MRS. FRANK ATTACKS SOLICITOR H. M. DORSEY IN A NEW STATEMENT

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey refused late Saturday afternoon to make reply to the reiterated accusations of Mrs. Leo M. Frank that "torture chamber" methods were made use of by the state to secure evidence from witnesses.

"I havn't had time to read Mrs. Frank's statement fully," declared Mr. Dorsey, "and even though I did read it, I do not know that I would reply to it."

Mrs. Frank's second letter was made public Saturday morning and is as follows:

Atlanta Ga., June 7, 1913.

Editor Atlanta Georgian:

I think fairness to Mr. Frank requires that the public should clearly understand Mr. Dorsey's position as stated by him in his card in The Constitution of June 6, and repeated in the papers yesterday, in reply to my statement that he proposes to use testimony which comes from witnesses as the result of torture.

His real position, as gleaned from his card, can be stated in the following sentence which he employed:

"I have only to say, without in anywise taking issue with her premises as I might" * * * that "I welcome all evidence from any source that will aid an impartial jury, under the charge of the court, in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused."

That is to say, he thinks it unnecessary to waste time in disputing the fact that the detectives are procuring testimony from witnesses by torture. He considers this point immaterial. He believes he is thoroughly justified in using tortured testimony, if it is turned over to him, for he says: "I welcome all evidence from any source."

No Charge Against Woman

The Journal and The Constitution stated that he had had my cook arrested and carired to his office and quizzed to such an extent as to drive her into hysterics, and that after this he sent her screaming to the Police station in the patrol wagon. After she left his office she was taken to the detective's Torture Chamber, and, according to The Atlanta Constitution, she there had the third degree applied to her to the point of exhaustion, after which she made an affidavit, which the detectives, or someone, immediately gave out to the papers.

The Solicitor had no charge against this cook and did not suspect her of any crime. Yet Mr. Dorsey waives this aside as a trivial matter, not worthy to be discussed by him, because he says: "I welcome all evidance from any source," clearly implying that he will take it from the torture chamber if it is offered to him.

That he and the detectives violated the criminal law in arresting my cook when they had no charge against her and when they suspected her of no crime, I am told by lawyers, admits of no doubt. But this, Mr. Dorsey thinks, need not be discussed by him.

Thinks Public Is Opposed

While Mr. Dorsey thinks all this is entirely proper, it is the next thing to an impossibility to believe that many persons in the community will agree with him. Indeed, I would be surprised if a single person could be found who would agree with him that he should use, even in the newspapers, torture chamber testimony to take away a man's life.

When Mr. Dorsey introduces this third-degree evidence to the jury, can it be supposed that he will at the same time tell the jury that it comes direct from the torture chamber?

It is our time to suffer now. Can anyone tell whose turn will come next?

I do not wish to be in any manner bitter toward Mr. Dorsey, even in my feelings, because it is so perfectly clear that his action is dictated by a serious mistake of judgment, and my only purpose is to let the community understand as thoroughly as I can, in the interest of fairness to my innocent husband, that Mr. Dorsey is proposing to use third-degree torture chamber testimony in an effort to take his life, and that he thinks it is perfectly proper for him to do so.

Know She Can Not Testify

Mr. Dorsey and the detectives know that I can not go on the witness stand and deny the affidavits they have published in the newspapers, wrung from my cook in the torture chamber by the third-degree process, because I am informed that under the law a wife will not be permitted to testify either for or against her husband. The law puts this absolute seal upon my lips, and my only recourse is in letting the community know the facts through the newspapers as far as I can.

I know I can not keep up with all the false affidavits and false rumors and innuendoes that have been so industriously put in the newspapers, but I feel that I should call attention in this instance to Mr. Dorsey's position, which he so boldly justifies. MRS. LEO M. FRANK.

Defense Bends Efforts To Prove Conley Slayer

The defense of Leo Frank against the charge of murdering Mary Phagan will be more than a mere attempt to clear Frank's skirts. It will seek directly to fix upon James Conley, negro, full and complete responsibility for the crime.

Despite the secretiveness and the silence of Frank's attorneys, it has been ascertained with a reasonable degree of authority that the foregoing is the program of the defense, and that the defense believes itself abundantly prepared to take care of itself along that line.

An ironclad alibi, covering all the time cited in the Conley statement with a substantial margin of time to spare, will be set up by Frank.

In addition to this, it will be shown that Conley was in the factory at the time he himself says Frank committed the murder, and for a long time before.

The defense will try to show that Conley had ample opportunity to accomplish the murder, and that every circumstance of it shows that he did do so.

Say Conley Broke Staple.

It will be contended that the murder was effected on the first floor, and that after it was performed the girl's body was thrown down the open elevator shaft, where soon after it was followed by Conley, who then hid it in the rear.

Conley will be held to be the party

Captain Keene Hurt; Out of World's Polo ChampionshipGames

MEADOWBROOK, N. Y., June 7.—Foxhall Keene, captain of the newly selected American polo team, broke his collar bone in a practice session to-day. The injury to Keene means that he will not be able to participate in the international polo matches which are to take place here on June 10, and Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the old team, no doubt will take his place.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Following a day of intense heat, when the mercury reached 91 degrees, Chicago today awoke facing a temperature of 42, a drop of 49 degrees in less than 24 hours.

The quick weather change began when a 50-mile wind struck the city, tearing off roofs, breaking down signs, smashing plate-glass windows and sinking boats.

WILSON MAY IN PERSON REPLY TO CHARGE

Says He May Cast Aside Official Title to Defend Himself Against Attack.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—As a result of the attack of Senator Townsend, of Michigan, on the "lobbying" of President Wilson, the Chief Executive to-day is considering casting aside his official title and testifying before the senatorial investigation committee as a private citizen, both as to what he knows of the lobbying interests and also to defend himself against the attacks of Republican Senators.

Senator Townsend's charges that the President himself is lobbying for the passage of the Underwood tariff bill have aroused great resentment at the White House. Secretary to the President Tumulty to-day said while he did not consider the Townsend charges specific enough to warrant an official reply from the President of the United States, he thought it likely that the President will testify as a private citizen.

Before deciding on such a step, however, the President will consult with several of his Senatorial advisers, and it is considered probable at the White House that he will appear before the lobby committee suddenly and without warning. It is admitted that his testimony would be sensational in the extreme because he made a number of careful investigations of the lobby situation before issuing his denunciation of the lobbyists, which started the Congressional investigation.

Officials Defend President.

White House officials deny without reservation the charge that the President has used the "big stick of patronage" to force the adoption of his views or to obtain votes for the tariff bill. If this charge be pressed the White House is prepared to produce a list of the patronage already granted, which will show that Senators who have announced that they intend to vote against the bill have received exactly the same treatment in the matter of appointments as have those who intend to support the measure.

Committee Against Recalling Senators.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Democratic Senators on the Overman lobby investigating committee to-day expressed the opinion that the admission of Senator Townsend that he had no specific information on which to base his accusation of lobbying against President Wilson has made it unnecessary to recall Senators who have testified.

"I see no reason for recalling those Senators who have testified," said Senator Reed, acting chairman of the investigating committee. "Senator Townsend's charge was based simply on the interest of the administration in the tariff bill. He has admitted that this interest was natural and that the acts of the administration merely followed precedents established by the parties in power since the creation of republican government. Personally, I shall not request any Senator to again testify on this matter."

Senator Walsh, the other Democratic member present to-day, seconded this view. Senators Cummins and Nelson were inclined to differ and Cummins has announced that he will bring to the attention of the committee facts regarding the shadowing of legislators by detectives. It is believed he will ask the recall of several Senators to question them along this line.

Motorcycle Elopers Win Race to Marry

WAYNESBORO, GA., June 7.—Eluding parents and outwitting friends, Miss Elizabeth McElmurray, sixteen years old, and Heyward Fulcher, also sixteen, were married after a chase that lasted for eighteen hours, in North Augusta, S. C., last night at 7 o'clock.

They started Thursday evening on a motorcycle, which gave out. Fulcher then secured his father's horse and buggy, dodged pursuing automobiles and reached Augusta about daybreak. They rested in a house eight miles from Augusta until afternoon, when they telephoned for a car and went to the Baptist Church parsonage in North Augusta, where the Rev. George White performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony they returned to Augusta and are the guests of his sister, Mrs. Morgan Gordon.

Snow After Record Hot Day in Chicago

CHICAGO, June 7.—Snow fell in Chicago to-day, fourteen hours after the season's warmest temperature of 96 degrees was registered. The falling of snowflakes lasted ten minutes in Austin, a suburb of Chicago.

A 40-mile gale direct from the north sent the mercury down 47 degrees in fifteen hours here. Many persons were hurt in the windstorm, and property damage estimated at several thousand dollars was caused.

MILAN, ITALY, June 7.—The heat throughout this part of Italy is greater than anything known in recent years. An enormous number of suicides are being reported as a result.

Twelve suicides in one day in this city is the record never before equaled. Hundreds are prostrated, and unless relief comes son a great many will die.

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"We can not too cordially reciprocate Ambasasdor Page's pleasant words."

The Evening Standard says:

"It is good to see the power of the friendly feeling existing between the two nations thus recognized."

FRANK DEFENSE TO MAKE FIGHT ON CONLEY

who drew the staple from the back door and thereby made his escape from the building, either by way of Madison Avenue or Forsyth Street.

The missing purse that Mary Phagan is known to have had in her hand when she left home, and in which she is supposed to have put her money just received from Frank, has never been found, although Conley has been careful enough to account for her hat and her shoe.

Undoubtedly, the defense has been very busy, while the State's officers have been talking.

Reticent and silent as the grave as to the theory of the crime to be advanced in defense of Frank, it now is known that it will be sweeping, sensational and complete.

State Faces Strong Defense.

Whether it will come as a tremendous surprise to the prosecution, or whether something of the magnitude and scope of it has leaked through to the Solicitor and the police within the past 24 hours, is problematical.

The sudden clamping down of the lid at detective headquarters and the announcement that no more talking would be done there, either for the State or anybody else, is viewed by many as a circumstance tending to show that the State at last has come to a full realization of the fact that Frank's defense will be thorough and complete in detail.

Whereas up to yesterday any sort of an interview might be had for the asking of the detective, to-day nothing whatever may be had.

As silent as the defense has been, it has nothing by way of silence on the State to-day.

Frank's Character.

Frank's previous good character, his fine business reputation, his happy family relations, his ordinary habits of life and his everyday methods of conducting himself will be thrown fearlessly into the scales.

It has been determined for him to leave nothing unsaid and to leave nothing undone that may tend to clear fully and completely and to free him for all time from responsibility for this crime or any knowledge of it.

Besides the technical correctness of Frank's defense, his lawyers will undertake to show how impossible it would have been for him to have done what the negro accuses him of, under the negro's own statement.

Conley's affidavits will be reduced to absurdities, so the defense now believes. He not only will be thrown out of court upon a strict legal showing, but he will be grimly laughed out.

To Attack Conley.

His general character will be put in evidence, his drinking habits established, and his opportunity to have killed Mary Phagan completely demonstrated.

Attorney Rosser is known, despite his silence, to have determined not only upon Frank's complete acquittal, but upon Conley's future conviction.

The foregoing in brief outline, is the defense of Leo Frank now being framed up in surprising detail.

If the defense can establish what it now unquestionably hopes to and believes it may, Frank's acquittal seems a foregone conclusion.

Of course, the State still is standing pat on its theory that Frank committed the crime, but undoubtedly is more or less disturbed by the surprising nature of the defense that has leaked out, even to the extent indicated, and is preparing to meet that defense accordingly.

WOOL MAGNATE ACQUITTED OF CONSPIRACY

BOSTON, June 7.—"Not guilty" for William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, was the verdict of the jury in the Lawrence dynamite case returned in the Suffolk Superior Court at 9:55 o'clock to-day, after the jury had been out since 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge dog fancier, was found guilty on two counts.

The three defendants were tried jointly upon charges in fifteen counts of conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence during the big textile strike of last year.

The court room was crowded when the jury came in. The three defendants were sitting outside the rail. Wood was chatting with his counsel, members of his family and friends at the left side of the room. Atteaux was sitting by Wood.

The jurymen were pale and disheveled, like men who had wrestled all night in earnest argument.

Probe Jury Tampering.

Even before the jury reported, District Attorney Pelletier set on foot a rigid investigation of the charges of Juror Morris Shuman that he had been approached with an offer of a good job or of $300 if he would "vote right" in the trial.

The police have the names of six men they believe to be connected with the case. John Doe warrants were to be asked for, and one or more of these men were expected to be arrested before night. When Assistant Clerk John Campbell called each defendant by name the three men rose and stood inside the rail. Then the clerk called for the verdict from the foreman of the jury, saying:

"What say you as to Mr. Wood on the first count?"

"Not guilty," replied Foreman Wesser, distinctly.

The verdicts on the defendant counts followed in order, the result in each count being given first for Wood, then for Atteaux, then for Collins.

Six Counts Against Each.

The indictment charged each man in six counts with conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence in the big textile strike in order to discredit the strikers. The defendant counts were practically different descriptions of the same act. The reading of the verdicts took fully three minutes. The tabulated result was as follows:

Wood was found not guilty on all six counts.

The jury disagreed on Atteaux on all but the sixth count, and that count was not considered, because Judge Crosby had directed the jury to return verdicts of not guilty for all three defendants on the sixth count.

Collins was found guilty on the first and second counts and not guilty on the other four.

The defendants had to wait until fifteen counts were reported upon before each man knew how his separate case stood in the eyes of the law and the jury.

ANOTHER VICTIM IS CLAIMED IN PAINTER CASE

By COLE E. MORGAN.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 7.—While no new light has been shed on the mystery in the death of E. O. Painter immediately after he had taken out $1,000,000 life insurance, that case has a tragic result in the death of John Stricker Coles, which is attributed directly to worry over the affair.

Mr. Coles, a brother of A. P. Coles, the Atlanta banker; Mrs. Stewart Phinizy, of Augusta; Mrs. J. D. Twiggs, of Albany, and Mrs. J. J. Talley, of Columbia, S. C., was general agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which issued policies on Painter's life totaling $190,000, and which refused him $50,000 additional on the ground that he was overinsured. These applications had gone through the Jacksonville office. The Equitable was one of those active in investigating Painter's death. This company ranked next to the Mutual in the amount of insurance on Painter.

His Death a Surprise.

Coles had been in bad health for several months. The Painter mystery caused him much worry, as it did the agents of other companies interested. A few days ago, while the Painter investigation was in progress, he was forced to take his bed, but his illness was not considered serious, and it was stated at his office only Friday afternoon that he was expected at his desk within a few days. However, before the day was over he was stricken with a heart attack and died almost immediately.

The announcement of his death today came as a real shock in Jacksonville business circles, for Coles was one of the most popular men here. He had been a resident of Jacksonville for nine years. He was 57 years old. His wife and eight children survive him.

Rush Active Investigation.

The Mutual, Equitable and New York Life companies have been most active in the investigation of Painter's death. Each of these companies has had an adjuster here directly representing the home office. Some of the companies have had inspectors on the ground, while two or three have been represented only by their resident general agents. The Mutual, being the largest company interested, has probably gone more thoroughly into the case than any other.

The local insurance men are reticent in discussing the details of the investigations made for their companies until the report on the autopsy and chemical examination of Painter's organs reaches the Coroner's jury. They fear to disclose any of their information lest it prejudice their cases if the anticipated court contests over the payment of the policies materialize.

State to Take No Action.

The State of Florida, through the Criminal Court, is taking and will take no part in the Painter inquest, declared William A. Hallowes, State's Attorney, to-day. "There is no suspicion whatever that Mr. Painter's death was due to any act of violence on the part of another," he said, "and for that reason there is no occasion for an inquest as far as the Criminal Court is concerned. The law specifies that inquests are necessary only where there is suspicion of death being due directly or indirectly to a criminal action on the part of another. No such condition applies in this case, and I so stated to the Coroner's jury. The Coroner has authority to call an inquest when he sees fit, and to report the findings to the Criminal Court for the action of the Grand Jury, but I will state positively that the Painter case will not be presented to that body.

"Mr. Painter died either from natural causes, by accidentally drowning or he committed suicide. No second party had any hand in his death. The question is one between the insurance companies and the representatives of the dead man's family. The State of Florida has no interest in it."

Attorney Hallowes is a law graduate of the University of Georgia, class of 1903.

No Report Yet.

The report of analysis made of Painter's vital organs by Baltimore chemists did not reach Jacksonville to-day. Cashier Wheeler, of the Barnett National Bank, to which institution it was ordered sent, said it had not reached the bank nor had there been any message received as to when it would come. Coroner C. D. Abbott said he had received a message that the report would leave Baltimore on Monday. That means it will be next Wednesday before it will be available for action by the Coroner's jury. After completing their tests the chemists needed additional time to write and certify under oath to their report.

Dr. J. E. Boyd and Dr. P. C. Perry, the physicians representing the Painter family, who performed the autopsy and who went to Baltimore to witness the chemical analysis, arrived in Jacksonville Friday night, after an absence of fifteen days on this case.

The result of the Baltimore analysis is a closely guarded secret as far as Jacksonville is concerned. Drs. Boyd and Perry and representatives of the Painter family are the only persons here who know what took place in Baltimore, and they absolutely refuse to discuss the matter to-day. Dr. Perry said: "I will answer no questions whatever. It is no use asking them."

Clubwomen Plan City Beautiful

Speaker Calls Atlanta Dirty

Other Civic Movements Advocated

Atlanta clubwomen have inaugurated a movement for a city beautiful, following an address by Mrs. W. P. Pattillo to the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

Having just returned from a trip abroad, Mrs. Pattillo discussed European methods of beautifying municipalities, to which she devoted considerable time and study, and gave vivid descriptions of results as she saw them. She selected for her subject, "How Other Cities Are Made Beautiful and Attractive," and sought to interest the clubwomen of Atlanta in co-operative measures which have transformed continental cities into veritable gardens.

"Atlanta is one of the dirtiest places I have seen," Mrs. Pattillo said, as she contrasted the city with other places she had visited in Europe and America. Then she described the city's natural advantages and asked the clubwomen to concentrate their efforts toward developing them. Her auditors, representing 84 clubs with 8,000 members, expressed pleasure at her remarks and pledged themselves to work together to carry out her suggestions. It was evident to all present that Atlanta will be made a city beautiful if her clubwomen have the necessary influence.

Industrial Home Suggested.

Civic movements received most attention at the hands of the Federation members. Prominent among them was a report of the committee on resolutions, made by Mrs. James Jackson, containing a recommendation for the establishment of an industrial home for wayward girls. The Federation indorsed the resolution and announced its intention of petitioning the Georgia Legislature to establish the home. Atlanta will be suggested as the proper site for the home.

The committee was appointed upon instruction of the General Council, which adopted a resolution introduced by Councilman A. D. Thompson and subsequently concurred in a similar recommendation by the Finance Committee.

This committee will investigate the question of a bond issue in all its ramifications—whether Atlanta shall authorize a bond issue at all, and if so, how much and for what purpose.

Following is the personnel of the committee: Councilman A. D. Thompson of the Fourth Ward, chairman; Alderman J. H. Harwell, of the First Ward; Councilman T. J. Lynch, of the Second Ward; Councilman O. H. Hall, of the Third Ward; Alderman J. W. Maddox, of the Fifth Ward; Alderman J. R. Nutting, of the Sixth Ward; Councilman A. R. Colcord, of the Seventh Ward; Councilman W. G. Humphrey, of the Eighth Ward; Alderman John S. Candler, of the Ninth ward; Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, of the Tenth Ward; Courtland S. Winn, former Mayor of Atlanta; Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor; F. J. Paxon, former president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and A. Frank Liebman, real estate operator and capitalist.

The prevailing opinion is that the committee will recommend the issuance of bonds approximating the sum of $4,000,000 or $5,000,000.

7 Years Enough to Finish School, Says President Judson

CHICAGO, June 7.—Shortening of the grammar school, high school and college courses in order to put young men and women into business and other activities at an early age was advocated to-day by Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, the only witness summoned before the Illinois Senate White Slave Committee hearings to-day.

Lieutenant Governor O'Hara, questioning President Judson, asked:

"How long is it after a young man leaves college before he is financially able to marry?"

"About three or four years," replied President Judson.

"Do you think the shortening of the courses in schools would make the young man earlier efficient?"

"Yes, especially in the case of the young man who is going into business. I believe a boy or girl should spend about seven years going through the grades and high school. I believe it will ultimately be made six years instead of twelve, as at present. There are too many things taught in the high schools. They fritter away too much time. The first university year is a repetition of high school work."

"I owe my education to the fact that I ran away from my teachers while I was still young enough to learn something. I think the last two years of the present high school course should be devoted to training students for active business life."

PENDLETON SAYS BEAVERS MIGHT BE IMPEACHED

That Chief of Police James L. Beavers and Policeman James H. Kirke are subject to impeachment if the facts in the temporary restraining order of Mrs. N. P. Powell, who has been sentenced to four months in jail, are substantiated in court, was the startling declaration of Superior Court Judge John T. Pendleton in discussing the case Saturday morning.

The judge defended the State courts in granting the temporary injunction and said that Chief Beavers had misstated the facts if he said the courts were interfering with his breaking up a disorderly house. He said the injunction distinctly read that the police were only restrained from making the woman move from the house and in no other way balked any action that might be contemplated.

He said the police were at liberty to raid as often as they saw fit and make a case against the woman every time she violated the law.

"In the petition for an injunction the woman said Kirke made an improper proposal to her," said Judge Pendleton. "She alleged that when she ordered him away he threatened to have her place raided every night until she was forced to move. She said Kirke had told Beavers of having made the improper proposal and had poisoned his mind against her.

"If she can prove that Beavers knew of Kirke's proposal and his threats and permitted himself to be influenced, the two are subject to impeachment.

"Judge Bell granted this particular temporary restraining order, but I would have done the same thing had I been on the bench that day. The law allows no latitude or discretion in this matter. A woman comes into court and makes a sworn statement that her home is not a disorderly house and that she anticipates irreparable wrong and injury on the part of the police in forcing her to move. If the court were to wait until the matter could be tried, the injury would be done.

"A judge can not do otherwise than believe the sworn statement. The law demands that protection be granted. There is a wide difference between a temporary and a permanent injunction, and it is more than likely the permanent injunction would not be granted.

"This particular injunction has been pending in the courts a little longer than the ordinary. It has been called three or four times, but on each occasion the attorneys for the city or the defense were not available and it had to be postponed. It was called Friday, but the lawyers were in the other court trying the case. It will be heard at an early date."

POLICE BOARD WANTS PROBE TO GO DEEP

McEachern Declares Vice Inquiry Will Prove Beavers and Lanford Have Done Full Duty.

"If the vice probe in Atlanta is carried to a complete conclusion," said Commissioner J. N. McEachern, of the Police Board, Saturday, "it will be found that Atlanta is one of the cleanest and most moral cities in the United States, the assertion of the Rev. Mr. Batten to the contrary notwithstanding.

"The Grand Jury will find that Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford have done their whole duty, and that not one single instance of corruption or graft will be found. I have been a member of the Police Board for the past six years, and I have watched the department closely. I say without hesitation that I believe in the absolute integrity and honesty of both chiefs. I am confident that if there had been any corruption or graft in the department it would have been unearthed by the board, which is composed of reputable citizens and business men serving in the interest of the city and the welfare of the people.

Board Trusts Chiefs.

"Every member of the board is more than anxious to have the probe reach the very bottom. We know the men and we know the chiefs and we have the utmost confidence in them.

"An old saw is that 'where there is so much smoke there must be some fire,' and this has been quoted by many persons since the vice probe was begun. The saying may be true; in fact, I am rather inclined to the opinion that it is true in this case, but not in the manner in which it is suggested by those who would discredit the Police Department. The smoke has been raised by those who discredit the department, and the fire is the desire of those individuals to to bring reproach on the men who have dared to do right and enforce the law. The investigation will reveal the fact that the smoke does not arise from the department, and that there is no fire there, but on the contrary, from those who would turn Atlanta over to the lawless element and the mercy of those who value a dollar more than they do a human soul."

Commissioner McEachern unhesitatingly stated that the morality of the city had been improved by the efforts of the police officials to enforce the law, and that in this they had his support and approval.

"The question of segregation is one that the majority of the members of the board hesitate to express an opinion upon, but a large majority will stand back of Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford in the discharge of their duties, and will abide by the action of the lawmaking body, their one and only duty being to enforce the law as laid down in the City Code."

Whitewashing Effort Fails.

That a faction in the Grand Jury tried to whitewash the vice probe shortly after the first witness was examined, became known Saturday. A vote was taken on the question and the probe continued. Two members of the body, at least, will insist on the inquiry being continued when the jury meets next Tuesday morning.

Immediately after Colonel Thomas B. Felder testified and left the room a juryman offered a resolution that the Grand Jury go on record as saying "Atlanta is better morally than it has ever been and vice is effectively stamped out." The motion was defeated by the necessary twelve votes, and other witnesses were called. Several times before adjournment Thursday the same person is said to have offered the resolution and each time it was defeated.

A sensational development is expected Tuesday when a member of the jury, who will insist on the probe being continued, will ask the foreman to summon a man high up in police circles to tell what he knows of vice conditions and what knowledge the police have of them.

That the probe will be continued is practically an established fact Saturday. Since adjournment Thursday Foreman L. H. Beck has received numerous communications from citizens asking that vice conditions be more thoroughly inquired into.

Many Offer Information.

Some of the communications give the names of witnesses who will give the jury addresses and "positive information."

Several names have been furnished that were not in the hands of the jury when it adjourned Thursday. One of them is Mrs. Nell Powell, of 95 Spring Street, who was sentenced to four months imprisonment Friday for running a lewd house. She expressed a willingness to furnish the jury with the addresses of some 50 or 60 houses in Atlanta and over a hundred names. She will in all probability be called before the jury Tuesday morning and asked to furnish the list that the witnesses may be called for a meeting later in the week.

The movement for new high schools gained impetus Saturday when public-spirited citizens turned with interest toward the plan as advocated by Colonel Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, in his two addresses at the graduation exercises of the Boys' and Girls' High Schools, in which he urged a $5,000,000 bond issue by the city of Atlanta, $2,000,000 for the express purpose of building high schools.

There is not an adequate high school in the entire city of Atlanta. It's up to the people, and time City Councilmen are urged to wake up and do their duty. Atlanta has a credit upon which any city government could borrow $5,000,000, declared Colonel Daley, president of the Board of Education, Friday night when he presented high school diplomas to 64 young Americans.

"The current revenue from taxation," said Colonel Daley, "is not sufficient to care for the maintenance of the high schools, and it's not sufficient to take care of the current expense of the other important departments.

Asks $2,000,000 for Schools.

"Atlanta citizens should see that city officials work for a $5,000,000 bond issue, and of that amount, as president of the Board of Education, I want to ask for $2,000,000 for the purpose of erecting adequate and abundant plants for high school students. The remainder of the money from such a bond issue should go to the other departments. We need additional grammar schools and many improvements. All this is because Atlanta is growing so rapidly, and yet people who are not in constant touch with these matters are prone to disregard them."

The graduating exercises of the Boys' High School in the Grand Opera House were more than ordinarily impressive, and members of the faculty said they indicated that young men are thinking deeply and are taking an interest in matters which ten years ago the average high school graduate had absolutely no conception of.

"The growth and development of the nation is characterized in Theodore Roosevelt's advocacy of the strenous life," declared Bascom H. Torrance in his valedictory. "But already has a reaction set in. There is now a demand for intellectual activity and development. This intellectual activity is characterized in Woodrow Wilson's policy, which has impressed upon the demagogues RESTRAINT.

Conservation His Policy.

"Conservation of careful, thoughtful and helpful actions is President Wilson's ideal. His policy is applicable to every question which requires foresight and thought, regardless of political objects or interests.

"Conditions to-day are greater than ever before. From now on will justice and moderation supplant knavery and intrigue."

"With modern cynicism obliterated will come the great question, the human philosophy of life."

The Grand Opera House was packed. In the balcony sat High School boys, underclassmen, each thinking about the day when he should graduate. In the boxes sat members of the Boad of Education and their families. Throughout the crowded house sat proud fathers and mothers whose interest centered in just one of the 64 boys on the stage.

After a fitting prayer by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Superintendent of Public Schools W. M. Slaton announced that, owing to a change in the course of the Technological High School, which had been extended to a four-year course, there would be no graduates from that school this year as in former years.

Student Orators Please.

Mr. Slaton then introduced Sam Eplan, of the commercial department, who delivered an oration on "The Gospel of Service." Eplan's oration was interesting and breezy and struck a true note. The speaker advocated honesty and uprightness, fairness and equality in all business transactions. Joseph H. Stanfiel was valedictorian and acquitted himself well.

"Universal Peace" was the subject discussed in the oration of Roy W. Manning, an eloquent plea for the abolition of war.

An oration by Ernest H. Lowenthal on "Woman's Suffrage" aroused genuine interest. The way he championed woman's rights certainly put him in strong with the audience, for he was given round after round of applause.

The B. H. S. and T. H. S. Orchestra rendered a number of choice selections. The boys played excellently and were encored time and again.

Presentation of diplomas was then made by Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education. Each boy was applauded as he received his sheepskin.

Medals and Scholarships.

The announcement and delivery of medals and scholarships was made by Hon. Edgar Watkins. The winners of these prizes had been kept secret.

The Holzman medal, given by A. Holzman, the jeweler, for excellence in scholarship, was awarded to Bascom H. Torrance.

Medal given by the Atlanta Chapter, Daughers of 1812, for improvement in physical culture was awarded to Edwin P. Lochridge.

The following scholarships were awarded:

Washington and Lee University, Sam Armistead; Mercer University, Charles B. Cotney; Harold Hirsch $150 scholarship to University of Georgia, Herbert O. Calhoun; Price Greenleaf cash scholarship to Harvard University, Bascom Torrance; Davidson University, divided between George Hoyt and Evelyn Hamilton; University of North Carolina, Roy W. Manning; University of Chicago, Eugene Johnson; Tulane University, Spencer A. Folsom; Emory College, Charles Candler; University of the South, Lewis Rosser.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO REPEAT COMEDY

Second Performance To Be for Charity — Trip to Other Cities Planned.

The Players' Club is planning to give another performance of "The Importance of Being Earnest" in the near future. The second performance will be given under the auspices of a local charity, the selection of which is in the hands of a committee composed of Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Robert L. Cooney, Lamar Hill and Hamilton Douglas.

While the performance of Tuesday evening was one of the most successful ever given by the club, in an artistic sense, the attendance was not so good as formerly, and this second performance is planned to give the public an opportunity to see one of the best plays given by the club, and at the same time to give assistance to some worthy charity of the city.

The club also expects to take "The Importance of Being Earnest" to other cities, with the notable cast which presents the comedy here, including Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Lamar Hill, Marsh Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Frank Taylor and others.

Some time ago the Savannah Dramatic Club made a proposition to give its recent successful play in Atlanta if the Atlanta club would play there. Birmingham also has invited the Players' Club to that city, and probably several other Georgia towns will have the opportunity of seeing Atlanta's talented amateurs in the well-known Wilde comedy.

The wonderful City Life Section of The Sunday American will be better than ever on Sunday. Mutt and Jeff, and Powers, the great cartoonist, with dozens of other fun-makers, will have exclusive features.

The man, William Donovan, confessed.

"She was dressed all in white," he said, "and she was so darned pretty I just couldn't help kissing her."

City of Flowers Is Rich's Ideal

School Contest Has High Purpose

Conceived the Idea of Organizing Playground-Recreation Centers While Traveling in Europe.

To make every school yard in Atlanta beautiful and attractive.

To inculcate into the minds of the children a love for flowers and the beautiful things that grow that they will carry into their daily lives and into their homes, and eventually make possible the dream of civic enthusiasts—the city beautiful.

These are the reasons, Walter H. Rich said Saturday, that prompted him to begin his campaign for more attractive school yards and offer prizes each year to the school showing the best results.

Hopes to Have all Enter.

The presentation of two prizes of $50 each, offered by Mr. Rich, to the Davis Street and the English Avenue Schools Thursday marked the close of the second year of the contest. The results have been wonderful. Though not all of the city schools have entered the contest, a majority of them have taken part, and many of the most barren school yards have been transformed by the children into flower gardens. Next year Mr. Rich hopes to have every school in the city entered in the contest, and expects greater results each year.

"I got the idea of trying to improve Atlanta's school yards," said Mr. Rich, "while I was traveling abroad. In Europe the school yards are made as attractive as possible and are utilized as recreation centers when not otherwise in use.

Has Two Objects in View.

"When I became a member of the Board of Education, I wanted to do something more for the schools than the mere routine business of the board meetings, so I thought of the contest. It has run two years, and I am more than satisfied with results.

"By offering the prizes and getting the children interested in the work, I hope to accomplish two things. One is to make the yards of the school beautiful and attractive to the children. Boys and girls do not like to go to places that are dirty and barren. I think every school yard in the country ought to have flowers planted wherever they will grow, always, provided, of course, that the children shall be left plenty of room in which to play. If it comes to a choice between the flowers and a playground, the playground should be the first consideration. But in most school yards there is room for both.

Wants City of Flowers.

"I hope also to foster a love for the beautiful that will eventually make of Atlanta a city of flowers. The ideas taught the children now will develop and expand as they grow older, and in the end we will have citizens who will take pride in making their homes and their city attractive."

Mr. Rich's plan has been indorsed by the Board of Education, though the prizes are offered out of his own pocket. He also has been assisted by the ladies of the Atlanta Art Institute, and a committee, headed by Mrs. Joseph Moody, made the selections of the winning schools for 1913 and aided in awarding the prizes.

Union Maids Insist Milady Wash Dishes

CHICAGO, June 7.—These "Rules for Mistresses" have been presented by the new Household Workers' Association:

Wash your own dishes on the girl's day off—don't leave them for her to do when she comes back.

Give the girl a full day off every week, and every other week let it be Sunday.

Get dressed before 8 p. m., for no lady's maid will work after that hour.

Days off will begin after breakfast, and breakfast will be served at 7:30 a. m.

If maids are out late at night, a light shall be left burning for them.

Maids shall be given vacations after six months of service for the same family.

If the mistresses refuse to subscribe to the rules a strike is threatened.

Peary Tells Paris Of South Pole Plan

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 7.—All Paris newspapers to-day agree that the Parisians have accorded Rear Admiral Peary and his family a triumphant reception that few living personalities have ever received. Admiral Peary said his future plans were rather unsettled, but indicated that he hopes to be able to outfit an American expedition for a trip to the South Pole.

"I believe the expedition should approach the pole from an opposite direction to that taken by Scott and Amundsen," said the explorer. "The result of my expedition will be to draw up a map of the South Polar

CANDLER COUNTY BOOSTERS ON HAND EARLY

Opening of Headquarters First Indication That Legislative Session Is Near.

The first concrete evidence of the fact that the Legislature is about to get together in Atlanta came to light to-day, when the boomers for the new county of Candler secured headquarters in the Kimball House and prepared to open war in earnest for their pet project.

Two handsome rooms on the parlor floor have been reserved, and literature will be shipped in by the ton for the next few days. Managers will be in charge from this time forward. Banners will be strung all around and about the lobby and the walls of the hotel, and the merits of the proposed grand young county of Candler will be shouted from the house tops, both vociferously and eloquently from this time forward.

Representative Burwell, of Hancock, who generally is thought to have the speakership pretty well sewed up, will open headquarters shortly, and both Judge John T. Allen and Senator Randolph Anderson, candidates for President of the Senate, will do likewise.

It long has been thought to be quite the fit and proper thing for candidates to have "headquarters" in Atlanta, and nine cases out of ten in the Kimball House. Sometimes, the walls and railings are far too limited in extent to accommodate the banners and things, and other devices to catch the eye of the incoming member are adopted. In all cases, however, the warfare for position and glory is merry enough in Georgia, and the incoming Legislature will have its share of excitement, no doubt.

Representative Sills, of Metter, who has in charge the fight to create Candler County, is very optimistic. Discussing the subject to-day he said:

"The Legislature is sure to create Candler County. Already we have secured pledges from 138 out of 184 members. That is well over the necessary two-thirds required in passing constitutional amendments.

"There is practically no opposition to the new county. Seven of the eight newspapers published in the territory affected are favorable to it. Indeed, they are fighting for it. The counties of Bulloch, Emanuel, and Tatnall, from which the new county will be taken, have a combined territory of 2,409 square miles, and of that it will require to create Candler only 361. This is no new proposition—we have been agitating the matter for nine years—and this year, we get it!"

The friends of A. O. Blalock, of Fayette County, more generally known as "Bud," are congratulating him on being named Collector of Internal Revenue for Georgia, notwithstanding the fact that the tip long ago came straight from Washington that he was to win the plum.

There hardly is a man in Georgia better known than Blalock, and few that have more friends. He has served in the Legislature, in both the House and the Senate, time and again and never has been defeated for office.

Mr. Blalock expects to take his office about the first day of July.

Peace reigns again over Banks' mill pond at Milltown, and its environs, the cases against a number of citizens charged with fishing in the pond without consent of the owner, having been nol-prossed in the city court at Nashville.

An agreement was reached between R. T. Berryhill, lessee of the Banks' property and each of the defendants, which was satisfactory to the court and Game Warden Mercer, with the result that Judge Christian dismissed the prosecutions.

The cases attracted much attention in the State, by reason of the newspaper interviews given out by Warden Mercer and his Deputy Boisclair, and the severe criticism of these officials by the people at Milltown. It is understood that in future people who want to fish in the pond will obtain permission from Mr. Berryhill or some of the other owners of land covered by the pond, and that Mr. Berryhill recognize permits given by other land owners.

This is about the old status of affairs, but it is not believed there will be any further trouble.

Governor Brown's final message to the Legislature is about shaped now, and will deal more or less exhaustively with many problems, solved and unsolved, coming to his attention during the term of office about to be wound up.

The Governor's message has not yet been reduced to presentatable shape, however, for it is fashioned after a manner wonderful in the extreme and Brownesque to the limit. It is written out almost entirely on the backs of used envelopes, and is entirely in pencil. The writing is so small and fine, as almost to be illegible to the naked eye, but every single letter and every group is finished as completely as if five times the space were taken up in the writing.

Governor Brown writes an amazingly plain and clear hand, but as amazingly plain and clear as it is, it is even more amazingly small. To the bottom of the document, however, he attaches a signature elaborate and imposing in the extreme. Those who have seen it never forget it.

Governor Brown's relations to the incoming administration are very cordial, and there will be nothing by way of conflict in his farewell message and the initial message of Governor Slaton, which will follow in a few days later.

Visitors to Macon nowadays will do well to go to The Telegraph office either early in the morning or very late in the afternoon if they wish to catch the Colonel on the job. Otherwise he is sure to be out at the ball park watching the game.

Two Sides to a Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THOUGH love and marriage are the dreams of every girl, happiness is not dependent on either, and often one is happiest without them.

There are two sides to the question. The girl who is looking anxiously for the coming of a lover, and who grows apprehensive when he is delayed, sees only one side. She takes no account of the look of care, unhappiness and discontent on the face of the wife. She does not see—she refuses to see—that matrimony does not always bring returns commensurate for the price one must pay.

Perhaps it may lessen the discontent of the girl who has no lover to compare the life of the woman who never marries with that of the wife.

The girl has time and opportunity for cultivating every talent with which she is endowed. The only talents the wife is given opportunity to develop are those of economy and patience.

The happiness of a nation depends on its power to dream, and this being true of the whole, is true of the part. The girl dreams of an ideal lover, and the dream is never shattered; a wife has no illusions left.

A Wife's Work.

A girl has many hours in which she has nothing disagreeable to do; but the wife finds she has more to do for the rest of her life than any man could stand up under.

The uncertainty of the girl centers around WHO is to be her husband, and is not unpleasant. The uncertainty of wifehood is WHERE he is, and is a tragedy.

The criticisms a girl receives in her home are loving and kindly; those the wife receives are less kindly, and her rewards for effort to please are less sure.

The girl walks as if she owned the earth. Ten years after she has married she will walk as if she were carrying it on her shoulders.

"If I don't marry," a girl will say, "I will be an old maid." * * * "If I hadn't married and been tied down by the cares of a husband and home," she will say some years later, "I might have won fame and fortune by developing my talents."

There is loneliness in spinsterhood, but there is also PEACE.

The girl who marries sentences herself to self-sacrifice and hard labor for life. Her only reward is Love, and could you, my dear little girl with the discontented look because your lover has not come, count up the number of wives you know who are systematically and regularly cheated out of their payments?

The girl who never marries is the one to whom opportunity is given for being the blessing and mainstay of her parents' home. There is no avenue for developing her character which matrimony grants and spinsterhood denies.

Two Sides.

There are two sides to the question One can be a happy spinster; one may be a happy wife.

The former is a question of will. The latter depends on a string of ifs long enough to encircle the globe.

I do not want my girls to care less for love, but I do want them to value more highly the greater privileges, the fewer burdens, the lighter loads, the broader opportunities and the surer peace that await the woman to whom love and marriage never come.

I want them, for their own sake, to look with less panic-stricken fright and greater sanity upon the spinster's side of the question.

Diplomatic.

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

The Mistakes of Jennie

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

By HAL COFFMAN

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never, marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take her and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's old friend, the boarding house keeper also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what anybody thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Bah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

HAL COFFMAN.

Do You Know That—

An 18-year-old boy was injured in a game of football two years ago, but after two days returned to work feeling quite well again. Last summer he had to be examined for insurance purposes, and the doctor found there was something wrong with his neck, but did not discover exactly what was the matter. A short time ago, however, the boy's neck began to give him such pain that he was made to undergo an examination under X-rays. Then the astounded physicians discovered that it was broken. They can not realize how he has lived all this time. It is a question whether a cure can be effected.

The Farmers' Association of the department of Loir-et-Cher has held at Blois a competition for agricultural workers who have brought up the largest families, all the members of which have remained "on the land." Eleven grandmothers—the youngest aged 45 and the oldest 80—presented themselves, surrounded by 95 children and 138 grandchildren. The first prize went to a woman who has had 13 children, of whom 9 are living, and 20 grandchildren.

The Czar is, among European monarchs, the one who makes the least use of the motor car. His imperial majesty, in former days, registered a vow that he would never enter such a conveyance, and although necessity occasionally compels him to break it his dislike for motors is unabated. When King Edward first took a car with him to Denmark on joining the big family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the Czar nor his grandfather, King Christian IX. could be persuaded to set foot in it.

The Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, is shortly going to be superseded by an even more splendid vessel. It is said that the new yacht was partly designed by the Kaiser himself, who adds a knowledge of shipbuilding to his varied stock of information. The vessel will take two years to build, and is not expected to be ready before the spring of 1915.

Why He Couldn't.

N American philanthropist made a business of getting jobs for men just out of jail. A notorious cracksman came to him with a letter of introduction from the clergyman.

"I've the very thing you want," said the philanthropist when the jailbird had dilated adequately and with pride upon his exploits. "I'll see my friend Briggs. Come around to-morrow morning."

The cracksman, encouraged by the prospect of honest work, appeared promptly at the appointed hour.

"You're to go to work at once," said the philanthropist. "My friend Briggs is producing a melodrama. In it is a scene where a burglar enters the room and cracks a safe. It will only take you a few minutes, and you don't have to speak a word—just execute the job with the minute detail that will make it look real. Your salary will be $50 a week."

The convict dolefully shook his head.

"Sorry I can't take the job, boss."

"Can't take it? Why, it's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it, boss. I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage."

THE COMING OF DAY.

OVER the edge of the sleeping world,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Past the gloaming where shadow is furled,
Into the chasm of darkness whirled,
Forth from the hosts of blackness hurled—
Over the purple hills;
Out of the land of the sun-rise glow,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Into the meadows of shimmering green,
Over the brooklets of glimmering sheen,
Comes glowing morning, the summer queen—
Aflame are the purple hills.

LIFE IS WORTH IT.

Life is worth it—
Worth the turmoil and the effort and the pain,
Worth the hurt and disappointment
So you make but steady gain;
If the failure of the morning
Give you strength to struggle on,
If the evening mark some progress
From the dimness of the dawn—
Life is worth it.

Life is worth it—
Though you question as the years go slipping by,
"Have I failed in every project?
Have I set my mark too high?
Does the failure of this morning
Mean I never shall attain?
Nay! The power to strive transmuteth
Every failure into gain—
Life is worth it!

Brother and Sister

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

START out a girl with a dollar, and she will come home wearing it. Start out a boy with one, and he will come home eating it.

A girl's interest in a baby is the same as that her brother manifests in a dog.

About all a girl does for her little brother is to scream about his dirty hands every time she looks at him, though it is as natural for a boy to have dirty hands as it is for a cat to have fits.

The quarrels between brothers are over the larger share in something to eat, but when sisters quarrel, it is because one wore something belonging to the other.

It may indicate deep thought when a girl scratches her head, but they don't look at it that way when it is a boy.

Here of late a girl is permitted to read in the parlor fiction worse than that her brother used to peruse surreptitiously in the barn aloft.

It has always been the custom to compare a boy with a weed and a girl with a flower.

A girl doesn't know it, but if someone cut off her hair, put a hundred freckles on her face, and a tan spot on the end of her nose, she would be a duplicate of the younger brother whose looks she so plainly despises.

When brother and sister go to a party together, sister doesn't seem to have any recollection of anything that happened beyond the manner in which her brother misbehaved.

There never was a girl who couldn't give the impression when away from her home that her parents are wealthy, but a boy can't do it.

When a girl is 16 she has the right of way all over the road. Her mother and father promptly side-track when they see her coming, the only one daring a collision being her younger brother. And he long shows the effects of it!

Individual pies, strawberry shortcakes, etc., appeal to a girl, but never to a boy, because they give him no opportunity to get a larger piece than his sister. There is no element of chance in the individual form of pastry.

After sister has expressed her appreciation, brother's thanks sound as cold as yesterday morning's pancakes.

Very Important.

The glib-tongued agent was trying to persuade Mr. Wipedunks to buy a dictionary.

"Its the latest thing out," he said; "up to date in every particular, contains more words than any other, has all the technical and scientific terms that have come into use in the last ten years, and there isn't a feature missing that goes to make a first-class work of the kind."

"Let me look at it a minute," said Mr. Wipedunks.

The agent handed it over, and Mr. W. inspected it briefly. Then he handed it back.

"Young man," he said, "you can't work that book on me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It hain't got no copious index."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young man from the mountains, who says that he never played on any baseball club and that he has never seen a game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta club, to give him a try-out. At batting and fielding practice he creates a sensation, The Atlanta Georgian prints a whole page of snapshots of him and his fame spreads throughout the country.

In the meantime he has become very friendly with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a wealthy timber speculator. Forrest Caln, an admirer of Mildred, becomes jealous of Gordon and attempts to play him a trick and gets soundly thrashed. Gordon owns a large tract of land in the mountains, between two tracts owned by Mr. Deery and Caln, who need Gordon's property to carry out a land scheme.

The Boston Nationals and other big league clubs stop at Atlanta for exhibition games on their way North and Gordon Kelly becomes the baseball sensation of the hour. Scouts who come to see him work try to get him away from the Atlanta club, and then send wild telegrams to their owners, imploring them to come to Atlanta by the first train and do their own bidding. Nearly all the big league magnates come, and President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, announces that, while disposed to reject all offers, his club felt the necessity of living up to the obligations of organized baseball and would sell Gordon Kelly's release to the best advantage of the stockholders of the club. In a practice game with a big league team, Kelly covers himself with glory. He is injured and Mildred rushes on the field to his aid. The newspapers are filled with accounts of the affair.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Readers of newspapers are aware, without being told, that in reports of any great public gathering, any extraordinary crime, any $100,000 diamond robbery, any uncommon disaster, it is the newspapers that set the pace in gathering and distributing the news of the event. This fact is lost sight of in this narrative. In this particular case the newspapers told all about Gordon Kelly, but later certain things happened to him that the newspapers were never able to learn, and they will be told in the course of this story for the first time.

The news of Gordon Kelly's great feat in his last game in Atlanta created a profound impression throughout the baseball world. There was no end of praise for the player and of sympathy for the Boston club, which, through the accident, had lost the services for many weeks at least of a man for whom it had just paid that unheard-of price of $50,000. The championship races in the two big leagues had started and were well under way. In the American League, of which Gordon Kelly was now a member, although not able to play, the Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland clubs had taken the lead, while the New York and Boston clubs were off to a bad start. Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, although himself limping around with an injured leg, bemoaned his hard luck.

"I have the best outfield in the country as it is," he said, "but I could use that Gordon Kelly just the same. Gee, I wish he would hurry up and get well before my club is out of the running."

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, cursed his fate. "If we had only landed Gordon Kelly and if he hadn't broken his leg, we would be right up there fighting with the leaders," he declared.

The word IF is 90 per cent of baseball, it may be remarked.

Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, said:

"Comiskey ought to have landed Gordon Kelly. All I need is that fellow, besides Big Ed Walsh, to win the American League pennant."

On May 10 the championship season in the two big leagues was a month old and Gordon Kelly was still in the hospital at Atlanta. Mildred Deery was still "out of town." That was all the information the patient could get from the Deery residence. The Atlanta club made a short trip to other cities and returned to home grounds for a brief stay. Bill Smith, Long Tom Morrissey and other members of the team paid daily visits to see their former comrade, who got around the hospital grounds on crutches, but who could not be induced to go out to the park and see a ball game.

Something on His Mind.

"Something's on his mind," declared Long Tom in the club house one day. "He doesn't seem to want to talk about baseball much. And it would not surprise me," he added, emphatically, "to learn that that girl that rushed out on the field and took his head in her lap is what's troubling him. Well, I don't know as I can blame him, at that. She was some peacherino, you hear me!"

"He'll get over it," remarked Bill Smith, sagely. "As soon as his leg gets strong enough for him to run the bases you'll see him up at the plate with that bat of his and he'll forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey had nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and, true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred now knew he was a ball player, he argued to himself. She did not disapprove, else why did she rush on the ball field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelly asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things, and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the time being, sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the $50,000 ball player, became an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She complained of a headache and retired at once to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had well-nigh exhausted her, she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole downstairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove, nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7:30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife.

Under ordinary conditions Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the astounding escapade of his daughter. Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery, at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked, in conclusion.

Not So Shocked.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred liked the young man. Far better than her husband, she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I will speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll——." He slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have it. I was planning to go up in the mountains with a surveyor to-morrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has probably moved in by this time. Instead of going to-morrow, I will leave by the noon train to-day and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something, as I want to see her."

Mildred Approves Plan.

"Wait a minute, please, dear. Mildred isn't a child, and you can not force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure, and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains, and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two, and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains, and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Car Full of Supplies.

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened), ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days), and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes; drove to his home, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of kissed his wife, sped to the depot, the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his vast project, Deery had erected a large cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the main road and close to a roaring brook that, a mile or two beyond, ran into Pew Creek, which flowed down past the settlement. It was a beautiful spot, and Mildred cried her delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself dashed up to the bungalow.

The superintendent's name was Shephard, and his family consisted of his wife and boy, a lad of about fifteen years. Mildred promptly became good friends with them all and declared she never wanted to go back to Atlanta again, whereat her father chuckled in his sleeve.

"If you like hunting and fishing, Miss Deery, I can show you a lot of fun up here," said Elmer Shephard, the lad of fifteen years.

"I should enjoy it immensely, Elmer," replied Mildred, "but you will have to teach me."

The boxes and barrels of things Deery had bought in Atlanta arrived on teams before sundown, and Mildred expressed her surprise at the bulk of it. Her father hastened to explain.

"Well, you see," he said, "you will like this place so well that you will be running up every little while from Atlanta, so I just thought I would put in a supply of things to make you comfortable. If there is anything you don't see that you want let me know, and I will have it sent up from the city."

So Mildred settled down to live the joys of mountain life. But in these Georgia mountains, in this wild and solitary country, she came upon an adventure that completely changed the course of her existence.

To Be Continued Monday.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THERE was a queer old bug up to our house last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It seems that he and father used to go to school together, and the old gent ran into him by accident yesterday afternoon. He didn't know that his school chum had changed so since boyhood, and before he got wise to the change he asked his friend up to the house.

"I was kind of surprised at the general appearance of Pa's friend. He was one of them tall, slim college professor looking kind of chaps, and when anybody spoke to him he gave a little jump sideways like a scared kitten. His manner was that timid and gentle you would have swore, George, that his wife had a dozen kind of Indian signs on him. It seemed kind of funny to the folks to have Pa chumming around with such like, because goodness knows most of his intimate friends are big necked and copper lined enough to make their way in this speedy world of ours. After knowing Bull McCabe and Marty Regan and the rest of Pa's husky comrades, it seemed funny to entertain a shrinking violet like this gent of which I am speaking of."

A Long Story Teller.

"Well, come to the point," said the Head Barber, "and don't be puttering around all the forenoon. You are worse than one of those long story-tellers."

"I wouldn't converse with you at all, ever, if I didn't have to, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "Most of the time you are awful uninteresting anyway. But I might as well finish this yarn, anyhow.

"We was all setting around the parlor like we used to when we was kids at a party, all waiting for somebody else to speak first, when the old man that father had brought home spoke up and said something about believing explicitly in the theory of reincarceration."

"That ain't the word," said the Head Barber. "I don't know the word either, but it's something that ends up with the name of a flower—carnation, I think."

Didn't Know the Name.

"If you don't know the name of the theory what made you interrupt me?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "Anyhow, it was something about folks that lived a long time ago living over again. For instance, the old gent said—don't mean father, I mean the other old gent—that he believed he was a soldier in the time when they was having the Wars of the Roses. He said that he fought under the Red Rose, whatever kind of a lodge that was, and I guess he was that dippy he believed it. I could see that father wanted to humor his old school chum, because he said he believed in the same theory and thought the soul could live again in another body. It was all I could do to keep from snickering when father talked like that, because goodness knows he spends a lot more time thinking about pinochle and three-cushion billiards than he does in thinking about the human soul and what becomes of it after we have kicked in. But he stalled fine, and I guess the old school friend went away thinking that father was on the level about reincarceration."

"I'd like to know what I would be if I was born again," said George.

"I know what you would be," replied the Manicure Lady. "You would just be another barber."

Modesty the Best Policy.

IT was the early part of the New Year, and little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a long delayed visit to Uncle Silas.

Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of the said uncle, and asked:

"Uncle dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining room table a dime, a half-dollar and a five-dollar note, remarking:

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the dime. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I shan't lose it?"

And uncle did.

"Sisters Under Their Skins"

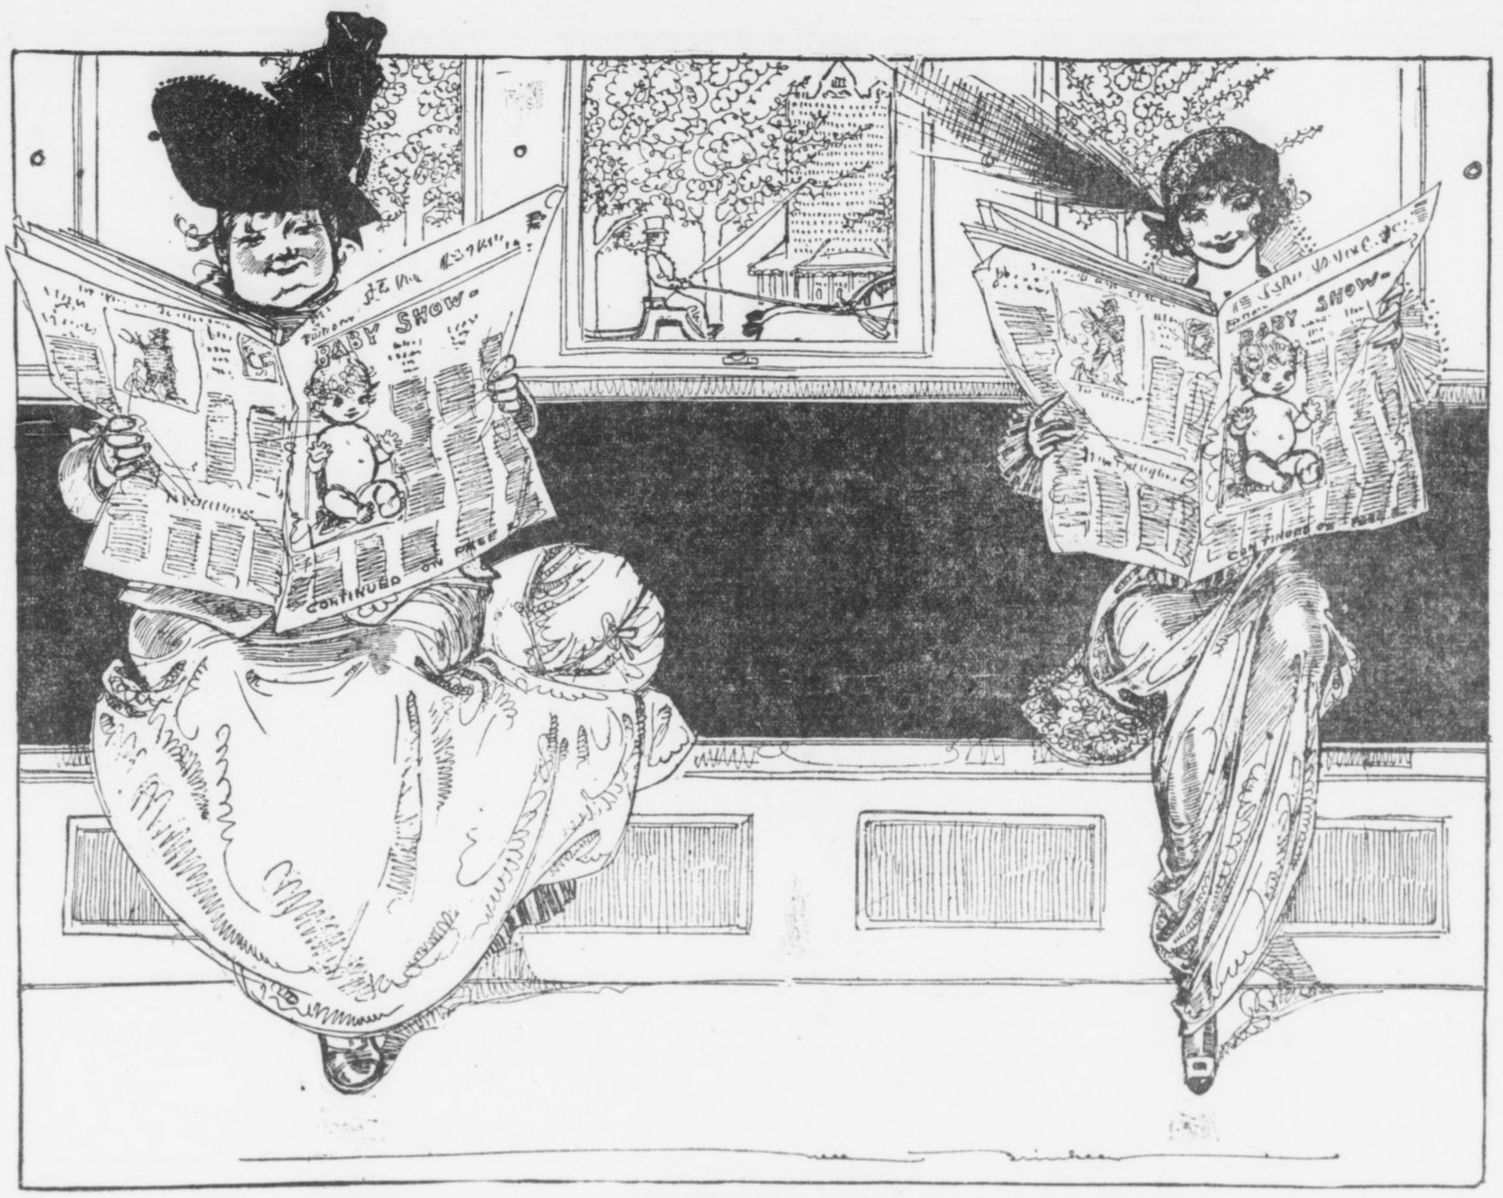
By NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins.---Rudyard Kipling.

THIS I saw a week or so ago when the country was showing off its fat babies. Across the car from me, sitting with the sweet sunshine streaming in on their two blond heads—coiffed, oh, so differently, was a large plain lady with her chapeau slightly on one ear and a fat bundle snuggled beside her, and a yard or so down the red plush seat an aristocratic woman in silk and brocade, a French hat above her pretty eyebrows, white gloves, rose point lace at her throat and wrists, perfectly groomed! And the whole middle of each was hidden by the newspapers they held. I had watched. They had climbed on at the same street, had settled their silken and cotton skirts, and their four eyes had homed straight to the "pie" of a fat baby on the front page. They had both flipped over to the second page, where more babies were promised to "continue"—and there they stuck—the two of them—the same tilt to their two heads, the same unconscious gentle smile on their two faces. Under the lace-smothered breast of the "colonel's lady" rose the same heart springs that welled beneath the cotton and pearl buttons of "Judy O'Grady" "sisters under their skins."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dick repeated his question, unobservant of its first effect.

"Why didn't you go to Chicago as you had planned?"

"Planned? With whom?" The interrogation came with an abrupt force that cried of new suspicions.

"Why, with Burke." The young man tried to be patient over her density in this time of crisis.

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?" Mary asked. Now the tenseness in her manner got the husband's attention, and he replied with a sudden gravity, apprehensive of he knew not what.

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago." He had caught the contagion of her mood and vague alarm swept him.

"Where?" came the next question, still with that vital insistence.

"In this room."

"Burke was here?" Mary's voice was suddenly cold, very dangerous. "What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

Garson Leaped to the Switch.

The seemingly simple answer appeared the last straw to the girl's burden of frenzied suspicion. Her voice cut fiercely into the quiet of the room, imperious, savage.

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

Something fatally significant in her voice set Garson aleap to the switch, and, in the same second, the blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. The others stood motionless, blinking in the sudden radiance—all save Griggs, who moved stealthily in that same moment, a little nearer the door into the passage, which was nearest to him.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise, seemingly totally irrelevant to this instant of crisis. Yet they rang athrob with an hysterical anxiety.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" With the question she pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

The young man was plainly astonished, disconcerted as well by the obtrusion of a sordid detail into the tragedy of the time.

"Why in the world do you—?" he began, impatiently.

"Tell me—quick!" she commanded. The authority in her voice and manner was not to be gainsaid.

Dick yielded sullenly.

"Oh, two or three hundred dollars, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that!" Mary exclaimed, violently. And now the girl's voice came stinging like a whiplash. In Garson's face, too, was growing fury, for in an instant of illumination he guessed something of the truth. Mary's next question confirmed his raging suspicion.

"How long have you had them, Dick?"

By now the young man himself sensed the fact that something mysteriously baneful lay behind the frantic questioning on this seemingly trivial theme.

"Ever since I can remmber," he replied, promptly.

Mary's voice came then with an intonation that brought enlightenment not only to Garson's shrewd perceptions, but also to the heavier intelligences of Dacey and of Chicago Red.

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently, from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?" So simple were the words of her inquiry, but under them beat something evil, deadly.

The young man laughed contemptuously.

He Came Toward Her.

"I should say not!" he declared indignantly, for he resented the implication against his father's honesty.

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door into the passage.

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery. He was very dapper in his evening clothes, with his rather handsome, well groomed face set in lines of innocence.

"He's lying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward Dick Gilder. "I tell you, those tapestries are worth a million cold."

Mary's answer was virulent in its sudden burst of hate. For once, the music of her voice was lost in a discordant cry of detestation.

"You stool-pigeon! You did this for Burke!"

Griggs sought still to maintain his air of innocence, and he strove well, since he knew that he fought for his life against those whom he had outraged. As he spoke again, his tones were tremulous with sincerity—perhaps that tremulousness was born chiefly of fear, yet to the ear his words came stoutly enough for truth:

"I swear I didn't! I swear it!"

Mary regarded the protesting man with abhorrence. The perjured wretch shrank before the loathing in her eyes.

"You came to me yesterday," she said, with more of restraint in her voice now, but still with inexorable rancor. "You came to me to explain this plan. And you came from him—from Burke!"

"I swear I was on the level. I was tipped off to the story by a pal," Griggs declared, but at last the assurance was gone out of his voice. He felt the hostility of those about him.

Garson broke in ferociously.

"It's a frame-up!" he said. His tones came in a deadened roar of wrath.

On the instant, aware that further subterfuge could be of no avail, Griggs swaggered defiance.

"And what if it is true?" he drawled, with a resumption of his aristocratic manner, while his eyes swept the group balefully. He plucked the police whistle from his waistcoat pocket, and raised it to his lips.

Then He Trembled.

He moved too slowly. In the same moment of his action, Garson had pulled the pistol from his pocket, had pressed the trigger. There came no spurt of flame. There was no sound—save perhaps a faint clicking noise. But the man with the whistle at his lips suddenly ceased movement, stood absolutely still for the space of a breath. Then he trembled horribly, and in the next instant crashed to the floor, where he lay rigid, dead.

"D—n you—I've got you!" Garson sneered through clenched teeth. His eyes were like balls of fire. There was a frightful grin of triumph twisting his mouth in this minute of punishment.

In the first second of the tragedy, Dick had not understood. Indeed, he was still dazed by the suddenness of it all. But the falling of Griggs before the leveled weapon of the other man, there to lie in that ghastly immobility, made him to understand. He leaped toward Garson—would have wrenched the pistol from the other's grasp. In the struggle, it fell to the floor.

Before either could pick it up, there came an interruption. Even in the stress of this scene, Chicago Red had never relaxed his professional caution. A slight noise had caught his ear; he had stooped, listening. Now he straightened and called his warning.

"Somebody's opening the front door!"

"The street's empty! We must jump for it!" His hate was forgotten now in an emotion still deeper, and he turned to Mary. His face was all gentleness again, where just before it had been evil incarnate, aflame with the lust to destroy. "Come on, Mary," he cried.

Already Chicago Red had snapped off the lights of the chandelier, had sprung to the window, thrown open a panel of it, and had vanished into the night, with Dacey at his heels. As Garson would have called out to the girl again in mad anxiety for haste, he was interrupted by Dick.

"She couldn't make it, Garson," he declared, coolly and resolutely. "You go. It'll be all right, you know. I'll take care of her!"

"If she's caught——!" There was an indescribable menace in the forger's half-uttered threat.

"She won't be." The quality of sincerity in Dick's voice was more convincing than any vow might have been.

"If she is, I'll get you; that's all." Garson said gravely, as one stating a simple fact that could not be disputed.

Then he glanced down at the body of the man whom he had done to death.

"And you can tell that to Burke!" he said, viciously, to the dead. "You d——d squealer!" There was a supremely malevolent content in his sneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters.

Not Quite Right.

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "2" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

THE MAN WHO IS TIRED OF HIS WIFE

"Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," Says an Old Proverb, and This Is Especially Apt in This Situation.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A MAN writes me in great distress. He says that he has been married about fifteen years, and that suddenly a great weariness of spirit has come upon him. His wife is good and kind, an excellent housekeeper, a thrifty manager, and her one object in life is to please him and make him happy, but while he recognizes her virtues and admires them, they leave him cold and unmoved.

In a word, he's tired of his wife. She bores him to death. Just her presence is irksome to him, and when she goes with him on any sort of a pleasure jaunt it takes all the fun out of the occasion.

This man is no gay Lothario. He is a good, honest, domestic man, who is honestly alarmed at the state of affairs, and he wants to know what he can do to recover the interest he once had in his wife, and the thrills that went through his veins like fire at the touch of her hand.

There is only one remedy for such cases, and that is absence. Only people who have neither nerves, temperament nor imagination can stand the horrible monotony of seeing the same face opposite them at three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, and ditto dinners, to say nothing of having the same form across the drop light for an equal number of evenings a year, and having to listen to the same old stories.

The most beautiful people in the world grow homely to our eyes if we see them too often. The wittiest conversationalists grow tedious if we have a surfeit of their society. The virtues of even an angel pall upon us if they are constantly before us.

Reasons Why.

Probably Mr. Milo thought his Venus too fat or too thin, and asked her why she didn't get another make of corset. Doubtless there were times, before she got a divorce, when Mrs. Caruso said to herself that if Enrico warbled another warble she would scream, and it isn't on record that the immediate family of any of our saints and martyrs ever handed in any testimonial to show what they thought on the subject of the canonization of their husbands or wives.

Why people who can not eat thirty quails in thirty days; who never want to see the same play twice, or read a book a second time; who tire of their clothes before they are half worn out, and spend their lives hunting for new sights, new emotions, new diversions, new places to go, should ever be foolish enough to imagine that they could endure the undiluted society of one person, year in and year out, passes comprehension.

There are millions of husbands and wives who have had an overdose of each other's society and are suffering from it, and they are so stupid they don't realize what ails them, nor how simple the remedy for it is. Yet the symptoms are unmistakable.

When a man begins to dread the thought of going home of an evening, and to wonder what made him idiot enough to get married and to pick out Sally, of all women in the world, for a wife; when he begins to notice that Sally has gone off in looks and is getting a triple chin, and to have a feather bed figure; when his eyes focus on the little mole on Sally's cheek instead of the cute way her hair curls around the back of her neck; and when he commences wondering if all women talk as much drivel and use as many words in telling nothing as Sally Jones—then it's time for the man to pack his grip and hike away from home and Sally.

He hasn't really fallen out of love with her, as he thinks he has. He's just tired of her for the time being. He doesn't really pine to be a gay rover, as he imagines he does. He just wants to ease the pressure of the yoke of matrimony for a little, and to him—and to his wife—a ticket to Chicago, or San Francisco, or Bird Center, or anywhere away from home, is a lifeline that saves them both from destruction.

And it's exactly the same way with women. Of course the theory is that women have such an abnormal talent for loving that a wife never gets enough of her husband's society, but is a femael Oliver Twist, always asking for more. Don't you believe it. Women are fickle creatures, and the best wife in the world can get so sick and weary of a model husband that she is ready to die of sheer ennui.

The Woman's Side.

Every now and then a woman gets so that she can see nothing but faults in her husband. Everything he does and everything he doesn't do irritates her, and she, too, gets to wondering what on earth the fool-killer was doing on the day that she tied up with the miserable little shrimp that she did, instead of marrying some romantic and godlike creature that she didn't marry. She thinks that she is suffering from having missed her affinity and being married to a groundling that can't understand her higher nature, but the whole trouble is that she has had too much of her husband's society. All that she needs to effect a complete cure is a month or six weeks' separation.

Of course, being ladies and gentlemen, most of us never admit to our husbands and wives that we are bored. We yawn behind our hands and try to look interested, but in our secret souls all of us know that the surging joy with which we saw our dearly beloved husband or wife start off on a journey, or the rapture that filled our own soul when we got to go off somewhere alone, or with perfect strangers.

And we also know the delight with which we returned home, or welcomed back the wanderer, our whole point of vision changed by a little absence, and the one of whom we had been so tired clothed again in his or her halo.

This is why the summer vacation is such a beneficent institution. We can lay our weariness of our domestic partners on the weather, and get away with a decent excuse. But it isn't the change of climate that does us good. It's the change from the monotony of association, and it sends us back rested and refreshed and romantically in love again.

A True Proverb.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says the old proverb, and this is especially true of husbands and wives. They need to break away every few months just to get a perspective on each other's good qualities and to find out how necessary each is to the other's happiness.

You can overdo matrimony as easily as you can any other good thing, and if there were some way by which we could be married three days a week instead of seven there would be no more divorce.

Queer Vegetable.

A vicar advertised for a servant a short time ago, and a country girl, with a fat, red face, answered the advertisement.

After the vicar had asked a few personal questions, he said:

"You know, we are all vegetarians here, and, of course, we should require you to be one. No meat, you know—simply vegetables."

She dropped her eyes, and for a time seemed deep in thought.

"Well, what do you think?" asked the vicar, after a short time.

"Well, sir," she replied, "it's like this. I don't mind so much about the meat; but before I take the place I should like to know if you—er—call beer a vegetable?"

She was not engaged.

$10 WORTH OF BALL FOR TWO BITS FRIDAY

By Percy H. Whiting.

TEN dollars' worth of baseball at two bits was the offering at Ponce DeLeon Park Friday afternoon, in a game the Crackers lost to Chattanooga, 7 to 5. The contest took ten innings, two hours and seventeen minutes and a pound of flesh from the wracked frame of Manager Bill Smith.

It was surely a cuckoo little contest.

For eight innings it was an awful affair, a regular boob game as far as the Crackers were concerned. They had made only three hits off Rudy Summers and it looked as though they would never make any more. The score was then five to nothing against the Crackers, for Chappelle was no puzzle to the guys he used to work with and his support was much to the cheese.

* * *

THE last half of the eighth was a memorable session. Joe Agler opened it with a single. Dunn walked—and walked. Rohe, batting for Chappelle, flied out. Long walked. And then came Welchonce, the hero of the previous day's game. All he did this time was to triple but that scored three men and put Summers in a blue funk. Whereupon Alperman arose and lammed the ball to the score board for a home-run—and this tied it up. Five runs in one inning for a tie up! Wow!

* * *

DID you ever notice that when a team comes from behind they come just far enough to tie the score—and then stop there? It happens nine times out of ten. In Friday's game it was obvious that the locals had Summers absolutely on his last legs. With only one out and two dangerous batters in line it seemed as though a little more of the same steam would have put over the winning run.

It's human nature, though, to pull up on even terms and stop to breathe, believing that the overhauling will be an easy matter later.

* * *

AFTER warming up both Dent and Price while the batting rally was in progress Smith stuck in the former. He retired the first two men and then got in an awful mess by letting Flick and King hit. Coyle then grounded to Alperman, who started a double play and pulled the Crackers through that inning.

To the surprise of everybody Elberfeld elected to use Harry Coveleskie to finish out the game for him. Considering the Pole's uncertainty and the ease with which he is usually rattled this was a brave choice. Hardly another manager in the world would have taken that chance.

But Coveleskie stood the gaff.

Every Cracker went up to the plate with strict orders to wait him out. It started all right too, when Bisland walked. Agler sacrificed him along but there he croaked. Dunn waited like a statue but Coveleskie had the plate located and Joe finally popped to Coveleskie. Dent had a lovely opportunity but was struck out.

In the first of the tenth Dent got his. Elberfeld opened with a single. Elston sacrificed. Johnson singled. Street fractured the tie by going out Smith to Agler, so artistically that Elberfeld tallied. Williams was walked. And then came the superlative surprise for Coveleskie hit a clean single, scoring Johnson and closing out the Crackers.

In the last half of the tenth Welchonce kept up his great pinch hitting with a timely single but Coveleskie was the master of the rest of them and deserved a victory.

This was the first game the Lookouts have won out of eight attempts against the Crackers.

Wan, Weary and Worn Out

S. S. S. Makes Your Blood Corpuscles Unite for Mutual Protection.

Half the people you meet complain of weary muscles, stagnant brain, jangled nerves, and a wonderful desire to lay down and just quit. Most of these people have been using nervines that spasmodically flare up the nerves only to die down again, as die they must. Avoid nerve stimulants. Bear in mind that this worn-out feeling is due to poor blood, to bacteria in the water you drink; to the multiplying of destructive germs in the blood faster than they can be overcome by the white corpuscles; and to what is known as auto-toxemia, that condition where the venous or impure blood accumulates faster than it can be replaced by the red arterial blood.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital and essential to well-balanced health as those of the grains, meats, fats and sugars of our food.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S. Swift's Sure Specific. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling; it just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine just as active and just as timely as to a man who has been lost in the mountains, is about starved and comes across a settler just cooking a savory meal of good corned beef. Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 159 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Jackson's Clout a Record One

Longest Homer, Says Sam Crane

By Sam Crane.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Joe Jackson's home run wallop over the roof of the right field wing of the Brush stadium last Monday was a marvel.

There were two other circuit clouts made, but while they were hard hits, they were not patches on "Jolting Joe's" job that cleared every sky high obstacle in the Polo Grounds and in the immediate neighborhood for miles around. The ball landed somewhere. There is no doubt of that, for Sir Isaac Newton's statement that everything that goes up must come down is still considered as sufficient authority to bank on even in these baseball days when "up in the air" is considered a permanent ascension.

Yes, siree, Joe Jackson's wonderful wallop was a record breaker. It was the longest drive ever made on the Polo Grounds, either to right field, center field or to left field. Buck Ewing is given credit for smashing the longest hit ever made toward the Harlem River. That was in the days when the left field was known as "Burkeville," that euphonious title being derived from "Eddie" Burke, once a Giant left fielder, who played the sun field without the aid of smoked glasses or a net, and never missed a fly ball, so 'tis said, or a high one, either.

Opinions Differed.

There are various opinions as to where the ball went over the left field fence that Buck shaked so far. But it was made in the Players' League days of 1890, and sailed over the outer bulwarks at about where the present 25 cent pen is now located.

"Some drive," you young fans of the present day may say, but in those good old days there were some sluggers—consecutive wallopers. I might say, like "Babe" Anson, Roger Connor, Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, Ed Delehanty, Mike Tiernan and others, who, if they didn't make a home run a day, were ashamed to go to the "captain's office" and draw their half monthly stipends.

"Home Run" Baker has made quite a "small" reputation since those days by smashing out homers off Matty and Rube and they possibly earned more fame than the lengthy licks of the old-time swatters, soaks, but only for the reason that they figured as winning clouts in world championship contests and not because they were the real thing in drives.

Why, I have seen Ed Delehanty clout a ball so far over the present left field wall on the Phillies' grounds in Quakerville that make the home runs made by Cravath and Magee this year on the same grounds look like bunts.

Thompson Made Long Clout.

In Cincinnati I saw Sam Thompson hit the ball so hard and far that the home run smashes of Beecher, Bates and other long-hitting Reds of the present look like handle hits.

I have witnessed Anson make home runs in Chicago off wild pitches that would make the fourbag drives of Schulte and Zimmerman look like mere infield pop-ups.

Mike Tiernan lifted the ball once over the right field fence on Manhattan Field into Brotherhood Park (now the Polo Grounds.) That historical hit of Tiernan's, too, won a famous 11-inning pitching contest between the two star pitchers of that time (1890), and the spot where the ball went over the fence was marked by a small American flag for several years. Even the Harlem small boy revered the wallop so much that he didn't steal the flag.

I have seen—well, all those great hits and many more—but I will come down to earth now and take off my hat to Joe Jackson, of the Clevelands, for making the longest lick I ever saw—and that was Monday.

Doubt About O'Rourke's Hit.

Jim O'Rourke has heretofore been credited with making the longest smash, but there is a doubt on that record. Jim hit the ball over left field fence on the present Boston Braves' grounds, and the ball never stopped going until it landed in Providence, R. I. The ball went into the express car of a through train from Boston to Providence that didn't stop until it got to the Rhode Island Capital.

There is a history connected with Jackson's smash. A small boy recovered the ball somewhere down in Harlem on a side street and hearing about the record wallop—(why, Harlem was full of it) brought the ball back to the Polo Grounds and showed it to Joe after the game.

Joe paid the youngster a ten-dollar note for his prize—and it was well worth the money. It is a memento of the longest hit ever made.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

THE Western invasion in the American League should bring out some interesting baseball within the next two weeks. It is common gossip on that circuit that the Cleveland team is a much bigger winner on its home grounds than away on the road. The present trip should show whether this is true. With Birmingham's pitchers, and the club hitting as it is, there is no reason why it should not be just as big a winner in the East as the West. The Cleveland club looks like a strong one to me, and the Athletics are worried by the showing it is making. They fear the excellent pitching, the Philadelphia club being none too strong on the twirling itself.

* * *

STILL, I do not see how the Athletics can be beaten out. They are playing at their old-time speed now and should pick up on Cleveland during their long stand at home. Outside of the Naps, "Connie" Mack's team will be playing the easy Western clubs, while the only soft spot Birmingham will find in the East will be in New York. The series with Philadelphia, Washington and Boston will all be hard ones. The Naps have made all these gains without Lajoie, and with him back in the game the aggregation will be greatly strengthened, as the return of Wagner braced up the Pirates.

* * *

THE Boston Red Sox are still off color, although they have shown flashes of better ball recently. The failure of their pitching staff has been largely responsible for the poor showing. None of the pitchers who looked so good in the world's series have been able to win consistently this spring. Even "Smoky Joe" Wood has not been smoky. When their pitchers come around in shape, as they are bound to do, Boston will do considerably more winning, but I do not believe the Red Sox have a chance for the pennant. There are too many other high-class ball teams ahead of them in the competition now.

* * *

THE White Sox have made a good showing, better than was expected of them, and may come through and scare a lot of managers before the race is over. Their pitchers are displaying grand form, even without the aid of "Ed" Walsh. White, Russell, Benz and Scott have all pitched good ball. Pitching has been a big factor in the races in both leagues so far this year, the clubs with the twirlers getting the early starts, with the possible exception of the Athletics.

* * *

DETROIT and the New York Americans look hopeless. Somebody said the other day that the only reason they are keeping a club in Detroit is to give Cobb a chance to see how high he can bat. Chance realizes he will have to tear his club down and build over again. He began by trading Chase. His task is a tough one.

"CHICK" GANDIL HASN'T DROPPED BALL IN YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Washington baseball fans are pointing out that Walter Johnson is not the only record holder on the local team. "Chick" Gandil, who one year ago this month began playing first base for the Senators, has never dropped a thrown ball in all that time, except when the throw was so wild it pulled him off the bag. This is believed to be a record for accuracy in fielding.

Time was when a middleweight fighter could fight,
And he battled with never a care.
He walloped the smoke and he walloped the white,
And he fought like a man who was there.
And somebody got him one calm summer day,
And he went with a smile on his brow.
He battled his battles and went on his way,
But where is a middleweight now?

It is said that Bill Steen, of the Naps, can do needlework in addition to his pitching. Having listened to various baseball magnates, we have a hunch that Mr. Steen is a mere novice with the needle.

Mr. Goux sails this week for home, despite various challenges from Mr. Burman. In other words, Mr. Goux refuses to fall for any goux-goux eyes. We sprang this simply to prove that we ain't got no sense of humor.

Every time we read that there are motorcycle races on the program we are sore over the fact that we ain't a mortician. And then when we think it over we ain't.

FOXHALL KEENE DISCUSSES THE POLO CONTEST

By Foxhall Keene.

(Captain of the American Polo Team.)

NEW YORK, June 7.—Before I take up the discussion of teams which will meet in the approaching contest I want to repeat what I have said in recent interviews—that the changes made in the line-up of the squad were not due to friction or to trouble of any sort, and rumors to that effect are absolutely without foundation.

The changes were made by those in charge not only with the consent, but at the urging of the parties concerned, in the belief that it will further the common cause and we know all are working together with the one hope and ambition to keep the polo cup in America.

Speaking for myself I can say that I did not want to have anything to do with the game at this particular time on account of the recent death of my father, but Mr. Whitney and the other members of the team finally prevailed upon me to re-enter the lists, and now that I am in I shall do my best to bring about the defeat of the English.

Will Put Up Hard Fight.

I hope and believe that our team will be able to give a good account of itself in the match and if we are defeated I am pretty sure the Englishmen will know they have been in a fight.

I am inclined to believe that the old team was not up to the form it has shown in past years, and perhaps Mr. Whitney held it together on account of old friendships longer than he might have done.

Mr. Whitney is one of the greatest players the game of polo has produced in 20 years and his passing from the team at this time must be viewed with real regret.

Larry Waterbury was certainly as good a back as the world has ever seen. He played No. 1 on the team that Mr. Whitney took to England, and he played it brilliantly, though the English team at that time was rated rather poor.

Monte Waterbury has not been well for some months and his game has not been the phenomenal game of past years.

Betting Favors Englishmen.

The betting is against us and the popular feeling seems to be that the Englishmen have the stronger team, but in spite of that and in spite of the fact we have been given a very short time to prepare ourselves, I am confident that America will not be ashamed of her representatives when we take the field against the mother country.

The English squad have an extraordinary array of ponies. We can not deny that they outpony us to some extent, but in addition to Mr. Whitney's string, Mr. Prince, of Boston, who owns a very fine stud, sent his ponies to New York by special train and we will all have them to depend on.

We have but a small handful of polo players in America,"—by which I mean only a few men who have gone in for the game strong enough to become experts; whereas England not only has England, where the game is older and more popular than here, to draw upon, but India as well, and in India every other man is a good polo player.

It is therefore great credit to our small handful that we have been able to produce squads that have at times beaten the best teams produced by the British and that have always given a good account of themselves.

English Ponies Are Good.

From what I have seen of the Englishmen I might say that their hitting is uniformly fine and the ponies are very good, but they were not being tackled, and a team always looks pretty good when it is not being opposed.

In drawing a comparison between American and English methods of playing polo it seems to me that the Americans have been more ambitious for the past 20 years. The Englishmen are rather orthodox in their general style, while we have all kinds of strokes. They have some that they play best, but there is always more variety to the Americans.

There are really no new ways of playing polo and few new angles to be developed. Naturally I have certain theories of my own in connection with the game as has every polo player, but this is hardly the time to exploit them.

BURMAN DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE GOUX SAILED

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bob Burman, the dare-devil automobile racer, who is in town to-day, was quite disappointed to find that Jules Goux, the Frenchman who won the 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis, had sailed Thursday for France.

Burman came here to challenge Goux to a 500-mile race either at Indianapolis or New York for a side bet of from $5,000 to $20,000. Burman announced that he will now cable his challenge.

JIM FLYNN AND SAVAGE ARRIVE HERE MONDAY

By Left Hook.

JACK CURLEY, manager of Jim Flynn, has wired that he and Flynn will arrive in Atlanta Monday. Dan Morgan, manager of Jim Savage, had previously wired that he and his man would be here either Sunday or Monday. So the Queensberry festivities of the city should brighten up materially within the next few days.

Dan Morgan, in behalf of Savage, has laid claim to the heavyweight championship of the world. In his formal statement Morgan says:

"Savage has as much right to the title as any of the white hopes. I consider him the best man in the lot. I believe he can whip any of them, now that McCarty is out of the way. We are willing to meet any of them, and intend to begin by polishing off Flynn on the night of June 13 in Atlanta."

Morgan is wild with enthusiasm over the outlook. The sudden turn of affairs that gave his man a championship look-in pleased him right down to the ground. He saw the opportunity and he is off on a campaign of activity that will give Jim Savage more scraps in the next few months than he ever had before in his life.

It may be that Morgan's plans may get an awful jolt right here in Atlanta. There is not any doubt that, until a few weeks ago, he believed that his man could trim Jim Flynn with all ease. Then came Jim's great battle with Jim Coffey, and that was something else again. Flynn, instead of being on the down slant, as Morgan hoped, proved to be as good as ever in his career. But after that was learned it was too late to back out, for the match between Savage and Flynn was made.

Neither of the men wants to meet the other now. Yet each knows that he must go into it to win or to be knocked out. There is no middle ground now. A draw decision would do neither of them any good. They must win. A victory, with the heavyweight situation as it now is, means money to them, way up in the tens of thousands.

The odd way affairs have lined themselves has played into the hands of the local promoters. It has made the battle next Friday night one of the BIG contests of the year. The winner is almost sure within the year to grab off the heavyweight championship of the world.

NATIONAL COMMISSION PASSES NEW SALARY RULE

CINCINNATI, June 7.—The National Baseball Commission promulgated a new rule yesterday which clearly defines the salary obligations of a club to a player whose services are released by the club after the commencement of its contract period.

The new rule reads:

"A club which after the beginning of the terms of its contract with him, releases the services of a player to a club whose championship season had not commenced, must pay him at the rate of his canceled contract up to the date his salary starts with his new club, provided he promptly reports to and gives service to the club to which he is transferred."

398 MEN TAKE PART IN TRACK MEET AT MADISON

MADISON, WIS., June 7.—The greatest group of college athletes in the history of Western competition to-day are here awaiting the signals which start the conference track and field meet billed for this afternoon. Seventeen schools are represented in the gathering, with 398 entrants. The colleges in the running include every member of the "big nine," and in addition to these schools are Drake, Ames, Kansas, Missouri, Notre Dame, Oberlin, Wabash and California.

Because of the weakening of the California team, which lost four of its star performers by conference rules, Missouri is favorite, with Illinois second choice.

Whitney Plays Aldredge To-day

Winner Gets Dixie Championship

By W. R. Tichenor.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 7. Nelson Whitney, twice champion of the Southern Golf Association, and George A. Eldredge, champion of the State of Texas, are battling to-day at 36 holes for the championship of the South and a huge silver cup.

Whitney won his match in the semi-finals yesterday from Reuben Bush, whom he defeated 7 up and 6 to play.

