husband or wife a man or maiden will turn out to be.

Your first venture into matrimony was so disastrous that you can at least comfort yourself with the thought that you have been through the worst disillusionment that domesticity can offer. Any other of the fifty-seven known varieties of wives must be better than the one you had, whose only claim to your gratitude was established when she packed her trunks and hiked for Reno.

As I said before, it is strange that your previous experience of matrimony should incline you to try it over again; but, since it does, let us hope that you are making a more fortunate choice in a wife this time and that luck will be with you.

Of Our Own Making.

But did you ever think, son, that luck in matrimony is a good deal like luck in business—principally of our own making? Opportunity and happiness knock on our door, but unless we are on the job, ready to welcome them in, they pass us by. They don't force their way in with a club. They have to be cajoled across the threshold.

So, if you want this second marriage of yours to turn out successfully, it's going to be up to you to strike the keynote, and make it either a grand, sweet song or a scream. What? That's right.

It's the husband's place to make the home happy. Of course, the wife is due to chip in with her little contribution to the general felicity; but no woman, working alone and unaided, can carry out that contract. It's too big for her. It's a man's size job.

To begin with, son, make of your divorce papers a torch to light you on the road of happiness with this marriage. Think back and remember the things that you and your wife quarreled about. Was there a perpetual conflict between you on the money question?

Tell Your Income.

Avoid that snag by telling the girl you are about to marry exactly what your income is, and what she will have to spend. Tell her that she will have to do without many of the things that rich women have, perhaps without many of the luxuries that she has been in the habit of having. That will start out fair with her and give her, at least, a chance to keep out of the box of becoming a poor man's wife, unless she loves you enough to prefer you to fine clothes and an automobile.

Then, when you are married, give her a definite allowance for the house and for her own personal expenses, and give it to her as her due, without making her come to you for it like a beggar. And make her live within her allowance. That's the way to train her into being a good business woman.

Did you and your first wife have a never-ending fight because you stayed out late at night? Don't marry, son, until you are done sowing your wild oats. If you dance attendance on chorus girls and joy-ride them around; if you want to play poker and drink with the boys, stay single, where you'll have perfect liberty to do so. Don't be selfish enough to take a girl away from her home and put her to watching through weary nights for the drag of a drunken husband's footsteps.

Dreary for Girl.

Aside from the heartbreak and the anguish and the anxiety of it all, think how dreary it must be for a woman to spend her evenings alone.

No girl would marry if that was what she expected to get in matrimony, so be just and don't ask one to leave her happy home for you unless you are going to give her one just as happy in return.

A man's idea of doing his full duty by his wife is to give her food and clothes. That isn't enough. He owes her consideration and tenderness and comradeship besides. It's just as much his place to try to be entertaining to her, and meet her with a glad, sweet smile of an evening, as it is hers to try to interest and entertain him. And when a man does this, son, he never has to pay alimony.

Make your own matrimonial luck in the second marriage, son, and may heaven prosper the brave!

.:. The Exact Time .:.

"IF you are interesting in getting mother off on the train you'd better make some arrangement to set my clock right," suggested Mrs. Binkum.

"I certainly am interested," replied Binkum. "But you know, Betsy, that I have no way of setting your clock because my watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day. I never know whether it has lost eight or eighteen minutes and I do not like to gamble on any such important event as your mother's catching her train."

"My clock gains about thirteen minutes a day," said Mrs. Binkum. "Wouldn't that make it easier to get to set it by your watch?"

"Let me think—let me think," mused Binkum. "If a watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day and a clock gains thirteen minutes a day how can a watch be used in setting the clock? And at 12 o'clock fast watch time, what would be the hour by slow clock? I give it up."

"If they would only blow a whistle at noon in this town," said Mrs. Binkum. "I could tell the time at least once a day, and the rest of the time I should be able to tell about what time it was."

"The situation is serious I admit," said Binkum. "If we keep on this way you and I will be two or three days apart. There will come a time, in fact, when it will not even be the same year by our respective timepieces."

"The railroad clock is correct, I suppose?"

"Without a doubt. I can go down to the station, say at 12 o'clock, and start for home immediately. The station is eighteen blocks away. It takes me thirty minutes, about——"

"About! We want the exact time! And, besides, as likely as not you'll stop to talk to somebody. You do not know how long it takes you to walk eighteen blocks."

"I admit that I do not know how long it takes me to walk eighteen blocks. But there is one thing that I can time myself by. You know I was a bricklayer, I can lay just 60 bricks an hour. I am absolutely correct to a dot."

"But how does that help us?"

"It is the only thing I can time myself on."

"Then I will go to the railroad station and at 12 o'clock I'll give you some sort of signal, and you can begine to lay bricks. Then as soon as I get home we can count the bricks and know how many minutes have elapsed since I left the station."

"All right. I'll order the bricks and have the mortar ready. But what sort of signals are you going to give me?"

"I have read that the sound that carries farthest is the sound of a bass fiddle. I'll borrow Uncle John's bass fiddle. Then at precisely 12 o'clock I will get a good big sweep at the bow, and you'll hear it and begin to lay bricks. So when I get home I will know the exact time and set my clock and mother can catch her train."

"Fine!" ejaculated Binkum.

He's Too Kind

"I HAVE no use for the hospitable man!" declared the young architect, who had come in from dining out, and was at the moment engaged in rooting around in the pantry for something to eat.

"I hate a man who carries you proudly off to dinner when you don't want to be entertained. There's Robinson, the soul of hospitality! He's always trying to drag me home with him for dinner, and I have always managed to get away from him until to-night.

"This night he nailed me, and I couldn't get away. You should have seen Mrs. Robinson's expression when he shoved me in through the door.

"He shoved me right into the dining room, into the bosom of his family. His poor wife grabbed some things that were airing by the fireplace, and then hurried out and changed her dress. Then I heard the kitchen range rattling and knew that the unfortunate woman was cooking dinner all over again.

"Robinson was very entertaining for a while. He caught part of what I said, and I caught part of what he said. But he was uneasy and soon bolted out into the kitchen, where debate was immediately in order.

"In due time we had a very unfestive meal. Every once in a while Robinson gave his wife a dig, and she gave him a dig—sort of tennis fashion. I was the net for their little contest and every now and then I got the ball.

"The three kids got spanked and put to bed in relays. That was not exactly delightful for me!

"Robinson is one of the best fellows I ever saw! And I went to school with Emily, his wife. But I am blessed if I like to drop in there for a meal at night and have them play tennis across me in the manner described.

"I like to be treated formally. If a man wants to invite me to dinner, let him take me to the club or proceed to make adequate arrangements with his family ahead of time!"

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Do You Know That—

The longest hunger strike on record was carried out some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt as to his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to escape the guillotine, and from the day of his arrest refused to eat in spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell, and when that failed, attempted forcible feeding. Granie held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which time he died.

It is reported that all German submarines are to be fitted with guns. Two types have been selected—a 12-pounder, which can be housed and a 1-pounder, which will be permanently in position. The older boats will probably carry 1-pounders only. The 12-pounders are on special high-angle mounting for use against aircraft if necessary. The crew of these guns consists of four men, three to work the gun and one to hand the ammunition. The newer boats will carry two of these guns.

Farmers in the Boyertown district of Pennsylvania came for miles round to attend a sale held at Boyertown of a number of heavy rolled steel coffins. A burial casket company purchased the coffins fifteen years ago, but they were too cumbersome and could not be disposed of. The coffins, which were sold at prices ranging from ten cents to a quarter each, will be used by the farmers for watering troughs for their stock.

A new machine, called the stenotype, has been invented, which enables the shorthand writer to get from 400 to 600 words a minute upon paper in an absolutely correct and accurate form. The basis of operating the machine is phonetic spelling. While the work done is virtually the same as done by shorthand, it has the advantage of being recorded in plain English characters.

Nell Brinkley Says:

I WALKED with a sceptic who has scarcely a rag of a dream to his name to believe in, close under a garden wall, warmed by the sun and cuddled close by the fragrant arms of cherry trees in spring bloom. On the broad, flat top of it was a gypsy-like girl of ten, maybe, with a bowl of iridescent suds between her scratched, sun-tanned knees and a head as velvety black as the poplars in the garden must be when night comes. Up into the still scented air she was sending big elastic soap bubbles, hued like a box of loose gems with a shaft of sunlight lying on them, frail discs of perfect beauty which are the vanishing soul of a drop of crystal water. Idly they floated, some long breathless seconds, some but an instant, giving to the wind changing and glowing with swift-running rivers of color before they snapped into thin air with a tiny shatter of splintering light.

"There, by my new straw hat!" quoth the sceptic, "there is the stuff that dreams are made of; there the blowing of them, there the rainbow coloring, there the vanishing into thin air. What are they? Nothing. Why blow them through our little thin pipe in the first place? Only the veriest child takes joy in blowing soap bubbles, and only the simple-minded among grown-ups (your pardon, mad'moiselle) find the making of dreams delectable. They only snap and vanish, and where once our eyes saw a sphere of unutterable beauty there is nothing! Ah, ah, I don't dream any more, my child. They amount in the end to just a bit of elastic color that we cannot touch or breathe upon—pf!—there is nothing there. Dreamers are fools, out of a drop of ether, colorless it is true, but very real and material stuff which they can at least possess. Out of this tiny but satisfactory thing they insist on stretching a gorgeous thing that a breath will break."

"Nevertheless," quoth I in return, I who am so much less wise and who have so much a better time, "nevertheless, the little kid on the wall is having a better time than you. The bursting of one thin bubble is just nothing. There are countless more in the bowl between her knees. What is the vanishing of one lovely-hued thing when you have the making of endless more? What is the breaking of one little tiny dream of yours when you have the source of countless more in your head and heart? There is the big dream of all—wise man—the bowl—the bowl! Real it is, too—just soap and water. There is the big dream of all, wise man, the head and the heart that are the source of frail and lovely dreams! Real they are, too—red blood and brain. There is where you are poor, m'sieu. You have considered the bubble too deeply, and you haven't the bowl!"

The little black head on the wall went on blowing thin, lovely planets into the spring air, and her eyes were thoughtful enough to make me think she saw child dreams of the things that are to be in their opalescent sides. It looked lots of fun, and it IS fun to blow dreams, for without dreams (real dreams are ambitions) where would we be? After all, would we care about a bubble at all if we could hold it in our hand and play with it? For that matter, we can go buy us a big crystal or a pretty marble any day.

Hasn't Found It.

Jackson—Bunker has got himself into a nice fix.

Johnson—How?

Jackson—He wrote an article on "The Ideal Wife" for a ladies' paper last month.

Johnson—Well, what's that got to do with his present fix?

Jackson—Somebody told his wife about it, and she's been reading the thing over during the past two days trying to discover a single trait wherein his ideal resembles her. She hasn't found it, and Bunker dines in the city now.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A minister in a small country village, who was noted for his absent-mindedness, was once observed to stop suddenly in the middle of his sermon and heard to mutter:

"I knew she would—I knew she would!"

After the service was over some one asked him the reason.

"Dear me," said he, "did I? Well, you know, from the pulpit I can just see old Mrs. Rogers' garden, and this morning she was out pulling up a cabbage, and I thought to myself, 'Now, if that cabbage comes up suddenly she'll go over,' and just then it came up and over she went."

Brown—I've got an excellent plan for getting rid of duns.

Green—Ah! That so?

Brown—I have. Never fails.

Green—Then, old fellow, you must let me into the secret, for I'm worried to death by 'em.

Brown—Well, I've tried it several times of late and I find the man never comes back again.

Green—Aye, aye! what do you do?

Brown—I pay him.

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see I'm rather busy just now. I hung Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your churchwarden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled-looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly remarked the woman as she counted the contents of her purse.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

The father looked at Mary with a reproach that was pathetic.

"See," he said, and his voice was for once thin with passion, "see what you've done to my boy!"

Mary had held her eyes on Dick. There had been in her gaze a conflict of emotions, strong and baffling. Now, however, when the father spoke, her face grew more composed and her eyes met his coldly. Her voice was level and vaguely dangerous as she answered his accusation.

"What is that compared to what you have done to me?"

Gilder stared at her in honest amazement. He had no suspicion as to the tragedy that lay between him and her.

"What have I done to you?" he questioned, uncomprehending.

Mary moved forward, passing beyond the desk, and continued her advance toward him until the two stood close together, face to face. She spoke softly, but with an intensity of supreme feeling in her voice.

"Do you remember what I said to you the day you had me sent away?"

The merchant regarded her with stark lack of understanding.

"I don't remember you at all," he said.

The woman looked at him intently for a moment, then spoke in a colorless voice:

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store. And perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy-jowled man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember. Yes? There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off—only, you asked the judge to make an example of her."

The man to whom she spoke had gone gray a little. He began to understand, for he was not lacking in intelligence. Somehow, it was borne in on him that this woman had a grievance beyond the usual run of injuries.

"You are that girl?" he said. It was not a question, rather an affirmation.

Mary spoke with the dignity of long suffering—more than that, with the confident dignity of a vengeance long delayed, now at last achieved. Her words were simple enough, but they reached to the heart of the man accused by them.

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again, remorselessly.

"You took away my good name. You smashed my life. You put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. . . . Well, I've begun to collect."

Burke Shouts a Warning.

The man opposite her, the man of vigorous form, of strong face and keen eyes, stood gazing intently for long moments. In that time he was learning many things. Finally he spoke:

"And that is why you married my boy."

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

Convincingly, save to one—her husband. Dick suddenly aroused and spoke with the violence of one sure.

"It is not!"

Burke shouted a warning. Demarest, more diplomatic, made a restraining gesture toward the police official, then started to address the young man soothingly.

But Dick would have none of their interference.

"This is my affair," he said, and the others fell silent. He stood up and went to Mary and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you loved me."

The wife shuddered, but she strove to deny.

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not!"

"And you love me now!" he went on, insistingly.

"No, no!" Mary's denial came like a cry for escape.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated, bitterly.

But he was inexorable.

"Look me in the face and say that."

He took her face in his hands, lifted it, and his eyes met hers searchingly.

"Look me in the face and say that," he repeated.

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. The three watchers dared not interrupt this drama of emotions, but at last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly. Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I Do Not Love You."

"I do not love you."

"Just the same," he said cheerfully, "you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me."

Mary felt a thrill of fear through her very soul.

"You can't!" she cried harshly. "You are his son!"

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care a d—n what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll put all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart, because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke, with his rousing voice, spoke again:

"I tell you, she's a crook!"

Mary moved a little and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers?"

Gilder moved fussily.

"And you——"

Mary swayed a little, standing there before her questioner.

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago you took away my name—and gave me a number.... Now I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XV.
Aftermath of Tragedy.

THE Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger. Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. In these hours of grief the soul of him put out its strength. He learned beyond peradventure of doubt that the woman whom he had married was in truth an ex-convict, even as Burke and Demarest had declared.

Nevertheless, he did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim.

He Remained Loyal.

He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder. In his summing of her, he set as more than an offset to her unrighteousness in this regard the desperate struggle she had made after leaving prison to keep straight, which, as he learned, had ended in her attempt at suicide.

He knew the intelligence of this woman whom he loved, and in his heart was no thought of her faults as vital flaws. It seemed to him rather that circumstances had compelled her, and that through all the suffering of her life she had retained the more beautiful qualities of her womanliness, for which he reverenced her. In the closeness of their association, short as it had been, he had learned to know something of the tenderer depths within her, the kindliness of her, the wholesomeness.

Swayed as he was by the loveliness of her, he was yet more enthralled by those inner qualities of which the outer beauty was only the fitting symbol.

So in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers and abandon her. On the contrary, his only purpose was to gain her for himself, to cherish and guard her against every ill, to protect with his love from every attack of shame or injury.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me, but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it, with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Maine.

The Five Frankforters

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Evelyn's great moment had come. She looked at the coffee service of gold—she thought of Neustadt Castle, the home of brave men and women of her race for long hundreds of years—she visioned the treasury of Taunus empty quite of gold. She was only a girl with a girl's longing heart—but this was the home of her ancestors—and Gustavus was the last of a race that must be preserved at any cost. She struggled for a light tone. "I could care a great deal if you were to dawdle here over your breakfast and miss your important engagement with the bankers of Frankfort. When the treasury is quite stocked with gold pieces, Gustavus, may I go to Paris to visit Klausthal, and bring back all the lovely Paris fashions?"

Gustavus looked at her with bitter scorn. "So you are scheming too—the one pure, good thing I had ever known. You caress with lying eyes that you may have Paris gowns. And for one wild moment I had thought I could give it all up—the old castle—the old home—and go to Paris like Klausthal—abdicate—for you."

The Prince strode from the room—the Frankfort business must not fail now, and because Evelyn was a princess and must never forget her royal dignity, she did not fling her sobbing body across the old mahogany breakfast table as a simple girl of our world might have done. Instead, walking with stately mien—and trembling knees and blinded eyes—to her old tower room, she sat there at her rose-hung window and watched her youth die, the while Gustavus, magnificent in royal uniform of cream and blue, rode away to Frankfort—and fortune.

..... Down the Highway. .. .. ..

Down the highway clattered Gustavus, Count Fehrenberg by his side and two grooms at the rear. In Neustadt Castle a girl lay crumpled across a canopied bed of old mahogany, and was fighting for the mere desire to live. In Jew's lane another girl stood merry-hearted and gay and watched the light play in prismatic color on the glory of her necklace—little unconscious Charlotte, into whose hands Destiny was soon to deliver the threads of many lives. What will you do, Charlotte? What can you do when your hour strikes? Evelyn met her hour—and you?

So many a man rides down the highway of life while a woman waits at either end of the road.

Playing the Game.

As they galloped through the spring sunshine Fehrenberg's eyes were alight with mischief at the great coup he had Gustavus had planned the night before, and when the first meetings had been concluded after their arrival at the lucky house in Jews' Lane, he reminded his sovereign of their little game.

Gustavus banished two tender, loving, lying eyes from his mind—those eyes had journeyed in his memory from Neustadt Castle to Jews' Lane, but now he must "play the game."

"Of course, quite right. Gentlemen, I wish to creat you knights of my family order. To your oldest I give the decoration generally conferred for valor on the field. The motto is "Undaunted." I choose this decoration for you, because you are so bold as to be about to lend me money. No soldier could display greater courage." He smiled whimsically as he turned from Amsche l to Solomon. "And you, Baron, I create a commander of this honorable order. I consider that your courage rose yesterday to supreme heights. Allow me to point out that the ribbon is so wide that in warm weather it will save the necessity of a waistcoat."

If this was indeed a game—even if he were being made game of—Solomon would play it too. He bowed low. "Your Highness, I thank you in the name of all of us for the manner in which it pleases and amuses you to honor us."

From the doorway a gentle voice spoke, and as his grandmother and cousin came into the room, the somber, wounded-animal look that had never left Jacob's face since the veiled insults of the Prince of Klausthal-Agorda had brought it there, suddenly cleared like the rising of a gray mist.

Held Out Her Hand.

Holding out her hand and bowing with dignified self-possession, Frau Gudula spoke to the Heir of Nestadt and Taunus: "You are welcome, Duke Gustavus, to my house. How do you do, Count Fehrenberg."

"Dear Baroness," said Gustavus to Charlotte, "if I do not speak my thoughts to you, it is because your beauty makes a pretty speech appear so plain!"

Charlotte chose to be demure. "I thank Your Highness for your reserve."

Even for pretty speeches, Solomon meant to brook no delay. If there was to be coquetry it might well come later, when the contract was duly signed and sealed. "May I propose that we settle our financial business at once?" and thereat, in solemn procession the four brothers followed the Duke and Count Fehrenberg to the unpretentious little office upstairs, where lay the agreement and twelve million florins in gold and notes!

"What are you waiting for, Jacob?"

"I do not like this business—nor will I share its profit."

"My boy, we always share our duties when the family is decided, whether they are pleasant duties or not. You must take your place with them. I have no wish to entertain the Duke in this house—but I must do so now he is here. I am going now to choose some of your grandfather's old Burgundy with which to do honor to the unwelcome guest who is in my house. Think it over while I am gone, my little Jacob."

Charlotte went after her grandmother and shut the door with a great show of importance. With girlish eagerness, and merrily withal, she entered on the interview that must make or mar four lives.

"Cousin Jacob—why are you so much against lending money to the Duke?"

To Be Continued Monday.

GREAT SCRAMBLE ON FOR SUNDAY AMERICAN PONY CONTEST VOTES

I nominate, as a candidate in The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian Pony Outfit Contest:

Name ....

Address ....

Nominated by ....

Address ....

GOOD FOR 1,000 VOTES.

Great will be the scramble for coupons to-morrow.

Inadvertently, the coupon calling for 15 votes in The Georgian and American's pony contest was omitted from last Sunday's issue of The American. After consultation and debate, it was decided that the fairest thing to do would be to make the coupon in the next Sunday paper valued at 30 votes. This was done.

No sooner was it announced than the contestants began laying plans for getting copies of to-morrow's American. In hundreds of cases subscribers were canvassed early in the week and induced to promise to save to-morrow's coupon for contestants.

News dealers were besieged with inquiries, and many of them have increased their orders for to-morrow, foreseeing unusual demand.

Watch the totals rise as soon as these coupons begin to come in. But they are rising already.

The names and standings of contestants follow:

MEMPHIS COTTON HOUSE SHOWS CONDITION 83.1 P. C.

MEMPHIS, May 24.—In a special report issued to-day, Miller-Carter made public their first report of cotton acreage and condition, as compiled by their crop reporting bureau, which is in charge of Mr. Turner. The returns are made up to May 21.

The average for the United States shows condition of 93.1 per cent and acreage increase of 2.7 per cent.

North Carolina	77	102
South Carolina	73	100
Georgia	74	99
Alabama	79	100
Mississippi	89	104
Tennessee	93	105
Arkansas	89	105
Louisiana	86	120
Oklahoma	92	110
Texas	86	102

OATS CROP BAD IN WISCONSIN.

CHICAGO, May 24.—B. W. Snow wires from Sedalia, Mo.: "Central Missouri counties have had scattered but insufficient rains. During the past week wheat has lost the extra promise that characterized it early in the season, but with seasonable conditions hereafter will make more than an average crop. The crop is heading in the River counties, but will not harvest until last week in June.

"Oats are irreparably damaged—yellow and thin—considerable may be classed as practically a failure. Only the early sown is promising; acreage is reduced. Corn still being planted and some plowing yet to do; ground dry and hard to work.

"The early planted is in good shape and is up with a good stand."

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Hogs—Receipts 12,000. Market strong. Mixed and butchers, $8.40@8.60; good heavy, $8.40@8.60; rough heavy, $8.20@8.35; light, $8.40@8.65; pigs, $6.75@8.35; bulk, $8.50@8.60.

Cattle—Receipts 400. Market steady. Beeves, $7.15@8.80; cows and heifers, $3.40@8.35; stockers and feeders, $5.85@7.60; Texans, $6.50@9.05; calves, $7.50@9.50.

Sheep—Receipts 1,000. Market steady. Native and Western, $4.00@6.00; lambs, $5.50@8.25.

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—Cattle—Receipts 350, including 200 Southerns. Market steady. Native beef steers, $5.75@9.00; cows and heifers, $4.50@8.50; stockers and feeders, $5.25@7.50; calves, $6.00@10.25; Texas steers, $5.25@7.75; cows and heifers, $4.00@7.00; calves, $5.00@6.50.

Hogs—Receipts 5,500. Market 5 cents lower. Mixed, $8.50@8.65; good, $8.50@8.60; rough, $7.90@8.10; lights, $8.55@8.65; pigs $7.00@8.40; bulk, $8.50@8.60.

Sheep—Receipts 1,000. Market steady. Muttons, $5.00@5.75; yearlings, $6.25@6.75; lambs, $7.00@7.65.

OPINIONS ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows light rains in the Northwest and generally fair over the rest of the belt. Look for narrow market, as traders will take no big chances on either side of the market over Sunday.

Corn—The market continues to show a very strong undertone.

Oats—We believe the long side of the market on sharp reactions will prove safest.

Provisions—Look for prices to go higher.

COTTON STEADIER ON MILLS DEMAND

Bearish Condition Report Causes Sharp Decline From Early Best Figure.

NEW YORK, May 24.—On bullish weather news and increasing firmness in the cotton goods market the cotton market opened steady to-day, with first prices at a net gain of 4 to 8 points from last night's close. The ring showed a disposition to buy on all breaks, which helped in sustaining the market. After the call, however, the list became unsettled and easier, influenced by weather bulletins reporting lower temperatures over the Eastern belt.

This class of selling caused prices to drop sharply. At the end of the first hour prices were 2 to 5 points under the opening quotations. Later the selling became freer, based upon the report of a prominent spot house in Memphis, giving the condition of the crop at 83.1 per cent to May 21, and acreage increase of 3.7 per cent.

The market, however, held rather steady at the decline, through week-end short covering. July closed at 11.73 and October 11.20. The entire list at the close aggregated a net gain of 1 to 6 points from the final quotations of Friday. The tone was steady.

U. P. MAKES BIG GAIN; ALSO S. P.

Insiders Purchase U. P. Heavily on Rumor That It Will Fare Well in the Dissolution.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 24.—A combination composed of a selling movement and absence of demand carried off prices of most of the issues at the opening of the stock market to-day.

Canadian Pacific was lowest, opening at 235½ for a loss of 1⅞. Among the others were Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¾; Chesapeake and Ohio, ¼; Erie, ¼; Reading, ¼; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; United States Steel common, ⅜. Northern Pacific made a slight fractional gain.

The curb market was quiet.

Americans in London were firm. The hostilities between Bulgaria and Greece threaten to oppress the foreign markets and reflect an impressive sympathy on Americans.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged. Other bonds firm.

WHEAT GOES UP ON CROP SCARE

Each Option Soars Over a Cent. Crop Advices Conflicting, but Had No Effect.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	105
Corn—No. 2	60½
Oats—No. 2	40½

CHICAGO, May 24.—The "annual crop scare" was on in earnest to-day and advances were shown of ⅝c to 1½c for wheat, with the July the strongest spot in the list and September the weakest. As for several days past, the reports received from Kansas were conflicting in character, but this did not seem to have any effect on the professionals around whom the trade was centered. The outsider has not come into the market to any extent, owing to fears of manipulation, coupled with the possibility of suffering losses in case of soaking rains where needed overnight in the Southwest.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c higher. Oats were ⅝c lower for the May, ⅛c lower for July, but ¼c higher for September.

There were small advances in provisions and the undercurrent was one of strength.

Telling the Age of Fowls When Found Upon the Market

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Years ago there were more old fowls put upon the markets than there are to-day. Then the people would not part with their laying hens until they were too old to lay and get about the premises—then was the time it was thought to sell them. It mattered but little what the consumer thought about it so long as they got them off of their hands.

In those days it was considered part of the housekeeper's trade to be able to tell the difference between a hen one year old and a six-year-old. It was a point to notice whether the spur was hard and tight to the bone of the leg or rather soft and movable when you attempted to push it from side to side. If the former, it was an old one.

The smooth, bright scales on the legs usually indicate a young hen, although it is not an infallible rule, for we have seen hens four years old retain legs as bright as one a year old.

If you are undecided by these methods, try pressing the underpart of the bill. If it is very flexible, it is a young hen; if hard and stiff, it is very naturally otherwise. On a young hen the claws are also rather short and rather clear looking, and not stiff.

The turkey when old has long, hard, strong claws, and hard calloused places on the bottoms of the feet. They also have a long beard when they are old. Even the hens have this. It is really easier to tell the age of a live fowl than of a dressed one. On a dressed fowl the usual test is to feel of the point of the breastbone farthest from the head. It is rather soft and flexible on a young fowl, with a feeling like gristle. On the old ones it assumes the hard, stiff, bonelike or flinty nature. The feet, legs and neck of young fowls are large in proportion to the size of the body.

A fowl that has been dry picked will look younger in quality and appearance of flesh than one that has been scalded. It will look more natural in color of skin and not be so dull looking. Young ducks and geese will be plump looking with flesh of a semi-transparent look.

Another method for selecting a duck or goose when they are dressed is to take hold of the toes and pull them apart; if the web separates easily it is young.

Breeding Up a Flock.

Judge Marshall: We are trying to breed up a flock of thoroughbred Brown Leghorns and want a point or two from you as to what to expect in the crosses. Should the rooster have five or six points? Also, should the comb on the hen stand up straight like that on the rooster? J. R. S.

Chester, S. C.

Answer: The standard calls for five points on the male and female both of the single Comb Brown Leghorns. This is made as a ruling for those who are raising exhibition stock. If they happen to have four or six points it does not go to show that they are not pure bred.

You say you are grading up a flock of Brown Leghorns. If you are really doing what you say you are we would say don't. If you are trying to get a really fine lot of Leghorns by breeding good stock of males and females onto common or mixed stock you will certainly have a long and hard road to travel. The process is too slow, and the time spent is worth so much more for something else that it will pay you very much better to just buy a good trio to breed from and raise some really good stock the first year. Or buy about two or three settings of good eggs from a reliable party. Life is too short and this is too progressive an age to spend your time trying to produce what has taken others years and years of time to accomplish. Then you have the choice of buying day-old chicks at a nominal price at this season of the year, and they are all ready to grow. After you have gotten the best stock that money will buy you will then have an opportunity to try your skill at keeping them up to as high a standard as they were when you got them. The hen's comb should not stand up like the male's, but should turn smoothly over to one side of the head.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Permit Is Taken For Fine Residence

Ben Z. Phillips, member of the well-known law firm of Slaton & Phillips, applied through his representative, W. P. Francis, contracting builder, Saturday morning for a permit to erect a residence at 894 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to cost $28,150.

This will be one of the most attractive homes in the section. It will be a two-story brick veneer affair, with ten rooms and a tile roof.

Very few homes built so far during 1913 have exceeded this figure. One of them is the Venable stone castle at Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Oakdale Road; another is Mrs. J. M. High's mansion on the west side of Peachtree just north of Fifteenth Street, and still another is Mrs. Hunter Cooper's Italian house on the east side of Peachtree at Brookwood, just north of J. H. Nunnally's place.

Residence Lots Sold.

Several sales in the Howell Mill Road subdivision were announced Saturday by the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company. This concern sold to Miss Clara Perry, of Madison, two lots on Holmes Street for $1,200 cash; to A. W. Baughn, on Belle Meade Avenue, a lot for $600, and to G. C. Bohannon, on the same avenue, a lot for $600. All of the lots are 54 by 145 feet.

Peachtree Sale of Record.

A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, seller, and Ben J. Massell, buyer, have put on record papers conveying a 21 by 158 foot lot on Peachtree for $25,296. This property is on the east side of Peachtree, 223 feet north of Pine Street, and is in litigation through a suit filed several days ago to recover part of two acres in this block. The petitioners are suing the people holding the original deeds, and not those having bond-for-title interests.

Dr. VanHoose retains some 42 feet in a 63-foot parcel which he purchased several months ago from Porter Langston. The 21-foot strip to Mr. Massell brought approximately $1,205 a front foot.

Two Sales Bring $17,900.

The Atlanta Land Investment Company has bought from the E. M. Atwood estate and others through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency an acreage tract on Williams and Thirteenth Streets for $15,000. The West Agency has bought from J. C. Perry for Miss Clifford Morgan West 23 Pierce Street, near Stewart Avenue, a five-room cottage on a 43 by 138-foot lot for $2,900.

Another Country Home.

Well-known citizens continue to seek the rural districts for homes. Charles E. Harman, general passenger agent of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, has bought a heavily timbered lot fronting 600 feet on Howell Mill Road and 540 feet on the Collier Road, and will erect a fine country residence. The seller of the lot was the Provident Trust Company, but the price was withheld. The property is in the neighborhood of the residences of Thomas B. Felder, Smith D. Pickett and others.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

Made in Atlanta--A Permanent Exhibition of Our Goods Would be a Liberal Education to the Whole Country--The Time to Act Is NOW.

The plan of the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta to install a permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods in this city is excellent.

Chattanooga has an exhibition along similar lines, and it is proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of this city that the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta shall study this exhibit in Chattanooga, and install an exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods here, so that people of the entire south, and other parts of the country as well, may know exactly what MADE IN ATLANTA goods really mean.

The Georgian suggests that the business men of Atlanta take up this question at once, with the idea of devoting a week during this summer or early fall to a SHOW THEM exhibition of the 1,000 or more articles that are now manufactured in Atlanta by the 600 manufacturers now engaged in such work.

An exhibition of this kind would attract the attention of business men and merchants from all over the south. The railroads would undoubtedly offer low rates to travelers; hotel accommodations are ample, and with the superb summer weather that Atlanta always enjoys, an exhibition week here would be beneficial to all concerned.

A permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods would be a liberal education. Atlanta needs that kind of an exhibition. MADE IN ATLANTA should mean the highest standard of merit. Articles made in Atlanta will undoubtedly find a ready sale all over the country, as soon as it is known what Atlanta really can do.

Every business man in Atlanta, no matter in what enterprise he is engaged, should help this movement along. It will mean much to the city. It will make for progress in every direction.

The Georgian congratulates the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the manufacturers and merchants of this city in taking up this permanent exhibition idea, and hopes it will be pushed forward in an active way.

What Is To Be Done for These Women and Others Like Them?

Who Will Answer the Questions That These Human Question Marks Permanently Represent in Our Civilization? Isn't It Time TO MAKE A BEGINNING?

Copyright, 1913.

AND THEY ARE THREE QUESTION MARKS.

They are the oldest question marks in the world, or at least in the world as long as men have lived on it, some two or three hundred thousand years.

From the beginning women have done the hard work, the dull work, the work that wears the brain, the body and the nerves, AND THE HORRIBLE WORK THAT HOLDS OUT NO FUTURE HOPE.

These question marks stand out on our so-called "civilization" of to-day.

You have the girl in her childhood bending over the machine. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to set her free?

You have the young woman bending over her child, in poverty, misery and anxiety. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to make your boasted civilization and prosperity free her from a life of sorrow, worry and want?

You have the older woman bending over the washtub, using up the last fragment of vitality and energy, painfully and slowly doing work which could be done quickly and easily by a machine—if it were "worth while" for men to use their intelligence and their machinery to free women from slavery.

How are you going to free these three slaves, straighten up their backs and answer the questions which they represent?

We have more than half a thousand solemn statesmen in Washington. And we have thousands in the Capitols of the States.

They are discussing laws and "economic questions," talking, advising, sometimes honestly urging, more often dishonestly selling their opinions.

When will they find time among other questions to take up the three questions at the top of this page?

Is it not almost time to make a BEGINNING?

And wouldn't the best beginning be the fixing OF A MINIMUM WAGE FOR WORKING GIRLS AND WOMEN?

That would be at least a start. It would stop or check the present profitable money making schemes of hiring and working girls and women for less than it costs to feed them properly.

It is true that you could not in this way free from misery the wives of underpaid workingmen, or the mothers, old and half worn out.

But you could at least BEGIN with the wages of women, making it a crime to force a woman by poverty and want to work for such wages as mean a life half starved.

Who cares now for these miserable women?

They can't put a judge on the bench or take him off the bench.

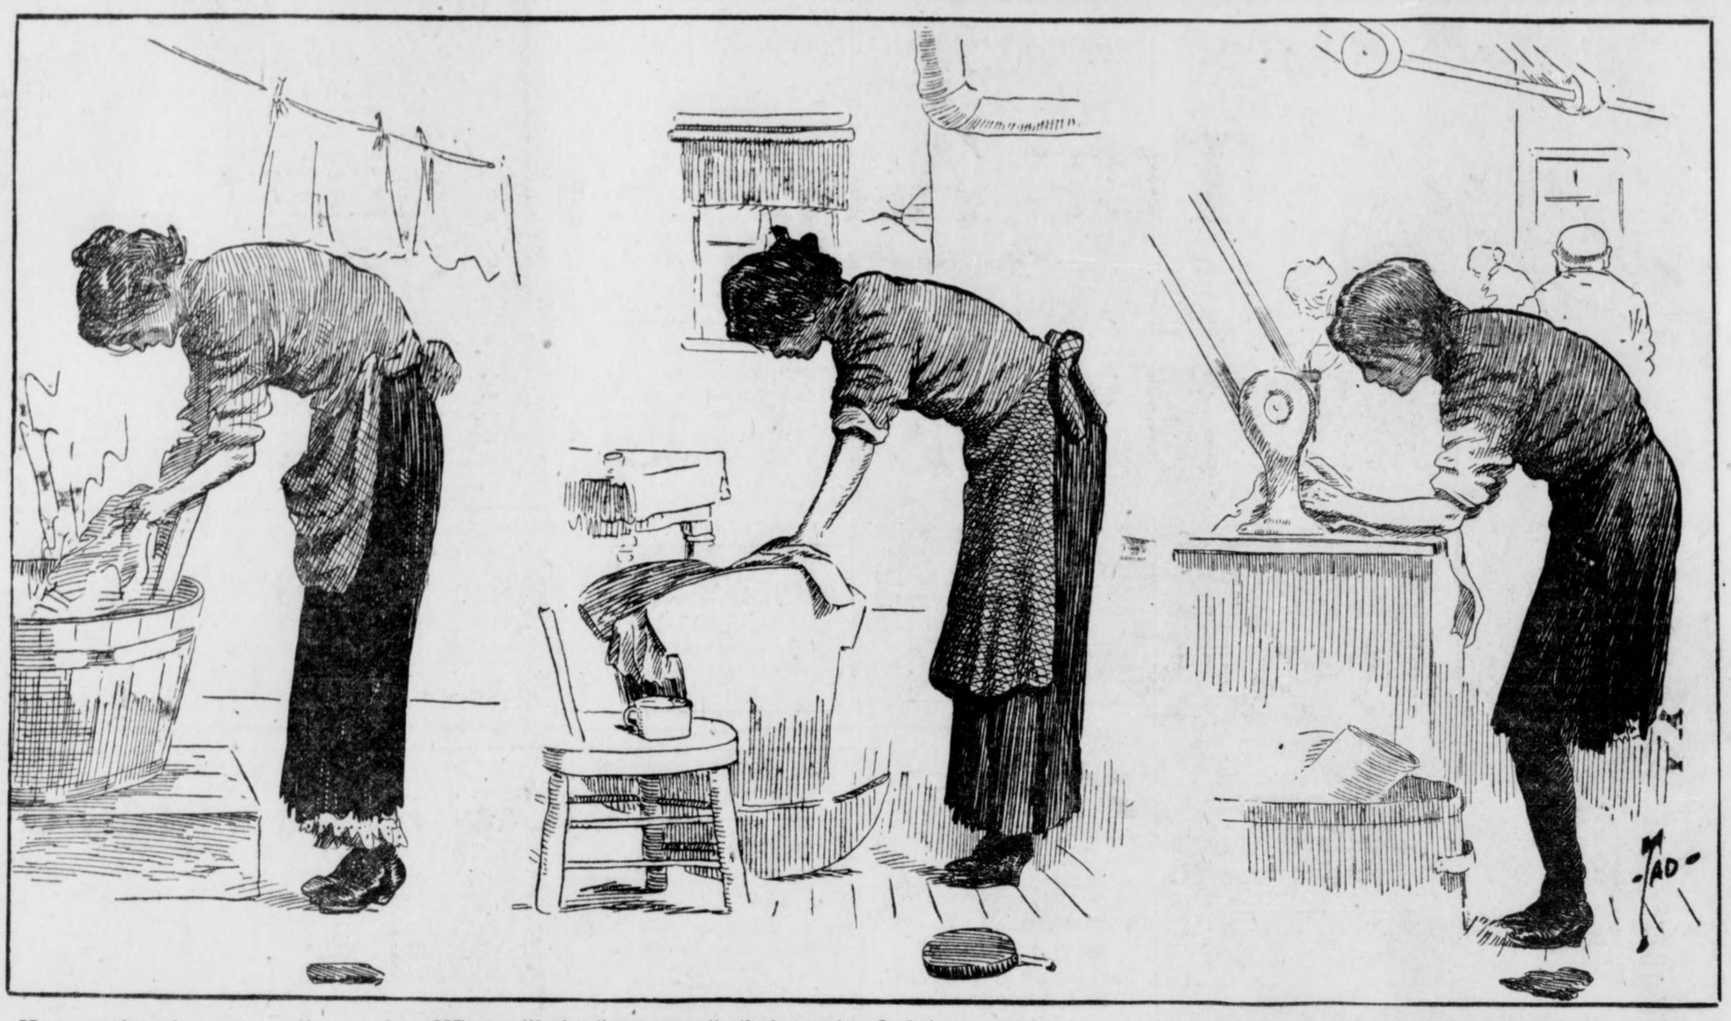
Living Questions



Here are three human question marks. When will the "statesmen" of the nation find time to answer, or try to answer, the questions that these three bodies ask?

(See Editorial.)

What Is Ideal Love in a Man?

The Highest Type of Lover Is at Once Friend, Mate, Defender and Comrade to the Woman He Loves.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

WHAT is the highest ideal of man's love for woman?

It is a more difficult question to answer than its companion—woman's ideal love for man—because woman is a more difficult being to satisfy in the matter of the affections than man.

Given an orderly home, a well-supplied table and a tactful, cheerful woman to reign, and the average man is content with his domestic relations. But emotional woman wants more than these conditions grant. She wants continuous praise, a frequently recurring touch of sentiment, and even a misunderstanding, now and then, followed by a reconciliation, is sweeter to her than a monotony of unexpressed satisfaction.

The Ideal Lover.

The ideal lover takes into consideration all these peculiarities of feminine temperament, and adapts himself to them in a reasonable degree.

Almost every woman, the most ardent and romantic as well as the phlegmatic, realizes at times the maternal element in her love for a man. It is this which aids her in being his patient nurse in hours of illness and his stimulus in times of despondency, and it is that lack of graver and more paternal element in man's love which detracts from its ideality so often.

When he does possess it man is liable to overdo the matter and to become the slave of his lady's hysterical moods and to encourage her weaknesses and her selfish whims.

The lover who is at once kind, sympathetic and masterful is seldom found, yet he alone illustrates the highest order of love.

The ideal lover is he who commands his wife's or sweetheart's respect and admiration, together with her love; who makes her realize that his standards of womanhood and of life are high, and that he expects her to do her part toward maintaining them, and who is capable of drawing a fine line between devotion and servility.

The moment those elements enter into a love its standard is lowered.

I once heard a wife say that she would not live with a man who told her he thought another woman beautiful. She felt that his love for her should blind his eyes to the beauty of all others.

The man loved his wife, but while his lips were silent on the subject of others' charms, his furtive glances of admiration often bespoke the sentiments of his mind. That man's love was not ideal; since it lacked the courage to make his wife understand how she belittled herself in his eyes.

The ideal lover does not entertain his wife by expatiating on the charms of other women for hours, but he does express his respectful admiration on occasions.

It Lacked Courage.

He strives to bring out the very best and noblest qualities in the woman whom he has chosen for his life mate and to aid her developing into a perfect womanhood. He is her friend and her protector as well as her lover and admirer. He looks out for her best interests, but he never forgets that she has an individuality of her own which is to be respected and considered. She is his mate and his companion, not his chattel or his servant.

She is to be advised and guided, but not commanded or coerced.

The highest type of lover realizes that a woman has a spirit and a soul, as well as a body.

The man who hides a woman away and tries to keep her from all association with her kind and all pleasures not directly bestowed by him is not an ideal lover, however madly he adores her.

His love savors too much of that of the bear who carries the lamb to its cave to devour it at leisure.

Neither is that the highest type of love which encourages a woman's foolish ambitions and unworthy aims.

I have known a man to plume himself as a model husband because he gave his assistance to a silly wife—the mother of his children—who conceived an aspiration for a theatrical career. She possessed no atom of talent, and made herself only the object of ridicule and pity to all observers, while she left her husband—a good man, of ample means—and her children to the care of domestics.

Had the woman been a great genius, born to do some special work in life and no other, the husband's unselfishness would have been "ideal."

Highest Type of Lover.

A man must be a woman's truest friend in order to be also her ideal lover. He must possess appreciation of all her best qualities, sympathy for all her feminine weaknesses, the courage to warn her when her highest good demands it, and the wisdom to direct her when counsel is needed. He must be delicate enough never to make her feel her financial dependence upon him, and he must possess the will power and self-control to make his loyalty to her under all conditions that which he expects of her.

Yes, he must be strong enough to keep her from leading him into financial ruin, and lover enough to keep her responsive to his demonstrations of affection. Friend, defender, lover, comrade, mate—all these must be he who possesses "the highest type of love" for woman.

"The God-Blessed Macs"

Dr. White Says in the Storm the Presbyterians Are Oak and Rock, but in the Sunshine They Are Vine and Flower.

Written for The Georgian by REV. JOHN E. WHITE, pastor Second Baptist Church.

TWO good-natured witticisms at the expense of the Presbyterians by the late Sam Jones have just passed into oblivion beyond recall. He said that the only objection to be had against the Presbyterians was that there are so few of them, and that "The Presbyterians pay more for their religion and get less fun out of it than any people on earth."

The historic gathering of 1,500 commissioners in Atlanta, representing American Presbyterians, has abruptly made an end of the first complaint, and their lively proceedings in debate and the good cheer they have radiated on our streets and in our homes leaves no ground for the other.

The Presbyterians number nearly 5,000,000 in the world and constitute one-fifth of the evangelical force of Christianity. They have furnished their full share to the entertainment of history.

Definite Distinctions.

The English and Welsh names of Smith and Jones represent our largest American classification of surnames, but the folks whose names carry the handle of the "God-blessed Macs" belong to a class of quality incomparable in weight and achievement.

Next to the Jews the Macs have preserved through generations a distinctive character. They are not all Presbyterians, but there is a Presbyterian quality in them all.

Presbyterianism is only a denominational subdivision—a fragment broken off from Scotch granite; but the Presbyterian essence has gone with Scotchmen into every nook and corner of American character. Its leaven is pungent and penetrating, and if they could only monopolize it and secure a royal patent on all it permeates, the Presbyterians would lay claim to the most immense religious areas. But there is no monopoly in truth, and the Presbyterians are debtors also. Renan said "Jesus begat Paul, Paul begat Augustine, Augustine begat John Calvin, John Calvin begat John Knox."

It is with difficulty that Protestants are reminded that Augustine was Roman Catholic. Aside from theological heredity, the Presbyterians, taken as they are, constitute in the world an incalculable value to human character far beyond their numerical strength.

It is not generally known that the name Scotland was stolen from the little country now known as Ireland. Scotia, before the tenth century, was a territorial term, while Scotus was a race name and the generic term of Scoti embraced the people of that race, whether inhabiting Ireland or Britain.

After the tenth century the

principal stronghold of the people designated Scoti included nine counties in the North of Ireland as well as the Western part of Scotland.

The Scotch-Irish, therefore, are not a mixture of Irish and Scotch blood, but are the pure Scotch who happened to be geographically identified with Northern Ireland. The main contribution to American life from the Scotch came from this region. They brought their quality with them, and it was a fighting quality.

The first Scotch-Irish clergyman to land in America, in 1682, landed in jail immediately, charged with the offense of preaching the Gospel at a private house.

The first great Scotch-Irish lawyer spoke a piece in Virginia about "Give me liberty or give me death." At Mecklenburg, North Carolina, the Scotch-Irish raised the first standard of defiance to Great Britain.

At Alamance, in North Carolina, ten years before, they had fought the first skirmish of the American Revolution.

When George Washington saw red-coats landing at every seaport he said that if the worst came to the worst he would gather the Scotch-Irishmen around him and make a fortress of liberty in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

At King's Mountain the Scotch-Irish, under three Presbyterian elders, flung victory into the teeth of despair and saved the cause of Independence.

The Presbyterians may not claim them all, but we all claim them.

Good Soldiers—Good Brothers.

We have had a large flavor of this life for ten days in Atlanta. All our under-estimates are revised.

We have seen the Presbyterians as many and we know them as much. We have marked them as good soldiers, and we have felt them as good brothers. We have witnessed them in their conflicts, and we have warmed toward them in our homes.

If in the storm they are oak and rock, in the sunshine they are vine and flower.

JUST YOU

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

ALL the selfish joys of earth,
I am getting through—
That which used to lure and lead
Now I pass and give no heed;
Only one thing seems of worth—
Just you.

Not for me the lonely height,
And the larger view;
Lowlier ways seem fair and wide,
While we wander side by side.
One thing makes the whole world bright—
Just you.

Not for distant goals I run,
No great aim pursue;
Most of earth's ambitions seem
Like a shadow of a dream
All the world to me means one—
Just you.

LUTHER M'CARTY DEAD IN PRIZE FIGHT

42 KILLED WHEN PIER FALLS AT LOS ANGELES

ERRORS AND HITS COST LOCALS GAME

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, May 24.—The Gulls trimmed the Crackers here this afternoon to the tune of 5 to 1.

Hall Smith sent in Brady and Graham to do the battery work for Atlanta, while Mike Finn selected W. Robertson and Schmidt to look after that end for Mobile.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Stock lifted a high fly back of second. Agler and Alperman got mixed up over it, and Stock was safe at first. Starr grounded to Alperman and Stock was out to Bisland. Starr stole second. O'Dell went out, Alperman to Agler. Jacobsen flied to Long. NO RUNS.

Long went out, O'Dell to Paulet. Bailey also went out, O'Dell to Paulet. Alperman fanned. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Clark flied to Long. D. Robertson drove one past Alperman for a single. Paulet singled over first and Robertson went to third. Paulet and D. Robertson attempted a double steal and Robertson was caught at the plate, Graham to Alperman to Graham. Schmidt lined to Welchonce. NO RUNS.

Welchonce out, W. Robertson to Paulet. Smith grounded out, Stock to Paulet. Bisland out, O'Dell to Paulet. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

W. Robertson out, Brady to Agler. Stock went out, Brady to Alperman to Agler. Starr walked and stole second. O'Dell flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS.

Agler singled to center. Graham went out, Stock to Paulet, and Agler took second. Brady grounded to O'Dell and was safe when Paulet dropped the latter's throw. Agler took third on the error. Long flied to Jacobsen and Agler scored. Bailey walked. Alperman flied to Clark. ONE RUN.

FOURTH INNING.

42 DEAD, 150 INJURED BY COLLAPSE OF PIER

LONG BEACH, CAL., May 24.—Five hundred persons were hurled to the beach this afternoon, 42 were killed and more than 150 injured, when the stage of the Municipal Auditorium, a part of the Municipal pier extending over the ocean, collapsed.

The accident occurred during the celebration of Empire Day, Queen Victoria's birthday. Fully 20,000 former subjects of the British Empire had assembled at Long Beach for the celebration.

The ceremonies were taking place on the pier and in the auditorium. Five hundred persons had been seated on the stage, when the structure gave way.

Piled Among Wreckage.

Those seated on the stage were piled in a mass of wreckage at the very edge of the ocean itself. First reports that reached the downtown sections here said that the crowds had bten hurled into the water. When the rescuers from the city reached the scene they found the injured huddled in a tangled mass, the spectators crowding about trying to render aid.

Work of removing the injured was at once begun. Every physician and nurse was sent to the scene and others from nearby cities summoned. A special train carrying physicians and nurses was rushed here from Los Angeles at the behest of Mayor Alexander there.

The injured were removed to the shelter of cafes along the beach. The dead were laid in rows on the sands. Forty-two bodies were removed from the debris. Many of the injured are so seriously hurt that they will die.

Gibson Near Break As Trial Continues

NEW YORK, May 24.—Maurice ton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer on trial here on the charge of drowning Rosa Menschnik Szabo in Greenwood Lake July 16 last to secure her estate, looked to be on the verge of collapse when led into court to-day.

He had refused to eat any breakfast.

The big part that Mrs. Gibson played in the defense of her husband becomes more and more apparent. Gibson has been very down-hearted since she was removed from his side at the beginning of the second trial yesterday.

CHAMPION OF WORLD IS KILLED IN RING

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 24.—One minute and forty-five seconds after Luther McCarty and Arthur Pelky met in the prize ring this afternoon, Pelky landed a right-hand punch squarely over the big cowboy's heart. Thirty minutes later the former heavyweight white champion of the world was dead.

For the first few seconds the fight was on even terms. The men went at it carefully, feeling each other out.

Pelky saw his chance. He threw all his force into a right-handed swing. It landed square. McCarty crumpled up. His arms fell limp to his sides, he reeled and fell backward.

The referee tolled out the count. McCarty was unconscious before ten was pronounced. His body heaved, then became rigid.

Physicians were hustled into the ring. They worked over the giant fighter, but as they worked his face took on a strange black tinge. Thirty minutes after the blow was struck the physicians summoned to the ringside pronounced the fighter dead.

An ambulance was hastily summoned. It clanged to the ring, three miles from the city proper. McCarty's condition from the beginning evidently was too serious to ever remove him from the resin covered canvas which where he lay.

The ring officials remained at the arena while the physicians worked. Most of the spectators sat quietly in their places watching quietly the efforts to resuscitate McCarty.

When it was finally officially announced that McCarty was dead, the crowd filed slowly out of the arena.

Weak Heart Blamed.

McCarty's death was said by physicians to have been due to a weak heart and the excitement superinduced by the fight fully as much as by the blow itself. An examination to determine whether the blow caused an internal hemorrhage was decided on.

McCarty and Pelky both seemed cool and confident when they entered the ring. They shook hands smilingly at the behest of Referee Ed W. Smith, then posed for photographs.

The right landed with stinging effect. McCarty wavered and staggered, then flopped over on his back. The blow, though a hard one, was not delivered with the full power of the fighter, and Pelky stepped back, apparently ready to resume the fight.

He seemed surprised when his big adversary failed to rise as Referee Smith began the count.

Pelky Placed Under Arrest.

Before ten had been counted McCarty was evidently in a serious condition and his manager stepped to the ropes and shouted a summons for a doctor. Doctors in the audience at once responded and they began efforts to restore McCarty. Artificial respiration was resorted to, but it had no effect and strong stimulants were used to produce a reaction in the heart. McCarty was evidently failing rapidly and as the doctors worked it was evident that their hopes of reviving the big fellow were lessened.

After 25 minutes of effort the physicians suspended their work and whispered together. Then they made tests to determine whether the fighter was still alive. A brief announcement from the ring was made, stating that he was dead.

A policeman entered the ring and arrested Pelky, who had watched the scene stupefied by the tragedy.

COLYAR HELD FOR FORGERY

A. S. Colyar, Jr., author of the alleged dictographing of Mayor Woodward and Colonel Thomas B. Felder, was placed under arrest Saturday afternoon at the request of Chief of Police Edward Connors of Knoxville, Tenn., on the charge of forgery.

The arrest came on a capias from the Criminal Court of Knoxville.

Upon receipt of the request from Connors, Police Chief Beavers ordered Colyar's arrest. Colyar was located at the corner of Forsyth and Marietta Streets by Detectives Chewning and Norris and taken to the police station. He was taken to Beavers' office and the charge placed against him. Colyar is now being held at the station awaiting further action from Knoxville.

Rents in Washington Dismay Marshall

WASHINGTON, May 24.—"We won't pay more than $2,000 a year rent."—(Signed) Vice President Marshall, Secretary of Labor Wilson and Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

"Absuh-h-d! It can't be done."—(Signed) Washington society.

With the record standing thus the new officials of the nation go on looking for reasonably priced houses, and society and the rent agents go on being shocked.

DICTOGRAPH CATCHES MAYOR IN NET

Sensational dictograph conversations, in which Mayor James G. Woodward, Charles C. Jones, former Tenderloin proprietor and present owner of the Rex saloon; E. O. Miles, a private detective; A. S. Colyar, accuser of Colonel T. B. Felder, and Chief Lanford's clerk, February, all figure, are made public by The Atlanta Georgian to-day.

The conversations, all reported by a dictograph installed in the Williams House, in the same room and by the same man who figured in the "trapping" of Felder, tend to throw new and startling light on the alleged plot to "get" Chief of Police James L. Beavers, who wiped out the Tenderloin, and Chief of Detectives Lanford.

As reported by George M. Gentry, who took down the conversation as it trickled over the thin spun wires through the door between Colyar's room, No. 31, and room No. 32, it is apparently made clear that the Mayor was not only after evidences of graft in the police department, but more directly after evidence on which Chief Beavers could be impeached and discharged. The Mayor has never hesitated to make plain that he was not in sympathy with the chief's attitude.

The conversation in which the Mayor figured seems to show that he promised protection to the man who would get the evidence if he should get in trouble doing it, and that he gave assurances the work would be well paid for.

The Mayor was present at the conference with February, Colyar and Miles. The entire dictograph conversation in which he figured is given elsewhere.

Far more sensational is the conversation in which Jones, Miles and Colyar took part. Jones viciously attacked the police department, charging graft and crookedness; accused Marion Jackson, Men and Religion Forward Movement leader, of being the beneficiary of vice, and said he had been double-crossed in the wiping out of the Tenderloin.

Colonel Felder's name is mentioned time and again in the conversation of the three, and more than one reference is made to the alleged offer of $1,000 for evidence.

Here is the entire dictograph conversation in which Mayor James G. Woodward took a part as it was reported to the police. A copy is in the police files to-day.

A. S. Colyar, the man who engineered the entire sensation, of course, take a leading part. The conversation is first principally between him and Chief Lanford's clerk, February, and E. O. Miles, a private investigator, and a friend of Charles C. Jones, who comes later into the conversation.

Jones owned a number of houses in the restricted district closed up by Chief Beavers, which were conservatively estimated to have given him an income of $40,000 a year. He is the owner of the Rex saloon, and is by no means poverty stricken, despite the huge dent Chief Beavers' reform made in his roll.

Mayor James G. Woodward, who has never hesitated to let it be known that he was not in sympathy with the Chief's vice crusade, comes into the conversation later and is reported in full.

NEGRO SWEEPER OWNS WRITING NOTES FOUND BY DEAD GIRL'S BODY

It was announced Saturday noon that Leo M. Frank had been indicted by the Grand Jury for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The authorities are of the opinion that they have a very strong case against Frank and Lee, and sufficient evidence to convict Frank of the murder.

Rumors about the Grand Jury room were definite to the effect that evidence produced against Frank convinced the entire jury that the case against Frank was very strong.

Of course the proceedings of the Grand Jury are secret and no member of the Grand Jury nor any member of Solicitor Dorsey's staff would give the reporters information as to what had taken place in the Grand Jury room, or what evidence had been disclosed against Frank or Lee.

That the authorities have very important evidence that has not yet been disclosed to the public is certain. The Georgian has maintained this from the beginning of the investigation.

The jury adjourned until Friday without indicting Lee.

Several most peculiar features mark the affidavit of James Connally, and Solicitor Dorsey is chary about accepting its supposed admissions without a thorough investigation.

The fact that the negro sweeper places the date as the Friday before the murder that Frank asked him for specimens of his handwriting forms the first mystifying phase of the confession.

No theory that has placed the responsibility of the crime upon Frank has held that he planned it deliberately a day before it was committed. The unanimous theory of those who have believed Frank guilty is that he did it on the necessity of the moment to prevent the girl revealing the attack which is supposed to have preceded the killing.

The belief that the killing was planned as far ahead as Friday has entered no one's mind in respect to the circumstances of the mystery.

The negro also says in his affidavit that Frank muttered: "Why should I hang?" a very significant question if it could be regarded as likely to be made by a guilty person, but a question which appears entirely outside the realm of probabilities, in view of the careful watch Frank has kept on his tongue ever since the city was shocked by the news of the murder the morning of April 27.

The entire affidavit ie exceedingly peculiar.

Connally's testimony came as a surprise. Few persons knew of the weighty evidence which was being carried before the Grand Jury when the negro sweeper was taken before that tribunal except the prosecution.

Connally was arrested on suspicion the morning following the murder. He had been confined in the Tower since that time.

Sent for Detective.

Until Saturday morning his testimony had been considered by practically everyone connected with the case as of small value.

"Boss, I wrote those notes," said the negro in reference to the bits of note paper which were found in the basement of the factory and which had been practically the only clew the police had unearthed which would bear upon the personality of the murderer.

When the negro had finished his statement he was taken immediately to the court house. Samples of his handwriting had already been secured and these, it is said, compare favorably with those in the mysterious notes.

Negro's Affidavit.

Here is Connally's (or Conley's) affidavit:

State of Georgia, County of Fulton:

Personally appeared before the undersigned, a notary public in and for the above State and county, James Connally, who, being sworn on oath, says:

On Friday evening before the holiday, about four minutes to 1 o'clock, Mr. Frank come up the aisle and asked me to come to his office. That was the aisle on the fourth floor, where I was working, and when I went down to the office he asked me could I write and I told him yes I could write a little bit, and he give me a scratch pad and told me what to put on it, and told me to put on there, "Dear Mother, a long tall black negro did this by himself," and he told me to write it two or three times on there. I wrote it on a white scratch pad, single ruled. He went to his desk and pulled out another scratch pad, a brown looking scratch pad, and looked at my writing and wrote on that himself, but when I went to his office he asked me if I wanted a cigarette, and I told him yes, but they didn't allow any smoking in the factory, and he pulled out a box of cigarette that cost 15 cents a box, and in that box he had $2.50—two paper dollars and two quarters—and I taken one of the cigarettes and handed him the box back, and he told me that was all right I could keep the box, and I told him he had some money in the box, and he said that was all right I was welcome to that for I was a good working negro around there, and then he asked me where was Gordon Bailey (Snowball they call him), and I told him he was on the elevator, and he asked me if I knew the night watchman, and I told him no, sir, I didn't know him, and he asked me if I ever saw him in the basement, and I told him no, sir, I never did see him down there, but he could ask the fireman and maybe he could tell him more about that than I could, and then Mr. Frank was laughing and jollying and going on in the office, and I asked him not to take out any money for that watchman I owed, for I didn't have any to spare, and he told me he wouldn't, but he would see to me getting some money a little bit later. He told me he had some wealthy people in Brooklyn, and then he held his head up and looked out of the corner of his eyes and said, "Why should I hang," and that's all I remember him saying to me. When I asked him not to take out any money for the watch he said you ought not to buy any watch, for that big fat wife of mine wants me to buy her an automobile but he wouldn't do it; I never did see his wife. On Tuesday morning, after the holiday on Saturday, before Mr. Frank got in jail, he come up the aisle where I was sweeping and held his head over to me and whispered to me to be a good boy, and that was all he said to me.

(Signed) JAMES CONLEY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 24th day of May, 1913.

In the name and behalf of the citizens of Georgia, I charge and accuse Leo M. Frank, of the County and State aforesaid, with the offense of murder, for that the said Leo M. Frank, in the County aforesaid, on the 26th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1913, with force and arms, did unlawfully and with malace aforethought, kill and murder one Mary Phagan by then and there choking her, the said Mary Phagan, with a cord placed around her neck, contrary to the laws of the State and the good order, peace and dignity thereof.

HUGH M. DORSEY,
Solicitor General.

J. M. STARNES, Prosecutor.

Fulton Superior Court, 1913.

Leo M. Frank was confronted in his cell by the startling confession of the negro sweeper, James Connally.

"What have you to say to this?" demanded a Georgian reporter.

Frank, as soon as he gained the import of what the negro had told, jumped back in his cell and refused to say a word. His hands moved nervously and his face twitched as though he were on the verge of a breakdown, but he absolutely declined to deny the truth of the negro's statement or to make any sort of comment upon it.

His only answer to the repeated questions that were shot at him was a negative shaking of the head, or the simple, "I have nothing to say."

Solicitor Dorsey let it be known following the adjournment of the Grand Jury Saturday noon that Newt Lee's release within a short time was not unlikely.

It is also understood that James Connally, on the strength of his admission that he wrote notes at the dictation of Frank, probably will be held as accessory before the fact.

Girl Tells Her Story.

Little Monteen Stover, the girl who went into the National Pencil Factory at 12:10 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was strangled, was one of the eight witnesses called before the Grand Jury Saturday forenoon.

The girl testified before the Coroner's Jury that she went to the factory at this time to draw her money and that she was unable to find Mr. Frank, although Frank had testified that he was in his office from the time that Mary Phagan left until Foreman Quinn is said to have called at about 12:20 o'clock.

M. B. Darley, foreman at the factory, was another of the witnesses. He was before the Grand Jury for about half an hour undergoing examination.

Another employee, E. F. Holloway, the day watchman and timekeeper, was called during the forenoon. Holloway was asked by the Coroner's Jury concerning Frank's attitude toward the girls in his employ.

Detective Is Questioned.

Harry Scott, Pinkerton detective, was questioned about 40 minutes and B. B. Haslett, city detective, was in the jury room about ten minutes.

H. L. Parry, stenographer, testified for about five minutes, presumably identifying the proceedings of the Coroner's Jury.

Miss Grace Hicks, the girl that identified the body of Mary Phagan the morning the body was found, was the first witness of the day. She was detained less than 10 minutes.

J. M. Gantt, who testified before the Coroner's Jury in regard to the excited manner of Frank the day of the murder, was one of the last witnesses of the forenoon.

V. H. Kriegshaber was excused from duty when the jury convened at 10 o'clock. George H. Gershon, who has been absent in New York, sat with the jury.

PLOT ON LIFE OF BEAVERS TOLD BY COLYAR

But He Fails to Produce Man to Prove Charge, as He Promised.

A. S. Colyar, Jr., failed entirely to produce the "mysterious man" whom he declared had been hired to "shoot to death" Chief of Police J. L. Beavers.

When Colyar gave the sensational information of the conspiracy to kill the police official he declared that he would bring to police headquarters the man who had been secured to commit the deed; that this person would make affidavit to bear out the plot charges, and would swear also that he had been promised immunity from punishment for his act.

Colyar asserted at the time of his charges that the man was at present in Atlanta and intended remaining here until he had killed Beavers. Colyar also declared that the person had intimated that he might also kill Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford. Colyar then stated that he knew of the person's whereabouts and would bring him before the police to prove the charges.

Disclosures of the amazing conspiracy came to light Saturday morning. Police officials have been quietly investigating it since the astounding information was given them.

The name of this mysterious man has not been furnished detectives, but Colyar promised to take him Friday night to the office of Chief Lanford, in the police station, where the affidavit was to be made. Up to a late hour to-day, however, neither he nor Colyer had put in an appearance.

According to the story told by Colyar, this man is not a resident of Atlanta, but has been here several days. He is an old friend of Colyar. He said this man would swear positively that the murder plot proposition was made to him shortly after his arrival here, and that he would give the name of the man who engineered the deal.

'Hard Labor' Omitted, Banker Takes Appeal

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., May 24. Under plea that will win freedom for many Federal prisoners if he wins, Julius W Hopkins, former bank teller of Cleveland, Ohio, sentenced to seven years in the Federal Penitentiary here, for embezzling $115,000, will contend before the United States Court of Appeals at St. Paul next week that the sentence should have read at "hard labor," according to the law governing the sentencing of violations.

Rich Stockman Gets Bail; Victim Lives

MOULTRIE, GA., May 25.—Joe J. Battle, the wealthy live stock dealer who was remanded to jail without bail several days ago by Judge Thomas for shooting Walter P. Brown, has been released under $25,000 bond, after physicians testified that Brown was practically out of danger.

MILES SAYS HE HAD MAYOR GO TO ROOM

Wanted Woodward to See Just What Sort of a Crook Colyar Was, He Declares.

Edward O. Miles, a private detective, assumes the responsibility for the presence of Mayor Woodward at the Williams House, resulting in the dictographing of the Chief Executive of Atlanta. He also says it was at his suggestion Colonel Thomas B. Felder discontinued even his acquaintance with A. S. Colyar, the wild-eyed investigator from Tennessee.

Miles' statement to a Georgian reporter follows:

"Colonel Felder had already been to see Colyar and he asked me to go and see what he had; to examine any papers, etc.

"I went, and as soon as I saw Colyar I was disgusted. The Lord doesn't make mistakes, and the Lord certainly put the brand of a crook on that fellow's physiognomy if He ever put it anywhere.

"Colyar wanted Mayor Woodward and asked me to get him. I went to the Mayor and said: 'I want to take you down to see the greatest freak and crook you ever saw in your life. I want you to hear his line of bunk. You don't have to say anything—just come along and listen to what he hands out.'

Thought Someone Listened.

"That was Wednesday afternoon. I didn't think anything about a dictograph, but I knew, or at least thought, that he had somebody listening in the next room. I couldn't help knowing that, because every now and then Colyar raised his voice so they could hear. Anybody on the streets a block could have heard him had they listened.

"Colyar told me not to forget to bring Colonel Felder and the money next morning at 10 o'clock. I asked him what money, and he said the $1,000 for the papers. I told him I didn't want to buy any papers; that if Colonel Felder or anybody else did, that was their business, but I didn't believe they did.

"Then I went back and reported to Colonel Felder and advised him to have nothing more to do with Colyar; not to go back to the Williams House and even not answer his telephone calls.

Felder Quit Negotiations.

"They waited all day Thursday, and Colonel Felder didn't go back and didn't answer the telephone calls. That's why it was published in incompleted form. They saw the jig was up, and I believe Colyar then sold the story.

"I know young Gentry, who took down the dictograph report, and I'll wager $100 he won't sign an affidavit it has been published in unexpurgated form. Nothing has been added, but some things have been left out. However, I can't say that the omissions made any material change.

"Yes, I am the one that caused Mayor Woodward to go there. He is all right. I just wanted him to hear the line of bunk that crook had to hand out.

Feud Victim Dead; Slayers Surrender

MOULTRIE, GA., May 24.—J. M. Hornage, who was wounded in a feud battle near here Thursday by the Hart brothers, has a slight chance to recover, should no complications develop. Horace Hornage, his son, died yesterday from his wounds and was buried to-day.

The Hart brothers came to Moultrie and surrendered to the Sheriff. They have demanded an immediate commitment trial.

Georgians Boast Interurban Road

ANDERSON, S. C., May 24.—More than 100 representatives from Georgia cities were here last night to urge the Southern Power Company to build an interurban electric railway from Anderson to Athens to connect with proposed Atlanta lines. Hartwell, Elberton, Athens, Royston and other Georgia cities sent delegations, thirty-nine coming from Hartwell.

A rally was held and speeches urging the advantage of the proposed road were made.

LANFORD'S SECRETARY WHO ACCUSES FELDER

He is a modest, unassuming young man, in whom Lanford and Beavers have complete confidence.

G. C. February Lanford's clerk, who alleges bribery offer.

February alleges that Felder offered $1,000 for police records.

Felder Charges Police Plot to Shield Slayer

Colonel Thomas B. Felder entered into an explicit and detailed denial to The Georgian of all the charges of attempted bribery contained in the affidavits signed by C. C. Febuary, secretary to Chief of Detectives Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, a private detective with a spectacular career.

Colonel Felder declared the alleged dictograph record of conversation he is alleged to have had with Colyar and Febuary in Williams House No. 2 a "frame-up" and a fabrication.

The report that he had offered $1,000 for the Coleman affidavit in the Phagan case and affidavits said to indicate graft in the Police Department he branded as absolutely false.

The whole plot had been concocted, he said, to discredit himself and W. J. Burns and drive them from the Phagan case so the guilty person might be protected.

"Every move made by the police in the Phagan case has been for the protection of the real criminal," said Colonel Felder. "The police have kept an innocent negro there in a cell for three weeks in the hope that they can crush a confession out of him and let the real culprit go free.

"Guilty Person Protected."

"If the desire were not to protect the guilty person, why should they desire to eliminate Burns and myself? Burns has a reputation for landing every criminal he goes after. He has a reputation for being absolutely merciless in the manner he hunts down his man. It is as certain as anything can be in the detection of criminals that he will be successful, once he gets started on a case. He is known to be unpurchasable. Everybody knows that he could have accepted a million dollars at any time during the chase for the McNamara brothers if he had been willing to say that he had not been able to find the dynamiters.

"As for myself, my professional reputation, at least, is that if I have not done a case in which I was interested any good, I certainly have not done it any harm.

"So, I repeat, what other motive could they have in trying to drive Mr. Burns and myself from the Phagan case except to protect the real culprit?

"That so-called dictograph conversation was a frame-up and a fabrication from start to finish. In a longer statement that I am preparing, I will show this conclusively. I will demonstrate it by the very conversation that is alleged to have been reproduced in the other room by the dictograph. I will show that things were written that never would have been said by persons in conversation.

"I will show its absolute absurdity with such clearness that no room will be left for doubt. It will be so plain that he who runs may read. It won't require any detective to show that it is a frame-up, and one of the clumsiest and crudest that ever was attempted.

"That Coleman affidavit, in which the mother and stepfather of the murdered Mary Phagan are made to say that they never hired me or approved of me as an attorney to prosecute the Phagan slayer, was extorted, in my opinion. As a matter of fact, I never said I was employed by the Colemans. I announced that I had been engaged by residents of Bellwood who were friends of the bereaved family. It is true, however, that Mr. Coleman approved of my selection. I never offered $1,900 for the possession of this affidavit.

"Neither is it true that I went to Mayor Woodward and told him that there was lots of graft in the city, but that it would take a good deal of money to uncover it. I had only a brief conversation with the Mayor, and I told him at the time that I did not wish to undertake anything or become interested in anything that would take my time from the prosecution of the Phagan case. It was not understood that I was to probe into the city's graft conditions.

Will Expose Colyar.

"Along with my detailed statement to-morrow I shall make public some of the startling incidents in the career of this man Colyar. I have known his history for years. What I have to say about him—and practically every statement I make will be supported by affidavits—will cause a grave doubt as to his credibility.

"I am acquainted with his movements when he went into Mexico. I know of the humiliation he was to his father, who was a well-known public man. I will tell of these things when I make my formal statement to-morrow.

"Colyar came to me and said that he had evidence of graft in the Police and Detective Departments. He said he knew that hush money was being paid the police authorities by the proprietors of disorderly houses.

"I said to him: 'Don't you know, Colyar, that nobody would believe a word you had to say? If you've got any papers that you think are worth anything, you can bring them to me and I'll look them over.' It is from these conversations that we had in my office that he has framed up this so-called dictograph conversation, adding the conversation that gives it the appearance of an attempt to bribe.

Burns Fought, He Says.

"It is nothing but a plot to get me out of the Phagan case, but I am certain of one thing, and that is that Burns and Tobie, if they are not circumvented by this gang, will have the guilt fixed upon the right person within a very short time after Burns arrives here. They will have to work against difficulties, for as soon as it became known that Burns was going to enter the case all of the witnesses were instructed not to talk to any of the Burns operatives, although they had been allowed to talk to the Pinkertons, hired by the National Pencil Company, without reserve."

Colonel Felder is bitter in his attitude toward Colyar and the people he represents, and declares that he will have them "shown up" within another 24 hours.

He was so harassed by the constant ringing of the telephone Friday night that, with Mrs. Felder, he left home shortly after 7 o'clock with the intention, he said, of hiding himself somewhere up town. He found a group of his friends at one of the clubs and he stayed there until shortly after 10 o'clock when he met Mrs. Felder, who had been witnessing a rehersal at the Grand Theater.

"If they're framing up on you, I want to tell you you've got my sympathy," said one of his friends, heartily.

"Thank you, old man," returned the Colonel, "but I don't need any sympathy. I'll have these fellows on the run so quick it'll make their heads swim!"

SEES HUSBAND'S LOVE WANING, TAKES ACID

Mrs. Janie Hazelbridge, 25, Attempts Suicide, Believing Herself an Unloved Wife.

Believing her husband did not love her any more, Mrs. Janie Hazelridge, 90 Brighton Street, attempted to end her life this morning by taking carbolic acid. After taking the poison she ran to the home of Mrs. J. Coles, at 92 Brighton Street, and told of her deed.

While Mrs. Coles was summoning the neighbors, Mrs. Hazelridge fell unconscious. The Grady Hospital and police were notified and an ambulance rushed to the scene.

Owing to the torn-up condition of Brighton Street, however, the automobile-ambulance could not pass over it and it was necessary for Call Officer Bailey to obtain a buggy and carry Mrs. Hazelridge in it for nearly a mile.

At the hospital it was said that she had a good chance for recovery.

Before taking the acid Mrs. Hazelridge wrote a note to her husband, J. V. Hazelridge, who works for the Exposition Cotton Mills, which read.

"Farewell, John. I have taken carbolic acid to kill myself, so you will be happy. Oh, God, what I suffer.

"One That Loved You."

Mrs. Hazelridge is 25 years of age and attractive. It is said she developed melancholy over small differences between herself and husband.

U. S. Will Reindict 3 for Cotton Corner

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Government has decided to seek the reindictment of Frank Hayne and William P. Brown, of New Orleans; Eugene Scales, of Texas, and Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, on the charge that they conspired to corner the cotton crop of 1909 to obtain a profit of $10,000,000.

James A. Patten, of Chicago, pleaded guilty last February to the count of the indictment, and was fined $4,000.

Carnegie, Warlike, Ready to Fight Japs

NEW YORK, May 24.—Andrew Carnegie, one of the greatest living exponents of world peace, banged one fist into his other to-day and declared that, if war should come against Japan or any other country, he would shoulder a musket and go to the front. This statement was made just before the ironmaster sailed to-day for Europe.

"What are the Japanese thinking about?" asked Mr. Carnegie. "England is Japan's ally and yet England will not allow a Japanese to set foot in her territory. Yet they expect us to give them more than their own ally."

GOODWIN TO WED AGAIN; HOPPER REMARRIED

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Nat Goodwin and DeWolf Hopper are now running neck and neck in the great American marriage sweepstakes.

A dispatch from New York states that DeWolf Hopper, comedian, has just been married for the fifth time, having been divorced April 21 by Nella Bergen, his fourth wife. His bride is said to be Miss Edna Curry, of the Gilbert & Sullivan Company.

Nathaniel Goodwin, Jr., mining magnate and comedian, will be married here to-day by Justice Summerfield to Miss Marjorie Parrott Moreland, an actress, of Baltimore. Announcement was made to this effect at a private dinner at Mr. Goodwin's Ocean Park home last night. It was said the wedding would be very quiet.

Miss Moreland is a divorcee, her first husband being Charles N. Doughty. Mr. Goodwin said he is the happiest man in the world.

"For Love" This Time.

Further he declared:

"This time I am marrying for love. Miss Moreland is the only woman I have known who has the capacity for home-making added to beauty and talent. I consider her the coming representative American actress. Everything I have is hers. What I am to-day she made me—to her I owe my life. Since my accident last year she has constantly cared for me and looked after my interests with the ability of a man."

It's High Honor, She Says.

Miss Moreland gave the following reasons why she will marry Mr. Goodwin:

"I consider it a high honor to marry Mr. Goodwin. He is one of the few men who can be ranked as being absolutely honest. He is generous to a fault and lives up to his ideals. Despite certain rumors heralded as reasons why women marry Mr. Goodwin, I am marrying him for none of these. I am marrying him because I consider him the most interesting man alive. He is very, very interesting. He is a financier, he is clever, he is an author and he is a great actor. But the big reason why I am marrying him is because I love him."

Mr. Goodwin's former wives were Miss Elizabeth Weatherby, Miss Nellie Baker Pease, Maxine Elliott and Edna Goodrich.

Hopper Refuses to Talk.

NEW YORK, May 2 .—Theatrical and intensive matrimonial circles heard with great interest to-day that DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, has been married for the fifth time. When asked about the report to-day, Mr. Hopper refused to talk, saying that he would not discuss his "personal affairs."

DICTOGRAPH TALKS IN WHICH MAYOR FIGURED

The conversation took place on Wednesday afternoon in Colyar's room—the same room where Felder was trapped, and was taken down by George M. Gentry, a nephew of the president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company. Here is a copy of the record:

The following statements were overheard by me, by using a dictograph located in room 32 of the Williams House No. 2, 34-36 North Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga.; said dictograph being connected with room No. 31 of the said hotel, and I saw Mr. E. O. Miles, whom I am personally acquainted with; Mr. G. C. February, whom I have known for several years, and Mr. A. S. Colyar, with whom I have only been acquainted for a short time, enter room No. 31 of said hotel at about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 21, 1913.

On account of Mr. February having locked the door to room No. 32, I was delayed in getting in, after having witnessed the three parties above mentioned enter room No. 31 of said hotel. In the emergency, I used the key to my front door, which, with a little difficulty, opened the door. After closing the door and going to the instrument, I was unable to hear what was being said very distinctly on account of the windows of the said room being open. This necessitated another delay to close them, and after returning to my instrument I was able to hear the following. Several dashes indicate that the voice just at that point became inaudible:

Colyar—I can tell you some things. I am executive secretary (noise made sound indistinct).

Miles—Now, just wait a minute. I know (here noise made hearing indistinct). I have got several cases (sound indistinct).

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—I am satisfied you ought, but you know when they go into it they are going to put up a howl.

Colyar—(Conversation too low to catch.)

Miles—The Mayor will give us absolute assurance that he will protect us.

Miles—I think I can bring the Mayor up here right away. The evidence is in the (sound indistinct).

Colyar—You are not a Jew, are you?

Miles—No, I am not. I spell my name M-i-l-e-s.

Colyar—These sons of a gun down here can frame up anything on Decatur Street. I told Felder I would get the goods and go outside of the county and I would meet you and him at East Lake.

Miles—There is no occasion for your leaving town.

Colyar—But I mean afterwards. I am afraid to stay here.

February—If the Mayor and Felder will stay behind us like they said they would.

Colyar—I would like to have the Mayor's——

Miles—But right now he may be busy. Felder can get—— Mr. Felder is a good—— Now, it will take about ten minutes, in any case, but he may be busy. I will bring him if he can possibly get here.

(In a few minutes Miles returned.)

Miles—He was up to the City Hall. He will be over in a few minutes, he said.

Colyar—Where is your residence, Mr. Miles?

Miles—In Decatur. I used to live in Smyrna.

(Conversation here became inaudible for a short time on account of scraping of feet upon the floor, chairs, etc., which drowned the sounds through the instrument.)

Miles—If you will excuse me, I will take off my coat. It is very warm.

Colyar and February—Certainly.

