STATE WINS VICTORY WHEN ROAN RETAINS DAMAGING EVIDENCE

A decisive victory was scored by the State Wednesday afternoon in the bitter struggle over the admissibility of certain portions of Jim Conley's testimony which has reference to Leo Frank's alleged conduct with women visitors at the factory.

Judge Roan ruled that all of Conley's testimony should stand; he also ruled that the testimony of C. B. Dalton on the same subject insofar as it was corroborative of Conley's statements might be presented, and that he would rule on it as it came up.

Judge Roan's only ruling which favored the defense was that the proposed testimony of young George Epps was entirely inadmissible. The part of Epps' testimony to which the defense objected was that Mary Phagan had told him that she was afraid of Frank, and that Frank had tried to flirt with her.

Mistrial Talk By Arnold.

The announcement of Judge Roan's ruling was a signal for a murmer of applause and a stamping of feet about the room.

Reuben Arnold was on his feet instantly.

"Such a demonstration might easily cause a mistrial," he cried.

"The jury is not in," Solicitor Dorsey remarked.

"That makes no difference, the jury might have heard it," retorted Arnold. "If any applause like thi soccurs again I shall move that the courtroom be cleared."

Dr. H. F. Harris, who collapsed on the stand last Friday, was recalled as soon as the ruling was announced. He was able to present nothing new for more than half an hour due to the clash over the admissibility of testimony in regard to some of his scientific experiments which the State asserted had a bearing on the case.

"I say with almost absolute certainty that Mary Phagan lived not more than 30 or 45 minutes," said the medical expert, as soon as he had been recalled to the stand by Solicitor Dorsey.

Dr. Harris declared there could be no doutb as to the result of his analysis of the contents of the girl's stomach. The cabbage she had eaten had been hardly affected by the digestive juices, he said. Answering the contention of the defense that cabbage is especially hard to digest, the physician said that the biscuit the girl had eaten had progressed no further in its digestion than the cabbage.

Hot Argument Over Excluding Testimony.

The State has virtually completed its case.

It was reported during the confusion after the judge's announcement of his ruling that Reuben Arnold had made a motion for a mistrial. Mr. Arnold later explained that he had made it, and then withdrawn it because the jury was not in the room.

The fight to exclude Conley's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged conduct proved one of the exciting incidents of the morning session. The argument was still in progress when court adjourned for the noon recess. That and Conley's sensational declaration that Frank had hid the murder victim's silver-plated mesh bag, for which the detectives have been searching for months, in the safe in the factory office immediately after the crime were the features of the day.

Reuben Arnold argued that it was inadmissible because irrelevant and immaterial, and that it was a violation of the general principle in law that because A committed X last year, it can not be introduced to show that he committed X of which he is now accused.

Early Ruling Is Promised.

Combating the contention of Attorney Hooper that the objection of the defense had not been made until the lawyers for Frank had cross-examined the negro and found that they could get no reversal of statements from him, Arnold cited cases in a large number of States indicating that it is a well defined privilege that testimony may be stricken out at the instance of the defense even after the cross-examination has taken place. Judge Roan said that he would make his ruling early in the afternoon session. Colonel Arnold grew faint during the argument and got the judge's consent to talk sitting.

Attorney Rosser's manner was angry and threatening when he arose for the re-cross-examination of Jim Conley, who had testified to seeing Frank hide Mary Phagan's purse in his safe. He began at once a vicious attack on Conley's story of the mesh bag. He asked when Conley first told this remarkable tale. Conley said he couldn't remember.

"Why didn't you tell all this when you were telling 'the whole

Bill Providing for Sale of Governor's Mansion Defeated

Two bills of importance, one by Senator Stark providing for the permanent registration of voters under certain restrictions and the other by Senator Watts giving to each county the option to abolish the office of County Treasurer were passed by the Georgia Senate Wednesday afternoon.

The bill provides for the appointment of a special commission, consisting of the Governor, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, three representatives and two senators, to dispose of the present Governor's Mansion, either by sale or exchange, was defeated by the vote of 21 to 19.

Senator McNiell, of the Twenty-Second, and Senator Harrell of the Twelfth who led the opposition forces charged that a lobby of real estate schemers existed at the capitol to put this measure through.

CONLEY SAYS FRANK TOOK MARY PHAGAN'S MESH BAG

Lies Down on Floor to Show Jury How He Left Girl's Body in Cellar

NEGRO'S LONG GRILL ENDS AFTER 15 HOURS, HIS MAIN STORY STILL UNSHAKEN

truth' to the detectives?'' Rosser shouted.

The attorney apparently sought to create the impression that the mesh bag story was an afterthought, and that it was manufactured by the negro when he heard of the search the detectives were making for the bag.

On Grill Over Thirteen Hours.

When Rosser turned Conley back to Dorsey for the redirect examination, the negro had been under the grill of Rosser's cross-questioning for a total of thirteen hours. His main story of Frank's admitting the killing and of the disposal of Mary Phagan's body at Frank's direction was unshaken except by his own admissions of previous falsehoods. He had been on the stand a total of fifteen and one-half hours. Of this time the Solicitor had questioned him only about two hours.

Conley was called from the stand at 11:10 o'clock.

Conley was taken into an anteroom. He removed his coat and lit a cigarette someone had given him.

''How did you like it?'' he was asked.

''I liked it all right,'' he replied, grinning.

Sheriff Mangum then interrupted the questioning of the reporters, saying that under the judge's orders no one could speak to him.

The next moment Conley picked up a newspaper and became intently interested in the story of his own testimony.

As soon as court opened Mr. Rosser asked the judge if he was ready to hear argument on the proposition to eliminate parts of Conley's testimony. He said he was prepared to support his motion with authorities.

Judge Roan replied that he would postpone his decision until 2 o'clock.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that he had witnesses he expects to put on the stand Wednesday morning to substantiate the part of the negro's testimony in dispute. He said:

"I just want the court to understand that I am going to do this."

Judge Roan replied:

"I'll give you the benefit of whatever you bring out."

Conley was then recalled to the stand for the conclusion of his cross-examination.

Questioned About Affidavit.

Rosser's first question was:

Q. You made this statement just as I read it, didn't you, Jim?—A. Yes.

Q. It's all correct?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, Jim, you signed this statement, too, didn't you? (Showing another affidavit.)—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made this one the day after the one I just read? Now, listen, and see if this is what you said?

Mr. Rosser read how Jim Conley for the first time told the story of carrying the body of Mary Phagan to the basement. These were the concluding words:

"The reason I have not told this before is that Mr. Frank said he would get me out, but it don't seem that he is going to get out and I have decided to tell the whole truth. I gave him back the $200. He said he would fix it all right Monday."

Q. This is what you swore, isn't it, Jim?—A. Yes, sir; I swore it.

Q. Jim, didn't Miss Carson ask you on Monday while you were working around her machine when they were going to get you, you answered that you hadn't done nothing?—A. No, sir.

Denies Alarm While Sweeping.

Q. Didn't she say that Mr. Frank was innocent and the real murderer of little Mary Phagan was the man Mrs. White saw near the steps? You dropped your broom and quit sweeping when she said that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say to Mr. Herbert Schiff on Monday after the murder that you were afraid to go out of the factory and that you would give a million dollars to be a white man? A. I didn't say just that, but I told him if I was a white man I would go on out.

Q. He told you to get on out, asking you what you had to be afraid of?—A. Something like that.

Q. Jim, you talked with Julia Fuss on that day and asked her if she had another extra? You asked her if she got one to let you see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. She told you that Mr. Frank was innocent, didn't she? And you said he was innocent as the angels in heaven?—A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Mr. Rosser closed the cross-examination and Solicitor Dorsey began the redirect examination.

Q. Jim, where were you in prison?—A. Police headquarters.

Q. Were you ever in jail?—A. Yes.

Q. What were you charged with?—A. Just because I was washing my shirt.

Q. I mean those other times you were arrested. Were you in the county jail then?—A. No, I was in headquarters.

Rosser interrupted:

"The charges are in writing, your honor. They are the last evidence."

"It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways," said Dorsey. "Can't we exclude this evidence?"

Judge Roan: "You can show where he was."

Q. What were you arrested for the first time?—A. I was throwing rocks.

Q. Who arrested you?—A. A police named Edmonds.

Q. The second time?—A. I was fighting.

Q. A white man or a woman?—A. No, I never had any trouble with white folks.

Q. Jim, did you try to see Mr. Frank in jail?

Rosser objected.

Judge Roan—Don't lead him, Mr. Dorsey.

Q. Did you ever see Frank after you went to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Why not?

Rosser objected to the question as immaterial. Dorsey changed his question.

Last Saw Frank at Station.

Q. When was the last time you saw Frank before you saw him here?—A. Over there at the police station.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. No, he just smiled and bowed his head.

Q. When you wrote those notes, did you sit down, and, if so, where?—A. I was sitting at the desk.

Q. Where was Frank sitting?—A. At the other desk.

Attorney Rosser objected. "He went into all that before," he said.

Judge Roan—Did you, Mr. Dorsey?

"No, it is something I omitted," said Dorsey.

Q. What did Frank do when he you wrote those notes?

Rosser objected to the question as leading.

Q. Did Frank touch your pencil when you were writing?

Rosser objected again, declaring that the question was leading.

Judge Roan said the question could be asked without leading.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Frank do when you were writing?—A. He took the pencil out of my hand and told me to rule out that "s" on the "negro."

Q. What hour was it Friday Frank came up on the fourth floor and spoke to you?—A. About 3 o'clock.

Says Frank Took Girl's Bag.

Q. How far was it from where you were Tuesday when he told you to be a good boy?—A. Almost the same place.

Q. How far was it from the water cooler to where her body was dragged?—A. I don't know, sir.

Q. How far from the water cooler? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see Mary Phagan's pocketbook or meshbag?—A. Yes, it was on the desk in Mr. Frank's office.

Q. What did he do with it?—A. He put it in the safe.

Q. How long were you in jail before you wrote for the detectives?—A. About ten or fifteen days.

Q. How long would it take Frank to go down and lock that door?—A. About one minute.

Q. Where was Frank standing when you saw the clock at four minutes to one?—A. He was standing near those stair steps.

Q. Describe that scream you heard. Rosser objected.

"He has gone into that before, your honor," he said.

The question was sustained, Judge Roan saying: "The question cannot be asked because it is reopening a long cross-examination."

Q. Jim, who has asked you the most questions, Mr. Black, Scott, Starnes and Campbell and myself or Mr. Rosser?

Tries to Show Court Grilling.

Rosser objected.

Dorsey: "Your honor, he has tried to bring out the fact that this witness has been grilled. I want to show that altogether he was not questioned as long or as much as Mr. Rosser has questioned him on the stand.

Judge Roan: "You can ask him how long he was questioned out of court, and what has gone on here is public."

Dorsey put the question again.

Q. How long was the longest you was ever questioned before you came here?—A. Mr. Scott came and got me one day and I herd him tell the turnkey it was fifteen minutes to eleven. It was dark when I got back.

Q. How long was that?—A. I'd say about three and one-half hours.

Q. How long has Mr. Rosser questioned you?

"Your honor, I want to get this answer in the records," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan: "Do you object?" looking at Mr. Rosser.

"I do," said Rosser.

"I sustain you," said the court.

Dorsey continued the questioning.

Q. Jim, how did you leave the body in the basement?—A. I left her on her side.

Lies on Floor to Answer Query.

Q. How? (Conley got down on the floor and lay on his left side, his arms against his body. After the illustration he identified a photograph of the basement and pointed out just where he left the body).

Q. Now, Jim, tell the jury in detail everything you did after you looked at the clock at 4 minutes to 1.

Rosser objected. "He has gone into that, your honor," he said.

"Have you, Mr. Dorsey?" Judge Roan asked.

"We have not gone into that detail," Dorsey replied. "We want to show the jury how long it would have taken to do the things there and how long it would have taken Frank to get to his home. Mr. Rosser has brought out this detail to draw his conclusions."

Judge Roan: "Have you asked that?"

Dorsey: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I sustain the objection."

Dorsey: "That's all right, your honor. If you think the State ought not to ask these questions, it is all right with me."

Promised Help in Trouble.

Q. What kind of paper were you talking about when you spoke of green sheets?—A. That one (identifying the white note).

Q. What kind of back did it have? —A. A kind of grayish pad.

Q. What did Frank say about taking you to Brooklyn?—A. He didn't. He said he would take me away, and if I got into trouble he would get me out.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Mincey?—A. No; I saw him at police headquarters.

Q. What did he say?

Rosser objected, and the objection was sustained.

Q. That night at jail, did those newspaper men come on the inside?—A. No.

Q. What did they say? Wait a minute; I want those two men out. (Two newspaper reporters, H. W. Ross and Harllee Branch, of The Atlanta Journal, who were at the press table, retired from the courtroom.)—A. I can't remember that.

Q. Did they offer you anything at all?

Rosser objected, and was sustained. Conley had answered the question, though, declaring that nothing was offered him but a paper.

Q. That day at the factory, were you nervous or not?—A. No; I was not.

Darley Knew He Could Write.

Q. What did Mr. Schiff say to you? —A. They were standing there by the clock and asked if there was a crowd at the front door. Mr. Schiff came in and I said I wish I was a white man; that I would go out from there. One man said he wished he had a pistol. Mr. Schiff said: 'They've got Mr. Frank in jail. I don't see that being white would help."

Q. Did Darley know you could write?—A. Yes.

Rosser objected. "It is immaterial," said he.

Dorsey: "We want to show that this man could write; that he was in jail several days without writing, and the detectives, the Pinkertons employed by the factory, knew he could write.

Q. Could you spell luxury?—A. Yes.

Q. Why?—A. I had to write it several times. Mr. Frank had me to write down the names of the different boxes that pencils were in, and give them to him, so that he could know when they were out.

Attorney Rosser took up the re-cross-examination:

Q. Jim, you were questioned by Mr. Dorsey and myself and all the detectives, and this morning was the first time you ever mentioned that mesh bag.—A. You didn't ask me.

Q. Do you know what I asked you yesterday?—A. Yes, sir; I remember some of the questions.

Q. What?—A. Well, I don't remember just exactly.

Q. You don't remember a single thing that has not been written down?

Dorsey objected. "He must give the witness time to answer," said he.

Q. Jim, haven't you answered my questions?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said this morning that Mr. Frank promised to get you out on bond and send you out of town?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell the detectives that when you told them you were telling all the truth?—A. I did tell them hep romised to get me out.

Q. Mr, Dorsey saw you seven times, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir; I think that's right.

Q. Did he take down what you said? A. He took down something the first time.

Q. How about the next times?—A. I disremember.

Q. How long have you kept up with those boxes?—A. About a year.

Conley Tries Spelling.

Q. And you wrote Mr. Frank reports on these boxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you know "luxury" if you were to see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you write it for Mr. Frank, then?—A. I can write it.

Q. Can you spell it?—I can try it.

Q. Well let's hear you spell 'luxury.'

A. L-u-s-t-r-i-s.

Q. Was that the only kind of pencil boxes up there?—A. No, sir. There was Uncle Remus, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and others.

Q. Did you write reports on them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Uncle Remus.'—A. O-n-e R-i-m-e-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Thomas Jefferson.'—A. T-o-m J-e-l-s-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'George Washington.'—A. J-o-e W-i-s-h-t-o-n.

Q. What did Mr. Frank say about your spelling?—A. He laughed.

Q. How do you spell 'O'?—A. O-x.

Q. How did you write him notes to borrow money?—. A. I just wrote them.

Q. Tell me what you wrote?—A. I just said: 'Please let me have fifty cents.'

Q. When you were standing by that box talking, could Mr. Darley hear you?—A. Yes.

Q. Could Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes.

Q. Could that boy?—A. Yes.

Q. The shipping clerk?—A. Yes.

Asked If He Could Write.

Q. When you went into the office to write those notes, Mr. Frank asked you if you could write, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Rosser put the question again.

Dorsey objected to the repetition, and the objection was sustained.

Q. Messrs. Hooper and Dorsey were with you in the jail together, were they not?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. Two or three hours.

Dorsey Wins Ruling.

Q. How long after April 26 was it you saw this man?—A. About a month.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. I want you to describe that pocketbook.—A. It was a wire-ish looking pocketbook, kind of whitish looking.

Q. Did you have anything to copy from when you wrote those words?—A. I could see the boxes.

Dorsey: "Come down, Jim."

Rosser: "Just a minute."

Q. Jim, tell me how large that pocketbook was.—A. I can't say, it was kind of folded up.

Q. Give us your best estimate.—A. It was about like this (indicating about 5 inches.)

Conley was then excused, having been on the stand since 9:45 Monday morning.

Dalton Called to Stand.

C. B. Dalton was called to the stand.

Dalton is the man Conley declared was in the factory with Frank and the women on Saturday afternoons when he watched.

Before questioning Dalton, Solicitor Dorsey obtained consent to tender the notes found by the side of the dead girl and a photograph of the basement as evidence.

Dalton came in and took the chair. He is a man of about 35 years of age rather rough in appearance. He has brown hair and overhanging brows and thin, tightly compressed lips. Solicitor Dorsey recalled him before putting any questions, and Mrs. Arthur White was called. Dorsey stated that he would call Dalton later. Dorsey questioned Mrs. White. He had Jim Conley brought back into the room.

Q. Mrs. White, look at this man right good. Do you know who he is? —A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him before?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. At police headquarters.

Q. Does he compare in general size to the man you saw in the National Pencil Factory April 26? ("Put on your hat, Jim," said Dorsey to Conley.)—A. He looks more like him than any man I have seen.

Q. At the time you saw him at the police station did you identify him?—A. I did not.

Rosser objected.

Q. What did you say?

Rosser: "I object. I wasn't there."

Dorsey: "Your representative, Mr. Scott, was there."

Rosser: "I move to rule that out."

A. I said he looked more like the one than any man I have seen.

Rosser: "I move to rule it all out."

Dorsey: "We expect to show by this witness that this was the man. We want to show how he was dressed, his facial expression, etc., and we submit that it is material."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. Describe the man you saw.—A. He was about the size of the one just brought before me whom I have been told is Jim Conley. He was in a dark place and I took him to be black. He had on dark clothes and I don't know whether he had on a hat or not.

Q. Wade Campbell is your brother, and Arthur White your husband, aren't they?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you tell them you saw a negro sitting in that hall?

Rosser objected.

Laughing Spectators Ousted.