Whitney was longer and steadier on all of his tee shots, which gave him the advantage of seeing the results of Bush's second shot on almost every hole before he was forced to play his own. While he was unsteady on his short puts in the morning round and presented Bush with a half at the eighth, ninth, tenth and fourteenth, and a win at the sixth and thirteenth holes by taking three puts on each. Whitney managed to end the round 3 up, with a 76 for the 18 holes.

Bush Puts Poorly.

In the afternoon round Bush picked up in his field game, but became erratic in his short puts, allowing Whitney to add three more holes in going out, and so they turned for home with Whitney 6 up. Both played the tenth badly, Bush winning it with a 5 after putting his tee shot out of bounds. Whitney, however, came to life on the eleventh, which is 460 yards in length, by holing a long put for a 3. On the 575-yard twelfth hole Whitney put his third within 10 feet of the hole and sank the put for a "win" of the hole and the match.

Whitney has met in succession Jacoby, Knowles and Bush. To-morrow he meets Aldredge, of Dallas, Texas, in the final.

Aldredge won his way into the final by defeating Herbert Tutwiler, of Birmingham. At the end of the morning round yesterday he was 3 up. He increased this lead to four and won on the thirty-second green.

Rowan Still In.

W. H. Rowan dfeeated George Fooshe, of Memphis, in a hard match. At the end of the morning round Fooshe was 2 up. Rowan evened the match at the turn and won 3 up and 2 to play.

Young Charley Hardy, of New Orleans, and Rollo Steinmehl, both of them youngsters, met in the semi-finals of the second flight. Hardy was going fine and had a 77 for the morning round, while Steinmehl was off his game and the first eighteen holes ended with Hardy 11 up. Steinmehl braced in the afternoon, but could not cut down Hardy's lead and was beaten 11 up and 10 to play. Hardy and Rowan meet in the final to-day.

Probasco defeated Stahlman 7 and 6 in the semi-finals of the third flight. In the other half of this flight Ned Daley ran away from Reid Sayre and had him 9 down at the thirteenth hole, when Sayre gave up the match. Daley and Probasco meet in the final of this flight.

In the fourth flight J. A. England defaulted to D. Weaver. Harnett, of Jacksonville, defeated A. W. Post, 6 and 5. The final of the fifth flight will be fought out between J. W. S. Rhea and C. Tyson. Rhea won from Richards, of Chattanooga, 3 and 2, and Tyson beat Whitney Bouden by the same score.

Atlanta Man Loses.

Albert Mallory defeated D. E. Root, of Atlanta, three and two, in the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Munger beat Watts by the same score, and these two will meet in the finals.

Munger of Texas, and Ulmer, of Jacksonville, are the finalists in the consolation division of the championship flight.

Dowdell Brown had Cullom dormie seven in his match against him, but, knowing he could not be present to play the final if he won, defaulted the match.

Hamilton Block, of Atlanta, trimmed J. Tyson, of Montgomery to the tune of nine up and eight to play, and so is one of the finalists in the consolation division of the third flight.

D. Henderson, of Chattanooga, and Crawford, of Montgomery, are in the finals of the consolation division of the fifth flight.

Will Gunn, of Macon, and Ed Joseph, of Montgomery, will fight it out in the final of the consolation division of the sixth flight.

* * *

Jim Savage writes from New York that he is getting in great shape for his ten-round engagement with Jim Flynn at the Auditorium-Armory here on June 13. Savage says he is boxing with George Rodel and Soldier Kearns daily. He will be here in a couple of days.

* * *

Danny Morgan, manager of Savage, is keeping a close watch on his protege. Danny is looking for Savage to hand Flynn a lacing, and then expects to take the clever heavyweight to the coast for a whirl at Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard.

* * *

Johnny Dundee, the New York featherweight, who is matched to fight Ad Wolgast at the Vernon arena on the night of June 19, has accepted an offer to box Tommy Dixon in a ten-round battle at Albuquerque, N. Mex., on July 4. Wolgast and Dundee are scheduled to go twenty rounds.

* * *

St. Louis is after Charlie White for a match with Harry Trendall. The bout was offered the Chicago featherweight yesterday, weight to be 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. Nate Lewis, manager of White, wired back he would accept if the men weighed in at 6. June 18 is the date set for the match if it is closed.

* * *

Ad Wolgast has signed for a twenty-round fight with Red Watson, a California lightweight, for June 20, according to the announcement of a San Francisco athletic club. The weight will be 133 pounds ringside.

* * *

George Chip is the latest boxer to camp on the trail of Frank Klaus. Jimmy Dime, manager of Chip, writes from Pittsburg that he would be "tickled to death" to close the match. A bout between Chip and Klaus should prove a corker.

* * *

If Meyer Pries succeeds in trimming Spider Britt at the Auditorium-Armory on June 13 he is to seek a bout with Kid Young. Pries says he is to train faithfully for the Britt go, so as to be in the pink of condition. Meyer figures that a victory over Spider will put him in line for some good matches around here.

* * *

Requests for tickets for the big boxing show to be staked at the Auditorium-Armory are already piling in. Fans are aware of the fact that the best show ever staged in Atlanta will be pulled off on June 13, and do not wish to miss the treat. Tickets will be placed on sale in a couple of days.

* * *

A match was arranged yesterday between Jack Dillon and Tony Caponi to be staged at Winnipeg on June 16. The men are to make 158 pounds and battle twelve rounds.

* * *

George Gealelis, the well-known Greek sportsman, wishes to announce that Jimmy Grant is still on the fighting map. George says that Jimmy is at present on his farm at Jacksonville, Fla., keeping himself in great shape. Jimmy expects to start on a busy campaign soon.

* * *

Grant has issued a challenge to the winner of the Meyer Pries-Jimmy Britt set-to. Gaelelis says he will back Grant against either boy for $200. Grant is certainly entitled to some good match.

Riggs Resigns as Athletic Leader

CLEMSON COLLEGE, June 7.—At a recent meeting of the Clemson College Athletic Association, President W. M. Riggs after about 15 or 17 years of continuous service in the capacity of president of the association, refused re-election. Dr. Riggs is the father of athletics at Clemson and has always given much time to the development of the various sports, especially to football. He will continue to give his hearty support to all college sports, but his regular duties will prevent his serving as president of the association.

The following officers and managers were elected for the next session: Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, president; R. B. Ezell, vice president; Prof. J. W. Gantt, secretary and treasurer; J. B. Douthit, manager of the football team; C. B. Iler and S. W. Hutto, assistant managers; H. H. Tressley, manager of the baseball team; H. W. Bristol and S. M. Richards, assistant managers; K. G. Caughman, manager of the basket ball team; J. B. Glover and G. C. McDermis, assistant managers; A. P. Lewis, manager of the track team; L. LeGrand and R. J. Odom, assistants; J. W. Erwin, manager of the tennis teams; M. R. Stender, chief rooter; R. B. Ezell and F. J. Jervey, assistants; J. N. McBride, historian.

Clemson has a good football schedule, as the following will show. October 4, Davidson, at Clemson; October 11, University of Alabama, at Tuscaloosa; October 18, Auburn, at Clemson; October 29, University of South Carolina, in Columbia during fair week; November 1, the Citadel, in Charleston; November 8, University of Georgia, in Athens or Augusta; November 15, Mercer, at Clemson; November 27, Georgia Tech, in Atlanta.

Diamond News and Gossip

A new baseball record was established yesterday in the game between the Scranton-Syracuse teams at Scranton, Pa., when only one ball was used throughout the entire contest.

* * *

Hal Chase, who, after eight years on the Yankee payroll, was traded to the White Sox last week, was expected to appear in the White Sox uniform this afternoon on the Polo grounds when his new teammates goes against his old teammates.

* * *

In their four-game series against the Tigers the Athletics secured only 39 runs and 51 hits—an average of nearly ten runs and thirteen hits per game.

* * *

Seaton, the Phillies' star twirler, held the Pirates safe at all times yesterday, and as a result the Philadelphians landed another victory.

* * *

Lewis' double in the twelfth inning that sent Speaker across the plate, won the game for the Red Sox from the White Sox yesterday.

* * *

Jackson, of the Naps, got three hits out of three times at the bat yesterday, giving his healthy average a still further boost. Ty Cobb, his swatting rival, grabbed two hits out of four times up.

* * *

It has been estimated from information gathered in the different betting places in New York that at least $500,000 has been wagered in that city on the result of the baseball races. The Giants in the National League and the Athletics in the American League have been the big betting favorites from the start of the season.

* * *

The Yankees evidently intend establishing a record that will never be equaled or broken. By dropping a 2 to 1 game to the Naps yesterday they registered their seventeenth straight defeat on their home grounds. Fans are thinking of holding a big fireworks celebration as soon as the Yankees win their first game on the home grounds.

* * *

The Athletics yesterday garnered their twelfth straight victory and the Naps have annexed a record of thirteen victories out of the last fourteen starts.

* * *

One and one-half full games, or 50 percentage points, separated the Naps from the first place Athletics to-day. The Naps open their four-game series with the Red Sox and Athletics engaged the Browns in combat to-day.

* * *

The Cubs made twelve hits yesterday against six for the Braves, but the Braves bunched their safeties and won 5 to 4.

* * *

Walter Johnson, of the Senators, was back in form again yesterday with the result that the Senators won over the Browns, Johnson shutting out the St. Louis players and allowing but four scattered hits.

* * *

Just now both teams are tearing the American League wide open and leaving such a gap that only a terrific slump will enable any other team to overtake both for another month or six weeks.

INVASION ABROAD BY U. S. GOLFERS IS SUCCESSFUL

By "Chick" Evans.

PERHAPS the readers of The Georgian will remember a little biography of a golfer which appeared in this paper a few months ago. In that slight sketch I endeavored to give the golfing history of a young player, who, although not well known in the West, was champion of an Eastern State and had made a creditable showing in the National at Wheaton. Although he tied for the last place in the qualifying round with Herreshoff, he won the playoff, and his subsequent game in the tournament led me to class him as one of the most promising players in America. I defeated him in the third round of that event and I have respected his game and appreciated my good fortune ever since.

This young player, Heinrich Schmidt, of Worcester, Mass., has attracted the attention of every American golfer by his recent good showing in the British amateur championship. There is no qualifying round in this event; the matter is arranged by drawing a certain number of byes, determined by the number of entrants. Mr. Schmidt did not draw a bye, however, but played through five successful rounds and was defeated by Harold Hilton in the sixth round by one stroke on the nineteenth hole. His opponents in the other rounds were golfers of the first class, among them a former British champion and the man who defeated Hilton last year. We have only meager accounts of the event, but Mr. Schmidt's record is certainly an enviable one.

Another American Makes Showing.

I had many letters from Mr. Schmidt last winter and spring, urging me to join the little party of Americans in the trip abroad, but business kept me at home. He went unheralded and no hint of his practice scores reached us, but the result of his going was made golf history.

Harold Weber, of Toledo, Ohio, another American competitor in the British amateur, also made an excellent showing. This surprised none of Mr. Weber's Western friends, for he is well known here, and is a very good player indeed. He had the good fortune, if it can be called good fortune, to remain inactive during the first round, to draw a bye, and he put out several fine British players before he himself met defeat in the third round.

Findlay Douglas, of New York, another of the American entrants, bears a national reputation, and it was perhaps largely through his efforts that the little band of Americans journeyed abroad. Mr. Douglas has not taken his game very seriously of late years. He was defeated in the first round.

British Invasion Successful.

There were also some California entrants with whose playing I am unacquainted, but I am told that they are excellent golfers.

All in all, the Americans have reason to be proud of the results of their invasion of British territory this year. They have faced the difficulties of the British courses, the skill of the British players, and the fine British golfing temperament, and they have achieved some notable victories. They are well content.

American Net Stars Win Over Australians

NEW YORK, June 7.—American lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis Cup preliminaries at the West Side Tennis Club courts yesterday.

Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, and R. Norris Williams, second, scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to cinch the American team's victory is to win one of the three remaining matches, and experts look for this to be accomplished this afternoon when McLoughlin and Harold H. Hackett meet the Australian doubles team, consisting of Doust and A. B. Jones. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team, which already has eliminated the French team.

Rain Stops Races; To Be Held Tuesday

CITRON FOULS M'GUINNESS.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Seeing he had no chance to win in their ten-round bout last night, Sam Citron, heavyweight, landed a foul blow on Frank McGuinness in the fourth round. McGuinness fell to the floor groaning, and the referee, declaring the foul deliberate, gave the fight to McGuinness.

COUNZELMAN IN FOLD; RELEASE FOR CHAPPELLE

BILL CHAPPELLE has been released by the Atlanta club to make a place for Pitcher Counzelman, just secured from the Pirates.

Chappelle did not come around as Bill Smith expected he would and Manager Smith decided to let him go and to hang onto Pitcher Price, for the present at least.

Smith has no deals on for pitchers now and will give his present staff a thorough trial before letting any more men out.

It is probable that Counzelman will be worked to-day. Smith gave him a good warm-up Friday and he showed a lot of stuff. His curve ball is pronounced a marvel by Smith, and he has plenty of speed, too.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE TO BOX IN 'FRISCO ON FOURTH

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—According to a statement made by Ad Wolgast early to-day the former title holder has been re-matched with Willie Ritchie.

Wolgast was just starting for Venice when he was called to the telephone.

"That was Tom Jones in San Francisco that I was talking to," said Ad when he emerged from the booth. He has matched me with Ritchie at 133 pounds at 9 o'clock in the morning for an afternoon fight on July 4 before Eddie Graney's club.

"That's an awful weight handicap for me to carry and I wouldn't stand for it except that I am getting a big end of the money for my share. No matter what Ritchie weighs, I will scale in at 133, so that I will be recognized as the lightweight champion in case I beat him.

"This match makes it absolutey necessary for me to stop Johnny Dundee next Tuesday night. I can't say that I relish the 20-round bout with Ritchie, except that I want to prove that I am a better man than Willie."

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF COTTON

Good Rains in the Western Belt Cause Decline After Early Gain—No Feature.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The cotton market opened steady to-day with first prices net unchanged to 4 points lower than last night's close. Early cables reflected the usual week-end evening up at Liverpool, resulting in a wave of scattered short covering here. Prices immediately rallied 1 to 4 points above the opening quotations. The selling was scattered. The strength of the market was mainly attributed to the strength of the summer positions.

Later advices from sections of the cotton belt indicated that the crop is making excellent progress. This, coupled with the weather map showing heavy rains over the entire State of Oklahoma and nice showers in Texas, where rains are badly needed, brought out some selling, resulting in prices dropping 3 to 8 points from the previous close.

At the close the market was steady with prices showing irregularity, being 4 points lower to 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 7.—Oklahoma and the northwestern portion of Texas had a general rainfall over night. Some good rains and scattered showers occurred in north Texas and Tennessee, while light showers fell in many localities in the eastern half of the belt.

Indications are for more general rains over Sunday in the Central and Western States. Scattered showers in the Eastern States. Cooler over the entire belt.

With Liverpool furnishing no incentive to action we had a quiet Saturday market to-day, waiting for what next week will bring in the way of professional action.

New York reviews of the market state plainly that professional operations in the July position rule the market to the exclusion of all other considerations. Brokers representing Liverpool spot interests have also been steady buyers of July during the past three days. The small stock in New York, of only 40,000 bales certificated, said to be the smallest in ten years, is the main encouragement to bullish operations. As far as new crops are concerned they are under the sympathetic influence of efforts to advance July futures.

For the time being it must be admitted that, owing to the greatly reduced stocks, the July position appears to be an easy prey for bullish designs, and the flush of success could easily lead to excesses.

A fact worthy of consideration is that July in New York is nearly 12 cents and that according to statistics and reliable private information visible and invisible holdings in the South are a good deal larger than last year and that with the close approach to the realization of good crop prospects and the continued absence of mill demand, these holdings could become attracted by any future position of isolated high prices. A determined rally in New York toward the close to-day was taken as an indication of the sentiment and intentions for next week.

North Eager to Buy Southern Securities

William Hurd Hillyer, who recently returned from a trip to New York, Philadelphia and Boston, said Saturday that he had been impressed by the eagerness with which Northern and Eastern capitalists invested in Southern mortgage loans, particularly those on Georgia property.

"There seems to be as much readiness to lend money on farm and country securities as on those in the city," he asserted. "This is a circumstance that speaks favorably for the confidence of the country in this section."

STOCKS WEAKEN IN CLOSING HOUR

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Following the movement in Europe, there was an absence of selling pressure in the stock market this morning. A few issues, however, showed concessions, due to the reluctance of buyers to follow the upturn.

In the initial dealings, Reading opened ¾ higher at 157¼, and the same amount of gain was made in Amalgamated Copper, which sold at 68⅝.

Slight recessions were recorded in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred. Other railroads and industrials were well held. The London market was dull.

The curb market was firm.

The market closed weak. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

B. W. Snow wires from Russell, Kansas: "In Kansas, north of main line of Union Pacific, rains came soon enough to save large part of crop. To-day in West Ellsworth, Russell and Osborne Counties most fields show burned spots, but with 400,000 acres there are large areas that will make 20 bushels or more. Present rains are general and generous and will almost insure good yield in north."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—We are inclined to look for a narrow market until after the Government report on Monday next, unless something sensational in the way of crop news comes to hand.

Corn—Speculative interest has assumed rather small proportions and the market is in a waiting attitude. The action of the cash markets during the next few days will be the chief factor in determining values.

Oats—Crop reports from the Southwest are not good, while the reports from east of the River show some improvement.

Provisions—Think some further upturn in prices is likely.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Begin Right in Poultry by Buying Thoroughbreds

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

In each line of business someone must be the first in his town, county or neighborhood. If he is successful, others will soon follow. The question is frequently asked, Why is such and such a town noted for its cotton manufacture, another for numerous tobacco factories, another a paper town? The story can usually be told in a few words. Some enterprising and capable man or firm became very successful in the manufacture of a certain kind of goods; his success soon incited others to action along the same lines, including perhaps some of his best workmen. Others still take it up from the very fact that they see the successes of this, to them, familiar line of business. And so it goes.

This is also true in the breeding and sale of thoroughbred poultry. But who are the starters in the field of thoroughbred poultry? One who has been in a position to know, as the writer has observed, is that in the main the breeders of fine cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are the ones who first take up good poultry in their section. I was for many years a breeder of short horn cattle and Poland China hogs; bred them for stock purposes, and sold them in all sections of this country and Canada. At the same time I was breeding a lot of good Barred Rocks, Brown Leghorns and Wyandottes. It was my observation and experience that three-fourths of the stockmen who came to my place for cattle or hogs became or were already interested in poultry. The result was that my sales in poultry were nearly as big as my sales in cattle and hogs. Consequently this thoroughbred poultry was carried into the various sections of the country and, being successfully bred and handled by these expert stockmen, their neighbors caught the inspiration and soon they were in the same boat. But you say, Why did so many of these cattle and hog men become poultry breeders? Simply because they knew from their experience with other live stock that nothing pays so well to handle as the best in its line. It took no argument on my part to sell this good poultry to these intelligent stockmen. As soon as the fact appeared to them its importance was made manifest at once. The question of breeds was the only one discussed. The man who has found that by raising short horn cattle he can produce two pounds of beef where he had been producing one with native cattle is not a hard one to convince that if he will change from his barnyard scrubs to Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Orpingtons or Rhode Island Reds he will be enabled to double his poultry product with the same expense for feed, to say nothing of the increased egg yield and the uniform appearance of the flock. The proposition to him is as plain as the nose on a man's face. These up-to-date stockmen are of greater value to any community. They do not have to open their mouths or utter a sound. Their success is being watched, and others will strive to do likewise.

Take stock sections of Kentucky and Tennessee as examles, and you will find that nine out of ten of these breeders of fine stock are also breeders of some one or more good kinds of chickens or turkeys. Are they successful? How long have they been breeding fine poultry? I will answer the second question first, and then I think you will be able to answer the first. Many of them have been breeding this good class of poultry for ten or twenty years. Would you presume that breeders of fine cattle, horses and hogs, men of the very best abilities in stock farming, would bother to keep a class of fine chickens if they were not more profitable than scrubs? Not a bit of it. Men of this character must have results and experience of such. Now, then, can we not profit by the results and experience of such men?

Experience is a good teacher, as is often said, but if we can run on to a short cut by which we can reach the same results and save ourselves years of experimenting, is it not wise to take advantage of it at once? We are not compelled to go through long years of experimenting with crosses, striving to produce a breed of chickens that will give us good results as egg producers. Specialists, as we might call them, in their line of work have them all ready for you in the Leghorns, Minorcas and Hamburgs. You do not have to rack your brain for years over a strain intended as a general purpose chicken, one that will give you the most meat with the least consumation of feed, and at the same time give you an abundance of eggs. Such a fowl is all ready for you, and you can take your choice as to color in the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks of the different varieties, the Rhode Island Reds and the Orpingtons. The whole scheme is cocked and primed; all there is for you to do is to touch it off. Why any reasonable man or any man of reason will stand in his own light in these matters and not take hold of a good thing when he sees it is more than I can understand. I know of no other one thing in which a man in the country, city or suburbs can invest a few dollars and get as quick and satisfactory returns on his investment as thoroughbred poultry. These are not idle fancies; they have proven thousands of times in this country. The amount of money to be made from such an investment lies with you, depending upon the time and energy you are willing to devote to it. The possibilities are limitless.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Quarter Million In New Building

The building inspector's office did a large business Saturday. A permit was granted the Louisville and Nashville and the Atlantic Coast Line Railway Companies to erect a two-story reinforced concrete building on Central Avenue to cost $206,000, and application was made to erect the three-story brick building for Nunnally & McCrea, overall manufacturers, at 74 and 75 Central Avenue, at a cost of $43,000. The former will be for the commission merchants of the city, and especially those merchants now located along North and South Broad Streets. It will front 420 feet along the new street, Produce Row, and 90 feet on Central Avenue and Washington Street. H. J. Carr & Co. have the contract.

Permits have been issued for a change in the front of the Imperial Hotel at Peachtree and Ivy Streets, for $3,000, and for a number of small dwellings. The first five months of 1913 are behind 1912 in big buildings, but are ahead in dwellings. The total of dwellings for the first five months in 1912 was 488, as against 524 this year.

Marietta Street Sale.

Joseph F. Gatins has sold to J. K. Shippey a parcel on Marietta Street, 597 feet northwest of Jefferson Street, for $26,250, on terms of $8,750 cash and the balance in notes, and Mr. Shippey has transferred it to Shippey Brothers & White for a consideration, which is withheld. This parcel is 150 by 397 by 50 by 407 feet, and frontage on the W. & A. right-of-way as well as on Marietta Street.

More Peachtree Paving.

For the purpose of taking up the matter of repaving Peachtree from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead, the Board of County Commissioners will meet Tuesday morning at the Court House. Property owners interested have been requested to be present to hear a proposition from the board. This matter was discussed at a recent meeting and was postponed for further discussion. Several of the commissioners are said to be in favor of the plan.

Peachtree was recently repaved from Sixth to Fifteenth Streets, and it is proposed to extend the work to make a uniformly smooth thoroughfare leading into the remote sections of the county.

Lawton Street Sale.

Mrs. C. J. Cook has bought from Marcellus M. Anderson, through Mr. Maddox, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, 77 Lawton Street, a seven-room house on a 46 by 150-foot lot, for $4,000.

Big Deals Pending.

Real estate dealers report several interesting deals which have been finally closed up. One of these, it is said, involves about $200,000, and another nearly $100,000. There are some smaller sales which will be announced early next week.

Interest in Electric Line.

Real estate men got out their maps Saturday to plan a route for the Greenville, Anderson and Spartanburg Railroad, which it is proposed to run into Atlanta from South Carolina. Several land dealers in town are now working on rights-of-way for various railroads and buying up property for this class of development, and they declare they will turn their attention to the new project if it should materialize. The line is electric and one of the biggest things of its kind undertaken.

The plan is to connect up Atlanta with the other Carolina cities and make this city the southwestern terminus. J. B. Duke, the tobacco king, is backing the railroad, and the Anderson (S. C.) Chamber of Commerce is pulling for Atlanta as an objective point.

Buildings for Whitehall.

Since the City Council has set aside $3,500 for regrading Whitehall Street, between Mitchell and Garnett Streets, buildings proposed by Charles H. Black, C. E. Currier, John W. Grant and others can soon go ahead. Regrading will start in October and the street is expected to be vastly improved.

Land Money Coming.

Good news has come to local real estate dealers from points in the East, to the effect that in the next six months there will be a great deal of money sent to this section to be loaned on real estate. This is the gist of an interview with William Hurd Hillyer, who has just returned from a trip, and who reports great confidence among financiers in land securities.

Crowds at Auction Sale.

Inquiries received concerning the auction sale of bungalows and lots indicated that there would be a large crowd out this Saturday afternoon at Oakland City. Foster & Robson are conducting the sale and J. W. Ferguson & Son are the auctioneers. Six bungalows built by Colonel I. N. Ragsdale and nineteen building lots are the offering.

FRANK DEFENSE TO MAKE FIGHT ON CONLEY

who drew the staple from the back door and thereby made his escape from the building, either by way of Madison Avenue or Forsyth Street.

The missing purse that Mary Phagan is known to have had in her hand when she left home, and in which she is supposed to have put her money just received from Frank, has never been found, although Conley has been careful enough to account for her hat and her shoe.

Undoubtedly, the defense has been very busy, while the State's officers have been talking.

Reticent and silent as the grave as to the theory of the crime to be advanced in defense of Frank, it now is known that it will be sweeping, sensational and complete.

State Faces Strong Defense.

Whether it will come as a tremendous surprise to the prosecution, or whether something of the magnitude and scope of it has leaked through to the Solicitor and the police within the past 24 hours, is problematical.

The sudden clamping down of the lid at detective headquarters and the announcement that no more talking would be done there, either for the State or anybody else, is viewed by many as a circumstance tending to show that the State at last has come to a full realization of the fact that Frank's defense will be thorough and complete in detail.

Whereas up to yesterday any sort of an interview might be had for the asking of the detective, to-day nothing whatever may be had.

As silent as the defense has been, it has nothing by way of silence on the State to-day.

Frank's Character.

Frank's previous good character, his fine business reputation, his happy family relations, his ordinary habits of life and his everyday methods of conducting himself will be thrown fearlessly into the scales.

It has been determined for him to leave nothing unsaid and to leave nothing undone that may tend to clear fully and completely and to free him for all time from responsibility for this crime or any knowledge of it.

Besides the technical correctness of Frank's defense, his lawyers will undertake to show how impossible it would have been for him to have done what the negro accuses him of, under the negro's own statement.

Conley's affidavits will be reduced to absurdities, so the defense now believes. He not only will be thrown out of court upon a strict legal showing, but he will be grimly laughed out.

To Attack Conley.

His general character will be put in evidence, his drinking habits established, and his opportunity to have killed Mary Phagan completely demonstrated.

Attorney Rosser is known, despite his silence, to have determined not only upon Frank's complete acquittal, but upon Conley's future conviction.

The foregoing in brief outline, is the defense of Leo Frank now being framed up in surprising detail.

If the defense can establish what it now unquestionably hopes to and believes it may, Frank's acquittal seems a foregone conclusion.

Of course, the State still is standing pat on its theory that Frank committed the crime, but undoubtedly is more or less disturbed by the surprising nature of the defense that has leaked out, even to the extent indicated, and is preparing to meet that defense accordingly.

WOOL MAGNATE ACQUITTED OF CONSPIRACY

BOSTON, June 7.—"Not guilty" for William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, was the verdict of the jury in the Lawrence dynamite case returned in the Suffolk Superior Court at 9:55 o'clock to-day, after the jury had been out since 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge dog fancier, was found guilty on two counts.

The three defendants were tried jointly upon charges in fifteen counts of conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence during the big textile strike of last year.

The court room was crowded when the jury came in. The three defendants were sitting outside the rail. Wood was chatting with his counsel, members of his family and friends at the left side of the room. Ateaux was sitting by Wood.

The jurymen were pale and dishevelled, like men who had wrestled all night in earnest argument.

Probe Jury Tampering.

Even before the jury reported, District Attorney Pelletier set on foot a rigid investigation of the charges of Juror Morris Shuman that he had been approached with an offer of a good job or of $300 if he would "vote right" in the trial.

The police have the names of six men they believe to be connected with the case. John Doe warrants were to be asked for, and one or more of these men were expected to be arrested before night. When Assistant Clerk John Campbell called each defendant by name the three men rose and stood inside the rail. Then the clerk called for the verdict from the foreman of the jury, saying:

"What say you as to Mr. Wood on the first count?"

"Not guilty," replied Foreman Wesser, distinctly.

The verdicts on the defendant counts followed in order, the result in each count being given first for Wood, then for Atteaux, then for Collins.

Six Counts Against Each.

The indictment charged each man in six counts with conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence in the big textile strike in order to discredit the strikers. The defendant counts were practically different descriptions of the same act. The reading of the verdicts took fully three minutes. The tabulated result was as follows:

Wood was found not guilty on all six counts.

The jury disagreed on Atteaux on all but the sixth count, and that count was not considered, because Judge Crosby had directed the jury to return verdicts of not guilty for all three defendants on the sixth count.

Collins was found guilty on the first and second counts and not guilty on the other four.

The defendants had to wait until fifteen counts were reported upon before each man knew how his separate case stood in the eyes of the law and the jury.

ANOTHER VICTIM IS CLAIMED IN PAINTER CASE

By COLE E. MORGAN.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 7.—While no new light has been shed on the mystery in the death of E. O. Painter immediately after he had taken out $1,000,000 life insurance, that case has a tragic result in the death of John Stricker Coles, which is attributed directly to worry over the affair.

Mr. Coles, a brother of A. P. Coles, the Atlanta banker; Mrs. Stewart Phinizy, of Augusta; Mrs. J. D. Twiggs, of Albany, and Mrs. J. J. Talley, of Columbia, S. C., was general agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which issued policies on Painter's life totaling $190,000, and which refused him $50,000 additional on the ground that he was overinsured. These applications had gone through the Jacksonville office. The Equitable was one of those active in investigating Painter's death. This company ranked next to the Mutual in the amount of insurance on Painter.

His Death a Surprise.

Coles had been in bad health for several months. The Painter mystery caused him much worry, as it did the agents of other companies interested. A few days ago, while the Painter investigation was in progress, he was forced to take his bed, but his illness was not considered serious, and it was stated at his office only Friday afternoon that he was expected at his desk within a few days. However, before the day was over he was stricken with a heart attack and died almost immediately.

The announcement of his death today came as a real shock in Jacksonville business circles, for Coles was one of the most popular men here. He had been a resident of Jacksonville for nine years. He was 57 years old. His wife and eight children survive him.

Rush Active Investigation.

The Mutual, Equitable and New York Life companies have been most active in the investigation of Painter's death. Each of these companies has had an adjuster here directly representing the home office. Some of the companies have had inspectors on the ground, while two or three have been represented only by their resident general agents. The Mutual, being the largest company interested, has probably gone more thoroughly into the case than any other.

The local insurance men are reticent in discussing the details of the investigations made for their companies until the report on the autopsy and chemical examination of Painter's organs reaches the Coroner's jury. They fear to disclose any of their information lest it prejudice their cases if the anticipated court contests over the payment of the policies materialize.

State to Take No Action.

The State of Florida, through the Criminal Court, is taking and will take no part in the Painter inquest, declared William A. Hallowes, State's Attorney, to-day. "There is no suspicion whatever that Mr. Painter's death was due to any act of violence on the part of another," he said, "and for that reason there is no occasion for an inquest as far as the Criminal Court is concerned. The law specifies that inquests are necessary only where there is suspicion of death being due directly or indirectly to a criminal action on the part of another. No such condition applies in this case, and I so stated to the Coroner's jury. The Coroner has authority to call an inquest when he sees fit, and to report the findings to the Criminal Court for the action of the Grand Jury, but I will state positively that the Painter case will not be presented to that body.

"Mr. Painter died either from natural causes, by accidentally drowning or he committed suicide. No second party had any hand in his death. The question is one between the insurance companies and the representatives of the dead man's family. The State of Florida has no interest in it."

Attorney Hallowes is a law graduate of the University of Georgia, class of 1903.

No Report Yet.

The report of analysis made of Painter's vital organs by Baltimore chemists did not reach Jacksonville to-day. Cashier Wheeler, of the Barnett National Bank, to which institution it was ordered sent, said it had not reached the bank nor had there been any message received as to when it would come. Coroner C. D. Abbott said he had received a message that the report would leave Baltimore on Monday. That means it will be next Wednesday before it will be available for action by the Coroner's jury. After completing their tests the chemists needed additional time to write and certify under oath to their report.

Dr. J. E. Boyd and Dr. P. C. Perry, the physicians representing the Painter family, who performed the autopsy and who went to Baltimore to witness the chemical analysis, arrived in Jacksonville Friday night, after an absence of fifteen days on this case.

The result of the Baltimore analysis is a closely guarded secret as far as Jacksonville is concerned. Drs. Boyd and Perry and representatives of the Painter family are the only persons here who know what took place in Baltimore, and they absolutely refuse to discuss the matter to-day. Dr. Perry said: "I will answer no questions whatever. It is no use asking them."

Clubwomen Plan City Beautiful

Speaker Calls Atlanta Dirty

Other Civic Movements Advocated

Atlanta clubwomen have inaugurated a movement for a city beautiful, following an address by Mrs. W. P. Pattillo to the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

Having just returned from a trip abroad, Mrs. Pattillo discussed European methods of beautifying municipalities, to which she devoted considerable time and study, and gave vivid descriptions of results as she saw them. She selected for her subject, "How Other Cities Are Made Beautiful and Attractive," and sought to interest the clubwomen of Atlanta in co-operative measures which have transformed continental cities into veritable gardens.

"Atlanta is one of the dirtiest places I have seen," Mrs. Pattillo said, as she contrasted the city with other places she had visited in Europe and America. Then she described the city's natural advantages and asked the clubwomen to concentrate their efforts toward developing them. Her auditors, representing 84 clubs with 8,000 members, expressed pleasure at her remarks and pledged themselves to work together to carry out her suggestions. It was evident to all present that Atlanta will be made a city beautiful if her clubwomen have the necessary influence.

Industrial Home Suggested.

Civic movements received most attention at the hands of the Federation members. Prominent among them was a report of the committee on resolutions, made by Mrs. James Jackson, containing a recommendation for the establishment of an industrial home for wayward girls. The Federation indorsed the resolution and announced its intention of petitioning the Georgia Legislature to establish the home. Atlanta will be suggested as the proper site for the home.

Counsel for the company explained that full restitution had been made by Shourds. Shourds, indicted in September, is said to have opened negotiations with the bank official by means of advertisements.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Shortening of the grammar school, high school and college courses in order to put young men and women into business and other activities at an early age was advocated to-day by Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, the only witness summoned before the Illinois Senate White Slave Committee hearings to-day.

Lieutenant Governor O'Hara, questioning President Judson, asked:

"How long is it after a young man leaves college before he is financially able to marry?"

"About three or four years," replied President Judson.

"Do you think the shortening of the courses in schools would make the young man earlier efficient?"

"Yes, especially in the case of the young man who is going into business. I believe a boy or girl should spend about seven years going through the grades and high school. I believe it will ultimately be made six years instead of twelve, as at present. There are too many things taught in the high schools. They fritter away too much time. The first university year is a repetition of high school work."

"I owe my education to the fact that I ran away from my teachers while I was still young enough to learn something. I think the last two years of the present high school course should be devoted to training students for active business life."

PENDLETON SAYS BEAVERS MIGHT BE IMPEACHED

That Chief of Police James L. Beavers and Policeman James H. Kirke are subject to impeachment if the facts in the temporary restraining order of Mrs. N. P. Powell, who has been sentenced to four months in jail, are substantiated in court, was the startling declaration of Superior Court Judge John T. Pendleton in discussing the case Saturday morning.

The judge defended the State courts in granting the temporary injunction and said that Chief Beavers had misstated the facts if he said the courts were interfering with his breaking up a disorderly house. He said the injunction distinctly read that the police were only restrained from making the woman move from the house and in no other way balked any action that might be contemplated.

He said the police were at liberty to raid as often as they saw fit and make a case against the woman every time she violated the law.

"In the petition for an injunction the woman said Kirke made an improper proposal to her," said Judge Pendleton. "She alleged that when she ordered him away he threatened to have her place raided every night until she was forced to move. She said Kirke had told Beavers of having made the improper proposal and had poisoned his mind against her.

"If she can prove that Beavers knew of Kirke's proposal and his threats and permitted himself to be influenced, the two are subject to impeachment.

"Judge Bell granted this particular temporary restraining order, but I would have done the same thing had I been on the bench that day. The law allows no latitude or discretion in this matter. A woman comes into court and makes a sworn statement that her home is not a disorderly house and that she anticipates irreparable wrong and injury on the part of the police in forcing her to move. If the court were to wait until the matter could be tried, the injury would be done.

"A judge can not do otherwise than believe the sworn statement. The law demands that protection be granted. There is a wide difference between a temporary and a permanent injunction, and it is more than likely the permanent injunction would not be granted.

"This particular injunction has been pending in the courts a little longer than the ordinary. It has been called three or four times, but on each occasion the attorneys for the city or the defense were not available and it had to be postponed. It was called Friday, but the lawyers were in the other court trying the case. It will be heard at an early date."

POLICE BOARD WANTS PROBE TO GO DEEP

McEachern Declares Vice Inquiry Will Prove Beavers and Lanford Have Done Full Duty.

"If the vice probe in Atlanta is carried to a complete conclusion," said Commissioner J. N. McEachern, of the Police Board, Saturday, "it will be found that Atlanta is one of the cleanest and most moral cities in the United States, the assertion of the Rev. Mr. Batten to the contrary notwithstanding.

"The Grand Jury will find that Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford have done their whole duty, and that not one single instance of corruption or graft will be found. I have been a member of the Police Board for the past six years, and I have watched the department closely. I say without hesitation that I believe in the absolute integrity and honesty of both chiefs. I am confident that if there had been any corruption or graft in the department it would have been unearthed by the board, which is composed of reputable citizens and business men serving in the interest of the city and the welfare of the people.

Board Trusts Chiefs.

"Every member of the board is more than anxious to have the probe reach the very bottom. We know the men and we know the chiefs and we have the utmost confidence in them.

"An old saw is that 'where there is so much smoke there must be some fire,' and this has been quoted by many persons since the vice probe was begun. The saying may be true; in fact, I am rather inclined to the opinion that it is true in this case, but not in the manner in which it is suggested by those who would discredit the Police Department. The smoke has been raised by those who discredit the department, and the fire is the desire of those individuals to to bring reproach on the men who have dared to do right and enforce the law. The investigation will reveal the fact that the smoke does not arise from the department, and that there is no fire there, but on the contrary, from those who would turn Atlanta over to the lawless element and the mercy of those who value a dollar more than they do a human soul."

Commissioner McEachern unhesitatingly stated that the morality of the city had been improved by the efforts of the police officials to enforce the law, and that in this they had his support and approval.

"The question of segregation is one that the majority of the members of the board hesitate to express an opinion upon, but a large majority will stand back of Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford in the discharge of their duties, and will abide by the action of the lawmaking body, their one and only duty being to enforce the law as laid down in the City Code."

Whitewashing Effort Fails.

That a faction in the Grand Jury tried to whitewash the vice probe shortly after the first witness was examined, became known Saturday. A vote was taken on the question and the probe continued. Two members of the body, at least, will insist on the inquiry being continued when the jury meets next Tuesday morning.

Immediately after Colonel Thomas B. Felder testified and left the room a juryman offered a resolution that the Grand Jury go on record as saying "Atlanta is better morally than it has ever been and vice is effectively stamped out." The motion was defeated by the necessary twelve votes, and other witnesses were called. Several times before adjournment Thursday the same person is said to have offered the resolution and each time it was defeated.

A sensational development is expected Tuesday when a member of the jury, who will insist on the probe being continued, will ask the foreman to summon a man high up in police circles to tell what he knows of vice conditions and what knowledge the police have of them.

That the probe will be continued is practically an established fact Saturday. Since adjournment Thursday Foreman L. H. Beck has received numerous communications from citizens asking that vice conditions be more thoroughly inquired into.

Many Offer Information.

Some of the communications give the names of witnesses who will give the jury addresses and "positive information."

Several names have been furnished that were not in the hands of the jury when it adjourned Thursday. One of them is Mrs. Nell Powell, of 95 Spring Street, who was sentenced to four months imprisonment Friday for running a lewd house. She expressed a willingness to furnish the jury with the addresses of some 50 or 60 houses in Atlanta and over a hundred names. She will in all probability be called before the jury Tuesday morning and asked to furnish the list that the witnesses may be called for a meeting later in the week.

The movement for new high schools gained impetus Saturday when public-spirited citizens turned with interest toward the plan as advocated by Colonel Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, in his two addresses at the graduation exercises of the Boys' and Girls' High Schools, in which he urged a $5,900,000 bond issue by the city of Atlanta, $2,000,000 for the express purpose of building high schools.

There is not an adequate high school in the entire city of Atlanta. It's up to the people, and time City Councilmen are urged to wake up and do their duty. Atlanta has a credit upon which any city government could borrow $5,000,000, declared Colonel Daley, president of the Board of Education, Friday night when he presented high school diplomas to 64 young Americans.

"The current revenue from taxation," said Colonel Daley, "is not sufficient to care for the maintenance of the high schools, and it's not sufficient to take care of the current expense of the other important departments.

Asks $2,000,000 for Schools.

"Atlanta citizens should see that city officials work for a $5,000,000 bond issue, and of that amount, as president of the Board of Education, I want to ask for $2,000,000 for the purpose of erecting adequate and abundant plants for high school students. The remainder of the money from such a bond issue should go to the other departments. We need additional grammar schools and many improvements. All this is because Atlanta is growing so rapidly, and yet people who are not in constant touch with these matters are prone to disregard them."

The graduating exercises of the Boys' High School in the Grand Opera House were more than ordinarily impressive, and members of the faculty said they indicated that young men are thinking deeply and are taking an interest in matters which ten years ago the average high school graduate had absolutely no conception of.

"The growth and development of the nation is characterized in Theodore Roosevelt's advocacy of the strenous life," declared Bascom H. Torrance in his valedictory. "But already has a reaction set in. There is now a demand for intellectual activity and development. This intellectual activity is characterized in Woodrow Wilson's policy, which has impressed upon the demagogues RESTRAINT.

Conservation His Policy.

"Conservation of careful, thoughtful and helpful actions is President Wilson's ideal. His policy is applicable to every question which requires foresight and thought, regardless of political objects or interests.

"Conditions to-day are greater than ever before. From now on will justice and moderation supplant knavery and intrigue."

"With modern cynicism obliterated will come the great question, the human philosophy of life."

The Grand Opera House was packed. In the balcony sat High School boys, underclassmen, each thinking about the day when he should graduate. In the boxes sat members of the Boad of Education and their families. Throughout the crowded house sat proud fathers and mothers whose interest centered in just one of the 64 boys on the stage.

After a fitting prayer by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Superintendent of Public Schools W. M. Slaton announced that, owing to a change in the course of the Technological High School, which had been extended to a four-year course, there would be no graduates from that school this year as in former years.

Student Orators Please.

Mr. Slaton then introduced Sam Eplan, of the commercial department, who delivered an oration on "The Gospel of Service." Eplan's oration was interesting and breezy and struck a true note. The speaker advocated honesty and uprightness, fairness and equality in all business transactions. Joseph H. Stanfiel was valedictorian and acquitted himself well.

"Universal Peace" was the subject discussed in the oration of Roy W. Manning, an eloquent plea for the abolition of war.

An oration by Ernest H. Lowenthal on "Woman's Suffrage" aroused genuine interest. The way he championed woman's rights certainly put him in strong with the audience, for he was given round after round of applause.

The B. H. S. and T. H. S. Orchestra rendered a number of choice selections. The boys played excellently and were encored time and again.

Presentation of diplomas was then made by Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education. Each boy was applauded as he received his sheepskin.

Medals and Scholarships.

The announcement and delivery of medals and scholarships was made by Hon. Edgar Watkins. The winners of these prizes had been kept secret.

The Holzman medal, given by A. Holzman, the jeweler, for excellence in scholarship, was awarded to Bascom H. Torrance.

Medal given by the Atlanta Chapter, Daughers of 1812, for improvement in physical culture was awarded to Edwin P. Lochridge.

The following scholarships were awarded:

Washington and Lee University, Sam Armistead; Mercer University, Charles B. Cotney; Harold Hirsch $150 scholarship to University of Georgia, Herbert O. Calhoun; Price Greenleaf cash scholarship to Harvard University, Bascom Torrance; Davidson University, divided between George Hoyt and Evelyn Hamilton; University of North Carolina, Roy W. Manning; University of Chicago, Eugene Johnson; Tulane University, Spencer A. Folsom; Emory College, Charles Candler; University of the South, Lewis Rosser.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO REPEAT COMEDY

Second Performance To Be for Charity — Trip to Other Cities Planned.

The Players' Club is planning to give another performance of "The Importance of Being Earnest" in the near future. The second performance will be given under the auspices of a local charity, the selection of which is in the hands of a committee composed of Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Robert L. Cooney, Lamar Hill and Hamilton Douglas.

While the performance of Tuesday evening was one of the most successful ever given by the club, in an artistic sense, the attendance was not so good as formerly, and this second performance is planned to give the public an opportunity to see one of the best plays given by the club, and at the same time to give assistance to some worthy charity of the city.

The club also expects to take "The Importance of Being Earnest" to other cities, with the notable cast which presents the comedy here, including Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Miss Hilldreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Lamar Hill, Marsh Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Frank Taylor and others.

Some time ago the Savannah Dramatic Club made a proposition to give its recent successful play in Atlanta if the Atlanta club would play there. Birmingham also has invited the Players' Club to that city, and probably several other Georgia towns will have the opportunity of seeing Atlanta's talented amateurs in the well-known Wilde comedy.

The wonderful City Life Section of The Sunday American will be better than ever on Sunday. Mutt and Jeff, and Powers, the great cartoonist, with dozens of other fun-makers, will have exclusive features.

City of Flowers Is Rich's Ideal School Contest Has High Purpose

Conceived the Idea of Organizing Playground-Recreation Centers While Traveling in Europe.

To make every school yard in Atlanta beautiful and attractive.

To inculcate into the minds of the children a love for flowers and the beautiful things that grow that they will carry into their daily lives and into their homes, and eventually make possible the dream of civic enthusiasts—the city beautiful.

These are the reasons, Walter H. Rich said Saturday, that prompted him to begin his campaign for more attractive school yards and offer prizes each year to the school showing the best results.

Walter H. Rich.

Hopes to Have all Enter.

The presentation of two prizes of $50 each, offered by Mr. Rich, to the Davis Street and the English Avenue Schools Thursday marked the close of the second year of the contest. The results have been wonderful. Though not all of the city schools have entered the contest, a majority of them have taken part, and many of the most barren school yards have been transformed by the children into flower gardens. Next year Mr. Rich hopes to have every school in the city entered in the contest, and expects greater results each year.

"I got the idea of trying to improve Atlanta's school yards," said Mr. Rich, "while I was traveling abroad. In Europe the school yards are made as attractive as possible and are utilized as recreation centers when not otherwise in use.

Has Two Objects in View.

"When I became a member of the Board of Education, I wanted to do something more for the schools than the mere routine business of the board meetings, so I thought of the contest. It has run two years, and I am more than satisfied with results.

"By offering the prizes and getting the children interested in the work, I hope to accomplish two things. One is to make the yards of the school beautiful and attractive to the children. Boys and girls do not like to go to places that are dirty and barren. I think every school yard in the country ought to have flowers planted wherever they will grow, always, provided, of course, that the children shall be left plenty of room in which to play. If it comes to a choice between the flowers and a playground, the playground should be the first consideration. But in most school yards there is room for both.

Wants City of Flowers.

"I hope also to foster a love for the beautiful that will eventually make of Atlanta a city of flowers. The ideas taught the children now will develop and expand as they grow older, and in the end we will have citizens who will take pride in making their homes and their city attractive."

Mr. Rich's plan has been indorsed by the Board of Education, though the prizes are offered out of his own pocket. He also has been assisted by the ladies of the Atlanta Art Institute, and a committee, headed by Mrs. Joseph Moody, made the selections of the winning schools for 1913 and aided in awarding the prizes.

PARIS, June 7.—All Paris newspapers to-day agree that the Parisians have accorded Rear Admiral Peary and his family a triumphant reception that few living personalities have ever received. "I believe the expedition should approach the pole from an opposite direction to that taken by Scott and Amundsen," said the explorer. "The result of my expedition will be to draw up a map of the South Polar

Opening of Headquarters First Indication That Legislative Session Is Near.

The first concrete evidence of the fact that the Legislature is about to get together in Atlanta came to light to-day, when the boomers for the new county of Candler secured headquarters in the Kimball House and prepared to open war in earnest for their pet project.

Two handsome rooms on the parlor floor have been reserved, and literature will be shipped in by the ton for the next few days. Managers will be in charge from this time forward. Banners will be strung all around and about the lobby and the walls of the hotel, and the merits of the proposed grand young county of Candler will be shouted from the house tops, both vociferously and eloquently from this time forward.

Representative Burwell, of Hancock, who generally is thought to have the speakership pretty well sewed up, will open headquarters shortly, and both Judge John T. Allen and Senator Randolph Anderson, candidates for President of the Senate, will do likewise.

It long has been thought to be quite the fit and proper thing for candidates to have "headquarters" in Atlanta, and nine cases out of ten in the Kimball House. Sometimes, the walls and railings are far too limited in extent to accommodate the banners and things, and other devices to catch the eye of the incoming member are adopted. In all cases, however, the warfare for position and glory is merry enough in Georgia, and the incoming Legislature will have its share of excitement, no doubt.

Representative Sills, of Metter, who has in charge the fight to create Candler County, is very optimistic. Discussing the subject to-day he said:

"The Legislature is sure to create Candler County. Already we have secured pledges from 138 out of 184 members. That is well over the necessary two-thirds required in passing constitutional amendments.

"There is practically no opposition to the new county. Seven of the eight newspapers published in the territory affected are favorable to it. Indeed, they are fighting for it. The counties of Bulloch, Emanuel, and Tatnall, from which the new county will be taken, have a combined territory of 2,400 square miles, and of that it will require to create Candler only 361. This is no new proposition—we have been agitating the matter for nine years—and this year, we get it!"

The friends of A. O. Blalock, of Fayette County, more generally known as "Bud," are congratulating him on being named Collector of Internal Revenue for Georgia, notwithstanding the fact that the tip long ago came straight from Washington that he was to win the plum.

There hardly is a man in Georgia better known than Blalock, and few that have more friends. He has served in the Legislature, in both the House and the Senate, time and again and never has been defeated for office.

Mr. Blalock expects to take his office about the first day of July.

Peace reigns again over Banks' mill pond at Milltown, and its environs, the cases against a number of citizens charged with fishing in the pond without consent of the owner, having been nol-prossed in the city court at Nashville.

An agreement was reached between R. T. Berryhill, lessee of the Banks' property and each of the defendants, which was satisfactory to the court and Game Warden Mercer, with the result that Judge Christian dismissed the prosecutions.

The cases attracted much attention in the State, by reason of the newspaper interviews given out by Warden Mercer and his Deputy Boisclair, and the severe criticism of these officials by the people at Milltown. It is understood that in future people who want to fish in the pond will obtain permission from Mr. Berryhill or some of the other owners of land covered by the pond, and that Mr. Berryhill recognize permits given by other land owners.

This is about the old status of affairs, but it is not believed there will be any further trouble.

Governor Brown's final message to the Legislature is about shaped now, and will deal more or less exhaustively with many problems, solved and unsolved, coming to his attention during the term of office about to be wound up.

The Governor's message has not yet been reduced to presentatable shape, however, for it is fashioned after a manner wonderful in the extreme and Brownesque to the limit. It is written out almost entirely on the backs of used envelopes, and is entirely in pencil. The writing is so small and fine, as almost to be illegible to the naked eye, but every single letter and every group is finished as completely as if five times the space were taken up in the writing.

Governor Brown writes an amazingly plain and clear hand, but as amazingly plain and clear as it is, it is even more amazingly small. To the bottom of the document, however, he attaches a signature elaborate and imposing in the extreme. Those who have sen it never forget it.

Governor Brown's relations to the incoming administration are very cordial, and there will be nothing by way of conflict in his farewell message and the initial message of Governor Slaton, which will follow in a few days later.

Colonel Charles R. Pendleton, of The Macon Telegraph, nestor of Georgia journalism and powerful political factor in the State, is a pronounced baseball "fan."

Visitors to Macon nowadays will do well to go to The Telegraph office either early in the morning or very late in the afternoon if they wish to catch the Colonel on the job. Otherwise he is sure to be out at the ball park watching the game.

Two Sides to a Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THOUGH love and marriage are the dreams of every girl, happiness is not dependent on either, and often one is happiest without them.

There are two sides to the question. The girl who is looking anxiously for the coming of a lover, and who grows apprehensive when he is delayed, sees only one side. She takes no account of the look of care, unhappiness and discontent on the face of the wife. She does not see—she refuses to see—that matrimony does not always bring returns commensurate for the price one must pay.

Perhaps it may lessen the discontent of the girl who has no lover to compare the life of the woman who never marries with that of the wife.

The girl has time and opportunity for cultivating every talent with which she is endowed. The only talents the wife is given opportunity to develop are those of economy and patience.

The happiness of a nation depends on its power to dream, and this being true of the whole, is true of the part. The girl dreams of an ideal lover, and the dream is never shattered; a wife has no illusions left.

A Wife's Work.

A girl has many hours in which she has nothing disagreeable to do; but the wife finds she has more to do for the rest of her life than any man could stand up under.

The uncertainty of the girl centers around WHO is to be her husband, and is not unpleasant. The uncertainty of wifehood is WHERE he is, and is a tragedy.

The criticisms a girl receives in her home are loving and kindly; those the wife receives are less kindly, and her rewards for effort to please are less sure.

The girl walks as if she owned the earth. Ten years after she has married she will walk as if she were carrying it on her shoulders.

"If I don't marry," a girl will say, "I will be an old maid." * * * "If I hadn't married and been tied down by the cares of a husband and home," she will say some years later, "I might have won fame and fortune by developing my talents."

There is loneliness in spinsterhood, but there is also PEACE.

The girl who marries sentences herself to self-sacrifice and hard labor for life. Her only reward is Love, and could you, my dear little girl with the discontented look because your lover has not come, count up the number of wives you know who are systematically and regularly cheated out of their payments?

The girl who never marries is the one to whom opportunity is given for being the blessing and mainstay of her parents' home. There is no avenue for developing her character which matrimony grants and spinsterhood denies.

Two Sides.

There are two sides to the question One can be a happy spinster; one may be a happy wife.

The former is a question of will. The latter depends on a string of ifs long enough to encircle the globe.

I do not want my girls to care less for love, but I do want them to value more highly the greater privileges, the fewer burdens, the lighter loads, the broader opportunities and the surer peace that await the woman to whom love and marriage never come.

I want them, for their own sake, to look with less panic-stricken fright and greater sanity upon the spinster's side of the question.

Diplomatic.

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never, marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take her and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's old friend, the boarding house keeper also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what anybody thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Hah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

Do You Know That—

An 18-year-old boy was injured in a game of football two years ago, but after two days returned to work feeling quite well again. Last summer he had to be examined for insurance purposes, and the doctor found there was something wrong with his neck, but did not discover exactly what was the matter. A short time ago, however, the boy's neck began to give him such pain that he was made to undergo an examination under X-rays. Then the astounded physicians discovered that it was broken. They can not realize how he has lived all this time. It is a question whether a cure can be effected.

The Farmers' Association of the department of Loir-et-Cher has held at Blois a competition for agricultural workers who have brought up the largest families, all the members of which have remained "on the land." Eleven grandmothers—the youngest aged 45 and the oldest 80—presented themselves, surrounded by 95 children and 138 grandchildren. The first prize went to a woman who has had 13 children, of whom 9 are living, and 20 grandchildren.

The Czar is, among European monarchs, the one who makes the least use of the motor car. His imperial majesty, in former days, registered a vow that he would never enter such a conveyance, and although necessity occasionally compels him to break it his dislike for motors is unabated. When King Edward first took a car with him to Denmark on joining the big family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the Czar nor his grandfather, King Christian IX, could be persuaded to set foot in it.

The Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, is shortly going to be superseded by an even more splendid vessel. It is said that the new yacht was partly designed by the Kaiser himself, who adds a knowledge of shipbuilding to his varied stock of information. The vessel will take two years to build, and is not expected to be ready before the spring of 1915.

Why He Couldn't.

N American philanthropist made a business of getting jobs for men just out of jail. A notorious cracksman came to him with a letter of introduction from the clergyman.

"I've the very thing you want," said the philanthropist when the jailbird had dilated adequately and with pride upon his exploits. "I'll see my friend Briggs. Come around to-morrow morning."

"You're to go to work at once," said the philanthropist. "My friend Briggs is producing a melodrama. In it is a scene where a burglar enters the room and cracks a safe. It will only take you a few minutes, and you don't have to speak a word—just execute the job with the minute detail that will make it look real. Your salary will be $50 a week."

The convict dolefully shook his head.

"Sorry I can't take the job, boss."

"Can't take it? Why, it's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it, boss. I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage."

THE COMING OF DAY.

OVER the edge of the sleeping world,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Past the gloaming where shadow is furled,
Into the chasm of darkness whirled,
Forth from the hosts of blackness hurled—
Over the purple hills;
Out of the land of the sun-rise glow,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Into the meadows of shimmering green,
Over the brooklets of glimmering sheen,
Comes glowing morning, the summer queen—
Aflame are the purple hills.

LIFE IS WORTH IT.

Life is worth it—
Worth the turmoil and the effort and the pain,
Worth the hurt and disappointment
So you make but steady gain;
If the failure of the morning
Give you strength to struggle on,
If the evening mark some progress
From the dimness of the dawn—
Life is worth it.

Life is worth it—
Though you question as the years go slipping by,
"Have I failed in every project?
Have I set my mark too high?
Does the failure of this morning
Mean I never shall attain?
Nay! The power to strive transmuteth
Every failure into gain—
Life is worth it!

Brother and Sister

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

START out a girl with a dollar, and she will come home wearing it. Start out a boy with one, and he will come home eating it.

A girl's interest in a baby is the same as that her brother manifests in a dog.

About all a girl does for her little brother is to scream about his dirty hands every time she looks at him, though it is as natural for a boy to have dirty hands as it is for a cat to have fits.

The quarrels between brothers are over the larger share in something to eat, but when sisters quarrel, it is because one wore something belonging to the other.

It may indicate deep thought when a girl scratches her head, but they don't look at it that way when it is a boy.

Here of late a girl is permitted to read in the parlor fiction worse than that her brother used to peruse surreptitiously in the barn aloft.

It has always been the custom to compare a boy with a weed and a girl with a flower.

A girl doesn't know it, but if someone cut off her hair, put a hundred freckles on her face, and a tan spot on the end of her nose, she would be a duplicate of the younger brother whose looks she so plainly despises.

When brother and sister go to a party together, sister doesn't seem to have any recollection of anything that happened beyond the manner in which her brother misbehaved.

There never was a girl who couldn't give the impression when away from her home that her parents are wealthy, but a boy can't do it.

When a girl is 16 she has the right of way all over the road. Her mother and father promptly side-track when they see her coming, the only one daring a collision being her younger brother. And he long shows the effects of it!

Individual pies, strawberry shortcakes, etc., appeal to a girl, but never to a boy, because they give him no opportunity to get a larger piece than his sister. There is no element of chance in the individual form of pastry.

After sister has expressed her appreciation, brother's thanks sound as cold as yesterday morning's pancakes.

Very Important.

"Its the latest thing out," he said; "up to date in every particular, contains more words than any other, has all the technical and scientific terms that have come into use in the last ten years, and there isn't a feature missing that goes to make a first-class work of the kind."

"Let me look at it a minute," said Mr. Wipedunks.

The agent handed it over, and Mr. W. inspected it briefly. Then he handed it back.

"Young man," he said, "you can't work that book on me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It hain't got no copious index."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young man from the mountains, who says that he never played on any baseball club and that he has never seen a game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta club, to give him a try-out. At batting and fielding practice he creates a sensation, The Atlanta Georgian prints a whole page of snapshots of him and his fame spreads throughout the country.

In the meantime he has become very friendly with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a wealthy timber speculator. Forrest Cain, an admirer of Mildred, becomes jealous of Gordon and attempts to play him a trick and gets soundly thrashed. Gordon owns a large tract of land in the mountains, between two tracts owned by Mr. Deery and Cain, who need Gordon's property to carry out a land scheme.

The Boston Nationals and other big league clubs stop at Atlanta for exhibition games on their way North and Gordon Kelly becomes the baseball sensation of the hour. Scouts who come to see him work try to get him away from the Atlanta club, and then send wild telegrams to their owners, imploring them to come to Atlanta by the first train and do their own bidding. Nearly all the big league magnates come, and President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, announces that, while disposed to reject all offers, his club felt the necessity of living up to the obligations of organized baseball and would sell Gordon Kelly's release to the best advantage of the stockholders of the club. In a practice game with a big league team, Kelly covers himself with glory. He is injured and Mildred rushes on the field to his aid. The newspapers are filled with accounts of the affair.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Readers of newspapers are aware, without being told, that in reports of any great public gathering, any extraordinary crime, any $100,000 diamond robbery, any uncommon disaster, it is the newspapers that set the pace in gathering and distributing the news of the event. This fact is lost sight of in this narrative. In this particular case the newspapers told all about Gordon Kelly, but later certain things happened to him that the newspapers were never able to learn, and they will be told in the course of this story for the first time.

The news of Gordon Kelly's great feat in his last game in Atlanta created a profound impression throughout the baseball world. There was no end of praise for the player and of sympathy for the Boston club, which, through the accident, had lost the services for many weeks at least of a man for whom it had just paid that unheard-of price of $50,000. The championship races in the two big leagues had started and were well under way. In the American League, of which Gordon Kelly was now a member, although not able to play, the Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland clubs had taken the lead, while the New York and Boston clubs were off to a bad start. Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, although himself limping around with an injured leg, bemoaned his hard luck.

"I have the best outfield in the country as it is," he said, "but I could use that Gordon Kelly just the same. Gee, I wish he would hurry up and get well before my club is out of the running."

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, cursed his fate. "If we had only landed Gordon Kelly and if he hadn't broken his leg, we would be right up there fighting with the leaders," he declared.

The word IF is 90 per cent of baseball, it may be remarked.

Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, said:

"Comiskey ought to have landed Gordon Kelly. All I need is that fellow, besides Big Ed Walsh, to win the American League pennant."

On May 10 the championship season in the two big leagues was a month old and Gordon Kelly was still in the hospital at Atlanta. Mildred Deery was still "out of town." That was all the information the patient could get from the Deery residence. The Atlanta club made a short trip to other cities and returned to home grounds for a brief stay. Bill Smith, Long Tom Morrissey and other members of the team paid daily visits to see their former comrade, who got around the hospital grounds on crutches, but who could not be induced to go out to the park and see a ball game.

Something on His Mind.

"Something's on his mind," declared Long Tom in the club house one day. "He doesn't seem to want to talk about baseball much. And it would not surprise me," he added, emphatically, "to learn that that girl that rushed out on the field and took his head in her lap is what's troubling him. Well, I don't know as I can blame him, at that. She was some peacherino, you hear me!"

"He'll get over it," remarked Bill Smith, sagely. "As soon as his leg gets strong enough for him to run the bases you'll see him up at the plate with that bat of his and he'll forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey had nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and, true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred now knew he was a ball player, he argued to himself. She did not disapprove, else why did she rush on the ball field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelly asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things, and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the time being, sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the $50,000 ball player, became an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She complained of a headache and retired at once to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had wellnigh exhausted her, she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole downstairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove, nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7:30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife.

Under ordinary conditions Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the astounding escapade of his daughter. Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery, at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked, in conclusion.

Not So Shocked.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred liked the young man. Far better than her husband, she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I will speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll——." He slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have it. I was planning to go up in the mountains with a surveyor to-morrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has probably moved in by this time. Instead of going to-morrow, I will leave by the noon train to-day and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something, as I want to see her."

Mildred Approves Plan.

"Wait a minute, please, dear. Mildred isn't a child, and you can not force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure, and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains, and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two, and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains, and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Car Full of Supplies.

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened), ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days), and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes; drove to his home, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of kissed his wife, sped to the depot, the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his vast project, Deery had erected a large cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the main road and close to a roaring brook that, a mile or two beyond, ran into Pew Creek, which flowed down past the settlement. It was a beautiful spot, and Mildred cried her delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself dashed up to the bungalow.

The superintendent's name was Shephard, and his family consisted of his wife and boy, a lad of about fifteen years. Mildred promptly became good friends with them all and declared she never wanted to go back to Atlanta again, whereat her father chuckled in his sleeve.

"If you like hunting and fishing, Miss Deery, I can show you a lot of fun up here," said Elmer Shephard, the lad of fifteen years.

"I should enjoy it immensely, Elmer," replied Mildred, "but you will have to teach me."

The boxes and barrels of things Deery had bought in Atlanta arrived on teams before sundown, and Mildred expressed her surprise at the bulk of it. Her father hastened to explain.

"Well, you see," he said, "you will like this place so well that you will be running up every little while from Atlanta, so I just thought I would put in a supply of things to make you comfortable. If there is anything you don't see that you want let me know, and I will have it sent up from the city."

So Mildred settled down to live the joys of mountain life. But in these Georgia mountains, in this wild and solitary country, she came upon an adventure that completely changed the course of her existence.

YOU read the first seventeen installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the eighteenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THERE was a queer old bug up to our house last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It seems that he and father used to go to school together, and the old gent ran into him by accident yesterday afternoon. He didn't know that his school chum had changed so since boyhood, and before he got wise to the change he asked his friend up to the house.

"I was kind of surprised at the general appearance of Pa's friend. He was one of them tall, slim college professor looking kind of chaps, and when anybody spoke to him he gave a little jump sideways like a scared kitten. His manner was that timid and gentle you would have swore, George, that his wife had a dozen kind of Indian signs on him. It seemed kind of funny to the folks to have Pa chumming around with such like, because goodness knows most of his intimate friends are big necked and copper lined enough to make their way in this speedy world of ours. After knowing Bull McCabe and Marty Regan and the rest of Pa's husky comrades, it seemed funny to entertain a shrinking violet like this gent of which I am speaking of."

A Long Story Teller.

"Well, come to the point," said the Head Barber, "and don't be puttering around all the forenoon. You are worse than one of those long story-tellers."

"I wouldn't converse with you at all, ever, if I didn't have to, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "Most of the time you are awful uninteresting anyway. But I might as well finish this yarn, anyhow.

"We was all setting around the parlor like we used to when we was kids at a party, all waiting for somebody else to speak first, when the old man that father had brought home spoke up and said something about believing explicitly in the theory of reincarceration."

"That ain't the word," said the Head Barber. "I don't know the word either, but it's something that ends up with the name of a flower—carnation, I think."

Didn't Know the Name.

"If you don't know the name of the theory what made you interrupt me?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "Anyhow, it was something about folks that lived a long time ago living over again. For instance, the old gent said—don't mean father, I mean the other old gent—that he believed he was a soldier in the time when they was having the Wars of the Roses. He said that he fought under the Red Rose, whatever kind of a lodge that was, and I guess he was that dippy he believed it. I could see that father wanted to humor his old school chum, because he said he believed in the same theory and thought the soul could live again in another body. It was all I could do to keep from snickering when father talked like that, because goodness knows he spends a lot more time thinking about pinochle and three-cushion billiards than he does in thinking about the human soul and what becomes of it after we have kicked in. But he stalled fine, and I guess the old school friend went away thinking that father was on the level about reincarceration."

"I'd like to know what I would be if I was born again," said George.

Modesty the Best Policy.

IT was the early part of the New Year, and little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a long delayed visit to Uncle Silas.

Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of the said uncle, and asked:

"Uncle dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining room table a dime, a half-dollar and a five-dollar note, remarking:

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the dime. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I sha'n't lose it?"

And uncle did.

"Sisters Under Their Skins"

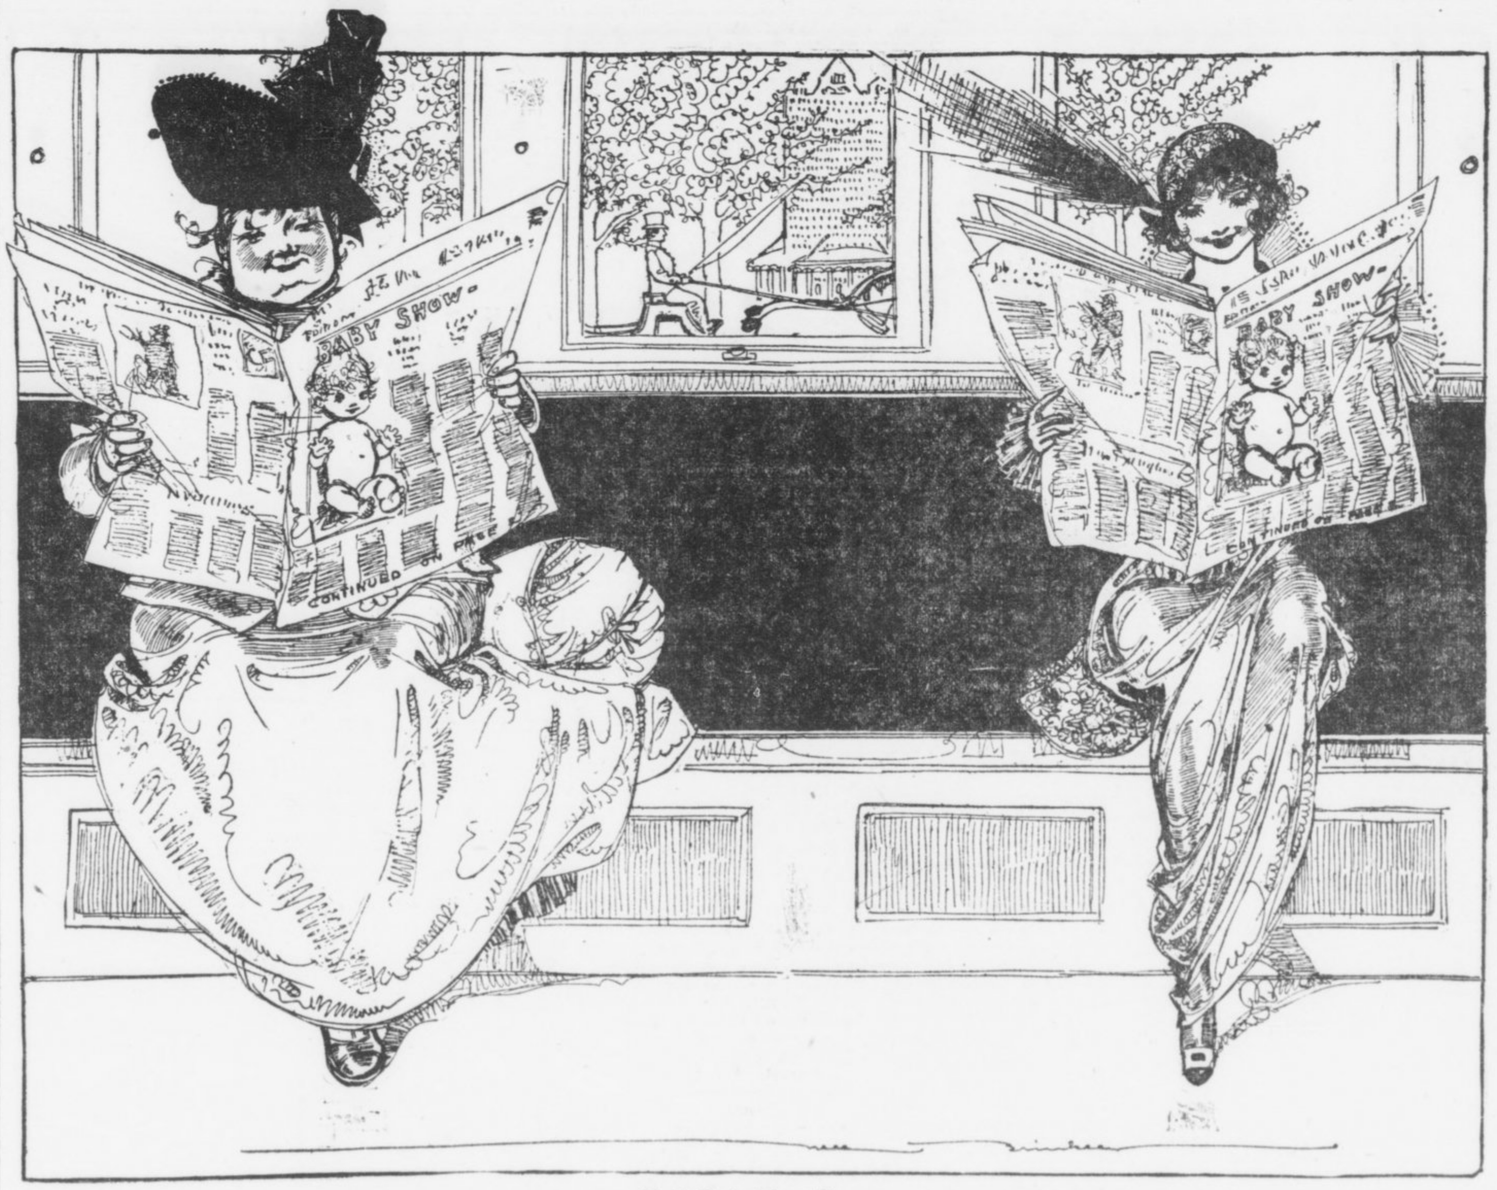
By NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins.---Rudyard Kipling.

THIS I saw a week or so ago when the country was showing off its fat babies. Across the car from me, sitting with the sweet sunshine streaming in on their two blond heads—coiffed, oh, so differently, was a large plain lady with her chapeau slightly on one ear and a fat bundle snuggled beside her, and a yard or so down the red plush seat an aristocratic woman in silk and brocade, a French hat above her pretty eyebrows, white gloves, rose point lace at her throat and wrists, perfectly groomed! And the whole middle of each was hidden by the newspapers they held. I had watched. They had climbed on at the same street, had settled their silken and cotton skirts, and their four eyes had homed straight to the "pie" of a fat baby on the front page. They had both flipped over to the second page, where more babies were promised to "continue"—and there they stuck—the two of them—the same tilt to their two heads, the same unconscious gentle smile on their two faces. Under the lace-smothered breast of the "colonel's lady" rose the same heart springs that welled beneath the cotton and pearl buttons of "Judy O'Grady" "sisters under their skins."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dick repeated his question, unobservant of its first effect.

"Why didn't you go to Chicago as you had planned?"

"Planned? With whom?" The interrogation came with an abrupt force that cried of new suspicions.

"Why, with Burke." The young man tried to be patient over her density in this time of crisis.

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?" Mary asked. Now the tenseness in her manner got the husband's attention, and he replied with a sudden gravity, apprehensive of he knew not what.

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago." He had caught the contagion of her mood and vague alarm swept him.

"Where?" came the next question, still with that vital insistence.

"In this room."

"Burke was here?" Mary's voice was suddenly cold, very dangerous. "What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

Garson Leaped to the Switch.

The seemingly simple answer appeared the last straw to the girl's burden of frenzied suspicion. Her voice cut fiercely into the quiet of the room, imperious, savage.

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

Something fatally significant in her voice set Garson aleap to the switch, and, in the same second, the blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. The others stood motionless, blinking in the sudden radiance—all save Griggs, who moved stealthily in that same moment, a little nearer the door into the passage, which was nearest to him.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise, seemingly totally irrelevant to this instant of crisis. Yet they rang athrob with an hysterical anxiety.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" With the question she pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

The young man was plainly astonished, disconcerted as well by the obtrusion of a sordid detail into the tragedy of the time.

"Why in the world do you—?" he began, impatiently.

"Tell me—quick!" she commanded. The authority in her voice and manner was not to be gainsaid.

Dick yielded sullenly.

"Oh, two or three hundred dollars, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that!" Mary exclaimed, violently. And now the girl's voice came stinging like a whiplash. In Garson's face, too, was growing fury, for in an instant of illumination he guessed something of the truth. Mary's next question confirmed his raging suspicion.

"How long have you had them, Dick?"

By now the young man himself sensed the fact that something mysteriously baneful lay behind the frantic questioning on this seemingly trivial theme.

"Ever since I can remmber," he replied, promptly.

Mary's voice came then with an intonation that brought enlightenment not only to Garson's shrewd perceptions, but also to the heavier intelligences of Dacey and of Chicago Red.

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently, from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?" So simple were the words of her inquiry, but under them beat something evil, deadly.

The young man laughed contemptuously.

He Came Toward Her.

"I should say not!" he declared indignantly, for he resented the implication against his father's honesty.

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door into the passage.

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery. He was very dapper in his evening clothes, with his rather handsome, well groomed face set in lines of innocence.

"He's lying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward Dick Gilder. "I tell you, those tapestries are worth a million cold."

Mary's answer was virulent in its sudden burst of hate. For once, the music of her voice was lost in a discordant cry of detestation.

"You stool-pigeon! You did this for Burke!"

Griggs sought still to maintain his air of innocence, and he strove well, since he knew that he fought for his life against those whom he had outraged. As he spoke again, his tones were tremulous with sincerity—perhaps that tremulousness was born chiefly of fear, yet to the ear his words came stoutly enough for truth:

"I swear I didn't! I swear it!"

Mary regarded the protesting man with abhorrence. The perjured wretch shrank before the loathing in her eyes.

"You came to me yesterday," she said, with more of restraint in her voice now, but still with inexorable rancor. "You came to me to explain this plan. And you came from him—from Burke!"

"I swear I was on the level. I was tipped off to the story by a pal," Griggs declared, but at last the assurance was gone out of his voice. He felt the hostility of those about him.

Garson broke in ferociously.

"It's a frame-up!" he said. His tones came in a deadened roar of wrath.

On the instant, aware that further subterfuge could be of no avail, Griggs swaggered defiance.

"And what if it is true?" he drawled, with a resumption of his aristocratic manner, while his eyes swept the group balefully. He plucked the police whistle from his waistcoat pocket, and raised it to his lips.

Then He Trembled.

He moved too slowly. In the same moment of his action, Garson had pulled the pistol from his pocket, had pressed the trigger. There came no spurt of flame. There was no sound—save perhaps a faint clicking noise. But the man with the whistle at his lips suddenly ceased movement, stood absolutely still for the space of a breath. Then he trembled horribly, and in the next instant crashed to the floor, where he lay rigid, dead.

"D—n you—I've got you!" Garson sneered through clenched teeth. His eyes were like balls of fire. There was a frightful grin of triumph twisting his mouth in this minute of punishment.

In the first second of the tragedy, Dick had not understood. Indeed, he was still dazed by the suddenness of it all. But the falling of Griggs before the leveled weapon of the other man, there to lie in that ghastly immobility, made him to understand. He leaped toward Garson—would have wrenched the pistol from the other's grasp. In the struggle, it fell to the floor.

Before either could pick it up, there came an interruption. Even in the stress of this scene, Chicago Red had never relaxed his professional caution. A slight noise had caught his ear; he had stooped, listening. Now he straightened and called his warning.

"Somebody's opening the front door!"

"The street's empty! We must jump for it!" His hate was forgotten now in an emotion still deeper, and he turned to Mary. His face was all gentleness again, where just before it had been evil incarnate, aflame with the lust to destroy. "Come on, Mary," he cried.

Already Chicago Red had snapped off the lights of the chandelier, had sprung to the window, thrown open a panel of it, and had vanished into the night, with Dacey at his heels. As Garson would have called out to the girl again in mad anxiety for haste, he was interrupted by Dick.

"She couldn't make it, Garson," he declared, coolly and resolutely. "You go. It'll be all right, you know. I'll take care of her!"

"If she's caught——!" There was an indescribable menace in the forger's half-uttered threat.

"She won't be." The quality of sincerity in Dick's voice was more convincing than any vow might have been.

"If she is, I'll get you; that's all," Garson said gravely, as one stating a simple fact that could not be disputed.

Then he glanced down at the body of the man whom he had done to death.

"And you can tell that to Burke!" he said, viciously, to the dead. "You d——d squealer!" There was a supremely malevolent content in his sneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father. Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters.

Now go on with the story.

Not Quite Right.

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "?" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

THE MAN WHO IS TIRED OF HIS WIFE

"Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," Says an Old Proverb, and This Is Especially Apt in This Situation.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A MAN writes me in great distress. He says that he has been married about fifteen years, and that suddenly a great weariness of spirit has come upon him. His wife is good and kind, an excellent housekeeper, a thrifty manager, and her one object in life is to please him and make him happy, but while he recognizes her virtues and admires them, they leave him cold and unmoved.

In a word, he's tired of his wife. She bores him to death. Just her presence is irksome to him, and when she goes with him on any sort of a pleasure jaunt it takes all the fun out of the occasion.

This man is no gay Lothario. He is a good, honest, domestic man, who is honestly alarmed at the state of affairs, and he wants to know what he can do to recover the interest he once had in his wife, and the thrills that went through his veins like fire at the touch of her hand.

There is only one remedy for such cases, and that is absence. Only people who have neither nerves, temperament nor imagination can stand the horrible monotony of seeing the same face opposite them at three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, and ditto dinners, to say nothing of having the same form across the drop light for an equal number of evenings a year, and having to listen to the same old stories.

The most beautiful people in the world grow homely to our eyes if we see them too often. The wittiest conversationalists grow tedious if we have a surfeit of their society. The virtues of even an angel pall upon us if they are constantly before us.

Reasons Why.

Probably Mr. Milo thought his Venus too fat or too thin, and asked her why she didn't get another make of corset. Doubtless there were times, before she got a divorce, when Mrs. Caruso said to herself that if Enrico warbled another warble she would scream, and it isn't on record that the immediate family of any of our saints and martyrs ever handed in any testimonial to show what they thought on the subject of the canonization of their husbands or wives.

Why people who can not eat thirty quails in thirty days; who never want to see the same play twice, or read a book a second time; who tire of their clothes before they are half worn out, and spend their lives hunting for new sights, new emotions, new diversions, new places to go, should ever be foolish enough to imagine that they could endure the undiluted society of one person, year in and year out, passes comprehension.

There are millions of husbands and wives who have had an overdose of each other's society and are suffering from it, and they are so stupid they don't realize what ails them, nor how simple the remedy for it is. Yet the symptoms are unmistakable.

When a man begins to dread the thought of going home of an evening, and to wonder what made him idiot enough to get married and to pick out Sally, of all women in the world, for a wife; when he begins to notice that Sally has gone off in looks and is getting a triple chin, and to have a feather bed figure; when his eyes focus on the little mole on Sally's cheek instead of the cute way her hair curls around the back of her neck; and when he commences wondering if all women talk as much drivel and use as many words in telling nothing as Sally Jones—then it's time for the man to pack his grip and hike away from home and Sally.

He hasn't really fallen out of love with her, as he thinks he has. He's just tired of her for the time being. He doesn't really pine to be a gay rover, as he imagines he does. He just wants to ease the pressure of the yoke of matrimony for a little, and to him—and to his wife—a ticket to Chicago, or San Francisco, or Bird Center, or anywhere away from home, is a lifeline that saves them both from destruction.

And it's exactly the same way with women. Of course the theory is that women have such an abnormal talent for loving that a wife never gets enough of her husband's society, but is a femael Oliver Twist, always asking for more. Don't you believe it. Women are fickle creatures, and the best wife in the world can get so sick and weary of a model husband that she is ready to die of sheer ennui.

The Woman's Side.

Every now and then a woman gets so that she can see nothing but faults in her husband. Everything he does and everything he doesn't do irritates her, and she, too, gets to wondering what on earth the fool-killer was doing on the day that she tied up with the miserable little shrimp that she did, instead of marrying some romantic and godlike creature that she didn't marry. She thinks that she is suffering from having missed her affinity and being married to a groundling that can't understand her higher nature, but the whole trouble is that she has had too much of her husband's society. All that she needs to effect a complete cure is a month or six weeks' separation.

Of course, being ladies and gentlemen, most of us never admit to our husbands and wives that we are bored. We yawn behind our hands and try to look interested, but in our secret souls all of us know that the surging joy with which we saw our dearly beloved husband or wife start off on a journey, or the rapture that filled our own soul when we got to go off somewhere alone, or with perfect strangers.

And we also know the delight with which we returned home, or welcomed back the wanderer, our whole point of vision changed by a little absence, and the one of whom we had been so tired clothed again in his or her halo.

This is why the summer vacation is such a beneficent institution. We can lay our weariness of our domestic partners on the weather, and get away with a decent excuse. But it isn't the change of climate that does us good. It's the change from the monotony of association, and it sends us back rested and refreshed and romantically in love again.

A True Proverb.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says the old proverb, and this is especially true of husbands and wives. They need to break away every few months just to get a perspective on each other's good qualities and to find out how necessary each is to the other's happiness.

You can overdo matrimony as easily as you can any other good thing, and if there were some way by which we could be married three days a week instead of seven there would be no more divorce.

Queer Vegetable.

A vicar advertised for a servant a short time ago, and a country girl, with a fat, red face, answered the advertisement.

After the vicar had asked a few personal questions, he said:

"You know, we are all vegetarians here, and, of course, we should require you to be one. No meat, you know—simply vegetables."

She dropped her eyes, and for a time seemed deep in thought.

"Well, what do you think?" asked the vicar, after a short time.

"Well, sir," she replied, "it's like this. I don't mind so much about the meat; but before I take the place I should like to know if you—er—call beer a vegetable?"

She was not engaged.

$10 WORTH OF BALL FOR TWO BITS FRIDAY

By Percy H. Whiting.

TEN dollars' worth of baseball at two bits was the offering at Ponce DeLeon Park Friday afternoon, in a game the Crackers lost to Chattanooga, 7 to 5. The contest took ten innings, two hours and seventeen minutes and a pound of flesh from the wracked frame of Manager Bill Smith.

It was surely a cuckoo little contest.

For eight innings it was an awful affair, a regular boob game as far as the Crackers were concerned. They had made only three hits off Rudy Summers and it looked as though they would never make any more. The score was then five to nothing against the Crackers, for Chappelle was no puzzle to the guys he used to work with and his support was much to the cheese.

* * *

THE last half of the eighth was a memorable session. Joe Agler opened it with a single. Dunn walked—and walked. Rohe, batting for Chappelle, flied out. Long walked. And then came Welchonce, the hero of the previous day's game. All he did this time was to triple but that scored three men and put Summers in a blue funk. Whereupon Alperman arose and lammed the ball to the score board for a home-run—and this tied it up. Five runs in one inning for a tie up! Wow!

* * *

DID you ever notice that when a team comes from behind they come just far enough to tie the score—and then stop there? It happens nine times out of ten. In Friday's game it was obvious that the locals had Summers absolutely on his last legs. With only one out and two dangerous batters in line it seemed as though a little more of the same steam would have put over the winning run.

It's human nature, the ... to pull up on even terms and ... stop to breathe, believing that the overhauling will be an easy matter later.

* * *

AFTER warming up both Dent and Price while the batting rally was in progress Smith stuck in the former. He retired the first too men and then got in an awful mess by letting Flick and King hit. Coyle then grounded to Alperman, who started a double play and pulled the Crackers through that inning.

To the surprise of everybody Elberfeld elected to use Harry Coveleskie to finish out the game for him. Considering the Pole's uncertainty and the ease with which he is usually rattled this was a brave choice. Hardly another manager in the world would have taken that chance.

But Coveleskie stood the gaff.

Every Cracker went up to the plate with strict orders to wait him out. It started all right too, when Bisland walked. Agler sacrificed him along but there he croaked. Dunn waited like a statue but Coveleskie had the plate located and Joe finally popped to Coveleskie. Dent had a lovely opportunity but was struck out.

In the first of the tenth Dent got his. Elberfeld opened with a single. Elston sacrificed. Johnson singled. Street fractured the tie by going out Smith to Agler, so artistically that Elberfeld tallied. Williams was walked. And then came the superlative surprise for Coveleskie hit a clean single, scoring Johnson and closing out the Crackers.

In the last half of the tenth Welchonce kept up his great pinch hitting with a timely single but Coveleskie was the master of the rest of them and deserved a victory.

This was the first game the Lookouts have won out of eight attempts against the Crackers.

Happy Hooligan starts to break into society—A fine feature in the Comic Section of The Sunday American.

Wan, Weary and Worn Out

If You Feel Fagged to a Finish and Utterly Used Up Here is Quick Relief.