(Mr. February was evidently the one addressed, as some one went out and the conversation continued between Mr. Miles and Mr. Colyar.)

Miles—We will have that fixed. If we have got the goods on these detectives their sphere of work will be over. It will take three or four days——

Colyar—Well, what do you think of this Phagan murder?

Miles—I think it is the most damnable—— They telephoned Craig, The Constitution man to come and go with them.

Colyar—Do you believe Frank murdered that girl?

Miles—I never have believed it. It looks a great deal more like he did than it did before from the affidavits. Also there is going to be pretty strong evidence that the girl was not raped.

(Conversation became very indistinct for a few minutes.)

Miles—I think the whole thing was handled badly. In my mind I am satisfied. They had an extra on the street at 6:30. They should never have allowed all the persons they did on the premises. Just after the murder there were only a few scents and tracks, and the man who did the murder could have easily been tracked, as no one else had been there but the negro and his tracks could have been very easily eliminated.

Colyar—Yes; that is right. It looks to me like they would have known better.

Miles—They should have looked for foot prints and finger prints. Instead of that they had over 500 finger prints—— (Conversation interrupted by knock at door.)

A moment or so later Mayor Woodward entered the room.

(After the general conversation of all had subsided I was able to distinguish Mr. Miles' voice.)

Miles—I really don't know it well enough—this is the first conference I have had.

Colyar—Well, Tom Felder told me that the Mayor wanted some evidence on these fellows down here at the city hall, Decatur Street, and the station house, and here's a man that works down there. He got disgusted doing three men's work. He can get the evidence for you, but he wants no one to know it. There are some terrible framers down there.

Miles—He is afraid they will throw him in jail, after they find it out.

Woodward—How can they throw him in jail?

Colyar—They can get a charge against anybody and throw him in jail. You don't know them like some other people do.

Woodward—What is the nature of the evidence he can get?

Colyar—Well, if he was to get the evidence that Mr. Felder wants, it would do the work, which I understand is what you want.

Woodward—All I want to—(voice too low and indistinct).

Colyar—They would throw him out of his job and put him in jail.

Woodward—I don't see how they could do it.

Miles—I don't—unless there are no sane people in the city any more.

Colyar—Well, you know they said they were going to close up the red light—(voice too low.)

Woodward—Well, they have got nothing to fear.

Colyar—I went up to your office to see you, and I found it was harder work to get in your office than when I was a newspaper reporter.

Woodward—Well, my secretary came in and I told him to tell them I would see you just as soon as I possibly could.

Colyar—But he said you couldn't see me until to-morrow.

Woodward—The reason I said that was because he said you said you were in a hurry, and I said tell him to come back to-morrow. If you could have waited there a few minutes you would have had no trouble. You said you were in a hurry and had some business to attend to, but I could not tell the other people to get out of the office.

Colyar—There wasn't anybody else in the office.

Woodward—Well, the secretary or somebody was. Oh, I had to sign up a lot of checks that had to go in before the bank closed.

Colyar—I have always heard you were a plain old politician.

Woodward—It is just my natural way.

Colyar—Well, this is the man that can give the evidence down at headquarters that you want, but he is afraid to.

Colyar—You don't know what police persecution is. They can prove that black is white and water will run up stream, and they can get a jury that will—

Miles—I take this view of it. It will only be—with the police force to be—until they won't be in position to get anyone into trouble.

Colyar—They tell me they got a majority in the force.

Miles—No, sir; I don't—

Woodward—Dozier. I—

Colyar—How many votes will it take to remove him?

Woodward—A majority.

Colyar—How many are on the board?

Woodward—Twelve.

Colyar—You have a vote in case of a tie?

Woodward—I have a vote anyhow.

Miles—He is a member ex-officio.

Woodward—I vote all the time.

Miles—February wants to know if we can promise him protection. I think we can safely do it in a matter of right, like this.

Woodward—Yes.

Miles—He has the graft list and knows who's on the list, who is to be protected and who is not to be protected. It looks to me like we have the same thing down there that they had in New York, only on a smaller scale, because Atlanta is a smaller town.

Colyar—Did you tell Tom Felder that you authorized Felder that if he got the proof for you you would see that he got paid for it?

Woodward—I told Felder that on matters of this kind (voice here indistinct) and he has a good deal to say, and I told him that I am satisfied that certain parties would be willing to pay the money for him, and if he got the evidence that would convict those people it would be paid, and it will be. There is no question about that.

Colyar—He said he would give him a thousand dollars for the evidence.

Miles—Felder said to me that February said that was the price.

February—Felder said that he would pay it to us, but he would have to see the papers. He said he would give me one thousand dollars.

Miles—He didn't say that anybody had authorized him to do it. He just said he would get it up.

Woodward—I don't know whether he had reference (voice too low). As to whether he could raise the money or not; but if he did, he knows that I have not authorized him to do anything of that kind.

Miles—What would be the nature of those documents?

Colyar—It is an affidavit from two people—both signed it—acknowledging threats, etc., graft and general corruption. Like you said a while ago.

Miles—There is no trouble to show the graft?

February—(Reply inaudible).

Miles—(Voice too low at first) a place like the Walton Inn has never been closed.

February—I don't know just about that one.

Miles—Now, my information is that the woman who runs it is a sister-in-law of an official in the Police Department. A woman gave me that information and said that she was operating under protection, and there certainly is a half dozen hacks around there at 1 o'clock at night, automobiles, and couples going in and out.

Woodward—There will be no trouble about getting the money.

Miles—Yes, but * * * They might get the Council in their favor at some later date. * * * Of course, somebody would have to advance it now.

Woodward—Yes, I know it.

Miles—Isn't there another stenographer that works down there?

February—Yes; there is a man down there in Chief of Police's office. He works at night. He goes on about 4.

Miles—If they want anything after you go off, they get him to do it?

February—(Reply indistinct.)

Miles—You keep all the records of that department?

February—Yes; for Lanford.

Colyar—Only two men can get the evidence, February and Chief Lan-

MAYOR JAMES G. WOODWARD, of Atlanta, who has been trapped by the dictograph in his hunt for police graft evidence. His conversation with others was taken in A. S. Colyar's room at the Williams House on the afternoon of May 21.

Jones Attacks Beavers and Charges Police Crookedness

The following conversation occurred in room No. 31, at Williams House No. 2, 34-36 N. Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock, between C. C. Jones, E. O. Miles and A. S. Colyar:

Colyar—It has been very warm to-day, hasn't it?

Miles—Yes, it has. I asked Mr. Felder if you mentioned Mr. Jones' name to him and he said no.

Colyar—He told me Monday night that Mr. Jones was a friend of his and he thought it an outrage the way they had done him.

Miles—You know I asked you this afternoon why you wanted to see Mr. Jones.

Colyar—If you don't want to talk, that's all right.

Jones—In what way?

Jones—Yes. They closed up the houses I had. I had a lot of property.

Colyar—He told me they framed up on you.

Jones—There is no doubt but what it was a frame-up.

Colyar—Tom told me he would like to see the gang out of business.

Jones—The record now is (voice very indistinct just then). They never grafted me. Wouldn't be any use for me to give them any money.

Miles—You told me you wanted to see Jones. It is not a question of lack of confidence, as what I told you was true as far as I know, but if he knows anything at all about it, I don't know just what it is.

Jones—I don't know anything. I just told them to go ahead and build them houses and move them across the street. Even some of them went and paid for them. Three or four days before they closed the houses, the Chief of the City of Atlanta —— —— —— that it would never do to close this district and I was surprised one morning by a telephone message from someone at No. 18, that the Chief had given five or six days notice to get out, I don't remember which, and I never even went to the trouble to go out to this man to ask him what he meant, as I could not figure it out to save my life what he meant. That is all that I know of. I found out what he was doing. I understand that Jackson was holding conversation with him anywhere from one to three times a day.

Colyar—Who is Jackson?

Jones—Jackson is the man that owns the biggest —— house in Atlanta now. —— and the Chief was there and wanted to know what he had done about the license of the hotel, and the Chief ——. The people owe him $500 a month each. I understand he opened.

Colyar—Who is John Eagan?

Colyar—They certainly must have some kind of a pull.

Jones—They got something, I don't know what it is.

Colyar—What does Jackson do?

Jones—Jackson runs them religious bulletins. I know them to be the fact, for he owns this place and on one occasion after he told someone I made a remark to a man that was very close to him, I told him that he had better close his own mouth. TO BE EXACT, HE OWNS THE EMPIRE HOTEL. The man that was running the hotel had an engagement to introduce me to this man. John Dawson told me that he had just had the hotel for three or four months, and that he had cleaned the hotel out, and I looked at him and said, "Yest, you cleaned it out, no doubt of that, but run it different from what other people run it. The man went to one room and the woman to the other, with a door opening between it." So I will be frank with you, if I had anything that would convict Mr. Beavers I would tell it on the public streets. I think he is everything in the world but a man. I will be frank with you about that. If he takes my dollar and then goes to the other fellow and takes his dollar, he would tell me to go to hell, but, of course, I used to be a gambler; I run the Rex, and everybody knows it. I wouldn't trust Beavers as far as I could throw——

Colyar—I want to talk to you about——

Jones—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Colyar—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Jones—I don't think it is going to—— As far as my own knowledge is concerned, I have never been able to—well, I haven't tried to. Well, as I haven't slept much lately I think I will go. Well, I will see you to-morrow.

Miles—Well, I am much obliged to you for coming in.

Jones—I will try and ge there between 10 and 11. Will that suit you? I am glad to have met you. Good-night.

Colyar—Have you seen Felder since you saw me?

Miles—Yes.

Colyar—What did he say about going out of town?

Miles—He will go.

Colyar—Well, we will get the papers.

Miles—I told him that was reasonable.

Colyar—Then I will get the papers at 2:30 to-morrow. What time will you get in in the morning?

Miles—I will get in at 8:30 to-morrow, and I have an appointment.

Colyar—I think it is best to go out there.

Colyar—Call me up at 2401, Atlanta 'phone, at the hotel, at 1 o'clock. I won't have anything to do with the transfer of them in Fulton County. As long as he—

Miles—Yes, it makes a great deal more—. He can bull — a Morse out. I think he owes him most of it.

Colyar—What was his fee?

Miles—A hundred thousand dollars.

Colyar—How much did he get?

Miles—Oh! Absolutely—

Colyar—How long have you known Felder?

Miles—I have known him 25 years, personally.

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—Did you hear him commit himself?

Colyar—(Answer incoherent). Now listen here, this boy needs protection. Will you do all in your power to see that he gets protection? Will you promise not to use it any way as to jeopardize his position in any way?

Miles—* * * And I believe he would, because I have seen him tried. I have been through all his campaigns with him, and I have never known him to go back on his word. I can't convince my mind that the young man won't balk. He is liable to lose his nerve. He seems nervous and afraid.

Colyar—No, he won't balk; he is just timid.

Miles—In dealing with a rattlesnake I never think about (dictograph not clear) Do you?

Colyar—No.

Miles—I presume every man has his own code of honor, and mine is if the right is figured in the wrong that the right needn't hurt you. I don't mean to call him a rattlesnake as I don't know anything against him. But that respect I had in mind the general corruption in that department down there.

Colyar—He goes down there and gets the papers and brings them out there and they are the papers that you and Felder want and they would know that nobody could get them but Lanford, and him and Lanford would say that he didn't get them and they would know February got them and would fire him right away. Now, how is the Mayor going to puth im back?

Miles—If they are the documents of the nature he understands they are, there will be another Chief in his office. They would put him back for the very reason it would insure a straight administration of the next Chief.

Colyar—Will you call me in the morning at 10 o'clock?

Miles—I will call you at 10 o'clock.

Colyar—We will make Tom spend his money now.

Miles—Yes. You don't want to give the Mayor any list of these things.

Colyar—I thought you wanted the papers.

Miles—I don't want them.

Colyar—Tom does. He can tell about the papers whether they are what he wants.

Miles—We agree with the Mayor that we get this list.

Colyar—I am willing to copy it.

Colyar—Tom said that the papers—

Miles—Between you and Tom, we have nothing to do with it. If you are going to sell them to him, we will drop out of it. You say you will see the Mayor?

Colyar—I will see him to-morrow.

Miles—Good-night.

Colyar—Good-night.

FRAME-UP AIMED AT BURNS' MEN, SAYS TOBIE

Denouncing A. S. Colyar as an "eagle-beaked crook," W. C. Tobie, the Burns detective who is here making an investigation of the Phagan case, declared on Saturday that the charges of bribery and double-dealing brought against Felder were a frame-up concocted by the Pinkerton Detective Agency and the Atlanta Police Department, with these three ends in view:

To discredit the Burns Agency.

To discredit Colonel Felder because he employed Burns men.

Tobie charges also that Colyar was used as the "capper" in the frame-up. He declares that Colyar tried to induce him to be a party to a fake frame-up on the Police Department and the Pinkertons, and that Colyar invited him to attend the conference at the Williams House No. 2 between Colonel Felder, G. C. February and Colyar. He declares that Colyar told him he had affidavits that proved crookedness and graft in the Police Department and that he heard Colyar, on last Sunday, offer to sell the evidence to Colonel Felder for a stipulated sum. He declares also that Colyar said he wanted to get even with the police because they had arrested him once.

Tobie's Complete Statement.

Mr. Tobie's complete statement, in which he outlines the position of the Burns Agency in the squabble, follows:

"The charges against Colonel Felder are a frame-up betwen the Pinkerton Detective Agency, the Atlanta police department and Colyar to discredit the Burns agency and drive us out of Georgia, and to discredit Colonel Felder because he employed the Burns people to work on the Phagan case. In my mind there is no doubt that Colyar is in the employ of the Pinkertons and the police department. His actions when he tried to inveigle me into the deal proves it.

"I was in Colonel Felder's office last Sunday night when Colyar made his proposition to sell out the police department, and when he framed the conference in the Williams House. He told Colonel Felder and myself that he had affidavits that Beavers and Lanford were getting rich by protecting resorts, and that there was a world of near-beer graft in the police department. Felder agreed to attend the conference, but I didn't like the looks of things and refused to have anything to do with it. I advised Colonel Felder to keep away from Colyar.

Called at Tobie's Room.

"On Monday morning Colyar called on me in my room at the Piedmont Hotel. The eagle-beaked crook sleuthed in like a fly cop out of a story book, and was very mysterious. He saw to it that there were no exits open, that there was no likelihood of our being overheard, and then old eagle-beak began throwing out hints. He said he felt it his duty to warn me of the difficulties I would encounter, and the things I would have to overcome if I tried to work out the Phagan case. He said the police department was jealous and sore that the Burns men had begun work on the case. He declared that the Pinkertons were just as sore as the city police, and that both of them were framing on me and Colonel Felder.

"Old eagle-beak Colyar cursed the police department for everything he could think of. He called them more vile names than I have ever heard before in my life. He said he had been put in jail by the Atlanta police once, and that now was his chance to get even. He said he had affidavits that proved that Beavers and Lanford were grafters, and that the whole police force was rotten to the core. He wanted to read extracts from these affidavits, and I told him I didn't care what he had, and what is more I wouldn't believe he had anything worth while if he swore it on a stack of Bibles a mile high.

Asked to Attend Conference.

"He tried to inveigle me into a frameup against the police, and wanted me to dig into the doings of the police department. He asked me to attend the conference at the Williams House, when he said he would show a bunch of evidence that would prove everything he had claimed.

"I shut him off short and told him I wouldn't have anything to do with him, or with any other eagle-beaked crook like him. I told him to get out.

"I told Colyar that I didn't care a hang about the Atlanta police department, or about anything it does. I don't care whether Atlanta has a police department or not. I have no grudge, private or otherwise, to work off on the police department. If there is graft in the police department here, it is none of my business, and I don't care if they run a resort and a joint on every corner. I am here to work on the Phagan case, and I'll continue to work on it to the best of my ability so long as the necessary money is forthcoming. The Burns Agency is not a charitable institution and requires fees to handle a case. I am not in Atlanta to investigate the police department or anything else but the Phagan case.

Here for Phagan Case Only.

"If, when we are through with the Phagan case, anyone wants to hire the Burns agency to investigate the Police Department, we'll do it, and get whatever evidence there may be. But now I'm here for the Phagan mystery and nothing else, and haven't time to listen to the ravings of an eagle-beaked crook who is trying to play both ends against the middle."

Mr. Tobie declared also that he has never been discharged from the Pinkerton agency.

"Colyar lied like the crook he is when he said that," declared the Burns man. "I quit the Pinkerton agency to start an agency of my own with Captain Tellison. We handled the work for Burns, and when Burns opened a branch in Kansas City I was made manager."

BLEASE IRONIC IN COMMENTS ON FELDER TRAP.

I do not see that it is necessary for me to give out any interview or to have anything to say. It is not inside of my State and I do not suppose anybody that knows Tom Felder would be surprised if he is guilty, or if this is a scheme worked up by him to get a little cheap notoriety and advertisement.

However, I presume that the members of the Atlanta Bar will immediately furnish certificates of character for their darling Tommy and show that he is above suspicion and a gentleman of the highest character, with an unblemished reputation as a man and attorney, and if a court of Georgia should order his arrest that his friends will forthwith call out the militia and have him released, as they know of his character and reputation and will not for a moment allow Tommy to be interfered with. I am satisfied that poor little misled Joe Brown has had his pardon clerk already fixing up a release for his innocent darling in case of any conviction.

And, as a matter of course, the gutter snipes who went over to Augusta from South Carolina will hurry to offer their services to go on sweet Tommy's bond, and also to appear in the courts, along with Seaboard Bill and his friend, J. F. Lyon, who have heretofore been his bosom friends in his defense—all save Chairman Carlisle, who, I suppose, will be too busy "moseying" to leave his own State just now.

Consequently all will be well. Birds of a feather flock together, and of course if the lead buzzard rings his bell the congregation will assemble.

Huerta Threatens to Assume Dictatorship

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—Provisional President Huerta has threatened to dissolve Congress and assume dictatorship over the legislative branch of the government unless the deputies opposed to the $100,000,000 foreign loan cease filibustering against it.

This clash between the executive and legislative branch of the government has been expected for some time.

If the opposition is successful and the loan is not secured, a crisis will follow.

Daniels 'Afraid' to Umpire Ball Game

WASHINGTON, May 24.—As soon as Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, announced that he was going to West Point to attend the Army-Navy baseball game on May 31, he was invited to be one of the two umpires.

"No, thank you; it's a bit too risky," declared Mr. Daniels. "I've gone up in aeroplanes and down to the bottom of the sea in a submarine, but I am not a brave enough man to attempt the job as arbitrator in a college baseball game. The job is too hazardous and too dangerous."

What Is in a Name? Gets Boy $2,000,000

SEATTLE, May 24.—Through the action of the Superior Court here, Henry Francis Shoemaker, aged five, regained his name, and his father, Henry W. Shoemaker, of Altoona, Pa., has promised that the boy shall inherit $2,000,000. The boy's mother, formerly Mr. Shoemaker's wife, gave the boy the name of Perry. Mr. Shoemaker wanted him to have the name given him before he and his wife separated.

Cemetery Sexton Dies Amid Tombs

COLUMBUS, GA., May 24.—T. D. Bartlett, sexton of Riverdale Cemetery, Columbus, was found dead in the cemetery last night. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict that death was due to natural causes.

ford. * * * They have got him doing three men's work. They make him do the work of the judge down there. * * *

Miles—Well, Mr. Woodward, suppose we leave!

Woodward—I would like to have some kind of an idea or statement of what * * * so as to know what * * *.

Miles—Yes; that is, something specific.

Woodward—I don't know what to do.

February—Well, I will have to go through these papers and see what I can get.

Woodward—Get anything that looks like graft. I don't care who it hits, and especially Beavers.

February—Well, I will have to go through these papers and see what I can get.

Woodward—We are going to get up the money to pay for it. They'll want to know what you have got and what you can prove. Then I can give him an answer. Are you a stenographer?

Woodward—What do they pay you?

February—One hundred dollars. I am clerk of the detective office, and I spend a great deal of my time in working for Judge Broyles, which makes one man working in two different departments.

Miles—Are you married?

February—Yes, sir.

Miles—(Excessive noise rendered conversation inaudible.)

Woodward—I won't do anything until it is substantiated.

Miles—Yes; just forget it. You know you have never broken your word yet.

Woodward—I heard they charged me with some meanness.

Miles—I think that is a great compliment.

Woodward—I heard they said something of that kind down there.

Miles—That would tickle me to death if some woman would say that to me.

Woodward—The woman, I und the stand and swear to it.

erstand, said she would not get on

Colyar—Well, I understood that the woman said she did not know you.

(Noise interfered with sound over dictograph.)

Woodward—I have a lot of fellows to come up to me and say: "Is this Mayor Woodward? I have seen your picture—" . . . Oh, I don't know that it is true about me.

Miles—Personally (on account of Mr. Miles talking so low, was unable to understand him).

Woodward—Well, they have pretty good evidence on him.

Colyar—On who?

Woodward—Beavers.

Colyar—I know one of the vice commission leaders was put out of a hotel in Birmingham three years ago with a prominent man's wife. . . .

Woodward—I tell you what to do. You get this stenographer up there and see what he can do. You needn't let me know about it; just tell Miles.

Colyar—How about Lanford?

Woodward—We want Beavers first, then Lanford.

Miles—I agree with you, it is best that after we go into this and raise the money to pay for it, we go out of the county, and it will be turned over to be examined, to see that they are the papers, and then the money is to be turned over. Now, this list you speak of. If February don't want it t o go out in his own handwriting, I will take it and copy it in my own handwriting. And if he gets into trouble we will protect him. Still, in a thing like this I don't mind getting in trouble for the right. If he gets in jail I will promise that he will get out. . . .

Woodward—We have got lawyers here that will get you out pretty quick. And I have the pardon power still.

Miles—And when they see you have got them they are going to be mighty quick to quiet down. . . . Now suppose we arrange for another meeting. You set the hour and I will meet you at any time and place.

February—Well, we would better call you up.

Miles—I am so busy that I am not in my office very much, and you may not catch me.

Colyar—Can you meet me at 8 o'clock to-night, here?

Miles—Yes; I can meet you here.

(At this juncture someone knocked on the door and told Mr. Colyar that he was wanted at the telephone. Mr. Colyar replied by saying he couldn't come as he was busy.)

February—Well, we will call you up.

Colyar—He is coming here at 8 o'clock to-night. * * * My number up here is Atlanta phone 2401.

Miles—Yes, I will call for you. Now, that is to-night?

Colyar—Yes.

Miles—I will be here at 8 o'clock. That is all right?

Woodward—I am satisfied that if we can establish. * * * Do you understand this much, that we have got something (voice too low and indistinct to hear).

Miles—Yes; it has got to be positive.

Colyar—Want a match?

Miles—I got one. Well, good luck.

Woodward—(Voice too low to hear.)

Colyar—They will frame up on anybody that you report.

Woodward—(Talked very low and indistinct.)

Colyar—What protection have we got?

Woodward—Well, I don't think there will be any trouble at all. * * * We could get together and establish * * * There is something wrong. It is simply a * * * Now, Mr. February, you get a list of the papers you can furnish me against those men and give them to me or Miles, and then we will know how to talk with you. As it is, we don't know whether you can get anything or not.

Colyar—What do you think of the Phagan case?

Woodward—Phagan case? I think it has been mighty mussed up. The only thing I know on that subject is what I see in the papers, and they have very little in connection with it. (Balance inaudible.)

Colyar—Tom Felder talks too much.

Woodward—I think so, too. I don't know what he said on the outside, but he talked some to me, not a great deal; I didn't see him five minutes.

Woodward—I only had a very few words. * * * Well, I will see you again.

Colyar and February—Well, good-bye, Mayor.

MAYOR ADMITS DICTOGRAPH IS CORRECT

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 24.—Bur- Mayor Woodward to-day admitted that the dictograph record of his conversation in the room of the mysterious Colyar was correct. After reading the report in The Georgian, he said:

"This is not as strong as the conversation I told you I had before I knew they had a dictograph on me.

"I did not offer them any money, but I will say now that I will subscribe to a fund that might unearth any graft in any city department. But I haven't got any $1,000 to give.

Denies Phagan Connection.

"Another thing I want to make clear is that my dealing with those men had nothing whatever to do with the Phagan case. They told me they had evidence of the corruption of Beavers and Lanford. I wanted to see what they had.

"I don't suppose anyone takes seriously the statement that Colonel Felder controls me. It is just as absurd to believe that he controls Solicitor Dorsey or the Governor."

"G. C. February, secretary to Detective Chief Newport Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, that long-haired mysterious investigator, talked to me about evidence they had proving that Chief of Police Beavers and Chief Lanford were protecting disorderly houses and blind tigers. They talked of protecting February's job and the need of $1,000 to pull off the affair.

Told Them to Get Proof.

"My reply was if February could show up any crooks in the police department I did not think the people of Atlanta would stand for him losing his job. I told them to produce the evidence. If it was worth anything I told them I did not think there would be any trouble about a just reward, but that I did not have any $1,000 to give them.

"The Phagan case was not mentioned.

Charles C. Jones, owner of some of the closed houses in our midst," also said he was persuaded to visit the mysterious room of Colyar, No. 31.

"When he spoke about money to show up Beavers, and I told him I was not interested, the interview ended," said Jones.

Mayor Woodward said the first he knew of Colyar was one day last week. Colyar called at the City Hall and told the Mayor's secretary, Frank Hammond, he had some important evidence to submit to the Mayor When he was delayed in getting into the office, he grew impatient and declared that it was more trouble to see the Mayor of Atlanta than the President of the United States.

Felder Tells of Evidence.

"Monday," said Mayor Woodward "Colonel Felder came to my office. He told me that in working on the Phagan case he had unearthed some startling evidence of corruption in the police department.

"'Give me the evidence,' I said to him, 'and I will see that it is given proper attention and investigation.'

"He explained that it would take funds to employ a detective to get the evidence together, as the man he had employed was confined to the Phagan case.

"My reply was that if the evidence was sufficient to convict, I did not think there would be the least trouble about getting the money. His reply was that it was in documentary form.

"Just as he was about to leave, Charlie Jones came in. As I remember, Colonel Felder left immediately. Jones had been up to the meeting of Council Monday afternoon. I understood, and dropped by just for a minute."

Mayor's Next Experience.

Mayor Woodward said his next experience with the alleged plotters et al. was on Wednesday afternoon when February and E. O. Miles, a private detective, came to his office in the Empire Building.

"It was a little after 3 o'clock," said the Mayor. "They told me they could show up Beavers and Lanford with unquestionable proof. I was reluctant to go, but they insisted, so I told them

Wants Congress to Govern All Aliens

WASHINGTON, May 24.—That Congress shall have the right to legislate on questions affecting the right of citizens of foreign nations residing in the United States is the proposal of Representative Bartholdt, of Missouri, in a resolution offered in the House. The resolution was inspired by the California situation.

Bartholdt declares that the United States should not be in a position of being embroiled in an international controversy on account of the action of a single State.

COLYAR CALLED CONVICT AND INSANE

Records Show He Has Been Confined in Numerous Prisons and Twice in Asylum.

Who is A. S. Colyar?

The records show that Colyar was once confined in the Middle Tennessee Insane Asylum, and that more recently he was sent to Lyons View, the East Tennessee Asylum. Information from Nashville is that he served time in prisons all over the State, as well as in Sing Sing, New York, and a jail in Virginia. Telegrams from Chattanooga paint him as a wild adventurer who spends considerable time in prison and is always in trouble.

In Prison Many Times.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 24.—A. S. Colyar is a son of the late A. S. Colyar, of this city, one of the most brilliant lawyers and statesmen Tennessee ever produced. When not violently insane his mind works brilliantly, but always to the wrong end. He has been in prison time after time, but always evaded long sentences through influence of his father's friends.

Young Colyar's most noted exploit, as it is understood here, consisted in connection with the famous Mollineux murder case in New York. He went from Nashville to New York, saw General Mollineux and offered to have his son acquitted for $20,000.

"Your son is innocent," Colyar is reported to have said. "One of my clients, now in the Tennessee penitentiary, is guilty. He confessed to me. For $20,000 I can get him out of the penitentiary, bring him here, induce him to confess and save your son's life."

Next day, so the story here runs, General Mollineux advanced him half the money. Colyar went back to Nashville, engaged a well-known pickpocket as a confederate, took him to New York with half a dozen guards and claimed the rest of the $20,000. The ruse might have worked, except for the fact that an assistant district attorney secured information about Colyar and blocked his plans.

Leaving New York, he started for Tennessee, only to stop off in Virginia, get in more trouble and serve more time. Then he went to Athens, Ga., and lived on the fat of the land while posing as a Baptist ministerial candidate. At least, this is the story told here.

In Mexico Once.

In Mexico City Colyar posed as a son of John G. Carlisle, was the guest of honor at a dinner attended by the President, and secured an advance of $10,000 from the American Ambassador.

Returning to Tennessee, he went to McMinnville and stole a mule. Through interposition of friends he was sent to an insane asylum. He set fire to the institution and rode into Nashville to notify the fire department. Several persons were incinerated in this fire.

In Financial Trouble.

For the past ten years A. S. Colyar has been out of one serious trouble into another, until his father's friends have despaired of him.

His last trouble in Tennessee was in the town of Lafollette, a wealthy mining center in East Tennessee. He then became involved in serious financial difficulties which promised a prison sentence. Nashville people who revered the name out of memory of an honored sire saved him by convincing a judge that young Colyar was unbalanced, and he was sent to Lyons View, Knoxville, the East Tennessee asylum for the insane.

Atlanta Printers To Honor Dead in 2 Services Sunday

Union printers of Atlanta Sunday will hold annual memorial services in common with the union printers the country over. Two services will be held, a sermon and reading of a roster of deceased printers at 11, and decorating the graves in union printers' lot in Oakland Cemetery at 3:30 o'clock.

The morning services will be held in the Unitarian Church, in the Woman's Club rooms, in East Cain Street. Dr. Wade F. Conkling, the pastor, will preach the sermon.

The Woman's Auxiliary to Atlanta Typographical Union, No. 48, will have charge of the decoration of the graves. R. L. Whites is chairman of the committee making arrangements for the exercises.

These services have been held annually for about fifteen years.

Nearly 700 typographical unions will take part in services throughout the country.

Jacob Schiff Sees Prosperity Ahead

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 24.—Jacob Schiff declares that Americans can look forward to a good sound money market in the near future, after Congress has disposed of the tariff bill. He said:

"I have made a very careful study of European money markets while abroad, and I think money is on a more solid basis than ever. With the settlement of Balkan affairs, I find markets stronger and better than ever.

"We have a good, sound market which will improve surprisingly within the next few months."

DR. JAMES W. LEE, FORMER ATLANTAN, VISITS MACON

Dr. James W. Lee, for many years pastor of Trinity and Park Street Methodist Churches in Atlanta, passed through the city Saturday on the way to Macon, where he will on Sunday preach the commencement sermon at Wesleyan Female College.

Dr. Lee's latest book, "Tre Religion of Science," has just gone into its third edition.

FIRE RATE FIGHT LOOMING IN ASSEMBLY

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

The City of Savannah, through its Chamber of Commerce, has started an investigation into the question of fire insurance rates that may terminate in the State Insurance Department, if not in the Legislature itself.

The primary purpose of the investigation will be to determine whether the City of Savannah is being discriminated against in the matter of rates now prescribed by the Southeastern Tariff Association, which has its headquarters in Atlanta. In shaping its conclusions, the Savannah trade body will employ statistics gathered from all over the nation.

If rates in Savannah are found to be excessive in the judgment of the Savannah Chamber of Commerce, inquiry will be made as to excessive rates throughout all Georgia. And if the Chamber finds that Georgia is being unfairly treated in this matter, the case against the tariff body will be carried before the State Insurance Department, and it may be that Legislative relief will be sought.

The Savannah Chamber will employ numerous insurance experts to investigate conditions, and expects to be put to considerable expense in making its probe thorough and complete. The question is a broad one, of course, and the Chamber of Commerce expresses its determination to be fair and equitable to the tariff association no less than to itself in getting at the facts involved.

The investigation was brought about by reason of numerous complaints of excessive fire insurance rates charged in Savannah, and once the Chamber of Commerce made up its mind to get busy with the question, it further made up its mind to make its inquiry sweeping and effective in such directions as the findings suggest.

The inquiry will be started immediately with an idea of getting it through in time to go before the summer session of the Legislature for relief, if necessary.

It seems to be generally agreed that John P. Cheney, of Cobb, is to be the speaker pro tem of the next House of Representatives.

He is one of the veteran members of the House as veterans go nowadays, and is an experienced parliamentarian. Moreover, he is genuinely popular with his fellow members, and is sure to be acceptable as a presiding officer.

Besides being a member of the Legislature, he is a member of the city Council of Marietta, and a trustee of the Georgia Agricultural College, at Dahlonega.

Since Mr. Adams, of Hall, definitely announced that he not only would not be in the race for speaker pro tem, but would support Mr. Cheney, there have been no other announcements, and the presumption is that Mr. Cheney is to be elected without opposition.

According to an editorial in the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, "Governor Brown has suggested a monument to former Governor Smith!"

It should be carefully explained, however, that Governor Brown was referring to former Governor James M. Smith, and not to former Governor Hoke.

Representatives Garlington, Picquet and Olive of Richmond and Representatives Wright, Foster, and Nunnally, of Floyd, will introduce in the next Legislature bills prescribing commission forms of government for Augusta and Rome respectively.

Both measures will provide for a ratifying vote of the people of the municipalities affected, before becoming operative. So far, these two Georgia cities are the only ones reported ready to ask the Legislature for charter authority to set up a commission form of government, although it is expected that others will follow suit.

The North Georgia Citizen, of Dalton, says that Congressman Gordon Lee, of the Seventh District, some day will be Governor of Georgia, and adds: "Gordon Lee is the kind of man that makes good by accomplishment. There is nothing of the spectacular in him. He is not wordy and tiresome as are so many others who hold responsible offices. His record speaks, and Lee has sense enough to know it will do all the talking that is necessary."

One hears this talk of Lee for Governor around and about the hotel lobbies and the capitol corridors frequently. Whether Mr. Lee has a gubernatorial ambition and has expressed it himself, it is a fact that he has many friends who view the suggestion with genuine approval.

A member of the Legislature who will seek to have a dog muzzling law passed by the incoming General Assembly has gathered some striking figures for the Legislature's consideration with respect to the hydrophobia situation in Georgia.

Between the first of January and the first of May, this year, 392 cases of hydrophobia have been treated in Georgia. In 1912 there were 673 cases treated.

So far this year there have been 12 cases in Savannah, 84 in Atlanta, 3 in Americus, 4 in Columbus and 2 in Douglas.

These figures, so the Georgia Medical Society hopes, will go far toward convincing the Legislature of the great necessity of a dog muzzling law.

With the convening of the Legislature only about one month away, interest in its forthcoming work is growing every day.

The hotel lobbies are well filled daily with members of the new House and Senate, and already the Legislature, while almost entirely made up of new material, has managed to get pretty well acquainted with itself.

'Church Needs Better Preachers'

Good Ones Scarce, Says Stelzle

Difficult Task for Seminaries

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

The Presbyterian Church needs 1,000 additional ministers to man its churches, according to the report of the committee on Christian life and work, which reported at the Northern Assembly Friday.

Among the many topics discussed at the Assembly meetings, few are of more importance than that of securing ministers—not more ministers necessarily, but better ministers, for the demand to-day is for the highest type of leadership in the church.

There never was a time in the history of the church when the chances for making good as a preacher were so great as it is to-day. The church is being asked to take the lead in the important social problems of the day, as well as the religious questions of the period. For a real man's man, here's the job of the twentieth century.

Many Men Needed.

But while better men are needed, we can't get away from the proposition that we need a good many of them. This is the problem which faces the church.

Dr. W. H. Houston, of Columbus, secretary of the committee on vacancy and supply, which has charge of finding preachers for vacant churches, gave a stirring address. He made the startling statement that there are 3,000 ordained ministers in the Presbyterian Church who are not pastors—that is, they are not in charge of churches. To be sure, many of these men are engaged in other forms of religious work, but the great mass of them are either without churches, but looking for positions as pastors, or else they are engaged in business.

How to tie up these men—at least, some of them, is the task confronting Dr. Houston's committee. The Assembly voted to give the committee "half a cent a member" to make the experiment of finding churches for the unemployed ministers and ministers for vacant churches. This means that Dr. Houston will have about $7,000 to spend this year for the purpose in question, as there are nearly 1,400,000 members in the church.

Half a cent a member per year may seem like a mighty small contribution for this purpose, but Dr. Houston believes he can make the demonstration with this amount.

Here's good luck to him.

For if he succeeds, he will render a great service not only for the Presbyterians, but for all other non-Episcopal churches which must depend upon the wisdom of their sessions and other boards or committees to find ministers.

In the churches governed by bishops these officials simply say to an unemployed minister: "You go to that church," and he goes. And to that church they say, "Here's your preacher," and he stays just as long as the bishop says so. Now the democracy of the Presbyterian Church is a fine thing. It gives each church the right to "call" just the preacher it wishes. But the system also holds some very serious disadvantages. However, men have always paid dearly for the benefits of democracy, and if they want it, they must pay the price.

Work for Seminaries.

Dr. A. H. Barr, of Baltimore, reported on theological seminaries. To many people here's the crux of the entire situation: If the seminaries can make good in training men and training them in the right way, so as to give their students the right kind of an outlook upon their tasks, it will help immensely.

Dr. Barr said it was quite a popular thing to criticise theological seminaries for their alleged shortcomings. That's easy. Few men can give us a program and a curriculum which will not only develop men of superior type—this they can do without much difficulty—but to take the ordinary man who comes to the seminary to become a preacher and really make a great preacher of him—there's the rub.

Usually, the $1,000 church wants a $10,000 preacher; so the job of supplying preachers is difficult at best. Dr. Barr reported that the enrollment in the junior classes in all Presbyterian theological seminaries this year is 30 less than it was a year ago, although there are 60 more men in the senior classes than there were last year. This proves that either students are holding on better in the upper classes or else some men are coming back to the seminaries and finishing their courses. No doubt, the seminaries are improving their curriculums. This will help in inducing more men to take the course.

Pay for Students.

Dr. William McKibbin offered a resolution that the Board of Education pay ordained ministers who wish to return to the seminary for additional work the same amount of money that is paid the regular student for the Gospel ministry. Dr. McKibbin is himself the president of a theological seminary—Lane, of Cincinnati—and he knows something of the difficulties in the way of securing men and training them.

The discussion of the day with reference to the entire subject revealed a decided interest in the matter, many of the commissioners speaking to it.

First of Seaboard's Steel Diners Here

The first of six new steel dining cars purchased by the Seaboard Air Line Railway arrived in Atlanta this afternoon and was met at the Union Depot by Assistant General Passenger Agent Fred Geissler and Robert F. Maddox, one of the directors of the road.

The new cars, which are 73 feet long and seat 36 people, are equipped with the latest devices. Suction fans prevent all odors from the kitchen entering the car.

The cars will be run from New York and Washington to Birmingham and Florida. They cost $30,000 each and others will be put in service as soon as the Pullman Company can finish them.

Roosevelt in Person To Push Libel Suit

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 24.—Arrangements were completed to-day by attorneys for the trial Monday of the libel suit for $10,000 brought by Theodore Roosevelt against George A. Newett, editor of Iron Ore, a weekly paper of Ishpeming, Mich.

Roosevelt is expected to arrive here Monday.

The defense of Editor Newett will be that he was criticising, in an editorial, a public man who was running for office. Many prominent men from all over the country will testify for Roosevelt.

Time Clock Accuses Man It Once Saved

CHICAGO, May 24.—The time clock in the Cook County jail, which saved James Dugan, a guard, from being prosecuted on the charge of complicity in the murder of his father-in-law on December 18, 1912, will be used in an effort to prove a charge of robbery against Dugan.

According to the clock record, Dugan did not punch the time clock on the night a number of freight cars were robbed. A man under arrest, who confessed his part in the robbery, said Dugan was one of the thieves.

Suffragists Called "Slaves to Clothes"

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Representative Stanley E. Bowdle, of Ohio, who succeeded Nicholas Longworth, aroused the ire of Washington suffragists by declaring that the suffragettes would do well to emancipate themselves from the slavery of clothes.

He also suggested that they stop the slaughter of rare and beautiful birds for the adornment of womankind, take better care of their servants and abolish the deadly hook and eye.

Dollar Diplomacy Called Necessity

CHICAGO, May 24.—"Dollar diplomacy" has become a necessity because the use of diplomacy has come to be more and more used to safeguard and advise traders who are pushing commerce into new quarters. This was the statement of William J. Calhoun, former Minister to China.

"Why should the United States spend $350,000,000 on the Panama Canal if it is the policy to sit on the bank and watch other nations' ships sail across the Pacific to trade expansion?" was his criticism of the Government's foreign trade policy.

Nun and Rich Sister Meet After 19 Years

Marshall Rebuked by Bacon for Reed Rule

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Bacon sharply rebuked Vice President Marshall in executive session of the Senate for attempting to use the famous Reed rules by counting Senators to make the quorum not voting.

Senator Bacon declared the only way such a rule should ever be enforced would be through changed rules.

M'LOUGHLIN FEARS INVADERS.

NEW YORK, May 24.—M. E. McLoughlin, national lawn tennis champion, arrived here yesterday and immediately began practice on the West Side courts, preparatory to the Davis Cup matches against the Australians. He said the Australian team is very formidable.

POPE TAKES KEEN INTEREST IN U. S.

ROME, May 24.—The Pope to-day received Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, in private audience. He greeted him most cordially and expressed the greatest satisfaction at his visit.

The Pope discussed the missionary congress to be held in Boston next October, and said he knew it would give a great impetus to the cause of missions and be a great success owing to the constant progress of the Catholic Church in America generally, and in Boston particularly.

He also referred to the loyalty of the clergy and the piety of the faithful in the United States.

After the audience Cardinal O'Connell said to the correspondent,

"I was surprised and gratified to see the wonderful recovery the Pope has made. Considering his age, his recuperative powers are astonishing.

"My audience lasted over half an hour. He had just finished another audience equally long.

"The Pope always takes the keenest interest in the Catholic Church in America, and I was able to give him very cheering news of our progress there."

Fear of Oysters to Be Effectually Allayed

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Oyster beds from Cape Cod to Texas are to be investigated by the Department of Agriculture.

When polluted beds have been located the department will bar their product from interstate commerce, and through publicity aid State and municipal authorities in preventing local sales.

Lad, Playing With Pistol, Is Wounded

VALDOSTA, GA., May 24.—The 6-year-old son of S. N. Atkins, of Mineola, Lowndes County, was shot through the left shoulder and narrowly escaped death while playing with a pistol. Assisted by a companion of about the same age, the lad climbed to a shelf on which the weapon was kept.

The ball passed entirely through the boy's shoulder. He was brought to this city for medical attention.

Miss Booth Catches, Then Converts Thief

LONDON, May 24.—Capt. Mary Booth, daughter of Gen. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, discovered a burglar in her bedroom at 2 o'clock this morning.

Instead of calling the police, she confronted her visitor and learning he was driven to crime by hunger, gave him a square meal and prayed with him. When he left he promised to turn over a new leaf.

MIKADO'S FEVER FALLS, THEN GOES UP

Emperor Yoshihito's Temperature 101.48 Saturday Afternoon; Was 99.2 Friday Night.

TOKIO, May 24.—Although there was an abatement early to-day of approximately four degrees in his fever, the temperature of Emperor Yoshihito, who is ill of pneumonia, later rose more than two degrees. It was 101.48 degrees this afternoon.

"His majesty has passed a favorable night and shows encouraging improvement. His temperature is 99.2, pulse 76 and respiration 36."

News that improvement was shown in the condition of the Mikado caused great rejoicing throughout the empire, but especially in this city. Prayers of thanksgiving were offered up and a ministerial order was proclaimed allowing the theaters to reopen.

Empress Sadaka spent several hours at the bedside of her husband to-day. She insists upon ministering to him and was much rejoiced to learn of his change for the better.

Congratulations From U. S.

The bulletin expressing news of the Mikado's improvement was carried to the foreign office, where the Cabinet was in session discussing the diplomatic controversy with the United States over the California anti-alien land law.

Arthur Blanchard Bailey, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, conveyed his congratulations to the imperial family that the Mikado showed improvement and that he hoped it would continue.

Special services will be held in the Christian churches to-morrow.

Caruso is a One-Man Band

Every Bone is An Orchestra

Musical Ability Permeates Nearly Every Tissue, Surgeon Discovers.

If that gold bearing, silver toned voice of Enrico Caruso's ever fails him, all he will have to do, according to the latest medical lore, is to go around tapping himself on the bones and the vibrations that result will be musical. He can tap his knuckles and get a pleasing jingle, whereas, with most folk, the result would only be a discord.

Music, according to the new authority, is built into the frame. If one's chest and bones and throat are put together on a musical basis, there isn't any power on earth that can keep the owner of the melodiously built frame from being musical.

Dr. William Lloyd, the famous London throat specialist, found the advantage that Caruso has over the rest of mankind when he made a recent examination. He found that Caruso had physical characteristics that allowed him to produce musical sounds in almost unlimited volume and that the quality of the structure of the throat was just as much adapted for emitting sound as the shell of a fine violin.

Enrico Caruso, the Famous Tenor.

If he loses famous golden-toned voice, medical lore declares by merely rapping his bones a pleasing harmony can be developed, where, if tried on others, only discord would result.

Music in His Bones.

The chest capacity of the singer gave him unusual aid in work, while the peculiar construction of the entire throat machinery enabled him to let loose vibrations at a higher rate than almost any other subject.

Then the doctor found that Caruso had music in his bones.

The simple tapping of the Caruso knuckles resulted in a vibration that was different from that of an ordinary mortal. The pitch of the vibration produced by a blow is higher and more resonant.

The distance from the front teeth to the vocal cords is half an inch more than in most tenors, and the vocal tube, the doctor found, was of unusual length.

In other words, Caruso was just built that way when it came to singing.

The suggestion that comes from the doctor's report on the plans and specifications of the Caruso throat and mouth is one that might give the commercial age a chance to locate future singers without the slightest trouble.

All that would be necessary would be for the experts in throat construction to go around to the schools and examine the children, sort them out in bunches and let them develop.

Easy to Pick Artists.

It would be perfectly easy to pick out the boys whose bones, vocal cords and throat material had the tenor elevation, while the basso and baritone chaps might be known by the way their bones were set.

So little Willie Jones would not have any trouble knowing what his future will be. He could tell the teacher that there was no use trying to pound electrical engineering or cube root into him, because the school doctor had picked him out as a singer who could not escape his future even if he tried.

The veriest chump of a teacher would know that if the front teeth of one of her pupils had half an inch the start on the other pupils in the race from the vocal cords the owner of the unhandicapped teeth had a cinch on becoming great as a warbler.

On the other hand the young men and young women who have been spending their money at conservatories trying to cultivate voices that are not and never will be will have a chance to find out just where they stand in the realm of art.

They can go to the doctor and confess that they have spent $1,728 trying to get in the genius class and get an expert line of dope on the prospects of ultimately landing before the footlights with the bouquets coming over in bunches.

Great Aid to Critics.

The scientific statement is that there is a fixed and definite relation between the construction of the bones, cords, muscles and tissues and the volume and character of sound that the owner of the said bones can emit. Once in possession of the scale, a flexible foot rule will answer all of the purposes of a musical critic.

Naturally, the critic might profit by the development of science and place his art upon the exact status of mathematics by closing his criticism of a singer in some fashion like this:

"Miss Smith-Jones-Brown cannot sing. That we may not be accused of bias, we submit that it is only three inches and seven-sixteenths from the southwest corner of the eye tooth to the extended arc subtended by the vocal cord; hence, quod erat demonstrandum, she hasn't a ghost of a chance to sing because it would take four-sixteenths of an inch more of space to even get in the class where the lady could gargle songs through a megaphone at a moving picture show."

But that is getting science down to a point that is beyond the average man and woman, and, besides, it is all based upon the statement of a doctor, and doctors do not agree.

Blow With a Glass Blinded Both Eyes

NEW YORK, May 24.—Joseph Doherty, sightless, was before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday to testify against former Policeman Thomas C. Flynn, of 1981 Southern Boulevard, following whose attack on July 21 last Doherty became blind. Flynn was convicted of second degree assault. He will be sentenced next week.

Flynn and Doherty were drinking at a table in Flanagan's Hotel, at 2013 Boston Road, it was testified, when a quarrel arose and Flynn threw a glass at Doherty, hitting him between the eyes.

It came out at the trial that Flynn had been an honor man in the Police Department.

GEORGIAN INVENTS REAL 'KNEE JERK'

Man From Monk Offers to Tell Beavers Just How Far Patrolman Walks in a Night.

Georgia has produced another celebrity in Harry Winthrop, of Monk, Ga. Investigation shows that Monk is on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, near Fairburn, not a great distance from Atlanta. It now will take its place in the hall of fame as the home of a famous inventor.

The Monk man has invented the "knee jerk." This is not the knee jerk that alienists use in testing insane criminals, but is a mechanical device to record the distance walked by policemen on their beats. It is termed the "knee jerk," says the inventor, for the reason that it is strapped to the knee and registers every time a step is taken by the wearer.

All of this information came out Friday in a letter received by Chief of Police Beavers from Winthrop, who urged that his invention be tried out by the Atlanta police department. He explained that he has already taken up the matter with the New York police department, but, being a Georgian himself, he is anxious for Atlanta to "get in on the ground floor." He made the proposition to equip the entire police department of 250 men with "knee jerks" at $50 each. The regular price, he suggested, is $100 each. It will, therefore, cost Atlanta but $12,500 to ascertain the distance each policeman walks on his beat.

"The knee jerk registers only when the policeman is actually walking—there is no chance for him to make it register while sitting or lying down," writes the inventor.

He added:

"The knee jerk is something on the order of a speedometer, although not quite so heavy. It is an accurate gauge to show whether policemen are properly patrolling their beats."

As Chief Beavers chucked the letter in a waste basket, he laughingly remarked that he didn't think Atlanta quite ripe yet for the "knee jerk."

"I think I'll write to Mr. Winthrop, however, and suggest that he give Monk the honor of first trying out his wonderful invention."

Judge Rules $1 Week Enough for Husbands

PORTLAND, OREG., May 24.—That $1 a week is enough spending money for any married man and that he should turn the rest of his salary over to his wife and allow her to attend to its spending without interference was the assertion made by Municipal Judge Taswell. ED WALSH'S DIGESTION WRECKED BY "SPITBALL"

CHICAGO, May 24.—Excessive use of the spitball has injured Ed Walsh's digestion and has thus affected his condition so that he has not yet reached his best form this year, according to Dr. James H. Blair, club physician of the Chicago Americans, in a report made on the pitcher's condition.

According to the doctor, saliva needed for Walsh's digestion has been used on the ball. With care the pitcher may be in his old-time form in a month.

Kennedy, Mrs. John W. Moore, Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Mrs. E. S. Wilkins, Mrs. W. D. Owens, in Druid Hills; Mrs. Asa G. Candler, Jr., Mrs. Karl Brittain and Miss Jane Stanfield.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. B. H. Brainerd, of Illinois, entertained informally at luncheon at the Georgian Terrace for a group of visitors in attendance upon the Presbyterian Assembly, her guests including Mrs. C. C. Brown, of Springfield, Ill.; Mrs. W. G. Craig, of Chicago; Mrs. Busbee, Miss Agnes Provine, Mrs. J. R. Brantley and Miss Margaret Brantley.

Vesper Club Dance.

The Vesper Club gave a delightful dance Friday evening. Members present were Messrs. R. H. Atkinson, A. W. Lloyd, E. M. Stephens, C. Trotti, E. Trotti, H. L. Withers, J. H. Kelly, F. S. McGaughey and L. D. Acker.

Among those invited were Misses Louise Mell, Doherty, Alli Ramser, Lucile Bean, Ruby McGaughey, K. Perry, Ethel Hudson, Virginia Bowman, Margaret Bramlett, Mary Anderson, Maude Lewis and Montile Alman.

Visitors were Messrs. Clarence Hill, R. H. White, Jr., L. P. Dalhouse, Mercer Lee, Ernest Allen, Horrie O. Andrews, Richard B. Greene, Lonnie Stroble, Donald Atchinson, J. C. Baldwin, Jr., A. C. Lampkin, C. E. Beem, Paul Turner, C. A. Trussell, A. Lovingood, P. B. Robinson and S. Elkin.

Chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christisen and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooks.

Another dance will be given Friday, June 6.

Parties for Miss Fewell.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Berry R. Jackson will entertain for her at a bridge party and handkerchief shower. Mrs. Frank Massenburg entertains for her Wednesday at auction bridge, 22 guests being invited. Mrs. G. W. Clayton gives a miscellaneous shower Friday, and Saturday Miss Mana Tucker gives a shower at her home in West End.

Saturday Miss Fewell shared honors with Miss Lina Andrews at Mrs. S. C. Dobbs' luncheon, the luncheon being followed by an informal party given for her by Miss Margaret Stokes.

PRINCE AND ONLY DAUGHTER OF KAISER WED

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 24.—Scenes of bewildering brilliance to-day marked the marriage of Prince Ernest August, of Cumberland, descendant of the Hanoverian kings and heir to a fortune of $200,000,000, to Princess Victoria Luise, only daughter of Emperor William, of Germany.

The capital was en fete and a gala day was made of the occasion throughout most of the German empire. The rain, which fell at intervals, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the thousands who packed all the streets.

Emperor William, Czar Nicholas, King George of England and lesser royalties were cheered to an echo as they drove to the chapel for the religious ceremony which followed the civil service in Brandenburg Hall, an adjunct of the Potsdam marble palace.

Gorgeous pomp attended the wedding, in which entered a large element of diplomacy as well as true love. By the marriage to-day is brought to an end the long feud which has existed between the reigning house of Hohenzollern and the house of Guelph, from which the Prince Ernest August comes.

Religious Rites Brilliant.

The religious ceremonies far outshone the civil rites in brilliancy. This service began at 5 o'clock in the presence of the greatest gathering of royalty for a decade or more.

At 5 o'clock the court marshal entered the chapel, which had already been filled during the procession of the bridal party from Potsdam to Berlin, and tapped three times with his staff to signify the approach of the wedding party.

First entered the Marshal of the Imperial Household, Count August Fulenburg, with his staff, followed by a long line of chamberlains. Next came the "bride's cavaliers," three young princelings selected for manly grace and beauty; immediately following the "cavaliers" came the bride leaning upon the arm of the stalwart groom, who wore the uniform of a lieutenant of the Bavarian army. Four bridesmaids carried the long train of the bride's gown. Next in line were a number of court functionaries and then came Emperor William and Princess Thyra, of Cumberland, mother of the groom.

The Duke of Cumberland, father of the groom, accompanied the Empress. King George of England followed with the German Crown Princess upon his arm. Following George was Czar Nicholas of Russia, with Queen Mary of England.

One American Present.

Followed then an innumerable array of generals, field marshals, admirals, and others. But one American was present in official capacity. He was United States Ambassador Lieshman.

As the procession entered the chapel the Cathedral choir sang a double quartette from Mendelssohn's Oratorio of "Elijah." Then the famous silver trumpets (the Kosleck trumpet corps) accompanied the hymn, "Praise The Lord, Ye Heavens Adore Thee."

The recent patent issued on this NOISELESS PORCH SWING HOOK secures and protects a fortune for the person that puts this badly needed and universally used article on the market. The inventor (an Atlanta man) will sell all or a part interest.

IT'S ALL IN THE EXAMINATION

A pair of glasses are more than worthless if the lenses are not absolutely correct. The correct lenses cannot be properly fitted unless a careful examination is made by a competent and skillful operator, aided by the latest scientific eye-testing instruments and appliances. Of course, the comfort of a pair of glasses depends a great deal on the fit of the frames, the proper adjustment of eyeglass mountings to the nose, and upon the size and shape of lenses. But primarily and most important of all is the correct fitting of the lenses. The experience necessary to properly diagnose a difficult case of eye trouble requiring correction by glasses is not obtained in a day, and the longer these years of experience, the more you can depend upon the results obtained by your Optician. Our fifty years' growth has produced for you the very best optical service obtainable. We offer you the best-equipped fitting rooms, the very latest styles of frames and mountings, the newest shapes and tints of lenses, the Kryptok Invisible Bifocals, moderate prices, and we make every possible effort to serve you pleasantly and satisfactorily. M'CUE TO GET FIGHTS WITH LEADING STARS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—No more slob fights for Matty McCue, Racine's sensation of the ring. After the little fellow has finished out the engagements he has at the present time, which include a battle in Fond du Lac, Wis., in Jack Brunkhorst's arena and one in Milwaukee with Patsy Brannigan, the Eastern featherweight, John McCue, his manager, is going to take on only the very best boys he can find as opponents of his protege. The veteran McCue is convinced that he has a champion in Matty and nobody is going to convince him otherwise until he sees the actual defeat of the little fellow. Hence he is canvassing the situation for boys that will be at once good drawing cards and at the same time fit opponents for a man of the McCue standard—as judged not only in Racine, but elsewhere.

* * *

JOHNNY DUNDEE, the young Eastern Italian who recently went twenty rounds to a draw with Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, and therefore is regarded as having at least half of the title, if that will get him anything, is adjudged by the elder McCue to be the best man in sight at the present time for his star. The machinery has been set in motion already and some definite announcement may be expected almost any time now of the match having been clinched. McCue would be willing to let Dundee come in at 124 pounds, the same as any of the rest of them, and as this is an easy figure for the hardy New Yorker there would be no hitch over the match as far as the poundage is concerned.

* * *

CHARLEY WHITE, the sensational local boxer, who is neither a feather nor a light weight, but liable to be a thorn in the side of boys of either class, also is spoken of as a corking good test for McCue. And the McCue party is not unwilling to listen to reason in the matter of weight. Recognizing that Charley would be a dandy draw with the Racine sensation the Wisconsin people are beginning to flirt with Nate Lewis regarding the proposed meeting. White is willing to make 126 pounds for Matty, which would not be much of a hardship.

* * *

JACK BRUNKHORST is sending a young boxer named Johnny Sokol, who is well known up in the Lake Winnebago District, against the punching star and there is a prospect that Johnny may do somewhat better against the Racine terror than did Jeff O'Connell and the remainder of them who have tried to worry him lately. Up in Fond du Lac they seem to like Sokol pretty well, for he has put up some good contests there, the fiercest of which was a ten-round draw with Gene McGovern that had everybody yelling like mad before it was over. Since that time Sokol has spent all of his time in the East and was especially active in the neighborhood of Buffalo, where he whipped some of the best boys of his weight.

* * *

BRUNKHORST was at the Racine battle recently and saw the McCue threashing machine under a full head of steam against Jeff O'Connell. Even in the face of that exhibit Jack didn't weaken and said afterward that while McCue surely is one of the real bearcats of the day that Sokol and his hefty punch are liable to make Matty go to the very limit in order to get the decision. Jack has a good card on for his show, having matched Freddie Andrews and Sorenson, who fought Battling Nelson a hard ten-round go recently, in the semi-windup.

* * *

THE Patsy Brannigan that Milwaukee has matched up with McCue is the veteran bantamweight of the East, now filled out until he finds himself up among the feathers. Patsy had numerous turnups with Johnny Coulon and is one of those tricky old chaps with a long, wise head and quite capable of troubling any of them for a little while at least.

* * *

BUT after the Brannigan match there will be nothing but better things for the McCue boy. And the chances are most of his battling will be done in Racine.

FLYNN SHADES JIM COFFEY IN THRILLING BOUT

NEW YORK, May 24.—Fight fans here to-day are clamoring for another match between Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and Jim Coffey, the "Dublin giant," who engaged last night in one of the fiercest and most thrilling heavyweight bouts ever seen in the city.

Coffey, taller and heavier than Flynn, started at Flynn like a madman and for nearly four rounds rained punches into Flynn's face and body that staggered him and drove him back against the ropes. Just when it looked like a sure knockout Flynn came to life.

* * *

GEORGE RODEL, the "Fighting Boer," with Bob Fitzsimmons acting as his second, outslugged Soldier Kearns, who was seconded by Tom Sharkey, in the 10-round semi-final.

TRAVERS MEETS KAMMER IN METROPOLITAN FINALS

NEW YORK, May 24.—The final round for the Metropolitan golf championship title is on to-day between Jerome D. Travers, the present champion, and Alfred D. Kammer on the Fox Hills golf course. Travers, by steady playing, has easily defeated every one so far opposed to him.

In the third round yesterday, playing against Chisolm Beach, Travers, after winning, 7-5, played out the bye-holes and made a new amateur competitive record of 70 strokes for the course.

$10,000 GUARANTEE FOR SMITH.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Tom Jones, fight promoter, to-day offered Gunboat Smith a guarantee of $10,000 for another battle with Jess Willard next month. The manager of Smith, however, has declared that he means to give his protege a rest for a few months.

SPORTS AND SUCH

By RIGHT CROSS

WE DON'T HAVE ANY LUCK.

Here for three or four weeks we have been bearing with patience and restraint the advance dope on the mighty clash of those titans, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, soothing ourselves with the thought that this fight would be the finish of one of them.

Instead of which both of them will now be going about the country insisting on telling a lot of people who never did them any harm that all they want is another chance to get together with each other, with Lute McCarty or with anybody else.

They will clamor for vindication, and there doesn't seem to be any way to stop them, unless they can be nailed for inciting a riot. Reports of the stern encounter differ in everything but one point. All those present seem to be agreed on the fact that it was a very gloomy and cheerless occasion.

According to the referee Smith was the winner, but the consensus of opinion among the experts at the ringside was that a decision would be more difficult than picking the winner of a transcontinental auto truck durability run. Also that the latter event would be much more exciting.

They fought the full distance of twenty rounds without a knock-down or a crucial moment. According to one or two reports Smith was in a little trouble in the fourteenth round and Willard bled somewhat from the mouth after a right-hand punch had cut his machinery for torturing sporting writers. That was all. A twenty-round fight between high-class men is frequently slow and uninteresting, and it is easy to imagine what this must have been like.

* * *

To the conquering hero stalks
The fight expert and yaps and squawks,
And bellows that he wasn't right
Against that guy the other night;
And when you make this bum de-camp
He's followed by another tramp.

* * *

THE REVIVAL OF WRESTLING in New York will not probably get very far. Something tells us that even New Yorkers, who are gluttons for punishment, will not rush upon this good old bunk in maddened throngs.

* * *

SIR THOMAS LIPTON SAYS that he is greatly pleased with the splendid sportsmanship of the New York Yacht Club, and yet there are a lot of people who say that the Irish haven't a sense of humor.

BRITANNIA WILL NEVER RULE the wave as long as one rocking chair remains afloat in the racing committee room.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, is breaking his neck trying to get his protege a return match with Gunboat Smith. Jones has offered the Eastern heavyweight a guarantee of $10,000 for another bout, but Buckley has about decided to give Smith a rest for two months.

* * *

Most of the fans are of the opinion that Willard would have a great chance to defeat Smith in a return engagement. They point to the fact that Willard was making his first 20-round scrap and that Jones was handling him for the first time in a fight.

* * *

Jim Flynn, toughest of all heavyweights, will get into action Friday night. The Pueblo fireman will exchange wallops with Jim Coffey in a 10-round mill at New York and the fur should fly. This will probably be Flynn's last fight before he meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium here June 13.

* * *

Mike Saul will help train Flynn for the latter's set-to with Savage. Saul thinks that the experience gained by working with Flynn will put him in great shape for his bout with Eddie Hanlon.

* * *

If Matty McCue succeeds in defeating Patsy Brannigan at Milwaukee, Wis., Monday night he is to get a match with Abe Attell. The ex-featherweight champion has agreed to meet the Racine sensation on June 5.

* * *

Arthur Pelky will have the chance of his young life when he stacks up against Luther McCarty in a 10-round affair at Calgary, Alberta, Saturday night. Should Pelky succeed in besting McCarty or holding him even he will become one of the greatest cards in the heavyweight division.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke wishes to challenge any lightweight on behalf of Billy Bennett, the Irish lightweight champion. O'Rourke is particularly anxious to sign his boxer for a match with Willie Ritchie or Freddie Welsh.

* * *

Chicago fans are boosting Eddie Murphy as a contender for the lightweight championship. Murphy's recent draw fight against Jack Britton has done much to put him back in the good graces of the windy city fans. Murphy put up a great battle and was fighting Britton off his feet at the finish, according to reports from the battle ground.

* * *

Pittsburg fans are expecting a real scrap Saturday night when Eddie McGoorty and Frank Klaus clash in a six-round bout. Klaus' friends have made him an even money choice against the Oshkosh boy.

* * *

After the McGoorty affair Klaus will travel to Indianapolis where he is billed to take on Jack Dillon in a 10-round battle later in the month.

* * *

Nothing has been heard of lately from Tommy Murphy, the New York lightweight. Murphy is certainly entitled to much consideration when the Coast promoters pick an opponent for Willie Ritchie.

Rivers Gets July 4 Date With Champion

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Joe Rivers is the lucky boy to get the July 4 date here with Champion Willie Ritchie.

Following the announcement to-day by Promoter McCarey that he had been unable to induce Ritchie to meet the Spanish boxer at Vernon on Independence Day and consequently he, McCarey, would release Rivers from his agreement to appear at Vernon on that date, Manager Joe Levy wired his acceptance of the terms offered by Eddie Graney, the San Francisco promoter.

McCarey to-day received a telegram from Nolan flatly refusing to fight at Vernon, and declaring that Ritchie would fight at San Francisco on the holiday date and nowhere else.

"If Ritchie does not box for Graney on July 4 we will accept a match in Victoria on Dominion Day, July 1," wired Nolan. "A syndicate of very wealthy Britishers is seeking to promote a match between Ritchie and Freddie Welsh for that date."

SMITH-WILLARD WOULD BE CINCH FOR OLD-TIMERS

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—It is said that one Theodore Roosevelt is going to Arizona to search for a certain lost tribe. After seeing the championship candidates, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, in action, the writer feels that Roosevelt or some one else should be commissioned to hunt for descendants of the lost tribe of heavyweights.

There is no shutting one's eyes to the fact that the big fellows of to-day don't begin to compare with the heavies of "yesteryear" in any department of the game. One doesn't have to go so far as to institute comparisons between present day championship aspirants and the men who were thought to be in line for the title in former times.

Take the cases of such boxers as Kid McCoy and Joe Choynski, pugilists who were never troubled with the championship bee. How long would Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard last with either of these? Or how long would Gunboat or Jess keep erect in front of clean hitting, hard thumping Peter Maher?

There will be another heavyweight bout at Calgary to-day, and then, if present plans hold, there will be a championship final, with Gunboat Smith pitted against the winner of the Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky go at Calgary.

Naturally the deciding contest will create some interest, for, low grade though they are, bidders for the blue ribbon are the best we have. Candor compels the observation that they are simply the best of a bad lot.

Thought Fight a Draw.

While the writer is among those who are of the opinion that Willard did every bit as well as Smith Tuesday night, I must own that the tall Kansan was a good deal of a disappointment. We are led to look for better things after reading of the way Jess acquitted himself with Luther McCarty, Soldier Kearns and others.

It will be hard to make a top notch man of Willard for the reason that he has so few natural fighting qualities. True, his straight left is a dependable quantity, but this is largely on account of his tremendous reach. It would be pretty hard for Willard to straighten his left without finding something unless the other fellow clambered through the ropes when he saw it coming.

Willard has poor ideas of distance and direction and he hits in a stilted pokey way. This, may be, comes of clinching his fists too tightly before lashing out.

He seems, too, to be deficient in ring sense. Several times after chasing Gunboat into a corner and having him off balance he smiled fatuously and stepped back. And if looks count, the Gunner was quite content to have it that way.

Willard a Game Fellow.

Willard is a game fellow and he assimilates well, and it may be that proper coaching will develop him to a stage where he can safely hold his own with modern heavies. That is, unless the breed suddenly improves. One thing to admire in Jess is the way a stinging clash arouses his battle ire. In this respect he resembles Tom Sharkey.

Gunboat Smith's fight was an improvement on some of his local exhibitions. He seemed to use his head more than he generally does, but whether this was an instance of present initiative or the result of careful coaching the writer has no means of knowing. Anyhow there was a method in the way Smith handled himself, even if his execution was faulty.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influences over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., the former national champion, is one of a fine golfing family, in which both men and women have attained considerable distinction in their favorite game. W. C. Fownes, the father of W. C. Fownes, Jr., is a golfer of considerable skill, and I venture to say there is not a golfer of his age in the country who can defeat him. Fownes, Sr., plays golf almost the year round and he never fails to attend each national championship.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., began playing golf in 1900 and therefore he has enjoyed more than a decade of excellent sport. His record is indeed an enviable one, for in addition to winning the premier event in 1910 he has many other notable victories to his credit. He has held the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association amateur championship from 1904 down through 1911, and this championship although limited in territory, is of the highest class, as is shown by the fact that it has furnished two national champions.

Has Won Many Honors.

In 1910 and 1912 Fownes won the Pennsylvania State championship and he has really held at various times all the golfing honors of his State and many from elsewhere. In fact, the only important title that has been denied him so far is the Western championship, where he has invariably encountered a bit of hard luck. Pittsburg marks the Eastern boundary of the big Western Golf Association territory, and yet in spite of the many fine players in the Smoky City, Chicago has always managed to hold fast to the big Western cup.

Fownes was a member of the Olympic team of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, which won the event in 1905 at Chicago Golf.

Fownes' game has not been quite so good during the last year or so, owing, I think, to a number of experiments, chiefly with wooden clubs. Fownes believes his wooden shots to be the weakest part of his game and in consequence he is given to many experiments with them. Sometimes he tries for distance and sometimes for direction, and his clubs and methods of playing vary with the object in view. Last year he came to the national at Wheaton with clubs about forty-six inches in length.

Nearly Wins Over Hilton.

Fownes plays a very thoughtful game of golf. Its high quality can be realized by the fact that he has been national champion. Furthermore, in a match with H. H. Hilton at the National Golf Links tourney in 1911 his game compared favorably with the British player's and he was only defeated at the nineteenth hole in the second round.

Fownes is perhaps the most popular member of the U. S. G. A. He is a regular attendant at its annual event and I think without him the competition would lose much of its savor for a great many of us.

BRITONS WILL SELECT TENNIS TEAM IN JULY

LONDON, May 24.—The Secretary of the British Lawn Tennis Association announced that the British team which will defend the Dwight F. Davis International Trophy against the winner of the elimination contests will not be selected until early in July, after the Wimbledon championships have been decided.

The teams playing in the eliminations will represent the United States, Australia, Germany, France, Canada, South Africa and Belgium.

RUBE WADDELL MISSING; BIG CROWDS DISAPPOINTED

WINNIPEG, May 24.—Although the Virginia (Minn.) Northern League team has played two games here, Rube Waddell, the eccentric southpaw, has failed to appear on the field for either game. Just where he is is a question, and if Manager "Spike" Shannon knows he is not telling. Large crowds have attended both games in the hope of catching a glimpse of the former big leaguer.

No Class to Champions of To-day

Feather Title a Family Affair

By Otto C. Floto.

ONLY a short time ago Mr. Featherweight dwelt in an abode alone. He was master of all he surveyed. But things have suddenly changed, and the elusive little cuss now lives in a duplex building. In other words, Johnny Kilbane was the sole possessor of the title and in undisputed control of the same. Now along comes Johnny Dundee and battles him. Well, it's a fifty-fifty proposition now. As a reminder, Kilbane now only holds a working interest in the title, True, he didn't lose it; neither did he win it again. Dundee didn't win it, either, but he worked so well that Referee Eyton declared him in as a partner on the thing. So at best it's a muddled or rather queer condition that exists in that department of the game.

The firm title to the prize should now read Kilbane & Dundee, holders of the world's featherweight title. So that both boys must content themselves with a half a loaf—which, after all, is better than no loaf at all.

* * *

SPEAKING of championship titles, was there ever a time when the different emblems were in so chaotic a condition? Take them right down the line from the heavyweights to the feathers, and not a single representative of any of the departments holds an undisputed right to the title he covets. Never before has such a thing been apparent in pugilism, and it does seem rather astounding to those who have never given this angle a fleeting thought.

When we look back a few years and realize the hard-fought battles and the strenuous routes the champions were compelled to travel over to gain their positions, and then peek hurriedly over the present crop—well, deliver us from expressing our candid opinion, for it would not look well in print.

* * *

TO ALL intents and purposes, Luther McCarty is heavyweight champion. Of course, he never won the title from the man who held it, and probably still holds it. That's not particularly Luther's fault, because of queer circumstances that transpired in the life of the recognized champion. Still the fact remains that McCarty has a title he acquired without winning it as per the usual process required to annex the coveted emblem. True, he stands ready to defend it. But—

Nevertheless, we'll fall in line and look upon Luther as the champion under the circumstances. At the same time, much as we admire him, he is No. 1 of the champions that acquired his honors without meeting the predecessor of the high office in actual combat.

* * *

THEN we drop to the middleweights. Here's where we laugh long and loud, for if there is a single one in the bunch entitled to be crowned champion we are ready to be convinced. Stanley Ketchel, whose sudden death left the question of champion an open one, could have taken the whole lot of the present crop, beginning with Klaus and including McGoorty, Papke and the whole flock, and beaten them to a jelly all on the same night, and in the same ring, without even half trying. So here's a class without a representative in the exclusive class. Klaus, who claims the title, is therefore labeled No. 2 of the champions who failed to battle a titleholder for the honor.

* * *

THE welterweights are in the same disturbed condition. Jimmy Clabby, if he could make the weight (145 pounds), might be looked upon as a real contender. As he cannot make the weight, we claim that Rube "Wildcat" Ferns is the best. And while he does not hold the title, he is ready to fight the whole world for it and have his right disputed to the same. This class, like the middleweight division, is barren of a leader, a man the world will recognize as the top-notcher of the 145-pounders. Of all the classes we are mentioning we recognize the claims of Ferns to the honor to a greater extent than we would listen to anyone else claiming it.

* * *

IN THE lightweight ranks we have Willie Ritchie as champion. Yet, like the other classes, he comes to us with a flaw in the title. His championship was won by the punch of the other fellow instead of his own. There is no doubt he would have defeated Wolgast had the battle gone on. But he didn't knock Ad out. On the other hand, it was the transgression of the former champion in striking that foul blow that awarded the honors to Ritchie.

In this same class we have two other good boys—Packey McFarland and Jack Britton. McFarland, however, can't possibly make the weight, so that lets him out. Ritchie beat Britton when they met on a former occasion. And, say, why not take Freddie Welsh into consideration? Thinking it over, his claims are the very best. He defeated Matt Wells for the English championship and beat Willie Ritchie the only time he met him (that was before Ritchie met Wolgast.) But again we are confronted with the condition that the champion is not one of that undisputed sort.

* * *

IN THE featherweight realm we have the laughable condition of a divided or split title, with two men claiming it. It was originally won by Kilbane from Attell. But it was one of those decision affairs, without a decisive ending, that stamps the winner as a bona fide representative.

After reviewing the different classes about us, it's like a fresh spring breeze to recall the classes of a few years ago, and see the grand list of names that represented the different divisions. Each and every one a champion in the full meaning of the term, and each and every title won by actual conflict within the ring, with a knockout accompaniment to cinch it and keep it free from dispute.

Heavyweight Champion—James J. Corbett.
Middleweight Champion—Robert Fitzsimmons.
Welterweight Champion—Tommy Ryan.
Lightweight Champion—Joe Gans.
Featherweight Champion—George Dixon.
Bantamweight Champion—Jimmy Barry.

WINNIPEG, MAN., May 24.—Sammy Trott, of Columbus, Ohio, was awarded the newspaper decision over Grover Hayes, of Philadelphia, in a twelve-round bout here, as the result of a wild swing in the eleventh round, which caught Hayes on the jaw and floored him for the count of five.

SPEECHLESS.

"What are the athletes howling for?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot talk! They cannot talk!" young Johnny Evers said.
"Why do they look so awful glum?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot get their names in print," young Johnny Evers said.

"You may knock a baseball player; you may tell him he's a mutt,
You may tell him of the ebony that constitutes his nut,
You may write of solid ivory and alabaster, but—
He will always grab the paper in the morning."

Far be it from one to perpetrate a pun with malice aforethought, but it strikes us that Charlie Murphy is the guy that put the boss in Boston.

Not that we have anything against Tom Jones, but who is going to be the next meal ticket?

Jess Willard once threw Charlie Cutler down. The equanimity which the latter gentleman displayed leads one to wonder whether he is a philosopher or a humorist.

Joe Cantillon has released Hobe Ferris. Hobe got flippant one night and led Joe to suspect that he was less than sixty years old.

The consensus of opinion on the Pacific coast is that if Jess Willard were tried on a charge of pugilism he would be declared absolutely innocent.

LINES TO C. WEBB MURPHY.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The baseball writer wends his weary way,
And says: "No baseball player talks to me."

How happy is the baseball writer now
If C. Webb Murphy only has his way!
No longer must he write with wrinkled brow
The slop that lowbrowed athletes have to say.

No longer must he lean against a bar
And say: "Come on and have another drink!"
No longer must he stay where athletes are
And hear their efforts as they try to think.

Oh, Charlie Murphy, chubby little runt,
Your name is always near and dear to me!
You up and got away with this here stunt
And saved a thousand writers from ennui.

THEY'LL KNOW THEY'VE BEEN IN GAME—NAYLOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—George W. Naylor, stud groom to the Duke of Westminster, and who has charge of the English polo ponies, came into town yesterday from the Piping Rock Club. He wanted to have a good square look at the lower part of the town, and incidentally to buy some things for the horses. A few of those who are interested in the international match got around him and tried to get him excited over the match.

One said that Larry Fitzpatrick, who is training the American ponies, would put it all over him. Naylor gave a sort of icy grin as he remarked, "He may put it all over me as you say, old chap, but his side will know that they have been in a game."

There was a report yesterday that the American team were suffering from staleness, and that was the reason they had such little practice for the past week.

To-day's Ball Game Begins at 3

Gulls Have Grand Pitcher in Hogg

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE pastiming this afternoon at the celebrated ball park of the well-known Georgia Railway and Power Company, said park ycleptPonce DeLeon, will settle the question of whether or not a mediocre club can beat a good club with pitching alone.

And lest somebody arise to ask which is the "good" club, we state without hesitation that it is the Atlanta delegation—and add positively that the Gull team ought to be a mediocre aggregation, considered on a man-by-man basis.

And before we forget it, the contest this afternoon will be called at 3 o'clock to enable the Mobile team to get an early train. There should be sufficient time for a full nine-inning contest, provided the umpires, the managers and the players do their respective and assorted duties.

* * *

REVERTING to the Gulls and their claims on distinction, we can only say that we can't see them at all. It is a good club. But is it a great club?

We don't even pause for an answer.

You can hand Mike Finn a lot of credit for the way the Gulls have been winning. He has gathered together a club that has balance. It hasn't a strong spot in fielding, but it hasn't a weak one. It is not a great hitting club, but it has a great slugger in D. Robertson, and a moderately reliable one in Jacobson. The rest of it must be team play, or maybe something even more intangible than that—a winning spirit, maybe; which is a hard thing to define, but a useful one to have.

* * *

A REALLY great performer on the club is Bradley Hogg, the ex-Mercer and ex-Brave pitcher. The former Baptist hurled unusually good ball Friday. Though the Crackers acquired six hits, they never came within miles of scoring. Hogg walked just one man, struck out but one—and looked like ready money and lots of it all the way.

It takes a pretty good pitcher to hold the Crackers safe. They are deadly sluggers. Any pitcher who can shut them out is a big leaguer at heart—or mighty lucky. And there was no luck about Hogg's work.

How in the mischief it happened that the Braves ever let go of Hogg is a mystery. He looks more like a pitcher than any five men of George Stallings' staff rolled into one.

To those who remember Hogg in his college days, his huge size proved a jolt. He is a whale now, while in his college days he seemed a man of hardly more than average size. To-day he has the ideal size and weight for a great pitcher. He will be a big man in the big leagues some day.

* * *

THANKS are hereby expressed to Bill Hart for his efforts to hurry along Friday's game. Bill kept right on the trail of the players, got them up to the plate in a hurry and managed to run the game off in less than an hour and three-quarters—which was especially appreciated, owing to the fact that the day was awfully cold and raw.

* * *

ALL Atlanta, beginning with Bill Smith and running down to the humblest bat boy, is raging because the Atlanta papers were inclined to saddle the blame for losing the last Memphis game largely on the shoulders of Pitcher Dent. The following communication expresses the views of a lot of fans:

Dear Sir:

I am a great lover of baseball and frequently attend the games. I want to ask if the blame of losing Wednesdays game to Memphis is not wrongly placed on Pitcher Dent. Up to the sixth inning he pitched well nigh perfect ball. In the beginning of the seventh, a batter made an infield hit and the ball was thrown to first base in ample time to get the batter out. The first baseman in his eagerness to make a double play, failed to touch the base and threw badly to second. The shortstop failed to hold the ball and both runners were safe. Then Memphis' best hitter came to bat, made a three bagger, brought in three runs and the pitcher, discouraged, could do nothing more. Now didn't the first baseman and shortstop lose the game? If the runners on first and second had been put out, as should have been done, would not Atlanta have won?

* * *

THE point that "Fan" seems to have overlooked is that before Agler made his misplay, three singles in succession had been made off Dent. Then came the bobble. Then two more hits. We disagree with Bill Smith and others that Agler had an easy double if he had made the play right.

A pitcher who allows three singles with none out starts something right there.

More than that, a pitcher has got to be able to keep steady even after an error.

BIGGEST BALLOON RACE EVER OUT OF KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 24.—The largest and most widely represented balloon race ever held on this side of the Atlantic will be that which is to start from Kansas City July 4. George M. Myers, president of the Kansas City Aero Club and manager of the race, has sent invitations to the clubs of practically every large city in the country asking them to participate. The St. Louis Aero Club has written that it will enter from three to five bags and Topeka is sure of one entry, but hopes to have two.