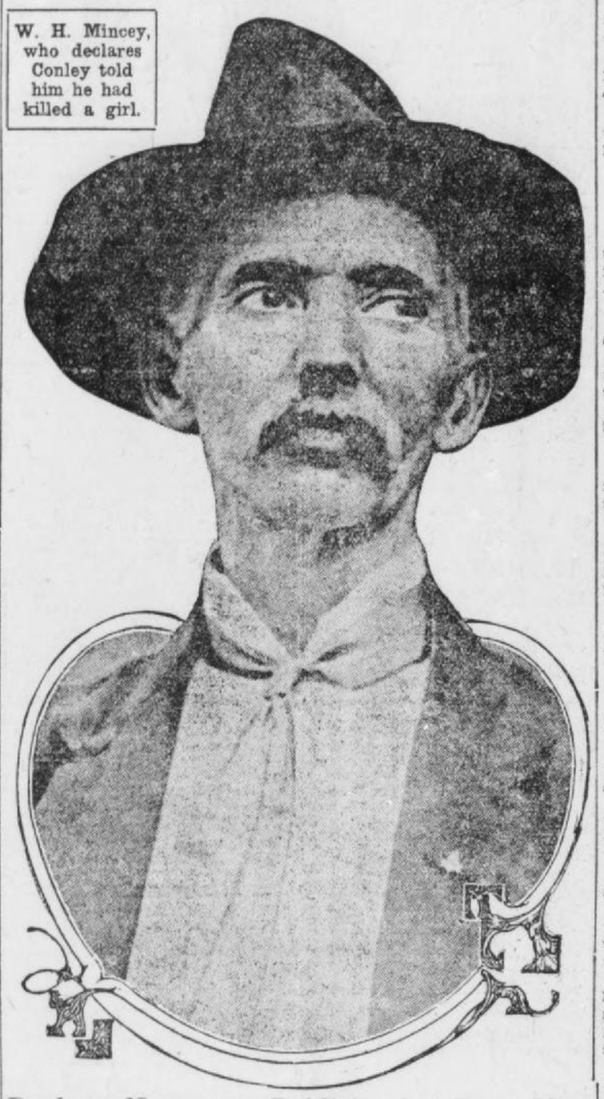

The odd situation of the attorneys for the defense being in possession of the official court records was relieved when Mr. Arnold consented to them being read.

Mr. Rosser, however, found it first in his copy of the testimony of Scott.

Rosser—You were right. Harry Scott did say Mrs. White told Frank

ACCUSER OF CONLEY IS READY TO TESTIFY

W. H. Mincey, who declares Conley told him he had killed a girl.

Deplores Newspaper Publicity, but Poses Merrily for the Camera Brigade.

W. H. Mincey, the school teacher and insurance solicitor who made an affidavit that Jim Conley confessed to him that he had already killed a girl that day and didn't want to kill anyone else, was the center of attraction for the crowd on the outside of the courthouse Wednesday morning.

While deploring newspaper publicity, he readily agreed to pose for a group of newspaper photographers, assuming many poses, some of which were rather grotesque. He followed this with implicit instructions to the photographer that his picture was not to be printed in the papers.

Efforts to get him to state whether he had seen Jim Conley since his arrest proved futile. Mincey declared he would not make this statement or answer until he had taken the stand.

Mincey was located at New Salem, Ga., near Rising Fawn, in Dade County. He is teaching school there, his work being the preparation of students to enter the Martha Berry School at Rome.

"I will not talk of the case and will not tell my story until I take the stand," said Mincey. "If Jim Conley killed little Mary Phagan, I feel that it is my duty to tell of the experience I had with him that Saturday afternoon. I don't think this thing should be discussed in the newspapers, though I regard newspapers as a necessity. These matters should be left to the court hearings. It is a loss to me to be here and I trust the case will soon be over. I think, though, that it is my duty to tell what I know."

Mincey is a man of small stature with piercing eyes and a gray mustache. He wears a black felt slouch hat and a dark suit.

Ready to Rebut Mincey Story.

J. W. Boozer, a collector for Patrick & Thompson, Broad street jewelers, from whom Jim Conley purchased a watch, has been summoned as a witness by the State, but released subject to call. He is ready to give testimony to rebut the Mincey affidavit. When asked what he knew of the case, Mr. Boozer said:

"On Saturday afternoon on the day Mary Phagan was murdered, about 4:15 o'clock, I met Conley on Peters street. I asked him if he had any money and he said no, that he drew his wages on Friday evening and had spent it. He then asked me if I had not collected the installment due from Frank."

"Why should you collect from Frank?" Mr. Boozer was asked.

"We had caused the arrest of Conley several times on account of the failure to pay installments. Frank agreed that if Conley would sign the agreement he would deduct the amount of the installment from the pay of the negro each week. To this Conley assented, and I had from that time collected from Frank."

"That being the case, why did you ask the negro for the money on the Saturday mentioned?" was asked.

"I had instructions from Frank that in case I did not collect the money before 1:30 on Saturday not to come until the next week. I had several accounts due on that date and it was impossible for me to reach the pencil factory earlier."

NEGRO COOL AND UNAFRAID DESPITE FIERCE ATTACK OF DEFENSE ON HIS STORY

Jim Conley was the same cool, unafraid negro when he returned to the stand Wednesday morning in the trial of Leo Frank after almost two whole days under the cross-examination of Luther Rosser. He had passed through fire and didn't seem to mind it. He had no fear of anything that was yet to come.

Mr. Rosser might threaten him or might joke with him; it was all the same to the negro. He had tried both and had established but one thing—that Conley is a liar, and Conley admits that.

Arnold might describe him as "that miserable wretch in the witness chair;" he could gaze calmly out the window as he had done before. He didn't quite understand all those names they were calling him, anyway.

If, in all the time that Conley was under the raking fire of Rosser's cross-examination, he was disturbed in the slightest degree, it was when he was being asked about that mysterious affidavit of William H. Mincey.

The declaration of Mincey that Conley had boasted the afternoon of April 26 of killing a girl was sinister and held in it the possibility that Rosser would finish by blazing forth with a direct charge of murder against the negro. Conley moved uneasily in his seat. He refused to meet the eye of his inquisitor. He fidgeted with his hands, but with his lips he framed a denial of every damning charge contained in the document.

The ordeal soon was over. Conley regained his composure, and when court adjourned a few minutes later a grin of triumph cleft his black face almost in twain.

Attorney Sees Conley.

Conley's attorney, William M. Smith, provided him with supper and breakfast at the jail and talked for some time with the State's star witness. He had been prevented from holding any sort of a conference with his client the night before, and protested at this procedure at the close of court Tuesday night. Judge Roan extended him the privilege of seeing Conley. Reuben Arnold asked that an exception be entered in the record.

Conley slept between nine and ten hours and arose much refreshed.

"I'se telling the truth now," he said to a newspaper man who encountered him outside the jail. "That Mr. Rosser ain't got no chance to get me mixed up because I'm telling just what happened."

Frank occupied his usual cell on the second floor of the Tower. He was joined by his wife and mother as soon as he arrived at the courthouse.

Rosser Reads Affidavits.

Rosser asked Dorsey for the original of Conley's third affidavit. The Solicitor advised Mr. Rosser that the original had never been signed. Rosser took a copy of the affidavit, which the Solicitor said was identical with the original, and read it to Conley. It was a signed statement from the negro, in which he admitted the other two affidavits contained lies and the one which the detectives said was the last word in the great mystery.

The reading consumed nearly fifteen minutes, Rosser enunciating clearly and slowly, emphasizing every statement that differed with Conley's evidence on the stand.

Freely Admits He Lied.

All of Rosser's quiz Tuesday had only the one possible effect—that of casting suspicion in the minds of the jury of the story that Conley now is telling. He spread his lies with a lavish hand in that first affidavit he made to the detectives.

He freely admitted this and rather gloried in his prowess as a first-class liar. He lied in his second affidavit, although he maintained that this was a step nearer the truth. And in his third affidavit, which he and the detectives had joined in proclaiming "the whole truth," there were still little discrepancies and deviations from the straight path of veracity.

But this tale that he was unfolding to the jury, this was the pure, unalloyed, gospel truth. He had raised his right hand and sworn that he was going to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Mr. Rosser was most unkind to throw over it a shadow of suspicion.

And the lawyer labored in vain to shake the negro's story as it had gone before the jury. Rosser midway in the Tuesday forenoon session abandoned his line of interrogation in regard to statements that Conley had made to the police and detectives and began questioning Conley directly on the crime.

Questioned Closely on Time.

He questioned him most closely in regard to the time in an effort to show conclusively to the jury that Frank and Conley did not have the opportunity to accomplish all which the negro narrated before Frank left the factory for luncheon at his home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue, at which place he arrived by 1:30 o'clock, according to the State's own witnesses.

Conley testified, under Rosser's cross-examination, that he went to the rear of the factory at Frank's direction and there found the body of the slain girl. He said that he yelled to Frank that the girl was dead and that Frank told him to bring her to the front of the factory.

Conley said that he did not know how he was going to carry the girl and he asked Frank. Frank, he said, yelled back something about getting some crocus bagging, but he did not quite understand him and walked to the front of the factory so that he could hear the superintendent better. He noticed the clock at this moment. It was four minutes of 1 o'clock.

With this time as a starting point, Rosser began to quiz the negro closely as to how long it took him to accomplish each part of the remainder of the afternoon's events.

It was plain that the negro's estimates did not coincide with what the lawyer thought they should be.

Defense's Views Evidently Differ.

"How long did it take you from the time that you came forward and looked at the clock until you had taken the body down to the cellar and was back again on the second floor, and Frank went to wash his hands?" asked Rosser.

Conley thought it was only four or five minutes. It evidently was the opinion of the defense that it should have been nearer twenty minutes, as it included rolling the body of the girl into the cloth from the cotton box, carrying it to the elevator, the wait while Conley says Frank went into the office after the key, the trip down the elevator, the carrying of the body to the rear of the basement, the disposal of the cloth and the return to the second floor.

Rosser asked how long it took Frank to wash his hands. Conley replied that it was only a minute or two. Rosser then inquired how long Frank had Conley in the closet while the two women were in his office. Conley said it was eight or ten minutes. This incident, if it is as Conley represented it, would have brought the time up to 1:12 or 1:15.

Rosser then asked how long it took Conley to write the four notes, two of which were found by the girl's dead body.

Wrote Notes in a Hurry.

"You couldn't have written these four notes inside of ten minutes to save your soul, could you, Jim?" Rosser inquired.

"Yas, sah; I think I wrote 'em in about a minute and a half," replied the negro.

"You're some rapid writer," retorted Rosser after he had called attention to the laborious scrawl.

Rosser then questioned Conley as to the time of each part of his conversation with Frank while he was in the office that afternoon. He asked him about Frank giving him the cigarettes with the money in the box, about Frank giving him the $200 roll of bills and the attendant conversation, about the conversation in respect to Conley's watch and to Frank's wealthy folks in Brooklyn.

While he did not make the actual computation of time, he impressed strongly on the minds of the jury that it would have been impossible for all this to have occurred in connection with the undisputed fact that Frank arrived home at or before 1:30 that afternoon.

CAN JURY OBEY IF TOLD TO FORGET BASE CHARGE?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

"Gentlemen of the jury, having heard from James Conley, the blackest, most damning story ever told in Atlanta by one human being against another, having sat there and listened as he smudged with unspeakable scandal the defendant in this case, Leo Frank, although it is irrelevant, immaterial, and has nothing to do with this case, you will kindly forget it, being on your oaths as jurymen to consider the evidence declared competent!"

And the jury, being like most other juries, in one way and another, and having heard all the things as aforesaid, will promptly proceed to do as instructed about forgetting it—NOT!

I have heard juries told too many times to "forget" things—such, for instance, as that there is no such thing as "unwritten law" in this land of the free and home of the brave—and I have seen too many times those very same juries proceed to "forget"—NOT!

Juries are, after all, composed of mere human beings, and things such as Conley said to the Frank jury can NOT be forgotten, and will NOT be disregarded by the average jury.

Merely Question of Belief.

It is merely a queston of whether the jury BELIEVES the negro!

There was something infinitely pathetic in the situation Tuesday, when court met in the afternoon.

For one thing, it brought to the cheeks of the defendant's wife, always and ever at h'- side, the firs: tears I yet have seen fall from her eyes.

She has borne herself with amazing fortitude thus far—the wonder is that she has not long ago collapsed.

When Reuben Arnold, moving to strike from the record the vile story of Jim Conley, paused a second before reading the exact words he desired expunged, looked a moment in the direction of the defendant's wife, and said, with no show of the spectacular whatever, "Your honor, I would prefer not to read this in the presence of these two ladies, and I therefore pass it to your honor that you may read it in silence!" The moment was tense and tragic!

Weeps For First Time.

I do not know whether it was gratitude to Arnold for the kindness and consideration thus shown, whether it was realization of the weighty purpose of the motion, whether it was the first chilling breath of apprehension, or whether it was just a physical giving way that moved Mrs. Frank. Whatever it was, as Arnold passed the paper along to Judge Roan, the first tear I ever saw from the eyes of Lucile Frank trickled down her cheek and she dropped her head in her hands for a moment or two and sobbed!

Apparently there was nothing in the incident, either upon the part of Arnold or the woman, designed to be the least bit theatrical. The jury had been removed, the stage settings were wanting.

It merely was a natural and minor incident that tugged, somehow, at the heartstrings and caught at the throat.

In all the packed courtroom there were two women only—beyond that, there was a morbidly hungry crowd of men, ready to grasp greedily at anything sensational.

Arnold denied the crowd for the sake of—the women.

And now the jury has been asked to forget the damning thing that has been said to it, that has been said in the presence of the wife and the mother—and that was too vile to say a second time in the presence of the latter!

Do you think the jury WILL forget—do you think it CAN forget?

Maybe you do—I don't!

And as to Conley and his story in its entirety—the spectators in that courtroom have been looking for Conley to "break down," to fall on his knees and confess it all a lie, and all that sort of thing.

There never was any chance that Conley would do that. It should be borne in mind that to "break down" Conley's story does not necessarily mean to break down Conley—to collapse him.

The point is: Can the defense—has or will the defense—so UNDERMINE Conley's story that, through the introduction of other evidence, it eventually will fall to the ground as a mass of lies?

Slowly, but persistently, with deadly intent even if with tediousness of method, Luther Z. Rosser for more than two days has attacked the amazing and terrible story upon which the State hopes to convict Leo Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Rosser has been almost maddening in his patience with the negro. He has gone over the same ground, time after time, in his efforts to get Conley's various stories adjusted to the purpose of the defense.

Conley, rapid-fire enough in direct examination, rattling off his grewsome and frightful story as if it were a recital of an altogether common thing, became quite another Conley under cross-examination.

Where but a few moments ago he had remembered most amazing and inconsequential details—such as the fact that a woman who called to see Frank on Thanksgiving Day wore a blue and white polka dotted dress, a green hat and white shoes and stockings—under cross-examination he could remember nothing at all save after the most persistent prodding.

Time and again Mr. Rosser had to go over the entire ground of an entire situation to draw from Conley one further comment upon it. Questioned on his story under both cross and direct examination, the negro was pat enough in reply—on other points he was as vague as he possibly could be.

Twenty-one times Tuesday he admitted to Mr. Rosser that he had "lied." Seven times in addition to that he admitted that he had been "mistaken."

As the cross-examination progressed, too, it became evident enough that the defense is to hold the entire charge against Frank to be largely a "frame-up," with Conley as the bright and particular star about whom it revolves.

The negro said he at first refused to speak of the crime at all, and when he did speak deliberately lied because he "wished to protect Mr. Frank."

"He was my young superintendent—I would have done anything to save him," said the negro—whether with sinister cunning or genuine sincerity, the jury must say.

Showed How Negro Lied.

And yet, with Conley's own lips Rosser showed how, time and again, he deliberately lied about his movements on the fatal Saturday that was Mary Phagan's last on earth—after he had said that he had looked in vain for help from Frank, and was then determined to tell "the whole truth!"

After Conley's excuse of protecting Frank had been shattered by the negro's own "confession," he had to make three subsequent and different "confessions" before he got things shaped to his liking—and every time he readjusted his story it was changed to meet the ever bobbing up objections to the story of the day or two before.

Continuously Mr. Rosser referred to the fact, always admitted by the negro, that his various affidavits were changed "at police headquarters," in the presence of officers, "after being released from jail and carried to headquarters."

There are dozens of puzzling inconsistencies to be bridged over in Conley's story—scores of things yet to be explained and straightened out.

And yet—

In the average mind I doubt whether Conley's story has been seriously discredited in the main.

There are people who admit, readily enough—hundreds of them—that Conley is a liar, a thousand times over, a loafer, and an utterly undesirable citizen.

Doubt Slowly Crystallizing.

They will say thus and so to his disparagement, but——

Fateful, suggestive, profoundly melancholy "but" for Leo Frank!

It bespeaks a widespread and crystallizing doubt that is dangerously incompatible with Frank's hopes for life and liberty and the restoration of his good name.

With all the undermining and incongruities of Conley's story that the most subtle ingenuity of the defense can conjure to its aid, the jury has been given a story which, if so much as 5 per cent of it sticks, likely will serve to convict.

The primary circumstances—these might be swept aside like chaff before the wind, if only Conley's story might be crushed to earth and made absurd.

But there is the story in all its abundance of sinister detail—the comings and goings of questionable men and women, the negro, time and again, on watch downstairs, responding to signals, the connivance of the negro with the white man in unnatural and perverted practices, the coming of innocent little Mary Phagan, the pattering of anxious feet above, the suppressed scream, the call to Conley for further assistance in consummating unlawful deeds with women—this time murder—the removal of the body, and the promise to pay on some subsequent day!

Will the story thus given to the jury, unless completely and altogether broken down, ever be removed from its mind entirely? And unless it is removed entirely, can Frank hope for acquittal?

If it is, in its essentials, the truth, what will the jury care about the exact time at which Conley bought some whisky on Peters street; or whether he went straight from Peters street to the laundry; or whether he remembers the mythical "woman in green who went up the factory steps," no matter how vitally important these things may be to the sustained truth of Conley's story.

Conley may lie in a dozen details of his story, he may have readjusted it continuously under the direction of Tom, Dick, or Harry, he may be everything he ought not to be—and yet, if one BIG detail in his awful story sticks in the minds of that jury, Leo Frank is undone hopelessly.

If the story Conley tells IS a lie, then it is the most inhumanly devilish, t he most cunningly clever, and the most amazingly sustained lie ever told in Georgia!

Every little detail, as finally adjusted—and not then until Conley went upon the stand Monday—fits the necessities of those bent upon Frank's conviction. If it is, as the defense contends, a "frame-up," it is a diabolically smart "frame-up"—one can not escape that conclusion!

Girl's Visit Dovetails In.

Even the coming an d going of Monteen Stover, the five minutes of time in which the primary circumstances might be made to dovetail into the Conley story, is cited by the witness Conley as the very period of time wherein Conley, sitting in the dark hall below, heard pattering footsteps above, the faint scream, and immediately after Miss Stover went out, the tiptoeing of Frank to the front, and then the story of the death upstairs.

Monteen Stover could not have chosen a more exact and useful moment to wander in—and yet, she heard no scream, although she did not see Frank in his office during the few minutes she remained upstairs.

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

It has come to the point where one, seeking the truth and justice and the right to all men at all times and in all circumstances, can only say he will leave it to the jury—and that the JURY will speak the TRUTH!

Crowd Set in Its Opinions

By O. B. KEELER.

The impression persists that courtroom crowds are made up in the main of two classes, as follows:

(1) People who take it for granted that any person being tried on any charge in any court is guilty, and then some.

(2) People who are constitutionally incapable of believing anybody is guilty of anything whatever.

That is one powerful impression gained at the Frank trial. It is an impression sticking out pointedly in the wake of the Thaw trial, and the Nan Patterson trial, and the Beatty trial, and the Hyde trial.

All three of the Hyde trials, in fact.

Never an Opinion Altered.

At the risk of being convicted of exaggeration in the first degree, the writer, who was rather intimately associated with the celebrated poison case, would estimate that 18,397 persons expressed in his hearing what they insisted were unalterable opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused physician before the jury in the first trial had been impaneled.

And of the 18,397 (estimated) not one single instance is recalled of one single opinion being altered.

The fact that the physician was convicted on his first trial made not the least difference to those who believed him innocent.