S. S. S. Makes Your Blood Corpuscles Unite for Mutual Protection.

Half the people you meet complain of weary muscles, stagnant brain, jangled nerves, and a wonderful desire to lay down and just quit. Most of these people have been using nervine that stimulated only flare up the nerves only to die down again, as die they must. Avoid nerve stimulants. Bear in mind that this worn-out feeling is due to poor blood, to bacteria in the water you drink; to the multiplying of destructive germs in the blood faster than they can be overcome by the white corpuscles; and to what is known as auto-toxemia, that condition where the venous or impure blood accumulates faster than it can be replaced by the red arterial blood.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital and essential to well-balanced health as those of the grains, meats, fats and sugars of our food.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S., Swift's Sure Specific. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling. It just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine just as active and just as timely as to a man who has been lost in the mountains, is about starved and comes across a settler just cooking a savory meal of good honest beef. Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Jackson's Clout a Record One

Longest Homer, Says Sam Crane

By Sam Crane.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Joe Jackson's home run wallop over the roof of the right field wing of the Brush stadium last Monday was a marvel.

There were two other circuit clouts made, but while they were hard hits, they were not patches on "Jolting Joe's" job that cleared every sky high obstacle in the Polo Grounds and in the immediate neighborhood for miles around. The ball landed somewhere. There is no doubt of that, for Sir Isaac Newton's statement that everything that goes up must come down is still considered as sufficient authority to bank on even in these baseball days when "up in the air" is considered a permanent ascension.

Yes, siree, Joe Jackson's wonderful wallop was a record breaker. It was the longest drive ever made on the Polo Grounds, either to right field, center field or to left field. Buck Ewing is given credit for smashing the longest hit ever made toward the Harlem River. That was in the days when the left field was known as "Burkeville," that euphonious title being derived from "Eddie" Burke, once a Giant left fielder, who played the sun field without the aid of smoked glasses or a net, and never missed a fly ball, so 'tis said, or a high one, either.

Opinions Differed.

There are various opinions as to where the ball went over the left field fence that Buck soaked so far. But it was made in the Players' League days of 1890, and sailed over the outer bulwarks at about where the present 25 cent pen is now located.

"Some drive," you young fans of the present day may say, but in those good old days there were some sluggers—consecutive wallopers. I might say, like "Babe" Anson, Roger Connor, Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, Ed Delehanty, Mike Tiernan and others, who, if they didn't make a home run a day, were ashamed to go to the "captain's office" and draw their half monthly stipends.

"Home Run" Baker has made quite a "small" reputation since those days by smashing out homers off Matty and Rube and they possibly earned more fame than the lengthy licks of the old-time swatters, soaks, but only for the reason that they figured as winning clouts in world championship contests and not because they were the real thing in drives.

Why, I have seen Ed Delehanty clout a ball so far over the present left field wall on the Phillies' grounds in Quakerville that make the home runs made by Cravath and Magee this year on the same grounds look like bunts.

Thompson Made Long Clout.

In Cincinnati I saw Sam Thompson hit the ball so hard and far that the home run smashes of Boucher, Bates and other long-hitting Reds of the present look like handie hits.

I have witnessed Anson make home runs in Chicago off wild pitches that would make the fourbag drives of Schulte and Zimmerman look like mere infield pop-ups.

Mike Tiernan lifted the ball once over the right field fence on Manhattan Field into Brotherhood Park (now the Polo Grounds.) That historical hit of Tiernan's, too, won a famous 11-inning pitching contest between the two star pitchers of that time (1890), and the spot where the ball went over the fence was marked by a small American flag for several years. Even the Harlem small boy revered the wallop so much that he didn't steal the flag.

I have seen—well, all those great hits and many more—but I will come down to earth now and take off my hat to Joe Jackson, of the Clevelands, for making the longest lick I ever saw—and that was Monday.

Doubt About O'Rourke's Hit.

Jim O'Rourke has heretofore been credited with making the longest smash, but there is a doubt on that record. Jim hit the ball over left field fence on the present Boston Braves' grounds, and the ball never stopped going until it landed in Providence, R. I. The ball went into the express car of a through train from Boston to Providence that didn't stop until it got to the Rhode Island Capital.

There is a history connected with Jackson's smash. A small boy recovered the ball somewhere down in Harlem on a side street and hearing about the record wallop—(why, Harlem was full of it) brought the ball back to the Polo Grounds and showed it to Joe after the game.

Joe paid the youngster a ten-dollar note for his prize—and it was well worth the money. It is a memento of the longest hit ever made.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

THE Western invasion in the American League should bring out some interesting baseball within the next two weeks. It is common gossip on that circuit that the Cleveland team is a much bigger winner on its home grounds than away on the road. The present trip should show whether this is true. With Birmingham's pitchers, and the club hitting as it is, there is no reason why it should not be just as big a winner in the East as the West. The Cleveland club looks like a strong one to me, and the Athletics are worried by the showing it is making. They fear the excellent pitching, the Philadelphia club being none too strong on the twirling itself.

* * *

STILL, I do not see how the Athletics can be beaten out. They are playing at their old-time speed now and should pick up on Cleveland during their long stand at home. Outside of the Naps, "Connie" Mack's team will be playing the easy Western clubs, while the only soft spot Birmingham will find in the East will be in New York. The series with Philadelphia, Washington and Boston will all be hard ones. The Naps have made all these gains without Lajole, and with him back in the game the aggregation will be greatly strengthened, as the return of Wagner braced up the Pirates.

* * *

THE Boston Red Sox are still off color, although they have shown flashes of better ball recently. The failure of their pitching staff has been largely responsible for the poor showing. None of the pitchers who looked so good in the world's series have been able to win consistently this spring. Even "Smoky Joe" Wood has not been smoky. When their pitchers come around in shape, as they are bound to do, Boston will do considerably more winning, but I do not believe the Red Sox have a chance for the pennant. There are too many other high-class ball teams ahead of them in the competition now.

* * *

THE White Sox have made a good showing, better than was expected of them, and may come through and scare a lot of managers before the race is over. Their pitchers are displaying grand form, even without the aid of "Ed" Walsh. White, Russell, Benz and Scott have all pitched good ball. Pitching has been a big factor in the races in both leagues so far this year, the clubs with the twirlers getting the early starts, with the possible exception of the Athletics.

* * *

DETROIT and the New York Americans look hopeless. Somebody said the other day that the only reason they are keeping a club in Detroit is to give Cobb a chance to see how high he can bat. Chance realizes he will have to tear his club down and build over again. He began by trading Chase. His task is a tough one.

STEVE.

Time was when a middleweight fighter could fight,
And he battled with never a care.
He walloped the smoke and he walloped the white,
And he fought like a man who was there.
And somebody got him one calm summer day,
And he went with a smile on his brow.
He battled his battles and went on his way.
But where is a middleweight now?

It is said that Bill Steen, of the Naps, can do needlework in addition to his pitching. Having listened to various baseball magnates, we have a hunch that Mr. Steen is a mere novice with the needle.

Mr. Goux sails this week for home, despite various challenges from Mr. Burman. In other words Mr. Goux refuses to fall for any goux-goux eyes. We sprang this simply to prove that we ain't got no sense of humor.

Every time we read that there are motorcycle races on the program we are sore over the fact that we ain't a mortician. And then when we think it over we ain't.

One who is versed in pugilistic lore is not surprised to learn that Willie Ritchie refuses to make 133 ringside. One who is not versed in pugilistic lore does not care a whoop. So why should we waste any more space on it?

THE GLADIATOR.

It is the bar-room roustabout,
Who cleans around the house,
Occasionally, when not too big,
He takes a husky short-arm dig
At some half-conscious souse.

It is the needy manager
Who takes him into camp,
And borrows trunks and fighting shoes,
And, lo! In all the sporting news:
"'Death' Jones, the new White Champ!"

FOXHALL KEENE DISCUSSES THE POLO CONTEST

By Foxhall Keene.

(Captain of the American Polo Team.)

NEW YORK, June 7.—Before I take up the discussion of teams which will meet in the approaching contest I want to repeat what I have said in recent interviews—that the changes made in the line-up of the squad were not due to friction or to trouble of any sort, and rumors to that effect are absolutely without foundation.

The changes were made by those in charge not only with the consent, but at the urging of the parties concerned, in the belief that it will further the common cause and we know all are working together with the one hope and ambition to keep the polo cup in America.

Speaking for myself I can say that I did not want to have anything to do with the game at this particular time on account of the recent death of my father, but Mr. Whitney and the other members of the team finally prevailed upon me to re-enter the lists, and now that I am in I shall do my best to bring about the defeat of the English.

Will Put Up Hard Fight.

I hope and believe that our team will be able to give a good account of itself in the match and if we are defeated I am pretty sure the Englishmen will know they have been in a fight.

I am inclined to believe that the old team was not up to the form it has shown in past years, and perhaps Mr. Whitney held it together on account of old friendships longer than he might have done.

Mr. Whitney is one of the greatest players the game of polo has produced in 20 years and his passing from the team at this time must be viewed with real regret.

Larry Waterbury was certainly as good a back as the world has ever seen. He played No. 1 on the team that Mr. Whitney took to England, and he played it brilliantly, though the English team at that time was rated rather poor.

Monte Waterbury has not been well for some months and his game has not been the phenomenal game of past years.

Betting Favors Englishmen.

The betting is against us and the popular feeling seems to be that the Englishmen have the stronger team, but in spite of that and in spite of the fact we have been given a very short time to prepare ourselves, I am confident that America will not be ashamed of her representatives when we take the field against the mother country.

The English squad have an extraordinary array of ponies. We can not deny that they outpony us to some extent, but in addition to Mr. Whitney's string, Mr. Prince, of Boston, who owns a very fine stud, sent his ponies to New York by special train and we will all have them to depend on.

We have but a small handful of polo players in America,"—by which I mean only a few men who have gone in for the game strong enough to become experts; whereas England not only has England, where the game is older and more popular than here, to draw upon, but India as well, and in India every other man is a good polo player.

It is therefore great credit to our small handful that we have been able to produce squads that have at times beaten the best teams produced by the British and that have always given a good account of themselves.

English Ponies Are Good.

From what I have seen of the Englishmen I might say that their hitting is uniformly fine and the ponies are very good, but they were not being tackled, and a team always looks pretty good when it is not being opposed.

In drawing a comparison between American and English methods of playing polo it seems to me that the Americans have been more ambitious for the past 20 years. The Englishmen are rather orthodox in their general style, while we have all kinds of strokes. They have some that they play best, but there is always more variety to the Americans.

There are really no new ways of playing polo and few new angles to be developed. Naturally I have certain theories of my own in connection with the game as has every polo player, but this is hardly the time to exploit them.

BURMAN DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE GOUX SAILED

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bob Burman, the dare-devil automobile racer, who is in town to-day, was quite disappointed to find that Jules Goux, the Frenchman who won the 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis, had sailed Thursday for France.

Burman came here to challenge Goux to a 500-mile race either at Indianapolis or New York for a side bet of from $5,000 to $20,000. Burman announced that he will now cable his challenge.

JIM FLYNN AND SAVAGE ARRIVE HERE MONDAY

By Left Hook.

JACK CURLEY, manager of Jim Flynn, has wired that he and Flynn will arrive in Atlanta Monday. Dan Morgan, manager of Jim Savage, had previously wired that he and his man would be here either Sunday or Monday. So the Queensberry festivities of the city should brighten up materially within the next few days.

Dan Morgan, in behalf of Savage, has laid claim to the heavyweight championship of the world. In his formal statement Morgan says:

"Savage has as much right to the title as any of the white hopes. I consider him the best man in the lot. I believe he can whip any of them, now that McCarty is out of the way. We are willing to meet any of them, and intend to begin by polishing off Flynn on the night of June 13 in Atlanta."

Morgan is wild with enthusiasm over the outlook. The sudden turn of affairs that gave his man a championship look-in pleased him right down to the ground. He saw the opportunity and he is off on a campaign of activity that will give Jim Savage more scraps in the next few months than he ever had before in his life.

It may be that Morgan's plans may get an awful jolt right here in Atlanta. There is not any doubt that, until a few weeks ago, he believed that his man could trim Jim Flynn with all ease. Then came Jim's great battle with Jim Coffey, and that was something else again. Flynn, instead of being on the down slant, as Morgan hoped, proved to be as good as ever in his career. But after that was learned it was too late to back out, for the match between Savage and Flynn was made.

Neither of the men wants to meet the other now. Yet each knows that he must go into it to win or to be knocked out. There is no middle ground now. A draw decision would do neither of them any good. They must win. A victory, with the heavyweight situation as it now is, means money to them, way up in the tens of thousands.

The odd way affairs have lined themselves has played into the hands of the local promoters. It has made the battle next Friday night one of the BIG contests of the year. The winner is almost sure within the year to grab off the heavyweight championship of the world.

NATIONAL COMMISSION PASSES NEW SALARY RULE

CINCINNATI, June 7.—The National Baseball Commission promulgated a new rule yesterday which clearly defines the salary obligations of a club to a player whose services are released by the club after the commencement of its contract period.

The new rule reads:

"A club which after the beginning of the terms of its contract with him, releases the services of a player to a club whose championship season had not commenced, must pay him at the rate of his canceled contract up to the date his salary starts with his new club, provided he promptly reports to and gives service to the club to which he is transferred."

398 MEN TAKE PART IN TRACK MEET AT MADISON

MADISON, WIS., June 7.—The greatest group of college athletes in the history of Western competition to-day are here awaiting the signals which start the conference track and field meet billed for this afternoon. Seventeen schools are represented in the gathering, with 398 entrants. The colleges in the running include every member of the "big nine," and in addition to these schools are Drake, Ames, Kansas, Missouri, Notre Dame, Oberlin, Wabash and California.

Because of the weakening of the California team, which lost four of its star performers by conference rules, Missouri is favorite, with Illinois second choice.

Whitney Plays Aldredge To-day

Winner Gets Dixie Championship

By W. R. Tichenor.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 7. Nelson Whitney, twice champion of the Southern Golf Association, and George A. Eldredge, champion of the State of Texas, are battling to-day at 36 holes for the championship of the South and a huge silver cup.

Whitney won his match in the semi-finals yesterday from Reuben Bush, whom he defeated 7 up and 6 to play.

Whitney was longer and steadier on all of his tee shots, which gave him the advantage of seeing the results of Bush's second shot on almost every hole before he was forced to play his own. While he was unsteady on his short puts in the morning round and presented Bush with a half at the eighth, ninth, tenth and fourteenth, and a win at the sixth and thirteenth holes by taking three puts on each, Whitney managed to end the round 3 up, with a 76 for the 18 holes.

Bush Puts Poorly.

In the afternoon round Bush picked up in his field game, but became erratic in his short puts, allowing Whitney to add three more holes in going out, and so they turned for home with Whitney 6 up. Both played the tenth badly, Bush winning it with a 5 after putting his tee shot out of bounds. Whitney, however, came to life on the eleventh, which is 460 yards in length, by holing a long put for a 3. On the 575-yard twelfth hole Whitney put his third within 10 feet of the hole and sank the put for a "win" of the hole and the match.

Whitney has met in succession Jacoby, Knowles and Bush. To-morrow he meets Aldredge, of Dallas, Texas, in the final.

Aldredge won his way into the final by defeating Herbert Tutwiler, of Birmingham. At the end of the morning round yesterday he was 3 up. He increased this lead to four and won on the thirty-second green.

Rowan Still In.

W. H. Rowan dfeeated George Fooshe, of Memphis, in a hard match. At the end of the morning round Fooshe was 2 up. Rowan evened the match at the turn and won 3 up and 2 to play.

Young Charley Hardy, of New Orleans, and Rollo Steinmehl, both of them youngsters, met in the semi-finals of the second flight. Hardy was going fine and had a 77 for the morning round, while Steinmehl was off his game and the first eighteen holes ended with Hardy 11 up. Steinmehl braced in the afternoon, but could not cut down Hardy's lead and was beaten 11 up and 10 to play. Hardy and Rowan meet in the final to-day.

Probasco defeated Stahlman 7 and 6 in the semi-finals of the third flight. In the other half of this flight Ned Daley ran away from Reid Sayre and had him 9 down at the thirteenth hole, when Sayre gave up the match. Daley and Probasco meet in the final of this flight.

In the fourth flight J. A. England defaulted to D. Weaver. Harnett, of Jacksonville, defeated A. W. Post, 6 and 5. The final of the fifth flight will be fought out between J. W. S. Rhea and C. Tyson. Rhea won from Richards, of Chattanooga, 3 and 2, and Tyson beat Whitney Bouden by the same score.

Atlanta Man Loses.

Albert Mallory defeated D. E. Root, of Atlanta, three and two, in the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Munger beat Watts by the same score, and these two will meet in the finals.

Munger of Texas, and Ulmer, of Jacksonville, are the finalists in the consolation division of the championship flight.

Dowdell Brown had Cullom dormie seven in his match against him, but, knowing he could not be present to play the final if he won, defaulted the match.

Hamilton Block, of Atlanta, trimmed J. Tyson, of Montgomery to the tune of nine up and eight to play, and so is one of the finalists in the consolation division of the third flight.

D. Henderson, of Chattanooga, and Crawford, of Montgomery, are in the finals of the consolation division of the fifth flight.

Will Gunn, of Macon, and Ed Joseph, of Montgomery, will fight it out in the final of the consolation division of the sixth flight.

Riggs Resigns as Athletic Leader

CLEMSON COLLEGE, June 7.—At a recent meeting of the Clemson College Athletic Association, President W. M. Riggs after about 15 or 17 years of continuous service in the capacity of president of the association, refused re-election. Dr. Riggs is the father of athletics at Clemson and has always given much time to the development of the various sports, especially to football. He will continue to give his hearty support to all college sports, but his regular duties will prevent his serving as president of the association.

The following officers and managers were elected for the next session: Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, president; R. B. Ezell, vice president; Prof. J. W. Gantt, secretary and treasurer; J. B. Douthit, manager of the football team; C. B. Iler and S. W. Hutto, assistant managers; H. H. Pressley, manager of the baseball team; H. W. Bristol and S. M. Richards, assistant managers; K. G. It has been estimated from information gathered in the different betting places in New York that at least $500,- has been wagered in that city on the result of the baseball races. The Giants in the National League and the Athletics in the American League have been the big betting favorites from the start of the season.

The Yankees evidently intend establishing a record that will never be equaled or broken. Just now both teams are tearing the American League wide open and leaving such a gap that only a terrific slump will enable any other team to overtake both for another month or six weeks.

By "Chick" Evans.

PERHAPS the readers of The Georgian will remember a little biography of a golfer which appeared in this paper a few months ago. In that slight sketch I endeavored to give the golfing history of a young player, who, although not well known in the West, was champion of an Eastern State and had made a creditable showing in the National at Wheaton. Although he tied for the last place in the qualifying round with Herreshoff, he won the playoff, and his subsequent game in the tournament led me to class him as one of the most promising players in America. I defeated him in the third round of that event and I have respected his game and appreciated my good fortune ever since.

This young player, Heinrich Schmidt, of Worcester, Mass., has attracted the attention of every American golfer by his recent good showing in the British amateur championship. There is no qualifying round in this event; the matter is arranged by drawing a certain number of byes, determined by the number of entrants. Mr. Schmidt did not draw a bye, however, but played through five successful rounds and was defeated by Harold Hilton in the sixth round by one stroke on the nineteenth hole. His opponents in the other rounds were golfers of the first class, among them a former British champion and the man who defeated Hilton last year. We have only meager accounts of the event, but Mr. Schmidt's record is certainly an enviable one.

Another American Makes Showing.

I had many letters from Mr. Schmidt last winter and spring, urging me to join the little party of Americans in the trip abroad, but business kept me at home. He went unheralded and no hint of his practice scores reached us, but the result of his going was made golf history.

Harold Weber, of Toledo, Ohio, another American competitor in the British amateur, also made an excellent showing. This surprised none of Mr. Weber's Western friends, for he is well known here, and is a very good player indeed. He had the good fortune, if it can be called good fortune, to remain inactive during the first round, to draw a bye, and he put out several fine British players before he himself met defeat in the third round.

Findlay Douglas, of New York, another of the American entrants, bears a national reputation, and it was perhaps largely through his efforts that the little band of Americans journeyed abroad. Mr. Douglas has not taken his game very seriously of late years. He was defeated in the first round.

British Invasion Successful.

There were also some California entrants with whose playing I am unacquainted, but I am told that they are excellent golfers.

All in all, the Americans have reason to be proud of the results of their invasion of British territory this year. They have faced the difficulties of the British courses, the skill of the British players, and the fine British golfing temperament, and they have achieved some notable victories. They are well content.

American Net Stars Win Over Australians

NEW YORK, June 7.—American lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis Cup preliminaries at the West Side Tennis Club courts yesterday.

Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, and R. Norris Williams, second, scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to cinch the American team's victory is to win one of the three remaining matches, and experts look for this to be accomplished this afternoon when McLoughlin and Harold H. Hackett meet the Australian doubles team, consisting of Doust and A. B. Jones. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team, which already has eliminated the French team.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Seeing he had no chance to win in their ten-round bout last night, Sam Citron, heavyweight, landed a foul blow on Frank McGuinness in the fourth round. McGuinness fell to the floor groaning, and the referee, declaring the foul deliberate, gave the fight to McGuinness.

COUNZELMAN IN FOLD; RELEASE FOR CHAPPELLE

BILL CHAPPELLE has been released by the Atlanta club to make a place for Pitcher Counzelman, just secured from the Pirates.

Chappelle did not come around as Bill Smith expected he would and Manager Smith decided to let him go and to hang onto Pitcher Price, for the present at least.

Smith has no deals on for pitchers now and will give his present staff a thorough trial before letting any more men out.

It is probable that Counzelman will be worked to-day. Smith gave him a good warm-up Friday and he showed a lot of stuff. His curve ball is pronounced a marvel by Smith, and he has plenty of speed, too.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE TO BOX IN 'FRISCO ON FOURTH

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—According to a statement made by Ad Wolgast early to-day the former title holder has been re-matched with Willie Ritchie.

Wolgast was just starting for Venice when he was called to the telephone.

"That was Tom Jones in San Francisco that I was talking to," said Ad when he emerged from the booth. He has matched me with Ritchie at 133 pounds at 9 o'clock in the morning for an afternoon fight on July 4 before Eddie Graney's club.

"That's an awful weight handicap for me to carry and I wouldn't stand for it except that I am getting a big end of the money for my share. No matter what Ritchie weighs, I will scale in at 133, so that I will be recognized as the lightweight champion in case I beat him.

"This match makes it absolutey necessary for me to stop Johnny Dundee next Tuesday night. I can't say that I relish the 20-round bout with Ritchie, except that I want to prove that I am a better man than Willie."

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF COTTON

Good Rains in the Western Belt Cause Decline After Early Gain—No Feature.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The cotton market opened steady to-day with first prices net unchanged to 4 points lower than last night's close. Early cables reflected the usual week-end evening up at Liverpool, resulting in a wave of scattered short covering here. Prices immediately rallied 1 to 4 points above the opening quotations. The selling was scattered. The strength of the market was mainly attributed to the strength of the summer positions.

Later advices from sections of the cotton belt indicated that the crop is making excellent progress. This, coupled with the weather map showing heavy rains over the entire State of Oklahoma and nice showers in Texas, where rains are badly needed, brought out some selling, resulting in prices dropping 3 to 8 points from the previous close.

At the close the market was steady with prices showing irregularity, being 4 points lower to 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 7.—Oklahoma and the northwestern portion of Texas had a general rainfall over night. Some good rains and scattered showers occurred in north Texas and Tennessee, while light showers fell in many localities in the eastern half of the belt.

Indications are for more general rains over Sunday in the Central and Western States. Scattered showers in the Eastern States. Cooler over the entire belt.

With Liverpool furnishing no incentive to action we had a quiet Saturday market to-day, waiting for what next week will bring in the way of professional action.

New York reviews of the market state plainly that professional operations in the July position rule the market to the exclusion of all other considerations. Brokers representing Liverpool spot interests have also been steady buyers of July during the past three days. The small stock in New York, of only 40,000 bales certificated, said to be the smallest in ten years, is the main encouragement to bullish operations. As far as new crops are concerned they are under the sympathetic influence of efforts to advance July futures.

For the time being it must be admitted that, owing to the greatly reduced stocks, the July position appears to be an easy prey for bullish designs, and the flush of success could easily lead to excesses.

A fact worthy of consideration is that July in New York is nearly 12 cents and that according to statistics and reliable private information visible and invisible holdings in the South are a good deal larger than last year and that with the close approach to the realization of good crop prospects and the continued absence of mill demand, these holdings could become attracted by any future position of isolated high prices. A determined rally in New York toward the close to-day was taken as an indication of the sentiment and intentions for next week.

North Eager to Buy Southern Securities

William Hurd Hillyer, who recently returned from a trip to New York, Philadelphia and Boston, said Saturday that he had been impressed by the eagerness with which Northern and Eastern capitalists invested in Southern mortgage loans, particularly those on Georgia property.

"There seems to be as much readiness to lend money on farm and country securities as on those in the city," he asserted. "This is a circumstance that speaks favorably for the confidence of the country in this section."

STOCKS WEAKEN IN CLOSING HOUR

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Following the movement in Europe, there was an absence of selling pressure in the stock market this morning. A few issues, however, showed concessions, due to the reluctance of buyers to follow the upturn.

In the initial dealings, Reading opened ⅜ higher at 157¼, and the same amount of gain was made in Amalgamated Copper, which sold at 68⅝.

Slight recessions were recorded in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred. Other railroads and industrials were well held. The London market was dull.

The curb market was firm.

The market closed weak. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

GOOD RAINS HELP KANSAS CROP.

B. W. Snow wires from Russell, Kansas: "In Kansas, north of main line of Union Pacific, rains came soon enough to save large part of crop. To-day in West Ellsworth, Russell and Osborne Counties most fields show burned spots, but with 400,000 acres there are large areas that will make 20 bushels or more. Present rains are general and generous and will almost insure good yield in north."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—We are inclined to look for a narrow market until after the Government report on Monday next, unless something sensational in the way of crop news comes to hand.

Corn—Speculative interest has assumed rather small proportions and the market is in a waiting attitude. The action of the cash markets during the next few days will be the chief factor in determining values.

Oats—Crop reports from the Southwest are not good, while the reports from east of the River show some improvement.

Provisions—Think some further upturn in prices is likely.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Begin Right in Poultry by Buying Thoroughbreds

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

In each line of business someone must be the first in his town, county or neighborhood. If he is successful, others will soon follow. The question is frequently asked, Why is such and such a town noted for its cotton manufacture, another for numerous tobacco factories, another a paper town? The story can usually be told in a few words. Some enterprising and capable man or firm became very successful in the manufacture of a certain kind of goods; his success soon incited others to action along the same lines, including perhaps some of his best workmen. Others still take it up from the very fact that they see the successes of this, to them, familiar line of business. And so it goes.

This is also true in the breeding and sale of thoroughbred poultry. But who are the starters in the field of thoroughbred poultry? One who has been in a position to know, as the writer has observed, is that in the main the breeders of fine cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are the ones who first take up good poultry in their section. I was for many years a breeder of short horn cattle and Poland China hogs; bred them for stock purposes, and sold them in all sections of this country and Canada. At the same time I was breeding a lot of good Barred Rocks, Brown Leghorns and Wyandottes. It was my observation and experience that three-fourths of the stockmen who came to my place for cattle or hogs became or were already interested in poultry. The result was that my sales in poultry were nearly as big as my sales in cattle and hogs. Consequently this thoroughbred poultry was carried into the various sections of the country and, being successfully bred and handled by these expert stockmen, their neighbors caught the inspiration and soon they were in the same boat. But you say, Why did so many of these cattle and hog men become poultry breeders? Simply because they knew from their experience with other live stock that nothing pays so well to handle as the best in its line. It took no argument on my part to sell this good poultry to these intelligent stockmen. As soon as the fact appeared to them its importance was made manifest at once. The question of breeds was the only one discussed. The man who has found that by raising short horn cattle he can produce two pounds of beef where he had been producing one with native cattle is not a hard one to convince that if he will change from his barnyard scrubs to Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Orpingtons or Rhode Island Reds he will be enabled to double his poultry product with the same expense for feed, to say nothing of the increased egg yield and the uniform appearance of the flock. The proposition to him is as plain as the nose on a man's face. These up-to-date stockmen are of greater value to any community. They do not have to open their mouths or utter a sound. Their success is being watched, and others will strive to do likewise.

Take stock sections of Kentucky and Tennessee as examles, and you will find that nine out of ten of these breeders of fine stock are also breeders of some one or more good kinds of chickens or turkeys. Are they successful? How long have they been breeding fine poultry? I will answer the second question first, and then I think you will be able to answer the first. Many of them have been breeding this good class of poultry for ten or twenty years. Would you presume that breeders of fine cattle, horses and hogs, men of the very best abilities in stock farming, would bother to keep a class of fine chickens if they were not more profitable than scrubs? Not a bit of it. Men of this character must have results and experience of such. Now, then, can we not profit by the results and experience of such men?

Experience is a good teacher, as is often said, but if we can run on to a short cut by which we can reach the same results and save ourselves years of experimenting, is it not wise to take advantage of it at once? We are not compelled to go through long years of experimenting with crosses, striving to produce a breed of chickens that will give us good results as egg producers. Specialists, as we might call them, in their line of work have them all ready for you in the Leghorns, Minorcas and Hamburgs. You do not have to rack your brain for years over a strain intended as a general purpose chicken, one that will give you the most meat with the least consumation of feed, and at the same time give you an abundance of eggs. Such a fowl is all ready for you, and you can take your choice as to color in the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks of the different varieties, the Rhode Island Reds and the Orpingtons. The whole scheme is cocked and primed; all there is for you to do is to touch it off. Why any reasonable man or any man of reason will stand in his own light in these matters and not take hold of a good thing when he sees it is more than I can understand. I know of no other one thing in which a man in the country, city or suburbs can invest a few dollars and get as quick and satisfactory returns on his investment as thoroughbred poultry. These are not idle fancies; they have proven thousands of times in this country. The amount of money to be made from such an investment lies with you, depending upon the time and energy you are willing to devote to it. The possibilities are limitless.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Quarter Million In New Building

The building inspector's office did a large business Saturday. A permit was granted the Louisville and Nashville and the Atlantic Coast Line Railway Companies to erect a two-story reinforced concrete building on Central Avenue to cost $205,000, and application was made to erect the three-story brick building for Nunnally & McCrea, overall manufacturers, at 74 and 75 Central Avenue, at a cost of $43,000. The former will be for the commission merchants of the city, and especially those merchants now located along North and South Broad Streets. It will front 420 feet along the new street, Produce Row, and 90 feet on Central Avenue and Washington Street. H. J. Carr & Co. have the contract.

Permits have been issued for a change in the front of the Imperial Hotel at Peachtree and Ivy Streets, for $3,000, and for a number of small dwellings. The first five months of 1913 are behind 1912 in big buildings, but are ahead in dwellings. The total of dwellings for the first five months in 1912 was 488, as against 524 this year.

Marietta Street Sale.

Joseph F. Gatins has sold to J. K. Shippey a parcel on Marietta Street, 597 feet northwest of Jefferson Street, for $26,250, on terms of $8,750 cash and the balance in notes, and Mr. Shippey has transferred it to Shippey Brothers & White for a consideration, which is withheld. This parcel is 150 by 397 by 50 by 407 feet, and frontage on the W. & A. right-of-way as well as on Marietta Street.

More Peachtree Paving.

For the purpose of taking up the matter of repaving Peachtree from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead, the Board of County Commissioners will meet Tuesday morning at the Court House. Property owners interested have been requested to be present to hear a proposition from the board. This matter was discussed at a recent meeting and was postponed for further discussion. Several of the commissioners are said to be in favor of the plan.

Peachtree was recently repaved from Sixth to Fifteenth Streets, and it is proposed to extend the work to make a uniformly smooth thoroughfare leading into the remote sections of the county.

Lawton Street Sale.

Mrs. C. J. Cook has bought from Marcellus M. Anderson, through Mr. Maddox, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, 77 Lawton Street, a seven-room house on a 46 by 150-foot lot, for $4,000.

Big Deals Pending.

Real estate dealers report several interesting deals which have been finally closed up. One of these, it is said, involves about $200,000, and another nearly $100,000. There are some smaller sales which will be announced early next week.

Interest in Electric Line.

Real estate men got out their maps Saturday to plan a route for the Greenville, Anderson and Spartanburg Railroad, which it is proposed to run into Atlanta from South Carolina. Several land dealers in town are now working on rights-of-way for various railroads and buying up property for this class of development, and they declare they will turn their attention to the new project if it should materialize. The line is electric and one of the biggest things of its kind undertaken.

The plan is to connect up Atlanta with the other Carolina cities and make this city the southwestern terminus. J. B. Duke, the tobacco king, is backing the railroad, and the Anderson (S. C.) Chamber of Commerce is pulling for Atlanta as an objective point.

Buildings for Whitehall.

Since the City Council has set aside $3,500 for regrading Whitehall Street, between Mitchell and Garnett Streets, buildings proposed by Charles H. Black, C. E. Currier, John W. Grant and others can soon go ahead. Regrading will start in October and the street is expected to be vastly improved.

Land Money Coming.

Good news has come to local real estate dealers from points in the East, to the effect that in the next six months there will be a great deal of money sent to this section to be loaned on real estate. This is the gist of an interview with William Hurd Hillyer, who has just returned from a trip, and who reports great confidence among financiers in land securities.

Crowds at Auction Sale.

Inquiries received concerning the auction sale of bungalows and lots indicated that there would be a large crowd out this Saturday afternoon at Oakland City. Foster & Robson are conducting the sale and J. W. Ferguson & Son are the auctioneers. Six bungalows built by Colonel L. N. Ragsdale and nineteen building lots are the offering.

ATLANTA'S GROWTH AND WHAT IT MEANS

THE OTHER DAY we told you about Atlanta—told you in incontrovertible figures how Atlanta has grown—is growing.

The average man of business seldom stops to think about the growth going on around him, and only appreciates it when the facts and figures are brought briefly and bluntly to his attention.

THEN HE WAKES UP!

WE WANT you to wake up and get wise to another important fact:

ATLANTA IS ALREADY BUILT UP IN HOMES RIGHT TO

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK

IT IS the growth—the RAPID GROWTH—we told you about that has carried it there.

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK IS THE BEST, THE HIGHEST CLASS AND IN EVERY WAY THE MOST ATTRACTIVE RESIDENCE PROPERTY ATLANTA NOW OFFERS.

WE MAKE this statement without qualification or reservation. We put the property up as evidence of the truth of it, and with that we are willing to leave it to your judgment.

With Atlanta building 2,000 homes every year to supply the growing demand, in two or three years PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK WILL HAVE BEEN BUILT UP AND YOU WILL BE TOO LATE TO GET THE LOT YOU WANT AT ANYTHING LIKE THE PRICE AND TERMS AT WHICH YOU CAN GET IT TO-DAY.

JUST GO OUT AND LOOK AT THIS PROPERTY—THAT'S ALL WE ASK. THEN

FRANK DEFENSE TO MAKE FIGHT ON CONLEY

very busy, while the State's officers have been talking.

Reticent and silent as the grave as to the theory of the crime to be advanced in defense of Frank, it now is known that it will be sweeping, sensational and complete.

State Faces Strong Defense.

Whether it will come as a tremendous surprise to the prosecution, or whether something of the magnitude and scope of it has leaked through to the Solicitor and the police within the past 24 hours, is problematical.

The sudden clamping down of the lid at detective headquarters and the announcement that no more talking would be done there, either for the State or anybody else, is viewed by many as a circumstance tending to show that the State at last has come to a full realization of the fact that Frank's defense will be thorough and complete in detail.

Whereas up to yesterday any sort of an interview might be had for the asking of the detective, to-day nothing whatever may be had.

As silent as the defense has been, it has nothing by way of silence on the State to-day.

Frank's Character.

Frank's previous good character, his fine business reputation, his happy family relations, his ordinary habits of life and his everyday methods of conducting himself will be thrown fearlessly into the scales.

It has been determined for him to leave nothing unsaid and to leave nothing undone that may tend to clear fully and completely and to free him for all time from responsibility for this crime or any knowledge of it.

Besides the technical correctness of Frank's defense, his lawyers will undertake to show how impossible it would have been for him to have done what the negro accuses him of, under the negro's own statement.

Conley's affidavits will be reduced to absurdities, so the defense now believes. He not only will be thrown out of court upon a strict legal showing, but he will be grimly laughed out.

To Attack Conley.

His general character will be put in evidence, his drinking habits established, and his opportunity to have killed Mary Phagan completely demonstrated.

Attorney Rosser is known, despite his silence, to have determined not only upon Frank's complete acquittal, but upon Conley's future conviction.

The foregoing in brief outline, is the defense of Leo Frank now being framed up in surprising detail.

If the defense can establish what it now unquestionably hopes to and believes it may, Frank's acquittal seems a foregone conclusion.

Of course, the State still is standing pat on its theory that Frank committed the crime, but undoubtedly is more or less disturbed by the surprising nature of the defense that has leaked out, even to the extent indicated, and is preparing to meet that defense accordingly.

"China very much looks toward the United States as its big brother, or, indeed, as the father republic," said Dr. Muensterberg.

12-Inch Clearance for Skirt Means Fine

NEW YORK, June 7.—Dr. Otto who wear skirts whose hem is more than 12 inches above the ground are liable to arrest and a fine. Judge Page decided when he fined Elizabeth Geiger, 34 years old, $10 and costs.

Patrolman Ryterski, who arrested the woman, asserted that her skirts were so short she attracted the attention of men for several blocks around.

WOOL MAGNATE ACQUITTED OF CONSPIRACY

BOSTON, June 7.—"Not guilty" for William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, was the verdict of the jury in the Lawrence dynamite case returned in the Suffolk Superior Court at 9:55 o'clock to-day, after the jury had been out since 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge dog fancier, was found guilty on two counts.

The three defendants were tried jointly upon charges in fifteen counts of conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence during the big textile strike of last year.

The court room was crowded when the jury came in. The three defendants were sitting outside the rail. Wood was chatting with his counsel, members of his family and friends at the left side of the room. Atteaux was sitting by Wood.

The jurymen were pale and dishevelled, like men who had wrestled all night in earnest argument.

Probe Jury Tampering.

Even before the jury reported, District Attorney Pelletier set on foot a rigid investigation of the charges of Juror Morris Shuman that he had been approached with an offer of a good job or of $300 if he would "vote right" in the trial.

The police have the names of six men they believe to be connected with the case. John Doe warrants were to be asked for, and one or more of these men were expected to be arrested before night. When Assistant Clerk John Campbell called each defendant by name the three men rose and stood inside the rail. Then the clerk called for the verdict from the foreman of the jury, saying:

"What say you as to Mr. Wood on the first count?"

"Not guilty," replied Foreman Wesser, distinctly.

The verdicts on the defendant counts followed in order, the result in each count being given first for Wood, then for Atteaux, then for Collins.

Six Counts Against Each.

The indictment charged each man in six counts with conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence in the big textile strike in order to discredit the strikers. The defendant counts were practically different descriptions of the same act. The reading of the verdicts took fully three minutes. The tabulated result was as follows:

Wood was found not guilty on all six counts.

The jury disagreed on Atteaux on all but the sixth count, and that count was not considered, because Judge Crosby had directed the jury to return verdicts of not guilty for all three defendants on the sixth count.

Collins was found guilty on the first and second counts and not guilty on the other four.

The defendants had to wait until fifteen counts were reported upon before each man knew how his separate case stood in the eyes of the law and the jury.

Chattanooga Gets G. A. R. Convention

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 7.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued to-day by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

A national encampment has never been held so far South, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

War Veterans Thank Atlanta for Support

C. W. Mangum, commandant, and J. H. Shelnutt, adjutant, of Camp Walker, No. 925, United Confederate Veterans, have issued a letter thanking the people of Atlanta for the support accorded them during the past and expressing the appreciation of the old soldiers for the generous contributions given to Captain Julius Cook, which enabled the camp to attend the reunion at Chattanooga and to uniform the veterans for the trip.

ANOTHER VICTIM IS CLAIMED IN PAINTER CASE

question is one between the insurance companies and the representatives of the dead man's family. The State of Florida has no interest in it."

Attorney Hallowes is a law graduate of the University of Georgia, class of 1903.

No Report Yet.

The report of analysis made of Painter's vital organs by Baltimore chemists did not reach Jacksonville to-day. Cashier Wheeler, of the Barnett National Bank, to which institution it was ordered sent, said it had not reached the bank nor had there been any message received as to when it would come. Coroner C. D. Abbott said he had received a message that the report would leave Baltimore on Monday. That means it will be next Wednesday before it will be available for action by the Coroner's jury. After completing their tests the chemists needed additional time to write and certify under oath to their report.

Dr. J. E. Boyd and Dr. P. C. Perry, the physicians representing the Painter family, who performed the autopsy and who went to Baltimore to witness the chemical analysis, arrived in Jacksonville Friday night, after an absence of fifteen days on this case.

The result of the Baltimore analysis is a closely guarded secret as far as Jacksonville is concerned. Drs. Boyd and Perry and representatives of the Painter family are the only persons here who know what took place in Baltimore, and they absolutely refuse to discuss the matter to-day. Dr. Perry said: "I will answer no questions whatever. It is no use asking them."

May Jewel Imports Top $4,000,000 Mark

NEW YORK, June 7.—Indications that local diamond importers are rushing large quantities of gems into this country in the expectation of an increase in the tariff is given in figures compiled by William B. Treadwell, jewelry examiner at the Appraiser's Stores. According to his report the total value of the gems received through the port of New York for the month of May reached $4,606,323.

These record breaking figures are $1,500,000 greater than the value of the gems imported in May, 1911, and nearly $600,000 more than the highest figures ever recorded for that month in any year.

Envoy Page Lauded By English Papers

LONDON, June 7.—Walter Hines Page, American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, is complimented in editorials on his first speech in England, made last night at the banquet given in his honor by the Pilgrims' Society.

The Westminster Gazette says:

"Nothing could have been happier than the note he struck in this first public utterance."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"We can not too cordially reciprocate Ambasasdor Page's pleasant words."

The Evening Standard says:

"It is good to see the power of the friendly feeling existing between the two nations thus recognized."

Hotel Register Wins Wife Quick Divorce

CHICAGO, June 7.—In less than ten minutes Mrs. William S. Lord, a leader in society of Evanston, a fashionable suburb, obtained a divorce from her husband, a wealthy merchant and poet of Evanston. Lord's signature on a hotel register was identified.

Mrs. Lord, asked if she was at the hotel with her husband, answered "No," and the decree was granted.

CUNARD LINER LAUNCHED.

LONDON, June 7.—The new Cunard liner Alaunia, 13,000 tons, was launched to-day at the Greenock yards. The new ship is constructed on the very latest lines and contains every improvement in shipbuilding. She is to be put in the Canadian service of the line.

AMERICANS BEG WILSON'S AID IN MEXICO

Three Hundred, in Danger at Tampico, Put Question of Protection Up to President

TAMPICO, MEXICO, June 7.—Three hundred Americans located in Southern Tamaulipas, representing 68 families, have demanded in a long message to President Wilson, sent through Consul Miller here, to know, "once for all," whether they can expect protection from their home Government, since they "do not desire to take measures for our own safety which would embarrass our Government without giving due notice before hand."

The message of the Americans was transmitted by wireless through Consul Miller to W. W. Canada, the American Consul at Vera Cruz, to be forwarded to Washington. It says, in part:

"Having been left without any protection whatever on the part of both sides in the pending controversy, therefore we can look for protection only from our own country. We must know once for all if we can expect same. Having been subjected to slights and a great variety of indignities and gross abuse during the last few days, the situation calls for most serious preparations for our personal safety and the defense of our families and our interests. Therefore, we have assembled for the purpose of considering the best way. We consider protection necessary now, since after death it will be of no utility."

The message declares in addition that the petitioners have borne financial losses silently, but that many of them can not obey the advice to "get away if in danger," as their departure would mean the abandoning of the accumulations of a lifetime.

"We consider the lives of ourselves and our families in danger, and the situation has justified this petition several times in the last few days," the message continues. "It is no longer doubtful that the slightest spark will bring on the dread conflagration at any moment. In many instances the small arms sold American citizens on the part of the American Government for their protection have been demanded, and in some instances they have been taken."

Clubwomen Plan City Beautiful

Speaker Calls Atlanta Dirty

Other Civic Movements Advocated

Miss Lucy Vaughan Stockard, serving punch at the meeting of the club women.

Atlanta clubwomen have inaugurated a movement for a city beautiful, following an address by Mrs. W. P. Pattillo to the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

Having just returned from a trip abroad, Mrs. Pattillo discussed European methods of beautifying municipalities, to which she devoted considerable time and study, and gave vivid, descriptions of results as she saw them. She selected for her subject, "How Other Cities Are Made Beautiful and Attractive," and sought to interest the clubwomen of Atlanta in co-operative measures which have transformed continental cities into veritable gardens.

"Atlanta is one of the dirtiest places I have seen," Mrs. Pattillo said, as she contrasted the city with other places she had visited in Europe and America. Then she described the city's natural advantages and asked the clubwomen to concentrate their efforts toward developing them. Her auditors, representing 84 clubs with 8,000 members, expressed pleasure at her remarks and pledged themselves to work together to carry out her suggestions. It was evident to all present that Atlanta will be made a city beautiful if her clubwomen have the necessary influence.

Industrial Home Suggested.

Civic movements received most attention at the hands of the Federation members. Prominent among them was a report of the committee on resolutions, made by Mrs. James Jackson, containing a recommendation for the establishment of an industrial home for wayward girls. The Federation indorsed the resolution and announced its intention of petitioning the Georgia Legislature to establish the home. Atlanta will be suggested as the proper site for the home.

Thompson Heads Body Composed of Five Aldermen, Five Councilmen and Five Citizens.

Mayor Pro Tem James E. Warren on Saturday appointed a bond-investigating committee of fifteen members—five aldermen, five councilmen and five citizens.

The committee was appointed upon instruction of the General Council, which adopted a resolution introduced by Councilman A. D. Thompson and subsequently concurred in a similar recommendation by the Finance Committee.

This committee will investigate the question of a bond issue in all its ramifications—whether Atlanta shall authorize a bond issue at all, and if so, how much and for what purpose.

Following is the personnel of the committee: Councilman A. D. Thompson, of the Fourth Ward, chairman; Alderman J. H. Harwell, of the First Ward; Councilman T. J. Lynch, of the Second Ward; Councilman O. H. Hall, of the Third Ward; Alderman J. W. Maddox, of the Fifth Ward; Alderman J. R. Nutting, of the Sixth Ward; Councilman A. R. Colcord, of the Seventh Ward; Councilman W. G. Humphrey, of the Eighth Ward; Alderman John S. Candler, of the Ninth ward; Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, of the Tenth Ward; Courtland S. Winn, former Mayor of Atlanta; Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor; P. J. Paxon, former president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and A. Frank Liebman, real estate operator and capitalist.

The prevailing opinion is that the committee will recommend the issuance of bonds approximating the sum of $4,000,000 or $5,000,000.

7 Years Enough to Finish School, Says President Judson

CHICAGO, June 7.—Shortening of the grammar school, high school and college courses in order to put young men and women into business and other activities at an early age was advocated to-day by Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, the only witness summoned before the Illinois Senate White Slave Committee hearings to-day.

Lieutenant Governor O'Hara, questioning President Judson, asked:

"How long is it after a young man leaves college before he is financially able to marry?"

"About three or four years," replied President Judson.

"Do you think the shortening of the courses in schools would make the young man earlier efficient?"

"Yes, especially in the case of the young man who is going into business. I believe a boy or girl should spend about seven years going through the grades and high school. I believe it will ultimately be made six years instead of twelve, as at present. There are too many things taught in the high schools. They fritter away too much time. The first university year is a repetition of high school work."

"I owe my education to the fact that I ran away from my teachers while I was still young enough to learn something. I think the last two years of the present high school course should be devoted to training students for active business life."

PENDLETON SAYS BEAVERS MIGHT BE IMPEACHED

That Chief of Police James L. Beavers and Policeman James H. Kirke are subject to impeachment if the facts in the temporary restraining order of Mrs. N. P. Powell, who has been sentenced to four months in jail, are substantiated in court, was the startling declaration of Superior Court Judge John T. Pendleton in discussing the case Saturday morning.

The judge defended the State courts in granting the temporary injunction and said that Chief Beavers had misstated the facts if he said the courts were interfering with his breaking up a disorderly house. He said the injunction distinctly read that the police were only restrained from making the woman move from the house and in no other way balked any action that might be contemplated.

He said the police were at liberty to raid as often as they saw fit and make a case against the woman every time she violated the law.

"In the petition for an injunction the woman said Kirke made an improper proposal to her," said Judge Pendleton. "She alleged that when she ordered him away he threatened to have her place raided every night until she was forced to move. She said Kirke had told Beavers of having made the improper proposal and had poisoned his mind against her.

"If she can prove that Beavers knew of Kirke's proposal and his threats and permitted himself to be influenced, the two are subject to impeachment.

"Judge Bell granted this particular temporary restraining order, but I would have done the same thing had I been on the bench that day. The law allows no latitude or discretion in this matter. A woman comes into court and makes a sworn statement that her home is not a disorderly house and that she anticipates irreparable wrong and injury on the part of the police in forcing her to move. If the court were to wait until the matter could be tried, the injury would be done.

"A judge can not do otherwise than believe the sworn statement. The law demands that protection be granted. There is a wide difference between a temporary and a permanent injunction, and it is more than likely the permanent injunction would not be granted.

"This particular injunction has been pending in the courts a little longer than the ordinary. It has been called three or four times, but on each occasion the attorneys for the city or the defense were not available and it had to be postponed. It was called Friday, but the lawyers were in the other court trying the case. It will be heard at an early date."

POLICE BOARD WANTS PROBE TO GO DEEP

McEachern Declares Vice Inquiry Will Prove Beavers and Lanford Have Done Full Duty.

"If the vice probe in Atlanta is carried to a complete conclusion," said Commissioner J. N. McEachern, of the Police Board, Saturday, "it will be found that Atlanta is one of the cleanest and most moral cities in the United States, the assertion of the Rev. Mr. Batten to the contrary notwithstanding.

"The Grand Jury will find that Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford have done their whole duty, and that not one single instance of corruption or graft will be found. I have been a member of the Police Board for the past six years, and I have watched the department closely. I say without hesitation that I believe in the absolute integrity and honesty of both chiefs. I am confident that if there had been any corruption or graft in the department it would have been unearthed by the board, which is composed of reputable citizens and business men serving in the interest of the city and the welfare of the people.

Board Trusts Chiefs.

"Every member of the board is more than anxious to have the probe reach the very bottom. We know the men and we know the chiefs and we have the utmost confidence in them.

"An old saw is that 'where there is so much smoke there must be some fire,' and this has been quoted by many persons since the vice probe was begun. The saying may be true; in fact, I am rather inclined to the opinion that it is true in this case, but not in the manner in which it is suggested by those who would discredit the Police Department. The smoke has been raised by those who discredit the department, and the fire is the desire of those individuals to to bring reproach on the men who have dared to do right and enforce the law. The investigation will reveal the fact that the smoke does not arise from the department, and that there is no fire there, but on the contrary, from those who would turn Atlanta over to the lawless element and the mercy of those who value a dollar more than they do a human soul."

Commissioner McEachern unhesitatingly stated that the morality of the city had been improved by the efforts of the police officials to enforce the law, and that in this they had his support and approval.

"The question of segregation is one that the majority of the members of the board hesitate to express an opinion upon, but a large majority will stand back of Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford in the discharge of their duties, and will abide by the action of the lawmaking body, their one and only duty being to enforce the law as laid down in the City Code."

Whitewashing Effort Fails.

That a faction in the Grand Jury tried to whitewash the vice probe shortly after the first witness was examined, became known Saturday. A vote was taken on the question and the probe continued. Two members of the body, at least, will insist on the inquiry being continued when the jury meets next Tuesday morning.

Immediately after Colonel Thomas B. Felder testified and left the room a juryman offered a resolution that the Grand Jury go on record as saying "Atlanta is better morally than it has ever been and vice is effectively stamped out." The motion was defeated by the necessary twelve votes, and other witnesses were called. Several times before adjournment Thursday the same person is said to have offered the resolution and each time it was defeated.

A sensational development is expected Tuesday when a member of the jury, who will insist on the probe being continued, will ask the foreman to summon a man high up in police circles to tell what he knows of vice conditions and what knowledge the police have of them.

That the probe will be continued is practically an established fact Saturday. Since adjournment Thursday Foreman L. H. Beck has received numerous communications from citizens asking that vice conditions be more thoroughly inquired into.

Many Offer Information.

Some of the communications give the names of witnesses who will give the jury addresses and "positive information."

Several names have been furnished that were not in the hands of the jury when it adjourned Thursday. One of them is Mrs. Nell Powell, of 95 Spring Street, who was sentenced to four months imprisonment Friday for running a lewd house. She expressed a willingness to furnish the jury with the addresses of some 50 or 60 houses in Atlanta and over a hundred names. She will in all probability be called before the jury Tuesday morning and asked to furnish the list that the witnesses may be called for a meeting later in the week.

The movement for new high schools gained impetus Saturday when public-spirited citizens turned with interest toward the plan as advocated by Colonel Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, in his two addresses at the graduation exercises of the Boys' and Girls' High Schools, in which he urged a $5,000,000 bond issue by the city of Atlanta, $2,000,000 for the express purpose of building high schools.

There is not an adequate high school in the entire city of Atlanta. It's up to the people, and time City Councilmen are urged to wake up and do their duty. Atlanta has a credit upon which any city government could borrow $5,000,000, declared Colonel Daley, president of the Board of Education, Friday night when he presented high school diplomas to 64 young Americans.

"The current revenue from taxation," said Colonel Daley, "is not sufficient to care for the maintenance of the high schools, and it's not sufficient to take care of the current expense of the other important departments.

Asks $2,000,000 for Schools.

"Atlanta citizens should see that city officials work for a $5,000,000 bond issue, and of that amount, as president of the Board of Education. I want to ask for $2,000,000 for the purpose of erecting adequate and abundant plants for high school students. The remainder of the money from such a bond issue should go to the other departments. We need additional grammar schools and many improvements. All this is because Atlanta is growing so rapidly, and yet people who are not in constant touch with these matters are prone to disregard them."

The graduating exercises of the Boys' High School in the Grand Opera House were more than ordinarily impressive, and members of the faculty said they indicated that young men are thinking deeply and are taking an interest in matters which ten years ago the average high school graduate had absolutely no conception of.

"The growth and development of the nation is characterized in Theodore Roosevelt's advocacy of the strenous life," declared Bascom H. Torrance in his valedictory. "But already has a reaction set in. There is now a demand for intellectual activity and development. This intellectual activity is characterized in Woodrow Wilson's policy, which has impressed upon the demagogues RESTRAINT.

Conservation His Policy.

"Conservation of careful, thoughtful and helpful actions is President Wilson's ideal. His policy is applicable to every question which requires foresight and thought, regardless of political objects or interests.

"Conditions to-day are greater than ever before. From now on will justice and moderation supplant knavery and intrigue."

"With modern cynicism obliterated will come the great question, the human philosophy of life."

The Grand Opera House was packed. In the balcony sat High School boys, underclassmen, each thinking about the day when he should graduate. In the boxes sat members of the Boad of Education and their families. Throughout the crowded house sat proud fathers and mothers whose interest centered in just one of the 64 boys on the stage.

After a fitting prayer by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Superintendent of Public Schools W. M. Slaton announced that, owing to a change in the course of the Technological High School, which had been extended to a four-year course, there would be no graduates from that school this year as in former years.

Student Orators Please.

Mr. Slaton then introduced Sam Eplan, of the commercial department, who delivered an oration on "The Gospel of Service." Eplan's oration was interesting and breezy and struck a true note. The speaker advocated honesty and uprightness, fairness and equality in all business transactions. Joseph H. Stanfiel was valedictorian and acquitted himself well.

"Universal Peace" was the subject discussed in the oration of Roy W. Manning, an eloquent plea for the abolition of war.

An oration by Ernest H. Lowenthal on "Woman's Suffrage" aroused genuine interest. The way the championed woman's rights certainly put him in strong with the audience, for he was given round after round of applause.

The B. H. S. and T. H. S. Orchestra rendered a number of choice selections. The boys played excellently and were encored time and again.

Presentation of diplomas was then made by Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education. Each boy was applauded as he received his sheepskin.

Medals and Scholarships.

The announcement and delivery of medals and scholarships was made by Hon. Edgar Watkins. The winners of these prizes had been kept secret.

The Holzman medal, given by A. Holzman, the jeweler, for excellence in scholarship, was awarded to Bascom H. Torrance.

Medal given by the Atlanta Chapter, Daughers of 1812, for improvement in physical culture was awarded to Edwin P. Lochridge.

The following scholarships were awarded:

Washington and Lee University, Sam Armistead; Mercer University, Charles B. Cotney; Harold Hirsch $150 scholarship to University of Georgia, Herbert O. Calhoun; Price Greenleaf cash scholarship to Harvard University, Bascom Torrance; Davidson University, divided between George Hoyt and Evelyn Hamilton; University of North Carolina, Roy W. Manning; University of Chicago, Eugene Johnson; Tulane University, Spencer A. Folsom; Emory College, Charles Candler; University of the South, Lewis Rosser.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO REPEAT COMEDY

Second Performance To Be for Charity — Trip to Other Cities Planned.

The Players' Club is planning to give another performance of "The Importance of Being Earnest" in the near future. The second performance will be given under the auspices of a local charity, the selection of which is in the hands of a committee composed of Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Robert L. Cooney, Lamar Hill and Hamilton Douglas.

While the performance of Tuesday evening was one of the most successful ever given by the club, in an artistic sense, the attendance was not so good as formerly, and this second performance is planned to give the public an opportunity to see one of the best plays given by the club, and at the same time to give assistance to some worthy charity of the city.

The club also expects to take "The Importance of Being Earnest" to other cities, with the notable cast which presents the comedy here, including Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Lamar Hill, Marsh Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Frank Taylor and others.

Some time ago the Savannah Dramatic Club made a proposition to give its recent successful play in Atlanta if the Atlanta club would play there. Birmingham also has invited the Players' Club to that city, and probably several other Georgia towns will have the opportunity of seeing Atlanta's talented amateurs in the well-known Wilde comedy.

City of Flowers Is Rich's Ideal

School Contest Has High Purpose

Conceived the Idea of Organizing Playground-Recreation Centers While Traveling in Europe.

To make every school yard in Atlanta beautiful and attractive.

To inculcate into the minds of the children a love for flowers and the beautiful things that grow that they will carry into their daily lives and into their homes, and eventually make possible the dream of civic enthusiasts—the city beautiful.

These are the reasons, Walter H. Rich said Saturday, that prompted him to begin his campaign for more attractive school yards and offer prizes each year to the school showing the best results.

Walter H. Rich.

Hopes to Have all Enter.

The presentation of two prizes of $50 each, offered by Mr. Rich, to the Davis Street and the English Avenue Schools Thursday marked the close of the second year of the contest. The results have been wonderful. Though not all of the city schools have entered the contest, a majority of them have taken part, and many of the most barren school yards have been transformed by the children into flower gardens. Next year Mr. Rich hopes to have every school in the city entered in the contest, and expects greater results each year.

"I got the idea of trying to improve Atlanta's school yards," said Mr. Rich, "while I was traveling abroad. In Europe the school yards are made as attractive as possible and are utilized as recreation centers when not otherwise in use.

Has Two Objects in View.

"When I became a member of the Board of Education, I wanted to do something more for the schools than the mere routine business of the board meetings, so I thought of the contest. It has run two years, and I am more than satisfied with results.

"By offering the prizes and getting the children interested in the work, I hope to accomplish two things. One is to make the yards of the school beautiful and attractive to the children. Boys and girls do not like to go to places that are dirty and barren. I think every school yard in the country ought to have flowers planted wherever they will grow, always, provided, of course, that the children shall be left plenty of room in which to play. If it comes to a choice between the flowers and a playground, the playground should be the first consideration. But in most school yards there is room for both.

Wants City of Flowers.

"I hope also to foster a love for the beautiful that will eventually make of Atlanta a city of flowers. The ideas taught the children now will develop and expand as they grow older, and in the end we will have citizens who will take pride in making their homes and their city attractive."

Mr. Rich's plan has been indorsed by the Board of Education, though the prizes are offered out of his own pocket. He also has been assisted by the ladies of the Atlanta Art Institute, and a committee, headed by Mrs. Joseph Moody, made the selections of the winning schools for 1913 and aided in awarding the prizes.

CANDLER COUNTY BOOSTERS ON HAND EARLY

Opening of Headquarters First Indication That Legislative Session Is Near.

The first concrete evidence of the fact that the Legislature is about to get together in Atlanta came to light to-day, when the boomers for the new county of Candler secured headquarters in the Kimball House and prepared to open war in earnest for their pet project.

Two handsome rooms on the parlor floor have been reserved, and literature will be shipped in by the ton for the next few days. Managers will be in charge from this time forward. Banners will be strung all around and about the lobby and the walls of the hotel, and the merits of the proposed grand young county of Candler will be shouted from the house tops, both vociferously and eloquently from this time forward.

Representative Burwell, of Hancock, who generally is thought to have the speakership pretty well sewed up, will open headquarters shortly, and both Judge John T. Allen and Senator Randolph Anderson, candidates for President of the Senate, will do likewise.

It long has been thought to be quite the fit and proper thing for candidates to have "headquarters" in Atlanta, and nine cases out of ten in the Kimball House. Sometimes, the walls and railings are far too limited in extent to accommodate the banners and things, and other devices to catch the eye of the incoming member are adopted. In all cases, however, the warfare for position and glory is merry enough in Georgia, and the incoming Legislature will have its share of excitement, no doubt.

Representative Sills, of Metter, who has in charge the fight to create Candler County, is very optimistic. Discussing the subject to-day he said:

"The Legislature is sure to create Candler County. Already we have secured pledges from 138 out of 184 members. That is well over the necessary two-thirds required in passing constitutional amendments.

"There is practically no opposition to the new county. Seven of the eight newspapers published in the territory affected are favorable to it. Indeed, they are fighting for it. The counties of Bulloch, Emanuel, and Tatnall, from which the new county will be taken, have a combined territory of 2,400 square miles, and of that it will require to create Candler only 361. This is no new proposition—we have been agitating the matter for nine years—and this year, we get it!"

The friends of A. O. Blalock, of Fayette County, more generally known as "Bud," are congratulating him on being named Collector of Internal Revenue for Georgia, notwithstanding the fact that the tip long ago came straight from Washington that he was to win the plum.

There hardly is a man in Georgia better known than Blalock, and few that have more friends. He has served in the Legislature, in both the House and the Senate, time and again and never has been defeated for office.

Mr. Blalock expects to take his office about the first day of July.

Peace reigns again over Banks' mill pond at Milltown, and its environs, the cases against a number of citizens charged with fishing in the pond without consent of the owner, having been nol-prossed in the city court at Nashville.

An agreement was reached between R. T. Berryhill, lessee of the Banks' property and each of the defendants, which was satisfactory to the court and Game Warden Mercer, with the result that Judge Christian dismissed the prosecutions.

The cases attracted much attention in the State, by reason of the newspaper interviews given out by Warden Mercer and his Deputy Boisclair, and the severe criticism of these officials by the people at Milltown. It is understood that in future people who want to fish in the pond will obtain permission from Mr. Berryhill or some of the other owners of land covered by the pond, and that Mr. Berryhill recognize permits given by other land owners.

This is about the old status of affairs, but it is not believed there will be any further trouble.

Governor Brown's final message to the Legislature is about shaped now, and will deal more or less exhaustively with many problems, solved and unsolved, coming to his attention during the term of office about to be wound up.

The Governor's message has not yet been reduced to presentatable shape, however, for it is fashioned after a manner wonderful in the extreme and Brownesque to the limit. It is written out almost entirely on the backs of used envelopes, and is entirely in pencil. The writing is so small and fine, as almost to be illegible to the naked eye, but every single letter and every group is finished as completely as if five times the space were taken up in the writing.

Governor Brown writes an amazingly plain and clear hand, but as amazingly plain and clear as it is, it is even more amazingly small. To the bottom of the document, however, he attaches a signature elaborate and imposing in the extreme. Those who have sen it never forget it.

Governor Brown's relations to the incoming administration are very cordial, and there will be nothing by way of conflict in his farewell message and the initial message of Governor Slaton, which will follow in a few days later.

Colonel Charles R. Pendleton, of The Macon Telegraph, nestor of Georgia journalism and powerful political factor in the State, is a pronounced baseball "fan."

Visitors to Macon nowadays will do well to go to The Telegraph office either early in the morning or very late in the afternoon if they wish to catch the Colonel on the job. Otherwise he is sure to be out at the ball park watching the game.

Two Sides to a Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THOUGH love and marriage are the dreams of every girl, happiness is not dependent on either, and often one is happiest without them.

There are two sides to the question. The girl who is looking anxiously for the coming of a lover, and who grows apprehensive when he is delayed, sees only one side. She takes no account of the look of care, unhappiness and discontent on the face of the wife. She does not see—she refuses to see—that matrimony does not always bring returns commensurate for the price one must pay.

Perhaps it may lessen the discontent of the girl who has no lover to compare the life of the woman who never marries with that of the wife.

The girl has time and opportunity for cultivating every talent with which she is endowed. The only talents the wife is given opportunity to develop are those of economy and patience.

The happiness of a nation depends on its power to dream, and this being true of the whole, is true of the part. The girl dreams of an ideal lover, and the dream is never shattered; a wife has no illusions left.

A Wife's Work.

A girl has many hours in which she has nothing disagreeable to do; but the wife finds she has more to do for the rest of her life than any man could stand up under.

The uncertainty of the girl centers around WHO is to be her husband, and is not unpleasant. The uncertainty of wifehood is WHERE he is, and is a tragedy.

The criticisms a girl receives in her home are loving and kindly; those the wife receives are less kindly, and her rewards for effort to please are less sure.

The girl walks as if she owned the earth. Ten years after she has married she will walk as if she were carrying it on her shoulders.

"If I don't marry," a girl will say, "I will be an old maid." * * * "If I hadn't married and been tied down by the cares of a husband and home," she will say some years later, "I might have won fame and fortune by developing my talents."

There is loneliness in spinsterhood, but there is also PEACE.

The girl who marries sentences herself to self-sacrifice and hard labor for life. Her only reward is Love, and could you, my dear little girl with the discontented look because your lover has not come, count up the number of wives you know who are systematically and regularly cheated out of their payments?

The girl who never marries is the one to whom opportunity is given for being the blessing and mainstay of her parents' home. There is no avenue for developing her character which matrimony grants and spinsterhood denies.

Two Sides.

There are two sides to the question One can be a happy spinster; one may be a happy wife.

The former is a question of will. The latter depends on a string of ifs long enough to encircle the globe.

I do not want my girls to care less for love, but I do want them to value more highly the greater privileges, the fewer burdens, the lighter loads, the broader opportunities and the surer peace that await the woman to whom love and marriage never come.

I want them, for their own sake, to look with less panic-stricken fright and greater sanity upon the spinster's side of the question.

Diplomatic.

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never, marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take her and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's old friend, the boarding house keeper also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what anybody thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Bah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

Do You Know That—

An 18-year-old boy was injured in a game of football two years ago, but after two days returned to work feeling quite well again. Last summer he had to be examined for insurance purposes, and the doctor found there was something wrong with his neck, but did not discover exactly what was the matter. A short time ago, however, the boy's neck began to give him such pain that he was made to undergo an examination under X-rays. Then the astounded physicians discovered that it was broken. They can not realize how he has lived all this time. It is a question whether a cure can be effected.

The Farmers' Association of the department of Loir-et-Cher has held at Blois a competition for agricultural workers who have brought up the largest families, all the members of which have remained "on the land." Eleven grandmothers—the youngest aged 45 and the oldest 80—presented themselves, surrounded by 95 children and 138 grandchildren. The first prize went to a woman who has had 13 children, of whom 9 are living, and 20 grandchildren.

The Czar is, among European monarchs, the one who makes the least use of the motor car. His imperial majesty, in former days, registered a vow that he would never enter such a conveyance, and although necessity occasionally compels him to break it his dislike for motors is unabated. When King Edward first took a car with him to Denmark on joining the big family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the Czar nor his grandfather, King Christian IX, could be persuaded to set foot in it.

The Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, is shortly going to be superseded by an even more splendid vessel. It is said that the new yacht was partly designed by the Kaiser himself, who adds a knowledge of shipbuilding to his varied stock of information. The vessel will take two years to build, and is not expected to be ready before the spring of 1915.

Why He Couldn't.

N American philanthropist made a business of getting jobs for men just out of jail. A notorious cracksman came to him with a letter of introduction from the clergyman.

"I've the very thing you want," said the philanthropist when the jailbird had dilated adequately and with pride upon his exploits. "I'll see my friend Briggs. Come around to-morrow morning."

The cracksman, encouraged by the prospect of honest work, appeared promptly at the appointed hour.

"You're to go to work at once," said the philanthropist. "My friend Briggs is producing a melodrama. In it is a scene where a burglar enters the room and cracks a safe. It will only take you a few minutes, and you don't have to speak a word—just execute the job with the minute detail that will make it look real. Your salary will be $50 a week."

The convict dolefully shook his head.

"Sorry I can't take the job, boss."

"Can't take it? Why, it's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it, boss. I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage."

THE COMING OF DAY.

OVER the edge of the sleeping world,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Past the gloaming where shadow is furled,
Into the chasm of darkness whirled,
Forth from the hosts of blackness hurled—
Over the purple hills;
Out of the land of the sun-rise glow,
Over the purple-hued hills.
Into the meadows of shimmering green,
Over the brooklets of glimmering sheen,
Comes glowing morning, the summer queen—
Aflame are the purple hills.

LIFE IS WORTH IT.

Life is worth it—
Worth the turmoil and the effort and the pain,
Worth the hurt and disappointment
So you make but steady gain;
If the failure of the morning
Give you strength to struggle on,
If the evening mark some progress
From the dimness of the dawn—
Life is worth it.

Life is worth it—
Though you question as the years go slipping by,
"Have I failed in every project?
Have I set my mark too high?
Does the failure of this morning
Mean I never shall attain?
Nay! The power to strive transmuteth
Every failure into gain—
Life is worth it!

Brother and Sister

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

START out a girl with a dollar, and she will come home wearing it. Start out a boy with one, and he will come home eating it.

A girl's interest in a baby is the same as that her brother manifests in a dog.

About all a girl does for her little brother is to scream about his dirty hands every time she looks at him, though it is as natural for a boy to have dirty hands as it is for a cat to have fits.

The quarrels between brothers are over the larger share in something to eat, but when sisters quarrel, it is because one wore something belonging to the other.

It may indicate deep thought when a girl scratches her head, but they don't look at it that way when it is a boy.

Here of late a girl is permitted to read in the parlor fiction worse than that her brother used to peruse surreptitiously in the barn aloft.

It has always been the custom to compare a boy with a weed and a girl with a flower.

A girl doesn't know it, but if someone cut off her hair, put a hundred freckles on her face, and a tan spot on the end of her nose, she would be a duplicate of the younger brother whose looks she so plainly despises.

When brother and sister go to a party together, sister doesn't seem to have any recollection of anything that happened beyond the manner in which her brother misbehaved.

There never was a girl who couldn't give the impression when away from her home that her parents are wealthy, but a boy can't do it.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome in the parlor of a neighbor before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

When a girl is 16 she has the right of way all over the road. Her mother and father promptly side-track when they see her coming, the only one daring a collision being her younger brother. And he long shows the effects of it!

Individual pies, strawberry shortcakes, etc., appeal to a girl, but never to a boy, because they give him no opportunity to get a larger piece than his sister. There is no element of chance in the individual form of pastry.

After sister has expressed her appreciation, brother's thanks sound as cold as yesterday morning's pancakes.

Rev. Dr. John E. White has a splendid article in The Sunday American on "The House of Our Fathers." Everybody should read it.

Very Important.

The glib-tongued agent was trying to persuade Mr. Wipedunks to buy a dictionary.

"Its the latest thing out," he said; "up to date in every particular, contains more words than any other, has all the technical and scientific terms that have come into use in the last ten years, and there isn't a feature missing that goes to make a first-class work of the kind."

"Let me look at it a minute," said Mr. Wipedunks.

The agent handed it over, and Mr. W. inspected it briefly. Then he handed it back.

"Young man," he said, "you can't work that book on me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It hain't got no copious index."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young man from the mountains, who says that he never played on any baseball club and that he has never seen a game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta club, to give him a try-out. At batting and fielding practice he creates a sensation. The Atlanta Georgian prints a whole page of snapshots of him and his fame spreads throughout the country.

In the meantime he has become very friendly with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a wealthy timber speculator. Forrest Cain, an admirer of Mildred, becomes jealous of Gordon and attempts to play him a trick and gets soundly thrashed. Gordon owns a large tract of land in the mountains, between two tracts owned by Mr. Deery and Cain, who need Gordon's property to carry out a land scheme.

The Boston Nationals and other big league clubs stop at Atlanta for exhibition games on their way North and Gordon Kelly becomes the baseball sensation of the hour. Scouts who come to see him work try to get him away from the Atlanta club, and then send wild telegrams to their owners, imploring them to come to Atlanta by the first train and do their own bidding. Nearly all the big league magnates come, and President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, announces that, while disposed to reject all offers, his club felt the necessity of living up to the obligations of organized baseball and would sell Gordon Kelly's release to the best advantage of the stockholders of the club. In a practice game with a big league team, Kelly covers himself with glory. He is injured and Mildred rushes on the field to his aid. The newspapers are filled with accounts of the affair.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Readers of newspapers are aware, without being told, that in reports of any great public gathering, any extraordinary crime, any $100,000 diamond robbery, any uncommon disaster, it is the newspapers that set the pace in gathering and distributing the news of the event. This fact is lost sight of in this narrative. In this particular case the newspapers told all about Gordon Kelly, but later certain things happened to him that the newspapers were never able to learn, and they will be told in the course of this story for the first time.

The news of Gordon Kelly's great feat in his last game in Atlanta created a profound impression throughout the baseball world. There was no end of praise for the player and of sympathy for the Boston club, which, through the accident, had lost the services for many weeks at least of a man for whom it had just paid that unheard-of price of $50,000. The championship races in the two big leagues had started and were well under way. In the American League, of which Gordon Kelly was now a member, although not able to play, the Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland clubs had taken the lead, while the New York and Boston clubs were off to a bad start. Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, although himself limping around with an injured leg, bemoaned his hard luck.

"I have the best outfield in the country as it is," he said, "but I could use that Gordon Kelly just the same. Gee, I wish he would hurry up and get well before my club is out of the running."

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, cursed his fate. "If we had only landed Gordon Kelly and if he hadn't broken his leg, we would be right up there fighting with the leaders," he declared.

The word IF is 90 per cent of baseball, it may be remarked.

Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, said:

"Comiskey ought to have landed Gordon Kelly. All I need is that fellow, besides Big Ed Walsh, to win the American League pennant."

On May 10 the championship season in the two big leagues was a month old and Gordon Kelly was still in the hospital at Atlanta. Mildred Deery was still "out of town." That was all the information the patient could get from the Deery residence. The Atlanta club made a short trip to other cities and returned to home grounds for a brief stay. Bill Smith, Long Tom Morrissey and other members of the team paid daily visits to see their former comrade, who got around the hospital grounds on crutches, but who could not be induced to go out to the park and see a ball game.

Something on His Mind.

"Something's on his mind," declared Long Tom in the club house one day. "He doesn't seem to want to talk about baseball much. And it would not surprise me," he added, emphatically, "to learn that that girl that rushed out on the field and took his head in her lap is what's troubling him. Well, I don't know as I can blame him, at that. She was some peacherino, you hear me!"

"He'll get over it," remarked Bill Smith, sagely. "As soon as his leg gets strong enough for him to run the bases you'll see him up at the plate with that bat of his and he'll forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey had nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and, true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred now knew he was a ball player, he argued to himself. She did not disapprove, else why did she rush on the ball field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelly asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things, and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the time being, sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the $50,000 ball player, became an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She complained of a headache and retired at once to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had well-nigh exhausted her, she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole downstairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove, nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7:30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife.

Under ordinary conditions Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the astounding escapade of his daughter, Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery, at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked, in conclusion.

Not So Shocked.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred liked the young man. Far better than her husband, she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I will speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll——." He slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have it. I was planning to go up in the mountains with a surveyor to-morrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has probably moved in by this time. Instead of going to-morrow, I will leave by the noon train to-day and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something, as I want to see her."

Mildred Approves Plan.

"Wait a minute, please, dear. Mildred isn't a child, and you can not force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure, and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains, and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two, and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains, and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Car Full of Supplies.

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened), ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days), and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes; drove to his home, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of kissed his wife, sped to the depot, the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his vast project, Deery had erected a large cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the main road and close to a roaring brook that, a mile or two beyond, ran into Pew Creek, which flowed down past the settlement. It was a beautiful spot, and Mildred cried her delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself dashed up to the bungalow.

The superintendent's name was Shephard, and his family consisted of his wife and boy, a lad of about fifteen years. Mildred promptly became good friends with them all and declared she never wanted to go back to Atlanta again, whereat her father chuckled in his sleeve.

"If you like hunting and fishing, Miss Deery, I can show you a lot of fun up here," said Elmer Shephard, the lad of fifteen years.

"I should enjoy it immensely, Elmer," replied Mildred, "but you will have to teach me."

The boxes and barrels of things Deery had bought in Atlanta arrived on teams before sundown, and Mildred expressed her surprise at the bulk of it. Her father hastened to explain.

"Well, you see," he said, "you will like this place so well that you will be running up every little while from Atlanta, so I just thought I would put in a supply of things to make you comfortable. If there is anything you don't see that you want let me know, and I will have it sent up from the city."

So Mildred settled down to live the joys of mountain life. But in these Georgia mountains, in this wild and solitary country, she came upon an adventure that completely changed the course of her existence.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THERE was a queer old bug up to our house last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It seems that he and father used to go to school together, and the old gent ran into him by accident yesterday afternoon. He didn't know that his school chum had changed so since boyhood, and before he got wise to the change he asked his friend up to the house.

"I was kind of surprised at the general appearance of Pa's friend. He was one of them tall, slim college professor looking kind of chaps, and when anybody spoke to him he gave a little jump sideways like a scared kitten. His manner was that timid and gentle you would have swore, George, that his wife had a dozen kind of Indian signs on him. It seemed kind of funny to the folks to have Pa chumming around with such like, because goodness knows most of his intimate friends are big necked and copper lined enough to make their way in this speedy world of ours. After knowing Bull McCabe and Marty Regan and the rest of Pa's husky comrades, it seemed funny to entertain a shrinking violet like this gent of which I am speaking of."

A Long Story Teller.

"Well, come to the point," said the Head Barber, "and don't be puttering around all the forenoon. You are worse than one of those long story-tellers."

"I wouldn't converse with you at all, ever, if I didn't have to, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "Most of the time you are awful uninteresting anyway. But I might as well finish this yarn, anyhow.

"We was all setting around the parlor like we used to when we was kids at a party, all waiting for somebody else to speak first, when the old man that father had brought home spoke up and said something about believing explicitly in the theory of reincarceration."

"That ain't the word," said the Head Barber. "I don't know the word either, but it's something that ends up with the name of a flower—carnation, I think."

Didn't Know the Name.

"If you don't know the name of the theory what made you interrupt me?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "Anyhow, it was something about folks that lived a long time ago living over again. For instance, the old gent said—don't mean father, I mean the other old gent—that he believed he was a soldier in the time when they was having the Wars of the Roses. He said that he fought under the Red Rose, whatever kind of a lodge that was, and I guess he was that dippy he believed it. I could see that father wanted to humor his old school chum, because he said he believed in the same theory and thought the soul could live again in another body. It was all I could do to keep from snickering when father talked like that, because goodness knows he spends a lot more time thinking about pinochle and three-cushion billiards than he does in thinking about the human soul and what becomes of it after we have kicked in. But he stalled fine, and I guess the old school friend went away thinking that father was on the level about reincarceration."

"I'd like to know what I would be if I was born again," said George.

"I know what you would be," replied the Manicure Lady. "You would just be another barber."

Modesty the Best Policy.

IT was the early part of the New Year, and little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a long delayed visit to Uncle Silas.

Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of the said uncle, and asked:

"Uncle dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining room table a dime, a half-dollar and a five-dollar note, remarking:

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the dime. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I sha'n't lose it?"

And uncle did.

"Sisters Under Their Skins"

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

By NELL BRINKLEY

For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins.---Rudyard Kipling.

THIS I saw a week or so ago when the country was showing off its fat babies. Across the car from me, sitting with the sweet sunshine streaming in on their two blond heads—coiffed, oh, so differently, was a large plain lady with her chapeau slightly on one ear and a fat bundle snuggled beside her, and a yard or so down the red plush seat an aristocratic woman in silk and brocade, a French hat above her pretty eyebrows, white gloves, rose point lace at her throat and wrists, perfectly groomed! And the whole middle of each was hidden by the newspapers they held. I had watched. They had climbed on at the same street, had settled their silken and cotton skirts, and their four eyes had homed straight to the "pie" of a fat baby on the front page. They had both flipped over to the second page, where more babies were promised to "continue"—and there they stuck—the two of them—the same tilt to their two heads, the same unconscious gentle smile on their two faces. Under the lace-smothered breast of the "colonel's lady" rose the same heart springs that welled beneath the cotton and pearl buttons of "Judy O'Grady" "sisters under their skins."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dick repeated his question, unobservant of its first effect.

"Why didn't you go to Chicago as you had planned?"

"Planned? With whom?" The interrogation came with an abrupt force that cried of new suspicions.

"Why, with Burke." The young man tried to be patient over her density in this time of crisis.

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?" Mary asked. Now the tenseness in her manner got the husband's attention, and he replied with a sudden gravity, apprehensive of he knew not what.

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago." He had caught the contagion of her mood and vague alarm swept him.

"Where?" came the next question, still with that vital insistence.

"In this room."

"Burke was here?" Mary's voice was suddenly cold, very dangerous. "What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

Garson Leaped to the Switch.

The seemingly simple answer appeared the last straw to the girl's burden of frenzied suspicion. Her voice cut fiercely into the quiet of the room, imperious, savage.

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

Something fatally significant in her voice set Garson aleap to the switch, and, in the same second, the blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. The others stood motionless, blinking in the sudden radiance—all save Griggs, who moved stealthily in that same moment, a little nearer the door into the passage, which was nearest to him.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise, seemingly totally irrelevant to this instant of crisis. Yet they rang athrob with an hysterical anxiety.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" With the question she pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

The young man was plainly astonished, disconcerted as well by the obtrusion of a sordid detail into the tragedy of the time.

"Why in the world do you—?" he began, impatiently.

"Tell me—quick!" she commanded. The authority in her voice and manner was not to be gainsaid.

Dick yielded sullenly.

"Oh, two or three hundred dollars, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that!" Mary exclaimed, violently. And now the girl's voice came stinging like a whiplash. In Garson's face, too, was growing fury, for in an instant of illumination he guessd something of the truth. Mary's next question confirmed his raging suspicion.

"How long have you had them, Dick?"

By now the young man himself sensed the fact that something mysteriously baneful lay behind the frantic questioning on this seemingly trivial theme.

"Ever since I can remmber," he replied, promptly.

Mary's voice came then with an intonation that brought enlightenment not only to Garson's shrewd perceptions, but also to the heavier intelligences of Dacey and of Chicago Red.

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently, from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?" So simple were the words of her inquiry, but under them beat something evil, deadly.

The young man laughed contemptuously.

He Came Toward Her.

"I should say not!" he declared indignantly, for he resented the implication against his father's honesty.

"It's a trick! Burke's done it!" Mary's words came with accusing vehemence.

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door into the passage.

Mary's eye caught the movement, and her lips soundlessly framed the name:

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery. He was very dapper in his evening clothes, with his rather handsome, well groomed face set in lines of innocence.

"He's lying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward Dick Gilder. "I tell you, those tapestries are worth a million cold."

Mary's answer was virulent in its sudden burst of hate. For once, the music of her voice was lost in a discordant cry of detestation.

"You stool-pigeon! You did this for Burke!"

Griggs sought still to maintain his air of innocence, and he strove well, since he knew that he fought for his life against those whom he had outraged. As he spoke again, his tones were tremulous with sincerity—perhaps that tremulousness was born chiefly of fear, yet to the ear his words came stoutly enough for truth:

"I swear I didn't! I swear it!"

Mary regarded the protesting man with abhorrence. The perjured wretch shrank before the loathing in her eyes.

"You came to me yesterday," she said, with more of restraint in her voice now, but still with inexorable rancor. "You came to me to explain this plan. And you came from him—from Burke!"

"I swear I was on the level. I was tipped off to the story by a pal," Griggs declared, but at last the assurance was gone out of his voice. He felt the hostility of those about him.

Garson broke in ferociously.

"It's a frame-up!" he said. His tones came in a deadened roar of wrath.

On the instant, aware that further subterfuge could be of no avail, Griggs swaggered defiance.

"And what if it is true?" he drawled, with a resumption of his aristocratic manner, while his eyes swept the group balefully. He plucked the police whistle from his waistcoat pocket, and raised it to his lips.

Then He Trembled.

He moved too slowly. In the same moment of his action, Garson had pulled the pistol from his pocket, had pressed the trigger. There came no spurt of flame. There was no sound—save perhaps a faint clicking noise. But the man with the whistle at his lips suddenly ceased movement, stood absolutely still for the space of a breath. Then he trembled horribly, and in the next instant crashed to the floor, where he lay rigid, dead.

"D—n you—I've got you!" Garson sneered through clenched teeth. His eyes were like balls of fire. There was a frightful grin of triumph twisting his mouth in this minute of punishment.

In the first second of the tragedy, Dick had not understood. Indeed, he was still dazed by the suddenness of it all. But the falling of Griggs before the leveled weapon of the other man, there to lie in that ghastly immobility, made him to understand. He leaped toward Garson—would have wrenched the pistol from the other's grasp. In the struggle, it fell to the floor.

Before either could pick it up, there came an interruption. Even in the stress of this scene, Chicago Red had never relaxed his professional caution. A slight noise had caught his ear; he had stooped, listening. Now he straightened and called his warning.

"Somebody's opening the front door!"

Garson forgot his weapon in this new alarm. He sprang to the octagonal window, even as Dick took possession of the pistol.

"The street's empty! We must jump for it!" His hate was forgotten now in an emotion still deeper, and he turned to Mary. His face was all gentleness again, where just before it had been evil incarnate, aflame with the lust to destroy. "Come on, Mary," he cried.

Already Chicago Red had snapped off the lights of the chandelier, had sprung to the window, thrown open a panel of it, and had vanished into the night, with Dacey at his heels. As Garson would have called out to the girl again in mad anxiety for haste, he was interrupted by Dick.

"She couldn't make it, Garson," he declared, coolly and resolutely. "You go. It'll be all right, you know. I'll take care of her!"

"If she's caught——!" There was an indescribable menace in the forger's half-uttered threat.

"She won't be." The quality of sincerity in Dick's voice was more convincing than any vow might have been.

"If she is, I'll get you; that's all." Garson said gravely, as one stating a simple fact that could not be disputed.

Then he glanced down at the body of the man whom he had done to death.

"And you can tell that to Burke!" he said, viciously, to the dead. "You d——d squealer!" There was a supremely malevolent content in his sneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters.

Not Quite Right.

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "?" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

THE MAN WHO IS TIRED OF HIS WIFE

"Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," Says an Old Proverb, and This Is Especially Apt in This Situation.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A MAN writes me in great distress. He says that he has been married about fifteen years, and that suddenly a great weariness of spirit has come upon him. His wife is good and kind, an excellent housekeeper, a thrifty manager, and her one object in life is to please him and make him happy, but while he recognizes her virtues and admires them, they leave him cold and unmoved.

In a word, he's tired of his wife. She bores him to death. Just her presence is irksome to him, and when she goes with him on any sort of a pleasure jaunt it takes all the fun out of the occasion.

This man is no gay Lothario. He is a good, honest, domestic man, who is honestly alarmed at the state of affairs, and he wants to know what he can do to recover the interest he once had in his wife, and the thrills that went through his veins like fire at the touch of her hand.

There is only one remedy for such cases, and that is absence. Only people who have neither nerves, temperament nor imagination can stand the horrible monotony of seeing the same face opposite them at three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, and ditto dinners, to say nothing of having the same form across the drop light for an equal number of evenings a year, and having to listen to the same old stories.