Other entries are: Dayton, Ohio, 1; Cleveland, Ohio, 1; San Francisco, 1; Salt Lake City, 1; Dana, Ill., 1; New York city, 1; Pennsylvania, 1; Peoria, Ill., 1; Akron, Ohio, 1; Cincinnati, Ohio, 1; Chicago, 1; Indianapolis, Ind., 1; Kansas City, 1.

MURPHY DENIES BRESNAHAN WILL REPLACE EVERS

By Davenport.

BOSTON, MASS., May 24.—Slowly but surely the mystery of Charles Webb Murphy's visit to Boston is beginning to unravel.

Murphy is after pitchers. He is wise to the fact the Cubs are woefully weak when it comes to pitching, so is every one else who has been watching the dope.

Murphy stated before leaving for the East that he had a deal on with an Eastern club, hence his trip to Boston. The president of the Cubs left his room bright and early this morning, and it is rumored he went for a conference with Mr. Gaffney, owner of the Braves.

Hub Perdue. Yep, that's the game, and it's big game Murphy's after. If he gets Perdue it will be only by giving in exchange two or three good players. Sweeney has been showing weak at second and Art Phelan would just fit in there.

Murphy refused to commit himself upon the result of his trip when he returned to the hotel at noon, but he wore that famous Murphy smile which means he met with success of some sort. The boss of the Cubs denies that he is contemplating the removal of Evers in favor of Bresnahan.

He said this morning: "Evers has a five-year contract and there is not the slightest chance of a change of managers."

Murphy stated to Boston scribes last night that he did not permit his players to talk with him, but he played pool with one of his men until nearly midnight and hobnobbed with the others.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA was kind of grouchy last nite. Ma & me knew he was going to be grouchy, beekaus sum old friends of Ma was going to visit us for a few days & they was to cum last nite, all the way from Colfax, Wisconsin.

I doant like to be a killjoy, sed Pa, & I will do my best to treet Mister & Missus Bing all rite, but you know as well as I do what it will be. Both of them will want to be took to all of the leading points of interest, such as the hoam of the widow wich entertained George Washington onst & the museum of art & the points of historical interest outside of those wich I have just menshuned. After I have dragged them & you & littel Bobbie all oaver the town for a few days, showing them a lot of stuff that I doant care a rap to see, they will say goodbye & tell us to be sure & cum to Colfax & stay a month. That is sum invitashun, issent it? sed Pa—cum to Colfax & stay a month. It sounds like cum to Sing Sing & stay thirty years.

Pa Gets Their Name Wrong.

Well, thay are my frends, anyway, sed Ma, & I want you to be nice to them, & please remember, sed Ma, that thare naim isept Bing, thare name is Ging G-I-I-N-G, Ma sed, with the accent on the two Gs.

Wen Mister & Missus Ging caim thay didn't look as if thay was happy at all.

I am glad to bid you both welcome to our home, sed Pa. I have offen heard my wife speek of her deer friends the Pings.

Ging, sed Mister Ging. G-I-N-G. That doesn't sound like a vary hard naim to reemember, he sed. He looked at Pa kind of cross & Pa handed the look rite back to him.

What do you think of Atlanta, deer? said Ma to Missus Ging.

I think it is perfeckly beestly, sed Missus Ging. We had to ride in that horrid trolley all the way from the depot to here, & I had to stand up. I wanted Mister Ging to maik a gentelman give me his seat, but you know how husbands are. He sed that perhaps the poor man was tired. Think of it, and fancy me, a Ging, having to stand up in a common street car. Why, at home we have our own carriage.

If it is anything like the carriages I used to see in Colfax wen I was courting you, Pa sed to Ma, I am afrade Mister & Missus Wing wuddent have reached our hoam till to-morrow morning. Colfax was noted for its pritty gurls and its saddle backed skates, sed Pa. There was only one hansum horse in the town, & nobody cud drive it.

I beg your pardon, sir, sed Mister Ging There are sum magnificent horses in Colfax. I have two roans that I wuddent sell for a thousand dollars.

I wuddent give a thousand cents for them, sed Pa. There isen't any class to a roan horse. Who ever heard of a roan horse stepping out & winning the Brooklyn Handicap? sed Pa.

Never mind, deerest, Ma sed to Pa. I am sure Mister & Missus Ging will get to love Atlanta after they have had a chanst to git around. There is so much of interest to see here, & the shops are very butiful now. The windows are jest full of bargans.

Missus Ging Is Put Out.

The windows can stay full of bargans, sed Mister Ging. I toald my wife beefoar we left hoam that the stores in Colfax was plenty good enuff for her mother before her and plenty good enuff for her. There is going to be no extrava-gance on this trip. Hevings deliver me, sed Mister Ging, from a shopping & bargan hunting woman. I wish you would show us our room, he sed to Ma. My wife & I are vary tired. I suppose you have breakfast at seven, he sed.

Oh, deer no, sed Ma. We have breakfast at nine.

Oh, well, sed Missus Ging. I suppose my husband & I can go out to a resterant. Do you know a good cheap place nere here? she asked Pa.

Yes, sed Pa, I know a good cheep place. They have rooms thare too.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Cain had no definite idea in view except to drive a considerable distance out of town and have it out with this stranger. Hitherto his money had enabled him to have his way in everything and he had ridden roughshod over every obstacle that presented itself in his path, so that the idea that he was a sort of demi-god had become firmly implanted in his nature. In the case in hand he did not stop to realize that his money was of little use to him. He was blind with rage. He attributed his misunderstanding with Mildred to the passenger in the back seat. Cain resolved to eliminate this stranger from his affairs. He tried to get more speed out of the car, but by this time the roads were growing worse and worse as they got further out of town. They had passed the limit of electric lights and except for the rays of the powerful headlights everything was in inky darkness.

They must have driven all of half an hour and were a good fifteen miles from where they started, when Cain, spying a road that branched off to the left, turned into it. Up to this point Gordon Kelly, in the back seat, had made no movement whatever. He might have been asleep, for all Cain knew. But the car had not traveled a furlong on the branch road before he gave evidence that he was very much awake.

With a spring as light as a panther he vaulted over the back of the front seat and landed lightly beside Cain. Reaching down he switched off the magneto, pulled out the plug and dropped it into his coat pocket. Almost instantly the motor stopped and the car came to a standstill.

CHAPTER VIII.

REACHING down to the coil box, Cain discovered the plug was not there.

"Where's that plug?" he demanded, fiercely.

"I have it in my pocket," replied Kelly, quietly. "Something is likely to happen pretty quick, but as I don't know just what it is, I thought I would be on the safe side, that's all."

"Who are you?" cried Cain.

"I will tell you who I am, but first I want to know if I am talking to a crazy man, a fool, or a joker," answered Kelly. While he was speaking he was fumbling in his pockets. He now drew forth a match which he held up to the other's face. Cain blew it out almost as quickly as it ignited, but Kelly had seen enough.

"Oh, you're the Deerys' chauffeur," he observed calmly. "You're the man who nearly ran over me the other day. Well, did your employer tell you to dive me out here, or did you do it on your own hook?"

"I'm not a chauffeur," exclaimed Cain hotly, "I'm a friend of the Deery family and, if you want to know, I brought you here on my own hook. What are you going to do about it?"

"You are certainly a queer sort. What is your object? Is this a hold-up game?" Did you bring me out here to rob me?"

"Rob you; no!" shouted Cain. "I can buy and sell you a million times!" The calmness of the man seated beside him acted as a kind of reverse English on Cain. He had been angry all along, but was now furious and gave every indication of losing control of himself entirely.

"I can't figure you out at all," said Kelly in an even voice. "I'm not much used to city ways and I thought at first you had been ordered to take me on a little drive, though it is a mighty queer night for it. I stood for it as long as you stayed on the main road, but when you turned off here I thought it was time to quit. Tell me please, what this is all about? If you have been drinking, you ought to be sober enough by now. If it's a joke I'll take it as such and let it go at that."

Cain ignored the question.

"What were you doing in Deery's house to-night," he snarled.

"I was invited there, but—"

"You're a liar!" screamed Cain, making a movement as if to struggle out of his seat behind the wheel of the automobile.

Just Chastisement.

As quick as the stroke of a cat Kelly shot up his right hand and his fingers closed on Cain's collar with the strength of a vise. With the same movement he jerked Cain's head down to the floor of the car. He sent his left foot crashing through the side curtains which had been fastened on to exclude the rain, and thus clearing a passage, as it were, he jumped to the ground, dragging the struggling Cain after him like a sack of meal. Cain fell in the muddy road with a splash. Still holding his man by the collar, Kelly, ankle deep in mud, hauled him around in front of the car and deposited him there in the full glare of the searchlights.

"Now we can see what we are doing," he remarked and in spite of the effort he had made to drag a man of Cain's size, his respiration was hardly above normal.

Cain scrambled to his feet and with a vile epithet rushed at his antagonist. But Kelly, who had a reach like Bob Fitzsimmons, simply put out one hand and Cain ran blindly into it and stopped short. With one powerful shove Kelly sent the other man reeling backward and, losing his balance, Cain fell with another splash in the mud. In two jumps Kelly stood over him.

"There's only one thing to do to a man like you," he said "Get up."

Cain lay motionless, blinking up at Kelly as though he had just been awakened from a bad dream.

"Get up," ordered Kelly again.

But Cain refused to move so, reaching down Kelly inserted his fingers in the collar of his foe and yanked him to his feet. Then, turning him around, and facing him up the road, Kelly stepped back one pace and delivered a solid kick in Cain's nether region.

There is nothing that will take the fight out of a man sooner than a weighty kick, placed where it will do the most good. There is nothing so humiliating to the recipient, nothing so mortifying, so abasing. Such was the effect on Cain. He started to run up the road, but Kelly followed him and executed a series of blows with the foot, of astonishing power and accuracy. At last, grabbing Cain by the collar once more, he turned him around and kicked him back to the headlights.

Cain was covered from head to foot with the red mud of Georgia and Kelly's clothing was so splashed with it that very little of the material showed. The rain had practically ceased and only a fine mist was falling. Away off in the distance could be seen the glow of the lights of Atlanta reflected above that city. The rays of the powerful headlights fell full on the two young men. It was a weird scene, but Kelly was ready to have done with it.

"Do you own this car," he asked.

"No."

"Who does own it?"

"The Davis Garage."

Kelly took the plug from his pocket, inserted it in the coil box and switched on the spark.

"Crank it," he ordered.

Without a word Cain gave the motor a whirl and the machinery started with a roar. Kelly jumped in the driver's seat and, evidently sure of every movement, eased in the reversed gear and backed the car off the road with a view of heading it in the other direction. This accomplished, he called Cain to the side of the car and said:

Might Lose Temper.

"This may appear a childish act on my part, but I'm going to leave you here to find your way back to town the best way you can. It will do you good to think the whole matter over carefully. I don't know yet what your object was in bringing me away out here. Is there anything you want to say to me?"

Cain made no answer.

"Very well," continued Kelly, "I will probably be able to figure it out for myself in the course of time. You are evidently one of those rich young fellows that have more money than brains. I never met one before, but I have read about them in newspapers. My name is Gordon Kelly and I live at the Imperial Hotel. It is possible that you will be seeking some kind of revenge on me, but let me warn you to leave me severely alone. If you annoy me any further I am liable to lose my temper and Lord help you if anything like that comes to pass."

This may sound like heroics delivered by a stage hero in a melodrama, but as a matter of fact Kelly spoke calmly and seriously. It was simply his way.

Waiting a moment longer and receiving no response from Cain, Kelly started the car and slowly plowed his way through the mud to the main road, where the going was much better, leaving Cain to shift for himself. He drove carefully back to the city and reached his hotel in about an hour. Instead of stopping there, however, he continued on three or four blocks and slowed down next the sidewalk in front of the Capital City Club and left the car standing there. Walking back to his hotel he went to the desk and asked for his key. He was splashed with mud from head to foot and Clerk McClendon eyed him auspiciously for a moment, but as Kelly did not seem disposed to offer any explanation, he silently passed over the room key.

When Kelly reached his room, he went to the telephone, called up Davis' garage and said:

"You remember sending a car to Mr. Deery's house about 9:30 to-night? Well, you will find the car in front of the Capital City Club and if you want to know anything more about it you will have to see the man you sent along as chauffeur Good night."

Gordon Kelly then peeled off his mud-bespattered clothes, threw them on the floor of his bathroom, took a bath, crawled between the bedsheets and five minutes later was sleeping the sleep of the just.

Who was this young man from the mountains who knew all about handling automobiles? How did he acquire his calm manner? Where did he gain that easy and confident bearing? Whence came the breeding that enabled him to enter one of the "best" houses in Atlanta and conduct himself as though he had been brought up in "society?"

* * *

Forrest Cain, chewing the bitter cud of reflection, walked for more than an hour in the direction of the city before he got a lift. Then a friendly milkman came along and he rode the rest of the way in. Going to his room, he kicked the sleeping George out of bed and made him attend to his wants. Cain remained in bed all next day. His trunks had gone to New York and that night he followed them to the metropolis.

To Be Continued Monday.

"Yes, this is the garage—yes, Miss Deery—Yes, I understand—I'll have a car around in five minutes."

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this sixth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Natural History Lessons

No. 2—The Lamb

By Dorothy Dix

THERE are few more valuable animals than the Lamb, whether you consider it from the mint sauce or the Wall Street point of view. In either capacity it is our meat, and furnishes glad raiment and diamonds to those who, but for it, would not slain a dozen take its place. Indeed, against the cold blasts of Winter.

The name of the individual who discovered the first Lamb is lost in the mists of antiquity, but as a source of supplies he has got the individual who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before beat a city block. Thus are we called upon again to marvel at the wisdom of a beneficent Providence that has created just the proper thing to meet our every need.

Lambs are found in all parts of the known world, and appear to multiply with great rapidity, so that as one is slain a dozen take its place. Indeed the theory is held on Wall Street that a new batch of Lambs is born every second, but this probably exaggerates the situation. At any rate, the Lamb crop for the last year or two has been so poor that many brokers have been forced to prey on one another.

In appearance the Lamb is of a mild and pleasing aspect with a voice that sounds like the amateur soloist who kindly consents to sing at a club dinner. Originally the Lamb is of a snow white color, but after a short sojourn away from its native haunts it is apt to need a hurry trip to the laundry. It gets soiled very quickly.

In the matter of legs the Lamb is eclectic, some Lambs having four, one located on each corner, while other Lambs have only two, which are situated at the extreme northeast end of their anatomy, thus enabling them to stand upright after the manner of men.

Also, some Lambs have alfalfa on their chins, while others have smooth faces, but this difference depends on whether they came from the middle West or not.

We may dismiss the quadruped Lamb in a few words, merely stating, in passing, that it has of late developed an ambitious and aspiring tendency to rise skyward under the tuition of Messrs. Armour and Swift, and that it has shown a coy disposition to stay in cold storage that every one who has the good of the country at heart must deplore. However, that great veterinarian Professor Wilson, late of Princeton University, we understand, has now undertaken the moral regeneration of the Lamb, and eke the beef, and the pig, and we may hope to see some needed reforms instituted in this line.

It is in the two-legged Lamb (genus suckibus) that the trained naturalist finds his most interesting study.

This amiable creature lives apparently only to give pleasure to others, which it does by the simple expedient of suffering itself to be sheared by any artistic trimmer that happens along.

This is great sport, and it is a matter of pride that our Wall Street brokers hold the world's record as the champion fleecers of Lambs.

Being so gentle and kind, the Lamb, especially the woolly ones from Pittsburgh, are held in great esteem by women as pets. There was once a chorus girl named Mary who had a little Lamb, with a fleece as white as snow, and everywhere that Mary went his money did surely go—but that's another story.

Lambs are generally of the masculine persuasion, though occasionally we observe an elderly female mutton dressed as Spring Lamb capering around at the dansant.

There are many curious slights in nature, and this is one of the curiousest.

Not What He Meant.

Jones and Long had not met for years. Once—that is, in the days when both had been striving for fame in their different professions—they had been really good chums, and many a talk had they enjoyed together by the fireside as to the little places they would take in the country "when their ships came home."

The dream of Jones has been realized, and now, although a portly old fellow, it was with a sense of real pleasure that he prepared for a visit from his former friend.

"Ah, it's splendid seeing you down here, Long!" he said cordially, by way of greeting. "Quite like old times—what? And the missus, I know, is longing to shake you by the hand. But first—yes, you must come along and have a look at my greenhouse. You simply must!"

And Long went.

"Well, Jones," he said, "you've got a mighty pretty place down here; but, to my mind, it's just a bit bare."

"Oh," replied Jones cheerfully, "that's because the trees are so young! Next time you come—why, they'll be so big that you won't recognize them!"

The Drawbacks

"HOUSE HUNTING," said the man who is boarding with the Pikers until he can get a home and bring his wife and children to town, "is the worst and most depressing job that any man or woman ever had to tackle.

"You can never find a house anywhere that has not some terrible drawback," he went on. "You can take your choice between a poor house in a good neighborhood and a good house in a poor neighborhood.

"If you have a good house in a poor neighborhood your little Cedric and Kenneth and Quentin will be contaminated by contact with those common Awfulwaffle children and the horrid young Beansizzles. And if you take a poor house in a good neighborhood your children will hang wistfully upon the fence and watch the haughty Stalkswaggers children, exclusive young Manybridges and the stuck-up little Snippydoodles at play.

"If a house is perfect in every other respect the landlord will live too near. You are not at first suspicious of the fact that there is a handy little gate by which he can enter your back yard. At first he is just helping you move in. But after you are settled you find him on the premises every time you come home from anywhere.

"Next you note with concern that he and his wife are exceedingly familiar with the history of all the people who have occupied the premises before you. And presently you begin to realize that your idiosyncrasies will furnish considerable data for the edification of your successor.

"Every time you find the landlord at your house he is there merely in the capacity of a friend. He was afraid the cat was caught in the fly-paper or that the canary had escaped, or that mice had got in the piano. He just come to see that everything was as it should be. You are glad to find that you have such a solicitous friend who is always looking after your interests.

"But when you come home suddenly some day and find him taking a bath in your bath room his disinterested motives are not so clear. You become dissatisfied and begin getting ready to move."

.:. The Truth About England .:.

There is a large missionary school in Tokio where the teaching is given in English. One of the pupils not long ago wrote a composition on England, from which these are extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the emmenced mind and his chin is so strong as deserves iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully says, 'The sun are never set on our dominion.' The testimony of England say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit, though he has gained a complete world.' The English are punning mention to establish a great Empire of the Paradise. As the Englishmen always confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy, and the reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men!"

A Reward of Merit

A Complete Short Story

"HERE comes Johnny!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones, sighing disconsolately. "He must have been awfully good to-day—for he's as dirty as a little pig, and he's an hour late!"

Her caller opened her eyes in amazement. "Awfully good?" she repeated. "Why, when my Sammy comes home late and is dirty I usually know that he's been into some sort of mischief. It's never a sign of being particularly good to my eyes."

"Well, your Sammy doesn't go to the same school," returned Mrs. Jones. "Johnny has a pretty and stylish teacher, and, what's more, she knows how to make her pupils like her. They all fight to do things for her! I learned all about it when I went to call on her one day after Johnny had brought home a perfect report card. For a whole month he'd been coming home late and looking perfectly dreadful—you'd think he was a street Arab. I have never been able to get anything out of him, except that he'd stayed after school to clean the blackboards.

A Perfect Card.

"Even though he was my own angel child, I had my doubts as to the reason he stayed, and I thought I would have his father settle with him when his report came in. I was confident that it would be a very poor one, since he was kept in almost every single evening.

"You can imagine my amazement when Johnny brought home a perfect card. Motherlike, I doubted his veracity. I even thought it was not impossible that he had doctored his card to show to us. So I put on my hat and went to school to see his teacher. I thought Johnny was singularly unconcerned about it—but, then, you know, you can never tell about boys.

"Well, it seemed that Johnny's teacher had had such a time trying not to seem to play favorites that she had adopted a system of rewards. The pupils are allowed to wash so many blackboards or beat out the dust from so many erasers or raise the windows so many times for certain grades in their studies.

"But the choice reward is ringing the bell. I do wish Johnny was bright enough always to ring the bell—or else dull enough just to open the windows or pass papers. But he's of that intermediate brightness that rewards him with blackboard cleaning. He scoffs at the windows and papers, but he's had the bell only a few times!

"Johnny will get up early, eat a cold breakfast and hardly allow me to see that he is properly washed when he has the privilege of ringing that bell, he's so anxious to get to school in time to see that it is done right! And as for my errands, he finds it quite impossible to do them in his limited time."

He Was Late.

"What makes you so late?" she inquired, as Johnny came in, brushing the chalk dust from his sleeves.

Johnny grinned happily, "I had 95 in geography and 100 in spelling—so she let me have all the boards to-night," he answered, triumphantly. "And last week Frank had the bell—and he came late, so she said if I'd come early to-morrow and he wasn't there I could have it. Anyway, he cheats! And I've a good mind to tell her!"

"Will you run to—" began Mrs. Jones, but Johnny interrupted her as he turned to go.

"Yes, but just wait. I've got to see a fellow that's waiting out here!" And Johnny was gone.

"My, I wish I knew her system," declared Mrs. Jones, enviously.

"And errands are such nice, clean work," sympathized the caller, glancing at the coating of chalk dust that had settled on the rug. "Maybe if you tell him it's a reward?"

But Mrs. Jones smiled and shook her head. "I'm not a teacher!" she replied.

GETTING MARRIED

By DOROTHY DIX.

MY DEAR ROBERT—Who was the wise guy that said "the remarriage of a widow or widower was the final triumph of hope over experience"? Anyway, he was there with the goods when it came to sizing up the nerve of those who, like yourself, are contemplating entering that Mendelssohn Rag.

Now, I am not knocking second marriages. I am strong for them. But I confess they always fill me with amazement. If a man or woman has been happily married the first time, I should think that he or she would not dare to even attempt to replace the angel he or she has lost with another husband or wife, because he or she would realize that no one can always make matrimonial ten-strikes.

On the other hand, if a man or woman has been unhappily married, it has always seemed to me that the very sound of wedding bells would be anathema to him or her, and that, having been mercifully delivered by death or divorce from the partner who made life a torment, such a one would no more rush back into the holy estate than the soul who has just won out of purgatory would voluntarily return to it.

Opinion of the Public.

However, the general public does not share in these opinions. Every day we see the truly bereaved consoling themselves by taking new partners, and the freed hastening to put their necks once more under the yoke; for marriage is the only human experience from which we learn no wisdom.

Perhaps this is just as well. If we weren't all plungers, none of us would ever get married, for matrimony is the big gamble of life. In it we stake our all on the turn of a card, and whether we win or lose is pure luck, since there is no earthly way of telling beforehand what sort of a husband or wife a man or maiden will turn out to be.

Your first venture into matrimony was so disastrous that you can at least comfort yourself with the thought that you have been through the worst, disillusionment that domesticity can offer. Any other of the fifty-seven known varieties of wives must be better than the one you had, whose only claim to your gratitude was established when she packed her trunks and hiked for Reno.

As I said before, it is strange that your previous experience of matrimony should incline you to try it over again; but, since it does, let us hope that you are making a more fortunate choice in a wife this time and that luck will be with you.

Of Our Own Making.

But did you ever think, son, that luck in matrimony is a good deal like luck in business—principally of our own making? Opportunity and happiness knock on our door, but unless we are on the job, ready to welcome them in, they pass us by. They don't force their way in with a club. They have to be cajoled across the threshold.

So, if you want this second marriage of yours to turn out successfully, it's going to be up to you to strike the keynote, and make it either a grand, sweet song or a scream. What? That's right.

It's the husband's place to make the home happy. Of course, the wife is due to chip in with her little contribution to the general felicity; but no woman, working alone and unaided, can carry out that contract. It's too big for her. It's a man's size job.

To begin with, son, make of your divorce papers a torch to light you on the road of happiness with this marriage. Think back and remember the things that you and your wife quarreled about. Was there a perpetual conflict between you on the money question?

Tell Your Income.

Avoid that snag by telling the girl you are about to marry exactly what your income is, and what she will have to spend. Tell her that she will have to do without many of the things that rich women have, perhaps without many of the luxuries that she has been in the habit of having. That will start out fair with her and give her, at least, a chance to keep out of the box of becoming a poor man's wife, unless she loves you enough to prefer you to fine clothes and an automobile.

Then, when you are married, give her a definite allowance for the house and for her own personal expenses, and give it to her as her due, without making her come to you for it like a beggar. And make her live within her allowance. That's the way to train her into being a good business woman.

Did you and your first wife have a never-ending fight because you stayed out late at night? Don't marry, son, until you are done sowing your wild oats. If you dance attendance on chorus girls and joy-ride them around; if you want to play poker and drink with the boys, stay single, where you'll have perfect liberty to do so. Don't be selfish enough to take a girl away from her home and put her to watching through weary nights for the drag of a drunken husband's footsteps.

Dreary for Girl.

Aside from the heartbreak and the anguish and the anxiety of it all, think how dreary it must be for a woman to spend her evenings alone.

No girl would marry if that was what she expected to get in matrimony, so be just and don't ask one to leave her happy home for you unless you are going to give her one just as happy in return.

A man's idea of doing his full duty by his wife is to give her food and clothes. That isn't enough. He owes her consideration and tenderness and comradeship besides. It's just as much his place to try to be entertaining to her, and meet her with a glad, sweet smile of an evening, as it is hers to try to interest and entertain him. And when a man does this, son, he never has to pay alimony.

Make your own matrimonial luck in the second marriage, son, and may heaven prosper the brave!

.:. The Exact Time .:.

"IF you are interesting in getting mother off on the train you'd better make some arrangement to set my clock right," suggested Mrs. Binkum.

"I certainly am interested," replied Binkum. "But you know, Betsy, that I have no way of setting your clock because my watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day. I never know whether it has lost eight or eighteen minutes and I do not like to gamble on any such important event as your mother's catching her train."

"My clock gains about thirteen minutes a day," said Mrs. Binkum. "Wouldn't that make it easier to get to set it by your watch?"

"Let me think—let me think," mused Binkum. "If a watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day and a clock gains thirteen minutes a day how can a watch be used in setting the clock? And at 12 o'clock fast watch time, what would be the hour by slow clock? I give it up."

"If they would only blow a whistle at noon in this town," said Mrs. Binkum. "I could tell the time at least once a day, and the rest of the time I should be able to tell about what time it was."

"The situation is serious I admit," said Binkum. "If we keep on this way you and I will be two or three days apart. There will come a time, in fact, when it will not even be the same year by our respective timepieces."

"The railroad clock is correct, I suppose?"

"Without a doubt. I can go down to the station, say at 12 o'clock, and start for home immediately. The station is eighteen blocks away. It takes me thirty minutes, about——"

"About! We want the exact time! And, besides, as likely as not you'll stop to talk to somebody. You do not know how long it takes you to walk eighteen blocks."

"I admit that I do not know how long it takes me to walk eighteen blocks. But there is one thing that I can time myself by. You know I was a bricklayer, I can lay just 60 bricks an hour. I am absolutely correct to a dot."

"But how does that help us?"

"It is the only thing I can time myself on."

"Then I will go to the railroad station and at 12 o'clock I'll give you some sort of signal, and you can begine to lay bricks. Then as soon as I get home we can count the bricks and know how many minutes have elapsed since I left the station."

"All right. I'll order the bricks and have the mortar ready. But what sort of signals are you going to give me?"

"I have read that the sound that carries farthest is the sound of a bass fiddle. I'll borrow Uncle John's bass fiddle. Then at precisely 12 o'clock I will get a good big sweep at the bow, and you'll hear it and begin to lay bricks. So when I get home I will know the exact time and set my clock and mother can catch her train."

"Fine!" ejaculated Binkum.

He's Too Kind

"I HAVE no use for the hospitable man!" declared the young architect, who had come in from dining out, and was at the moment engaged in rooting around in the pantry for something to eat.

"I hate a man who carries you proudly off to dinner when you don't want to be entertained. There's Robinson, the soul of hospitality! He's always trying to drag me home with him for dinner, and I have always managed to get away from him until to-night.

"This night he nailed me, and I couldn't get away. You should have seen Mrs. Robinson's expression when he shoved me in through the door.

"He shoved me right into the dining room, into the bosom of his family. His poor wife grabbed some things that were airing by the fireplace, and then hurried out and changed her dress. Then I heard the kitchen range rattling and knew that the unfortunate woman was cooking dinner all over again.

"Robinson was very entertaining for a while. He caught part of what I said, and I caught part of what he said. But he was uneasy and soon bolted out into the kitchen, where debate was immediately in order.

"In due time we had a very unfestive meal. Every once in a while Robinson gave his wife a dig, and she gave him a dig—sort of tennis fashion. I was the net for their little contest and every now and then I got the ball.

"The three kids got spanked and put to bed in relays. That was not exactly delightful for me!

"Robinson is one of the best fellows I ever saw! And I went to school with Emily, his wife. But I am blessed if I like to drop in there for a meal at night and have them play tennis across me in the manner described.

"I like to be treated formally. If a man wants to invite me to dinner, let him take me to the club or proceed to make adequate arrangements with his family ahead of time!"

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Do You Know That—

The longest hunger strike on record was carried out some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt as to his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to escape the guillotine, and from the day of his arrest refused to eat in spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell, and when that failed, attempted forcible feeding. Granie held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which time he died.

It is reported that all German submarines are to be fitted with guns. Two types have been selected—a 12-pounder, which can be housed and a 1-pounder, which will be permanently in position. The older boats will probably carry 1-pounders only. The 12-pounders are on special high-angle mounting for use against aircraft if necessary. The crew of these guns consists of four men, three to work the gun and one to hand the ammunition. The newer boats will carry two of these guns.

Farmers in the Boyertown district of Pennsylvania came for miles round to attend a sale held at Boyertown of a number of heavy rolled steel coffins. A burial casket company purchased the coffins fifteen years ago, but they were too cumbersome and could not be disposed of. The coffins, which were sold at prices ranging from ten cents to a quarter each, will be used by the farmers for watering troughs for their stock.

A new machine, called the stenotype, has been invented, which enables the shorthand writer to get from 400 to 600 words a minute upon paper in an absolutely correct and accurate form. The basis of operating the machine is phonetic spelling. While the work done is virtually the same as done by shorthand, it has the advantage of being recorded in plain English characters.

Nell Brinkley Says:

I WALKED with a sceptic who has scarcely a rag of a dream to his name to believe in, close under a garden wall, warmed by the sun and cuddled close by the fragrant arms of cherry trees in spring bloom. On the broad, flat top of it was a gypsy-like girl of ten, maybe, with a bowl of iridescent suds between her scratched, sun-tanned knees and a head as velvety black as the poplars in the garden must be when night comes. Up into the still scented air she was sending big elastic soap bubbles, hued like a box of loose gems with a shaft of sunlight lying on them, frail discs of perfect beauty which are the vanishing soul of a drop of crystal water. Idly they floated, some long breathless seconds, some but an instant, giving to the wind changing and glowing with swift-running rivers of color before they snapped into thin air with a tiny shatter of splintering light.

"There, by my new straw hat!" quoth the sceptic, "there is the stuff that dreams are made of; there the blowing of them, there the rainbow coloring, there the vanishing into thin air. What are they? Nothing. Why blow them through our little thin pipe in the first place? Only the veriest child takes joy in blowing soap bubbles, and only the simple-minded among grown-ups (your pardon, mad'moiselle) find the making of dreams delectable. They only snap and vanish, and where once our eyes saw a sphere of unutterable beauty there is nothing! Ah, ah, I don't dream any more, my child. They amount in the end to just a bit of elastic color that we cannot touch or breathe upon—pf!—there is nothing there. Dreamers are fools, out of a drop of ether, colorless it is true, but very real and material stuff which they can at least possess. Out of this tiny but satisfactory thing they insist on stretching a gorgeous thing that a breath will break."

"Nevertheless," quoth I in return, I who am so much less wise and who have so much a better time, "nevertheless, the little kid on the wall is having a better time than you. The bursting of one thin bubble is just nothing. There are countless more in the bowl between her knees. What is the vanishing of one lovely-hued thing when you have the making of endless more? What is the breaking of one little tiny dream of yours when you have the source of countless more in your head and heart? There is the big dream of all—wise man—the bowl—the bowl! Real it is, too—just soap and water. There is the big dream of all, wise man, the head and the heart that are the source of frail and lovely dreams! Real they are, too—red blood and brain. There is where you are poor, m'sieu. You have considered the bubble too deeply, and you haven't the bowl!"

The little black head on the wall went on blowing thin, lovely planets into the spring air, and her eyes were thoughtful enough to make me think she saw child dreams of the things that are to be in their opalescent sides. It looked lots of fun, and it IS fun to blow dreams, for without dreams (real dreams are ambitions) where would we be? After all, would we care about a bubble at all if we could hold it in our hand and play with it? For that matter, we can go buy us a big crystal or a pretty marble any day.

Hasn't Found It.

Jackson—Bunker has got himself into a nice fix.

Johnson—How?

Jackson—He wrote an article on "The Ideal Wife" for a ladies' paper last month.

Johnson—Well, what's that got to do with his present fix?

Jackson—Somebody told his wife about it, and she's been reading the thing over during the past two days trying to discover a single trait wherein his ideal resembles her. She hasn't found it, and Bunker dines in the city now.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A minister in a small country village, who was noted for his absent-mindedness, was once observed to stop suddenly in the middle of his sermon and heard to mutter:

"I knew she would—I knew she would!"

After the service was over some one asked him the reason.

"Dear me," said he, "did I? Well, you know, from the pulpit I can just see old Mrs. Rogers' garden, and this morning she was out pulling up a cabbage, and I thought to myself, 'Now, if that cabbage comes up suddenly she'll go over,' and just then it came up and over she went."

Brown—I've got an excellent plan for getting rid of duns.

Green—Ah! That so?

Brown—I have. Never fails.

Green—Then, old fellow, you must let me into the secret, for I'm worried to death by 'em.

Brown—Well, I've tried it several times of late and I find the man never comes back again.

Green—Aye, aye! what do you do?

Brown—I pay him.

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see I'm rather busy just now. I hung Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your churchwarden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled-looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly remarked the woman as she counted the contents of her purse.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

The father looked at Mary with a reproach that was pathetic.

"See," he said, and his voice was for once thin with passion, "see what you've done to my boy!"

Mary had held her eyes on Dick. There had been in her gaze a conflict of emotions, strong and baffling. Now, however, when the father spoke, her face grew more composed and her eyes met his coldly. Her voice was level and vaguely dangerous as she answered his accusation.

"What is that compared to what you have done to me?"

Gilder stared at her in honest amazement. He had no suspicion as to the tragedy that lay between him and her.

"What have I done to you?" he questioned, uncomprehending.

Mary moved forward, passing beyond the desk, and continued her advance toward him until the two stood close together, face to face. She spoke softly, but with an intensity of supreme feeling in her voice.

"Do you remember what I said to you the day you had me sent away?"

The merchant regarded her with stark lack of understanding.

"I don't remember you at all," he said.

The woman looked at him intently for a moment, then spoke in a colorless voice:

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store. And perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy-jowled man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember. Yes? There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off—only, you asked the judge to make an example of her."

The man to whom she spoke had gone gray a little. He began to understand, for he was not lacking in intelligence. Somehow, it was borne in on him that this woman had a grievance beyond the usual run of injuries.

"You are that girl?" he said. It was not a question, rather an affirmation.

Mary spoke with the dignity of long suffering—more than that, with the confident dignity of a vengeance long delayed, now at last achieved. Her words were simple enough, but they reached to the heart of the man accused by them.

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again, remorselessly.

"You took away my good name. You smashed my life. You put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. . . . Well, I've begun to collect."

Burke Shouts a Warning.

The man opposite her, the man of vigorous form, of strong face and keen eyes, stood gazing intently for long moments. In that time he was learning many things. Finally he spoke:

"And that is why you married my boy."

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

Convincingly, save to one—her husband. Dick suddenly aroused and spoke with the violence of one sure.

"It is not!"

Burke shouted a warning. Demarest, more diplomatic, made a restraining gesture toward the police official, then started to address the young man soothingly.

But Dick would have none of their interference.

"This is my affair," he said, and the others fell silent. He stood up and went to Mary and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you loved me."

The wife shuddered, but she strove to deny.

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not!"

"And you love me now!" he went on, insistingly.

"No, no!" Mary's denial came like a cry for escape.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated, bitterly.

But he was inexorable.

"Look me in the face and say that."

He took her face in his hands, lifted it, and his eyes met hers searchingly.

"Look me in the face and say that," he repeated.

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. The three watchers dared not interrupt this drama of emotions, but at last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly. Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I Do Not Love You."

"I do not love you."

In the instant of reply Dick Gilder, by some inspiration of love, changed his attitude.

"Just the same," he said cheerfully, "you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me."

Mary felt a thrill of fear through her very soul.

"You can't!" she cried harshly. "You are his son!"

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care a d—n what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll put all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart, because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke, with his rousing voice, spoke again:

"I tell you, she's a crook!"

Mary moved a little and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"She didn't get her time for good behavior."

Mary raised her head haughtily, with a gesture of high disdain.

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers?"

Gilder moved fussily.

"And you——"

Mary swayed a little, standing there before her questioner.

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago you took away my name—and gave me a number.... Now I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XV.

Aftermath of Tragedy.

THE Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger. Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. In these hours of grief the soul of him put out its strength. He learned beyond peradventure of doubt that the woman whom he had married was in truth an ex-convict, even as Burke and Demarest had declared.

Nevertheless, he did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim.

He Remained Loyal.

He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder. In his summing of her, he set as more than an offset to her unrighteousness in this regard the desperate struggle she had made after leaving prison to keep straight, which, as he learned, had ended in her attempt at suicide.

He knew the intelligence of this woman whom he loved, and in his heart was no thought of her faults as vital flaws. It seemed to him rather that circumstances had compelled her, and that through all the suffering of her life she had retained the more beautiful qualities of her womanliness, for which he reverenced her. In the closeness of their association, short as it had been, he had learned to know something of the tenderer depths within her, the kindliness of her, the wholesomeness.

Swayed as he was by the loveliness of her, he was yet more enthralled by those inner qualities of which the outer beauty was only the fitting symbol.

So in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers and abandon her. On the contrary, his only purpose was to gain her for himself, to cherish and guard her against every ill, to protect with his love from every attack of shame or injury.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me, but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it, with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Maine.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Evelyn's great moment had come. She looked at the coffee service of gold—she thought of Neustadt Castle, the home of brave men and women of her race for long hundreds of years—she visioned the treasury of Taunus empty quite of gold. She was only a girl with a girl's longing heart—but this was the home of her ancestors—and Gustavus was the last of a race that must be preserved at any cost. She struggled for a light tone. "I could care a great deal if you were to dawdle here over your breakfast and miss your important engagement with the bankers of Frankfort. When the treasury is quite stocked with gold pieces, Gustavus, may I go to Paris to visit Klausthal, and bring back all the lovely Paris fashions?"

Gustavus looked at her with bitter scorn. "So you are scheming too—the one pure, good thing I had ever known. You caress with lying eyes that you may have Paris gowns. And for one wild moment I had thought I could give it all up—the old castle—the old home—and go to Paris like Klausthal—abdicate—for you."

The Prince strode from the room—the Frankfort business must not fall now, and because Evelyn was a princess and must never forget her royal dignity, she did not fling her sobbing body across the old mahogany breakfast table as a simple girl of our world might have done. Instead, walking with stately mien—and trembling knees and blinded eyes—to her old tower room, she sat there at her rose-hung window and watched her youth die, the while Gustavus, magnificent in royal uniform of cream and blue, rode away to Frankfort—and fortune.

. . . . . Down the Highway, ...

Down the highway clattered Gustavus, Count Fehrenberg by his side and two grooms at the rear. In Neustadt Castle a girl lay crumpled across a canopied bed of old mahogany, and was fighting for the mere desire to live. In Jew's lane another girl stood merry-hearted and gay and watched the light play in prismatic color on the glory of her necklace—little unconscious Charlotte, into whose hands Destiny was soon to deliver the threads of many lives. What will you do, Charlotte? What can you do when your hour strikes? Evelyn met her hour—and you?

So many a man rides down the highway of life while a woman waits at either end of the road.

Playing the Game.

As they galloped through the spring sunshine Fehrenberg's eyes were alight with mischief at the great coup he had Gustavus had planned the night before, and when the first meetings had been concluded after their arrival at the lucky house in Jews' Lane, he reminded his sovereign of their little game.

Gustavus banished two tender, loving, lying eyes from his mind—those eyes had journeyed in his memory from Neustadt Castle to Jews' Lane, but now he must "play the game."

"Of course, quite right. Gentlemen, I wish to creat you knights of my family order. To your oldest I give the decoration generally conferred for valor on the field. The motto is "Undaunted." I choose this decoration for you, because you are so bold as to be about to lend me money. No soldier could display greater courage." He smiled whimsically as he turned from Amsche l to Solomon. "And you, Baron, I create a commander of this honorable order. I consider that your courage rose yesterday to supreme heights. Allow me to point out that the ribbon is so wide that in warm weather it will save the necessity of a waistcoat."

If this was indeed a game—even if he were being made game of—Solomon would play it too. He bowed low. "Your Highness, I thank you in the name of all of us for the manner in which it pleases and amuses you to honor us."

From the doorway a gentle voice spoke, and as his grandmother and cousin came into the room, the somber, wounded-animal look that had never left Jacob's face since the veiled insults of the Prince of Klausthal-Agorda had brought it there, suddenly cleared like the rising of a gray mist.

Held Out Her Hand.

Holding out her hand and bowing with dignified self-possession, Frau Gudula spoke to the Heir of Nestadt and Taunus: "You are welcome, Duke Gustavus, to my house. How do you do, Count Fehrenberg."

"Dear Baroness," said Gustavus to Charlotte, "if I do not speak my thoughts to you, it is because your beauty makes a pretty speech appear so plain!"

Charlotte chose to be demure. "I thank Your Highness for your reserve."

Even for pretty speeches, Solomon meant to brook no delay. If there was to be coquetry it might well come later, when the contract was duly signed and sealed. "May I propose that we settle our financial business at once?" and thereat, in solemn procession the four brothers followed the Duke and Count Fehrenberg to the unpretentious little office upstairs, where lay the agreement and twelve million florins in gold and notes!

"What are you waiting for, Jacob?"

"I do not like this business—nor will I share its profit."

"My boy, we always share our duties when the family is decided, whether they are pleasant duties or not. You must take your place with them. I have no wish to entertain the Duke in this house—but I must do so now he is here. I am going now to choose some of your grandfather's old Burgundy with which to do honor to the unwelcome guest who is in my house. Think it over while I am gone, my little Jacob."

Charlotte went after her grandmother and shut the door with a great show of importance. With girlish eagerness, and merrily withal, she entered on the interview that must make or mar four lives.

"Cousin Jacob—why are you so much against lending money to the Duke?"

GOOD FOR 1,000 VOTES.

Only One Nomination Blank Can be Voted for Any Contestant.

Great will be the scramble for coupons to-morrow.

Inadvertently, the coupon calling for 15 votes in The Georgian and American's pony contest was omitted from last Sunday's issue of The American. After consultation and debate, it was decided that the fairest thing to do would be to make the coupon in the next Sunday paper valued at 30 votes. This was done.

No sooner was it announced than the contestants began laying plans for getting copies of to-morrow's American. In hundreds of cases subscribers were canvassed early in the week and induced to promise to save to-morrow's coupon for contestants.

News dealers were besieged with inquiries, and many of them have increased their orders for to-morrow, foreseeing unusual demand.

Watch the totals rise as soon as these coupons begin to come in. But they are rising already.

The names and standings of contestants follow:

MEMPHIS COTTON HOUSE SHOWS CONDITION 83.1 P. C.

MEMPHIS, May 24.—In a special report issued to-day, Miller-Carter made public their first report of cotton acreage and condition, as compiled by their crop reporting bureau, which is in charge of Mr. Turner. The returns are made up to May 21.

The average for the United States shows condition of 93.1 per cent and acreage increase of 2.7 per cent.

The following table shows the condition by States:

	May 21, 1913. Per Cent.	Acreage Compared to Last Year.
North Carolina	77	102
South Carolina	73	100
Georgia	74	99
Alabama	79	100
Mississippi	89	104
Tennessee	93	105
Arkansas	89	105
Louisiana	86	120
Oklahoma	92	110
Texas	86	102

OATS CROP BAD IN WISCONSIN.

CHICAGO, May 24.—B. W. Snow wires from Sedalia, Mo.: "Central Missouri counties have had scattered but insufficient rains. During the past week wheat has lost the extra promise that characterized it early in the season, but with seasonable conditions hereafter will make more than an average crop. The crop is heading in the River counties, but will not harvest until last week in June.

"Oats are irreparably damaged—yellow and thin—considerable may be classed as practically a failure. Only the early sown is promising; acreage is reduced. Corn still being planted and some plowing yet to do; ground dry and hard to work.

"The early planted is in good shape and is up with a good stand."

OPINIONS ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows light rains in the Northwest and generally fair over the rest of the belt. Look for narrow market, as traders will take no big chances on either side of the market over Sunday.

Corn—The market continues to show a very strong undertone.

Oats—We believe the long side of the market on sharp reactions will prove safest.

Provisions—Look for prices to go higher.

COTTON STEADIER ON MILLS DEMAND

Bearish Condition Report Causes Sharp Decline From Early Best Figure.

NEW YORK, May 24.—On bullish weather news and increasing firmness in the cotton goods market the cotton market opened steady to-day, with first prices at a net gain of 4 to 8 points from last night's close. The ring showed a disposition to buy on all breaks, which helped in sustaining the market. After the call, however, the list became unsettled and easier, influenced by weather bulletins reporting lower temperatures over the Eastern belt.

This class of selling caused prices to drop sharply. At the end of the first hour prices were 2 to 5 points under the opening quotations. Later the selling became freer, based upon the report of a prominent spot house in Memphis, giving the condition of the crop at 83.1 per cent to May 21, and acreage increase of 2.7 per cent.

The market, however, held rather steady at the decline, through week-end short covering. July closed at 11.73 and October 11.20. The entire list at the close aggregated a net gain of 1 to 6 points from the final quotations of Friday. The tone was steady.

Estimated cotton receipts:

U. P. MAKES BIG GAIN; ALSO S. P.

Insiders Purchase U. P. Heavily on Rumor That It Will Fare Well in the Dissolution.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 24.—A combination composed of a selling movement and absence of demand carried off prices of most of the issues at the opening of the stock market to-day.

Canadian Pacific was lowest, opening at 235½ for a loss of 1⅝. Among the others were Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¾; Chesapeake and Ohio, ⅛; Erie, ¼; Reading, ¼; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; United States Steel common, ⅜. Northern Pacific made a slight fractional gain.

The curb market was quiet.

Americans in London were firm. The hostilities between Bulgaria and Greece threaten to oppress the foreign markets and reflect an impressive sympathy on Americans.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged. Other bonds firm.

WHEAT GOES UP ON CROP SCARE

Each Option Soars Over a Cent. Crop Advices Conflicting, but Had No Effect.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	105
Corn—No. 2	60½
Oats—No. 2	40½

CHICAGO, May 24.—The "annual crop scare" was on in earnest to-day and advances were shown of ¾c to 1½c for wheat, with the July the strongest spot in the list and September the weakest. As for several days past, the reports received from Kansas were conflicting in character, but this did not seem to have any effect on the professionals around whom the trade was centered. The outsider has not come into the market to any extent, owing to fears of manipulation, coupled with the possibility of suffering losses in case of soaking rains where needed overnight in the Southwest.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c higher.

Oats were ¾c lower for the May, ⅛c lower for July, but ⅛c higher for September.

There were small advances in provisions and the undercurrent was one of strength.

Telling the Age of Fowls When Found Upon the Market

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Years ago there were more old fowls put upon the markets than there are to-day. Then the people would not part with their laying hens until they were too old to lay and get about the premises—then was the time it was thought to sell them. It mattered but little what the consumer thought about it so long as they got them off of their hands.

In those days it was considered part of the housekeeper's trade to be able to tell the difference between a hen one year old and a six-year-old. It was a point to notice whether the spur was hard and tight to the bone of the leg or rather soft and movable when you attempted to push it from side to side. If the former, it was an old one.

The smooth, bright scales on the legs usually indicate a young hen, although it is not an infallible rule, for we have seen hens four years old retain legs as bright as one a year old.

If you are undecided by these methods, try pressing the underpart of the bill. If it is very flexible, it is a young hen; if hard and stiff, it is very naturally otherwise. On a young hen the claws are also rather short and rather clear looking, and not stiff.

The turkey when old has long, hard, strong claws, and hard calloused places on the bottoms of the feet. They also have a long beard when they are old. Even the hens have this. It is really easier to tell the age of a live fowl than of a dressed one. On a dressed fowl the usual test is to feel of the point of the breastbone farthest from the head. It is rather soft and flexible on a young fowl, with a feeling like gristle. On the old ones it assumes the hard, stiff, bonelike or flinty nature. The feet, legs and neck of young fowls are large in proportion to the size of the body.

A fowl that has been dry picked will look younger in quality and appearance of flesh than one that has been scalded. It will look more natural in color of skin and not be so dull looking. Young ducks and geese will be plump looking with flesh of a semi-transparent look.

Another method for selecting a duck or goose when they are dressed is to take hold of the toes and pull them apart; if the web separates easily it is young.

Breeding Up a Flock.

Judge Marshall: We are trying to breed up a flock of thoroughbred Brown Leghorns and want a point or two from you as to what to expect in the crosses. Should the rooster have five or six points? Also, should the comb on the hen stand up straight like that on the rooster?

Chester, S. C. J. R. S.

Answer: The standard calls for five points on the male and female both of the single Comb Brown Leghorns. This is made as a ruling for those who are raising exhibition stock. If they happen to have four or six points it does not go to show that they are not pure bred.

You say you are grading up a flock of Brown Leghorns. If you are really doing what you say you are we would say don't. If you are trying to get a really fine lot of Leghorns by breeding good stock of males and females onto common or mixed stock you will certainly have a long and hard road to travel. The process is too slow, and the time spent is worth so much more for something else that it will pay you very much better to just buy a good trio to breed from and raise some really good stock the first year. Or buy about two or three settings of good eggs from a reliable party. Life is too short and this is too progressive an age to spend your time trying to produce what has taken others years and years of time to accomplish. Then you have the choice of buying day-old chicks at a nominal price at this season of the year, and they are all ready to grow. After you have gotten the best stock that money will buy you will then have an opportunity to try your skill at keeping them up to as high a standard as they were when you got them. The hen's comb should not stand up like the male's, but should turn smoothly over to one side of the head.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Permit Is Taken For Fine Residence

Ben Z. Phillips to Build $28,000 Home on Ponce DeLeon Ave. Small Sales.

Ben Z. Phillips, member of the well-known law firm of Slaton & Phillips, applied through his representative, W. P. Francis, contracting builder, Saturday morning for a permit to erect a residence at 894 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to cost $28,150.

This will be one of the most attractive homes in the section. It will be a two-story brick veneer affair, with ten rooms and a tile roof.

Very few homes built so far during 1913 have exceeded this figure. One of them is the Venable stone castle at Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Oakdale Road; another is Mrs. J. M. High's mansion on the west side of Peachtree just north of Fifteenth Street, and still another is Mrs. Hunter Cooper's Italian house on the east side of Peachtree at Brookwood, just north of J. H. Nunnally's place.

Residence Lots Sold.

Several sales in the Howell Mill Road subdivision were announced Saturday by the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company. This concern sold to Miss Clara Perry, of Madison, two lots on Holmes Street for $1,200 cash; to A. W. Baughn, on Belle Meade Avenue, a lot for $600, and to G. C. Bohannon, on the same avenue, a lot for $600. All of the lots are 54 by 145 feet.

Peachtree Sale of Record.

A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, seller, and Ben J. Massell, buyer, have put on record papers conveying a 21 by 158 foot lot on Peachtree for $25,296. This property is on the east side of Peachtree, 223 feet north of Pine Street, and is in litigation through a suit filed several days ago to recover part of two acres in this block. The petitioners are suing the people holding the original deeds, and not those having bond-for-title interests.

Dr. VanHoose retains some 42 feet in a 63-foot parcel which he purchased several months ago from Porter Langston. The 21-foot strip to Mr. Massell brought approximately $1,205 a front foot.

Two Sales Bring $17,900.

The Atlanta Land Investment Company has bought from the E. M. Atwood estate and others through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency an acreage tract on Williams and Thirteenth Streets for $15,000. The West Agency has bought from J. C. Perry for Miss Clifford Morgan West 23 Pierce Street, near Stewart Avenue, a five-room cottage on a 43 by 138-foot lot for $2,900.

Another Country Home.

Well-known citizens continue to seek the rural districts for homes. Charles E. Harman, general passenger agent of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, has bought a heavily timbered lot fronting 600 feet on Howell Mill Road and 540 feet on the Collier Road, and will erect a fine country residence. The seller of the lot was the Provident Trust Company, but the price was withheld. The property is in the neighborhood of the residences of Thomas B. Felder, Smith D. Pickett and others.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

Forrest & George Adair

WE CAN SELL you a nice, NEW 6-room BUNGALOW with bath and every modern convenience for $3,000, and others for $3,300 and $3,500, on EASY TERMS. These bungalows are situated in the beautiful and coming section of Murray Hill in North Kirkwood, and are bargains at the price. It is a pleasure to show them.

GOOD NEW HOMES: Listen, on Moreland Avenue, corner of Albemarble, we are just completing a beautiful two-story, seven-room bungalow. This place has an abundance of large and roomy closets, tile bath, exposed ceiling beams, stone front, stone steps, and it is on a corner lot; birch doors, the best of hardware; will tint walls to suit your own taste. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. To see this is to buy it. Take a look and come to see us.

ON NORTH AVENUE, close to Highland Avenue, we have just completed a pretty six-room home with two baths; it is seldom that you find a place so well built and so complete in every detail as this one. Each bath has tile floor; large rooms, plenty of light and furnace heat. Will take a good lot in part payment for this. It is close to school and churches, within a stone's throw of Druid Hills; car just a block away. Or will sell on easy terms.

ON BEAUTIFUL Cleburne Avenue we are offering the best value in the city in a new six-room, hall and bath bungalow with tile floor on front porch and in bath room, dressing mirrors, stone steps, and automobile drive on side. This lot has a frontage of 70 feet. If you have been waiting for a large lot here it is. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. We know that you will like this.

Made in Atlanta--A Permanent

Exhibition of Our Goods Would be a Liberal Education to the Whole Country--The Time to Act Is NOW.

The plan of the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta to install a permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods in this city is excellent.

Chattanooga has an exhibition along similar lines, and it is proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of this city that the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta shall study this exhibit in Chattanooga, and install an exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods here, so that people of the entire south, and other parts of the country as well, may know exactly what MADE IN ATLANTA goods really mean.

The Georgian suggests that the business men of Atlanta take up this question at once, with the idea of devoting a week during this summer or early fall to a SHOW THEM exhibition of the 1,000 or more articles that are now manufactured in Atlanta by the 600 manufacturers now engaged in such work.

An exhibition of this kind would attract the attention of business men and merchants from all over the south. The railroads would undoubtedly offer low rates to travelers; hotel accommodations are ample, and with the superb summer weather that Atlanta always enjoys, an exhibition week here would be beneficial to all concerned.

A permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods would be a liberal education. Atlanta needs that kind of an exhibition. MADE IN ATLANTA should mean the highest standard of merit. Articles made in Atlanta will undoubtedly find a ready sale all over the country, as soon as it is known what Atlanta really can do.

Every business man in Atlanta, no matter in what enterprise he is engaged, should help this movement along. It will mean much to the city. It will make for progress in every direction.

The Georgian congratulates the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the manufacturers and merchants of this city in taking up this permanent exhibition idea, and hopes it will be pushed forward in an active way.

What Is To Be Done for These Women and Others Like Them?

Who Will Answer the Questions That These Human Question Marks Permanently Represent in Our Civilization? Isn't It Time TO MAKE A BEGINNING?

Copyright, 1913.

Hold this paper at arm's length and the three women at the top of the page look like three question marks.

AND THEY ARE THREE QUESTION MARKS.

They are the oldest question marks in the world, or at least in the world as long as men have lived on it, some two or three hundred thousand years.

From the beginning women have done the hard work, the dull work, the work that wears the brain, the body and the nerves, AND THE HORRIBLE WORK THAT HOLDS OUT NO FUTURE HOPE.

These question marks stand out on our so-called "civilization" of to-day.

You have the girl in her childhood bending over the machine. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to set her free?

You have the young woman bending over her child, in poverty, misery and anxiety. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to make your boasted civilization and prosperity free her from a life of sorrow, worry and want?

You have the older woman bending over the washtub, using up the last fragment of vitality and energy, painfully and slowly doing work which could be done quickly and easily by a machine—if it were "worth while" for men to use their intelligence and their machinery to free women from slavery.

How are you going to free these three slaves, straighten up their backs and answer the questions which they represent?

We have more than half a thousand solemn statesmen in Washington. And we have thousands in the Capitols of the States.

They are discussing laws and "economic questions," talking, advising, sometimes honestly urging, more often dishonestly selling their opinions.

When will they find time among other questions to take up the three questions at the top of this page?

Is it not almost time to make a BEGINNING?

And wouldn't the best beginning be the fixing OF A MINIMUM WAGE FOR WORKING GIRLS AND WOMEN?

That would be at least a start. It would stop or check the present profitable money making schemes of hiring and working girls and women for less than it costs to feed them properly.

It is true that you could not in this way free from misery the wives of underpaid workingmen, or the mothers, old and half worn out.

But you could at least BEGIN with the wages of women, making it a crime to force a woman by poverty and want to work for such wages as mean a life half starved.

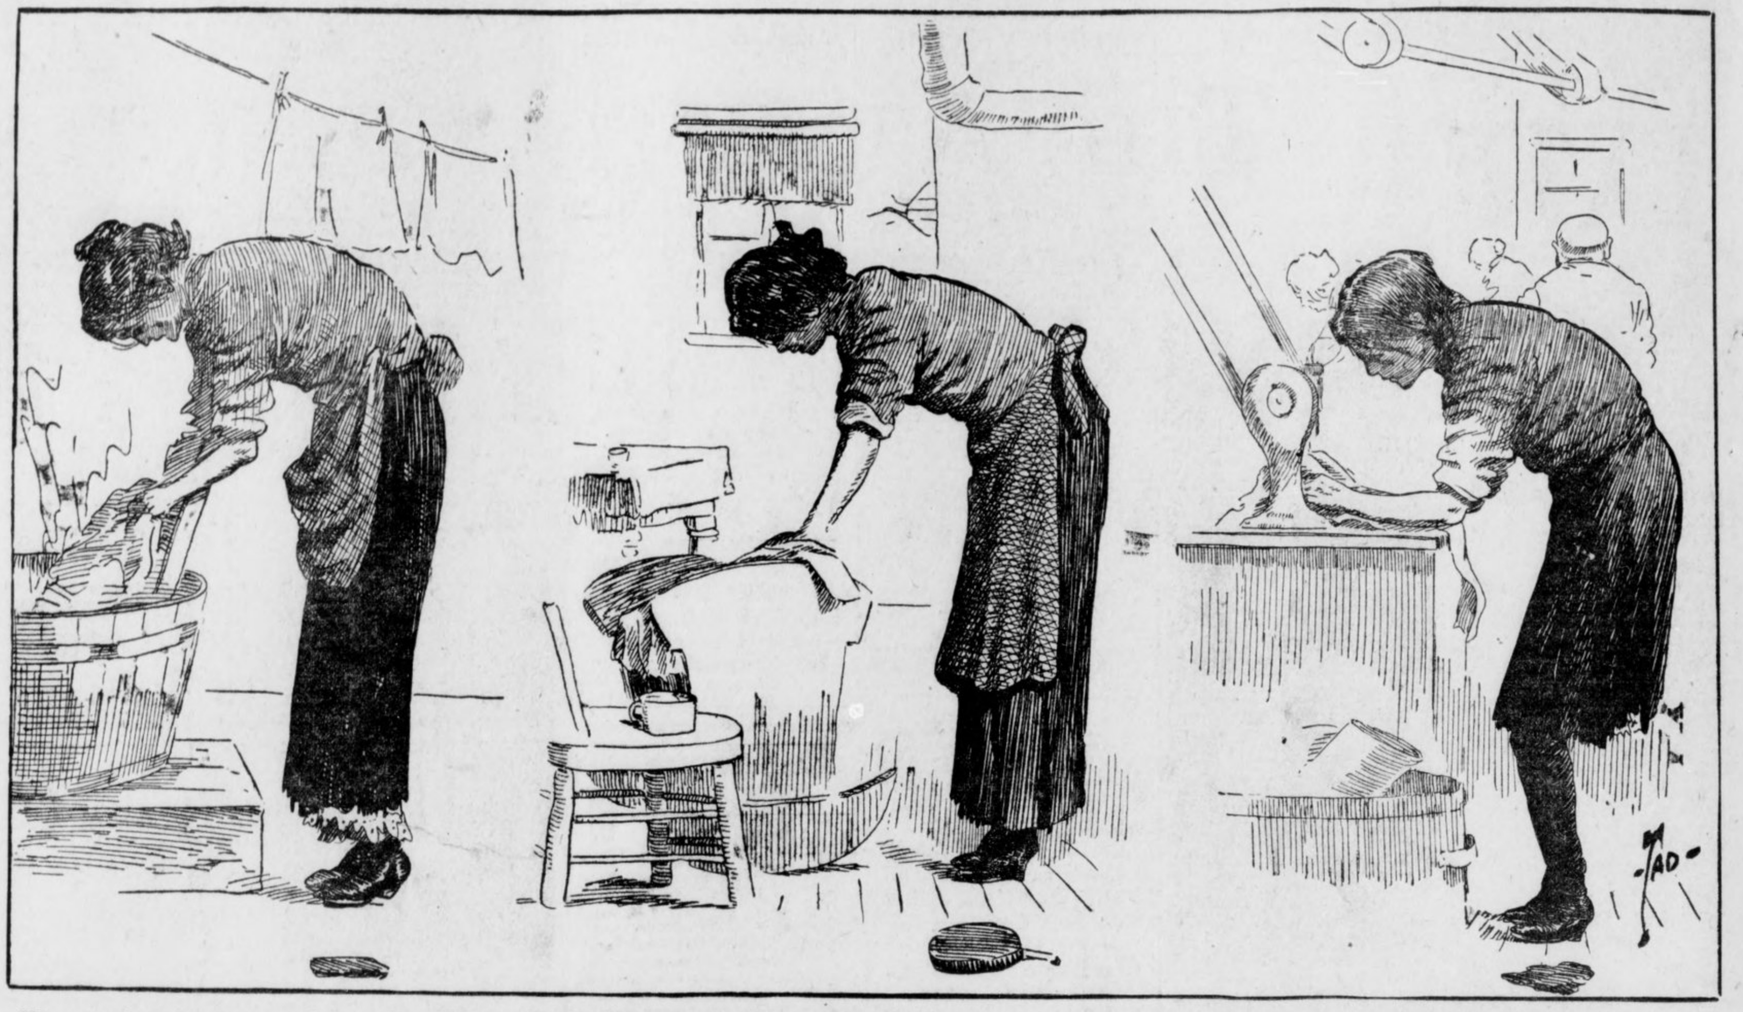
Who cares now for these miserable women?

What voice have they? They can't send a man to Congress, or take him from Congress.

They can't put a judge on the bench or take him off the bench.

How long must women wait for their rights? How long shall this picture continue? How long shall these human question marks bend over their tasks, neglected and forgotten?

Living Questions



Here are three human question marks. When will the "statesmen" of the nation find time to answer, or try to answer, the questions that these three bodies ask?

What Is Ideal Love in a Man?

The Highest Type of Lover Is at Once Friend, Mate, Defender and Comrade to the Woman He Loves.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

WHAT is the highest ideal of man's love for woman?

It is a more difficult question to answer than its companion—woman's ideal love for man—because woman is a more difficult being to satisfy in the matter of the affections than man.

Given an orderly home, a well-supplied table and a tactful, cheerful woman to reign, and the average man is content with his domestic relations. But emotional woman wants more than these conditions grant. She wants continuous praise, a frequently recurring touch of sentiment, and even a misunderstanding, now and then, followed by a reconciliation, is sweeter to her than a monotony of unexpressed satisfaction.

The Ideal Lover.

The ideal lover takes into consideration all these peculiarities of feminine temperament, and adapts himself to them in a reasonable degree.

Almost every woman, the most ardent and romantic as well as the phlegmatic, realizes at times the maternal element in her love for a man. It is this which aids her in being his patient nurse in hours of illness and his stimulus in times of despondency, and it is that lack of graver and more paternal element in man's love which detracts from its ideality so often.

When he does possess it man is liable to overdo the matter and to become the slave of his lady's hysterical moods and to encourage her weaknesses and her selfish whims.

The lover who is at once kind, sympathetic and masterful is seldom found, yet he alone illustrates the highest order of love.

The ideal lover is he who commands his wife's or sweetheart's respect and admiration, together with her love; who makes her realize that his standards of womanhood and of life are high, and that he expects her to do her part toward maintaining them, and who is capable of drawing a fine line between devotion and servility.

The ideal lover of either sex is not a slave or a coward.

The moment those elements enter into a love its standard is lowered.

I once heard a wife say that she would not live with a man who told her he thought another woman beautiful. She felt that his love for her should blind his eyes to the beauty of all others.

The man loved his wife, but while his lips were silent on the subject of others' charms, his furtive glances of admiration often bespoke the sentiments of his mind. That man's love was not ideal, since it lacked the courage to make his wife understand how she belittled herself in his eyes.

The ideal lover does not entertain his wife by expatiating on the charms of other women for hours, but he does express his respectful admiration on occasions.

It Lacked Courage.

He strives to bring out the very best and noblest qualities in the woman whom he has chosen for his life mate and to aid her developing into a perfect womanhood. He is her friend and her protector as well as her lover and admirer. He looks out for her best interests, but he never forgets that she has an individuality of her own which is to be respected and considered. She is his mate and his companion, not his chattel or his servant.

She is to be advised and guided, but not commanded or coerced.

The highest type of lover realizes that a woman has a spirit and a soul, as well as a body.

The man who hides a woman away and tries to keep her from all association with her kind and all pleasures not directly bestowed by him is not an ideal lover, however madly he adores her.

His love savors too much of that of the bear who carries the lamb to its cave to devour it at leisure.

Neither is that the highest type of love which encourages a woman's foolish ambitions and unworthy aims.

I have known a man to plume himself as a model husband because he gave his assistance to a silly wife—the mother of his children—who conceived an aspiration for a theatrical career. She possessed no atom of talent, and made herself only the object of ridicule and pity to all observers, while she left her husband—a good man, of ample means—and her children to the care of domestics.

Had the woman been a great genius, born to do some special work in life and no other, the husband's unselfishness would have been "ideal."

Highest Type of Lover.

A man must be a woman's truest friend in order to be also her ideal lover. He must possess appreciation of all her best qualities, sympathy for all her feminine weaknesses, the courage to warn her when her highest good demands it, and the wisdom to direct her when counsel is needed. He must be delicate enough never to make her feel her financial dependence upon him, and he must possess the will power and self-control to make his loyalty to her under all conditions that which he expects of her.

Yes, he must be strong enough to keep her from leading him into financial ruin, and lover enough to keep her responsive to his demonstrations of affection. Friend, defender, lover, comrade, mate—all these must be he who possesses "the highest type of love" for woman.

"The God-Blessed Macs"

Dr. White Says in the Storm the Presbyterians Are Oak and Rock, but in the Sunshine They Are Vine and Flower.

Written for The Georgian by REV. JOHN E. WHITE, pastor Second Baptist Church.

TWO good-natured witticisms at the expense of the Presbyterians by the late Sam Jones have just passed into oblivion beyond recall. He said that the only objection to be had against the Presbyterians was that there are so few of them, and that "The Presbyterians pay more for their religion and get less fun out of it than any people on earth."

The historic gathering of 1,500 commissioners in Atlanta, representing American Presbyterians, has abruptly made an end of the first complaint, and their lively proceedings in debate and the good cheer they have radiated on our streets and in our homes leaves no ground for the other.

The Presbyterians number nearly 5,000,000 in the world and constitute one-fifth of the evangelical force of Christianity. They have furnished their full share to the entertainment of history.

Definite Distinctions.

The English and Welsh names of Smith and Jones represent our largest American classification of surnames, but the folks whose names carry the handle of the "God-blessed Macs" belong to a class of quality incomparable in weight and achievement.

Next to the Jews the Macs have preserved through generations a distinctive character. They are not all Presbyterians, but there is a Presbyterian quality in them all.

Presbyterianism is only a denominational subdivision—a fragment broken off from Scotch granite; but the Presbyterian essence has gone with Scotchmen into every nook and corner of American character. Its leaven is pungent and penetrating, and if they could only monopolize it and secure a royal patent on all it permeates, the Presbyterians would lay claim to the most immense religious areas. But there is no monopoly in truth, and the Presbyterians are debtors also. Renan said "Jesus begat Paul, Paul begat Augustine, Augustine begat John Calvin, John Calvin begat John Knox."

It is with difficulty that Protestants are reminded that Augustine was Roman Catholic. Aside from theological heredity, the Presbyterians, taken as they are, constitute in the world an incalculable value to human character far beyond their numerical strength.

It is not generally known that the name Scotland was stolen from the little country now known as Ireland. Scotia, before the tenth century, was a territorial term, while Scotus was a race name and the generic term of Scoti embraced the people of that race, whether inhabiting Ireland or Britain.

After the tenth century the

REV. JOHN E. WHITE.

principal stronghold of the people designated Scoti included nine counties in the North of Ireland as well as the Western part of Scotland.

The Scotch-Irish, therefore, are not a mixture of Irish and Scotch blood, but are the pure Scotch who happened to be geographically identified with Northern Ireland. The main contribution to American life from the Scotch came from this region. They brought their quality with them, and it was a fighting quality.

The first Scotch-Irish clergyman to land in America, in 1682, landed in jail immediately, charged with the offense of preaching the Gospel at a private house.

The first great Scotch-Irish lawyer spoke a piece in Virginia about "Give me liberty or give me death." At Mecklenburg, North Carolina, the Scotch-Irish raised the first standard of defiance to Great Britain.

At Alamance, in North Carolina, ten years before, they had fought the first skirmish of the American Revolution.

When George Washington saw red-coats landing at every seaport he said that if the worst came to the worst he would gather the Scotch-Irishmen around him and make a fortress of liberty in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

At King's Mountain the Scotch-Irish, under three Presbyterian elders, flung victory into the teeth of despair and saved the cause of Independence.

The Presbyterians may not claim them all, but we all claim them.

Good Soldiers—Good Brothers.

We have had a large flavor of this life for ten days in Atlanta. All our under-estimates are revised.

We have seen the Presbyterians as many and we know them as much. We have marked them as good soldiers, and we have felt them as good brothers. We have witnessed them in their conflicts, and we have warmed toward them in our homes.

If in the storm they are oak and rock, in the sunshine they are vine and flower.

JUST YOU

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

ALL the selfish joys of earth,
I am getting through—
That which used to lure and lead
Now I pass and give no heed;
Only one thing seems of worth—
Just you.

Not for me the lonely height,
And the larger view;
Lowlier ways seem fair and wide,
While we wander side by side.
One thing makes the whole world bright—
Just you.

Not for distant goals I run,
No great aim pursue;
Most of earth's ambitions seem
Like a shadow of a dream
All the world to me means one—
Just you.

DR. JAMES W. LEE, FORMER ATLANTAN, VISITS MACON

Dr. James W. Lee, for many years pastor of Trinity and Park Street Methodist Churches in Atlanta, passed through the city Saturday on the way to Macon, where he will on Sunday preach the commencement sermon at Wesleyan Female College.

Dr. Lee's latest book, "Tre Religion of Science," has just gone into its third edition.

42 DEAD, 150 INJURED BY COLLAPSE OF PIER

LONG BEACH, CAL., May 24.—Five hundred persons were hurled to the beach this afternoon, 42 were killed and more than 150 injured, when the stage of the Municipal Auditorium, a part of the Municipal pier extending over the ocean, collapsed.

The accident occurred during the celebration of Empire Day, Queen Victoria's birthday. Fully 20,000 former subjects of the British Empire had assembled at Long Beach for the celebration.

The ceremonies were taking place on the pier and in the auditorium. Five hundred persons had been seated on the stage, when the structure gave way.

Piled Among Wreckage.

Those seated on the stage were piled in a mass of wreckage at the very edge of the ocean itself. First reports that reached the downtown sections here said that the crowds had bten hurled into the water. When the rescuers from the city reached the scene they found the injured huddled in a tangled mass, the spectators crowding about trying to render aid.

Work of removing the injured was at once begun. Every physician and nurse was sent to the scene and others from nearby cities summoned. A special train carrying physicians and nurses was rushed here from Los Angeles at the behest of Mayor Alexander there.

The injured were removed to the shelter of cafes along the beach. The dead were laid in rows on the sands. Forty-two bodies were removed from the debris. Many of the injured are so seriously hurt that they will die.

Fell More Than 40 Feet.

The auditorium occupied a second story of the pier structure. The platform, with its load of people, crashed to the floor below and carried it to the sands. The fall was more than 40 feet. Thousands were standing outside the auditorium when the crash came.

The exercises of the day had begun with a parade through the streets. It had just reached the pier, where the spectators had assembled, when the accident happened. When the doors of the auditorium were thrown open and the waiting throngs started in, the sudden weight of people was too much for the floor, and it gave way. A space 40 by 60 feet sank beneath the crowd.

Police and firemen were summoned from Long Beach and were the first to begin the work of rescue.

Late this afternoon it was reported that the death list might reach 50, and that more than 200 had been severely injured.

COLYAR HELD FOR FORGERY

A. S. Colyar, Jr., author of the alleged dictographing of Mayor Woodward and Colonel Thomas B. Felder, was placed under arrest Saturday afternoon at the request of Chief of Police Edward Connors of Knoxville, Tenn., on the charge of forgery.

The arrest came on a capias from the Criminal Court of Knoxville.

Upon receipt of the request from Connors, Police Chief Beavers ordered Colyar's arrest. Colyar was located at the corner of Forsyth and Marietta Streets by Detectives Chewning and Norris and taken to the police station. He was taken to Beavers' office and the charge placed against him. Colyar is now being held at the station awaiting further

CHAMPION OF WORLD IS KILLED IN RING

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 24.—One minute and forty-five seconds after Luther McCarty and Arthur Pelky met in the prize ring this afternoon, Pelky landed a right-hand punch squarely over the big cowboy's heart. Thirty minutes later the former heavyweight white champion of the world was dead.

For the first few seconds the fight was on even terms. The men went at it carefully, feeling each other out.

Pelky saw his chance. He threw all his force into a right-handed swing. It landed square. McCarty crumpled up. His arms fell limp to his sides, he reeled and fell backward.

The referee tolled out the count. McCarty was unconscious before ten was pronounced. His body heaved, then became rigid.

Physicians were hustled into the ring. They worked over the giant fighter, but as they worked his face took on a strange black tinge. Thirty minutes after the blow was struck the physicians summoned to the ringside pronounced the fighter dead.

An ambulance was hastily summoned. It clanged to the ring, three miles from the city proper. McCarty's condition from the beginning evidently was too serious to ever remove him from the resin covered canvas which where he lay.

The ring officials remained at the arena while the physicians worked. Most of the spectators sat quietly in their places watching quietly the efforts to resuscitate McCarty.

When it was finally officially announced that McCarty was dead, the crowd filed slowly out of the arena.

Weak Heart Blamed.

McCarty's death was said by physicians to have been due to a weak heart and the excitement superinduced by the fight fully as much as by the blow itself. An examination to determine whether the blow caused an internal hemorrhage was decided on.

McCarty and Pelky both seemed cool and confident when they entered the ring. They shook hands smilingly at the behest of Referee Ed W. Smith, then posed for photographs.

Pelky was sure of himself, apparently. He began using a left jab to the face. He landed three straight lefts on McCarty. McCarty tried rushing tactics. Pelky met him with a stiff left to the jaw and a right two inches below the heart.

The right landed with stinging effect. McCarty wavered and staggered, then flopped over on his back. The blow, though a hard one, was not delivered with the full power of the fighter, and Pelky stepped back, apparently ready to resume the fight.

He seemed surprised when his big adversary failed to rise as Referee Smith began the count.

Pelky Placed Under Arrest.

Before ten had been counted McCarty was evidently in a serious condition and his manager stepped to the ropes and shouted a summons for a doctor. Doctors in the audience at once responded and they began efforts to restore McCarty. Artificial respiration was resorted to, but it had no effect and strong stimulants were used to produce a reaction in the heart. McCarty was evidently failing rapidly and as the doctors worked it was evident that their hopes of reviving the big fellow were lessened.

After 25 minutes of effort the physicians suspended their work and whispered together. Then they made tests to determine whether the fighter was still alive. A brief announcement from the ring was made, stating that he was dead.

A policeman entered the ring and arrested Pelky, who had watched the

DICTOGRAPH CATCHES MAYOR IN NET

Sensational dictograph conversations, in which Mayor James G. Woodward, Charles C. Jones, former Tenderloin proprietor and present owner of the Rex saloon; E. O. Miles, a private detective; A. S. Colyar, accuser of Colonel T. B. Felder, and Chief Lanford's clerk, February, all figure, are made public by The Atlanta Georgian to-day.

The conversations, all reported by a dictograph installed in the Williams House, in the same room and by the same man who figured in the "trapping" of Felder, tend to throw new and startling light on the alleged plot to "get" Chief of Police James L. Beavers, who wiped out the Tenderloin, and Chief of Detectives Lanford.

As reported by George M. Gentry, who took down the conversation as it trickled over the thin spun wires through the door between Colyar's room, No. 31, and room No. 32, it is apparently made clear that the Mayor was not only after evidence of graft in the police department, but more directly after evidence on which Chief Beavers could be impeached and discharged. The Mayor has never hesitated to make plain that he was hot in sympathy with the chief's attitude.

The conversation in which the Mayor figured seems to show that he promised protection to the man who would get the evidence if he should get in trouble doing it, and that he gave assurances the work would be well paid for.

The Mayor was present at the conference with February, Colyar and Miles. The entire dictograph conversation in which he figured is given elsewhere.

Far more sensational is the conversation in which Jones, Miles and Colyar took part. Jones viciously attacked the police department, charging graft and crookedness; accused Marion Jackson, Men and Religion Forward Movement leader, of being the beneficiary of vice, and said he had been double-crossed in the wiping out of the Tenderloin.

Colonel Felder's name is mentioned time and again in the conversation of the three, and more than one reference is made to the alleged offer of $1,000 for evidence.

Here is the entire dictograph conversation in which Mayor James G. Woodward took a part as it was reported to the police. A copy is in the police files to-day.

A. S. Colyar, the man who engineered the entire sensation, of course, take a leading part. The conversation is first principally between him and Chief Lanford's clerk, February, and E. O. Miles, a private investigator, and a friend of Charles C. Jones, who comes later into the conversation.

Jones owned a number of houses in the restricted district closed up by Chief Beavers, which were conservatively estimated to have given him an income of $40,000 a year. He is the owner of the Rex saloon, and is by no means poverty stricken, despite the huge dent Chief Beavers' reform made in his roll.

Mayor James G. Woodward, who has never hesitated to let it be known that he was not in sympathy with the Chief's vice crusade, comes into the conversation later and is reported in full.

NEGRO SWEEPER OWNS WRITING NOTES FOUND BY DEAD GIRL'S BODY

It was announced Saturday noon that Leo M. Frank had been indicted by the Grand Jury for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The authorities are of the opinion that they have a very strong case against Frank and Lee, and sufficient evidence to convict Frank of the murder.

Rumors about the Grand Jury room were definite to the effect that evidence produced against Frank convinced the entire jury that the case against Frank was very strong.

Of course the proceedings of the Grand Jury are secret and no member of the Grand Jury nor any member of Solicitor Dorsey's staff would give the reporters information as to what had taken place in the Grand Jury room, or what evidence had been disclosed against Frank or Lee.

That the authorities have very important evidence that has not yet been disclosed to the public is certain. The Georgian has maintained this from the beginning of the investigation.

The jury adjourned until Friday without indicting Lee.

Several most peculiar features mark the affidavit of James Connally, and Solicitor Dorsey is chary about accepting its supposed admissions without a thorough investigation.

The fact that the negro sweeper places the date as the Friday before the murder that Frank asked him for specimens of his handwriting forms the first mystifying phase of the confession.

No theory that has placed the responsibility of the crime upon Frank has held that he planned it deliberately a day before it was committed. The unanimous theory of those who have believed Frank guilty is that he did it on the necessity of the moment to prevent the girl revealing the attack which is supposed to have preceded the killing.

The belief that the killing was planned as far ahead as Friday has entered no one's mind in respect to the circumstances of the mystery.

The negro also says in his affidavit that Frank muttered: "Why should I hang?" a very significant question if it could be regarded as likely to be made by a guilty person, but a question which appears entirely outside the realm of probabilities, in view of the careful watch Frank has kept on his tongue ever since the city was shocked by the news of the murder the morning of April 27.

The entire affidavit is exceedingly peculiar.

Connally's testimony came as a surprise. Few persons knew of the weighty evidence which was being carried before the Grand Jury when the negro sweeper was taken before that tribunal except the prosecution.

Connally was arrested on suspicion the morning following the murder. He had been confined in the Tower since that time.

Sent for Detective.

Until Saturday morning his testimony had been considered by practically everyone connected with the case as of small value.