Court Ruling Mattered Not.

The fact that the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further trial made not the least difference to those who voted guilty.

The second and third trials, one of which resulted in an escaped juror, fleeing madly by way of a rain spout from the dread lair of the hypothetical question, and the other in a hung jury, had no perceptible effect on the factions.

Except to solidify them in their original beliefs.

One side desired to take steps at once.

The other side named men-children for the object of a persecution unparalleled since the days of Nero.

Arguments Never Will End.

And if Bennett Clark Hyde's annual trials proceed as per schedule until the year 1950, there will be hoary-headed wrangling over the same old points, by the same ancient and original wranglers, lined up the same way as when the greatest mystery of the West came to the fall of the gavel in the opening trial.

Take the Beatty Case.

There were men and women—you know some of them—who raised frantic hands to heaven, that a poor boy should thus be railroaded to his doom.

They were about set to buy mileage and travel to throw themselves and their petitions at the feet of a cruel and callous Governor.

And then Beatty confessed.

Did that still the trouble lachrymal waters?

Not precisely.

They said the poor boy's mind had been weakened by his persecution.

And if you are in a hypercritical mood or are otherwise disposed to stick pins in toy balloons, just ask your memory to inform you how many times you have heard these pronouncements since the trial of Leo M. Frank began:

First: "Well, I've been absolutely certain from the very first that Frank did it."

Second: "Well, I never have believed that Frank was guilty of that crime."

And now do you feel hypercritical?

And now do you fancy that 18,397 is an inflated estimate?

Of course, there must be a Third Estate—a well-balanced, thoughtful, cautious body. Particularly cautious, and slow of speech—mayhap in some sporadic instances slow of thought.

They are the judicial ones. They hold the balance open at both ends, to receive and weigh the testimony and the facts.

At least, they say they do.

That would be the jury, perhaps.

And some others—perhaps.

DORSEY ACCOMPLISHES AIM DESPITE BIG ODDS

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Practically the entire case on which the State of Georgia bases its claim on the life of Leo Frank to pay for that life taken from Mary Phagan is before the jury.

Most of the remaining evidence of importance which the Solicitor General may introduce merely will be rebuttal to testimony presented by Frank's counsel.

Whether the evidence presented is strong enough to convict is a question for the jury to decide. Whether the testimony introduced by the defense will be convincing enough to cause the reasonable doubt which the law says shall make Frank a free man or whether the defense's attack on the State's case has been of sufficient strength to create a question in the minds of the jurors, time alone will tell.

But this fact remains unchallenged: Every single thing that Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey declared in advance that he would get before the jury is there now. It may not be enough to convict, but the case which the State said fastened the crime on Leo Frank has been put in evidence.

Dorsey Had Huge Task.

One by one the prosecutor has forged the links in the chain that he maintains fixes the guilt of the Phagan murder on Leo Frank and Leo Frank alone.

It has been long, tedious work. Dorsey has had to fight against considerable odds, but his work has been well done.

When the defense has its innings, the chain may be torn asunder as though struck by lightning, but that will be the work of the skilled attorneys who are fighting to save the life of the pencil factory superintendent.

Here was Dorsey's work: He had to adduce enough circumstantial evidence to corroborate the testimony of Jim Conley before his case could even be seriously considered. The unsupported word of the negro sweeper would have been about as valuable as a punctured drum. The Solicitor knew this.

First, he had to prove the venue. He had to locate Frank in the National Pencil Company factory at the time Mary Phagan was slain. He did this by the unattacked testimony of many witnesses. He did it so thoroughly that the defense has tacitly admitted that Frank was at the factory about the time he deed was supposed to have been done.

Question of Time Settled.

Then he had to prove the time. According to the State's theory the murder was committed about 12:10 on Memorial Day. Frank himself has said and his employees and his associates have testified he was there at that time. This point also is practically unchallenged.

At last came the hardest task. He had to prove that Leo Frank was the only human being in the pencil factory at that time who could have taken Mary Phagan's life.

By every witness introduced on this point it was shown that as far as human knowledge goes Leo Frank and Jim Conley were the only men in that part of the factory at that time. Either could have committed the crime. It was Dorsey's work to place the blame on Frank alone.

Newt Lee's testimony was introduced to show that Frank sent him away that afternoon. Dr. Harris' testimony tended to show that the slaying must have been done immediately after Frank had given the child her week's wage and had given it to her while they were alone. Mrs. White's testimony tended to show that Jim Conley was sitting downstairs making no attempt at flight after the time the crime is supposed to have been committed.

Then came Conley's direct evidence and the chain was practically complete.

As has been said before, this chain may not stand the acid test of the defense's attack. It may not be strong enough even unattacked to convince the jury that Frank is responsible for Mary Phagan's death.

But it is what Dorsey went out to get before the jury. He has done it.

And he has done it practically unaided. The valuable assistance he had reason to believe he would receive from the police department has been more or less missing. In fact, the greatest blows to the State's case have been delivered by detectives, supposdly expert witnesses who have been unable to withstand the crossfire of Luther Rosser.

The case has meant a lot to Dorsey, and right now, with the thrilling battle approaching its final stages, Dorsey stands out as big and commanding a figure as the brilliant lawyers against whom he is arrayed.

He may lose his case, but if he does he will come out with reputation enhanced.

DEFENSE GIVES UP FUTILE EFFORT TO BATTER DOWN SWEEPER'S MAIN CHARGE

about seeing this negro Monday after the crime.

Several spectators were put out of the courtroom for laughing at Mr. Rosser's admission of the error.

Rosser—I will say it is the first time that you have been right. Your honor, we object. It is immaterial what time this witness made known the fact unless they go further and show she was delayed through the influence of Frank.

The objection was overruled.

Lawyers Clash.

Dorsey—Your honor, I have already shown that Leo Frank knew on Monday, April 28, that she saw this negro there, and that it was May 7 before the State got into possession of this fact.

Rosser—I say that no such evidence has been introduced.

Dorsey—Call for the record of Harry Scott's evidence.

Rosser—I say he has not introduced this evidence, and he saws he has. If your honor can not remember some of the things that happen here we are perfectly helpless.

Stenographer Parry was called. He said he was taking the testimony for Mr. Arnold and he wanted Mr. Arnold's consent before reading it.

Q. When did you report it to anyone else?

Rosser objected.

Dorsey—I want to show who it was who first reported to detectives of the State of Georgia.

The objection was overruled.

Q. When did you report it?—A. May 27.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You never declined to tell anybody?—A. No.

Q. I want to refresh your memory. Didn't you tell Wade Campbell you saw the negro when you went up?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell Wade Campbell that when you came down you heard voice?—A. No; that was when I went up.

The witness was excused.

Sheriff C. W. Mangum was then called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you at the jail when Jim Conley was brought there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Frank about seeing Conley?

Rosser—I object.

Dorsey—We want to show that this white man wouldn't see this ignorant negro, his accuser. Can I ask the question?

Judge Roan—Go ahead.

Frank Didn't Want to See Police.

A. Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Harry Scott, Detective Black and Jim Conley came down and wanted to see Frank. I asked Frank if he wanted to see them. He said no; that his lawyer was not there and he had nobody to defend him.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Frank knew who was there, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Sheriff Mangum was excused, and Solicitor Dorsey called for Mrs. W. J. Coleman and George Epps. Neither answered.

Dorsey—We have got two propositions, and there will be objections to them. They are Dalton and Epps. When we finish with them we only have one more witness—Dr. Harris. We can't get him until 2 o'clock, and we would like to get that argument over.

Judge Roan sent the jury from the room and admonished the attorneys to give only the authorities and not to argue the points.

Dorsey—First, we don't want any evidence taken out that has already gone in. Second, we want to substantiate what Jim Conley said. Third, we want to bring out what Mary Phagan told George Epps on her way to the factory that Saturday, about Frank making eyes at her, and that she was afraid of him.

Attorney Arnold began his argument of objection by reading authorities. He declared he would include all three propositions in one argument.

Defense Compiles Authorities.

During Mr. Arnold's argument, Mr. Rosser climbed up in the witness chair in which Jim Conley sat during the thirteen hours Mr. Rosser was firing questions at him.

Arnold—Do we have to move to rule it out at the time it is presented? My friend, Mr. Leonard Haas, has compiled the authorities, and for this work he is one of the most reliable men I know of.

Arnold then asked the court's permission to remain seated while addressing it, as he was feeling hot and faint. He was allowed to do so. Judge Roan spoke to Solicitor Dorsey and his associates:

"What do you say, gentlemen?"

Dorsey—It looks this way: If this evidence goes in on Conley's testimony unsubstantiated, I can see how it might appear to the advantage of the defense. They can go out fishing, and if they catch something, they don't want to throw it back. They drew out the relation and association of Conley and Frank. Now they can't diminish it; they slept over their rights.

Mr. Arnold, interrupting Mr. Dorsey, read a few more authorities.

"Not Character Evidence," Says Dorsey.

Judge Roan—Mr. Dorsey, how can you differentiate this evidence from character evidence? The defense must bring his character in.

Dorsey—No, it is not character evidence. I know I can't bring his character in. If I convict him, of course, I want to hold him. I am not afraid of the higher court reversing your honor.

Roan interrupted—No, I am not either. I don't care anything about that.

Roan then declared court adjourned until 2 o'clock, without any ruling on the questions at bar having been made.

Argument is Resumed.

Court reconvened at 2 o'clock and with the jury still out, Solicitor Dorsey continued his argument on the admissability of the evidence that was stopped by adjournment at the noon recess.

The Solicitor read first a Supreme Court decision in which the defense waived its right to object by not so doing when the evidence was given. He cited a number of Georgia State cases. He declared that proof of another crime, if necessarily an independent crime, was admissable provided it was intended to illustrate the state of the defendant's mind at the time this crime was committed, and the fact that it was a crime did not make it inadmissable, therefore as an original proposition he declared that it was admissable.

"Shall we go on with the other objection," the Solicitor then asked Judge Roan.

"Yes," answered Judge Roan.

Dorsey Cites Example.

Dorsey: "We object to any evidence that is already in being ruled out because we expect to introduce other evidence to substantiate it. Now about the evidence of George Epps. Here is a case. (Dorsey here referred to an authority) in which a man was living with a woman as his wife. She left him and as heard to say she was afraid. This oman was later murdered and this man was [illegible] on trial for the crime. The man who heard the remark she made about being afraid was permitted to testify. Now we want to show that when little Mary Phagan was on her way to the factory where she met her death, she expressed a fear of this defendant. It is a circumstance that points to this man's guilt."

Attorney Hooper here took up the argument.

"The court desires that we be brief," he said, "and I promise to be brief. I will confine myself to the laws of Georgia, for that, I understand, is what controls this court and not decisions from Missouri or California.

"The Supreme Court of Georgia has held several times that it would not reverse a lower court on a decision unless the objection was made at the time the evidence was submitted.

Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, who testified that Mary Phagan died within half an hour after eating cabbage, was recalled by the State.

Defense Witness Excused.

At this moment, Attorney Rosser interrupted to state that one of the defense's witnesses wished to be excused on account of the death of a relative. This was W. T. Holda, whose relative, J. L. Adair, of Dallas, Ga., was killed by falling off a street car on Marietta street. The witness was excused and promised to be back in court by Friday morning.

Dorsey then took up the examination of Dr. Harris.

Q. What branch in medicine is yours? What special branch?—A. Diagnosis and chemistry.

Q. Why did you say Mary Phagan came to her death from strangulation?—A An examination showed that cause to have been the only probable one for death.

Blow Inflicted During Life.

Q. Was that blow on the head given before death?—A. It had every evidence of having been inflicted during life.

Q. Was there any evidence on the windpipe or larynx of strangulation?—A. No. That is, very little.

Q. Are there usually traces in cases of this kind?—A. No.

Q. Did you see the windpipe?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the lungs?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you notice anything about them?—A. No. They would not have shown anything on account of the embalming fluid.

Dorsey turned to Mr. Arnold: "Give me that baseball bat."

The stick found near where the negro had been sitting on the first floor of the factory was given the Solicitor.

Q. Could this have produced that cut on the back of the head?—A. In my opinion it could not have. The cut was too sharp.

Cabbage Question Again Arises.

Q. Now coming to the stomach?—A. I might preface my remarks by saying that some ten or fifteen years ago someone suggested to me that the idea of the indigestibility of cabbage was because it usually was cooked with meats. I conducted some experiments. I discovered with some healthy stomachs with bread and cabbage was practically the same as with bread and water."

"I object," said Attorney Rosser, "for him to state the results of his efforts as scientific facts."

"I was just explaining," Dr. Harris interrupted——

"Now, Dr. Harris, let me talk just a minute," Rosser interrupted.

Judge Roan said: "I rule that you can testify, if you are alone in the scientific world on that subject."

Harris said: "I can find no data on that subject and I made the investigation myself. I found that most ideas about digesting cabbage were erroneous when taken with bread alone. Now, I have some exits——"

Rosser Has Real Stomach.

Rosser interrupted again: "I object to these experiments of his. They are not admissible," the attorney declared. "If I ate that cabbage, I would have it in my stomach to-morrow morning, and I have a stomach that will digest leather and nails and almost anything else."

Judge Roan ruled: "He can state that he gave cabbage to whom he thought was a normal man with certain results. Let him state only the science of the thing. That alone is admissible."

Tells of Remarkable Test.

Judge Roan then told the witness to go ahead.

Attorney Arnold was on his feet immediately. "Your honor, if he means that he is going to show experiments on the same sort of stomach as Mary Phagan's," Arnold shouted, "that is different, but you know that it is not fair to compare the stomachs of grown men with little girls. There are also differences in the manner of cooking."

Dr. Harris said: "I have made the conditions as near parallel as possible. I had Mary Phagan's mother cook the cabbage and one of the persons I experimented on was a girl about her age. I know her stomach was normal."

"Arnold said: "There are no two stomachs in the world alike."

Harris continued: "Some years ago I made experiments on twenty or thirty persons."

Rosser said: "I object to what he did twenty or thirty years ago, and I object to his argumentative idea."

Judge Roan said: "The witness might not be argumentative."

Rosser's Opinion of Scientist.

Rosser said: "I insist that these examinations might be vitally different. How can he tell the exact nature of these things? How can he experiment except upon the same subject and except upon the same stomach?"

Judge Roan said: "But he is a scientist."

Rosser said: "Oh, bosh! I have always thought that these doctors were guessing."

Roan said: "Proceed, Dr. Harris."

Dr. Harris continued:

"Well, the digestion takes from 28 to 70 minutes in the cabbage found in Mary Phagan's stomach. I found that even the most minute particles had not gone through the process of digestion. In fact, it was plainly noticeable to the naked eye that there was practically no digestion. Even in an hour's time there is digestion and it is well advanced. As a matter of greater importance——"

Rosser said: "I object to 'a matter of greater importance.'"

Rosser overruled the objection.

Dr. Harris launched into a technical discussion as to the amount of cabbage in the stomach and intestines.

Rosser said: "I object to that, he is making an argument. It is nothing more nor less than a stump speech."

Judge Roan said: "He is giving his opinion. Continue, Dr. Harris."

Certain Death Came Soon.

Harris said: "I want to state that the amount of secretive juice in this stomach was considerably less than would have collected in an hour. The hydrochloride acid had not been in long enough to become free. The amount of confined hydrochloric was 32 degrees. In a normal stomach, the amount would have been 55 or 60 degrees. It was just about the amount one would have supposed to have collected in half an hour or 35 to 40 minutes. I can say with absolute certainty that she was unconscious within 30 or 40 minutes after she ate the cabbage."

Dorsey then questioned the witness.

Q. Do you know whether or not the failure to digest this cabbage was due to indigestion?—A. No sir, that stomach was normal. The gastric juices were there.

Q. What about the glands?—A. The glands were the principal part of the stomach—they were all there.

Q. Was the digestion progressing favorably?—A. Yes. It was normal and stopped by whatever happened.

Bread in Like State.

Q. Was the examination microscopic?—A. Yes. It was made with the best instrument possible to procure.

Q. How about the stage of digestion of the bread? Did it show to the same extent?—A. Exactly the same.

Q. Suppose that large piece of cabbage had have been chewed up fine? Would it have had any effect on the digestive process?—A. Not the slightest.

Arnold took the witness on the cross-examination.

Q. When did you make this examination?—A. May 5.

Q. Did Dorsey request you not to make the result of your examination public?—A. Yes.

Kept Promise of Secrecy.

Q. Did you keep your promise in this respect?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he ask you as Solicitor General or personally?—A. He did not state. I did it because I liked him personally.

Q. What part of the body did he ask you to examine?—A. None. He just asked me to make an examination and find out all I could.

Q. How did you know the girl died by strangulation?—It was plainly discernible.

Q. Externally?—A. Yes. The marks were on the throat.

Q. Could not the same marks be made if the rope was placed around the neck of a dying person?—A. Yes, the heart were still beating.

Q. How long does it take for a person to die by strangulation?—A. There is no special time.

Tells of Strangulation Effects.

Q. Isn't it true that the time required for a person to strangle is from 20 to 30 minutes?—A. There are different times, all according to the circumstances.

Q. Isn't drowning strangulation?—A. One form.

Q. Isn't the effect just the same?—A. There are different effects on the body.

Q. But strangulation is simply cutting off oxygen from the lungs?—A. Yes, but there are different forms in strangulation by choking; there are poisons which gain control. In drowning entirely different elements enter which produce an entirely different state of the body.

Q. What is the average time it takes a person to die from strangulation?—A. I don't know.

Q. Haven't statistics been compiled?—A. Well, it is practically impossible to tell when life leaves the body. I saw a man once who was pulled out of the water with his heart still beating, but he was not breathing and we failed to revive him.

Q. He was alive, wasn't he?—A. I don't know.

Made Tests for Poisons.

Q. You say you were going to examine for poison—what kind of poison?—A. Alkaloids.

Q. That's vegetable poison? Why didn't you examine for poison like arsenic?—A. The undertaker had told me he used some of the metal poisons in embalming the body.

Q. How did you know what he had used?—A. I sent for him and he told me.

Q. Did he give you that valuable formula he was so secretive about here?—A. Yes. I guess he thought better of me.

Q. How far did you continue this examination?—A. When I failed to find any alkaloids, I gave it up.

Q. You tested for opium?—A. Yes.

Q. Opium has about twenty-three alkaloids?—A. Yes.

Q. What test did you use?—A. The usual test—the color test.

Q. How much did you find?—A. None.

Q. How much of the contents of the stomach did you use in your test for alkaloids?—A. I made a number of tests. I can't say just how many.

Q. As much as that half a glass of water?—A. About half of that.

Q. Were the contents liquid or solid?—A. Both.

Q. Did you make a poison test before the others?—A. Simultaneously.

Made Eight Tests.

Q. Into how many parts did you divide the contents of the stomach?—A. As many as were necessary—I don't remember.

Q. Did you say you had six or eight tests going at the same time as to the digestibility of the food? Why did you make eight?—A. Because that many were necessary.

Q. Will you explain those tests?

Dr. Harris went into an elaborate technical explanation of the various stages of the tests. Mr. Arnold appeared to be unable to understand a number of the words used. Turning to the stenographer he said: "This is very important—I just want to know if you are getting it. I don't quite understand it." The stenographer replied that he had taken the testimony down.

Q. In all this testing you made you were attempting to ascertain the amount of hydrochloric acid in the stomach?—A. Yes.

Q. How much was that?—A. Eleven-one hundredths of fifteen drops.

Q. That would amount to about a drop and a half, wouldn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. How much free hydrochloric acid did you find?—A. None.