The most beautiful people in the world grow homely to our eyes if we see them too often. The wittiest conversationalists grow tedious if we have a surfeit of their society. The virtues of even an angel pall upon us if they are constantly before us.

Reasons Why.

Probably Mr. Milo thought his Venus too fat or too thin, and asked her why she didn't get another make of corset. Doubtless there were times, before she got a divorce, when Mrs. Caruso said to herself that if Enrico warbled another warble she would scream, and it isn't on record that the immediate family of any of our saints and martyrs ever handed in any testimonial to show what they thought on the subject of the canonization of their husbands or wives.

Why people who can not eat thirty quails in thirty days; who never want to see the same play twice, or read a book a second time; who tire of their clothes before they are half worn out, and spend their lives hunting for new sights, new emotions, new diversions, new places to go, should ever be foolish enough to imagine that they could endure the undiluted society of one person, year in and year out, passes comprehension.

There are millions of husbands and wives who have had an overdose of each other's society and are suffering from it, and they are so stupid they don't realize what ails them, nor how simple the remedy for it is. Yet the symptoms are unmistakable.

When a man begins to dread the thought of going home of an evening, and to wonder what made him idiot enough to get married and to pick out Sally, of all women in the world, for a wife; when he begins to notice that Sally has gone off in looks and is getting a triple chin, and to have a feather bed figure; when his eyes focus on the little mole on Sally's cheek instead of the cute way her hair curls around the back of her neck; and when he commences wondering if all women talk as much drivel and use as many words in telling nothing as Sally Jones—then it's time for the man to pack his grip and hike away from home and Sally.

He hasn't really fallen out of love with her, as he thinks he has. He's just tired of her for the time being. He doesn't really pine to be a gay rover, as he imagines he does. He just wants to ease the pressure of the yoke of matrimony for a little, and to him—and to his wife—a ticket to Chicago, or San Francisco, or Bird Center, or anywhere away from home, is a lifeline that saves them both from destruction.

And it's exactly the same way with women. Of course the theory is that women have such an abnormal talent for loving that a wife never gets enough of her husband's society, but if a femael Oliver Twist, always asking for more. Don't you believe it. Women are fickle creatures, and the best wife in the world can get so sick and weary of a model husband that she is ready to die of sheer ennui.

The Woman's Side.

Every now and then a woman gets so that she can see nothing but faults in her husband. Everything he does and everything he doesn't do irritates her, and she, too, gets to wondering what on earth the fool-killer was doing on the day that she tied up with the miserable little shrimp that she did, instead of marrying some romantic and godlike creature that she didn't marry. She thinks that she is suffering from having missed her affinity and being married to a groundling that can't understand her higher nature, but the whole trouble is that she has had too much of her husband's society. All that she needs to effect a complete cure is a month or six weeks' separation.

Of course, being ladies and gentlemen, most of us never admit to our husbands and wives that we are bored. We yawn behind our hands and try to look interested, but in our secret souls all of us know that the surging joy with which we saw our dearly beloved husband or wife start off on a journey, or the rapture that filled our own soul when we got to go off somewhere alone, or with perfect strangers.

And we also know the delight with which we returned home, or welcomed back the wanderer, our whole point of vision changed by a little absence, and the one of whom we had been so tired clothed again in his or her halo.

This is why the summer vacation is such a beneficent institution. We can lay our weariness of our domestic partners on the weather, and get away with a decent excuse. But it isn't the change of climate that does us good. It's the change from the monotony of association, and it sends us back rested and refreshed and romantically in love again.

A True Proverb.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says the old proverb, and this is especially true of husbands and wives. They need to break away every few months just to get a perspective on each other's good qualities and to find out how necessary each is to the other's happiness.

You can overdo matrimony as easily as you can any other good thing, and if there were some way by which we could be married three days a week instead of seven there would be no more divorce.

Queer Vegetable.

A vicar advertised for a servant a short time ago, and a country girl, with a fat, red face, answered the advertisement.

After the vicar had asked a few personal questions, he said:

"You know, we are all vegetarians here, and, of course, we should require you to be one. No meat, you know—simply vegetables."

She dropped her eyes, and for a time seemed deep in thought.

"Well, what do you think?" asked the vicar, after a short time.

"Well, sir," she replied, "it's like this. I don't mind so much about the meat; but before I take the place I should like to know if you—er—call beer a vegetable?"

She was not engaged.

$10 WORTH OF BALL FOR TWO BITS FRIDAY

By Percy H. Whiting.

TEN dollars' worth of baseball at two bits was the offering at Ponce DeLeon Park Friday afternoon, in a game the Crackers lost to Chattanooga, 7 to 5. The contest took ten innings, two hours and seventeen minutes and a pound of flesh from the wracked frame of Manager Bill Smith.

It was surely a cuckoo little contest.

For eight innings it was an awful affair, a regular boob game as far as the Crackers were concerned. They had made only three hits off Rudy Summers and it looked as though they would never make any more. The score was then five to nothing against the Crackers, for Chappelle was no puzzle to the guys he used to work with and his support was much to the cheese.

* * *

THE last half of the eighth was a memorable session. Joe Agler opened it with a single. Dunn walked—and walked. Rohe, batting to Chappelle, flied out. Long walked. And then came Welchonce, the hero of the previous day's game. All he did this time was to triple but that scored three men and put Summers in a blue funk. Whereupon Alperman arose and lammed the ball to the score board for a home-run—and this tied it up. Five runs in one inning for a tie up! Wow!

* * *

DID you ever notice that when a team comes from behind they come just far enough to tie the score—and then stop there? It happens nine times out of ten. In Friday's game it was obvious that the locals had Summers absolutely on his last legs. With only one out and two dangerous batters in line it seemed as though a little more of the same steam would have put over the winning run.

It's human nature, though, to pull up on even terms and stop to breathe, believing that the overhauling will be an easy matter later.

* * *

AFTER warming up both Dent and Price while the batting rally was in progress Smith stuck in the former. He retired the first two men and then got in an awful mess by letting Flick and King hit. Coyle then grounded to Alperman, who started a double play and pulled the Crackers through that inning.

To the surprise of everybody Elberfeld elected to use Harry Coveleskie to finish out the game for him. Considering the Pole's uncertainty and the ease with which he is usually rattled this was a brave choice. Hardly another manager in the world would have taken that chance.

But Coveleskie stood the gaff.

Every Cracker went up to the plate with strict orders to wait him out. It started all right too, when Bisland walked. Agler sacrificed him along but there he croaked. Dunn waited like a statue but Coveleskie had the plate located and Joe finally popped to Coveleskie. Dent had a lovely opportunity but was struck out.

In the first of the tenth Dent got his. Elberfeld opened with a single. Elston sacrificed. Johnson singled Street fractured the tie by going out Smith to Agler, so artistically that Elberfeld tallied. Williams was walked. And then came the superlative surprise for Coveleskie hit a clear single, scoring Johnson and closing out the Crackers.

In the last half of the tenth Welchonce kept up his great pinch hitting with a timely single but Coveleskie was the master of the rest of them and deserved a victory.

This was the first game the Lookouts have won out of eight attempts against the Crackers.

Wan, Weary and Worn Out

If You Feel Fagged to a Finish and Utterly Used Up Here Is Quick Relief.

S. S. S. Makes Your Blood Corpuscles Unite for Mutual Protection.

Half the people you meet complain of weary muscles, stagnant brain, jangled nerves, and a wonderful desire to lay down and just quit. Most of these people have been using nervines that spasmodically fire up the nerves only to die down again, as die they must. Avoid nerve stimulants. Bear in mind that this worn-out feeling is due to poor blood, to bacteria in the water you drink; to the multiplying of destructive germs in the blood faster than they can be overcome by the white corpuscles; and to what is known as auto-toxemia, that condition where the venous or impure blood accumulates faster than it can be replaced by the red arterial blood.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital and essential to well-balanced health as those of the grains, meats, fats and sugars of our food.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S., which is Nature Specific. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling. It just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine just as active and just as timely as to a man who has been lost in the mountains, is about starved and comes across a settler just roasting a savory meal of good victuals. Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 157 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Jackson's Clout a Record One

Longest Homer, Says Sam Crane

By Sam Crane.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Joe Jackson's home run wallop over the roof of the right field wing of the Brush stadium last Monday was a marvel.

There were two other circuit clouts made, but while they were hard hits, they were not patches on "Jolting Joe's" job that cleared every sky high obstacle in the Polo Grounds and in the immediate neighborhood for miles around. The ball landed somewhere. There is no doubt of that, for Sir Isaac Newton's statement that everything that goes up must come down is still considered as sufficient authority to bank on even in these baseball days when "up in the air" is considered a permanent ascension.

Yes, siree, Joe Jackson's wonderful wallop was a record breaker. It was the longest drive ever made on the Polo Grounds, either to right field, center field or to left field. Buck Ewing is given credit for smashing the longest hit ever made toward the Harlem River. That was in the days when the left field was known as "Burkeville," that euphonious title being derived from "Eddie" Burke, once a Giant left fielder, who played the sun field without the aid of smoked glasses or a net, and never missed a fly ball, so 'tis said, or a high one, either.

Opinions Differed.

There are various opinions as to where the ball went over the left field fence that Buck soaked so far. But it was made in the Players' League days of 1890, and sailed over the outer bulwarks at about where the present 25 cent pen is now located.

"Some drive," you young fans of the present day may say, but in those good old days there were some sluggers—consecutive wallopers. I might say, like "Babe" Anson, Roger Connor, Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, Ed Delehanty, Mike Tiernan and others, who, if they didn't make a home run a day, were ashamed to go to the "captain's office" and draw their half monthly stipends.

"Home Run" Baker has made quite a "small" reputation since those days by smashing out homers off Matty and Rube and they possibly earned more fame than the lengthy licks of the old-time swatters, soaks, but only for the reason that they figured as winning clouts in world championship contests and not because they were the real thing in drives.

Why, I have seen Ed Delehanty clout a ball so far over the present left field wall on the Phillies' grounds in Quakerville that make the home runs made by Cravath and Magee this year on the same grounds look like bunts.

Thompson Made Long Clout.

In Cincinnati I saw Sam Thompson hit the ball so hard and far that the home run smashes of Bescher, Bates and other long-hitting Reds of the present look like handle hits.

I have witnessed Anson make home runs in Chicago off wild pitches that would make the fourbag drives of Schulte and Zimmerman look like mere infield pop-ups.

Mike Tiernan lifted the ball once over the right field fence on Manhattan Field into Brotherhood Park (now the Polo Grounds.) That historical hit of Tiernan's, too, won a famous 11-inning pitching contest between the two star pitchers of that time (1890), and the spot where the ball went over the fence was marked by a small American flag for several years. Even the Harlem small boy revered the wallop so much that he didn't steal the flag.

I have seen—well, all those great hits and many more—but I will come down to earth now and take off my hat to Joe Jackson, of the Clevelands, for making the longest lick I ever saw—and that was Monday.

Doubt About O'Rourke's Hit.

Jim O'Rourke has heretofore been credited with making the longest smash, but there is a doubt on that record. Jim hit the ball over left field fence on the present Boston Braves' grounds, and the ball never stopped going until it landed in Providence, R. I. The ball went into the express car of a through train from Boston to Providence that didn't stop until it got to the Rhode Island Capital.

There is a history connected with Jackson's smash. A small boy recovered the ball somewhere down in Harlem on a side street and hearing about the record wallop—(why, Harlem was full of it) brought the ball back to the Polo Grounds and showed it to Joe after the game.

Joe paid the youngster a ten-dollar note for his prize—and it was well worth the money. It is a memento of the longest hit ever made.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

THE Western invasion in the American League should bring out some interesting baseball within the next two weeks. It is common gossip on that circuit that the Cleveland team is a much bigger winner on its home grounds than away on the road. The present trip should show whether this is true. With Birmingham's pitchers, and the club hitting as it is, there is no reason why it should not be just as big a winner in the East as the West. The Cleveland club looks like a strong one to me, and the Athletics are worried by the showing it is making. They fear the excellent pitching, the Philadelphia club being none too strong on the twirling itself.

* * *

STILL, I do not see how the Athletics can be beaten out. They are playing at their old-time speed now and should pick up on Cleveland during their long stand at home. Outside of the Naps, "Connie" Mack's team will be playing the easy Western clubs, while the only soft spot Birmingham will find in the East will be in New York. The series with Philadelphia, Washington and Boston will all be hard ones. The Naps have made all these gains without Lajoie, and with him back in the game the aggregation will be greatly strengthened, as the return of Wagner braced up the Pirates.

* * *

THE Boston Red Sox are still off color, although they have shown flashes of better ball recently. The failure of their pitching staff has been largely responsible for the poor showing. None of the pitchers who looked so good in the world's series have been able to win consistently this spring. Even "Smoky Joe" Wood has not been smoky. When their pitchers come around in shape, as they are bound to do, Boston will do considerably more winning, but I do not believe the Red Sox have a chance for the pennant. There are too many other high-class ball teams ahead of them in the competition now.

* * *

THE White Sox have made a good showing, better than was expected of them, and may come through and scare a lot of managers before the race is over. Their pitchers are displaying grand form, even without the aid of "Ed" Walsh. White, Russell, Benz and Scott have all pitched good ball. Pitching has been a big factor in the races in both leagues so far this year, the clubs with the twirlers getting the early starts, with the possible exception of the Athletics.

* * *

DETROIT and the New York Americans look hopeless. Somebody said the other day that the only reason they are keeping a club in Detroit is to give Cobb a chance to see how high he can bat. Chance realizes he will have to tear his club down and build over again. He began by trading Chase. His task is a tough one.

"CHICK" GANDIL HASN'T DROPPED BALL IN YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Washington baseball fans are pointing out that Walter Johnson is not the only record holder on the local team. "Chick" Gandil, who one year ago this month began playing first base for the Senators, has never dropped a thrown ball in all that time, except when the throw was so wild it pulled him off the bag. This is believed to be a record for accuracy in fielding.

FOXHALL KEENE DISCUSSES THE POLO CONTEST

By Foxhall Keene.

(Captain of the American Polo Team.)

NEW YORK, June 7.—Before I take up the discussion of teams which will meet in the approaching contest I want to repeat what I have said in recent interviews—that the changes made in the line-up of the squad were not due to friction or to trouble of any sort, and rumors to that effect are absolutely without foundation.

The changes were made by those in charge not only with the consent, but at the urging of the parties concerned, in the belief that it will further the common cause and we know all are working together with the one hope and ambition to keep the polo cup in America.

Speaking for myself I can say that I did not want to have anything to do with the game at this particular time on account of the recent death of my father, but Mr. Whitney and the other members of the team finally prevailed upon me to re-enter the lists, and now that I am in I shall do my best to bring about the defeat of the English.

Will Put Up Hard Fight.

I hope and believe that our team will be able to give a good account of itself in the match and if we are defeated I am pretty sure the Englishmen will know they have been in a fight.

I am inclined to believe that the old team was not up to the form it has shown in past years, and perhaps Mr. Whitney held it together on account of old friendships longer than he might have done.

Mr. Whitney is one of the greatest players the game of polo has produced in 20 years and his passing from the team at this time must be viewed with real regret.

Larry Waterbury was certainly as good a back as the world has ever seen. He played No. 1 on the team that Mr. Whitney took to England, and he played it brilliantly, though the English team at that time was rated rather poor.

Monte Waterbury has not been well for some months and his game has not been the phenomenal game of past years.

Betting Favors Englishmen.

The betting is against us and the popular feeling seems to be that the Englishmen have the stronger team, but in spite of that and in spite of the fact we have been given a very short time to prepare ourselves, I am confident that America will not be ashamed of her representatives when we take the field against the mother country.

The English squad have an extraordinary array of ponies. We can not deny that they outpony us to some extent, but in addition to Mr. Whitney's string, Mr. Prince, of Boston, who owns a very fine stud, sent his ponies to New York by special train and we will all have them to depend on.

We have but a small handful of polo players in America,"—by which I mean only a few men who have gone in for the game strong enough to become experts; whereas England not only has England, where the game is older and more popular than here, to draw upon, but India as well, and in India every other man is a good polo player.

It is therefore great credit to our small handful that we have been able to produce squads that have at times beaten the best teams produced by the British and that have always given a good account of themselves.

English Ponies Are Good.

From what I have seen of the Englishmen I might say that their hitting is uniformly fine and the ponies are very good, but they were not being tackled, and a team always looks pretty good when it is not being opposed.

In drawing a comparison between American and English methods of playing polo it seems to me that the Americans have been more ambitious for the past 20 years. The Englishmen are rather orthodox in their general style, while we have all kinds of strokes. They have some that they play best, but there is always more variety to the Americans.

There are really no new ways of playing polo and few new angles to be developed. Naturally I have certain theories of my own in connection with the game as has every polo player, but this is hardly the time to exploit them.

BURMAN DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE GOUX SAILED

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bob Burman, the dare-devil automobile racer, who is in town to-day, was quite disappointed to find that Jules Goux, the Frenchman who won the 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis, had sailed Thursday for France.

Burman came here to challenge Goux to a 500-mile race either at Indianapolis or New York for a side bet of from $5,000 to $20,000. Burman announced that he will now cable his challenge.

JIM FLYNN AND SAVAGE ARRIVE HERE MONDAY

By Left Hook.

JACK CURLEY, manager of Jim Flynn, has wired that he and Flynn will arrive in Atlanta Monday. Dan Morgan, manager of Jim Savage, had previously wired that he and his man would be here either Sunday or Monday. So the Queensberry festivities of the city should brighten up materially within the next few days.

Dan Morgan, in behalf of Savage, has laid claim to the heavyweight championship of the world. In his formal statement Morgan says:

"Savage has as much right to the title as any of the white hopes. I consider him the best man in the lot. I believe he can whip any of them, now that McCarty is out of the way. We are willing to meet any of them, and intend to begin by polishing off Flynn on the night of June 13 in Atlanta."

Morgan is wild with enthusiasm over the outlook. The sudden turn of affairs that gave his man a championship look-in pleased him right down to the ground. He saw the opportunity and he is off on a campaign of activity that will give Jim Savage more scraps in the next few months than he ever had before in his life.

It may be that Morgan's plans may get an awful jolt right here in Atlanta. There is not any doubt that, until a few weeks ago, he believed that his man could trim Jim Flynn with all ease. Then came Jim's great battle with Jim Coffey, and that was something else again. Flynn, instead of being on the down slant, as Morgan hoped, proved to be as good as ever in his career. But after that was learned it was too late to back out, for the match between Savage and Flynn was made.

Neither of the men wants to meet the other now. Yet each knows that he must go into it to win or to be knocked out. There is no middle ground now. A draw decision would do neither of them any good. They must win. A victory, with the heavyweight situation as it now is, means money to them, way up in the tens of thousands.

The odd way affairs have lined themselves has played into the hands of the local promoters. It has made the battle next Friday night one of the BIG contests of the year. The winner is almost sure within the year to grab off the heavyweight championship of the world.

NATIONAL COMMISSION PASSES NEW SALARY RULE

CINCINNATI, June 7.—The National Baseball Commission promulgated a new rule yesterday which clearly defines the salary obligations of a club to a player whose services are released by the club after the commencement of its contract period.

The new rule reads:

"A club which after the beginning of the terms of its contract with him, releases the services of a player to a club whose championship season had not commenced, must pay him at the rate of his canceled contract up to the date his salary starts with his new club, provided he promptly reports to and gives service to the club to which he is transferred."

398 MEN TAKE PART IN TRACK MEET AT MADISON

MADISON, WIS., June 7.—The greatest group of college athletes in the history of Western competition to-day are here awaiting the signals which start the conference track and field meet billed for this afternoon. Seventeen schools are represented in the gathering, with 398 entrants. The colleges in the running include every member of the "big nine," and in addition to these schools are Drake, Ames, Kansas, Missouri, Notre Dame, Oberlin, Wabash and California.

Because of the weakening of the California team, which lost four of its star performers by conference rules, Missouri is favorite, with Illinois second choice.

Whitney Plays Aldredge To-day

Winner Gets Dixie Championship

By W. R. Tichenor.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 7. Nelson Whitney, twice champion of the Southern Golf Association, and George A. Eldredge, champion of the State of Texas, are battling to-day at 36 holes for the championship of the South and a huge silver cup.

Whitney won his match in the semi-finals yesterday from Reuben Bush, whom he defeated 7 up and 6 to play.

Whitney was longer and steadier on all of his tee shots, which gave him the advantage of seeing the results of Bush's second shot on almost every hole before he was forced to play his own. While he was unsteady on his short puts in the morning round and presented Bush with a half at the eighth, ninth, tenth and fourteenth, and a win at the sixth and thirteenth holes by taking three puts on each, Whitney managed to end the round 3 up, with a 76 for the 18 holes.

Bush Puts Poorly.

In the afternoon round Bush picked up in his field game, but became erratic in his short puts, allowing Whitney to add three more holes in going out, and so they turned for home with Whitney 6 up. Both played the tenth badly, Bush winning it with a 5 after putting his tee shot out of bounds. Whitney, however, came to life on the eleventh, which is 460 yards in length, by holing a long put for a 3. On the 575-yard twelfth hole Whitney put his third within 10 feet of the hole and sank the put for a "win" of the hole and the match.

Whitney has met in succession Jacoby, Knowles and Bush. To-morrow he meets Aldredge, of Dallas, Texas, in the final.

Aldredge won his way into the final by defeating Herbert Tutwiler, of Birmingham. At the end of the morning round yesterday he was 3 up. He increased this lead to four and won on the thirty-second green.

Rowan Still In.

W. H. Rowan dfeeated George Fooshe, of Memphis, in a hard match. At the end of the morning round Fooshe was 2 up. Rowan evened the match at the turn and won 3 up and 2 to play.

Young Charley Hardy, of New Orleans, and Rollo Steinmehl, both of them youngsters, met in the semi-finals of the second flight. Hardy was going fine and had a 77 for the morning round, while Steinmehl was off his game and the first eighteen holes ended with Hardy 11 up. Steinmehl braced in the afternoon, but could not cut down Hardy's lead and was beaten 11 up and 10 to play. Hardy and Rowan meet in the final to-day.

Probasco defeated Stahlman 7 and 6 in the semi-finals of the third flight. In the other half of this flight Ned Daley ran away from Reid Sayre and had him 9 down at the thirteenth hole, when Sayre gave up the match. Daley and Probasco meet in the final of this flight.

In the fourth flight J. A. England defaulted to D. Weaver. Harnett, of Jacksonville, defeated A. W. Post, 6 and 5. The final of the fifth flight will be fought out between J. W. S. Rhea and C. Tyson. Rhea won from Richards, of Chattanooga, 3 and 2, and Tyson beat Whitney Bouden by the same score.

Atlanta Man Loses.

Albert Mallory defeated D. E. Root, of Atlanta, three and two, in the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Munger beat Watts by the same score, and these two will meet in the finals.

Munger of Texas, and Ulmer, of Jacksonville, are the finalists in the consolation division of the championship flight.

Dowdell Brown had Cullom dormie seven in his match against him, but, knowing he could not be present to play the final if he won, defaulted the match.

Hamilton Block, of Atlanta, trimmed J. Tyson, of Montgomery to the tune of nine up and eight to play, and so is one of the finalists in the consolation division of the third flight.

D. Henderson, of Chattanooga, and Crawford, of Montgomery, are in the finals of the consolation division of the fifth flight.

Will Gunn, of Macon, and Ed Joseph, of Montgomery, will fight it out in the final of the consolation division of the sixth flight.

Riggs Resigns as Athletic Leader

CLEMSON COLLEGE, June 7.—At a recent meeting of the Clemson College Athletic Association, President W. M. Riggs after about 16 or 17 years of continuous service in the capacity of president of the association, refused re-election. Dr. Riggs is the father of athletics at Clemson and has always given much time to the development of the various sports, especially to football. He will continue to give his hearty support to all college sports, but his regular duties will prevent his serving as president of the association.

The following officers and managers were elected for the next season: Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, president; R. B. Ezell, vice president; Prof. J. W. Gantt, secretary and treasurer; J. B. Douthit, manager of the football team; C. B. Iler and S. W. Hutto, assistant managers; H. H. Pressley, manager of the baseball team; H. W. Bristol and S. M. Richards, assistant managers; K. G. Caughman, manager of the basket ball team; J. B. Glover and G. C. McDermis, assistant managers; A. P. Lewis, manager of the track team; L. LeGrand and R. J. Odom, assistants; J. W. Erwin, manager of the tennis teams; M. R. Stender, chief rooter; R. B. Ezell and F. J. Jervey, assistants; J. N. McBride, historian.

Clemson has a good football schedule, as the following will show. Gandy is captain of the football team, and Webb is captain of the baseball team.

It has been estimated from information gathered in the different betting places in New York that at least $500,000 has been wagered in that city on the result of the baseball races. The Giants in the National League and the Athletics in the American League have been the big betting favorites from the start of the season.

* * *

The Yankees evidently intend establishing a record that will never be equaled or broken. By dropping a 2 to 1 game to the Naps yesterday they registered their seventeenth straight defeat on their home grounds. Fans are thinking of holding a big fireworks celebration as soon as the Yankees win their first game on the home grounds.

The Athletics yesterday garnered their twelfth straight victory and the Naps have annexed a record of thirteen victories out of the last fourteen starts.

The Cubs made twelve hits yesterday against six for the Braves, but the Braves bunched their safeties and won 5 to 4.

Walter Johnson, of the Senators, was back in form again yesterday with the result that the Senators won over the Browns, Johnson shutting out the St. Louis players and allowing but four scattered hits.

Just now both teams are tearing the American League wide open and leaving such a gap that only a terrific slump will enable any other team to overtake both for another month or six weeks.

By "Chick" Evans.

PERHAPS the readers of The Georgian will remember a little biography of a golfer which appeared in this paper a few months ago. In that slight sketch I endeavored to give the golfing history of a young player, who, although not well known in the West, was champion of an Eastern State and had made a creditable showing in the National at Wheaton. Although he tied for the last place in the qualifying round with Herreshoff, he won the playoff, and his subsequent game in the tournament led me to class him as one of the most promising players in America. I defeated him in the third round of that event and I have respected his game and appreciated my good fortune ever since.

This young player, Heinrich Schmidt, of Worcester, Mass., has attracted the attention of every American golfer by his recent good showing in the British amateur championship. There is no qualifying round in this event; the matter is arranged by drawing a certain number of byes, determined by the number of entrants. Mr. Schmidt did not draw a bye, however, but played through five successful rounds and was defeated by Harold Hilton in the sixth round by one stroke on the nineteenth hole. His opponents in the other rounds were golfers of the first class, among them a former British champion and the man who defeated Hilton last year. We have only meager accounts of the event, but Mr. Schmidt's record is certainly an enviable one.

Another American Makes Showing.

I had many letters from Mr. Schmidt last winter and spring, urging me to join the little party of Americans in the trip abroad, but business kept me at home. He went unheralded and no hint of his practice scores reached us, but the result of his going was made golf history.

Harold Weber, of Toledo, Ohio, another American competitor in the British amateur, also made an excellent showing. This surprised none of Mr. Weber's Western friends, for he is well known here, and is a very good player indeed. He had the good fortune, if it can be called good fortune, to remain inactive during the first round, to draw a bye, and he put out several fine British players before he himself met defeat in the third round.

Findlay Douglas, of New York, another of the American entrants, bears a national reputation, and it was perhaps largely through his efforts that the little band of Americans journeyed abroad. Mr. Douglas has not taken his game very seriously of late years. He was defeated in the first round.

British Invasion Successful.

There were also some California entrants with whose playing I am unacquainted, but I am told that they are excellent golfers.

All in all, the Americans have reason to be proud of the results of their invasion of British territory this year. They have faced the difficulties of the British courses, the skill of the British players, and the fine British golfing temperament, and they have achieved some notable victories. They are well content.

American Net Stars Win Over Australians

NEW YORK, June 7.—American lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis Cup preliminaries at the West Side Tennis Club courts yesterday.

Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, and R. Norris Williams, second, scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to cinch the American team's victory is to win one of the three remaining matches, and experts look for this to be accomplished this afternoon when McLoughlin and Harold H. Hackett meet the Australian doubles team, consisting of Doust and A. B. Jones. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team, which already has eliminated the French team.

COUNZELMAN IN FOLD; RELEASE FOR CHAPPELLE

BILL CHAPPELLE has been released by the Atlanta club to make a place for Pitcher Counzelman, just secured from the Pirates.

Chappelle did not come around as Bill Smith expected he would and Manager Smith decided to let him go and to hang onto Pitcher Price, for the present at least.

Smith has no deals on for pitchers now and will give his present staff a thorough trial before letting any more men out.

It is probable that Counzelman will be worked to-day. Smith gave him a good warm-up Friday and he showed a lot of stuff. His curve ball is pronounced a marvel by Smith, and he has plenty of speed, too.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE TO BOX IN 'FRISCO ON FOURTH

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—According to a statement made by Ad Wolgast early to-day the former title holder has been re-matched with Willie Ritchie.

Wolgast was just starting for Venice when he was called to the telephone.

"That was Tom Jones in San Francisco that I was talking to," said Ad when he emerged from the booth. He has matched me with Ritchie at 133 pounds at 9 o'clock in the morning for an afternoon fight on July 4 before Eddie Graney's club.

"That's an awful weight handicap for me to carry and I wouldn't stand for it except that I am getting a big end of the money for my share. No matter what Ritchie weighs, I will scale in at 133, so that I will be recognized as the lightweight champion in case I beat him.

"This match makes it absolutey necessary for me to stop Johnny Dundee next Tuesday night. I can't say that I relish the 20-round bout with Ritchie, except that I want to prove that I am a better man than Willie."

The question of determining who will win these valuable pony outfits is put up squarely to the people of Atlanta and its territory, and they will make the actual choice. After the people have determined to whom the prizes shall be awarded, The Georgian will do the rest. The utmost fairness and impartiality will govern the contest from beginning to end, and every assurance of consideration is extended those who participate in the contest. The pony outfit contest is public in its spirit. Everyone in Atlanta and territory is cordially invited to take part in the balloting which will decide the winners of the ponies, and it is believed everyone will.

Who the boys and girls are that will take away these handsome ponies on July 31 will be decided by popular vote of the people of Atlanta and territory. Ballots will be printed each and every issue of The Georgian and American during the life of this contest, and other ballots of infinitely greater value will be given on all prepaid subscriptions. At the close of the contest a pony cart and harness, "all in readiness to drive away," will be awarded in each district to the boy or girl who has received the highest number of votes in that district.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF COTTON

Good Rains in the Western Belt Cause Decline After Early Gain—No Feature.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The cotton market opened steady to-day with first prices net unchanged to 4 points lower than last night's close. Early cables reflected the usual week-end evening up at Liverpool, resulting in a wave of scattered short covering here. Prices immediately rallied 1 to 4 points above the opening quotations. The selling was scattered. The strength of the market was mainly attributed to the strength of the summer positions.

Later advices from sections of the cotton belt indicated that the crop is making excellent progress. This, coupled with the weather map showing heavy rains over the entire State of Oklahoma and nice showers in Texas, where rains are badly needed, brought out some selling, resulting in prices dropping 3 to 8 points from the previous close.

At the close the market was steady with prices showing irregularity, being 4 points lower to 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 7.—Oklahoma and the northwestern portion of Texas had a general rainfall over night. Some good rains and scattered showers occurred in north Texas and Tennessee, while light showers fell in many localities in the eastern half of the belt.

Indications are for more general rains over Sunday in the Central and Western States. Scattered showers in the Eastern States. Cooler over the entire belt.

With Liverpool furnishing no incentive to action we had a quiet Saturday market to-day, waiting for what next week will bring in the way of professional action.

New York reviews of the market state plainly that professional operations in the July position rule the market to the exclusion of all other considerations. Brokers representing Liverpool spot interests have also been steady buyers of July during the past three days. The small stock in New York, of only 40,000 bales certificated, said to be the smallest in ten years, is the main encouragement to bullish operations. As far as new crops are concerned they are under the sympathetic influence of efforts to advance July futures.

For the time being it must be admitted that, owing to the greatly reduced stocks, the July position appears to be an easy prey for bullish designs, and the flush of success could easily lead to excesses.

A fact worthy of consideration is that July in New York is nearly 12 cents and that according to statistics and reliable private information visible and invisible holdings in the South are a good deal larger than last year and that with the close approach to the realization of good crop prospects and the continued absence of mill demand, these holdings could become attracted by any future position of isolated high prices. A determined rally in New York toward the close to-day was taken as an indication of the sentiment and intentions for next week.

North Eager to Buy Southern Securities

William Hurd Hillyer, who recently returned from a trip to New York, Philadelphia and Boston, said Saturday that he had been impressed by the eagerness with which Northern and Eastern capitalists invested in Southern mortgage loans, particularly those on Georgia property.

"There seems to be as much readiness to lend money on farm and country securities as on those in the city," he asserted. "This is a circumstance that speaks favorably for the confidence of the country in this section."

STOCKS WEAKEN IN CLOSING HOUR

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Following the movement in Europe, there was an absence of selling pressure in the stock market this morning. A few issues, however, showed concessions, due to the reluctance of buyers to follow the upturn.

In the initial dealings, Reading opened ⅝ higher at 157¼, and the same amount of gain was made in Amalgamated Copper, which sold at 68⅝.

Slight recessions were recorded in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred. Other railroads and industrials were well held. The London market was dull.

The curb market was firm.

The market closed weak. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

GOOD RAINS HELP KANSAS CROP.

B. W. Snow wires from Russell, Kansas: "In Kansas, north of main line of Union Pacific, rains came soon enough to save large part of crop. Today in West Ellsworth, Russell and Osborne Counties most fields show burned spots, but with 400,000 acres there are large areas that will make 20 bushels or more. Present rains are general and generous and will almost insure good yield in north."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—We are inclined to look for a narrow market until after the Government report on Monday next, unless something sensational in the way of crop news comes to hand.

Corn—Speculative interest has assumed rather small proportions and the market is in a waiting attitude. The action of the cash markets during the next few days will be the chief factor in determining values.

Oats—Crop reports from the Southwest are not good, while the reports from east of the River show some improvement.

Provisions—Think some further upturn in prices is likely.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Begin Right in Poultry by Buying Thoroughbreds

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

In each line of business someone must be the first in his town, county or neighborhood. If he is successful, others will soon follow. The question is frequently asked, Why is such and such a town noted for its cotton manufacture, another for numerous tobacco factories, another a paper town? The story can usually be told in a few words. Some enterprising and capable man or firm became very successful in the manufacture of a certain kind of goods; his success soon incited others to action along the same lines, including perhaps some of his best workmen. Others still take it up from the very fact that they see the successes of this, to them, familiar line of business. And so it goes.

This is also true in the breeding and sale of thoroughbred poultry. But who are the starters in the field of thoroughbred poultry? One who has been in a position to know, as the writer has observed, is that in the main the breeders of fine cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are the ones who first take up good poultry in their section. I was for many years a breeder of short horn cattle and Poland China hogs; bred them for stock purposes, and sold them in all sections of this country and Canada. At the same time I was breeding a lot of good Barred Rocks, Brown Leghorns and Wyandottes. It was my observation and experience that three-fourths of the stockmen who came to my place for cattle or hogs became or were already interested in poultry. The result was that my sales in poultry were nearly as big as my sales in cattle and hogs. Consequently this thoroughbred poultry was carried into the various sections of the country and, being successfully bred and handled by these expert stockmen, their neighbors caught the inspiration and soon they were in the same boat. But you say, Why did so many of these cattle and hog men become poultry breeders? Simply because they knew from their experience with other live stock that nothing pays so well to handle as the best in its line. It took no argument on my part to sell this good poultry to these intelligent stockmen. As soon as the fact appeared to them its importance was made manifest at once. The question of breeds was the only one discussed. The man who has found that by raising short horn cattle he can produce two pounds of beef where he had been producing one with native cattle is not a hard one to convince that if he will change from his barnyard scrubs to Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Orpingtons or Rhode Island Reds he will be enabled to double his poultry product with the same expense for feed, to say nothing of the increased egg yield and the uniform appearance of the flock. The proposition to him is as plain as the nose on a man's face. These up-to-date stockmen are of greater value to any community. They do not have to open their mouths or utter a sound. Their success is being watched, and others will strive to do likewise.

Take stock sections of Kentucky and Tennessee as examles, and you will find that nine out of ten of these breeders of fine stock are also breeders of some one or more good kinds of chickens or turkeys. Are they successful? How long have they been breeding fine poultry? I will answer the second question first, and then I think you will be able to answer the first. Many of them have been breeding this good class of poultry for ten or twenty years. Would you presume that breeders of fine cattle, horses and hogs, men of the very best abilities in stock farming, would bother to keep a class of fine chickens if they were not more profitable than scrubs? Not a bit of it. Men of this character must have results and experience of such. Now, then, can we not profit by the results and experience of such men?

Experience is a good teacher, as is often said, but if we can run on to a short cut by which we can reach the same results and save ourselves years of experimenting, is it not wise to take advantage of it at once? We are not compelled to go through long years of experimenting with crosses, striving to produce a breed of chickens that will give us good results as egg producers. Specialists, as we might call them, in their line of work have them all ready for you in the Leghorns, Minorcas and Hamburgs. You do not have to rack your brain for years over a strain intended as a general purpose chicken, one that will give you the most meat with the least consumation of feed, and at the same time give you an abundance of eggs. Such a fowl is all ready for you, and you can take your choice as to color in the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks of the different varieties, the Rhode Island Reds and the Orpingtons. The whole scheme is cocked and primed; all there is for you to do is to touch it off. Why any reasonable man or any man of reason will stand in his own light in these matters and not take hold of a good thing when he sees it is more than I can understand. I know of no other one thing in which a man in the country, city or suburbs can invest a few dollars and get as quick and satisfactory returns on his investment as thoroughbred poultry. These are not idle fancies; they have proven thousands of times in this country. The amount of money to be made from such an investment lies with you, depending upon the time and energy you are willing to devote to it. The possibilities are limitless.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Quarter Million In New Building

The building inspector's office did a large business Saturday. A permit was granted the Louisville and Nashville and the Atlantic Coast Line Railway Companies to erect a two-story reinforced concrete building on Central Avenue to cost $205,000, and application was made to erect the three-story brick building for Nunnally & McCrea, overall manufacturers, at 74 and 75 Central Avenue, at a cost of $43,000. The former will be for the commission merchants of the city, and especially those merchants now located along North and South Broad Streets. It will front 420 feet along the new street, Produce Row, and 90 feet on Central Avenue and Washington Street. H. J. Carr & Co. have the contract.

Permits have been issued for a change in the front of the Imperial Hotel at Peachtree and Ivy Streets, for $3,000, and for a number of small dwellings. The first five months of 1913 are behind 1912 in big buildings, but are ahead in dwellings. The total of dwellings for the first five months in 1912 was 488, as against 524 this year.

Marietta Street Sale.

Joseph F. Gatins has sold to J. K. Shippey a parcel on Marietta Street, 597 feet northwest of Jefferson Street, for $26,250, on terms of $8,750 cash and the balance in notes, and Mr. Shippey has transferred it to Shippey Brothers & White for a consideration, which is withheld. This parcel is 150 by 397 by 50 by 407 feet and frontage on the W. & A. right-of-way as well as on Marietta Street.

More Peachtree Paving.

For the purpose of taking up the matter of repaving Peachtree from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead, the Board of County Commissioners will meet Tuesday morning at the Court House. Property owners interested have been requested to be present to hear a proposition from the board. This matter was discussed at a recent meeting and was postponed for further discussion. Several of the commissioners are said to be in favor of the plan.

Peachtree was recently repaved from Sixth to Fifteenth Streets, and it is proposed to extend the work to make a uniformly smooth thoroughfare leading into the remote sections of the county.

Lawton Street Sale.

Mrs. C. J. Cook has bought from Marcellus M. Anderson, through Mr. Maddox, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, 77 Lawton Street, a seven-room house on a 46 by 150-foot lot, for $4,000.

Big Deals Pending.

Real estate dealers report several interesting deals which have been finally closed up. One of these, it is said, involves about $200,000, and another nearly $100,000. There are some smaller sales which will be announced early next week.

Interest in Electric Line.

Real estate men got out their maps Saturday to plan a route for the Greenville, Anderson and Spartanburg Railroad, which it is proposed to run into Atlanta from South Carolina. Several land dealers in town are now working on rights-of-way for various railroads and buying up property for this class of development, and they declare they will turn their attention to the new project if it should materialize. The line is electric and one of the biggest things of its kind undertaken.

The plan is to connect up Atlanta with the other Carolina cities and make this city the southwestern terminus. J. B. Duke, the tobacco king, is backing the railroad, and the Anderson (S. C.) Chamber of Commerce is pulling for Atlanta as an objective point.

Buildings for Whitehall.

Since the City Council has set aside $3,500 for regrading Whitehall Street, between Mitchell and Garnett Streets, buildings proposed by Charles H. Black, C. E. Currier, John W. Grant and others can soon go ahead. Regrading will start in October and the street is expected to be vastly improved.

Land Money Coming.

Good news has come to local real estate dealers from points in the East, to the effect that in the next six months there will be a great deal of money sent to this section to be loaned on real estate. This is the gist of an interview with William Hurd Hillyer, who has just returned from a trip, and who reports great confidence among financiers in land securities.

Crowds at Auction Sale.

Inquiries received concerning the auction sale of bungalows and lots indicated that there would be a large crowd out this Saturday afternoon at Oakland City. Foster & Robson are conducting the sale and J. W. Ferguson & Son are the auctioneers. Six bungalows built by Colonel I. N. Ragsdale and nineteen building lots are the offering.

ATLANTA'S GROWTH AND WHAT IT MEANS

THE OTHER DAY we told you about Atlanta—told you in incontrovertible figures how Atlanta has grown—is growing.

The average man of business seldom stops to think about the growth going on around him, and only appreciates it when the facts and figures are brought briefly and bluntly to his attention.

THEN HE WAKES UP!

WE WANT you to wake up and get wise to another important fact:

ATLANTA IS ALREADY BUILT UP IN HOMES RIGHT TO

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK

IT IS the growth—the RAPID GROWTH—we told you about that has carried it there.

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK IS THE BEST, THE HIGHEST CLASS AND IN EVERY WAY THE MOST ATTRACTIVE RESIDENCE PROPERTY ATLANTA NOW OFFERS.

WE MAKE this statement without qualification or reservation. We put the property up as evidence of the truth of it, and with that we are willing to leave it to your judgment.

With Atlanta building 2,000 homes every year to supply the growing demand, in two or three years PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK WILL HAVE BEEN BUILT UP AND YOU WILL BE TOO LATE TO GET THE LOT YOU WANT AT ANYTHING LIKE THE PRICE AND TERMS AT WHICH YOU CAN GET IT TO-DAY.

JUST GO OUT AND LOOK AT THIS PROPERTY—THAT'S ALL WE ASK. THEN

SEE YOUR OWN REAL ESTATE AGENT ABOUT IT

Or, come and let us show it to you.

Lobbyists, Insidious and Otherwise at the National Capital

Thus Far the Investigation at Washington Has Failed to Reveal Any Sign of the "Numerous, Industrious and Insidious Lobby" That President Wilson Charged With Being at Work There.

Thus far the soul-searching Senators who are testifying before the Senate subcommittee in Washington have failed to reveal any sign of the "numerous, industrious and insidious lobby" that President Wilson charged with being at work in their solemn midst.

It may be that the President's definition of a lobbyist differs from that of the Senators. It may even be that a lobbyist, even though he be numerous and industrious, is not insidious, and is entitled to ply his calling among the legislators, despite the Presidential wrath which he invokes by doing so.

According to the Century Dictionary, a lobbyist is "one who frequents halls of legislation, and makes a profession of influencing legislation, or attempting to influence legislation."

Some such miscreants as these doubtless are now in Washington, but according to the testimony of Senators, most of the attempts to influence legislation, aside from those of the President and the Secretary of State, are made by men directly interested in the legislation they are attempting to influence.

For example, among the men who are now in Washington for the purpose of molding Congressional opinion are numerous sugar growers of Louisiana and wool growers of the West. These men do not hesitate to say that their business will be ruined by the passage of the tariff as it stands. Not being particularly eager to have their business ruined, they have come to their Senators and Congressmen to see if something can not be done to keep it from being ruined. And daily they take advertising space in newspapers, for which they pay regular rates, to set forth their case as it looks to them.

Are these men lobbyists? According to the President, they are, and insidious lobbyists at that.

But what about the President? On several occasions he has gone to the Capitol and buttonholed legislators to state his side of the tariff question. Is the President, then, a lobbyist?

Mr. Wilson would probably deny the charge hotly. Yet where is the difference? Mr. Wilson's business is being President, and he believes that that business will be best served by the pending tariff. The sugar growers and the wool growers and the others are in the business of raising sugar and wool, and they believe that their business will be worst served by the pending tariff.

There is not a scintilla of evidence that they have tried to corrupt anybody. There is no indication that they have used anything but such arguments as any man has a right to make to his duly elected representatives in the Senate and in the House.

Why, then, are they lobbyists when the President is not?

How did they become lobbyists?

Will they remain lobbyists beyond the present administration?

These are interesting questions. For, if a man is to be condemned for striving honestly to protect his own business, there will be no legitimate channels of industry in this country save being a President or a Cabinet member, and under our Constitution, few people can hold these positions at the same time.

STEAM AND SALE

By WEX JONES.

Representative Goodwin, of Arkansas, is preparing a bill ordering United States battleships to display samples of American manufactures.

IT was a glorious spectacle to see our fleet depart,
Equipped with lines of samples that would thrill a drummer's heart.
The North Dakota led the van, the dry goods flagship she,
Flinging this signal to the breeze, "SILK SHIRTWAISTS, 98."
The dreadnought Arizona displayed along the rail
The immortal words of Lawrence, "DON'T GIVE UP THE SALE."
While, paraphrasing Perry, the Wisconsin warned the Powers,
"WHEN WE MEET THE ENEMY'S CUSTOMERS THEY'LL EVERY ONE BE OURS."

The seamen—no, no, salesmen—the salesmen were at drill,
Learning store discipline, and means of filling up the till.
The captain—please excuse us, the floorwalker—of course
Paced proudly down the center aisle as he watched his selling force.
The great fleet's general manager—he'd been admiral before—
Dictated red-hot ads about each mammoth floating store,
And then, inspired, he wirelessed this message through the air,
"AMERICA THIS DAY EXPECTS EACH MAN WILL SELL HIS SHARE."

Forget the Constitution, Essex and President;
Never such glorious ships as these, which sailed on business bent.
They out-advertised the British fleet; they undersold the Jap;
They swept all their competitors clean off the retail map.
And when the general manager took stock upon the cruise
He'd sold ten tons of chewing gum and a thousand pairs of shoes.
Oh, well, that general manager, as the stories of him tell,
When asked if he surrendered said, "I HAVEN'T JUST BEGUN TO SELL."

Writes on

Can the South "Come Back?"

The South Can Not "Come Back," He Says, and Stay at the Front of American Leadership if Our Ideals Are Permitted to Take Their Color and Quality From the Period in Which the South Has Been in the Wilderness.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

CAN the South "come back" and take up and maintain the great position in National affairs which was hers in the first hundred years of American history? This question becomes practical in view of the fact, widely commented on as the most significant phase of National politics, that Southern influence is dominant in the present Government at Washington.

It is a question of great practical interest to the Southern people whether their re-entrance into the sphere of national leadership is only an accidental turn of the political wheel of fortune or a role to be undertaken seriously and permanently.

If the present prominence is successful and the idea that the South is called upon to reassume her ancient glory as a National and world-wide factor gets on top in Southern public opinion, it is going to have a vast and immediate influence upon our life in education, industry, morals and politics.

Arrested Glory.

The part the South played in the achievement of independence and in the organization and administration of American Democracy in the early days of the Republic is beyond exaggeration. Such historians as Bancroft and Fiske have put beyond dispute the claim that the South contributed the largest share of the patriotism and political genius which established the nation.

The roots of American civilization, which has grown to be so vast and influential in modern times, are mainly traceable to the Southern colonies. The concert of colonial unity at the time of the revolution was rallied around Virginia and the Carolinas.

Before the Pilgrims launched the Mayflower, Virginia was an established social and political fabric with a representative assembly making laws for the government of a dominion twice as large as the New England States. It included the great Northwestern territory, out of which have been carved the seven splendid commonwealths of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia.

In 1790 the Southern section constituted in area and in population three-fourths of all that was included under the terms of the Federal Constitution. At the time the Constitution was adopted there was no question of the predominant responsibility of this section for the Republic, both as to the principles on which it was founded, the processes by which it was accomplished, and the actual administration of its Government.

For 53 years the Southern States furnished its Presidents in an unbroken line of succession. The hope of liberty in the world was raised in the heart of humanity by this achievement. The thought which then controlled the Southern mind was universal in its sympathy, and Southern men were the world's leaders in the ideals of democratic humanity.

This is the background of history, against which we lift up the question—"Can the South 'come back?'" For since 1850 the South has taken but small part in the large affairs of the nation, and in contributions to human interests that are world wide. The great glory of the former day was arrested and the South in this broad sense of influence and power went into an eclipse which has lasted for more than a half century.

The Vital Questions.

The question to be pondered by our political philosophers is whether the present South is prepared to take up where the old South left off? Have we lost any vital element of civic and moral capacity as a people in our wilderness of political inactivity and detachment from National opportunities? Has anything vital been dropped out during the half century of Southern dislocation from responsibility in national and world concerns?

These questions will not be answered fairly by the success or failure of the Woodrow Wilson administration, but they will be tested out in the history now beginning, which is calling such distant attention to the South in reference to National politics.

The ability of the Southern people to come back positively as actors in the affairs of the whole country will find its severest test in our own local and sectional civilization.

We cannot play a big part at Washington permanently for everybody to recognize, if we play a little part at home for everybody to criticise.

Our ability to advance the civilization of the world as leaders in its greatest Republic will be eventually measured by our ability to achieve a basis for great influence in a noble civilization in the states South of the Potomac.

These are the vital questions Southern men are now to consider. The question of education—a trained citizenship—the relief of illiteracy. The question of public breadth and sympathy—of world consciousness—of realized amenability to the established standards of Christian civilization the world over.

True to Ourselves.

The question is being true of all to ourselves—of faithful introspection and self scrutiny and of intelligent self-criticism to discover our own faults and the sources of our weaknesses. The question of ideals and leaders—the type of Southern character to be hung in the sky before our children—the temper to be exalted as the Southern temper—the point of view to be set up for the direction and control of Southern public opinion.

The South can come back and stay back if these questions are decided under the influence of our ante-bellum history, but the South cannot come back and stay at the front of American leadership if our ideals are permitted to take their color and quality from the period in which the South has been in the wilderness.

WILSON MAY IN PERSON REPLY TO LOBBYING CHARGE

Says He May Cast Aside Official Title to Defend Himself Against Attack.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—As a result of the attack of Senator Townsend, of Michigan, on the "lobbying" of President Wilson, the Chief Executive to-day is considering casting aside his official title and testifying before the senatorial investigation committee as a private citizen, both as to what he knows of the lobbying interests and also to defend himself against the attacks of Republican Senators.

Senator Townsend's charges that the President himself is lobbying for the passage of the Underwood tariff bill have aroused great resentment at the White House. Secretary to the President Tumulty to-day said while he did not consider the Townsend charges specific enough to warrant an official reply from the President of the United States, he thought it likely that the President will testify as a private citizen.

Before deciding on such a step, however, the President will consult with several of his Senatorial advisers, and it is considered probable at the White House that he will appear before the lobby committee suddenly and without warning. It is admitted that his testimony would be sensational in the extreme because he made a number of careful investigations of the lobby situation before issuing his denunciation of the lobbyists, which started the Congressional investigation.

Officials Defend President.

White House officials deny without reservation the charge that the President has used the "big stick of patronage" to force the adoption of his views or to obtain votes for the tariff bill. If this charge be pressed the White House is prepared to produce a list of the patronage already granted, which will show that Senators who have announced that they intend to vote against the bill have received exactly the same treatment in the matter of appointments as have those who intend to support the measure.

Committee Against Recalling Senators.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Democratic Senators on the Overman lobby investigating committee to-day expressed the opinion that the admission of Senator Townsend that he had no specific information on which to base his accusation of lobbying against President Wilson has made it unnecessary to recall Senators who have testified.

"I see no reason for recalling those Senators who have testified," said Senator Reed, acting chairman of the investigating committee. "Senator Townsend's charge was based simply on the interest of the administration in the tariff bill. He has admitted that this interest was natural and that the acts of the administration merely followed precedents established by the parties in power since the creation of republican government. Personally, I shall not request any Senator to again testify on this matter."

Senator Walsh, the other Democratic member present to-day, seconded this view. Senators Cummins and Nelson were inclined to differ and Cummins has announced that he will bring to the attention of the committee facts regarding the shadowing of legislators by detectives. It is believed he will ask the recall of several Senators to question them along this line.

Pope Praises and Gives W. J. Burns A Special Blessing

ROME, June 7.—W. J. Burns, head of the American Detective Agency which bears his name, accompanied by his wife, had an audience with the Pope to-day.

Mr. Burns said afterward that the Pope's face was the finest he ever saw and he was deeply impressed by his appearance. The health of Pius X, Mr. Burns says, is good, and he shows no trace of his recent illness. He walks firmly and his voice is strong and clear.

The Pope entered the anteroom, and after a few words of welcome blessed the pilgrims, but when Mr. Burns was pointed out to him he approached and offered him his ring to kiss. He blessed some devotional articles which were carried by Mrs. Burns.

The Pope expressed his pleasure at meeting Mr. Burns, who, he said, had spent his life in aiding justice. He praised Mr. Burns' good work and gave him a special blessing.

Snow After Record Hot Day in Chicago

CHICAGO, June 7.—Snow fell in Chicago to-day, fourteen hours after the season's warmest temperature of 96 degrees was registered. The falling of snowflakes lasted ten minutes in Austin, a suburb of Chicago.

A 40-mile gale direct from the north sent the mercury down 47 degrees in fifteen hours here. Many persons were hurt in the windstorm, and property damage estimated at several thousand dollars was caused.

MILAN, ITALY, June 7.—The heat throughout this part of Italy is greater than anything known in recent years. An enormous number of suicides are being reported as a result.

Twelve suicides in one day in this city is the record never before equaled. Hundreds are prostrated, and unless relief comes son a great many will die.

Marshall's Soul Food Is Daily "Hoe Cake"

WASHINGTON, June 7.—A slice of old-fashioned "hoe-cake" and a generous glass of creamy milk is the lunch Vice President Marshall feeds his epigrammatic soul 365 times a year.

"It is not that Americans are gluttons," he said, "but they want an infinite variety in their food. Most Americans need the beneficial lesson of being real hungry once in a while. Then even my luncheon of corn bread and milk would be a meal fit for a king."

Mad Dog Bite Kills Girl at Waycross

She was bitten by a mad dog in the streets of this city early in March, and was rushed to Atlanta for treatmen. Only a partial treatment was taken there, the remainder being administered by a local physician.

She is the second victim of mad dogs in Waycross within a month. Much uneasiness is felt here, as many children have been bitten recently.

Cuts Her Third Set Of Teeth at 93 Years

GADSDEN, ALA., June 7.—Mrs. Julia Usry, aged 93 years, for the past ten years an inmate of the St. Clair County Poorhouse near Ashville, is cutting her third set of teeth. The third set commenced coming about a year ago, and she now has an almost perfect outfit of molars.

Her second teeth dropped out when she was about 60 years old. She is very active and gives promise of living for several years.

Militant Injured At Derby Is Dying

NEW VICTIM IS CLAIMED IN PAINTER TRAGEDY

By COLE E. MORGAN.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 7.—While no new light has been shed on the mystery in the death of E. O. Painter immediately after he had taken out $1,000,000 life insurance, that case has a tragic result in the death of John Stricker Coles, which is attributed directly to worry over the affair.

Mr. Coles, a brother of A. P. Coles, the Atlanta banker; Mrs. Stewart Phinizy, of Augusta; Mrs. J. D. Twiggs, of Albany, and Mrs. J. J. Talley, of Columbia, S. C., was general agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which issued policies on Painter's life totaling $190,000, and which refused him $50,000 additional on the ground that he was overinsured. These applications had gone through the Jacksonville office. The Equitable was one of those active in investigating Painter's death. This company ranked next to the Mutual in the amount of insurance on Painter.

His Death a Surprise.

Coles had been in bad health for several months. The Painter mystery caused him much worry, as it did the agents of other companies interested. A few days ago, while the Painter investigation was in progress, he was forced to take his bed, but his illness was not considered serious, and it was stated at his office only Friday afternoon that he was expected at his desk within a few days. However, before the day was over he was stricken with a heart attack and died almost immediately.

The announcement of his death to-day came as a real shock in Jacksonville business circles, for Coles was one of the most popular men here. He had been a resident of Jacksonville for nine years. He was 57 years old. His wife and eight children survive him.

Rush Active Investigation.

The Mutual, Equitable and New York Life companies have been most active in the investigation of Painter's death. Each of these companies has had an adjuster here directly representing the home office. Some of the companies have had inspectors on the ground, while two or three have been represented only by their resident general agents. The Mutual, being the largest company interested, has probably gone more thoroughly into the case than any other.

The local insurance men are reticent in discussing the details of the investigations made for their companies until the report on the autopsy and chemical examination of Painter's organs reaches the Coroner's jury. They fear to disclose any of their information lest it prejudice their cases if the anticipated court contests over the payment of the policies materialize.

Rev. Samuel Zane Batten.

Residents Here Declare Never Have They Been Accosted on Streets of City.

The Georgian publishes herewith the latest photograph of Dr. Samuel Zane Batten, the Philadelphia Adonis, whose declaration of popularity among women while in the Peachtree night parade has aroused so much comment.

Dr. Batten is possessed of most alluring iron gray locks; his profile is Grecian, to say the least, and his stalwart figure make it highly probable that he would be noticeable in any street. Dr. Batten is said to have a most pleasing personality also.

Only on the grounds of his own attractiveness — or exaggeration — can his slander be explained.

According to Dr. Batten's admission, he was shown attention by nineteen women during a single night's stroll through Peachtree Street. While this modest statement of the reverend's has been thoroughly proven a slander by Atlanta men who declare that never in their lives have they had such attentions bestowed upon them, still everybody admits that Dr. Batten is possessed of a most attractive appearance.

That may explain why Dr. Batten is the only man in American who couldn't take a walk up Peachtree without having women accost him.

PENDLETON SAYS BEAVERS MIGHT BE IMPEACHED

That Chief of Police James L. Beavers and Policeman James H. Kirke are subject to impeachment if the facts in the temporary restraining order of Mrs. N. P. Powell, who has been sentenced to four months in jail, are substantiated in court, was the startling declaration of Superior Court Judge John T. Pendleton in discussing the case Saturday morning.

The judge defended the State courts in granting the temporary injunction and said that Chief Beavers had misstated the facts if he said the courts were interfering with his breaking up a disorderly house. He said the injunction distinctly read that the police were only restrained from making the woman move from the house and in no other way balked any action that might be contemplated.

He said the police were at liberty to raid as often as they saw fit and make a case against the woman every time she violated the law.

What Mrs. Powell Claims.

"In the petition for an injunction the woman said Kirke made an improper proposal to her," said Judge Pendleton. "She alleged that when she ordered him away he threatened to have her place raided every night until she was forced to move. She said Kirke had told Beavers of having made the improper proposal and had poisoned his mind against her.

"If she can prove that Beavers knew of Kirke's proposal and his threats and permitted himself to be influenced, the two are subject to impeachment.

"Judge Bell granted this particular temporary restraining order, but I would have done the same thing had I been on the bench that day. The law allows no latitude or discretion in this matter. A woman comes into court and makes a sworn statement that her home is not a disorderly house and that she anticipates irreparable wrong and injury on the part of the police in forcing her to move. If the court were to wait until the matter could be tried, the injury would be done.

Injunction Case Up Soon.

"A judge can not do otherwise than believe the sworn statement. The law demands that protection be granted. There is a wide difference between a temporary and a permanent injunction, and it is more than likely the permanent injunction would not be granted.

"This particular injunction has been pending in the courts a little longer than the ordinary. It has been called three or four times, but on each occasion the attorneys for the city or the defense were not available and it had to be postponed. It was called Friday, but the lawyers were in the other court trying the case. It will be heard at an early date."

SCORES READINESS TO TAKE 'EVIDENCE' FROM ANY SOURCE

Mrs. Leo M. Frank made public on Saturday the following letter, which explains itself:

Atlanta Ga., June 7, 1913.

Editor Atlanta Georgian:

I think fairness to Mr. Frank requires that the public should clearly understand Mr. Dorsey's position as stated by him in his card in The Constitution of June 6, and repeated in the papers yesterday, in reply to my statement that he proposes to use testimony which comes from witnesses as the result of torture.

His real position, as gleaned from his card, can be stated in the following sentence which he employed:

"I have only to say, without in anywise taking issue with her premises as I might" * * * that "I welcome all evidence from any source that will aid an impartial jury, under the charge of the court, in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused."

That is to say, he thinks it unnecessary to waste time in disputing the fact that the detectives are procuring testimony from witnesses by torture. He considers this point immaterial. He believes he is thoroughly justified in using tortured testimony, if it is turned over to him, for he says: "I welcome all evidence from any source."

No Charge Against Woman

The Journal and The Constitution stated that he had my cook arrested and carried to his office and quizzed to such an extent as to drive her into hysterics, and that after this he sent her screaming to the Police Station, in the patrol wagon. After she left his office she was taken to the detective's Torture Chamber, and, according to The Atlanta Constitution, she there had the third degree applied to her to the point of exhaustion, after which she made an affidavit, which the detectives, or some one, immediately gave out to the papers.

The Solicitor had no charge against this cook and did not suspect her of any crime. Yet Mr. Dorsey waives this aside as a trivial matter, not worthy to be discussed by him, because he says: "I welcome all evidance from any source," clearly implying that he will take it from the torture chamber if it is offered to him.

That he and the detectives violated the criminal law in arresting my cook when they had no charge against her and when they suspected her of no crime, I am told by lawyers, admits of no doubt. But this, Mr. Dorsey thinks, need not be discussed by him.

Thinks Public Is Opposed

While Mr. Dorsey thinks all this is entirely proper, it is the next thing to an impossibility to believe that many persons in the community will agree with him. Indeed, I would agree with him that he should use, even in the newspapers, torture chamber testimony to take away a man's life.

When Mr. Dorsey introduces this third-degree evidence to the jury, can it be supposed that he will at the same time tell the jury that it comes direct from the torture chamber?

It is our time to suffer now. Can anyone tell whose turn will come next?

I do not wish to be in any manner bitter toward Mr. Dorsey, even in my feelings, because it is so perfectly clear that his action is dictated by a serious mistake of judgment, and my only purpose is to let the community understand as thoroughly as I can, in the interest of fairness to my innocent husband, that Mr. Dorsey is proposing to use third-degree torture chamber testimony in an effort to take his life, and that he thinks it is perfectly proper for him to do so.

Know She Can Not Testify

Mr. Dorsey and the detectives know that I can not go on the witness stand and deny the affidavits they have published in the newspapers, wrung from my cook in the torture chamber by the third-degree process, because I am informed that under the law a wife will not be permitted to testify either for or against her husband. The law puts this absolute seal upon my lips, and my only recourse is in letting the community know the facts through the newspapers as far as I can.

I know I can not keep up with all the false affidavits and false rumors and innuendoes that have been so industriously put in the newspapers, but I feel that I should call attention in this instance to Mr. Dorsey's position, which he so boldly justifies. MRS. LEO M. FRANK.

Defense Bends Efforts To Prove Conley Slayer

The defense of Leo Frank against the charge of murdering Mary Phagan will be more than a mere attempt to clear Frank's skirts. It will seek directly to fix upon James Conley, negro, full and complete responsibility for the crime.

Despite the secretiveness and the silence of Frank's attorneys, it has been ascertained with a reasonable degree of authority that the foregoing is the program of the defense, and that the defense believes itself abundantly prepared to take care of itself along that line.

Ironclad Alibi Framed.

An ironclad alibi, covering all the time cited in the Conley statement with a substantial margin of time to spare, will be set up by Frank.

In addition to this, it will be shown that Conley was in the factory at the time he himself says Frank committed the murder, and for a long time before.

The defense will try to show that Conley had ample opportunity to accomplish the murder, and that every circumstance of it shows that he did do so.

Say Conley Broke Staple.

It will be contended that the murder was effected on the first floor, and that after it was performed the girl's body was thrown down the open elevator shaft, where soon after it was followed by Conley, who then hid it in the rear.

Conley will be held to be the party who drew the staple from the back door and thereby made his escape from the building, either by way of Madison Avenue or Forsyth Street.

The misisng purse that Mary Phagan is known to have had in her hand when she left home, and in which she is supposed to have put her money just received from Frank, has never been found, although Conley has been careful enough to account for her hat and her shoe.

Undoubtedly, the defense has been very busy, while the State's officers have been talking.

Reticent and silent as the grave as to the theory of the crime to be advanced in defense of Frank, it now is known that it will be sweeping, sensational and complete.

State Faces Strong Defense.

Whether it will come as a tremendous surprise to the prosecution, or whether something of the magnitude and scope of it has leaked through to the Solicitor and the police within the past 24 hours, is problematical.

The sudden clamping down of the lid at detective headquarters and the announcement that no more talking would be done there, either for the State or anybody else, is viewed by many as a circumstance tending to show that the State at last has come to a full realization of the fact that Frank's defense will be thorough and complete in detail.

Whereas up to yesterday any sort of an interview might be had for the asking of the detective, to-day nothing whatever may be had.

As silent as the defense has been, it has nothing by way of silence on the State to-day.

Frank's Character.

Frank's previous good character, his fine business reputation, his happy family relations, his ordinary habits of life and his everyday methods of conducting himself will be thrown fearlessly into the scales.

It has been determined for him to leave nothing unsaid and to leave nothing undone that may tend to clear fully and completely and to free him for all time from responsibility for this crime or any knowledge of it.

Besides the technical correctness of Frank's defense, his lawyers will undertake to show how impossible it would have been for him to have done what the negro accuses him of, under the negro's own statement.

Conley's affidavits will be reduced to absurdities, so the defense now believes. He not only will be thrown out of court upon a strict legal showing, but he will be grimly laughed out.

To Attack Conley.

His general character will be put in evidence, his drinking habits established, and his opportunity to have killed Mary Phagan completely demonstrated.

Attorney Rosser is known, despite his silence, to have determined not only upon Frank's complete acquittal, but upon Conley's future conviction.

The foregoing in brief outline, is the defense of Leo Frank now being framed up in surprising detail.

If the defense can establish what it now unquestionably hopes to and believes it may, Frank's acquittal seems a foregone conclusion.

Of course, the State still is standing pat on its theory that Frank committed the crime, but undoubtedly is more or less disturbed by the surprising nature of the defense that has leaked out, even to the extent indicated, and is preparing to meet that defense accordingly.

WOOL MAGNATE ACQUITTED OF CONSPIRACY

BOSTON, June 7.—"Not guilty" for William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, was the verdict of the jury in the Lawrence dynamite case returned in the Suffolk Superior Court at 9:55 o'clock to-day, after the jury had been out since 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge dog fancier, was found guilty on two counts.

The three defendants were tried jointly upon charges in fifteen counts of conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence during the big textile strike of last year.

The court room was crowded when the jury came in. The three defendants were sitting outside the rail. Wood was chatting with his counsel, members of his family and friends at the left side of the room. Atteaux was sitting by Wood.

The jurymen were pale and dishevelled, like men who had wrestled all night in earnest argument.

Probe Jury Tampering.

Even before the jury reported, District Attorney Pelletier set on foot a rigid investigation of the charges of Juror Morris Shuman that he had been approached with an offer of a good job or of $300 if he would "vote right" in the trial.

The police have the names of six men they believe to be connected with the case. John Doe warrants were to be asked for, and one or more of these men were expected to be arrested before night. When Assistant Clerk John Campbell called each defendant by name the three men rose and stood inside the rail. Then the clerk called for the verdict from the foreman of the jury, saying:

"What say you as to Mr. Wood on the first count?"

"Not guilty," replied Foreman Wesser, distinctly.

The verdicts on the defendant counts followed in order, the result in each count being given first for Wood, then for Atteaux, then for Collins.

Six Counts Against Each.

The indictment charged each man in six counts with conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence in the big textile strike in order to discredit the strikers. The defendant counts were practically different descriptions of the same act. The reading of the verdicts took fully three minutes. The tabulated result was as follows:

Wood was found not guilty on all six counts.

The jury disagreed on Atteaux on all but the sixth count, and that count was not considered, because Judge Crosby had directed the jury to return verdicts of not guilty for all three defendants on the sixth count.

Collins was found guilty on the first and second counts and not guilty on the other four.

The defendants had to wait until fifteen counts were reported upon before each man knew how his separate case stood in the eyes of the law and the jury.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Following a day of intense heat, when the mercury reached 91 degrees, Chicago today awoke facing a temperature of 42, a drop of 49 degrees in less than 24 hours.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 7.—British residents of Southern California have begun a movement for the recall of C. Mortimer, British Vice Consul in Los Angeles, as a sequel to the Empire Day disaster at Long Beach, which cost 38 lives through the collapse of a pier.

A petition requesting the removal of the Vice Consul alleges general inefficiency, but specifically charges that the Vice Consul "took no part in the celebration and during the inquest of the victims he was not present, and took no part in the efforts to place the responsibility for the accident."

AMERICANS BEG WILSON'S AID IN MEXICO

TAMPICO, MEXICO, June 7.—Three hundred Americans located in Southern Tamaulipas, representing 68 families, have demanded in a long message to President Wilson, sent through Consul Miller here, to know, "once for all," whether they can expect protection from their home Government, since they "do not desire to take measures for our own safety which would embarrass our Government without giving due notice before hand."

The message of the Americans was transmitted by wireless through Consul Miller to W. W. Canada, the American Consul at Vera Cruz, to be forwarded to Washington. It says, in part:

"Having been left without any protection whatever on the part of both sides in the pending controversy, therefore we can look for protection only from our own country. We must know once for all if we can expect same. Having been subjected to slights and a great variety of indignities and gross abuse during the last few days, the situation calls for most serious preparations for our personal safety and the defense of our families and our interests. Therefore, we have assembled for the purpose of considering the best way. We consider protection necessary now, since after death it will be of no utility."

The message declares in addition that the petitioners have borne financial losses silently, but that many of them can not obey the advice to "get away if in danger," as their departure would mean the abandoning of the accumulations of a lifetime.

"We consider the lives of ourselves and our families in danger, and the situation has justified this petition several times in the last few days," the message continues. "It is no longer doubtful that the slightest spark will bring on the dread conflagration at any moment. In many instances the small arms sold American citizens on the part of the American Government for their protection have been demanded, and in some instances they have been taken."

May Jewel Imports Top $4,000,000 Mark

NEW YORK, June 7.—Indications that local diamond importers are rushing large quantities of gems into this country in the expectation of an increase in the tariff is given in figures compiled by William B. Treadwell, jewelry examiner at the Appraiser's Stores. According to his report the total value of the gems received through the port of New York for the month of May reached $4,606,323.

These record breaking figures are $1,500,000 greater than the value of the gems imported in May, 1911, and nearly $600,000 more than the highest figures ever recorded for that month in any year.

Clubwomen Plan City Beautiful

Speaker Calls Atlanta Dirty

Other Civic Movements Advocated

Miss Lucy Vaughan Stockard, serving punch at the meeting of the club women.

Atlanta clubwomen have inaugurated a movement for a city beautiful, following an address by Mrs. W. P. Pattillo to the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

Having just returned from a trip abroad, Mrs. Pattillo discussed European methods of beautifying municipalities, to which she devoted considerable time and study, and gave vivid descriptions of results as she saw them. She selected for her subject, "How Other Cities Are Made Beautiful and Attractive," and sought to interest the clubwomen of Atlanta in co-operative measures which have transformed continental cities into veritable gardens.

"Atlanta is one of the dirtiest places I have seen," Mrs. Pattillo said, as she contrasted the city with other places she had visited in Europe and America. Then she described the city's natural advantages and asked the clubwomen to concentrate their efforts toward developing them. Her auditors, representing 84 clubs with 8,000 members, expressed pleasure at her remarks and pledged themselves to work together to carry out her suggestions. It was evident to all present that Atlanta will be made a city beautiful if her clubwomen have the necessary influence.

Industrial Home Suggested.

Civic movements received most attention at the hands of the Federation members. Prominent among them was a report of the committee on resolutions, made by Mrs. James Jackson, containing a recommendation for the establishment of an industrial home for wayward girls. The Federation indorsed the resolution and announced its intention of petitioning the Georgia Legislature to establish the home. Atlanta will be suggested as the proper site for the home.

PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—An indictment charging Walter S. Shourds, former superintendent of the safe deposit vaults of the Merchants' Union Trust Company, with the theft of nearly a million and a half dollars in cash and securities, was ordered submitted to a jury yesterday for a verdict of "not guilty."

Counsel for the company explained that full restitution had been made by Shourds. Shourds, indicted in September, is said to have opened negotiations with the bank official by means of advertisements.

BISHOP KEILEY MARIST SPEAKER

Commencement week at Marist College came to a close with graduating exercises last night. A crowd that completely filled the Auditorium witnessed the presentation of diplomas and listened attentively to an address by the Rt. Rev. Benjamin D. Keiley, Bishop of Savannah.

"You are young men. In reality you are just beginning to arrive at the budding state," said the bishop. "Before you lies the pathway of life, and the roadway will be smooth or rough, flooded with sunshine or enshrouded with darkness, just as you will it. The days of childhood, when you were dependent upon your mother's and father's advice, are rapidly passing away. They corrected your evils in the formative period of your character. It is up to you to make the mold perfect. As a student at Marist you have had the proper training. So far your surroundings and teachings have been such as to bring out the sterling part. Let it remain so throughout your lives."

J. Rhodes Haverty, classical; Gilbert Chewes, science and commercial; Ralph H. Lewis, science, and Charles B. Allen, commercial, were the young men who received honors.

The entire student body made a splendid showing in the various drills.

7 Years Enough to Finish School, Says President Judson

CHICAGO, June 7.—Shortening of the grammar school, high school and college courses in order to put young men and women into business and other activities at an early age was advocated to-day by Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, the only witness summoned before the Illinois Senate White Slave Committee hearings to-day.

Lieutenant Governor O'Hara, questioning President Judson, asked:

"How long is it after a young man leaves college before he is financially able to marry?"

"About three or four years," replied President Judson.

"Do you think the shortening of the courses in schools would make the young man earlier efficient?"

"Yes, especially in the case of the young man who is going into business. I believe a boy or girl should spend about seven years going through the grades and high school. I believe it will ultimately be made six years instead of twelve, as at present. There are too many things taught in the high schools. They fritter away too much time. The first university year is a repetition of high school work."

"I owe my education to the fact that I ran away from my teachers while I was still young enough to learn something. I think the last two years of the present high school course should be devoted to training students for active business life."

BURGLAR BARKS AT COMMAND OF "HANDS UP"

Shaggy Intruder Routs Crew St. Household, Who Then Call on Police for Help.

Call Officers Jones and Anderson had just consumed their early morning eye-opener—coffee—at police headquarters Saturday morning shortly before 3 o'clock when the telephone bell rang.

An excited voice came over the wires: "This is 137 Crew Street," sputtered the voice. "A burglar is walking around in our parlor, and he won't leave! Please send a policeman!"

So Officers Jones and Anderson, bristling with weapons and determination, boarded their trusty motorcycles and hurried to the scene.

Mrs. M. E. Brown, who lives at the Crew Street address, met them at the door and told them the tale. She had been awakened from a sound sleep by a noise in the parlor, as of someone walking. She listened, and the stealthy tread grew louder. She screamed, but the burglar calmly continued parading over the Axminster rugs and shoving aside the furniture.

"In There Yet."

"Listen," she said; "he's in there yet!"

Sure enough, the sound of the burglar's footsteps were plainly heard.

Aghast at the effrontery of the burglar, the officers made their plans. Officer Anderson drew his revolver and went to the back door to catch the marauder when he ran out, and Officer Jones tightened his belt, and drew his revolver. Calmly looking down the muzzle to see if it was loaded, he stalked into the house, and entered the parlor. He flashed his searchlight and exclaimed:

"Hands up, you!"

"Bow-wow!" calmly remarked the burglar, and continued his prowling.

The officer, astounded, moved stealthily forward and touched the shadowy form. His hands came in contact with the hair of a large and inquisitive canine, which had come in through an open window and calmly taken possession of the parlor.

"Burglar" Is Shot.

So disgusted were the officers that they took the dog out into the street and killed him with their trusty guns. The presence of the bold "burglar" who didn't care how much noise he made, and the firing of the officers' guns, threw the neighborhood into a fever of excitement, which changed to laughter when the real cause of the furore became known.

POLICE BOARD WANTS PROBE TO GO DEEP

McEachern Declares Vice Inquiry Will Prove Beavers and Lanford Have Done Full Duty.

"If the vice probe in Atlanta is carried to a complete conclusion," said Commissioner J. N. McEachern, of the Police Board, Saturday, "it will be found that Atlanta is one of the cleanest and most moral cities in the United States, the assertion of the Rev. Mr. Batten to the contrary notwithstanding.

"The Grand Jury will find that Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford have done their whole duty, and that not one single instance of corruption or graft will be found. I have been a member of the Police Board for the past six years, and I have watched the department closely. I say without hesitation that I believe in the absolute integrity and honesty of both chiefs. I am confident that if there had been any corruption or graft in the department it would have been unearthed by the board, which is composed of reputable citizens and business men serving in the interest of the city and the welfare of the people.

Board Trusts Chiefs.

"Every member of the board is more than anxious to have the probe reach the very bottom. We know the men and we know the chiefs and we have the utmost confidence in them.

"An old saw is that 'where there is so much smoke there must be some fire,' and this has been quoted by many persons since the vice probe was begun. The saying may be true; in fact, I am rather inclined to the opinion that it is true in this case, but not in the manner in which it is suggested by those who would discredit the Police Department. The smoke has been raised by those who discredit the department, and the fire is the desire of those individuals to to bring reproach on the men who have dared to do right and enforce the law. The investigation will reveal the fact that the smoke does not arise from the department, and that there is no fire there, but on the contrary, from those who would turn Atlanta over to the lawless element and the mercy of those who value a dollar more than they do a human soul."

Commissioner McEachern unhesitatingly stated that the morality of the city had been improved by the efforts of the police officials to enforce the law, and that in this they had his support and approval.

"The question of segregation is one that the majority of the members of the board hesitate to express an opinion upon, but a large majority will stand back of Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford in the discharge of their duties, and will abide by the action of the lawmaking body, their one and only duty being to enforce the law as laid down in the City Code."

Whitewashing Effort Fails.

That a faction in the Grand Jury tried to whitewash the vice probe shortly after the first witness was examined, became known Saturday. A vote was taken on the question and the probe continued. Two members of the body, at least, will insist on the inquiry being continued when the jury meets next Tuesday morning.

Immediately after Colonel Thomas B. Felder testified and left the room a juryman offered a resolution that the Grand Jury go on record as saying "Atlanta is better morally than it has ever been and vice is effectively stamped out." The motion was defeated by the necessary twelve votes, and other witnesses were called. Several times before adjournment Thursday the same person is said to have offered the resolution and each time it was defeated.

A sensational development is expected Tuesday when a member of the jury, who will insist on the probe being continued, will ask the foreman to summon a man high up in police circles to tell what he knows of vice conditions and what knowledge the police have of them.

That the probe will be continued is practically an established fact Saturday. Since adjournment Thursday Foreman L. H. Beck has received numerous communications from citizens asking that vice conditions be more thoroughly inquired into.

Many Offer Information.

Some of the communications give the names of witnesses who will give the jury addresses and "positive information."

Several names have been furnished that were not in the hands of the jury when it adjourned Thursday. One of them is Mrs. Nell Powell, of 95 Spring Street, who was sentenced to four months imprisonment Friday for running a lewd house. She expressed a willingness to furnish the jury with the addresses of some 50 or 60 houses in Atlanta and over a hundred names. She will in all probability be called before the jury Tuesday morning and asked to furnish the list that the witnesses may be called for a meeting later in the week.

The movement for new high schools gained impetus Saturday when public-spirited citizens turned with interest toward the plan as advocated by Colonel Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, in his two addresses at the graduation exercises of the Boys' and Girls' High Schools, in which he urged a $5,000,000 bond issue by the city of Atlanta, $2,000,000 for the express purpose of building high schools.

There is not an adequate high school in the entire city of Atlanta. It's up to the people, and time City Councilmen are urged to wake up and do their duty. Atlanta has a credit upon which any city government could borrow $5,000,000, declared Colonel Daley, president of the Board of Education, Friday night when he presented high school diplomas to 64 young Americans.

"The current revenue from taxation," said Colonel Daley, "is not sufficient to care for the maintenance of the high schools, and it's not sufficient to take care of the current expense of the other important departments.

Asks $2,000,000 for Schools.

"Atlanta citizens should see that city officials work for a $5,000,000 bond issue, and of that amount, as president of the Board of Education, I want to ask for $2,000,000 for the purpose of erecting adequate and abundant plants for high school students. The remainder of the money from such a bond issue should go to the other departments. We need additional grammar schools and many improvements. All this is because Atlanta is growing so rapidly, and yet people who are not in constant touch with these matters are prone to disregard them."

The graduating exercises of the Boys' High School in the Grand Opera House were more than ordinarily impressive, and members of the faculty said they indicated that young men are thinking deeply and are taking an interest in matters which ten years ago the average high school graduate had absolutely no conception of.

"The growth and development of the nation is characterized in Theodore Roosevelt's advocacy of the strenous life," declared Bascom H. Torrance in his valedictory. "But already has a reaction set in. There is now a demand for intellectual activity and development. This intellectual activity is characterized in Woodrow Wilson's policy, which has impressed upon the demagogues RESTRAINT.

Conservation His Policy.

"Conservation of careful, thoughtful and helpful actions is President Wilson's ideal. His policy is applicable to every question which requires foresight and thought, regardless of political objects or interests.

"Conditions to-day are greater than ever before. From now on will justice and moderation supplant knavery and intrigue."

"With modern cynicism obliterated will come the great question, the human philosophy of life."

The Grand Opera House was packed. In the balcony sat High School boys, underclassmen, each thinking about the day when he should graduate. In the boxes sat members of the Boad of Education and their families. Throughout the crowded house sat proud fathers and mothers whose interest centered in just one of the 64 boys on the stage.

After a fitting prayer by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Superintendent of Public Schools W. M. Slaton announced that, owing to a change in the course of the Technological High School, which had been extended to a four-year course, there would be no graduates from that school this year as in former years.

Student Orators Please.

Mr. Slaton then introduced Sam Eplan, of the commercial department, who delivered an oration on "The Gospel of Service." Eplan's oration was interesting and breezy and struck a true note. The speaker advocated honesty and uprightness, fairness and equality in all business transactions. Joseph H. Stanfiel was valedictorian and acquitted himself well.

"Universal Peace" was the subject discussed in the oration of Roy W. Manning, an eloquent plea for the abolition of war.

An oration by Ernest H. Lowenthal on "Woman's Suffrage" aroused genuine interest. The way he championed woman's rights certainly put him in strong with the audience, for he was given round after round of applause.

The B. H. S. and T. H. S. Orchestra rendered a number of choice selections. The boys played excellently and were encored time and again.

Presentation of diplomas was then made by Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education. Each boy was applauded as he received his sheepskin.

Medals and Scholarships.

The announcement and delivery of medals and scholarships was made by Hon. Edgar Watkins. The winners of these prizes had been kept secret.

The Holzman medal, given by A. Holzman, the jeweler, for excellence in scholarship, was awarded to Bascom H. Torrance.

Medal given by the Atlanta Chapter, Daughers of 1812, for improvement in physical culture was awarded to Edwin P. Lochridge.

The following scholarships were awarded:

Washington and Lee University, Sam Armistead; Mercer University, Charles B. Cotney; Harold Hirsch $150 scholarship to University of Georgia, Herbert O. Calhoun; Price Greenleaf cash scholarship to Harvard University, Bascom Torrance; Davidson University, divided between George Hoyt and Evelyn Hamilton; University of North Carolina, Roy W. Manning; University of Chicago, Eugene Johnson; Tulane University, Spencer A. Folsom; Emory College, Charles Candler; University of the South, Lewis Rosser.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO REPEAT COMEDY

Second Performance To Be for Charity — Trip to Other Cities Planned.

The Players' Club is planning to give another performance of "The Importance of Being Earnest" in the near future. The second performance will be given under the auspices of a local charity, the selection of which is in the hands of a committee composed of Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Robert L. Cooney, Lamar Hill and Hamilton Douglas.

While the performance of Tuesday evening was one of the most successful ever given by the club, in an artistic sense, the attendance was not so good as formerly, and this second performance is planned to give the public an opportunity to see one of the best plays given by the club, and at the same time to give assistance to some worthy charity of the city.

The club also expects to take "The Importance of Being Earnest" to other cities, with the notable cast which presents the comedy here, including Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Lamar Hill, Marsh Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Frank Taylor and others.

Some time ago the Savannah Dramatic Club made a proposition to give its recent successful play in Atlanta if the Atlanta club would play there. Birmingham also has invited the Players' Club to that city, and probably several other Georgia towns will have the opportunity of seeing Atlanta's talented amateurs in the well-known Wilde comedy.

The wonderful City Life Section of The Sunday American will be better than ever on Sunday. Mutt and Jeff, and Powers, the great cartoonist, with dozens of other fun-makers, will have exclusive features.

City of Flowers Is Rich's Ideal

School Contest Has High Purpose

Conceived the Idea of Organizing Playground-Recreation Centers While Traveling in Europe.

To make every school yard in Atlanta beautiful and attractive.

To inculcate into the minds of the children a love for flowers and the beautiful things that grow that they will carry into their daily lives and into their homes, and eventually make possible the dream of civic enthusiasts—the city beautiful.

These are the reasons, Walter H. Rich said Saturday, that prompted him to begin his campaign for more attractive school yards and offer prizes each year to the school showing the best results.

Hopes to Have all Enter.

The presentation of two prizes of $50 each, offered by Mr. Rich, to the Davis Street and the English Avenue Schools Thursday marked the close of the second year of the contest. The results have been wonderful. Though not all of the city schools have entered the contest, a majority of them have taken part, and many of the most barren school yards have been transformed by the children into flower gardens. Next year Mr. Rich hopes to have every school in the city entered in the contest, and expects greater results each year.

"I got the idea of trying to improve Atlanta's school yards," said Mr. Rich, "while I was traveling abroad. In Europe the school yards are made as attractive as possible and are utilized as recreation centers when not otherwise in use.

Has Two Objects in View.

"When I became a member of the Board of Education, I wanted to do something more for the schools than the mere routine business of the board meetings, so I thought of the contest. It has run two years, and I am more than satisfied with results.

"By offering the prizes and getting the children interested in the work, I hope to accomplish two things. One is to make the yards of the school beautiful and attractive to the children. Boys and girls do not like to go to places that are dirty and barren. I think every school yard in the country ought to have flowers planted wherever they will grow, always, provided, of course, that the children shall be left plenty of room in which to play. If it comes to a choice between the flowers and a playground, the playground should be the first consideration. But in most school yards there is room for both.

Wants City of Flowers.

"I hope also to foster a love for the beautiful that will eventually make of Atlanta a city of flowers. The ideas taught the children now will develop and expand as they grow older, and in the end we will have citizens who will take pride in making their homes and their city attractive."

Mr. Rich's plan has been indorsed by the Board of Education, though the prizes are offered out of his own pocket. He also has been assisted by the ladies of the Atlanta Art Institute, and a committee, headed by Mrs. Joseph Moody, made the selections of the winning schools for 1913 and aided in awarding the prizes.

"I believe the expedition should approach the pole from an opposite direction to that taken by Scott and Amundsen," said the explorer. "The result of my expedition will be to draw up a map of the South Polar

CANDLER COUNTY BOOSTERS ON HAND EARLY

Opening of Headquarters First Indication That Legislative Session Is Near.

The first concrete evidence of the fact that the Legislature is about to get together in Atlanta came to light to-day, when the boomers for the new county of Candler secured headquarters in the Kimball House and prepared to open war in earnest for their pet project.

Two handsome rooms on the parlor floor have been reserved, and literature will be shipped in by the ton for the next few days. Managers will be in charge from this time forward. Banners will be strung all around and about the lobby and the walls of the hotel, and the merits of the proposed grand young county of Candler will be shouted from the house tops, both vociferously and eloquently from this time forward.

Representative Burwell, of Hancock, who generally is thought to have the speakership pretty well sewed up, will open headquarters shortly, and both Judge John T. Allen and Senator Randolph Anderson, candidates for President of the Senate, will do likewise.