Just before the Grand Jury opened Saturday morning, however, Connally sent for City Detective Black.

"Boss, I wrote those notes," said the negro in reference to the bits of note paper which were found in the basement of the factory and which had been practically the only clew the police had unearthed which would bear upon the personality of the murderer.

When the negro had finished his statement he was taken immediately to the court house. Samples of his handwriting had already been secured and these, it is said, compare favorably with those in the mysterious notes.

Negro's Affidavit.

Here is Connally's (or Conley's) affidavit:

State of Georgia, County of Fulton:

Personally appeared before the undersigned, a notary public in and for the above State and county, James Connally, who, being sworn on oath, says:

On Friday evening before the holiday, about four minutes to 1 o'clock, Mr. Frank come up the aisle and asked me to come to his office. That was the aisle on the fourth floor, where I was working, and when I went down to the office he asked me could I write and I told him yes I could write a little bit, and he give me a scratch pad and told me what to put on it, and told me to put on there, "Dear Mother, a long tall black negro did this by himself," and he told me to write it two or three times on there. I wrote it on a white scratch pad, single ruled. He went to his desk and pulled out another scratch pad, a brown looking scratch pad, and looked at my writing and wrote on that himself, but when I went to his office he asked me if I wanted a cigarette, and I told him yes, but they didn't allow any smoking in the factory, and he pulled out a box of cigarette that cost 15 cents a box, and in that box he had $2.50—two paper dollars and two quarters—and I taken one of the cigarettes and handed him the box back, and he told me that was all right I could keep the box, and I told him he had some money in the box, and he said that was all right I was welcome to that for I was a good working negro around there, and then he asked me where was Gordon Bailey (Snowball they call him), and I told him he was on the elevator, and he asked me if I knew the night watchman, and I told him no, sir, I didn't know him, and he asked me if I ever saw him in the basement, and I told him no, sir, I never did see him down here, but he could ask the fireman and maybe he could tell him more about that than I could, and then Mr. Frank was laughing and jollying and going on in the office, and I asked him not to take out any money for that watchman I owed, for I didn't have any to spare, and he told me he wouldn't, but he would see to me get "a some money a little bit later. He told me he had some wealthy people in Brooklyn, and then he held his head up and looked out of the corner of his eyes and said, "Why should I hang," and that's all I remember him saying to me. When I asked him not to take out any money for the watch he said you ought not to buy any watch, for that big fat wife of mine wants me to buy her an automobile but he wouldn't do it; I never did see his wife. On Tuesday morning, after the holiday on Saturday, before Mr. Frank got in jail, he come up the aisle where I was sweeping and held his head over to me and whispered to me to be a good boy, and that was all he said to me.

The Indictment.

Here is the indictment complete:

STATE OF GEORGIA,
FULTON COUNTY.

BILL OF INDICTMENT.

The Grand Jury selected, chosen and sworn by the County of Fulton, to wit: L. H. Beck, foreman, 26 East Sixth; A. D. Adair, Sr., 809 Peachtree; F. P. H. Akers, 29 Spruce; B. F. Bell, 228 North Jackson; J. C. Bell, 36 St. Charles; Sol Benjamin, 248 Whitehall; William E. Besser, 78 Bellwood; Albert Boylston, 81 East Third; C. M. Brown, 331 South Pryor; C. A. Cowles, 334 Peachtree; Walker Dunson, 231 Juniper; S. C. Glass, 79-B Spring; A. L. Guthman, 479 Washington; Charles Heinz, 504 West Peachtree; H. G. Hubbard, Bellwood; V. H. Kriegshaber, 66 Moreland; R. R. Nash, 201 Lucile; W. L. Percy, 112 Waverly Way; R. A. Redding, 799 West Peachtree; R. F. Sams, 140 Juniper; John D. Wing, 485 Peachtree.

In the name and behalf of the citizens of Georgia, I charge and accuse Leo M. Frank, of the County and State aforesaid, with the offense of murder, for that the said Leo M. Frank, in the County aforesaid, on the 26th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1913, with force and arms, did unlawfully and with malace aforethought, kill and murder one Mary Phagan by then and there choking her, the said Mary Phagan, with a cord placed around her neck, contrary to the laws of the State and the good order, peace and dignity thereof.

HUGH M. DORSEY,
Solicitor General.

J. M. STARNES, Prosecutor.

Fulton Superior Court, 1913.

Leo M. Frank was confronted in his cell by the startling confession of the negro sweeper, James Connally.

"What have you to say to this?" demanded a Georgian reporter.

Frank, as soon as he gained the import of what the negro had told, jumped back in his cell and refused to say a word. His hands moved nervously and his face twitched as though he were on the verge of a breakdown, but he absolutely declined to deny the truth of the negro's statement or to make any sort of comment upon it.

His only answer to the repeated questions that were shot at him was a negative shaking of the head, or the simple, "I have nothing to say."

Solicitor Dorsey let it be known following the adjournment of the Grand Jury Saturday noon that Newt Lee's release within a short time was not unlikely.

It is also understood that James Connally, on the strength of his admission that he wrote notes at the dictation of Frank, probably will be held as accessory before the fact.

Girl Tells Her Story.

Little Monteen Stover, the girl who went into the National Pencil Factory at 12:10 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was strangled, was one of the eight witnesses called before the Grand Jury Saturday forenoon.

The girl testified before the Coroner's Jury that she went to the factory at this time to draw her money and that she was unable to find Mr. Frank, although Frank had testified that he was in his office from the time that Mary Phagan left until Foreman Quinn is said to have called at about 12:20 o'clock.

M. B. Darley, foreman at the factory, was another of the witnesses. He was before the Grand Jury for about half an hour undergoing examination.

Another employee, E. F. Holloway, the day watchman and timekeeper, was called during the forenoon. Holloway was asked by the Coroner's Jury concerning Frank's attitude toward the girls in his employ.

Detective Is Questioned.

Harry Scott, Pinkerton detective, was questioned about 40 minutes and B. B. Haslett, city detective, was in the jury room about ten minutes.

H. L. Parry, stenographer, testified for about five minutes, presumably identifying the proceedings of the Coroner's Jury.

Miss Grace Hicks, the girl that identified the body of Mary Phagan the morning the body was found, was the first witness of the day. She was detained less than 10 minutes.

J. M. Gantt, who testified before the Coroner's Jury in regard to the excited manner of Frank the day of the murder, was one of the last witnesses of the forenoon.

V. H. Kriegshaber was excused from duty when the jury convened at 10 o'clock. George H. Gershon, who has been absent in New York, sat with the jury.

PLOT ON LIFE OF BEAVERS TOLD BY COLYAR

But He Fails to Produce Man to Prove Charge, as He Promised.

A. S. Colyar, Jr., failed entirely to produce the "mysterious man" whom he declared had been hired to "shoot to death" Chief of Police J. L. Beavers.

When Colyar gave the sensational information of the conspiracy to kill the police official he declared that he would bring to police headquarters the man who had been secured to commit the deed; that this person would make affidavit to bear out the plot charges, and would swear also that he had been promised immunity from punishment for his act.

Colyar asserted at the time of his charges that the man was at present in Atlanta and intended remaining here until he had killed Beavers. Colyar also declared that the person had intimated that he might also kill Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford. Colyar then stated that he knew of the person's whereabouts and would bring him before the police to prove the charges.

Disclosures of the amazing conspiracy came to light Saturday morning. Police officials have been quietly investigating it since the astounding information was given them.

This report created an intense sensation in police circles, and produced one of the greatest sensations of the Phagan mystery.

The name of this mysterious man has not been furnished detectives, but Colyar promised to take him Friday night to the office of Chief Lanford, in the police station, where the affidavit was to be made. Up to a late hour Saturday, however, neither he nor Colyer had put in an appearance.

According to the story told by Colyar, this man is not a resident of Atlanta, but has been here several days. He is an old friend of Colyar. He said this man would swear positively that the murder plot proposition was made to him shortly after his arrival here, and that he would give the name of the man who engineered the deal.

BEAVERS SAYS HE WILL SEEK INDICTMENTS

"Gang of Vice Promoters Have Been After Me," Declares Police Chief.

Chief of Police J. L. Beavers, in answering the turmoil of accusations of graft and frame-ups which have been cast at himself and Detective Chief Lanford, declared the whole to be the result of a plot of gangsters which has been working against him ever since he closed up the Tenderloin section of Atlanta.

"This whole proposition is a fight against me by a gang of vice promoters," declared Chief Beavers. "Tom Felder is the leader of it and C. C. Jones is his chief lieutenant.

"They have made repeated attempts to attack me. Only last Christmas I learned that they had offered $500 to a man if he would get me into a room with a woman of ill fame.

"Their action now is the result of the constant prodding I have been giving them. They have had to come out into the open and fight. This is going to be a fight to the finish, too. I am going to carry this matter before the Grand Jury. It is going to be a fight to the finish, even though I get killed in the meantime."

U. S. Will Reindict 3 for Cotton Corner

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Government has decided to seek the reindictment of Frank Hayne and William P. Brown, of New Orleans; Eugene Scales, of Texas, and Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, on the charge that they conspired to corner the cotton crop of 1909 to obtain a profit of $10,000,000.

The document contains flaws, it is understood, which the Government fears might stand in the way of conviction.

James A. Patten, of Chicago, pleaded guilty last February to the count of the indictment, and was fined $4,000.

'Hard Labor' Omitted, Banker Takes Appeal

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., May 24. Under plea that will win freedom for many Federal prisoners if he wins, Julius W Hopkins, former bank teller of Cleveland, Ohio, sentenced to seven years in the Federal Penitentiary here, for embezzling $115,000, will contend before the United States Court of Appeals at St. Paul next week that the sentence should have read at "hard labor," according to the law governing the sentencing of violations.

Rich Stockman Gets Bail; Victim Lives

MOULTRIE, GA., May 25.—Joe J. Battle, the wealthy live stock dealer who was remanded to jail without bail several days ago by Judge Thomas for shooting Walter P. Brown, has been released under $25,000 bond, after physicians testified that Brown was practically out of danger.

Miss Booth Catches, Then Converts Thief

LONDON, May 24.—Capt. Mary Booth, daughter of Gen. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, discovered a burglar in her bedroom at 2 o'clock this morning.

Instead of calling the police, she confronted her visitor and learning he was driven to crime by hunger, gave him a square meal and prayed with him. When he left he promised to turn over a new leaf.

M'GOORTY AND KLAUS CLASH IN BOUT SATURDAY

PITTSBURG, May 24.—Eddie McGoorty and Frank Klaus will go six rounds here to-night in the race for the middleweight championship. Both are to weigh 160 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Carnegie, Warlike, Ready to Fight Japs

NEW YORK, May 24.—Andrew Carnegie, one of the greatest living exponents of world peace, banged one fist into his other to-day and declared that, if war should come against Japan or any other country, he would shoulder a musket and go to the front. This statement was made just before the ironmaster sailed to-day for Europe.

"What are the Japanese thinking about?" asked Mr. Carnegie. "England is Japan's ally and yet England will not allow a Japanese to set foot in her territory. Yet they expect us to give them more than their own ally."

Feud Victim Dead; Slayers Surrender

MOULTRIE, GA., May 24.—J. M. Hornage, who was wounded in a feud battle near here Thursday by the Hart brothers, has a slight chance to recover, should no complications develop. Horace Hornage, his son, died yesterday from his wounds and was buried to-day.

The Hart brothers came to Moultrie and surrendered to the Sheriff. They have demanded an immediate commitment trial.

Georgians Boast Interurban Road

ANDERSON, S. C., May 24.—More than 100 representatives from Georgia cities were here last night to urge the Southern Power Company to build an interurban electric railway from Anderson to Athens to connect with proposed Atlanta lines. Hartwell, Elberton, Athens, Royston and other Georgia cities sent delegations, thirty-nine coming from Hartwell.

A rally was held and speeches urging the advantage of the proposed road were made.

A. S. COLYAR, who figures in the dictograph sensation. Records show he has been confined in two insane asylums and numerous prisons. His operations are alleged to extend from New York to Mexico. He is a member of a prominent Tennessee family.

His exploits with the dictograph have created a big sensation in the Phagan case.

Gibson Near Break As Trial Continues

NEW YORK, May 24.—Maurice Ton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer on trial here on the charge of drowning Rosa Menschnik Szabo in Greenwood Lake July 16 last to secure her estate, looked to be on the verge of collapse when led into court to-day.

He had refused to eat any breakfast.

The big part that Mrs. Gibson played in the defense of her husband becomes more and more apparent. Gibson has been very down-hearted since she was removed from his side at the beginning of the second trial yesterday.

There are more women spectators at the trial than men.

Senator's Daughter Weds Her Rescuer

NEW YORK, May 24.—A romance which had its inception in a thrilling rescue of the bride by the groom while bathing along the Jersey coast four years ago, came to a culmination to-day in the wedding of John Anthony Maher, a street railway official, to Miss Dolorita O'Gorman, eldest unmarried daughter of Senator James A. O'Gorman and Mrs. O'Gorman.

"The proper rental for a Cabinet member's home is $5,000 to $12,000 a year."—(Signed) Washington real estate men.

With the record standing thus the new officials of the nation go on looking for reasonably priced houses, and society and the rent agents go on being shocked.

Wilson Liberates 2 From Leavenworth

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., May 24. President Wilson's clemency in behalf of two men confined in the Federal Prison to-day resulted in a full pardon for James Moorehead, sentenced to life for murder, and release for Samuel J. Jumper, Paris, Texas, who has lost an arm in the prison laundry, and who was received in March, 1911, to serve five years for embezzlement of money order funds.

Rev. Dr. Patton's Son Has Turned Catholic

PRINCETON, May 24.—Paul Patton, son of the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, who recently resigned as president of Princeton Theological Seminary, entered the Roman Catholic Church a year ago.

It was suggested that the Rev. Dr. Patton's resignation had been due to his son's conversion, but this was denied by Mr. Patton.

GOODWIN TO WED AGAIN; HOPPER REMARRIED

Comedians Neck and Neck in Great American Sweepstakes. Five Wives Each.

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Nat Goodwin and DeWolf Hopper are now running neck and neck in the great American marriage sweepstakes.

A dispatch from New York states that DeWolf Hopper, comedian, has just been married for the fifth time, having been divorced April 21 by Nella Bergen, his fourth wife. His bride is said to be Miss Edna Curry, of the Gilbert & Sullivan Company.

Nathaniel Goodwin, Jr., mining magnate and comedian, will be married here to-day by Justice Summerfield to Miss Marjorie Parrott Moreland, an actress, of Baltimore. Announcement was made to this effect at a private dinner at Mr. Goodwin's Ocean Park home last night. It was said the wedding would be very quiet.

Miss Moreland is a divorcee, her first husband being Charles N. Doughty. Mr. Goodwin said he is the happiest man in the world.

"For Love" This Time.

Further he declared:

"This time I am marrying for love. Miss Moreland is the only woman I have known who has the capacity for home-making added to beauty and talent. I consider her the coming representative American actress. Everything I have is hers. What I am to-day she made me—to her I owe my life. Since my accident last year she has constantly cared for me and looked after my interests with the ability of a man."

It's High Honor, She Says.

Miss Moreland gave the following reasons why she will marry Mr. Goodwin:

"I consider it a high honor to marry Mr. Goodwin. He is one of the few men who can be ranked as being absolutely honest. He is generous to a fault and lives up to his ideals. Despite certain rumors heralded as reasons why women marry Mr. Goodwin, I am marrying him for none of these. I am marrying him because I consider him the most interesting man alive. He is very, very interesting. He is a financier, he is clever, he is an author and he is a great actor. But the big reason why I am marrying him is because I love him."

Mr. Goodwin's former wives were Miss Elizabeth Weatherby, Miss Nellie Baker Pease, Maxine Elliott and Edna Goodrich.

Hopper Refuses to Talk.

NEW YORK, May 2 .—Theatrical and intensive matrimonial circles heard with great interest to-day that DeWolf Hopper, the comedian, has been married for the fifth time. When asked about the report to-day, Mr. Hopper refused to talk, saying that he would not discuss his "personal affairs."

Lad, Playing With Pistol, Is Wounded

VALDOSTA, GA., May 24.—The 6-year-old son of S. N. Atkins, of Mineola, Lowndes County, was shot through the left shoulder and narrowly escaped death while playing with a pistol. Assisted by a companion of about the same age, the lad climbed to a shelf on which the weapon was kept.

The ball passed entirely through the boy's shoulder. He was brought to this city for medical attention.

Fear of Oysters to Be Effectually Allayed

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Oyster beds from Cape Cod to Texas are to be investigated by the Department of Agriculture.

When polluted beds have been located the department will bar their product from interstate commerce, and through publicity aid State and municipal authorities in preventing local sales.

ELBERFELD LANDS HUNT; FRANK IS AFTER ADAMS

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 24.—"Lefty" Hunt, the huge southpaw secured from the Victoria Club of the Northwestern League, reported to Manager Elberfeld last night.

It is rumored that Charlie Frank has a deal on for Catcher Jack Adams, at one time member of the Memphis Club.

DICTOGRAPH TALKS IN WHICH MAYOR FIGURED

The conversation took place on Wednesday afternoon in Colyar's room—the same room where Felder was trapped, and was taken down by George M. Gentry, a nephew of the president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company. Here is a copy of the record:

The following statements were overheard by me, by using a dictograph located in room 32 of the Williams House No. 2, 34-36 North Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga.; said dictograph being connected with room No. 31 of the said hotel, and I saw Mr. E. O. Miles, whom I am personally acquainted with; Mr. G. C. February, whom I have known for several years, and Mr. A. S. Colyar, with whom I have only been acquainted for a short time, enter room No. 31 of said hotel at about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 21, 1913.

On account of Mr. February having locked the door to room No. 32, I was delayed in getting in, after having witnessed the three parties above mentioned enter room No. 31 of said hotel. In the emergency, I used the key to my front door, which, with a little difficulty, opened the door. After closing the door and going to the instrument, I was unable to hear what was being said very distinctly on account of the windows of the said room being open. This necessitated another delay to close them, and after returning to my instrument I was able to hear the following. Several dashes indicate that the voice just at that point became inaudible:

Colyar—I can tell you some things. I am executive secretary (noise made sound indistinct).

Miles—Now, just wait a minute. I know (here noise made hearing indistinct). I have got several cases (sound indistinct).

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—I am satisfied you ought, but you know when they go into it they are going to put up a howl.

Colyar—(Conversation too low to catch.)

Miles—The Mayor will give us absolute assurance that he will protect us.

Colyar—Will you bring the Mayor up here—right now?

Miles—I think I can bring the Mayor up here right away. The evidence is in the (sound indistinct).

Colyar—You are not a Jew, are you?

Miles—No, I am not. I spell my name M-i-l-e-s.

Colyar—These sons of a gun down here can frame up anything on Decatur Street. I told Felder I would get the goods and go outside of the county and I would meet you and him at East Lake.

Miles—There is no occasion for your leaving town.

Colyar—But I mean afterwards. I am afraid to stay here.

February—If the Mayor and Felder will stay behind us like they said they would.

Colyar—I would like to have the Mayor's——

Miles—But right now he may be busy. Felder can get—— Mr. Felder is a good—— Now, it will take about ten minutes, in any case, but he may be busy. I will bring him if he can possibly get here.

(In a few minutes Miles returned.)

Miles—He was up to the City Hall. He will be over in a few minutes, he said.

Colyar—Where is your residence, Mr. Miles?

Miles—In Decatur. I used to live in Smyrna.

(Conversation here became inaudible for a short time on account of scraping of feet upon the floor, chairs, etc., which drowned the sounds through the instrument.)

Miles—If you will excuse me, I will take off my coat. It is very warm.

Colyar and February—Certainly.

Colyar—Step downstairs and get the pitcher and bring it up here full of ice water.

(Mr. February was evidently the one addressed, as some one went out and the conversation continued between Mr. Miles and Mr. Colyar.)

Miles—We will have that fixed. If we have got the goods on these detectives their sphere of work will be over. It will take three or four days——

Colyar—Well, what do you think of this Phagan murder?

Miles—I think it is the most damnable—— They telephoned Craig, The Constitution man to come and go with them.

Colyar—Do you believe Frank murdered that girl?

Miles—I never have believed it. It looks a great deal more like he did than it did before from the affidavits. Also there is going to be pretty strong evidence that the girl was not raped.

(Conversation became very indistinct for a few minutes.)

Miles—I think the whole thing was handled badly. In my mind I am satisfied. They had an extra on the street at 6:30. They should never have allowed all the persons they did on the premises. Just after the murder there were only a few scents and tracks, and the man who did the murder could have easily been tracked, as no one else had been there but the negro and his tracks could have been very easily eliminated.

Colyar—Yes; that is right. It looks to me like they would have known better.

Miles—They should have looked for foot prints and finger prints. Instead of that they had over 500 finger prints—— (Conversation interrupted by knock at door.)

A moment or so later Mayor Woodward entered the room.

Miles, Colyar and February (almost simultaneously)—Well, how are you Mr. Mayor.

(After the general conversation of all had subsided I was able to distinguish Mr. Miles' voice.)

Miles—I really don't know it well enough—this is the first conference I have had.

Colyar—Well, Tom Felder told me that the Mayor wanted some evidence on these fellows down here at the city hall, Decatur Street, and the station house, and here's a man that works down there. He got disgusted doing three men's work. He can get the evidence for you, but he wants no one to know it. There are some terrible framers down there.

Miles—He is afraid they will throw him in jail, after they find it out.

Woodward—How can they throw him in jail?

Colyar—They can get a charge against anybody and throw him in jail. You don't know them like some other people do.

Woodward—What is the nature of the evidence he can get?

Colyar—Well, if he was to get the evidence that Mr. Felder wants, it would do the work, which I understand is what you want.

Woodward—All I want to—(voice too low and indistinct).

Colyar—They would throw him out of his job and put him in jail.

Woodward—I don't see how they could do it.

Miles—I don't—unless there are no sane people in the city any more.

Colyar—Well, you know they said they were going to close up the red light—(voice too low.)

Woodward—Well, they have got nothing to fear.

Colyar—I went up to your office to see you, and I found it was harder work to get in your office than when I was a newspaper reporter.

Woodward—Well, my secretary came in and I told him to tell them I would see you just as soon as I possibly could.

Colyar—But he said you couldn't see me until to-morrow.

Woodward—The reason I said that was because he said you said you were in a hurry, and I said tell him to come back to-morrow. If you could have waited there a few minutes you would have had no trouble. You said you were in a hurry and had some business to attend to, but I could not tell the other people to get out of the office.

Colyar—There wasn't anybody else in the office.

Woodward—Well, the secretary or somebody was. Oh, I had to sign up a lot of checks that had to go in before the bank closed.

Colyar—I have always heard you were a plain old politician.

Woodward—It is just my natural way.

Colyar—Well, this is the man that can give the evidence down at headquarters that you want, but he is afraid to.

Woodward—There is nothing to be afraid of.

Colyar—You don't know what police persecution is. They can prove that black is white and water will run up stream, and they can get a jury that will——

Miles—I take this view of it. It will only be—with the police force to be—until they won't be in position to get anyone into trouble.

MAYOR JAMES G. WOODWARD, of Atlanta, who has been trapped by the dictograph in his hunt for police graft evidence. His conversation with others was taken in A. S. Colyar's room at the Williams House on the afternoon of May 21.

Colyar—They tell me they got a majority in the force.

Miles—No, sir; I don't—

Woodward—Dozier. I—

Colyar—How many votes will it take to remove him?

Woodward—A majority.

Colyar—How many are on the board?

Woodward—Twelve.

Colyar—You have a vote in case of a tie?

Woodward—I have a vote anyhow.

Miles—He is a member ex-officio.

Woodward—I vote all the time.

Miles—February wants to know if we can promise him protection. I think we can safely do it in a matter of right, like this.

Woodward—Yes.

Miles—He has the graft list and knows who's on the list, who is to be protected and who is not to be protected. It looks to me like we have the same thing down there that they had in New York, only on a smaller scale, because Atlanta is a smaller town.

Colyar—Did you tell Tom Felder that you authorized Felder that if he got the proof for you you would see that he got paid for it?

Woodward—I told Felder that on matters of this kind (voice here indistinct) and he has a good deal to say, and I told him that I am satisfied that certain parties would be willing to pay the money for him, and if he got the evidence that would convict those people it would be paid, and it will be. There is no question about that.

Colyar—He said he would give him a thousand dollars for the evidence.

Miles—Felder said to me that February said that was the price.

February—Felder said that he would pay it to us, but he would have to see the papers. He said he would give me one thousand dollars.

Miles—He didn't say that anybody had authorized him to do it. He just said he would get it up.

Woodward—I don't know whether he had reference (voice too low). As to whether he could raise the money or not; but if he did, he knows that I have not authorized him to do anything of that kind.

Miles—What would be the nature of those documents?

Colyar—It is an affidavit from two people—both signed it—acknowledging threats, etc., graft and general corruption. Like you said a while ago.

Miles—There is no trouble to show the graft?

February—(Reply inaudible).

Miles—(Voice too low at first) a place like the Walton Inn has never been closed.

February—I don't know just about that one.

Miles—Now, my information is that the woman who runs it is a sister-in-law of an official in the Police Department. A woman gave me that information and said that she was operating under protection, and there certainly is a half dozen hacks around there at 1 o'clock at night, automobiles, and couples going in and out.

Woodward—There will be no trouble about getting the money.

Miles—Yes, but * * * They might get the Council in their favor at some later date. * * * Of course, somebody would have to advance it now.

Woodward—Yes, I know it.

Miles—Isn't there another stenographer that works down there?

February—Yes; there is a man down there in Chief of Police's office. He works at night. He goes on about 4.

Miles—If they want anything after you go off, they get him to do it?

February—(Reply indistinct.)

Miles—You keep all the records of that department?

February—Yes; for Lanford.

(Traffic noise interfered with sound.)

Colyar—Only two men can get the evidence, February and Chief Lan-

Jones Attacks Beavers and Charges Police Crookedness

The following conversation occurred in room No. 31, at Williams House No. 2, 34-36 N. Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock, between C. C. Jones, E. O. Miles and A. S. Colyar:

Colyar—It has been very warm to-day, hasn't it?

Miles—Yes, it has. I asked Mr. Felder if you mentioned Mr. Jones' name to him and he said no.

Colyar—He told me Monday night that Mr. Jones was a friend of his and he thought it an outrage the way they had done him.

Miles—You know I asked you this afternoon why you wanted to see Mr. Jones.

Colyar—If you don't want to talk, that's all right.

Jones—In what way?

Colyar—Tom told me they did you pretty dirty down here at the station house.

Jones—Yes. They closed up the houses I had. I had a lot of property.

Colyar—He told me they framed up on you.

Jones—There is no doubt but what it was a frame-up.

Colyar—Tom told me he would like to see the gang out of business.

Jones—The record now is (voice very indistinct just then). They never grafted me. Wouldn't be any use for me to give them any money.

Miles—You told me you wanted to see Jones. It is not a question of lack of confidence, as what I told you was true as far as I know, but if he knows anything at all about it, I don't know just what it is.

Jones—I don't know anything. I just told them to go ahead and build them houses and move them across the street. Even some of them went and paid for them. Three or four days before they closed the houses, the Chief of the City of Atlanta —— —— —— that it would never do to close this district and I was surprised one morning by a telephone message from someone at No. 18, that the Chief had given five or six days notice to get out, I don't remember which, and I never even went to the trouble to go out to this man to ask him what he meant, as I could not figure it out to save my life what he meant. That is all that I know of. I found out what he was doing. I understand that Jackson was holding conversation with him anywhere from one to three times a day.

Colyar—Who is Jackson?

Jones—Jackson is the man that owns the biggest —— house in Atlanta now. ——— and the Chief was there and wanted to know what he had done about the license of the hotel, and the Chief ———. The people owe him $500 a month each. I understand he opened.

Colyar—Who is John Eagan?

Colyar—They certainly must have some kind of a pull.

Jones—They got something, I don't know what it is.

Colyar—What does Jackson do?

Jones—Jackson runs them religious bulletins. I know them to be the fact, for he owns this place and on one occasion after he told someone I made a remark to a man that was very close to him, I told him that he had better close his own mouth. TO BE EXACT, HE OWNS THE EMPIRE HOTEL. The man that was running the hotel had an engagement to introduce me to this man. John Dawson told me that he had just had the hotel for three or four months, and that he had cleaned the hotel out, and I looked at him and said, "Yest, you cleaned it out, no doubt of that, but run it different from what other people run it. The man went to one room and the woman to the other, with a door opening between it." So I will be frank with you, if I had anything that would convict Mr. Beavers I would tell it on the public streets. I think he is everything in the world but a man. I will be frank with you about that. If he takes my dollar and then goes to the other fellow and takes his dollar, he would tell me to go to hell, but, of course, I used to be a gambler; I run the Rex, and everybody knows it. I wouldn't trust Beavers as far as I could throw——

Colyar—I want to talk to you about——

Jones—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Colyar—Well, we can make it. I will show you something.

Jones—I don't think it is going to—— As far as my own knowledge is concerned, I have never been able to—well, I haven't tried to. Well, as I haven't slept much lately I think I will go. Well, I will see you to-morrow.

Miles—Well, I am much obliged to you for coming in.

Jones—I will try and ge there between 10 and 11. Will that suit you? I am glad to have met you. Good-night.

Colyar—Have you seen Felder since you saw me?

Miles—Yes.

Colyar—What did he say about going out of town?

Miles—He will go.

Colyar—Well, we will get the papers.

Miles—I told him that was reasonable.

Colyar—Then I will get the papers at 2:30 to-morrow. What time will you get in in the morning?

Miles—I will get in at 8:30 to-morrow, and I have an appointment.

Colyar—I think it is best to go out there.

Colyar—Call me up at 2401, Atlanta 'phone, at the hotel, at 1 o'clock. I won't have anything to do with the transfer of them in Fulton County. As long as he—

Miles—Yes, it makes a great deal more—. He can bull — a Morse out. I think he owes him most of it.

Colyar—What was his fee?

Miles—A hundred thousand dollars.

Colyar—How much did he get?

Miles—Oh! Absolutely—

Colyar—How long have you known Felder?

Miles—I have known him 25 years, personally.

Colyar—(Question incoherent).

Miles—Did you hear him commit himself?

Colyar—(Answer incoherent). Now listen here, this boy needs protection. Will you do all in your power to see that he gets protection? Will you promise not to use it any way as to jeopardize his position in any way?

Miles—* * * And I believe he would, because I have seen him tried. I have been through all his campaigns with him, and I have never known him to go back on his word. I can't convince my mind that the young man won't balk. He is liable to lose his nerve. He seems nervous and afraid.

Colyar—No, he won't balk; he is just timid.

Miles—In dealing with a rattlesnake I never think about (dictograph not clear) Do you?

Colyar—No.

Miles—I presume every man has his own code of honor, and mine is if the right is figured in the wrong that the right needn't hurt you. I don't mean to call him a rattlesnake as I don't know anything against him. But that respect I had in mind the general corruption in that department down there.

Colyar—He goes down there and gets the papers and brings them out there and they are the papers that you and Felder want and they would know that nobody could get them but Lanford, and him and Lanford would say that he didn't get them and they would know February got them and would fire him right away. Now, how is the Mayor going to puth im back?

Miles—If they are the documents of the nature he understands they are, there will be another Chief in his office. They would put him back for the very reason it would insure a straight administration of the next Chief.

Colyar—Will you call me in the morning at 10 o'clock?

Miles—I will call you at 10 o'clock.

Colyar—We will make Tom spend his money now.

Miles—Yes. You don't want to give the Mayor any list of these things.

Colyar—I thought you wanted the papers.

Miles—I don't want them.

Colyar—Tom does. He can tell about the papers whether they are what he wants.

Miles—We agree with the Mayor that we get this list.

Colyar—I am willing to copy it.

Colyar—Tom said that the papers—

Miles—Between you and Tom, we have nothing to do with it. If you are going to sell them to him, we will drop out of it. You say you will see the Mayor?

Colyar—I will see him to-morrow.

Miles—Good-night.

Colyar—Good-night.

FRAME-UP AIMED AT BURNS' MEN, SAYS TOBIE

Denouncing A. S. Colyar as an "eagle-beaked crook," W. C. Tobie, the Burns detective who is here making an investigation of the Phagan case, declared on Saturday that the charges of bribery and double-dealing brought against Felder were a frame-up concocted by the Pinkerton Detective Agency and the Atlanta Police Department, with these three ends in view:

To discredit the Burns Agency.

To drive the Burns Agency from the State of Georgia.

To discredit Colonel Felder because he employed Burns men.

Tobie charges also that Colyar was used as the "capper" in the frame-up. He declares that Colyar tried to induce him to be a party to a fake frame-up on the Police Department and the Pinkertons, and that Colyar invited him to attend the conference at the Williams House No. 2 between Colonel Felder, G. C. February and Colyar. He declares that Colyar told him he had affidavits that proved crookedness and graft in the Police Department and that he heard Colyar, on last Sunday, offer to sell the evidence to Colonel Felder for a stipulated sum. He declares also that Colyar said he wanted to get even with the police because they had arrested him once.

Tobie's Complete Statement.

Mr. Tobie's complete statement, in which he outlines the position of the Burns Agency in the squabble, follows:

"The charges against Colonel Felder are a frame-up betwen the Pinkerton Detective Agency, the Atlanta police department and Colyar to discredit the Burns agency and drive us out of Georgia, and to discredit Colonel Felder because he employed the Burns people to work on the Phagan case. In my mind there is no doubt that Colyar is in the employ of the Pinkertons and the police department. His actions when he tried to inveigle me into the deal proves it.

"I was in Colonel Felder's office last Sunday night when Colyar made his proposition to sell out the police department, and when he framed the conference in the Williams House. He told Colonel Felder and myself that he had affidavits that Beavers and Lanford were getting rich by protecting resorts, and that there was a world of near-beer graft in the police department. Felder agreed to attend the conference, but I didn't like the looks of things and refused to have anything to do with it. I advised Colonel Felder to keep away from Colyar.

Called at Tobie's Room.

"On Monday morning Colyar called on me in my room at the Piedmont Hotel. The eagle-beaked crook sleuthed in like a fly cop out of a story book, and was very mysterious. He saw to it that there were no exits open, that there was no likelihood of our being overheard, and then old eagle-beak began throwing out hints. He said he felt it his duty to warn me of the difficulties I would encounter, and the things I would have to overcome if I tried to work out the Phagan case. He said the police department was jealous and sore that the Burns men had begun work on the case. He declared that the Pinkertons were just as sore as the city police, and that both of them were framing on me and Colonel Felder.

"Old eagle-beak Colyar cursed the police department for everything he could think of. He called them more vile names than I have ever heard before in my life. He said he had been put in jail by the Atlanta police once, and that now was his chance to get even. He said he had affidavits that proved that Beavers and Lanford were grafters, and that the whole police force was rotten to the core. He wanted to read extracts from these affidavits, and I told him I didn't care what he had, and what is more I wouldn't believe he had anything worth while if he swore it on a stack of Bibles a mile high.

Asked to Attend Conference.

"He tried to inveigle me into a frameup against the police, and wanted me to dig into the doings of the police department. He asked me to attend the conference at the Williams House, when he said he would show a bunch of evidence that would prove everything he had claimed.

"I shut him off short and told him I wouldn't have anything to do with him, or with any other eagle-beaked crook like him. I told him to get out.

"I told Colyar that I didn't care a hang about the Atlanta police department, or about anything it does. I don't care whether Atlanta has a police department or not. I have no grudge, private or otherwise, to work off on the police department. If there is graft in the police department here, it is none of my business, and I don't care if they run a resort and a joint on every corner. I am here to work on the Phagan case, and I'll continue to work on it to the best of my ability so long as the necessary money is forthcoming. The Burns Agency is not a charitable institution and requires fees to handle a case. I am not in Atlanta to investigate the police department or anything else but the Phagan case.

Here for Phagan Case Only.

"If, when we are through with the Phagan case, anyone wants to hire the Burns agency to investigate the Police Department, we'll do it, and get whatever evidence there may be. But now I'm here for the Phagan mystery and nothing else, and haven't time to listen to the ravings of an eagle-beaked crook who is trying to play both ends against the middle."

Mr. Tobie declared also that he has never been discharged from the Pinkerton agency.

"Colyar lied like the crook he is when he said that," declared the Burns man. "I quit the Pinkerton agency to start an agency of my own with Captain Tellison. We handled the work for Burns, and when Burns opened a branch in Kansas City I was made manager."

BLEASE IRONIC IN COMMENTS ON FELDER TRAP

I do not see that it is necessary for me to give out any interview or to have anything to say. It is not inside of my State and I do not suppose anybody that knows Tom Felder would be surprised if he is guilty, or if this is a scheme worked up by him to get a little cheap notoriety and advertisement.

However, I presume that the members of the Atlanta Bar will immediately furnish certificates of character for their darling Tommy and show that he is above suspicion and a gentleman of the highest character, with an unblemished reputation as a man and attorney, and if a court of Georgia should order his arrest that his friends will forthwith call out the militia and have him released, as they know of his character and reputation and will not for a moment allow Tommy to be interfered with. I am satisfied that poor little misled Joe Brown has had his pardon clerk already fixing up a release for his innocent darling in case of any conviction.

And, as a matter of course, the gutter snipes who went over to Augusta from South Carolina will hurry to offer their services to go on sweet Tommy's bond, and also to appear in the courts, along with Seaboard Bill and his friend, J. F. Lyon, who have heretofore been his bosom friends in his defense—all save Chairman Carlisle, who, I suppose, will be too busy "moseying" to leave his own State just now.

Consequently all will be well. Birds of a feather flock together, and of course if the lead buzzard rings his bell the congregation will assemble.

Huerta Threatens to Assume Dictatorship

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—Provisional President Huerta has threatened to dissolve Congress and assume dictatorship over the legislative branch of the government unless the deputies opposed to the $100,000,000 foreign loan cease filibustering against it.

This clash between the executive and legislative branch of the government has been expected for some time.

If the opposition is successful and the loan is not secured, a crisis will follow.

Daniels 'Afraid' to Umpire Ball Game

WASHINGTON, May 24.—As soon as Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, announced that he was going to West Point to attend the Army-Navy baseball game on May 31, he was invited to be one of the two umpires.

"No, thank you; it's a bit too risky," declared Mr. Daniels. "I've gone up in aeroplanes and down to the bottom of the sea in a submarine, but I am not a brave enough man to attempt the job as arbitrator in a college baseball game. The job is too hazardous and too dangerous."

What Is in a Name? Gets Boy $2,000,000

SEATTLE, May 24.—Through the action of the Superior Court here, Henry Francis Shoemaker, aged five, regained his name, and his father, Henry W. Shoemaker, of Altoona, Pa., has promised that the boy shall inherit $2,000,000. The boy's mother, formerly Mr. Shoemaker's wife, gave the boy the name of Perry. Mr. Shoemaker wanted him to have the name given him before he and his wife separated.

ford. . . . They have got him doing three men's work. They make him do the work of the judge down there. * * *

Miles—Well, Mr. Woodward, suppose we leave!

Woodward—I would like to have some kind of an idea or statement of what * * * so as to know what * * *.

Miles—Yes; that is, something specific.

Woodward—I don't know what to do.

February—Well, I will have to go through these papers and see what I can get.

Woodward—Get anything that looks like graft. I don't care who it hits, and especially Beavers.

February—Well, I will have to go through these papers and see what I can get.

Woodward—We are going to get up the money to pay for it. They'll want to know what you have got and what you can prove. Then I can give him an answer. Are you a stenographer?

Woodward—What do they pay you?

February—One hundred dollars. I am clerk of the detective office, and I spend a great deal of my time in working for Judge Broyles, which makes one man working in two different departments.

Miles—Are you married?

February—Yes, sir.

Miles—(Excessive noise rendered conversation inaudible.)

Woodward—I won't do anything until it is substantiated.

Miles—Yes; just forget it. You know you have never broken your word yet.

Woodward—I heard they charged me with some meanness.

Miles—I think that is a great compliment.

Woodward—I heard they said something of that kind down there.

Miles—That would tickle me to death if some woman would say that to me.

Woodward—The woman, I understand, said she would not get on the stand and swear to it.

Colyar—Well, I understood that the woman said she did not know you.

(Noise interfered with sound over dictograph.)

Woodward—I have a lot of fellows to come up to me and say: "Is this Mayor Woodward? I have seen your picture—" . . . Oh, I don't know that it is true about me.

Miles—Personally (on account of Mr. Miles talking so low, was unable to understand him).

Woodward—Well, they have pretty good evidence on him.

Colyar—On who?

Woodward—Beavers.

Colyar—I know one of the vice commission leaders was put out of a hotel in Birmingham three years ago with a prominent man's wife. . .

Woodward—I tell you what to do. You get this stenographer up there and see what he can do. You needn't let me know about it; just tell Miles.

Colyar—How about Lanford?

Woodward—We want Beavers first, then Lanford.

Miles—I agree with you, it is best that after we go into this and raise the money to pay for it, we go out of the county, and it will be turned over to be examined, to see that they are the papers, and then the money is to be turned over. Now, this list you speak of. If February don't want it t o go out in his own handwriting, I will take it and copy it in my own handwriting. And if he gets into trouble we will protect him. Still, in a thing like this I don't mind getting in trouble for the right. If he gets in jail I will promise that he will get out. . . .

Woodward—We have got lawyers here that will get you out pretty quick. And I have the pardon power still.

Miles—And when they see you have got them they are going to be mighty quick to quiet down. . . . Now suppose we arrange for another meeting. You set the hour and I will meet you at any time and place.

February—Well, we would better call you up.

Miles—I am so busy that I am not in my office very much, and you may not catch me.

Colyar—Can you meet me at 8 o'clock to-night, here?

Miles—Yes; I can meet you here.

(At this juncture someone knocked on the door and told Mr. Colyar that he was wanted at the telephone. Mr. Colyar replied by saying he couldn't come as he was busy.)

February—Well, we will call you up.

Colyar—He is coming here at 8 o'clock to-night. * * * My number up here is Atlanta phone 2401.

Miles—Yes, I will call for you. Now, that is to-night?

Colyar—Yes.

Miles—I will be here at 8 o'clock. That is all right?

Woodward—I am satisfied that if we can establish * * * Do you understand this much, that we have got something (voice too low and indistinct to hear).

Miles—Yes; it has got to be positive.

Colyar—Want a match?

Miles—I got one. Well, good luck.

Woodward—(Voice too low to hear.)

Colyar—They will frame us on anybody that you report.

Woodward—(Talked very low and indistinct.)

Colyar—What protection have we got?

Woodward—Well, I don't think there will be any trouble at all. * * * We could get together and establish * * * There is something wrong. It is simply a * * * Now, Mr. February, you get a list of the papers you can furnish me against those men and give them to me or Miles, and then we will know how to talk with you. As it is, we don't know whether you can get anything or not.

Colyar—What do you think of the Phagan case?

Woodward—Phagan case? I think it has been mighty mussed up. The only thing I know on that subject is what I see in the papers, and they have very little in connection with it. (Balance inaudible.)

Colyar—Tom Felder talks too much.

Woodward—I think so, too. I don't know what he said on the outside, but he talked some to me, not a great deal; I didn't see him five minutes.

Woodward—I only had a very few words. * * * Well, I will see you again.

Colyar and February—Well, good-bye, Mayor.

MAYOR ATTACKS DICTOGRAPH RECORD

Declares Part of Conversation Said to Have Been Recorded Is False.

Mayor James G. Woodward, in commenting Saturday afternoon on the published dictograph record of the conversation said to have been held between E. O. Allen, A. S. Colyar, G. C. February and himself in the Williams House on Wednesday afternoon, declared that it was a "frame-up of a dirty gang."

Mayor Woodward admitted having conversation with the men above mentioned, however, but declared that only half of the conversation which has been attributed to him is true. The rest, the Chief Executive asserts, was injected into the records and is false. The men who have sworn to the statement have perjured themselves, the Mayor declares.

"I did not offer them any money, but I will say now that I will subscribe to a fund that might unearth any graft in any city department. But I haven't got any $1,000 to give.

Denies Phagan Connection.

"Another thing I want to make clear is that my dealing with those men had nothing whatever to do with the Phagan case. They told me they had evidence of the corruption of Beavers and Lanford. I wanted to see what they had.

"I don't suppose anyone takes seriously the statement that Colonel Felder controls me. It is just as absurd to believe that he controls Solicitor Dorsey or the Governor."

"G. C. February, secretary to Detective Chief Newport Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, that long-haired mysterious investigator, talked to me about evidence they had proving that Chief of Police Beavers and Chief Lanford were protecting disorderly houses and blind tigers. They talked of protecting February's job and the need of $1,000 to pull off the affair.

Told Them to Get Proof.

"My reply was if February could show up any crooks in the police department I did not think the people of Atlanta would stand for him losing his job. I told them to produce the evidence. If it was worth anything I told them I did not think there would be any trouble about a just reward, but that I did not have any $1,000 to give them.

"The Phagan case was not mentioned.

Charles C. Jones, owner of some of the closed "houses in our midst," also said he was persuaded to visit the mysterious room of Colyar, No. 31.

"When he spoke about money to show up Beavers, and I told him I was not interested, the interview ended," said Jones.

Mayor Woodward said the first he knew of Colyar was one day last week. Colyar called at the City Hall and told the Mayor's secretary, Frank Hammond, he had some important evidence to submit to the Mayor. When he was delayed in getting into the office, he grew impatient and declared that it was more trouble to see the Mayor of Atlanta than the President of the United States.

Felder Tells of Evidence.

"Monday," said Mayor Woodward, "Colonel Felder came to my office. He told me that in working on the Phagan case he had unearthed some startling evidence of corruption in the police department.

"'Give me the evidence,' I said to him, 'and I will see that it is given proper attention and investigation.'

"He explained that it would take funds to employ a detective to get the evidence together, as the man he had employed was confined to the Phagan case.

"My reply was that if the evidence was sufficient to convict, I did not think there would be the least trouble about getting the money. His reply was that it was in documentary form.

"Just as he was about to leave, Charlie Jones came in. As I remember, Colonel Felder left immediately. Jones had been up to the meeting of Council Monday afternoon. I understood, and dropped by just for a minute."

Mayor's Next Experience.

Mayor Woodward said his next experience with the alleged plotters et al, was on Wednesday afternoon when February and E. O. Miles, a private detective, came to his office in the Empire Building.

"It was a little after 3 o'clock," said the Mayor. "They told me they could show up Beavers and Lanford with unquestionable proof. I was reluctant to go, but they insisted, so I told them

Felder Charges Police Plot to Shield Slayer

Colonel Thomas B. Felder entered into an explicit and detailed denial to The Georgian of all the charges of attempted bribery contained in the affidavits signed by C. C. Febuary, secretary to Chief of Detectives Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, a private detective with a spectacular career.

Colonel Felder declared the alleged dictograph record of conversation he is alleged to have had with Colyar and Febuary in Williams House No. 2 a "frame-up" and a fabrication.

The report that he had offered $1,000 for the Coleman affidavit in the Phagan case and affidavits said to indicate graft in the Police Department he branded as absolutely false.

The whole plot had been concocted he said, to discredit himself and W. J. Burns and drive them from the Phagan case so the guilty person might be protected.

"Every move made by the police in the Phagan case has been for the protection of the real criminal," said Colonel Felder. "The police have kept an innocent negro there in a cell for three weeks in the hope that they can crush a confession out of him and let the real culprit go free.

"Guilty Person Protected."

"If the desire were not to protect the guilty person, why should they desire to eliminate Burns and myself? Burns has a reputation for landing every criminal he goes after. He has a reputation for being absolutely merciless in the manner he hunts down his man. It is as certain as anything can be in the detection of criminals that he will be successful, once he gets started on a case. He is known to be unpurchasable. Everybody knows that he could have accepted a million dollars at any time during the chase for the McNamara brothers if he had been willing to say that he had not been able to find the dynamiters.

"As for myself, my professional reputation, at least, is that if I have not done a case in which I was interested any good, I certainly have not done it any harm.

"So, I repeat, what other motive could they have in trying to drive Mr. Burns and myself from the Phagan case except to protect the real culprit?

"That so-called dictograph conversation was a frame-up and a fabrication from start to finish. In a longer statement that I am preparing, I will show this conclusively. I will demonstrate it by the very conversation that is alleged to have been reproduced in the other room by the dictograph. I will show that things were written that never would have been said by persons in conversation.

"I will show its absolute absurdity with such clearness that no room will be left for doubt. It will be so plain that he who runs may read. It won't require any detective to show that it is a frame-up, and one of the clumsiest and crudest that ever was attempted.

"That Coleman affidavit, in which the mother and stepfather of the murdered Mary Phagan are made to say that they never hired me or approved of me as an attorney to prosecute the Phagan slayer, was extorted, in my opinion. As a matter of fact, I never said I was employed by the Colemans. I announced that I had been engaged by residents of Bellwood who were friends of the bereaved family. It is true, however, that Mr. Coleman approved of my selection. I never offered $1,000 for the possession of this affidavit.

"Neither is it true that I went to Mayor Woodward and told him that there was lots of graft in the city, but that it would take a good deal of money to uncover it. I had only a brief conversation with the Mayor, and I told him at the time that I did not wish to undertake anything or become interested in anything that would take my time from the prosecution of the Phagan case. It was not understood that I was to probe into the city's graft conditions.

Will Expose Colyar.

"Along with my detailed statement to-morrow I shall make public some of the startling incidents in the career of this man Colyar. I have known his history for years. What I have to say about him—and practically every statement I make will be supported by affidavits—will cause a grave doubt as to his credibility.

"I am acquainted with his movements when he went into Mexico. I know of the humiliation he was to his father, who was a well-known public man. I will tell of these things when I make my formal statement to-morrow.

"Colyar came to me and said that he had evidence of graft in the Police and Detective Departments. He said he knew that hush money was being paid the police authorities by the proprietors of disorderly houses.

"I said to him: 'Don't you know, Colyar, that nobody would believe a word you had to say? If you've got any papers that you think are worth anything, you can bring them to me and I'll look them over.' It is from these conversations that we had in my office that he has framed up this so-called dictograph conversation, adding the conversation that gives it the appearance of an attempt to bribe.

Burns Fought, He Says.

"It is nothing but a plot to get me out of the Phagan case, but I am certain of one thing, and that is that Burns and Foble, if they are not circumvented by this gang, will have the guilt fixed upon the right person within a very short time after Burns arrives here. They will have to work against difficulties, for as soon as it became known that Burns was going to enter the case all of the witnesses were instructed not to talk to any of the Burns operatives, although they had been allowed to talk to the Pinkertons, hired by the National Pencil Company, without reserve."

Colonel Felder is bitter in his attitude toward Colyar and the people he represents, and declares that he will have them "shown up" within another 24 hours.

He was so harassed by the constant ringing of the telephone Friday night that, with Mrs. Felder, he left home shortly after 7 o'clock with the intention, he said, of hiding himself somewhere up town. He found a group of his friends at one of the clubs and he stayed there until shortly after 10 o'clock when he met Mrs. Felder, who had been witnessing a rehearsal at the Grand Theater.

"If they're framing up on you, I want to tell you you've got my sympathy," said one of his friends, heartily.

"Thank you, old man," returned the Colonel, "but I don't need any sympathy. I'll have these fellows on the run so quick it'll make their heads swim!"

COLYAR CALLED CONVICT AND INSANE

Records Show He Has Been Confined in Numerous Prisons and Twice in Asylum.

Who is A. S. Colyar?

The records show that Colyar was once confined in the Middle Tennessee Insane Asylum, and that more recently he was sent to Lyons View, the East Tennessee Asylum. Information from Nashville is that he served time in prisons all over the State, as well as in Sing Sing, New York, and a jail in Virginia. Telegrams from Chattanooga paint him as a wild adventurer who spends considerable time in prison and is always in trouble.

In Prison Many Times.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 24.—A. S. Colyar is a son of the late A. S. Colyar, of this city, one of the most brilliant lawyers and statesmen Tennessee ever produced. When not violently insane his mind works brilliantly, but always to the wrong end. He has been in prison time after time, but always evaded long sentences through influence of his father's friends.

Young Colyar's most noted exploit, as it is understood here, consisted in connection with the famous Mollineux murder case in New York. He went from Nashville to New York, saw General Mollineux and offered to have his son acquitted for $20,000.

"Your son is innocent," Colyar is reported to have said. "One of my clients, now in the Tennessee penitentiary, is guilty. He confessed to me. For $20,000 I can get him out of the penitentiary, bring him here, induce him to confess and save your son's life."

Next day, so the story here runs, General Mollineux advanced him half the money. Colyar went back to Nashville, engaged a well-known pickpocket as a confederate, took him to New York with half a dozen guards and claimed the rest of the $20,000. The ruse might have worked, except for the fact that an assistant district attorney secured information about Colyar and blocked his plans.

Leaving New York, he started for Tennessee, only to stop off in Virginia, get in more trouble and serve more time. Then he went to Athens, Ga., and lived on the fat of the land while posing as a Baptist ministerial candidate. At least, this is the story told here.

In Mexico Once.

In Mexico City Colyar posed as a son of John G. Carlisle, was the guest of honor at a dinner attended by the President, and secured an advance of $10,000 from the American Ambassador.

Returning to Tennessee, he went to McMinnville and stole a mule. Through interposition of friends he was sent to an insane asylum. He set fire to the institution and rode into Nashville to notify the fire department. Several persons were incinerated in this fire.

In Financial Trouble.

For the past ten years A. S. Colyar has been out of one serious trouble into another, until his father's friends have despaired of him.

His last trouble in Tennessee was in the town of Lafollette, a wealthy mining center in East Tennessee. He then became involved in serious financial difficulties which promised a prison sentence. Nashville people who revered the name out of memory of an honored sire saved him by convincing a judge that young Colyar was unbalanced, and he was sent to Lyons View, Knoxville, the East Tennessee asylum for the insane.

Merchants' Parade Wednesday Greets Half Holiday Here

Plans for a monster parade of Atlanta jobbers, commission merchants, meat packers, retail grocers and market men will be concluded at a meeting of business men in Taft Hall Tuesday evening.

The parade, to be held Wednesday, will inaugurate the commencement of the half holiday for retail merchants through June, July and August. The procession will be more than two miles long and will be one of the most pretentious pageants ever seen in Atlanta.

At Tuesday evening's meeting R. A. Broyles, E. L. Adams, W. O. Stamps, John M. McCullough and Harry L. Schlesinger will speak.

Jacob Schiff Sees Prosperity Ahead

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 24.—Jacob Schiff declares that Americans can look forward to a good sound money market in the near future, after Congress has disposed of the tariff bill. He said:

"I have made a very careful study of European money markets while abroad, and I think money is on a more solid basis than ever. With the settlement of Balkan affairs, I find markets stronger and better than ever.

"We have a good, sound market which will improve surprisingly within the next few months."

Caruso Nervous as He Sings to His Son

LONDON, May 24.—Caruso was nervous when he appeared in "Pagliacci" at Covent Garden last night, for in the audience there was a critic whom he especially desired to please and he did not know whether or not he would succeed.

"I really was singing to an audience of one," the tenor said, "and that is the most difficult of all audiences. I knew there was sitting in one of the boxes a critic whom I did not dare to disappoint, a critic who was listening to me for the first time, my little son."

'Church Needs Better Preachers'

Good Ones Scarce, Says Stelzle

Difficult Task for Seminaries

Job of Supplying Ministers for Congregations Hardest of All—Each Wants Best.

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

The Presbyterian Church needs 1,000 additional ministers to man its churches, according to the report of the committee on Christian life and work, which reported at the Northern Assembly Friday.

Among the many topics discussed at the Assembly meetings, few are of more importance than that of securing ministers—not more ministers necessarily, but better ministers, for the demand to-day is for the highest type of leadership in the church.

There never was a time in the history of the church when the chances for making good as a preacher were so great as it is to-day. The church is being asked to take the lead in the important social problems of the day, as well as the religious questions of the period. For a real man's man, here's the job of the twentieth century.

Many Men Needed.

But while better men are needed we can't get away from the proposition that we need a good many of them. This is the problem which faces the church.

Dr. W. H. Houston, of Columbus, secretary of the committee on vacancy and supply, which has charge of finding preachers for vacant churches, gave a stirring address. He made the startling statement that there are 3,000 ordained ministers in the Presbyterian Church who are not pastors—that is, they are not in charge of churches. To be sure, many of these men are engaged in other forms of religious work, but the great mass of them are either without churches, but looking for positions as pastors, or else they are engaged in business.

How to tie up these men—at least, some of them, is the task confronting Dr. Houston's committee. The Assembly voted to give the committee "half a cent a member" to make the experiment of finding churches for the unemployed ministers and ministers for vacant churches. This means that Dr. Houston will have about $7,000 to spend this year for the purpose in question, as there are nearly 1,400,000 members in the church.

Half a cent a member per year may seem like a mighty small contribution for this purpose, but Dr. Houston believes he can make the demonstration with this amount.

Here's good luck to him.

For if he succeeds, he will render a great service not only for the Presbyterians, but for all other non-Episcopal churches which must depend upon the wisdom of their sessions and other boards or committees to find ministers.

In the churches governed by bishops these officials simply say to an unemployed minister: "You go to that church," and he goes. And to that church they say, "Here's your preacher," and he stays just as long as the bishop says so. Now the democracy of the Presbyterian Church is a fine thing. It gives each church the right to "call" just the preacher it wishes. But the system also holds some very serious disadvantages. However, men have always paid dearly for the benefits of democracy, and if they want it, they must pay the price.

Work for Seminaries.

Dr. A. H. Barr, of Baltimore, reported on theological seminaries. To many people here's the crux of the entire situation: If the seminaries can make good in training men and training them in the right way, so as to give their students the right kind of an outlook upon their tasks, it will help immensely.

Dr. Barr said it was quite a popular thing to criticise theological seminaries for their alleged shortcomings. That's easy. Few men can give us a program and a curriculum which will not only develop men of superior type—this they can do without much difficulty—but to take the ordinary man who comes to the seminary to become a preacher and really make a great preacher of him—there's the rub.

Usually, the $1,000 church wants a $10,000 preacher; so the job of supplying preachers is difficult at best. Dr. Barr reported that the enrollment in the junior classes in all Presbyterian theological seminaries this year is 20 less than it was a year ago, although there are 60 more men in the senior classes than there were last year. This proves that either students are holding on better in the upper classes or else some men are coming back to the seminaries and finishing their courses. No doubt, the seminaries are improving their curriculums. This will help in inducing more men to take the course.

Pay for Students.

Dr. William McKibbin offered a resolution that the Board of Education pay ordained ministers who wish to return to the seminary for additional work the same amount of money that is paid the regular student for the Gospel ministry. Dr. McKibbin is himself the president of a theological seminary—Lane, of Cincinnati—and he knows something of the difficulties in the way of securing men and training them.

The discussion of the day with reference to the entire subject revealed a decided interest in the matter, many of the commissioners speaking to it.

First of Seaboard's Steel Diners Here

The first of six new steel dining cars purchased by the Seaboard Air Line Railway arrived in Atlanta this afternoon and was met at the Union Depot by Assistant General Passenger Agent Fred Geissler and Robert F. Maddox, one of the directors of the road.

The new cars, which are 72 feet long and seat 36 people, are equipped with the latest devices. Suction fans prevent all odors from the kitchen entering the cars.

"The cars will be run from New York and Washington to Birmingham and Florida. They cost $50,000 each and others will be put in service as soon as the Pullman Company can finish them.

Roosevelt in Person To Push Libel Suit

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 24.—Arrangements were completed to-day by attorneys for the trial Monday of the libel suit for $10,000 brought by Theodore Roosevelt against George A. Newett, editor of Iron Ore, a weekly paper of Ishpeming, Mich.

Roosevelt is expected to arrive here Monday.

The defense of Editor Newett will be that he was criticising, in an editorial, a public man who was running for office. Many prominent men from all over the country will testify for Roosevelt.

Time Clock Accuses Man It Once Saved

CHICAGO, May 24.—The time clock in the Cook County jail, which saved James Dugan, a guard, from being prosecuted on the charge of complicity in the murder of his father-in-law on December 18, 1912, will be used in an effort to prove a charge of robbery against Dugan.

According to the clock record, Dugan did not punch the time clock on the night a number of freight cars were robbed. A man under arrest, who confessed his part in the robbery, said Dugan was one of the thieves.

Suffragists Called "Slaves to Clothes"

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Representative Stanley E. Bowdle, of Ohio, who succeeded Nicholas Longworth, aroused the ire of Washington suffragists by declaring that the suffragettes would do well to emancipate themselves from the slavery of clothes.

He also suggested that they stop the slaughter of rare and beautiful birds for the adornment of womankind, take better care of their servants and abolish the deadly hook and eye.

Dollar Diplomacy Called Necessity

CHICAGO, May 24.—"Dollar diplomacy" has become a necessity because the use of diplomacy has come to be more and more used to safeguard and advise traders who are pushing commerce into new quarters. This was the statement of William J. Calhoun, former Minister to China.

"Why should the United States spend $350,000,000 on the Panama Canal if it is the policy to 'sit on the bank and watch other nations' ships sail across the Pacific to trade expansion?" was his criticism of the Government's foreign trade policy.

Nun and Rich Sister Meet After 19 Years

MOBILE, ALA., May 24.—Mrs. Thomas P. Conroy, a wealthy woman of Boston, and her sister, who is Sister Mary Vincent, a nun stationed at Providence Infirmary, have just met here for the first time in 19 years.

Marshall Rebuked by Bacon for Reed Rule

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Bacon sharply rebuked Vice President Marshall in executive session of the Senate for attempting to use the famous Reed rules by counting Senators to make the quorum not voting.

Senator Bacon declared the only way such a rule should ever be enforced would be through changed rules.

M'LOUGHLIN FEARS INVADERS.

NEW YORK, May 24.—M. E. McLoughlin, national lawn tennis champion, arrived here yesterday and immediately began practice on the West Side courts, preparatory to the Davis Cup matches against the Australians. He said the Australian team is very formidable.

MILES SAYS HE HAD MAYOR GO TO ROOM

Wanted Woodward to See Just What Sort of a Crook Colyar Was, He Declares.

Edward O. Miles, a private detective, assumes the responsibility for the presence of Mayor Woodward at the Williams House, resulting in the dictographing of the Chief Executive of Atlanta. He also says it was at his suggestion Colonel Thomas B. Felder discontinued even his acquaintance with A. S. Colyar, the wild-eyed investigator from Tennessee.

Miles' statement to a Georgian reporter follows:

"Colonel Felder had already been to see Colyar and he asked me to go and see what he had; to examine any papers, etc.

"I went, and as soon as I saw Colyar I was disgusted. The Lord doesn't make mistakes, and the Lord certainly put the brand of a crook on that fellow's physiognomy if He ever put it anywhere.

"Colyar wanted Mayor Woodward and asked me to get him. I went to the Mayor and said: 'I want to take you down to see the greatest freak and crook you ever saw in your life. I want you to hear his line of bunk. You don't have to say anything—just come along and listen to what he hands out.'

Thought Someone Listened.

"That was Wednesday afternoon. I didn't think anything about a dictograph, but I knew, or at least thought, that he had somebody listening in the next room. I couldn't help knowing that, because every now and then Colyar raised his voice so they could hear. Anybody on the streets a block could have heard him had they listened.

"After the conversation, practically as reported in the dictograph, Mayor Woodward left.

"Colyar told me not to forget to bring Colonel Felder and the money next morning at 10 o'clock. I asked him what money, and he said the $1,000 for the papers. I told him I didn't want to buy any papers; that if Colonel Felder or anybody else did, that was their business, but I didn't believe they did.

"Then I went back and reported to Colonel Felder and advised him to have nothing more to do with Colyar; not to go back to the Williams House and even not answer his telephone calls.

Felder Quit Negotiations.

"They waited all day Thursday, and Colonel Felder didn't go back and didn't answer the telephone calls. That's why it was published in incompleted form. They saw the jig was up, and I believe Colyar then sold the story.

"I know young Gentry, who took down the dictograph report, and I'll wager $100 he won't sign an affidavit it has been published in unexpurgated form. Nothing has been added, but some things have been left out. However, I can't say that the omissions made any material change.

"Yes, I am the one that caused Mayor Woodward to go there. He is all right. I just wanted him to hear the line of bunk that crook had to hand out.

MIKADO'S FEVER FALLS, THEN GOES UP

Emperor Yoshihito's Temperature 101.48 Saturday Afternoon; Was 99.2 Friday Night.

TOKIO, May 24.—Although there was an abatement early to-day of approximately four degrees in his fever, the temperature of Emperor Yoshihito, who is ill of pneumonia, later rose more than two degrees. It was 101.48 degrees this afternoon.

The following bulletin was issued this morning from the Aoyoma palace, signed by two of the eight physicians who are attending the imperial patient:

"His majesty has passed a favorable night and shows encouraging improvement. His temperature is 99.2, pulse 76 and respiration 36."

News that improvement was shown in the condition of the Mikado caused great rejoicing throughout the empire, but especially in this city. Prayers of thanksgiving were offered up and a ministerial order was proclaimed allowing the theaters to reopen.

Empress Sadaka spent several hours at the bedside of her husband to-day. She insists upon ministering to him and was much rejoiced to learn of his change for the better.

Congratulations From U. S.

The bulletin expressing news of the Mikado's improvement was carried to the foreign office, where the Cabinet was in session discussing the diplomatic controversy with the United States over the California anti-alien land law.

Arthur Blanchard Bailey, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, conveyed his congratulations to the imperial family that the Mikado showed improvement and that he hoped it would continue.

Special services will be held in the Christian churches to-morrow.

Caruso is a One-Man Band

Every Bone is An Orchestra

Musical Ability Permeates Nearly Every Tissue, Surgeon Discovers.

If that gold bearing, silver toned voice of Enrico Caruso's ever fails him, all he will have to do, according to the latest medical lore, is to go around tapping himself on the bones and the vibrations that result will be musical. He can tap his knuckles and get a pleasing jingle, whereas, with most folk, the result would only be a discord.

Music, according to the new authority, is built into the frame. If one's chest and bones and throat are put together on a musical basis, there isn't any power on earth that can keep the owner of the melodiously built frame from being musical.

Dr. William Lloyd, the famous London throat specialist, found the advantage that Caruso has over the rest of mankind when he made a recent examination. He found that Caruso had physical characteristics that allowed him to produce musical sounds in almost unlimited volume and that the quality of the structure of the throat was just as much adapted for emitting sound as the shell of a fine violin.

Music in His Bones.

The chest capacity of the singer gave him unusual aid in work, while the peculiar construction of the entire throat machinery enabled him to let loose vibrations at a higher rate than almost any other subject.

Then the doctor found that Caruso had music in his bones.

The simple tapping of the Caruso knuckles resulted in a vibration that was different from that of an ordinary mortal. The pitch of the vibration produced by a blow is higher and more resonant.

The distance from the front teeth to the vocal cords is half an inch more than in most tenors, and the vocal tube, the doctor found, was of unusual length.

In other words, Caruso was just built that way when it came to singing.

The suggestion that comes from the doctor's report on the plans and specifications of the Caruso throat and mouth is one that might give the commercial age a chance to locate future singers without the slightest trouble.

All that would be necessary would be for the experts in throat construction to go around to the schools and examine the children, sort them out in bunches and let them develop.

Easy to Pick Artists.

It would be perfectly easy to pick out the boys whose bones, vocal cords and throat material had the tenor elevation, while the basso and baritone chaps might be known by the way their bones were set.

So little Willie Jones would not have any trouble knowing what his future will be. He could tell the teacher that there was no use trying to pound electrical engineering or cube root into him, because the school doctor had picked him out as a singer who could not escape his future even if he tried.

The veriest chump of a teacher would know that if the front teeth of one of her pupils had half an inch the start on the other pupils in the race from the vocal cords the owner of the unhandicapped teeth had a cinch on becoming great as a warbler.

On the other hand the young men and young women who have been spending their money at conservatories trying to cultivate voices that are not and never will be will have a chance to find out just where they stand in the realm of art.

They can go to the doctor and confess that they have spent $1,728 trying to get in the genius class and get an expert line of dope on the prospects of ultimately landing before the footlights with the bouquets coming over in bunches.

Great Aid to Critics.

The scientific statement is that there is a fixed and definite relation between the construction of the bones, cords, muscles and tissues and the volume and character of sound that the owner of the said bones can emit. Once in possession of the scale, a flexible foot rule will answer all of the purposes of a musical critic.

Naturally, the critic might profit by the development of science and place his art upon the exact status of mathematics by closing his criticism of a singer in some fashion like this:

"Miss Smith-Jones-Brown cannot sing. That we may not be accused of bias, we submit that it is only three inches and seven-sixteenths from the southwest corner of the eye tooth to the extended arc subtended by the vocal cord; hence, quod erat demonstrandum, she hasn't a ghost of a chance to sing because it would take four-sixteenths of an inch more of space to even get in the class where the lady could gargle songs through a megaphone at a moving picture show."

But that is getting science down to a point that is beyond the average man and woman, and, besides, it is all based upon the statement of a doctor, and doctors do not agree.

Enrico Caruso, the Famous Tenor.

If he loses famous golden-toned voice, medical lore declares by merely rapping his bones a pleasing harmony can be developed, where, if tried on others, only discord would result.

Blow With a Glass Blinded Both Eyes

NEW YORK, May 24.—Joseph Doherty, sightless, was before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday to testify against former Policeman Thomas C. Flynn, of 1981 Southern Boulevard, following whose attack on July 21 last Doherty became blind. Flynn was convicted of second degree assault. He will be sentenced next week.

Flynn and Doherty were drinking at a table in Flanagan's Hotel, at 2013 Boston Road, it was testified, when a quarrel arose and Flynn threw a glass at Doherty, hitting him between the eyes.

It came out at the trial that Flynn had been an honor man in the Police Department.

GEORGIAN INVENTS REAL 'KNEE JERK'

Man From Monk Offers to Tell Beavers Just How Far Patrolman Walks in a Night.

Georgia has produced another celebrity in Harry Winthrop, of Monk, Ga. Investigation shows that Monk is on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, near Fairburn, not a great distance from Atlanta. It now will take its place in the hall of fame as the home of a famous inventor.

The Monk man has invented the "knee jerk." This is not the knee jerk that alienists use in testing insane criminals, but is a mechanical device to record the distance walked by policemen on their beats. It is termed the "knee jerk," says the inventor, for the reason that it is strapped to the knee and registers every time a step is taken by the wearer.

All of this information came out Friday in a letter received by Chief of Police Beavers from Winthrop, who urged that his invention be tried out by the Atlanta police department. He explained that he has already taken up the matter with the New York police department, but, being a Georgian himself, he is anxious for Atlanta to "get in on the ground floor." He made the proposition to equip the entire police department of 250 men with "knee jerks" at $50 each. The regular price, he suggested, is $100 each. It will, therefore, cost Atlanta but $12,500 to ascertain the distance each policeman walks on his beat.

"The knee jerk registers only when the policeman is actually walking—there is no chance for him to make it register while sitting or lying down," writes the inventor.

He added:

"The knee jerk is something on the order of a speedometer, although not quite so heavy. It is an accurate gauge to show whether policemen are properly patrolling their beats."

As Chief Beavers chucked the letter in a waste basket, he laughingly remarked that he didn't think Atlanta quite ripe yet for the "knee jerk."

"I think I'll write to Mr. Winthrop, however, and suggest that he give Monk the honor of first trying out his wonderful invention."

Judge Rules $1 Week Enough for Husbands

PORTLAND, OREG., May 24.—That $1 a week is enough spending money for any married man and that he should turn the rest of his salary over to his wife and allow her to attend to its spending without interference was the assertion made by Municipal Judge Taswell. He had found Fred J. Brooks, a waiter, guilty of beating his wife and paroled him with the instructions as to the disposition of his salary.

ED WALSH'S DIGESTION WRECKED BY "SPITBALL"

CHICAGO, May 24.—Excessive use of the spitball has injured Ed Walsh's digestion and has thus affected his condition so that he has not yet reached his best form this year, according to Dr. James H. Blair, club physician of the Chicago Americans, in a report made on the pitcher's condition.

According to the doctor, saliva needed for Walsh's digestion has been used on the ball. With care the pitcher may be in his old-time form in a month.

PRINCE AND ONLY DAUGHTER OF KAISER WED

Love and Diplomacy Enter Into Imperial Match at Berlin. Royalty in Attendance.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 24.—Scenes of bewildering brilliance to-day marked the marriage of Prince Ernest August, of Cumberland, descendant of the Hanoverian kings and heir to a fortune of $200,000,000, to Princess Victoria Luise, only daughter of Emperor William, of Germany.

The capital was en fete and a gala day was made of the occasion throughout most of the German empire. The rain, which fell at intervals, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the thousands who packed all the streets.

Emperor William, Czar Nicholas, King George of England and lesser royalties were cheered to an echo as they drove to the chapel for the religious ceremony which followed the civil service in Brandenburg Hall, an adjunct of the Potsdam marble palace.

Gorgeous pomp attended the wedding, in which entered a large element of diplomacy as well as true love. By the marriage to-day is brought to an end the long feud which has existed between the reigning house of Hohenzollern and the house of Guelph, from which the Prince Ernest August comes.

Religious Rites Brilliant.

The religious ceremonies far outshone the civil rites in brilliancy. This service began at 5 o'clock in the presence of the greatest gathering of royalty for a decade or more.

At 5 o'clock the court marshal entered the chapel, which had already been filled during the procession of the bridal party from Potsdam to Berlin, and tapped three times with his staff to signify the approach of the wedding party.

First entered the Marshal of the Imperial Household, Count August Fulenburg, with his staff, followed by a long line of chamberlains. Next came the "bride's cavaliers," three young princelings selected for manly grace and beauty; immediately following the "cavaliers" came the bride leaning upon the arm of the stalwart groom, who wore the uniform of a lieutenant of the Bavarian army. Four bridesmaids carried the long train of the bride's gown. Next in line were a number of court functionaries and then came Emperor William and Princess Thyra, of Cumberland, mother of the groom.

The Duke of Cumberland, father of the groom, accompanied the Empress. King George of England followed with the German Crown Princess upon his arm. Following George was Czar Nicholas of Russia, with Queen Mary of England.

One American Present.

Followed then an innumerable array of generals, field marshals, admirals, and others. But one American was present in official capacity. He was United States Ambassador Lieshman.

As the procession entered the chapel the Cathedral choir sang a double quartette from Mendelssohn's Oratorio of "Elijah." Then the famous silver trumpets (the Kosleck trumpet corps) accompanied the hymn, "Praise The Lord, Ye Heavens Adore Thee."

The recent patent issued on this NOISELESS PORCH SWING HOOK secures and protects a fortune for the person that puts this badly needed and universally used article on the market. The inventor (an Atlanta man) will sell all or a part interest.

IT'S ALL IN THE

EXAMINATION

A pair of glasses are more than worthless if the lenses are not absolutely correct. The correct lenses cannot be properly fitted unless a careful examination is made by a competent and skillful operator, aided by the latest scientific eye-testing instruments and appliances. Of course, the comfort of a pair of glasses depends a great deal on the fit of the frames, the proper adjustment of eyeglass mountings to the nose, and upon the size and shape of lenses. But primarily and most important of all is the correct fitting of the lenses. The experience necessary to properly diagnose a difficult case of eye trouble requiring correction by glasses is not obtained in a day, and the longer these years of experience, the more you can depend upon the results obtained by your Optician. Our fifty years' growth has produced for you the very best optical service obtainable. We offer you the best-equipped fitting rooms, the very latest styles of frames and mountings, the newest shapes and tints of lenses, the Kryptok Invisible Bifocals, moderate prices, and we make every possible effort to serve you pleasantly and satisfactorily. M'CUE TO GET FIGHTS WITH LEADING STARS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—No more slob fights for Matty McCue, Racine's sensation of the ring. After the little fellow has finished out the engagements he has at the present time, which include a battle in Fond du Lac, Wis., in Jack Brunkhorst's arena and one in Milwaukee with Patsy Brannigan, the Eastern featherweight, John McCue, his manager, is going to take on only the very best boys he can find as opponents of his protege. The veteran McCue is convinced that he has a champion in Matty and nobody is going to convince him otherwise until he sees the actual defeat of the little fellow. Hence he is canvassing the situation for boys that will be at once good drawing cards and at the same time fit opponents for a man of the McCue standard—as judged not only in Racine, but elsewhere.

* * *

JOHNNY DUNDEE, the young Eastern Italian who recently went twenty rounds to a draw with Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, and therefore is regarded as having at least half of the title, if that will get him anything, is adjudged by the elder McCue to be the best man in sight at the present time for his star. The machinery has been set in motion already and some definite announcement may be expected almost any time now of the match having been clinched. McCue would be willing to let Dundee come in at 124 pounds, the same as any of the rest of them, and as this is an easy figure for the hardy New Yorker there would be no hitch over the match as far as the poundage is concerned.

* * *

CHARLEY WHITE, the sensational local boxer, who is neither a feather nor a light weight, but liable to be a thorn in the side of boys of either class, also is spoken of as a corking good test for McCue. And the McCue party is not unwilling to listen to reason in the matter of weight. Recognizing that Charley would be a dandy draw with the Racine sensation the Wisconsin people are beginning to flirt with Nate Lewis regarding the proposed meeting. White is willing to make 126 pounds for Matty, which would not be much of a hardship.

* * *

JACK BRUNKHORST is sending a young boxer named Johnny Sokol, who is well known up in the Lake Winnebago District, against the punching star and there is a prospect that Johnny may do somewhat better against the Racine terror than did Jeff O'Connell and the remainder of them who have tried to worry him lately. Up in Fond du Lac they seem to like Sokol pretty well, for he has put up some good contests there, the fiercest of which was a ten-round draw with Gene McGovern that had everybody yelling like mad before it was over. Since that time Sokol has spent all of his time in the East and was especially active in the neighborhood of Buffalo, where he whipped some of the best boys of his weight.

* * *

BRUNKHORST was at the Racine battle recently and saw the McCue threashing machine under a full head of steam against Jeff O'Connell. Even in the face of that exhibit Jack didn't weaken and said afterward that while McCue surely is one of the real bearcats of the day that Sokol and his hefty punch are liable to make Matty go to the very limit in order to get the decision. Jack has a good card on for his show, having matched Freddie Andrews and Sorenson, who fought Battling Nelson a hard ten-round go recently, in the semi-windup.

* * *

THE Patsy Brannigan that Milwaukee has matched up with McCue is the veteran bantamweight of the East, now filled out until he finds himself up among the feathers. Patsy had numerous turnups with Johnny Coulon and is one of those tricky old chaps with a long, wise head and quite capable of troubling any of them for a little while at least.

* * *

BUT after the Brannigan match there will be nothing but better things for the McCue boy. And the chances are most of his battling will be done in Racine.

FLYNN SHADES JIM COFFEY IN THRILLING BOUT

NEW YORK, May 24.—Fight fans here to-day are clamoring for another match between Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and Jim Coffey, the "Dublin giant," who engaged last night in one of the fiercest and most thrilling heavyweight bouts ever seen in the city.

Coffey, taller and heavier than Flynn, started at Flynn like a madman and for nearly four rounds rained punches into Flynn's face and body that staggered him and drove him back against the ropes. Just when it looked like a sure knockout Flynn came to life.

GEORGE RODEL, the "Fighting Boer," with Bob Fitzsimmons acting as his second, outstrateged Soldier Kearns, who was seconded by Tom Sharkey, in the 10-round semi-final.

TRAVERS MEETS KAMMER IN METROPOLITAN FINALS

NEW YORK, May 24.—The final round for the Metropolitan golf championship title is on to-day between Jerome D. Travers, the present champion, and Alfred D. Kammer on the Fox Hills golf course. Travers, by steady playing, has easily defeated every one so far opposed to him.

In the third round yesterday, playing against Chisolm Beach, Travers, after winning, 7-5, played out the bye-holes and made a new amateur competitive record of 70 strokes for the course.

Later Travers defeated Oswald Kirkby, the New Jersey State champion, by 2 up in his semi-final match.

$10,000 GUARANTEE FOR SMITH.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Tom Jones, fight promoter, to-day offered Gunboat Smith a guarantee of $10,000 for another battle with Jess Willard next month. The manager of Smith, however, has declared that he means to give his protege a rest for a few months.

SPORTS AND SUCH

By RIGHT CROSS

WE DON'T HAVE ANY LUCK. Here for three or four weeks we have been bearing with patience and restraint the advance dope on the mighty clash of those titans, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, soothing ourselves with the thought that this fight would be the finish of one of them.

Instead of which both of them will now be going about the country insisting on telling a lot of people who never did them any harm that all they want is another chance to get together with each other, with Lute McCarty or with anybody else.

They will clamor for vindication, and there doesn't seem to be any way to stop them, unless they can be nailed for inciting a riot. Reports of the stern encounter differ in everything but one point. All those present seem to be agreed on the fact that it was a very gloomy and cheerless occasion.

According to the referee Smith was the winner, but the consensus of opinion among the experts at the ringside was that a decision would be more difficult than picking the winner of a transcontinental auto truck durability run. Also that the latter event would be much more exciting.

They fought the full distance of twenty rounds without a knock-down or a crucial moment. According to one or two reports Smith was in a little trouble in the fourteenth round and Willard bled somewhat from the mouth after a right-hand punch had cut his machinery for torturing sporting writers. That was all. A twenty-round fight between high-class men is frequently slow and uninteresting, and it is easy to imagine what this must have been like.

* * *

To the conquering hero stalks
The fight expert and yaps and squawks,
And bellows that he wasn't right
Against that guy the other night;
And when you make this bum decamp
He's followed by another tramp.

* * *

THE REVIVAL OF WRESTLING in New York will not probably get very far. Something tells us that even New Yorkers, who are gluttons for punishment, will not rush upon this good old bunk in maddened throngs.