Q. What is gastric juice?—A. It is a juice secreted in the stomach.

Function of Pepsin.

Q. Is hydrochloric acid to be found in gastric juice?—A. Yes, one of its most important ingredients.

Q. What is the most important ingredient?—A. Pepsin.

Q. What is the effect of hydrochloric acid on pepsin?—A. It brings it out.

Q. What amount of hydrochloric acid did you find in the stomach?—A. Thirty-two degrees.

Q. What is the normal amount in a normal man's stomach?—A. Fifty-six degrees.

Q. What was the relative amount of pepsin in her stomach as compared to the amount of hydrochloric acid?—A. We have no test for determining the exact amount of pepsin.

Q. What is the third most important ingredient in the gastric juice?—A. There is none of importance.

Q. But there is water?—A. Oh, yes, there is water. We might say that gastric juice is composed of hydrochloric acid, pepsin and water. In fact, a solution of these three ingredients could be made and taken and digest the food as well as the gastric juice found in the stomach.

Q. That is the reason people sometimes take pepsin?—A. Yes.

Nothing Else in Stomach.

Q. These experiments were made on live subjects? How about experiments on corpses?—A. That would be very clumsy.

Q. Why?—A. The difficulty in getting bodies with the proper food mixtures in them.

Q. Did you examine the small intestine in this case?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you find?—A. Practically nothing.

Q. Did you save any of the contents of the stomach?—A. No.

Q. All you preserved was this cabbage in this bottle?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't analyze these particular leaves?—A. No. I took these out just as I started my examination.

Q. Did you find anything besides bread and cabbage?—A. Absolutely nothing.

Q. Did you find any of the cabbage chewed?—A. Yes, a good deal of it.

Q. How did you know it was cabbage. Tell me its chemical analysis?—A. I have a book with some 67 analyses of cabbage. Just for a general idea you might say 90 per cent water and 10 per cent solid.

Cabbages Vary, He Says.

Q. Do individual cabbages vary?—A. I would say so from these analyses. Give me that book over there and I will show you.

Arnold said: "No, I wouldn't care for that."

Dorsey said: "He's got a right to explain."

Roan ruled with the Solicitor, but on the insistence of Mr. Arnold, Harris did not go into the explanation.

Q. What juice flows through the mouth?—A. Saliva.

Q. That is a great aid to digestion, isn't it?—A. Well, that's a question as to just how much it really counts.

Q. Doctors disagree about that like they do about everything else?—A. Well a number of analyses have been made and some doctors hold to one theory and some to others.

At this point Dr. Harris asked if the examination could stop. The attorneys agreed that it might stop for the afternoon, and Detective Starnes was called to the stand. Dorsey took the witness.

Q. At the request of Dr. Harris, did you get a cabbage and take it to Mrs. Coleman and ask her to cook it like the one she cooked on the day Mary Phagan was killed?—A. Yes.

Mrs. Coleman was called to the stand and substantiated Starnes' statement, and declared that she cooked the cabbage.

C. C. Dalton was then called to the stand but upon the request of jurymen, court was adjourned for the day to reconvene at 9 o'clock Thursday morning. Dr. Harris probably will be called to the stand again Thursday.

Girl Is Run Down by Auto on Whitehall

A small girl, who refused to give her name, was knocked down and badly bruised by an automobile driven by Lewis Carhart, on Whitehall street, in front of Rich Brothers' store about noon Wednesday. The child was taken into Cone's store and her bruises bandaged, and then put in a cab and taken home.

Eyewitnesses to the accident say it was unavoidable. The car was going slowly and the girl ran in front of it before it could be stopped. No arrest was made.

Mothers' Testimony Binds Over Man Who Cruelly Beat Son

Several mothers appeared in police court Wednesday to testify that J. S. Newman, 41 Gaskill street, Tuesday brutally beat his 11-year-old boy, Joe Newman, with a board.

The mothers declared they would never think of whipping a child as severely as Newman did.

Newman insisted that the boy deserved a good thrashing, and quoted "spare the rod and spoil the child."

Judge Preston, declaring it one of the worst case that had come to his notice, bound the father over to the State courts in bond of $300.

Kills Man Who Held Her Captive in Woods

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 6.—Mabel Farmer, 16, shot and killed Henry Blanz to-day when he threatened her life because she would not elope with him.

The girl told the police after the shooting that Blanz forced her to leave her home and remain with him for twelve hours in the woods.

Detroit Wins Cut In Street Car Fare

DETROIT, MICH., Aug. 6.—A compromise in the city's fight for 3-cent street car fares was effected to-day when the Detroit United Railway agreed to sell seven tickets for 25 cents, after an automobile firm offered the city the use of 1,000 automobiles in case the company refused to operate its cars.

A strike of employees, held off by a promise of arbitration, is threatened unless the company's arbitrator agrees with the union's representative upon a third arbitrator within 24 hours.

Woman Injured in Chicago Race Riot

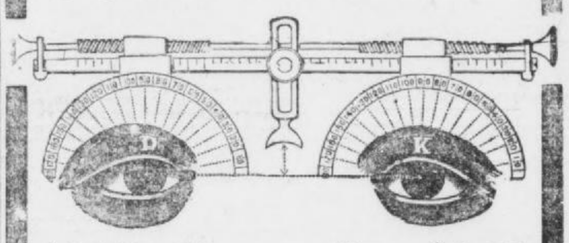

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Mary A. Barrett was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a riot between whites and negroes on a street car.

The trouble was caused by a remark of a negro directed at one of the white passengers.

HOUSE BILL PUTS TAX ON AUTOS FOR ROADS

Opponents "Poke Fun" in Effort to Defeat It—Urge License for Baby Carriage.

The bill of the House Ways and Means Committee providing for a State registration tax of $5 on automobiles was passed by the House Wednesday morning, 107 to 64, after a fight that raged since Monday morning.

The original bill provided that the funds obtained by the tax should go into the general fund of the State. An amendment offered by McMichael, of Marion County, diverting the proceeds of the tax into the State road fund, was carried, and the purposes of the Ways and Means Committee in presenting the bill to provide more revenue for the general expenses of the State were defeated.

Would Tax Baby Carts.

The opponents of the bill, led by Stovall, of Elbert, and Sheppard, of Sumter, tried to defeat the bill by poking fun at it. To that end half a dozen amendments were offered of a facetious nature, but all were voted down.

Oliver, of Quitman, wanted to amend the bill to tax wagons and buggies in relation to their "horsepower;" Smith, of Fulton County, wanted to amend the bill to place a tax of $1 on all goats and wagons, and Estes, of Lincoln, offered an amendment that placed a tax on ox carts and baby carriages.

Other amendments included those by Lee, of Wilkinson, who wanted to double the tax; Culpepper, of Meriwether, to require two license numbers instead of one, and Myrick, of Chatham, that the autoist register his number with the clerk of his town.

School Tax Bill Up.

Consideration of the bill offering to the voters a constitutional amendment limiting the levy for school purposes to two and one-half mills was begun immediately after the passage of the automobile tax bill, and was in progress when the House adjourned at 1 o'clock. It will be continued at the afternoon session.

The bill for the constitutional amendment was offered by Speaker Burwell, and has the indorsement of the Administration. The Speaker took the floor and spoke for half an hour urging the passage of the bill.

Others who spoke on the bill at the morning session were Representatives Stovall, of Elbert, who opposed it; Shuptrine, of Chatham, who favored it; Fullbright, of Floyd, who is in favor of the measure; Meadows, of Wayne, who opposes it, and Barry Wright, of Floyd, who is against the bill. Mr. Wright had the floor when the House adjourned.

Fulton Legislators Asked to Supplant County Fee System

By unanimous vote the Board of County Commissioners passed a resolution Wednesday requesting the local representatives in the Legislature to draft a bill abolishing fees for county officials and substituting the salary system. The board instructed the clerk, Henry M. Wood, to prepare a copy of the bill and present it at once to the legislators.

At previous meetings of the board various officials had appeared to protest against the proposed change, but this time there was no protest.

The board heard from several delegations with petitions for street improvements. Those present were Chairman Shelby Smith and Commissioners S. B. Turman, Clifford L. Anderson, W. Tom Winn and Tull C. Waters.

Southern Railway Agents Convene at Georgian Terrace

The first session of the fifteenth annual meeting of the Southern Railway Agents' Association began Wednesday in the main dining room of the Georgian Terrace Hotel. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Woodward and W. L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce. A reply was made by President Walker of the Agents' Association.

Routine business was disposed of and short discussions of topics of interest to the agents followed. More than one hundred agents, representing the largest stations of the Southern Railway system, are here for the meeting, which will last through Friday.

Officers of the association are C. G. Walker, Louisville, Ky., president; E. J. Coffey, East St. Louis, Ill., vice president; D. L. Bryan, Augusta, Ga., treasurer, and W. J. Townsend, Columbia, S. C., secretary. J. M. Fagan is chairman of the executive committee.

Dr. O'Kelly Has Not Accepted Mercer Job

SAVANNAH, Aug. 6.—According to J. G. McCall, of Quitman, chairman of the committee named to elect a president of Mercer University, Dr. T. W. O'Reilly, of Raleigh, N. C., has not accepted the position, which has, however, been tendered him.

McCall says he now fears that Dr. O'Kelly will not accept.

Americans in Mexico City Declare Removal of Envoy Wilson Was a Mistake.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—Prominent members of the American colony today expressed the opinion that the administration at Washington had made a mistake in removing Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson at this time.

President Wilson's action in sending John Lind, former Governor of Minnesota, here on a special mission has given Provisional President Huerta another excuse to protest against outside interference. That Huerta is becoming exceedingly angry at the Washington Government is evident.

Two unofficial envoys have been sent here within the past six months to study the situation and to report to President Wilson on actual conditions and their presence has piqued Huerta.

Jingoes are making capital out of the present status of affairs by declaring that the United States is afraid of Mexico and will not make any move which would inflame the populace.

Lind Will Investigate Charges Against Envoy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—One of the first duties devolving on former Governor Lind of Minnesota, when he arrives at Mexico City as personal representative of President Wilson, will be to check certain features of the report by Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson and to find out whether certain charges made against the former envoy have any foundation.

It is expected that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy will aid in ascertaining how American influence in the Mexican Captal has been used for the past two years.

At Vera Cruz he will confer with Admiral Fletcher, who will report on conditions in Frontera, Tampico and other points on the east coast. Mr. Lind desires to strip his mind of all possible misinformation he may have acquired through inspired sources before taking any action.

The special envoy will leave Galveston to-morrow on the battleship New Hampshire, it was announced at the Navy Department to-day, and it is expected he will be in Vera Cruz within 36 hours and in Mexico City within 48 hours after he leaves the Texas port.

Sidney Dell, Once Atlanta Attorney, Dead in California

News has been received in Atlanta of the death July 24 near Los Angeles of Sidney Dell, once a leading attorney and prominent Mason in Atlanta. Mr. Dell's wife found him dead in bed. The funeral was held July 28 from the residence in Glendale, near Los Angeles.

Mr. Dell was in Atlanta about the same time that Woodrow Wilson was here, but left soon afterward for the West to seek his fortune. He was elected mayor of Portland and missed, by only a few votes, election to the governorship of Oregon. He went to Washington State and thence, twenty years ago, to Los Angeles.

He claimed to have discovered the right of Los Angeles to tide lands at the harbor worth $50,000,000, which the city gained through the courts. Mr. Dell sought a fee for his services but he never was rewarded.

Among lodgemates of Mr. Dell in Atlanta were General A. J. West and other well-known citizens, who remember Mr. Dell as an unusually brilliant attorney and champion of municipal rights.

Bath Mats, Soft, Luxurious & Absorbent

at Prices a Third to a Half Less Than Regular

These bath mats are the product of the best mill in America. In consideration of heavy orders placed throughout the year, they favor us at certain seasons with their accumulation of "seconds"—bath mats which because of some slight defect fail to pass the critical eye of the inspector as absolutely perfect. The "hurts," however, are hard to find; in fact, scarcely noticeable. Each bath mat will give perfect satisfaction.

The bath mats are big thirsty fellows that will soak up water like a sponge. Thick and comfy; soft and luxurious. Firmly looped threads. They should wear almost forever. In various colors and sizes. This is the price range:

39c; values 50c to 65c.
49c; values 75c and 85c.
69c; value $1.00.
89c; value $1.25
$1.50; value $3.00.

Imported Austrian Bentwood Furniture in

The August Furniture Sale

Planning for this August Furniture Sale has been on such a liberal scale that the advertiser is confused with an embarrassment of riches. But one of the "plums" that can wait no longer to be advertised is this imported Bentwood furniture.

Light and graceful, splendidly adapted for living room, library or porch, it makes instant appeal to many cultured customers. The wooden frame is bent to shape by steam heat—it is firm, rigid and durable. The backs and seats are of cane. A list of the articles and the savings:

The Social World

An event of Wednesday afternoon which interests society is the polo match to be played on the parade ground at Fort McPherson.

As this is the first polo match played in Atlanta everyone is anticipating great sport. A team representing the Atlanta Polo Club will meet that of the Seventeenth Infantry, the game to be refereed by Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun. The army team has a group of pretty girls as sponsors; these being Misses Myrt Hancock, Tommie Hancock, Aline Fielder, Lyda Nash, Louise Bradbury, Mary Carl Hurst, Reble Wilkins, Elise Brown and Virginia Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winecoff and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Freeman, of Greenville, Ga., to chaperone the party of young women.

Many well-known people are interested in the introduction of polo in Atlanta's social and sporting world. Officially connected with the game of Wednesday afternoon are: Robert Maddox, timer; Wilmer Moore, scorer; Clark Howell and James R. Gray, goal judges. Dr. J. A. McLeay has been active in arranging for the polo match.

Wife of Governor Trammell Here.

Mrs. Park Trammell, wife of Governor Trammell of Florida, and her sister, Miss Emma Trammell, are guests of Mrs. Fred Williams for the week. Invited to meet Miss Harrison are Misses Cobble Vaughan, Nancy Prince, Mary Helen Moody, Ruth Akin and Winnie McKinnon, of Brunswick; Sarah Rawson, Mary Hines, Virginia Lipscomb, Mary Murray, of Alabama, the guest of Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott; Ruth Stallings, Margaret Hawkins, Annie Lee McKenzie, Emma Kate Amorous, Aimee Hunnicutt, Edith and Antoinette Kirkpatrick, Katherine Richardson, Ruth Northen, Adrienne Battey, Edith Dunson, Frances Clarke and Penelope Clarke.

Miss Dillon Hostess.

Miss Dorothy Dillon entertained at an afternoon reception from 5 to 7 o'clock Wednesday for her guest, Miss Dorothy Browne, of New York.

The house was artistically decorated with bright garden flowers.

About 50 guests were present.

U. D. C. Scholarship.

The Atlanta Chapter, U. D. C., announces, through the chairman, Mrs. T. T. Stevens, two valuable scholarships to be given for the coming school year. These include a scholarship in Miss Woodberry's School for Girls, a full four-year collegiate course, including languages; also a scholarship in Miss Hanna's School for Girls, this to be either in the primary or academic departments. Applicants for these scholarships must be descendants of Confederate veterans and in every way worthy. Applications should be made at once to Mrs. T. T. Stevens, No. 450 Luckie street; phone Ivy 324.

Philathea Social.

The College Park Baptist Philathea Class was delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Camp on Thursday evening, July 31. There also were present several Baraca boys and others. Games were played, refreshments served, and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Members of the Philathea class present were Misses Ophelia West, Lottie Dewel, Mattie Camp, Daisy Wilhelt, Anne Lamar, Pauline Trimble, Hazel Foley, Ethel Martin, Nealie Liveoak, Elva Crenshaw, Hettie Cochran, Mrs. Carl Cook and Mrs. T. L. Camp. Others present were Miss Margaret Terry, the Rev. A. F. O'Kelley, Messrs. T. L. Camp, John Hale, Looney Liveoak, Frank Longino, John Jackson, Bernard Smith and Thomas Camp.

For Miss Hazen.

Tuesday evening Messrs. Tyler Waller and Prince Webster gave a swimming party at East Lake for Miss Mildred Hazen, of Orange, N. J., who is the guest of Miss Mignon McCarty. Miss Virginius Hitt chaperoned the party.

Among the guests were Misses Mildred Hazen, Mignon McCarty, Helen Woolfork, guest of Mrs. Hitt; Nancy Prince, Passie May Ottley, Nell Prince, Emma Kate Amorous, Messrs. Tyler Waller, Prince Webster, Moultrie Hitt, Curry Moon, George McCarty, Archie Lee, Gilbert Stout and R. C. C. Black.

Miss Helen Jones entertained at tea at the Piedmont Club Wednesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Mildred Hazen. Tea was served on the terrace, and the table had as its decoration a rustic basket of gay colored flowers.

Miss Jones received her guests wearing yellow crepe with the little coat effect of charmeuse with a blouse of shadow lace.

Miss Buckner, who is visiting Miss Jones, was gowned in mustard-colored crepe with a wide girdle of purple satin.

Twelve girls were guests on this informal occasion.

Surprise Party.

Mrs. George Adair gave a surprise party for her son, Perry Adair, Tuesday evening at their home in Druid Hills in celebration of his fifteenth birthday.

The house was decorated with garden flowers and after a buffet supper dancing was enjoyed.

Among the guests were Misses Annie Bates, Madeline Cullough, Julia Murphey, Ann Patterson, Irene King, Mildred Dobbs, Elizabeth Millard, Margaret Whitman, Quill Orme, Jr., Junius Millard, George Eckford, Earle Eckford, Thomas Hull, Lynn Adams and Perry Day.

For House Party Guests.

Mrs. Robert Hayes is entertaining a house party at her home in Cleburne avenue. The party includes Misses Gladys Tappan, of White Plains; Mattie Cheaves, of Montezuma; Zaretta Estes, of Decatur, and Mary Wolcott, of Boston, Ga.

Tuesday evening Mrs. Hayes gave an al fresco party in compliment to her guests.

Miss Alline Perryman will entertain at bridge Friday evening for the visitors and Miss Willie Belle Mauck will give an informal evening party for them Thursday.

Wheeler-Dabney.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Avery Wheeler announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Ann, to Mr. Morde Jefferson Dabney on Sunday, July 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Dabney are with Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Fussell in Inman Park.

For Mrs. Block.

Colonel and Mrs. Robert Lowry entertained at dinner at the Piedmont Club Tuesday evening in compliment to Mrs. Bates Block, whose birthday it was. It also was the birthday of Mr. L. H. Beck, one of the guests, and appropriate toasts were proposed to each.

The table had as its centerpiece a basket of pink roses, and all the minor details were in pink.

Colonel and Mrs. Peel Entertain.

Colonel and Mrs. William L. Peel gave a dinner Tuesday evening at their home, "Woodbine."

The guests were seated at a long table on the terrace of the garden under a pergola hung with lanterns and decorated with growing vines, and the garden itself was fragrant with many flowering plants.

Sixteen guests were invited.

For Mrs. Salmon's Guests.

Mrs. Charles Salmon entertained at an informal luncheon at the Hotel Ansley in honor of her guests, Miss Agnes Vining, of Savannah, and Miss Pearl Vining, of Covington, Ga. Another affair on Wednesday afternoon was a porch party given by Miss Annie Furgerson in honor of Mrs. Salmon's guests.