It long has been thought to be quite the fit and proper thing for candidates to have "headquarters" in Atlanta, and nine cases out of ten in the Kimball House. Sometimes, the walls and railings are far too limited in extent to accommodate the banners and things, and other devices to catch the eye of the incoming member are adopted. In all cases, however, the warfare for position and glory is merry enough in Georgia, and the incoming Legislature will have its share of excitement, no doubt.

Representative Sills, of Metter, who has in charge the fight to create Candler County, is very optimistic. Discussing the subject to-day he said:

"The Legislature is sure to create Candler County. Already we have secured pledges from 138 out of 184 members. That is well over the necessary two-thirds required in passing constitutional amendments.

"There is practically no opposition to the new county. Seven of the eight newspapers published in the territory affected are favorable to it. Indeed, they are fighting for it. The counties of Bulloch, Emanuel, and Tatnall, from which the new county will be taken, have a combined territory of 2,400 square miles, and of that it will require to create Candler only 361. This is no new proposition—we have been agitating the matter for nine years—and this year, we get it!"

The friends of A. O. Blalock, of Fayette County, more generally known as "Bud," are congratulating him on being named Collector of Internal Revenue for Georgia, notwithstanding the fact that the tip long ago came straight from Washington that he was to win the plum.

There hardly is a man in Georgia better known than Blalock, and few that have more friends. He has served in the Legislature, in both the House and the Senate, time and again and never has been defeated for office.

Mr. Blalock expects to take his office about the first day of July.

Peace reigns again over Banks' mill pond at Milltown, and its environs, the cases against a number of citizens charged with fishing in the pond without consent of the owner, having been nol-prossed in the city court at Nashville.

An agreement was reached between R. T. Berryhill, lessee of the Banks' property and each of the defendants, which was satisfactory to the court and Game Warden Mercer, with the result that Judge Christian dismissed the prosecutions.

The cases attracted much attention in the State, by reason of the newspaper interviews given out by Warden Mercer and his Deputy Boisclair, and the severe criticism of these officials by the people at Milltown. It is understood that in future people who want to fish in the pond will obtain permission from Mr. Berryhill or some of the other owners of land covered by the pond, and that Mr. Berryhill recognize permits given by other land owners.

This is about the old status of affairs, but it is not believed there will be any further trouble.

Governor Brown's final message to the Legislature is about shaped now, and will deal more or less exhaustively with many problems, solved and unsolved, coming to his attention during the term of office about to be wound up.

The Governor's message has not yet been reduced to presentatable shape, however, for it is fashioned after a manner wonderful in the extreme and Brownesque to the limit. It is written out almost entirely on the backs of used envelopes, and is entirely in pencil. The writing is so small and fine, as almost to be illegible to the naked eye, but every single letter and every group is finished as completely as if five times the space were taken up in the writing.

Governor Brown writes an amazingly plain and clear hand, but as amazingly plain and clear as it is, it is even more amazingly small. To the bottom of the document, however, he attaches a signature elaborate and imposing in the extreme. Those who have sen it never forget it.

Governor Brown's relations to the incoming administration are very cordial, and there will be nothing by way of conflict in his farewell message and the initial message of Governor Slaton, which will follow in a few days later.

Colonel Charles R. Pendleton, of The Macon Telegraph, nestor of Georgia journalism and powerful political factor in the State, is a pronounced baseball "fan."

Visitors to Macon nowadays will do well to go to The Telegraph office either early in the morning or very late in the afternoon if they wish to catch the Colonel on the job. Otherwise he is sure to be out at the ball park watching the game.

Two Sides to a Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THOUGH love and marriage are the dreams of every girl, happiness is not dependent on either, and often one is happiest without them.

There are two sides to the question. The girl who is looking anxiously for the coming of a lover, and who grows apprehensive when he is delayed, sees only one side. She takes no account of the look of care, unhappiness and discontent on the face of the wife. She does not see—she refuses to see—that matrimony does not always bring returns commensurate for the price one must pay.

Perhaps it may lessen the discontent of the girl who has no lover to compare the life of the woman who never marries with that of the wife.

The girl has time and opportunity for cultivating every talent with which she is endowed. The only talents the wife is given opportunity to develop are those of economy and patience.

The happiness of a nation depends on its power to dream, and this being true of the whole, is true of the part. The girl dreams of an ideal lover, and the dream is never shattered; a wife has no illusions left.

A Wife's Work.

A girl has many hours in which she has nothing disagreeable to do; but the wife finds she has more to do for the rest of her life than any man could stand up under.

The uncertainty of the girl centers around WHO is to be her husband, and is not unpleasant. The uncertainty of wifehood is WHERE he is, and is a tragedy.

The criticisms a girl receives in her home are loving and kindly; those the wife receives are less kindly, and her rewards for effort to please are less sure.

The girl walks as if she owned the earth. Ten years after she has married she will walk as if she were carrying it on her shoulders.

"If I don't marry," a girl will say, "I will be an old maid." * * * "If I hadn't married and been tied down by the cares of a husband and home," she will say some years later, "I might have won fame and fortune by developing my talents."

There is loneliness in spinsterhood, but there is also PEACE.

The girl who marries sentences herself to self-sacrifice and hard labor for life. Her only reward is Love, and could you, my dear little girl with the discontented look because your lover has not come, count up the number of wives you know who are systematically and regularly cheated out of their payments?

The girl who never marries is the one to whom opportunity is given for being the blessing and mainstay of her parents' home. There is no avenue for developing her character which matrimony grants and spinsterhood denies.

Two Sides.

There are two sides to the question One can be a happy spinster; one may be a happy wife.

The former is a question of will. The latter depends on a string of ifs long enough to encircle the globe.

I do not want my girls to care less for love, but I do want them to value more highly the greater privileges, the fewer burdens, the lighter loads, the broader opportunities and the surer peace that await the woman to whom love and marriage never come.

I want them, for their own sake, to look with less panic-stricken fright and greater sanity upon the spinster's side of the question.

Diplomatic.

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never, marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take her and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's old friend, the boarding house keeper also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what anybody thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Bah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

Do You Know That—

An 18-year-old boy was injured in a game of football two years ago, but after two days returned to work feeling quite well again. Last summer he had to be examined for insurance purposes, and the doctor found there was something wrong with his neck, but did not discover exactly what was the matter. A short time ago, however, the boy's neck began to give him such pain that he was made to undergo an examination under X-rays. Then the astounded physicians discovered that it was broken. They can not realize how he has lived all this time. It is a question whether a cure can be effected.

The Farmers' Association of the department of Loir-et-Cher has held at Blois a competition for agricultural workers who have brought up the largest families, all the members of which have remained "on the land." Eleven grandmothers—the youngest aged 45 and the oldest 80—presented themselves, surrounded by 95 children and 138 grandchildren. The first prize went to a woman who has had 13 children, of whom 9 are living, and 20 grandchildren.

The Czar is, among European monarchs, the one who makes the least use of the motor car. His imperial majesty, in former days, registered a vow that he would never enter such a conveyance, and although necessity occasionally compels him to break it his dislike for motors is unabated. When King Edward first took a car with him to Denmark on joining the big family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the Czar nor his grandfather, King Christian IX, could be persuaded to set foot in it.

The Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, is shortly going to be superseded by an even more splendid vessel. It is said that the new yacht was partly designed by the Kaiser himself, who adds a knowledge of shipbuilding to his varied stock of information. The vessel will take two years to build, and is not expected to be ready before the spring of 1915.

Why He Couldn't.

N American philanthropist made a business of getting jobs for men just out of jail. A notorious cracksman came to him with a letter of introduction from the clergyman.

"I've the very thing you want," said the philanthropist when the jailbird had dilated adequately and with pride upon his exploits. "I'll see my friend Briggs. Come around to-morrow morning."

The cracksman, encouraged by the prospect of honest work, appeared promptly at the appointed hour.

"You're to go to work at once," said the philanthropist. "My friend Briggs is producing a melodrama. In it is a scene where a burglar enters the room and cracks a safe. It will only take you a few minutes, and you don't have to speak a word—just execute the job with the minute detail that will make it look real. Your salary will be $50 a week."

The convict dolefully shook his head.

"Sorry I can't take the job, boss."

"Can't take it? Why, it's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it, boss. I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage."

THE COMING OF DAY.

OVER the edge of the sleeping world,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Past the gloaming where shadow is furled,
Into the chasm of darkness whirled,
Forth from the hosts of blackness hurled—
Over the purple hills;
Out of the land of the sun-rise glow,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Into the meadows of shimmering green,
Over the brooklets of glimmering sheen,
Comes glowing morning, the summer queen—
Aflame are the purple hills.

LIFE IS WORTH IT.

Life is worth it—
Worth the turmoil and the effort and the pain,
Worth the hurt and disappointment
So you make but steady gain;
If the failure of the morning
Give you strength to struggle on,
If the evening mark some progress
From the dimness of the dawn—
Life is worth it.

Life is worth it—
Though you question as the years go slipping by,
"Have I failed in every project?
Have I set my mark too high?
Does the failure of this morning
Mean I never shall attain?
Nay! The power to strive transmuteth
Every failure into gain—
Life is worth it!

Brother and Sister

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

START out a girl with a dollar, and she will come home wearing it. Start out a boy with one, and he will come home eating it.

A girl's interest in a baby is the same as that her brother manifests in a dog.

About all a girl does for her little brother is to scream about his dirty hands every time she looks at him, though it is as natural for a boy to have dirty hands as it is for a cat to have fits.

The quarrels between brothers are over the larger share in something to eat, but when sisters quarrel, it is because one wore something belonging to the other.

It may indicate deep thought when a girl scratches her head, but they don't look at it that way when it is a boy.

Here of late a girl is permitted to read in the parlor fiction worse than that her brother used to peruse surreptitiously in the barn aloft.

It has always been the custom to compare a boy with a weed and a girl with a flower.

A girl doesn't know it, but if someone cut off her hair, put a hundred freckles on her face, and a tan spot on the end of her nose, she would be a duplicate of the younger brother whose looks she so plainly despises.

When brother and sister go to a party together, sister doesn't seem to have any recollection of anything that happened beyond the manner in which her brother misbehaved.

There never was a girl who couldn't give the impression when away from her home that her parents are wealthy, but a boy can't do it.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome in the parlor of a neighbor before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

When a girl is 16 she has the right of way all over the road. Her mother and father promptly side-track when they see her coming, the only one daring a collision being her younger brother. And he long shows the effects of it!

Individual pies, strawberry shortcakes, etc., appeal to a girl, but never to a boy, because they give him no opportunity to get a larger piece than his sister. There is no element of chance in the individual form of pastry.

After sister has expressed her appreciation, brother's thanks sound as cold as yesterday morning's pancakes.

Rev. Dr. John E. White has a splendid article in The Sunday American on "The House of Our Fathers." Everybody should read it.

Very Important.

The glib-tongued agent was trying to persuade Mr. Wipedunks to buy a dictionary.

"Its the latest thing out," he said; "up to date in every particular, contains more words than any other, has all the technical and scientific terms that have come into use in the last ten years, and there isn't a feature missing that goes to make a first-class work of the kind."

"Let me look at it a minute," said Mr. Wipedunks.

The agent handed it over, and Mr. W. inspected it briefly. Then he handed it back.

"Young man," he said, "you can't work that book on me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It hain't got no copious index."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young man from the mountains, who says that he never played on any baseball club and that he has never seen a game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta club, to give him a try-out. At batting and fielding practice he creates a sensation. The Atlanta Georgian prints a whole page of snapshots of him and his fame spreads throughout the country.

In the meantime he has become very friendly with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a wealthy timber speculator. Forrest Cain, an admirer of Mildred, becomes jealous of Gordon and attempts to play him a trick and gets soundly thrashed. Gordon owns a large tract of land in the mountains, between two tracts owned by Mr. Deery and Cain, who need Gordon's property to carry out a land scheme.

The Boston Nationals and other big league clubs stop at Atlanta for exhibition games on their way North and Gordon Kelly becomes the baseball sensation of the hour. Scouts who come to see him work try to get him away from the Atlanta club, and then send wild telegrams to their owners, imploring them to come to Atlanta by the first train and do their own bidding. Nearly all the big league magnates come, and President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, announces that, while disposed to reject all offers, his club felt the necessity of living up to the obligations of organized baseball and would sell Gordon Kelly's release to the best advantage of the stockholders of the club. In a practice game with a big league team, Kelly covers himself with glory. He is injured and Mildred rushes on the field to his aid. The newspapers are filled with accounts of the affair.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Readers of newspapers are aware, without being told, that in reports of any great public gathering, any extraordinary crime, any $100,000 diamond robbery, any uncommon disaster, it is the newspapers that set the pace in gathering and distributing the news of the event. This fact is lost sight of in this narrative. In this particular case the newspapers told all about Gordon Kelly, but later certain things happened to him that the newspapers were never able to learn, and they will be told in the course of this story for the first time.

The news of Gordon Kelly's great feat in his last game in Atlanta created a profound impression throughout the baseball world. There was no end of praise for the player and of sympathy for the Boston club, which, through the accident, had lost the services for many weeks at least of a man for whom it had just paid that unheard-of price of $50,000. The championship races in the two big leagues had started and were well under way. In the American League, of which Gordon Kelly was now a member, although not able to play, the Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland clubs had taken the lead, while the New York and Boston clubs were off to a bad start. Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, although himself limping around with an injured leg, bemoaned his hard luck.

"I have the best outfield in the country as it is," he said, "but I could use that Gordon Kelly just the same. Gee, I wish he would hurry up and get well before my club is out of the running."

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, cursed his fate. "If we had only landed Gordon Kelly and if he hadn't broken his leg, we would be right up there fighting with the leaders," he declared.

The word IF is 90 per cent of baseball, it may be remarked.

Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, said:

"Comiskey ought to have landed Gordon Kelly. All I need is that fellow, besides Big Ed Walsh, to win the American League pennant."

On May 10 the championship season in the two big leagues was a month old and Gordon Kelly was still in the hospital at Atlanta. Mildred Deery was still "out of town." That was all the information the patient could get from the Deery residence. The Atlanta club made a short trip to other cities and returned to home grounds for a brief stay. Bill Smith, Long Tom Morrissey and other members of the team paid daily visits to see their former comrade, who got around the hospital grounds on crutches, but who could not be induced to go out to the park and see a ball game.

Something on His Mind.

"Something's on his mind," declared Long Tom in the club house one day. "He doesn't seem to want to talk about baseball much. And it would not surprise me," he added, emphatically, "to learn that that girl that rushed out on the field and took his head in her lap is what's troubling him. Well, I don't know as I can blame him, at that. She was some peacherino, you hear me!"

"He'll get over it," remarked Bill Smith, sagely. "As soon as his leg gets strong enough for him to run the bases you'll see him up at the plate with that bat of his and he'll forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey had nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and, true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred now knew he was a ball player, he argued to himself. She did not disapprove, else why did she rush on the ball field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelly asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things, and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the time being, sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the $50,000 ball player, became an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She complained of a headache and retired at once to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had wellnigh exhausted her, she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole downstairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove, nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7:30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife.

Under ordinary conditions Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the astounding escapade of his daughter, Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery, at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked, in conclusion.

Not So Shocked.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred liked the young man. Far better than her husband, she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I will speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll——." He slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have it. I was planning to go up in the mountains with a surveyor to-morrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has probably moved in by this time. Instead of going to-morrow, I will leave by the noon train to-day and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something, as I want to see her."

Mildred Approves Plan.

"Wait a minute, please, dear. Mildred isn't a child, and you can not force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure, and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains, and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two, and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains, and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Car Full of Supplies.

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened), ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days), and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes; drove to his home, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of kissed his wife, sped to the depot, the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his vast project, Deery had erected a large cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the main road and close to a roaring brook that, a mile or two beyond, ran into Pew Creek, which flowed down past the settlement. It was a beautiful spot, and Mildred cried her delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself dashed up to the bungalow.

The superintendent's name was Shephard, and his family consisted of his wife and boy, a lad of about fifteen years. Mildred promptly became good friends with them all and declared she never wanted to go back to Atlanta again, whereat her father chuckled in his sleeve.

"If you like hunting and fishing, Miss Deery, I can show you a lot of fun up here," said Elmer Shephard, the lad of fifteen years.

"I should enjoy it immensely, Elmer," replied Mildred, "but you will have to teach me."

The boxes and barrels of things Deery had bought in Atlanta arrived on teams before sundown, and Mildred expressed her surprise at the bulk of it. Her father hastened to explain.

"Well, you see," he said, "you will like this place so well that you will be running up every little while from Atlanta, so I just thought I would put in a supply of things to make you comfortable. If there is anything you don't see that you want let me know, and I will have it sent up from the city."

So Mildred settled down to live the joys of mountain life. But in these Georgia mountains, in this wild and solitary country, she came upon an adventure that completely changed the course of her existence.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THERE was a queer old bug up to our house last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It seems that he and father used to go to school together, and the old gent ran into him by accident yesterday afternoon. He didn't know that his school chum had changed so since boyhood, and before he got wise to the change he asked his friend up to the house.

"I was kind of surprised at the general appearance of Pa's friend. He was one of them tall, slim college professor looking kind of chaps, and when anybody spoke to him he gave a little jump sideways like a scared kitten. His manner was that timid and gentle you would have swore, George, that his wife had a dozen kind of Indian signs on him. It seemed kind of funny to the folks to have Pa chumming around with such like, because goodness knows most of his intimate friends are big necked and copper lined enough to make their way in this speedy world of ours. After knowing Bull McCabe and Marty Regan and the rest of Pa's husky comrades, it seemed funny to entertain a shrinking violet like this gent of which I am speaking of."

A Long Story Teller.

"Well, come to the point," said the Head Barber, "and don't be puttering around all the forenoon. You are worse than one of those long story-tellers."

"I wouldn't converse with you at all, ever, if I didn't have to, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "Most of the time you are awful uninteresting anyway. But I might as well finish this yarn, anyhow.

"We was all setting around the parlor like we used to when we was kids at a party, all waiting for somebody else to speak first, when the old man that father had brought home spoke up and said something about believing explicitly in the theory of reincarceration."

"That ain't the word," said the Head Barber. "I don't know the word either, but it's something that ends up with the name of a flower—carnation, I think."

Didn't Know the Name.

"If you don't know the name of the theory what made you interrupt me?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "Anyhow, it was something about folks that lived a long time ago living over again. For instance, the old gent said—don't mean father, I mean the other old gent—that he believed he was a soldier in the time when they was having the Wars of the Roses. He said that he fought under the Red Rose, whatever kind of a lodge that was, and I guess he was that dippy he believed it. I could see that father wanted to humor his old school chum, because he said he believed in the same theory and thought the soul could live again in another body. It was all I could do to keep from snickering when father talked like that, because goodness knows he spends a lot more time thinking about pinochle and three-cushion billiards than he does in thinking about the human soul and what becomes of it after we have kicked in. But he stalled fine, and I guess the old school friend went away thinking that father was on the level about reincarceration."

"I'd like to know what I would be if I was born again," said George.

"I know what you would be," replied the Manicure Lady. "You would just be another barber."

Modesty the Best Policy.

IT was the early part of the New Year, and little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a long delayed visit to Uncle Silas.

Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of the said uncle, and asked:

"Uncle dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining room table a dime, a half-dollar and a five-dollar note, remarking:

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the dime. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I sha'n't lose it?"

And uncle did.

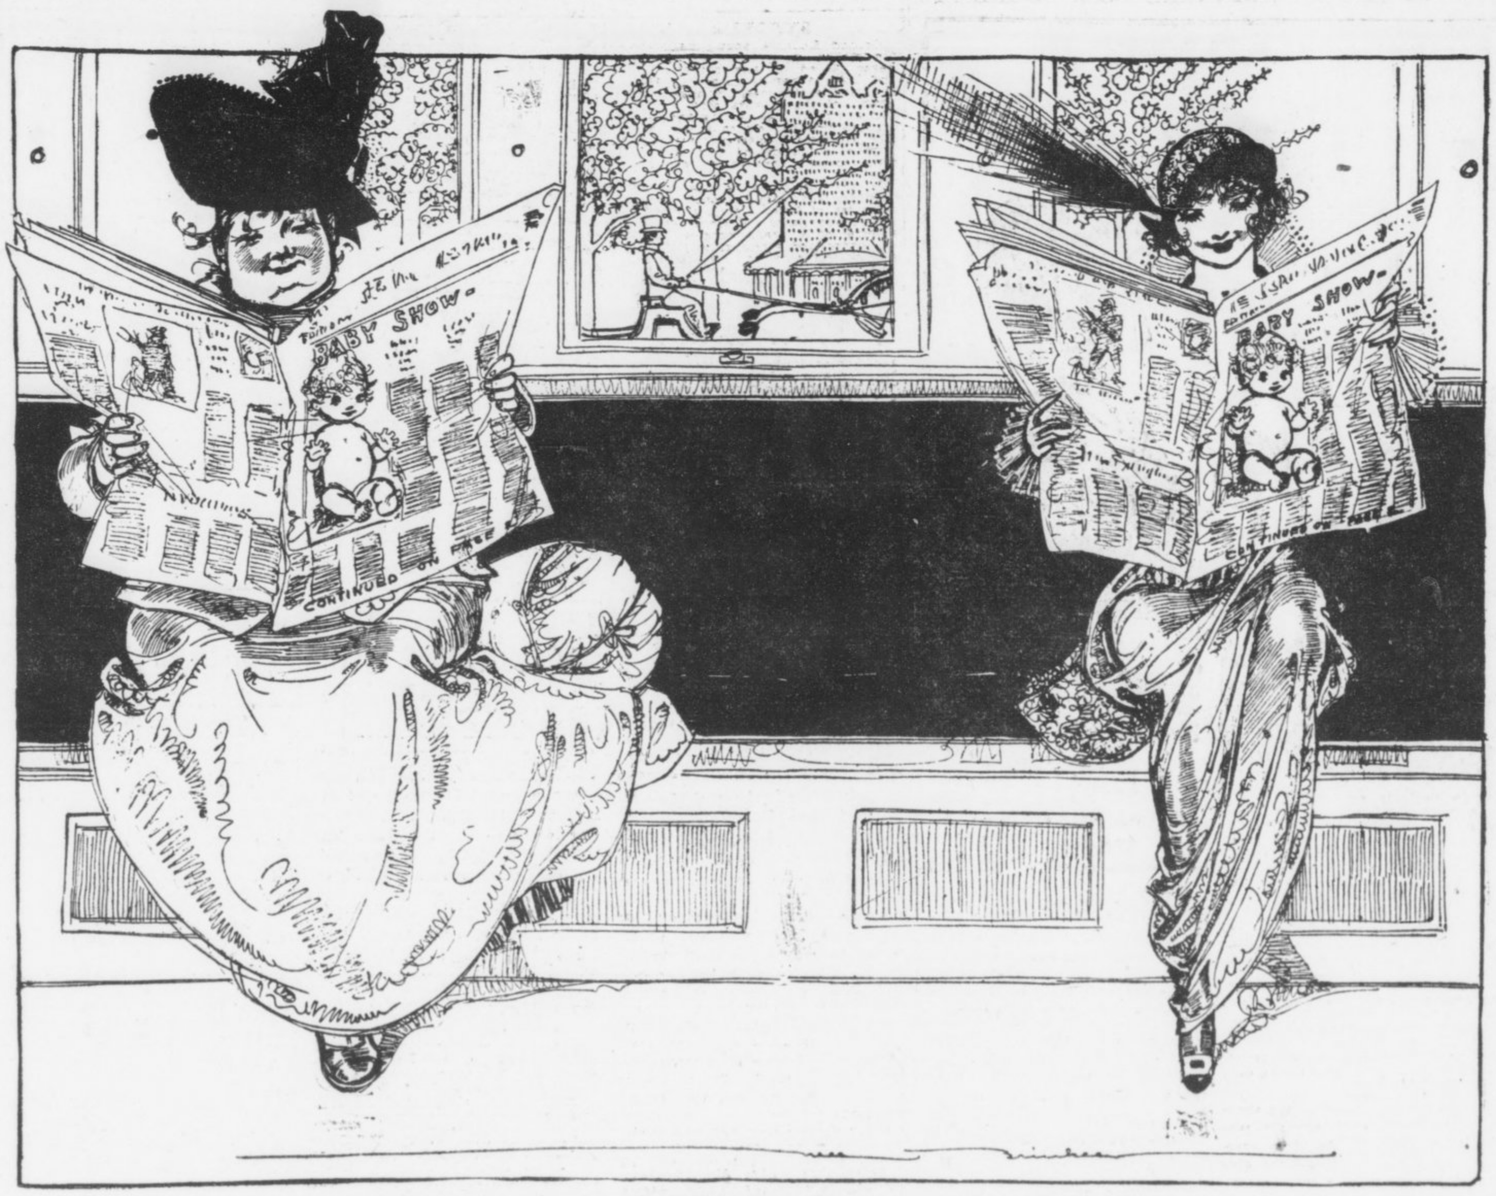
"Sisters Under Their Skins"

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

By NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins.---Rudyard Kipling.

THIS I saw a week or so ago when the country was showing off its fat babies. Across the car from me, sitting with the sweet sunshine streaming in on their two blond heads—coiffed, oh, so differently, was a large plain lady with her chapeau slightly on one ear and a fat bundle snuggled beside her, and a yard or so down the red plush seat an aristocratic woman in silk and brocade, a French hat above her pretty eyebrows, white gloves, rose point lace at her throat and wrists, perfectly groomed! And the whole middle of each was hidden by the newspapers they held. I had watched. They had climbed on at the same street, had settled their silken and cotton skirts, and their four eyes had homed straight to the "pic" of a fat baby on the front page. They had both flipped over to the second page, where more babies were promised to "continue"—and there they stuck—the two of them—the same tilt to their two heads, the same unconscious gentle smile on their two faces. Under the lace-smothered breast of the "colonel's lady" rose the same heart springs that welled beneath the cotton and pearl buttons of "Judy O'Grady" "sisters under their skins."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dick repeated his question, unobservant of its first effect.

"Why didn't you go to Chicago as you had planned?"

"Planned? With whom?" The interrogation came with an abrupt force that cried of new suspicions.

"Why, with Burke." The young man tried to be patient over her density in this time of crisis.

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?" Mary asked. Now the tenseness in her manner got the husband's attention, and he replied with a sudden gravity, apprehensive of he knew not what.

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago." He had caught the contagion of her mood and vague alarm swept him.

"Where?" came the next question, still with that vital insistence.

"In this room."

"Burke was here?" Mary's voice was suddenly cold, very dangerous. "What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

Garson Leaped to the Switch.

The seemingly simple answer appeared the last straw to the girl's burden of frenzied suspicion. Her voice cut fiercely into the quiet of the room, imperious, savage.

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

Something fatally significant in her voice set Garson aleap to the switch, and, in the same second, the blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. The others stood motionless, blinking in the sudden radiance—all save Griggs, who moved stealthily in that same moment, a little nearer the door into the passage, which was nearest to him.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise, seemingly totally irrelevant to this instant of crisis. Yet they rang athrob with an hysterical anxiety.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" With the question she pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

The young man was plainly astonished, disconcerted as well by the obtrusion of a sordid detail into the tragedy of the time.

"Why in the world do you—?" he began, impatiently.

Mary stamped her foot angrily in protest against the delay.

"Tell me—quick!" she commanded. The authority in her voice and manner was not to be gainsaid.

Dick yielded sullenly.

"Oh, two or three hundred dollars, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that!" Mary exclaimed, violently. And now the girl's voice came stinging like a whiplash. In Garson's face, too, was growing fury, for in an instant of illumination he guessed something of the truth. Mary's next question confirmed his raging suspicion.

"How long have you had them, Dick?"

By now the young man himself sensed the fact that something mysteriously baneful lay behind the frantic questioning on this seemingly trivial theme.

"Ever since I can remmber," he replied, promptly.

Mary's voice came then with an intonation that brought enlightenment not only to Garson's shrewd perceptions, but also to the heavier intelligences of Dacey and of Chicago Red.

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently, from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?" So simple were the words of her inquiry, but under them beat something evil, deadly.

The young man laughed contemptuously.

He Came Toward Her.

"I should say not!" he declared indignantly, for he resented the implication against his father's honesty.

"It's a trick! Burke's done it!" Mary's words came with accusing vehemence.

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door into the passage.

Mary's eye caught the movement, and her lips soundlessly framed the name:

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery. He was very dapper in his evening clothes, with his rather handsome, well groomed face set in lines of innocence.

"He's lying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward Dick Gilder. "I tell you, those tapestries are worth a million cold."

Mary's answer was virulent in its sudden burst of hate. For once, the music of her voice was lost in a discordant cry of detestation.

"You stool-pigeon! You did this for Burke!"

Griggs sought still to maintain his air of innocence, and he strove well, since he knew that he fought for his life against those whom he had outraged. As he spoke again, his tones were tremulous with sincerity—perhaps that tremulousness was born chiefly of fear, yet to the ear his words came stoutly enough for truth:

"I swear I didn't! I swear it!"

Mary regarded the protesting man with abhorrence. The perjured wretch shrank before the loathing in her eyes.

"You came to me yesterday," she said, with more of restraint in her voice now, but still with inexorable rancor. "You came to me to explain this plan. And you came from him—from Burke!"

"I swear I was on the level. I was tipped off to the story by a pal," Griggs declared, but at last the assurance was gone out of his voice. He felt the hostility of those about him.

Garson broke in ferociously.

"It's a frame-up!" he said. His tones came in a deadened roar of wrath.

On the instant, aware that further subterfuge could be of no avail, Griggs swaggered defiance.

"And what if it is true?" he drawled, with a resumption of his aristocratic manner, while his eyes swept the group balefully. He plucked the police whistle from his waistcoat pocket, and raised it to his lips.

Then He Trembled.

He moved too slowly. In the same moment of his action, Garson had pulled the pistol from his pocket, had pressed the trigger. There came no spurt of flame. There was no sound—save perhaps a faint clicking noise. But the man with the whistle at his lips suddenly ceased movement, stood absolutely still for the space of a breath. Then he trembled horribly, and in the next instant crashed to the floor, where he lay rigid, dead.

"D—n you—I've got you!" Garson sneered through clenched teeth. His eyes were like balls of fire. There was a frightful grin of triumph twisting his mouth in this minute of punishment.

In the first second of the tragedy, Dick had not understood. Indeed, he was still dazed by the suddenness of it all. But the falling of Griggs before the leveled weapon of the other man, there to lie in that ghastly immobility, made him to understand. He leaped toward Garson—would have wrenched the pistol from the other's grasp. In the struggle, it fell to the floor.

Before either could pick it up, there came an interruption. Even in the stress of this scene, Chicago Red had never relaxed his professional caution. A slight noise had caught his ear; he had stooped, listening. Now he straightened and called his warning.

"Somebody's opening the front door!"

Garson forgot his weapon in this new alarm. He sprang to the octagonal window, even as Dick took possession of the pistol.

"The street's empty! We must jump for it!" His hate was forgotten now in an emotion still deeper, and he turned to Mary. His face was all gentleness again, where just before it had been evil incarnate, aflame with the lust to destroy. "Come on, Mary," he cried.

Already Chicago Red had snapped off the lights of the chandelier, had sprung to the window, thrown open a panel of it, and had vanished into the night, with Dacey at his heels. As Garson would have called out to the girl again in mad anxiety for haste, he was interrupted by Dick.

"She couldn't make it, Garson," he declared, coolly and resolutely. "You go. It'll be all right, you know. I'll take care of her!"

"If she's caught——!" There was an indescribable menace in the forger's half-uttered threat.

"She won't be." The quality of sincerity in Dick's voice was more convincing than any vow might have been.

"If she is, I'll get you; that's all," Garson said gravely, as one stating a simple fact that could not be disputed.

Then he glanced down at the body of the man whom he had done to death.

"And you can tell that to Burke!" he said, viciously, to the dead. "You d——d squealer!" There was a supremely malevolent content in his sneer.

To Be Continued Monday.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father. Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters.

THE MAN WHO IS TIRED OF HIS WIFE

"Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," Says an Old Proverb, and This Is Especially Apt in This Situation.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A MAN writes me in great distress. He says that he has been married about fifteen years, and that suddenly a great weariness of spirit has come upon him. His wife is good and kind, an excellent housekeeper, a thrifty manager, and her one object in life is to please him and make him happy, but while he recognizes her virtues and admires them, they leave him cold and unmoved.

In a word, he's tired of his wife. She bores him to death. Just her presence is irksome to him, and when she goes with him on any sort of a pleasure jaunt it takes all the fun out of the occasion.

This man is no gay Lothario. He is a good, honest, domestic man, who is honestly alarmed at the state of affairs, and he wants to know what he can do to recover the interest he once had in his wife, and the thrills that went through his veins like fire at the touch of her hand.

There is only one remedy for such cases, and that is absence. Only people who have neither nerves, temperament nor imagination can stand the horrible monotony of seeing the same face opposite them at three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, and ditto dinners, to say nothing of having the same form across the drop light for an equal number of evenings a year, and having to listen to the same old stories.

The most beautiful people in the world grow homely to our eyes if we see them too often. The wittiest conversationalists grow tedious if we have a surfeit of their society. The virtues of even an angel pall upon us if they are constantly before us.

Reasons Why.

Probably Mr. Milo thought his Venus too fat or too thin, and asked her why she didn't get another make of corset. Doubtless there were times, before she got a divorce, when Mrs. Caruso said to herself that if Enrico warbled another warble she would scream, and it isn't on record that the immediate family of any of our saints and martyrs ever handed in any testimonial to show what they thought on the subject of the canonization of their husbands or wives.

Why people who can not eat thirty quails in thirty days; who never want to see the same play twice, or read a book a second time; who tire of their clothes before they are half worn out, and spend their lives hunting for new sights, new emotions, new diversions, new places to go, should ever be foolish enough to imagine that they could endure the undiluted society of one person, year in and year out, passes comprehension.

There are millions of husbands and wives who have had an overdose of each other's society and are suffering from it, and they are so stupid they don't realize what ails them, nor how simple the remedy for it is. Yet the symptoms are unmistakable.

When a man begins to dread the thought of going home of an evening, and to wonder what made him idiot enough to get married and to pick out Sally, of all women in the world, for a wife; when he begins to notice that Sally has gone off in looks and is getting a triple chin, and to have a feather bed figure; when his eyes focus on the little mole on Sally's cheek instead of the cute way her hair curls around the back of her neck; and when he commences wondering if all women talk as much drivel and use as many words in telling nothing as Sally Jones—then it's time for the man to pack his grip and hike away from home and Sally.

He hasn't really fallen out of love with her, as he thinks he has. He's just tired of her for the time being. He doesn't really pine to be a gay rover, as he imagines he does. He just wants to ease the pressure of the yoke of matrimony for a little, and to him—and to his wife—a ticket to Chicago, or San Francisco, or Bird Center, or anywhere away from home, is a lifeline that saves them both from destruction.

And it's exactly the same way with women. Of course the theory is that women have such an abnormal talent for loving that a wife never gets enough of her husband's society, but is a femael Oliver Twist, always asking for more. Don't you believe it. Women are fickle creatures, and the best wife in the world can get so sick and weary of a model husband that she is ready to die of sheer ennui.

The Woman's Side.

Every now and then a woman gets so that she can see nothing but faults in her husband. Everything he does and everything he doesn't do irritates her, and she, too, gets to wondering what on earth the fool-killer was doing on the day that she tied up with the miserable little shrimp that she did, instead of marrying some romantic and godlike creature that she didn't marry. She thinks that she is suffering from having missed her affinity and being married to a groundling that can't understand her higher nature, but the whole trouble is that she has had too much of her husband's society. All that she needs to effect a complete cure is a month or six weeks' separation.

Of course, being ladies and gentlemen, most of us never admit to our husbands and wives that we are bored. We yawn behind our hands and try to look interested, but in our secret souls all of us know that the surging joy with which we saw our dearly beloved husband or wife start off on a journey, or the rapture that filled our own soul when we got to go off somewhere alone, or with perfect strangers.

And we also know the delight with which we returned home, or welcomed back the wanderer, our whole point of vision changed by a little absence, and the one of whom we had been so tired clothed again in his or her halo.

This is why the summer vacation is such a beneficent institution. We can lay our weariness of our domestic partners on the weather, and get away with a decent excuse. But it isn't the change of climate that does us good. It's the change from the monotony of association, and it sends us back rested and refreshed and romantically in love again.

A True Proverb.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says the old proverb, and this is especially true of husbands and wives. They need to break away every few months just to get a perspective on each other's good qualities and to find out how necessary each is to the other's happiness.

You can overdo matrimony as easily as you can any other good thing, and if there were some way by which we could be married three days a week instead of seven there would be no more divorce.

Queer Vegetable.

A vicar advertised for a servant a short time ago, and a country girl, with a fat, red face, answered the advertisement.

After the vicar had asked a few personal questions, he said:

"You know, we are all vegetarians here, and, of course, we should require you to be one. No meat, you know—simply vegetables."

She dropped her eyes, and for a time seemed deep in thought.

"Well, what do you think?" asked the vicar, after a short time.

"Well, sir," she replied, "it's like this. I don't mind so much about the meat; but before I take the place I should like to know if you—er—call beer a vegetable?"

She was not engaged.

Not Quite Right.

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "2" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

$10 WORTH OF BALL FOR TWO BITS FRIDAY

By Percy H. Whiting.

TEN dollars' worth of baseball at two bits was the offering at Ponce DeLeon Park Friday afternoon, in a game the Crackers lost to Chattanooga, 7 to 5. The contest took ten innings, two hours and seventeen minutes and a pound of flesh from the wracked frame of Manager Bill Smith.

It was surely a cuckoo little contest.

For eight innings it was an awful affair, a regular boob game as far as the Crackers were concerned. They had made only three hits off Rudy Summers and it looked as though they would never make any more. The score was then five to nothing against the Crackers, for Chappelle was no puzzle to the guys he used to work with and his support was much to the cheese.

* * *

THE last half of the eighth was a memorable session. Joe Agler opened it with a single. Dunn waited—and walked. Rohe, batting to Chappelle, flied out. Long walked. And then came Welchonce, the hero of the previous day's game. All he did this time was to triple but that scored three men and put Summers in a blue funk. Whereupon Alperman arose and lammed the ball to the score board for a home-run—and this tied it up. Five runs in one inning for a tie up! Wow!

* * *

DID you ever notice that when a team comes from behind they come just far enough to tie the score—and then stop there? It happens nine times out of ten. In Friday's game it was obvious that the locals had Summers absolutely on his last legs. With only one out and two dangerous batters in line it seemed as though a little more of the same steam would have put over the winning run.

It's human nature, though, to pull up on even terms and then stop to breathe, believing that the overhauling will be an easy matter later.

* * *

AFTER warming up both Dent and Price while the batting rally was in progress Smith stuck in the former. He retired the first two men and then got in an awful mess by letting Flick and King hit. Coyle then grounded to Alperman, who started a double play and pulled the Crackers through that inning.

To the surprise of everybody Elberfeld elected to use Harry Coveleskie to finish out the game for him. Considering the Pole's uncertainty and the ease with which he is usually rattled this was a brave choice. Hardly another manager in the world would have taken that chance.

But Coveleskie stood the gaff.

Every Cracker went up to the plate with strict orders to wait him out. It started all right too, when Bisland walked. Agler sacrificed him along but there he croaked. Dunn waited like a statue but Coveleskie had the plate located and Joe finally popped to Coveleskie. Dent had a lovely opportunity but was struck out.

In the first of the tenth Dent got his. Elberfeld opened with a single. Elston sacrificed. Johnson singled. Street fractured the tie by going out Smith to Agler, so artistically that Elberfeld tallied. Williams was walked. And then came the superlative surprise for Coveleskie hit a clean single, scoring Johnson and closing out the Crackers.

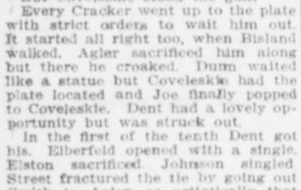
In the last half of the tenth Welchonce kept up his great pinch hitting with a timely single but Coveleskie was the master of the rest of them and deserved a victory.

This was the first game the Lookouts have won out of eight attempts against the Crackers.

Happy Hooligan starts to break into society—A fine feature in the Comic Section of The Sunday American.

Wan, Weary and Worn Out

If You Feel Fagged to a Finish and Utterly Used Up Here is Quick Relief.



S. S. S. Makes Your Blood Corpuscles Unite for Mutual Protection.

Half the people you meet complain of weary muscles, stagnant brain, jangled nerves, and a wonderful desire to lay down and just quit. Most of these people have been using nervines that spasmodically flare up the nerves only to die down again, as die they must. Avoid nerve stimulants. Bear in mind that this worn-out feeling is due to poor blood, to bacteria in the water you drink; to the multiplying of destructive germs in the blood faster than they can be overcome by the white corpuscles, and to what is known as auto-toxemia, that condition where the venous or impure blood accumulates faster than it can be replaced by the red arterial blood.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital and essential to well-balanced health as those of the grains, meats, fats and sugars of our food.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S., Swift's Sure Specific. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling. It just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine just as active and just as timely as to a man who has been lost in the mountains, is about starved and comes across a settler just cooking a savory meal of good honest beef. Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 159 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Jackson's Clout a Record One

Longest Homer, Says Sam Crane

By Sam Crane.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Joe Jackson's home run wallop over the roof of the right field wing of the Brush stadium last Monday was a marvel.

There were two other circuit clouts made, but while they were hard hits, they were not patches on "Jolting Joe's" job that cleared every sky high obstacle in the Polo Grounds and in the immediate neighborhood for miles around. The ball landed somewhere. There is no doubt of that, for Sir Isaac Newton's statement that everything that goes up must come down is still considered as sufficient authority to bank on even in these baseball days when "up in the air" is considered a permanent ascension.

Yes, siree, Joe Jackson's wonderful wallop was a record breaker. It was the longest drive ever made on the Polo Grounds, either to right field, center field or to left field. Buck Ewing is given credit for smashing the longest hit ever made toward the Harlem River. That was in the days when the left field was known as "Burkeville," that euphonious title being derived from "Eddie" Burke, once a Giant left fielder, who played the sun field without the aid of smoked glasses or a net, and never missed a fly ball, so 'tis said, or a high one, either.

Opinions Differed.

There are various opinions as to where the ball went over the left field fence that Buck soaked so far. But it was made in the Players' League days of 1890, and sailed over the outer bulwarks at about where the present 25 cent pen is now located.

"Some drive," you young fans of the present day may say, but in those good old days there were some sluggers—consecutive wallopers, I might say, like "Babe" Anson, Roger Connor, Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, Ed Delehanty, Mike Tiernan and others, who, if they didn't make a home run a day, were ashamed to go to the "captain's office" and draw their half monthly stipends.

"Home Run" Baker has made quite a "small" reputation since those days by smashing out homers off Matty and Rube and they possibly earned more fame than the lengthy licks of the old-time swatters, soaks, but only for the reason that they figured as winning clouts in world championship contests and not because they were the real thing in drives.

Why, I have seen Ed Delehanty clout a ball so far over the present left field wall on the Phillies' grounds in Quakerville that make the home runs made by Cravath and Magee this year on the same grounds look like bunts.

Thompson Made Long Clout.

In Cincinnati I saw Sam Thompson hit the ball so hard and far that the home run smashes of Bescher, Bates and other long-hitting Reds of the present look like handle hits.

I have witnessed Anson make home runs in Chicago off wild pitches that would make the fourbag drives of Schulte and Zimmerman look like mere infield pop-ups.

Mike Tiernan lifted the ball once over the right field fence on Manhattan Field into Brotherhood Park (now the Polo Grounds.) That historical hit of Tiernan's, too, won a famous 11-inning pitching contest between the two star pitchers of that time (1890), and the spot where the ball went over the fence was marked by a small American flag for several years. Even the Harlem small boy revered the wallop so much that he didn't steal the flag.

I have seen—well, all those great hits and many more—but I will come down to earth now and take off my hat to Joe Jackson, of the Clevelands, for making the longest lick I ever saw—and that was Monday.

Doubt About O'Rourke's Hit.

Jim O'Rourke has heretofore been credited with making the longest smash, but there is a doubt on that record. Jim hit the ball over left field fence on the present Boston Braves' grounds, and the ball never stopped going until it landed in Providence, R. I. The ball went into the express car of a through train from Boston to Providence that didn't stop until it got to the Rhode Island Capital.

There is a history connected with Jackson's smash. A small boy recovered the ball somewhere down in Harlem on a side street and hearing about the record wallop—(why, Harlem was full of it) brought the ball back to the Polo Grounds and showed it to Joe after the game.

Joe paid the youngster a ten-dollar note for his prize—and it was well worth the money. It is a memento of the longest hit ever made.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

THE Western invasion in the American League should bring out some interesting baseball within the next two weeks. It is common gossip on that circuit that the Cleveland team is a much bigger winner on its home grounds than away on the road. The present trip should show whether this is true. With Birmingham's pitchers, and the club hitting as it is, there is no reason why it should not be just as big a winner in the East as the West. The Cleveland club looks like a strong one to me, and the Athletics are worried by the showing it is making. They fear the excellent pitching, the Philadelphia club being none too strong on the twirling itself.

* * *

STILL, I do not see how the Athletics can be beaten out. They are playing at their old-time speed now and should pick up on Cleveland during their long stand at home. Outside of the Naps, "Connie" Mack's team will be playing the easy Western clubs, while the only soft spot Birmingham will find in the East will be in New York. The series with Philadelphia, Washington and Boston will all be hard ones. The Naps have made all these gains without Lajoie, and with him back in the game the aggregation will be greatly strengthened, as the return of Wagner braced up the Pirates.

* * *

THE Boston Red Sox are still off color, although they have shown flashes of better ball recently. The failure of their pitching staff has been largely responsible for the poor showing. None of the pitchers who looked so good in the world's series have been able to win consistently this spring. Even "Smoky Joe" Wood has not been smoky. When their pitchers come around in shape, as they are bound to do, Boston will do considerably more winning, but I do not believe the Red Sox have a chance for the pennant. There are too many other high-class ball teams ahead of them in the competition now.

* * *

THE White Sox have made a good showing, better than was expected of them, and may come through and scare a lot of managers before the race is over. Their pitchers are displaying grand form, even without the aid of "Ed" Walsh. White, Russell, Benz and Scott have all pitched good ball. Pitching has been a big factor in the races in both leagues so far this year, the clubs with the twirlers getting the early starts, with the possible exception of the Athletics.

* * *

DETROIT and the New York Americans look hopeless. Somebody said the other day that the only reason they are keeping a club in Detroit is to give Cobb a chance to see how high he can bat. Chance realizes he will have to tear his club down and build over again. He began by trading Chase. His task is a tough one.

"CHICK" GANDIL HASN'T DROPPED BALL IN YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Washington baseball fans are pointing out that Walter Johnson is not the only record holder on the local team. "Chick" Gandil, who one year ago this month began playing first base for the Senators, has never dropped a thrown ball in all that time, except when the throw was so wild it pulled him off the bag. This is believed to be a record for accuracy in fielding.

STEVE.

Time was when a middleweight fighter could fight,
And he battled with never a care.
He walloped the smoke and he walloped the white,
And he fought like a man who was there.
And somebody got him one calm summer day,
And he went with a smile on his brow.
He battled his battles and went on his way,
But where is a middleweight now?

It is said that Bill Steen, of the Naps, can do needlework in addition to his pitching. Having listened to various baseball magnates, we have a hunch that Mr. Steen is a mere novice with the needle.

Mr. Goux sails this week for home, despite various challenges from Mr. Burman. In other words, Mr. Goux refuses to fall for any goux-goux eyes. We sprang this simply to prove that we ain't got no sense of humor.

Every time we read that there are motorcycle races on the program we are sore over the fact that we ain't a mortician. And then when we think it over we ain't.

One who is versed in pugilistic lore is not surprised to learn that Willie Ritchie refuses to make 133 ringside. One who is not versed in pugilistic lore does not care a whoop. So why should we waste any more space on it?

FOXHALL KEENE DISCUSSES THE POLO CONTEST

By Foxhall Keene.

(Captain of the American Polo Team.)

NEW YORK, June 7.—Before I take up the discussion of teams which will meet in the approaching contest I want to repeat what I have said in recent interviews—that the changes made in the line-up of the squad were not due to friction or to trouble of any sort, and rumors to that effect are absolutely without foundation.

The changes were made by those in charge not only with the consent, but at the urging of the parties concerned, in the belief that it will further the common cause and we know all are working together with the one hope and ambition to keep the polo cup in America.

Speaking for myself I can say that I did not want to have anything to do with the game at this particular time on account of the recent death of my father, but Mr. Whitney and the other members of the team finally prevailed upon me to re-enter the lists, and now that I am in I shall do my best to bring about the defeat of the English.

Will Put Up Hard Fight.

I hope and believe that our team will be able to give a good account of itself in the match and if we are defeated I am pretty sure the Englishmen will know they have been in a fight.

I am inclined to believe that the old team was not up to the form it has shown in past years, and perhaps Mr. Whitney held it together on account of old friendships longer than he might have done.

Mr. Whitney is one of the greatest players the game of polo has produced in 20 years and his passing from the team at this time must be viewed with real regret.

Larry Waterbury was certainly as good a back as the world has ever seen. He played No. 1 on the team that Mr. Whitney took to England, and he played it brilliantly, though the English team at that time was rated rather poor.

Monte Waterbury has not been well for some months and his game has not been the phenomenal game of past years.

Betting Favors Englishmen.

The betting is against us and the popular feeling seems to be that the Englishmen have the stronger team, but in spite of that and in spite of the fact we have been given a very short time to prepare ourselves, I am confident that America will not be ashamed of her representatives when we take the field against the mother country.

The English squad have an extraordinary array of ponies. We can not deny that they outpony us to some extent, but in addition to Mr. Whitney's string, Mr. Prince, of Boston, who owns a very fine stud, sent his ponies to New York by special train and we will all have them to depend on.

We have but a small handful of polo players in America,"—by which I mean only a few men who have gone in for the game strong enough to become experts; whereas England not only has England, where the game is older and more popular than here, to draw upon, but India as well, and in India every other man is a good polo player.

It is therefore great credit to our small handful that we have been able to produce squads that have at times beaten the best teams produced by the British and that have always given a good account of themselves.

English Ponies Are Good.

From what I have seen of the Englishmen I might say that their hitting is uniformly fine and the ponies are very good, but they were not being tackled, and a team always looks pretty good when it is not being opposed.

In drawing a comparison between American and English methods of playing polo it seems to me that the Americans have been more ambitious for the past 20 years. The Englishmen are rather orthodox in their general style, while we have all kinds of strokes. They have some that they play best, but there is always more variety to the Americans.

There are really no new ways of playing polo and few new angles to be developed. Naturally I have certain theories of my own in connection with the game as has every polo player, but this is hardly the time to exploit them.

BURMAN DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE GOUX SAILED

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bob Burman, the dare-devil automobile racer, who is in town to-day, was quite disappointed to find that Jules Goux, the Frenchman who won the 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis, had sailed Thursday for France.

Burman came here to challenge Goux to a 500-mile race either at Indianapolis or New York for a side bet of from $5,000 to $20,000. Burman announced that he will now cable his challenge.

JIM FLYNN AND SAVAGE ARRIVE HERE MONDAY

By Left Hook.

JACK CURLEY, manager of Jim Flynn, has wired that he and Flynn will arrive in Atlanta Monday. Dan Morgan, manager of Jim Savage, had previously wired that he and his man would be here either Sunday or Monday. So the Queensberry festivities of the city should brighten up materially within the next few days.

Dan Morgan, in behalf of Savage, has laid claim to the heavyweight championship of the world. In his formal statement Morgan says:

"Savage has as much right to the title as any of the white hopes. I consider him the best man in the lot. I believe he can whip any of them, now that McCarty is out of the way. We are willing to meet any of them, and intend to begin by polishing off Flynn on the night of June 13 in Atlanta."

Morgan is wild with enthusiasm over the outlook. The sudden turn of affairs that gave his man a championship look-in pleased him right down to the ground. He saw the opportunity and he is off on a campaign of activity that will give Jim Savage more scraps in the next few months than he ever had before in his life.

It may be that Morgan's plans may get an awful jolt right here in Atlanta. There is not any doubt that, until a few weeks ago, he believed that his man could trim Jim Flynn with all ease. Then came Jim's great battle with Jim Coffey, and that was something else again. Flynn, instead of being on the down slant, as Morgan hoped, proved to be as good as ever in his career. But after that was learned it was too late to back out, for the match between Savage and Flynn was made.

Neither of the men wants to meet the other now. Yet each knows that he must go into it to win or to be knocked out. There is no middle ground now. A draw decision would do neither of them any good. They must win. A victory, with the heavyweight situation as it now is, means money to them, way up in the tens of thousands.

The odd way affairs have lined themselves has played into the hands of the local promoters. It has made the battle next Friday night one of the BIG contests of the year. The winner is almost sure within the year to grab off the heavyweight championship of the world.

NATIONAL COMMISSION PASSES NEW SALARY RULE

CINCINNATI, June 7.—The National Baseball Commission promulgated a new rule yesterday which clearly defines the salary obligations of a club to a player whose services are released by the club after the commencement of its contract period.

The new rule reads:

"A club which after the beginning of the terms of its contract with him, releases the services of a player to a club whose championship season had not commenced, must pay him at the rate of his canceled contract up to the date his salary starts with his new club, provided he promptly reports to and gives service to the club to which he is transferred."

398 MEN TAKE PART IN TRACK MEET AT MADISON

MADISON, WIS., June 7.—The greatest group of college athletes in the history of Western competition to-day are here awaiting the signals which start the conference track and field meet billed for this afternoon. Seventeen schools are represented in the gathering, with 398 entrants. The colleges in the running include every member of the "big nine," and in addition to these schools are Drake, Ames, Kansas, Missouri, Notre Dame, Oberlin, Wabash and California.

Because of the weakening of the California team, which lost four of its star performers by conference rules, Missouri is favorite, with Illinois second choice.

Whitney Plays Aldredge To-day

Winner Gets Dixie Championship

By W. R. Tichenor.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 7. Nelson Whitney, twice champion of the Southern Golf Association, and George A. Eldredge, champion of the State of Texas, are battling to-day at 36 holes for the championship of the South and a huge silver cup.

Whitney won his match in the semi-finals yesterday from Reuben Bush, whom he defeated 7 up and 6 to play.

Whitney was longer and steadier on all of his tee shots, which gave him the advantage of seeing the results of Bush's second shot on almost every hole before he was forced to play his own. While he was unsteady on his short puts in the morning round and presented Bush with a half at the eighth, ninth, tenth and fourteenth, and a win at the sixth and thirteenth holes by taking three puts on each, Whitney managed to end the round 3 up, with a 76 for the 18 holes.

Bush Puts Poorly.

In the afternoon round Bush picked up in his field game, but became erratic in his short puts, allowing Whitney to add three more holes in going out, and so they turned for home with Whitney 6 up. Both played the tenth badly, Bush winning it with a 5 after putting his tee shot out of bounds. Whitney, however, came to life on the eleventh, which is 460 yards in length, by holing a long put for a 3. On the 575-yard twelfth hole Whitney put his third within 10 feet of the hole and sank the put for a "win" of the hole and the match.

Whitney has met in succession Jacoby, Knowles and Bush. To-morrow he meets Aldredge, of Dallas, Texas, in the final.

Aldredge won his way into the final by defeating Herbert Tutwiler, of Birmingham. At the end of the morning round yesterday he was 3 up. He increased this lead to four and won on the thirty-second green.

Rowan Still In.

W. H. Rowan dfeeated George Fooshe, of Memphis, in a hard match. At the end of the morning round Fooshe was 2 up. Rowan evened the match at the turn and won 3 up and 2 to play.

Young Charley Hardy, of New Orleans, and Rollo Steinmehl, both of them youngsters, met in the semi-finals of the second flight. Hardy was going fine and had a 77 for the morning round, while Steinmehl was off his game and the first eighteen holes ended with Hardy 11 up. Steinmehl braced in the afternoon, but could not cut down Hardy's lead and was beaten 11 up and 10 to play. Hardy and Rowan meet in the final to-day.

Probasco defeated Stahlman 7 and 6 in the semi-finals of the third flight. In the other half of this flight Ned Daley ran away from Reid Sayre and had him 9 down at the thirteenth hole, when Sayre gave up the match. Daley and Probasco meet in the final of this flight.

In the fourth flight J. A. England defaulted to D. Weaver. Harnett, of Jacksonville, defeated A. W. Post, 6 and 5. The final of the fifth flight will be fought out between J. W. S. Rhea and C. Tyson. Rhea won from Richards, of Chattanooga, 3 and 2, and Tyson beat Whitney Bouden by the same score.

Atlanta Man Loses.

Albert Mallory defeated D. E. Root, of Atlanta, three and two, in the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Munger beat Watts by the same score, and these two will meet in the finals.

Munger, of Texas, and Ulmer, of Jacksonville, are the finalists in the consolation division of the championship flight.

Dowdell Brown had Cullom dormie seven in his match against him, but, knowing he could not be present to play the final if he won, defaulted the match.

Hamilton Block, of Atlanta, trimmed J. Tyson, of Montgomery to the tune of nine up and eight to play, and so is one of the finalists in the consolation division of the third flight.

D. Henderson, of Chattanooga, and Crawford, of Montgomery, are in the finals of the consolation division of the fifth flight.

Will Gunn, of Macon, and Ed Joseph, of Montgomery, will fight it out in the final of the consolation division of the sixth flight.

Riggs Resigns as Athletic Leader

CLEMSON COLLEGE, June 7.—At a recent meeting of the Clemson College Athletic Association, President W. M. Riggs after about 15 or 17 years of continuous service in the capacity of president of the association, refused re-election. Dr. Riggs is the father of athletics at Clemson and has always given much time to the development of the various sports, especially to football. He will continue to give his hearty support to all college sports, but his regular duties will prevent his serving as president of the association.

The following officers and managers were elected for the next session: Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, president; R. B. Ezell, vice president; Prof. J. W. Gantt, secretary and treasurer; J. B. Douthit, manager of the football team; C. B. Iler and S. W. Hutto, assistant managers; H. H. Pressley, manager of the baseball team; H. W. Bristol and S. M. Richards, assistant managers; K. G. Caughman, manager of the basket ball team; J. B. Glover and G. C. McDermis, assistant managers; A. P. Lewis, manager of the track team; L. LeGrand and R. J. Odom, assistants; J. W. Erwin, manager of the tennis teams; M. R. Stender, chief rooter; R. B. Ezell and F. J. Jervey, assistants; J. N. McBride, historian.

Clemson has a good football schedule, as the following will show. Gandy is captain of the football team, and Webb is captain of the baseball team.

It has been estimated from information gathered in the different betting places in New York that at least $500,000 has been wagered in that city on the result of the baseball races. The Giants in the National League and the Athletics in the American League have been the big betting favorites from the start of the season.

The Yankees evidently intend establishing a record that will never be equaled or broken. By dropping a 2 to 1 game to the Naps yesterday they registered their seventeenth straight defeat on their home grounds. Fans are thinking of holding a big fireworks celebration as soon as the Yankees win their first game on the home grounds.

Walter Johnson, of the Senators, was back in form again yesterday with the result that the Senators won over the Browns, Johnson shutting out the St. Louis players and allowing but four scattered hits.

Just now both teams are tearing the American League wide open and leaving such a gap that only a terrific slump will enable any other team to overtake both for another month or six weeks.

By "Chick" Evans.

PERHAPS the readers of The Georgian will remember a little biography of a golfer which appeared in this paper a few months ago. In that slight sketch I endeavored to give the golfing history of a young player, who, although not well known in the West, was champion of an Eastern State and had made a creditable showing in the National at Wheaton. Although he tied for the last place in the qualifying round with Herreshoff, he won the playoff, and his subsequent game in the tournament led me to class him as one of the most promising players in America. I defeated him in the third round of that event and I have respected his game and appreciated my good fortune ever since.

This young player, Heinrich Schmidt, of Worcester, Mass., has attracted the attention of every American golfer by his recent good showing in the British amateur championship. There is no qualifying round in this event; the matter is arranged by drawing a certain number of byes, determined by the number of entrants. Mr. Schmidt did not draw a bye, however, but played through five successful rounds and was defeated by Harold Hilton in the sixth round by one stroke on the nineteenth hole. His opponents in the other rounds were golfers of the first class, among them a former British champion and the man who defeated Hilton last year. We have only meager accounts of the event, but Mr. Schmidt's record is certainly an enviable one.

Another American Makes Showing.

I had many letters from Mr. Schmidt last winter and spring, urging me to join the little party of Americans in the trip abroad, but business kept me at home. He went unheralded and no hint of his practice scores reached us, but the result of his going was made golf history.

* * *

Harold Weber, of Toledo, Ohio, another American competitor in the British amateur, also made an excellent showing. This surprised none of Mr. Weber's Western friends, for he is well known here, and is a very good player indeed. He had the good fortune, if it can be called good fortune, to remain inactive during the first round, to draw a bye, and he put out several fine British players before he himself met defeat in the third round.

Findlay Douglas, of New York, another of the American entrants, bears a national reputation, and it was perhaps largely through his efforts that the little band of Americans journeyed abroad. Mr. Douglas has not taken his game very seriously of late years. He was defeated in the first round.

British Invasion Successful.

There were also some California entrants with whose playing I am unacquainted, but I am told that they are excellent golfers.

All in all, the Americans have reason to be proud of the results of their invasion of British territory this year. They have faced the difficulties of the British courses, the skill of the British players, and the fine British golfing temperament, and they have achieved some notable victories. They are well content.

American Net Stars Win Over Australians

NEW YORK, June 7.—American lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis Cup preliminaries at the West Side Tennis Club courts yesterday.

Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, and R. Norris Williams, second, scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to cinch the American team's victory is to win one of the three remaining matches, and experts look for this to be accomplished this afternoon when McLoughlin and Harold H. Hackett meet the Australian doubles team, consisting of Doust and A. B. Jones. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team, which already has eliminated the French team.

COUNZELMAN IN FOLD; RELEASE FOR CHAPPELLE

BILL CHAPPELLE has been released by the Atlanta club to make a place for Pitcher Counzelman, just secured from the Pirates.

Chappelle did not come around as Bill Smith expected he would and Manager Smith decided to let him go and to hang onto Pitcher Price, for the present at least.

Smith has no deals on for pitchers now and will give his present staff a thorough trial before letting any more men out.

It is probable that Counzelman will be worked to-day. Smith gave him a good warm-up Friday and he showed a lot of stuff. His curve ball is pronounced a marvel by Smith, and he has plenty of speed, too.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE TO BOX IN 'FRISCO ON FOURTH

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—According to a statement made by Ad Wolgast early to-day the former title holder has been re-matched with Willie Ritchie.

Wolgast was just starting for Venice when he was called to the telephone.

"That was Tom Jones in San Francisco that I was talking to," said Ad when he emerged from the booth. He has matched me with Ritchie at 133 pounds at 9 o'clock in the morning for an afternoon fight on July 4 before Eddie Graney's club.

"That's an awful weight handicap for me to carry and I wouldn't stand for it except that I am getting a big end of the money for my share. No matter what Ritchie weighs, I will scale in at 133, so that I will be recognized as the lightweight champion in case I beat him.

"This match makes it absolutey necessary for me to stop Johnny Dundee next Tuesday night. I can't say that I relish the 20-round bout with Ritchie, except that I want to prove that I am a better man than Willie."

The Public to Choose

The question of determining who will be the successful winners of the Shetland ponies and carts will be decided by the people of Atlanta and vicinity. Balloting is open to all. Start to-day to clip free coupons.

The question of determining who will win these valuable pony outfits is put up squarely to the people of Atlanta and its territory, and they will make the actual choice. After the people have determined to whom the prizes shall be awarded, The Georgian will do the rest. The utmost fairness and impartiality will govern the contest from beginning to end, and every assurance of consideration is extended those who participate in the contest. The pony outfit contest is public in its spirit. Everyone in Atlanta and territory is cordially invited to take part in the balloting which will decide the winners of the ponies, and it is believed everyone will.

Who the boys and girls are that will take away these handsome ponies on July 31 will be decided by popular vote of the people of Atlanta and territory. Ballots will be printed each and every issue of The Georgian and American during the life of this contest, and other ballots of infinitely greater value will be given on all prepaid subscriptions. At the close of the contest a pony cart and harness, "all in readiness to drive away," will be awarded in each district to the boy or girl who has received the highest number of votes in that district.

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF COTTON

Good Rains in the Western Belt Cause Decline After Early Gain—No Feature.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The cotton market opened steady to-day with first prices net unchanged to 4 points lower than last night's close. Early cables reflected the usual week-end evening up at Liverpool, resulting in a wave of scattered short covering here. Prices immediately rallied 1 to 4 points above the opening quotations. The selling was scattered. The strength of the market was mainly attributed to the strength of the summer positions.

Later advices from sections of the cotton belt indicated that the crop is making excellent progress. This, coupled with the weather map showing heavy rains over the entire State of Oklahoma and nice showers in Texas, where rains are badly needed, brought out some selling, resulting in prices dropping 3 to 8 points from the previous close.

At the close the market was steady with prices showing irregularity, being 4 points lower to 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 7.—Oklahoma and the northwestern portion of Texas had a general rainfall over night. Some good rains and scattered showers occurred in north Texas and Tennessee, while light showers fell in many localities in the eastern half of the belt.

Indications are for more general rains over Sunday in the Central and Western States. Scattered showers in the Eastern States. Cooler over the entire belt.

With Liverpool furnishing no incentive to action we had a quiet Saturday market to-day, waiting for what next week will bring in the way of professional action.

New York reviews of the market state plainly that professional operations in the July position rule the market to the exclusion of all other considerations. Brokers representing Liverpool spot interests have also been steady buyers of July during the past three days. The small stock in New York, of only 40,000 bales certificated, said to be the smallest in ten years, is the main encouragement to bullish operations. As far as new crops are concerned they are under the sympathetic influence of efforts to advance July futures.

For the time being it must be admitted that, owing to the greatly reduced stocks, the July position appears to be an easy prey for bullish designs, and the flush of success could easily lead to excesses.

A fact worthy of consideration is that July in New York is nearly 12 cents and that according to statistics and reliable private information visible and invisible holdings in the South are a good deal larger than last year and that with the close approach to the realization of good crop prospects and the continued absence of mill demand, these holdings could become attracted by any future position of isolated high prices.' A determined rally in New York toward the close to-day was taken as an indication of the sentiment and intentions for next week.

North Eager to Buy Southern Securities

William Hurd Hillyer, who recently returned from a trip to New York, Philadelphia and Boston, said Saturday that he had been impressed by the eagerness with which Northern and Eastern capitalists invested in Southern mortgage loans, particularly those on Georgia property.

"There seems to be as much readiness to lend money on farm and country securities as on those in the city," he asserted. "This is a circumstance that speaks favorably for the confidence of the country in this section."

STOCKS WEAKEN IN CLOSING HOUR

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Following the movement in Europe, there was an absence of selling pressure in the stock market this morning. A few issues, however, showed concessions, due to the reluctance of buyers to follow the upturn.

In the initial dealings, Reading opened ⅜ higher at 157¼, and the same amount of gain was made in Amalgamated Copper, which sold at 68⅝.

Slight recessions were recorded in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred. Other railroads and industrials were well held. The London market was dull.

The curb market was firm.

The market closed weak. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

GOOD RAINS HELP KANSAS CROP.

B. W. Snow wires from Russell, Kansas: "In Kansas, north of main line of Union Pacific, rains came soon enough to save large part of crop. To-day in West Ellsworth, Russell and Osborne Counties most fields show burned spots, but with 400,000 acres there are large areas that will make 20 bushels or more. Present rains are general and generous and will almost insure good yield in north."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—We are inclined to look for a narrow market until after the Government report on Monday next, unless something sensational in the way of crop news comes to hand.

Corn—Speculative interest has assumed rather small proportions and the market is in a waiting attitude. The action of the cash markets during the next few days will be the chief factor in determining values.

Oats—Crop reports from the Southwest are not good, while the reports from east of the River show some improvement.

Provisions—Think some further upturn in prices is likely.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Begin Right in Poultry by Buying Thoroughbreds

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

In each line of business someone must be the first in his town, county or neighborhood. If he is successful, others will soon follow. The question is frequently asked, Why is such and such a town noted for its cotton manufacture, another for numerous tobacco factories, another a paper town? The story can usually be told in a few words. Some enterprising and capable man or firm became very successful in the manufacture of a certain kind of goods; his success soon incited others to action along the same lines, including perhaps some of his best workmen. Others still take it up from the very fact that they see the successes of this, to them, familiar line of business. And so it goes.

This is also true in the breeding and sale of thoroughbred poultry. But who are the starters in the field of thoroughbred poultry? One who has been in a position to know, as the writer has observed, is that in the main the breeders of fine cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are the ones who first take up good poultry in their section. I was for many years a breeder of short horn cattle and Poland China hogs; bred them for stock purposes, and sold them in all sections of this country and Canada. At the same time I was breeding a lot of good Barred Rocks, Brown Leghorns and Wyandottes. It was my observation and experience that three-fourths of the stockmen who came to my place for cattle or hogs became or were already interested in poultry. The result was that my sales in poultry were nearly as big as my sales in cattle and hogs. Consequently this thoroughbred poultry was carried into the various sections of the country and, being successfully bred and handled by these expert stockmen, their neighbors caught the inspiration and soon they were in the same boat. But you say, Why did so many of these cattle and hog men become poultry breeders? Simply because they knew from their experience with other live stock that nothing pays so well to handle as the best in its line. It took no argument on my part to sell this good poultry to these intelligent stockmen. As soon as the fact appeared to them its importance was made manifest at once. The question of breeds was the only one discussed. The man who has found that by raising short horn cattle he can produce two pounds of beef where he had been producing one with native cattle is not a hard one to convince that if he will change from his barnyard scrubs to Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Orpingtons or Rhode Island Reds he will be enabled to double his poultry product with the same expense for feed, to say nothing of the increased egg yield and the uniform appearance of the flock. The proposition to him is as plain as the nose on a man's face. These up-to-date stockmen are of greater value to any community. They do not have to open their mouths or utter a sound. Their success is being watched, and others will stive to do likewise.

Take stock sections of Kentucky and Tennessee as examles, and you will find that nine out of ten of these breeders of fine stock are also breeders of some one or more good kinds of chickens or turkeys. Are they successful? How long have they been breeding fine poultry? I will answer the second question first, and then I think you will be able to answer the first. Many of them have been breeding this good class of poultry for ten or twenty years. Would you presume that breeders of fine cattle, horses and hogs, men of the very best abilities in stock farming, would bother to keep a class of fine chickens if they were not more profitable than scrubs? Not a bit of it. Men of this character must have results and experience of such. Now, then, can we not profit by the results and experience of such men?

Experience is a good teacher, as is often said, but if we can run on to a short cut by which we can reach the same results and save ourselves years of experimenting, is it not wise to take advantage of it at once? We are not compelled to go through long years of experimenting with crosses, striving to produce a breed of chickens that will give us good results as egg producers. Specialists, as we might call them, in their line of work have them all ready for you in the Leghorns, Minorcas and Hamburgs. You do not have to rack your brain for years over a strain intended as a general purpose chicken, one that will give you the most meat with the least consumation of feed, and at the same time give you an abundance of eggs. Such a fowl is all ready for you, and you can take your choice as to color in the Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks of the different varieties, the Rhode Island Reds and the Orpingtons. The whole scheme is cocked and primed; all there is for you to do is to touch it off. Why any reasonable man or any man of reason will stand in his own light in these matters and not take hold of a good thing when he sees it is more than I can understand. I know of no other one thing in which a man in the country, city or suburbs can invest a few dollars and get as quick and satisfactory returns on his investment as thoroughbred poultry. These are not idle fancies; they have proven thousands of times in this country. The amount of money to be made from such an investment lies with you, depending upon the time and energy you are willing to devote to it. The possibilities are limitless.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Quarter Million In New Building

The building inspector's office did a large business Saturday. A permit was granted the Louisville and Nashville and the Atlantic Coast Line Railway Companies to erect a two-story reinforced concrete building on Central Avenue to cost $205,000, and application was made to erect the three-story brick building for Nunnally & McCrea, overall manufacturers, at 74 and 75 Central Avenue, at a cost of $43,000. The former will be for the commission merchants of the city, and especially those merchants now located along North and South Broad Streets. It will front 420 feet along the new street, Produce Row, and 90 feet on Central Avenue and Washington Street. H. J. Carr & Co. have the contract.

Permits have been issued for a change in the front of the Imperial Hotel at Peachtree and Ivy Streets, for $3,000, and for a number of small dwellings. The first five months of 1913 are behind 1912 in big buildings, but are ahead in dwellings. The total of dwellings for the first five months in 1912 was 488, as against 524 this year.

Marietta Street Sale.

Joseph F. Gatins has sold to J. K. Shippey a parcel on Marietta Street, 597 feet northwest of Jefferson Street, for $26,250, on terms of $8,750 cash and the balance in notes, and Mr. Shippey has transferred it to Shippey Brothers & White for a consideration, which is withheld. This parcel is 150 by 397 by 50 by 407 feet, and frontage on the W. & A. right-of-way as well as on Marietta Street.

More Peachtree Paving.

For the purpose of taking up the matter of repaving Peachtree from Fifteenth Street to Buckhead, the Board of County Commissioners will meet Tuesday morning at the Court House. Property owners interested have been requested to be present to hear a proposition from the board. This matter was discussed at a recent meeting and was postponed for further discussion. Several of the commissioners are said to be in favor of the plan.

Peachtree was recently repaved from Sixth to Fifteenth Streets, and it is proposed to extend the work to make a uniformly smooth thoroughfare leading into the remote sections of the county.

Lawton Street Sale.

Mrs. C. J. Cook has bought from Marcellus M. Anderson, through Mr. Maddox, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, 77 Lawton Street, a seven-room house on a 46 by 150-foot lot, for $4,600.

Big Deals Pending.

Real estate dealers report several interesting deals which have been finally closed up. One of these, it is said, involves about $200,000, and another nearly $100,000. There are some smaller sales which will be announced early next week.

Interest in Electric Line.

Real estate men got out their maps Saturday to plan a route for the Greenville, Anderson and Spartanburg Railroad, which it is proposed to run into Atlanta from South Carolina. Several land dealers in town are now working on rights-of-way for various railroads and buying up property for this class of development, and they declare they will turn their attention to the new project if it should materialize. The line is electric and one of the biggest things of its kind undertaken.

The plan is to connect up Atlanta with the other Carolina cities and make this city the southwestern terminus. J. B. Duke, the tobacco king, is backing the railroad, and the Anderson (S. C.) Chamber of Commerce is pulling for Atlanta as an objective point.

Buildings for Whitehall.

Since the City Council has set aside $3,500 for regrading Whitehall Street, between Mitchell and Garnett Streets, buildings proposed by Charles H. Black, C. E. Currier, John W. Grant and others can soon go ahead. Regrading will start in October and the street is expected to be vastly improved.

Land Money Coming.

Good news has come to local real estate dealers from points in the East, to the effect that in the next six months there will be a great deal of money sent to this section to be loaned on real estate. This is the gist of an interview with William Hurd Hillyer, who has just returned from a trip, and who reports great confidence among financiers in land securities.

Crowds at Auction Sale.

Inquiries received concerning the auction sale of bungalows and lots indicated that there would be a large crowd out this Saturday afternoon at Oakland City. Foster & Robson are conducting the sale and J. W. Ferguson & Son are the auctioneers. Six bungalows built by Colonel I. N. Ragsdale and nineteen building lots are the offering.

ATLANTA'S GROWTH AND WHAT IT MEANS

THE OTHER DAY we told you about Atlanta—told you in incontrovertible figures how Atlanta has grown—is growing.

The average man of business seldom stops to think about the growth going on around him, and only appreciates it when the facts and figures are brought briefly and bluntly to his attention.

THEN HE WAKES UP!

WE WANT you to wake up and get wise to another important fact:

ATLANTA IS ALREADY BUILT UP IN HOMES RIGHT TO

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK

IT IS the growth—the RAPID GROWTH—we told you about that has carried it there.

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK IS THE BEST, THE HIGHEST CLASS AND IN EVERY WAY THE MOST ATTRACTIVE RESIDENCE PROPERTY ATLANTA NOW OFFERS.

WE MAKE this statement without qualification or reservation. We put the property up as evidence of the truth of it, and with that we are willing to leave it to your judgment.

With Atlanta building 2,000 homes every year to supply the growing demand, in two or three years PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK WILL HAVE BEEN BUILT UP AND YOU WILL BE TOO LATE TO GET THE LOT YOU WANT AT ANYTHING LIKE THE PRICE AND TERMS AT WHICH YOU CAN GET IT TO-DAY.

JUST GO OUT AND LOOK AT THIS PROPERTY—THAT'S ALL WE ASK. THEN

SEE YOUR OWN REAL ESTATE AGENT ABOUT IT

Or, come and let us show it to you.

Lobbyists, Insidious and Otherwise at the National Capital

Thus Far the Investigation at Washington Has Failed to Reveal Any Sign of the "Numerous, Industrious and Insidious Lobby" That President Wilson Charged With Being at Work There.

Thus far the soul-searching Senators who are testifying before the Senate subcommittee in Washington have failed to reveal any sign of the "numerous, industrious and insidious lobby" that President Wilson charged with being at work in their solemn midst.

It may be that the President's definition of a lobbyist differs from that of the Senators. It may even be that a lobbyist, even though he be numerous and industrious, is not insidious, and is entitled to ply his calling among the legislators, despite the Presidential wrath which he invokes by doing so.

According to the Century Dictionary, a lobbyist is "one who frequents halls of legislation, and makes a profession of influencing legislation, or attempting to influence legislation."

Some such miscreants as these doubtless are now in Washington, but according to the testimony of Senators, most of the attempts to influence legislation, aside from those of the President and the Secretary of State, are made by men directly interested in the legislation they are attempting to influence.

For example, among the men who are now in Washington for the purpose of molding Congressional opinion are numerous sugar growers of Louisiana and wool growers of the West. These men do not hesitate to say that their business will be ruined by the passage of the tariff as it stands. Not being particularly eager to have their business ruined, they have come to their Senators and Congressmen to see if something can not be done to keep it from being ruined. And daily they take advertising space in newspapers, for which they pay regular rates, to set forth their case as it looks to them.

Are these men lobbyists? According to the President, they are, and insidious lobbyists at that.

But what about the President? On several occasions he has gone to the Capitol and buttonholed legislators to state his side of the tariff question. Is the President, then, a lobbyist?

Mr. Wilson would probably deny the charge hotly. Yet where is the difference? Mr. Wilson's business is being President, and he believes that that business will be best served by the pending tariff. The sugar growers and the wool growers and the others are in the business of raising sugar and wool, and they believe that their business will be worst served by the pending tariff.

There is not a scintilla of evidence that they have tried to corrupt anybody. There is no indication that they have used anything but such arguments as any man has a right to make to his duly elected representatives in the Senate and in the House.

Why, then, are they lobbyists when the President is not?

How did they become lobbyists?

Will they remain lobbyists beyond the present administration?

These are interesting questions. For, if a man is to be condemned for striving honestly to protect his own business, there will be no legitimate channels of industry in this country save being a President or a Cabinet member, and under our Constitution, few people can hold these positions at the same time.

STEAM AND SALE

By WEX JONES.

Representative Goodwin, of Arkansas, is preparing a bill ordering United States battleships to display samples of American manufactures.

IT was a glorious spectacle to see our fleet depart,
Equipped with lines of samples that would thrill a drummer's heart.
The North Dakota led the van, the dry goods flagship she,
Flinging this signal to the breeze, "SILK SHIRTWAISTS, 93."
The dreadnought Arizona displayed along the rail
The immortal words of Lawrence, "DON'T GIVE UP THE SALE."
While, paraphrasing Perry, the Wisconsin warned the Powers,
"WHEN WE MEET THE ENEMY'S CUSTOMERS THEY'LL EVERY ONE BE OURS."

The seamen—no, no, salesmen—the salesmen were at drill,
Learning store discipline, and means of filling up the till.
The captain—please excuse us, the floorwalker—of course
Paced proudly down the center aisle as he watched his selling force.
The great fleet's general manager—he'd been admiral before—
Dictated red-hot ads about each mammoth floating store,
And then, inspired, he wirelessed this message through the air,
"AMERICA THIS DAY EXPECTS EACH MAN WILL SELL HIS SHARE."

Forget the Constitution, Essex and President;
Never such glorious ships as these, which sailed on business bent.
They out-advertised the British fleet; they undersold the Jap;
They swept all their competitors clean off the retail map.
And when the general manager took stock upon the cruise
He'd sold ten tons of chewing gum and a thousand pairs of shoes.
Oh, well, that general manager, as the stories of him tell,
When asked if he surrendered said, "I HAVE JUST BEGUN TO SELL."

Writes on

Can the South "Come Back?"

The South Can Not "Come Back," He Says, and Stay at the Front of American Leadership if Our Ideals Are Permitted to Take Their Color and Quality From the Period in Which the South Has Been in the Wilderness.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

CAN the South "come back" and take up and maintain the great position in National affairs which was hers in the first hundred years of American history? This question becomes practical in view of the fact, widely commented on as the most significant phase of National politics, that Southern influence is dominant in the present Government at Washington.

It is a question of great practical interest to the Southern people whether their re-entrance into the sphere of national leadership is only an accidental turn of the political wheel of fortune or a role to be undertaken seriously and permanently.

If the present prominence is successful and the idea that the South is called upon to reassume her ancient glory as a National and world-wide factor gets on top in Southern public opinion, it is going to have a vast and immediate influence upon our life in education, industry, morals and politics.

Arrested Glory.

The part the South played in the achievement of independence and in the organization and administration of American Democracy in the early days of the Republic is beyond exaggeration. Such historians as Bancroft and Fiske have put beyond dispute the claim that the South contributed the largest share of the patriotism and political genius which established the nation.

The roots of American civilization, which has grown to be so vast and influential in modern times, are mainly traceable to the Southern colonies. The concert of colonial unity at the time of the revolution was rallied around Virginia and the Carolinas.

Before the Pilgrims launched the Mayflower, Virginia was an established social and political fabric with a representative assembly making laws for the government of a dominion twice as large as the New England States. It included the great Northwestern territory, out of which have been carved the seven splendid commonwealths of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia.

In 1790 the Southern section constituted in area and in population three-fourths of all that was included under the terms of the Federal Constitution. At the time the Constitution was adopted there was no question of the predominant responsibility of this section for the Republic, both as to the principles on which it was founded, the processes by which it was accomplished, and the actual administration of its Government.

For 53 years the Southern States furnished its Presidents in an unbroken line of succession. The hope of liberty in the world was raised in the heart of humanity by this achievement. The thought which then controlled the Southern mind was universal in its sympathy, and Southern men were the world's leaders in the ideals of democratic humanity.

This is the background of history, against which we lift up the question—"Can the South 'come back?'" For since 1850 the South has taken but small part in the large affairs of the nation, and in contributions to human interests that are world wide. The great glory of the former day was arrested and the South in this broad sense of influence and power went into an eclipse which has lasted for more than a half century.

The Vital Questions.

The question to be pondered by our political philosophers is whether the present South is prepared to take up where the old South left off? Have we lost any vital element of civic and moral capacity as a people in our wilderness of political inactivity and detachment from National opportunities? Has anything vital been dropped out during the half century of Southern dislocation from responsibility in national and world concerns?

These questions will not be answered fairly by the success or failure of the Woodrow Wilson administration, but they will be tested out in the history now beginning, which is calling such distant attention to the South in reference to National politics.

The ability of the Southern people to come back positively as actors in the affairs of the whole country will find its severest test in our own local and sectional civilization.

We cannot play a big part at Washington permanently for everybody to recognize, if we play a little part at home for everybody to criticise.

Our ability to advance the civilization of the world as leaders in its greatest Republic will be eventually measured by our ability to achieve a basis for great influence in a noble civilization in the states South of the Potomac.

These are the vital questions Southern men are now to consider. The question of education—a trained citizenship—the relief of illiteracy. The question of public breadth and sympathy—of world consciousness—of realized amenability to the established standards of Christian civilization the world over.

True to Ourselves.

The question is being true of all to ourselves—of faithful introspection and self scrutiny and of intelligent self-criticism to discover our own faults and the sources of our weaknesses. The question of ideals and leaders—the type of Southern character to be hung in the sky before our children—the temper to be exalted as the Southern temper—the point of view to be set up for the direction and control of Southern public opinion.

The South can come back and stay back if these questions are decided under the influence of our ante-bellum history, but the South cannot come back and stay at the front of American leadership if our ideals are permitted to take their color and quality from the period in which the South has been in the wilderness.

WILSON, TOO, A LOBBYIST, CHARGE OF SENATOR

Townsend Attacks the President for Using "Undue Influence" on Legislators.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—President Wilson was branded a lobbyist by Senator Townsend, of Michigan, Republican, at the Overman lobby inquiry yesterday.

"The actions of President Wilson come nearest my definition of a lobbyist," said Townsend. "I am certain that some Senators will not vote as their consciences dictate for fear of the Administration."

Letters and telegrams alleged to prove that a sugar and wool lobby has endeavored to influence the Senators were shown by Senator Thomas, or Colorado.

Thomas said he has received thousands of communications, some of them threatening him with political extinction should he oppose these interests in his State.

Senator Townsend criticised the committee for not having asked members of the Senate whether the President has sought to influence them, and declared that even though the President had not intended it, his recent denunciation of "lobbies" working in support of changes in the tariff would force certain Senators to vote against amendments they knew to be just.

"Who are these Senators?" demanded Senator Reed.

"I don't care to name anyone," retorted Senator Townsend.

The two Democratic members of the committee present, Reed and Walsh, resented any intimation that President Wilson had used patronage or threats to force anyone to support free sugar or free wool, or to support the bill as a whole. Senator Townsend insisted the committee had not asked any Senator thus far whether the President had tried to influence him.

"I move," interrupted Senator Walsh, "that in view of the serious statements touching the Executive, that any Senator who has already testified may be recalled and interrogated in reference thereto."

"I am for that," said Senator Nelson, and every member of the committee agreed.

Convict Escapes in Governor's Clothes

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., June 7.—Donning a good suit of clothes belonging to Governor Major, George Clemens, a Joplin negro, serving two years in the penitentiary for burglary, stole away from the Executive Mansion and is still at large.

Clemens was employed, with a number of other convict trusties, in laying a water main at the Executive Mansion when he secured the suit.

Face Powder Salted, Onions in Her Boudoir

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—There are some things that no one can stand, thinks Mrs. Isabelle Bauer, and among these are having your four stepchildren put salt in your face powder and cut up onions in your bedroom.

Therefore she is filing a cross bill in answer to the divorce petition of Ignatius J. Bauer.

Harvard Professor Makes New Tobacco

CAMBRIDGE, June 7.—Prof. E. M. East of Harvard has just succeeded in producing a tobacco from a cross between the Sumatra and Havana varities which has resulted in a better quality of smoking material and a yield of 50 per cent. more than either of the individual leaves.

May Jewel Imports Top $4,000,000 Mark

NEW YORK, June 7.—Indications that local diamond importers are rushing large quantities of gems into this country in the expectation of an increase in the tariff is given in figures compiled by William B. Treadwell, jewelry examiner at the Appraiser's Stores. According to his report the total value of the gems received through the port of New York for the month of May reached $4,606,322.

These record breaking figures are $1,500,000 greater than the value of the gems imported in May, 1911, and nearly $600,000 more than the highest figures ever recorded for that month in any year.

Pastor Quits Stage; Returns to Pulpit

CAMBRIDGE, June 7.—After a year's career as an actor the Rev. Frederick Wilmot is to return to his first calling, the church. He has accepted the pastorate of the Third Universalist Church of West Somerville.

Mr. Wilmot during the past theatrical season played one of the brothers in "Joseph and His Brethren" at the Century Theater, New York, and was also cast in Pierre Loti's "Daughter of Heaven."

Mr. Wilmot was graduated from Harvard in 1910.

Sweet-Toothed Goat Ate Marriage License

HAMMOND, IND., June 7.—Because a hungry goat ate the marriage license parchment, ribbon and all, elaborate wedding festivities were delayed while an automobile raced across country to secure another license for Charles W. Gribben and Mrs. Anna King Chance.

The bride, on approaching the house, tried to tie the fluttering ribbon around the license, and Gribben playfully took them away from her. He fumbled it, and a hungry goat at the roadside did the rest.