* * *

SIR THOMAS LIPTON SAYS that he is greatly pleased with the splendid sportsmanship of the New York Yacht Club, and yet there are a lot of people who say that the Irish haven't a sense of humor.

BRITANNIA WILL NEVER RULE the wave as long as one rocking chair remains afloat in the racing committee room.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, is breaking his neck trying to get his protege a return match with Gunboat Smith. Jones has offered the Eastern heavyweight a guarantee of $10,000 for another bout, but Buckley has about decided to give Smith a rest for two months.

* * *

Most of the fans are of the opinion that Willard would have a great chance to defeat Smith in a return engagement. They point to the fact that Willard was making his first 20-round scrap and that Jones was handling him for the first time in a fight.

* * *

Jim Flynn, toughest of all heavyweights, will get into action Friday night. The Pueblo fireman will exchange wallops with Jim Coffey in a 10-round mill at New York and the fur should fly. This will probably be Flynn's last fight before he meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium here June 13.

* * *

Mike Saul will help train Flynn for the latter's set-to with Savage. Saul thinks that the experience gained by working with Flynn will put him in great shape for his bout with Eddie Hanlon.

* * *

If Matty McCue succeeds in defeating Patsy Brannigan at Milwaukee, Wis., Monday night he is to get a match with Abe Attell. The ex-featherweight champion has agreed to meet the Racine sensation on June 5.

* * *

Arthur Pelky will have the chance of his young life when he stacks up against Luther McCarty in a 10-round affair at Calgary, Alberta, Saturday night. Should Pelky succeed in besting McCarty or holding him even he will become one of the greatest cards in the heavyweight division.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke wishes to challenge any lightweight on behalf of Billy Bennett, the Irish lightweight champion. O'Rourke is particularly anxious to sign his boxer for a match with Willie Ritchie or Freddie Welsh.

* * *

Chicago fans are boosting Eddie Murphy as a contender for the lightweight championship. Murphy's recent draw fight against Jack Britton has done much to put him back in the good graces of the windy city fans. Murphy put up a great battle and was fighting Britton off his feet at the finish, according to reports from the battle ground.

* * *

Pittsburg fans are expecting a real scrap Saturday night when Eddie McGoorty and Frank Klaus clash in a six-round bout. Klaus' friends have made him an even money choice against the Oshkosh boy.

* * *

After the McGoorty affair Klaus will travel to Indianapolis where he is billed to take on Jack Dillon in a 10-round battle later in the month.

* * *

Nothing has been heard of lately from Tommy Murphy, the New York lightweight. Murphy is certainly entitled to much consideration when the Coast promoters pick an opponent for Willie Ritchie.

Rivers Gets July 4 Date With Champion

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Joe Rivers is the lucky boy to get the July 4 date here with Champion Willie Ritchie.

Following the announcement to-day by Promoter McCarey that he had been unable to induce Ritchie to meet the Spanish boxer at Vernon on Independence Day and consequently he, McCarey, would release Rivers from his agreement to appear at Vernon on that date, Manager Joe Levy wired his acceptance of the terms offered by Eddie Graney, the San Francisco promoter.

McCarey to-day received a telegram from Nolan flatly refusing to fight at Vernon, and declaring that Ritchie would fight at San Francisco on the holiday date and nowhere else.

"If Ritchie does not box for Graney on July 4 we will accept a match in Victoria on Dominion Day, July 1," wired Nolan. "A syndicate of very wealthy Britishers is seeking to promote a match between Ritchie and Freddie Welsh for that date."

SMITH-WILLARD WOULD BE CINCH FOR OLD-TIMERS

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—It is said that one Theodore Roosevelt is going to Arizona to search for a certain lost tribe. After seeing the championship candidates, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, in action, the writer feels that Roosevelt or some one else should be commissioned to hunt for descendants of the lost tribe of heavyweights.

There is no shutting one's eyes to the fact that the big fellows of to-day don't begin to compare with the heavies of "yesteryear" in any department of the game. One doesn't have to go so far as to institute comparisons between present day championship aspirants and the men who were thought to be in line for the title in former times.

Take the cases of such boxers as Kid McCoy and Joe Choynski, pugilists who were never troubled with the championship bee. How long would Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard last with either of these? Or how long would Gunboat or Jess keep erect in front of clean hitting, hard thumping Peter Maher?

There will be another heavyweight bout at Calgary to-day, and then, if present plans hold, there will be a championship final, with Gunboat Smith pitted against the winner of the Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky go at Calgary.

Naturally the deciding contest will create some interest, for, low grade though they are, bidders for the blue ribbon are the best we have. Candor compels the observation that they are simply the best of a bad lot.

Thought Fight a Draw.

While the writer is among those who are of the opinion that Willard did every bit as well as Smith Tuesday night, I must own that the tall Kansan was a good deal of a disappointment. We are led to look for better things after reading of the way Jess acquitted himself with Luther McCarty, Soldier Kearns and others.

It will be hard to make a top notch man of Willard for the reason that he has so few natural fighting qualities. True, his straight left is a dependable quantity, but this is largely on account of his tremendous reach. It would be pretty hard for Willard to straighten his left without finding something unless the other fellow clambered through the ropes when he saw it coming.

Willard has poor ideas of distance and direction and he hits in a stilted pokey way. This, may be, comes of clinching his fists too tightly before lashing out.

He seems, too, to be deficient in ring sense. Several times after chasing Gunboat into a corner and having him off balance he smiled fatuously and stepped back. And if looks count, the Gunner was quite content to have it that way.

Willard a Game Fellow.

Willard is a game fellow and he assimilates well, and it may be that proper coaching will develop him to a stage where he can safely hold his own with modern heavies. That is, unless the breed suddenly improves. One thing to admire in Jess is the way a stinging clash arouses his battle ire. In this respect he resembles Tom Sharkey.

Gunboat Smith's fight was an improvement on some of his local exhibitions. He seemed to use his head more than he generally does, but whether this was an instance of present initiative or the result of careful coaching the writer has no means of knowing. Anyhow there was a method in the way Smith handled himself, even if his execution was faulty.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right Into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., the former national champion, is one of a fine golfing family, in which both men and women have attained considerable distinction in their favorite game. W. C. Fownes, the father of W. C. Fownes, Jr., is a golfer of considerable skill, and I venture to say there is not a golfer of his age in the country who can defeat him. Fownes, Sr., plays golf almost the year round and he never fails to attend each national championship.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., began playing golf in 1900 and therefore he has enjoyed more than a decade of excellent sport. His record is indeed an enviable one, for in addition to winning the premier event in 1910 he has many other notable victories to his credit. He has held the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association amateur championship from 1904 down through 1911, and this championship although limited in territory, is of the highest class, as is shown by the fact that it has furnished two national champions.

Has Won Many Honors.

In 1910 and 1912 Fownes won the Pennsylvania State championship and he has really held at various times all the golfing honors of his State and many from elsewhere. In fact, the only important title that has been denied him so far is the Western championship, where he has invariably encountered a bit of hard luck. Pittsburg marks the Eastern boundary of the big Western Golf Association territory, and yet in spite of the many fine players in the Smoky City, Chicago has always managed to hold fast to the big Western cup.

Fownes was a member of the Olympic team of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, which won the event in 1905 at Chicago Golf.

Fownes' game has not been quite so good during the last year or so, owing, I think, to a number of experiments, chiefly with wooden clubs. Fownes believes his wooden shots to be the weakest part of his game and in consequence he is given to many experiments with them. Sometimes he tries for distance and sometimes for direction, and his clubs and methods of playing vary with the object in view. Last year he came to the national at Wheaton with clubs about forty-six inches in length.

Nearly Wins Over Hilton.

Fownes plays a very thoughtful game of golf. Its high quality can be realized by the fact that he has been national champion. Furthermore, in a match with H. H. Hilton at the National Golf Links tourney in 1911 his game compared favorably with the British player's and he was only defeated at the nineteenth hole in the second round.

Fownes is perhaps the most popular member of the U. S. G. A. He is a regular attendant at its annual event and I think without him the competition would lose much of its savor for a great many of us.

BRITONS WILL SELECT TENNIS TEAM IN JULY

LONDON, May 24.—The Secretary of the British Lawn Tennis Association announced that the British team which will defend the Dwight F. Davis International Trophy against the winner of the elimination contests will not be selected until early in July, after the Wimbledon championships have been decided.

The teams playing in the eliminations will represent the United States, Australia, Germany, France, Canada, South Africa and Belgium.

RUBE WADDELL MISSING; BIG CROWDS DISAPPOINTED

WINNIPEG, May 24.—Although the Virginia (Minn.) Northern League team has played two games here, Rube Waddell, the eccentric southpaw, has failed to appear on the field for either game. Just where he is is a question, and if Manager "Spike" Shannon knows he is not telling. Large crowds have attended both games in the hope of catching a glimpse of the former big leaguer.

No Class to Champions of To-day

Feather Title a Family Affair

By Otto C. Floto.

ONLY a short time ago Mr. Featherweight dwelt in an abode alone. He was master of all he surveyed. But things have suddenly changed, and the elusive little cuss now lives in a duplex building. In other words, Johnny Kilbane was the sole possessor of the title and in undisputed control of the same. Now along comes Johnny Dundee and battles him. Well, it's a fifty-fifty proposition now. As a reminder, Kilbane now only holds a working interest in the title, True, he didn't lose it; neither did he win it again. Dundee didn't win it, either, but he worked so well that Referee Eyton declared him in as a partner on the thing. So at best it's a muddled or rather queer condition that exists in that department of the game.

The firm title to the prize should now read Kilbane & Dundee, holders of the world's featherweight title. So that both boys must content themselves with a half a loaf—which, after all, is better than no loaf at all.

* * *

SPEAKING of championship titles, was there ever a time when the different emblems were in so chaotic a condition? Take them right down the line from the heavyweights to the feathers, and not a single representative of any of the departments holds an undisputed right to the title he covets. Never before has such a thing been apparent in pugilism, and it does seem rather astounding to those who have never given this angle a fleeting thought.

When we look back a few years and realize the hard-fought battles and the strenuous routes the champions were compelled to travel over to gain their positions, and then peek hurriedly over the present crop—well, deliver us from expressing our candid opinion, for it would not look well in print.

* * *

TO ALL intents and purposes, Luther McCarty is heavyweight champion. Of course, he never won the title from the man who held it, and probably still holds it. That's not particularly Luther's fault, because of queer circumstances that transpired in the life of the recognized champion. Still the fact remains that McCarty has a title he acquired without winning it as per the usual process required to annex the coveted emblem. True, he stands ready to defend it. But—

Nevertheless, we'll fall in line and look upon Luther as the champion under the circumstances. At the same time, much as we admire him, he is No. 1 of the champions that acquired his honors without meeting the predecessor of the high office in actual combat.

* * *

THEN we drop to the middleweights. Here's where we laugh long and loud, for if there is a single one in the bunch entitled to be crowned champion we are ready to be convinced. Stanley Ketchel, whose sudden death left the question of champion an open one, could have taken the whole lot of the present crop, beginning with Klaus and including McGoorty, Papke and the whole flock, and beaten them to a jelly all on the same night, and in the same ring, without even half trying. So here's a class without a representative in the exclusive class. Klaus, who claims the title, is therefore labeled No. 2 of the champions who failed to battle a titleholder for the honor.

* * *

THE welterweights are in the same disturbed condition. Jimmy Clabby, if he could make the weight (145 pounds), might be looked upon as a real contender. As he cannot make the weight, we claim that Rube "Wildcat" Ferns is the best. And while he does not hold the title, he is ready to fight the whole world for it and have his right disputed to the same. This class, like the middleweight division, is barren of a leader, a man the world will recognize as the top-notcher of the 145-pounders. Of all the classes we are mentioning we recognize the claims of Ferns to the honor to a greater extent than we would listen to anyone else claiming it.

* * *

IN THE lightweight ranks we have Willie Ritchie as champion. Yet, like the other classes, he comes to us with a flaw in the title. His championship was won by the punch of the other fellow instead of his own. There is no doubt he would have defeated Wolgast had the battle gone on. But he didn't knock Ad out. On the other hand, it was the transgression of the former champion in striking that foul blow that awarded the honors to Ritchie.

In this same class we have two other good boys—Packey McFarland and Jack Britton. McFarland, however, can't possibly make the weight, so that lets him out. Ritchie beat Britton when they met on a former occasion. And, say, why not take Freddie Welsh into consideration? Thinking it over, his claims are the very best. He defeated Matt Wells for the English championship and beat Willie Ritchie the only time he met him (that was before Ritchie met Wolgast.) But again we are confronted with the condition that the champion is not one of that undisputed sort.

* * *

IN THE featherweight realm we have the laughable condition of a divided or split title, with two men claiming it. It was originally won by Kilbane from Attell. But it was one of those decision affairs, without a decisive ending, that stamps the winner as a bona fide representative.

After reviewing the different classes about us, it's like a fresh spring breeze to recall the classes of a few years ago, and see the grand list of names that represented the different divisions. Each and every one a champion in the full meaning of the term, and each and every title won by actual conflict within the ring, with a knockout accompaniment to cinch it and keep it free from dispute.

Heavyweight Champion—James J. Corbett.
Middleweight Champion—Robert Fitzsimmons.
Welterweight Champion—Tommy Ryan.
Lightweight Champion—Joe Gans.
Featherweight Champion—George Dixon.
Bantamweight Champion—Jimmy Barry.

WINNIPEG, MAN., May 24.—Sammy Trott, of Columbus, Ohio, was awarded the newspaper decision over Grover Hayes, of Philadelphia, in a twelve-round bout here, as the result of a wild swing in the eleventh round, which caught Hayes on the jaw and floored him for the count of five.

SPEECHLESS.

"What are the athletes howling for?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot talk! They cannot talk!" young Johnny Evers said.
"Why do they look so awful glum?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot get their names in print," young Johnny Evers said.

"You may knock a baseball player; you may tell him he's a mutt,
You may tell him of the ebony that constitutes his nut,
You may write of solid ivory and alabaster, but—
He will always grab the paper in the morning."

Far be it from one to perpetrate a pun with malice aforethought, but it strikes us that Charlie Murphy is the guy that put the boss in Boston.

Not that we have anything against Tom Jones, but who is going to be the next meal ticket?

Jess Willard once threw Charlie Cutler down. The equanimity which the latter gentleman displayed leads one to wonder whether he is a philosopher or a humorist.

Joe Cantillon has released Hobe Ferris. Hobe got flippant one night and led Joe to suspect that he was less than sixty years old.

The consensus of opinion on the Pacific coast is that if Jess Willard were tried on a charge of pugilism he would be declared absolutely innocent.

LINES TO C. WEBB MURPHY.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The baseball writer wends his weary way,
And says: "No baseball player talks to me."

How happy is the baseball writer now
If C. Webb Murphy only has his way!
No longer must he write with wrinkled brow
The slop that lowbrowed athletes have to say.

No longer must he lean against a bar
And say: "Come on and have another drink!"
No longer must he stay where athletes are
And hear their efforts as they try to think.

Oh, Charlie Murphy, chubby little runt,
Your name is always near and dear to me!
You up and got away with this here stunt
And saved a thousand writers from ennui.

THEY'LL KNOW THEY'VE BEEN IN GAME—NAYLOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—George W. Naylor, stud groom to the Duke of Westminster, and who has charge of the English polo ponies, came into town yesterday from the Piping Rock Club. He wanted to have a good square look at the lower part of the town, and incidentally to buy some things for the horses. A few of those who are interested in the international match got around him and tried to get him excited over the match.

One said that Larry Fitzpatrick, who is training the American ponies, would put it all over him. Naylor gave a sort of icy grin as he remarked, "He may put it all over me as you say, old chap, but his side will know that they have been in a game."

There was a report yesterday that the American team were suffering from staleness, and that was the reason they had such little practice for the past week.

To-day's Ball Game Begins at 3

Gulls Have Grand Pitcher in Hogg

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE pastiming this afternoon at the celebrated ball park of the well-known Georgia Railway and Power Company, said park yclept Ponce DeLeon, will settle the question of whether or not a mediocre club can beat a good club with pitching alone.

And lest somebody arise to ask which is the "good" club, we state without hesitation that it is the Atlanta delegation—and add positively that the Gull team ought to be a mediocre aggregation, considered on a man-by-man basis.

And before we forget it, the contest this afternoon will be called at 3 o'clock to enable the Mobile team to get an early train. There should be sufficient time for a full nine-inning contest, provided the umpires, the managers and the players do their respective and assorted duties.

* * *

REVERTING to the Gulls and their claims on distinction, we can only say that we can't see them at all. It is a good club. But is it a great club?

We don't even pause for an answer.

You can hand Mike Finn a lot of credit for the way the Gulls have been winning. He has gathered together a club that has balance. It hasn't a strong spot in fielding, but it hasn't a weak one. It is not a great hitting club, but it has a great slugger in D. Robertson, and a moderately reliable one in Jacobson. The rest of it must be team play, or maybe something even more intangible than that—a winning spirit, maybe; which is a hard thing to define, but a useful one to have.

* * *

A REALLY great performer on the club is Bradley Hogg, the ex-Mercer and ex-Brave pitcher. The former Baptist hurled unusually good ball Friday. Though the Crackers acquired six hits, they never came within miles of scoring. Hogg walked just one man, struck out but one—and looked like ready money and lots of it all the way.

It takes a pretty good pitcher to hold the Crackers safe. They are deadly sluggers. Any pitcher who can shut them out is a big leaguer at heart—or mighty lucky. And there was no luck about Hogg's work.

How in the mischief it happened that the Braves ever let go of Hogg is a mystery. He looks more like a pitcher than any five men of George Stallings' staff rolled into one.

To those who remember Hogg in his college days, his huge size proved a jolt. He is a whale now, while in his college days he seemed a man of hardly more than average size. To-day he has the ideal size and weight for a great pitcher. He will be a big man in the big leagues some day.

* * *

THANKS are hereby expressed to Bill Hart for his efforts to hurry along Friday's game. Bill kept right on the trail of the players, got them up to the plate in a hurry and managed to run the game off in less than an hour and three-quarters—which was especially appreciated, owing to the fact that the day was awfully cold and raw.

* * *

ALL Atlanta, beginning with Bill Smith and running down to the humblest bat boy, is raging because the Atlanta papers were inclined to saddle the blame for losing the last Memphis game largely on the shoulders of Pitcher Dent. The following communication expresses the views of a lot of fans:

Dear Sir:

I am a great lover of baseball and frequently attend the games. I want to ask if the blame of losing Wednesdays game to Memphis is not wrongly placed on Pitcher Dent. Up to the sixth inning he pitched well nigh perfect ball. In the beginning of the seventh, a batter made an infield hit and the ball was thrown to first base in ample time to get the batter out. The first baseman in his eagerness to make a double play, failed to touch the base and threw badly to second. The shortstop failed to hold the ball and both runners were safe. Then Memphis' best hitter came to bat, made a three bagger, brought in three runs and the pitcher, discouraged, could do nothing more. Now didn't the first baseman and shortstop lose the game? If the runners on first and second had been put out, as should have been done, would not Atlanta have won?

* * *

THE point that "Fan" seems to have overlooked is that before Agler made his misplay, three singles in succession had been made off Dent. Then came the bobble. Then two more hits. We disagree with Bill Smith and others that Agler had an easy double if he had made the play right.

A pitcher who allows three singles with none out starts something right there.

More than that, a pitcher has got to be able to keep steady even after an error.

BIGGEST BALLOON RACE EVER OUT OF KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 24.—The largest and most widely represented balloon race ever held on this side of the Atlantic will be that which is to start from Kansas City July 4. George M. Myers, president of the Kansas City Aero Club and manager of the race, has sent invitations to the clubs of practically every large city in the country asking them to participate. The St. Louis Aero Club has written that it will enter from three to five bags and Topeka is sure of one entry, but hopes to have two.

Other entries are: Dayton, Ohio, 1; Cleveland, Ohio, 1; San Francisco, 1; Salt Lake City, 1; Dana, Ill., 1; New York city, 1; Pennsylvania, 1; Peoria, Ill., 1; Akron, Ohio, 1; Cincinnati, Ohio, 1; Chicago, 1; Indianapolis, Ind., 1; Kansas City, 1.

MURPHY DENIES BRESNAHAN WILL REPLACE EVERS

By Davenport.

BOSTON, MASS., May 24.—Slowly but surely the mystery of Charles Webb Murphy's visit to Boston is beginning to unravel.

Murphy is after pitchers. He is wise to the fact the Cubs are woefully weak when it comes to pitching, so is every one else who has been watching the dope.

Murphy stated before leaving for the East that he had a deal on with an Eastern club, hence his trip to Boston. The president of the Cubs left his room bright and early this morning, and it is rumored he went for a conference with Mr. Gaffney, owner of the Braves.

Hub Perdue, Yep, that's the game, and it's big game Murphy's after. If he gets Perdue it will be only by giving in exchange two or three good players. Sweeney has been showing weak at second and Art Phelan would just fit in there.

Murphy refused to commit himself upon the result of his trip when he returned to the hotel at noon, but he wore that famous Murphy smile which means he met with success of some sort. The boss of the Cubs denies that he is contemplating the removal of Evers in favor of Bresnahan.

He said this morning: "Evers has a five-year contract and there is not the slightest chance of a change of managers."

Murphy stated to Boston scribes last night that he did not permit his players to talk with him, but he played pool with one of his men until nearly midnight and hobnobbed with the others.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA was kind of grouchy last nite. Ma & me knew he was going to be grouchy, beekaus sum old friends of Ma was going to visit us for a few days & they was to cum last nite, all the way from Colfax, Wisconsin.

I doant like to be a killjoy, sed Pa, & I will do my best to treet Mister & Missus Bing all rite, but you know as well as I do what it will be. Both of them will want to be took to all of the leading points of interest, such as the hoam of the widow wich entertained George Washington onst & the museum of art & the points of historical interest outside of those wich I have just menshuned. After I have dragged them & you & littel Bobbie all oaver the town for a few days, showing them a lot of stuff that I doant care a rap to see, they will say goodbye & tell us to be sure & cum to Colfax & stay a month. That is sum invitashun, issent it? sed Pa—cum to Colfax & stay a month. It sounds like cum to Sing Sing & stay thirty years.

Pa Gets Their Name Wrong.

Well, thay are my frends, anyway, sed Ma, & I want you to be nice to them, & please remember, sed Ma, that thare naim isept Bing, thare name is Ging G-I-I-N-G, Ma sed, with the accent on the two Gs.

Wen Mister & Missus Ging caim thay didn't look as if thay was happy at all.

I am glad to hid you both welcome to our home, sed Pa. I have offen heard my wife speek of her deer friends the Pings.

Ging, sed Mister Ging. G-I-N-G. That doesn't sound like a vary hard naim to reemember, he sed. He looked at Pa kind of cross & Pa handed the look rite back to him.

What do you think of Atlanta, deer? said Ma to Missus Ging.

I think it is perfeckly beestly, sed Missus Ging. We had to ride in that horrid trolley all the way from the depot to here, & I had to stand up. I wanted Mister Ging to maik a gentelman give me his seat, but you know how husbands are. He sed that perhaps the poor man was tired. Think of it, and fancy me, a Ging, having to stand up in a common street car. Why, at home we have our own carriage.

If it is anything like the carriages I used to see in Colfax wen I was courting you, Pa sed to Ma, I am afrade Mister & Missus Wing wuddent have reached our hoam till to-morrow morning. Colfax was noted for its pritty gurls and its saddle backed skates, sed Pa. Thare was only one hansum horse in the town, & nobody cud drive it.

I beg your pardon, sir, sed Mister Ging There are sum magnificent horses in Colfax. I have two roans that I wuddent sell for a thousand dollars.

I wuddent give a thousand cents for them, sed Pa. Thare isen't any class to a roan horse. Who evver heard of a roan horse stepping out & winning the Brooklyn Handicap? sed Pa.

Never mind, deerest, Ma sed to Pa. I am sure Mister & Missus Ging will get to love Atlanta after they have had a chanst to git around. Thare is so much of interest to see here, & the shops are very butiful now. The windows are jest full of bargans.

Missus Ging Is Put Out.

The windows can stay full of bargans, sed Mister Ging. I toald my wife beefoar we left hoam that the stores in Colfax was plenty good enuff for her mother before her and plenty good enuff for her. Thare is going to be no extrava-gance on this trip. Hevings deliver me, sed Mister Ging, from a shopping & bargan hunting woman. I wish you would show us our room, he sed to Ma. My wife & I are vary tired. I suppose you have breakfast at seven, he sed.

Oh, deer no, sed Ma. We have breakfast at nine.

Oh, well, sed Missus Ging. I suppose my husband & I can go out to a resteerant. Do you know a good cheap place nere here? she asked Pa.

Yes, sed Pa, I know a good cheep place. They have rooms thare too.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess.

Now go on with the story.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

"Yes, this is the garage—yes, Miss Deery—Yes, I understand—I'll have a car around in five minutes."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Cain had no definite idea in view except to drive a considerable distance out of town and have it out with this stranger. Hitherto his money had enabled him to have his way in everything and he had ridden roughshod over every obstacle that presented itself in his path, so that the idea that he was a sort of demi-god had become firmly implanted in his nature. In the case in hand he did not stop to realize that his money was of little use to him. He was blind with rage. He attributed his misunderstanding with Mildred to the passenger in the back seat. Cain resolved to eliminate this stranger from his affairs. He tried to get more speed out of the car, but by this time the roads were growing worse and worse as they got further out of town. They had passed the limit of electric lights and except for the rays of the powerful headlights everything was in inky darkness.

They must have driven all of half an hour and were a good fifteen miles from where they started, when Cain, spying a road that branched off to the left, turned into it. Up to this point Gordon Kelly, in the back seat, had made no movement whatever. He might have been asleep, for all Cain knew. But the car had not traveled a furlong on the branch road before he gave evidence that he was very much awake.

With a spring as light as a panther he vaulted over the back of the front seat and landed lightly beside Cain. Reaching down he switched off the magneto, pulled out the plug and dropped it into his coat pocket. Almost instantly the motor stopped and the car came to a standstill.

CHAPTER VIII.

REACHING down to the coil box, Cain discovered the plug was not there.

"Where's that plug?" he demanded, fiercely.

"I have it in my pocket," replied Kelly, quietly. "Something is likely to happen pretty quick, but as I don't know just what it is, I thought I would be on the safe side, that's all."

"Who are you?" cried Cain.

"I will tell you who I am, but first I want to know if I am talking to a crazy man, a fool, or a joker," answered Kelly. While he was speaking he was fumbling in his pockets. He now drew forth a match which he held up to the other's face. Cain blew it out almost as quickly as it ignited, but Kelly had seen enough.

"Oh, you're the Deerys' chauffeur," he observed calmly. "You're the man who nearly ran over me the other day. Well, did your employer tell you to dive me out here, or did you do it on your own hook?"

"I'm not a chauffeur," exclaimed Cain hotly, "I'm a friend of the Deery family and, if you want to know, I brought you here on my own hook. What are you going to do about it?"

"You are certainly a queer sort. What is your object? Is this a hold-up game?" Did you bring me out here to rob me?"

"Rob you; no!" shouted Cain. "I can buy and sell you a million times!" The calmness of the man seated beside him acted as a kind of reverse English on Cain. He had been angry all along, but was now furious and gave every indication of losing control of himself entirely.

"I can't figure you out at all," said Kelly in an even voice. "I'm not much used to city ways and I thought at first you had been ordered to take me on a little drive, though it is a mighty queer night for it. I stood for it as long as you stayed on the main road, but when you turned off here I thought it was time to quit. Tell, me please, what this is all about? If you have been drinking, you ought to be sober enough by now. If it's a joke I'll take it as such and let it go at that."

Cain ignored the question.

"What were you doing in Deery's house to-night," he snarled.

"I was invited there, but—"

"You're a liar!" screamed Cain, making a movement as if to struggle out of his seat behind the wheel of the automobile.

Just Chastisement.

As quick as the stroke of a cat Kelly shot up his right hand and his fingers closed on Cain's collar with the strength of a vise. With the same movement he jerked Cain's head down to the floor of the car. He sent his left foot crashing through the side curtains which had been fastened on to exclude the rain, and thus clearing a passage, as it were, he jumped to the ground, dragging the struggling Cain after him like a sack of meal. Cain fell in the muddy road with a splash. Still holding his man by the collar, Kelly, ankle deep in mud, hauled him around in front of the car and deposited him there in the full glare of the searchlights.

"Now we can see what we are doing," he remarked and in spite of the effort he had made to drag a man of Cain's size, his respiration was hardly above normal.

Cain scrambled to his feet and with a vile epithet rushed at his antagonist. But Kelly, who had a reach like Bob Fitzsimmons, simply put out one hand and Cain ran blindly into it and stopped short. With one powerful shove Kelly sent the other man reeling backward and, losing his balance, Cain fell with another splash in the mud. In two jumps Kelly stood over him.

"There's only one thing to do to a man like you," he said "Get up."

Cain lay motionless, blinking up at Kelly as though he had just been awakened from a bad dream.

"Get up," ordered Kelly again.

But Cain refused to move so, reaching down Kelly inserted his fingers in the collar of his foe and yanked him to his feet. Then, turning him around, and facing him up the road, Kelly stepped back one pace and delivered a solid kick in Cain's nether region.

There is nothing that will take the fight out of a man sooner than a weighty kick, placed where it will do the most good. There is nothing so humiliating to the recipient, nothing so mortifying, so abasing. Such was the effect on Cain. He started to run up the road, but Kelly followed him and executed a series of blows with the foot, of astonishing power and accuracy. At last, grabbing Cain by the collar once more, he turned him around and kicked him back to the headlights.

Cain was covered from head to foot with the red mud of Georgia and Kelly's clothing was so splashed with it that very little of the material showed. The rain had practically ceased and only a fine mist was falling. Away off in the distance could be seen the glow of the lights of Atlanta reflected above that city. The rays of the powerful headlights fell full on the two young men. It was a weird scene, but Kelly was ready to have done with it.

"Do you own this car," he asked.

"No."

"Who does own it?"

"The Davis Garage."

Kelly took the plug from his pocket, inserted it in the coil box and switched on the spark.

"Crank it," he ordered.

Without a word Cain gave the motor a whirl and the machinery started with a roar. Kelly jumped in the driver's seat and, evidently sure of every movement, eased in the reversed gear and backed the car off the road with a view of heading it in the other direction. This accomplished, he called Cain to the side of the car and said:

Might Lose Temper.

"This may appear a childish act on my part, but I'm going to leave you here to find your way back to town the best way you can. It will do you good to think the whole matter over carefully. I don't know yet what your object was in bringing me away out here. Is there anything you want to say to me?"

Cain made no answer.

"Very well," continued Kelly, "I will probably be able to figure it out for myself in the course of time. You are evidently one of those rich young fellows that have more money than brains. I never met one before, but I have read about them in newspapers. My name is Gordon Kelly and I live at the Imperial Hotel. It is possible that you will be seeking some kind of revenge on me, but let me warn you to leave me severely alone. If you annoy me any further I am liable to lose my temper and Lord help you if anything like that comes to pass."

This may sound like heroics delivered by a stage hero in a melodrama, but as a matter of fact Kelly spoke calmly and seriously. It was simply his way.

Waiting a moment longer and receiving no response from Cain, Kelly started the car and slowly plowed his way through the mud to the main road, where the going was much better, leaving Cain to shift for himself. He drove carefully back to the city and reached his hotel in about an hour. Instead of stopping there, however, he continued on three or four blocks and slowed down next the sidewalk in front of the Capital City Club and left the car standing there. Walking back to his hotel he went to the desk and asked for his key. He was splashed with mud from head to foot and Clerk McClendon eyed him suspicfously for a moment, but as Kelly did not seem disposed to offer any explanation, he silently passed over the room key.

When Kelly reached his room, he went to the telephone, called up Davis' garage and said:

"You remember sending a car to Mr. Deery's house about 9:30 to-night? Well, you will find the car in front of the Capital City Club and if you want to know anything more about it you will have to see the man you sent along as chauffeur Good night."

Gordon Kelly then peeled off his mud-bespattered clothes, threw them on the floor of his bathroom, took a bath, crawled between the bedsheets and five minutes later was sleeping the sleep of the just.

Who was this young man from the mountains who knew all about handling automobiles? How did he acquire his calm manner? Where did he gain that easy and confident bearing? Whence came the breeding that enabled him to enter one of the "best" houses in Atlanta and conduct himself as though he had been brought up in "society?"

* * *

Forrest Cain, chewing the bitter cud of reflection, walked for more than an hour in the direction of the city before he got a lift. Then a friendly milkman came along and he rode the rest of the way in. Going to his room, he kicked the sleeping George out of bed and made him attend to his wants. Cain remained in bed all next day. His trunks had gone to New York and that night he followed them to the metropolis.

To Be Continued Monday.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this sixth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

No. 2—The Lamb

By Dorothy Dix

THERE are few more valuable animals than the Lamb, whether you consider it from the mint sauce or the Wall Street point of view. In either capacity it is our meat, and furnishes glad raiment and diamonds to those who, but for it, would not slain a dozen take its place. Indeed, against the cold blasts of Winter.

The name of the individual who discovered the first Lamb is lost in the mists of antiquity, but as a source of supplies he has got the individual who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before beat a city block. Thus are we called upon again to marvel at the wisdom of a beneficent Providence that has created just the proper thing to meet our every need.

Lambs are found in all parts of the known world, and appear to multiply with great rapidity, so that as one is slain a dozen take its place. Indeed the theory is held on Wall Street that a new batch of Lambs is born every second, but this probably exaggerates the situation. At any rate, the Lamb crop for the last year or two has been so poor that many brokers have been forced to prey on one another.

In appearance the Lamb is of a mild and pleasing aspect with a voice that sounds like the amateur soloist who kindly consents to sing at a club dinner. Originally the Lamb is of a snow white color, but after a short sojourn away from its native haunts it is apt to need a hurry trip to the laundry. It gets soiled very quickly.

In the matter of legs the Lamb is eclectic, some Lambs having four, one located on each corner, while other Lambs have only two, which are situated at the extreme northeast end of their anatomy, thus enabling them to stand upright after the manner of men. Also, some Lambs have alfalfa on their chins, while others have smooth faces, but this difference depends on whether they came from the middle West or not.

We may dismiss the quadruped Lamb in a few words, merely stating, in passing, that it has of late developed an ambitious and aspiring tendency to rise skyward under the tuition of Messrs. Armour and Swift, and that it has shown a coy disposition to stay in cold storage that every one who has the good of the country at heart must deplore. However, that great veterinarian Professor Wilson, late of Princeton University, we understand, has now undertaken the moral regeneration of the Lamb, and eke the beef, and the pig, and we may hope to see some needed reforms instituted in this line.

It is in the two-legged Lamb (genus suckibus) that the trained naturalist finds his most interesting study.

This amiable creature lives apparently only to give pleasure to others, which it does by the simple expedient of suffering itself to be sheared by any artistic trimmer that happens along.

This is great sport, and it is a matter of pride that our Wall Street brokers hold the world's record as the champion fleecers of Lambs.

Being so gentle and kind, the Lamb, especially the woolly ones from Pittsburgh, are held in great esteem by women as pets. There was once a chorus girl named Mary who had a little Lamb, with a fleece as white as snow, and everywhere that Mary went his money did surely go—but that's another story.

Lambs are generally of the masculine persuasion, though occasionally we observe an elderly female mutton dressed as Spring Lamb capering around at the dansant.

There are many curious sights in nature, and this is one of the curiousest.

Not What He Meant.

Jones and Long had not met for years. Once—that is, in the days when both had been striving for fame in their different professions—they had been really good chums, and many a talk had they enjoyed together by the fireside as to the little places they would take in the country "when their ships came home."

The dream of Jones has been realized, and now, although a portly old fellow, it was with a sense of real pleasure that he prepared for a visit from his former friend.

"Ah, it's splendid seeing you down here, Long!" he said cordially, by way of greeting. "Quite like old times—what? And the missus, I know, is longing to shake you by the hand. But first—yes, you must come along and have a look at my greenhouse. You simply must!"

And Long went.

"Well, Jones," he said, "you've got a mighty pretty place down here; but, to my mind, it's just a bit bare."

"Oh," replied Jones cheerfully, "that's because the trees are so young! Next time you come—why, they'll be so big that you won't recognize them!"

The Truth About England

There is a large missionary school in Tokio where the teaching is given in English. One of the pupils not long ago wrote a composition on England, from which these are extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the emmenced mind and his chin is so strong as deserves iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully says, 'The sun are never set on our dominion.' The testimony of England say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit, though he has gained a complete world.' The English are running mention to establish a great Empire of the Paradise. As the Englishmen always confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy, and the reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men!"

The Drawbacks

"HOUSE HUNTING," said the man who is boarding with the Pikers until he can get a home and bring his wife and children to town, "is the worst and most depressing job that any man or woman ever had to tackle.

"You can never find a house anywhere that has not some terrible drawback," he went on. "You can take your choice between a poor house in a good neighborhood and a good house in a poor neighborhood.

"If you have a good house in a poor neighborhood your little Cedric and Kenneth and Quentin will be contaminated by contact with those common Awfulwaffle children and the horrid young Beansizzles. And if you take a poor house in a good neighborhood your children will hang wistfully upon the fence and watch the haughty Stalkswaggers children, exclusive young Manybridges and the stuck-up little Snippydoodles at play.

"If a house is perfect in every other respect the landlord will live too near. You are not at first suspicious of the fact that there is a handy little gate by which he can enter your back yard. At first he is just helping you move in. But after you are settled you find him on the premises every time you come home from anywhere.

"Next you note with concern that he and his wife are exceedingly familiar with the history of all the people who have occupied the premises before you. And presently you begin to realize that your idiosyncrasies will furnish considerable data for the edification of your successor.

"Every time you find the landlord at your house he is there merely in the capacity of a friend. He was afraid the cat was caught in the fly-paper or that the canary had escaped, or that mice had got in the piano. He just come to see that everything was as it should be. You are glad to find that you have such a solicitous friend who is always looking after your interests.

"But when you come home suddenly some day and find him taking a bath in your bath room his disinterested motives are not so clear. You become dissatisfied and begin getting ready to move."

A Reward of Merit

A Complete Short Story

"HERE comes Johnny!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones, sighing disconsolately. "He must have been awfully good to-day—for he's as dirty as a little pig, and he's an hour late!"

Her caller opened her eyes in amazement. "Awfully good?" she repeated. "Why, when my Sammy comes home late and is dirty I usually know that he's been into some sort of mischief. It's never a sign of being particularly good to my eyes."

"Well, your Sammy doesn't go to the same school," returned Mrs. Jones. "Johnny has a pretty and stylish teacher, and, what's more, she knows how to make her pupils like her. They all fight to do things for her! I learned all about it when I went to call on her one day after Johnny had brought home a perfect report card. For a whole month he'd been coming home late and looking perfectly dreadful—you'd think he was a street Arab. I have never been able to get anything out of him, except that he'd stayed after school to clean the blackboards.

A Perfect Card.

"Even though he was my own angel child, I had my doubts as to the reason he stayed, and I thought I would have his father settle with him when his report came in. I was confident that it would be a very poor one, since he was kept in almost every single evening.

"You can imagine my amazement when Johnny brought home a perfect card. Motherlike, I doubted his veracity. I even thought it was not impossible that he had doctored his card to show to us. So I put on my hat and went to school to see his teacher. I thought Johnny was singularly unconcerned about it—but, then, you know, you can never tell about boys.

"Well, it seemed that Johnny's teacher had had such a time trying not to seem to play favorites that she had adopted a system of rewards. The pupils are allowed to wash so many blackboards or beat out the dust from so many erasers or raise the windows so many times for certain grades in their studies.

"But the choice reward is ringing the bell. I do wish Johnny was bright enough always to ring the bell—or else dull enough just to open the windows or pass papers. But he's of that intermediate brightness that rewards him with blackboard cleaning. He scoffs at the windows and papers, but he's had the bell only a few times!

"Johnny will get up early, eat a cold breakfast and hardly allow me to see that he is properly washed when he has the privilege of ringing that bell, he's so anxious to get to school in time to see that it is done right! And as for my errands, he finds it quite impossible to do them in his limited time."

He Was Late.

"What makes you so late?" she inquired, as Johnny came in, brushing the chalk dust from his sleeves.

Johnny grinned happily, "I had 95 in geography and 100 in spelling—so she let me have all the boards to-night," he answered, triumphantly. "And last week Frank had the bell—and he came late, so she said if I'd come early to-morrow and he wasn't there I could have it. Anyway, he cheats! And I've a good mind to tell her!"

"Will you run to—" began Mrs. Jones, but Johnny interrupted her as he turned to go.

"Yes, but just wait. I've got to see a fellow that's waiting out here!" And Johnny was gone.

"My, I wish I knew her system," declared Mrs. Jones, enviously.

"And errands are such nice, clean work!" sympathized the caller, glancing at the coating of chalk dust that had settled on the rug. "Maybe if you tell him it's a reward?"

But Mrs. Jones smiled and shook her head. "I'm not a teacher!" she replied.

GETTING MARRIED

By DOROTHY DIX.

MY DEAR ROBERT—Who was the wise guy that said "the remarriage of a widow or widower was the final triumph of hope over experience"? Anyway, he was there with the goods when it came to sizing up the nerve of those who, like yourself, are contemplating entering that Mendelssohn Rag.

Now, I am not knocking second marriages. I am strong for them. But I confess they always fill me with amazement. If a man or woman has been happily married the first time, I should think that he or she would not dare to even attempt to replace the angel he or she has lost with another husband or wife, because he or she would realize that no one can always make matrimonial ten-strikes.

On the other hand, if a man or woman has been unhappily married, it has always seemed to me that the very sound of wedding bells would be anathema to him or her, and that, having been mercifully delivered by death or divorce from the partner who made life a torment, such a one would no more rush back into the holy estate than the soul who has just won out of purgatory would voluntarily return to it.

Opinion of the Public.

However, the general public does not share in these opinions. Every day we see the truly bereaved consoling themselves by taking new partners, and the freed hastening to put their necks once more under the yoke; for marriage is the only human experience from which we learn no wisdom.

Perhaps this is just as well. If we weren't all plungers, none of us would ever get married, for matrimony is the big gamble of life. In it we stake our all on the turn of a card, and whether we win or lose is pure luck, since there is no earthly way of telling beforehand what sort of a husband or wife a man or maiden will turn out to be.

Your first venture into matrimony was so disastrous that you can at least comfort yourself with the thought that you have been through the worst disillusionment that domesticity can offer. Any other of the fifty-seven known varieties of wives must be better than the one you had, whose only claim to your gratitude was established when she packed her trunks and hiked for Reno.

As I said before, it is strange that your previous experience of matrimony should incline you to try it over again; but, since it does, let us hope that you are making a more fortunate choice in a wife this time and that luck will be with you.

Of Our Own Making.

But did you ever think, son, that luck in matrimony is a good deal like luck in business—principally of our own making? Opportunity and happiness knock on our door, but unless we are on the job, ready to welcome them in, they pass us by. They don't force their way in with a club. They have to be cajoled across the threshold.

So, if you want this second marriage of yours to turn out successfully, it's going to be up to you to strike the keynote, and make it either a grand, sweet song or a scream. What? That's right.

It's the husband's place to make the home happy. Of course, the wife is due to chip in with her little contribution to the general felicity; but no woman, working alone and unaided, can carry out that contract. It's too big for her. It's a man's size job.

To begin with, son, make of your divorce papers a torch to light you on the road of happiness with this marriage. Think back and remember the things that you and your wife quarreled about. Was there a perpetual conflict between you on the money question?

Tell Your Income.

Avoid that snag by telling the girl you are about to marry exactly what your income is, and what she will have to spend. Tell her that she will have to do without many of the things that rich women have, perhaps without many of the luxuries that she has been in the habit of having. That will start out fair with her and give her, at least, a chance to keep out of the box of becoming a poor man's wife, unless she loves you enough to prefer you to fine clothes and an automobile.

Then, when you are married, give her a definite allowance for the house and for her own personal expenses, and give it to her as her due, without making her come to you for it like a beggar. And make her live within her allowance. That's the way to train her into being a good business woman.

Did you and your first wife have a never-ending fight because you stayed out late at night? Don't marry, son, until you are done sowing your wild oats. If you dance attendance on chorus girls and joy-ride them around; if you want to play poker and drink with the boys, stay single, where you'll have perfect liberty to do so. Don't be selfish enough to take a girl away from her home and put her to watching through weary nights for the drag of a drunken husband's footsteps.

Dreary for Girl.

Aside from the heartbreak and the anguish and the anxiety of it all, think how dreary it must be for a woman to spend her evenings alone.

No girl would marry if that was what she expected to get in matrimony, so be just and don't ask one to leave her happy home for you unless you are going to give her one just as happy in return.

A man's idea of doing his full duty by his wife is to give her food and clothes. That isn't enough. He owes her consideration and tenderness and comradeship besides. It's just as much his place to try to be entertaining to her, and meet her with a glad, sweet smile of an evening, as it is hers to try to interest and entertain him. And when a man does this, son, he never has to pay alimony.

Make your own matrimonial luck in the second marriage, son, and may heaven prosper the brave!

.:. The Exact Time .:.

"IF you are interesting in getting mother off on the train you'd better make some arrangement to set my clock right," suggested Mrs. Binkum.

"I certainly am interested," replied Binkum. "But you know, Betsy, that I have no way of setting your clock because my watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day. I never know whether it has lost eight or eighteen minutes and I do not like to gamble on any such important event as your mother's catching her train."

"My clock gains about thirteen minutes a day," said Mrs. Binkum. "Wouldn't that make it easier to get to set it by your watch?"

"Let me think—let me think," mused Binkum. "If a watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day and a clock gains thirteen minutes a day how can a watch be used in setting the clock? And at 12 o'clock fast watch time, what would be the hour by slow clock? I give it up."

"If they would only blow a whistle at noon in this town," said Mrs. Binkum. "I could tell the time at least once a day, and the rest of the time I should be able to tell about what time it was."

"The situation is serious I admit," said Binkum. "If we keep on this way you and I will be two or three days apart. There will come a time, in fact, when it will not even be the same year by our respective timepieces."

"The railroad clock is correct, I suppose?"

"Without a doubt. I can go down to the station, say at 12 o'clock, and start for home immediately. The station is eighteen blocks away. It takes me thirty minutes, about——"

"About! We want the exact time! And, besides, as likely as not you'll stop to talk to somebody. You do not know how long it takes you to walk eighteen blocks."

"I admit that I do not know how long it takes me to walk eighteen blocks. But there is one thing that I can time myself by. You know I was a bricklayer. I can lay just 60 bricks an hour. I am absolutely correct to a dot."

"But how does that help us?"

"It is the only thing I can time myself on."

"Then I will go to the railroad station and at 12 o'clock I'll give you some sort of signal, and you can begine to lay bricks. Then as soon as I get home we can count the bricks and know how many minutes have elapsed since I left the station."

"All right. I'll order the bricks and have the mortar ready. But what sort of signals are you going to give me?"

"I have read that the sound that carries farthest is the sound of a bass fiddle. I'll borrow Uncle John's bass fiddle. Then at precisely 12 o'clock I will get a good big sweep at the bow, and you'll hear it and begin to lay bricks. So when I get home I will know the exact time and set my clock and mother can catch her train."

"Fine!" ejaculated Binkum.

He's Too Kind

"I HAVE no use for the hospitable man!" declared the young architect, who had come in from dining out, and was at the moment engaged in rooting around in the pantry for something to eat.

"I hate a man who carries you proudly off to dinner when you don't want to be entertained. There's Robinson, the soul of hospitality! He's always trying to drag me home with him for dinner, and I have always managed to get away from him until to-night.

"This night he nailed me, and I couldn't get away. You should have seen Mrs. Robinson's expression when he shoved me in through the door.

"He shoved me right into the dining room, into the bosom of his family. His poor wife grabbed some things that were airing by the fireplace, and then hurried out and changed her dress. Then I heard the kitchen range rattling and knew that the unfortunate woman was cooking dinner all over again.

"Robinson was very entertaining for a while. He caught part of what I said, and I caught part of what he said. But he was uneasy and soon bolted out into the kitchen, where debate was immediately in order.

"In due time we had a very unfestive meal. Every once in a while Robinson gave his wife a dig, and she gave him a dig—sort of tennis fashion. I was the net for their little contest and every now and then I got the ball.

"The three kids got spanked and put to bed in relays. That was not exactly delightful for me!

"Robinson is one of the best fellows I ever saw! And I went to school with Emily, his wife. But I am blessed if I like to drop in there for a meal at night and have them play tennis across me in the manner described.

"I like to be treated formally. If a man wants to invite me to dinner, let him take me to the club or proceed to make adequate arrangements with his family ahead of time!"

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Do You Know That—

The longest hunger strike on record was carried out some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt as to his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to escape the guillotine, and from the day of his arrest refused to eat in spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell, and when that failed, attempted forcible feeding. Granie held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which time he died.

It is reported that all German submarines are to be fitted with guns. Two types have been selected—a 12-pounder, which can be housed and a 1-pounder, which will be permanently in position. The older boats will probably carry 1-pounders only. The 12-pounders are on special high-angle mounting for use against aircraft if necessary. The crew of these guns consists of four men, three to work the gun and one to hand the ammunition. The newer boats will carry two of these guns.

Farmers in the Boyertown district of Pennsylvania came for miles round to attend a sale held at Boyertown of a number of heavy rolled steel coffins. A burial casket company purchased the coffins fifteen years ago, but they were too cumbersome and could not be disposed of. The coffins, which were sold at prices ranging from ten cents to a quarter each, will be used by the farmers for watering troughs for their stock.

A new machine, called the stenotype, has been invented, which enables the shorthand writer to get from 400 to 600 words a minute upon paper in an absolutely correct and accurate form. The basis of operating the machine is phonetic spelling. While the work done is virtually the same as done by shorthand, it has the advantage of being recorded in plain English characters.

Nell Brinkley Says:

I WALKED with a sceptic who has scarcely a rag of a dream to his name to believe in, close under a garden wall, warmed by the sun and cuddled close by the fragrant arms of cherry trees in spring bloom. On the broad, flat top of it was a gypsy-like girl of ten, maybe, with a bowl of iridescent suds between her scratched, sun-tanned knees and a head as velvety black as the poplars in the garden must be when night comes. Up into the still scented air she was sending big elastic soap bubbles, hued like a box of loose gems with a shaft of sunlight lying on them, frail discs of perfect beauty which are the vanishing soul of a drop of crystal water. Idly they floated, some long breathless seconds, some but an instant, giving to the wind changing and glowing with swift-running rivers of color before they snapped into thin air with a tiny shatter of splintering light.

"There, by my new straw hat!" quoth the sceptic, "there is the stuff that dreams are made of; there the blowing of them, there the rainbow coloring, there the vanishing into thin air. What are they? Nothing. Why blow them through our little thin pipe in the first place? Only the veriest child takes joy in blowing soap bubbles, and only the simple-minded among grown-ups (your pardon, mad'moiselle) find the making of dreams delectable. They only snap and vanish, and where once our eyes saw a sphere of unutterable beauty there is nothing! Ah, ah, I don't dream any more, my child. They amount in the end to just a bit of elastic color that we cannot touch or breathe upon—pf!—there is nothing there. Dreamers are fools, out of a drop of ether, colorless it is true, but very real and material stuff which they can at least possess. Out of this tiny but satisfactory thing they insist on stretching a gorgeous thing that a breath will break."

"Nevertheless," quoth I in return, I who am so much less wise and who have so much a better time, "nevertheless, the little kid on the wall is having a better time than you. The bursting of one thin bubble is just nothing. There are countless more in the bowl between her knees. What is the vanishing of one lovely-hued thing when you have the making of endless more? What is the breaking of one little tiny dream of yours when you have the source of countless more in your head and heart? There is the big dream of all—wise man—the bowl—the bowl! Real it is, too—just soap and water. There is the big dream of all, wise man, the head and the heart that are the source of frail and lovely dreams! Real they are, too—red blood and brain. There is where you are poor, m'sieu. You have considered the bubble too deeply, and you haven't the bowl!"

The little black head on the wall went on blowing thin, lovely planets into the spring air, and her eyes were thoughtful enough to make me think she saw child dreams of the things that are to be in their opalescent sides. It looked lots of fun, and it IS fun to blow dreams, for without dreams (real dreams are ambitions) where would we be? After all, would we care about a bubble at all if we could hold it in our hand and play with it? For that matter, we can go buy us a big crystal or a pretty marble any day.

Hasn't Found It.

Jackson—Bunker has got himself into a nice fix.

Johnson—How?

Jackson—He wrote an article on "The Ideal Wife" for a ladies' paper last month.

Johnson—Well, what's that got to do with his present fix?

Jackson—Somebody told his wife about it, and she's been reading the thing over during the past two days trying to discover a single trait wherein his ideal resembles her. She hasn't found it, and Bunker dines in the city now.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A minister in a small country village, who was noted for his absent-mindedness, was once observed to stop suddenly in the middle of his sermon and heard to mutter:

"I knew she would—I knew she would!"

After the service was over some one asked him the reason.

"Dear me," said he, "did I? Well, you know, from the pulpit I can just see old Mrs. Rogers' garden, and this morning she was out pulling up a cabbage, and I thought to myself 'Now, if that cabbage comes up suddenly she'll go over,' and just then it came up and over she went."

Brown—I've got an excellent plan for getting rid of duns.

Green—Ah! That so?

Brown—I have. Never fails.

Green—Then, old fellow, you must let me into the secret, for I'm worried to death by 'em.

Brown—Well, I've tried it several times of late and I find the man never comes back again.

Green—Aye, aye! what do you do?

Brown—I pay him.

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see I'm rather busy just now. I hung Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your churchwarden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled-looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly remarked the woman as she counted the contents of her purse.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

The father looked at Mary with a reproach that was pathetic.

"See," he said, and his voice was for once thin with passion, "see what you've done to my boy!"

Mary had held her eyes on Dick. There had been in her gaze a conflict of emotions, strong and baffling. Now, however, when the father spoke, her face grew more composed and her eyes met his coldly. Her voice was level and vaguely dangerous as she answered his accusation.

"What is that compared to what you have done to me?"

Gilder stared at her in honest amazement. He had no suspicion as to the tragedy that lay between him and her.

"What have I done to you?" he questioned, uncomprehending.

Mary moved forward, passing beyond the desk, and continued her advance toward him until the two stood close together, face to face. She spoke softly, but with an intensity of supreme feeling in her voice.

"Do you remember what I said to you the day you had me sent away?"

The merchant regarded her with stark lack of understanding.

"I don't remember you at all," he said.

The woman looked at him intently for a moment, then spoke in a colorless voice:

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store. And perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy-jowled man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember. Yes? There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off—only, you asked the judge to make an example of her."

The man to whom she spoke had gone gray a little. He began to understand, for he was not lacking in intelligence. Somehow, it was borne in on him that this woman had a grievance beyond the usual run of injuries.

"You are that girl?" he said. It was not a question, rather an affirmation.

Mary spoke with the dignity of long suffering—more than that, with the confident dignity of a vengeance long delayed, now at last achieved. Her words were simple enough, but they reached to the heart of the man accused by them.

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again, remorselessly.

"You took away my good name. You smashed my life. You put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. . . . Well, I've begun to collect."

Burke Shouts a Warning.

The man opposite her, the man of vigorous form, of strong face and keen eyes, stood gazing intently for long moments. In that time he was learning many things. Finally he spoke:

"And that is why you married my boy."

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

Convincingly, save to one—her husband. Dick suddenly aroused and spoke with the violence of one sure.

"It is not!"

Burke shouted a warning. Demarest, more diplomatic, made a restraining gesture toward the police official, then started to address the young man soothingly.

But Dick would have none of their interference.

"This is my affair," he said, and the others fell silent. He stood up and went to Mary and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you loved me."

The wife shuddered, but she strove to deny.

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not!"

"And you love me now!" he went on, insistingly.

"No, no!" Mary's denial came like a cry for escape.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated, bitterly.

But he was inexorable.

"Look me in the face and say that."

He took her face in his hands, lifted it, and his eyes met hers searchingly.

"Look me in the face and say that," he repeated.

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. The three watchers dared not interrupt this drama of emotions, but at last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly. Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I Do Not Love You."

"I do not love you."

In the instant of reply Dick Gilder, by some inspiration of love, changed his attitude.

"Just the same," he said cheerfully, "you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me."

Mary felt a thrill of fear through her very soul.

"You can't!" she cried harshly. "You are his son!"

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care a d—n what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll put all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart, because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke, with his rousing voice, spoke again:

"I tell you, she's a crook!"

Mary moved a little and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"She didn't get her time for good behavior."

Mary raised her head haughtily, with a gesture of high disdain.

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers?"

Gilder moved fussily.

"And you——"

Mary swayed a little, standing there before her questioner.

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago you took away my name—and gave me a number.... Now I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XV.
Aftermath of Tragedy.

THE Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger. Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. In these hours of grief the soul of him put out its strength. He learned beyond peradventure of doubt that the woman whom he had married was in truth an ex-convict, even as Burke and Demarest had declared.

Nevertheless, he did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim.

He Remained Loyal.

He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder. In his summing of her, he set as more than an offset to her unrighteousness in this regard the desperate struggle she had made after leaving prison to keep straight, which, as he learned, had ended in her attempt at suicide.

He knew the intelligence of this woman whom he loved, and in his heart was no thought of her faults as vital flaws. It seemed to him rather that circumstances had compelled her, and that through all the suffering of her life she had retained the more beautiful qualities of her womanliness, for which he reverenced her. In the closeness of their association, short as it had been, he had learned to know something of the tenderer depths within her, the kindliness of her, the wholesomeness.

Swayed as he was by the loveliness of her, he was yet more enthralled by those inner qualities of which the outer beauty was only the fitting symbol.

So in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers and abandon her. On the contrary, his only purpose was to gain her for himself, to cherish and guard her against every ill, to protect with his love from every attack of shame or injury.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me, but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it, with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Maine.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Evelyn's great moment had come. She looked at the coffee service of gold—she thought of Neustadt Castle, the home of brave men and women of her race for long hundreds of years—she visioned the treasury of Taunus empty quite of gold. She was only a girl with a girl's longing heart—but this was the home of her ancestors—and Gustavus was the last of a race that must be preserved at any cost. She struggled for a light tone. "I could care a great deal if you were to dawdle here over your breakfast and miss your important engagement with the bankers of Frankfort. When the treasury is quite stocked with gold pieces, Gustavus, may I go to Paris to visit Klausthal, and bring back all the lovely Paris fashions?"

Gustavus looked at her with bitter scorn. "So you are scheming too—the one pure, good thing I had ever known. You caress with lying eyes that you may have Paris gowns. And for one wild moment I had thought I could give it all up—the old castle—the old home—and go to Paris like Klausthal—abdicate—for you."

The Prince strode from the room—the Frankfort business must not fail now, and because Evelyn was a princess and must never forget her royal dignity, she did not fling her sobbing body across the old mahogany breakfast table as a simple girl of our world might have done. Instead, walking with stately mien—and trembling knees and blinded eyes—to her old tower room, she sat there at her rose-hung window and watched her youth die, the while Gustavus, magnificent in royal uniform of cream and blue, rode away to Frankfort—and fortune.

.. .. .. Down the Highway, ...

Down the highway clattered Gustavus, Count Fehrenberg by his side and two grooms at the rear. In Neustadt Castle a girl lay crumpled across a canopied bed of old mahogany, and was fighting for the mere desire to live. In Jew's lane another girl stood merry-hearted and gay and watched the light play in prismatic color on the glory of her necklace—little unconscious Charlotte, into whose hands Destiny was soon to deliver the threads of many lives. What will you do, Charlotte? What can you do when your hour strikes? Evelyn met her hour—and you?

So many a man rides down the highway of life while a woman waits at either end of the road.

Playing the Game.

As they galloped through the spring sunshine Fehrenberg's eyes were alight with mischief at the great coup he had Gustavus had planned the night before, and when the first meetings had been concluded after their arrival at the lucky house in Jews' Lane, he reminded his sovereign of their little game.

Gustavus banished two tender, loving, lying eyes from his mind—those eyes had journeyed in his memory from Neustadt Castle to Jews' Lane, but now he must "play the game."

"Of course, quite right. Gentlemen, I wish to creat you knights of my family order. To your oldest I give the decoration generally conferred for valor on the field. The motto is "Undaunted." I choose this decoration for you, because you are so bold as to be about to lend me money. No soldier could display greater courage." He smiled whimsically as he turned from Amsche l to Solomon. "And you, Baron, I create a commander of this honorable order. I consider that your courage rose yesterday to supreme heights. Allow me to point out that the ribbon is so wide that in warm weather it will save the necessity of a waistcoat."

If this was indeed a game—even if he were being made game of—Solomon would play it too. He bowed low. "Your Highness, I thank you in the name of all of us for the manner in which it pleases and amuses you to honor us."

From the doorway a gentle voice spoke, and as his grandmother and cousin came into the room, the somber, wounded-animal look that had never left Jacob's face since the veiled insults of the Prince of Klausthal-Agorda had brought it there, suddenly cleared like the rising of a gray mist.

Held Out Her Hand.

Holding out her hand and bowing with dignified self-possession, Frau Gudula spoke to the Heir of Neustadt and Taunus: "You are welcome, Duke Gustavus, to my house. How do you do, Count Fehrenberg."

"Dear Baroness," said Gustavus to Charlotte, "if I do not speak my thoughts to you, it is because your beauty makes a pretty speech appear so plain!"

Charlotte chose to be demure. "I thank Your Highness for your reserve."

Even for pretty speeches, Solomon meant to brook no delay. If there was to be coquetry it might well come later, when the contract was duly signed and sealed. "May I propose that we settle our financial business at once?" and thereat, in solemn procession the four brothers followed the Duke and Count Fehrenberg to the unpretentious little office upstairs, where lay the agreement and twelve million florins in gold and notes!

"What are you waiting for, Jacob?"

"I do not like this business—nor will I share its profit."

"My boy, we always share our duties when the family is decided, whether they are pleasant duties or not. You must take your place with them. I have no wish to entertain the Duke in this house—but I must do so now he is here. I am going now to choose some of your grandfather's old Burgundy with which to do honor to the unwelcome guest who is in my house. Think it over while I am gone, my little Jacob."

Charlotte went after her grandmother and shut the door with a great show of importance. With girlish eagerness, and merrily withal, she entered on the interview that must make or mar four lives.

"Cousin Jacob—why are you so much against lending money to the Duke?"

GOOD FOR 1,000 VOTES.

Only One Nomination Blank Can be Voted for Any Contestant.

Great will be the scramble for coupons to-morrow.

Inadvertently, the coupon calling for 15 votes in The Georgian and American's pony contest was omitted from last Sunday's issue of The American. After consultation and debate, it was decided that the fairest thing to do would be to make the coupon in the next Sunday paper valued at 30 votes. This was done.

No sooner was it announced than the contestants began laying plans for getting copies of to-morrow's American. In hundreds of cases subscribers were canvassed early in the week and induced to promise to save to-morrow's coupon for contestants.

News dealers were besieged with inquiries, and many of them have increased their orders for to-morrow, foreseeing unusual demand.

Watch the totals rise as soon as these coupons begin to come in. But they are rising already.

The names and standings of contestants follow:

MEMPHIS COTTON HOUSE SHOWS CONDITION 83.1 P. C.

MEMPHIS, May 24.—In a special report issued to-day, Miller-Carter made public their first report of cotton acreage and condition, as compiled by their crop reporting bureau, which is in charge of Mr. Turner. The returns are made up to May 21.

The average for the United States shows condition of 93.1 per cent and acreage increase of 2.7 per cent.

The following table shows the condition by States:

	May 21, 1913. Per Cent.	Acreage Compared to Last Year.
North Carolina	77	102
South Carolina	73	100
Georgia	74	99
Alabama	79	100
Mississippi	89	104
Tennessee	93	105
Arkansas	89	105
Louisiana	86	120
Oklahoma	92	110
Texas	86	102

OATS CROP BAD IN WISCONSIN.

CHICAGO, May 24.—B. W. Snow wires from Sedalia, Mo.: "Central Missouri counties have had scattered but insufficient rains. During the past week wheat has lost the extra promise that characterized it early in the season, but with seasonable conditions hereafter will make more than an average crop. The crop is heading in the River counties, but will not harvest until last week in June.

"Oats are irreparably damaged—yellow and thin—considerable may be classed as practically a failure. Only the early sown is promising; acreage is reduced. Corn still being planted and some plowing yet to do; ground dry and hard to work.

"The early planted is in good shape and is up with a good stand."

OPINIONS ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows light rains in the Northwest and generally fair over the rest of the belt. Look for narrow market, as traders will take no big chances on either side of the market over Sunday.

Corn—The market continues to show a very strong undertone.

Oats—We believe the long side of the market on sharp reactions will prove safest.

Provisions—Look for prices to go higher.

COTTON STEADIER ON MILLS DEMAND

Bearish Condition Report Causes Sharp Decline From Early Best Figure.

NEW YORK, May 24.—On bullish weather news and increasing firmness in the cotton goods market the cotton market opened steady to-day, with first prices at a net gain of 4 to 8 points from last night's close. The ring showed a disposition to buy on all breaks, which helped in sustaining the market. After the call, however, the list became unsettled and easier, influenced by weather bulletins reporting lower temperatures over the Eastern belt.

This class of selling caused prices to drop sharply. At the end of the first hour prices were 2 to 5 points under the opening quotations. Later the selling became freer, based upon the report of a prominent spot house in Memphis, giving the condition of the crop at 83.1 per cent to May 21, and acreage increase of 2.7 per cent.

The market, however, held rather steady at the decline, through week-end short covering. July closed at 11.73 and October 11.20. The entire list at the close aggregated a net gain of 1 to 6 points from the final quotations of Friday. The tone was steady.

Estimated cotton receipts:

U. P. MAKES BIG GAIN; ALSO S. P.

Insiders Purchase U. P. Heavily on Rumor That It Will Fare Well in the Dissolution.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 24.—A combination composed of a selling movement and absence of demand carried off prices of most of the issues at the opening of the stock market to-day.

Canadian Pacific was lowest, opening at 235½ for a loss of 1⅞. Among the others were Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¾; Chesapeake and Ohio, ⅛; Erie, ¼; Reading, ¼; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; United States Steel common, ⅜. Northern Pacific made a slight fractional gain.

The curb market was quiet.

Americans in London were firm. The hostilities between Bulgaria and Greece threaten to oppress the foreign markets and reflect an impressive sympathy on Americans.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged. Other bonds firm.

WHEAT GOES UP ON CROP SCARE

Each Option Soars Over a Cent. Crop Advices Conflicting, but Had No Effect.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red 105
Corn—No. 2 60½
Oats—No. 2 40½

CHICAGO, May 24.—The "annual crop scare" was on in earnest to-day and advances were shown of ¾c to 1½c for wheat, with the July the strongest spot in the list and September the weakest. As for several days past, the reports received from Kansas were conflicting in character, but this did not seem to have any effect on the professionals around whom the trade was centered. The outsider has not come into the market to any extent, owing to fears of manipulation, coupled with the possibility of suffering losses in case of soaking rains where needed overnight in the Southwest.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c higher. Oats were ⅜c lower for the May, ⅛c lower for July, but ¼c higher for September.

There were small advances in provisions and the undercurrent was one of strength.

Telling the Age of Fowls When Found Upon the Market

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Years ago there were more old fowls put upon the markets than there are to-day. Then the people would not part with their laying hens until they were too old to lay and get about the premises—then was the time it was thought to sell them. It mattered but little what the consumer thought about it so long as they got them off of their hands.

In those days it was considered part of the housekeeper's trade to be able to tell the difference between a hen one year old and a six-year-old. It was a point to notice whether the spur was hard and tight to the bone of the leg or rather soft and movable when you attempted to push it from side to side. If the former, it was an old one.

The smooth, bright scales on the legs usually indicate a young hen, although it is not an infallible rule, for we have seen hens four years old retain legs as bright as one a year old.

If you are undecided by these methods, try pressing the underpart of the bill. If it is very flexible, it is a young hen; if hard and stiff, it is very naturally otherwise. On a young hen the claws are also rather short and rather clear looking, and not stiff.

The turkey when old has long, hard, strong claws, and hard calloused places on the bottoms of the feet. They also have a long beard when they are old. Even the hens have this. It is really easier to tell the age of a live fowl than of a dressed one. On a dressed fowl the usual test is to feel of the point of the breastbone farthest from the head. It is rather soft and flexible on a young fowl, with a feeling like gristle. On the old ones it assumes the hard, stiff, bonelike or flinty nature. The feet, legs and neck of young fowls are large in proportion to the size of the body.

A fowl that has been dry picked will look younger in quality and appearance of flesh than one that has been scalded. It will look more natural in color of skin and not be so dull looking. Young ducks and geese will be plump looking with flesh of a semi-transparent look.

Another method for selecting a duck or goose when they are dressed is to take hold of the toes and pull them apart; if the web separates easily it is young.

Breeding Up a Flock.

Judge Marshall: We are trying to breed up a flock of thoroughbred Brown Leghorns and want a point or two from you as to what to expect in the crosses. Should the rooster have five or six points? Also, should the comb on the hen stand up straight like that on the rooster?

Chester, S. C. J. R. S.

Answer: The standard calls for five points on the male and female both of the single Comb Brown Leghorns. This is made as a ruling for those who are raising exhibition stock. If they happen to have four or six points it does not go to show that they are not pure bred.

You say you are grading up a flock of Brown Leghorns. If you are really doing what you say you are we would say don't. If you are trying to get a really fine lot of Leghorns by breeding good stock of males and females onto common or mixed stock you will certainly have a long and hard road to travel. The process is too slow, and the time spent is worth so much more for something else that it will pay you very much better to just buy a good trio to breed from and raise some really good stock the first year. Or buy about two or three settings of good eggs from a reliable party. Life is too short and this is too progressive an age to spend your time trying to produce what has taken others years and years of time to accomplish. Then you have the choice of buying day-old chicks at a nominal price at this season of the year, and they are all ready to grow. After you have gotten the best stock that money will buy you will then have an opportunity to try your skill at keeping them up to as high a standard as they were when you got them. The hen's comb should not stand up like the male's, but should turn smoothly over to one side of the head.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

Forrest & George Adair

WE CAN SELL you a nice, NEW 6-room BUNGALOW with bath and every modern convenience for $3,000, and others for $3,300 and $3,500, on EASY TERMS. These bungalows are situated in the beautiful and coming section of Murray Hill in North Kirkwood, and are bargains at the price. It is a pleasure to show them.

GOOD NEW HOMES: Listen, on Moreland Avenue, corner of Albemarble, we are just completing a beautiful two-story, seven-room bungalow. This place has an abundance of large and roomy closets, tile bath, exposed ceiling beams, stone front, stone steps, and it is on a corner lot; birch doors, the best of hardware; will tint walls to suit your own taste. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. To see this is to buy it. Take a look and come to see us.

ON NORTH AVENUE, close to Highland Avenue, we have just completed a pretty six-room home with two baths; it is seldom that you find a place so well built and so complete in every detail as this one. Each bath has tile floor; large rooms, plenty of light and furnace heat. Will take a good lot in part payment for this. It is close to school and churches, within a stone's throw of Druid Hills; car just a block away. Or will sell on easy terms.

ON BEAUTIFUL Cleburne Avenue we are offering the best value in the city in a new six-room, hall and bath bungalow with tile floor on front porch and in bath room, dressing mirrors, stone steps, and automobile drive on side. This lot has a frontage of 70 feet. If you have been waiting for a large lot here it is. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. We know that you will like this.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Permit Is Taken For Fine Residence

Ben Z. Phillips to Build $28,000 Home on Ponce DeLeon Ave. Small Sales.

Ben Z. Phillips, member of the well-known law firm of Slaton & Phillips, applied through his representative, W. P. Francis, contracting builder, Saturday morning for a permit to erect a residence at 894 Ponce DeLeon Avenue to cost $28,150.

This will be one of the most attractive homes in the section. It will be a two-story brick veneer affair, with ten rooms and a tile roof.

Very few homes built so far during 1913 have exceeded this figure. One of them is the Venable stone castle at Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Oakdale Road; another is Mrs. J. M. High's mansion on the west side of Peachtree just north of Fifteenth Street, and still another is Mrs. Hunter Cooper's Italian house on the east side of Peachtree at Brookwood, just north of J. H. Nunnally's place.

Residence Lots Sold.

Several sales in the Howell Mill Road subdivision were announced Saturday by the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company. This concern sold to Miss Clara Perry, of Madison, two lots on Holmes Street for $1,200 cash; to A. W. Baughn, on Belle Meade Avenue, a lot for $600, and to G. C. Bohannon, on the same avenue, a lot for $600. All of the lots are 54 by 145 feet.

Peachtree Sale of Record.

A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, seller, and Ben J. Massell, buyer, have put on record papers conveying a 21 by 158 foot lot on Peachtree for $25,296. This property is on the east side of Peachtree, 223 feet north of Pine Street, and is in litigation through a suit filed several days ago to recover part of two acres in this block. The petitioners are suing the people holding the original deeds, and not those having bond-for-title interests.

Dr. VanHoose retains some 42 feet in a 63-foot parcel which he purchased several months ago from Porter Langston. The 21-foot strip to Mr. Massell brought approximately $1,205 a front foot.

Two Sales Bring $17,900.

The Atlanta Land Investment Company has bought from the E. M. Atwood estate and others through the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency an acreage tract on Williams and Thirteenth Streets for $15,000. The West Agency has bought from J. C. Perry for Miss Clifford Morgan West 23 Pierce Street, near Stewart Avenue, a five-room cottage on a 43 by 138-foot lot for $2,900.

Another Country Home.

Well-known citizens continue to seek the rural districts for homes. Charles E. Harman, general passenger agent of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, has bought a heavily timbered lot fronting 600 feet on Howell Mill Road and 540 feet on the Collier Road, and will erect a fine country residence. The seller of the lot was the Provident Trust Company, but the price was withheld. The property is in the neighborhood of the residences of Thomas B. Felder, Smith D. Pickett and others.

Made in Atlanta--A Permanent Exhibition of Our Goods Would be a Liberal Education to the Whole Country--The Time to Act Is NOW.

The plan of the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta to install a permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods in this city is excellent.

Chattanooga has an exhibition along similar lines, and it is proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of this city that the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta shall study this exhibit in Chattanooga, and install an exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods here, so that people of the entire south, and other parts of the country as well, may know exactly what MADE IN ATLANTA goods really mean.

The Georgian suggests that the business men of Atlanta take up this question at once, with the idea of devoting a week during this summer or early fall to a SHOW THEM exhibition of the 1,000 or more articles that are now manufactured in Atlanta by the 600 manufacturers now engaged in such work.

An exhibition of this kind would attract the attention of business men and merchants from all over the south. The railroads would undoubtedly offer low rates to travelers; hotel accommodations are ample, and with the superb summer weather that Atlanta always enjoys, an exhibition week here would be beneficial to all concerned.

A permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods would be a liberal education. Atlanta needs that kind of an exhibition. MADE IN ATLANTA should mean the highest standard of merit. Articles made in Atlanta will undoubtedly find a ready sale all over the country, as soon as it is known what Atlanta really can do.

Every business man in Atlanta, no matter in what enterprise he is engaged, should help this movement along. It will mean much to the city. It will make for progress in every direction.

The Georgian congratulates the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the manufacturers and merchants of this city in taking up this permanent exhibition idea, and hopes it will be pushed forward in an active way.

What Is To Be Done for These Women and Others Like Them?

Who Will Answer the Questions That These Human Question Marks Permanently Represent in Our Civilization? Isn't It Time TO MAKE A BEGINNING?

Copyright, 1913.

Hold this paper at arm's length and the three women at the top of the page look like three question marks.

AND THEY ARE THREE QUESTION MARKS.

They are the oldest question marks in the world, or at least in the world as long as men have lived on it, some two or three hundred thousand years.

From the beginning women have done the hard work, the dull work, the work that wears the brain, the body and the nerves, AND THE HORRIBLE WORK THAT HOLDS OUT NO FUTURE HOPE.

These question marks stand out on our so-called "civilization" of to-day.

You have the girl in her childhood bending over the machine. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to set her free?

You have the young woman bending over her child, in poverty, misery and anxiety. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to make your boasted civilization and prosperity free her from a life of sorrow, worry and want?

You have the older woman bending over the washtub, using up the last fragment of vitality and energy, painfully and slowly doing work which could be done quickly and easily by a machine—if it were "worth while" for men to use their intelligence and their machinery to free women from slavery.

How are you going to free these three slaves, straighten up their backs and answer the questions which they represent?

We have more than half a thousand solemn statesmen in Washington. And we have thousands in the Capitols of the States.

They are discussing laws and "economic questions," talking, advising, sometimes honestly urging, more often dishonestly selling their opinions.

When will they find time among other questions to take up the three questions at the top of this page?

Is it not almost time to make a BEGINNING?

And wouldn't the best beginning be the fixing OF A MINIMUM WAGE FOR WORKING GIRLS AND WOMEN?

That would be at least a start. It would stop or check the present profitable money making schemes of hiring and working girls and women for less than it costs to feed them properly.

It is true that you could not in this way free from misery the wives of underpaid workingmen, or the mothers, old and half worn out.

But you could at least BEGIN with the wages of women, making it a crime to force a woman by poverty and want to work for such wages as mean a life half starved.

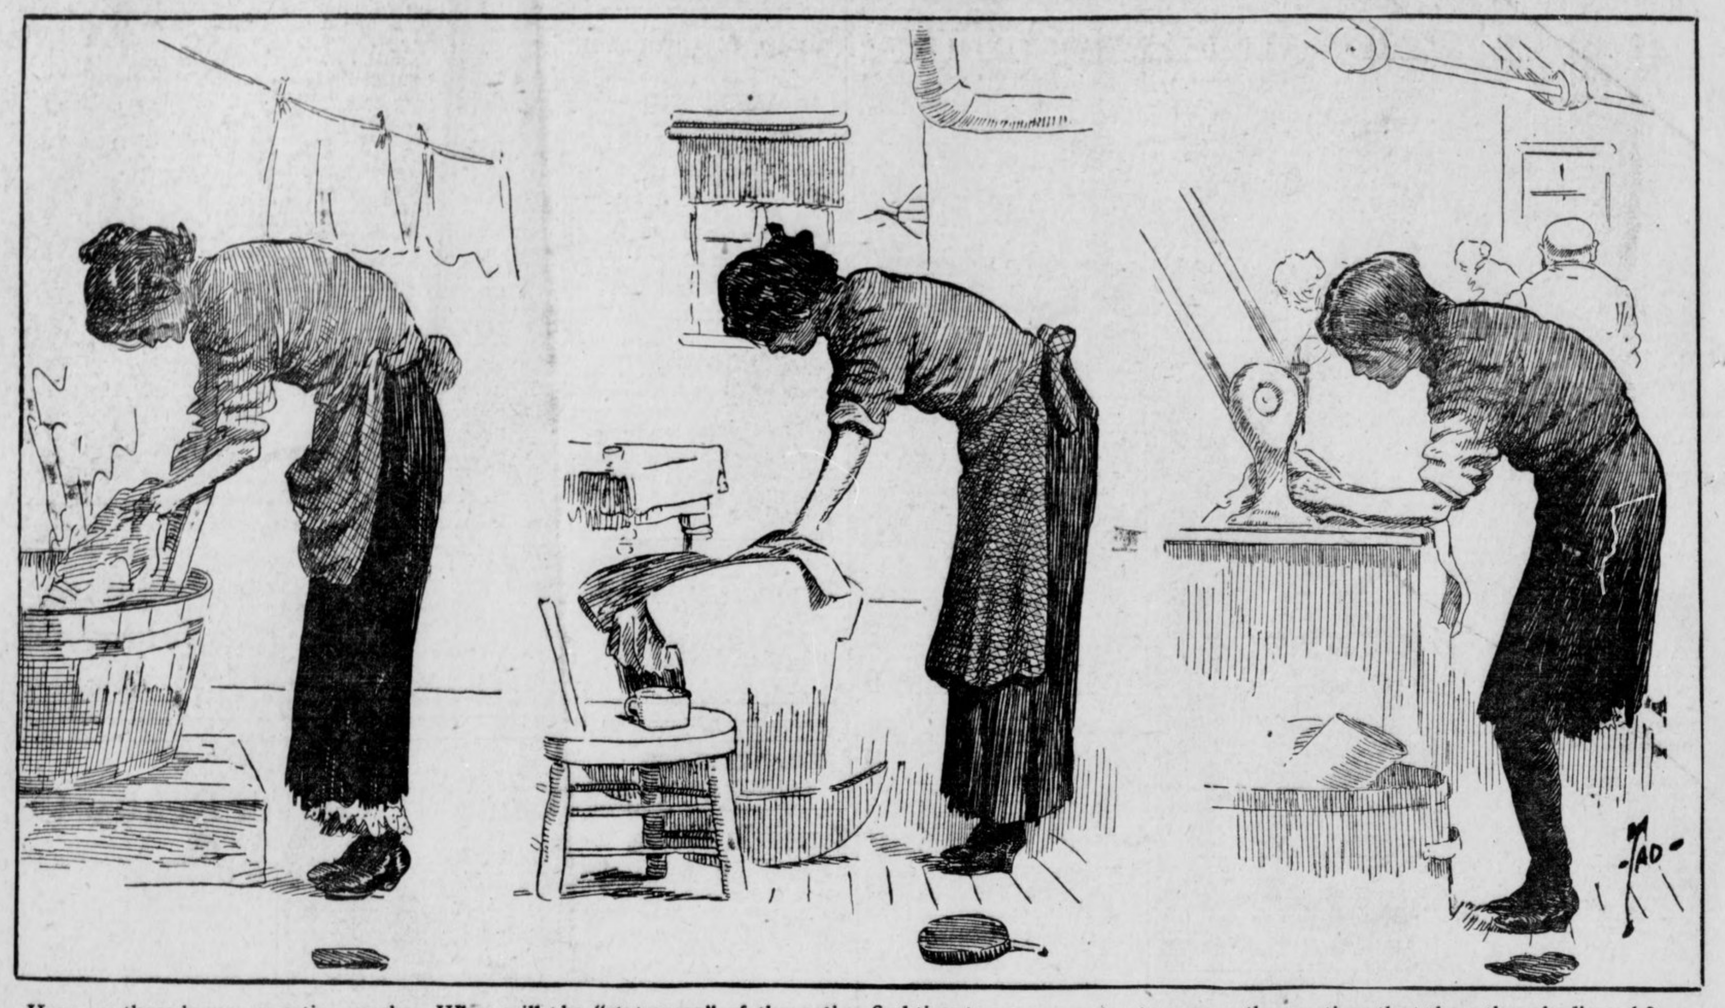
Who cares now for these miserable women?