300 Factory Women Gamble on Baseball

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball pools, have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed has been held in bail by Magistrate Coward, having been charged with operating a pool.

Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games in Reed's place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost 25 cents each.

China Picks Cornell Grad to Replace Wu

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, CHINA, Aug. 6.—The government, according to latest information, intends to appoint Alfred Sze, a Cornell graduate, as Minister to Washington. It planned to make Wu Tingfang Ambassador, but the American Government did not agree to raise the status of the legation here and this necessitated the nomination of a junior.

Mr. Sze was nominated Minister to Washington in 1911, but did not go to his post on account of the revolution.

ATLANTA IS 16TH CITY IN U. S. IN PARCEL POST

Remarkable Increase in Volume of Mail Here Arouses Favorable Comment in Washington.

Postmaster Hugh McKee declared Wednesday that the large increase in the amount of mail handled in the Atlanta postoffice was the subject of favorable comment in Washington among department officials.

During the past year more than 50,000,000 letters, not including newspapers and periodicals were stamped or canceled in the Atlanta postoffice. This is an increase over the previous year of about 15,000,000 letters.

Showing the progressive spirit of Atlanta merchants in taking advantage of the new parcel post, Mr. McKee said: "We are handling more than 7,000 parcel post packages per day, which is more than are handled in Louisville, Indianapolis and other cities twice the size of Atlanta. The Atlanta office ranks sixteenth in the number of parcel post packages handled in the United States.

"Here in the postoffice we have a chance to keep close tab on Atlanta's activity and correspondence, and I will say that the growth in mail business since I came into office has been marvelous, and scarcely seems believable when you compare the books of previous years with the fiscal year just ended."

Empire Life Plans 20-Story Building

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—Meetings of the building committee of The Empire Life Insurance Company were held here yesterday and to-day to decide on plans and specifications for the new building upon which work will start here on October 1. It is understood the building will be twenty stories.

The members of the committee are W. W. Reid, Atlanta; M. P. Pope, Washington, and H. C. Lorick, H. H. Stafford and C. E. Whitney, Augusta.

CHILD DIES IN VINEGAR.

PARIS, ILL., Aug. 6.—Falling head foremost into an 8-gallon jar of vinegar, Lester David, aged 2 years, son of George David, a farmer, was drowned before his mother could rescue him.

Voliva in Power at Zion City Bars Rum, Drugs and Tobacco

ZION CITY, ILL., Aug. 6.—A city free from beer, whisky, drugs and tobacco was planned to-day by Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor of John Alexander Dowie as the head of Zion City. Voliva's followers dominate the City Council. Counting the women voters of the city, his forces can re-elect its own city officers at the next election.

Beer wagons passing through the streets of Zion City will be prohibited the use of the streets after the passage of an ordinance Voliva was preparing to-day.

The ordinance will give city authorities the right to go into a man's own home and arrest him for using tobacco.

No drug store will be permitted within the city limits after the adoption of the ordinance.

French Want Trading Base North of Canal

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The commission sent by the French Government to study the effect upon French commerce of the opening of the Panama Canal reports unfavorably upon the establishment of a commercial base either on Guadaloupe or Martinique. These French possessions in the West Indies are too far south of the regular Panama route, says the commission, and shippers will rather coal in Porto Rico or Cuba.

Lieutenant Hallier, representing the Minister of Marine, recommends, however, the establishment of a naval station at Fort DeFrance, Martinique.

Bankrupt Town Has To Let 'Skeeters Nip

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 6. Invaded by a swarm of mosquitoes, this town is too poor to fight them.

The Board of Health asked the Council for $1,000 to fight the pests, and the Council replied that it could not make the appropriation.

CHANGE IN MILITIA LAWS IS OPPOSED

The House Committee on Military Affairs put its members on record Wednesday morning as upholding the present military laws of the State, which give the militia supreme authority during riots and other disturbances, when it reported unfavorably the bills introduced by Mr. Slade of Muscogee. Mr. Slade's bills repealed the act of 1912, and re-established the act of 1910, making the militia subservient to the civil authorities.

Mr. Slade, dissatisfied with the action of the committee, served notice that he will ask the unanimous consent of the House that his bills be placed on the calendar for consideration.

Chairman Spence, of the Military Affairs Committee, stated that he will endeavor to get the members of his committee together Wednesday afternoon for a reopening of the Augusta investigation. He stated that both sides of the trouble will be heard. Several witnesses from Augusta have been requested to attend the meeting and Adjutant Gneral Nash and several militia officers also will be present.

Mr. Spence several times has expressed his opinion that a legislative investigation of the Augusta trouble is useless.

Beware, Poseurs, of 'Soul Photos'

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—"With the development of 'soul photography,'" the latest addition to the picture maker's are, says Miss Emma Gerhard, "the modern photographer will vie with the old masters in producing pictures that will live forever.

"It is wholly a matter of art," said Miss Gerhard. "It consists of bringing out in the subject what is really in him or her, not in making an artificial reproduction of his features and clothes.

"Every human being is constantly posing. There are a thousand and one little superficial things about every man and woman which cover up the real self, and these things overshadow all else in photographs."

PARDON DENIED HAWTHORNE BY M'REYNOLDS

Attorney General Ignores Recommendation of Board Which Made Special Inquiry.

Despite the fact that the Federal Pardon Board strongly recommended after a thorough investigation, that pardons be granted to Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, who are imprisoned in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary on charges of using the mails to defraud in the sale of mining stocks, Attorney General McReynolds has issued a statement from Washington that he has decided to override the recommendations of the board and refuse clemency to the two men.

The action of McReynolds is almost unprecedented in the history of the Department of Justice. The Board of Pardons made the Hawthorne case a subject of thorough and exhaustive investigation. It came to Atlanta and went into every detail of the case. At the end of the investigation it made the Hawthorne case the subject of a special report and a special recommendation for clemency. It had been intimated that the writer had been the scapegoat for others.

Mr. McReynolds' excuse for refusing to grant a pardon to Hawthorne is that he and Dr. Morton have been shown enough leniency.

It is generally understood that one result of Mr. McReynolds' actions in the Hawthorne case will be the redoubling of the efforts of the writer's friends and the case may be taken to President Wilson.

Under the ruling of the Attorney General, Hawthorne and Morton must remain in prison until October. The trial judge, in sentencing them, dated their terms back a year and a day, and their time will be up in about two months.

Deputy Warden Hawk, of the Federal Prison, stated Wednesday morning that the prison authorities have as yet received no formal notification that a pardon had been refused Hawthorne. He stated, however, that it is not usual for them to do so. They are notified when a pardon has been granted, but never when one has been refused.

FOUR KILLED IN WRECK CAUSED BY WASHOUT

L. and N. Freight Engine Submerged—Three of Train Crew and Negro Tramp Perish.

Imprisoned in a locomotive submerged under fifteen feet of water, three members of the crew and a negro tramp met death early Wednesday morning when the Louisville and Nashville freight train No. 5, southbound, ran into a washout a few miles north of Marietta.

The dead are S. K. Farris, the engineer; Fireman Shenell and Brakeman R. P. Merrell, all of Etowah, and the unknown negro.

The wreck was on the Western and Atlantic tracks near Noonday station, and, according to Superintendent J. L. McCollum, was caused by the washout.

The embankment gave way before the engine pulling 30 cars, and the locomotive was thrown into the gully, twelve cars piling on it. Part of the train crew, including Conductor J. L. Brenenizer, was in the caboose on the rear and escaped.

The wrecked train was coming to Atlanta, due here at 7:25 a. m.

Forest Fire Imperils Cape Cod Villages

HYANNIS, MASS., Aug. 6.—With more than forty square miles of Cape Cod timber devastated by a roaring forest fire that has caused a loss of more than $250,000, the fate of this town and nearby villages hung in the balance to-day.

House Bill Opens Campaign on Flies

War against flies and other germ carriers was declared in the House Wednesday when Representative Allen introduced a bill requiring all hotels, boarding houses, sleeping apartments, wholesale and retail grocery stores, meat markets and drug stores, and all stores that sell refreshments to keep all outer doors and windows thoroughly screened.

The law, according to the provisions of the bill, shall be in effect from April 1 to October 1 of each year. A fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000 is to be imposed for violation.

Mrs. Ham's Name Too Much for P. O. Clerks

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—"Mrs. Henry W. J. Ham" is the form of signature that must be written dozens of times each day by the assistants in the local postoffice here, and employees are complaining because it is long and awkward to write. This is the form in which the appointment of the new postmaster was made and in which the bond was given.

Mrs. Anna E. Ham is the name by which the new postmaster is known to her friends.

JOYNER'S SLAYER ELUDES CAPTURE

Screven County Negro Completely Disappears After Tragedy Near Sylvania—Six Arrests.

SYLVANIA, Aug. 6.—Cleveland Michael, the slayer of Dine Joyner, a Screven County farmer, is still uncaptured, no clew whatever being found that would suggest the whereabouts of the murderer. Dogs from the Bulloch County chaingang were put on the trail, but it was too cold for them to make any headway. Men were stationed at all bridges across the Ogeechee River, as it was thought he would make an effort to reach Bulloch, where he has relatives.

A full description of this negro has been published and pictures of him are in the hands of officers in adjoining counties. Six other negroes that were thought to have been plotting with Michael to kill Joyner are in jail here.

More than 500 persons attended the funeral of Joyner at Friendship Church.

Brand Whitlock to Get Diplomatic Post

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The White House has decided definitely to give Brand Whitlock, Mayor of Toledo, and an "original Wilson man," an important diplomatic post.

It is probable he will go either as Ambassador to Russia or Minister to Turkey.

JUSTICE AND MERCY IN GEORGIA

"A bruised reed shall he not break.
"And the smoking flax shall he not quench."—Isaiah 42:3.
"I will have mercy."—Matt. 11:17.

Justice and mercy for the friendless!

The Senate, without a dissenting vote, has passed the bill providing for Probation.

With only three men voting against it, the Senate has also passed the bill providing for the Indeterminate Sentence.

These two bills are now before the House, having been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee.

And yesterday, Tuesday, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY saved the Girls' Reformatory from oblivion; he called a special meeting of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the Jones-Mills Bill; THE RESULT, it is believed, will be the building of the Reformatory for Girls in Georgia.

Representatives GRIFFIN, GREENE of Houston and BERRY, members of the sub-committee that considered the original bill and reported it back carrying an appropriation of $30,000.00 to the committee for action, spoke in favor of it.

Messrs. CONNOR and METHVIN advocated its adoption.

JOHN Y. SMITH of Fulton then moved that the Committee report favorably the bill as amended.

In favoring this motion, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY explained that he had favored the bill from the beginning.

Both the Chairman and the members of the Committee recognize the APPALLING AND IMMEDIATE NEED for the Reformatory for Girls; they unanimously adopted the motion recommending that the bill, carrying an appropriation of $30,000.00, be passed.

The Prison Commission has urged that the home be built, pointing out that Georgia has no place in which to handle wayward and delinquent girls. And the Penitentiary Committee has also without a dissenting vote recommended the passage of the Jones-Mills Bill providing for the Home.

Remember! This home is not to deal with the hardened woman of the streets, but with children.

To-day if a GIRL OF ELEVEN, TWELVE OR FOURTEEN gets in trouble, there is no place in Georgia either to protect or help her.

This shame is unendurable. To-day seventy-five girls under sixteen years old known to us are without a place.

What will YOU do?

No man has opposed—and it is believed that no man can or will oppose—the bill either in the House or the Senate.

To-day Georgia looks to the Rules Committee of the House.

SPEAKER BURWELL, who is ex-officio its Chairman, and BLACKBURN of Fulton its Vice Chairman, and the men serving with them in the Committee on Rules, namely Messrs. HARDEMAN, MILLER, NUNNALLY, PAULK of Berrien, REDWINE, RHODES, SHUPTRINE, SLADE AND RAGLAND, are to decide whether or not the State will take care of her delinquent and wayward girls—

Whether or not the State shall have Probation and the Indeterminate Sentence—

Whether or not Georgia will take her stand with her Sister States in giving Justice and Mercy to the unfortunate.

Those who know these men believe that they will NOT KILL, but WILL HELP to pass these measures.

Those who know Georgia believe that the men of the House and of the Senate will gladly give the brief time necessary to make these bills the law of Georgia.

They harm no one. But they help the helpless.

They mean life to many a home in Georgia where worse than death—dishonor and shame—will reign if these bills are not enacted into laws at this session of the Legislature.

What will you do?

The Executive Committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

CRASH FATAL TO 2 LAID TO BAD AUTO BRAKE

Car Rolled Into Train's Path, Declares J. P. Heard, Whose Wife and Son Were Killed.

Struck by a Southern Railway train when their automobile went dead on the tracks of a crossing a mile north of McDonough, Ga., late Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Emma Heard, wife of J. P. Heard, of Vienna, Ga., and her ten-year-old son, Lio Lindon Heard, were killed.

Mr. Heard leaped from the car when he saw it would be impossible to escape the crash, and escaped with a few bruises. Mrs. Heard and her son were caught in the cowcatcher of the locomotive and dragged 50 feet.

The bodies of Mrs. Heard and her son were taken to Vienna. The funeral will be held there Wednesday afternoon. They were well known in Atlanta, and many friends of the family here will attend the funeral.

Mrs. Heard was Miss Emma Lashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lashley, and was a leader in the social life of her community. She is survived by her husband, who is a son of the late Senator Heard and president of the Heard Banking Company, and her parents.

Mr. Heard Tells of Accident.

Statements made Wednesday morning by Mr. Heard and J. L. Mable, engineer of the train, indicate that the accident was unavoidable and was the result of the failure of the emergency brake of the automobile.

"My wife, my son Lindon and myself left our home in Vienna, in my two-passenger roadster," said Mr. Heard, "to attend the motorcycle races in Atlanta. We passed through McDonough about 2 o'clock. Ten minutes later we passed over the brow of a long steep hill that leads down to the railroad tracks. A train can not be seen until the crossing is almost reached. We were only a few yards from the track when Mrs. Heard saw the train coming and shouted.

"We were going about 25 miles an hour. I at once shut off my engine and applied the brake, but it failed to work. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable, I leaped from the car and shouted for Mrs. Heard and my son to do likewise. They were probably too frightened to do so. The next thing I remember was hearing their screams as the train struck them."

Engineer Gives His Version.

Engineer Mable declared that when he saw the automobile he applied airbrakes, but the crossing was too near for the air to take effect before the automobile was struck.

"I was running about 25 miles an hour and the crossing was about a hundred yards ahead of me when I saw the automobile. The car was running as fast as my train, and had plenty of time to cross the tracks in front of me.

"When the machine got to within about ten yards of the track, it slowed down and rolled up until the front wheels of the car were on the tracks. Then it stopped. I at once applied the airbrakes, but too late to have any appreciable effect on the speed of the train."

Life Insurance Men Dine; Name Delegates

Atlanta members of the National Association of Life Underwriters enjoyed an informal banquet at Hotel Ansley Tuesday night and elected delegates to the annual convention of the organization in Atlantic City in September.

The delegates are F. W. Burr, J. H. Byrley, Paul H. Dobbins, W. R. Hawkins, R. F. Shedden and A. C. Newell. The following alternates were named: R. L. Foreman, Oscar Palmour, W. R. Hawkins, J. M. Skinner and R. J. Guinn.

Isadore Duncan's Motor Is Wrecked

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Isadora Duncan gave proof of her stoicism the other night when her chauffeur flung her car at full speed in pitch darkness against the closed barriers of a railway crossing at Mondragon village.

Instead of jumping out, under the stress of the ghastly memories of her children's fate, she remained in her seat and a little later reached Orange practically unhurt.

Gerard Threatens to Quit as Ambassador

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Justice James W. Gerard, of New York, the Ambassador to Germany, after inspecting all the available houses in Berlin, says that unless he succeeds in finding a place adapted to the requirements of himself, his family and the embassy, he was seriously considering declining the post of Ambassador.

He has been unable to find quarters, although he is willing to pay for them out of his private means.

'September Morn' Is 'Art' in Augusta

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—"September Morn" has made her appearance in Augusta. Many prints of the painting may be seen in a local bookstore window, but no arrest of the proprietor has been made or threatened arrest.

Augusta takes "September Morn" as a matter of course. The people here deem her graceful and the fact that she is minus a wardrobe does not cause any young girl to blush, for all have seen reproductions of real art before.

How and Why to Eat Watermelon

Cool, but do not chill Mr. Melon.

Cut it lengthwise, not in round slices.

Save the seeds, make "watermelon tea."

Use your teeth—not knives or forks.

Watermelon is refreshing and good for the stomach and kidneys.

P. S.—These tips are furnished by the "champeen" melon-eaters of Congress.

HOWARD ONE OF 8 BEST MELON EATERS

Georgia Congressman Right Up in Race for "Champeen" Title in Capitol Cafes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—State secrets on statesmen's appetites, and particularly watermelons during the present height of the watermelon season, were divulged to-day. The divulger is R. J. Martyn, "boss" of the Capitol Cafes.

Twenty big, fat watermelons are consumed by Congressmen every day, according to "Chef" Martyn. Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is the acknowledged "champeen" watermelon eater. He gets outside of from one to three big slices daily.

Other watermelon "fanatics" who appear to be crowding Clayton for the title are Representative Mann, of Illinois; Sereno Payne, of New York; Sims, of Tennessee; Dietrick, of Massachusetts; Austin, of Tennessee; Stedman, of North Carolina, and Howard, of Georgia.

Approached on his watermelon prowess, Clayton gave the following panegyric:

"Watermelon beats ice cream or lemonade all hollow as a cool refreshment. It is the most luscious, refreshing fruit possible to be secured in summer.

"Some people eat salt on watermelon. That is a mistake. Salt militates against its palatability and digestibility. I take mine straight.

"Watermelon is a splendid diuretic. It cleanses the whole digestive system.

"Watermelon seed tea is an old Southern remedy for kidney trouble.

"I don't care for thick-rind striped melons. I don't like the hybrids between the Georgie 'rattlesnake' melon and the 'scaly bark.' Some of these are a cross between a guinea melon and a horse gourd.

"The best melon grown is in Alabama, with a thin rind, a whitish melon. Lead me to them any time."

RICH MEN RULE CHURCH, SAYS RICHMOND

Morgan Held House of Rishops in Hollow of Hand, Asserts Episcopalian Rector.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—"Our House of Bishops is led in tow by Wall street. The lat J. P. Morgan was the power behind Bishop Greer, and he held our House of Bishops in the hollow of his hand.

"The cathedral on Morningside Heights is a standing monument to our New York corrupt money power. It is the embodiment of ecclesiastical snobbery, spiritual frippery and moral incompetency.

"Since the day of Bishop Potter the diocese of New York has been in control of half a dozen plutocrats. In Philadelphia the Episcopal Church is 'run' by a few rich men. They control the Bishop (Rhinelander), who, in mental ability, personal authority and moral aggressiveness is not, by any means, a great man.

"August Belmont is at the head of our race track gamblers. His career is one of the worst careers for an American youth to imitate. Yet he is prominent in the Church of the Ascension on lower Fifth avenue."

The foregoing quotations are from a sermon delivered in St. John's Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond.

"In most of the large parishes of the Episcopal Church throughout the country we find men like Belmont and the late J. P. Morgan, who curb the spiritual influence of the clergy, make them timid, and in the end cause them to shrivel up morally. Men in humble circumstances distrust our sincerity. The Episcopal Church is not sincere in its present assumed attitude toward labor.