Marshall's Soul Food Is Daily "Hoe Cake"

WASHINGTON, June 7.—A slice of old-fashioned "hoe-cake" and a generous glass of creamy milk is the lunch Vice President Marshall feeds his epigrammatic soul 365 times a year.

"It is not that Americans are gluttons," he said, "but they want an infinite variety in their food. Most Americans need the beneficial lesson of being real hungry once in a while. Then even my luncheon of corn bread and milk would be a meal fit for a king."

NEW VICTIM IS CLAIMED IN PAINTER TRAGEDY

Death of J. S. Coles, Insurance Man, Traced to Worry Caused by Millionaire's Death.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 7.—While no new light has been shed on the mystery in the death of E. O. Painter immediately after he had taken out $1,000,000 life insurance, that case has a tragic result in the death of John Stricker Coles, which is attributed directly to worry over the affair.

Mr. Coles, a brother of A. P. Coles, the Atlanta banker; Mrs. Stewart Phinizy, of Augusta; Mrs. J. D. Twiggs, of Albany, and Mrs. J. J. Talley, of Columbia, S. C., was general agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which issued policies on Painter's life totaling $190,000, and which refused him $50,000 additional on the ground that he was overinsured. These applications had gone through the Jacksonville office. The Equitable was one of those active in investigating Painter's death. This company ranked next to the Mutual in the amount of insurance on Painter.

His Death a Surprise.

Coles had been in bad health for several months. The Painter mystery caused him much worry, as it did the agents of other companies interested. A few days ago, while the Painter investigation was in progress, he was forced to take his bed, but his illness was not considered serious, and it was stated at his office only Friday afternoon that he was expected at his desk within a few days. However, before the day was over he was stricken with a heart attack and died almost immediately.

The announcement of his death today came as a real shock in Jacksonville business circles, for Coles was one of the most popular men here. He had ben a resident of Jacksonville for nine years. He was 57 years old. His wife and eight children survive him.

Rush Active Investigation.

The mutual, Equitable and New York Life companies have been most active in the investigation of Painter's death. Each of these companies has had an adjuster here directly representing the home office. Some of the companies have had inspectors on the ground, while two or three have been represented only by their resident general agents. The Mutual, being the largest company interested, has probably gone more thoroughly into the case than any other.

The local insurance men are reticent in discussing the details of the investigations made for their companies until the report on the autopsy and chemical examination of Painter's organs reaches the Coroner's jury. They fear to disclose any of their information lest it prejudice their cases if the anticipated court contests over the payment of the policies materialize.

A committee of insurance men is acting in an advisory capacity for the interested companies, and the general agents are acquainting their home offices with developments that have come out since the adjusters and inspectors left Jacksonville. These agents are eagerly awaiting the announcement of the Baltimore report.

Little additional information can be expected until that report is public, as the whole case seems to hinge on what the Baltimore chemists found.

Elopes With Georgia Girl on Motorcycle

AUGUSTA, GA., June 7.—Miss Elizabeth McElmurray, a pretty sixteen-year-old Waynesboro girl, eloped Thursday with Edwin Fulcher on young Fulcher's motorcycle. After proceeding a few miles, the motorcycle broke down and they secured either an automobile or a horse and went on. It is believed they went to Aiken. Relatives searched in vain for them all night.

The families of Miss McElmurray and young Fulcher are both wealthy and socially prominent. Fulcher is about the same age as the girl.

Clubwomen Plan City Beautiful

Speaker Calls Atlanta Dirty

Other Civic Movements Advocated

Miss Lucy Vaughan Stockard, serving punch at the meeting of the club women.

Federation Will Petition Legislature to Establish Home for Wayward Girls.

Atlanta clubwomen have inaugurated a movement for a city beautiful, following an address by Mrs. W. P. Pattillo to the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

Having just returned from a trip abroad, Mrs. Pattillo discussed European methods of beautifying municipalities, to which she devoted considerable time and study, and gave vivid descriptions of results as she saw them. She selected for her subject, "How Other Cities Are Made Beautiful and Attractive," and sought to interest the clubwomen of Atlanta in co-operative measures which have transformed continental cities into veritable gardens.

"Atlanta is one of the dirtiest places I have seen," Mrs. Pattillo said, as she contrasted the city with other places she had visited in Europe and America. Then she described the city's natural advantages and asked the clubwomen to concentrate their efforts toward developing them. Her auditors, representing 84 clubs with 8,000 members, expressed pleasure at her remarks and pledged themselves to work together to carry out her suggestions. It was evident to all present that Atlanta will be made a city beautiful if her clubwomen have the necessary influence.

Industrial Home Suggested.

Civic movements received most attention at the hands of the Federation members. Prominent among them was a report of the committee on resolutions, made by Mrs. James Jackson, containing a recommendation for the establishment of an industrial home for wayward girls. The Federation indorsed the resolution and announced its intention of petitioning the Georgia Legislature to establish the home. Atlanta will be suggested as the proper site for the home.

After saying the opening prayer, the Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., complimented the federation on its work. "Excellent work has been done by the united effort of Atlanta's noble women, and you are doing great good for the city," he said.

Mrs. W. M. Legg, of Macon, former president of the Macon Federation of Women's Clubs, was honor guest.

A third civic movement was advocated by Mrs. Sparrow, who urged the establishment of free milk depots for the benefit of the poor of Atlanta. Mrs. Sparrow, who is a trained nurse, said her professional duties had made it necessary for her to examine the city's milk supply, and she had found some of the best milk, supposedly, contained over 10,000 baeteria to the cubic centimeter and was conducive to ill effects.

Urges Milk Inspection.

She urged strict inspection of all milk sold in Atlanta. The federation members showed their indorsement of her recommendations by instructing the president, Mrs. Charles Haden, to appoint a committee to investigate the city's milk supply and make suitable recommendations for the betterment of present conditions. Mrs. Haden named ten clubwomen to serve on this committee.

In the absence of Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, the treasurer, who is ill at Tate Springs, her report was read by Mrs. Jackson. The federation sent Mrs. Price-Smith a message of sympathy. The treasurer's report showed a surplus, despite heavy expenses incurred within the year.

Announcement was made that sixteen clubs had joined the federation during the year, and officers and members alike congratulated themselves on the acquisition of this united strength just as the federation takes up three civic improvement tasks.

Because of a change in the federation constitution the election of officers was deferred until spring.

Union Maids Insist Milady Wash Dishes

CHICAGO, June 7.—These "Rules for Mistresses" have been presented by the new Household Workers' Association:

Days off will begin after breakfast, and breakfast will be served at 7:30 a. m.

Peary Tells Paris Of South Pole Plan

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 7.—All Paris newspapers to-day agree that the Parisians have accorded Rear Admiral Peary and his family a triumphant reception that few living personalities have ever received. Admiral Peary said his future plans were rather unsettled, but indicated that he hopes to be able to outfit an American expedition for a trip to the South Pole.

"I believe the expedition should approach the pole from an opposite direction to that taken by Scott and Amundsen," said the explorer. "The result of my expedition will be to draw up a map of the South Polar

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Following the cabinet meeting yesterday Attorney General McReynolds announced that he would be in court in St. Paul, Minn., on June 12, when the new dissolution plan of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Railroads is to be filed.

The Attorney General said he would see to it personally that the Government gets a "square deal" in the case and that the ruling of the court is complied with.

Twelve suicides in one day in this city is the record never before equaled. Hundreds are prostrated, and unless relief comes soon a great many will die.

DEFENSE DIGS DEEP TO SHOW CONLEY IS PHAGAN GIRL SLAYER

Getting New Evidence to Show Negro Was Located in Factory---Theory Explains Mystery of Staple Pulled From Back Door of Basement.

The defense of Leo Frank against the charge of murdering Mary Phagan will be more than a mere attempt to clear Frank's skirts of the crime. It will seek directly to fix upon James Conley, negro, full and complete responsibility for the crime.

Despite the secretiveness and the silence of Frank's attorneys, it has been ascertained with a reasonable degree of authority that the foregoing is the program of the defense, and that the defense believes itself abundantly prepared to take care of itself along that line.

An ironclad alibi, covering all the time cited in the Conley statement with a substantial margin of time to spare, will be set up by Frank.

In addition to this, it will be shown that Conley was in the factory at the time he himself says Frank committed the murder, and for a long time before.

The defense will try to show that Conley had ample opportunity to accomplish the murder, and that every circumstance of it shows that he did do so.

Say Conley Broke Staple.

It will be contended that the murder was effected on the first floor, and that after it was performed the girl's body was thrown down the open elevator shaft, where soon after it was followed by Conley, who then hid it in the rear.

Conley ill be held to be the party who drew the staple from the back door and thereby made his escape from the building, either by way of Madison Avenue or Forsyth Street.

The misisng purse that Mary Phagan is known to have had in her hand when she left home, and in which she is supposed to have put her money just received from Frank, has never been found, although Conley has been careful enough to account for her hat and her shoe.

Undoubtedly, the deefase has been very busy, while the State's officers have been talking.

Reticent and silent as the grave as to the theory of the crime to be advanced in defense of Frank, it now is known that it will be sweeping, sensational and complete.

State Faces Strong Defense.

Whether it will come as a tremendous surprise to the prosecution, or whether something of the magnitude and scope of it has leaked through to the Solicitor and the police within the past 24 hours, is problematical.

The sudden clamping down of the lid at detective headquarters and the announcement that no more talking would be done there, either for the State or anybody else, is viewed by many as a circumstance tending to show that the State at least has come to a full realization of the fact that Frank's defense will be thorough and complete in detail.

Whereas up to yesterday any sort of an interview might be had for the asking of the detective, to-day nothing whatever may be had.

As silent as the defense has been, it has nothing by way of silence on the State to-day.

Frank's Character.

Frank's previous good character, his fine business reputation, his happy family relations, his ordinary habits of life and his everyday methods of conducting himself will be thrown fearlessly into the scales.

It has been determined for him to leave nothing unsaid and to leave nothing undone that may tend to clear fully and completely and to free him for all time from responsibility for this crime or any knowledge of it.

Besides the technical correctness of Frank's defense, his lawyers will undertake to show how impossible it would have been for him to have done what the negro accuses him of, under the negro's own statement.

Conley's affidavits will be reduced to absurdities, so the defense now believes. He not only will be thrown out of court upon a strict legal showing, but he will be grimly laughed out.

To Attack Conley.

His general character will be put in evidence, his drinking habits established, and his opportunity to have killed Mary Phagan completely demonstrated.

Attorney Rosser is known, despite his silence, to have determined not only upon Frank's complete acquittal, but upon Conley's future conviction.

The foregoing in brief outline, is the defense of Leo Frank now being framed up in surprising detail.

If the defense can establish what it now unquestionably hopes to and believes it may, Frank's acquittal seems a foregone conclusion.

Of course, the State still is standing pat on its theory that Frank committed the crime, but undoubtedly is more or less disturbed by the surprising nature of the defense that has leaked out, even to the extent indicated, and is preparing to meet that defense accordingly.

KANSAS GOVERNOR AND AIDES HERE

Talking Kansas and woman suffrage, Governor George H. Hodges, Lieutenant Governor Sheffield Ingalls and a delegation of State House officials of Kansas, spent last night in Atlanta. This morning they departed for Tate, Ga., where they will inspect the Georgia marble to be found there. It is proposed to use the Georgia product in the Old Soldiers' Memorial to be erected in Topaka.

Governor Hodges was smilingly pleased to discuss woman's suffrage, and of how it had succeeded in Kansas. "Why, the women are running things the way they should be run out in Kansas," he declared.

"We have the strictest moral laws of any State in the Union, and we have almost completely eliminated vice; our white slavery law is the strictest to be found. Why, in Topeka we even have feminine policemen—regular policemen with a regular beat. They do splendid work and have proved wonderful factors in eliminating vice conditions.

"Why, I believe a woman police chief is the very thing. That it would work right here in Atlanta to the end of absolutely freeing your city of vice is my belief. Chief Beavers is a great chief and his war against vice has attracted world-wide attention, but I am for women chiefs of police."

FREE THINKERS MEET.

The Free Thinkers of Atlanta will meet at 571-2 East Hunter Street Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the purpose of organizing locally.

WHITEWASHING EFFORT FAILS IN GRAND JURY

Probers Turn Down Move to Halt Vice Investigation — May Continue Inquiry.

That a faction in the Grand Jury tried to whitewash the vice probe shortly after the first witness was examined, became known Saturday. A vote was taken on the question and the probe continued. Two members of the body, at least, will insist on the inquiry being continued when the jury meets next Tuesday morning.

Immediately after Colonel Thomas B. Felder testified and left the room a juryman offered a resolution that the Grand Jury go on record as saying "Atlanta is better morally than it has ever been and vice is effectively stamped out." The motion was defeated by the necessary twelve votes, and other witnesses were called. Several times before adjournment Thursday the same person is said to have offered the resolution and each time it was defeated.

A sensational development is expected Tuesday when a member of the jury, who will insist on the probe being continued, will ask the foreman to summon a man high up in police circles to tell what he knows of vice conditions and what knowledge the police have of them.

That the probe will be continued is practically an established fact Saturday. Since adjournment Thursday Foreman L. H. Beck has received numerous communications from citizens asking that vice conditions be more thoroughly inquired into.

Some of the communications give the names of witnesses who will give the jury addresses and "positive information."

Several names have been furnished that were not in the hands of the jury when it adjourned Thursday. One of them is Mrs. Nell Powell, of 95 Spring Street, who was sentenced to four months imprisonment Friday for running a lewd house. She expressed a willingness to furnish the jury with the addresses of some 50 or 60 houses in Atlanta and over a hundred names. She will in all probability be called before the jury Tuesday morning and asked to furnish the list that the witnesses may be called for a meeting later in the week.

Chicago Bakes at 91, Then Shivers at 42

CHICAGO, June 7.—Following a day of intense heat, when the mercury reached 91 degrees, Chicago to-day awoke facing a temperature of 42, a drop of 49 degrees in less than 24 hours.

The quick weather change began when a 50-mile wind struck the city, tearing off roofs, breaking down signs, smashing plate-glass windows and sinking boats.

BATTLE PAINTING, IN DANGER, CLOSED

Another accident in the Cyclorama building at Grant Park, the second in a few weeks, imperiled several lives Friday and resulted in an order from General Manager Dan Carey to close the exhibition indefinitely. Part of the roof fell in a few weeks ago, and a skylight collapsed Friday.

Although city inspectors have announced the whole Cyclorama building is in imminent danger of collapse, and that it would go up like an explosion if it ever caught fire, Mr. Carey denied the closing order was issued to hasten construction of a new house. He closed the place, he said, only as a precaution.

The $100,000 picture of the "Battle of Atlanta" in the Cyclorama building is a paying proposition, more than $5,000 having been cleared last season. When the January apportionment sheet was made, there was an effort to include $60,000 for a new building, and the question was up again this month, but the crematory contract made appropriations for this purpose impossible.

The Park Board probably will be called to meet soon to arrange for permanent and safe housing of the painting.

PARIS HAS SERUM CURE FOR TYPHOID

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 7.—The announcement of another wonderful "serum cure" is causing considerable interest in medical circles to-day. Professor Vincente, of the Caldegrace Military Hospital, is credited with having discovered a serum which both prevents and cures typhoid fever.

It is said that more than 50,000 persons have received treatment with the cure. Wonderfully successful tests are announced. A patient who had been treated with the serum drank a glass of pure cultures of baccilli. The baccilli had no effect upon him.

Dr. Theroloix, of the Pitie Hospital of this city, who had watched the case, secured another patient who had been treated with the serum three weeks before and subjected him to a subcutaneous injection of pure ultra virulent typhoid bacilli. There was not the slightest sign of reaction. The patient remained well throughout the treatment.

Dr. Theroloix declares that he has effected cures at the hospital in seventeen days.

CANDLER COUNTY BOOSTERS ON HAND EARLY

Opening of Headquarters First Indication That Legislative Session Is Near.

The first concrete evidence of the fact that the Legislature is about to get together in Atlanta came to light to-day, when the boomers for the new county of Candler secured headquarters in the Kimball House and prepared to open war in earnest for their pet project.

Two handsome rooms on the parlor floor have been reserved, and literature will be shipped in by the ton for the next few days. Managers will be in charge from this time forward. Banners will be strung all around and about the lobby and the walls of the hotel, and the merits of the proposed grand young county of Candler will be shouted from the house tops, both vociferously and eloquently from this time forward.

Representative Burwell, of Hancock, who generally is thought to have the speakership pretty well sewed up, will open headquarters shortly, and both Judge John T. Allen and Senator Randolph Anderson, candidates for President of the Senate, will do likewise.

It long has been thought to be quite the fit and proper thing for candidates to have "headquarters" in Atlanta, and nine cases out of ten in the Kimball House. Sometimes, the walls and railings are far too limited in extent to accommodate the banners and things, and other devices to catch the eye of the incoming member are adopted. In all cases, however, the warfare for position and glory is merry enough in Georgia, and the incoming Legislature will have its share of excitement, no doubt.

Representative Sills, of Metter, who has in charge the fight to create Candler County, is very optimistic. Discussing the subject to-day he said:

"The Legislature is sure to create Candler County. Already we have secured pledges from 138 out of 184 members. That is well over the necessary two-thirds required in passing constitutional amendments.

"There is practically no opposition to the new county. Seven of the eight newspapers published in the territory affected are favorable to it. Indeed, they are fighting for it. The counties of Bulloch, Emanuel, and Tatnall, from which the new county will be taken, have a combined territory of 2,400 square miles, and of that it will require to create Candler only 361. This is no new proposition —we have been agitating the matter for nine years—and this year, we get it!"

The friends of A. O. Bialock, of Fayette County, more generally known as "Bud," are congratulating him on being named Collector of Internal Revenue for Georgia, notwithstanding the fact that the tip long ago came straight from Washington that he was to win the plum.

There hardly is a man in Georgia better known than Bialock, and few that have more friends. He has served in the Legislature, in both the House and the Senate, time and again and never has been defeated for office.

Mr. Bialock expects to take his office about the first day of July.

Peace reigns again over Banks' mill pond at Milltown, and its environs, the cases against a number of citizens charged with fishing in the pond without consent of the owner, having been nol-prossed in the city court at Nashville.

An agreement was reached between R. T. Berryhill, lessee of the Banks' property and each of the defendants, which was satisfactory to the court and Game Warden Mercer, with the result that Judge Christian dismissed the prosecutions.

The cases attracted much attention in the State, by reason of the newspaper interviews given out by Warden Mercer and his Deputy Boisclair, and the severe criticism of these officials by the people at Milltown. It is understood that in future people who want to fish in the pond will obtain permission from Mr. Berryhill or some of the other owners of land covered by the pond, and that Mr. Berryhill recognize permits given by other land owners.

This is about the old status of affairs, but it is not believed there will be any further trouble.

Governor Brown's final message to the Legislature is about shaped now, and will deal more or less exhaustively with many problems, solved and unsolved, coming to his attention during the term of office about to be wound up.

The Governor's message has not yet been reduced to presentatable shape, however, for it is fashioned after a manner wonderful in the extreme and Brownesque to the limit. It is written out almost entirely on the backs of used envelopes, and is entirely in pencil. The writing is so small and fine, as almost to be illegible to the naked eye, but every single letter and every group is finished as completely as if five times the space were taken up in the writing.

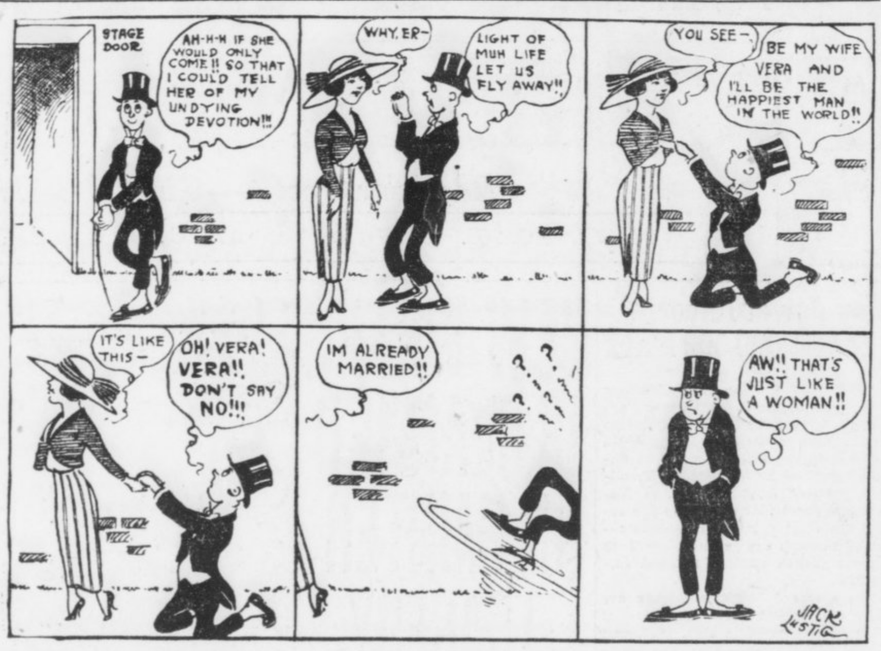
Governor Brown writes an amazingly plain and clear hand, but as amazingly plain and clear as it is, it is even more amazingly small. To the bottom of the document, however, he attaches a signature elaborate and imposing in the extreme. Those who have sen it never forget it.

Governor Brown's relations to the incoming administration are very cordial, and there will be nothing by way of conflict in his farewell message and the initial message of Governor Slaton, which will follow in a few days later.

Colonel Charles R. Pendleton, of The Macon Telegraph, nestor of Georgia journalism and powerful political factor in the State, is a pronounced baseball "fan."

Visitors to Macon nowadays will do well to go to The Telegraph office either early in the morning or very late in the afternoon if they wish to catch the Colonel on the job. Otherwise he is sure to be out at the ball park watching the game.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN



'CRADLE-ROCKING' CHURCH FEATURE

Aged Member of Buckhead Congregation to Lull Baby to Sleep on Children's Day.

Mrs. Dorothy Strickland, one of the prominent members of the Buckhead Baptist Church, will celebrate her eightieth birthday Sunday morning by rocking the youngest baby in the Buckhead Sunday school in an old box cradle, 86 years old, in which the Rev. Edward H. Peacock, a pastor of the church, was lulled to sleep when he was a baby.

The rocking of the youngest baby in the oldest cradle will be one of the interesting incidents of the celebration of children's day at the Buckhead church.

The entire morning service at the church will be given over to the celebration and the organizing of a cradle roll, on which the child rocked in the old cradle by Mrs. Strickland will be given the place of honor.

An elaborate program has been arranged for the morning. At 10 o'clock a number of children in the primary department will graduate, with Mrs. W. B. Wood in charge of the exercises. At 11 o'clock Miss Eva Rary will give a recitation, "A Woman's Fidelity," and the services will close with an address by A. M. Smith, superintendent of the primary department of the Tabernacle Sunday school.

A special song service by the Buckhead Chorus, under the direction of T. W. Torrant, will feature the evening services. At 8 o'clock all the members will enter into a covenant service, led by the Rev. Mr. Peacock. The Lord's Supper will be celebrated and the first baptizing to be in the new church will be conducted by the pastor.

BARNES LODGE HAS BEST DEGREE TEAM

Atlanta Odd Fellows Win Prize at Savannah Over Great Number of Competitors.

Barnes Lodge, No. 55, I. O. O. F., of Atlanta, made a clean sweep in the degree work at the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Georgia in Savannah, making a total of 95 points and winning first prize.

For the past two or three years Barnes Lodge has had a degree team that has attracted the attention of Odd Fellows throughout the city by the splendid effect with which it put on the third degree, and when it was announced that this degree would be put on in Savannah it was conceded by those who had witnessed the work of Barnes degree team that this lodge would prove a winner. This opinion was not prevalent in other lodges throughout the State, however, and many teams were entered.

Interest was great though almost an entire night was consumed in putting on the degree by the different lodges, a large crowd of Odd Fellows remained. When Barnes degree team finished there was an ovation and not a doubt remained in the minds of those present that this team would win first prize.

Much of the credit for the victory is due to H. C. Hall, captain of the degree team, who drilled his men in the floor work and was right on the job from the beginning to the end. The team was as follows:

Captain, H. C. Hall; past grand, E. Reese; noble grand, E. L. Barnes; vice grand, C. J. Jamison; chaplain, Ernest W. Brown; warden, T. C. Perkins; conductor, J. A. Alleyne; right supporter to noble grand, E. H. Hood; left supporter to noble grand, O. H. Sims; right supporter to vice grand, J. I. Ketchum; left supporter to vice grand, Gordon Mitchell; right scene supporter, T. J. Buchanan; left scene supporter, W. E. Clarke; inside guardian, H. C. Hall; candidate, Wade P. Harding.

The membership in the State, as reported to the Grand Lodge, was more than 30,000.

TRAITOR CHARGE STIRS ANDREW CARNEGIE

"Answer Not a Fool According to Her Folly," Laird's Retart to Miss Troy.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 7.—"Answer not a fool according to her folly," said Andrew Carnegie, commenting on Miss Scott Troy's charge that he is a traitor to the United States and is trying to annex it to the British Empire.

"Such a statement is absurd and beneath contempt," he cried, throwing both hands in the air in a gesture of disgust.

The Laird was at the Coburg waiting for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lloyd George, to take him to luncheon. He was absorbed in the newspapers that had just reached his desk. A cartoon clipped from one of them, depicted him in ethereal costume with wings of an angel and muttering the word "peace," stood on the mantelpiece.

"I see the President has appointed Mr. Metcalfe to be Governor of Panama," said Mr. Carnegie, "although Colonel Goethals was supposed to be the choice of every one. They say it has caused a sensation, but may not the explanation be that the Colonel prefers to stay in his present position. He is a man of rare good common sense.

"Hullo! Waldo is in trouble," exclaimed the Laird turning to another news item. "Well, I believe those who accuse him will get the worst of it. There is one great fault with our American public life—it is so easy to accuse public officials. Why not look for the best that is in them? We don't give a man half a chance.

"I am sorry to see that Alfred Noyes, the poet, has suffered a breakdown. Poets are rare plants and need constant protection and attention. They are assets to the world."

Regarding the financial outlook, Mr. Carnegie said:

"Everything is prosperous. Conditions are good and happy times are in store for us. All is well with the Republic."

Mr. Carnegie leaves for Scotland Friday night. Later he will go to Berlin to meet the Kaiser.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Wild West Here Monday.

The return of the Cody-Lillie Alliance to Atlanta with Buffalo Bill out of the saddle, but in a business role, still acting as guide, shows a managerial confidence in the inherent merits of the exhibition and reliance on its rearranged program and added innovations to meet the public's requirements. Pawnee Bill will be in the saddle as arenic director. There will be two performances of the show Monday at Brisbine Park, out Cooper Street. Also a street parade Monday morning.

The original Cody exhibition of frontier life in the West has been noted for its speedy succession of scenes, incidents and adherence to realism, the same style being adopted by its ally, the Far East. Every season something new was presented, appropriate to its themes and the return this season, after a three years' absence, with a program rearranged by R. H. Burnside, whose standing as a capable producer of the spectacular assures a presentation of the two subjects in an effective manner, with a wealth of material and people from the Orient and our own West. A novelty will be Miss Wentworth's trained buffalo team, the first to grace the arena.

The wonderful City Life Section of The Sunday American will be better than ever on Sunday. Mutt and Jeff, and Powers, the great cartoonist, with dozens of other fun-makers, will have exclusive features.

Two Millions for Schools Urged at Boys' and Girls' Commencemt

Some of the students who figured in the annual commencement exerciss of the Boys' and Girls' High Schools last night. Above, from left to right, J. E. Coleman, J. W. Welch, E. C. Lyman and L. D. Wallace, English commercial seniors. Below—J. A. Stanfield, valedictorian.

Head of Board of Education Asserts City Is Able to Raise Needed Funds.

The movement for new high schools gained impetus Saturday when public-spirited citizens turned with interest toward the plan as advocated by Colonel Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, in his two addresses at the graduation exercises of the Boys' and Girls' High Schools, in which he urged a $5,000,000 bond issue by the city of Atlanta, $2,000,000 for the express purpose of building high schools.

There is not an adequate high school in the entire city of Atlanta. It's up to the people, and time City Councilmen are urged to wake up and do their duty. Atlanta has a credit upon which any city government could borrow $5,000,000, declared Colonel Daley, president of the Board of Education, Friday night when he presented high school diplomas to 64 young Americans.

"The current revenue from taxation," said Colonel Daley, "is not sufficient to care for the maintenance of the high schools, and it's not sufficient to take care of the current expense of the other important departments.

Asks $2,000,000 for Schools.

"Atlanta citizens should see that city officials work for a $5,000,000 bond issue, and of that amount, as president of eht Board of Education, I want to ask for $2,000,000 for the purpose of erecting adequate and abundant plants for high school students. The remainder of the money from such a bond issue should go to the other departments. We need additional grammar schools and many improvements. All this is because Atlanta is growing so rapidly, and yet people who are not in constant touch with these matters are prone to disregard them."

The graduating exercises of the Boys' High School in the Grand Opera House were more than ordinarily impressive, and members of the faculty said they indicated that young men are thinking deeply and are taking an interest in matters which ten years ago the average high school graduate had absolutely no conception of.

"The growth and development of the nation is characterized in Theodore Roosevelt's advocacy of the strenous life," declared Bascom H. Torrance in his valedictory. "But already has a reaction set in. There is now a demand for intellectual activity and development. This intellectual activity is characterized in Woodrow Wilson's policy, which has impressed upon the demagogues RESTRAINT.

Conservation His Policy.

"Conservation of careful, thoughtful and helpful actions is President Wilson's ideal. His policy is applicable to every question which requires foresight and thought, regardless of political objects or interests.

"Conditions to-day are greater than ever beofre. From now on will justice and moderation supplant knavery and intrigue."

"With modern cynicism obliterated will come the great question, the human philosophy of life."

The Grand Opera House was packed. In the balcony sat High School boys, underclassmen, each thinking about the day when he should graduate. In the boxes sat members of the Boad of Education and their families. Throughout the crowded house sat proud fathers and mothers whose interest centered in just one of the 64 boys on the stage.

After a fitting prayer by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Superintendent of Public Schools W. M. Slaton announced that, owing to a change in the course of the Technological High School, which had been extended to a four-year course, there would be no graduates from that school this year as in former years.

Student Orators Please.

Mr. Slaton then introduced Sam Eplam, of the commercial department, who delivered an oration on "The Gospel of Service." Eplam's oration was interesting and breezy and struck a true note. The speaker advocated honesty and uprightness, fairness and equality in all business transactions. Joseph H. Stanfiel was valedictorian and acquitted himself well.

"Universal Peace" was the subject discussed in the oration of Roy W. Manning, an eloquent plea for the abolition of war.

An oration by Ernest H. Lowenthal on "Woman's Suffrage," aroused genuine interest. The way he championed woman's rights certainly put him in strong with the audience, for he was given round after round of applause.

The B. H. S. and T. H. S. Orchestra rendered a number of choice selections. The boys played excellently and were encored time and again.

Presentation of diplomas was then made by Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education. Each boy was applauded as he received his sheepskin.

Medals and Scholarships.

The announcement and delivery of medals and scholarships was made by Hon. Edgar Watkins. The winners of these prizes had been kept secret.

The Holzman medal, given by A. Holzman, the jeweler, for excellence in scholarship, was awarded to Bascom H. Torrance.

Medal given by the Atlanta Chapter, Daughers of 1812, for improvement in physical culture was awarded to Edwin P. Lochridge.

The following scholarships were awarded:

GERMANY PLAYS FOR TRADE OF ARGENTINA

Kaiser Extends Lavish Entertainment to Commission From South American Country.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 7.—Germany's far-reaching designs of conquering Argentina as a market for German products are at the bottom of the almost unprecedentedly lavish entertainment which the Kaiser and the German Government have been extending to the special Argentine commission which has been in Berlin for the past week. The commission which is headed by Senator Salas, left Berlin to-night for Hamburg, whence it will proceed to Essen, before going to England next week.

Given Royal Welcome.

No foreign delegation, even with a monarch at its head, has ever been the recipient of more bounteous hospitality in Berlin. The members of the commission occupied the royal suites at the Hotel Adlon as personal guests of the Kaiser. In addition to the hotel staff the Kaiser placed an army of Court attendants at its beck and call. The Commissioners had luncheon and dinner with the Kaiser and attended a gala opera arranged in their honor. They survived a prodigious banquet at the Hotel Kaiserhof, witnessed a review of the Guards at the Tempelhof Field from Court automobiles, and had high officers of the German Army and Navy detailed as their personal adjutants. Boards of Trade, Associations of Commerce, Parliamentary bodies, and merchants and manufacturers vied with one another in doing the Argentinians honor.

Tried to Outdo England.

The Kaiser's intention apparently was to convince them that German hospitality, like German goods, is the finest in the world. The Emperor, whose ability as a stage manager and business getter is second to none, seems to have figured that London and the Londoners would be far too much preoccupied next week with their "season" to waste time and energy upon the South American visitors. The English, at any rate, have their work cut out if they care to make any impression upon the commission to measure up to the high standard of entertainment provided by Berlin.

Germany now holds second place in Argentina's foreign trade, being outstripped only by England. It is proud of having crowded out the United States from second place and says it will not rest content until it has pushed Great Britain from the lead.

RETAIL PRICE OF BEEF IS GOING UP

Packers Notify Butchers That Advances Go Into Effect in Few Days.

CHICAGO, June 7.—All retail butchers in this city have been notified by the Chicago packers that the price of beef would be advanced from one-half to one cent a pound in the next few days. The price of meat is to be increased correspondingly in New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

John T. Russell, President of the United Master Butchers' Association of America, confirming the announcement, said the proposed advance would be communicated to the retail butchers throughout the country, and within a short time the consumers everywhere would feel the effects of the increase. The scarcity of cattle and the action of commission merchants in putting up the price of beef on the hoof are said to be responsible for the move on the part of the packers.

"The commission dealer," said Mr. Russell, "is trying to stand in with the farmer. The retail butcher has been endeavoring to keep the price of meat down. It is to his interest to do this, because he deals with the consumer, while the commission man, who has no connection with the consumer, is looking out for his customers.

"During the last year the meat sales have fallen off from 35 to 40 per cent. This is due to the fact that people will not stand the high prices for which the middleman is responsible."

So Fair He Couldn't Resist Kissing Her

NEW YORK, June 7.—Traffic in Ann Street was blocked by a crowd surrounding a man and a young woman.

"He kissed me," declared Miss Gertrude Puzio. "He kissed me all the time we were coming down five floors in the crowded elevator. Then he followed me out here and kissed me again."

The man, William Donovan, confessed.

"She was dressed all in white," he said, "and she was so darned pretty I just couldn't help kissing her."

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Watching Other Folks at Work.

"Why is it," remarked a well-known building contractor this morning, "that so many people like to look at other folks at work? Right now I am erecting half a dozen houses, each in a different part of town, and every day I visit all of them. I notice there is always one or two men hanging around watching my workmen putting up the structure.

"Downtown in the business section there are more people to look on, and if you want to see some interested men, go 'round to where one of those big office buildings is being put up. You'll find a crowd there watching and watching and watching all day long. I was over to the new Healey Building yesterday, and I suppose I saw 50 or 100 men, old and young, standing about watching the workmen on that structure.

"And a queer thing about it is that some of the people never seem to have any other occupation than to watch others. Several will be found watching one place all day long. They'll slip off for lunch somewhere, but they'll be back in a hurry as if afraid the men will put in a couple of bolts that they won't see. It is a peculiar curiosity, but a lot of folks in Atlanta are afflicted with it."

Risking a Splinter After Hard Work.

Six feet from the top of Jack Prince's Motordrome cleats were nailed from start to finish of the almost perpendicular quarter-mile track. These cleats provided a precarious, inch-wide footing for the sign painters. Thursday a coal black negro of forbidding mien shed his shoes and, with his big toes protruding from purple socks, began, with a crowbar, prying the strips off to leave the track clear.

Clinging with his left hand and his stockinged feet, he worked his way along cautiously, wielding a "jimmy" with his right hand as the cleats clattered to the arena below, one by one.

It took him two hours to reach the last cleat. He pried one end of this loose and edged his way along to the far end.

Then he paused. He studied the situation a moment and shouted:

"Help! Help on this!"

"What's the trouble?" asked an attendant.

"What I wants to know, boss, is how does I git down from here?"

"Run down."

"Boss, they ain't nobody but a fly can run down this here fence."

"Slide, then."

"I'll git me a splinter."

"There's a ladder."

The ladder was almost directly opposite, an eighth of a mile away, and no way to reach it except "hand over hand."

The darky sighed.

"Guess I'll chance the splinter," he concluded, and, to the cheers of a crowd of lockers-on, slide he did.

Two Sides to a Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THOUGH love and marriage are the dreams of every girl, happiness is not dependent on either, and often one is happiest without them.

There are two sides to the question. The girl who is looking anxiously for the coming of a lover, and who grows apprehensive when he is delayed, sees only one side. She takes no account of the look of care, unhappiness and discontent on the face of the wife. She does not see—she refuses to see—that matrimony does not always bring returns commensurate for the price one must pay.

Perhaps it may lessen the discontent of the girl who has no lover to compare the life of the woman who never marries with that of the wife.

The girl has time and opportunity for cultivating every talent with which she is endowed. The only talents the wife is given opportunity to develop are those of economy and patience.

The happiness of a nation depends on its power to dream, and this being true of the whole, is true of the part. The girl dreams of an ideal lover, and the dream is never shattered; a wife has no illusions left.

A Wife's Work.

A girl has many hours in which she has nothing disagreeable to do; but the wife finds she has more to do for the rest of her life than any man could stand up under.

The uncertainty of the girl centers around WHO is to be her husband, and is not unpleasant. The uncertainty of wifehood is WHERE he is, and is a tragedy.

The criticisms a girl receives in her home are loving and kindly; those the wife receives are less kindly, and her rewards for effort to please are less sure.

The girl walks as if she owned the earth. Ten years after she has married she will walk as if she were carrying it on her shoulders.

"If I don't marry," a girl will say, "I will be an old maid." * * * "If I hadn't married and been tied down by the cares of a husband and home," she will say some years later, "I might have won fame and fortune by developing my talents."

There is loneliness in spinsterhood, but there is also PEACE.

The girl who marries sentences herself to self-sacrifice and hard labor for life. Her only reward is Love, and could you, my dear little girl with the discontented look because your lover has not come, count up the number of wives you know who are systematically and regularly cheated out of their payments?

The girl who never marries is the one to whom opportunity is given for being the blessing and mainstay of her parents' home. There is no avenue for developing her character which matrimony grants and spinsterhood denies.

Two Sides.

There are two sides to the question One can be a happy spinster; one may be a happy wife.

The former is a question of will. The latter depends on a string of ifs long enough to encircle the globe.

I do not want my girls to care less for love, but I do want them to value more highly the greater privileges, the fewer burdens, the lighter loads, the broader opportunities and the surer peace that await the woman to whom love and marriage never come.

I want them, for their own sake, to look with less panic-stricken fright and greater sanity upon the spinster's side of the question.

Diplomatic.

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never, marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take her and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's old friend, the boarding house keeper also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what anybody thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Bah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

HAL COFFMAN.

Do You Know That—

An 18-year-old boy was injured in a game of football two years ago, but after two days returned to work feeling quite well again. Last summer he had to be examined for insurance purposes, and the doctor found there was something wrong with his neck, but did not discover exactly what was the matter. A short time ago, however, the boy's neck began to give him such pain that he was made to undergo an examination under X-rays. Then the astounded physicians discovered that it was broken. They can not realize how he has lived all this time. It is a question whether a cure can be effected.

The Farmers' Association of the department of Loir-et-Cher has held at Blois a competition for agricultural workers who have brought up the largest families, all the members of which have remained "on the land." Eleven grandmothers—the youngest aged 45 and the oldest 80—presented themselves, surrounded by 95 children and 138 grandchildren. The first prize went to a woman who has had 13 children, of whom 9 are living, and 20 grandchildren.

The Czar is, among European monarchs, the one who makes the least use of the motor car. His imperial majesty, in former days, registered a vow that he would never enter such a conveyance, and although necessity occasionally compels him to break it his dislike for motors is unabated. When King Edward first took a car with him to Denmark on joining the big family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the Czar nor his grandfather, King Christian IX, could be persuaded to set foot in it.

The Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, is shortly going to be superseded by an even more splendid vessel. It is said that the new yacht was partly designed by the Kaiser himself, who adds a knowledge of shipbuilding to his varied stock of information. The vessel will take two years to build, and is not expected to be ready before the spring of 1915.

Why He Couldn't.

N American philanthropist made a business of getting jobs for men just out of jail. A notorious cracksman came to him with a letter of introduction from the clergyman.

"I've the very thing you want," said the philanthropist when the jailbird had dilated adequately and with pride upon his exploits. "I'll see my friend Briggs. Come around to-morrow morning."

The cracksman, encouraged by the prospect of honest work, appeared promptly at the appointed hour.

"You're to go to work at once," said the philanthropist. "My friend Briggs is producing a melodrama. In it is a scene where a burglar enters the room and cracks a safe. It will only take you a few minutes, and you don't have to speak a word—just execute the job with the minute detail that will make it look real. Your salary will be $50 a week."

The convict dolefully shook his head.

"Sorry I can't take the job, boss."

"Can't take it? Why, it's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it, boss. I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage."

Brother and Sister

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

START out a girl with a dollar, and she will come home wearing it. Start out a boy with one, and he will come home eating it.

A girl's interest in a baby is the same as that her brother manifests in a dog.

About all a girl does for her little brother is to scream about his dirty hands every time she looks at him, though it is as natural for a boy to have dirty hands as it is for a cat to have fits.

The quarrels between brothers are over the larger share in something to eat, but when sisters quarrel, it is because one wore something belonging to the other.

It may indicate deep thought when a girl scratches her head, but they don't look at it that way when it is a boy.

Here of late a girl is permitted to read in the parlor fiction worse than that her brother used to peruse surreptitiously in the barn aloft.

It has always been the custom to compare a boy with a weed and a girl with a flower.

A girl doesn't know it, but if someone cut off her hair, put a hundred freckles on her face, and a tan spot on the end of her nose, she would be a duplicate of the younger brother whose looks she so plainly despises.

When brother and sister go to a party together, sister doesn't seem to have any recollection of anything that happened beyond the manner in which her brother misbehaved.

There never was a girl who couldn't give the impression when away from her home that her parents are wealthy, but a boy can't do it.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome in the parlor of a neighbor before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

When a girl is 16 she has the right of way all over the road. Her mother and father promptly side-track when they see her coming, the only one daring a collision being her younger brother. And he long shows the effects of it!

Individual pies, strawberry shortcakes etc., appeal to a girl, but never to a boy, because they give him no opportunity to get a larger piece than his sister. There is no element of chance in the individual form of pastry.

After sister has expressed her appreciation, brother's thanks sound as cold as yesterday morning's pancakes.

Rev. Dr. John E. White has a splendid article in The Sunday American on "The House of Our Fathers." Everybody should read it.

Very Important.

The glib-tongued agent was trying to persuade Mr. Wipedunks to buy a dictionary.

"Its the latest thing out," he said; "up to date in every particular, contains more words than any other, has all the technical and scientific terms that have come into use in the last ten years, and there isn't a feature missing that goes to make a first-class work of the kind."

"Let me look at it a minute," said Mr. Wipedunks.

The agent handed it over, and Mr. W. inspected it briefly. Then he handed it back.

"Young man," he said, "you can't work that book on me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It hain't got no copious index."

THE COMING OF DAY.

OVER the edge of the sleeping world,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Past the gloaming where shadow is furled,
Into the chasm of darkness whirled,
Forth from the hosts of blackness hurled—
Over the purple hills;
Out of the land of the sun-rise glow,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Into the meadows of shimmering green,
Over the brooklets of glimmering sheen,
Comes glowing morning, the summer queen—
Aflame are the purple hills.

LIFE IS WORTH IT.

Life is worth it—
Worth the turmoil and the effort and the pain,
Worth the hurt and disappointment
So you make but steady gain;
If the failure of the morning
Give you strength to struggle on,
If the evening mark some progress
From the dimness of the dawn—
Life is worth it.

Life is worth it—
Though you question as the years go slipping by,
"Have I failed in every project?
Have I set my mark too high?
Does the failure of this morning
Mean I never shall attain?
Nay! The power to strive transmuteth
Every failure into gain—
Life is worth it!

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young man from the mountains, who says that he never played on any baseball club and that he has never seen a game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta club, to give him a try-out. At batting and fielding practice he creates a sensation. The Atlanta Georgian prints a whole page of snapshots of him and his fame spreads throughout the country.

In the meantime he has become very friendly with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a wealthy timber speculator. Forrest Cain, an admirer of Mildred, becomes jealous of Gordon and attempts to play him a trick and gets soundly thrashed. Gordon owns a large tract of land in the mountains, between two tracts owned by Mr. Deery and Cain, who need Gordon's property to carry out a land scheme.

The Boston Nationals and other big league clubs stop at Atlanta for exhibition games on their way North and Gordon Kelly becomes the baseball sensation of the hour. Scouts who come to see him work try to get him away from the Atlanta club, and then send wild telegrams to their owners, imploring them to come to Atlanta by the first train and do their own bidding. Nearly all the big league magnates come, and President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, announces that, while disposed to reject all offers, his club felt the necessity of living up to the obligations of organized baseball and would sell Gordon Kelly's release to the best advantage of the stockholders of the club. In a practice game with a big league team, Kelly covers himself with glory. He is injured and Mildred rushes on the field to his aid. The newspapers are filled with accounts of the affair.

Now go on with the story.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Readers of newspapers are aware, without being told, that in reports of any great public gathering, any extraordinary crime, any $100,000 diamond robbery, any uncommon disaster, it is the newspapers that set the pace in gathering and distributing the news of the event. This fact is lost sight of in this narrative. In this particular case the newspapers told all about Gordon Kelly, but later certain things happened to him that the newspapers were never able to learn, and they will be told in the course of this story for the first time.

The news of Gordon Kelly's great feat in his last game in Atlanta created a profound impression throughout the baseball world. There was no end of praise for the player and of sympathy for the Boston club, which, through the accident, had lost the services for many weeks at least of a man for whom it had just paid that unheard-of price of $50,000. The championship races in the two big leagues had started and were well under way. In the American League, of which Gordon Kelly was now a member, although not able to play, the Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland clubs had taken the lead, while the New York and Boston clubs were off to a bad start. Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, although himself limping around with an injured leg, bemoaned his hard luck.

"I have the best outfield in the country as it is," he said, "but I could use that Gordon Kelly just the same. Gee, I wish he would hurry up and get well before my club is out of the running."

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, cursed his fate. "If we had only landed Gordon Kelly and if he hadn't broken his leg, we would be right up there fighting with the leaders," he declared.

The word IF is 90 per cent of baseball, it may be remarked.

Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, said:

"Comiskey ought to have landed Gordon Kelly. All I need is that fellow, besides Big Ed Walsh, to win the American League pennant."

On May 10 the championship season in the two big leagues was a month old and Gordon Kelly was still in the hospital at Atlanta. Mildred Deery was still "out of town." That was all the information the patient could get from the Deery residence. The Atlanta club made a short trip to other cities and returned to home grounds for a brief stay. Bill Smith, Long Tom Morrissey and other members of the team paid daily visits to see their former comrade, who got around the hospital grounds on crutches, but who could not be induced to go out to the park and see a ball game.

Something on His Mind.

"Something's on his mind," declared Long Tom in the club house one day. "He doesn't seem to want to talk about baseball much. And it would not surprise me," he added, emphatically, "to learn that that girl that rushed out on the field and took his head in her lap is what's troubling him. Well, I don't know as I can blame him, at that. She was some peacherino, you hear me!"

"He'll get over it," remarked Bill Smith, sagely. "As soon as his leg gets strong enough for him to run the bases you'll see him up at the plate with that bat of his and he'll forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey had nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and, true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred now knew he was a ball player, he argued to himself. She did not disapprove, else why did she rush on the ball field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelly asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things, and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the time being, sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the $50,000 ball player, became an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She complained of a headache and retired at once to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had wellnigh exhausted her, she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole downstairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove, nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7:30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife.

Under ordinary conditions Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the astounding escapade of his daughter. Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery, at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked, in conclusion.

Not So Shocked.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred liked the young man. Far better than her husband, she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I will speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll——." He slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have it. I was planning to go up in the mountains with a surveyor to-morrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has probably moved in by this time. Instead of going to-morrow, I will leave by the noon train to-day and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something, as I want to see her."

Deery turned to leave the room, but his wife called him back.

Mildred Approves Plan.

"Wait a minute, please, dear. Mildred isn't a child, and you can not force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure, and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains, and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two, and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains, and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Car Full of Supplies.

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened), ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days), and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes; drove to his home, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of kissed his wife, sped to the depot, the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his vast project, Deery had erected a large cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the main road and close to a roaring brook that, a mile or two beyond, ran into Pew Creek, which flowed down past the settlement. It was a beautiful spot, and Mildred cried her delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself dashed up to the bungalow.

The superintendent's name was Shephard, and his family consisted of his wife and boy, a lad of about fifteen years. Mildred promptly became good friends with them all and declared she never wanted to go back to Atlanta again, whereat her father chuckled in his sleeve.

"If you like hunting and fishing, Miss Deery, I can show you a lot of fun up here," said Elmer Shephard, the lad of fifteen years.

"I should enjoy it immensely, Elmer," replied Mildred, "but you will have to teach me."

The boxes and barrels of things Deery had bought in Atlanta arrived on teams before sundown, and Mildred expressed her surprise at the bulk of it. Her father hastened to explain.

"Well, you see," he said, "you will like this place so well that you will be running up every little while from Atlanta, so I just thought I would put in a supply of things to make you comfortable. If there is anything you don't see that you want let me know, and I will have it sent up from the city."

So Mildred settled down to live the joys of mountain life. But in these Georgia mountains, in this wild and solitary country, she came upon an adventure that completely changed the course of her existence.

To Be Continued Monday.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THERE was a queer old bug up to our house last night," said the Manicure Lady, "It seems that he and father used to go to school together, and the old gent ran into him by accident yesterday afternoon. He didn't know that his school chum had changed so since boyhood, and before he got wise to the change he asked his friend up to the house.

"I was kind of surprised at the general appearance of Pa's friend. He was one of them tall, slim college professor looking kind of chaps, and when anybody spoke to him he gave a little jump sideways like a scared kitten. His manner was that timid and gentle you would have swore, George, that his wife had a dozen kind of Indian signs on him. It seemed kind of funny to the folks to have Pa chumming around with such like, because goodness knows most of his intimate friends are big necked and copper lined enough to make their way in this speedy world of ours. After knowing Bull McCabe and Marty Regan and the rest of Pa's husky comrades, it seemed funny to entertain a shrinking violet like this gent of which I am speaking of."

A Long Story Teller.

"Well, come to the point," said the Head Barber, "and don't be puttering around all the forenoon. You are worse than one of those long story-tellers."

"I wouldn't converse with you at all, ever, if I didn't have to, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "Most of the time you are awful uninteresting anyway. But I might as well finish this yarn, anyhow.

"We was all setting around the parlor like we used to when we was kids at a party, all waiting for somebody else to speak first, when the old man that father had brought home spoke up and said something about believing explicitly in the theory of reincarceration."

"That ain't the word," said the Head Barber. "I don't know the word either, but it's something that ends up with the name of a flower—carnation, I think."

Didn't Know the Name.

"If you don't know the name of the theory what made you interrupt me?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "Anyhow, it was something about folks that lived a long time ago living over again. For instance, the old gent said—don't mean father, I mean the other old gent—that he believed he was a soldier in the time when they was having the Wars of the Roses. He said that he fought under the Red Rose, whatever kind of a lodge that was, and I guess he was that dippy he believed it. I could see that father wanted to humor his old school chum, because he said he believed in the same theory and thought the soul could live again in another body. It was all I could do to keep from snickering when father talked like that, because goodness knows he spends a lot more time thinking about pinochle and three-cushion billiards than he does in thinking about the human soul and what becomes of it after we have kicked in. But he stalled fine, and I guess the old school friend went away thinking that father was on the level about reincarceration."

"I'd like to know what I would be if I was born again," said George.

"I know what you would be," replied the Manicure Lady. "You would just be another barber."

Modesty the Best Policy.

IT was the early part of the New Year, and little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a long delayed visit to Uncle Silas.

Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of the said uncle, and asked:

"Uncle dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining room table a dime, a half-dollar and a five-dollar note, remarking:

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the dime. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I sha'n't lose it?"

And uncle did.

"Sisters Under Their Skins"

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says

For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins.---Rudyard Kipling.

THIS I saw a week or so ago when the country was showing off its fat babies. Across the car from me, sitting with the sweet sunshine streaming in on their two blond heads—coiffed, oh, so differently, was a large plain lady with her chapeau slightly on one ear and a fat bundle snuggled beside her, and a yard or so down the red plush seat an aristocratic woman in silk and brocade, a French hat above her pretty eyebrows, white gloves, rose point lace at her throat and wrists, perfectly groomed! And the whole middle of each was hidden by the newspapers they held. I had watched. They had climbed on at the same street, had settled their silken and cotton skirts, and their four eyes had homed straight to the "pic" of a fat baby on the front page. They had both flipped over to the second page, where more babies were promised to "continue"—and there they stuck—the two of them—the same tilt to their two heads, the same unconscious gentle smile on their two faces. Under the lace-smothered breast of the "colonel's lady" rose the same heart springs that welled beneath the cotton and pearl buttons of "Judy O'Grady" "sisters under their skins."

THE MAN WHO IS TIRED OF HIS WIFE

"Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," Says an Old Proverb, and This Is Especially Apt in This Situation.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A MAN writes me in great distress. He says that he has been married about fifteen years, and that suddenly a great weariness of spirit has come upon him. His wife is good and kind, an excellent housekeeper, a thrifty manager, and her one object in life is to please him and make him happy, but while he recognizes her virtues and admires them, they leave him cold and unmoved.

In a word, he's tired of his wife. She bores him to death. Just her presence is irksome to him, and when she goes with him on any sort of a pleasure jaunt it takes all the fun out of the occasion.

This man is no gay Lothario. He is a good, honest, domestic man, who is honestly alarmed at the state of affairs, and he wants to know what he can do to recover the interest he once had in his wife, and the thrills that went through his veins like fire at the touch of her hand.

There is only one remedy for such cases, and that is absence. Only people who have neither nerves, temperament nor imagination can stand the horrible monotony of seeing the same face opposite them at three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, and ditto dinners, to say nothing of having the same form across the drop light for an equal number of evenings a year, and having to listen to the same old stories.

The most beautiful people in the world grow homely to our eyes if we see them too often. The wittiest conversationalists grow tedious if we have a surfeit of their society. The virtues of even an angel pall upon us if they are constantly before us.

Reasons Why.

Probably Mr. Milo thought his Venus too fat or too thin, and asked her why she didn't get another make of corset. Doubtless there were times, before she got a divorce, when Mrs. Caruso said to herself that if Enrico warbled another warble she would scream, and it isn't on record that the immediate family of any of our saints and martyrs ever handed in any testimonial to show what they thought on the subject of the canonization of their husbands or wives.

Why people who can not eat thirty quails in thirty days; who never want to see the same play twice, or read a book a second time; who tire of their clothes before they are half worn out, and spend their lives hunting for new sights, new emotions, new diversions, new places to go, should ever be foolish enough to imagine that they could endure the undiluted society of one person, year in and year out, passes comprehension.

There are millions of husbands and wives who have had an overdose of each other's society and are suffering from it, and they are so stupid they don't realize what ails them, nor how simple the remedy for it is. Yet the symptoms are unmistakable.

When a man begins to dread the thought of going home of an evening, and to wonder what made him idiot enough to get married and to pick out Sally, of all women in the world, for a wife; when he begins to notice that Sally has gone off in looks and is getting a triple chin, and to have a feather bed figure; when his eyes focus on the little mole on Sally's cheek instead of the cute way her hair curls around the back of her neck; and when he commences wondering if all women talk as much drivel and use as many words in telling nothing as Sally Jones—then it's time for the man to pack his grip and hike away from home and Sally.

He hasn't really fallen out of love with her, as he thinks he has. He's just tired of her for the time being. He doesn't really pine to be a gay rover, as he imagines he does. He just wants to ease the pressure of the yoke of matrimony for a little, and to him—and to his wife—a ticket to Chicago, or San Francisco, or Bird Center, or anywhere away from home, is a lifeline that saves them both from destruction.

And it's exactly the same way with women. Of course the theory is that women have such an abnormal talent for loving that a wife never gets enough of her husband's society, but is a femael Oliver Twist, always asking for more. Don't you believe it. Women are fickle creatures, and the best wife in the world can get so sick and weary of a model husband that she is ready to die of sheer ennui.

The Woman's Side.

Every now and then a woman gets so that she can see nothing but faults in her husband. Everything he does and everything he doesn't do irritates her, and she, too, gets to wondering what on earth the fool-killer was doing on the day that she tied up with the miserable little shrimp that she did, instead of marrying some romantic and godlike creature that she didn't marry. She thinks that she is suffering from having missed her affinity and being married to a groundling that can't understand her higher nature, but the whole trouble is that she has had too much of her husband's society. All that she needs to effect a complete cure is a month or six weeks' separation.

Of course, being ladies and gentlemen, most of us never admit to our husbands and wives that we are bored. We yawn behind our hands and try to look interested, but in our secret souls all of us know that the surging joy with which we saw our dearly beloved husband or wife start off on a journey, or the rapture that filled our own soul when we got to go off somewhere alone, or with perfect strangers.

And we also know the delight with which we returned home, or welcomed back the wanderer, our whole point of vision changed by a little absence, and the one of whom we had been so tired clothed again in his or her halo.

This is why the summer vacation is such a beneficent institution. We can lay our weariness of our domestic partners on the weather, and get away with a decent excuse. But it isn't the change of climate that does us good. It's the change from the monotony of association, and it sends us back rested and refreshed and romantically in love again.

A True Proverb.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says the old proverb, and this is especially true of husbands and wives. They need to break away every few months just to get a perspective on each other's good qualities and to find out how necessary each is to the other's happiness.

You can overdo matrimony as easily as you can any other good thing, and if there were some way by which we could be married three days a week instead of seven there would be no more divorce.

Queer Vegetable.

A vicar advertised for a servant a short time ago, and a country girl, with a fat, red face, answered the advertisement.

After the vicar had asked a few personal questions, he said:

"You know, we are all vegetarians here, and, of course, we should require you to be one. No meat, you know—simply vegetables."

She dropped her eyes, and for a time seemed deep in thought.

"Well, what do you think?" asked the vicar, after a short time.

"Well, sir," she replied, "it's like this. I don't mind so much about the meat; but before I take the place I should like to know if you—er—call beer a vegetable?"

She was not engaged.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Dick repeated his question, unobservant of its first effect.

"Why didn't you go to Chicago as you had planned?"

"Planned? With whom?" The interrogation came with an abrupt force that cried of new suspicions.

"Why, with Burke." The young man tried to be patient over her density in this time of crisis.

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?" Mary asked. Now the tenseness in her manner got the husband's attention, and he replied with a sudden gravity, apprehensive of he knew not what.

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago." He had caught the contagion of her mood and vague alarm swept him.

"Where?" came the next question, still with that vital insistence.

"In this room."

"Burke was here?" Mary's voice was suddenly cold, very dangerous. "What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

Garson Leaped to the Switch.

The seemingly simple answer appeared the last straw to the girl's burden of frenzied suspicion. Her voice cut fiercely into the quiet of the room, imperious, savage.

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

Something fatally significant in her voice set Garson aleap to the switch, and, in the same second, the blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. The others stood motionless, blinking in the sudden radiance—all save Griggs, who moved stealthily in that same moment, a little nearer the door into the passage, which was nearest to him.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise, seemingly totally irrelevant to this instant of crisis. Yet they rang athrob with an hysterical anxiety.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" With the question she pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

The young man was plainly astonished, disconcerted as well by the obtrusion of a sordid detail into the tragedy of the time.

"Why in the world do you—?" he began, impatiently.

Mary stamped her foot angrily in protest against the delay.

"Tell me—quick!" she commanded. The authority in her voice and manner was not to be gainsaid.

Dick yielded sullenly.

"Oh, two or three hundred dollars, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that!" Mary exclaimed, violently. And now the girl's voice came stinging like a whiplash. In Garson's face, too, was growing fury, for in an instant of illumination he guessd something of the truth. Mary's next question confirmed his raging suspicion.

"How long have you had them, Dick?"

By now the young man himself sensed the fact that something mysteriously baneful lay behind the frantic questioning on this seemingly trivial theme.

"Ever since I can remmber," he replied, promptly.

Mary's voice came then with an intonation that brought enlightenment not only to Garson's shrewd perceptions, but also to the heavier intelligences of Dacey and of Chicago Red.

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently, from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?" So simple were the words of her inquiry, but under them beat something evil, deadly.

The young man laughed contemptuously.

He Came Toward Her.

"I should say not!" he declared indignantly, for he resented the implication against his father's honesty.

"It's a trick! Burke's done it!" Mary's words came with accusing vehemence.

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door into the passage.

Mary's eye caught the movement, and her lips soundlessly framed the name:

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery. He was very dapper in his evening clothes, with his rather handsome, well groomed face set in lines of innocence.

"He's lying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward Dick Gilder. "I tell you, those tapestries are worth a million cold."

Mary's answer was virulent in its sudden burst of hate. For once, the music of her voice was lost in a discordant cry of detestation.

"You stool-pigeon! You did this for Burke!"

Griggs sought still to maintain his air of innocence, and he strove well, since he knew that he fought for his life against those whom he had outraged. As he spoke again, his tones were tremulous with sincerity—perhaps that tremulousness was born chiefly of fear, yet to the ear his words came stoutly enough for truth:

"I swear I didn't! I swear it!"

Mary regarded the protesting man with abhorrence. The perjured wretch shrank before the loathing in her eyes.

"You came to me yesterday," she said, with more of restraint in her voice now, but still with inexorable rancor. "You came to me to explain this plan. And you came from him—from Burke!"

"I swear I was on the level. I was tipped off to the story by a pal," Griggs declared, but at last the assurance was gone out of his voice. He felt the hostility of those about him.

Garson broke in ferociously.

"It's a frame-up!" he said. His tones came in a deadened roar of wrath.

On the instant, aware that further subterfuge could be of no avail, Griggs swaggered defiance.

"And what if it is true?" he drawled, with a resumption of his aristocratic manner, while his eyes swept the group balefully. He plucked the police whistle from his waistcoat pocket, and raised it to his lips.

Then He Trembled.

He moved too slowly. In the same moment of his action, Garson had pulled the pistol from his pocket, had pressed the trigger. There came no spurt of flame. There was no sound—save perhaps a faint clicking noise. But the man with the whistle at his lips suddenly ceased movement, stood absolutely still for the space of a breath. Then he trembled horribly, and in the next instant crashed to the floor, where he lay rigid, dead.

"D—n you—I've got you!" Garson sneered through clenched teeth. His eyes were like balls of fire. There was a frightful grin of triumph twisting his mouth in this minute of punishment.

In the first second of the tragedy, Dick had not understood. Indeed, he was still dazed by the suddenness of it all. But the falling of Griggs before the leveled weapon of the other man, there to lie in that ghastly immobility, made him to understand. He leaped toward Garson—would have wrenched the pistol from the other's grasp. In the struggle, it fell to the floor.

Before either could pick it up, there came an interruption. Even in the stress of this scene, Chicago Red had never relaxed his professional caution. A slight noise had caught his ear; he had stooped, listening. Now he straightened and called his warning.

"Somebody's opening the front door!"

Garson forgot his weapon in this new alarm. He sprang to the octagonal window, even as Dick took possession of the pistol.

"The street's empty! We must jump for it!" His hate was forgotten now in an emotion still deeper, and he turned to Mary. His face was all gentleness again, where just before it had been evil incarnate, aflame with the lust to destroy. "Come on, Mary," he cried.

Already Chicago Red had snapped off the lights of the chandelier, had sprung to the window, thrown open a panel of it, and had vanished into the night, with Dacey at his heels. As Garson would have called out to the girl again in mad anxiety for haste, he was interrupted by Dick.

"She couldn't make it, Garson," he declared, coolly and resolutely. "You go. It'll be all right, you know. I'll take care of her!"

"If she's caught——!" There was an indescribable menace in the forger's half-uttered threat.

"She won't be." The quality of sincerity in Dick's voice was more convincing than any vow might have been.

"If she is, I'll get you; that's all," Garson said gravely, as one stating a simple fact that could not be disputed.

Then he glanced down at the body of the man whom he had done to death.

"And you can tell that to Burke!" he said, viciously, to the dead. "You d——d squealer!" There was a supremely malevolent content in his sneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob The Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters.

Now go on with the story.

To Be Continued Monday.

Not Quite Right.

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "2" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

$10 WORTH OF BALL FOR TWO BITS FRIDAY

By Percy H. Whiting.

TEN dollars' worth of baseball at two bits was the offering at Ponce DeLeon Park Friday afternoon, in a game the Crackers lost to Chattanooga, 7 to 5. The contest took ten innings, two hours and seventeen minutes and a pound of flesh from the wracked frame of Manager Bill Smith.

It was surely a cuckoo little contest.

For eight innings it was an awful affair, a regular boob game as far as the Crackers were concerned. They had made only three hits off Rudy Summers and it looked as though they would never make any more. The score was then five to nothing against the Crackers, for Chappelle was no puzzle to the guys he used to work with and his support was much to the cheese.

* * *

THE last half of the eighth was a memorable session. Joe Agler opened it with a single. Dunn walked—and walked. Rohe, batting to Chappelle, flied out. Long walked. And then came Welchonce, the hero of the previous day's game. All he did this time was to triple but that scored three men and put Summers in a blue funk. Whereupon Alperman arose and lammed the ball to the score board for a home-run—and this tied it up. Five runs in one inning for a tie up! Wow!

* * *

DID you ever notice that when a team comes from behind they come just far enough to tie the score—and then stop there? It happens nine times out of ten. In Friday's game it was obvious that the locals had Summers absolutely on his last legs. With only one out and two dangerous batters in line it seemed as though a little more of the same steam would have put over the winning run.

It's human nature, though, to pull up on even terms and then stop to breathe, believing that the overhauling will be an easy matter later.

* * *

AFTER warming up both Dent and A. Price while the batting rally was in progress Smith stuck in the former. He retired the first two men and then got in an awful mess by letting Flick and King hit. Coyle then grounded to Alperman, who started a double play and pulled the Crackers through that inning.

To the surprise of everybody Elberfeld elected to use Harry Coveleskie to finish out the game for him. Considering the Pole's uncertainty and the ease with which he is usually rattled this was a brave choice. Hardly another manager in the world would have taken that chance.

But Coveleskie stood the gaff.

Every Cracker went up to the plate with strict orders to wait him out. It started all right too, when Bisland walked. Agler sacrificed him along but there he croaked. Dunn waited like a statue but Coveleskie had the plate located and Joe finally popped to Coveleskie. Dent had a lovely opportunity but was struck out.

In the first of the tenth Dent got his. Elberfeld opened with a single. Elston sacrificed. Johnson singled. Street fractured the tie by going out Smith to Agler, so artistically that Elberfeld tallied. Williams was walked. And then came the superlative surprise for Coveleskie hit a clean single, scoring Johnson and closing out the Crackers.

In the last half of the tenth Welchonce kept up his great pinch hitting with a timely single but Coveleskie was the master of the rest of them and deserved a victory.

This was the first game the Lookouts have won out of eight attempts against the Crackers.

Happy Hooligan starts to break into society—A fine feature in the Comic Section of The Sunday American.

Wan, Weary and Worn Out

If You Feel Fagged to a Finish and Utterly Used Up Here is Quick Relief.

S. S. S. Makes Your Blood Corpuscles Unite for Mutual Protection.

Half the people you meet complain of weary muscles, stagnant brain, jangled nerves, and a wonderful desire to lay down and just quit. Most of these people have been using nervines that spasmodically flare up the nerves only to die down again, as die they must. Avoid nerve stimulants. Bear in mind that this worn-out feeling is due to poor blood, to bacteria in the water you drink; to the multiplying of destructive germs in the blood faster than they can be overcome by the white corpuscles, and to what is known as auto-toxemia, that condition where the venous or impure blood accumulates faster than it can be replaced by the red arterial blood.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital and essential to well-balanced health as those of the grains, meats, fats and sugars of our food.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S., Swift's Sure Specific. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling. It just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine just as active and just as timely as to a man who has been lost in the mountains, is about starved and comes across a settler just cooking a savory meal of good homely beef. Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 187 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Jackson's Clout a Record One

Longest Homer, Says Sam Crane

By Sam Crane.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Joe Jackson's home run wallop over the roof of the Brush stadium last Monday was a marvel.

There were two other circuit clouts made, but while they were hard hits, they were not patches on "Jolting Joe's" job that cleared every sky high obstacle in the Polo Grounds and in the immediate neighborhood for miles around. The ball landed somewhere. There is no doubt of that, for Sir Isaac Newton's statement that everything that goes up must come down is still considered as sufficient authority to bank on even in these baseball days when "up in the air" is considered a permanent ascension.

Yes, siree, Joe Jackson's wonderful wallop was a record breaker. It was the longest drive ever made on the Polo Grounds, either to right field, center field or to left field. Buck Ewing is given credit for smashing the longest hit ever made toward the Harlem River. That was in the days when the left field was known as "Burkeville," that euphonious title being derived from "Eddie" Burke, once a Giant left fielder, who played the sun field without the aid of smoked glasses or a net, and never missed a fly ball, so 'tis said, or a high one, either.

Opinions Differed.

There are various opinions as to where the ball went over the left field fence that Buck soaked so far. But it was made in the Players' League days of 1890, and sailed over the outer bulwarks at about where the present 25-cent pen is now located.

"Some drive," you young fans of the present day may say, but in those good old days there were some sluggers—consecutive wallopers, I might say, like "Babe" Anson, Roger Connor, Dan Brouthers, Sam Thompson, Ed. Delehanty, Mike Tiernan and others, who, if they didn't make a home run a day, were ashamed to go to the "captain's office" and draw their half monthly stipends.

"Home Run" Baker has made quite a "small" reputation since those days by smashing out homers off Matty and Rube and they possibly earned more fame than the lengthy licks of the old-time swatters, soaks, but only for the reason that they figured as winning clouts in world championship contests and not because they were the real thing in drives.

Why, I have seen Ed Delehanty clout a ball so far over the present left field wall on the Phillies' grounds in Quakerville that make the home runs made by Cravath and Magee this year on the same grounds look like bunts.

Thompson Made Long Clout.

In Cincinnati I saw Sam Thompson hit the ball so hard and far that the home run smashes of Bescher, Bates and other long-hitting Reds of the present look like handle hits.

I have witnessed Anson make home runs in Chicago off wild pitches that would make the fourbag drives of Schulte and Zimmerman look like mere infield pop-ups.

Mike Tiernan lifted the ball once over the right field fence on Manhattan Field into Brotherhood Park (now the Polo Grounds.) That historical hit of Tiernan's, too, won a famous 11-inning pitching contest between the two star pitchers of that time (1890), and the spot where the ball went over the fence was marked by a small American flag for several years. Even the Harlem small boy revered the wallop so much that he didn't steal the flag.

I have seen—well, all those great hits and many more—but I will come down to earth now and take off my hat to Joe Jackson, of the Clevelands, for making the longest lick I ever saw—and that was Monday.

Doubt About O'Rourke's Hit.

Jim O'Rourke has heretofore been credited with making the longest smash, but there is a doubt on that record. Jim hit the ball over left field fence on the present Boston Braves' grounds, and the ball never stopped going until it landed in Providence, R. I. The ball went into the express car of a through train from Boston to Providence that didn't stop until it got to the Rhode Island Capital.

There is a history connected with Jackson's smash. A small boy recovered the ball somewhere down in Harlem on a side street and hearing about the record wallop—(why, Harlem was full of it) brought the ball back to the Polo Grounds and showed it to Joe after the game.

Joe paid the youngster a ten-dollar note for his prize—and it was well worth the money. It is a memento of the longest hit ever made.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

THE Western invasion in the American League should bring out some interesting baseball within the next two weeks. It is common gossip on that circuit that the Cleveland team is a much bigger winner on its home grounds than away on the road. The present trip should show whether this is true. With Birmingham's pitchers, and the club hitting as it is, there is no reason why it should not be just as big a winner in the East as the West. The Cleveland club looks like a strong one to me, and the Athletics are worried by the showing it is making. They fear the excellent pitching, the Philadelphia club being none too strong on the twirling itself.

* * *

STILL, I do not see how the Athletics can be beaten out. They are playing at their old-time speed now and should pick up on Cleveland during their long stand at home. Outside of the Naps, "Connie" Mack's team will be playing the easy Western clubs, while the only soft spot Birmingham will find in the East will be in New York. The series with Philadelphia, Washington and Boston will all be hard ones. The Naps have made all these gains without Lajoie, and with him back in the game the aggregation will be greatly strengthened, as the return of Wagner braced up the Pirates.

* * *

THE Boston Red Sox are still off color, although they have shown flashes of better ball recently. The failure of their pitching staff has been largely responsible for the poor showing. None of the pitchers who looked so good in the world's series have been able to win consistently this spring. Even "Smoky Joe" Wood has not been smoky. When their pitchers come around in shape, as they are bound to do, Boston will do considerably more winning, but I do not believe the Red Sox have a chance for the pennant. There are too many other high-class ball teams ahead of them in the competition now.

* * *

THE White Sox have made a good showing, better than was expected of them, and may come through and scare a lot of managers before the race is over. Their pitchers are displaying grand form, even without the aid of "Ed" Walsh. White, Russell, Benz and Scott have all pitched good ball. Pitching has been a big factor in the races in both leagues so far this year, the clubs with the twirlers getting the early starts, with the possible exception of the Athletics.

* * *

DETROIT and the New York Americans look hopeless. Somebody said the other day that the only reason they are keeping a club in Detroit is to give Cobb a chance to see how high he can bat. Chance realizes he will have to tear his club down and build over again. He began by trading Chase. His task is a tough one.

"CHICK" GANDIL HASN'T DROPPED BALL IN YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Washington baseball fans are pointing out that Walter Johnson is not the only record holder on the local team. "Chick" Gandil, who one year ago this month began playing first base for the Senators, has never dropped a thrown ball in all that time, except when the throw was so wild it pulled him off the bag. This is believed to be a record for accuracy in fielding.

STEVE.

Time was when a middleweight fighter could fight,
And he battled with never a care.
He walloped the smoke and he walloped the white,
And he fought like a man who was there.
And somebody got him one calm summer day,
And he went with a smile on his brow.
He battled his battles and went on his way,
But where is a middleweight now?

It is said that Bill Steen, of the Naps, can do needlework in addition to his pitching. Having listened to various baseball magnates, we have a hunch that Mr. Steen is a mere novice with the needle.

Mr. Goux sails this week for home, despite various challenges from Mr. Burman. In other words, Mr. Goux refuses to fall for any goux-goux eyes. We sprang this simply to prove that we ain't got no sense of humor.

Every time we read that there are motorcycle races on the program we are sore over the fact that we ain't a mortician. And then when we think it over we ain't.

One who is versed in pugilistic lore is not surprised to learn that Willie Ritchie refuses to make 133 ringside. One who is not versed in pugilistic lore does not care a whoop. So why should we waste any more space on it?

THE GLADIATOR.

It is the bar-room roustabout,
Who cleans around the house,
Occasionally, when not too big,
He takes a husky short-arm dig
At some half-conscious souse.

It is the needy manager
Who takes him into camp,
And borrows trunks and fighting shoes,
And, lo! In all the sporting news:
"'Death' Jones, the new White Champ!"

FOXHALL KEENE DISCUSSES THE POLO CONTEST

By Foxhall Keene.

(Captain of the American Polo Team.)

NEW YORK, June 7.—Before I take up the discussion of teams which will meet in the approaching contest I want to repeat what I have said in recent interviews—that the changes made in the line-up of the squad were not due to friction or to trouble of any sort, and rumors to that effect are absolutely without foundation.

The changes were made by those in charge not only with the consent, but at the urging of the parties concerned, in the belief that it will further the common cause and we know all are working together with the one hope and ambition to keep the polo cup in America.

Speaking for myself I can say that I did not want to have anything to do with the game at this particular time on account of the recent death of my father, but Mr. Whitney and the other members of the team finally prevailed upon me to re-enter the lists, and now that I am in I shall do my best to bring about the defeat of the English.

Will Put Up Hard Fight.

I hope and believe that our team will be able to give a good account of itself in the match and if we are defeated I am pretty sure the Englishmen will know they have been in a fight.

I am inclined to believe that the old team was not up to the form it has shown in past years, and perhaps Mr. Whitney held it together on account of old friendships longer than he might have done.

Mr. Whitney is one of the greatest players the game of polo has produced in 20 years and his passing from the team at this time must be viewed with real regret.

Larry Waterbury was certainly as good a back as the world has ever seen. He played No. 1 on the team that Mr. Whitney took to England, and he played it brilliantly, though the English team at that time was rated rather poor.

"Monte Waterbury has not been well for some months and his game has not been the phenomenal game of past years.

Betting Favors Englishmen.

The betting is against us and the popular feeling seems to be that the Englishmen have the stronger team, but in spite of that and in spite of the fact we have been given a very short time to prepare ourselves, I am confident that America will not be ashamed of her representatives when we take the field against the mother country.

The English squad have an extraordinary array of ponies. We can not deny that they outpony us to some extent, but in addition to Mr. Whitney's string, Mr. Prince, of Boston, who owns a very fine stud, sent his ponies to New York by special train and we will all have them to depend on.

We have but a small handful of polo players in America,"—by which I mean only a few men who have gone in for the game strong enough to become experts; whereas England not only has England, where the game is older and more popular than here, to draw upon, but India as well, and in India every other man is a good polo player.

It is therefore great credit to our small handful that we have been able to produce squads that have at times beaten the best teams produced by the British and that have always given a good account of themselves.

English Ponies Are Good.

From what I have seen of the Englishmen I might say that their hitting is uniformly fine and the ponies are very good, but they were not being tackled, and a team always looks pretty good when it is not being opposed.

In drawing a comparison between American and English methods of playing polo it seems to me that the Americans have been more ambitious for the past 20 years. The Englishmen are rather orthodox in their general style, while we have all kinds of strokes. They have some that they play best, but there is always more variety to the Americans.

There are really no new ways of playing polo and few new angles to be developed. Naturally I have certain theories of my own in connection with the game as has every polo player, but this is hardly the time to exploit them.

BURMAN DISAPPOINTED BECAUSE GOUX SAILED

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bob Burman, the dare-devil automobile racer, who is in town to-day, was quite disappointed to find that Jules Goux, the Frenchman who won the 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis, had sailed Thursday for France.

Burman came here to challenge Goux to a 500-mile race either at Indianapolis or New York for a side bet of from $5,000 to $20,000. Burman announced that he will now cable his challenge.

THIRD ONE-HIT GAME OF SEASON BY YOUNGSTER

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 7.—Rube Schauer, the sensational young pitcher for the Superior Northern League club, at Grand Forks yesterday pitched his third one-hit game of the season, Superior winning, 5 to 1.

Schauer twirled a one-hit game early in the season and another a couple of weeks ago at Superior, thereby attracting the attention of several big league clubs, including the Chicago Nationals. This is his first year in organized baseball.

JIM FLYNN AND SAVAGE ARRIVE HERE MONDAY

By Left Hook.

JACK CURLEY, manager of Jim Flynn, has wired that he and Flynn will arrive in Atlanta Monday. Dan Morgan, manager of Jim Savage, had previously wired that he and his man would be here either Sunday or Monday. So the Queensberry festivities of the city should brighten up materially within the next few days.

Dan Morgan, in behalf of Savage, has laid claim to the heavyweight championship of the world. In his formal statement Morgan says:

"Savage has as much right to the title as any of the white hopes. I consider him the best man in the lot. I believe he can whip any of them, now that McCarty is out of the way. We are willing to meet any of them, and intend to begin by polishing off Flynn on the night of June 13 in Atlanta."

Morgan is wild with enthusiasm over the outlook. The sudden turn of affairs that gave his man a championship look-in pleased him right down to the ground. He saw the opportunity and he is off on a campaign of activity that will give Jim Savage more scraps in the next few months than he ever had before in his life.

It may be that Morgan's plans may get an awful jolt right here in Atlanta. There is not any doubt that, until a few weeks ago, he believed that his man could trim Jim Flynn with all ease. Then came Jim's great battle with Jim Coffey, and that was something else again. Flynn, instead of being on the down slant, as Morgan hoped, proved to be as good as ever in his career. But after that was learned it was too late to back out, for the match between Savage and Flynn was made.

Neither of the men wants to meet the other now. Yet each knows that he must go into it to win or to be knocked out. There is no middle ground now. A draw decision would do neither of them any good. They must win. A victory, with the heavyweight situation as it now is, means money to them, way up in the tens of thousands.

The odd way affairs have lined themselves has played into the hands of the local promoters. It has made the battle next Friday night one of the BIG contests of the year. The winner is almost sure within the year to grab off the heavyweight championship of the world.

NATIONAL COMMISSION PASSES NEW SALARY RULE

CINCINNATI, June 7.—The National Baseball Commission promulgated a new rule yesterday which clearly defines the salary obligations of a club to a player whose services are released by the club after the commencement of its contract period.

The new rule reads:

"A club which after the beginning of the terms of its contract with him, releases the services of a player to a club whose championship season had not commenced, must pay him at the rate of his canceled contract up to the date his salary starts with his new club, provided he promptly reports to and gives service to the club to which he is transferred."

398 MEN TAKE PART IN TRACK MEET AT MADISON

MADISON, WIS., June 7.—The greatest group of college athletes in the history of Western competition to-day are here awaiting the signals which start the conference track and field meet billed for this afternoon. Seventeen schools are represented in the gathering, with 398 entrants. The colleges in the running include every member of the "big nine," and in addition to these schools are Drake, Ames, Kansas, Missouri, Notre Dame, Oberlin, Wabash and California.

Because of the weakening of the California team, which lost four of its star performers by conference rules, Missouri is favorite, with Illinois second choice.

Whitney Plays Aldredge To-day

Winner Gets Dixie Championship

By W. R. Tichenor.

NELSON WHITNEY, twice champion of the Southern Golf Association, and George A. Eldredge, champion of the State of Texas, are battling to-day at 36 holes for the championship of the South and a huge silver cup.

Whitney won his match in the semi-finals yesterday from Reuben Bush, whom he defeated 7 up and 6 to play.

Whitney was longer and steadier on all of his tee shots, which gave him the advantage of seeing the results of Bush's second shot on almost every hole before he was forced to play his own. While he was unsteady on his short puts in the morning round and presented Bush with a half at the eighth, ninth, tenth and fourteenth, and a win at the sixth and thirteenth holes by taking three puts on each, Whitney managed to end the round 3 up, with a 76 for the 18 holes.

Bush Puts Poorly.

In the afternoon round Bush picked up in his field game, but became erratic in his short puts, allowing Whitney to add three more holes in going out, and so they turned for home with Whitney 6 up. Bush played the tenth badly, Bush winning it with a 5 after putting his tee shot out of bounds. Whitney, however, came to life on the eleventh, which is 460 yards in length, by holing a long put for a 3. On the 575-yard twelfth hole Whitney put his third within 10 feet of the hole and sank the put for a "win" of the hole and the match.

Whitney has met in succession Jacoby, Knowles and Bush. To-morrow he meets Aldredge, of Dallas, Texas, in the final.

Aldredge won his way into the final by defeating Herbert Tutwiler, of Birmingham. At the end of the morning round yesterday he was 3 up. He increased this lead to four and won on the thirty-second green.

Rowan Still In.

W. H. Rowan dfeeated George Fooshe, of Memphis, in a hard match. At the end of the morning round Fooshe was 2 up. Rowan evened the match at the turn and won 3 up and 2 to play.

Young Charley Hardy, of New Orleans, and Rollo Steinmehl, both of them youngsters, met in the semi-finals of the second flight. Hardy was going fine and had a 77 for the morning round, while Steinmehl was off his game and the first eighteen holes ended with Hardy 11 up. Steinmehl braced in the afternoon, but could not cut down Hardy's lead and was beaten 11 up and 10 to play. Hardy and Rowan meet in the final to-day.

Probasco defeated Stahlman 7 and 6 in the semi-finals of the third flight. In the other half of this flight Ned Daley ran away from Reid Sayre and had him 9 down at the thirteenth hole, when Sayre gave up the match. Daley and Probasco meet in the final of this flight.

In the fourth flight J. A. England defaulted to D. Weaver. Harnett, of Jacksonville, defeated A. W. Post, 6 and 5. The final of the fifth flight will be fought out between J. W. S. Rhea and C. Tyson. Rhea won from Richards, of Chattanooga, 3 and 2, and Tyson beat Whitney Bouden by the same score.

Atlanta Man Loses.

Albert Mallory defeated D. E. Root, of Atlanta, three and two, in the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Munger beat Watts by the same score, and these two will meet in the finals.

Munger of Texas, and Ulmer, of Jacksonville, are the finals in the consolation division of the championship flight.

Dowdell Brown had Cullom dormie seven in his match against him, but, knowing he could not be present to play the final if he won, defaulted the match.

Hamilton Block, of Atlanta, trimmed J. Tyson, of Montgomery to the tune of nine up and eight to play, and so is one of the finalists in the consolation division of the third flight.

In the consolation division of the fourth flight David Roberts, of Birmingham, is matched against George Petrie, of Montgomery, in the final.

D. Henderson, of Chattanooga, and Crawford, of Montgomery, are in the finals of the consolation division of the fifth flight.

Will Gunn, of Macon, and Ed Joseph, of Montgomery, will fight it out in the final of the consolation division of the sixth flight.

Riggs Resigns as Athletic Leader

CLEMSON COLLEGE, June 7.—At a recent meeting of the Clemson College Athletic Association, President W. M. Riggs after about 16 or 17 years of continuous service in the capacity of president of the association, refused re-election. Dr. Riggs is the father of athletics at Clemson and has always given much time to the development of the various sports, especially to football. He will continue to give his hearty support to all college sports, but his regular duties will prevent his serving as president of the association.

The following officers and managers were elected for the next session: Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, president; R. B. Ezell, vice president; Prof. J. W. Gantt, secretary and treasurer; J. B. Douthit, manager of the football team; C. B. Iler and S. W. Hutto, assistant managers; H. H. Pressley, manager of the baseball team; H. W. Bristol and S. M. Richards, assistant managers; K. G. Caughman, manager of the basket ball team; J. B. Glover and G. C. McDermis, assistant managers; A. P. Lewis, manager of the track team; L. LeGrand and R. J. Odom, assistants; J. W. Erwin, manager of the tennis teams; M. R. Stender, chief rooter; R. B. Ezell and F. J. Jervey, assistants; J. N. McBride, historian.

Clemson has a good football schedule, as the following will show. October 4, Davidson, at Clemson; October 11, University of Alabama, at Tuscaloosa; October 18, Auburn, at Clemson; October 29, University of South Carolina, in Columbia during fair week; November 1, the Citadel, in Charleston; November 8, University of Georgia, in Athens or Augusta; November 15, Mercer, at Clemson; November 27, Georgia Tech, in Atlanta.

It has been estimated from information gathered in the different betting places in New York that at least $500,000 has been wagered in that city on the result of the baseball races. The Giants in the National League and the Athletics in the American League have been the big betting favorites from the start of the season.

* * *

The Yankees evidently intend establishing a record that will never be equaled or broken. By dropping a 2 to 1 game to the Naps yesterday they registered their seventeenth straight defeat on their home grounds. Fans are thinking of holding a big fireworks celebration as soon as the Yankees win their first game on the home grounds.

* * *

The Athletics yesterday garnered their twelfth straight victory and the Naps have annexed a record of thirteen victories out of the last fourteen starts.

* * *

One and one-half full games, or 50 percentage points, separated the Naps from the first place Athletics to-day. The Naps open their four-game series with the Red Sox and Athletics engaged the Browns in combat to-day.

* * *

The Cubs made twelve hits yesterday against six for the Braves, but the Braves bunched their safeties and won 5 to 4.

* * *

Walter Johnson, of the Senators, was back in form again yesterday with the result that the Senators won over the Browns, Johnson shutting out the St. Louis players and allowing but four scattered hits.

Just now both teams are tearing the American League wide open and leaving such a gap that only a terrific slump will enable any other team to overtake both for another month or six weeks.

INVASION ABROAD BY U. S. GOLFERS IS SUCCESSFUL

By "Chick" Evans.