What voice have they? They can't send a man to Congress, or take him from Congress.

They can't put a judge on the bench or take him off the bench.

How long must women wait for their rights? How long shall this picture continue? How long shall these human question marks bend over their tasks, neglected and forgotten?

Living Questions



Here are three human question marks. When will the "statesmen" of the nation find time to answer, or try to answer, the questions that these three bodies ask?

What Is Ideal Love in a Man?

The Highest Type of Lover Is at Once Friend, Mate, Defender and Comrade to the Woman He Loves.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

WHAT is the highest ideal of man's love for woman?

It is a more difficult question to answer than its companion—woman's ideal love for man—because woman is a more difficult being to satisfy in the matter of the affections than man.

Given an orderly home, a well-supplied table and a tactful, cheerful woman to reign, and the average man is content with his domestic relations. But emotional woman wants more than these conditions grant. She wants continuous praise, a frequently recurring touch of sentiment, and even a misunderstanding, now and then, followed by a reconciliation, is sweeter to her than a monotony of unexpressed satisfaction.

The Ideal Lover.

The ideal lover takes into consideration all these peculiarities of feminine temperament, and adapts himself to them in a reasonable degree.

Almost every woman, the most ardent and romantic as well as the phlegmatic, realizes at times the maternal element in her love for a man. It is this which aids her in being his patient nurse in hours of illness and his stimulus in times of despondency, and it is that lack of graver and more paternal element in man's love which detracts from its ideality so often.

When he does possess it man is liable to overdo the matter and to become the slave of his lady's hysterical moods and to encourage her weaknesses and her selfish whims.

The lover who is at once kind, sympathetic and masterful is seldom found, yet he alone illustrates the highest order of love.

The ideal lover is he who commands his wife's or sweetheart's respect and admiration, together with her love; who makes her realize that his standards of womanhood and of life are high, and that he expects her to do her part toward maintaining them, and who is capable of drawing a fine line between devotion and servility.

The ideal lover of either sex is not a slave or a coward.

The moment those elements enter into a love its standard is lowered.

I once heard a wife say that she would not live with a man who told her he thought another woman beautiful. She felt that his love for her should blind his eyes to the beauty of all others.

The man loved his wife, but while his lips were silent on the subject of others' charms, his furtive glances of admiration often bespoke the sentiments of his mind. That man's love was not ideal, since it lacked the courage to make his wife understand how she belittled herself in his eyes.

The ideal lover does not entertain his wife by expatiating on the charms of other women for hours, but he does express his respectful admiration on occasions.

It Lacked Courage.

He strives to bring out the very best and noblest qualities in the woman whom he has chosen for his life mate and to aid her developing into a perfect womanhood. He is her friend and her protector as well as her lover and admirer. He looks out for her best interests, but he never forgets that she has an individuality of her own which is to be respected and considered. She is his mate and his companion, not his chattel or his servant.

She is to be advised and guided, but not commanded or coerced.

The highest type of lover realizes that a woman has a spirit and a soul, as well as a body.

The man who hides a woman away and tries to keep her from all association with her kind and all pleasures not directly bestowed by him is not an ideal lover, however madly he adores her.

His love savors too much of that of the bear who carries the lamb to its cave to devour it at leisure.

Neither is that the highest type of love which encourages a woman's foolish ambitions and unworthy aims.

I have known a man to plume himself as a model husband because he gave his assistance to a silly wife—the mother of his children—who conceived an aspiration for a theatrical career. She possessed no atom of talent, and made herself only the object of ridicule and pity to all observers, while she left her husband—a good man, of ample means—and her children to the care of domestics.

Had the woman been a great genius, born to do some special work in life and no other, the husband's unselfishness would have been "ideal."

Highest Type of Lover.

A man must be a woman's truest friend in order to be also her ideal lover. He must possess appreciation of all her best qualities, sympathy for all her feminine weaknesses, the courage to warn her when her highest good demands it, and the wisdom to direct her when counsel is needed. He must be delicate enough never to make her feel her financial dependence upon him, and he must possess the will power and self-control to make his loyalty to her under all conditions that which he expects of her.

Yes, he must be strong enough to keep her from leading him into financial ruin, and lover enough to keep her responsive to his demonstrations of affection. Friend, defender, lover, comrade, mate—all these must be he who possesses "the highest type of love" for woman.

"The God-Blessed Macs"

Dr. White Says in the Storm the Presbyterians Are Oak and Rock, but in the Sunshine They Are Vine and Flower.

Written for The Georgian by REV. JOHN E. WHITE, pastor Second Baptist Church.

TWO good-natured witticisms at the expense of the Presbyterians by the late Sam Jones have just passed into oblivion beyond recall. He said that the only objection to be had against the Presbyterians was that there are so few of them, and that "The Presbyterians pay more for their religion and get less fun out of it than any people on earth."

The historic gathering of 1,500 commissioners in Atlanta, representing American Presbyterians, has abruptly made an end of the first complaint, and their lively proceedings in debate and the good cheer they have radiated on our streets and in our homes leaves no ground for the other.

The Presbyterians number nearly 5,000,000 in the world and constitute one-fifth of the evangelical force of Christianity. They have furnished their full share to the entertainment of history.

Definite Distinctions.

The English and Welsh names of Smith and Jones represent our largest American classification of surnames, but the folks whose names carry the handle of the "God-blessed Macs" belong to a class of quality incomparable in weight and achievement.

Next to the Jews the Macs have preserved through generations a distinctive character. They are not all Presbyterians, but there is a Presbyterian quality in them all.

Presbyterianism is only a denominational subdivision—a fragment broken off from Scotch granite; but the Presbyterian essence has gone with Scotchmen into every nook and corner of American character. Its leaven is pungent and penetrating, and if they could only monopolize it and secure a royal patent on all it permeates, the Presbyterians would lay claim to the most immense religious areas. But there is no monopoly in truth, and the Presbyterians are debtors also. Renan said "Jesus begat Paul, Paul begat Augustine, Augustine begat John Calvin, John Calvin begat John Knox."

It is with difficulty that Protestants are reminded that Augustine was Roman Catholic. Aside from theological heredity, the Presbyterians, taken as they are, constitute in the world an incalculable value to human character far beyond their numerical strength.

It is not generally known that the name Scotland was stolen from the little country now known as Ireland. Scotia, before the tenth century, was a territorial term, while Scotus was a race name and the generic term of Scoti embraced the people of that race, whether inhabiting Ireland or Britain.

After the tenth century the

REV. JOHN E. WHITE.

principal stronghold of the people designated Scoti included nine counties in the North of Ireland as well as the Western part of Scotland.

The Scotch-Irish, therefore, are not a mixture of Irish and Scotch blood, but are the pure Scotch who happened to be geographically identified with Northern Ireland. The main contribution to American life from the Scotch came from this region. They brought their quality with them, and it was a fighting quality.

The first Scotch-Irish clergyman to land in America, in 1682, landed in jail immediately, charged with the offense of preaching the Gospel at a private house.

The first great Scotch-Irish lawyer spoke a piece in Virginia about "Give me liberty or give me death." At Mecklenburg, North Carolina, the Scotch-Irish raised the first standard of defiance to Great Britain.

At Alamance, in North Carolina, ten years before, they had fought the first skirmish of the American Revolution.

When George Washington saw red-coats landing at every seaport he said that if the worst came to the worst he would gather the Scotch-Irishmen around him and make a fortress of liberty in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

At King's Mountain the Scotch-Irish, under three Presbyterian elders, flung victory into the teeth of despair and saved the cause of Independence.

The Presbyterians may not claim them all, but we all claim them.

Good Soldiers—Good Brothers.

We have had a large flavor of this life for ten days in Atlanta. All our under-estimates are revised.

We have seen the Presbyterians as many and we know them as much. We have marked them as good soldiers, and we have felt them as good brothers. We have witnessed them in their conflicts, and we have warmed toward them in our homes.

If in the storm they are oak and rock, in the sunshine they are vine and flower.

JUST YOU

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

ALL the selfish joys of earth,
I am getting through—
That which used to lure and lead
Now I pass and give no heed;
Only one thing seems of worth—
Just you.

Not for me the lonely height,
And the larger view;
Lowlier ways seem fair and wide,
While we wander side by side.
One thing makes the whole world bright—
Just you.

Not for distant goals I run,
No great aim pursue;
Most of earth's ambitions seem
Like a shadow of a dream
All the world to me means one—
Just you.

CHURCH AND RURAL LIFE BOARD IS DOOMED

Attempt to Save Mission Department of the Northern Presbyterians Fails.

Defenders of the church and country life department of the Board of Home Missions went down to an inglorious parliamentary defeat at the forenoon session of the Northern Presbyterian Assembly.

As a result the report of the executive commission stands that this department "shall be discontinued as soon as practicable."

Every attempt to revise this decision ran against a stone wall in the ruiings of the moderator. One commissioner after another essayed to speak on the report, but each was told that no question formally was before the assembly.

Rev. John Deans, of Brooklyn, N. Y., asked what interpretation was to be made of "as soon as practicable"—that given by Dr. Mark A. Matthews in presenting the report Wednesday, or that he gave Thursday, or the one he presented Friday morning.

Rev. Deans was informed that he was to accept the final explanation. Rev. T. M. Hall, of the Erie, Pa., Presbytery, sought to introduce a resolution bearing on the subject, but was ruled out of order.

Bars Reconsideration.

As a final recourse, one of the commissioners moved for a reconsideration of the portion of the executive commission's report bearing on the department of church and country life. Moderator Stone ran his eye over the house and ruled that two-thirds of the original assembly considering the question must be present to vote on a reconsideration. It was the moderator's assumption that the two-thirds was not in the auditorium.

Although the church and country life advocates were forced to accept defeat in their fight to establish the department permanently as a part of the Board of Home Missions' activities, those at the head of the work declared that they would be able to accomplish this at the next general assembly.

"We will simply continue the department through the year and then come before the next Assembly on our record," is the statement made Friday of their contemplated plan of campaign.

Professing Christians who spend Sundays in their automobiles or on the golf course came in for unrestrained criticism from Rev. Frederick J. Sauber, of Marcellus, N. Y., who submitted the report of the committee on Christian life and work.

Apathy Blamed for Vice.

The apathy and indifference of Christian people was blamed by Dr. Sauber for the rapid progress which the white slave evil has made. He called attention to the falling away from the church of the younger generation and pleaded for more active evangelistic work. Judging by the figures of additions to church membership, he estimated that it required about a half hundred persons one year to get one new member into the church.

W. H. Houston, secretary of the vacancy and supply department of the Presbyterian Church, said that there were 3,000 young men in the country who had studied for the Presbyterian ministry who were still without pulpits, while there were many churches about the country without preachers. His department, he said, was for the purpose of relieving this situation. He asked five years for a trial of the new plan.

Drug Traffic Attacked.

Looking toward the remedying of these conditions, the Assembly voted to instruct the moderator and stated clerk to write, through any of the Assembly boards, to every minister of the church urging him to bring to the attention of every family in his church the needs of the ministry for young men.

A strong resolution against interstate traffic in opium, cocaine and other similar dugs was introduced by Dr. C. A. R. Javier, of Philadelphia, and passed by the unanimous vote of the Assembly.

"The United States was in the lead of the movement to bar international traffic in the drugs," said Dr. Janvier, "but within her own borders the traffic is being continued with only a slight check. Decided action by this assembly will assist in passing the bill which is now before Congress."

Condition of Japanese Emperor Grave

Whole Nation Praying for His Recovery

Dispute With United States Overshadowed by Alarm Over Ruler's Illness.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

TOKIO, May 23.—It was reported to-night that Emperor Yoshihito is suffering from pleuro-pneumonia.

Throughout the day the Mikado's temperature reached 102.92 Fahrenheit, with no signs of abatement.

The Emperor is confined to Ayoama palace, his condition being too low to allow removal to the new Chiyoda palace.

A military guard has been placed about the palace, although the crowds have been very orderly and quiet up to date.

A number of Shinto priests have left on a religious pilgrimage for Fujiyama, where there is an ancient shrine.

Priests to Offer Sacrifices.

Sacrifices will be offered up for the recovery of the imperial patient.

The following statement was issued to-day by Count Watanabe:

His majesty is asleep. Conditions have not changed since yesterday and are not serious. The bulletin issued by the attending physicians apprised the people of the real condition of the imperial patient. His majesty had been in good health since ascending the throne, despite the report that he was suffering from weakness of the lungs, and has actively attended to affairs of state.

It is interesting to note that the modern European methods of treatment are being administered, the Emperor being a progressive.

Grave fears are felt that the illness may prove fatal, leaving Japan without a ruler at a time made critical by the dispute with the United States.

Weakened by Worry.

The present illness can be directly traced to a severe cold which the Emperor contracted five days ago, but his condition was aggravated by worry over the diplomatic controversy with the United States over the California land bill.

High officials remain reticent on the possible political effect of the Mikado's illness. Count Watanabe, Minister of Imperial Household, issued a statement for the benefit of the Japanese people saying that the Emperor's condition is not serious.

In spite of this reassuring statement, however, gravest fears were expressed that the Mikado would not survive. The Emperor's condition has never been strong and the cares of state have tended to weaken him.

For the time being the illness of the sovereign has tended to eclipse the American dispute, but high officials of the government are alarmed lest the death of the Mikado might inflame the people into an irresistible demand for war.

Should Yoshihito die, the dynasty would be in danger. The Crown Prince, Hirohito, is only twelve years old, and should there be a regency it is possible that old quarrels between the leading families would flare which would change the future government and identity of the future reigning family.

Pulse Remains High.

The Emperor's pulse remained around 90 to-day and his respiration 30. All the theaters have been ordered closed.

Among the callers at the palace to express sympathy for the family of the sick man was Arthur Bailly Blanchard, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy.

The illness of the Emperor has been diagnosed as pneumonia. His fever has increased within the past 24 hours. Yesterday the temperature was 101; last night it was 102. This afternoon at 4 o'clock it was 103.

Emperor Yoshihito of Japan, who is seriously ill, and the Empress.

Delay in Alien Bill Dispute Expected.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—That the illness of the Mikado, reported in diplomatic circles to be even more serious than indicated by press dispatches from Tokio, will delay the continuation of the dispute concerning the California land law, was the opinion expressed by diplomats here to-day.

It is understood that the Emperor is possessed of a constitution which is not too strong and that an attack of pneumonia similar to the one he is now suffering from left him very weak five years ago.

Therefore, grave fears for his recovery are entertained here and it is practically certain nothing further will be done about the enactment of the Webb law until after the Emperor has passed the crisis in his illness.

Japan has until August 10 in which to file her reply to the Bryan note—the Webb will not being enforced until that date—and it is probable that the conferences between Secretary Bryan and Ambassador Chinda scheduled for next week will be postponed.

Despite the press dispatches stating that the American reply to the Japanese protest has not been favorably received in Tokio, officials here point to the fact that Japan recently has made its appropriation for a proper national exhibit for the 1915 exposition in San Francisco as evidence that no genuinely grave situation between the two governments has yet been brought about.

The President to-day received the following message from the Mikado in answer to his cablegram of sympathy sent yesterday:

"Deeply touched by your kind message inquiring after my indisposition, I express my sincere thanks to yourself, Government and the people of the United States. YOSHIHITO.

Emperor's Illness Alarms Embassy.

LONDON, May 23.—Alarmed by the newspaper cables which report Emperor Yoshihito as being in danger of death, the Japanese Embassy to-day sent a message to Tokio asking for the very latest news on the Mikado's condition.

It was stated that the Embassy had received no information from the Japanese Government on the Emperor's illness.

Chinda and Bryan To Attend Banquet.

PITTSBURG, May 23.—Baron Chinda, Japanese Ambassador to the United States; Secretary of State Bryan and George Guthrie, newly appointed Ambassador to Japan, will attend a banquet in Pittsburg June 6.

DICTOGRAPH RECORD USED AGAINST FELDER

Affidavits and an alleged dictograph record made public Friday afternoon, accuse Colonel Thomas B. Felder of offering to C. C. February, a bribe of $1,000 for possession of police records of the Phagan case.

These affidavits and the dictograph record are sworn to by A. S. Colyar, Jr., of Nashville, and February, who is stenographer to Newport Lanford, Chief of the Atlanta Detective Department.

The Georgian on Wednesday published the fact that there were rumors on the streets that connected the name of Colonel Felder with the Phagan case in a sinister way.

Colonel Felder made a statement to a Georgian reporter to the effect that these rumors were false.

At that time, however, the police department was engaged in the effort to entrap Colonel Felder and bring against him a charge of bribery.

From developments Friday, it would seem that Colonel Felder was engaged in an effort to entrap Lanford and Beavers.

Colonel Felder has issued a statement to that effect. A statement from Mayor Woodward tends to corroborate it.

Chief of Detectives Lanford stated Friday afternoon that the premature publication of the affidavits had thwarted his plans and had defeated justice, and that he did not know what his future course would be as regards Colonel Felder.

No Mention of Case Except About Graft

Mayor Woodward Friday afternoon admitted that he had had conversation with Colonel Felder on Monday. No mention of the Phagan case was made by the attorney, however, except in reference to police graft.

"Colonel Felder said that he had run across a great many evidences of police graft in near beer saloons and resorts during the Phagan investigation," declared the Mayor. "He suggested that this evidence be gathered up in an effort to unearth crookedness in the police system. I asked him how the matter could be gone about and Mr. Felder replied that it would take a good deal of money; that he would have to get the evidence in shape first."

The Mayor denied that Felder was accompanied by C. C. Jones as has been stated. He said that Felder was alone. The Mayor's assertion was borne out by Frank Hammond, the official's secretary.

The sensational charges against Colonel Felder grow out of a plan entered into by Chief of Police Beavers, Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, his secretary, G. C. February, and A. S. Colyar, Jr., of Nashville.

For nearly a week Lanford and Colyar have been working on the theory that they could develop the situation which would enable them to make a charge of bribery against Colonel Felder.

Colyar had worked in South Carolina with Colonel Felder at various times in the past, he claimed, and enjoyed Colonel Felder's confidence. He informed Chief Lanford that Mr. Felder had failed to pay him money due for his work in South Carolina and that he intended to get revenge.

Colyar Reported Long Talk With Felder

On Monday Colyar reported that he had had long and confidential talks with Felder and C. W. Tobie, the Burns investigator who was working here on the Phagan case under the direction of Felder. He reported that Colonel Felder expressed extreme hostility to Chief Beavers and Lanford, cursed them and intimated that he would like to get possession of an affidavit the police were said to have secured from Mary Phagan's parents denying that they had asked Colonel Felder to enter the case and setting forth that they had refused proffers made by Felder.

He also reported that he had informed Felder he knew G. C. February, Lanford's secretary, quite well and hat he was sure he could frame up with February to secure a transcript of the police records and the Coleman affidavit. He said Felder said he would give February $1,000 for them.

On Monday night, it is stated, Colyar and February went to Colonel Felder's office and were in a conference there with Felder for something more than half an hour.

Colyar reported Tuesday that at this conference an arrangement was made for another meeting between February and Felder, the latter promising to give February $1,000 for the Coleman affidavit and the transcript of the police records of evidence in the case.

According to an affidavit made public Friday afternoon, a meeting as held Wednesday afternoon in the Williams House in North Forsyth Street between Colonel Felder, February and Colyar. It is stated a dictograph was placed in the room and that the city detective department now has in its possession alleged dictograph conversation in which Colonel Felder was quoted as offering February money to secure the Coleman affidavit.

It is charged by Colyar that Felder offered $1,000 for the affidavit and other police records of the Phagan case.

Colyar Submits Report To Chief Lanford

Monday morning Colyar made a written report to Chief Lanford, the substance of which was as follows:

"I met T. B. Felder at 8:15 o'clock Sunday night at the Marion Hotel and went with him to his law offices in the Equitable building, and held consultation with him until 9:15 p. m. In the meantime, C. W. Tobie, manager of the criminal department of the Burns Agency, dropped in in response to a telephone call. I was introduced to him and made an appointment with him for Monday morning at 10 o'clock in room 300 at the Piedmont Hotel.

"I find that Mr. Tobie is a former Pinkerton detective, and that he was discharged from that agency, as they allege, for corrupt practices. He is now posing as the confidential man of W. J. Burns.

"In my conversation with Mr. Tobie this morning, he said he would have the murderer of Mary Phagan within ten days, and that he had been on the scene long enough to know that the reason he had not been discovered before was on account of jealousy, politics and money.

"In my conversation with T. B. Felder, he stated that he had some thirty or forty clients, among whom were C.C.Jones, the Henderson Hotel and other liquor clients who were willing to raise a fund of $25,000 to impeach James L. Beavers and Newport A. Lanford, as both of them were corrupt, and that Beavers was at the present time living in open adultery with a prostitute, and was drunk half the time, and that Lanford missed his calling when he quit the farm, and threatened to go before the Board of Aldermen and file articles of impeachment against both them, and that he would have the backing of J. G. Woodward, Mayor of Atlanta; that Carlos Mason and two others of the police board had already gone back on Beavers because he was a fanatic.

"He said that he was employed to prosecute the Phagan murderer by J. A. McCall and other citizens of Atlanta, and that his employment had been ratified by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman, and that he intended to have them arrested for perjury and could prove the same."

(This reference to perjury is based on the affidavit made by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman that Felder's employment in the case was without their consent.

"In my conversation with him on Monday morning in the club rooms on the eighth floor of the Walton Building, he told me that he was very anxious for me to meet C. C. Jones, and that he could get me big money if I would help him secure the evidence that would throw Beavers and his flunky, Lanford, out of a job, and that he already had the assistance and cooperation of Henry Jennings, former Chief of Police.

"Said Affidavit Would Raise a Mob"

"Further in his conversation this morning he said that the police department was at loggerheads, and that Pat Campbell was giving Chief Beavers and Lanford the double-cross, and that before the week was out Beavers and Lanford would find that the good people of this city were indignant at their course in the Phagan case, and that the moment they published the affidavit signed by J. W. Coleman and wife reflecting on his moral character they would go to jail, and that he could speak one word at this time and raise a mob that would hang Beavers and Lanford to a telegraph pole.

"He further said that if I would go to work for him and

PHAGAN SLAYING IS TAKEN UP BY GRAND JURY

The Phagan case is now in the process of investigation by the Fulton County Grand Jury.

Two bills for indictment of Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee, for the murder of Mary Phagan, were presented before that tribunal at its session Friday morning by Solicitor Dorsey.

A host of witnesses gave their testimony. The torn and blood-stained clothing of the slain girl also was turned over to the Grand Jury for inspection.

The Grand Jury studied carefully an elaborate diagram drawn by Bert Green, one of The Georgian's staff artists, and setting forth in black and white the prosecutor's theory of how the murder was probably committed. Intense interest was displayed in the drawing.

After being in session for nearly three hours, the Grand Jury adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, when the Phagan case will be taken up once more.

Woman Gives New Testimony.

Whether the sensational testimony of Mrs. Mima Famby, 400 Piedmont Avenue—or Nina Fomby, as the woman says her name is—will be introduced at the Grand Jury probe, is a matter of doubt. Mrs. Fomby's affidavit declaring that on the evening of the murder Frank called the affiant on the telephone and in an excited voice asked her to arrange a room for himself and a girl whose name he would not disclose, is in the hands of the Solicitor General.

Important as is the bearing which the alleged telephone conversation appears to have on the mystery of Mary Phagan's death, doubts are already being expressed as to the part it will be permited to play in the present hearing or any to come, owing to the chary wording of the law on such evidence.

It is suposed, however, that if Mrs. Fomby's affidavit is admitted, an immediate attempt to attack her credibility will be made by the defense. Her own story puts the credibility of her testimony in doubt.

Frank Refused to Talk.

Frank, when interviewed in his cell at the Tower Friday morning regarding the telephone conversation and his dealings with Mrs. Fomby in general, refused to discuss the question.

"I am feeling fine," he said, but would not discuss the crime at all.

Among the witnesses who went before the Grand Jury were:

Dr. J. W. Hurt, Coroner's physician, who examined the dead girl's body the morning after it was found.

T. W. Epps, the newsboy who waited at the corner on the afternoon of the tragedy for Mary Phagan while she went to the factory to get her pay envelope.

Detective a Witness.

Harry Scott, assistant superintendent of the local branch of the Pinkerton detective agency, who has been investigating the mysterious case.

J. N. Starnes, a city detective.

M. D. Darley, Frank's assistant at the pencil factory.

L. S. Dobbs, sergeant of police, who answered Lee's call to the pencil factory the morning the body was found.

"Boots" Rogers, former county policeman, who drove the police to the factory in his automobile in answer to Lee's call.

Pat Campbell, city detective.

Bass Rosser, city detective.

Utmost secrecy clothed the Grand Jury's investigation. The cracks about the doors and windows of their room on the second floor of the Thrower Building were lined with paper in order that no chance conversation or view of the proceedings might escape.

An immense throng crowded the corridors of the building and filled the adjoining rooms.

The witnesses were all bunched into the ante-room and there kept waiting while one at a time they entered before the tribunal and told what they knew regarding the death of Mary Phagan.

Dr. Hurt was the first witness to go before the Grand Jury. He went into their room at 10:55 in the morning. He was dismissed at 11:23. Dr. Hurt's testimony, through his examination of the body, is considered of vast importance. He declined to make any statement whatsoever as he left the building.

In rapid succession other witnesses followed. Their testimony, which is believed will weave the preliminary chair of evidence about Frank and Lee which will warrant their indictment, was placed before the Grand Jury.

Sergeant Dobbs Testifies.

Police Sergeant Dobbs followed Dr. Hurt into the Grand Jury room at 11:49. His testimony is supposed to consist mainly of the condition of the Phagan girl's body when he arrived on the scene, including its location and the evidence surrounding it. Most important probably of his testimony was that as to the actions of the negro, Newt Lee, as he led the police squad to the body and while the initial examination of it took place in the basement of the factory.

City Detective Starnes, after Dobbs' departure, took into the Grand Jury room a map of the pencil factory, showing the floor upon which the girl is supposed to have met her slayer, tracing the trail along which he dragged the body down into the basement.

The rapidity with which the wheels of justice revolved at the hearing bore out Solicitor Dorsey's statement that when he presented his evidence before the Grand Jury it would be in a clear, concise form.

That the prosecution will avoid presenting its most incriminating evidence before the tribunal, unless necessary to secure indictments of the two men, was admitted in the Solicitor's office just before the Grand Jury convened. No more than enough evidence to secure true bills will be revealed, it was said.

Woman Makes Affidavit.

The affidavit of Mrs. Mima Fomby, who told of Frank trying to get a room at her place, was signed in the office of Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford May 11. Mrs. Fomby was sworn by Recorder Nash Broyles. Probation Officer Sidney J. Coogler witnessed the signature.

Mrs. Fomby said that she and a party of friends were playing bridge in her apartments late Memorial Day afternoon when Frank, whom she had known a long time, telephoned her. It was between 6 and 6:30 o'clock, she stated. Frank, according to her story, wanted to rent a room for himself and a girl whose name he would not give. Mrs. Fomby said that she flatly refused him, but Frank insisted he be rented an apartment.

"He said he was forced to obtain a room for himself and the girl," said Mrs. Fomby, "but didn't want to go anywhere else because he put such implicit trust in me. I would not grant his request and hung up the telephone."

Called Several Times.

"Later he called again," she continued. "This time he was more insistent and said something about it being a case of life and death. Between 6:30 and 10 o'clock he called probably half a dozen times. Finally I told him not to call any more, as I was going automobiling with friends."

Mrs. Fomby said that she had been offered money to leave the city until the courts concluded with the Phagan case. To substantiate this charge the name of Alexander S. Martin, of Gainesville, a newspaper man, has been handed the police. He is said to know of hush money having been offered Mrs. Fomby.

Shortly after Frank's arrest Mrs. Fomby said she visited him at the Tower. At first she said he did not recognize her, but later spoke to her, and they had a secret conference, the nature of which she would not discuss.

The woman added that when she lived at 87 Armstrong Street Frank was a frequent visitor to her place and had brought girls there.

Chief Lanford's Theory.

Chief Lanford's theory, as outlined Friday morning, is that the girl had been knocked unconscious when the alleged telephone call was made to secure a room, and the plan was to remove the girl to a place where she could be given medical attention without suspicion.

"When it was seen that Mrs. Fomby would not rent a room," said Chief Lanford, "it was necessary that she be disposed of. Dead folks tell no tales."

The corridors of the Thrower building were thronged with witnesses long before 10 o'clock this morning, the hour for the Grand Jury to assemble. More than 100 are under subpena. If all are examined it will be several days before the result of the jury's deliberation will be known.

George W. Parrott, a well-known business man, has written the following letter in the interest of Frank:

As is perhaps known by many, I am interested in the National Pencil Company and I have, with keen interest, noted, from time to time, hints and insinuations that Mr. Leo Frank has misused and mistreated female employees of the factory.

I felt it due myself and the other gentlemen interested in the factory that as to this matter there should be a thorough investigation.

To that end, on Wednesday, together with other gentlemen likewise interested in the factory, I interviewed every employee of the factory, both male and female.

Every one of them, without a dissenting voice, voluntarily and emphatically made affidavit that Mr. Frank had never, at any time, or in any way, misused or mistreated them, and that none of them had ever known a single instance of any familiarity on the part of Mr. Frank with any one of the female employees.

These affidavits are in my possession.

This is a matter of personal concern to me, and I beg that, in justice to myself and others interested in the factory, that this matter be set fairly right before the public.

GEORGE W. PARROTT.

Advice to Those Who Have Lung Trouble

Pulmonary Lung Trouble is said to be curable by simply living in the open air and taking an abundance of fresh eggs and milk. Do all you possibly can to add to strength and increase weight; eat wholesome, nourishing food, and breathe the cleanest and purest air, and then, if health and strength do not return, add the tonic and beneficial effects of Eckman's Alterative. Read what it did in this case:

405 E. 5th St., Wilmington, Del.

"Gentlemen: In January, 1908, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs. I took eggs and milk in quantities, but I got very weak. Mr. C. A. Lippincott, my employer (Lippincott & Co., Department Store, 306 to 314 Market Street, Wilmington, Del.), recommended to me Eckman's Alterative, and upon his suggestion I began taking it at once. This was about June, 1908. I continued faithfully, using no other remedy, and finally noticed the clearing of the lungs. I firmly believe Eckman's Alterative saved my life."

(Affidavit.) JAS. SQUIRES.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Frank Feeling Fine, but Will Not Discuss His Case

Leo Frank was seen this morning by a reporter for the first time since he was put in jail. He absolutely refused to talk on the Mary Phagan murder mystery, saying he had been advised not to say a word.

"What do you know about the affidavit, charging that on the night of the murder of Mary Phagan you called Mrs. Nina Famby on the telephone and tried to engage a room for yourself and a young girl?"

"I will not talk," said Frank. "I have been cautioned not to say one word."

"Do you deny or admit it?"

"I refuse to answer," replied Frank.

Frank is confined on the second floor of the county jail on the west side of the building. His cell is roomy, and as the reporter was admitted by the guard Frank arose from a chair in which he was sitting puffing on a cigar.

"How are you feeling?" Frank was asked.

"I am feeling fine," said the accused man as he puffed violently on his cigar. "But I don't want to talk to you," and he called the turnkey.

The turnkey came and Frank said to him, "Please don't let anyone in here to see me again who is not my friend."

"All right," said the turnkey.

"I won't say a word and you might as well go," said Frank, and the interview was ended.

Several other visitors saw Frank to-day.

May Fete at Home Of Uncle Remus Is Halted by Weather

Mrs. Brevard Montgomery announced Friday morning that, owing to inclement weather, the May Festival to have been held at Snapbean Farm Saturday afternoon had been postponed. Mrs. Montgomery, in charge of the affair to be staged at the home of Uncle Remus, said, however, an early date would be fixed for the entertainment.

An elaborate program has been arranged. Hundreds of well trained children will be on the grounds to give the May pole drill and dance. Miss Katherine Vickers, on a platform resplendent with garlands and gaily colored bunting, will be crowned Queen of the May, and, surrounded by fair maids of honor with their retinue of attendants, will review the celebration.

May songs, under the directorship of Miss Harralson, of the public schools music department, will be rendered by the multitude of childish voices.

Turkey Now Hit by Serious Revolution

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 23.—Following her disastrous war with the Balkan allies, Turkey now has a revolution on her hands.

Serious fighting is going on in the Vilayet of Basra, in Asiatic Turkey, between Saadun tribesmen and loyal troops of the Turkish army on one hand and a group of rebellious tribesmen. The Sheik of the Saadun tribesmen has been killed.

Postmaster Traps Eloping Husband

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., May 23.—Refusal of a Denver postmaster to assist in concealing the location of John M. Peters, of Uma, Va., resulted in his capture and conviction to-day on a charge of white slavery.

Peters was living with his wife and four children when he eloped with Miss Bettie Freeman, daughter of R. A. Freeman, a neighbor.

The girl wished to communicate with her parents, so a letter was written and inclosed in an envelope addressed to the postmaster of Denver, with the request that the outer envelope be thrown away and the inner envelope containing the letter be mailed. The postmaster did as instructed, but he wrote on the letter, "Received from Crystal City, Ill., with the request to be remailed at Denver."

SISSON DEFENDS STATE RIGHTS IN JAP ROW

U. S. Unworthy of Existence if It Submits to Interference, Congressman Declares.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Defending the right of the United States to protect her own land against the invasion of aliens, Representative Sisson, of Mississippi, urged on the House to-day the necessity of curtailing the treaty-making power of the President and the Senate. He advocated the extension of the right of ratifying treaties to the representatives of the people. Sisson disclaimed any intention of making a war speech and explained that he merely sought to sustain the right of America to control her own soil.

"If any nations," he continued, "should decide that they will dictate how our land laws should be made, then we will be unworthy of national existence if we submit to such dictation. Does anyone claim that this is a declaration of war because I announce this truth?

"It is no declaration of war for the United States Government to decline to override the rights of a sovereign State at the dictation of a foreign power.

Wants Peace Only.

"Nothing has been further from my mind than to embarrass or tend to render more difficult the peaceful solution of whatever differences, real or imaginary, may exist between the friendly Government of Japan and our own Government. Our officials are to be commended for their wise and earnest effort to maintain peaceful relations between the United States and Japan.

"A treaty can not compel any department of the Government to do what the Constitution forbids it to do. On these questions the true canon of construction that the treaty-making power, in its seeming absoluteness and unconditional extent, is confronted with seemingly absolute and unconditional authority invested in the judiciary."

"Make Treaties Public."

Sisson pleaded for less secrecy in the making of treaties. He declared that treaties should be considered in the open session of the Senate and the vote of each Senator should be made a public record.

"What would become of the farmer if the great corporations of the country should enter the land market and buy all of the best lands of the country and then cultivate them with Mongolian or other alien labor? The great land corporation would drive the American farmer out of existence."

Helen Keller to Try Own Cure on Prince

LONDON, May 23.—According to letters from Madrid, there is only the frailest hope that Prince Jamie, King Alfonso's five-year-old son, ever can be cured of his deafness and dumbness.

Helen Keller has been summoned by the Queen to proceed in all haste to the royal palace, every specialist of note in Europe having failed to help the child.

ROYAL WEDDING GUESTS THICK IN BERLIN

Big and Little Monarchs Throng the Capital for Wedding of Kaiser's Only Daughter.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, May 23.—Big and little monarchs, royal dukes and fair ladies are as common as pebbles upon the streets of Berlin to-day. Every once in a while royal equipage, with an escort of the soldiery of some foreign nation, rolls past in the street and the natives pause to stare and comment upon H. R. H. Somebody or other or the Duke of something. All are here to attend to-morrow the wedding of Princess Victoria Luise, only daughter of the Kaiser, and Prince Ernst of Cumberland, son of the Duke of Cumberland and Prince of Great Britain.

It is nearly impossible to get accommodations at a first-class hotel to-day because of the crowds that have come to Berlin from all parts of the Empire, from abroad and from various parts of Europe. Even some of the royal guests have been quartered at hotels because of the fact that there was not room enough at the Palace, where it had been planned to quarter some of the more distinguished visitors.

The celebration of the wedding started several days ago, with a most elaborate evening of opera. A State banquet was held Friday at which all of the impressive appearing diplomats here as attendants upon the parties of their royal masters were present. To-morrow the actual ceremony will be performed, and Victoria Luise Adelheid Mathilde Charlotte Hohenzollern, Princess of Prussia and Ernst August Chretien George of Vrunswick-Lunebourg, the House of Guelph, descendant of George III of Great Britain and great grandson of Queen Victoria of England will become one.

$2,000,000 Kaiser's Dowry on Daughter

BERLIN, May 23.—It is reported the Kaiser and Kaiserin have settled a dowry of $2,000,000 on their daughter, Princess Victoria Luise, who is to be married to Prince Ernest of Cumberland, Saturday.

The unusually large amount is probably in view of the coming proclamation—making the couple the reigning Duke and Duchess of Brunswick.

Urges U. S. to Sue Road for $3,000,000

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Representative Neeley of Kansas to-day sent a letter to the Attorney General urging the latter to sue the Missouri Pacific for more than $3,000,000, alleged to be due the Government for financing the road about 25 years ago when the central division of this road was built.

Neely quotes an opinion of Treasury Solicitor Thompson, in which Thompson recommends that suit be begun.

Who Groom in The Royal Wedding Is

Following are some interesting facts about the House of Cumberland, into which the Princess Victoria Luise, will be married to-morrow.

The Prince of Cumberland is both German and English.

He is a greadgrandson of King George III of Great Britain. His grandfather was a brother of Queen Victoria of England, they both having been children of George III.

In the event of the failure of succession of present heirs to the throne of England, it probably would be the present Duke of Cumberland, or in the event of his death, the Prince of Cumberland who would succeed to the throne, because of their descent from King George.

The arms of the House of Cumberland are almost similar to those of the royal family of Great Britain.

The Duke of Cumberland is a Prince of Great Britain, a general in the British army and a Colonel in the Austrian army.

Starves Self When Arrested as Slayer

CRIPPLE CREEK, COLO., May 23. For 56 hours James L. Bacon, former State Representative, in jail charged with the murder of his wife and 6-year-old stepdaughter last month, has refused water and food.

Doctors report that Bacon's physical and mental condition is normal. The last meal Bacon ate was on Monday morning at 7 o'clock in Denver. He merely states he does not care to eat.

KING GEORGE ASKS PEACE FOR WORLD

English Ruler's Berlin Speech Taken to Show Three Great Dynasties' Friendship.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 23.—"The preservation of world peace is my fervent desire, as it was the chief aim of my father's life," declared King George of England, guest of the Kaiser, in replying to an address presented to him by the British residents of Berlin.

This is the first political note sounded during the wedding festivities of the Kaiser's only daughter, for which three emperors and many princes are gathered.

The King's words seem, according to the opinion expressed in influential circles, to epitomize the chief significance of the royal visits as a demonstration of the peaceful and friendly relations existing among the three powerful dynasties.

PRESBYTERIANS DOOM COUNTRY MISSIONS

Attempt to Save Church and Rural Life Department Fails in Assembly.

Defenders of the church and country life department of the Board of Home Missions went down to an inglorious parliamentary defeat at the forenoon session of the Northern Presbyterian Assembly.

As a result the report of the executive commission stands that this department "shall be discontinued as soon as practicable."

Every attempt to revise this decision ran against a stone wall in the rulings of the moderator. One commissioner after another essayed to speak on the report, but each was told that no question formally was before the assembly.

Rev. John Deans, of Brooklyn, N. Y., asked what interpretation was to be made of "as soon as practicable"—that given by Dr. Mark A. Matthews in presenting the report Wednesday, or that he gave Thursday, or the one he presented Friday morning.

Rev. Deans was informed that he was to accept the final explanation. Rev. T. M. Hall, of the Erie, Pa., Presbytery, sought to introduce a resolution bearing on the subject, but was ruled out of order.

Bars Reconsideration.

As a final recourse, one of the commissioners moved for a reconsideration of the portion of the executive commission's report bearing on the department of church and country life. Moderator Stone ran his eye over the house and ruled that two-thirds of the original assembly considering the question must be present to vote on a reconsideration. It was the moderator's assumption that the two-thirds was not in the auditorium.

Although the church and country life advocates were forced to accept defeat in their fight to establish the department permanently as a part of the Board of Home Missions' activities, those at the head of the work declared that they would be able to accomplish this at the next general assembly.

"We will simply continue the department through the year and then come before the next Assembly on our record," is the statement made Friday of their contemplated plan of campaign.

Professing Christians who spend Sundays in their automobiles or on the golf course came in for unrestrained criticism from Rev. Frederick J. Sauber, of Marcellus, N. Y., who submitted the report of the committee on Christian life and work.

Apathy Blamed for Vice.

The apathy and indifference of Christian people was blamed by Dr. Sauber for the rapid progress which the white slave evil has made. He called attention to the falling away from the church of the younger generation and pleaded for more active evangelistic work. Judging by the figures of additions to church membership, he estimated that it required about a half hundred persons one year to get one new member into the church.

W. H. Houston, secretary of the vacancy and supply department of the Presbyterian Church, said that there were 3,000 young men in the country who had studied for the Presbyterian ministry who were still without pulpits, while there were many churches about the country without preachers. His department, he said, was for the purpose of relieving this situation. He asked five years for a trial of the new plan.

Drug Traffic Attacked.

Looking toward the remedying of these conditions, the Assembly voted to instruct the moderator and stated clerk to write, through any of the Assembly boards, to every minister of the church urging him to bring to the attention of every family in his church the needs of the ministry for young men.

A strong resolution against interstate traffic in opium, cocaine and other similar dugs was introduced by Dr. C. A. R. Javier, of Philadelphia, and passed by the unanimous vote of the Assembly.

"The United States was in the lead of the movement to bar international traffic in the drugs," said Dr. Janvier, "but within her own borders the traffic is being continued with only a slight check. Decided action by this assembly will assist in passing the bill which is now before Congress."

Truce on Hubbert.

When no further movement was made Friday in the effort to oust the Rev. J. M. Hubbert from his position as Assistant Stated Clerk of the Assembly, it became known that a truce had been patched up between his friends and William H. Roberts, the Stated Clerk. Dr. Roberts had been working hard to have the office of assistant abolished. He gave economy as his reason for recommending the change. The office pays $3,000 annually.

The members of the large Chicago delegation were happy to-day over the unanimous acceptance of the invitation of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of that city for the 1914 Assembly. This is the church of which Moderator Stone is the pastor. The First Presbyterian Church of Atlantic City, N. J., was the only other candidate for next year, but the indications are that there will be a hot fight on for the privilege of entertaining the commissioners in 1915.

The resignation of Duncan J. McMillan from the Board of Church Erection, which was announced Thursday afternoon, was not entirely unexpected. Dr. McMillan had been known not to be in sympathy with many of the moves of the board in the past. His stand on the John S. Kennedy memorial fund was the final straw that made his resignation virtually a foregone conclusion. He was bitterly opposed to placing it in the loan fund, contending that it was illegal. When the Assembly voted, almost unanimously, to place it in the loan fund, he announced that he could no longer serve.

Tribute Paid Roberts.

Resolutions of respect and thanks were passed in honor of Stated Clerk Roberts in view of the fact that he had reached the thirtieth anniversary of his election to the clerkship of the assembly. The resolutions noted that nearly two million dollars of the church's money had passed through his hands and that he had done more for church co-operation than any other member of the denomination.

He was given a leave of absence for two months to make the foreign trip with the commission which is seeking to bring about a world alliance of Christian religions. Dr. Roberts responded feelingly to the tributes paid him.

BROYLES SCORES MAYOR AS BAR TO JUSTICE

Recorder Says Woodward Cripples Courts by Granting Pardons and Remitting Fines.

Woodward also instructed the police not to molest Roper, as he was considering an application for pardon. Roper is still at liberty, nothing more having been heard from the Mayor.

Another instance referred to by Recorder Broyles in his interview was the Dan Shaw case. Shaw was known as the "blind tiger king" and received a twelve-month sentence in the county chaingang and a 30-day sentence in the city stockade. Governor Brown pardoned him on the chaingang sentence, with the stipulation that Shaw would leave Georgia and go back to Virginia. Appeal was made to Judge Broyles to remit the stockade sentence of 30 days, but he declined. Mayor Woodward granted this pardon.

Mattie Lou White was convicted in November, 1912, on a blind tiger charge in connection with an immorality charge. She was fined $500 or 30 days, and bound over to the State courts. The sentence given by Broyles was sustained by the Court of Appeals and her arrest was ordered.

Woman Also Is Free.

She had been out on bond since the time of her arrest. She appealed to the Mayor and was given a letter to the police instructing them not to molest her, as he was considering her appeal for a pardon. She is still at liberty. The letter is dated May 7.

R. L. Dixon, the man who was convicted on an immorality charge in connection with Mattie Lou White, is confined in the city jail and will begin the serving of his stockade term. The White woman called upon him at police headquarters this morning. Judge Broyles points out this case as an instance of how the court's work is being hampered, charging that the serious violators of the law are at liberty, while Dixon, who is held on a lighter charge, is serving his sentence.

Empire Life Gets Plans for Building

AUGUSTA, GA., May 23.—Twenty-five architects have submitted preliminary plans to the directors of the Empire Life Insurance Company for the fifteen-story building that company will erect here. A building committee will make a selection. The Empire plans to begin the erection of its building on October 1.

The Augusta Chronicle Building Company will begin the erection of a ten-story building within the next 60 days.

Miller Bell New Grand Chancellor of State Pythians

WAYCROSS, GA., May 23.—Grand Chancellor James W. Austin's suggestion for changing the method of electing grand lodge officers for the Knights of Pythias of Georgia, was to-day referred to the incoming committee on judiciary with instructions to prepare an amendment and submit it with a report at the next convention.

The officers elected for the year are:

Grand Chancellor, Miller S. Bell, Milledgeville; Grand Vice Chancellor, H. M. Stanley, Dublin; Grand Prelate John P. Cheney, Marietta; Grand Keeper of Records and Seal, W. H. Leopold, Savannah; Grand Master of Exchequer, R. C. Norman, Washington; Grand Master-at-arms, Troy Beatty, Athens; Grand Inner Guard, George C. Schaufele, Augusta; Grand Outer Guard, Joseph D. Smith, Barnesville. Supreme representatives, B. D. Brantley, Blackshear and C. M. Milan, Cartersville.

Macon was selected as the permanent meeting place for the Grand Lodge.

Coming of The Sunbeam

How to Avoid Those Pains and Distress Which so Many Mothers Have Suffered.

It is a pity more women do not know of Mother's Friend. Here is a remedy that softens the muscles, enables them to expand without any strain upon the ligaments and enables women to go through maternity without pain, nausea, morning sickness or any of the dreaded symptoms so familiar to many mothers.

There is no foolish diet to harass the mind. The thoughts do not dwell upon pain and suffering, for all such are avoided. Thousands of women no longer resign themselves to the thought that sickness and distress are natural. They know better, for in Mother's Friend they have found a wonderful penetrating remedy to banish all those dreaded experiences.

It is a subject every woman should be familiar with, and even though she may not require such a remedy, she will now and then meet some prospective mother to whom a word in time about it may be a wonderful blessing. This famous remedy is sold by all druggists. Mother's Friend will come as a wonderful blessing and is only $1.00 a bottle. It is for external use only, and is really worth its weight in gold. Write to-day to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 127 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a most valuable book.

Roosevelt Going to Arizona for a Rest

NEW YORK, May 23.—Colonel Roosevelt, with two of his sons, will visit Arizona this summer.

Through his secretary he yesterday denied that while in the Southwest he would seek a lost tribe of Indians. He said he was merely going for a rest. He will do little hunting, but will ride considerably.

DICTOGRAPH RECORD ALLEGED BRIBE OFFER

Here follows, in part, the alleged dictograph record of the conversation that took place in a room in the Williams House Wednesday afternoon between Colonel Thomas B. Felder, G. C. Febuary and A. S. Colyar:

Febuary: Let me understand you. You want this Coleman afdavit and all other Phagan afdavits that I can get hold of.

Felder: Yes. Colyar told me that he was to have the evidence that would get those two chiefs out of commission, the Phagan papers and the Coleman afdavit. Now what have you got?

Febuary: I haven't got these papers. The chief has these paprs in a large envelope. I do not know whether he keeps any graft sheets or not. I never saw one.

Colyar: You will have to examine the papers after Mr. Febuary brings them up. ———— Tell me this. Wasn't you employed by Coleman to work on this case?

Felder: Coleman said this to me: (failed to catch part of conversation) Then I said "Mr. Coleman I was invited by Mr. McCall." I believe that was his name (scraping of feet on floor interfered with dictograph). I said, Mr. Coleman, I would like to go in on the prosecution of this case. He said, I haven't got any money to employ a lawyer. I said, you misunderstand me, it isn't necessary for you to pay me any money, that has all been arranged. McCall said, now you meet us down there at 4:30, wasn't it Febuary, that the inquest was to be held that afternoon, and I went down and was introduced to Mr. Coleman, but I have forgotten who introduced me to Coleman. Now he said Mr. Felder we would like to have you look after the case, but I haven't money to employ anybody with. Now I said Mr. Coleman, you misapprehend the gentleman, now he is asking you for no money, he is simply asking you for your consent to represent you. Before we could close the deal the coroner's jury broke up and we all separated. Now there wasn't anything said about the regularity of my employment, but it was taken for granted.

Colyar: I want to put you in position where you can act, without bringing me into it.

Felder: I don't have to say you gave me the papers.

Colyar: If you do, they willgive me hell and you know it. I will be an accessory before the fact for him getting those papers and giving them to you.

Felder: You violate no law.

Colyar: He has.

Felder: No he hasn't. To abstract a lot of framed up documents is no larceny.

Colyar: Well, tell him what you want to, Febuary. Felder, can you bring Miles up here to see me. Can you bring hi mup at 4 o'clock?

Felder: Yes. All right.

Febuary: It is 3:20 now.

Felder: Tell what you are going to do about the papers.

Febuary: Well, I put them back. I was afraid to deliver these papers to you in Atlanta.

Felder: What is that?

A. S. Colyar: I have been stopping here off and on for ve years.

Thomas B. Felder: When I moved here twenty-three years ago, this was the nest hotel in Atlanta.

A. S. Colyar: Well, tell me, I thought you told me the other day that you became solicitor general six months after you were twenty-one. And I was reading the statutes and it stated the solicitor general had to be twenty-ve years old.

Thomas B. Felder: No. The statute has been changed since I was made solicitor.

A. S. Colyar: The statute stated that he must be twenty-ve years of age and must be an attorney at the bar of Georgia for three years in good standing, and must take an oath that he will prosecute all without fear or favor.

Thomas B. Felder: Yes.

A. S. Colyar: How old are you, Colonel?

Thomas B. Felder: I will be forty-in October. How old are you?

A. S. Colyar: I will be forty-seven next February.

G. C. Febuary: Mr. Colyar looks a good deal older than you.

Thomas B. Felder: Well! I have an appointment with another gentleman at 3:30.

A. S. Colyar: Well. There's the man you want to talk to.

G. C. Febuary: Now, you know this is pretty ticklish business—

A. S. Colyar: I told him last night that they could put him in the penitentiary as long as Hugh Dorsey is solicitor general.

G. C. Febuary: Well, you see, I am the chief's stenographer and I write all these afdavits.

Thomas B. Felder: Can this young man be trusted all right?

A. S. Colyar: Absolutely. I would trust him anywhere on earth. Who is this fellow Miles?

Thomas B. Felder: Well, you see, Miles is in the bureau of investigation, and he has three or four experts in the way of investigators and things like that.

Now, what I say to you is strictly condential. Day before yesterday I saw Woodward.

A. S. Colyar: You saw Woodward Monday?

Thomas B. Felder: Yes. Woodward says now it is all right for you to get the papers, and we will pay you for them.

Promised Mayor to Get Evidence Against Beavers and Lanford.

Thomas B. Felder: I will tell you what I have been doing for the last month. I have been investigating certain things for this company Mr. Miles works for, and I called on the mayor Monday afternoon, with C. C. Jones and I told the mayor I could get the evidence on these grafting . . . . . Beavers and Lanford, and the mayor told me to see Mr. Miles. That he had been working on it for a month. To show you how conscientious Mr. Miles is, although he has been in my ofce nearly every day, he has never mentioned it to me. The mayor also wanted me to prosecute them in the courts, as attorney, and I told him "No, I had my hands full, but I would help get up the evidence." Miles came over yesterday afternoon and I had a conference with him about an hour or two and without calling any names, I told him that I could get the evidence. But I said this young man doesn't want to lose his position. Well, he says, tell him for me that I will give him a position to-day just as good as the one he has. Mayor Woodward said to get him the evidence and he would be glad to prosecute this bunch.

A. S. Colyar: Well, I tell you he wouldn't. I tell you that this thing will just put us in the penitentiary.

Thomas B. Felder: Well, I assure you that I have never mentioned the names of either one of you.

A. S. Colyar: Well, say; Dorsey told Chief Lanford, so I have been informed, that you told Dorsey Sunday night that I was the———framer and double-crosser and blackmailer in the state, and you know if you know the law at all, that a blackmailer has to threaten a man with a crime, and you know I have not charged you with any crime.

Colyar: Will a thousand dollars be paid if we can get the papers?

Felder: Yes.

Colyar: I don't want any of that money.

Felder: Well, I have got an appointment with Miles. If the papers will do what you think they will do, I will give you a thousand dollars for them.

Colyar: We will get the papers and turn them over to Mr. Miles. But damned if I do it in Fulton County.

Felder: Why?

Colyar: I have got my reasons for it.

Felder: Well, if you can get the papers for me to examine by 2:30 to-morrow—

Colyar: He can tell him he is going fishing or something like that, just as he gets the papers, and he can go to Lakewood.

Febuary: I would rather do it out there.

Felder: I have some business engagements to-morrow that will not allow me to get away long enough to go out there.

Colyar: Oh! Pshaw! You can hop in your machine and go out there in a couple of minutes.

Felder: You won't meet anybody else except Miles and myself?

Febuary: No. It is like you said awhile ago, "Too many cooks spoil the broth."

Felder: That's right.

Febuary: Well, if you are in a hurry now, suppose we think this thing over and let you know later to-day or to-morrow whether to meet you here or out yonder.

Felder: I can't possibly go to East Lake.

Colyar: You can take your man and go out there and get the papers in a few minutes, give us a receipt and the money.

Felder: I told Woodward that I would get the papers that would put these two fellows out of business.

Febuary: That is all you want the papers for?

Felder: That's all. Yes.

Colyar: Well, we will meet you at East Lake at 2:30.

Felder: Well, I will send Miles out there and you can talk to him.

Colyar: Well, write your name on a piece of paper, for I don't know whether I will know him or not.

Felder: Why, you just met him a short while ago.

Colyar: Yes, I know, but I don't know whether I would recognize him or not, so you write your name on a piece of paper.

Felder: Well, I will write my name on a piece of paper so you will know him. As soon as I can get hold of Miles I will send him up.

Colyar: Send him up by 4 o'clock.

Crushed Under Car, Nerve of Trainman Alone Stays Death

R. C. Potts, a railroad brakeman, lies at the point of death at the Elkin-Goldsmith Infirmary from injuries received when run over by a passenger train. Though one leg was amputated and he was badly bruised, the injured man has displayed remarkable nerve.

Potts' nerve may bring him through an accident that usually means death. His left leg was almost completely severed. His right foot is badly crushed and it may be necessary to remove it, too. A large hole in his head and contusions on his face make his condition extremely serious.

An engine and two coaches passed over Potts Thursday night at Magnolia Street bridge.

Active; Earth Shaken As Big Fissure Opens

NAPLES, May 23.—Vesuvius, during the night and this morning, showed renewed signs of activity. One eruption was accompanied by a slight earthquake shock.

A new and large central fissure has opened round the crater, from which ashes are emitted. The ashes, however, have not yet gone beyond the limits of the volcano.

PEACH CROP FAR SHORT; PRICES WILL SOAR

Highest Estimate Puts Total Yield of State at 1,450 Cars—Five Thousand Last Year.

The Georgia peach crop this year will not exceed 1,450 carloads, which is 50 per cent less than the city of New York alone purchased last year.

H. D. Marks, manager of the Georgia Fruit Exchange, estimates the total Georgia crop at 1,454 cars. The Fruit Growers' Express figures 1,349 cars, while the Central of Georgia Railway looks for only 1,312.

Last year the Georgia crop was unusually large, 5,000 varloads of Georgia's favorite fruit being shipped to market. New York City, always the greatest consumer of the season's early delicacies, purchased 2,800 carloads. Still, there were more than 2,000 carloads for home consumption and country-wide distribution. This year New York alone will demand more than the entire State can supply.

Last year the growers realized, on the season's average, $575 per carload, gross, in New York. This season's short crop will send the price soaring. Early shipments may bring as high as $1,000 a car, although the season's average will be less.

Railroads have already begun preparing to handle the crop. All F. G. E. cars received by the Central of Georgia are being parked in the Fort Valley and Marshallville yards. This road has requisitioned 1,200 cars from the Fruit Growers' Express.

Mr. Marks expects the first carload of Greensboro peaches, the earliest variety, between June 3 and 5. Carmen peaches will begin to move between June 15 and 18; Hihley Bills June 23; Georgia Bills, June 30, and Elberta crops will be exceedingly short. Only the Hihley Bills and Georgia Bills will be gathered in great amounts.

Heavy rains, preventing pollenization, caused the crop shortage, according to Mr. Marks. Central of Georgia officials attribute the falling off to early frosts.

Says New York Is Tending to Paganism

NEW YORK, May 23.—"The idea of liberty in this country is a farce," says Sir Robert Perks, Bart., who has been visiting America.

"New York is leaning, and leaning hard, towards paganism. Unless your people return to the elementary forms of Christianity there will be an age of decadence in your country followed by a revolt which will overthrow the whole social system.

But Polly Needn't Worry Any More

CHICAGO, May 23.—Polly, the $300 parrot, for ten years a lively inmate of the home of the Rev. J. W. Libbertson, pastor of the Sacramento Boulevard church, flew out of a window and with a shriek, "I should worry!" entered the home of Mrs. C. F. Hall, some distance off.

A large brindle cat was in the room when Polly landed. The parrot's yells could be heard above the yowls of the cat. Mrs. Hall ran for the police and met Mrs. Libbertson.

"There's a ghost in my house," she said. "It cries like a child, but it flies around like a spirit and hollers, 'I should worry!'"

Mrs. Libbertson burst in the door. The large brindle cat occupied the immediate foreground. There was an expression of deep satisfaction on the cat's countenance and a few feathers and a beak on the carpet.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves to be worthless, you only lose money. When you use a questionable depilatory, however, it is a very serious matter because you not only lose money, but you take the grave risk of permanent disfigurement.

If You Value Your Face

use De Miracle, the one safe, perfected hair remover of proven merit. Remember, the injury caused by the use of doubtful hair removers will either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars because it will take months or possibly years to gain control of hair growths which have been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

De Miracle

Only Real Hair Remover on Earth

De Miracle contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Therefore, you must eventually use it to retard and gain control of growths which have been caused by the unwise use of questionable depilatories. Is it not safer and wiser to begin using De Miracle now, before the growth gets beyond control?

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours. If your dealer will not supply you with De Miracle, send $1.00 direct.

A Most Remarkable Sale of Summer Dresses

$5.95 to $8.50 Summer Dresses $3.85

We buy a great many dresses from certain makers at regular prices. Then at the end of their season they favor us with their surplus stocks greatly under price. That is how these dresses—though worth $5.95 to $8.50—come to us to sell at a profit at $3.85.

New as the morning—shown to-morrow for the first time. Made of soft white voiles and lingeries, prettily developed in embroideries and laces. Cool, inviting styles for summer wear. One hundred and eighty-seven (187) in the lot, and choice is only $3.85.

$10 & $12.50 Linen & Lingerie Dresses

The linen dresses are in the "Composed" models; one-piece dresses with white linen skirts and colored linene semi-coats. Variously white skirts with blue, rose, brown, lavender and tan coats. $5.85

The other dresses are of voile or lingerie, some comparatively simple; others made of elaborate embroidery flouncings or trimmed with laces, crushed silk girdles, crystal buttons, etc. Worth $10 and $12.50, for $5.85.

$2.50 to $3.50 Silk Shirts $1.95

All white shirts of Jap silk with turn-over collar and French attached cuffs. Also in habutai wash silks with black or colored stripes. All coat styles.

$2.50 to $3 White Nurse Waists $1.95

White lingerie waists, nursing styles. High or low neck; long or short sleeves.

$2.50 Lingerie Waists at $1.25

Also $2.50 white voile waists, low neck, lay-down flat collar of embroidered Bulgarian work. Bulgarian embroidered side pocket.

Clearaway of Neckwear

Usually 75c to $1.25 at

In selling this neckwear at 69c we are not unfair to those who have paid 75c to $1.25 for it. For they had first pick of all the lines, and got full value in every instance. Now that lines are broken we must be good storekeepers and hurry them out even at the little price of 69c. 69c

Every bit of neckwear is as clean and fresh as the day it first arrived. Main Floor,

This $7 Corset $3.50

Fashion is a matter of taste. Some women like a corset just this bust height—some women don't. The factory sides with the women who don't; they intend to discontinue the model. And that alone accounts for the halved price.

Corset is just as pictured. Made of fine imported broche in pink and blue. All sizes to 30 in the lot, but not in each color. Up to recently this corset has been one of our most popular models at $7; the price to-morrow is just half—$3.50.

New Corsets at $1 to $5

Complete lines of these popular makes—Thompson's, Warner's, C. B. a la Spirite, Iris and American Beauty.

A Sale of New Ribbons

The sale is as rare as it is timely. For pretty ribbons like these are scarce in the market at full price—and some of these are at less than half.

All new and crisp in delightful color combinations that rival the hues of the rainbow. Warp prints, Roman and Persian stripes, self colored satin stripes, Bulgarian and Dresden patterns, Pico edges—the list is almost endless. Variously in taffetas, moires and grosgrains. Divided into two lots.

35c Gauze Lisle Stockings 25c

We had to go abroad to get them—and there's been a fair shaving of our own profit to bring them down to 25c. But we think it pays to have the best 25c stocking in town—especially when so many women will want a light weight gauze lisle for summer.

The stocking is full fashioned; the finish is finer than the domestic grades. Reinforced where needed at heels, sole and toes, and garter top. Black, white, tan and a wonderfully big 25c worth.

$1 and $1.25 Silk Stockings 73c

These are called "run of the mill grade," which means they have not been examined for defects. We've searched them over—some show a dropped thread or other slight hurt which will never affect their wear—others appear to be perfect. All silk or with lisle feet and top. Black only.

(Hosiery—Main Floor, Right)

20c to 35c Veiling 10c

Just about enough for a busy day's selling—hence the "close out" price. In fancy mesh, solid color, brown, navy, taupe, black and black-and-white combinations.

PLAN EXHIBIT OF ATLANTA-MADE PRODUCTS

Chamber of Commerce Directors to Install Permanent Display to Boost Local Factories.

With "Boost Atlanta Made Goods" as the slogan, the board of directors of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has decided to install in this city a permanent exhibit of Atlanta made goods.

A special train is to be chartered by the Chamber of Commerce to take Atlanta manufacturers and merchants to Chattanooga, Tenn., to inspect the exhibit of Chattanooga manufacturers, which has been operated for more than a year and has proved of great advantage in advertising goods manufactured in that city.

Plan to Lease Building.

It is proposed to lease a large building near the center of the city, fill it with goods made here, keep it open the year round and make it one of the show places of the town so visitors can see what Atlanta is doing. Business men will thereby be interested in the products of Atlanta factories and a great increase in trade is expected.

Atlanta has 548 factories, which produce over 1,000 different products, and it is doubtful if any city in the United States of its size could assemble such a comprehensive display of this nature.

The industries of Atlanta are yet in their infancy, but every article made here is finding a ready market throughout the country. This speaks well for the manufacturers with present-day competition so keen.

Success Almost Certain.

The success of exhibits in Chattanooga and other cities much smaller than Atlanta make it almost a certainty that the undertaking will prove not only a "four-time winner" here, but an everlasting asset.

At the Chamber of Commerce meeting the participation of that body in the coming celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Georgia Tech was considered and the matter referred to a special committee, of which M. R. Wilkinson was appointed chairman. A special committee was also appointed to take up the matter of organizing a junior order of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

'Woman' Converts Many to Cause

Miss Mildred Bacon

Miss Lucy Hoke Smith

Daughter of Senator Smith One of the Charming Figures in Mrs. Hemmick's Drama.

Miss Lucy Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, is receiving many congratulations from her Washington friends for her ability as an actress. Miss Smith took a prominent part in the initial production of "Woman," a morality play written by Mrs. Christian Hemmick, millionairess and a recent suffrage convert at the New National theater in the capital Wednesday night.

A number of other prominent society girls took part in the play, and it is claimed that many converts to the cause have been made among the young women by the production. Others who had parts were Misses Mildred Bacon, Mabel Talliaferro, Nellie Bly, Helen Buchanan, Desha Allen, Roberta Aimes, Jeanette Allen, Esther Denny and Mrs. David Fairfield.

The new play is an allegory, designed to depict the troubles and trials of the woman of to-day.

UNVEIL CANDLER SHAFT ON JUNE 3

Governor Brown and Governor-Elect Slaton Will Attend Ceremonies at Macon.

The unveiling of the monument to Allen D. Candler, Governor of Georgia from 1898 to 1904, purchased by the members of his official household, will take place at Gainesville June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis. J. W. Lindsey, Commissioner of Pensions, has been named chairman of the committee in charge of the ceremony.

A large party, including Governor Joseph M. Brown and Governor-elect John M. Slaton, will go from Atlanta to attend the event. The City Council of Gainesville and the local camp of Confederate Veterans and other organizations will take prominent parts.

The monument selected is a tall marble shaft. Only the State officials who serve during Governor Candler's two terms contributed to the memorial. They are:

Here's the Prize List in Great Story Contest

Prizes aggregating $250 are offered by The Atlanta Georgian for the best solution of the great serial novel, "The Triple Tie," now running in The Georgian, as follows:

First Prize - -	$100
Second Prize -	50
Third Prize - -	25
Fourth Prize - -	15
12 other prizes, each.	5

"The Triple Tie" will be run in generous daily installments until June 29, when the final chapter will be published. Synopsis of the last installment is now in the hands of Mr. T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

It will be held by him in a sealed envelope until a committee of three Atlanta citizens not connected in any way with The Georgian may select the winners of the prizes.

$30,000 Paid for Old English Silver Plate

LONDON, May 23.—The sale of the collection of old English silver plate belonging to the late E. H. Baldon realized more than $30,000.

Crichton purchased a silver-gilt cream boat, made by Paul Lamerie, in 1744, for $682; a top of a George I'tazza, dated 1714, for $141; a plain bowl, dated 1715, for $175; a circular bowl dated 1663, for $287; and an Elizabethan tiger ware jug, dated 1575, for $1,000.

ALDERMAN'S WIFE ALLEGES CRUELTY

Mrs. James B. Everett, Asking $5,000 Alimony, Declares Husband's Office Pays Him Well.

Charging cruel and inhuman treatment, Mrs. Clara E. Everett has filed suit for divorce against her husband, Alderman James B. Everett, and for $5,000 temporary alimony. The petitioner states that she was forced to leave her husband July 1, 1912, because of his attitude toward her. She charges she is without means of support and has been compelled to depend on relatives for a livelihood since the separation.

Mrs. Everett declares her husband persuaded her to mortgage her home at 659 North Boulevard, which had been given to her by her mother, and that her husband appropriated this money to his own use. The petition states that Everett holds a position as Alderman, "from which he derives a large sum each year." In addition, he is connected with the Theatrical Club at a salary of $150 a month, while he also owns a large amount of stock in the club, which pays him good dividends, the wife states.

Judge John T. Pendleton has set May 31 for the hearing of the suit for temporary alimony. Attorneys Maddox & Sims represent Mrs. Everett.

Growing Children Need Good Bowels

Give a Mild Laxative Occasionally to Insure Regular Bowel Action.

As a child grows older it requires more and more personal attention from the mother, and as the functions of the bowels are of the utmost importance to health, great attention should be paid to them.

Diet is of great importance, and the mother should watch the effect of certain foods. A food will constipate one and not another, and so we have a healthy food like eggs causing biliousness to thousands, and a wholesome fruit like bananas constipating many. It is also to be considered that the child is growing, and great changes are taking place in the young man or young woman. The system has not yet settled itself to its later routine.

A very valuable remedy at this stage, and one which every growing boy and girl should be given often or occasionally, according to the individual circumstances, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a laxative and tonic combined, so mild that it is given to little babies, and yet equally effective in the most robust constitution. At the first sign of a tendency to constipation give a small dose of Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and prompt action will follow in the morning. It not only acts on the stomach and bowels, but its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system generally. Mrs. Henry Babler, Van Dyne, Wis., writes that her little son, Melvin Babler, was constipated most of the time until she gave him Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Since using this remedy he has never been constipated.

The use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts and pills, as they are too harsh for the majority and their effect is only temporary. Syrup Pepsin brings permanent results, and it can be conveniently obtained of any nearby druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

Needle Swallowed 30 Years Ago Found

COLUMBUS, GA., May 23.—A steel needle, swallowed by him more than 30 years ago, has just been removed from the body of J. E. Wood, a Central of Georgia Railroad engineer residing here.

Wood had almost forgotten about the needle, when this week he felt a stinging sensation in his left side, that led him to believe something was wrong. He had a physician make an examination and it was found that the needle had worked to the surface in his side. It was removed. Wood is 45 years of age.

MERGER CERTAIN TO COME NEXT YEAR, SAYS STELZLE

Harder to Unite Presbyterian Churches Than to Bring Together North and South After War, He Declares.

By REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

"When I came here forty-nine years ago, it was in the spirit of war. When I returned the other day, it was in the spirit of the Prince of Peace," was the way General Robert N. Adams, of Minneapolis put it when addressing the Northern Presbyterian Assembly yesterday. General Adams has been preaching the message of the Prince of Peace for a good many years.

After the war he became a preacher, going to the rough regions of the Northwest country. For a long time he has been superintendent of home missions in the State of Minnesota, retiring a short time ago on account of impaired health. He marched into Atlanta with General Sherman and is the only surviving general of the famous group that followed Sherman "from Atlanta to the sea."

"Not only a united republic, but a united church," is the message that General Adams is now preaching. But it seems to be more difficult to unite the church than it does to get together the citizens of the Republic. Religious prejudice dies hard. This has been made apparent in some of the meetings of the assemblies. But it isn't altogether prejudice, either, that keeps men apart. It is often sincere devotion to truth, and it often happens that both opponents have right on their side. Men change their political faiths far more readily than they do their religious convictions.

Churches Working Together.

But it is still true that men with different religious beliefs are working together far more generally than do men with different political beliefs. It isn't often that the Democrats and the Republicans sit down to map out a campaign which is to bring neither of them profit nor glory. So you Atlantans who have been smiling at what sometimes seemed like a religious row don't forget that the politicians haven't come anywhere near the church in unity and co-operation.

The Southern Assembly yesterday demonstrated that fact just stated by deciding to remain within the Federal Council of Churches. And it wasn't a very easy thing to do, either, for there were many things that hurt when they voted favorably upon the resolution. So strongly did it affect one veteran who has been fighting "the battles of the Lord" that he impulsively surrendered his seat as a commissioner, but he showed his real greatness by coming back in the afternoon, repentant. This commissioner has real convictions. He's been suffering on account of them.

Prejudice Giving Way.

But it has been revealed in the meetings of these Assemblies that every denominational prejudice and all sectarian passion must give way before the spirit of which General Adams spoke—the spirit of the Prince of Peace. There's no other way.

Next year will undoubtedly see the bringing together into one denomination of the United Presbyterian and the Southern Assemblies. Then the Northern Assembly will unite with the Reformed Church of the United States. The plan is already set up. It simply requires a little more time, for such matters can not be rushed. Then, perhaps, some time in the near future all these bodies will get together.

In many respects the Protestant Churches of the United States are already in one group, working out some great problems. Yesterday the Northern Assembly listened to Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, Secretary of the Federal Council. He brought greetings from thirty denominations and 20,000,000 Protestants in this country. These groups are working harmoniously for the building up of a great Kingdom of God in America, and they're building fast. Then the Assembly listened to Dr. David G. Wylie, who represented the "Alliance of Reformed Churches, holding the Presbyterian System of Belief." In this long-named society there are 30,000,000 Protestants, in every part of the world, who believe in the Presbyterian doctrine. And 30,000,000 Presbyterians can wield some influence in the world. They're doing it, too, but this isn't a subject that one of them can freely talk about.

Sees Church Unity.

Other fraternal delegates spoke to the Assembly, each of them representing a very considerable group of Christian men and women working in some part of the globe in the spirit of the "Prince of Peace," and most of them expressed a longing for the time when "all should be one."

"When I returned the other day, it was in the spirit of the Prince of Peace," said General Adams. Without fear of serious contradiction, the commissioners who to-day close their sessions in Atlanta may say that when another General Assembly—of any of the three branches that have been here for ten days—meets in this city, it will represent not merely one of the three, but all of them.

List to the Noises That Annoy Chicago!

CHICAGO, May 23.—When a City Council committee began its investigation of unnecessary noise in Chicago, protests were entered against roosters, pet dogs, a cow, motorcycles, electric pianos and practicing voice lessons.

Alderman Nance, chairman of the committee, read to the committeemen a list of noises against which he had received complaints, which included chiming church bells at 6 a. m., shouting of peddlers, policemen's whistles, rumbling of elevated trains, and one man wrote that a cabaret performance near his home kept his family from sleeping.

Seats on Sale for Players' Club Show

Seat sale of "The Importance of Being Earnest," to be presented by the Atlanta Players' Club May 30, begins to-day.

"This year's performance is expected to prove the most brilliant of any given by the club, which comprises talented amateurs from the ranks of Atlanta society. Leading roles will be taken by Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Lamar Hill and Marsh Adair.

After the performance the annual dinner of the Atlanta Players' Club will be given on the lawn of the Piedmont Driving Club, followed by a dance.

Philanthropic Club Docks Girl Workers

ST. LOUIS, May 23.—The Missouri Senate wage investigating committee to-day was surprised to learn from the testimony of Frank J. Sloan, manager of the City Club, a philanthropic organization of prominent St. Louisans, that the club took no interest in the welfare of its women employees.

Sloan also said that the women were paid $5 a week and two meals a day, and that when they were away from work on account of sickness they were docked.

Women Kidnaped by Moorish Outlaws

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ORAN, ALGERIA, May 23.—Word was received here to-day from the interior that Moorish bandits attacked a mail van enroute to Taourirt, abducting two European women passengers.

The driver of the van was killed and a passenger was seriously wounded. The bandits escaped into the mountains.

PRISON CRUELTIES SHARPLY DENIED

Shelby Smith Says Convicts Are Too Tired to Hear Preaching at Night Through Week.

Charges by George W. Crabtree, a Presbyterian prison evangelist, that Fulton County convicts are cruelly treated by guards under Captain Tom Donaldson, have brought a denial from Shelby Smith, chairman of the Fulton County Prison Commission.

The evangelist said he was prohibited from holding evangelistic services in the camp save on Sunday. Chairman Smith denies the cruelty charges, but admits the other, saying the welfare of the prisoners demands that no services be held on working days.

Further than to deny cruel treatment, Captain Donaldson declined to answer the charges made against him. Chairman Smith himself had little to say except about the evangelistic services.

"Among the 700 prisoners in this county are ten murderers and many other desperate characters, who obviously make many restrictions necessary," he said. "They work hard every day, and when they get through they need a bath and a good night's rest. To hold religious services at night, after a hard day's work, would be impractical for the prisoners, impractical for the guards and impractical for the other attendants. I favor holding religious services only on Sunday."

Rain Spoils Jobbers' Day at Ball Park

Friday has been billed as Jobbers and Ladies' Day at Ponce DeLeon Park, but with the rain falling steadily, prospects are that the game will have to be postponed.

"Jobbers' Day" was arranged by Vice President Charles Nunnally of the Atlanta Baseball Association in honor of the jobbers of Georgia and Alabama, who are in session at the Piedmont Hotel.

The plan was to give the visitors an automobile trip around the city, winding up at the ball park. The rain god is holding sway, though, and the jobbers are planning to sit quietly about the hotel and rejoice with the farmers over the saving of the crop.

Court Is Baffled by Trust Co. Statistics

Judge Pendleton, lost in the wilderness of figures in the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company case, wants a Moses to lead him out, and Friday morning named C. J. Metz for the task.

Even a blackboard failed to make the figures submitted by auditors and the two sets of attorneys "gee," and Judge Pendleton named Mr. Metz to secure the information essential in deciding whether or not a receivership is necessary.

The task is expected to take two weeks, and the case has been adjourned for that length of time.

Negro Saved From Mob in Nebraska

LINCOLN, NEBR., May 23.—Walter Balew, negro, charged with attacking a white woman of Falls City, is in the State Penitentiary here for safekeeping.

Sheriff Aldrich said he purposed to keep Balew in the penitentiary because of the intense feeling against him at Falls City. Yesterday a mob tried to storm the jail at Hiawatha, Kans., to get Balew.

OCTOBER WEDDING MOVED UP TO MAY

Manager of Elite Theater and Fiancee "Couldn't Wait" for Day Set 4 Months Hence.

"We just couldn't wait, so we got married."

Pretty Madeline Arnold, that was, in her dove-cote apartment at 25 East Third Street, thus explained the whys and wherefores of her unexpected marriage Thursday afternoon to H. S. Hossbein, manager of the Elite Theater.

"I'm going to the show this afternoon," Miss Arnold informed her mother, Mrs. H. E. Arnold, Thursday as she left her home, 780 East North Avenue.

On the corner she met Mr. Hossbein, who had a marriage license tucked away in his inside pocket. They walked to the residence of the Rev. C. B. Wilmer, of St. Luke's Episcopal Church. En route they were joined by two friends of the bridegroom.

No sign of storm appeared on the horizon of their new life until the bride and bridegroom entered the home of the former's parents.

Arm in arm, they stood before the former Miss Arnold's mother and chorused:

"We're married."

Silence reigned for two minutes while Mrs. Arnold was recovering from the shock. Then she kissed her daughter and welcomed the new acquisition to the family.

Mrs. Hossbein's father is connected with the Woodward Lumber Company.

Ladies' Maids Rebel; 'Hookists' Plan Union

CHICAGO, May 23.—Ladies' maids in Chicago are in open revolt, and efforts were being made to get enough of them in rebellion to form a union, affiliated with the new Household Workers Union. Those who want to organize are "hookists," private hair dressers and private manicures.

The "hookists" declare that present styles, which compel them to hook a 250-pound woman into a tube gown designed for the lines of a 120-pound figure, are giving them the "lacers' arm," akin to the "housemaids' knee."

Symptoms are a swelling of the arm muscles near the shoulder, followed by permanent lameness.

CROXONE SOON RELIEVES ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After Few Doses Are Taken.

If you are bothered with backache or rheumatism, have disagreeable, annoying bladder or urinary disorders I contend with—or suffer with any other of the many miseries that come from weak kidneys, here is a guaranteed remedy you can depend upon, no matter what else may have failed to cure you.

It is a positive fact that the new discovery, Croxone, promptly overcomes such diseases. It is the most wonderful remedy ever made for ridding the system of uric acid.

It soaks right in and cleans out the stopped-up kidneys and makes them filter and sift out all the poisonous waste matter from the blood. It neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder.

More than a few doses of Croxone are seldom required to relieve even the obstinate, long-standing cases.

You will find Croxone entirely different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package costs but a trifle. All druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time.

The Clearaway of Junior Suits

Junior Department---Third Floor

In making these new prices no thought has been taken of the excellent style points, of the real worth of the suits or of the fact that those who need suits and who see these would gladly pay many dollars more than they are now marked. But this is a Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company clearaway, and prices have been made accordingly. She who will travel this summer, she who will stay at home—both will want just such suits and now is the opportunity for both to own them and to save.

$30.00, $35.00 & $37.50 Junior Suits..... $18.50

This includes all Junior Suits that were formerly priced between $30.00 and $37.50. A fine variety! Silk poplins, Bedford cords, serges, shepherd checks—plain tailored suits, charming Balkan suits with elegant touches of trimmings.

All $25.00 & $27.50 Junior Suits.... $12.50

Which means not one but that is at least half-price! There are shepherd checks, navy serges, striped weaves in black and white, and brown and white, just as chic and smart as ever $25.00 and $27.50 suits have been this spring. Bulgarian blouses and tailored suits.

Here Is the Way Children's and Misses' Millinery Is Priced

Girls' Hats that were $1.50 and $2.00 are 59c.

These are colored straws—in many shapes—trimmed with ribbons—bands and bows.

Girls' Hats that were $2.50 are 95c.

Rough and fancy straws in a happy variety of shapes and trimmings—ribbons and flowers.