"My own ecclesiastical superior, Bishop Rhinelander, was elected two years ago," said Mr. Richmond, "largely through the push and pull of Wall street interests, corporation lawyers and social idlers, together with a few of our clergy among whom towered pre-eminently the Rev. Father Mortimer, of the 'High Church gang,' who has since been disposed from the ministry for gross immorality."

'Country-Bred Folks' Meet at Grant Park

The Country Collective Society will hold a meeting in the main pavilion in Grant Park Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The membership of the Society is made up of country-bred persons residing in and around Atlanta. It was organized to promote better friendship among the members, and to preserve the tradition of ante-bellum days in Dixie.

It is proposed to erect a log cabin in Grant Park and furnish it with old-fashioned articles. R. D. Hawkins is president and Robert P. Martin secretary.

Merchants on Tour Of Factories While Committees Work

Much detail work is yet to be accomplished in the organization of the Southern merchants' convention.

Wednesday will be devoted to work by the various committees, and an inspection of Atlanta's factories and stores by delegates and visitors.

A great deal of important work relating to crops, credit, stock questions and co-operation will come before the convention starting Thursday morning.

Adventists Report On Publishing Work

FORT VALLEY, Aug. 6.—The report of the publishing work of the denomination was the feature of to-day's business session of the Georgia Conference of Seventh-day Adventists which is meeting here in its tenday annual encampment.

This report showed that the publishing work had grown from one small printing house worth $652, with five employees, printing two periodicals in one language in 1862, to 39 publishing houses, worth $1,175,092, with 610 employees, printing 126 periodicals in 71 languages in 1912.

Banker Gets 5 Years For Embezzlement

MOULTRIE, Aug. 6.—The jury trying J. H. Cason, former cashier of the Bank of Crossland, for embezzling more than $7,000, returned a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Thomas to five years in the penitentiary. G. F. Clark, president of the Crossland Bank, and Assistant State Bank Examiner Anderson, of Atlanta, were the principal witnesses for the prosecution.

It was with difficulty that Cason kept from collapsing as he stood up to hear his sentence. While making his statement to the jury he wept freely.

K. of C. Plan Change In Insurance Rates

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—The election of officers and the reports of the supreme officers featured the two business sessions of the delegates to the Knights of Columbus' thirty-first annual convention to-day. The sessions were held at Hotel Somerset.

Important also among the probable actions of the delegates at to-day's sessions is the changing of the insurance laws so the assessments may rest more easily on the older members.

Aero Manufacturer Fails for $6,000,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Extravagent living and speculation in the silk trade were declared to-day to have caused the downfall of Armand Duperdessin, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of fraudulently raising millions of dollars for the extension of his aeroplane factory.

M. Duperdessin's liabilities amount to $6,000,000, whereas his assets are given at only $2,000,000.

COL. J. P. WILLIAMS DIES AT HIS HOME

Railroad and College Leader, Soldier and Philanthropist Was 70 Years Old.

Captain Jesse P. Williams, one of the best known men in Georgia, died at his home, 478 Peachtree street, Tuesday. He was 70 years old.

Captain Williams formerly operated one of the South's largest naval stores at Savannah. About seven years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and retired from active life, though he attended to his business affairs until the very last. He was president and principal owner of the Georgia, Florida and Southern Railroad.

Captain Williams was born in Wayne County, N. C. He attended the University of Virginia in the late fifties, going to Washington in company with other students of that institution to see Abraham Lincoln inaugurated. When Fort Sumter was fired upon he left the University and enlisted in the Twentieth North Carolina as a private, later rising to the rank of captain.

For many years he was president of the Boards of Trustees of Emory College, to which institution he gave two handsome buildings. He was a deeply religious man, and a steward in the Trinity Methodist Church.

Surviving Captain Williams are his wife; four sisters, Mrs. James Ezzell and Mrs. Olive B. Parks, Misses Hattie and Edith Taylor, of Mount Olive, N. C., and two brothers, Charles and George Williams, all of Mount Olive.

Funeral services will be held at the resident at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. J. E. Dickey, president of Emory College, will officiate, assisted by Bishop Candler. Interment will be at West View.

Cotton Schedule Is Scored by Lippit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Declaring that the schedules in the Democratic tariff bill relating to cotton, silk and wool are "capricious and illogical," Senator Lippitt, of Rhode Island, to-day advocated as substitute provisions the Dingley law rates with a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent.

"I believe the cotton manufacturers as a rule are willing to try the experiment of a reduction in the tariff," said Senator Lippitt. "They protest against revision."

FULTON COUNTY TO HAVE A CARD INDEX

Industrial Survey Ordered by the Chamber of Commerce To Be Best in United States.

Plans for an industrial survey of Fulton County, which will be one of the largest and most complete ever made in the United States, are now being formulated by the industrial and statistical bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. The work will be done by W. H. Leahy, chairman of the bureau, under the supervision of the committee, which is composed of J. R. Smith, E. H. Shaw, M. R. Wilkinson, V. H. Kriegshaber, W. T. Winn, A. R. Colcord, A. A. Floyd, David Woodward, W. R. Collier, and Wilmer L. Moore.

The work of Mr. Leahy and the committee will be to compile data, in card index form, of all manufacturing plants in the county, their output, source of raw material, cost of labor and production, number of employees and the payrolls, and the freight rates on raw materials and finished products.

A complete survey of all banking institutions and commercial enterprises will be made, and data will be obtained on all Southern headquarters of big corporations located in Atlanta and the truck gardening about the city.

The results of the survey will be published in a pamphlet which will be revised monthly. Other pamphlets relating to the commercial and industrial life of Atlanta will be published. Permission will be asked to place a large board in each railway station, on which will be written statistics of Atlanta for the information of travelers.

Portugal's President Not Dead, Says Lisbon

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The reported death of President Ariaga, of Portugal, published in the morning newspapers here, is denied in a dispatch received from Lisbon at noon.

Senhor Ariaga is ill of a kidney ailment.

Largest Fire Chief In World Is Dead

He was the largest fire chief in the world, weighing 325 pounds.

President Asked to Visit 2 Dixie States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Senators Fletcher, of Florida, and Williams, of Mississippi, and Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, called on President Wilson to-day to invite him to visit their States should he conclude to make a Southern trip this fall.

The President said he would be glad to accept their hospitality should he make the trip. Senator Fletcher especially desires the President to visit Jacksonville, and Senator Williams brought a delegation from Meridian with him.

Mrs. Longstreet in A Rest Sanitarium

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, former postmaster at Gainesville, is under treatment in the sanitarium of Dr. J. H. Lowney here.

The long fight waged by Mrs. Longstreet to retain her commission as postmaster and the part she has taken in politics brought about a breakdown which required rest and medical attention.

Nobleman Sought by Matchmakers Weds

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Lord Rocksavage, heir of the Marquis of Cholmondeley and known in society as "the enigma of matchmaking mothers," ceased to be a riddle to-day when he was married to Miss Sybil Sassoon, an heiress and a leader in the young Bohemian set. Lord Rocksavage is very rich, while his bride is accredited with having a fortune of $10,000,000 in her own right. They were quietly married at a registry office.

'Wilsonade' Routs Bryan Grape Juice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—"Wilsonade," the new Capital drink, made of orange juice and plain water, has completely routed Bryan grape juice out of Washington.

President Wilson is sponsor for the new drink, and it is prepared especially for him in the White House kitchen each morning. A dash of powdered sugar may be added if desired.

"Nothing Succeeds Like Circulation"

DRY SUPPORTERS ARE BEATEN BY FILIBUSTER

Resolution to Report the Hixon-Searcy Liquor Bill Defeated. Tax Plot Charged.

The filibuster in the House against the resolution of Kidd, of Baker, which instructed the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill for action, and by which Wohlwender, of Muscogee, consumed the entire time of the House Tuesday, came to an end Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with victory resting with the forces against the bill.

In response to a point of order raised by Stewart, of Coffee, Speaker Burwell ruled that Kidd's resolution was not in order for consideration Wednesday, and the efforts of the temperance forces to force a hearing on the bill were therefore in vain.

The point raised by Mr. Stewart was that, inasmuch as the resolution was introduced Tuesday and specifically called upon the Temperance Committee to report the bill back "to-morrow," it was asking the committee to perform a physical impossibility, and was therefore not in order.

Wright Objects to Decision.

Wright, of Floyd, who is generally credited with being behind Mr. Kidd in the introduction of the resolution, protested vigorously against the decision of the Speaker.

"Doesn't the Speaker intend to hear those who favor this resolution?" he demanded.

"You are out of order," the Speaker replied. "The resolution has been ruled out of order, and is not now under discussion."

Representative Wohlwender, backed by Myrick and Shuptrine, of Chatham; Nunnally, of Floyd, and others of the anti-dry forces, appeared when the House convened to-day determined to continue the filibuster until Mr. Kidd consented to withdraw his resolution. This Mr. Kidd and the temperance cohorts absolutely refused to do.

Stewart Then Finds Loophole.

Conferences between the prohis and the antis were numerous, but barren of result, and it looked as though the filibuster would continue, with the anti-dry people holding the whip hand indefinitely, when Mr. Stewart found the loophole through which the resolution was riddled.

The effect of the resolution and the filibuster has been to draw the line sharply between the anti-dry and the temperance forces, and to smother the more important question of tax revision. The victory of the antis precludes the possibility of the Searcy bill getting a hearing at this session, inasmuch as the Rules Committee takes charge and no resolutions similar to the Kidd resolution can be introduced.

Claims Anti-Tax Plot.

Mr. Wohlwender, whose strong lungs and determination defeated the resolution, voiced the opinion Wednesday morning that the resolution was an outgrowth of the tax revision fight.

"Sheppard, of Sumter; Stovall, of Elbert, and the others who are fighting tax revision were behind the resolution," declared Mr. Wohlwender. "They hoped to get that bill brought out because they knew if the House once got busy on it no tax measures could be passed at this session."

Chicago Suburb in Anti-Negro Uprising

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The uprising in the fashionable suburb of Wilmette against negro residents there reached its crest to-day, and many servants and chauffeurs were out of jobs.

The town board is considering a memorial directed against a real estate firm which is accused of encouraging negro emigration.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Motion pictures at the Grand have become decidedly popular. It is predicted that in the very near future the fad of going to the Grand to see the movies will be one of the daily matters of routine with thousands of people. The fact that the big building is cool, clean and safe, has added a healthy influence to people who want to see what is new in motion pictures with every convenience. The schedule of performances this week is from 2:30 until 5:15 each afternoon, and from 8:30 until 10:15 at night.

The Forsyth.

There is a splendid vaudeville entertainment at the Forsyth this week, despite the fact there is no feature headliner. It just happened that the Keith people were in position to secure the seven special acts, and each one has registered the sort of hit that has crowded the Forsyth at four performances, and built up an advance sale that has not very often been equalled. The hits are very evenly distributed.

At the Bijou.

The Bijou seems to improve the class of its entertainment each succeeding week. During the past ten weeks the popular theater has been devoted to popular priced musical comedies and each week has seen an improvement over the former, but the present week Lew Cantor's musical farce entitled "Along the Pike" is by far the most pretentious production that has been presented so far.

WANT AD GIVES GIRL START IN WORLD

Contestant Relates Story of How She Climbed, and Now She Knows Advertising Pays.

"I know I can secure want ads by the hundred, for I know what a want ad will do," said one young woman contestant when she entered The Georgian's want ad competition and started out to win an automobile or a trip to California. "I've had experience."

"I'll tell you," replied the young woman. "It lifted me from a $5 a week job to one at $12 and afterward to $15. I'm resting now for the summer and putting in my spare time on the contest.

"I was just beginning stenography when I found my first position. I started in at $5 a week, and though I kept improving in my work the boss just wouldn't give me a raise. He said he could get plenty of girls at that price. I had almost given up.

"One afternoon when he was away I was reading The Georgian and my eye happened to meet the 'Help Wanted, Female,' column. I had never taken interest in want ads before. But right under my nose was a little ad—'Wanted—a good stenographer. Salary $12.'

"I put on my hat, shut up my desk and went after that job, and got it. That's what a want ad did for me. And I can tell others what want ads will do, for I have confidence, and that goes a long way."

The contestants are rolling up votes right along, and those who are thinking of entering and winning first prize had better hurry. There is yet time to enter and get a start, but it will not pay to delay entering.

If You Don't Drink Do Not Read This

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Aug. 6. Henderson Hasty, of Easton, a small town near here, was stripped, plastered with a coat of warm tar and his face painted green last night by a party of citizens, determined to enforce observance of the prohibition law. Hasty was found asleep beside a road in Easton.

That he would sign the pledge is said to have been his declaration when he awoke.

Society Girl Now a $3 Millinery Clerk

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 5.—Miss Delphine Force, a pretty society girl and daughter of wealthy parents, is now a millinery apprentice at $3 a week and says she likes the work. She recently quit society pleasures to become a professional cook.

Miss Force plans to be a teacher of demestic science at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., in the Fall, where millinery is part of the curriculum.

Gainesville Plans Ban on Cigarettes

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Several hundred citizens of Gainesville have petitioned City Council to pass an ordinance making it unlawful for any child under 16 years of age to smoke cigarettes at any place except at the homes of parents or guardians.

It is thought the ordinance will be passed.

BATTLE WITH MOONSHINERS.

LEXINGTON, Aug. 6.—George N. Castel and Sherman Lewis, deputy United States marshals, engaged in a battle with moonshiners in Morgan County, Kentucky, to-day. Lewis was shot in the arm by John Kidd. Marion Kidd was wounded and captured. A 35-gallon still and a lot of beer and whisky were destroyed.

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a Large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdom and Experience.

In almost any settled community there is a grandma who knows Mother's Friend. Not only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recommendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this famous remedy.

Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nausea, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments and prepares the system so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear.

No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Friend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restful. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. Write at once to Bradfield Regulator Company, 133 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their very interesting and instructive book of advice for expectant mothers.

Asks Special Judge To Hear Demurrer

COLUMBUS, Aug. 6.—Alleging that Hugh M. Mooty, a former bookkeeper for the Beehive, a large dry goods establishment in Columbus, is not a resident of Muscogee County, but of Fulton County, and that the Superior Court of this county has no jurisdiction over his affairs, his attorneys have asked for the appointment of a special judge to sit when their demurrer to a recent decision is heard.

Judge Gilbert held that the Clerk of Superior Court should name the judge, but Clerk Marcus held that as the litigation is before Judge Littlejohn, of the Americus circuit, he would refuse to name another jurist.

$1,200 GIVEN FOR BIG COTTON SHOW

Crushers Donate Fourth of the Amount Needed — Committees etG Promises of Support.

With $1,200, one-fourth of the amount needed, contributed by the Cotton Seed Crushers of Georgia, plans for a permanent exhibit of cotton products which it is proposed to establish in the new Champer of Commerce building have received an impetus that bids fair to carry the project through. Other lines lines of the cotton industry of the State will be asked to contribute an amount in proportion to their importance, and it is thought the entire amount will be raised within a few weeks.

The gift of the Crushers was made through their chairman, W. M. Hutchinson, at a meeting late Tuesday afternoon of the cotton products committee of the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition Committee, of which Mell R. Wilkinson is chairman. The meeting was addressed by Mayor Woodward, Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Wilmer L. Moore, S. A. Carter and others.

Special committees for each branch of the cotton industry will be named Wednesday. These committees will confer with respresentatives of each line, including fertilizers, the textile industry, the cotton oil industry and ginning, and it will be determined to just what extent the movement for an exhibit will be supported.

Trots and Tangos Boon to Chiropodist

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The turkey trot and the tango are to the chiropodists equal to the goose that laid the golden eggs, says Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, the "girl with the perfect foot." Miss Houston, herself a chiropodist, says:

"Those dances put an unaccustomed strain on the toes and instep and since they started women have been flocking to chiropodists in droves to have their feet made over. I hope the craze lasts, but I would never dance any of those dances myself. I think too much of my feet."

BIRMINGHAMERS MAKE A HIT HERE

Atlanta Rotary Club Fills Members of Alabama Organization With Good Cheer.

The Birmingham Rotary Club, 32 strong, entrained at midnight Tuesday for the Alabama village, chuck full of the good cheer provided for them by the Atlanta Rotary Club, and joyful over the day spent in the Gate City.

Purely social was the visit of the Birminghamers, though the spirit of enthusiasm displayed augurs well for the growth of both clubs. Reaching Atlanta at 12:40, they were met by a delegation of fifteen members of the local club and escorted to Hotel Ansley, where they were entertained at luncheon. The afternoon was spent in sightseeing, the places of business of many of the members of the Atlanta Rotary Club coming in for an inspection.

At 7 o'clock the party went to the Capital City Club, where several hours were spent in good fellowship. The festivities broke up shortly before midnight, to enable the visitors to catch the train.

The modesty of Atlanta's business men was illustrated in the opening address of President Hubert Anderson. He described the speaker he was to introduce in flowery terms. He made of him the perfect man and the originator of all things great in Atlanta, and said: "Gentlemen, it is my honor to introduce to you——"

Instantly every member of the Atlanta Rotary Club was on his feet bowing and speaking. The laughter which followed is undoubtedly being heard on Twentieth street in Birmingham to-day.

23 Church 'Drones' Ousted by Elders

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 6.—Twenty-three members were forcibly removed from the First Baptist Church, of this city, last night by the deacons because of negligence in attending church.

No specific charge was made against any individual, but all of them were referred to as "drones" and guilty of "indifference and non-attendance."

IMPROVEMENT AT 'PEN' FARM URGED

Senate Committee Frames Recommendations After Inspecting Milledgeville Institution.

Following a visit to the State Prison Farm at Milledgeville Saturday the Senate Penitentiary Committee of which Senator Tarver, of the Forty-third, is chairman, will make several recommendations for improvement to the Senate.

One of these will be a recommendation for the construction of an annex to the present dormitory for negroes. Another provides for a waterworks system in the women's building.

There is a possibility also that the question of the present location of the prison farm will be considered with a view to removal, although this movement is not indorsed by a majority of the committee.

A further recommendation which probably will be made relates to the separation of the boys' reformatory from the prison farm.

Senator Tarver declared Tuesday that in his opinion this feature of the prison farm was bad, as the younger boys, although separated from the convicts, are sufficiently close to be influenced by the depressing influences of convict life.

Nine members of the Senate committee and one member from the House made the trip to Milledgeville.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But before he had worked his way half through he paused, stepped aside and took up his station against the wall in a position that gave him a good view of the scene, without attracting too much attention to himself. "Since I am at a swell wedding I might as well see the bride," he continued to himself, turning his gaze, however, in any other direction than that by which she was expected to descend. "If she looks more like her photograph than the other girl does, well and good, I am an old fool and it is about time for me to take down my sign and shut up shop. But if, on the contrary, she looks less like it; if her expression varies or she is fairer or larger than one would suppose from the picture they gave me, then I can lay the fault on the photographer and regain some portion at least of my self-esteem." And unmindful of the curious glances which now and then found him out, he retained his place through the weary minutes of waiting that now ensued, amusing himself as usual in gathering together such odds and ends of talk as floated by him and stowing them away in the storehouse of his brain, which already held so many secrets even of some of those who passed him by in gay apparel without a thought that the grave, quiet, rather benignant-looking man who was so occupied with the device on Mr. Gretorex's great hall clock was he who held in his keeping their fortune and possibly their good name.