PERHAPS the readers of The Georgian will remember a little biography of a golfer which appeared in this paper a few months ago. In that slight sketch I endeavored to give the golfing history of a young player, who, although not well known in the West, was champion of an Eastern State and had made a creditable showing in the National at Wheaton. Although he tied for the last place in the qualifying round with Herreshoff, he won the playoff, and his subsequent game in the tournament led me to class him as one of the most promising players in America. I defeated him in the third round of that event and I have respected his game and appreciated my good fortune ever since.

This young player, Heinrich Schmidt, of Worcester, Mass., has attracted the attention of every American golfer by his recent good showing in the British amateur championship. There is no qualifying round in this event; the matter is arranged by drawing a certain number of byes, determined by the number of entrants. Mr. Schmidt did not draw a bye, however, but played through five successful rounds and was defeated by Harold Hilton in the sixth round by one stroke on the nineteenth hole. His opponents in the other rounds were golfers of the first class, among them a former British champion and the man who defeated Hilton last year. We have only meager accounts of the event, but Mr. Schmidt's record is certainly an enviable one.

Another American Makes Showing.

I had many letters from Mr. Schmidt last winter and spring, urging me to join the little party of Americans in the trip abroad, but business kept me at home. He went unheralded and no hint of his practice scores reached us, but the result of his going was made golf history.

Harold Weber, of Toledo, Ohio, another American competitor in the British amateur, also made an excellent showing. This surprised none of Mr. Weber's Western friends, for he is well known here, and is a very good player indeed. He had the good fortune, if it can be called good fortune, to remain inactive during the first round, to draw a bye, and he put out several fine British players before he himself met defeat in the third round.

Findlay Douglas, of New York, another of the American entrants, bears a national reputation, and it was perhaps largely through his efforts that the little band of Americans journeyed abroad. Mr. Douglas has not taken his game very seriously of late years. He was defeated in the first round.

British Invasion Successful.

There were also some California entrants with whose playing I am unacquainted, but I am told that they are excellent golfers.

All in all, the Americans have reason to be proud of the results of their invasion of British territory this year. They have faced the difficulties of the British courses, the skill of the British players, and the fine British golfing temperament, and they have achieved some notable victories. They are well content.

American Net Stars Win Over Australians

NEW YORK, June 7.—American lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis Cup preliminaries at the West Side Tennis Club courts yesterday.

Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6,3, and R. Norris Williams, second, scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to cinch the American team's victory is to win one of the three remaining matches, and experts look for this to be accomplished this afternoon when McLoughlin and Harold H. Hackett meet the Australian doubles team, consisting of Doust and A. B. Jones. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team, which already has eliminated the French team.

COUNZELMAN IN FOLD; RELEASE FOR CHAPPELLE

BILL CHAPPELLE has been released by the Atlanta club to make a place for Pitcher Counzelman, just secured from the Pirates.

Chappelle did not come around as Bill Smith expected he would and Manager Smith decided to let him go and to hang onto Pitcher Price, for the present at least.

Smith has no deals on for pitchers now and will give his present staff a thorough trial before letting any more men out.

It is probable that Counzelman will be worked to-day. Smith gave him a good warm-up Friday and he showed a lot of stuff. His curve ball is pronounced a marvel by Smith, and he has plenty of speed, too.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE TO BOX IN FRISCO ON FOURTH

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—According to a statement made by Ad Wolgast early to-day the former title holder has been re-matched with Willie Ritchie.

Wolgast was just starting for Venice when he was called to the telephone.

"That was Tom Jones in San Francisco that I was talking to," said Ad when he emerged from the booth. He has matched me with Ritchie at 133 pounds at 9 o'clock in the morning for an afternoon fight on July 4 before Eddie Graney's club.

"That's an awful weight handicap for me to carry and I wouldn't stand for it except that I am getting a big end of the money for my share. No matter what Ritchie weighs, I will scale in at 133, so that I will be recognized as the lightweight champion in case I beat him.

"This match makes it absolutey necessary for me to stop Johnny Dundee next Tuesday night. I can't say that I relish the 20-round bout with Ritchie, except that I want to prove that I am a better man than Willie."

AD WOLGAST IS STRONG FAVORITE OVER DUNDEE

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—Wher odds of 10 to 6 on Ad Wolgast in his scheduled twenty-round bout with Johnny Dundee, of New York, next Tuesday night were offered to-day without any takers it was predicted that the former lightweight champion would be a 2-to-1 favorite before ring time. Both fighters expect to discontinue heavy training Sunday.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Health Pointers For the Chickens

Suggestions That Will Mean a Great Saving to the Poultryman.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Keep busy.

Keep your eggs cool.

Keep your nests clean.

Keep your coops and houses free from mites and lice.

Keep your growing chicks well supplied with green food.

Keep them out of the wet grass in the mornings.

Keep your breeding stock in a healthy condition by keeping plenty of gravel, lime and green food always in reach of them, and feed a variety.

Do not crowd too many young chicks together in one coop, or they will breed disease, and they will die off faster than you can hatch them.

Keep plenty of fresh water or milk for the little chicks to drink at all times; the milk after they are two weeks old.

Do not feed too much white bread to young chicks or you will find it fatal to many of them.

After this season of the year the nearer the ground you set your hens the better will be the hatches.

Keep Hens Hatching.

You can arrange them so that you will have three or four hens hatching at the same time; you can double up the broods with one or two hens and put the others to laying again, and the chicks will be easier cared for. When you take the hen and the chicks from the nest grease the hen slightly under the wings and along the breast with a little fresh lard (no salt). This will assist in getting rid of any lice on the little ones. Use no grease about the nest before they are hatched.

Keep sulphur away from the hen when she is breeding chicks, as it is hard upon the eyes of the chicks.

Coffee boxes or those of similar size, about two feet square and about two and a half feet long, make splendid brood coops for a hen and a lot of young ones. If they should incline to leak any, tack tarred paper over the top of them, or strips over the cracks.

Put your young chicks on as high ground as possible, and on fresh ground not used for chicks the year before.

Egg-Eating Hens.

Judge Marshall: I have a lot of hens that have contracted the habit of eating their own eggs, and it seems impossible for me to get them to quit it. Can you tell me of any way to stop them? I would also like to know what is the cause of their getting at it in the first place. Yours truly,
Fort Valley, Ga. H. H. S.

ANSWER—Egg eating is a very bad habit and is very annoying to the owner. The habit is usually formed by their eating a soft-shelled egg or one that has been broken by falling from the roost. Then a desire for meat food will cause them to continue. One will get at it first and the others will follow suit when they see her at it, and help devour everything in sight of the kind. The habit is seldom formed by a flock on free range. A good way to lessen the desire is to give the hens all the exercise possible by covering the grain food in the soil and have them dig it out. Hang cabbage heads up so they can just get to them by extra effort. Have the nests in as dark and secluded a place as possible. All this will not cure them of the habit when once it is well formed.

The best way we have ever found to rid them of the habit is to use good, deep nest boxes, putting a layer of excelsior on the bottom then tack a gunnysack over the box, allowing it to sag down half-way to the excelsior which forms the nest they are to use; at the lowest point cut a cross just large enough for the egg to roll through. In that way the egg will roll out of sight, and the hen will be unable to see it as she used to and will soon get out of the habit. The other hens which have been in the habit of running to get their share when a hen cackles will soon find out that there is nothing to be had and will soon quit that part of it. The best way is to prevent all this trouble when you can by anticipating the wants and habits of your hens by keeping them busy at all times and supplying their wants as well as you can.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Peachtree Lease Made at $50,000

Drug Company Takes Peck Corner Eight Years—Important Meeting Monday.

A. S. Adams, of the real estate firm of B. M. Grant & Company, announced Friday some of the details of the lease of the store at 141 Peachtree Street, being the Peachtree and Houston Streets corners of the Cruickshank Building, formerly known as the Peck Building. The floor space is about 1,500 square feet.

This entire property was leased some tme ago from the Peck estate through B. M. Grant & Company to the Cruickshank Cigar Company. The Cruickshank Cigar Company has now leased to the James Drug Company the store at 141 Peachtree for a term of approximately eight years at a total consideration of about $50,000, or more than $6,000 a year. The Cruickshank Company has also disposed of its soda water business to the drug concern.

The James Drug Company has installed one of the handsomest sets of fixtures in tlanta and will do a general drug, soda water and prescription business. When the Cruickshank Cigar Company has taken out the soda fountain they will install one of the largest and most expensive humidors in the South. Mr. Cruickshank states that in this additional space he will increase his cigar facilities.

B. M. Grant & Company have also leased for Mr. Cruickshank the entire second floor and most of the third floor to Veitrie & Harmon, for a term of about eight years. Theiessees will conduct a men's tailoring establishment.

Important Realty Meeting.

A meeting of the utmost importance to real estate men, office building managers and property owners generally will be held Monday at noon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on the fifth floor of the Empire Building. At this time the question of the pending income tax measure of the Federal tariff bill will be thoroughly discussed, and it is believevd that a formal protest against some items of the measure will be lodged with United States Senators A. O. Bacon and Hoke Smith.

The bill has passed the House and is now up to the Senate. A provision which realty men and building managers find obnoxious is that which provides that tenants shall withhold rents from landlords. The bill, it is contended, represents double taxation. Expenses will be taxed as well as income, and corporations doing business at a loss will be taxed on their losses.

Charles P. Glover has sent out notices of the meeting in the name of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, and it is expected that a large number of people will be present.

Leases by Cochran Company.

The Ralph O. Cochran Company has rented of leased the following places within the past few days:

For Mrs. A. H. Perkins to R. J. McGaughey, 269 East Hunter Street; for Mrs. A. M. Campbell to T. M. Middlebrooks, 290 Ormond Street; for Mrs. E. M. Holman to D. W. Hilley, 41 Oglethorpe Avenue; for L. H. Zurline to M. W. Cole, 22 Rogers Street; for Dillin-Morris Company to R. J. Meckle, 238 Lake Avenue; for Jacob Auerbach to J. J. Slappy, 295 Windsor Street; for C. P. Murphey to Mrs. M. E. Spruill, 18 Wellington Street; for Mrs. M. O. Trippe to Walter Cone, 97 Mills Street; for M. Leiverson to J. A. Finch, 324 Houston Street, and for W. D. Palmer to Mrs. W. C. Smith, 24 Cooper Street.

Realty Business Good.

The past few days in the real estate market have instilled a great deal of confidence in local land dealers. Prospects for good crops, easier money and general confidence have had their effect.

A few expressions are typical of the prevailing sentiment.

"Business is picking up," declared Ralph O. Cochran, head of the firm that bears his name.

"We expect an unusually good summer," asserted Charles P. Glover, head of the Atlanta Real Estate Board and the Glover Realty Company.

"Thursday we had more inquiries for property than we have had in a long time. People believe crops are going to be good," was the comment of J. H. Ewing, of the Smith & Ewing agency.

"Things look better to me," said Milton H. Liebman, of the A. F. Liebman Company.

"I can't see anything but good times ahead," declared Lowry Porter, of Porter & Swift.

"The man who's not selling real estate is not working up to capacity," was the comment of T. C. Holmes, of the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company. "We have no cause to complain."

Edwin P. Ansley, Shelby Smith, Forrest Adair, S. B. Turman, B. M. Grant, George P. Moore, L. P. Bottenfield, John D. Babbage, M. C. Kiser, Harris G. White, William A. Vernoy and others joined in the general chorus.

Mr. Candler's Purchase.

Considerable interest was manifested Friday in local realty circles over the purchase by Asa G. Candler of a tract in Chicago for the erection of a ten-story building at a cost of $300,000. Mr. Candler now has holdings in Chicago, Washington and New York, as well as in Atlanta and other cities where his soft drink business assumes large proportions.

The price paid for the 22 1-2 by 145 foot parcel was $28,000, or $1,254 a front foot, about the price that would be paid in Atlanta at Peachtree and Currier or Poplar and Luckie. The tract adjoins property already owned by Mr. Candler, which gives him a combined frontage of 114 1-3 feet.

West Peachtree Houses.

Three new bungalows are being built in West Peachtree Park, which corresponds to Thirteenth Street and is just to the east of West Peachtree Street. The houses face north and are an attractive addition to a neighborhood composed of medium-sized but very artistic dwellings.

Ten years ago West Peachtree was virtually a "wilderness," with only an occasional house north of Sixth Street, but to-day it is almost solidly built up along its entire extent.

Ivy Street Work.

Work on the regrading of Ivy Street is now nearly complete and in a comparatively short time this thoroughfare will be opened again to traffic. Joel Hurt has a plan for widening the street before the other work is finished, and if this should be done the opening would be delayed somewhat. Walls that recently gave way under heavy rains have been replaced.

Architect Brown's Bid.

A. Ten Eyck Brown, the well-known local architect, has submitted a bid on the Spartan Inn property at Spartanburg, S. C., and the contract for this job is expected to be awarded Thursday. This improvement will include a large department store, a hotel and the terminal of the Greenville, Spartanburg and Anderson Railroad.

Drawing for Mr. Candler.

Asa G. Candler is in receipt of a handsome architect's drawing of the entrance to the 24-story Candler Building in Times Square, New York City. An artistic frieze surrounds the entrance and the Candler coat-of-arms and shield are above it. Willauer, Shape & Bready, of New York, are the architects.

SIX UP-TO-DATE HOMES
And 19 Ready-to-Build-On Lots
TO-MORROW
SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1913,
At 3 p. m., on the Premises

THESE are 5 and 6-room houses, with every city convenience and connection, including furnace in several of the houses, but no gas as yet. These houses were built of the best material, under the personal direction of Colonel I. N. Ragsdale, who could not be induced to build a shoddy house.

These houses are real city homes, located in the social center of the Tenth Ward, and only a step from the best car service in Atlanta.

We urge you to go out and inspect this property. Each house will be plainly placarded, showing cash payment and monthly payments; also the amount of the loan to be assumed.

THESE HOUSES ARE NOW RENTED, and bring in from $18.50 to $30.00 per month. Think of what a help that will be to you, in meeting your payments, should you not be ready to occupy the house.

The houses and lots front on the following streets:

Arlington Avenue, Princess Avenue and LaRosa Terrace.

THIS SECTION HAS NO OBJECTIONABLE FEATURE

It is logically the place for the people to live who are engaged in business, or who are employed among the many industrial and manufacturing and railroad enterprises around the Terminal Station, Whitehall Street, Mitchell Street, and the Central and West Point Railroads, and the adjacent territory. The car service and the way the streets run prove these statements to be true. Think about it, and you'll see it as we do.

THE LOTS ARE READY TO BUILD ON

These are the lots to buy, either for home sites or for speculation, because they are ready to build on. In addition to this, every lot is a beauty, with nice young oak shade trees scattered over them. Also, because their location is excellent. They are only a short distance from the business center of Oakland City. Only two blocks from the City School, and near the churches; and the farthest lot is only two blocks from the car line; and, best of all, they are socially in the swim, and

ALL CITY IMPROVEMENTS DOWN AND PAID FOR.

THE TERMS ON THE HOUSES

will range from $150 to $250 cash, and the payments will range from $22.50 per month to $32.50 per month, with 6 per cent simple interest. Small loan on five of the houses, to be assumed by the purchaser.

THE TERMS ON THE LOTS

are right. Every lot will be sold on terms of $50 cash, and the balance $15 per month, with only 6 per cent simple interest on the deferred payments.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take cars at the corner of Forsyth and Alabama Streets, marked "East Point," "Hapeville" or "College Park." Get off at the corner of Avon (Oakland Avenue). You will then be only a step from this property.

COME AND BE SURE TO BUY—You will never regret it if you do, and you will be sorry if you don't. Get plans from

Lobbyists, Insidious and Otherwise at the National Capital

Thus Far the Investigation at Washington Has Failed to Reveal Any Sign of the "Numerous, Industrious and Insidious Lobby" That President Wilson Charged With Being at Work There.

Thus far the soul-searching Senators who are testifying before the Senate subcommittee in Washington have failed to reveal any sign of the "numerous, industrious and insidious lobby" that President Wilson charged with being at work in their solemn midst.

It may be that the President's definition of a lobbyist differs from that of the Senators. It may even be that a lobbyist, even though he be numerous and industrious, is not insidious, and is entitled to ply his calling among the legislators, despite the Presidential wrath which he invokes by doing so.

According to the Century Dictionary, a lobbyist is "one who frequents halls of legislation, and makes a profession of influencing legislation, or attempting to influence legislation."

Some such miscreants as these doubtless are now in Washington, but according to the testimony of Senators, most of the attempts to influence legislation, aside from those of the President and the Secretary of State, are made by men directly interested in the legislation they are attempting to influence.

For example, among the men who are now in Washington for the purpose of molding Congressional opinion are numerous sugar growers of Louisiana and wool growers of the West. These men do not hesitate to say that their business will be ruined by the passage of the tariff as it stands. Not being particularly eager to have their business ruined, they have come to their Senators and Congressmen to see if something can not be done to keep it from being ruined. And daily they take advertising space in newspapers, for which they pay regular rates, to set forth their case as it looks to them.

Are these men lobbyists? According to the President, they are, and insidious lobbyists at that.

But what about the President? On several occasions he has gone to the Capitol and buttonholed legislators to state his side of the tariff question. Is the President, then, a lobbyist?

Mr. Wilson would probably deny the charge hotly. Yet where is the difference? Mr. Wilson's business is being President, and he believes that that business will be best served by the pending tariff. The sugar growers and the wool growers and the others are in the business of raising sugar and wool, and they believe that their business will be worst served by the pending tariff.

There is not a scintilla of evidence that they have tried to corrupt anybody. There is no indication that they have used anything but such arguments as any man has a right to make to his duly elected representatives in the Senate and in the House.

Why, then, are they lobbyists when the President is not?

How did they become lobbyists?

Will they remain lobbyists beyond the present administration?

These are interesting questions. For, if a man is to be condemned for striving honestly to protect his own business, there will be no legitimate channels of industry in this country save being a President or a Cabinet member, and under our Constitution, few people can hold these positions at the same time.

STEAM AND SALE

By WEX JONES.

Representative Goodwin, of Arkansas, is preparing a bill ordering United States battleships to display samples of American manufactures.

IT was a glorious spectacle to see our fleet depart,
Equipped with lines of samples that would thrill a drummer's heart.
The North Dakota led the van, the dry goods flagship she,
Flinging this signal to the breeze, "SILK SHIRTWAISTS, 93."
The dreadnought Arizona displayed along the rail
The immortal words of Lawrence, "DON'T GIVE UP THE SALE."
While, paraphrasing Perry, the Wisconsin warned the Powers,
"WHEN WE MEET THE ENEMY'S CUSTOMERS THEY'LL EVERY ONE BE OURS."

The seamen—no, no, salesmen—the salesmen were at drill,
Learning store discipline, and means of filling up the till.
The captain—please excuse us, the floorwalker—of course
Paced proudly down the center aisle as he watched his selling force.
The great fleet's general manager—he'd been admiral before—
Dictated red-hot ads about each mammoth floating store,
And then, inspired, he wirelessed this message through the air,
"AMERICA THIS DAY EXPECTS EACH MAN WILL SELL HIS SHARE."

Forget the Constitution, Essex and President;
Never such glorious ships as these, which sailed on business bent.
They out-advertised the British fleet; they undersold the Jap;
They swept all their competitors clean off the retail map,
And when the general manager took stock upon the cruise
He'd sold ten tons of chewing gum and a thousand pairs of shoes.
Oh, well, that general manager, as the stories of him tell,
When asked if he surrendered said, "I HAVE JUST BEGUN TO SELL."

Writes on

Can the South "Come Back?"

The South Can Not "Come Back," He Says, and Stay at the Front of American Leadership if Our Ideals Are Permitted to Take Their Color and Quality From the Period in Which the South Has Been in the Wilderness.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

CAN the South "come back" and take up and maintain the great position in National affairs which was hers in the first hundred years of American history? This question becomes practical in view of the fact, widely commented on as the most significant phase of National politics, that Southern influence is dominant in the present Government at Washington.

It is a question of great practical interest to the Southern people whether their re-entrance into the sphere of national leadership is only an accidental turn of the political wheel of fortune or a role to be undertaken seriously and permanently.

If the present prominence is successful and the idea that the South is called upon to reassume her ancient glory as a National and world-wide factor gets on top in Southern public opinion, it is going to have a vast and immediate influence upon our life in education, industry, morals and politics.

Arrested Glory.

The part the South played in the achievement of independence and in the organization and administration of American Democracy in the early days of the Republic is beyond exaggeration. Such historians as Bancroft and Fiske have put beyond dispute the claim that the South contributed the largest share of the patriotism and political genius which established the nation.

The roots of American civilization, which has grown to be so vast and influential in modern times, are mainly traceable to the Southern colonies. The concert of colonial unity at the time of the revolution was rallied around Virginia and the Carolinas.

Before the Pilgrims launched the Mayflower, Virginia was an established social and political fabric with a representative assembly making laws for the government of a dominion twice as large as the New England States. It included the great Northwestern territory, out of which have been carved the seven splendid commonwealths of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia.

In 1790 the Southern section constituted in area and in population three-fourths of all that was included under the terms of the Federal Constitution. At the time the Constitution was adopted there was no question of the predominant responsibility of this section for the Republic, both as to the principles on which it was founded, the processes by which it was accomplished, and the actual administration of its Government.

For 53 years the Southern States furnished its Presidents in an unbroken line of succession. The hope of liberty in the world was raised in the heart of humanity by this achievement. The thought which then controlled the Southern mind was universal in its sympathy, and Southern men were the world's leaders in the ideals of democratic humanity.

This is the background of history, against which we lift up the question—"Can the South 'come back?'" For since 1850 the South has taken but small part in the large affairs of the nation, and in contributions to human interests that are world wide. The great glory of the former day was arrested and the South in this broad sense of influence and power went into an eclipse which has lasted for more than a half century.

The Vital Questions.

The question to be pondered by our political philosophers is whether the present South is prepared to take up where the old South left off? Have we lost any vital element of civic and moral capacity as a people in our wilderness of political inactivity and detachment from National opportunities? Has anything vital been dropped out during the half century of Southern dislocation from responsibility in national and world concerns?

These questions will not be answered fairly by the success or failure of the Woodrow Wilson administration, but they will be tested out in the history now beginning, which is calling such distant attention to the South in reference to National politics.

The ability of the Southern people to come back positively as actors in the affairs of the whole country will find its severest test in our own local and sectional civilization.

We cannot play a big part at Washington permanently for everybody to recognize, if we play a little part at home for everybody to criticise.

Our ability to advance the civilization of the world as leaders in its greatest Republic will be eventually measured by our ability to achieve a basis for great influence in a noble civilization in the states South of the Potomac.

These are the vital questions Southern men are now to consider. The question of education—a trained citizenship—the relief of illiteracy. The question of public breadth and sympathy—of world consciousness—of realized amenability to the established standards of Christian civilization the world over.

True to Ourselves.

The question is being true of all to ourselves—of faithful introspection and self scrutiny and of intelligent self-criticism to discover our own faults and the sources of our weaknesses. The question of ideals and leaders—the type of Southern character to be hung in the sky before our children—the temper to be exalted as the Southern temper—the point of view to be set up for the direction and control of Southern public opinion.

The South can come back and stay back if these questions are decided under the influence of our ante-bellum history, but the South cannot come back and stay at the front of American leadership if our ideals are permitted to take their color and quality from the period in which the South has been in the wilderness.

SAY HASTY AUTOPSY WAS TO PREVENT 'DOPING'

Chemists' Report in Painter Mystery Is Ready

COMPANY IS PROSPEROUS PARTNER SAYS

Insurance Agents Helped Painter Figure How He Could Pay Premiums.

By COLE E. MORGAN

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 6.—The analysis of E. O. Painter's vital organs has been completed in Baltimore and the report is expected to reach the Barnett National Bank on Saturday. It will come under seal and be delivered by the bank jointly to Coroner C. D. Abbott and Judge G. C. Hamlin, who was Painter's attorney for 32 years.

Coroner Abbott said to-day he would not open the report or take it from the bank until he had summoned the jury to complete the inquest on Painters' death.

Dr. J. E. Boyd and Dr. P. C. Perry, the physicians who performed the autopsy on Painter's body and went to Baltimore to remain through the analysis, left Baltimore last night and are due in Jacksonville to-night. Dr. Boyd is the Painter family physician and he and Dr. Perry have been acting in this case for the family.

Judge Hamlin Explains.

The explanation offered by Judge Hamlin for the hasty autopsy was that because of the large amount of insurance carried by Painter, it was considered essential, from a legal standpoint, to have the exact cause of death clearly established and be prepared, should the insurance companies resist payment on the policies. He said they wanted this evidence before an opportunity was offered any underling of an insurance company to "drug" the body and "plant" evidence to indicate suicide.

Cecil Wilcox, general agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, in Jacksonville, wrote the $502,000 insurance Painter took out with that company this year. He is president of the Children's Home Society, Painter's favorite charity, of which he was secretary. They had been intimately associated in this work and Wilcox looked upon Painter as a man of unquestioned integrity. He did not suspect any plot in Painter's seeking so much insurance. He was not aware of all the other policies being taken out.

Figured for the Agent.

Painter's premiums on his mutual policies would have cost about $26,000 a year. There was a 20 per cent discount allowed, netting about $21,000 annually. Painter figured out to Wilcox's satisfaction how he could carry this much insurance. With a salary of $6,000 a year as president of the E. O. Painter Fertilizer Company and $19,000 a year income from 190 shares of the fertilizer stock, there was left a margin of $4,000 annually for living expenses above the $21,000 premiums.

But before the Mutual wrote these policies an inspector and a medical examiner were sent to Jacksonville from the company's home office, and they made the investigations and examination that satisfied them.

Painter explained to Wilcox his plan to increase the capitalization of the company to about $700,000, arguing that his earnings would be increased and he would receive a large block of this new stock as a dividend on his old stock. June 3 was the date set for the stockholders to pass on this new stock issue. Some of the directors of the company opposed such a large stock increase, but Painter contended that they were not fully informed on the possibilities of the business growing and paying dividends on a capitalization this large.

Agent Helped Figure.

According to D. A. Morrison, Jr., secretary of the fertilizer company, Mr. Comfort, of Blood & Comfort, insurance agents who placed most of the other half million policies, figured with Painter and showed how he could carry a half million insurance

Parcel Post Clerks Eat Big Cake Down To 11-Pound Limit

Here is the latest "ripple" in the parcel post office as told by Postmaster Hugh McKee Friday:

"A prominent Atlanta woman brought in a bulky package Thursday and handed it to the parcel post clerk to be weighed.

"'It's a cake,' said the woman smilingly, 'and I want to send it to Cuba to a relative. I baked it myself.'

"'Sorry,' said the clerk, 'but the parcel weighs 12 1-4 pounds. The law provides for shipment of not more than 11-pound packages by parcel post.'

"The woman asked for a knife. She unwrapped her package and proceeded to cut a large, toothsome slice from the cake and invited the boys to partake of it. Before she was through with her hospitality she had given away a big part of her cake. The rest of it she mailed."

CHATTANOOGA, June 6.—As the result of the war among the ice manufacturers of this city, the price of ice has risen 100 per cent since Tuesday and is now selling at 20 cents a hundredweight.

NEGRO DECLARES HE MADE NO ADMISSION OF GUILT TO COLYAR

Denial of Existence of Any New Affidavits, as Charged Before Jury, Borne Out---Lanford Again Charges Felder Is Trying to Foil Justice.

Strenuous denials of any knowledge of the mysterious affidavit reported to have been made by Jim Conley, in which he was said to have confessed to A. S. Colyar that he murdered Mary Phagan, was made to Chief of Detectives Lanford Friday by both men.

Conley, on the grill, declared that he had never heard of Colyar until he read his name in the newspapers in connection with the dictograph controversy. The negro said he had never either talked with him or seen him, and that he had at no time made an affidavit other than the ones given to the police.

Colyar made a similar denial.

Following the examination, Lanford declared that the whole report was wholly without foundation. He also stated that Conley had reiterated the truth of his former affidavit and that there was nothing further to add to it.

"I attribute this report to Colonel Felder's work," said the chief. "It merely shows again that Felder is in league with the defense of Frank; that the attorney is trying to muddy the waters of this investigation to shield Frank and throw the blame on another.

Charges Felder Plot.

"This first became noticeable when Felder endeavored to secure the release of Conley. His ulterior motive, I am sure, was the protection of Frank. He had been informed that the negro had this damaging evidence against Frank, and Felder did all in his power to secure the negro's release. He declared that it was a shame that the police should hold Conley, an innocent negro.

"He protested strenuously against it. Yet not one time did Felder attempt to secure the release of Newt Lee or Gordon Bailey on the same grounds, even though both of these negroes had been held longer than Conley. This to me is significant of Felder's ulterior motive in getting Conley away from the police."

Peculiar Features.

A feature of Conley's affidavits and stories which has struck many who have read them over is the apparent care which has been taken in framing the declarations so that Conley can not be held as an accessory to the murder itself, and so that the indictment can hold which charges Leo Frank of killing Mary Phagan by strangulation.

In the sensational affidavit in which Conley swore that he helped Frank dispose of the body, there was no mention of the cord with which the strangulation was supposed to have been accomplished. It was only said that Frank had told Conley that a girl had hit her head against something back there. This left nothing in the negro's story to indicate that the killing had been other than accidental. The indictment charging strangulation would have had no support in the negro's story.

An Omission Supplied.

But the day that the negro went through the factory with the detectives and re-enacted the tragedy, this omission was supplied. Conley was standing at the point where he said he had found the body and was describing the manner in which it lay. He was about to continue by telling of placing it on his shoulder when he was interrupted by one of the officers.

"Didn't you find any cord there?" the officer asked.

Conley hesitated and then answered that he had, and said that the cord was right by the girl's body, but that he did not know that it had been used to strangle her.

Conley's story also avoided implicating him as an accessory to the murder by declaring that Frank had said that the girl had struck her head accidentally. This relieved Conley from any guilty knowledge of the girl's death. Had Conley framed his story so as to have Frank admitting murdering the girl, Conley would have been an accessory to the crime and would have been liable to the death penalty.

Mystery in Notes.

Another weird feature is contained in one of Conley's stories of the note writing. He said that he wrote one of the notes and that Frank wrote another. Yet the two notes are admittedly in identically the same handwriting.

After this is explained, those interested in the case will ask how Frank could have been satisfied with these incoherent notes, in the first place. It will be represented that if the notes actually had been dictated, as the negro says they were, there would have been some intelligibility and evident sequence to the notes. Instead, they say, the notes are exactly like the ramblings of a drunken and ignorant person.

Darley's Contradiction.

No explanation ever has been given of the wide discrepancies in the time of different events on the day of the tragedy, as narrated by the negro and as described by others who were actual participants in the events. One of the most glaring is that of the conversation which Conley says he overheard between Foreman Darley and Miss Mattie Smith. Conley has declared that he heard this between 11 and 12 o'clock. Darley insists that he left the factory with Miss Smith at 9:30 in the morning. At this time Conley says he was not in the factory, but that he came later at the invitation of Frank.

Conley may not be able to explain these breaks in his story at this time, but he surely will be asked to explain them satisfactorily when he is called as a witness in the trial of Frank.

My Duty, Says Dorsey.

Stating that the wife of a man accused of a crime would be the last person to learn of, or admit, his guilt, and that the most unpleasant feature of a prosecuting attorney's duty was the suffering that must necessarily fall to the lot of innocent relatives, Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey replied Friday to the letter of Mrs. Leo M. Frank bitterly criticising his alleged methods of obtaining evidence.

In speaking of the Phagan case, the Solicitor said that Frank had been indicted by the Grand Jury, and were he inclined to believe otherwise than in his guilt, it was his sworn duty to prosecute the case against the man under indictment and no other.

The police and the detectives, he said, were obtaining the evidence, and not his office.

His statement follows:

Solicitor's Reply.

"I have read the statement printed in the Atlanta newspapers over the signature of Mrs. Leo M. Frank, and I have only to say, without in any wise taking issue with her premises, as I might, that the wife of a man accused of crime would probably be the last

CHIEF SAYS LAW BALKS HIS WAR ON VICE

Resort in Spring Street Flourishes While Injunction Prevents Police Interference.

It became known Friday that Chief of Police James L. Beavers made the startling charge before the vice investigating Grand Jury that the courts of the State of Georgia made it impossible for him to close the most notorious resort that had ever operated in Atlanta.

S. C. Glass, a member of the Grand Jury, who was not present at the session Thursday when it was announced the vice probe had been concluded, said Friday that he, too, knew of the existence of the place and would demand at the next session that the tribunal go deeper into vice conditions and take some decisive action.

Mr. Glass made the emphatic statement that conditions were worse than they were before the restricted district was closed and that it was up to the jury to do something to relieve the situation. He said the Philadelphia ministers had not far exaggerated the street evil; that the respectable community was being encroached upon by houses of ill fame, and that women of questionable character walked the streets of Atlanta daily brushing elbows with the wife and school girl.

Resort Is in Spring Street.

The house in question is in Spring Street. The place was raided several months ago. Recorder Broyles ordered the woman held for the City Court and asked Chief Beavers to have her moved from that locality. The woman's lawyers applied for and secured an injunction from the Fulton Superior Court restraining the police from moving her. The restraining order still is in effect.

The case of Mrs. N. P. Powell, of 95 Spring Street, was on trial before Judge Andrew Calhoun, in the City Court, Friday. Chief Beavers, who appeared against her, stated that the house was still being operated in violation of the law, but that he was powerless to act. He said the woman, if found guilty, would pay a fine and go back and he could do nothing but make a new case, which, he said, would be several weeks in getting to court.

Despite what Chief Beavers said was overwhelming evidence, and the statement of Grand Juryman Glass,

W. R. Daley, Speaking at Commencement Exercises, Calls Buildings Fire Traps.

Declaring that Atlanta school buildings are inadequate, Colonel William R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, speaking before the forty-first graduating class of the Girls' High School, the third graduating class of the English-Commercial High School, at commencement exercises Thursday night, advocated a special tax to maintain the public schools.

Colonel Daley called the Girls' High School building a "dark and gloomy structure, and a veritable fire-trap, endangering the lives of the girls of Atlanta." He characterized the English-Commercial High School as a "homeless orphan, housed in a ramshackle old residence," and declared that an explosion blowing the present high school building to atoms would be a blessing to the city.

Graduates Dressed Alike.

The class was the largest ever graduated from a high school in the State of Georgia, and numbered 137 girls. Each girl wore a pretty white dress and carried a huge bunch of pink Killarney roses. The dresses were all exactly alike, and all made the same length from the floor. After repeating the Lord's prayer in unison, the class was seated in the rows of chairs at the rear of the stage. Next came a chorus, "Carmena Waltz," followed by a speech of greeting by Miss Gertrude Gates. An essay, "Vocational Schools," was read by Miss Blanche Foster, and after it part of the class sang "The Dance of the Leaves." Miss Floy Edwards read "Ethical Values at the High School," and the entire class sang "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

Miss Victor Wins Cup.

A feature of the program was the awarding of the Vivian Marsh cup to Miss Jeannette Victor, who also was winner of the Agnes Scott College scholarship. The handsome silver loving cup, which is awarded annually by Hon. F. M. Marsh, was presented by Colonel Daley.

The girls were called forward in groups of seven to receive their diplomas, and hearty applause greeted each group.

The closing number of the program was a march and drill by the class. First came girls with hoops draped with pink roses and green leaves, and then others with pink and green garlands.

BROYLES RANKS CAESAR BELOW BEAVERS

Recorder Declares Crossing the Rubicon Not in It With Closing the Tenderloin.

In an address at the Inman Park Presbyterian Church Thursday night, Judge Nash Broyles declared that Chief Beavers was a greater man than Julius Caesar. The subject of Judge Broyles' address was "Citizenship." Referring to the closing of the tenderloin by Chief Beavers, he said:

"The act of Chief Beavers in closing the houses in our midst, without the advice and approval of his associates and superiors, was a braver and greater act than that of Caesar when he crossed the Rubicon and took Rome.

Chief Also More Patriotic.

"It was a more patriotic act, for when Caesar crossed the Rubicon, he did so against the command of the Roman Senate, and thereby became a lawbreaker. Chief Beavers, by his act, became a defender of the law. He placed his life in jeopardy and he had to be a man of supreme moral and physical courage to go ahead."

Referring to the recent crime wave throughout the United States, Judge Broyles attributed it to the lack of respect for the law, caused by failure to enforce it.

South Is Chief Offender.

"The laws are not properly enforced in the United States, and especially in the South. The courts are held in contempt, and punishment is seldom meted out to evil-doers. There is not enough respect for the law. In the city of London, with a population of 7,000,000 people, there were only 20 murders in the year 1912; in Birmingham, Ala., with only 140,000 people, there were, in the same year, 306 murders.

"Records show that in Great Britain and Canada, 80 per cent of the murderers are convicted, whereas in the United States only 20 per cent are convicted.

Calls England a Model.

"The laws are enforced speedily and with certainty in Great Britain, and until we follow the example of our mother country we need expect nothing but crime and criminals.

"The day is speedily coming when there will be the same standard of morals for men as for women. The immoral man should be as much shunned as the immoral woman."

Girl Prefers Jail To Reform Home

Alma Barrett, a young woman arrested Thursday night in a raid on the Frankfort Hotel, at 27 South Pryor Street, pleaded in Police Court Friday morning for a stockade sentence in preference to being sent to the Martha Home to be reformed. Mrs. F. J. Rathnaw, who claims to be the wife of a soldier, also was arrested in the raid. Two men who were with the woman escaped.

When Judge Broyles asked the women if they would not like to go to the Martha Home, the Barrett woman cried: "Send me to the stockade. I do not want to be reformed." Each was given a sentence of 29 days in the police station.

Begs Police to Find Pet Poodle's Grave

Fearing the ghost of her pet poodle Snookums is wandering about disconsolate at the absence of a proper monument at his mound, Mrs. J. DuPree, of 42 Hendrix Avenue, has applied to the police for aid in locating the grave of her pet.

Snookums died May 30. At the time of his death Mrs. DuPree's husband was ill and could not leave his bedside to see that the poodle's carcass was properly interred. So Mrs. DuPree commissioned a passing negro to perform the burial rites. The negro has never returned to tell Mrs. DuPree where her darling lies buried.

Now she wants to find the grave and erect a suitable headstone.

Dr. Pickard Likely To Be Mercer Head

SAVANNAH, GA., June 6.—The Rev. W. L. Pickard, pastor of the First Baptist Church of this city, is likely to become the head of Mercer University, following the resignation of Dr. S. Y. Jameson.

Dr. Pickard now is one of the board of trustees of the University. He says he is not seeking the presidency of the school and does not especially wish it, but admits it offers a field of large usefulness. His friends believe he will accept.

Atlanta's "finest" blossomed forth Friday in their nifty new summer uniforms, undismayed by impending rain.

The regular inspection incident to the appearance of the new uniforms will not take place Friday, as the officials are all busy with the Grand Jury investigation.

person to learn all of the facts establishing his guilt, and certainly would be the last person to admit his culpability, even though proved by overwhelming evidence to the satisfaction of every impartial citizen beyond the possibility of reasonable doubt.

"Since the discovery of this crime I have rigidly adhered to my consistent policy of refraining from newspaper interviews or statements with relation to the evidence upon which the State must depend to convict and punish the perpetrator of the crime, and it is my purpose to adhere steadfastly to this policy, submitting to the jury of Fulton County citizens, to be selected under the fair provision of the law, the evidence upon which alone conviction or acquittal must depend.

"A bill of indictment has been found by the Grand Jury, composed of impartial and respected citizens of this community, and as Solicitor General of this circuit, charged with the duty of aiding in the enforcement of our laws by the prosecution of those indicted for violating the law, I welcome all evidence from any source that will aid an impartial jury, under the charge of the court, in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused.

"Perhaps the most unpleasant feature incident to the position of prosecuting attorney arises from the fact that punishment of the guilty inevitably brings suffering to relatives who are innocent of participation in the crime, but who must share the humiliation flowing from its exposure.

"This, however, is an evil attendant upon crime, and the courts and their officers can not allow their sympathies for the innocent to retard the vigorous prosecution of those indicted for the commission of crime, for were it otherwise, sentiment, and not justice, would dominate the administration of our laws.

"HUGH M. DORSEY."

The McKnight Incident.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Friday that his department would take no further action in reference to Minola McKnight, the colored cook at the Frank residence, who is said by the detectives to have made an affidavit incriminating Frank, but who denied it shortly after to The Georgian.

Chief Lanford said that if the woman was to be rearrested it would have to be at the instigation of Solicitor Dorsey. With an investigation of the "leaks" in the department taking place before the Grand Jury, the detectives are saying little to-day about the Phagan case, but it was plain that they were disappointed that the McKnight affidavit, which had been heralded as a document of the most vital importance, had fallen flat so far as actual value as evidence was concerned.

The affidavit, in the first place, was only hearsay evidence and would not have been received in any court. To top this, the woman only a few hours after she is said to have made the affidavit made a most emphatic and complete denial. She said that she had said nothing and that she knew nothing damaging to Frank.

"I am not surprised at the turn of this feature of the case," is the only comment that Chief Lanford would make upon her repudiation.

Censorship Ordered.

Announcement was made by Chief of Detectives Lanford Friday that he had issued orders forbidding the giving out of any information to the newspapers except by the heads of the departments.

The chief said that the order had been given prior to any investigation by the Grand Jury into department "leaks" and was, therefore, not the result of the probe. It, however, was not posted until Thursday night.

The new order makes any member of the detective force liable to immediate suspension if he gives out information without the authority of the head of the department.

Conforming to the new order, Detectives Starnes and Campbell refused to intimate the nature of the information they gleaned from Jim Conley's wife after they had questioned her at length in the office of Solicitor Dorsey. They would not even divulge the reason for questioning her again.

Frank's Cook Missing.

The report that Minola McKnight, reputed author of the sensational affidavit against Leo M. Frank, had disappeared from her home added another mystery to the Phagan murder investigation Friday.

She was not at the Selig residence, 68 East Georgia Avenue, where she had been employed as cook and where she returned immediately after she was released from the police station. It was said she could not be found at her home in the rear of 351 Pulliam Street and the detectives denied they had her in custody again.

Her whereabouts was a complete mystery, although the search that was being made was expected to locate her within a short time. It was not believed that she had left town, but rather that she was in hiding at the home of one of her acquaintances or relatives to avoid further questioning by the police and newspaper reporters.

Gordon Represents Whom?

George Gordon, whose name has been mentioned frequently as the attorney of the McKnight woman, was asked Friday to define his connection with the Phagan case. This he declined to do. He was asked whether his services had been engaged personally by the McKnight woman or by other parties. He refused to answer.

"What does the woman say?" he inquired.

"She says that she doesn't even know you," he was told. He would make no comment on this information, citing instead the example of a certain wise old owl that found that the less he said the more he heard. Then he proceeded faithfully to emulate the example of the owl by returning to his typewriter.

Say Woman Is Lying.

That Minola McKnight was lying when she asserted that she never had signed an affidavit in regard to conversations she had heard between Mrs. Leo Frank and her mother was the statement Friday of Ernest Pickett and Roy Cravens, the two employees at the Beck & Gregg hardware store whose information led to the arrest of the McKnight woman.

They did not wish to talk at length on the matter, but desired to make this particular statement in reference to the affidavit, as they said that they had been present during the time the affidavit was being prepared and when the McKnight woman signed it.

They said that considerable persuasion was necessary before the woman finally consented to talk, but that after she began she told her story with little hesitation.

DANIELS SCORES HAZING AND WHISKY

Secretary Tells Navy Cadets Officer Is Traitor Who Resigns From the Service.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., June 6.—Bitterly denouncing hazing and urging total abstinence, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels to-day made a speech at the commencement exercises of the Naval Academy that brought ringing cheers from the big assemblage of cadets.

"I have no sympathy for the arguments in favor of hazing," declared Daniels. "There is none worth considering. Let me appeal to you to take the lead of the American institutions in stamping out this barbarous practice from our schools. Put the hazer under your ban as one who violates your high code of ethics. I would like to see Annapolis reopen the putrid grave of the code duello and bury on top of its rotten corpse the practice of hazing.

"While there are many good men who drink temperately, there is only one safe course for the young man who would master his soul, and that is to abstain from intoxicating drinks."

Touching on the practice of some naval officers resigning their positions to go into the commercial world, Daniels said:

"The United States does not educate naval cadets for the purpose of supplying trained men for the big industrial concerns of the country. Every principle of honor, faith and fair dealing implies that a man would not accept a free education from his country and then give his talents to some industrial concern instead of to the navy. To the eternal credit of the navy it may be said that the resignations of officers who wish to leave the service of their country are few."

Chief Says He Is Powerless.

"Time and again," he said, "I have seen men and women go into the Spring Street house. I have on several occasions called the attention of Chief Beavers to the situation. He explains that he is powerless to act because of an injunction from the Superior Court.

"This house is not the only one. I know of some few others, and I will ask the Grand Jury to look into it thoroughly. I do not think this thing should end, as all such investigations do, by a formal presentment delivered to a judge and having it pigeonholed for 'future action.' It was not so very long ago that a certain hotel was raided by the police. Somebody 'higher up' stopped the proceedings and nothing ever came of it.

"As to the street evil, anyone can see it. I do not mean that every man who goes on the street will be accosted. Only an Adonis would be accosted 21 times on one afternoon, but I do say that women of this character walk the streets of Atlanta every day. They live in the apartment houses, hotels and even in the best communities. Some of them live now just about like they did before they were run out of the restricted district.

"It is a large undertaking for a Grand Jury, but the time is ripe for it, and it should not be done at all unless it is going to be thorough."

"Whatever evidence has been laid before the Grand Jury, I am confident that vice conditions in Atlanta were not shown to be worse now than before the segregated district was wiped out," said Chief Beavers Friday in commenting on the vice probe in progress before the Grand Jury.

The chief said that he did not know the significance of the announcement that the probe would be dropped. He was sure, however, that the jurors would learn that conditions had been improved steadily from the time the anti-vice crusade began.

"When the investigation closes," he said, "the public will be satisfied. The truth will have been sifted from the falsehood and we will have the estimate of the city's condition from a reliable source.

"City Not Spotless Yet."

"Conditions now, in my opinion, are incalculably better than before the houses were closed. I do not mean to say that Atlanta morally is a 'spotless town.' It is not, and for the very good reason that it is impossible to clean a city thoroughly in the short period of eight months.

"The work is continuing, however, and it is safe to promise a better city next year than it was this year, and so on into the future so long as the crusade is kept up."

Foreman L. H. Beck announced that the probe had been completed along the line outlined in the jury's charge, and would not be carried further unless members of the jury decided to do so at the next meeting.

Few witnesses, he said, who had been summoned to testify on this question had had an opportunity to give testimony.

No Specific Places Discussed.

The announcement that two members, and probably more, would insist on a searching probe, would indicate that following the meeting Tuesday, witnesses "excused until further notice" will be recalled and the question taken up again.

It became known also that the jury's probe had dealt only with the existence of vice in a general sense, and that no specific places or indictments had been discussed.

Witnesses are under subpena, however, who it is said will give startling evidence of the existence of vice along more specific lines.

The Felder-Lanford dictograph controversy probe was not completed at the session Friday and an especial effort will be made by Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Chief of Detectives N. A. Lanford to have a special session one day next week to consider no other question.

Felder Promises Sensation.

Both parties have made a personal appeal to the jury to probe the affair to the bottom, and it is more than likely their request will be granted.

In taking up the dictograph case, Colonel Felder will demand that the jury probe deep into his charges of corruption in the detective department. This will bear more directly on the vice question and probably will be taken up before the dictograph case.

The next development of any importance will be the statement of Colonel Felder to be issued Sunday, in which he states he positively will substantiate every charge he has made.

PAINTER'S WILL FAILS TO CLEAR MYSTERY

for six years at a cost of about $35,000 the first year and about $15,000 the 000 by paying about $20,000 premiums second, applying policy dividends to reduce it $5,000 and then taking advantage of the extension clauses that would keep the insurance in force for four years longer.

Morrison said the fertilizer company would have taken care of these preuims if Painter had been unable to do so, as a matter of business policy.

Morrison declared that the fertilizer company is in no wise financially embarrassed, nor was at the time Painter began taking out his insurance. The company, he said, does a business of $700,000 to $800,000 annually and for the month of May, 1913, showed a gross increase of $20,000 over the same month last year.

Neither Judge Hamlin nor Secretary Morrison would place an estimate on the valueof Painter's estate. The will, probated last Thursday afternoon, did not reveal its value. Court appraisers to fix the values have not been named. The bulk of it, though, consists of the fertilizer stock and his Riverside Drive residence. The stock, they declare, is valued at more than 30 per cent above par.

The home is worth proably $50,000. With his stock paying $19,000 a year on an 8 per cent basis it would have a value of about $150,000.

Expects 10,000 for Merchants' Meeting

Progress in the raising of funds to entertain delegates to the Southern Merchants' Convention in Atlanta August 4-16, was reported at a meeting Friday morning of the finance committee of the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

The committee has met with much encouragement in its campaign among the business men, and little doubt is expressed that the full amount will be ready when the convention is called to order.

It is expected that between 5,000 and 10,000 Southern merchants will attend the convention. Secretary Moore, of the Freight Bureau, said he had issued 25,000 invitations, and expects two-fifths of them to be accepted.

Sues Lodge Members Who Threw Him Out

Because he objected to Georgia Lodge 493, Brith Abraham, taking in a certain "new member," Mike Kaufman was forcibly ejected from the lodge room by three members of the order, I. Feinberg, J. Berstein and I. Springer, according to Kaufman's suit for $5,000 damages against the three men, filed with the Superior Court Friday.

Kaufman said in his suit that when the name of the "doubtful member" was introduced, he addressed the chair in opposition to his admission into the lodge. He said Springer shouted "Throw him out," and that Feinberg and Bernstein executed his orders.

Beavers to Attend Police Chiefs' Meet

L. H. Beck, foreman of the Fulton County Grand Jury, Friday told Chief of Police Beavers he could attend the annual convention of the International Police Chiefs' Association in Washington, D. C., next week without interfering with the Grand Jury's inquiry.

The chief will leave for Washington Saturday noon and will be gone for eight days.

"These annual conventions of police chiefs are most valuable for the police departments," said Foreman Beck. Mr. Beavers will learn much that will enable him to better his force."

Thursday night the association attended a theater party at the Forsyth.

"Squirrel Trot" by A Squirrel Thrills New York Society

NEW YORK, June 6.—The "squirrel trot," latest and liveliest of dances had its impromptu premier in the Hotel Plaza tea room yesterday.

A youthful "climber" of the squirrel family started across Fifty-ninth Street to see the great world. A limousine side-swiped a street car just that moment, and the squirrel was driven by sheer terror right into our best society.

In the Plaza hall it sped past Miss Florence Malone's bulldog. The dog caught the spirit of the light fantastic muse and followed the squirrel.

The squirrel glided into the tea room. The dog was at its heels. It hurdled one table, paused a moment in a dainty woman's lap, and then went on.

The whole throng of spectators was instantly inspired. They hopped and squealed in the ecstasy of the new movement. Finally there was a stampede to the lobby. A heartless management sent emissaries to stop the most thrilling dance of a dance-mad season.

Racing Club's Gift To Charity Attacked

BALTIMORE, June 6.—Two of the leading church denominations of Baltimore, through their official heads, have adopted resolutions protesting against the acceptance by any charitable organization of the proffered gift of $12,000 by the Maryland Jockey Club, because the money "was derived from gambling."

Dr. H. Warren Buckler, chairman of the commission appointed to distribute the money given by the jockey club for the benefit of poor tuberculosis sufferers, declared that he has no patience with the protests of the Methodist and Episcopal denominations.

REGINA, SASK., June 6.—For eighteen months the Panama Canal has been ready for the passage of ships, should there be any emergency requiring the presence of war vessels on the Pacific, says James Arthurs, one of the sub-engineers working on the canal, who is here on a vacation.

The work being done now is to make the canal safe and prevent slides when the water is let in.

Fraternities Barred By Alabama College

ANNISTON, ALA., June 6.—That the Alpha Omega Fraternity of the Alabama Presbyterian College in this city is misrepresentative and exercises a bad influence, is given as the reason for the action of the board of trustees in putting it under ban and totally barring the Greek letter societies from the school at their meeting here this week.

It is said that the chapter admitted members outside of the student body, and had few members among the students.

DOCTORS WAR ON FRIEDMANN'S 'CURE' HERE

County Medical Society Urges State and City Officials to Ban Serum.

The Fulton County Medical Society, at its meeting Thursday, passed resolutions strongly recommending to the city and State Boards of Health that measures be taken at once to prevent use of the Friedmann treatment for tuberculosis in this State until the commisison appointed by the United States Government has reported favorably upon the safety of the injection of the turtle serum into the human system.

Attention is called to the closing of the Friedmann Institute in New York on account of the probability of the serum's menace to the human body, and to the movement to establish a similar institution in Georgia.

The resolutions follow:

Whereas the report upon the Friedmann treatment have been more or less unfavorable, showing the results in all cases treated to be practically negative and in some cases a strong probability of harm having been done;

Whereas there is always an element of danger in injecting living germs into the tissues how ever much these germs may be attenuated, by their returning to their former virulence and activity in the tissues and by producing infection or stimulating the infection that already exists to greater activity;

Whereas the Friedmann Company has already sent agents into this State with the object of establishing a Friedmann institute and to treat patients, and

Whereas the Board of Health of New York City, after careful investigation, has closed up the institution established in that city on account of it being strongly probable that said institution was a menace to public health; be it

Resolved, That the Fulton County Medical Society recommend to the City Board of Health and to the State Board of Health that they use measures to prevent the Friedmann vaccine or any living tubercle bacilli to be injected into the tissues of human beings until the commission appointed by the United States Government has reported favorably upon the safety of such injections or until the said health boards have satisfied themselves in some other way that these injections will not do ultimate harm to the individual treated.

Be it further resolved, That the secretary place a copy of these resolutions in the hands of the secretaries of these respective boards, and furnish a copy to the local daily papers.

SECOND RICHEST SENATOR HIT BY NEW TARIFF

Oliver Resents Lobby Investigators Prying Into His Personal Affairs.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Senator Oliver, of Pennsylvania, testified at the lobby investigation to-day that he had holdings representing about $5,000,000 which would be affected by the tariff bill. One and one-half millions of this sum were represented by Pittsburg newspaper stock. The rest is in coal mines. Next to "Uncle Ike" Stephenson, of Wisconsin, Oliver is the richest Senator.

Oliver said that a number of men had called on him in regard to tariff matters, but there was nothing improper in the interviews.

The witness did not know of any money being used either directly or indirectly to influence legislation.

Senator Walsh, a member of the investigating committee, showed a disposition to pry further into Oliver's wealth.

"Have you any further holdings affected by the tariff bill which have not been mentioned?" inquired Walsh.

"Mr. Chairman," responded Oliver, "I object to having my personal affairs pried into by this committee, and I believe this investigation should be confined strictly to the subjects outlined by the resolution under which it was authorized."

"I think you are dead right," exclaimed Senator Knute Nelson.

Oliver went on to explain that he had holdings other than those mentioned, among them copper property in Michigan.

SUFFRAGE RENDS ROYAL FAMILY OF ENGLAND

Queen Mary Rebukes Daughter Sternly for Commending Justice of "the Cause."

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 6.—Emily W. Davison, the militant suffragette who tried to break up the Derby Wednesday and was seriously injured, continued to hold her own to-day and the attending physicians said that her chances for recovery seemed brighter than yesterday.

When she was able to enunciate Miss Davison's first question was:

"Did I ruin the race?"

Friends of the injured woman fear that her brain may be affected by the concussion. Her skull was cracked just above the base.

A suffragette outrage was reported from the Isle of Man to-day. Militants placed broken glass about the motorcycle track at Douglas where the tourist trophy event was scheduled to be held to-day.

The situation in the royal household is becoming tense, owing to the bitter opposition of Queen Mary to female suffrage and the fact that the "cause" has been espoused by some of the attendants of her majesty.

The Duchess of Portland refused to accept the position of mistress of the robes because of her sympathy for the propaganda and her knowledge that Queen Mary resents it.

Princess Mary Rebuked.

An interesting story was circulated to-day that Princess Mary, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary, was sternly rebuked by her mother for daring to commend the justice of "the cause" after Miss Davison had been hurt.

A court decision of far-reaching importance as regards reclamation for damage done by militant suffragettes was handed down here to-day in the case of the London and Manchester Plate Glass Company against Lloyds, the insurance underwriters.

The court held that companies insuring plate glass are not responsible for damage done by suffragettes. Civil suits against the women personally or their organization is the only recourse.

England Not Trying to Extradite Miss Pankhurst.

PARIS, June 6.—Foreign Minister Pichon denied that the British Foreign Office had demanded the extradition of Christabel Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader. Miss Pankhurst fled here to avoid arrest, and opened a Paris bureau of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Morgan and Vatican Rumor Not Affirmed

NEW YORK, June 6.—"You can say that 'at the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. it was stated that nothing was known of the subject,'" was the reply of J. Pierpont Morgan when told of a dispatch from Berlin repeating the rumor that the late J. Pierpont Morgan's mission in Italy at the time of his death was to reorganize the finances of the Catholic Church throughout the world.

According to the Berlin dispatch, Mr. Morgan had hoped to crown his career by carrying out the plans of the Vatican.

Wellesley Girls Quit $5,000-a-Year Club

BOSTON, June 6.—Members of the Wellesley College "5,000-a-year club," who pledged themselves not to marry until at least three years after they were graduated, and then only to a man with an income of $5,000 a year have disbanded.

The club, opposed by the faculty, was compelled to conduct its meetings in secret. Unhappy girls, regretting their solemn pledge, seized upon a faulty clause in the club by-laws, to disrupt the organization.

How Poor---How Pitifully Poor---Is This Poor Little Rich Girl

Forced to Choose Between Her Warring Father and Mother

Muriel Bishop, her millionaire father and her mother.

Nothing More Terrible Than Plight of Muriel Bishop, Says Dorothy Dix.

By DOROTHY DIX.

There is one story that can be relied on to always strike tears from any heart not as hard as a stone, and that is the story of the poor little homeless child who has been robbed by death of its parents.

There is another story equally pathetic, though we do not stop to shed any tears over it. That is the story of the poor little rich child who is homeless and who has been robbed by the divorce court of its parents.

A few weeks ago Romona Borden, the heiress to millions, related just such a tale in explanation of why she had run away from the place in which her father had put her. She told how she had been a helpless little pawn in the quarrels between her parents, who were separated; how she had been bandied about between them, and how they had struggled and fought over possession of her.

"I had everything in the world that money would buy," she sobbed out, "but I didn't have any mother or any home—and that was what I wanted most—a mother and a home."

The sequel to the Bishop divorce case is a repetition of this tragic theme. The children have been divided between the parents, some to be motherless, some fatherless, all homeless in the best sense of the word, and the final dramatic climax came when Muriel, a little girl of eleven, went into court to make her final choice between mother and father and chose to live with her father.

How Pitifully Poor.

Poor little rich girl, who can't have both mother and father nor a real home to grow up in! How poor—how terribly, pitifully poor—she is!

But could anything in a civilized land be sadder than the spectacle of a little child being called upon to choose betwen the mother who bore her and the father who has cherished her? Think of her having to turn from the outstretched arms of the mother to the welcoming hand of the father.

Who is to teach her which to choose? Yet she needed the wisdom of a Solomon in such a choice. How was she to be guided? Both parents had been tender to her, both had loved her. Childlike, she unquestioningly loved them without weighing her affection for either. How cruel the fate that did not permit her to go on blindly loving both without judging between them!

No Drop of Gall So Bitter.

Nothing is more terrible than that a child should be force to become a partisan of either parent, arrayed against the other one, taught by the very exigencies of the situation itself to judge, and blame, and treat as an enemy either the father or mother. There is no drop of gall so bitter as that which lies at the bottom of the cup of family dissension, and no crime worse than that of pressing this drink upon the lips of a child. It is a draught that poisons the very springs of life at the time when life should be sweetest and most carefree and trusting.

The circumstances of the Bishop case are too familiar to need recalling here. Mr. Bishop charged his wife with being a dipsomaniac. Mrs. Bishop accused her husband of unfaithfulness. There were suits and countersuits, and in the end a divorce decree has been awarded to Mrs. Bishop.

The two older girls, Mary and Augusta, who were grown and are to make their debut next winter, elected to go with their father. Mrs. Bishop alleges that they did this because of their father's wealth, and because he could give them more luxuries and social advantages than she could, and says that she has letters from them, written within the last few months, telling her of their love for her.

Two other little girls, Natalie and Abigail, the courts awarded to their mother, and it was Muriel, the fifth daughter, who had to choose between her parents.

Muriel was with her mother last fall and was kidnaped, so the mother claims, by the two older daughters. They came to the hotel to see the mother, and while one girl talked to the mother the other girl invited the child to go riding with her and took her to her father, who carried her to Virginia to his sister, where she awaited the outcome of the trial.

Mrs. Bishop made the bitterest claim that any woman can voice, and that is that her children have been prejudiced against her and that they have been made to believe that she was a victim of the drink habit, when this is not true. Whether that is the case or not, it but adds to the pathos of the situation in which the children find themselves when they have a mother's weakness and a father's sin exploited before them.

"Honor thy father and thy mother" is the commandment given to children from on high. Happy, the children who can honor their father and their mother and look up to them and reverence them, instead of having to try to decide which is the least blameworthy.

And certainly if wrong doing is ever punished in this world it is when parents see themselves stripped of all the attributes that should adorn parenthood, standing guilty before their children, waiting for sentence, for no eyes see with such pitiless clearness as children's eyes, no judgment is so merciless as that of youth.

Must Have Father's Help.

No matter how much a mother tries to do her duty, no matter how much she strives to make a home for her children, she cannot do it ideally without the strength and help of a husband, and a father for her children. This is true even when the sainted ghost of a dead father hovers over the home, and whose spirit can be invoked to inspire and bless it. How much less can it be done when the woman teaches her children that their father was unworthy, and to hate him.

Nor can a man, though he have ten times the millions of Mr. Bishop, and can house his children in a palace, and hire myriads of servants to wait upon them, make a home for his children without a wife at the head of it and a mother to guide them and love them. Such a home, a home within which the mother's name is not even whispered, is a mockery of a home that must make the very furies laugh with ribald glee.

Buy This New Home---On Small Divided Payments!

THE above cut is made from a photograph of a brand-new, beautiful house, located in a most desirable residential section of Atlanta, inside of the city limits. Located 95 feet above the level of the center of the city. Plenty of fresh air, which is conducive to rosy cheeks, sharp appetite and general GOOD HEALTH. Very convenient, too, as it is located right near the street car line—only a short ride from FIVE POINTS.

You can buy this house and lot on the DIVIDED PAYMENT plan—namely, $100 down and $15 a month until paid for. No mortgage. Values in this section (CAPITOL VIEW) are bound to increase remarkably, for various reasons which we shall be glad to point out to you if you will get in touch with us. For instance: Practically all the folks in this neighborhood OWN their homes—and keep their property in good condition—which, in itself, is a great factor in bringing about higher real estate values.

People who pay RENT are like they who "eat their cake and DON'T have it"—they PART with it. On the other hand, whoever BUYS this home on our DIVIDED PAYMENT plan lives in it while paying for it—INVESTS his money—gets REAL ESTATE for it—"eats his cake and still has it." That person will have a pretty home to show for his money—whereas the person who RENTS a home will have nothing to show for his money in the end. His LANDLORD will get his money. The moral is: BE YOUR OWN LANDLORD.

ANOTHER MOVE FOR BIENNIAL SESSIONS

Oft-Proposed Legislative Reform Will Be Pressed Vigorously This Year.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The old and oft-proposed legislative reform, biennial sessions instead of annual sessions, will be advanced in the Georgia General Assembly when it meets this month for its first sitting.

Despite the widespread sentiment in favor of this innovation throughout the State, it never yet has been able to muster sufficient votes to put it through. It requires a two-thirds vote of both Houses, of course, being a constitutional amendment, and this always has been the stumbling block in the way.

This year, however, friends of this reform believe they will be able to consummate it, especially as it will be coupled with other propositions likely to make it more acceptable to the Legislature.

Besides providing that the Legislature shall meet only once every two years instead of annually, the proposed bill will seek to raise the limit of sitting from 50 to 60 days, and to put members on a flat salary basis, rather than on a per diem system of compensation.

The total two-years' salary of a member of the Legislature as it now is, is $400—$4 per day for a total of 100 days, covering two sittings. Besides this, the members draw 10 cents per mile in each direction traveled coming and going to the sessions.

By making the salary of the members $300 per annum flat, with mileage allowances, and extending the session to 60 days, it is figured that the State can save money, the members be more adequately compensated, and the reform of biennial sessions effected in circumstances genuinely acceptable all around.

A bill to enact the changes stated will be introduced early in the session by a member of the House from South Georgia.

Representative Lipscomb, of Clarke County, has about perfected his proposed tax equalization bill to be introduced in the next House.

The gentleman from Clarke has gone very deeply into the question of tax equalization, and feels that through a board of equalizers alone can Georgia raise sufficient revenue to meet her necessities.

Mr. Lipscomb takes an eminently sensible and level-headed view of the question of income and outgo, and said recently, in discussing his proposed plan, this:

Naturally, coming from Clarke, I am interested in appropriations for our State institutions located there, and I fully realize the fact that it is almost an impossible proposition to beg the State for something which she has not. I feel that the way to get appropriations is first to provide the money, and I am satisfied that the State will then give us what we need to keep up the good work and high standing of our State institutions.

In other words, Mr. Lipscomb thinks that the various State institutions may be, and will be, taken care of as they shold be by the State, provided the State treasury can be furnished the money with which to perform the service. His idea is that a board of tax equalizers will do this.

Before Mr. Lipscomb's bill is introduced, it will be passed upon by one of the most eminent constitutional lawyers in Georgia, as to its legal soundness.

There seems to be a disposition among the boards of trustees of various State institutions to co-operate with the incoming Legislature in so far as they may in the matter of halting the State's outgo hereafter as near the present status as possible, in order that future revenus may be arranged as the State's necessities demand.

This attitude undoubtedly has been brought about in large measure by the outspoken determination of the incoming Governor to hold the Legislature within the limits of the State's income.

Governor-elect Slaton has let it be understood unequivocally that he will stop the Legislature in extravagant appropriations, if he has to wield his power of veto on the general appropriation bills in order to carry out his purpose. And there can be no manner of doubt that that weapon will prove entirely effective if used, because there are more than sufficient new members ready to stand by the Governor than will be necessary to sustain his veto in those circumstances.

Under Governor Slaton, the Legislature must not appropriate more than the State Treasury can pay, as it has been accustomed to doing in the past. The Executive does not propose to permit the Legislature to dump its embarrassments upon his shoulders, when by holding it to a strict accounting as it goes along, that may be avoided.

The impression is, however, that Governor Slaton's attitude already is so well understood, both by the incoming Legislature and the various State institutions, that no trouble or serious friction is likely.

Congressman Charles G. Edwards, of the First District, is earnestly advocating better salaries for the rural mail carriers.

In this connection, he said recently:

The rural service was hardly ever intended to be self-supporting. It was established as a convenience to the people. The rural mail service is about as self-sustaining as any other branch of the service that benefits so large a number of people.

Whether the service is self-supporting, it should be efficient—it must be efficient, indeed, before it can hope to be self-supporting. In respect of that, I do not think it can be made entirely efficient unless the carriers are paid living salaries, and that is what I am getting at right now.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Elderly Folks Want To Learn New Dances.

The new dances have proved a bonanza to the dancing schools, according to those who keep posted concerning the "dancing academy," and the teachers who usually have closed their schools early are keeping them open this year until the last of June.

"We haven't hours enough to take care of all the people who come in for lessons," explained one dancing teacher. "Every hour of the afternoon and evening is taken up by people who want to learn the new dances. Some of our patrons are going away for the summer and want to be sure they know the new dances before they try them out at the summer resorts, and a good many are well beyond middle age. You would be surprised at the number of elderly men and women who want to renew their dancing days and come here for lessons."

Trying to "Kid" The Stage "Kidder."

"Actors are queer folks," remarked a stage hand at the Forsyth Theater yesterday, "especially vaudeville actors. You would imagine they'd take their professional efforts very much in the nature of work and want to get away from it and every suggestion of it as soon as they are through with their turn on the stage. But the contrary is true.

"Vaudeville actors like to see each other on the stage and they stand in the wings afternoon and evenings watching the acts that go before and come after them with as much interest as do the people in the audience. I venture to say they get more real enjoyment out of the performance than many of those who pay to see it.

"There's a great deal said and done on the stage which the audience does not catch. For instance, some actor will stand in the wings out of sight of the audience and carry on a 'kidding' conversation with the people acting and they, in turn, will keep up their end of the talk. The audience does not hear it, but those back of the scenes do, and enjoy it hugely. The great thing seems to be to 'get the goat' of the fellow who is doing his best to amuse and entertain. The 'kidder' in the wings will say all sorts of things to disconcert him. Of course, this doesn't happen all the time, but it does occur frequently and occasions lots of fun behind the scenes."

FEEDSTUFFS CROPS DECREASING FAST

Agricultural Reports Show Georgia Each Year Is Buying More and Raising Less.

That Georgia is each year raising less feedstuff for domestic animals than it consumes and becoming more dependent on other parts of the country, is shown by reports of the State Agricultural Department. At the present rate at which feedstuff stamps are being sold, more than 70,000 tons of feed will be shipped into Georgia from outside States than was received last year.

Stamp sales from January 1 to May 31, 1913, amounted to $17,392.08, against $11,331.80 for the same period of 1912. The total stamp sales for 1912 were $26,550.20. At this rate the total for 1913 will amount to $40,621.80, an increase of $14,071.60.

Stamps are placed on concentrated commercial feedstuffs shipped into the State. The present rate of increase will make the increase more than 70,000 tons for this year.

"Practically all of this feedstuff could be raised in Georgia," said J. J. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture. "The increase over last year will be more than 70,000 tons. This is regrettable and the farmers of Georgia should busy themselves.

"There is no reason why all of this feedstuff should not be raised in this State, and there is no doubt about the farmer being able to dispose of every bit which he raises. It would take many years for Georgia to raise crops equal to the demand right here at home."

FORBES WRITES ON CAPITAL AND LABOR

Employers Seem to Be Getting More Reasonable Toward the Proletariat.

By B. C. FORBES.

"Are your sympathies with the rich or with the poor, with capital or with labor?" is the question put me by a reader.

* * *

My "sympathies" are not governed by the size of a man's bank account or by his station.

* * *

I have long since abandoned hero-worship of rich men simply because of their riches, and I long ago learned that a poor man of the right stamp can be happier than a king or a plutocrat.

* * *

My questioner really wanted to know whether I habitually supported capital or labor. To that I must reply: "Neither." My experience is that capital sometimes is in the right and that labor is sometimes in the wrong.

* * *

It is human nature to sympathize with the "under dog." Labor used to be nearly always the weaker party. Therefore, public sentiment invariably favored labor. But latterly organized labor, and more especially professional labor leaders, have occasionally resirted to arbitrary acts, to brute force, to unfair methods. They have sought to take undue advantage of their newly won power. They have not always had regard for justice. They have not always considered the interests, the comfort, the safety of the public. Having become the "upper dog" in certain cases they have abused their position.

* * *

Let labor keep ever in mind that public sympathy goes out to the "under dog." Of late the public has too often been the "under dog." A revulsion against autocratic labor agitators is inevitable if unfair tactics are pursued.

* * *

In this column humble efforts have been made to bring about a better understanding between capital and labor, a clearer appreciation of the fact that enormous riches are not to be envied, and a realization on the part of employers that they must treat their employees humanely, considerately and generously. Too much class hatred is being stirred up. Men holding the very highest offices in the Republic are as guilty in this connection as the most rabid Industrial Worker leader. Nothing is to be gained by fostering insensate class animosity. Much may be lost if it is carried much farther.

* * *

My own experience and observation are that capitalists and employers are becoming reasonable in their attitude toward labor and toward the public. They are realizing that we are all human beings, that we are all in the same boat, that we are all made of the same crumbling clay, that life is short and the grave never far off, that happiness is not the product of selfishness, that service is nobler than mere gain—that, in short, the only life worth while is that founded on justice, sympathy, moderation and brotherliness. To be worth playing, the game has to be played fair.

* * *

Read this telegram just received:

KANSAS CITY, MO.—"We should concern ourselves as much nationally about the welfare of our employees as of the stumpage itself."

With these words Everett G. Griggs, of Tacoma, Wash., president of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, prefaced an appeal for thoughtful treatment of the working man in the lumber industry, in the course of his address before the annual convention of the organization, which opened here to-day.

"Efficient labor and proper equipment mean as much in the final cost of lumber to the consumer as the log itself," he continued. "Our business affects the lives of more employees than any other in the United States."

* * *

Fancy our Lumber Kings talking like that! Would they have talked so ten years ago or even five years ago? We have, indeed, traveled far of late along the road whose goal is the brotherhood of man.

* * *

One important step of the near future will be the fixing of a minimum wage. Yes, I know there are economic drawbacks, but humanity is more important than any apparent obstacle. I was talking the other evening with Mr. D. A. Thomas, the largest coal mine owner in Britain and the operators' representative in the recent coal strike, and he tells me that the minimum wage then introduced has not upset things seriously.

* * *

The most pitiable people in America are the very, very rich and the very, very poor. Evolution is making for the modification of the circumstances of both.

* * *

I have rambled far from the question I started out to answer and have not written what I originally had in mind, but it is too late to mend matters now.

Loses $25,000 Suit, But Wife Has Purse

MACON, GA., June 6.—One of the largest court awards recorded here in many years was made yesterday afternoon, when a jury gave W. D. Nisbet, of Birmingham, a judgment for $25,000 against P. C. Wadsworth, of Macon and other cities.

Wadsworth formerly was an officer of the Southern States Cotton Corporation. He was sued by Nisbet for a commission for organizing the concern.

Stock owned by Wadsworth and in the possession of the court, to the extent of $5,000, was delivered to Nisbet. Other stock worth $50,000, owned by Mrs. Wadsworth, who lives in Atlanta, was released from the attachment.

Whole U. S. in Silent Panic, Wells Says

LONDON, June 6.—Ort Wells, the Chicago business man who was associated with Messrs. Gates and Drake some years ago, takes a pessimistic view of conditions in America in the immediate future. He says that President Wilson personally is a charming man, but the commercial future of the United States needs a man experienced in affairs at the head of the Government.

"Everything is in favor of unbounded prosperity, but the people are all afraid of the future and are waiting to see what will happen. The whole country is in a silent panic."

MEXICO CITY, June 6.—Two hundred Americans, who have been unable to find employment in this city, left here to-day for Vera Cruz and will there take a steamer for New Orleans.

The United States Government is paying the railroad fares, as well as all expenses, of these persons who have practically been forced to leave the capital.

Lunatic in Scanty Attire Causes Panic

SAVANNAH, GA., June 6.—Clad only in a light nightgown, barefooted and wild-eyed, a man who had escaped from a sanitarium last night frightened women and spread terror in the residnce section of the city until he was caught by S. Sanford Haupt, who gave chase in his auto.

A number of women who were sitting on their porches became hysterical when the man, his robe ne nuit flying about him, started directly toward them.

Currency Reform Bill Not Yet Ready

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Wilson said to-day that the reform currency bill was not ready to submit to the House Banking and Currency Committee. Chairman Carter Glass announced that he would issue his call for the first meeting of the committee Monday.

The President said that the best features of several plans will be taken by the President's experts, under the direction of Professor Little, and put into one bill, which will be sent to Congress, labeled by the White House.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Sparkling Comedy at Bijou.

Sparkling music, fetching costumes and good, wholesome comedy are the chief elements that are making "The College Girls," this week's attraction at the Bijou. The company, headed by the funny German comedian, Martin Guild, and the Irish cogedian, Frank Cristie, make things exceedingly lively and the work of the chorus in the many pretty musical numbers form one of the most pleasing features of the performance. Tabloid musical comedy has evidently come to stay at the Bijou.

NEGRO SUSPECTS FACING REARREST

Farmers Reported to Have Secured Warrants for Wilkes and Maynard for Fraud.

Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, stated Friday morning that Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the negroes held on suspicion in the death of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens and her daughter, Nellie, will be released within 24 hours.

The Sheriff declared that he and Detective Rosser, after a thorough investigation of the statements of the negroes which formed their alibi, have become convinced that they are telling the truth and that they know nothing of the death of the two women and the burning of their home.

It is probable, however, that Wilkes and Maynard both will be rearrested when they are released. It is understood that J. L. Cowan, a farmer living near Constitution, has sworn out warrants for their arrest, asserting that the negroes defrauded him out of $6 several months ago. Another farmer, for whom Wilkes and Maynard formerly worked, also will cause their arrest, it is stated, on similar charges.

TECH CELEBRATION BEGUN BY DEBATE

Three Classes Take Part in Opening of Anniversary Observance Friday Night.

The celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Georgia School of Technology will begin Friday night at the Young Men's Christian Association, when members of the Henry W. Grady Literary Society will debate on one of the live questions of the day—the recall of judges. The formal statement of the question is, "Resolved, That the judges of the State of Georgia be subject to recall."

S. D. Frankel, of Atlanta, a member of the senior class at Tech, and F. P. Raybon, of Jesup, of the sophomore class, will uphold the affirmative side of the question. The negative will be debated by S. A. Gayle, of Columbus, of the freshman class, and L. C. Gordon, of Atlanta, of the sophomore class. Professor W. G. Boogher, of the Tech faculty, will preside.

Judges will be Hon. Alex C. King, Rev. C. W. Daniel, of the First Baptist Church, and J. S. Fleet, of the Peacock-Fleet School.

On Saturday evening the annual freshman oratorical contest will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium.

A BUSINESS MAN'S RECREATION

Upon the way a man spends his time outside of business very largely depends his efficiency in business. A great many men of large affairs to-day are making music their hobby. This has become possible only through the invention of the Kimball 88-Note Player-Piano. Through this medium you can become familiar with the classics, the latest popular hits, dance and religious music, without any previous musical training.

In other words, the Kimball Player-Piano bridges years of technical training, because anyone can play with but a few minutes instruction. With but one stroke of the lever, the Player is transformed into a piano for hand or manual playing.

Our record of sales shows that the Kimball Player is bought by the leaders in the business world, such as bank presidents, lawyers, doctors and captains of industry in every line.

We cordially invite you to a demonstration of our several styles; then you will understand and realize fully that we don't overstate the immense amount of satisfaction they afford.

If you have an old instrument or an instrument in your home that remains silent because there is no skilled musician to play it, we will make you a reasonable allowance for it to apply on the purchase of a new Kimball Player. Remember that the value of such instruments taken in trade is greater to-day, intrinsically, than it will be later on.

We will be pleased to have a salesman call upon request.

COUNCIL TO URGE BOND ISSUE ON LEGISLATURE

Amendment Removing Two-thirds Restriction at Special Election Also Is Requested.

Every effort will be made to induce the Legislature to make it possible for Atlanta to vote on a bond issue of probably $5,000,000 as a result of Council action Thursday afternoon. The pressing need of money for public improvements in Atlanta, making a bond issue imperative, was emphasized by the Finance Committee, which recommended a committee of investigation.

Judge Candler went a step further and made the whole bond question a State issue by proposing the passage of a constitutional amendment eliminating the two-thirds vote clause.

After investigating the city's financial requirements and considering the effects of the recent crematory decision, the Finance Committee recommended a bond issue as the only means of providing for needed public improvements.

Bond Issue Only Course.

"We strongly recommend a bond issue at this time," the resolution read, "as it is, in our judgment, absolutely impossible for the city of Atlanta to make any permanent improvements out of the current revenue, and a bond issue, in our judgment, is the only way these improvements can be made."

The resolution instructed the Mayor Pro Tem. to appoint a committee "to investigate carefully the question of issuing bonds by the city to take care of the following purposes: Schools, water, sewers, hospital improvements and street improvements."

Without a dissenting voice, the General Council adopted the finance committee's resolution. The Mayor Pro Tem. announced he would appoint the committee some time this week. The general opinion of Councilmen and Aldermen is that the committee, irrespective of its personnel, will recommend a bond issue of from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Want Vote Limit Removed.

Following passage of the Finance Committee's resolution, Judge Candler introduced the following resolution:

"That the Representatives and Senators in the General Assembly of Georgia, who represent territory touching the limits of the city of Atlanta, be respectfully requested to introduce and press for passage a proposal to the people of Georgia to authorize an amendment to the Constitution of said State to allow bonds to be issued by any municipality of this State for any public necessity upon an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the citizens voting at an election held to determien the question of the issuance of bonds."

Judge Candler buttressed his resolution with a forceful address, setting out the constitutional restrictions upon bond issues.

Effect of Dead Men's Votes.

"The way it is now," Judge Candler said, "dead men vote in every bond election. A bond issue, to carry, must receive two-thirds as many votes as there are registered voters at the last preceding registration. The last time we had a bond election, 17 men had died in my ward, and those 17 dead men killed 34 votes of living men. Every lazy man kills the vote of two live men who go to the polls. Every man kept out of the city or who voluntarily remains out, kills two votes of men who remain in the city."

No one spoke in favor of the resolution except Judge Candler, but all voted for it.

Judge Candler told a Georgian reporter he had talked with half a dozen influential members of the Legislature from all parts of the State, and all of them favored his proposed amendment.

Crematory Contract Stands.

The Finance Committee submitted the June apportionment sheet exactly as published heretofore, and it was adopted unanimously.

Specifications for the crematory—the same as those in the first contract—were submitted by the Finance Committee.

The General Council adjourned to meet next Wednesday, by which time the Mayor's four days to approve the apportionment sheet will have expired. The sheet will then be finally adopted, after which the new crematory contract will be formally made. The contract will be the same as the first one, except the price to be paid for the crematory, which will be $260,000 instead of $270,000.

ODDITIES —in the— DAY'S NEWS

BEES BREAK SABBATH.—Bees which infest the First Congregational Church at Montclair, N. J., are so numerous that an acid will be poured into the interstices of the wall to drive them away. Their buzzing is annoying, and it is said several persons have been stung during services.

BRYAN'S COUSIN DIES.—While plucking flowers for a bouquet to be sent to Secretary of State Bryan, Mrs. Emilee Neilson, a cousin of the Secretary, was stricken with apoplexy and died at her home in Mount Vernon, N. Y.

GOLD CORNICE FOR HOUSE.—The new home which James H. Flood, wealthy land owner, is building in the fashionable section of San Francisco will be set off by a cornice of beaten bronze, over which will be laid a thin plating of gold.

OUTFASTS ELEVEN WOLVES.—Owen Hughes, of Angelo Township, near LaCrosse, Wis., outfasted a band of eleven wolves and won a bounty of $110, when the wolves, driven by hunger, dashed from their refuge and were killed. Hughes watched outside the entrance to their den for four days and four nights.

$650 HEN ADOPTS CATS.—A prize hen, for which President Mellen, of the New Haven Railroad, paid $650, covered a litter of ten kittens under its wings at Lenox, Mass., when its eggs were removed after she had shown a determination to set. The hen drove off the mother cat, which attempted to get possession of her offspring.

PICKPOCKET, 86, JAILED.—Ellen McCarthy, 86 years old, of New York City, convicted as an expert pickpocket, was sent to a reformatory, where it is probable she will remain for the rest of her days.

Anarchistic Activity Goads Paris to Raids

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 6.—Alarm is being caused in government circles by the spread of anarchy throughout France. Gendarmes made 49 separate raids today, seizing vast quantities of propaganda in the anarchistic anti-militarist headquarters. Forty arrests were made.

Letters show that many Spanish anarchists have come here to help spread the reading matter. The anarchists will be sternly dealt with.

AD MEN READY FOR BALTIMORE TRIP

Delegation Leaves Saturday to Advertise City of Atlanta at the Great Annual Meeting.

Atlanta ad men are fairly bubbling to-day with the "Atlanta Always Ahead" spirit—the intoxicant they always take with them when attending annual conventions of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America. Saturday will be the big day, this being the time set for the departure for Baltimore.

In private Pullmans, properly decorated and easily recognizable as the traveling equipment of the Atlanta Ad Club, the delegation will depart over the Southern Railway. Headquarters for the party have been arranged with the Hotel Rennert and rooms may be obtained by application to Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta Convention Bureau, 817 Empire Building.

A general invitation has been extended friends of the Ad Club to make the trip to Baltimore, and a large number already have signified their intention of going. Albert S. Adams, 209 Grant Building, is general chairman of the delegation, known as the "On to Baltimore Crowd."

Baltimore is making great plans for the entertainment of the ad men. An entertainment fund of $35,000 has been raised. Several thousand advertising men from all parts of the United States will attend.

At the Dallas convention last year the Atlanta delegation created a great sensation by their stick-together spirit and novel attire. Each Atlanta ad man, and the ladies as well, wore a duster, across the back of which was printed in big letters, "Atlanta Always Ahead," and the slogan at Baltimore will be the same.

Manuel's Bride Will Get $300,000 Dowry

PARIS, June 6.—Announcement is made that Prince William of Hohenzollern will give his daughter, the Princess Augustine Victoria, who is engaged to ex-King Manuel, a dowry of $200,000. Their income will be about $30,000.

The ex-King's mother, Queen Amelie, is satisfied and hopes her son will live quietly at Sigmaringen till the possible restoration of the monarchy in Portugal.

Mr. Batch, Little Jimmy, Howson Lott and other fun-makers supply enough laughter for the whole family for a week in the Comic Section of The Sunday American.

Hens Learn Diving By Going With Ducks

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., June 6.—Expert research has disclosed the reason that patients at the Foresters Sanitarium had had to complain of a fish flavor in their eggs.

The institution has its own lake, whither the ducks repair for swimming and the hens for drink. The keeper of the hens was confounded when he saw a dozen of his hens diving and coming up with infant trout, which they brought to shore to devour.

The hennery man, says it is a characteristic acquired through long association with the ducks.

14 British Poets Who Might Be Laureates

LONDON, June 6.—No one would imagine that England had 14 poets who were capable of filling the laureateship with distinction, but the list of possible candidates has reached that number.

They are Rudyard Kipling, Robert Bridges, Henry Newbolt, William Watson, W. H. Davis, Maurice Hewlett, Austin Dobson, Alfred Noyes, W. B. Yeats, Thomas Hardy, John Masefield, Stephen Phillips, Le Gallienne and Mrs. Alice Meynello.

3 Declaimers Tie in Law School Contest

A three-cornered tie was the result of the declamation contest at the Atlanta Law School Thursday night. Harry B. Terrell, Allen Dowda and George Northen were the young men who made it impossible for the judges to arrive at a decision.

The judges were Judge John S. Candler, Judge J. T. Pendleton and Professor M. L. Brittain. Unable to reach a decision, they called in Mrs. William Claer Spiker, professor of oratory. The four could not decide on a winner.

Graduating exercises will be held at the Grand Opera House Saturday night.

Judge Speer Warns Against Reporters

MACON, GA., June 6.—Judge Emory Speer's advice to he graduates of the Mercer Law School, of which he is dean, was to avoid newspaper men.

He told them to try their cases before juries, and not in the newspapers, and warned them against the "mucker."

"The mucker," he explained, "is a newspaper liar, who will attack judge as well as counsel."

YOUR ACQUAINTANCES CAN HELP YOU WIN IN CONTEST FOR PONIES

"What shall I say to people when I go to ask them to subscribe for The Georgian and The American?"

This is one of the questions boys and girls frequently put to the pony contest department.

The answer is: Explain to those you call on that you are in the contest to win, and that every friend and acquaintance can help. Ask them to subscribe. Remember that while it is true you are asking your friends to help you, still they are getting their money's worth and more in return.

Probably the most frequent answer contestants will get is: "We already take The Georgian and The American."

In this case, ask them to pay in advance, taking advantage of the saving which accrues through long-term subscriptions. This really is an easier situation to deal with, for in this case your friends are acquainted with The Georgian and The American, and by taking it, show they are friendly to it.

15 YEAR-OLD MISS ALMAN COMPLETES GRAHAM SHORTHAND IN THREE MONTHS AT THE SOUTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE

As the Literary Schools and Colleges Close, Many of Their Pupils and Teachers Are Entering the Southern Business College for a Summer Course in Shorthand and Bookkeeping.

Now, learn Business!

Get ready to obtain and to hold commercial positions!

Make such preparation where the best systems of shorthand and bookkeeping known to the world are taught, at the Southern Shorthand and Business University, this city!

Positions are always awaiting the graduates of this famous Business College.

A certain teacher of Bookkeeping recently took the Southern's Business Course just to say that he held a diploma from this well-known institution.