$5.00, $6.00 and $7.50 Hats are $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50.

Fine choice here! Chip and milan and rough straws, charmingly bedecked with flowers and ribbons, with a scattering few of tailored hats.

The finer $10.00 and $12.50 Hats are all $5.00.

All the better hats—the fanciful affairs that are trimmed by milliners who specialize in girls' hats—now $5.00. Choosing will be a delight—the shapes, the colors, the trimmings are so varied.

The New "Swim Easy" Bathing Suit Is Best for the Junior Miss

Because it is so very practical.

It is all a one-piece suit. The knickerbockers are attached to the skirt. It slips on over the head. There are but four buttons to the whole suit. Two at the waist—which is adjustable, may be made large or small, the fullness is taken up in a box plait down the front—two at the yoke.

And the "Swim Easy" is just as attractive as smart tailoring can make it. In black, red and navy, light weight mohair trimmed with braids and folds. Priced at $1.75, $2.25, $2.75, $3.00 to $4.50.

Sizes ten to eighteen years.

Girls' Bathing Suits at $1.00 and $1.50—these are the little bloomer suits without the skirts in navy mohair—prettily trimmed around the collar and sleeves.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Evelyn's great moment had come. She looked at the coffee service of gold—she thought of Neustadt Castle, the home of brave men and women of her race for long hundreds of years—she visioned the treasury of Taunus empty quite of gold. She was only a girl with a girl's longing heart—but this was the home of her ancestors—and Gustavus was the last of a race that must be preserved at any cost. She struggled for a light tone. "I could care a great deal if you were to dawdle here over your breakfast and miss your important engagement with the bankers of Frankfort. When the treasury is quite stocked with gold pieces, Gustavus, may I go to Paris to visit Klausthal, and bring back all the lovely Paris fashions?"

Gustavus looked at her with bitter scorn. "So you are scheming too—the one pure, good thing I had ever known. You caress with lying eyes that you may have Paris gowns. And for one wild moment I had thought I could give it all up—the old castle—the old home—and go to Paris like Klausthal—abdicate—for you."

The Prince strode from the room—the Frankfort business must not fail now, and because Evelyn was a princess and must never forget her royal dignity, she did not fling her sobbing body across the old mahogany breakfast table as a simple girl of our world might have done. Instead, walking with stately mien—and trembling knees and blinded eyes—to her old tower room, she sat there at her rose-hung window and watched her youth die, the while Gustavus, magnificent in royal uniform of cream and blue, rode away to Frankfort—and fortune.

. . . . . Down the Highway. . . . . .

Down the highway clattered Gustavus, Count Fehrenberg by his side and two grooms at the rear. In Neustadt Castle a girl lay crumpled across a canopied bed of old mahogany, and was fighting for the mere desire to live. In Jew's lane another girl stood merry-hearted and gay and watched the light play in prismatic color on the glory of her necklace—little unconscious Charlotte, into whose hands Destiny was soon to deliver the threads of many lives. What will you do, Charlotte? What can you do when your hour strikes? Evelyn met her hour—and you?

So many a man rides down the highway of life while a woman waits at either end of the road.

Playing the Game.

As they galloped through the spring sunshine Fehrenberg's eyes were alight with mischief at the great coup he had Gustavus had planned the night before, and when the first meetings had been concluded after their arrival at the lucky house in Jews' Lane, he reminded his sovereign of their little game.

Gustavus banished two tender, loving, lying eyes from his mind—those eyes had journeyed in his memory from Neustadt Castle to Jews' Lane, but now he must "play the game."

"Of course, quite right. Gentlemen, I wish to creat you knights of my family order. To your oldest I give the decoration generally conferred for valor on the field. The motto is "Undaunted." I choose this decoration for you, because you are so bold as to be about to lend me money. No soldier could display greater courage." He smiled whimsically as he turned from Amsche l to Solomon. "And you, Baron, I create a commander of this honorable order. I consider that your courage rose yesterday to supreme heights. Allow me to point out that the ribbon is so wide that in warm weather it will save the necessity of a waistcoat."

If this was indeed a game—even if he were being made game of—Solomon would play it too. He bowed low. "Your Highness, I thank you in the name of all of us for the manner in which it pleases and amuses you to honor us."

From the doorway a gentle voice spoke, and as his grandmother and cousin came into the room, the somber, wounded-animal look that had never left Jacob's face since the veiled insults of the Prince of Klausthal-Agorda had brought it there, suddenly cleared like the rising of a gray mist.

Held Out Her Hand.

Holding out her hand and bowing with dignified self-possession, Frau Gudula spoke to the Heir of Nestadt and Taunus: "You are welcome, Duke Gustavus, to my house. How do you do, Count Fehrenberg."

"Dear Baroness," said Gustavus to Charlotte, "if I do not speak my thoughts to you, it is because your beauty makes a pretty speech appear so plain!"

Charlotte chose to be demure. "I thank Your Highness for your reserve."

Even for pretty speeches, Solomon meant to brook no delay. If there was to be coquetry it might well come later, when the contract was duly signed and sealed. "May I propose that we settle our financial business at once?" and thereat, in solemn procession the four brothers followed the Duke and Count Fehrenberg to the unpretentious little office upstairs, where lay the agreement and twelve million florins in gold and notes!

"What are you waiting for, Jacob?"

"I do not like this business—nor will I share its profit."

"My boy, we always share our duties when the family is decided, whether they are pleasant duties or not. You must take your place with them. I have no wish to entertain the Duke in this house—but I must do so now he is here. I am going now to choose some of your grandfather's old Burgundy with which to do honor to the unwelcome guest who is in my house. Think it over while I am gone, my little Jacob."

Charlotte went after her grandmother and shut the door with a great show of importance. With girlish eagerness, and merrily withal, she entered on the interview that must make or mar four lives.

"Cousin Jacob—why are you so much against lending money to the Duke?"

To Be Continued Monday.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

It will mark the closing chapter of a reform movement which started eighty-seven years ago.

MAYOR ASSERTS SCHOOL MUST COME FIRST

Insists Girls' High Take Precedence Over All Other Matters in June Budget.

Mayor Woodward declared Friday he would urge an appropriation for a new English-Commercial Girls' High School building to take precedence over other matters when the finance committee prepares the June budget. The Mayor said there could be no question that this building was the city's most important need, and he would insist on the money being provided for it if everything else had to be sacrificed.

The Board of Education Thursday adopted a resolution insisting that Council provide $75,000 for this building. Members of the finance committee promised the amount the first of the year.

Girls Now Poorly Housed.

Hundreds of girls seeking a commercial education are being housed in small rented dwelling houses, and members of the Board of Education assert that conditions are intolerable.

The finance committee will meet Friday to begin work on the new budget. With only $120,000 available, Council has recommended an expenditure of $30,000 on the Whitehall Street regrading. The board of trustees of the Grady Hospital wants an additional $25,000 for a nurse's dormitory. All the departments want additional appropriations. If the new high school building is provided for virtually all other special appropriations will have to be sacrificed.

Smith Sees Tax Dodging.

Chairman Charles W. Smith, of the tax committee, declared Thursday he believed there were nearly 1,200 pupils attending the public schools whose parents were not paying any taxes. He said the fact that many were not real estate owners was nothing against them, but that they were dodging their street and sanitary taxes.

A list of the pupils has been secured and is being checked with the tax books. Chairman Smith believes a notification of parents of school children that they were delinquent in their taxes would result in immediate payment.

FORT MOULTRIE GUN EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR

Coast Artillery Captain and Three Privates Victims—Four Others Seriously Hurt.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 23.—Captain Guy Hanna, Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. A., died shortly before 11 o'clock to-day at the Fort Moultrie Hospital, his being the fourth death from the explosion of a 4.7 inch gun at Battery Lord, Fort Moultrie, last night at 9:20 o'clock, when officers and men were at night target practice.

The other dead are Privates Baxter, Christian and Dalton, and the seriously hurt are Privates Swaggerty and Steinspringer, Hospital Steward Lamar, and a corporal whose name was not learned. The corporal's right shoulder was torn off. Several others received minor injuries.

Two Killed Outright.

Privates Baxter and Christian were killed outright. Their bodies were cut in two. Private Dalton died three hours later in the post hospital. Captain Hanna was struck by a fragment of the breech lock of the big gun, which tore a hole in his side. Captain Clarke and Lieutenant Perry, between whom he was standing, escaped without injury.

The injured were rushed to the post hospital, nearby, and physicians were called from Charleston to assist the army surgeons in caring for the victims.

Mrs. Radcliff Saved By Insanity Decision

COLUMBUS, GA., May 23.—Dr. L. N. Jones, Superintendent of the State Insane Asylum at Milledgeville, testifying here as an alienist, declared that Mrs. Jennie Mae Radcliff is insane and William Green is in his right mind.

Upon this testimony depended whether or not Mrs. Radcliff, charged with killing her husband, George M. Radcliff, a Columbus merchant, and Green, charged with killing O. D. Kitchens, a young insurance man, would go to trial.

Judge Price Gilbert committed Mrs. Radcliff to the asylum. If she recovers her mental faculties she will stand trial. Green will likely be put on trial Monday.

Girl Faints When Telephone Bill Is $58

BETHLEHEM, PA., May 23.—Mary Smak, a pretty Hungarian domestic, not knowing what the rules or regulations of the telephone company were, decided to call her sweetheart on the telephone at Cleveland. She went into the booth in Gottlieb Huebner's candy store to-day and got connections with Cleveland.

Fifty-eight minutes she remained there. After she was through Huebner was told that the bill was $58. He informed the girl, who fainted. She earns only $2.50 a week.

Clerical Onions Are Barred by Church

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—The Lutheran Ministerium, the supreme body of that sect, decided at the sixty-sixth annual convention, that hereafter ministers of that denomination must not engage in outside work.

One minister has been ordained thirty-seven years and in that time has preached three sermons, but this was not as flagrant as one who raised onions, presumably for market, or another who was an undertaker on the side.

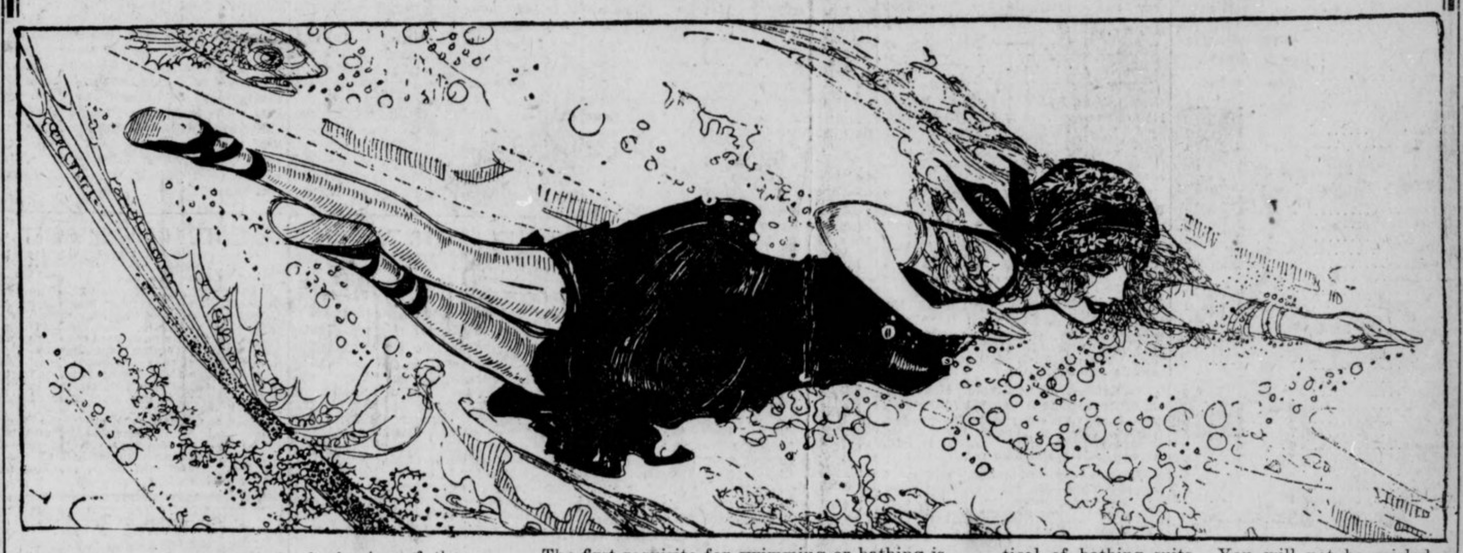
ENJOY LIFE—GO SWIMMING

By EVELYN WREN



THE song of the surf, the beckoning of the breakers, the lure of the lake invite us. The water fascinates, allures and enthralls. We act well and wisely to heed its call and—

Go swimming!

The intimate contact with the water, the overcoming of this element, the struggle and the conquest are inspiring. The laughter comes to your heart, the joy speaks from your eyes and intense happiness is yours.

The opportunities for this delight are at hand. Popular Piedmont Park is the scene of much of this wholesome gayety. East Lake is the mecca for those who appreciate the benefits of this recreation.

Did you ever bathe or swim when a gentle rain was falling? The raindrops tickle your nose, they confuse your sight, they tantalize and tease, adding to the joy of conquest. They help to make you feel the joy of living, the pleasure of happy combat with the water.

If you can't swim, learn. Wade out into the cool, refreshing water, just as far as you can keep your footing, and get acquainted. Laugh at the water, coax and love it, but never let it guess that you are a wee bit afraid. Let it learn that you intend to be victorious, splendidly victorious, as your acquaintance proceeds.

By and by the water will yield to your efforts. You will glide along as if it consciously aided and abetted your joy of conquest. The knowledge that you have overcome those first few fearful thoughts, that you are at home in the water and the pleasure in the bracing, physical contact inspires and cheers you.

The first requisite for swimming or bathing is a good suit. The suit must be cut properly, fit comfortably and be becoming. It detracts much from your first feeling of helplessness if the bathing suit is becoming. When you are expert you will judge of other details which add to your progress—flat trimmings, elimination of superfluous weight and ease of donning.

The J. M. High Company has bathing suits for the novice and the expert, for the maid and matron, for the youngster and his dad—for everyone who appreciates the value of the best of recreations.

The simple suits, well made and cut according to the new lines, are a delight to the beginner. They carry the flat trimming or pretty turn-over collars which will not dangle, damp and dripping, in your face. Every detail is carefully planned to aid, not impede, your progress.

When you first go swimming your costume will be rather elaborate. You will wish a pair of the bright, pretty bathing slippers and the whole line of accessories. You will choose your cap with a view to becomingness and be far less conscious of your lack of skill than if you looked and felt a dowd.

When you can really swim you will become an expert in choosing your bathing costume. You will know that the pretty sashes, the long ties and the large collars give a gorgeous effect on land, but prove real hindrances in the water. You will learn that your suit can be pretty, yet practical.

That swimming may be enjoyed to its fullest, J. M. High Company has selected the most practical of bathing suits. You will not be misled into the purchase of a suit that will prove impossible for swimming, though attractive on the beach. Every suit is practical. Moreover, they are all fashionable. They embrace all the timely touches with no loss of practicability. You can appear well, feel comfortable and swim with little effort.

These suits range in material from serviceable self-material, braid, striped material and stitch-mohair to shining silk. The trimmings are in ing. The prices begin at $2.50, for a pretty, practical suit, to $15.00 for a handsome, practical one. The caps, in all colors and a great variety of becoming styles, cost from 50c to $1.50. The slippers, picturesque with their long ankle lacings, are priced at 25c to $1.00.

There is no exercise so physically beneficial. There is no pleasure so intensely wholesome. Every muscle is brought into play. The chest broadens and grows strong. The mental attitude is positive and inspiring. To swim is to live at your fullest.

J. M. High Company is co-operating with us this year. They are ready with bathing suits, bathing accessories and bathing suggestions. Let's go see them and then—

Let's go swimming!

J.M. HIGH COMPANY.

EX-DIXIE STARS ARE SHINING IN MAJOR LEAGUE

EX-SOUTHERN Leaguers are making a noise like a slide trombone up in the select circles of the National League. Some of them are high up, some low down but they're all there with something.

For instance:

Slim Sallee, ex-Baron, is the champion rescuer of the league. Seven times he has been sent to the rescue of wavering hurlers—a high compliment to be paid a southpaw.

Rube Benton, ex-Lookout, holds the league record for wildness (with Toney of the Cubs), with an average of five and a quarter free passes per game.

Stengle, late of Montgomery, is the premier slugger, with 37 total bases to his credit.

These figures tell you what the graduates from the Southern League are doing, in comparison with the other guys in President Lynch's circuit:

On a basis of games pitched to a decision, Mathewson has been the steadiest pitcher in the league this spring—three passes in seven battles. Benton and Toney have been the wildest. Seaton and Hendrix have been the strike-out stars.

Myers, of Boston, the man who beat "Mary" Calhoun out of a job, has the best base stealing record so far. Stengel, of Brooklyn, who came in only last fall, is the premier slugger. Record:

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 23.—During the past few days the Pirates have played much nearer their natural form than heretofore this season. After being beaten all over the circuit, the Pittsburg club came to New York and gave us a stiff battle when we were looking for something easy. They also gave the Dodgers a neat trimming.

Fans have been talking about the weak pitching of the Pirates. The twirlers may have been off before this, but they certainly braced up against us. Adams, Hendrix, Robinson and Cooper all looked good in New York, and the rest of the club played pretty fair ball except in a couple of games. The team seems to be getting bad catching, the steady work of Gibson behind the bat being sadly missed. His absence also hurts the pitchers. He is laid up and will be out of the game for some time. Poor throwing and bad judgment behind the bat put the team off its balance in a couple of the contests against us.

• • •

THE Pirates will be in the race, and don't make any mistake about that. The club is just as good as the one which came so strong at the finish last year, and I predict that once this team gets going behind the pitching it is bound to get, there will be very few clubs in the league which will stop it. Personally, I am tickled to death that Clarke's team has made such a late start, because it is going to do a whole lot of crowding at the finish. Practically there are only two changes in the team over last year, and these should strengthen it. Viox is playing second base, and, although it is his first season in the big league as a regular, he looked better than any of the several men who appeared at that place last year. He is the kind of a ball player that helps any team, aggressive and "crabbing" all the time. When he first joined the Pittsburg club he was known as the freshest busher ever to come up from the minors, and he still retains his fighting spirit. He also hits the ball hard, and is a difficult man to pitch to, refusing to offer at bad balls.

ASIDE from all his natural accomplishments, Wagner has taken a personal shine to Viox, and this in itself is a big help to any player who joins the Pittsburg team. The Dutchman will teach him a lot of baseball. It is customary for Wagner to take up with some young fellow each season and string along with him, and the lucky recruit always benefits by it. Last year it was "Tom" Hendrix, and before that it was "Jack" Miller, now playing first base.

But the real wonder of the Pirates is Hans Wagner, who looks just the same as he did when I broke into the league, except that his hair is a little grayer, because it wasn't gray at all then. He looks just the same on the ball field as far as his playing goes. He is a wonder for his age, thirty-nine, and is a grand example of what taking care of himself has done for him. He is hitting just as hard as he ever did this season, if not harder, and the chances are all in favor of him batting over .300 once more, which he generally does with great consistency.

MENSOR, in center field, is a newcomer, but he looks like a good ball player. The chances are that "Artie" Hofman, the former Cub, will play in the outfield regularly as soon as he gets in shape. Just at present his heart is bad, and he is afraid of over-exerting himself. Pittsburg will come, and when they do they will come very fast, because they have a bunch of terrific hitters and plenty good pitchers to stop the opposing teams. It is going to be a hard little combination to beat.

The Giants have also braced on the past week, and McGraw is getting back closer each day to the lineup that won him two pennants. We came near losing a good ball player last week when Shafer threatened to go home, but he changed his mind. Many blamed Shafer for this, but he is only a boy, and got the idea he was needed home by his father. He should not be censured for his action.

CHARLEY EBBETS TO FILE CHARGES AGAINST KLEM

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 23.—President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn club, was so incensed over Umpire Klem's action in continuing the game with Pittsburg yesterday in the heavy rain that he announced he would file charges with the board of directors of the National League.

The rain fell in torrents from the second half of the third inning and the field was in frightful condition. The infielders could hardly keep their feet going after batted balls. The pitchers could not control the wet ball and only clever work by the pitchers prevented wild pitches.

SHAMROCK IV WILL NOT BE A "FREAK CRAFT"

SEWANEE AND VANDERBILT CLASH AT NASHVILLE

SEWANEE, TENN., May 23.—The Sewanee Tigers play their last series of baseball to-day and Saturday with Vanderbilt at Nashville. For the last few weeks the Tigers have been playing good ball, Captain Gordon shaking up the line-up after they returned from the long southern trip. McGoodwin, on first, is now playing fine ball on the initial sack, which was the weak spot of the team.

Captain Gordon will pitch the first game against the Commodores, and he ought to land the first victory, as he has been pitching winning ball all season. Eggleston will be in the box in the second contest.

FLYNN AND COFFEY CLASH IN NEW YORK GO FRIDAY

NEW YORK, May 23.—"If James Coffey, the Dublin giant, and Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, box to form, as the fistic fans would say, then the patrons of the hit, block and step-away sport may depend on an interesting ten-round bout at the Garden Athletic Club to-night.

Both are aggressive boxers, and as the first class brigade of heavyweight boxers. Coffey is the climber and Flynn one of those fighters who may come back at any time, no matter how many defeats he may have experienced.

Both are aggressive boxers, and as they are hitters the bout may terminate suddenly and in a manner that the fans of this city enjoy—by a knockout. Both are in perfect physical condition for a hard battle. The winner will be matched with Gunboat Smith.

MAYOR WOODWARD ALSO IS CAUGHT BY POLICE DICTOGRAPH

Chief of Detectives Lanford said today that further evidence of the alleged plot to discredit him and Beavers, and to drive them from their positions exists in another sensational dictograph record of a secret conference in which Mayor Woodward, C. C. Jones and E. O. Miles figure. Jones is the owner of the "Rex," and was formerly interested in property in the restricted district when Atlanta was running open. Miles is a private detective.

Mayor James G. Woodward declared Saturday that he was lured into the room in the Williams House No. 2, where Attorney T. B. Felder was dictographed and he would be glad if the detectives would give out for publication what the instrument recorded him as saying on that visit.

"G. C. February, secretary to Detective Chief Newport Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, that long-haired mysterious investigator, talked to me about evidence they had proving that Chief of Police Beavers and Chief Lanford were protecting disorderly houses and blind tigers. They talked of protecting February's job and the need of $1,000 to pull off the affair.

Told Them to Get Proof.

"My reply was ,if February could show up any crooks in the police department I did not think the people of Atlanta would stand for him losing his job. I told them to produce the evidence. If it was worth anything I told them I did not think there would be any trouble about a just reward, but that I did not have any $1,00 0to give them.

"The Phagan case was not mentioned.

Charles C. Jones, owner of some of the closed "houses in our midst," also said he was persuaded to visit the mysterious room of Colyar, No. 31.

"When he spoke about money to show up Beavers, and I told him I was not interested, the interview ended," said Jones.

Mayor Woodward said the first he knew of Colyar was one day last week. Colyar called at the City Hall and told the Mayor's secretary, Frank Hammond, he had some important evidence to submit to the Mayor. When he was delayed in getting into the office, he grew impatient and declared that it was more trouble to see the Mayor of Atlanta than the President of the United States.

Felder Tells of Evidence.

"Monday," said Mayor Woodward, "Colonel Felder came to my office. He told me that in working on the Phagan case he had unearthed some startling evidence of corruption in the Police Department.

"'Give me the evidence,' I said to him, 'and I will see that it is given proper attention and investigation.'"

"He explained that it would take funds to employ a detective to get the evidence together, as the man he had employed was confined to the Phagan case.

"My reply was that if the evidence was sufficient to convict, I did not think there would be the least trouble about getting up the money. His reply was that it was in documentary form.

"Just as he was about to leave, Charlie Jones came in. As I remember, Colonel Felder left immediately. Jones had been up to the meeting of Council Monday afternoon, I understood, and dropped by just for a minute."

Mayor's Next Experience.

Mayor Woodward said his next experience with the alleged plotters et. al. was on Wednesday afternoon when February and E. O. Miles, a private detective, came to his office in the Empire Building.

"It was a little after 3 o'clock," said the Mayor. "They told me they could show up Beavers and Lanford with unquestionable proof. I was reluctant to go, but they insisted, so I told them

"PROVOKE A QUARREL WITH CHIEF BEAVERS AND SHOOT HIM TO DEATH"

A plot to assassinate Chief of Police J. L. Beavers is the amazing charge made by A. S. Colyar, Jr., the man who conceived and accomplished the alleged dictographing of Colonel T. B. Felder in connection with the $1,000 bribery accusations placed against the attorney.

This sensational disclosure came to light Saturday morning. The charge was laid before Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford by Colyar. He declared that he would produce a man who would make an affidavit to the effect that an attempt was made to employ him to "get" Chief Beavers and also Chief Lanford. Colyar declared that this man would swear that if it became necessary that he had been instructed to "provoke a quarrel with Chief Beavers and shoot him to death." This man, Colyar avowed, would swear that he had been promised immunity from punishment for his deed.

This report created an intense sensation in police circles, and produced one of the greatest sensations of the Phagan mystery.

The name of this mysterious man has not been furnished detectives, but Colyar promised to take him Friday night to the office of Chief Lanford in the police station, where the affidavit was to be made. Up to a late hour Saturday morning, however, neither he nor Colyar had put in an appearance.

According to the story told b yColyar, this man is not a resident of Atlanta, but has been here several days. He is an old friend of Colyar. He said this man would swear positively that the murder plot proposition was made to him shortly after his arrival here, and that he would give the name of the man who engineered the deal.

FELDER'S FIGHT IS TO GET CHIEF AND LANFORD OUT OF OFFICE

Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lanford said Saturday that the whole sinister significance of the charges brought against Colonel Thomas B. Felder lay in the fact that the forces of evil in the city had been steadily laboring for the downfall of himself and Chief Beavers ever since the city was cleaned up and the disreputable resorts put out of business.

He declared that since that time spies and agents of "the interests" that were most harmed had been on the trail of himself and Chief Beavers trying to "get something on them" which would result in their disgrace and dismissal from office.

The theft of affidavits and other papers from his safe, he declared, was only a part of the deep plot to discredit the heads of the police and the detective departments.

Every accusation that is made by Lanford, Colonel Felder has denied to The Georgian, and has replied to Lanford by saying that the detective department has not been seeking to find the real criminal in the Phagan mystery, but has been making every effort to save the guilty man from the consequences of his terrible crime.

Felder Charges Police Plot to Shield Slayer

Colonel Thomas B. Felder entered into an explicit and detailed denial to The Georgian of all the charges of attempted bribery contained in the affidavits signed by C. C. Febuary, secretary to Chief of Detectives Lanford, and A. S. Colyar, a private detective with a spectacular career.

Colonel Felder declared the alleged dictograph record of conversation he is alleged to have had with Colyar and Febuary in Williams House No. 2 a "frame-up" and a fabrication.

The report that he had offered $1,000 for the Coleman affidavit in the Phagan case and affidavits said to indicate graft in the Police Department he branded as absolutely false.

The whole plot had been concocted, he said, to discredit himself and W. J. Burns and drive them from the Phagan case so the guilty person might be protected.

"Every move made by the police in the Phagan case has been for the protection of the real criminal," said Colonel Felder. "The police have kept an innocent negro there in a cell for three weeks in the hope that they can crush a confession out of him and let the real culprit go free.

"Guilty Person Protected."

"If the desire were not to protect the guilty person, why should they desire to eliminate Burns and myself? Burns has a reputation for landing every criminal he goes after. He has a reputation for being absolutely merciless in the manner he hunts down his man. It is as certain as anything can be in the detection of criminals that he will be successful, once he gets started on a case. He is known to be unpurchasable. Everybody knows that he could have accepted a million dollars at any time during the chase for the McNamara brothers if he had been willing to say that he had not been able to find the dynamiters.

"As for myself, my professional reputation, at least, is that if I have not done a case in which I was interested any good, I certainly have not done it any harm.

"So, I repeat, what other motive could they have in trying to drive Mr. Burns and myself from the Phagan case except to protect the real culprit?

"That so-called dictograph conversation was a frame-up and a fabrication from start to finish. In a longer statement that I am preparing, I will show this conclusively. I will demonstrate it by the very conversation that is alleged to have been reproduced in the other room by the dictograph. I will show that things were written that never would have been said by persons in conversation.

"I will show its absolute absurdity with such clearness that no room will be left for doubt. It will be so plain that he who runs may read. It won't require any detective to show that it is a frame-up, and one of the clumsiest and craziest that ever was attempted.

Says Coleman Approved.

"That Coleman affidavit, in which the mother and stepfather of the murdered Mary Phagan are made to say that they never hired me or approved of me as an attorney to prosecute the Phagan slayer, was extorted, in my opinion. As a matter of fact, I never said I was employed by the Colemans. I announced that I had been engaged by residents of Bellwood who were friends of the bereaved family. It is true, however, that Mr. Coleman approved of my selection. I never offered $1,000 for the possession of this affidavit.

"Neither is it true that I went to Mayor Woodward and told him that there was lots of graft in the city, but that it would take a good deal of money to uncover it. I had only a brief conversation with the Mayor, and I told him at the time that I did not wish to undertake anything or become interested in anything that would take my time from the prosecution of the Phagan case. It was not understood that I was to probe into the city's graft conditions.

Will Expose Colyar.

"Along with my detailed statement to-morrow I shall make public some of the startling incidents in the career of this man Colyar. I have known his history for years. What I have to say about him—and practically every statement I make will be supported by affidavits—will cause a grave doubt as to his credibility.

"I am acquainted with his movements when he went into Mexico. I know of the humiliation he was to his father, who was a well-known public man. I will tell of these things when I make my formal statement to-morrow.

"Colyar came to me and said that he had evidence of graft in the Police and Detective Departments. He said he knew that hush money was being paid the police authorities by the proprietors of disorderly houses.

"I said to him: 'Don't you know, Colyar, that nobody would believe a word you had to say? If you've got any papers that you think are worth anything, you can bring them to me and I'll look them over.' It is from these conversations that we had in my office that he has framed up this so-called dictograph conversation, adding the conversation that gives it the appearance of an attempt to bribe.

Burns Fought, He Says.

"It is nothing but a plot to get me out of the Phagan case, but I am certain of one thing, and that is that Burns and Tobie, if they are not circumvented by this gang, will have the guilt fixed upon the right person within a very short time after Burns arrives here. They will have to work against difficulties, for as soon as it became known that Burns was going to enter the case all of the witnesses were instructed not to talk to any of the Burns operatives, although they had been allowed to talk to the Pinkertons, hired by the National Pencil Company, without reserve."

Colonel Felder is bitter in his attitude toward Colyar and the people he represents, and declares that he will have them "shown up" within another 24 hours.

He was so harassed by the constant ringing of the telephone Friday night that, with Mrs. Felder, she left home shortly after 7 o'clock with the intention, he said, of hiding himself somewhere up town. He found a group of his friends at one of the clubs and he stayed there until shortly after 10 o'clock when he met Mrs. Felder, who had been witnessing a rehearsal at the Grand Theater.

"If they're framing up on you, I want to tell you you've got my sympathy," said one of his friends, heartily.

"Thank you, old man," returned the Colonel, "but I don't need any sympathy. I'll have these fellows on the run so quick it'll make their heads swim!"

COLYAR CALLED CONVICT AND INSANE

Records Show He Has Been Confined in Numerous Prisons and Twice in Asylum.

Who is A. S. Colyar?

The records show that Colyar was once confined in the Middle Tennessee Insane Asylum, and that more recently he was sent to Lyons View, the East Tennessee Asylum. Information from Nashville is that he served time in prisons all over the State, as well as in Sing Sing, New York, and a jail in Virginia. Telegrams from Chattanooga paint him as a wild adventurer who spends considerable time in prison and is always in trouble.

In Prison Many Times.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 24.—A. S. Colyar is a son of the late A. S. Colyar, of this city, one of the most brilliant lawyers and statesmen Tennessee ever produced. When not violently insane his mind works brilliantly, but always to the wrong end. He has been in prison time after time, but always evaded long sentences through influence of his father's friends.

Young Colyar's most noted exploit, as it is understood here, consisted in connection with the famous Mollineux murder case in New York. He went from Nashville to New York, saw General Mollineux and offered to have his son acquitted for $20,000.

"Your son is innocent," Colyar is reported to have said. "One of my clients, now in the Tennessee penitentiary, is guilty. He confessed to me. For $20,000 I can get him out of the penitentiary, bring him here, induce him to confess and save your son's life."

Next day, so the story here runs, General Mollineux advanced him half the money. Colyar went back to Nashville, engaged a well-known pickpocket as a confederate, took him to New York with half a dozen guards and claimed the rest of the $20,000. The ruse might have worked, except for the fact that an assistant district attorney secured information about Colyar and blocked his plans.

STRANGULATION CHARGE IS IN INDICTMENTS

True Bills Already Drawn by Solicitor Against Frank and Lee.

The Grand Jury resumed Saturday morning the Phagan murder case with indictments against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee charging strangulation.

While nothing definite could be learned, it was confidently expected at the office of the Solicitor Saturday morning the case of Frank might be completed during the day. Only a few more witnesses were to be called, it was learned, and these could tell what they knew in a few hours.

The indictments are the first of the kind to have been drawn in Fulton County in the recollection of the oldest court officials, and for this reason the exact verbiage is being kept secret. eFaring that if the indictments are not drawn in strict conformity to law, there would of course be some question of their validity, and there being so little law on this particular form of indictment, the Solicitor would not make public the phrasing of the bill until his assistant could find some precedent in the Supreme Court records.

It became known Saturday that none of the "star" witnesses for the State would go before the Grand Jury unless at the last moment the Solicitor thought it would be necessary to introduce them to secure a bill. Those who testified Friday were the detectives who appeared before the Coroner, and similar witnesses are awaiting their turn to be called upon Saturday.

The city detectives are the principal witnesses. From their investigation and examination of witnesses they are telling the Grand Jury everything they have found out. The Solicitor was confident this form of introducing evidence would not only greatly expedite matters, but would present the case in a more concise form.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said that he could prove Frank was not at his home the evening of the murder at the hours he said he was.

"I can prove that Frank was not at his home during the hours on Saturday night, the night of the murder, that he said he was. I will have witnesses to swear to this," was his statement.

The chief added that he had a great amount of other important evidence that has been more carefully guarded than some that had found its way into the papers.

Frank's statement at the Coroner's inquest was that he reached his home shortly after 7 o'clock the evening of Saturday, April 26, and did not leave it until the following morning. The testimony of his mother-in-law and father-in-law substantiated his evidence. They said that while they were engaged in a card game Frank was in the next room reading a magazine.

Wants Congress to Govern All Aliens

WASHINGTON, May 24.—That Congress shall have the right to legislate on questions affecting the right of citizens of foreign nations residing in the United States is the proposal of Representative Bartholdt of Missouri, in a resolution offered in the House. The resolution was inspired by the California situation.

Bartholdt declares that the United States should not be in a position of being embroiled in an international controversy on account of the action of a single State.

Febuary alleges that Felder offered $1,000 for police records.

WILL CONTESTANT DECRIED IN COURT

Heated discussion, resulting in a charge by Henry Brewster, representing part of the original legatees and Mrs. M. B. Crawford under the will of Nancy E. Crawford and J. B. Crawford, that Joe James, representing C. E. Crawford, was disreputable, was heard Friday morning in the city hall when the two sides of the Crawford estate clashed in a wordy battle.

James was denounced in scathing terms by Attorney Henry Brewster, who charged that James had tried to make a settlement with one of the heirs and had got hold of one of his clients. Brewster said he had made a settlement after having seen James' clients and knew the complete circumstances after hearing the testimony. He said he was convinced beyond all doubt of the disreputable character of these people, and that their evidence was unreliable.

Brewster then proceeded to denounce James, characterizing him as being no better than his clients. He alleged that James also had obtained Charles Crawford, one of his clients, a man easily preyed upon because of his innocence of the law, and was now attempting to rob this man.

The hearing was before Judge James A. Anderson, who, under the present law, has no authority to punish for libel, as he is acting merely as a referee in the case.

The Crawford estate case involves $200,000 and has been in the county courts for several years.

Under the will of Nancy E. Crawford, L. Z. Rosser, Henry Brewster and J. J. Barr are counsel for the legatees; while Reuben R. Arnold and Burton Smith represent the widow, Mrs. Crawford.

Lawyers for the widow declare a settlement had been effected, granting an equal distribution of one-half to each side, but that James now was attacking the legality of J. B. Crawford's second marriage, and in search of personal gain sought to rob the heirs.

James declared the charges were unfounded and unjust. Carroll Latimer, an attorney retained by the heirs, said he did not agree with James' method of conducting the case.

It was this same case that caused the fist fight last Monday of which Burton Smith, brother of Hoke Smith, was the principal combatant, causing five men to take the count.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday morning.

Fear of Oysters to Be Effectually Allayed

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Oyster beds from Cape Cod to Texas are to be investigated by the Department of Agriculture.

When polluted beds have been located the department will bar their product from interstate commerce, and through publicity aid State and municipal authorities in preventing local sales.

GREEK-BULGARIAN SITUATION GRAVE

Salonika Dispatches Report Fierce Fighting—Real War Is Feared.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 24.—The utmost gravity attends the Graeco-Bulgar situation, for dispatches from Salonika to-day reported that fierce fighting is still in progress between an army of 66,000 Bulgars and 4,000 Greeks. Fear is felt in quarters that war will be declared between the two countries unless an amicable understanding is soon reached.

While the fighting was brought about by the action of the Bulgars in crossing the neutral zone, there has been ill-feeling ever since Greece laid claim to Salonika last year. An artillery and infantry battle is in progress near Panghaion in Southern Albania. An unofficial dispatch said that over 250 had been killed in 48 hours.

Consternation has been caused here by the break, which, it is feared, will have an adverse influence upon peace negotiations with Turkey.

Four Drown in Week.

LIVERPOOL, May 24.—The British steamer Malroese was wrecked to-day off Holyhead Island with the loss of four lives. The ship went upon a reef in the fog. The Malroese was a schooner rigged ship of 1,084 tons, built in 1875.

Italian Lotteries Attacked.

ROME, May 24.—Although the system yields an income of $20,000,000 annually to the Government in taxes a strong attempt is being made by the Senate to break up lotteries.

Of six bills introduced to establish new lotteries, all but two were killed.

Women Score Suffragettes.

THE HAGUE, HOLLAND, May 24. Women of many nationalities gathered here for the International Council meeting are almost unanimous in their disapproval of the methods used by English suffragettes and of the repressive methods of the English Government as compared to the liberal policy of the colonies.

MIKADO'S FEVER FALLS, THEN GOES UP

Emperor Yoshihito's Temperature 101.48 Saturday Afternoon; Was 99.2 Friday Night.

TOKIO, May 24.—Although there was an abatement early to-day of approximately four degrees in his fever, the temperature of Emperor Yoshihito, who is ill of pneumonia, late rose more than two degrees. It was 101.48 degrees this afternoon.

The following bulletin was issued this morning from the Aoyoma palace, signed by two of the eight physicians who are attending the imperial patient:

"His Majesty has passed a favorable night and shows encouraging improvement. Tis temperature is 99.2, pulse 76 and respiration 36."

News that improvement was shown in the condition of the Mikado caused great rejoicing throughout the empire, but especially in this city. Prayers of thanksgiving were offered up and a ministerial order was proclaimed allowing the theaters to reopen.

Empress Sadaka spent several hours at the bedside of her husband to-day. She insists upon ministering to him and was much rejoiced to learn of his change for the better.

Congratulations From U. S.

The bulletin expressing news of the Mikado's improvement was carried to the foreign office, where the Cabinet was in session discussing the diplomatic controversy with the United States over the California anti-alien land law.

Arthur Blanchard Bailey, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, conveyed his congratulations to the imperial family that the Mikado showed improvement and that he hoped it would continue.

Special services will be held in the Christian churches to-morrow.

Armour Knows of No "Serious" Meat War

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 24.—Ogden Armour, here on a pleasure trip, made the following statement on the meat situation:

"Although I understand there is keen conflict among American meat men at the Smithfield meat market, as a result of which there has been a great reduction in prices here, yet we have received no word to this effect from Chicago.

There has been a drop in prices of all meats at the present time, due to the rise and fall of the market; but otherwise I am not conscious of any serious situation."

Senator's Daughter Weds Her Rescuer

NEW YORK, May 24.—A romance which had its inception in a thrilling rescue of the bride by the groom while bathing along the Jersey coast four years ago, came to a culmination to-day in the wedding of John Anthony Maher, a street railway official, to Miss Dolorita O'Gorman, eldest unmarried daughter of Senator James A. O'Gorman and Mrs. O'Gorman.

The wedding was celebrated at the Senator's home in West 108th Street.

SUFFRAGISTS OFF FOR WORLD MEET

NEW YORK, May 24.—Delegates to the World's International Congress of the Woman Suffrage Alliance in Budapest, June 15 to 21, sailed today on the "Finland" for Antwerp. The itinerary includes Antwerp, The Hague, Amsterdam, Berlin, Dresden, Vienna and Budapest; and after the convention they will visit Venice, Florence, Pisa, Rome, Naples and other Italian points before sailing for America July 10.

At the convention 26 countries will be represented by 12 delegates from each.

The twelve delegates from the National American Woman's Suffrage Association are: Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Pennsylvania; Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. J. T. Bowen, Illinois; Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Massachusetts; Mrs. Henry Villard and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, New York; Miss Runtz Rees, Connecticut; Mrs. Crystal Eastman Benedict, Wisconsin; Mrs. Emma E. Sweet, Mrs. William Tod Helmuth and Mrs. Frederick Nathan, New York, and Miss Anna Maxwell Jones, Texas.

Among the alternates are Miss A. L. Williams, Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Minnie Rutherford, Magazine, Ark.

The States where equal suffrage is now in force are allowed special delegates.

During the convention three languages will be spoken, French, German and English. The Chinese, Persian and Indian women take part in the convention for the first time. Other countries affiliated with the International Alliance are: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bohemia, Finland, France, Great Britain, Iceland, Norway, Portugal, Italy, The Netherlands, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, Servia, South Africa, Hungary and the United States.

Coincident with the suffragette convention, the International Men's League for Woman Suffrage will hold its second convention in Budapest, Sir John Cockburn will preside.

Among the American women who are going over as visitors and not as delegates is Mrs. T. L. Bush, Birmingham, Ala.

Jacob Schiff Sees Prosperity Ahead

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 24.—Jacob Schiff declares that Americans can look forward to a good sound money market in the near future, after Congress has disposed of the tariff bill. He said:

"I have made a very careful study of European money markets while abroad, and I think money is on a more solid basis than ever. With the settlement of Balkan affairs, I find markets stronger and better than ever.

"We have a good, sound market which will improve surprisingly within the next few months."

MAYOR ALSO IS DICTOGRAPHED BY POLICE

Chief Lanford Claims More Evidence of Plot to Discredit Him and Beavers.

I would be over within a few minutes.

"I went to the room in the Williams House. Colyar and February did most of the talking. I understood that February, through his position as secretary to the chief of detectives, was going to get the evidence. I did not suspicion a trap, but I did not like the atmosphere of the place, and I felt an especial antipathy to Colyar's looks.

"Publish It," Says Mayor.

"I told them I wanted to see their proof and then we could talk business. They argued about going to East Lake to make the transfer, explaining that they wanted to get out of Fulton County.

"I answered that there was no reason to get out of Fulton County, for a crime in Fulton was a crime in DeKalb. Colyar got up and said:

"'I'll see you to-morrow.'

"From what has been published I suppose I must have entered the room a few moments after Colonel Felder left. I have not the slightest objection to them publishing what the dictograph recorded me as saying."

Suffragists Called "Slaves to Clothes"

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Representative Stanley E. Bowdle, of Ohio, who succeeded Nicholas Longworth, aroused the ire of Washington suffragists by declaring that the suffragettes would do well to emancipate themselves from the slavery of clothes.

He also suggested that they stop the slaughter of rare and beautiful birds for the adornment of womankind, take better care of their servants and abolish the deadly hook and eye.

Suffragettes Start on Missionary Hike

NEW YORK, May 24.—"General" Rosalie Jones, at the head of her loyal army of suffragist hikers, many of whom made the "on to Washington" trip last winter, marched from New York into the little town of Mineola, Long Island, this afternoon.

The paraders, whose only mission this time is to bring converts to the "cause" into the fold, are starting this afternoon and to-night on a tour of the State.

Real Son of Ould Sod For House of Lords

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, May 24.—The death of the brilliant Irish lawyer, Lord Ashbourne, will result in a man who speaks Irish becoming a member of the House of Lords. Lord Ashbourne's heir, the Hon. William Gibson, long ago turned from England to Irish-speaking Ireland.

He is the founder of a movement for wearing Irish national costume, which he always wears himself.

Marshall Rebuked by Bacon for Reed Rule

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Bacon sharply rebuked Vice President Marshall in executive session of the Senate for attempting to use the famous Reed rules by counting Senators to make the quorum not voting.

Senator Bacon declared the only way such a rule should ever be enforced would be through changed rules.

Miss Booth Catches, Then Converts Thief

LONDON, May 24.—Capt. Mary Booth, daughter of Gen. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, discovered a burglar in her bedroom at 2 o'clock this morning.

Instead of calling the police, she confronted her visitor and learning he was driven to crime by hunger, gave him a square meal and prayed with him. When he left he promised to turn over a new leaf.

PRINCE AND ONLY DAUGHTER OF KAISER WED

Love and Diplomacy Enter Into Imperial Match at Berlin. Royalty in Attendance.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 24.—Love and diplomacy entered into the marriage today of Princess Victoria Luise, the only daughter of Emperor William and Prince Ernst August, youngest son of the Duke of Cumberland.

In brilliancy and in point of the great number of royal personages present the nuptials far outrivalled any similar event during the past decade.

Proud Kings, monarchs of lesser rank and Crown Princes and Princesses saw the fair-haired, blue-eyed twenty-one-year-old daughter of the German Kaiser, become one with the strapping young 26-year-old Prince and with the ceremony was healed a breach between the House of Hohenzollern and Guelph which has existed for about half a century.

The marriage of the beautiful young German Princess took place upon the silver anniversary of the wedding of Prince Henry of Prussia. The ceremonies really began two days ago with the marriage ceremonies today as the climax. The civil ceremony took place in the new Marble Palace at Potsdam; the religious rites were celebrated in this city.

All Germany Interested.

Ever since the engagement of the Princess to the young scion of Cumberland was announced last February at Carlsruhe the German Empire has been vitally interested in the approaching nuptials. Thousands of persons came from all parts of the Empire to make a gala occasion of the day.

Princess Victoria Luise selected for her attendants three of the prettiest girls of her own caste in Europe. Those invited to act as her bridesmaids were Princess Mary, daughter of King George and Queen Mary of England; Princess Elizabeth, daughter of King Charles of Roumania, and Grand Duchess Olga, eldest daughter of the Czar of Russia. At the last minute it was decided to increase the number of bridesmaids to four so a belated invitation was sent to Princess Yolanda, of Italy. Princess Yolanda has been called the reigning beauty of Southern Europe.

As would be imagined the wedding gifts are fabulous. Their value is estimated at close to $3,000,000. The Kaiser's gift to his daughter consists of a number of articles, among them jewelry of his own design. Many German cities appropriated sums ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 for the purchase of gifts. The great courts of Europe sent costly and beautiful presents.

Wedding Gifts Costly.

Usually in marriage the wedding gifts are supposed to be shared equally by the bride and groom but in the imperial marriage to-day Prince Ernst gets one gift of which the bride shares no part.

The Kaiser was so glad that the old quarrel with the House of Guelph was settled that, after the marriage had been arranged, he promised to create a new German state and make the groom the ruler of it. Accordingly Prince Ernst to-day became the Duke of Brunswick and the Grand Duke of Luneburg. This gives the young husband a responsible job and makes him the equal in rank with the Kings of Saxony and Wurtemburg and the Prince Regent of Bavaria. A considerable portion of the Province of Hanover, which belongs to Prussia, was taken over and added to the new state.

Princess Victoria Luise and Prince Ernst August have known each other for nearly three years and in spite of the repeated assertions in anti-government quarters that it is purely a marriage for the sake of politics, those in court circles say that real love enters into the match. Pictures have been printed of the engaged pair walking holding hands.

The bride's full name is Victoria Luise Adelheid Mathilde Charlotte Hohenzollern, Princess of Prussia, and she was born in the Potsdam Palace, September 13, 1892, fulfilling a fond wish of her parents for they already had six sons. The Princess grew into a very beautiful girl, under the personal care of her mother who taught her the science of home making.

Princess Patriotic Girl.

In intimate circles Emperor William called her "one of my little ones" and innumerable pictures have been printed showing the deep filial love of the fair young Princess for her father and mother.

The Princess is a very patriotic girl and insisted that her magnificent trousseau should be made in Germany and it was.

Prince Ernst August was reared to the profession of a soldier. His full name is Ernst August Chretien George of the Brunswick-Luneburg branch of the House of Guelph. He is an officer in the Bavarian Cavalry.

The quarrel between the two houses has lasted forty-seven years. The blind King George V of Hanover maintained his right to the Hanoverian throne after Prussia annexed his kingdom, and was sent into exile. The Duke of Cumberland (father of the groom) swore at his dying father's bedside in Paris that he would never become reconciled to the Crown of Prussia and would never renounce his rights to the throne of Hanover.

Many Americans There.

But love and diplomacy found a way even if cupid is presumed to be blind and diplomacy moves with ponderous steps with absolutely no trace of sentiment.

The wedding celebration began Thursday with a gala opera evening; Friday a state banquet was held. Tomorrow special religious services will be held throughout the Empire. Tonight some of the guests will leave as state business at home calls them away.

Berlin has swarmed as never before with secret service agents and foreign police. With so many monarchs to protect the city has been policed with the regular gendarmes and soldiers day and night. Among the royal visitors were King George and Czar Nicholas.

Caruso is a One-Man Band

Every Bone is An Orchestra

Musical Ability Permeates Nearly Every Tissue, Surgeon Discovers.

If that gold bearing, silver toned voice of Enrico Caruso's ever fails him, all he will have to do, according to the latest medical lore, is to go around tapping himself on the bones and the vibrations that result will be musical. He can tap his knuckles and get a pleasing jingle, whereas, with most folk, the result would only be a discord.

Music, according to the new authority, is built into the frame. If one's chest and bones and throat are put together on a musical basis, there isn't any power on earth that can keep the owner of the melodiously built frame from being musical.

Dr. William Lloyd, the famous London throat specialist, found the advantage that Caruso has over the rest of mankind when he made a recent examination. He found that Caruso had physical characteristics that allowed him to produce musical sounds in almost unlimited volume and that the quality of the structure of the throat was just as much adapted for emitting sound as the shell of a fine violin.

Enrico Caruso, the Famous Tenor.

If he loses famous golden-toned voice, medical lore declares by merely rapping his bones a pleasing harmony can be developed, where, if tried on others, only discord would result.

Music in His Bones.

The chest capacity of the singer gave him unusual aid in work, while the peculiar construction of the entire throat machinery enabled him to let loose vibrations at a higher rate than almost any other subject.

Then the doctor found that Caruso had music in his bones.

The simple tapping of the Caruso knuckles resulted in a vibration that was different from that of an ordinary mortal. The pitch of the vibration produced by a blow is higher and more resonant.

The distance from the front teeth to the vocal cords is half an inch more than in most tenors, and the vocal tube, the doctor found, was of unusual length.

In other words, Caruso was just built that way when it came to singing.

The suggestion that comes from the doctor's report on the plans and specifications of the Caruso throat and mouth is one that might give the commercial age a chance to locate future singers without the slightest trouble.

All that would be necessary would be for the experts in throat construction to go around to the schools and examine the children, sort them out in bunches and let them develop.

Easy to Pick Artists.

It would be perfectly easy to pick out the boys whose bones, vocal cords and throat material had the tenor elevation, while the basso and baritone chaps might be known by the way their bones were set.

So little Willie Jones would not have any trouble knowing what his future will be. He could tell the teacher that there was no use trying to pound electrical engineering or cube root into him, because the school doctor had picked him out as a singer who could not escape his future even if he tried.

The veriest chump of a teacher would know that if the front teeth of one of her pupils had half an inch the start on the other pupils in the race from the vocal cords the owner of the unhandicapped teeth had a cinch on becoming great as a warbler.

On the other hand the young men and young women who have been spending their money at conservatories trying to cultivate voices that are not and never will be will have a chance to find out just where they stand in the realm of art.

They can go to the doctor and confess that they have spent $1,728 trying to get in the genius class and get an expert line of dope on the prospects of ultimately landing before the footlights with the bouquets coming over in bunches.

Great Aid to Critics.

The scientific statement is that there is a fixed and definite relation between the construction of the bones, cords, muscles and tissues and the volume and character of sound that the owner of the said bones can emit. Once in possession of the scale, a flexible foot rule will answer all of the purposes of a musical critic.

Naturally, the critic might profit by the development of science and place his art upon the exact status of mathematics by closing his criticism of a singer in some fashion like this:

"Miss Smith-Jones-Brown cannot sing. That we may not be accused of bias, we submit that it is only three inches and seven-sixteenths from the southwest corner of the eye tooth to the extended arc subtended by the vocal cord; hence, quod erat demonstrandum, she hasn't a ghost of a chance to sing because it would take four-sixteenths of an inch more of space to even get in the class where the lady could gargle songs through a megaphone at a moving picture show."

But that is getting science down to a point that is beyond the average man and woman, and, besides, it is all based upon the statement of a doctor, and doctors do not agree.

POPE TAKES KEEN INTEREST IN U. S.

Cardinal O'Connell Adds That Pontiff Is Gratified by the Church's Progress.

ROME, May 24.—The Pope to-day received Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, in private audience. He greeted him most cordially and expressed the greatest satisfaction at his visit.

The Pope discussed the missionary congress to be held in Boston next October, and said he knew it would give a great impetus to the cause of missions and be a great success owing to the constant progress of the Catholic Church in America generally, and in Boston particularly.

He also referred to the loyalty of the clergy and the piety of the faithful in the United States.

After the audience Cardinal O'Connell said to the correspondent.

"I was surprised and gratified to see the wonderful recovery the Pope has made. Considering his age, his recuperative powers are astonishing.

"My audience lasted over half an hour. He had just finished another audience equally long.

"The Pope always takes the keenest interest in the Catholic Church in America, and I was able to give him very cheering news of our progress there."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"The Deep Purple" at the Atlanta.

"The Deep Purple," which has been the offering all week at the Atlanta by the Miss Billy Long Company, will be presented at a matinee this afternoon and for a final performance tonight. The play is by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner, and is full of action and dramatic situations. The lines are epigrammatic. It is an interesting play from start to finish. "St. Elmo" will be the offering at the Atlanta next week.

Maggie Cline in Headliner.

Maggie Cline, the famous "Irish Queen," will be the star headliner at the Forsyth all of next week, and this engagement can be counted as one of the real events of the season. In addition to the great character comedienne, there will be six other features of more than average good quality, with a good sound foundation of comedy, sprinkled with a quality of novelty and music. This week's bill has proved popular.

Bijou Patrons Pleased.

"A Trip to Joyville," the musical comedy tabloid success which is delighting Bijou patrons this week, is proving one of the strongest attractions that the popular Marietta Street theater has offered in recent years. The change from vaudeville to musical comedy is meeting with great favor, and patrons of the Bijou seem delighted with the change.

GEORGIAN INVENTS REAL 'KNEE JERK'

Man From Monk Offers to Tell Beavers Just How Far Patrolman Walks in a Night.

Georgia has produced another celebrity in Harry Winthrop, of Monk, Ga. Investigation shows that Monk is on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, near Fairburn, not a great distance from Atlanta. It now will take its place in the hall of fame as the home of a famous inventor.

The Monk man has invented the "knee jerk." This is not the knee jerk that alienists use in testing insane criminals, but is a mechanical device to record the distance walked by policemen on their beats. It is termed the "knee jerk," says the inventor, for the reason that it is strapped to the knee and registers every time a step is taken by the wearer.

All of this information came out Friday in a letter received by Chief of Police Beavers from Winthrop, who urged that his invention be tried out by the Atlanta police department. He explained that he has already taken up the matter with the New York police department, but, being a Georgian himself, he is anxious for Atlanta to "get in on the ground floor." He made the proposition to equip the entire police department of 250 men with "knee jerks" at $50 each. The regular price, he suggested, is $100 each. It will, therefore, cost Atlanta but $12,500 to ascertain the distance each policeman walks on his beat.

"The knee jerk registers only when the policeman is actually walking—there is no chance for him to make it register while sitting or lying down," writes the inventor.

He added:

"The knee jerk is something on the order of a speedometer, although not quite so heavy. It is an accurate gauge to show whether policemen are properly patrolling their beats."

As Chief Beavers chucked the letter in a waste basket, he laughingly remarked that he didn't think Atlanta quite ripe yet for the "knee jerk."

"I think I'll write to Mr. Winthrop, however, and suggest that he give Monk the honor of first trying out his wonderful invention."

Blow With a Glass Blinded Both Eyes

NEW YORK, May 24.—Joseph Doherty, sightless, was before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday to testify against former Policeman Thomas C. Flynn, of 1981 Southern Boulevard, following whose attack on July 21 last Doherty became blind. Flynn was convicted of second degree assault. He will be sentenced next week.

Flynn and Doherty were drinking at a table in Flanagan's Hotel, at 2013 Boston Road, it was testified, when a quarrel arose and Flynn threw a glass at Doherty, hitting him between the eyes.

It came out at the trial that Flynn had been an honor man in the Police Department.

Great Conclave Held By Knikgts Templars

Probably the greatest conclave of the local Knights Templars ever assembled was held Friday evening under the auspices of the Atlanta Commandery No. 9. Every living past commander of this commandery was present and participated in conferring the Order of the Temple.

Right Eminent Sir Joseph Kyle Orr, present grand senior warden of the Grand Encampment of the United States, was also present.

An elaborate musical program was rendered by the Knights Templars quartet; this with the military movements by the Knights Templars drill corps of Atlanta introduced two features not seen before in Atlanta.

Judge Rules $1 Week Enough for Husbands

PORTLAND, OREG., May 24.—That $1 a week is enough spending money for any married man and that he should turn the rest of his salary over to his wife and allow her to attend to its spending without interference was the assertion made by Municipal Judge Taswell. He had found Fred J. Brooks, a waiter, guilty of beating his wife and paroled him with the instructions as to the disposition of his salary.

Cook School to Make DaughtersGoodWives

LONG BRANCH, N. J., May 24.—"A girl who marries a man expecting him to support her in a comfortable home should make return by caring for the home in an efficient and economical manner," said Mrs. Jacob Wertheim, of Long Branch, N. J., in explaining why she fitted up her kitchen at an expense of $3,000, as a cooking school for her two daughters.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Evelyn's great moment had come. She looked at the coffee service of gold—she thought of Neustadt Castle, the home of brave men and women of her race for long hundreds of years—she visioned the treasury of Taunus empty quite of gold. She was only a girl with a girl's longing heart—but this was the home of her ancestors—and Gustavus was the last of a race that must be preserved at any cost. She struggled for a light tone. "I could care a great deal if you were to dawdle here over your breakfast and miss your important engagement with the bankers of Frankfort. When the treasury is quite stocked with gold pieces, Gustavus, may I go to Paris to visit Klausthal, and bring back all the lovely Paris fashions?"

Gustavus looked at her with bitter scorn. "So you are scheming too—the one pure, good thing I had ever known. You caress with lying eyes that you may have Paris gowns. And for one wild moment I had thought I could give it all up—the old castle—the old home—and go to Paris like Klausthal—abdicate—for you."

The Prince strode from the room—the Frankfort business must not fall now, and because Evelyn was a princess and must never forget her royal dignity, she did not fling her sobbing body across the old mahogany breakfast table as a simple girl of our world might have done. Instead, walking with stately mien—and trembling knees and blinded eyes—to her old tower room, she sat there at her rose-hung window and watched her youth die, the while Gustavus, magnificent in royal uniform of cream and blue, rode away to Frankfort—and fortune.

. . . . . Down the Highway. . . . . .

Down the highway clattered Gustavus, Count Fehrenberg by his side and two grooms at the rear. In Neustadt Castle a girl lay crumpled across a canopied bed of old mahogany, and was fighting for the mere desire to live. In Jew's lane another girl stood meryy-hearted and gay and watched the light play in prismatic color on the glory of her necklace—little unconscious Charlotte, into whose hands Destiny was soon to deliver the threads of many lives. What will you do, Charlotte? What can you do when your hour strikes? Evelyn met her hour—and you?

So many a man rides down the highway of life while a woman waits at either end of the road.

Playing the Game.

As they galloped through the spring sunshine Fehrenberg's eyes were alight with mischief at the great coup he had Gustavus had planned the night before, and when the first meetings had been concluded after their arrival at the lucky house in Jews' Lane, he reminded his sovereign of their little game.

Gustavus banished two tender, loving, lying eyes from his mind—those eyes had journeyed in his memory from Neustadt Castle to Jews' Lane, but now he must "play the game."

"Of course, quite right. Gentlemen, I wish to creat you knights of my family order. To your oldest I give the decoration generally conferred for valor on the field. The motto is "Undaunted." I choose this decoration for you, because you are so bold as to be about to lend me money. No soldier could display greater courage." He smiled whimsically as he turned from Amschel to Solomon. "And you, Baron, I create a commander of this honorable order. I consider that your courage rose yesterday to supreme heights. Allow me to point out that the ribbon is so wide that in warm weather it will save the necessity of a waistcoat."

If this was indeed a game—even if he were being made game of—Solomon would play it too. He bowed low. "Your Highness, I thank you in the name of all of us for the manner in which it pleases and amuses you to honor us."

From the doorway a gentle voice spoke, and as his grandmother and cousin came into the room, the somber, wounded-animal look that had never left Jacob's face since the veiled insults of the Prince of Klausthal-Agorda had brought it there, suddenly cleared like the rising of a gray mist.

Held Out Her Hand.

Holding out her hand and bowing with dignified self-possession, Frau Gudula spoke to the Heir of Nestadt and Taunus: "You are welcome, Duke Gustavus, to my house. How do you do, Count Fehrenberg."

"Dear Baroness," said Gustavus to Charlotte, "if I do not speak my thoughts to you, it is because your beauty makes a pretty speech appear so plain!"

Charlotte chose to be demure. "I thank Your Highness for your reserve."

Even for pretty speeches, Solomon meant to brook no delay. If there was to be coquetry it might well come later, when the contract was duly signed and sealed. "May I propose that we settle our financial business at once?" and thereat, in solemn procession the four brothers followed the Duke and Count Fehrenberg to the unpretentious little office upstairs, where lay the agreement and twelve million florins in gold and notes!

"What are you waiting for, Jacob?"

"I do not like this business—nor will I share its profit."

"My boy, we always share our duties when the family is decided, whether they are pleasant duties or not. You must take your place with them. I have no wish to entertain the Duke in this house—but I must do so now he is here. I am going now to choose some of your grandfather's old Burgundy with which to do honor to the unwelcome guest who is in my house. Think it over while I am gone, my little Jacob."

Charlotte went after her grandmother and shut the door with a great show of importance. With girlish eagerness, and merrily withal, she entered on the interview that must make or mar four lives.

"Cousin Jacob—why are you so much against lending money to the Duke?"

To Be Continued Monday.

PUBLIC, FLEECED BY BROKERS, DANGEROUS

It Behooves Wall Street and Its Affiliations to Reform Some of Its Ways.

By B. C. FORBES.

Certain happenings have come to my ears which demand this warning:

Brokers—members of the Stock Exchange, as well as non-members—had better refrain from taking advantage of innocent customers who come to buy, or sell, securities not dealt in on the Exchange.

If a person enters a store and bond or a stock, the broker is not entitled to say the price is $40 if the regular price is $30.

If an investor wants to buy a bond or a stock, the broker is not entitled to say the price is $98 if the current price is $96.

"Fleecing"—in stronger language, swindling—has been indulged in over-frequently for some time.

If it is not checked, the penalty will have to be paid.

The public cannot be fooled all the time.

Legislation calling for the divorcement of the brokerage business from that of banking, the licensing of every broker, frequent examinations of books and the like is invited by the present ongoings of not a few dealers in securities.

* * *

Opportunities for filching dishonest "commissions" or "edges" from the public have been very frequent for months owing to the comparatively large volume of business done off the floor of the Stock Exchange. Standard Oil subsidiaries, Tobacco shares and the bonds and stocks of companies not recognized by the Exchange have brought hundreds of thousands of dollars to brokers whose operations were not those of brokers—as they ought to have been—but of speculators who did not hesitate to deal unfairly with clients.

* * *

When a customer engages a broker whom he believes to be a man of honor to buy a stock or a bond he expects the broker to pick it up at the lowest possible price and to charge the recognized commission for the service. If the broker is offered the desired security at $100 is he playing fair if he tells his trusting client that the security cost $102 or $105.

* * *

When I say that flim-flamming of this kind has been and is being practiced those familiar with the inner workings of Wall Street—not Stock Exchange—operations will not offer a denial.

* * *

In the advanced countries of Europe a broker must be a broker and nothing else. He must buy and sell securities on a commission basis. So far American brokers and "bankers" have enjoyed the widest latitude in dealing with the public. Laws are now being brought forward to regulate Stock Exchange dealings, but brokers not affiliated with the Exchange can do as they please. This wide privilege is being abused in a manner that means retribution. Let wrongdoers hug no delusion on that score. The mills of the gods may grind slowly, but they grind.

* * *

The whole Wall Street community and its affiliations are entering a period of probation. It behooves them to act honestly and circumspectly. The sins of some will bring punishment on the heads of all.

* * *

Are brokers aware I wonder, how little they are trusted by the public at large? Do they realize in what slight esteem they are held? I confess that first-hand experiences on this subject have caused me to feel sad—at first sad, but later indignant, for certain revelations have forced me to ask whether the reputation attaching to brokers as a class has not been earned by the gross misdeeds of some.

* * *

The Hearst papers are now deluged with letters from security holders as well as from prospective purchasers. There is evidenced a deep distrust of brokers. "Please advise me what to do," runs the tenor of many communications, "for I know you have no axes to grind and that your advice will be honest."

* * *

To-day's appeal to all classes of brokers to give the public a fair deal is not, be assured, uncalled for, nor does it apply exclusively to conditions in Wall Street.

First of Seaboard's Steel Diners Here

The first of six new steel dining cars purchased by the Seaboard Air Line Railway arrived in Atlanta this afternoon and was met at the Union Depot by Assistant General Passenger Agent Fred Geissler and Robert F. Maddox, one of the directors of the road.

The new cars, which are 73 feet long and seat 36 people, are equipped with the latest devices. Suction fans prevent all odors from the kitchen entering the car.

The cars will be run from New York and Washington to Birmingham and Florida. They cost $30,000 each and others will be put in service as soon as the Pullman Company can finish them.

FIRE RATE FIGHT LOOMING IN ASSEMBLY

BY JAMES B. NEVIN.

The City of Savannah, through its Chamber of Commerce, has started an investigation into the question of fire insurance rates that may terminate in the State Insurance Department, if not in the Legislature itself.

The primary purpose of the investigation will be to determine whether the City of Savannah is being discriminated against in the matter of rates now prescribed by the Southeastern Tariff Association, which has its headquarters in Atlanta. In shaping its conclusions, the Savannah trade body will employ statistics gathered from all over the nation.

If rates in Savannah are found to be excessive in the judgment of the Savannah Chamber of Commerce, inquiry will be made as to excessive rates throughout all Georgia. And if the Chamber finds that Georgia is being unfairly treated in this matter, the case against the tariff body will be carried before the State Insurance Department, and it may be that Legislative relief will be sought.

The Savannah Chamber will employ numerous insurance experts to investigate conditions, and expects to be put to considerable expense in making its probe thorough and complete. The question is a broad one, of course, and the Chamber of Commerce expresses its determination to be fair and equitable to the tariff association no less than to itself in getting at the facts involved.

The investigation was brought about by reason of numerous complaints of excessive fire insurance rates charged in Savannah, and once the Chamber of Commerce made up its mind to get busy with the question, it further made up its mind to make its inquiry sweeping and effective in such directions as the findings suggest.

The inquiry will be started immediately with an idea of getting it through in time to go before the summer session of the Legislature for relief, if necessary.

It seems to be generally agreed that John P. Cheney, of Cobb, is to be the speaker pro tem of the next House of Representatives.

He is one of the veteran members of the House as veterans go nowadays, and is an experienced parliamentarian. Moreover, he is genuinely popular with his fellow members, and is sure to be acceptable as a presiding officer.

Besides being a member of the Legislature, he is a member of the city Council of Marietta, and a trustee of the Georgia Agricultural College, at Dahlonega.

Since Mr. Adams, of Hall, definitely announced that he not only would not be in the race for speaker pro tem, but would support Mr. Cheney, there have been no other announcements, and the presumption is that Mr. Cheney is to be elected without opposition.

According to an editorial in the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, "Governor Brown has suggested a monument to former Governor Smith!"

It should be carefully explained, however, that Governor Brown was referring to former Governor James M. Smith, and not to former Governor Hoke.

Representatives Garlington, Picquet and Olive of Richmond and Representatives Wright, Foster, and Nunnally, of Floyd, will introduce in the next Legislature bills prescribing commission forms of government for Augusta and Rome respectively.

Both measures will provide for a ratifying vote of the people of the municipalities affected, before becoming operative. So far, these two Georgia cities are the only ones reported ready to ask the Legislature for charter authority to set up a commission form of government, although it is expected that others will follow suit.

The North Georgia Citizen, of Dalton, says that Congressman Gordon Lee, of the Seventh District, some day will be Governor of Georgia, and adds: "Gordon Lee is the kind of man that makes good by accomplishment. There is nothing of the spectacular in him. He is not wordy and tiresome as are so many others who hold responsible offices. His record speaks, and Lee has sense enough to know it will do all the talking that is necessary."

One hears this talk of Lee for Governor around and about the hotel lobbies and the capitol corridors frequently. Whether Mr. Lee has a gubernatorial ambition and has expressed it himself, it is a fact that he has many friends who view the suggestion with genuine approval.

A member of the Legislature who will seek to have a dog muzzling law passed by the incoming General Assembly has gathered some striking figures for the Legislature's consideration with respect to the hydrophobia situation in Georgia.

Between the first of January and the first of May, this year, 392 cases of hydrophobia have been treated in Georgia. In 1912 there were 673 cases treated.

So far this year there have been 13 cases in Savannah, 84 in Atlanta, 3 in Americus, 4 in Columbus and 2 in Douglas.

These figures, so the Georgia Medical Society hopes, will go far toward convincing the Legislature of the great necessity of a dog muzzling law.

With the convening of the Legislature only about one month away, interest in its forthcoming work is growing every day.

The hotel lobbies are well filled daily with members of the new House and Senate, and already the Legislature, while almost entirely made up of new material, has managed to get pretty well acquainted with itself.

M'CUE TO GET FIGHTS WITH LEADING STARS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—No more slob fights for Matty McCue, Racine's sensation of the ring. After the little fellow has finished out the engagements he has at the present time, which include a battle in Fond du Lac, Wis., in Jack Brunkhorst's arena and one in Milwaukee with Patsy Brannigan, the Eastern featherweight, John McCue, his manager, is going to take on only the very best boys he can find as opponents of his protege. The veteran McCue is convinced that he has a champion in Matty and nobody is going to convince him otherwise until he sees the actual defeat of the little fellow. Hence he is canvassing the situation for boys that will be at once good drawing cards and at the same time fit opponents for a man of the McCue standard—as judged not only in Racine, but elsewhere.

* * *

JOHNNY DUNDEE, the young Eastern Italian who recently went twenty rounds to a draw with Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, and therefore is regarded as having at least half of the title, if that will get him anything, is adjudged by the elder McCue to be the best man in sight at the present time for his star. The machinery has been set in motion already and some definite announcement may be expected almost any time now of the match having been clinched. McCue would be willing to let Dundee come in at 124 pounds, the same as any of the rest of them, and as this is an easy figure for the hardy New Yorker there would be no hitch over the match as far as the poundage is concerned.

* * *

CHARLEY WHITE, the sensational local boxer, who is neither a feather nor a light weight, but liable to be a thorn in the side of boys of either class, also is spoken of as a corking good test for McCue. And the McCue party is not unwilling to listen to reason in the matter of weight. Recognizing that Charley would be a dandy draw with the Racine sensation the Wisconsin people are beginning to flirt with Nate Lewis regarding the proposed meeting. White is willing to make 126 pounds for Matty, which would not be much of a hardship.

* * *

JACK BRUNKHORST is sending a young boxer named Johnny Soko who is well known up in the Lake Winnebago District, against the punching star and there is a prospect that Johnny may do somewhat better against the Racine terror than did Jeff O'Connell and the remainder of them, who have tried to worry him lately. Up in Fond du Lac they seem to like Sokol pretty well, for he has put up some good contests there, the fiercest of which was a ten-round draw with Gene McGovern that had everybody yelling like mad before it was over. Since that time Sokol has spent all of his time in the East and was especially active in the neighborhood of Buffalo, where he whipped some of the best boys of his weight.

* * *

BRUNKHORST was at the Racine battle recentiy and saw the McCue threashing machine under a full head of steam against Jeff O'Connell. Even in the face of that exhibit Jack didn't weaken and said afterward that while McCue surely is one of the real bearcats of the day that Sokol and his hefty punch are liable to make Matty go to the very limit in order to get the decision. Jack has a good card on for his show, having matched Freddie Andrews and Sorenson, who fought Battling Nelson a hard ten-round go recently, in the semi-windup.

* * *

THE Patsy Brannigan that Milwaukee has matched up with McCue is the veteran bantamweight of the East, now filled out until he finds himself up among the feathers. Patsy had numerous turnups with Johnny Coulon and is one of those tricky old chaps with a long, wise head and quite capable of troubling any of them for a little while at least.

* * *

BUT after the Brannigan match there will be nothing but better things for the McCue boy. And the chances are most of his battling will be done in Racine.

ED WALSH WILL TEACH PITCHING BY LETTERS

CHICAGO, May 24.—Big Ed Walsh of the White Sox, is preparing to appear in a new role before the fans of the country. He is going to be a mail order teacher of the art of pitching to show inquiring youngsters and future greats how to throw the spitball that has made him famous.

According to Ed's plans, he is going to send out a course of lessons at one buck per course, in which he will go into detail regarding the use of saliva as applied to the horsehide. "I believe there are lots of young fellows over the country who would welcome such a course of instruotions," said Walsh.

TWO MIDDLEWEIGHT BOUTS WILL BE HELD AT BUTTE

BUTTE, MONT., May 24.—Articles were signed to-day for two bouts in this city on June 13, which is Miners' Union Day, the biggest holiday in the mining regions. Bob Moha will meet Jack Dillon and Eddie McGoorty will battle with Jimmy Clabby in 12-round bouts.

FLYNN SHADES JIM COFFEY IN THRILLING BOUT

NEW YORK, May 24.—Fight fans here to-day are clamoring for another match between Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, and Jim Coffey, the "Dublin giant," who engaged last night in one of the fiercest and most thrilling heavyweight bouts ever seen in the city.

Coffey, taller and heavier than Flynn, started at Flynn like a madman and for nearly four rounds rained punches into Flynn's face and body that staggered him and drove him back against the ropes. Just when it looked like a sure knockout Flynn came to life.

TRAVERS MEETS KAMMER IN METROPOLITAN FINALS

NEW YORK, May 24.—The final round for the Metropolitan golf championship title is on to-day between Jerome D. Travers, the present champion, and Alfred D. Kammer on the Fox Hills golf course. Travers, by steady playing, has easily defeated every one so far opposed to him.

In the third round yesterday, playing against Chisolm Beach, Travers, after winning, 7-5, played out the bye-holes and made a new amateur competitive record of 70 strokes for the course.

Later Travers defeated Oswald Kirkby, the New Jersey State champion, by 2 up in his semi-final match.

$10,000 GUARANTEE FOR SMITH.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Tom Jones, fight promoter, to-day offered Gunboat Smith a guarantee of $10,000 for another battle with Jess Willard next month. The manager of Smith, however, has declared that he means to give his protege a rest for a few months.

SPORTS AND SUCH

By RIGHT CROSS

WE DON'T HAVE ANY LUCK. Here for three or four weeks we have been bearing with patience and restraint the advance dope on the mighty clash of those titans, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, soothing ourselves with the thought that this fight would be the finish of one of them.

Instead of which both of them will now be going about the country insisting on telling a lot of people who never did them any harm that all they want is another chance to get together with each other, with Lute McCarty or with anybody else.

They will clamor for vindication, and there doesn't seem to be any way to stop them, unless they can be nailed for inciting a riot. Reports of the stern encounter differ in everything but one point. All those present seem to be agreed on the fact that it was a very gloomy and cheerless occasion.

According to the referee Smith was the winner, but the consensus of opinion among the experts at the ringside was that a decision would be more difficult than picking the winner of a transcontinental auto truck durability run. Also that the latter event would be much more exciting.

They fought the full distance of twenty rounds without a knock-down or a crucial moment. According to one or two reports Smith was in a little trouble in the fourteenth round and Willard bled somewhat from the mouth after a right-hand punch had cut his machinery for torturing sporting writers. That was all. A twenty-round fight between high-class men is frequently slow and uninteresting, and it is easy to imagine what this must have been like.

* * *

To the conquering hero stalks
The fight expert and yaps and squawks,
And bellows that he wasn't right
Against that guy the other night;
And when you make this bum decamp
He's followed by another tramp.

* * *

THE REVIVAL OF WRESTLING in New York will not probably get very far. Something tells us that even New Yorkers, who are gluttons for punishment, will not rush upon this good old bunk in maddened throngs.

* * *

SIR THOMAS LIPTON SAYS that he is greatly pleased with the splendid sportsmanship of the New York Yacht Club, and yet there are a lot of people who say that the Irish haven't a sense of humor.

BRITANNIA WILL NEVER RULE the wave as long as one rocking chair remains afloat in the racing committee room.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, is breaking his neck trying to get his protege a return match with Gunboat Smith. Jones has offered the Eastern heavyweight a guarantee of $10,000 for another bout, but Buckley has about decided to give Smith a rest for two months.

* * *

Most of the fans are of the opinion that Willard would have a great chance to defeat Smith in a return engagement. They point to the fact that Willard was making his first 20-round scrap and that Jones was handling him for the first time in a fight.

* * *

Jim Flynn, toughest of all heavyweights, will get into action Friday night. The Pueblo fireman will exchange wallops with Jim Coffey in a 10-round mill at New York and the fur should fly. This will probably be Flynn's last fight before he meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium here June 13.

* * *

Mike Saul will help train Flynn for the latter's set-to with Savage. Saul thinks that the experience gained by working with Flynn will put him in great shape for his bout with Eddie Hanlon.

* * *

If Matty McCue succeeds in defeating Patsy Brannigan at Milwaukee, Wis., Monday night he is to get a match with Abe Attell. The ex-featherweight champion has agreed to meet the Racine sensation on June 5.

* * *

Arthur Pelky will have the chance of his young life when he stacks up against Luther McCarty in a 10-round affair at Calgary, Alberta, Saturday night. Should Pelky succeed in besting McCarty or holding him even he will become one of the greatest cards in the heavyweight division.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke wishes to challenge any lightweight on behalf of Billy Bennett, the Irish lightweight champion. O'Rourke is particularly anxious to sign his boxer for a match with Willie Ritchie or Freddie Welsh.

* * *

Chicago fans are boosting Eddie Murphy as a contender for the lightweight championship. Murphy's recent draw fight against Jack Britton has done much to put him back in the good graces of the windy city fans. Murphy put up a great battle and was fighting Britton off his feet at the finish, according to reports from the battle ground.

* * *

Pittsburg fans are expecting a real scrap Saturday night when Eddie McGoorty and Frank Klaus clash in a six-round bout. Klaus' friends have made him an even money choice against the Oshkosh boy.

* * *

After the McGoorty affair Klaus will travel to Indianapolis where he is billed to take on Jack Dillon in a 10-round battle later in the month.

* * *

Nothing has been heard of lately from Tommy Murphy, the New York lightweight. Murphy is certainly entitled to much consideration when the Coast promoters pick an opponent for Willie Ritchie.

Rivers Gets July 4 Date With Champion

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Joe Rivers is the lucky boy to get the July 4 date here with Champion Willie Ritchie.

Following the announcement to-day by Promoter McCarey that he had been unable to induce Ritchie to meet the Spanish boxer at Vernon on Independence Day and consequently he, McCarey, would release Rivers from his agreement to appear at Vernon on that date, Manager Joe Levy wired his acceptance of the terms offered by Eddie Graney, the San Francisco promoter.

McCarey to-day received a telegram from Nolan flatly refusing to fight at Vernon, and declaring that Ritchie would fight at San Francisco on the holiday date and nowhere else.

"If Ritchie does not box for Graney on July 4 we will accept a match in Victoria on Dominion Day, July 1," wired Nolan. "A syndicate of very wealthy Britishers is seeking to promote a match between Ritchie and Freddie Welsh for that date."

SMITH-WILLARD WOULD BE CINCH FOR OLD-TIMERS

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—It is said that one Theodore Roosevelt is going to Arizona to search for a certain lost tribe. After seeing the championship candidates, Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard, in action, the writer feels that Roosevelt or some one else should be commissioned to hunt for descendants of the lost tribe of heavyweights.

There is no shutting one's eyes to the fact that the big fellows of to-day don't begin to compare with the heavies of "yesteryear" in any department of the game. One doesn't have to go so far as to institute comparisons between present day championship aspirants and the men who were thought to be in line for the title in former times.