A Sigh of Relief.

At length, with a sigh of relief that ran through the length of those vast parlors, the strains of the wedding march were heard, and Mr. Gryce, whose interest in the aforementioned device now because absolutely absorbing, shifted his portly figure a step or so, while the throng at his side pressed back and a path was made for Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex, and then after what seemed a long and unnecessary interval for the bride and groom, who, contrary to the usual arrangement, descended together. They passed near, very near that great hall clock; so near that the bride's veil brushed the homely habiliments of the man who stood there; but she did not notice this, nor to all appearance did he, for his eyes never left the clock, though a careful observer might have perceived that his lips pressed a little closer together after she went by, and that he did not wait for her to pass over the threshold of the parlor doof before taking his departure.

But no one thought of him. All eyes were on the bride, and little did any one think, least of all, she whom it most concerned, that the faint, half-suppressed click which they had just heard denoted the withdrawal of one whose powers of observation were more to be dreaded than were those of the whole vast crowd he had left behind him. If she had—but our interest is not at present with the bride, pale and troubled as she is, but with this man who but a short time ago entered the house with feelings of almost beneficent concern for its inmates, only to leave it now, with a sore and humiliated heart.

For in the one glimpse he caught of the bride—and he saw her, though he did not appear to do so—he had discerned nothing to relieve his dissatisfaction with himself. If the other girl was like the picture, this pale, haughty self-contained woman was the picture itself. There was no mistaking this much, as his pride would have been gratified to have found it otherwise.

Details that were lacking in the other girl's countenance were here, and an expression which made him acknowledge to himself that he would henceforth trust no man's eyes, not even his own, in this delicate matter of identification, the least shade of a look making sometimes all the difference between one person and another. He went out of the house, feeling, as I have said, very old, and he even was conscious of a twinge or two of rheumatism as he stepped down the icy steps and prepared to take his way round the house to the street. For this reason perhaps, and also because the walk was more or less slippery, he went very slowly, so that he was just at the corner of the house when that startling scream was heard, which as we know so seriously distured the minds of those who were witnessing the ceremony. A muffled cry it was, and to those outside sounded as if it came from the upper story of the house. But when the detective paused and looked up at the windows overhead he saw nothing, and being in a very indifferent mood, went on his way, remembering the occurrence only as a sort of lugubrious echo to the rather melancholy thoughts in which he had been at that moment indulging.

At the Hotel.

His courst was toward the city. He took it direct, getting on the elevated train at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and getting off again at Twenty-third. Why Twenty-third? Was it not late enough for him to go home? He evidently did not think so. Without hesitation and with a certain determination of manner, he went immediately to the C—— Hotel.

Let us follow him.

"Well, I suppose the wedding has come off."

These were his words to the clerk who was still at his desk in the office.

The clerk looked at him and laughed.

"No," was his quick rejoinder, "it didn't. The bride absconded."

"What is that?"

Mr. Gryce's tone was quite sharp. His face resumed its old expression.

"She ran off; didn't wait for the clergyman; afraid to risk herself with such a glum-looking customer as Moles-Molesworth, I suppose. I can't say I blame her."

"Humph! You interest me. And at what hour was this; how soon after [illegible]"

[illegible] few minutes, I should say; for you had not been gone more than half worth. I suppose, I can't say I blame came with the Rev. Mr. Pease at his heels, and she was not here then, nor had been some little time."

"Who saw her go out?"

"The hall boy."

"No one else?"

"I think not."

"Didn't she leave any word behind her?"

"Yes, a note; it was laying on the table in her room. Molesworth got it."

"The door then was open?"

"It was unlocked."

"Curious. There seems to be some difficulty in the way of wedlock tonight. I have just come from a wedding and the bride was three-quarters or more an hour late. But Molesworth, as you call him—how did he take it?"

"That's hard telling; he looked grim enough, but then he was none too cheerful looking before. Anything but a bridegroom in appearance at any time. But, then, it was rather hard lines for him. 'Twould make any man angry; Mr. Pease on hand, and no bride! I declare, I felt cheap myself; and the chambermaid, I believe, shed tears, grieving over the loss of the good fee she expected, I suppose."

"Yes, it's quite thrilling, quite romantic," quoth Mr. Gryce, enthusiastically. Then, in quieter tones, remarked: "You were all in the room, then?"

He Was no Fool.

"No, I didn't know anything about it till Dr. Molesworth came down, and, giving me the price of the room, remarked that there would be no wedding at present, the young lady having preferred to wait till she could have her friends about her."

"Ah!" ejaculated Mr. Gryce.

"Neat, wasn't it?" remarked the clerk. "But he is no fool; and though I knew on the spot that she had run away for good, I couldn't help giving him credit for coolness. But it was all in his words; his look was terrible."

Mr. Gryce's eyes fixed themselves on the small lamp used to light cigars.

"I can imagine it," said he.

"But he wasn't tragic; not a bit of it," continued the clerk. "Not even when he took out the note he had evidently received from the girl, and burned it in the flame of that jet."

"Oh! he burned it, did he?"

"Down to the very end."

"And then went away?"

"Directly."

"Well, this has been a delightful evening!" commented Mr. Gryce; and he lounged away a few more minutes in the office; then went out, and, entering a drug store near by, searched for an address in the directory.

"I can not sleep; why, then, not amuse myself?" his look seemed to say, as, glancing up at the clock, he passed again into the street and betook himself westward.

Certainly one does not run across such a complication every day, and when one is a detective, why not enjoy now and then the advantages of his position?

Mr. Gryce went up the steps of a four-story brick building to which was attached a doctor's sign.

A middle-aged woman, of neat enough appearance, answered his ring, after a short delay.

"Is the doctor in?" he asked.

She shook her head, and glancing at a slate that hung on one of the pegs of the old-fashioned hallrack, declared:

"He won't be home before to-morrow."

"And I am so ill," murmured the detective, with an air of great weakness. He had read her character at a glance.

"You!" she exclaimed.

"And I have come so far," he went on. "I thought surely I should see him to-night, if I came late enough. I know he is going to be married soon, but——"

"Married!" The interruption was full of surprise and incredulity. "Married! Dr. Molesworth! I guess you are mistaken."

"Oh, no," the old gentleman persisted, assuming with every instant a look of greater distress.

"I had it from one who knows him intimately. He is going to be married, but sensible girls don't keep their lovers out too late, and I thought I might find him in. I wish I had, for when I have these turns nothing but opium will help me, and the drug clerks won't give it to me without a doctor's prescription. I must go on."

But the old lady's sympathy as well as curiosity had been aroused. She was a widow and a boarding-house keeper, but she had a heart and was not afraid of showing it.

The Landlady.

She therefore stopped him as he hobbled toward the door, and, showing him the way into the parlor, asked him to sit down by the fire and warm himself a moment before going out.

"I am sitting up," she explained, "because there are still four or five of my young men out, and as I do not give night-keys to any one but the doctor, I have to sit up, or ask some of my hard-working girls to do so. It is deary waiting sometimes, but, on the whole, they are considerate, and I don't complain."

Then as she saw, or thought she saw, the old gentleman's face grow brighter in the really genial glow of the good hard-coal fire before them, she asked in a hospitable tone if he had ever heard whom the doctor was going to marry.

He shook his gray hairs indifferently, picked out with his glance a coal in the fireplace, and began to study it intently.

"I never paid it any attention," said he. "I am getting too old to busy myself much about such matters; and girls are all the same to me, unless it be one girl," he added, with a half-senile, half-pathetic smile, taking from his pocket as he did so a photograph which he looked at fondly.

"Your daughter?" inquired the old lady.

"My granddaughter," he replied, with enthusiasm.

She leaned over as women will at the sight of any picture in the hand of another, and quietly looked at it.

"Good heavens," she exclaimed, "it is Mildred Farley."

"Mildred Farley," he repeated, in mild surprise, "I never heard that name. This is Joanna Handscombe."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Ballroom Tango

A Pretty and Refined Way of Dancing This Popular Whirl

"First of all," says Miss Witchie, "be sure you have good music. Then make sure you know how to point your toe gracefully." This movement is shown in the top picture.

"Then take a waltz position."
(Posed by Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs.)

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"THERE is nothing new under the sun"—as we have been frequently informed, but there are new combinations of all the old ideas, and a clever combination of five or six old things results in one brand new one. Just a year or two ago we fully persuaded ourselves that tangos and turkey-trots and bunny hugs and monkey wrenches were the latest things—but they weren't, bless you—no! They were cakewalks and barn dances and two-steps arranged in a to-be-well-shaken-before-taken conglomeration and accompanied by a little hula-hula or other music native to any other soil but our own.

A New Combination.

Now two of New York's cleverest dancers have thought up a fascinating new combination and permutation of steps taken from the tango Argentina, the Spanish bolero and the beautiful and so completely forgotten as to be really new minuet. In a little three-cornered chat with Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs, of Lew Fields' "All Aboard" company, now playing at the Forty-Fourth Street Roof Garden, I learned just how to do the new tango bolero, as they mean to call it. Of course, most of us lack the inherent grace, the careful training and the untiring study of their artistic calling that the clever couple bring to make their dancing a thing of beauty—even if it is, alas! a joy for but a few fleeting moments instead of the hours and hours one would gladly sit and study their twinkling twirls.

"But we'll show you just how and we'll tell you just how," said pretty little Miss Katherine, "and then if you practice and practice, and if every one who reads follows the same course—why, when we introduce our dance every one will have that at-home feeling of knowing just how to join in the chorus.

Good Music Essential.

"First of all, be sure you have good music—the tango and the bolero. Then make sure that you know how to point your toe gracefully in somewhat the way the ballet dancers do. Then take a waltz position, girl's right hand on her partner's left shoulder, man's left hand at the back of his partner's waist, the other hands clasped loosely and held almost at shoulder height, faces turned toward the outheld arms, and correspondingly the girl's left and the man's right foot pointing straight in the direction of the aim.

"Now, to tango music take the eight steps and the long gliding slide and recoving stamp that are characteristic of this dance of Spanish extraction via Argentina. Then with arms still pointing to the girl's left, do the same steps toward the right. Swing into all the tango steps you know and can do easily and gracefully, and then suddenly the music changes to the real Spanish bolero—and you go on, Ralph," said Miss Witchie, with true sportsmanlike desire to share and share alike.

Mr. Riggs laughed his appreciation of the feminine desire to be the listening partner, and "went on": "As the bolero begins, the girl is left and the man is right. Her left foot points forward, her right arm is held high above the head, just touching the tips of the man's fingers, while the other hands touch at arms' length at waist height.

"Then the man twirls the girl in a little grapevine in and out and in and out by the upstretched fingers. At the end of this movement he is holding her at arm's length, his lifted right arm holding her left hand, and from this position he draws her around in front of him and they do a little flying forward step in perfect unison, right arms held together and weight on the right foot at the beginning of the movement, and left foot pointing to the back and dropping slowly to take the weight.

"Do this back and forth eight times in tango style, and then swing into figure three—hands clased in front, and girl's left and man's right foot pointing toward the side back in a knee-hight position parallel to the floor. Swing from foot to foot, looking in the direction of the uplifted foot; do this eight times, as for all dances of the tango family. And now for the pretty little minuet finish—you, Katherine, please."

Very Fetching.

And murmuring something about "in at the finish," Miss Witchie concluded our profitable little chat with a description of the quaint and dainty steps.

"It is the conventional dancing minuet bow. The man holds his partner's outstretched right hand in his left, with right hand on heart, and left toe pointing forward. The girl points her right foot, and holds her right arm poised with upturned wrist, and then gradually through eight bars they separate into a deep curtsey. Don't you think that a dear little conclusion to our tango-bolero? And don't you think it would be perfectly polite to dance that in any ballroom?"

Perfectly polite, and very fetching and pretty, I think, don't you? And I hope we may all learn to do it with a fraction of the dainty grace and modesty shown by its inventors.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ISN'T IT LATE TO ASK THAT?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am dead in love with a young man of twenty. He says he would not take the whole world for me, and he says that he could not live without me. He has asked me to marry him. I accepted his offer and he gave me a diamond ring last year. I have been going with him for the past two years. I am a girl of eighteen. Do you think that I should marry him or wait?

Neither could live without the other, and this condition has lasted two years.

M. F.

Under the circumstances, my dear, isn't it late to ask such a question? If there is any bar to your marriage further than that of your youth and his, you do not state what it is.

THERE IS A WAY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20 and in love with a girl of 19, and if I don't win this girl I'll go crazy. I proposed, but her parents object because I am of a different religion. The girl loves me, but she waits for her parents' consent. Will you please help me to win this girl, because I think of her all the time?

THOMAS.

She will not marry without her parents' consent, and she is right. You say their objection is based on your church. You do not say what your church is, but do you love the girl so much you would change it?

I do not advise it. I simply suggest that the means of overcoming the objection to you lies in yourself. You must not demand that the girl make the sacrifice.

Up-to-Date Jokes

"My wife," said Mr. Clarke, "sent ten dollars in answer to an advertisement of a sure method of getting rid of superfluous fat."

"And what did she get for the money? Was the information what she wanted?" asked Mr. Simmons.

"Well, she got a reply telling her to sell it to the soap man."

• • •

Mrs. Blinks (to her neighbor)—Oh, I do so like your house. It seems to homelike.

Mrs. Jinks—Do you think so?

Mrs. Blinks—Yes, indeed; you've got so many of my cooking dishes borrowed, you know, that your kitchen seems ever so much more natural than mine does."

The Snake Charmer

By INGLIS ALLEN.

THE long, lighted car sweeps swiftly up through the night, and the little man, waiting on the curb by my side, deftly extinguishes his cigarette against his coat sleeve and mounts the step before me.

I enter and seat myself by the door, idly noting that the car is otherwise empty save for a huge male form sprawling in the corner at the further end. Opposite me the little man has closed weary eyes. For my own part, I fall to watching through the doorway the crawling market carts, with their huddled drivers, as one by one we overtake and leave them behind.

A touch on my elbow disturbs my contemplations. I turn to find that the large man was vacated his corner and is leaning confidentially toward me.

"'Ere," he observes with a mysterious air, "I want to speak to you."

He is a very large man, indeed, in whom the absence of a collar is made the more noticeable by a high-colored flannel shirt open at the neck. He has twisted himself in his seat so as to face me, and, with sudden disquietude, I make the discovery that the breast of his shirt is undulating with the movements of some live body beneath it. With triumpnant eyes fixed on mine, he inserts his hand beneath the garment, and, withdrawing it impressively, holds up a particularly repulsive-looking snake for my inspection.

"I'm always doing this," he remarks with delight. "I'm an' me's pals. Teddy I call 'im. After my wife's father."

I express my satisfaction at this highly sociable state of affairs and at the same time the conductor makes his appearance.

He accepts a coin mechanically from the semi-somnolent man opposite, his gaze straying curiously over his shoulder toward my neighbor.

A Bedfellow.

The latter, overjoyed at his attention, persuades the snake to further vagaries.

"I'm always doin' this," he explains with the same delight. "Teddy 'is name is. 'E sleeps with me at night."

The conductor grins.

My neighbor falls to caressing his snake again. Soon he leans forward, and with a push at the knee arouses the little man opposite from his slumbers. The latter regards his performance for awhile in stolid silence.

"That ain't nothin'," he observes, and closes his eyes again.

Attention is diverted by the entrance of two new passengers—a young gentleman in rather wide trousers and a young lady in a very narrow skirt. At a glance my neighbor marks them down as his prey. He rises, lurches across the tram, and seats himself beside them. With a beaming smile, he puts the snake through its performance for their benefit the pair watching him with marked apprehension.

"Teddy, I call 'im," he observed affably. "I'm always doin' this."

The information seems in no way reassuring to his audience, who remain watchfully silent. Suddenly he withdraws the snake from his shirt and holds it toward the young man.

"Try 'im yerself," he suggests generously. "I've no objection. Put 'im down your neck, mate."

There is a sudden scuffling sound as the young lady rises precipitately and moves to the farther end of the car. Her escort, about to follow, is detained by a huge hand upon his sleeve.

"'E won't 'urt yer. Put 'im down yer neck, boss. Yer ought to get used to that sort of thing, yer know."

It is evident that the young man has no sense of this duty to himself; by a sharp movement he frees his arm, and, with such dignity as he can muster joins his companion at the farther end. The snake-charmer remains looking after him with an outraged stare.

Meanwhile the car has stopped, and there has been an influx of passengers. The conductor, about to ring the bell, suddenly observes the huge figure at the end.

It Disappears.

"'Ere you!" he cries. "You wanted Young's Corner!"

The snake-charmer turns hastily and stumbles down the car. Suddenly he stops and feels tentatively about the upper part of his body.

"'Arf a moment!" he exclaims anxiously. "Wot's become o' Teddy?"

The new passengers glance up with mild interest. The pair at the end rise expeditiously and peer about them in apprehension. The snake-charmer has gone to the seat lately vacated by him—now occupied by a respectable old lady of sedate aspect.

"Excuse me, mum——" he apepals.

The lady, evidently rather hard of hearing, looks around her inquiringly. The snake-charmer raises his voice.

"It's my snake," he explains. "I think you must be sittin' on 'im."

With a blood-curdling shriek, the lady shoots from the seat like a stone from a catapult. The new passengers rise in panic, and convulsively shake skirts or trousers.

"You ain't got your snake," grumbles the conductor from the step. "Think we're goin' to wait about all—Why, what's that?"

All eyes follow the conductor's finger, pointing toward the snake-charmer's feet. From one of the legs of his trousers a flat, evil head has emerged, and, curling upward, is darting a forked tongue into space. With a proud smile, he stoops and, drawing forth his pet, replaces it in the breast of his shirt and steps out into the road.

The conductor tugs the bell impatiently, and we move on.

The passengers resume their seats, then crane their necks to watch a dwindling figure stationary in the road behind. A genial hail is wafted faintly toward us.

"Teddy, I call 'im. Sleeps with me at night!"

Extra Modest.

"George, there's a burglar in the house."

"Well, keep still. We've got nothing he'll steal."

"I know. But I left my corsets over the back of a chair, and I wouldn't have him see them for the world."

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I GUESS there ain't many real human beings that goes to the boarding houses at the seashore, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I was down to Tybee for a week-end, and I was entertained beautiful by a friend of mine that always does everything right. She and her husband is perfect darlings, George. He always takes her wherever she wants to go, and she thinks he is the only man on this globe. She is one of them kind of wives, George, that thinks when she hears about Julius Caesar that her husband would have had Julius' Jo> if he had been living then.

"But they was the only two regular guys on that porch after we had ate our dinner and went out to let it digest in the shade. There was four married women there about forty years old or so, and two young chaps that had traveled extensively on the trolley cars. They were setting there talking to the old gals, showing how brown their arms was from swimming and how much muscle they had, and the old gals was fine to them, beaming on them just as if they was grown-up men. After the two chaps had went for their third swim that day, the old gals began telling what divine waltzers the kids was, and how one of them was very witty.

"But oh, dear doctor! When the name of one of the younger married ladies came up, a lady that didn't happen to be there at the time, there was sure some scandal.

"'They say her husband drinks something brutal!' says one of the old hens.

"'I wouldn't be surprised,' says another. 'She would drive any man to drink with that temper of hers.'"