The Southern's 48 years of continual operation has made it an enviable "rep."

Call upon 25 or 50 or more of Atlanta's prominent business firms and bankers, and verify this statement.

Among the recent students who have accepted positions and made good may be mentioned Miss Rosebud Alman, who, under date of May 28, writes as follows:

"Southern Shorthand and Business University, Atlanta, Ga.:

"Gentlemen—Anyone can attend your college with absolute assurance of satisfaction, as your courses are easily and quickly learned and they meet every requirement.

"I consider Graham-Pitmanic Shorthand the best in existence, chiefly on account of its simplicity. I SPENT ONLY THREE MONTHS in completing your Shorthand and Typewriting Course, and immediately accepted a position with the International Correspondence Schools, which you secured for me. Sincerely yours,

"MISS ROSEBUD ALMAN."

Yes, the Southern's pupils learn as much about shorthand in one week as do the pupils of any school on earth, and they become better stenographers in three months than do the pupils of any of the non-Pitmanic systems, but the Southern prefers its pupils to give a little longer time to the study and thereby become experts.

That's why the business men prefer the Southern's pupils.

The business men have already become disgusted with stenographers writing some of the newfangled systems, as evidenced by the following advertisement which appeared in the Atlanta newspapers:

"Wanted — Lady stenographer; work light; $30 per month to begin. Chance for advancement. * * * No Chartier writers need apply. Answer in own handwriting. M. A., Box 204, care Georgian."

Better be sure to learn the best system at the start.

Graham-Pitmanic leads all others in rapidity of execution and legibility in reading, and it is taught at the Southern.

Write, call or phone for catalogue, and enter now. Address,

A. C. Briscoe, president, or L. W. Arnold, vice president, 10 West Mitchell Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Thomas L. Bryan, representative and lecturer.

MISS ROSEBUD ALMAN, Who accepted a position as stenographer after a three-months' course in Graham Shorthand at the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

"All Work and No Play---"

Following Our Now Well-Established Custom The Store Closes To-morrow at 1 o'Clock

The Saturday half-holidays for the summer begin to-morrow!

They come as a little "breathing spell" for those who serve you and us faithfully through the long days of the year—and may they thoroughly enjoy them! Nor are we speaking out of pure philanthropy—it is tinged with business judgment, or perhaps with the psychology of business, we are simply putting into practice the old adage about all work and no play. We want bright, willing, happy people about us. We long ago recognized the Saturday half-holiday as a helpful means to this end.

We trust that whatever slight inconvenience it may cause you, our big public, will be more more than offset by the renewed energy and vigor and happy smiles that our people will bring with them on Monday mornings.

Were Toilet Articles Ever So Priced?

And right now comes the big season of toilet articles, when the sun is hot and when comfort depends so much upon the means we take to acquire it. There is no telling you how much you will save—at one time it is a half, again it's four-fifths, again it's five-sixths—but such fractions mean little—read the actual savings.

A Half-Day of Whole-Hearted Reductions

In the Junior Department

Third Floor

Much can be saved in the half-day to-morrow! We have created some timely and wonderfully fine values in the Junior Department—the question is whether such values will last through the whole half-day. Read them and judge for yourself whether you should delay hurrying.

Children's $2.00 & $3.00 Middy Blouses $1.25

Sizes eight to fourteen years. The white galatea is a splendid quality. They have navy, red and white collars and silk ties that take them out of the class of ordinary middies. The chances are you will choose more than one once you see them.

Children's $5.00 & $6.00 Dresses $2.98

Sizes six to fourteen years. As choice a collection of linen, French gingham and galatea dresses as one would want to choose from were price of no consideration. Styled in the most becoming little fashions—as only few makers of children's dresses seem to know how. Some are hand-embroidered, some are trimmed with Irish crochet laces—all have some point that marks them as extremely pretty.

Children's $8.50 to $12.50 Dresses $4.95

Sizes six to fourteen years. The clearaway of the finer wash dresses for children! Doubtless it will be a quick one—when $8.50, $10.00 and $12.50 dresses are $4.95. There are white and colored linens, white and colored piques and novelty striped ratines. Many of these are hand-embroidered, and all are fashioned and trimmed beautifully—and variously. too variously to do them justice here.

WILSON LEAVES JAP DEMANDS TO CABINET

Ambassador Guthrie Also Is Consulted—John Bassett Moore to Draft Reply.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Fresh from his conference with Ambassador Chinda, who placed before him in the clearest possible manner Japan's reasons for protesting against the California alien land law, President Wilson to-day put the matter up to his Cabinet.

Secretary of State Bryan was the first of the President's official family to reach the White House. He arrived at 10 o'clock and was closeted with the Chief Executive for half an hour before being joined by Attorney General McReynolds. The two Cabinet officers then went over the diplomatic and judicial phases of the question with the President before the remainder of the Cabinet made their appearance.

Moore to Draft Reply.

Only one thing was decided definitely to-day—to leave the drafting of the second American reply, which probably will be filed within a fortnight, in the hands of John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department and official mouthpiece of the administration in all matters involving complex questions of international law.

Because the Secretary of State had planned to take an early train for Pittsburg, where he will attend a banquet in honor of Ambassador Guthrie, who will soon leave to take up his duties in Tokio, to-day's discussion of the Japanese problem was elementary.

To Draft Immediate Reply.

It is expected the American reply will be drafted next week and will be ready for submission to the Cabinet June 17.

Ambassador Guthrie will be asked to pass judgment on the note before it is sent to Tokio, and it is probable that the advice of Lars Anderson, recent Ambassador to Japan, also will be requested.

Japs Declare Treaty Of 1911 Is Violated.

TOKIO, June 6.—That the passiveness of the United States Government in relation to the California alien land law violates the Japanese-American treaty of 1911 and that the California law in itself is a violation of the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution are the chief points made in Japan's rejoinder to the United States note on the subject.

This information was secured at the foreign office to-day. The Government has postponed its reply to the proposal of Secretary of State Bryan that the dispute be submitted to The Hague.

Tasue Yamamoto intimated to-day that Japan would refuse to participate in the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in 1915.

Jap-U. S. Envoys to Attend Peace Meet.

PITTSBURG, June 6.—East will meet West and race creed will be forgotten to-night in one of the most significant peace meetings in modern times, when, in honor of George W. Guthrie, newly appointed Ambassador to Japan, statesmen, savants and plenipotentiaries will gather and discuss the future relations of the two nations.

Ambassador Guthrie, Viscount Sutemi Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador to the United States; William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, and other leaders in the nations will speak.

'Taps' Sounded for Capt. T. H. Screven

SAVANNAH, GA., June 6.—Captain Thomas Forman Screven died yesterday after an illness of many weeks. He was born in Savannah in 1834, and was educated at the University of Georgia.

As a lieutenant and later as a captain in Company A of the Savannah Volunteer Guards, Captain Screven served with distinction during the war. He was an honorary member of the Guards at the time of his death, and the battalion will attend the funeral this afternoon from Christ Episcopal Church.

Referendum Bill Killed in Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 6.—The initiative and referendum resolution advocated by Governor Dunne was dead to-day, failing of adoption by 7 votes in the House.

POET SAYS WIFE WOULDN'T BE HIS MOTHER

Harold Susman, Unromantic, Balked at Closer Relationship, Even for $175,000.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Harold Susman, the unromantic poet, who last November married Mrs. Lillie Annette Coe, wealthy widow, of New Haven, Conn., on the mutual agreement—according to Mr. Susman—that they dwelt in the gentle distant relationship of mother and son, is writing a novel to-day concerning his unique matrimonial venture.

In a remarkable letter to friends in this city the poet has given, under his own hand, a detailed statement of his unprecedented marriage.

Says Widow Had $250,000.

In his letter he says he met Mrs. Coe in Newport. She had received $250,000 from her late husband. He writes as follows:

"Although Mrs. Coe was then 57 (she is now 58) and I was 29, she impressed me as being a gentle and kindly old lady. She was considerably older than my mother, had snow-white hair and wore spectacles."

First Going to Adopt Him.

He visited her in New Haven, and says she finally urged him to make his permanent home with her. At first she was going to adopt him, but they agreed marriage would be better, so they were wedded in City Hall, New York on November 6. The letter continues:

"She showed me the new will she had had her lawyer draw up, leaving me $175,000, her house and furniture and fine jewelry. But at the same time she put such an unusual construction upon the latent maternal instinct that I felt impelled to leave her.

Their Ideas Didn't Jibe.

"My wife and I had absolutely irreconcilable ideas as to what constituted the relationship of mother and son.

"I still believe that there are old promise to be mothers to young men, ladies in the world who, if they would really be so, and I have proved by my own conduct that there are young men in the world who, if they promised to be sons to old ladies, would insist on such relationship, despite offers of $175,000 or more."

The SOCIAL WORLD

The largest affair of Friday was the afternoon tea for 200 guests, given by Mrs. Ernest Durham in honor of her sister, Mrs. Homer Davis, a recent bride, and her cousin, Mrs. Paul Seydel, of New York.

Mrs. Durham entertained at the Peachtree Street residence of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Davis. Elaborate decorations prevailed, pink and white sweetpeas being used in the drawing room, daisies in the library and sun parlor, where punch was served from two tables, Misses Marion Woolley, Bertha Moore, Lamar Slaton, Ruth McMillan, Louise Parker and Helen Rhorer presiding.

In the dining room the table, covered with lace over pink satin, was adorned with a large plateau of pink sweetpeas, pink tulle was drawn from the chandelier to the corners of the table, ending in butterfly bows of tulle, and a shower boquet of pink sweetpeas and pink ribbons from the chandelier. Pink poppies, pink sweetpeas and roses were on the buffet, serving table and mantel. An orchestra played during the afternoon.

'ASK ME' BUREAU FOR CITY IS URGED

Councilman Ashley Sponsors Plan to Furnish Information to Citizens and Visitors.

Councilman C. L. Ashley intends to put an information bureau in the City Hall on the first floor, right in front of the main entrance. He said to-day he would ask Council for the necessary authorization, and keep on asking till he gets what he wants.

"I want an information bureau the like of which never has been seen before," says the Councilman, "a bureau dispensing real information on all subjects, not only to the people of Atlanta, but to the thousands of visitors who want to know something about the city or State or anything else.

"I'm going to have that information bureau stationed in the City Hall because it's needed; then I want to see a man in there well posted on all things. Let the telephone number be advertised, so people can call up to find out what car line to take to reach a certain place, to learn when a street parade starts or who the president of the Central of Georgia Railroad is. Anything anybody wanted to know, he could get it there.

"Suppose some one wants a sewer laid," the Councilman continued. "He comes down here to the City Hall and gets directed all over the building, then goes away without seeing the man he ought to see. If we had the information bureau he would be told the name of the man from his ward on the Sewer Committee, and where to find him. This bureau would make our system of government popular, instead of unpopular, as it is now."

Councilman Ashley says no such information bureau exists anywhere else, but believes that is no reason one should not be in Atlanta. He believes the General Council will agree with him and make the necessary appropriation for its establishment and maintenance.

Two Sides to a Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THOUGH love and marriage are the dreams of every girl, happiness is not dependent on either, and often one is happiest without them.

There are two sides to the question. The girl who is looking anxiously for the coming of a lover, and who grows apprehensive when he is delayed, sees only one side. She takes no account of the look of care, unhappiness and discontent on the face of the wife. She does not see—she refuses to see—that matrimony does not always bring returns commensurate for the price one must pay.

Perhaps it may lessen the discontent of the girl who has no lover to compare the life of the woman who never marries with that of the wife.

The girl has time and opportunity for cultivating every talent with which she is endowed. The only talents the wife is given opportunity to develop are those of economy and patience.

The happiness of a nation depends on its power to dream, and this being true of the whole, is true of the part. The girl dreams of an ideal lover, and the dream is never shattered; a wife has no illusions left.

A Wife's Work.

A girl has many hours in which she has nothing disagreeable to do; but the wife finds she has more to do for the rest of her life than any man could stand up under.

The uncertainty of the girl centers around WHO is to be her husband, and is not unpleasant. The uncertainty of wifehood is WHERE he is, and is a tragedy.

The criticisms a girl receives in her home are loving and kindly; those the wife receives are less kindly, and her rewards for effort to please are less sure.

The girl walks as if she owned the earth. Ten years after she has married she will walk as if she were carrying it on her shoulders.

"If I don't marry," a girl will say, "I will be an old maid." * * * "If I hadn't married and been tied down by the cares of a husband and home," she will say some years later, "I might have won fame and fortune by developing my talents."

There is loneliness in spinsterhood, but there is also PEACE.

The girl who marries sentences herself to self-sacrifice and hard labor for life. Her only reward is Love, and could you, my dear little girl with the discontented look because your lover has not come, count up the number of wives you know who are systematically and regularly cheated out of their payments?

The girl who never marries is the one to whom opportunity is given for being the blessing and mainstay of her parents' home. There is no avenue for developing her character which matrimony grants and spinsterhood denies.

Two Sides.

There are two sides to the question One can be a happy spinster; one may be a happy wife.

The former is a question of will. The latter depends on a string of ifs long enough to encircle the globe.

I do not want my girls to care less for love, but I do want them to value more highly the greater privileges, the fewer burdens, the lighter loads, the broader opportunities and the surer peace that await the woman to whom love and marriage never come.

I want them, for their own sake, to look with less panic-stricken fright and greater sanity upon the spinster's side of the question.

Diplomatic.

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never, marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take her and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's old friend, the boarding house keeper also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what anybody thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Bah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

HAL COFFMAN.

Do You Know That—

An 18-year-old boy was injured in a game of football two years ago, but after two days returned to work feeling quite well again. Last summer he had to be examined for insurance purposes, and the doctor found there was something wrong with his neck, but did not discover exactly what was the matter. A short time ago, however, the boy's neck began to give him such pain that he was made to undergo an examination under X-rays. Then the astounded physicians discovered that it was broken. They can not realize how he has lived all this time. It is a question whether a cure can be effected.

The Farmers' Association of the department of Loir-et-Cher has held at Blois a competition for agricultural workers who have brought up the largest families, all the members of which have remained "on the land." Eleven grandmothers—the youngest aged 45 and the oldest 89—presented themselves, surrounded by 95 children and 138 grandchildren. The first prize went to a woman who has had 13 children, of whom 9 are living, and 20 grandchildren.

The Czar is, among European monarchs, the one who makes the least use of the motor car. His imperial majesty, in former days, registered a vow that he would never enter such a conveyance, and although necessity occasionally compels him to break it his dislike for motors is unabated. When King Edward first took a car with him to Denmark on joining the big family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the Czar nor his grandfather, King Christian IX., could be persuaded to set foot in it.

The Kaiser's yacht, Hohenzollern, is shortly going to be superseded by an even more splendid vessel. It is said that the new yacht was partly designed by the Kaiser himself, who adds a knowledge of shipbuilding to his varied stock of information. The vessel will take two years to build, and is not expected to be ready before the spring of 1915.

Why He Couldn't.

N American philanthropist made a business of getting jobs for men just out of jail. A notorious cracksman came to him with a letter of introduction from the clergyman.

"I've the very thing you want," said the philanthropist when the jailbird had dilated adequately and with pride upon his exploits. "I'll see my friend Briggs. Come around to-morrow morning."

The cracksman, encouraged by the prospect of honest work, appeared promptly at the appointed hour.

"You're to go to work at once," said the philanthropist. "My friend Briggs is producing a melodrama. In it is a scene where a ourglar enters the room and cracks a safe. It will only take you a few minutes, and you don't have to speak a word—just execute the job with the minute detail that will make it look real. Your salary will be $50 a week."

The convict dolefully shook his head.

"Sorry I can't take the job, boss."

"Can't take it? Why, it's the chance of your life!"

"Can't help it, boss. I promised my mother I'd never go on the stage."

THE COMING OF DAY.

OVER the edge of the sleeping world,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Past the gloaming where shadow is furled,
Into the chasm of darkness whirled,
Forth from the hosts of blackness hurled—
Over the purple hills;
Out of the land of the sun-rise glow,
Over the purple-hued hills,
Into the meadows of shimmering sheen,
Over the brooklets of glimmering sheen,
Comes glowing morning, the summer queen—
Aflame are the purple hills.

LIFE IS WORTH IT.

Life is worth it—
Worth the turmoil and the effort and the pain,
Worth the hurt and disappointment
So you make but steady gain;
If the failure of the morning
Give you strength to struggle on,
If the evening mark some progress
From the dimness of the dawn—
Life is worth it.

Life is worth it—
Though you question as the years go slipping by,
"Have I failed in every project?
Have I set my mark too high?
Does the failure of this morning
Mean I never shall attain?
Nay! The power to strive transmuteth
Every failure into gain—
Life is worth it!

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

START out a girl with a dollar, and she will come home wearing it. Start out a boy with one, and he will come home eating it.

A girl's interest in a baby is the same as that her brother manifests in a dog.

About all a girl does for her little brother is to scream about his dirty hands every time she looks at him, though it is as natural for a boy to have dirty hands as it is for a cat to have fits.

The quarrels between brothers are over the larger share in something to eat, but when sisters quarrel, it is because one wore something belonging to the other.

It may indicate deep thought when a girl scratches her head, but they don't look at it that way when it is a boy.

Here of late a girl is permitted to read in the parlor fiction worse than that her brother used to peruse surreptitiously in the barn aloft.

It has always been the custom to compare a boy with a weed and a girl with a flower.

A girl doesn't know it, but if someone cut off her hair, put a hundred freckles on her face, and a tan spot on the end of her nose, she would be a duplicate of the younger brother whose looks she so plainly despises.

When brother and sister go to a party together, sister doesn't seem to have any recollection of anything that happened beyond the manner in which her brother misbehaved.

There never was a girl who couldn't give the impression when away from her home that her parents are wealthy, but a boy can't do it.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome in the parlor of a neighbor before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

When a girl is 16 she has the right of way all over the road. Her mother and father promptly side-track when they see her coming, the only one daring a collision being her younger brother. And he long shows the effects of it!

Individual pies, strawberry shortcakes, etc., appeal to a girl, but never to a boy, because they give him no opportunity to get a larger piece than his sister. There is no element of chance in the individual form of pastry.

After sister has expressed her appreciation, brother's thanks sound as cold as yesterday morning's pancakes.

Rev. Dr. John E. White has a splendid article in The Sunday American on "The House of Our Fathers." Everybody should read it.

Very Important.

The glib-tongued agent was trying to persuade Mr. Wipedunks to buy a dictionary.

"Its the latest thing out," he said; "up to date in every particular, contains more words than any other, has all the technical and scientific terms that have come into use in the last ten years, and there isn't a feature missing that goes to make a first-class work of the kind."

"Let me look at it a minute," said Mr. Wipedunks.

The agent handed it over, and Mr. W. inspected it briefly. Then he handed it back.

"Young man," he said, "you can't work that book on me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It hain't got no copious index."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young man from the mountains, who says that he never played on any baseball club and that he has never seen a game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta club, to give him a try-out. At batting and fielding practice he creates a sensation. The Atlanta Georgian prints a whole page of snapshots of him and his fame spreads throughout the country.

In the meantime he has become very friendly with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a wealthy timber speculator. Forrest Cain, an admirer of Mildred, becomes jealous of Gordon and attempts to play him a trick and gets soundly thrashed. Gordon owns a large tract of land in the mountains, between two tracts owned by Mr. Deery and Cain, who need Gordon's property to carry out a land scheme.

The Boston Nationals and other big league clubs stop at Atlanta for exhibition games on their way North and Gordon Kelly becomes the baseball sensation of the hour. Scouts who come to see him work try to get him away from the Atlanta club, and then send wild telegrams to their owners, imploring them to come to Atlanta by the first train and do their own bidding. Nearly all the big league magnates come, and President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, announces that, while disposed to reject all offers, his club felt the necessity of living up to the obligations of organized baseball and would sell Gordon Kelly's release to the best advantage of the stockholders of the club. In a practice game with a big league team, Kelly covers himself with glory. He is injured and Mildred rushes on the field to his aid. The newspapers are filled with accounts of the affair.

Now go on with the story.

Readers of newspapers are aware, without being told, that in reports of any great public gathering, any extraordinary crime, any $100,000 diamond robbery, any uncommon disaster, it is the newspapers that set the pace in gathering and distributing the news of the event. This fact is lost sight of in this narrative. In this particular case the newspapers told all about Gordon Kelly, but later certain things happened to him that the newspapers were never able to learn, and they will be told in the course of this story for the first time.

The news of Gordon Kelly's great feat in his last game in Atlanta created a profound impression throughout the baseball world. There was no end of praise for the player and of sympathy for the Boston club, which, through the accident, had lost the services for many weeks at least of a man for whom it had just paid that unheard-of price of $50,000. The championship races in the two big leagues had started and were well under way. In the American League, of which Gordon Kelly was now a member, although not able to play, the Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland clubs had taken the lead, while the New York and Boston clubs were off to a bad start. Jake Stahl, manager of the Red Sox, although himself limping around with an injured leg, bemoaned his hard luck.

"I have the best outfield in the country as it is," he said, "but I could use that Gordon Kelly just the same. Gee, I wish he would hurry up and get well before my club is out of the running."

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, cursed his fate. "If we had only landed Gordon Kelly and if he hadn't broken his leg, we would be right up there fighting with the leaders," he declared.

The word IF is 90 per cent of baseball, it may be remarked.

Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, said:

"Comiskey ought to have landed Gordon Kelly. All I need is that fellow, besides Big Ed Walsh, to win the American League pennant."

On May 10 the championship season in the two big leagues was a month old and Gordon Kelly was still in the hospital at Atlanta. Mildred Deery was still "out of town." That was all the information the patient could get from the Deery residence. The Atlanta club made a short trip to other cities and returned to home grounds for a brief stay. Bill Smith, Long Tom Morrissey and other members of the team paid daily visits to see their former comrade, who got around the hospital grounds on crutches, but who could not be induced to go out to the park and see a ball game.

Something on His Mind.

"Something's on his mind," declared Long Tom in the club house one day. "He doesn't seem to want to talk about baseball much. And it would not surprise me," he added, emphatically, "to learn that that girl that rushed out on the field and took his head in her lap is what's troubling him. Well, I don't know as I can blame him, at that. She was some peacherino, you hear me!"

"He'll get over it," remarked Bill Smith, sagely. "As soon as his leg gets strong enough for him to run the bases you'll see him up at the plate with that bat of his and he'll forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey had nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and, true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred now knew he was a ball player, he argued to himself. She did not disapprove, else why did she rush on the ball field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelly asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things, and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the time being, sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the $50,000 ball player, became an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She complained of a headache and retired at once to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had wellnigh exhausted her, she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole downstairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7:30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife.

Under ordinary conditions Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the astounding escapade of his daughter, Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery, at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked, in conclusion.

Not So Shocked.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred liked the young man. Far better than her husband, she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I will speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll——." He slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have it. I was planning to go up in the mountains with a surveyor to-morrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has probably moved in by this time. Instead of going to-morrow, I will leave by the noon train to-day and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something, as I want to see her."

Deery turned to leave the room, but his wife called him back.

Mildred Approves Plan.

"Wait a minute, please, dear. Mildred isn't a child, and you can not force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure, and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains, and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two, and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains, and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Car Full of Supplies.

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened), ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days), and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes; drove to his home, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of kissed his wife, sped to the depot, the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his vast project, Deery had erected a large cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the main road and close to a roaring brook that, a mile or two beyond, ran into Pew Creek, which flowed down past the settlement. It was a beautiful spot, and Mildred cried her delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself dashed up to the bungalow.

The superintendent's name was Shephard, and his family consisted of his wife and boy, a lad of about fifteen years. Mildred promptly became good friends with them all and declared she never wanted to go back to Atlanta again, whereat her father chuckled in his sleeve.

"If you like hunting and fishing, Miss Deery, I can show you a lot of fun up here," said Elmer Shephard, the lad of fifteen years.

"I should enjoy it immensely, Elmer," replied Mildred, "but you will have to teach me."

The boxes and barrels of things Deery had bought in Atlanta arrived on teams before sundown, and Mildred expressed her surprise at the bulk of it. Her father hastened to explain.

"Well, you see," he said, "you will like this place so well that you will be running up every little while from Atlanta, so I just thought I would put in a supply of things to make you comfortable. If there is anything you don't see that you want let me know, and I will have it sent up from the city."

So Mildred settled down to live the joys of mountain life. But in these Georgia mountains, in this wild and solitary country, she came upon an adventure that completely changed the course of her existence.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THERE was a queer old bug up to our house last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It seems that he and father used to go to school together, and the old gent ran into him by accident yesterday afternoon. He didn't know that his school chum had changed so since boyhood, and before he got wise to the change he asked his friend up to the house.

"I was kind of surprised at the general appearance of Pa's friend. He was one of them tall, slim college professor looking kind of chaps, and when anybody spoke to him he gave a little jump sideways like a scared kitten. His manner was that timid and gentle you would have swore, George, that his wife had a dozen kind of Indian signs on him. It seemed kind of funny to the folks to have Pa chumming around with such like, because goodness knows most of his intimate friends are big necked and copper lined enough to make their way in this speedy world of ours. After knowing Bull McCabe and Marty Regan and the rest of Pa's husky comrades, it seemed funny to entertain a shrinking violet like this gent of which I am speaking of."

A Long Story Teller.

"Well, come to the point," said the Head Barber, "and don't be puttering around all the forenoon. You are worse than one of those long story-tellers."

"I wouldn't converse with you at all, ever, if I didn't have to, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "Most of the time you are awful uninteresting anyway. But I might as well finish this yarn, anyhow.

"We was all setting around the parlor like we used to when we was kids at a party, all waiting for somebody else to speak first, when the old man that father had brought home spoke up and said something about believing explicitly in the theory of reincarceration."

"That ain't the word," said the Head Barber. "I don't know the word either, but it's something that ends up with the name of a flower—carnation, I think."

Didn't Know the Name.

"If you don't know the name of the theory what made you interrupt me?" snapped the Manicure Lady. "Anyhow, it was something about folks that lived a long time ago living over again. For instance, the old gent said—don't mean father, I mean the other old gent—that he believed he was a soldier in the time when they was having the Wars of the Roses. He said that he fought under the Red Rose, whatever kind of a lodge that was, and I guess he was that dippy he believed it. I could see that father wanted to humor his old school chum, because he said he believed in the same theory and thought the soul could live again in another body. It was all I could do to keep from snickering when father talked like that, because goodness knows he spends a lot more time thinking about pinochle and three-cushion billiards than he does in thinking about the human soul and what becomes of it after we have kicked in. But he stailed fine, and I guess the old school friend went away thinking that father was on the level about reincarceration."

"I'd like to know what I would be if I was born again," said George.

"I know what you would be," replied the Manicure Lady. "You would just be another barber."

Modesty the Best Policy.

IT was the early part of the New Year, and little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a long delayed visit to Uncle Silas.

Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of the said uncle, and asked:

"Uncle dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining room table a dime, a half-dollar and a five-dollar note, remarking:

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the dime. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I sha'n't lose it?"

And uncle did.

"Sisters Under Their Skins"

Nell Brinkley Says

For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins.---Rudyard Kipling.

THIS I saw a week or so ago when the country was showing off its fat babies. Across the car from me, sitting with the sweet sunshine streaming in on their two blond heads—coiffed, oh, so differently, was a large plain lady with her chapeau slightly on one ear and a fat bundle snuggled beside her, and a yard or so down the red plush seat an aristocratic woman in silk and brocade, a French hat above her pretty eyebrows, white gloves, rose point lace at her throat and wrists, perfectly groomed! And the whole middle of each was hidden by the newspapers they held. I had watched. They had climbed on at the same street, had settled their silken and cotton skirts, and their four eyes had homed straight to the "pie" of a fat baby on the front page. They had both flipped over to the second page, where more babies were promised to "continue"—and there they stuck—the two of them—the same tilt to their two heads, the same unconscious gentle smile on their two faces. Under the lace-smothered breast of the "colonel's lady" rose the same heart springs that welled beneath the cotton and pearl buttons of "Judy O'Grady" "sisters under their skins."

"Why didn't you go to Chicago as you had planned?"

"Planned? With whom?" The interrogation came with an abrupt force that cried of new suspicions.

"Why, with Burke." The young man tried to be patient over her censity in this time of crisis.

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?" Mary asked. Now the tenseness in her manner got the husband's attention, and he replied with a sudden gravity, apprehensive of he knew not what.

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago." He had caught the contagion of her mood and vague alarm swept him.

"Where?" came the next question, still with that vital insistence.

"In this room."

"Burke was here?" Mary's voice was suddenly cold, very dangerous. "What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

Garson Leaped to the Switch.

The seemingly simple answer appeared the last straw to the girl's burden of frenzied suspicion. Her voice cut fiercely into the quiet of the room, imperious, savage.

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

Something fatally significant in her voice set Garson aleap to the switch, and, in the same second, the blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. The others stood motionless, blinking in the sudden radiance—all save Griggs, who moved stealthily in that same moment, a little nearer the door into the passage, which was nearest to him.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise, seemingly totally irrelevant to this instant of crisis. Yet they rang athrob with an hysterical anxiety.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" With the question she pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

The young man was plainly astonished, disconcerted as well by the obtrusion of a sordid detail into the tragedy of the time.

"Why in the world do you—?" he began, impatiently.

Mary stamped her foot angrily in protest against the delay.

"Tell me—quick!" she commanded. The authority in her voice and manner was not to be gainsaid.

Dick yielded sullenly.

"Oh, two or three hundred dollars, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that!" Mary exclaimed, violently. And now the girl's voice came stinging like a whiplash. In Garson's face, too, was growing fury, for in an instant of illumination he guessed something of the truth. Mary's next question confirmed his raging suspicion.

"How long have you had them, Dick?"

By now the young man himself sensed the fact that something mysteriously baneful lay behind the frantic questioning on this seemingly trivial theme.

"Ever since I can remmber," he replied, promptly.

Mary's voice came then with an intonation that brought enlightenment not only to Garson's shrewd perceptions, but also to the heavier intelligences of Dacey and of Chicago Red.

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently, from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?" So simple were the words of her inquiry, but under them beat something evil, deadly.

The young man laughed contemptuously.

He Came Toward Her.

"I should say not!" he declared indignantly, for he resented the implication against his father's honesty.

"It's a trick! Burke's done it!" Mary's words came with accusing vehemence.

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door into the passage.

Mary's eye caught the movement, and her lips soundlessly framed the name:

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery. He was very dapper in his evening clothes, with his rather handsome, well groomed face set in lines of innocence.

"He's tying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward Dick Gilder. "I tell you, those tapestries are worth a million cold."

Mary's answer was virulent in its sudden burst of hate. For once, the music of her voice was lost in a discordant cry of detestation.

"You stool-pigeon! You did this for Burke!"

Griggs sought still to maintain his air of innocence, and he strove well, since he knew that he fought for his life against those whom he had outraged. As he spoke again, his tones were tremulous with sincerity—perhaps that tremulousness was born chiefly of fear, yet to the ear his words came stoutly enough for truth:

"I swear I didn't! I swear it!"

Mary regarded the protesting man with abhorrence. The perjured wretch shrank before the loathing in her eyes.

"You came to me yesterday," she said, with more of restraint in her voice now, but still with inexorable rancor. "You came to me to explain this plan. And you came from him—from Burke!"

"I swear I was on the level. I was tipped off to the story by a pal," Griggs declared, but at last the assurance was gone out of his voice. He felt the hostility of those about him.

Garson broke in ferociously.

"It's a frame-up!" he said. His tones came in a deadened roar of wrath.

On the instant, aware that further subterfuge could be of no avail, Griggs swaggered defiance.

"And what if it is true?" he drawled, with a resumption of his aristocratic manner, while his eyes swept the group balefully. He plucked the police whistle from his waistcoat pocket, and raised it to his lips.

Then He Trembled.

He moved too slowly. In the same moment of his action, Garson had pulled the pistol from his pocket, had pressed the trigger. There came no spurt of flame. There was no sound—save perhaps a faint clicking noise. But the man with the whistle at his lips suddenly ceased movement, stood absolutely still for the space of a breath. Then he trembled horribly, and in the next instant crashed to the floor, where he lay rigid, dead.

"D—n you—I've got you!" Garson sneered through clenched teeth. His eyes were like balls of fire. There was a frightful grin of triumph twisting his mouth in this minute of punishment.

In the first second of the tragedy, Dick had not understood. Indeed, he was still dazed by the suddenness of it all. But the falling of Griggs before the leveled weapon of the other man, there to lie in that ghastly immobility, made him to understand. He leaped toward Garson—would have wrenched the pistol from the other's grasp. In the struggle, it fell to the floor.

Before either could pick it up, there came an interruption. Even in the stress of this scene, Chicago Red had never relaxed his professional caution. A slight noise had caught his ear; he had stooped, listening. Now he straightened and called his warning.

"Somebody's opening the front door!"

Garson forgot his weapon in this new alarm. He sprang to the octagonal window, even as Dick took possession of the pistol.

"The street's empty! We must jump for it!" His hate was forgotten now in an emotion still deeper, and he turned to Mary. His face was all gentleness again, where just before it had been evil incarnate, aflame with the lust to destroy. "Come on, Mary," he cried.

Already Chicago Red had snapped off the lights of the chandelier, had sprung to the window, thrown open a panel of it, and had vanished into the night, with Dacey at his heels. As Garson would have called out to the girl again in mad anxiety for haste, he was interrupted by Dick.

"She couldn't make it, Garson," he declared, coolly and resolutely. "You go. It'll be all right, you know. I'll take care of her!"

"If she's caught——!" There was an indescribable menace in the forger's half-uttered threat.

"She won't be." The quality of sincerity in Dick's voice was more convincing than any vow might have been.

"If she is, I'll get you; that's all." Garson said gravely, as one stating a simple fact that could not be disputed.

Then he glanced down at the body of the man whom he had done to death.

"And you can tell that to Burke!" he said, viciously, to the dead. "You d——d squealer!" There was a supremely malevolent content in his sneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father. Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters.

Now go on with the story.

To Be Continued Monday.

Not Quite Right.

A story is being told of a couple of tourists in Spain who could not speak the language, and, consequently, had some difficulty in making known their wants.

One day they came to a wayside inn and tried to obtain some meat—roast beef, for choice. But nobody could understand them.

"What are we to do?" asked one of them despairingly.

"I know," said the other, a ray of hope appearing. "I'll draw a picture of a cow. Then they'll understand."

He made a rough sketch of a cow, put a "2" beneath it, and handed it to the waiter, who instantly smiled to show that he understood, and went off to execute their order.

A few minutes later he returned with two tickets for a local bull fight!

THE MAN WHO IS TIRED OF HIS WIFE

"Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," Says an Old Proverb, and This Is Especially Apt in This Situation.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A MAN writes me in great distress. He says that he has been married about fifteen years, and that suddenly a great weariness of spirit has come upon him. His wife is good and kind, an excellent housekeeper, a thrifty manager, and her one object in life is to please him and make him happy, but while he recognizes her virtues and admires them, they leave him cold and unmoved.

In a word, he's tired of his wife. She bores him to death. Just her presence is irksome to him, and when she goes with him on any sort of a pleasure jaunt it takes all the fun out of the occasion.

This man is no gay Lothario. He is a good, honest, domestic man, who is honestly alarmed at the state of affairs, and he wants to know what he can do to recover the interest he once had in his wife, and the thrills that went through his veins like fire at the touch of her hand.

There is only one remedy for such cases, and that is absence. Only people who have neither nerves, temperament nor imagination can stand the horrible monotony of seeing the same face opposite them at three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, and ditto dinners, to say nothing of having the same form across the drop light for an equal number of evenings a year, and having to listen to the same old stories.

The most beautiful people in the world grow homely to our eyes if we see them too often. The wittiest conversationalists grow tedious if we have a surfeit of their society. The virtues of even an angel pall upon us if they are constantly before us.

Reasons Why.

Probably Mr. Milo thought his Venus too fat or too thin, and asked her why she didn't get another make of corset. Doubtless there were times, before she got a divorce, when Mrs. Caruso said to herself that if Enrico warbled another warble she would scream, and it isn't on record that the immediate family of any of our saints and martyrs ever handed in any testimonial to show what they thought on the subject of the canonization of their husbands or wives.

Why people who can not eat thirty quails in thirty days; who never want to see the same play twice, or read a book a second time; who tire of their clothes before they are half worn out, and spend their lives hunting for new sights, new emotions, new diversions, new places to go, should ever be foolish enough to imagine that they could endure the undiluted society of one person, year in and year out, passes comprehension.

There are millions of husbands and wives who have had an overdose of each other's society and are suffering from it, and they are so stupid they don't realize what ails them, nor how simple the remedy for it is. Yet the symptoms are unmistakable.

When a man begins to dread the thought of going home of an evening, and to wonder what made him idiot enough to get married and to pick out Sally, of all women in the world, for a wife; when he begins to notice that Sally has gone off in looks and is getting a triple chin, and to have a feather bed figure; when his eyes focus on the little mole on Sally's cheek instead of the cute way her hair curls around the back of her neck; and when he commences wondering if all women talk as much drivel and use as many words in telling nothing as Sally Jones—then it's time for the man to pack his grip and hike away from home and Sally.

He hasn't really fallen out of love with her, as he thinks he has. He's just tired of her for the time being. He doesn't really pine to be a gay rover, as he imagines he does. He just wants to ease the pressure of the yoke of matrimony for a little, and to him—and to his wife—a ticket to Chicago, or San Francisco, or Bird Center, or anywhere away from home, is a lifeline that saves them both from destruction.

And it's exactly the same way with women. Of course the theory is that women have such an abnormal talent for loving that a wife never gets enough of her husband's society, but is a femael Oliver Twist, always asking for more. Don't you believe it. Women are fickle creatures, and the best wife in the world can get so sick and weary of a model husband that she is ready to die of sheer ennui.

The Woman's Side.

Every now and then a woman gets so that she can see nothing but faults in her husband. Everything he does and everything he doesn't do irritates her, and she, too, gets to wondering what on earth the fool-killer was doing on the day that she tied up with the miserable little shrimp that she did, instead of marrying some romantic and godlike creature that she didn't marry. She thinks that she is suffering from having missed her affinity and being married to a groundling that can't understand her higher nature, but the whole trouble is that she has had too much of her husband's society. All that she needs to effect a complete cure is a month or six weeks' separation.

Of course, being ladies and gentlemen, most of us never admit to our husbands and wives that we are bored. We yawn behind our hands and try to look interested, but in our secret souls all of us know that the surging joy with which we saw our dearly beloved husband or wife start off on a journey, or the rapture that filled our own soul when we got to go off somewhere alone, or with perfect strangers.

And we also know the delight with which we returned home, or welcomed back the wanderer, our whole point of vision changed by a little absence, and the one of whom we had been so tired clothed again in his or her halo.

This is why the summer vacation is such a beneficent institution. We can lay our weariness of our domestic partners on the weather, and get away with a decent excuse. But it isn't the change of climate that does us good. It's the change from the monotony of association, and it sends us back rested and refreshed and romantically in love again.

A True Proverb.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says the old proverb, and this is especially true of husbands and wives. They need to break away every few months just to get a perspective on each other's good qualities and to find out how necessary each is to the other's happiness.

You can overdo matrimony as easily as you can any other good thing, and if there were some way by which we could be married three days a week instead of seven there would be no more divorce.

Queer Vegetable.

A vicar advertised for a servant a short time ago, and a country girl, with a fat, red face, answered the advertisement.

After the vicar had asked a few personal questions, he said:

"You know, we are all vegetarians here, and, of course, we should require you to be one. No meat, you know—simply vegetables."

She dropped her eyes, and for a time seemed deep in thought.

"Well, what do you think?" asked the vicar, after a short time.

"Well, sir," she replied, "it's like this. I don't mind so much about the meat; but before I take the place I should like to know if you—er—call beer a vegetable?"

She was not engaged.

GOLF HONORS MAY GO AGAIN TO WHITNEY

By W. R. Tichenor.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 6.—Unless Nelson Whitney can keep up his best golfing gait, the Southern Golf Association is likely to have a brand-new champion before long. For Whitney is the only former champ left in the running. Of the other three, only one, R. G. Bush, has ever created a flurry in a Southern championship. Whitney and Bush meet to-day. In the other frame are a pair of unknowns, as far as championship experience goes—E. M. Tutwiler, of Birmingham, and A. J. Eldridge, of Texas.

Ellis Knowles, who looked like a very dangerous contender this year, threw away his chances to beat Nelson Whitney in the third round of the championship. After very indifferent work on the greens, he managed to pull himself together and squared the match on the eighteenth green. At the nineteenth Knowles pulled his tee shot badly and then played his second out of bounds. His third reached the green some 20 feet from the flag. Whitney, after a magnificent drive, was short with his second and just reached the edge of the green with his third. Both of them took two puts and the hole was halved in five. At the twentieth hole Knowles again hooked his tee shot far off the fair green and was stymied by a bunch of trees. Whitney sliced his tee shot out of bounds, but his second split the middle of the course. Knowles attempted to play over the trees, but half topped his mashie shot and hit a limb which deflected his ball so that it lay just flag high, but about 30 yards from the hole. Whitney's third was wide, but stopped on the right edge of the green. Knowles played his third too strong and passed the hole by 15 feet. Whitney laid his approach putt dead for a five. Knowles tried to hole his four, but overran the hole by a yard and missed the putt coming back. Whitney holed his five and won the match.

Whitney Beats Jacoby.

In the afternoon Whitney met and defeated L. Jacoby, of Texas, on the seventeenth green. In the first part of the match Jacoby was very erratic and was four down at the eighth tee. Here he took a brace and won the next three holes. The eleventh was halved, as was the thirteenth, but Whitney won the twelfth and fourteenth, and so was three up with only four to play. On the next hole, after making a mess of his tee shot, Jacoby laced a mashie shot stone dead, and won the hole with a three to Whitney's four. Jacoby won the sixteenth and so was only one down. Whitney won the seventeenth with a three and the match was over.

Reuben Bush won both of his matches handily. He and Whitney meet Friday in the semi-final. The other semi-finalists are E. M. Tutwiler, of Birmingham, and A. J. Aldridge, of Texas.

Rowan, of Atlanta, Stars.

W. H. Rowan, of Atlanta, did the best round made in the tournament in his match with R. H. Brooke, of New Orleans, when he turned in a 72. By winning this match he reached the semi-final of the second flight and will play Fooshe, of Memphis. The other semi-finalists in this flight are Hardy, of New Orleans, and Steinmehl, of Birmingham.

The players in the semi-final of the third flight are Probasco and Stahlman and Sayre and Daley. In the fourth flight there are left Post and Hargeth and Weaver and England.

The Atlanta players in the other flights are Root in the sixth flight, Dowdell Brown in the consolation division of the second flight, Hamilton Block in the consolation division of the third flight and W. P. Hazelwood in the consolation division of the sixth flight.

News of the Ring Game

Charlie White has lost another match. The Chicago sensation was billed to meet Johnny Lore in a ten-round bout at New Orleans Monday, but Lore canceled the go without giving any definite reason. Efforts are being made to get Frankie Russell as a substitute.

* * *

Matty McCue, Racine's featherweight, is anxious to get back in the ring and has made a bid for a match to the Kenosha matchmaker. The latter is willing to give him a chance, but Matty must start in the semi-finals. He is apt to be put on at the next show on June 13.

* * *

Pal Moore has been matched to box Patsy Drouillard at Windsor, Ont., Saturday night. Moore is training in the East.

* * *

Jimmy Clabby and Jack Dillon will don the gloves for a scheduled ten-round bout at Indianapolis on July 4. Dillon has recently defeated Klaus and Moha. Should he defeat Clabby he will have by far the best claim to the middleweight title.

* * *

Before Clabby takes on Dillon he will swing the padded mitts with Eddie McGoorty at Butte, Mont., in a bout billed to go ten rounds. The pair recently battled to a draw.

* * *

Jess Willard will make his next fight against Charlie Miller at Frisco on June 13. Tom Jones, manager of the Kansas City heavyweight, closed the match yesterday. They are scheduled to go four rounds.

* * *

A fighter's opinion of a fighter is not worth the breath it takes to place it on record. Ad Wolgast has yet to pick a winner.

* * *

A packed house should witness the mill between Flynn and Savage at the Auditorium-Armory on June 13. Savage usually shines against a man of the Flynn type and the battle should be a corker. Besides the Flynn-Savage set-to, two other ten-round mills will be staged. Mike Saul and Terry Nelson are billed to meet in one bout, while Britt and Meyer Pries will clash in the other.

WHAT'S THE USE.

A baseball magnate looked upon the blue and cloudless sky,
And as he saw the sunlit scene a tear

In every corner of his park the summer
sunlit stole,
But every shaft of sunshine was an

And when I asked him why he wept

EJECTED FROM PARK, BAT BRINGS SUIT FOR $10,000

BOSTON, June 6.—Ten-thousand-dollar suit for damages has been entered by Battling Nelson against the Ridgeway Construction Company of Boston, which operates the Nautical Gardens at Revere. The suit follows the ejection of the ex-lightweight champion from the gardens, where, with his wife and a party of friends, he had gone to spend the evening. Nelson was put out of the gardens by several employees, who alleged that he was intoxicated.

Later, when it was discovered that Nelson had never taken a drink in his life, the complaint is said to have been changed to improper dancing. Nelson was accompanied by his wife, who was Fay King, a cartoonist.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

IN yesterday's article I gave much space to the Phillies and Giants, so to-day will tell the fans just what I think of the Pirates. I did say yesterday that I thought Fred Clarke's men were far from out of the race, and wish to repeat that statement to-day.

The Pirates now have a long home stand which should be an advantage to them, as it is to any club. I expect that they will gain during the invasion of the West by the Eastern clubs, and they will be up very close to the Giants when our team gets back home. Clarke has always had the material on his team, but he could not get the club going, the pitchers all being out of sorts. Now they are all in sorts. A dangerous sign is the return to form of "Babe" Adams, the star of the world's series of 1909 and a man who has failed to show much since one way or another. The Pirates made their fight last year without much help from him. If he should develop into the star he really is this year, he is going to make the fighting all the tougher. He pitched a wonderful game against the Cubs last week, giving them only five hits. With Adams, Hendrix, Camnitz, O'Toole and Robinson all traveling, Clarke has a marvelous pitching staff.

* * *

THE threatening feature of this staff from a New York point of view is that Clarke is not forced to rely on its defensive ability to win games, as are many managers with a lot of star twirlers and nothing to back them up. Behind the pitchers is one of the hardest batting clubs in the league, and it will pile up runs any time. It is not a case of taking games by one or two runs. There will be very few clubs outside of the Giants that can stop the Pirates now, mark my words. They should be a better batting team than last year, and it is generally conceded among rival clubs that they hit hard enough last season.

* * *

WAGNER is going great guns and seems to be age proof. Viox at second base looks like a find. He hits well and fights hard all the time. Miller has learned much about playing the first bag, and looks like the best first baseman Clarke has had working for him in years. That has always been the weakness of the Pirates in the infield—the absence of a capable first baseman. Byrne is recognized by ball players and fans alike as one of the best third basemen there is. The outfield is stronger, Clarke having developed a couple of promising gardeners, both young workers, and Carey is hitting harder than he did last season. His fielding work is of the best. Hofman is on the bench and ready to get into the game regularly any time. He is a fine fielder and a good batter. The club has also improved in speed, being faster on the bases than last year; Viox and Booe add dash. It is going to be a hard club to stop. The only apparent weakness is in the catching staff, Kelly having done very poor work in the games I have seen him play, and Simon being slow. He is a good hitter. With the return of the veteran Gibson it will be a wonderfully rounded team.

* * *

MY favorable comment on the Pirates is honest, but it does not declare the Giants out of the race by any means. It is my opinion that we have just as good a ball club, if not a shade better, than Pittsburg. It is improved over last year, as are the Pirates. The race should be a neck-and-neck one.

* * *

THE hot weather has put two of the New York pitchers right who were off form all spring. These are Tesreau and Marquard. Both did some grand work last week in the Philadelphia series. Marquard worked a nice game against Cincinnati on Sunday. Tesreau pitched a magnificent game on Memorial Day afternoon, and this was an encouraging sign, as the big pitcher will be much needed before the race is over. Work does not hurt him and he will get his share of it. With Demaree and Fromme, it is my opinion that we have just as good a pitching staff as Pittsburg. Demaree will be booming along once more as soon as he fully recovers from the wrench which strained his back. Fromme did not get a very good start in New York last week for his first game, but it must be remembered he was working with a strange team under strange circumstances, and that he was doubly anxious to make good before the New York fans and his new boss. He is going to be a consistent winner for the Giants.

* * *

THE club struck its stride for the first time last week. Players who have been going poorly all spring suddenly bloomed into their old selves with the warm weather. Murray, in particular, picked up. He has been batting very badly, but showed his old punch in the Philadelphia series and some fielding that startled the Phillies. He cut down runner after runner with his great whip, and it is work of this sort that encourages a pitcher. Burns and Merkle and all the boys are hitting now, and hitting in the pinches, too. There is a different atmosphere around the clubhouse. It is the old smell of victory. "Larry" Doyle is playing the game of his life. Herzog was ill and out of the lineup for a few days last week, but is all right now. The Giants face a hard trip through the West. We are liable to run into the Cincinnati team on our return when it strikes its stride and get some trimmings. The Western clubs have been fattening on this bunch all spring, but "Joe" Tinker has his boys going better now, and he will give any team a battle. The Reds looked like a ball club against us last Sunday. Pittsburg is going to be a tough nut to crack, but I do not anticipate so much trouble in Chicago or here in St. Louis. With any sort of twirling against the Cubs, we should take the series. If the Giants come back from this road run as much ahead of Pittsburg as we are now, all hands will be satisfied. The rest of the Eastern clubs will experience great difficulty in beating the Pirates, especially with Philadelphia and Brooklyn crumbling. Still, if the team has the goods to deliver it should be just as effective on the road as at home, and I believe the Giants have the goods and will deliver.

FODDER FOR FANS

The Naps in the game against the Yankees yesterday kept up their fence busting record by smashing out two triples and three doubles.

* * *

The Pirates trimmed the Phillies yesterday, batting out three runs in the first inning off Rixey, which were sufficient to win the game without the four runs gathered during the other sessions of play.

* * *

"Shoeless Joe" Jackson got his title not because he made it a practice in his earlier days to play in his bare feet, but because he once played without shoes. One of the Southern League clubs with which Jackson played when he first began his baseball career provided him with shoes that were too tight. It was game time when Jackson discovered it, quite too late to send out and get another pair, so Jackson played that day in his stocking feet.

* * *

Both Jackson and Cobb suffered subtractions in their batting averages. Cobb, up four times, failed to get a hit, and Jackson went hitless after two attempts at the plate. He was passed twice also.

* * *

The Braves polished up their batting eyes yesterday before game time and then pounded the Cub pitchers for eight runs and thirteen hits, which were sufficient to give them the game and, lift them out of last place, into which they dropped Wednesday night.

* * *

The Red Sox went down to defeat again yesterday, suffering a shut-out at the hands of the White Sox.

* * *

At the present time the Red Sox, who were "doped" to repeat as pennant winners, are 425 points behind the Athletics. Can they overcome this immense handicap during the 100-odd games remaining to be played?

* * *

Nap Rucker, the portside flinger of the Dodgers, shut out the Reds with two hits yesterday.

* * *

The Yankees, by losing to the Naps in a ten-inning game yesterday, dropped their twelfth straight game, and also increased their record of home defeats to sixteen games.

* * *

However, despite the fact that the Yankees have not won a game at home this year, the daily attendance averages around 4,000, and each day nearly the same faces are seen in the grandstand and bleachers. No doubt the loyal fans want to be around when the Yankees finally grab off a game on the home grounds.

* * *

Sam Crawford, of the Tigers, got four slashing hits yesterday. So did Oldring, of the Athletics.

Electric self-starter and electric lighting system;

Otto Jordan in Near Mix-up With Fan

WAYCROSS, GA., June 6.—Otto Jordan, manager of the Valdosta Empire League team, came near having a mix-up with a spectator after yesterday's thrilling 12-inning game in which Waycross was the victor, 2 to 1.

During the game some remark was addressed to Jordan that he resented and it seems that Jordan said something to the wrong man, who afterwards called on Jordan for an explanation. Many fans gathered around the two men and for a while it looked like a fight would result.

President Groover, of the Empire League, has been advised that Waycross will not tolerate such conduct on the field and an investigation has been requested. Mr. Groover is expected here to-day to personally look into the matter.

FRED THOMSON BREAKS THE ALL-ROUND RECORD

PRINCETON, N. J., June 6.—A new world's record in the all-around championships to-day belongs to F. C. Thomson, a student in the Princeton Theological Seminary. He won that title when he scored a total of 7,499 in the ten events held here yesterday.

The previous records were 7,385, made by Martin Sheridan, New York, and 7,477½, made by James Thorpe, subsequently disqualified for professionalism. Thorpe made his record last September at Celtic Park, N. Y.

Senator Townsend Brands President Wilson as Lobbyist

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Wilson was branded a lobbyist by Senator Townsend, of Michigan, Republican, at the Overman lobby inquiry this afternoon.

"The actions of President Wilson come nearest my definition of a lobbyist," said Townsend. "I am certain that some Senators will not vote as their conscience dictate for fear of the Administration."

Letters and telegrams alleged to prove that a sugar and wool lobby has endeavored to influence the Senators were shown by Senator Thomas, of Colorado.

Thomas said he has received thousands of communications, some of them threatening him with political extinction should he expose these interests in his State.

Alma Barrett, a young woman arrested Thursday night in a raid on the Frankfort Hotel, at 27 South Pryor Street, pleaded in Police Court Friday morning for a stockade sentence in preference to being sent to the Martha Home to be reformed. Mrs. F. J. Rathnaw, who claims to be the wife of a soldier, also was arrested in the raid. Two men who were with the woman escaped.

When Judge Broyles asked the women if they would not like to go to the Martha Home, the Barrett woman cried: "Send me to the stockade. I do not want to be reformed." Each was given a sentence of 29 days in the police station.

Fearing the ghost of her pet poodle Snookums is wandering about disconsolate at the absence of a proper monument at his mound, Mrs. J. DuPree, of 42 Hendrix Avenue, has applied to the police for aid in locating the grave of her pet.

Snookums died May 30. At the time of his death Mrs. DuPree's husband was ill and could not leave his bedside to see that the poodle's carcass was properly interred. So Mrs. DuPree commissioned a passing negro to perform the burial rites. The negro has never returned to tell Mrs. DuPree where her darling lies buried.

Now she wants to find the grave and erect a suitable headstone.

Savage Has Developed a Punch If It Sticks Will Win Him Title

By Left Hook

IF Jim Savage has developed a punch, he's the coming heavyweight champion—a real champion; not merely another addition to the overgrown citrous crop.

They say he has, too.

Just after Savage was matched to meet Jim Flynn here before the Auditorium-Armory boxing fans June 13 he took on a bout with Whitey Allen. This Allen got as much publicity as a society divorcee before the bout. His previous scraps had all looked good, and he did, too. He was an elephant for size and his punch was a terrible thing. More than that, he had scrapped with a lot of tough boys and they hadn't made an impression on him.

What Jim Savage did to Allen is a matter of record. It was a smear. Savage, displaying a kick the like of which he had never shown before, punched Allen all over the place. He hit with either hand like a piledriver hits a post. A brick wall could not have stood up under the battering that Allen was getting.

And now arises the rumor that Savage has developed a punch.

* * *

OF course, it would never have been fair to have said that Savage couldn't strike a pretty solid blow. He's a big brute, with lots of muscle and a pretty good knack of getting his strength behind the blow. But he won his battles more on cleverness than on punch, and accordingly the story got out on him that he couldn't hit a haymaker.

* * *

JIM SAVAGE is helped along in his battle for the championship by having a wise manager, Dan Morgan. Dan said the last time he was in Atlanta that he was going to teach Savage to hit.

"It never was done," they told him.

"All right," Morgan replied; "then I'll do it."

How Morgan set about it nobody knows. He consulted with the greatest living experts on boxing, he studied Savage and then he set him to work. Month after month Savage has been cultivating his punch. It has blossomed out at last.

The Allen bout proved that. Savage, for the first time in his career, showed a real punch. It was a tremendous wallop. It may get him the championship, for he has everything else—size, weight, strength and cleverness.

* * *

THE battle with Flynn on June 13 will be Savage's first real test since he put over his new punch. Flynn is tough and clever, too. He hits a good blow himself. He is willing to mix with anybody, and no lover of long-range work. If Savage can put it over on Flynn, it will pretty nearly make a champion out of him. He is not going to overlook any chances.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CLOSE; 25,000 'KIDS' HAPPY

Year One of Best, Says Superintendent—Expects Enrollment of 27,000 in Fall.

Atlanta's public schools closed to-day for the annual summer vacation. Nearly 25,000 boys and girls in thirty-odd schools of the city shouted for joy when, at 11 o'clock, the school-house doors swung wide.

Accrding to Superintendent W. M. Slaton, who was busy Friday morning signing some 600 pay checks for the tired teachers, the year has been one of the best. The total enrollment this year was 24,065, 1,094 more than last year.

Growth Rapid in Last Decade.

He estimates that next year the enrollment will reach 27,000, and emphasizes the rapid growth of Atlanta schools during the past ten years. The total enrollment increases from 1,000 to 1,500 each year, meaning that the problem of overcrowding will continue.

A shortage of teachers is also felt, and the superintendent stated this morning that on August 15 and 16 an examination for teachers will be held in the Boys' High School.

Atlanta Teachers Not Favored.

"It is the common opinion that only Atlanta applicants are considered," said the superintendent, "but, as a matter of fact, we need all the applicants we can get, for we need teachers. We will take them from any part of the United States. Each year a great many teachers get married and this adds greatly to our shortage.

"There are no better public schools in the country than those which Atlanta boasts of, and at present the many people moving to Atlanta with their boys and girls have no hesitation in sending their children to our schools. We have the best of equipment and our teachers are efficient and unsurpassed in every respect."

LOYAL EX-SLAVES ASK STATE'S AID

Twenty-eight Aged Negroes, in Petition, Say They Cast Their Fortunes With South in War.

One of the most pathetic petitions ever presented to a Georgia State official was handed to the State Commissioner of Pensions by a delegation of aged negroes Thursday afternoon.

It is a prayer for aid from 28 men, who, though they knew their hopes for freedom lay with the North, followed their Southern masters into the battlefield. The petition says:

"Many times we could have escaped and gone over to the enemies of our masters, and our friends to freedom, but we would not, for we felt that our masters had placed in us a confidence or they would not have carried us along with them as bodyguards. We could not betray their confidence. Therefore we stayed with them until the great war was over, when we were discharged without one cent to make our way through the world. We now are old and helpless and our last resort is to the Confederate States of America for a small pension or donation for us old, broken-down, worn-out ex-slaves."

The laws of Georgia make no provision for the ex-slaves who followed their masters through the war. It is probable that efforts will be made to get some kind of a relief bill through the Legislature at the coming session.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN No. 58

COUNT THE COST

"Judas, betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?"

When you are tempted to fight against the good—

And to this you are about to add hypocritical treachery, pretending love for that which you are trying to destroy—

Remember Judas kissing the Saviour.

And do it not.

They crucified Christ, but they scorned Judas, who lost his soul.

He failed to count the cost.

Make not the same mistake.

You are warned when Jesus says:

"Whosoever doth not bear his own cross and come after Me can not be my disciple.

"For which of you, desiring to build a tower, doth not first sit down and count the cost, whether he have wherewith to complete it?

"Lest haply, when he hath laid a foundation, and is not able to finish, all that behold begin to mock him saying:

"THIS MAN BEGAN TO BUILD AND WAS NOT ABLE TO FINISH."

Count the cost.

And answer:—

"What is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

When the liquor dealers and the landlords of the houses which were in our midst stand before the judgment bar of God, that seven hundred thousand dollars of trade, that sixty thousand dollars of rent squeezed annually from the souls of fallen women will scarcely compensate those liquor dealers and landlords for the ruin of the numberless girls necessary to carry on the infamous traffic.

All of the foul gold of years will not outweigh those thirteen little girls under ten years of age suffering in Grady Hospital from hideous infection.

Neither will it balance the broken hearts of mothers of babies blinded at birth.

Nor will it offset the deadly weight of the sorrow and suffering of the mothers and fathers of these girls betrayed.

Count the cost.

AND YOU WILL JOIN THE FIGHT AGAINST THE SOCIAL EVIL.

It has only begun in Atlanta.

And every imaginable falsehood will be told by servants of Satan to hinder it.

Therefore, when you hear any statement, consider carefully its source.

When a man prating of morality advocates licensed immorality and seeks to besmear with slime police officials who are doing and who have done their duty, EXAMINE THE MAN'S PAST, his friends and connections.

Ask:—Is he connected directly or indirectly with the liquor traffic?

Has he been so connected in the past?

Has he ever been employed—is he now employed by any one or more of those charged with violating the laws against prostitution?

And, when one claims that vice has been scattered but not lessened in Atlanta, make the same inquiries and refer him to this Committee; for he is either in error or lying, as can be easily shown.

Conditions at the time of Chief Beavers' order closing the houses were accurately known to this Committee.

And the work of the Chief and his men—the co-operation of almost all of our public officials, city and county, have far exceeded the hopes of this Committee and demonstrated that ATLANTA NEEDS NO OUTSIDE HELP IN SOLVING HER PROBLEMS.

But remember, this is a work of years and generations, not of months and days.

Burglary, arson and murder—which were never fostered by the lie of segregation—are still here.

But in Atlanta the pimp, the panderer and those who would live or profit by the shame of women are losing hope.

Therefore, when their friends or their employees protest against "the frightful immorality" of our city and "the corruption" of the police and detective force which has put them out of business, those who know smile in pity.

FOR PROTECTED VICE IS DEAD.

Some people believe that a snake with a broken back will not die until sunset.

Notwithstanding its twisting and writhing, intelligent men know that the creature is dead when its spinal cord has been snapped.

The writhing and twisting are spasmodic; they will grow less and less.

Protected vice is dead. Months ago its spinal cord was broken by our Police Force.

Count the cost. You would not revive, if you could, your city's shame.

Remember Judas and his kiss.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

JULY AND AUGUST CONTINUE ASCENT

Spot Houses Bid Aggressively for Old Crop and Sell Their October Contracts.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The cotton market was lively at the opening today and first prices were unchanged to 3 points higher than last night's close. Best advances occurred in near months. A renewal of yesterday's buying, led by brokers representing spot interests, resulted in July rallying to 11.81 within ten minutes. August displayed phenomenal strength, advancing to 11.65, against an opening of 11.52, aggregating a net gain over the previous close of 16 points. After the call, the market held steady, with prices fluctuating narrowly.

July and August were purchased heavily by spot and commission houses. It was reported that buyers of the old crops were selling new positions. Commission houses also took new crops freely. The selling was scattered. New crops sold up 2 to 4 points from the opening.

During the forenoon August was under persistent demand and held steady around the early best, while July and new crop options ranged from unchanged to 3 points above the close of Thursday.

The weather map showed favorable conditions over the entire belt. Good showers were reported in Texas, where they are badly needed, with indications for more.

The advance at the outset was influenced by high cables. Spot sales in Liverpool were 15,000 bales, a record for the season, 11,200 of which were American. The English market ruled steady throughout the session and closed at the top prices.

Continued demand for July and August by spot houses and shorts resulted in July advancing to 11.85 and August to 11.73, a net gain of 24 points over the previous close. Local operators offered good lots at these prices. Spot houses were good sellers of new crop positions, which prevented them from following the advance.

Those short of July were nervous over the talk of the small stock here and the fear of this stock being shipped out.

It was reported that Liverpool and the South have been good sellers here today and there was a disposition on the part of the ring crowd to sell the market on all rallies as weather conditions continue favorable.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July 11.75, August 11.60, October 11.19, January 11.11.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July 12.11, August 11.72, October 11.30, January 11.32.

BARGAIN HUNTERS SEEK BIG ISSUES

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Heavy purchasing on the London exchange by bargain hunters exercised a bullish influence on the opening of the stock market to-day, with the result that advances were made ranging from fractions to 2 points. Liggett & Myers, in spite of the proposal of Attorney General MacReynolds to tobacco factories, advanced 2 points.

Among other advances were Amalgamated Copper, ⅝; United States Steel common, ¾; Union Pacific, ⅝; Reading, ¾; American Can, ¼; American Beet Sugar, ½; Atchison, ¼; Baltimore and Ohio, ⅛; Brooklyn Rapid Transit, ¼; Canadian Pacific, 2⅝; International Harvester, 1.

Chesapeake and Ohio, which sold ex-dividend 1¼, opened at 57½, against 58½ at the close last night. In a half hour it advanced ⅛.

Union Pacific shaded at the end of a half hour. Mexican Petroleum was one of the weakest issues, declining ¾. Erie began ⅞ up, but shaded.

Canadian Pacific was in demand both here and in London. London reported that it was being bought there by Continental houses. Some traders professed belief that the crisis had been passed; others think that stocks will sag for the balance of the summer on account of the scarcity of investment money.

Fractional losses and gains were recorded in the market after the opening with moderate gains in the more important issues. Chesapeake and Ohio dropped ¾ from its opening. American Can declined 2 points to 25⅛. Union Pacific was up ⅞ and Southern Pacific gained ⅛; Lehigh Valley and Northern Pacific were up ½; Canadian Pacific was off ¼ from the opening. The tone in the late forenoon was firm.

Call money loaning at 2½.

Most issues showed slight changes in the last hour. Canadian Pacific crossed 220, for a net gain of 1⅜ on the day. Steel sold around 54¾, for a fractional advance over the mid-day price. Among the other gains over the noon range of prices were Atchison ¼, St. Paul ⅛, Union Pacific 1, Reading ⅝. Pennsylvania crossed 108. Chesapeake and Ohio and Utah Copper were under pressure. The general tone showed improvement.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds steady.

WHEAT IS HIGHER DESPITE SHOWERS

Demand General in Chicago Pit Throughout Day, Based on Bad News From Kansas.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....105 @106
Corn—No. 2 .... 58½
Oats—No. 2 .... 39 @ 39½

CHICAGO, June 6.—Wheat showed considerable irregularity this morning, but strength predominated. There were early gains of ⅛@⅞c with sales of July between 90¼@90⅞. The buying was led by the Bartlett-Frazier house on continued unfavorable crop reports from sections of Kansas. Finlay, Barrell & Co. received a Kansas City message, however, saying good rains all over that State and that the harvesting of wheat has already been commenced in the southeastern section. Liverpool was higher and this, too, in the face of big world's shipments for Monday next.

Corn was ¼@⅜c higher and firm. This strength was mainly on the small offerings rather than any urgent demand.

Oats were ⅜@½c higher in sympathy with corn.

Provisions were higher on a higher hog market at the yards.

EASIER FEELING IN WHEAT; LOWER PRICES PREDICTED

CHICAGO, June 6.—The Inter-Ocean says: "Sentiment in wheat was mixed last night. The bears, while not any too confident of being able to make more money, are looking for lower prices on the belief that there will be more than an average crop of winter wheat and spring wheat. The bulls believe that the constant reiteration of damage claims for Kansas and Oklahoma crop are sufficient confirmation of reports that the crop estimates have been greatly reduced and warrant the maintenance of the present level.

"Some of the corn specialists who have been waiting for a break on the increased receipts say that it does not look as if a decline is likely until there is more actual pressure of cash corn and a large accumulation of stocks.

"Oats specialists calls attention to the slowness of the Eastern demand and Canadian oats in bond at Seaboard are 8 to 9c below the domestic product. It is said that some of the oats recently shipped to Eastern lake ports are unsold.

GET THE CHAFING DISH HABIT

By ELBERT L. THORNTON.

Don't worry about the hot kitchen. Prepare your supper on the chafing dish. Recipes that are quickly and easily prepared:

Chicken Supreme Chafing Dish.

The meat of one boiled hen cut into dice, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cup cream or milk, two egg yolks, pinch of flour. Put butter and flour in chafing dish and let cook for two minutes and add the cream and salt and pepper. Let cook until thick as gravy, beat in the egg yolks and add the chicken. A little sherry adds to the taste very much. Serve on toast.

Chicken a la King Chafing Dish.

The same as above, only chop one-half green pepper and one-half small onion and cook in butter and mix cream and chicken. Add one-half can mushrooms and one-half Spanish pepper (pimiento). Serve on toast.

Welsh Rarebit Chafing Dish.

One pound cream cheese chopped fine, one teaspoon dry mustard, one teaspoon Worcester sauce, pinch cayenne pepper, one-half cream or stale beer. Put the cheese, mustard and Worcester in chafing dish and let melt. Stir in the cream or beer and be careful not to let curdle. Serve on toast.

Crab Meat and Cheese Chafing Dish.

Pick meat from six hard crabs, one-half pound American cheese chopped, one-half green pepper chopped, butter size of egg, one-half cup cream, tabasco, Worcester, salt and pepper. Let butter melt, add green pepper and let simmer for two or three minutes, add crab meat, cream and seasoning, and stir well. Just before you serve, mix in cheese and let melt. Serve on hot plates with toast.

Eggs a la Lockhart Chafing Dish.

Melt small piece of butter in chafing dish, break six eggs (be careful not to break the yolk), put same over and let cook for three minutes, then salt and pepper, add dash tabasco, dash Worcester and tablespoon vinegar; cover and let steam for two or three minutes. Serve on toast.

These recipes should be a service to the readers of the Market Basket, and by looking over the ads you can find many suggestions for the meals and save time and worry. Fresh fruit adds to the meal, and you will see advertised cantaloupes, watermelons, raspberries, strawberries, cherries and peaches, as well as plenty of fresh vegetables.

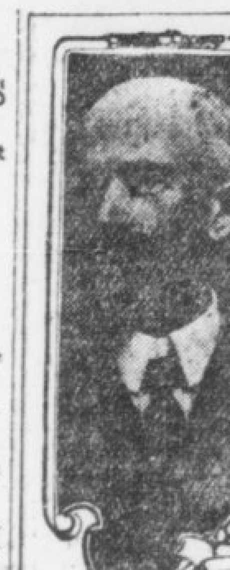
POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Health Pointers For the Chickens

Suggestions That Will Mean a Great Saving to the Poultryman.



EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Keep busy.

Keep your eggs cool.

Keep your nests clean.

Keep your coops and houses free from mites and lice.

Keep your growing chicks well supplied with green food.

Keep them out of the wet grass in the mornings.

Keep your breeding stock in a healthy condition by keeping plenty of gravel, lime and green food always in reach of them, and feed a variety.

Do not crowd too many young chicks together in one coop, or they will breed disease, and they will die off faster than you can hatch them.

Keep plenty of fresh water or milk for the little chicks to drink at all times; the milk after they are two weeks old.

Do not feed too much white bread to young chicks or you will find it fatal to many of them.

After this season of the year the nearer the ground you set your hens the better will be the hatches.

Keep Hens Hatching.

You can arrange them so that you will have three or four hens hatching at the same time; you can double up the broods with one or two hens and put the others to laying again, and the chicks will be easier cared for. When you take the hen and the chicks from the nest grease the hen slightly under the wings and along the breast with a little fresh lard (no salt). This will assist in getting rid of any lice on the little ones. Use no grease about the nest before they are hatched.

Keep sulphur away from the hen when she is breeding chicks, as it is hard upon the eyes of the chicks.

Coffee boxes or those of similar size, about two feet square and about two and a half feet long, make splendid brood coops for a hen and a lot of young ones. If they should incline to leak any, tack tarred paper over the top of them, or strips over the cracks.

Put your young chicks on as high ground as possible, and on fresh ground not used for chicks the year before.

Egg-Eating Hens.

Judge Marshall: I have a lot of hens that have contracted the habit of eating their own eggs, and it seems impossible for me to get them to quit it. Can you tell me of any way to stop them? I would also like to know what is the cause of their getting at it in the first place. Yours truly,

Fort Valley, Ga. H. H. S.

ANSWER—Egg eating is a very bad habit and is very annoying to the owner. The habit is usually formed by their eating a soft-shelled egg or one that has been broken by falling from the roost. Then a desire for meat food will cause them to continue. One will get at it first and the others will follow suit when they see her at it, and help devour everything in sight of the kind. The habit is seldom formed by a flock on free range. A good way to lessen the desire is to give the hens all the exercise possible by covering the grain food in the soil and have them dig it out. Hang cabbage heads up so they can just get to them by extra effort. Have the nests in as dark and secluded a place as possible. All this will not cure them of the habit when once it is well formed.

The best way we have ever found to rid them of the habit is to use good, deep nest boxes, putting a layer of excelsior on the bottom then tack a gunnysack over the box, allowing it to sag down half-way to the excelsior which forms the nest they are to use; at the lowest point cut a cross just large enough for the egg to roll through. In that way the egg will roll out of sight, and the hen will be unable to see it as she used to and will soon get out of the habit. The other hens which have been in the habit of running to get their share when a hen cackles will soon find out that there is nothing to be had and will soon quit that part of it. The best way is to prevent all this trouble when you can by anticipating the wants and habits of your hens by keeping them busy at all times and supplying their wants as well as you can.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Peachtree Lease Made at $50,000

Drug Company Takes Peck Corner Eight Years—Important Meeting Monday.

A. S. Adams, of the real estate firm of B. M. Grant & Company, announced Friday some of the details of the lease of the store at 141 Peachtree Street, being the Peachtree and Houston Streets corners of the Cruickshank Building, formerly known as the Peck Building. The floor space is about 1,500 square feet.

This entire property was leased some tme ago from the Peck estate through B. M. Grant & Company to the Cruickshank Cigar Company. The Cruickshank Cigar Company has now leased to the James Drug Company the store at 141 Peachtree for a term of approximately eight years at a total consideration of about $50,000, or more than $6,000 a year. The Cruickshank Company has also disposed of its soda water business to the drug concern.

The James Drug Company has installed one of the handsomest sets of fixtures in tlanta and will do a general drug, soda water and prescription business. When the Cruickshank Cigar Company has taken out the soda fountain they will install one of the largest and most expensive humidors in the South. Mr. Cruickshank states that in this additional space he will increase his cigar facilities.

B. M. Grant & Company have also leased for Mr. Cruickshank the entire second floor and most of the third floor to Veitrie & Harmon, for a term of about eight years. Thelessees will conduct a men's tailoring establishment.

Important Realty Meeting.

A meeting of the utmost importance to real estate men, office building managers and property owners generally will be held Monday at noon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on the fifth floor of the Empire Building. At this time the question of the pending income tax measure of the Federal tariff bill will be thoroughly discussed, and it is believed that a formal protest against some items of the measure will be lodged with United States Senators A. O. Bacon and Hoke Smith.

The bill has passed the House and is now up to the Senate. A provision which realty men and building managers find obnoxious is that which provides that tenants shall withhold rents from landlords. The bill, it is contended, represents double taxation. Expenses will be taxed as well as income, and corporations doing business at a loss will be taxed on their losses.

Charles P. Glover has sent out notices of the meeting in the name of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, and it is expected that a large number of people will be present.

Leases by Cochran Company.

The Ralph O. Cochran Company has rented or leased the following places within the past few days:

For Mrs. A. H. Perkins to R. J. McGaughey, 269 East Hunter Street; for Mrs. A. M. Campbell to T. M. Middlebrooks, 290 Ormond Street; for Mrs. E. M. Holman to D. W. Hilley, 41 Oglethorpe Avenue; for L. H. Zurline to M. W. Cole, 22 Rogers Street; for Dillin-Morris Company to R. J. Meckle, 238 Lake Avenue; for Jacob Auerbach to J. J. Slappy, 295 Windsor Street; for C. P. Murphey to Mrs. M. E. Spruill, 18 Wellington Street; for Mrs. M. G. Trippe to Walter Cone, 97 Mills Street; for M. Leiverson to J. A. Finch, 324 Houston Street, and for W. D. Palmer to Mrs. W. C. Smith, 24 Cooper Street.

Realty Business Good.

The past few days in the real estate market have instilled a great deal of confidence in local land dealers. Prospects for good crops, easier money and general confidence have had their effect.

A few expressions are typical of the prevailing sentiment.

"Thursday we had more inquiries for property than we have had in a long time. People believe crops are going to be good," was the comment of J. H. Ewing, of the Smith & Ewing agency.

"Things look better to me" said Milton H. Liebman, of the A. F. Liebman Company.

"The man who's not selling real estate is not working up to capacity," was the comment of T. C. Holmes, of the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company. "We have no cause to complain."

Edwin P. Ansley, Shelby Smith, Forrest Adair, S. B. Turman, B. M. Grant, George P. Moore, L. P. Bottenfield, John D. Babbage, M. C. Kiser, Harris G. White, William A. Vernoy and others joined in the general chorus.

Mr. Candler's Purchase.

Considerable interest was manifested Friday in local realty circles over the purchase by Asa G. Candler of a tract in Chicago for the erection of a ten-story building at a cost of $300,000. Mr. Candler now has holdings in Chicago, Washington and New York, as well as in Atlanta and other cities where his soft drink business assumes large proportions.

The price paid for the 22 1-2 by 145 foot parcel was $28,000, or $1,254 a front foot, about the price that would be paid in Atlanta at Peachtree and Currier or Poplar and Luckie. The tract adjoins property already owned by Mr. Candler, which gives him a combined frontage of 114 1-3 feet.

West Peachtree Houses.

Three new bungalows are being built in West Peachtree Park, which corresponds to Thirteenth Street and is just to the east of West Peachtree Street. The houses face north and are an attractive addition to a neighborhood composed of medium-sized but very artistic dwellings.

Ten years ago West Peachtree was virtually a "wilderness," with only an occasional house north of Sixth Street, but to-day it is almost solidly built up along its entire extent.

Ivy Street Work.

Work on the regrading of Ivy Street is now nearly complete and in a comparatively short time this thoroughfare will be opened again to traffic. Joel Hurt has a plan for widening the street before the other work is finished, and if this should be done the opening would be delayed somewhat. Walls that recently gave way under heavy rains have been replaced.

Architect Brown's Bid.

A. Ten Eyck Brown, the well-known local architect, has submitted a bid on the Spartan Inn property at Spartanburg, S. C., and the contract for this job is expected to be awarded Thursday. This improvement will include a large department store, a hotel and the terminal of the Greenville, Spartanburg and Anderson Railroad.

Drawing for Mr. Candler.

Asa G. Candler is in receipt of a handsome architect's drawing of the entrance to the 24-story Candler Building in Times Square, New York City. An artistic frieze surrounds the entrance and the Candler coat-of-arms and shield are above it. Willauer, Shape & Bready, of New York, are the architects.

FOR SALE AT
— A-U-C-T-I-O-N —
SIX UP-TO-DATE HOMES
And 19 Ready-to-Build-On Lots
TO-MORROW
SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1913,
At 3 p. m., on the Premises

THESE are 5 and 6-room houses, with every city convenience and connection, including furnace in several of the houses, but no gas as yet. These houses were built of the best material, under the personal direction of Colonel I. N. Ragsdale, who could not be induced to build a shoddy house.

These houses are real city homes, located in the social center of the Tenth Ward, and only a step from the best car service in Atlanta.

We urge you to go out and inspect this property. Each house will be plainly placarded, showing cash payment and monthly payments; also the amount of the loan to be assumed.

THESE HOUSES ARE NOW RENTED, and bring in from $18.50 to $30.00 per month. Think of what a help that will be to you, in meeting your payments, should you not be ready to occupy the house.

The houses and lots front on the following streets:

Arlington Avenue, Princess Avenue and LaRosa Terrace.

THIS SECTION HAS NO OBJECTIONABLE FEATURE

It is logically the place for the people to live who are engaged in business, or who are employed among the many industrial and manufacturing and railroad enterprises around the Terminal Station, Whitehall Street, Mitchell Street, and the Central and West Point Railroads, and the adjacent territory. The car service and the way the streets run prove these statements to be true. Think about it, and you'll see it as we do.

THE LOTS ARE READY TO BUILD ON

These are the lots to buy, either for home sites or for speculation, because they are ready to build on. In addition to this, every lot is a beauty, with nice young oak shade trees scattered over them. Also, because their location is excellent. They are only a short distance from the business center of Oakland City. Only two blocks from the City School, and near the churches; and the farthest lot is only two blocks from the car line; and, best of all, they are socially in the swim, and

ALL CITY IMPROVEMENTS DOWN AND PAID FOR.

THE TERMS ON THE HOUSES

will range from $150 to $250 cash, and the payments will range from $22.50 per month to $32.50 per month, with 6 per cent simple interest. Small loan on five of the houses, to be assumed by the purchaser.

THE TERMS ON THE LOTS

are right. Every lot will be sold on terms of $50 cash, and the balance $15 per month, with only 6 per cent simple interest on the deferred payments.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take cars at the corner of Forsyth and Alabama Streets, marked "East Point," "Hapeville" or "College Park." Get off at the corner of Avon (Oakland Avenue). You will then be only a step from this property.

COME AND BE SURE TO BUY—You will never regret it if you do, and you will be sorry if you don't. Get plans from

Lobbyists, Insidious and Otherwise at the National Capital

Thus Far the Investigation at Washington Has Failed to Reveal Any Sign of the "Numerous, Industrious and Insidious Lobby" That President Wilson Charged With Being at Work There.

Thus far the soul-searching Senators who are testifying before the Senate subcommittee in Washington have failed to reveal any sign of the "numerous, industrious and insidious lobby" that President Wilson charged with being at work in their solemn midst.

It may be that the President's definition of a lobbyist differs from that of the Senators. It may even be that a lobbyist, even though he be numerous and industrious, is not insidious, and is entitled to ply his calling among the legislators, despite the Presidential wrath which he invokes by doing so.

According to the Century Dictionary, a lobbyist is "one who frequents halls of legislation, and makes a profession of influencing legislation, or attempting to influence legislation."

Some such miscreants as these doubtless are now in Washington, but according to the testimony of Senators, most of the attempts to influence legislation, aside from those of the President and the Secretary of State, are made by men directly interested in the legislation they are attempting to influence.

For example, among the men who are now in Washington for the purpose of molding Congressional opinion are numerous sugar growers of Louisiana and wool growers of the West. These men do not hesitate to say that their business will be ruined by the passage of the tariff as it stands. Not being particularly eager to have their business ruined, they have come to their Senators and Congressmen to see if something can not be done to keep it from being ruined. And daily they take advertising space in newspapers, for which they pay regular rates, to set forth their case as it looks to them.

Are these men lobbyists? According to the President, they are, and insidious lobbyists at that.

But what about the President? On several occasions he has gone to the Capitol and buttonholed legislators to state his side of the tariff question. Is the President, then, a lobbyist?

Mr. Wilson would probably deny the charge hotly. Yet where is the difference? Mr. Wilson's business is being President, and he believes that that business will be best served by the pending tariff. The sugar growers and the wool growers and the others are in the business of raising sugar and wool, and they believe that their business will be worst served by the pending tariff.

There is not a scintilla of evidence that they have tried to corrupt anybody. There is no indication that they have used anything but such arguments as any man has a right to make to his duly elected representatives in the Senate and in the House.

Why, then, are they lobbyists when the President is not?

How did they become lobbyists?

Will they remain lobbyists beyond the present administration?

These are interesting questions. For, if a man is to be condemned for striving honestly to protect his own business, there will be no legitimate channels of industry in this country save being a President or a Cabinet member, and under our Constitution, few people can hold these positions at the same time.

STEAM AND SALE

By WEX JONES.

Representative Goodwin, of Arkansas, is preparing a bill ordering United States battleships to display samples of American manufactures.

IT was a glorious spectacle to see our fleet depart,
Equipped with lines of samples that would thrill a drummer's heart.
The North Dakota led the van, the dry goods flagship she,
Flinging this signal to the breeze, "SILK SHIRTWAISTS, 98."
The dreadnought Arizona displayed along the rail
The immortal words of Lawrence, "DON'T GIVE UP THE SALE."
While, paraphrasing Perry, the Wisconsin warned the Powers,
"WHEN WE MEET THE ENEMY'S CUSTOMERS THEY'LL EVERY ONE BE OURS."

The seamen—no, no, salesmen—the salesmen were at drill,
Learning store discipline, and means of filling up the till.
The captain—please excuse us, the floorwalker—of course
Paced proudly down the center aisle as he watched his selling force.
The great fleet's general manager—he'd been admiral before—
Dictated red-hot ads about each mammoth floating store,
And then, inspired, he wirelessed this message through the air,
"AMERICA THIS DAY EXPECTS EACH MAN WILL SELL HIS SHARE."

Forget the Constitution, Essex and President;
Never such glorious ships as these, which sailed on business bent.
They out-advertised the British fleet; they undersold the Jap;
They swept all their competitors clean off the retail map,
And when the general manager took stock upon the cruise
They sold ten tons of chewing gum and a thousand pairs of shoes.
Well, that general manager, as the stories of him tell,
When asked if he surrendered said, "I HAVE JUST BEGUN TO SELL."

Can the South "Come Back?"

The South Can Not "Come Back," He Says, and Stay at the Front of American Leadership if Our Ideals Are Permitted to Take Their Color and Quality From the Period in Which the South Has Been in the Wilderness.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

CAN the South "come back" and take up and maintain the great position in National affairs which was hers in the first hundred years of American history? This question becomes practical in view of the fact, widely commented on as the most significant phase of National politics, that Southern influence is dominant in the present Government at Washington.

It is a question of great practical interest to the Southern people whether their re-entrance into the sphere of national leadership is only an accidental turn of the political wheel of fortune or a role to be undertaken seriously and permanently.

If the present prominence is successful and the idea that the South is called upon to reassume her ancient glory as a National and world-wide factor gets on top in Southern public opinion, it is going to have a vast and immediate influence upon our life in education, industry, morals and politics.

Arrested Glory.

The part the South played in the achievement of independence and in the organization and administration of American Democracy in the early days of the Republic is beyond exaggeration. Such historians as Bancroft and Fiske have put beyond dispute the claim that the South contributed the largest share of the patriotism and political genius which established the nation.

The roots of American civilization, which has grown to be so vast and influential in modern times, are mainly traceable to the Southern colonies. The concert of colonial unity at the time of the revolution was rallied around Virginia and the Carolinas.

Before the Pilgrims launched the Mayflower, Virginia was an established social and political fabric with a representative assembly making laws for the government of a dominion twice as large as the New England States. It included the great Northwestern territory, out of which have been carved the seven splendid commonwealths of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia.

In 1790 the Southern section constituted in area and in population three-fourths of all that was included under the terms of the Federal Constitution. At the time the Constitution was adopted there was no question of the predominant responsibility of this section for the Republic, both as to the principles on which it was founded, the processes by which it was accomplished, and the actual administration of its Government.

For 53 years the Southern States furnished its Presidents in an unbroken line of succession. The hope of liberty in the world was raised in the heart of humanity by this achievement. The thought which then controlled the Southern mind was universal in its sympathy, and Southern men were the world's leaders in the ideals of democratic humanity.

This is the background of history, against which we lift up the question—"Can the South 'come back?'" For since 1850 the South has taken but small part in the large affairs of the nation, and in contributions to human interests that are world wide. The great glory of the former day was arrested and the South in this broad sense of influence and power went into an eclipse which has lasted for more than a half century.

The Vital Questions.

The question to be pondered by our political philosophers is whether the present South is prepared to take up where the old South left off? Have we lost any vital element of civic and moral capacity as a people in our wilderness of political inactivity and detachment from National opportunities? Has anything vital been dropped out during the half century of Southern dislocation from responsibility in national and world concerns?

These questions will not be answered fairly by the success or failure of the Woodrow Wilson administration, but they will be tested out in the history now beginning, which is calling such distant attention to the South in reference to National politics.

The ability of the Southern people to come back positively as actors in the affairs of the whole country will find its severest test in our own local and sectional civilization.

We cannot play a big part at Washington permanently for everybody to recognize, if we play a little part at home for everybody to criticise.

Our ability to advance the civilization of the world as leaders in its greatest Republic will be eventually measured by our ability to achieve a basis for great influence in a noble civilization in the states South of the Potomac.

These are the vital questions Southern men are now to consider. The question of education—a trained citizenship—the relief of illiteracy. The question of public breadth and sympathy—of world consciousness—of realized amenability to the established standards of Christian civilization the world over.

True to Ourselves.

The question is being true of all to ourselves—of faithful introspection and self scrutiny and of intelligent self-criticism to discover our own faults and the sources of our weaknesses. The question of ideals and leaders—the type of Southern character to be hung in the sky before our children—the temper to be exalted as the Southern temper—the point of view to be set up for the direction and control of Southern public opinion.

The South can come back and stay back if these questions are decided under the influence of our ante-bellum history, but the South cannot come back and stay at the front of American leadership if our ideals are permitted to take their color and quality from the period in which the South has been in the wilderness.