Take the cases of such boxers as Kid McCoy and Joe Choynski, pugilists who were never troubled with the championship bee. How long would Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard last with either of these? Or how long would Gunboat or Jess keep erect in front of clean hitting, hard thumping Peter Maher?

There will be another heavyweight bout at Calgary to-day, and then, if present plans hold, there will be a championship final, with Gunboat Smith pitted against the winner of the Luther McCarty-Arthur Pelky go at Calgary.

Naturally the deciding contest will create some interest, for, low grade though they are, bidders for the blue ribbon are the best we have. Candor compels the observation that they are simply the best of a bad lot.

Thought Fight a Draw.

While the writer is among those who are of the opinion that Willard did every bit as well as Smith Tuesday night, I must own that the tall Kansan was a good deal of a disappointment. We are led to look for better things after reading of the way Jess acquitted himself with Luther McCarty, Soldier Kearns and others.

It will be hard to make a top notch man of Willard for the reason that he has so few natural fighting qualities. True, his straight left is a dependable quantity, but this is largely on account of his tremendous reach. It would be pretty hard for Willard to straighten his left without finding something unless the other fellow clambered through the ropes when he saw it coming.

Willard has poor ideas of distance and direction and he hits in a stilted pokey way. This, may be, comes of clinching his fists too tightly before lashing out.

He seems, too, to be deficient in ring sense. Several times after chasing Gunboat into a corner and having him off balance he smiled fatuously and stepped back. And if looks count, the Gunner was quite content to have it that way.

Willard a Game Fellow.

Willard is a game fellow and he assimilates well, and it may be that proper coaching will develop him to a stage where he can safely hold his own with modern heavies. That is, unless the breed suddenly improves. One thing to admire in Jess is the way a stinging clash arouses his battle ire. In this respect he resembles Tom Sharkey.

Gunboat Smith's fight was an improvement on some of his local exhibitions. He seemed to use his head more than he generally does, but whether this was an instance of present initiative or the result of careful coaching the writer has no means of knowing. Anyhow there was a method in the way Smith handled himself, even if his execution was faulty.

BOMBARDIER WELLS WILL BATTLE WITH P. MAHONEY

LONDON, May 24.—Bombardier Wells, the English heavyweight champion, was matched to fight Packey Mahoney, of Cork, on June 30 before the National Sporting Club here. They will fight twenty rounds for a purse of $2,000 and a $1,000 side bet.

For Bright Eyes and Clear Nose

Remarkable Catarrh Cure That Gets Right into the Affected Parts and Stops Gatherings.

S. S. S. Is a Wonder for the Eyes, Nose and Throat.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antidotal remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of all the organs of the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Sure Specific, or, as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as naturally as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, and enables all mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for arterial elements that effectually cleanse the system and thus put an end to all catarrhal pollution. S. S. S. cleans out the stomach of mucus accumulations, enables only pure, blood-making materials to enter the intestines, combines with these food elements to enter the circulation, and in less than an hour is at work throughout the body in the process of purification.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the absence of headache, a decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that proves how completely catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores at $1 per bottle. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease write in confidence to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Do not delay to get a bottle of S. S. S. of your druggist.

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 24.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., the former national champion, is one of a fine golfing family, in which both men and women have attained considerable distinction in their favorite game. W. C. Fownes, the father of W. C. Fownes, Jr., is a golfer of considerable skill, and I venture to say there is not a golfer of his age in the country who can defeat him. Fownes, Sr., plays golf almost the year round and he never fails to attend each national championship.

W. C. Fownes, Jr., began playing golf in 1900 and therefore he has enjoyed more than a decade of excellent sport. His record is indeed an enviable one, for in addition to winning the premier event in 1910 he has many other notable victories to his credit. He has held the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association amateur championship from 1904 down through 1911, and this championship although limited in territory, is of the highest class, as is shown by the fact that it has furnished two national champions.

Has Won Many Honors.

In 1910 and 1912 Fownes won the Pennsylvania State championship and he has really held at various times all the golfing honors of his State and many from elsewhere. In fact, the only important title that has been denied him so far is the Western championship, where he has invariably encountered a bit of hard luck. Pittsburg marks the Eastern boundary of the big Western Golf Association territory, and yet in spite of the many fine players in the Smoky City, Chicago has always managed to hold fast to the big Western cup.

Fownes was a member of the Olympic team of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, which won the event in 1905 at Chicago Golf.

Fownes' game has not been quite so good during the last year or so, owing, I think, to a number of experiments, chiefly with wooden clubs. Fownes believes his wooden shots to be the weakest part of his game and in consequence he is given to many experiments with them. Sometimes he tries for distance and sometimes for direction, and his clubs and methods of playing vary with the object in view. Last year he came to the national at Wheaton with clubs about forty-six inches in length.

Nearly Wins Over Hilton.

Fownes plays a very thoughtful game of golf. Its high quality can be realized by the fact that he has been national champion. Furthermore, in a match with H. H. Hilton at the National Golf Links tourney in 1911 his game compared favorably with the British player's and he was only defeated at the nineteenth hole in the second round.

Fownes is perhaps the most popular member of the U. S. G. A. He is a regular attendant at its annual event and I think without him the competition would lose much of its savor for a great many of us.

BRITONS WILL SELECT TENNIS TEAM IN JULY

LONDON, May 24.—The Secretary of the British Lawn Tennis Association announced that the British team which will defend the Dwight F. Davis International Trophy against the winner of the elimination contests will not be selected until early in July, after the Wimbledon championships have been decided.

The teams playing in the eliminations will represent the United States, Australia, Germany, France, Canada, South Africa and Belgium.

RUBE WADDELL MISSING; BIG CROWDS DISAPPOINTED

WINNIPEG, May 24.—Although the Virginia (Minn.) Northern League team has played two games here, Rube Waddell, the eccentric southpaw, has failed to appear on the field for either game. Just where he is is a question, and if Manager "Spike" Shannon knows he is not telling. Large crowds have attended both games in the hope of catching a glimpse of the former big leaguer.

No Class to Champions of To-day

Feather Title a Family Affair

By Otto C. Floto.

ONLY a short time ago Mr. Featherweight dwelt in an abode alone. He was master of all he surveyed. But things have suddenly changed, and the elusive little cuss now lives in a duplex building. In other words, Johnny Kilbane was the sole possessor of the title and in undisputed control of the same. Now along comes Johnny Dundee and battles him. Well, it's a fifty-fifty proposition now. As a reminder, Kilbane now only holds a working interest in the title. True, he didn't lose it; neither did he win it again. Dundee didn't win it, either, but he worked so well that Referee Eyton declared him in as a partner on the thing. So at best it's a muddled or rather queer condition that exists in that department of the game.

The firm title to the prize should now read Kilbane & Dundee, holders of the world's featherweight title. So that both boys must content themselves with a half a loaf—which, after all, is better than no loaf at all.

* * *

SPEAKING of championship titles, was there ever a time when the different emblems were in so chaotic a condition? Take them right down the line from the heavyweights to the feathers, and not a single representative of any of the departments holds an undisputed right to the title he covets. Never before has such a thing been apparent in pugilism, and it does seem rather astounding to those who have never given this angle a fleeting thought.

When we look back a few years and realize the hard-fought battles and the strenuous routes the champions were compelled to travel over to gain their positions, and then peek hurriedly over the present crop—well, deliver us from expressing our candid opinion, for it would not look well in print.

* * *

TO ALL intents and purposes, Luther McCarty is heavyweight champion. Of course, he never won the title from the man who held it, and probably still holds it. That's not particularly Luther's fault, because of queer circumstances that transpired in the life of the recognized champion. Still the fact remains that McCarty has a title he acquired without winning it as per the usual process required to annex the coveted emblem. True, he stands ready to defend it. But—

Nevertheless, we'll fall in line and look upon Luther as the champion under the circumstances. At the same time, much as we admire him, he is No. 1 of the champions that acquired his honors without meeting the predecessor of the high office in actual combat.

* * *

THEN we drop to the middleweights. Here's where we laugh long and loud, for if there is a single one in the bunch entitled to be crowned champion we are ready to be convinced. Stanley Ketchel, whose sudden death left the question of champion an open one, could have taken the whole lot of the present crop, beginning with Klaus and including McGoorty, Papke and the whole flock, and beaten them to a jelly all on the same night, and in the same ring, without even half trying. So here's a class without a representative in the exclusive class. Klaus, who claims the title, is therefore labeled No. 2 of the champions who failed to battle a titleholder for the honor.

* * *

THE welterweights are in the same disturbed condition. Jimmy Clabby, if he could make the weight (145 pounds), might be looked upon as a real contender. As he cannot make the weight, we claim that Rube "Wildcat" Ferns is the best. And while he does not hold the title, he is ready to fight the whole world for it and have his right disputed to the same. This class, like the middleweight division, is barren of a leader, a man the world will recognize as the top-notcher of the 145-pounders. Of all the classes we are mentioning we recognize the claims of Ferns to the honor to a greater extent than we would listen to anyone else claiming it.

* * *

IN THE lightweight ranks we have Willie Ritchie as champion. Yet, like the other classes, he comes to us with a flaw in the title. His championship was won by the punch of the other fellow instead of his own. There is no doubt he would have defeated Wolgast had the battle gone on. But he didn't knock Ad out. On the other hand, it was the transgression of the former champion in striking that foul blow that awarded the honors to Ritchie.

In this same class we have two other good boys—Packey McFarland and Jack Britton. McFarland, however, can't possibly make the weight, so that lets him out. Ritchie beat Britton when they met on a former occasion. And, say, why not take Freddie Welsh into consideration? Thinking it over, his claims are the very best. He defeated Matt Wells for the English championship and beat Willie Ritchie the only time he met him (that was before Ritchie met Wolgast.) But again we are confronted with the condition that the champion is not one of that undisputed sort.

* * *

IN THE featherweight realm we have the laughable condition of a divided or split title, with two men claiming it. It was originally won by Kilbane from Attell. But it was one of those decision affairs, without a decisive ending, that stamps the winner as a bona fide representative.

After reviewing the different classes about us, it's like a fresh spring breeze to recall the classes of a few years ago, and see the grand list of names that represented the different divisions. Each and every one a champion in the full meaning of the term, and each and every title won by actual conflict within the ring, with a knockout accompaniment to cinch it and keep it free from dispute.

Heavyweight Champion—James J. Corbett.
Middleweight Champion—Robert Fitzsimmons.
Welterweight Champion—Tommy Ryan.
Lightweight Champion—Joe Gans.
Featherweight Champion—George Dixon.
Bantamweight Champion—Jimmy Barry.

WINNIPEG, MAN., May 24.—Sammy Trott, of Columbus, Ohio, was awarded the newspaper decision over Grover Hayes, of Philadelphia, in a twelve-round bout here, as the result of a wild swing in the eleventh round, which caught Hayes on the jaw and floored him for the count of five.

SPEECHLESS.

"What are the athletes howling for?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot talk! They cannot talk!" young Johnny Evers said.
"Why do they look so awful glum?" said Murphy-on-Parade.
"They cannot get their names in print," young Johnny Evers said.

"You may knock a baseball player; you may tell him he's a mutt,
You may tell him of the ebony that constitutes his nut,
You may write of solid ivory and alabaster, but—
He will always grab the paper in the morning."

Far be it from one to perpetrate a pun with malice aforethought, but it strikes us that Charlie Murphy is the guy that put the boss in Boston.

Not that we have anything against Tom Jones, but who is going to be the next meal ticket?

Jess Willard once threw Charlie Cutler down. The equanimity which the latter gentleman displayed leads one to wonder whether he is a philosopher or a humorist.

Joe Cantillon has released Hobe Ferris. Hobe got flippant one night and led Joe to suspect that he was less than sixty years old.

The consensus of opinion on the Pacific coast is that if Jess Willard were tried on a charge of pugilism he would be declared absolutely innocent.

LINES TO C. WEBB MURPHY.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The baseball writer wends his weary way,
And says: "No baseball player talks to me."

How happy is the baseball writer now
If C. Webb Murphy only has his way!
No longer must he write with wrinkled brow
The slop that lowbrowed athletes have to say.

No longer must he lean against a bar
And say: "Come on and have another drink!"
No longer must he stay where athletes are
And hear their efforts as they try to think.

Oh, Charlie Murphy, chubby little runt,
Your name is always near and dear to me!
You up and got away with this here stunt
And saved a thousand writers from ennui.

THEY'LL KNOW THEY'VE BEEN IN GAME—NAYLOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—George W. Naylor, stud groom to the Duke of Westminster, and who has charge of the English polo ponies, came into town yesterday from the Piping Rock Club. He wanted to have a good square look at the lower part of the town, and incidentally to buy some things for the horses. A few of those who are interested in the international match got around him and tried to get him excited over the match.

One said that Larry Fitzpatrick, who is training the American ponies, would put it all over him. Naylor gave a sort of icy grin as he remarked, "He may put it all over me as you say, old chap, but his side will know that they have been in a game."

There was a report yesterday that the American team were suffering from staleness, and that was the reason they had such little practice for the past week.

To-day's Ball Game Begins at 3

Gulls Have Grand Pitcher in Hogg

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE pastiming this afternoon at the celebrated ball park of the well-known Georgia Railway and Power Company, said park ycleept Ponce DeLeon, will settle the question of whether or not a mediocre club can beat a good club with pitching alone.

And lest somebody arise to ask which is the "good" club, we state without hesitation that it is the Atlanta delegation—and add positively that the Gull team ought to be a mediocre aggregation, considered on a man-by-man basis.

And before we forget it, the contest this afternoon will be called at 3 o'clock to enable the Mobile team to get an early train. There should be sufficient time for a full nine-inning contest, provided the umpires, the managers and the players do their respective and assorted duties.

* * *

REVERTING to the Gulls and their claims on distinction, we can only say that we can't see them at all. It is a good club. But is it a great club?

We don't even pause for an answer.

You can hand Mike Finn a lot of credit for the way the Gulls have been winning. He has gathered together a club that has balance. It hasn't a strong spot in fielding, but it hasn't a weak one. It is not a great hitting club, but it has a great slugger in D. Robertson, and a moderately reliable one in Jacobson. The rest of it must be team play, or maybe something even more intangible than that—a winning spirit, maybe; which is a hard thing to define, but a useful one to have.

* * *

A REALLY great performer on the club is Bradley Hogg, the ex-Mercer and ex-Brave pitcher. The former Baptist hurled unusually good ball Friday. Though the Crackers acquired six hits, they never came within miles of scoring. Hogg walked just one man, struck out but one—and looked like ready money and lots of it all the way.

It takes a pretty good pitcher to hold the Crackers safe. They are deadly sluggers. Any pitcher who can shut them out is a big leaguer at heart—or mighty lucky. And there was no luck about Hogg's work.

How in the mischief it happened that the Braves ever let go of Hogg is a mystery. He looks more like a pitcher than any five men of George Stallings' staff rolled into one.

To those who remember Hogg in his college days, his huge size proved a jolt. He is a whale now, while in his college days he seemed a man of hardly more than average size. To-day he has the ideal size and weight for a great pitcher. He will be a big man in the big leagues some day.

* * *

THANKS are hereby expressed to Bill Hart for his efforts to hurry along Friday's game. Bill kept right on the trail of the players, got them up to the plate in a hurry and managed to run the game off in less than an hour and three-quarters—which was especially appreciated, owing to the fact that the day was awfully cold and raw.

* * *

ALL Atlanta, beginning with Bill Smith and running down to the humblest bat boy, is raging because the Atlanta papers were inclined to saddle the blame for losing the last Memphis game largely on the shoulders of Pitcher Dent. The following communication expresses the views of a lot of fans:

Dear Sir:

I am a great lover of baseball and frequently attend the games. I want to ask if the blame of losing Wednesdays game to Memphis is not wrongly placed on Pitcher Dent. Up to the sixth inning he pitched well nigh perfect ball. In the beginning of the seventh, a batter made an infield hit and the ball was thrown to first base in ample time to get the batter out. The first baseman in his eagerness to make a double play, failed to touch the base and threw badly to second. The shortstop failed to hold the ball and both runners were safe. Then Memphis' best hitter came to bat, made a three bagger, brought in three runs and the pitcher, discouraged, could do nothing more. Now didn't the first baseman and shortstop lose the game? If the runners on first and second had been put out, as should have been done, would not Atlanta have won?

* * *

THE point that "Fan" seems to have overlooked is that before Agler made his misplay, three singles in succession had been made off Dent. Then came the bobble. Then two more hits. We disagree with Bill Smith and others that Agler had an easy double if he had made the play right.

A pitcher who allows three singles with none out starts something right there.

More than that, a pitcher has got to be able to keep steady even after an error.

BIGGEST BALLOON RACE EVER OUT OF KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, MO., May 24.—The largest and most widely represented balloon race ever held on this side of the Atlantic will be that which is to start from Kansas City July 4. George M. Myers, president of the Kansas City Aero Club and manager of the race, has sent invitations to the clubs of practically every large city in the country asking them to participate. The St Louis Aero Club has written that it will enter from three to five bags and Topeka is sure of one entry, but hopes to have two.

Other entries are: Dayton, Ohio, 1; Cleveland, Ohio, 1; San Francisco, 1; Salt Lake City, 1; Dana, Ill., 1; New York city, 1; Pennsylvania, 1; Peoria, Ill., 1; Akron, Ohio, 1; Cincinnati, Ohio, 1; Chicago, 1; Indianapolis, Ind., 1; Kansas City, 1.

MURPHY DENIES BRESNAHAN WILL REPLACE EVERS

By Davenport.

BOSTON, MASS., May 24.—Slowly but surely the mystery of Charles Webb Murphy's visit to Boston is beginning to unravel.

Murphy is after pitchers. He is wise to the fact the Cubs are woefully weak when it comes to pitching, so is every one else who has been watching the dope.

Murphy stated before leaving for the East that he had a deal on with an Eastern club, hence his trip to Boston. The president of the Cubs left his room bright and early this morning, and it is rumored he went for a conference with Mr. Gaffney, owner of the Braves.

Hub Perdue. Yep, that's the game, and it's big game Murphy's after. If he gets Perdue it will be only by giving in exchange two or three good players. Sweeney has been showing weak at second and Art Phelan would just fit in there.

Murphy refused to commit himself upon the result of his trip when he returned to the hotel at noon, but he wore that famous Murphy smile which means he met with success of some sort. The boss of the Cubs denies that he is contemplating the removal of Evers in favor of Bresnahan.

He said this morning: "Evers has a five-year contract and there is not the slightest chance of a change of managers."

Murphy stated to Boston scribes last night that he did not permit his players to talk with him, but he played pool with one of his men until nearly midnight and hobnobbed with the others.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA was kind of grouchy last nite. Ma & me knew he was going to be grouchy, beekaus sum old friends of Ma was going to visit us for a few days & they was to cum last nite, all the way from Colfax, Wisconsin.

I doant like to be a killjoy, sed Pa, & I will do my best to treet Mister & Missus Bing all rite, but you know as well as I do what it will be. Both of them will want to be took to all of the leading points of interest, such as the hoam of the widow wich entertained George Washington onst & the museum of art & the points of historical interest outside of those wich I have just menshuned. After I have dragged them & you & littel Bobbie all oaver the town for a few days, showing them a lot of stuff that I doant care a rap to see, they will say goodbye & tell us to be sure & cum to Colfax & stay a month. That is sum invitashun, issent it? sed Pa—cum to Colfax & stay a month. It sounds like cum to Sing Sing & stay thirty years.

Pa Gets Their Name Wrong.

Well, thay are my frends, anyway, sed Ma, & I want you to be nice to them, & please remember, sed Ma, that thare naim isent Bing, thare name is Ging G-I-I-N-G, Ma sed, with the accent on the two Gs.

Wen Mister & Missus Ging caim thay didn't look as if thay was happy at all.

I am glad to bid you both welcome to our home, sed Pa. I have offen heard my wife speek of her deer friends the Pings.

Ging, sed Mister Ging. G-I-N-G. That doesn't sound like a vary hard naim to reemember, he sed. He looked at Pa kind of cross & Pa handed the look rite back to him.

What do you think of Atlanta, deer? said Ma to Missus Ging.

I think it is perfeckly beestly, sed Missus Ging. We had to ride in that horrid trolley all the way from the depot to here, & I had to stand up. I wanted Mister Ging to maik a gentelman give me his seat, but you know how husbands are. He sed that perhaps the poor man was tired. Think of it, and fancy me, a Ging, having to stand up in a common street car. Why, at home we have our own carriage.

If it is anything like the carriages I used to see in Colfax wen I was courting you, Pa sed to Ma, I am afrade Mister & Missus Wing wuddent have reached our hoam till to-morrow morning. Colfax was noted for its pritty gurls and its saddle backed skates, sed Pa. Thare was only one hansum horse in the town, & nobody cud drive it.

I beg your pardon, sir, sed Mister Ging There are sum magnificent horses in Colfax. I have two roans that I wuddent sell for a thousand dollars.

I wuddent give a thousand cents for them, sed Pa. Thare isen't any class to a roan horse. Who ever heard of a roan horse stepping out & winning the Brooklyn Handicap? sed Pa.

Never mind, deerest, Ma sed to Pa. I am sure Mister & Missus Ging will get to love Atlanta after they have had a chanst to git around. Thare is so much of interest to see here, & the shops are very butiful now. The windows are jest full of bargans.

Missus Ging Is Put Out.

The windows can stay full of bargans, sed Mister Ging. I toald my wife beefoar we left hoam that the stores in Colfax was plenty good enuff for her mother before her and plenty good enuff for her. Thare is going to be no extrava-gance on this trip. Hevings deliver me, sed Mister Ging, from a shopping & bargan hunting woman. I wish you would show us our room, he sed to Ma. My wife & I are vary tired. I suppose you have breakfast at seven, he sed.

Oh, deer no, sed Ma. We have breakfast at nine.

Oh, well, sed Missus Ging. I suppose my husband & I can go out to a resterant. Do you know a good cheap place nere here? she asked Pa.

Yes, sed Pa, I know a good cheep place. They have rooms thare too.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Cain had no definite idea in view except to drive a considerable distance out of town and have it out with this stranger. Hitherto his money had enabled him to have his way in everything and he had ridden roughshod over every obstacle that presented itself in his path, so that the idea that he was a sort of demi-god had become firmly implanted in his nature. In the case in hand he did not stop to realize that his money was of little use to him. He was blind with rage. He attributed his misunderstanding with Mildred to the passenger in the back seat. Cain resolved to eliminate this stranger from his affairs. He tried to get more speed out of the car, but by this time the roads were growing worse and worse as they got further out of town. They had passed the limit of electric lights and except for the rays of the powerful headlights everything was in inky darkness.

They must have driven all of half an hour and were a good fifteen miles from where they started, when Cain, spying a road that branched off to the left, turned into it. Up to this point Gordon Kelly, in the back seat, had made no movement whatever. He might have been asleep, for all Cain knew. But the car had not traveled a furlong on the branch road before he gave evidence that he was very much awake.

With a spring as light as a panther he vaulted over the back of the front seat and landed lightly beside Cain. Reaching down he switched off the magneto, pulled out the plug and dropped it into his coat pocket. Almost instantly the motor stopped and the car came to a standstill.

CHAPTER VIII.

REACHING down to the coil box, Cain discovered the plug was not there.

"Where's that plug?" he demanded, fiercely.

"I have it in my pocket," replied Kelly, quietly. "Something is likely to happen pretty quick, but as I don't know just what it is, I thought I would be on the safe side, that's all."

"Who are you?" cried Cain.

"I will tell you who I am, but first I want to know if I am talking to a crazy man, a fool, or a joker," answered Kelly. While he was speaking he was fumbling in his pockets. He now drew forth a match which he held up to the other's face. Cain blew it out almost as quickly as it ignited, but Kelly had seen enough.

"Oh, you're the Deerys' chauffeur," he observed calmly. "You're the man who nearly ran over me the other day. Well, did your employer tell you to dive me out here, or did you do it on your own hook?"

"I'm not a chauffeur," exclaimed Cain hotly, "I'm a friend of the Deery family and, if you want to know, I brought you here on my own hook. What are you going to do about it?"

"You are certainly a queer sort. What is your object? Is this a hold-up game?" Did you bring me out here to rob me?"

"Rob you; no!" shouted Cain. "I can buy and sell you a million times!" The calmness of the man seated beside him acted as a kind of reverse English on Cain. He had been angry all along, but was now furious and gave every indication of losing control of himself entirely.

"Yes, this is the garage—yes, Miss Deery—Yes, I understand—I'll have a car around in five minutes."

"I can't figure you out at all," said Kelly in an even voice. "I'm not much used to city ways and I thought at first you had been ordered to take me on a little drive, though it is a mighty queer night for it. I stood for it as long as you stayed on the main road, but when you turned off here I thought it was time to quit. Tell, me please, what this is all about? If you have been drinking, you ought to be sober enough by now. If it's a joke, I'll take it as such and let it go at that."

Cain ignored the question.

"What were you doing in Deery's house to-night," he snarled.

"I was invited there, but—"

"You're a liar!" screamed Cain, making a movement as if to struggle out of his seat behind the wheel of the automobile.

Just Chastisement.

As quick as the stroke of a cat Kelly shot up his right hand and his fingers closed on Cain's collar with the strength of a vise. With the same movement he jerked Cain's head down to the floor of the car. He sent his left foot crashing through the side curtains which had been fastened on to exclude the rain, and thus clearing a passage, as it were, he jumped to the ground, dragging the struggling Cain after him like a sack of meal. Cain fell in the muddy road with a splash. Still holding his man by the collar, Kelly, ankle deep in mud, hauled him around in front of the car and deposited him there in the full glare of the searchlights.

"Now we can see what we are doing," he remarked and in spite of the effort he had made to drag a man of Cain's size, his respiration was hardly above normal.

Cain scrambled to his feet and with a vile epithet rushed at his antagonist. But Kelly, who had a reach like Bob Fitzsimmons, simply put out one hand and Cain ran blindly into it and stopped short. With one powerful shove Kelly sent the other man reeling backward and, losing his balance, Cain fell with another splash in the mud. In two jumps Kelly stood over him.

"There's only one thing to do to a man like you," he said "Get up."

Cain lay motionless, blinking up at Kelly as though he had just been awakened from a bad dream.

"Get up," ordered Kelly again.

But Cain refused to move so, reaching down Kelly inserted his fingers in the collar of his foe and yanked him to his feet. Then, turning him around, and facing him up the road, Kelly stepped back one pace and delivered a solid kick in Cain's nether region.

There is nothing that will take the fight out of a man sooner than a weighty kick, placed where it will do the most good. There is nothing so humiliating to the recipient, nothing so mortifying, so abasing. Such was the effect on Cain. He started to run up the road, but Kelly followed him and executed a series of blows with the foot, of astonishing power and accuracy. At last, grabbing Cain by the collar once more, he turned him around and kicked him back to the headlights.

Cain was covered from head to foot with the red mud of Georgia and Kelly's clothing was so splashed with it that very little of the material showed. The rain had practically ceased and only a fine mist was falling. Away off in the distance could be seen the glow of the lights of Atlanta reflected above that city. The rays of the powerful headlights fell full on the two young men. It was a weird scene, but Kelly was ready to have done with it.

"Do you own this car," he asked.

"No."

"Who does own it?"

"The Davis Garage."

Kelly took the plug from his pocket, inserted it in the coil box and switched on the spark.

"Crank it," he ordered.

Without a word Cain gave the motor a whirl and the machinery started with a roar. Kelly jumped in the driver's seat and, evidently sure of every movement, eased in the reversed gear and backed the car off the road with a view of heading it in the other direction. This accomplished, he called Cain to the side of the car and said:

Might Lose Temper.

"This may appear a childish act on my part, but I'm going to leave you here to find your way back to town the best way you can. It will do you good to think the whole matter over carefully. I don't know yet what your object was in bringing me away out here. Is there anything you want to say to me?"

Cain made no answer.

"Very well," continued Kelly, "I will probably be able to figure it out for myself in the course of time. You are evidently one of those rich young fellows that have more money than brains. I never met one before, but I have read about them in newspapers. My name is Gordon Kelly and I live at the Imperial Hotel. It is possible that you will be seeking some kind of revenge on me, but let me warn you to leave me severely alone. If you annoy me any further I am liable to lose my temper and Lord help you if anything like that comes to pass."

This may sound like heroics delivered by a stage hero in a melodrama, but as a matter of fact Kelly spoke calmly and seriously. It was simply his way.

Waiting a moment longer and receiving no response from Cain, Kelly started the car and slowly plowed his way through the mud to the main road, where the going was much better, leaving Cain to shift for himself. He drove carefully back to the city and reached his hotel in about an hour. Instead of stopping there, however, he continued on three or four blocks and slowed down next the sidewalk in front of the Capital City Club and left the car standing there. Walking back to his hotel he went to the desk and asked for his key. He was splashed with mud from head to foot and Clerk McClendon eyed him suspiciously for a moment, but as Kelly did not seem disposed to offer any explanation, he silently passed over the room key.

When Kelly reached his room, he went to the telephone, called up Davis' garage and said:

"You remember sending a car to Mr. Deery's house about 9:30 to-night? Well, you will find the car in front of the Capital City Club and if you want to know anything more about it you will have to see the man you sent along as chauffeur Good night."

Gordon Kelly then peeled off his mud-bespattered clothes, threw them on the floor of his bathroom, took a bath, crawled between the bedsheets and five minutes later was sleeping the sleep of the just.

Who was this young man from the mountains who knew all about handling automobiles? How did he acquire his calm manner? Where did he gain that easy and confident bearing? Whence came the breeding that enabled him to enter one of the "best" houses in Atlanta and conduct himself as though he had been brought up in "society?"

* * *

Forrest Cain, chewing the bitter cud of reflection, walked for more than an hour in the direction of the city before he got a lift. Then a friendly milkman came along and he rode the rest of the way in. Going to his room, he kicked the sleeping George out of bed and made him attend to his wants. Cain remained in bed all next day. His trunks had gone to New York and that night he followed them to the metropolis.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first five installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this sixth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

A Reward of Merit

A Complete Short Story

"HERE comes Johnny!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones, sighing disconsolately. "He must have been awfully good to-day—for he's as dirty as a little pig, and he's an hour late!"

Her caller opened her eyes in amazement. "Awfully good?" she repeated. "Why, when my Sammy comes home late and is dirty I usually know that he's been into some sort of mischief. It's never a sign of being particularly good to my eyes."

"Well, your Sammy doesn't go to the same school," returned Mrs. Jones. "Johnny has a pretty and stylish teacher, and, what's more, she knows how to make her pupils like her. They all fight to do things for her! I learned all about it when I went to call on her one day after Johnny had brought home a perfect report card. For a whole month he'd been coming home late and looking perfectly dreadful—you'd think he was a street Arab. I have never been able to get anything out of him, except that he'd stayed after school to clean the blackboards.

A Perfect Card.

"Even though he was my own angel child, I had my doubts as to the reason he stayed, and I thought I would have his father settle with him when his report came in. A card excellent when he has the privilege of ringing that bell, he's so anxious to get to school in time to see that it is done right! And as for my errands, he finds it quite impossible to do them in his limited time."

He Was Late.

"What makes you so late?" she inquired, as Johnny came in, brushing the chalk dust from his sleeves.

Johnny grinned happily, "I had 95 in geography and 100 in spelling—so she let me have all the boards to-night," he answered, triumphantly. "And last week Frank had the bell—and he came late, so she said if I'd come early to-morrow and he wasn't there I could have it. Anyway, he cheats! And I've a good mind to tell her!"

"Will you run to—" began Mrs. Jones, but Johnny interrupted her as he turned to go.

"Yes, but just wait. I've got to see a fellow that's waiting out here!" And Johnny was gone.

"My, I wish I knew her system," declared Mrs. Jones, enviously.

"And errands are such nice, clean work!" sympathized the caller, glancing at the coating of chalk dust that had settled on the rug. "Maybe if you tell him it's a reward?"

But Mrs. Jones smiled and shook her head. "I'm not a teacher!" she replied.

No. 2—The Lamb

By Dorothy Dix

THERE are few more valuable animals than the Lamb, whether you consider it from the mint sauce or the Wall Street point of view. In either capacity it is our meat, and furnishes glad raiment and diamonds to those who, but for it, would not slain a dozen take its place. Indeed, against the cold blasts of Winter.

The name of the individual who discovered the first Lamb is lost in the mists of antiquity, but as a source of supplies he has got the individual who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before beat a city block. Thus are we called upon again to marvel at the wisdom of a beneficent Providence that has created just the proper thing to meet our every need.

Lambs are found in all parts of the known world, and appear to multiply with great rapidity, so that as one is slain a dozen take its place. Indeed the theory is held on Wall Street that a new batch of Lambs is born every second, but this probably exaggerates the situation. At any rate, the Lamb crop for the last year or two has been so poor that many brokers have been forced to prey on one another.

In appearance the Lamb is of a mild and pleasing aspect with a voice that sounds like the amateur soloist who kindly consents to sing at a club dinner. Originally the Lamb is of a snow white color, but after a short sojourn away from its native haunts it is apt to need a hurry trip to the laundry. It gets soiled very quickly.

In the matter of legs the Lamb is eclectic, some Lambs having four, one located on each corner, while other Lambs have only two, which are situated at the extreme northeast end of their anatomy, thus enabling them to stand upright after the manner of men. Also, some Lambs have alfalfa on their chins, while others have smooth faces, but this difference depends on whether they came from the middle West or not.

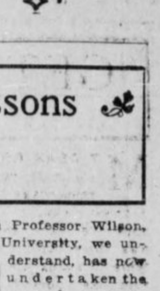
We may dismiss the quadruped Lamb in a few words, merely stating, in passing, that it has of late developed an ambitious and aspiring tendency to rise skyward under the tuition of Messrs. Armour and Swift, and that it has shown a coy disposition to stay in cold storage that every one who has the good of the country at heart must deplore. However, that great veterinarian Professor Wilson, late of Princeton University, we understand, has now undertaken the moral regeneration of the Lamb, and eke the beef, and the pig, and we may hope to see some needed reforms instituted in this line.

It is in the two-legged Lamb (genus suckibus) that the trained naturalist finds his most interesting study.

This amiable creature lives apparently only to give pleasure to others, which it does by the simple expedient of suffering itself to be sheared by any artistic trimmer that happens along.

This is great sport, and it is a matter of pride that our Wall Street brokers hold the world's record as the champion fleecers of Lambs.

Being so gentle and kind, the Lamb, especially the woolly ones from Pittsburgh, are held in great esteem by women as pets. There was once a chorus girl named Mary who had a little Lamb, with a fleece as white as snow, and everywhere that Mary went his money did surely go—but that's another story.



Lambs are generally of the masculine persuasion, though occasionally we observe an elderly female mutton dressed as Spring Lamb capering around at the dansant.

There are many curious sights in nature, and this is one of the curiousest.

Not What He Meant.

Jones and Long had not met for years. Once—that is, in the days when both had been striving for fame in their different professions—they had been really good chums, and many a talk had they enjoyed together by the fireside as to the little places they would take in the country "when their ships came home."

The dream of Jones has been realized, and now, although a portly old fellow, it was with a sense of real pleasure that he prepared for a visit from his former friend.

"Ah, it's splendid seeing you down here, Long!" he said cordially, by way of greeting. "Quite like old times—what? And the missus, I know, is longing to shake you by the hand. But first—yes, you must come along and have a look at my greenhouse. You simply must!"

And Long went.

"Well, Jones," he said, "you've got a mighty pretty place down here; but, to my mind, it's just a bit bare."

"Oh," replied Jones cheerfully, "that's because the trees are so young! Next time you come—why, they'll be so big that you won't recognize them!"

The Truth About England

There is a large missionary school in Tokio where the teaching is given in English. One of the pupils not long ago wrote a composition on England, from which these are extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the emmenced mind and his chin is so strong as deserves iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully says, 'The sun are never set on our dominion.' The testimony of England say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit, though he has gained a complete world.' The English are cunning mention to establish a great Empire of the Paradise. As the Englishmen always confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy, and the reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men!"

The Drawbacks

"HOUSE HUNTING," said the man who is boarding with the Pikers until he can get a home and bring his wife and children to town, "is the worst and most depressing job that any man or woman ever had to tackle.

"You can never find a house anywhere that has not some terrible drawback," he went on. "You can take your choice between a poor house in a good neighborhood and a good house in a poor neighborhood.

"If you have a good house in a poor neighborhood your little Cedric and Kenneth and Quentin will be contaminated by contact with those common Awfulwaffle children and the horrid young Beansizzles. And if you take a poor house in a good neighborhood your children will hang wistfully upon the fence and watch the haughty Stalkswaggers children, exclusive young Manybridges and the stuck-up little Snippydoodles at play.

"If a house is perfect in every other respect the landlord will live too near. You are not at first suspicious of the fact that there is a handy little gate by which he can enter your back yard. At first he is just helping you move in. But after you are settled you find him on the premises every time you come home from anywhere.

"Next you note with concern that he and his wife are exceedingly familiar with the history of all the people who have occupied the premises before you. And presently you begin to realize that your idiosyncrasies will furnish considerable data for the edification of your successor.

"Every time you find the landlord at your house he is there merely in the capacity of a friend. He was afraid the cat was caught in the fly-paper or that the canary had escaped, or that mice had got in the piano. He just come to see that everything was as it should be. You are glad to find that you have such a solicitous friend who is always looking after your interests.

"But when you come home suddenly some day and find him taking a bath in your bath room his disinterested motives are not so clear. You become dissatisfied and begin getting ready to move."

GETTING MARRIED

By DOROTHY DIX.

MY DEAR ROBERT—Who was the wise guy that said "the remarriage of a widow or widower was the final triumph of hope over experience"? Anyway, he was there with the goods when it came to sizing up the nerve of those who, like yourself, are contemplating entering that Mendelssohn Rag.

Now, I am not knocking second marriages. I am strong for them. But I confess they always fill me with amazement. If a man or woman has been happily married the first time, I should think that he or she would not dare to even attempt to replace the angel he or she has lost with another husband or wife, because he or she would realize that no one can always make matrimonial ten-strikes.

On the other hand, if a man or woman has been unhappily married, it has always seemed to me that the very sound of wedding bells would be anathema to him or her, and that, having been mercifully delivered by death or divorce from the partner who made life a torment, such a one would no more rush back into the holy estate than the soul who has just won out of purgatory would voluntarily return to it.

Opinion of the Public.

However, the general public does not share in these opinions. Every day we see the truly bereaved consoling themselves by taking new partners, and the freed hastening to put their necks once more under the yoke; for marriage is the only human experience from which we learn no wisdom.

Perhaps this is just as well. If we weren't all plungers, none of us would ever get married, for matrimony is the big gamble of life. In it we stake our all on the turn of a card, and whether we win or lose is pure luck, since there is no earthly way of telling beforehand what sort of a husband or wife a man or maiden will turn out to be.

Your first venture into matrimony was so disastrous that you can at least comfort yourself with the thought that you have been through the worst disillusionment that domesticity can offer. Any other of the fifty-seven known varieties of wives must be better than the one you had, whose only claim to your gratitude was established when she packed her trunks and hiked for Reno.

As I said before, it is strange that your previous experience of matrimony should incline you to try it over again; but, since it does, let us hope that you are making a more fortunate choice in a wife this time and that luck will be with you.

Of Our Own Making.

But did you ever think, son, that luck in matrimony is a good deal like luck in business—principally of our own making? Opportunity and happiness knock on our door, but unless we are on the job, ready to welcome them in, they pass us by. They don't force their way in with a club. They have to be cajoled across the threshold.

So, if you want this second marriage of yours to turn out successfully, it's going to be up to you to strike the keynote, and make it either a grand, sweet song or a scream. What? That's right.

It's the husband's place to make the home happy. Of course, the wife is due to chip in with her little contribution to the general felicity; but no woman, working alone and unaided, can carry out that contract. It's too big for her. It's a man's size job.

To begin with, son, make of your divorce papers a torch to light you on the road of happiness with this marriage. Think back and remember the things that you and your wife quarreled about. Was there a perpetual conflict between you on the money question?

Tell Your Income.

Avoid that snag by telling the girl you are about to marry exactly what your income is, and what she will have to spend. Tell her that she will have to do without many of the things that rich women have, perhaps without many of the luxuries that she has been in the habit of having. That will start out fair with her and give her, at least, a chance to keep out of the box of becoming a poor man's wife, unless she loves you enough to prefer you to fine clothes and an automobile.

Then, when you are married, give her a definite allowance for the house and for her own personal expenses, and give it to her as her due, without making her come to you for it like a beggar. And make her live within her allowance. That's the way to train her into being a good business woman.

Did you and your first wife have a never-ending fight because you stayed out late at night? Don't marry, son, until you are done sowing your wild oats. If you dance attendance on chorus girls and joy-ride them around; if you want to play poker and drink with the boys, stay single, where you'll have perfect liberty to do so. Don't be selfish enough to take a girl away from her home and put her to watching through weary nights for the drag of a drunken husband's footsteps.

Dreary for Girl.

Aside from the heartbreak and the anguish and the anxiety of it all, think how dreary it must be for a woman to spend her evenings alone.

No girl would marry if that was what she expected to get in matrimony, so be just and don't ask one to leave her happy home for you unless you are going to give her one just as happy in return.

A man's idea of doing his full duty by his wife is to give her food and clothes. That isn't enough. He owes her consideration and tenderness and comradeship besides. It's just as much his place to try to be entertaining to her, and meet her with a glad, sweet smile of an evening, as it is hers to try to interest and entertain him. And when a man does this, son, he never has to pay alimony.

Make your own matrimonial luck in the second marriage, son, and may heaven prosper the brave!

.:. The Exact Time .:.

"IF you are interesting in getting mother off on the train you'd better make some arrangement to set my clock right," suggested Mrs. Binkum.

"I certainly am interested," replied Binkum. "But you know, Betsy, that I have no way of setting your clock because my watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day. I never know whether it has lost eight or eighteen minutes and I do not like to gamble on any such important event as your mother's catching her train."

"My clock gains about thirteen minutes a day," said Mrs. Binkum. "Wouldn't that make it easier to get to set it by your watch?"

"Let me think—let me think," mused Binkum. "If a watch loses from eight to eighteen minutes a day and a clock gains thirteen minutes a day how can a watch be used in setting the clock? And at 12 o'clock fast watch time, what would be the hour by slow clock? I give it up."

"If they would only blow a whistle at noon in this town," said Mrs. Binkum, "I could tell the time at least once a day, and the rest of the time I should be able to tell about what time it was."

"The situation is serious I admit," said Binkum. "If we keep on this way you and I will be two or three days apart. There will come a time, in fact, when it will not even be the same year by our respective timepieces."

"The railroad clock is correct, I suppose?"

"Without a doubt. I can go down to the station, say at 12 o'clock, and start for home immediately. The station is eighteen blocks away. It takes me thirty minutes, about——"

"About! We want the exact time! And, besides, as likely as not you'll stop to talk to somebody. You do not know how long it takes you to walk eighteen blocks."

"I admit that I do not know how long it takes me to walk eighteen blocks. But there is one thing that I can time myself by. You know I was a bricklayer. I can lay just 60 bricks an hour. I am absolutely correct to a dot."

"But how does that help us?"

"It is the only thing I can time myself on."

"Then I will go to the railroad station and at 12 o'clock I'll give you some sort of signal, and you can begine to lay bricks. Then as soon as I get home we can count the bricks and know how many minutes have elapsed since I left the station."

"All right. I'll order the bricks and have the mortar ready. But what sort of signals are you going to give me?"

"I have read that the sound that carries farthest is the sound of a bass fiddle. I'll borrow Uncle John's bass fiddle. Then at precisely 12 o'clock I will get a good big sweep at the bow, and you'll hear it and begin to lay bricks. So when I get home I will know the exact time and set my clock and mother can catch her train."

"Fine!" ejaculated Binkum.

He's Too Kind

"I HAVE no use for the hospitable man!" declared the young architect, who had come in from dining out, and was at the moment engaged in rooting around in the pantry for something to eat.

"I hate a man who carries you proudly off to dinner when you don't want to be entertained. There's Robinson, the soul of hospitality! He's always trying to drag me home with him for dinner, and I have always managed to get away from him until to-night.

"This night he nailed me, and I couldn't get away. You should have seen Mrs. Robinson's expression when he shoved me in through the door.

"He shoved me right into the dining room, into the bosom of his family. His poor wife grabbed some things that were airing by the fireplace, and then hurried out and changed her dress. Then I heard the kitchen range rattling and knew that the unfortunate woman was cooking dinner all over again.

"Robinson was very entertaining for a while. He caught part of what I said, and I caught part of what he said. But he was uneasy and soon bolted out into the kitchen, where debate was immediately in order.

"In due time we had a very unfestive meal. Every once in a while Robinson gave his wife a dig, and she gave him a dig—sort of tennis fashion. I was the net for their little contest and every now and then I got the ball.

"The three kids got spanked and put to bed in relays. That was not exactly delightful for me!

"Robinson is one of the best fellows I ever saw! And I went to school with Emily, his wife. But I am blessed if I like to drop in there for a meal at night and have them play tennis across me in the manner described.

"I like to be treated formally. If a man wants to invite me to dinner, let him take me to the club or proceed to make adequate arrangements with his family ahead of time!"

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

Do You Know That—

The longest hunger strike on record was carried out some years ago by a Frenchman named Granie, who was arrested for murder in circumstances which left no doubt as to his guilt. He determined to starve himself to death in order to escape the guillotine, and from the day of his arrest refused to eat in spite of every effort on the part of the prison authorities, who first tried tempting him to eat by placing the most dainty meals in his cell, and when that failed, attempted forcible feeding. Granie held out for sixty-three days, at the end of which time he died.

It is reported that all German submarines are to be fitted with guns. Two types have been selected—a 12-pounder, which can be housed and a 1-pounder, which will be permanently in position. The older boats will probably carry 1-pounders only. The 12-pounders are on special high-angle mounting for use against aircraft if necessary. The crew of these guns consists of four men, three to work the gun and one to hand the ammunition. The newer boats will carry two of these guns.

Farmers in the Boyertown district of Pennsylvania came for miles round to attend a sale held at Boyertown of a number of heavy rolled steel coffins. A burial casket company purchased the coffins fifteen years ago, but they were too cumbersome and could not be disposed of. The coffins, which were sold at prices ranging from ten cents to a quarter each, will be used by the farmers for watering troughs for their stock.

A new machine, called the stenotype, has been invented, which enables the shorthand writer to get from 400 to 600 words a minute upon paper in an absolutely correct and accurate form. The basis of operating the machine is phonetic spelling. While the work done is virtually the same as done by shorthand, it has the advantage of being recorded in plain English characters.

Nell Brinkley Says:

I WALKED with a sceptic who has scarcely a rag of a dream to his name to believe in, close under a garden wall, warmed by the sun and cuddled close by the fragrant arms of cherry trees in spring bloom. On the broad, flat top of it was a gypsy-like girl of ten, maybe, with a bowl of iridescent suds between her scratched, sun-tanned knees and a head as velvety black as the poplars in the garden must be when night comes. Up into the still scented air she was sending big elastic soap bubbles, hued like a box of loose gems with a shaft of sunlight lying on them, frail discs of perfect beauty which are the vanishing soul of a drop of crystal water. Idly they floated, some long breathless seconds, some but an instant, giving to the wind changing and glowing with swift-running rivers of color before they snapped into thin air with a tiny shatter of splintering light.

"There, by my new straw hat!" quoth the sceptic, "there is the stuff that dreams are made of! there the blowing of them, there the rainbow coloring, there the vanishing into thin air. What are they? Nothing. Why blow them through our little thin pipe in the first place? Only the veriest child takes joy in blowing soap bubbles, and only the simple-minded among grown-ups (your pardon, mad'moiselle) find the making of dreams delectable. They only snap and vanish, and where once our eyes saw a sphere of unutterable beauty there is nothing! Ah, ah, I don't dream any more, my child. They amount in the end to just a bit of elastic color that we cannot touch or breathe upon—pf!—there is nothing there. Dreamers are fools, out of a drop of ether, colorless it is true, but very real and material stuff which they can at least possess. Out of this tiny but satisfactory thing they insist on stretching a gorgeous thing that a breath will break."

"Nevertheless," quoth I in return, I who am so much less wise and who have so much a better time, "nevertheless, the little kid on the wall is having a better time than you. The bursting of one thin bubble is just nothing. There are countless more in the bowl between her knees. What is the vanishing of one lovely-hued thing when you have the making of endless more? What is the breaking of one little tiny dream of yours when you have the source of countless more in your head and heart? There is the big dream of all—wise man—the bowl—the bowl! Real it is, too—just soap and water. There is the big dream of all, wise man, the head and the heart that are the source of frail and lovely dreams! Real they are, too—red blood and brain. There is where you are poor, m'sieu. You have considered the bubble too deeply, and you haven't the bowl!"

The little black head on the wall went on blowing thin, lovely planets into the spring air, and her eyes were thoughtful enough to make me think she saw child dreams of the things that are to be in their opalescent sides. It looked lots of fun, and it IS fun to blow dreams, for without dreams (real dreams are ambitions) where would we be? After all, would we care about a bubble at all if we could hold it in our hand and play with it? For that matter, we can go buy us a big crystal or a pretty marble any day.

Hasn't Found It.

Jackson—Bunker has got himself into a nice fix.

Johnson—How?

Jackson—He wrote an article on "The Ideal Wife" for a ladies' paper last month.

Johnson—Well, what's that got to do with his present fix?

Jackson—Somebody told his wife about it, and she's been reading the thing over during the past two days trying to discover a single trait wherein his ideal resembles her. She hasn't found it, and Bunker dines in the city now.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A minister in a small country village, who was noted for his absent-mindedness, was once observed to stop suddenly in the middle of his sermon and heard to mutter:

"I knew she would—I knew she would!"

After the service was over some one asked him the reason.

"Dear me," said he, "did I? Well, you know, from the pulpit I can just see old Mrs. Rogers' garden, and this morning she was out pulling up a cabbage, and I thought to myself, 'Now, if that cabbage comes up suddenly she'll go over,' and just then it came up and over she went."

Brown—I've got an excellent plan for getting rid of duns.

Green—Ah! That so?

Brown—I have. Never fails.

Green—Then, old fellow, you must let me into the secret, for I'm worried to death by 'em.

Brown—Well, I've tried it several times of late and I find the man never comes back again.

Green—Aye, aye! what do you do?

Brown—I pay him.

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see I'm rather busy just now. I hung Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your churchwarden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled-looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly remarked the woman as she counted the contents of her purse.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

The father looked at Mary with a reproach that was pathetic.

"See," he said, and his voice was for once thin with passion, "see what you've done to my boy!"

Mary had held her eyes on Dick. There had been in her gaze a conflict of emotions, strong and baffling. Now, however, when the father spoke, her face grew more composed and her eyes met his coldly. Her voice was level and vaguely dangerous as she answered his accusation.

"What is that compared to what you have done to me?"

Gilder stared at her in honest amazement. He had no suspicion as to the tragedy that lay between him and her.

"What have I done to you?" he questioned, uncomprehending.

Mary moved forward, passing beyond the desk, and continued her advance toward him until the two stood close together, face to face. She spoke softly, but with an intensity of supreme feeling in her voice.

"Do you remember what I said to you the day you had me sent away?"

The merchant regarded her with stark lack of understanding.

"I don't remember you at all," he said.

The woman looked at him intently for a moment, then spoke in a colorless voice:

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store. And perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy-jowled man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember. Yes? There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off—only, you asked the judge to make an example of her."

The man to whom she spoke had gone gray a little. He began to understand, for he was not lacking in intelligence. Somehow, it was borne in on him that this woman had a grievance beyond the usual run of injuries.

"You are that girl?" he said. It was not a question, rather an affirmation.

Mary spoke with the dignity of long suffering—more than that, with the confident dignity of a vengeance long delayed, now at last achieved. Her words were simple enough, but they reached to the heart of the man accused by them.

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again, remorselessly.

"You took away my good name. You smashed my life. You put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. . . . Well, I've begun to collect."

Burke Shouts a Warning.

The man opposite her, the man of vigorous form, of strong face and keen eyes, stood gazing intently for long moments. In that time he was learning many things. Finally he spoke:

"And that is why you married my boy."

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

Convincingly, save to one—her husband. Dick suddenly aroused and spoke with the violence of one sure.

"It is not!"

Burke shouted a warning. Demarest, more diplomatic, made a restraining gesture toward the police official, then started to addfess the young man soothingly.

But Dick would have none of their interference.

"This is my affair," he said, and the others fell silent. He stood up and went to Mary and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you loved me."

The wife shuddered, but she strove to deny.

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not!"

"And you love me now!" he went on, insistingly.

"No, no!" Mary's denial came like a cry for escape.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated, bitterly.

But he was inexorable.

"Look me in the face and say that."

He took her face in his hands, lifted it, and his eyes met hers searchingly.

"Look me in the face and say that," he repeated.

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. The three watchers dared not interrupt this drama of emotions, but at last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly. Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I Do Not Love You."

"I do not love you."

"Just the same," he said cheerfully, "you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me."

Mary felt a thrill of fear through her very soul.

"You can't!" she cried harshly. "You are his son!"

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care a d—n what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll put all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart, because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke, with his rousing voice, spoke again:

"I tell you, she's a crook!"

Mary moved a little and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers?"

Gilder moved fussily.

"And you——"

Mary swayed a little, standing there before her questioner.

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago you took away my name—and gave me a number.... Now I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XV.

Aftermath of Tragedy.

THE Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger. Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. In these hours of grief the soul of him put out its strength. He learned beyond peradventure of doubt that the woman whom he had married was in truth an ex-convict, even as Burke and Demarest had declared.

Nevertheless, he did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim.

He Remained Loyal.

He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder. In his summing of her, he set as more than an offset to her unrighteousness in this regard the desperate struggle she had made after leaving prison to keep straight, which, as he learned, had ended in her attempt at suicide.

He knew the intelligence of this woman whom he loved, and in his heart was no thought of her faults as vital flaws. It seemed to him rather that circumstances had compelled her, and that through all the suffering of her life she had retained the more beautiful qualities of her womanliness, for which he reverenced her. In the closeness of their association, short as it had been, he had learned to know something of the tenderer depths within her, the kindliness of her, the wholesomeness.

Swayed as he was by the loveliness of her, he was yet more enthralled by those inner qualities of which the outer beauty was only the fitting symbol.

So in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers and abandon her. On the contrary, his only purpose was to gain her for himself, to cherish and guard her against every ill, to protect with his love from every attack of shame or injury.

To Be Continued Monday.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me, but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it, with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Cary, Maine.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Poultry Fertilizer Better than Chemical To Build Up Land

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The value of the poultry products in the country for 1910 was approximately $800,000,000, and the 1913 product will be around $1,000,000,000.

Much of this is attributed to the everlasting and persistent efforts of the American Poultry Association, an organization whose aims and efforts are to the building up and increasing of the thoroughbred poultry interests of this country. How well they have succeeded we will leave the reader to judge for himself from the wonderful building up of the industry in every nook and corner of the country.

But the very people who should receive the greatest benefits from this work are not reaping the benefits they should. I refer to the farmers of this country, and especially those of the South.

The raising of cotton by the means of chemical fertilizers seems to have a death grip upon them; so much so that they can not see over it into anything more profitable to them. They have been constantly ruining their land, but they have been turning it out to grow up in bushes and adding new land to keep up the supply. But that string to their bow is about worn out, and they must look to the building up or maintaining the fertility of the soil now in hand.

Chemical Fertilizers.

This can hardly be accomplished by the use of chemical fertilizers, for at best they represent little more than prods and stimulants, such as whisky, morphine and the like to the human body, requiring more and more at each succeeding dose to produce the results, the result of which is utter depletion. What they need are the natural elements, such as poultry manure, prepared in the way of a compost heap, can furnish to the soil. A thousand hens on the average small farm, with proper care of the droppings, will do wonders in enriching the soil. The land should then be cropped in rotation with peas, corn, clover, potatoes, etc.—with the careful deep plowing so essential to the conserving of all the elements of the soil and air, which will work wonders. If the hens are allowed to range at intervals during the day, they will do more toward destroying the insect enemies of the crops than all the insecticides you can buy.

About 175 days represent the working actually spent during the year upon the farm. If the farmer would devote at least a part of the remaining time to the care and management of a good flock of well bred chickens instead of remaining idle, much profit would result and his farm would improve in fertility each year.

The American Poultry Association stands for pure thoroughbred stock. It does not indicate to you what varieties you should keep. It leaves that to you. But whatever you do, discard the old mixed breed, and, take up something that will show uniformity not only in color and breed characteristics, but in the production of eggs and meat. I have simply outlined a course that can be made profitable not only in the way of dollars and cents, but the improvement of your land in a permanent way. Get busy and work out the details, as every one must who makes a success of anything in this world.

Questions and Answers.

Judge Marshall—Some of my chickens have what seems to me to be rheumatism. They sit around on their hock joints a good deal of the time, and when they do attempt to get about they succeed with difficulty, hobbling about in a most ungainly manner. They seem to eat well and in many ways are all right. We have lost none so far with it, but of course will if they are not helped in some way. Can you suggest anything that might help them out? Thanking you in advance, I am yours truly—Mrs. M. M. H., Jackson, Miss.

Answer.—The first thing to do is to remove the cause if possible. It is no doubt rheumatism caused by roosting too low in a house or coop with a damp clay floor. Give the floor a coating of two inches of good dry sand or sawdust; something that will remove the results of the dampness. Have plenty of ventilation, but let it be pure and free from filth or dampness. Those afflicted should respond readily to treatment of some good liniment or a solution of witch hazel and arnica well rubbed in about the joints. We would also recommend the use of salts in the drinking water at the rate of a teaspoon to each two fowls. Give this one week and then use Douglass Mixture the next week.

The principal effort should, however, be made in protecting the well ones rather than in treating the sick.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Railroad Makes Move For Two Spur Tracks

Southern to Serve Big Factories in Marietta St. Section—West End Lots Bring $30,800.

An agreement entered into between the Southern Railway Company and Judge E. C. Kontz, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Kontz, Porter Langston and Philip Weltner, presages a considerable commercial development in the entire Marietta Street section. It will mean the erection of factories which will add greatly to the effectiveness of the Marietta Street neighborhood as a manufacturing center.

The agreement contemplates the construction of double spur tracks from the Southern's main line near Simpson Street to a point about a block and a half toward Mangum Street, between Simpson and Jones Avenue. The tracks will extend westerly 550 and 357 feet, respectively. Work on them is expected to start soon.

Persons in close touch with the improvement intimated that substantial commercial establishments were in contemplation, but refused to go into details.

This step is but another evidence of an industrial awakening in the neighborhood mentioned. Other interests, principally the railroads, are quietly working out plans of extension. Announcement of such plans is looked for shortly.

Most of the property in this direction on which developers have an eye for manufacturing is within the one-mile radius, which means close proximity to downtown activities.

West End Lots Bring $30,800.

Included in Friday's real estate announcements was the sale of approximately $30,800 in residence lots by the Dillin-Morris Company and J. S. Collins, of Collins Brothers & Davies for William J. Davis, developer of West End Park. The sale of 27 lots covered a period of 30 days, and it was also announced that about 25 houses are just completed or being built in this subdivision, and that the total in West End Park is now approximately 150. West End Park was opened up a year ago.

The lots just sold are on West Ontario Avenue, near Gordon Street, and averaged $1,100 to $1,250 apiece.

Sales on Durant Place.

Prominent citizens figured this week in two sales on Durant Place, 474 feet north of Ponce DeLeon Avenue. Edward M. Durant sold to Attorney Sam D. Hewlett, legislator-elect; John Y. Smith and John T. Dennis a 44 by 109-foot lot, for $2,000, and an adjoining lot, 42 by 109 feet, for the same price. Mr. Hewlett and Mr. Smith got an undivided three-eighths interest each and Mr. Dennis two-eighths. The cash consideration was $500 in each sale.

Transfer of Ellis Parcel.

S. H. Phelan, of Crawford County, formerly of Atlanta, has conveyed to Mrs. Barry Wright, of Rome, the northeast corner of Ellis and Courtland Streets. This parcel is a block east of the Elks Club and in the vicinity of other valuable properties. The frontage on Ellis Street is 50 feet.

Cancellations on Increase.

Figures in The Fulton County Daily Report for the twentieth week of 1913 and the corresponding week in 1912 show a continued increase in the number and amount of mortgages canceled, which realty men consider a good sign. The number in 1913 was 45 and the total $59,445, and for last year 39 and $45,835. Real estate transfers gained in number, but fell off in amount, and building permits dropped back a little in both.

Auction Sale Successful.

Everything but the weather was favorable to a successful auction sale Thursday by the Foster & Robson Co. of bungalows and lots on the South Decatur car line in the Ninth Ward. Rain stopped the sale, but before it came the following sales, aggregating $5,530, were made:

Bungalow to J. A. Boatwright for $1,500.

Bungalow to M. Owen for $1,525, sold on the grounds for a profit.

Bungalow to Mrs. T. M. Johnson for $1,550.

Lot 36 to I. N. Ragsdale for $245.

Lot 37 to T. N. Bradshaw for $140.

Lot 19 to M. Owen for $270.

Lot 49, on Vannoy Street, to J. L. Veal for $300.

Oakland City Auction.

The Foster & Robson Real Estate Agency has become associated with the W. E. Treadwell Company in the sale Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock of bungalows and residence lots at Oakland City, on the East Point car line. These real estate agencies report many inquiries, and a large crowd of home-seekers is expected out. The property for sale is opposite the George W. Adair School and has undergone extensive improvements.

New Dry Goods Home.

The new home of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company will be started at once at 92 South Pryor Street, and the concern will move its stock from North Pryor, having sold out there some weeks ago to Luther Z. Rosser and J. H. Porter. Mrs. L. J. Bowie has applied for a permit to erect a four-story and basement brick building for the dry goods house at a cost of $28,000. Donaldson & Pierson are the contractors. The Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company will occupy the building under lease.

T. C. Hellbrauck has filed application to build a $2,000 dwelling of one story on West Tenth Street. Day labor will be used.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

Forrest & George Adair

Six New Bungalows and Sixteen Building Lots AT AUCTION Saturday, May 24, 3 P. M.

In the Tenth Ward on Warner Street and Allene and Woodrow Avenues. Just two blocks from the splendid car service to East Point, College Park and Hapeville. Also convenient to the Stewart Avenue car line.

This property is in a rapidly growing section, close to the new $40,000 "Adair" Public School, and only two blocks from Adair Park.

One of Atlanta's best citizens, Mr. I. N. Ragsdale, has developed this property, sparing neither time nor money to bring this property to a point of desirability that would make it acceptable to the better class of citizens for homes.

With this purpose uppermost in mind, he has built six attractive bungalows. Built them of good material and with day labor, exercising good taste and rare good judgment in all the details of arrangement and construction. These are not the usual "built to sell" affairs.

Each house has a small loan, which the purchaser assumes as part of the price. The balance will be paid in small monthly payments without interest. A small cash payment will be required, ranging from $100 to $250. This is an unusually easy arrangement that should appeal to every buyer of a home.

The lots will be sold on very easy terms, with 6 per cent simple interest.

The lots lie particularly well, many of them having nice shade. They will make desirable and valuable home sites. Several of them have the added value of two street fronts.

Take East Point or College Park cars. Get off at Gammages. A big sign will direct you to the property. Get plats from

GOOD NEW HOMES: Listen, on Moreland Avenue, corner of Albemarble, we are just completing a beautiful two-story, seven-room bungalow. This place has an abundance of large and roomy closets, tile bath, exposed ceiling beams, stone front, stone steps, and it is on a corner lot; birch doors, the best of hardware; will tint walls to suit your own taste. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. To see this is to buy it. Take a look and come to see us.

ON NORTH AVENUE, close to Highland Avenue, we have just completed a pretty six-room home with two baths; it is seldom that you find a place so well built and so complete in every detail as this one. Each bath has tile floor; large rooms, plenty of light and furnace heat. Will take a good lot in part payment for this. It is close to school and churches, within a stone's throw of Druid Hills; car just a block away. Or will sell on easy terms.

ON BEAUTIFUL Cleburne Avenue we are offering the best value in the city in a new six-room, hall and bath bungalow with tile floor on front porch and in bath room, dressing mirrors, stone steps, and automobile drive on side. This lot has a frontage of 70 feet. If you have been waiting for a large lot here it is. Will sell you this handsome place on easy terms. We know that you will like this.

Made in Atlanta--A Permanent Exhibition of Our Goods Would be a Liberal Education to the Whole Country--The Time to Act Is NOW.

The plan of the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta to install a permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods in this city is excellent.

Chattanooga has an exhibition along similar lines, and it is proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of this city that the manufacturers and merchants of Atlanta shall study this exhibit in Chattanooga, and install an exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods here, so that people of the entire south, and other parts of the country as well, may know exactly what MADE IN ATLANTA goods really mean.

The Georgian suggests that the business men of Atlanta take up this question at once, with the idea of devoting a week during this summer or early fall to a SHOW THEM exhibition of the 1,000 or more articles that are now manufactured in Atlanta by the 600 manufacturers now engaged in such work.

An exhibition of this kind would attract the attention of business men and merchants from all over the south. The railroads would undoubtedly offer low rates to travelers; hotel accommodations are ample, and with the superb summer weather that Atlanta always enjoys, an exhibition week here would be beneficial to all concerned.

A permanent exhibition of MADE IN ATLANTA goods would be a liberal education. Atlanta needs that kind of an exhibition. MADE IN ATLANTA should mean the highest standard of merit. Articles made in Atlanta will undoubtedly find a ready sale all over the country, as soon as it is known what Atlanta really can do.

Every business man in Atlanta, no matter in what enterprise he is engaged, should help this movement along. It will mean much to the city. It will make for progress in every direction.

The Georgian congratulates the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the manufacturers and merchants of this city in taking up this permanent exhibition idea, and hopes it will be pushed forward in an active way.

What Is To Be Done for These Women and Others Like Them?

Who Will Answer the Questions That These Human Question Marks Permanently Represent in Our Civilization? Isn't It Time TO MAKE A BEGINNING?

Copyright, 1913.

AND THEY ARE THREE QUESTION MARKS.

They are the oldest question marks in the world, or at least in the world as long as men have lived on it, some two or three hundred thousand years.

From the beginning women have done the hard work, the dull work, the work that wears the brain, the body and the nerves, AND THE HORRIBLE WORK THAT HOLDS OUT NO FUTURE HOPE.

These question marks stand out on our so-called "civilization" of to-day.

You have the girl in her childhood bending over the machine. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to set her free?

You have the young woman bending over her child, in poverty, misery and anxiety. What are you going to do for her? How are you going to make your boasted civilization and prosperity free her from a life of sorrow, worry and want?

You have the older woman bending over the washtub, using up the last fragment of vitality and energy, painfully and slowly doing work which could be done quickly and easily by a machine—if it were "worth while" for men to use their intelligence and their machinery to free women from slavery.

How are you going to free these three slaves, straighten up their backs and answer the questions which they represent?

We have more than half a thousand solemn statesmen in Washington. And we have thousands in the Capitols of the States.

They are discussing laws and "economic questions," talking, advising, sometimes honestly urging, more often dishonestly selling their opinions.

When will they find time among other questions to take up the three questions at the top of this page?

Is it not almost time to make a BEGINNING?

And wouldn't the best beginning be the fixing OF A MINIMUM WAGE FOR WORKING GIRLS AND WOMEN?

That would be at least a start. It would stop or check the present profitable money making schemes of hiring and working girls and women for less than it costs to feed them properly.

It is true that you could not in this way free from misery the wives of underpaid workingmen, or the mothers, old and half worn out.

But you could at least BEGIN with the wages of women, making it a crime to force a woman by poverty and want to work for such wages as mean a life half starved.

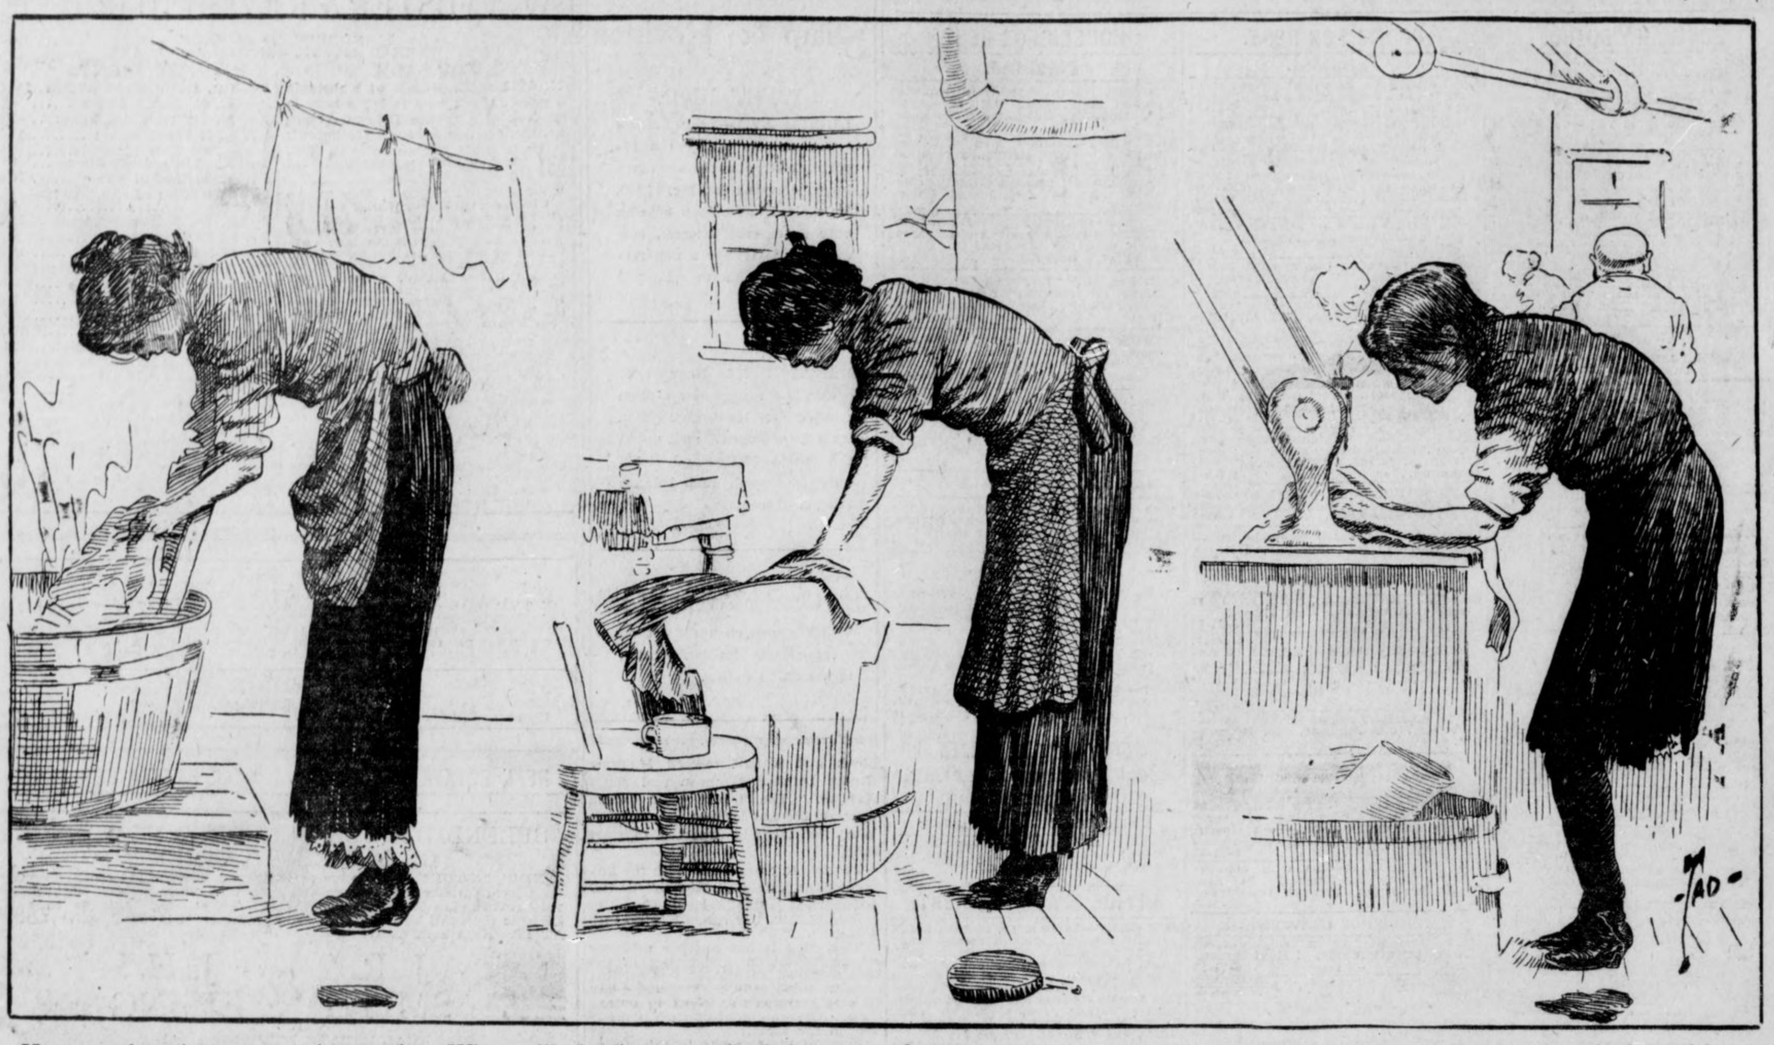
Who cares now for these miserable women?

What voice have they? They can't send a man to Congress, or take him from Congress.

They can't put a judge on the bench or take him off the bench.

How long must women wait for their rights? How long shall this picture continue? How long shall these human question marks bend over their tasks, neglected and forgotten?

Living Questions



Here are three human question marks. When will the "statesmen" of the nation find time to answer, or try to answer, the questions that these three bodies ask?

What Is Ideal Love in a Man?

The Highest Type of Lover Is at Once Friend, Mate, Defender and Comrade to the Woman He Loves.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

WHAT is the highest ideal of man's love for woman?

It is a more difficult question to answer than its companion—woman's ideal love for man—because woman is a more difficult being to satisfy in the matter of the affections than man.

Given an orderly home, a well-supplied table and a tactful, cheerful woman to reign, and the average man is content with his domestic relations. But emotional woman wants more than these conditions grant. She wants continuous praise, a frequently recurring touch of sentiment, and even a misunderstanding, now and then, followed by a reconciliation, is sweeter to her than a monotony of unexpressed satisfaction.

The Ideal Lover.

The ideal lover takes into consideration all these peculiarities of feminine temperament, and adapts himself to them in a reasonable degree.

Almost every woman, the most ardent and romantic as well as the phlegmatic, realizes at times the maternal element in her love for a man. It is this which aids her in being his patient nurse in hours of illness and his stimulus in times of despondency, and it is that lack of graver and more paternal element in man's love which detracts from its ideality so often.

When he does possess it man is liable to overdo the matter and to become the slave of his lady's hysterical moods and to encourage her weaknesses and her selfish whims.

The lover who is at once kind, sympathetic and masterful is seldom found, yet he alone illustrates the highest order of love.

The ideal lover is he who commands his wife's or sweetheart's respect and admiration, together with her love; who makes her realize that his standards of womanhood and of life are high, and that he expects her to do her part toward maintaining them, and who is capable of drawing a fine line between devotion and servility.

The ideal lover of either sex is not a slave or a coward.

The moment those elements enter into a love its standard is lowered.

I once heard a wife say that she would not live with a man who told her he thought another woman beautiful. She felt that his love for her should blind his eyes to the beauty of all others.

The man loved his wife, but while his lips were silent on the subject of others' charms, his furtive glances of admiration often bespoke the sentiments of his mind. That man's love was not ideal, since it lacked the courage to make his wife understand how she belittled herself in his eyes.

The ideal lover does not entertain his wife by expatiating on the charms of other women for hours, but he does express his respectful admiration on occasions.

It Lacked Courage.

He strives to bring out the very best and noblest qualities in the woman whom he has chosen for his life mate and to aid her developing into a perfect womanhood. He is her friend and her protector as well as her lover and admirer. He looks out for her best interests, but he never forgets that she has an individuality of her own which is to be respected and considered. She is his mate and his companion, not his chattel or his servant.

She is to be advised and guided, but not commanded or coerced.

The highest type of lover realizes that a woman has a spirit and a soul, as well as a body.

The man who hides a woman away and tries to keep her from all association with her kind and all pleasures not directly bestowed by him is not an ideal lover, however madly he adores her.

His love savors too much of that of the bear who carries the lamb to its cave to devour it at leisure.

Neither is that the highest type of love which encourages a woman's foolish ambitions and unworthy aims.

I have known a man to plume himself as a model husband because he gave his assistance to a silly wife—the mother of his children—who conceived an aspiration for a theatrical career. She possessed no atom of talent, and made herself only the object of ridicule and pity to all observers, while she left her husband—a good man, of ample means—and her children to the care of domestics.

Had the woman been a great genius, born to do some special work in life and no other, the husband's unselfishness would have been "ideal."

Highest Type of Lover.

A man must be a woman's truest friend in order to be also her ideal lover. He must possess appreciation of all her best qualities, sympathy for all her feminine weaknesses, the courage to warn her when her highest good demands it, and the wisdom to direct her when counsel is needed. He must be delicate enough never to make her feel her financial dependence upon him, and he must possess the will power and self-control to make his loyalty to her under all conditions that which he expects of her.

Yes, he must be strong enough to keep her from leading him into financial ruin, and lover enough to keep her responsive to his demonstrations of affection. Friend, defender, lover, comrade, mate—all these must be he who possesses "the highest type of love" for woman.

"The God-Blessed Macs"

Dr. White Says in the Storm the Presbyterians Are Oak and Rock, but in the Sunshine They Are Vine and Flower.

Written for The Georgian by REV. JOHN E. WHITE, pastor Second Baptist Church.

TWO good-natured witticisms at the expense of the Presbyterians by the late Sam Jones have just passed into oblivion beyond recall. He said that the only objection to be had against the Presbyterians was that there are so few of them, and that "The Presbyterians pay more for their religion and get less fun out of it than any people on earth."

The historic gathering of 1,500 commissioners in Atlanta, representing American Presbyterians, has abruptly made an end of the first complaint, and their lively proceedings in debate and the good cheer they have radiated on our streets and in our homes leaves no ground for the other.

The Presbyterians number nearly 5,000,000 in the world and constitute one-fifth of the evangelical force of Christianity. They have furnished their full share to the entertainment of history.

Definite Distinctions.

The English and Welsh names of Smith and Jones represent our largest American classification of surnames, but the folks whose names carry the handle of the "God-blessed Macs" belong to a class of quality incomparable in weight and achievement.

Next to the Jews the Macs have preserved through generations a distinctive character. They are not all Presbyterians, but there is a Presbyterian quality in them all.

Presbyterianism is only a denominational subdivision—a fragment broken off from Scotch granite; but the Presbyterian essence has gone with Scotchmen into every nook and corner of American character. Its leaven is pungent and penetrating, and if they could only monopolize it and secure a royal patent on all it permeates, the Presbyterians would lay claim to the most immense religious areas. But there is no monopoly in truth, and the Presbyterians are debtors also. Renan said "Jesus begat Paul, Paul begat Augustine, Augustine begat John Calvin, John Calvin begat John Knox."

It is with difficulty that Protestants are reminded that Augustine was Roman Catholic. Aside from theological heredity, the Presbyterians, taken as they are, constitute in the world an incalculable value to human character far beyond their numerical strength.

It is not generally known that the name Scotland was stolen from the little country now known as Ireland. Scotia, before the tenth century, was a territorial term, while Scotus was a race name and the generic term of Scoti embraced the people of that race, whether inhabiting Ireland or Britain.

After the tenth century the

REV. JOHN E. WHITE.

principal stronghold of the people designated Scoti included nine counties in the North of Ireland as well as the Western part of Scotland.

The Scotch-Irish, therefore, are not a mixture of Irish and Scotch blood, but are the pure Scotch who happened to be geographically identified with Northern Ireland. The main contribution to American life from the Scotch came from this region. They brought their quality with them, and it was a fighting quality.

The first Scotch-Irish clergyman to land in America, in 1682, landed in jail immediately, charged with the offense of preaching the Gospel at a private house.

The first great Scotch-Irish lawyer spoke a piece in Virginia about "Give me liberty or give me death." At Mecklenburg, North Carolina, the Scotch-Irish raised the first standard of defiance to Great Britain.

At Alamance, in North Carolina, ten years before, they had fought the first skirmish of the American Revolution.

When George Washington saw red-coats landing at every seaport he said that if the worst came to the worst he would gather the Scotch-Irishmen around him and make a fortress of liberty in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

At King's Mountain the Scotch-Irish, under three Presbyterian elders, flung victory into the teeth of despair and saved the cause of Independence.

The Presbyterians may not claim them all, but we all claim them.

Good Soldiers—Good Brothers.

We have had a large flavor of this life for ten days in Atlanta. All our under-estimates are revised.

We have seen the Presbyterians as many and we know them as much. We have marked them as good soldiers, and we have felt them as good brothers. We have witnessed them in their conflicts, and we have warmed toward them in our homes.

If in the storm they are oak and rock, in the sunshine they are vine and flower.

JUST YOU

By LILLIAN LAUFFERTY.

ALL the selfish joys of earth,
I am getting through—
That which used to lure and lead
Now I pass and give no heed;
Only one thing seems of worth—
Just you.

Not for me the lonely height,
And the larger view;
Lowlier ways seem fair and wide,
While we wander side by side.
One thing makes the whole world bright—
Just you.

Not for distant goals I run,
No great aim pursue;
Most of earth's ambitions seem
Like a shadow of a dream
All the world to me means one—
Just you.