"What else do you expect from that kind of folks?" asked the Head Barber. "I never sat on a boarding house porch in my life, unless it was with some of the old Romans, long after the women folks had went to bed, I never could stand all the cruel things they said about the other women. Many a young married lady has been kissed and called 'dearie' by the old fat and forty girls, only to be hammered into pulp when they moved fifty feet away. I was up in the country not long ago and heard some of those rocking-chair dames working. Two of the young chaps there happened to be live ones, and went to the village to get a few steins on a hot day. They mentioned it when they got back home, and the next morning when they started out one of the dames says 'Look at Mr. Doonan and Mr. McSherry!' and another says, 'Yes, there they go!' I suppose when the young fellow got back in the evening every one of the ancients says 'Here they come!'"

"That's the trouble, George," said the Manicure Lady. "This would be a whole lot different world in which to live in if it wasn't for the 'There they go!' and 'Here they come!' people. If they see a young fellow throwing himself away and going to the dogs, you don't hear many folks shouting 'Come back and get wise!' They all say 'There he goes!' and they say it as cheerful as a kid saying 'Oh Mamma, here comes the circus parade!'

"This is too hot a day to do much demoralizing, George, but I do wish that folks would be kinder to each other and bury the hammer. It ain't hatchets that needs burying in this world, George, it's hammer."

Hints For the Household

When about to make a pudding, well flour your board and rolling-pin and roll the suet out to a thin sheet. Take between your hands and rub down, when you will find the suet as fine as breadcrumbs.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all old bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish clothes for saucepans and pie-dishes.

When washing pudding cloths, throw some orange peelings into the water. This collects the grease and helps to make the cloths white and clean looking.

If great care is not taken flatirons easily become rusted. The following is a good way to clean them when this occurs: Tie a lump of beeswax in a piece of rag, and when theirons are hot rub them with this. Then rub them well with salt on a cloth, and they will be quite smooth and clean.

Before arranging maidenhair fern in vases, soak it for two hours in cold water; then singe the ends of the stems with a match. Ferns thus treated will last three times as long and keep quite green and fresh for several days.

Hot-water marks may be removed from japanned trays by the simple process of rubbing them over well with sweet oil, and then polishing with a little dry flour on a soft duster.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XIV.

MARY DANFORTH awoke early on the morning of her graduation day. She lifted her watch from the table at the head of her bed and glanced at it sleepily, noting with satisfaction that it still lacked more than an hour to breakfast time.

She lay half awake and let happy thoughts drift through her mind—light, girlish thoughts of the beauty of her graduation gown; affectionate thoughts of her father, speeding home from a business trip in the far West to be with his daughter on this important day; tender, timid thoughts of Gordon Craig.

In a letter written a week ago her lover had repeated his assurance that he would see her graduate. This epistle had reached her only the day before yesterday, and since then she had heard nothing from him, yet she was sure that he would be true to his word. She smiled now as she lay in her darkened room, a smile that was full of pure joy. She knew that Craig would have a question to ask when they met, and she also knew what her answer would be. She had no doubt now that she loved him dearly and was proud and happy in her love. The smile faded slowly from her lips, and she slept again.

Her mother's gentle knock on the door awakened her a half hour later.

"It's time to get up, girlie!" she announced, entering the room. "Breakfast will be ready soon and father has telephoned from the Grand Central to say that he will be up to eat it with us, as his train is just in. So try to be ready when he comes."

She kissed Mary as she had done each morning since the girl's birth, then hurried away on household tasks intent.

The trio had a happy breakfast together in the sunlit dining room. Mr. Danforth, haggard and pale—"from a sleepless night on the cars," as he explained—was once more at the head of the table, cheery and happy in spite of his evident weariness.

The morning meal over, he pushed his chair back from the table and, drawing Mary down upon his knees, questioned her with affection and interest about her plans for the day. He did not mention Craig's name. An unusual reticence had kept the Texan from his conversation ever since the young man had returned home, and when Mary had mentioned with studied indifference the fact that "Mr. Craig might possibly happen to be in New York on Commencement Day," her father let the statement pass without comment.

After a few minutes' chat this morning he declared that he must go to his office for a part of the day. At the front door he paused and came back to the dining room to kiss Mary, although he had already bade her an affectionate goodby.

"This is just to kiss my little girl once more," he explained, patting her cheek fondly. "She will be a grownup lady when I see her again."

It was late in the afternoon that Mary left the house to go down to her school. Her class were to have an early farewell supper in the gymnasium and would go directly from that to their graduation exercises.

At 8 o'clock she and the rest of her class took their places in the great school auditorium, which was already crowded. Mary looked vainly among the sea of faces for the three persons who made her small world. Of course, her parents were here, she mused, although she could not discern them—but was Craig here, too?

The white-haired principal arose to speak, and a hush fell on the house. Suddenly Mary knew that her lover had come. She felt his eyes upon her, and, looking up, saw him in the gallery above her. Their glances met and he smiled, but the girl blushed hotly and dropped her eyes. Her heart throbbed wildly. She had been eager to see him, but now she wished to evade his steady gaze and hide herself, yet she was happy to be in his presence. She raised her hand to her throat, and, caressingly, touched the hidden silver trinket he had sent her.

Those who knew her said Mary Danforth had never looked sweeter and fairer than when she rose at the calling of her name and went forward to receive her diploma. She did not think of the thousands of glances resting upon her, but only of the look of the man she loved. She longed to lift her eyes and gaze into his face, but she could not. Through the valedictory she sat silent, unhearing, her eyes upon her diploma and the mass of flowers which had been handed her. She knew some of them were sent by Craig, the rest by her parents.

At last she became aware that it was all over, that people were rising and that everybody about her was talking. A gray-haired, sweet-faced teacher accosted her.

"May I speak to you a moment, dear child?" she said quietly. "Come with me."

Puzzled and vaguely alarmed the girl obeyed the older woman's bidding and followed her into a small anteroom adjoining the auditorium. As Mary noted the woman's grave demeanor a dread clutched at her heart, and she held her breath to listen.

"I have bad news for you," said her teacher simply. "You must go right home to your mother. She has sent for you. Your father"——

She paused, and the girl clasped her hands in an agony of fear.

"Oh, what is it?" she gasped. "Tell me quickly! Is he hurt, or ill, or"—her voice failed her suddenly, for Gordon Craig stood beside her. She had not seen him enter, and he took her trembling hands in his firm grasp.

"Dear," he said quickly, but softly, while his body shielded her from the glances of persons passing the door, "your father will never be hurt or ill again. Be brave, dear. He died an hour ago."

An Impossible Post.

With tense, eager faces, the great audience of women leaned forward in their seats, eagerly drinking in the noted speaker's every word.

"Mere man," she was saying, "is wont to belittle woman's ability to enter the fields already usurped by him. As a matter of fact, she is capable of filling any post of public or private office now held by man, and, if appointed to it, could even perform man's tasks with greater faithfulness and greater daring.

"Name, if you can, one post for which she can not fit herself! Name one office to which she would not, could not, give the greatest measure of capability, the highest degree of courage, the——"

A mere man, who had slipped, unnoticed, into a back seat, rose at this point, and the light of sudden inspiration gleamed in his eye.

"Rat catcher!" he shouted. And then he fled.

Their Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"THAT must be the landing down there! I can't see that sign, but I'm sure that's where you get the St. Cloud boats."

"Hadn't you better ask some one," ventured Helen. "It's so far to go way down there and find it isn't the place."

"I tell you it IS the place," scowled Warren, who always hated to ask his way, and often wore Helen out trying to find a place without guidance.

Already they had walked across the Alexandre bridge, and Helen was tired and hot. Her feet ached, too, for she had foolishly started out in a pair of white canvas pumps which she had bought the day before.

A gravel path and stone steps led down to what Warren thought was the boat landing. But evidently it was not in use this season, for the place was deserted except for a man who was shearing a dog in an empty shed.

He was sitting on the ground holding on his knees a King Charles spaniel, whose sleek body he was clipping close, leaving only the lion-like ruff of neck and tail. The dog, grateful to be rid of his heavy coat this hot day, lay patiently on his back.

"I'll be darned!" muttered Warren, looking around the deserted landing. "I know those boats used to start from here."

"But it's been seven years since you were in Paris," protested Helen. "You can't expect to find everything just the same! Do ask that man where the right landing is—I CAN'T walk much farther!"

"Well, if it's along here we'll find it," obstinately ignoring her suggestion. "There, I see it now! Isn't that a boat just pulling in?"

Helen Inquires.

Helen's heart sank, for the landing Warren pointed to was back beyond the bridge. And it might not be the right one! Deter minedly she approached the man with the dog. If Warren would not ask, she would. Not knowing the French for "boat landing," she repeated "St. Cloud, St. Cloud?" and pointed to the landing beyond.

"Oui, oui, madame," nodded the man, understandingly, while the dog, in spite of his inverted position, wagged a friendly tail.

Warren was already striding back up the stone steps. "Hope you're satisfied," he grumbled, as Helen breathlessly caught up with him. "That's the St. Cloud boat there now. If you hurry we'll get it."

Helen, her shoes hurting her at every step, kept up with Warren's long strides as best she could. As they drew near they could see "St. Cloud" fluttering on a red flag over the boat.

"May have to wait another hour if we don't catch this!" called back Warren, running ahead to get the tickets.

The boat gave a warning whistle. A man was loosening the chain. Were they going to miss it after all? Warren had the tickets now and was waving them at her! Helen, flushed and breathless, reached the boat only a second before it moved off.

"Whee! That was close," and Warren wiped the inside of his hat with his handkerchief. "Pretty good sprint for a hot day."

"Oh, can't you find me a place to sit down?" panted Helen. "My feet hurt so!"

"Don't see any place, do you?" looking around the crowded boat, on which every seat was taken. "What's the matter with your feet, anyway? You've been hobbling ever since we started."

"It's these shoes I bought yesterday. They're plenty big," defiantly, "but they're too stiff. They hurt in the back at the heel."

"Humph, you ought to know you couldn't get a decent shoe in this country. Why on earth didn't you bring enough with you?"

"I did, dear, all except white ones."

"Well, serves you right. They ought to hurt you, if you haven't more sense than to start out on a trip like this with a new pair of shoes."

Paris had been hot, but the Seine was hotter. The sun glittered on the water that was not even rippled by a breath of air. The iron rail, against which Helen was leaning, almost burnt through her gloves. Would she have to stand on her aching feet in this blazing sun all the way to St. Cloud?

Warren Compares.

"They talk so blamed much about the beauty of the Seine—well I don't see it! Can't hold a candle to our Palisades along the Hudson."

"None too clean, either," went on Warren. "Hope they don't drink this water. But that's so—Frenchmen don't drink any water. There's a seat, if you want one," as a man rose to get out at the next landing.

Helen sank into the seat, and with a sigh of relief drew off her slipper under her dress. Warren did not grouble to come and stand by her, but stood where he was, leaning on his cane by the railing.

As they left the outskirts of Paris, the river grew cleaner and the scenery more attractive. But Helen was too hot and much too uncomfortable to enjoy or appreciate the sail.

At last they reached St. Cloud. On the hillside above was a big white hotel, with fluttering flags and white-clothed tables on the green hedged veranda and terrace.

"Well, what do you want to do? Walk around and take a look at the village—or get a cab here and drive through the park first?"

Helen, whose feet still hurt her, suggested the drive.

Several cabmen, spotting the Americans, were already urging them to their vehicles. Warren put Helen into one of the cabs and told the driver to take them through the park.

"What's that?" as the man began to chatter excitedly. "What in the devil's he trying to say?" For Warren's restaurant French was not equal to this conversation.

The driver finally made them understand they were to pay in advance—two francs, for which he presented them with a ticket, which Helen thought was a sort of receipt.

"Why, dear, that's awfully cheap," as they drove off.

"Oh, all cabs are much cheaper over here," explained Warren easily.

They entered the park by a massive gateway, sentinelled by a uniformed soldier. Helen had read in her Baedeker of the beauty of the park at St. Cloud, but the terraced groves, the statuary, the fountains, the vistas through arched trees, the cascades and grottoes surpassed any guide book description.

Pay In Advance.

"I say, this is great!" approved Warren. "Look through there! The fellow who laid out these grounds knew his job."

Thed river now slowed up, to give them a better view of a magnificent fountain at the top of a terraced mound.

"Dear, that must be the fountain which plays every other Sunday. Why didn't I bring the Baedeker?"

"Oh, forget your blamed old guidebook and enjoy what you see. By Jove, just look up there!"

In the distance was another fountain center with marble nymphs and flaming flower beds. Helen, with her slipper off, now leaned back and gave herself up to silent enjoyment of it all—the cool shaded groves, the smell of the woods, and the wonderful vistas through the trees. The whole park was a triumph of landscape art.

Every now and then they passed a festive picnic party with lunch spread in some secluded grove. And there were many courts of lawn-tennis and other field games, the white outing costumes of the players gleaming conspicuously against the green background.

"Well, we're getting our two francs' worth in this drive, all right. This man's got a pretty big tip coming to him."

When they had driven entirely around the great park, they again drew up before the impressive iron gate, which the soldier swung open.

"We don't want to go back to the station yet. Let's get out of here and go up to the hotel and have a drink. How about having dinner there?" and Warren motioned to the driver to let them out.

"Eh? What's that? Now what's he after?" as the driver stared at his tip, climbed down from his seat, and excitedly pointed to a taximeter in front, which they had not seen before.

"Well, what in thunder did we pay that two francs for?" demanded Warren, glacing at the taximeter which registered over seven francs. "If you think you've got a sucker here, you're wrong. You made us pay in advance, and that's all you'll get."

Here the soldier at the gate, overhearing the dispute, came out and explained to Warren, in halting English, that the two francs was the admission charged by the park, and that the taximeter charges was for the drive.

Explanations.

"Oh, if that's the way of it, all right," as Warren paid the seven francs, fifty. "But why in the devil didn't he say so?"

"Why, that's exorbitant," protested Helen indignantly, as they started up the hill to the hotel. "That makes the drive almost ten francs."

"If that's their regular rate—that's all right. All I want to know is that I'm not being held up. Now what? Want to go to the hotel for dinner now? Or take a walk around the village first?"

"I'm afraid I can't walk very far," faltered Helen.

"By George, you're a fine traveler, you are," in a tone of disgust. "Not much pleasure going anywhere with you. You're either too tired, or too hot, or your feet hurt—or some blamed thing's the matter. Come on then, we'll have dinner. Think you can sit up and take nourishment?"

There's Many a Slip.

Smithson had been really a power in his day. At any rate, he had held a job bringing him in some thousands a year—that is to say, until the smash came. After that he failed to hold any job he got, and became permanently out of luck.

His old friend Jenkins was a bit surprised, therefore, when Smithson stopped him in the street one day and angrily exclaimed:

"D'you know, I've just received the prize insult of my life! A chap down in the city offered me a job this morning!"

"Offered you a job?" replied Jenkins. "Y'ou call that an insult? I thought you were looking for a job!"

"Yes, but not at ten dollars a week. Hang it all, I can borrow more than that from you!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Cheer up little girl."

CHAPTER XXIII.

AFTER the scene in the office, when Jennie's new employer tried to kiss her, Jennie realized if she demanded her salary—so she could leave—he would not pay her, so she resolved to work the week out if possible and be on her guard in the meantime against any outbursts on his part.

The man saw there was nothing to be gained by forcing his attentions on Jennie, so thought he would play a "waiting game" and be as nice as possible.

He apologized profusely, saying if he had not been drinking it wouldn't have happened, but that Jennie was so pretty he just couldn't help it. Jennie was determined to leave at the end of the week, though, for she could see he was only waiting a more favorable chance.

When Jennie got home that night she found her aunt, the boarding-house keeper, very ill—so sick, in fact, that they had to get a doctor. "Goodness only knows where we can get the money to pay him," thought Jennie.

The only thing the doctor could prescribe was a good rest, change of scene and good, wholesome food. Quite simple to prescribe, but how could Jennie's aunt have these things when they had barely enough to live on as it was? After the doctor had gone Jennie's aunt called her to the bedside and told her: "I know what is the matter with me, Jennie girl; it was useless for you to have called the doctor, for he could not help me and it was just an added expense that we can not afford. I've had these spells for years, but never one before as bad as this—but cheer up, my little girl, everything will be all right and I'll be out of bed soon." But in her heart she KNEW she never would.

A TYPEWRITER COSTS OVER $3000.00

AS a business man you know that the price you pay for a typewriter is a negligible sum, compared with what it really costs.

If you pay your operator fifty dollars per month and she runs the machine five years, the operating cost is $3,000.00. This, plus what you paid for the machine, represents your investment.

The vital question is, "What do I get for that $3,000.00?"

On the

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

you get ten to twenty per cent more work than on any other typewriter made.

The original cost of the machine, therefore, fades into nothingness.

We can prove that our typewriter will do more and better work and do it longer than any other typewriter.

Our branch office in Atlanta is always at your service and we will demonstrate our machine in your office, without cost or obligation to you.

Our free employment department furnishes office help without expense to either party.

RITCHIE SIGNS TO MEET WELSH SEPTEMBER 1

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Freddie Welsh is to get first crack at Willie Ritchie, heightweight champion of the world. Ritchie today accepted the offer made by a Vancouver club for a twenty-round contest there on September 1 with the Englishman as his opponent.

The taking of the Vancouver match followed a four-hour talk between Ritchie and James W. Coffroth, of this city, who hoped to match Tommy Murphy and the champion for September 9. Ritchie's demand on Coffroth was far greater than the local promoter cared to consent to and negotiations were dropped.

While Ritchie would not say just what he is receiving for fighting Welsh in Vancouver, it is learned on good authority that he will receive a guarantee of $15,000 with a 50 per cent interest in the moving pictures.

The champion will depart to-day for the mountains to shoot deer and incidentally get himself a good start in the training line.

Eaglebeak's Admirer Deserts Him for the New Star

Turned Down Trade for Joe Agler

Jersey City Offered Borton for Him

By Joe Agler.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 6.—I reckon I ought to be feeling sort of set up this morning. From what I hear, Major Frank E. Callaway, president of our ball club association, came up here to see President J. L. Lillis, of the Jersey City club, who offered him Borton, recently of the White Sox, and another player for my humble self.

They tell me Mr. Callaway turned down the offer before the deal had got beyond the debating stage.

Well, that makes me feel pretty good. I like to play ball for Atlanta, and it certainly cheers a fellow up to know he is wanted on the job. I'll just keep on doing the best I can for the Crackers and the management.

Getting back to the real business of the ball club, I want to say that we took a licking yesterday and we haven't any yelp coming. Coveleskie was right, and when he is right he is a bear. He ought to have got a shutout except for a break in the luck.

Carl Thompson, too, was in grand trim, though the Lookouts tied up the game in the ninth inning when he hit a batsman with the bases full. Then another hit batsman, an error and a base hit untied it in the tenth.

But now we have the big Pole out of the way, and with Conzelman and Price to work this afternoon, we ought to get no worse than an even break at the outside. Then we tackle the Vols, and you know they looked pretty easy last time.

REDS BUY HARRINGTON FROM N. ENGLAND LEAGUE

LYNN, MASS., Aug. 6.—Frank Harrington, a pitcher of the Lynn club of the New England League, to-day is heading to join the Cincinnati National League team. An offer for Harrington made a month ago was accepted with the understanding that the pitcher would not leave Lynn until the close of the New England League season.

But Manager Flaherty received and accepted an offer of a bonus if he would allow Harrington to join the Reds immediately. Harrington is 21 years old.

One Comfort, the Pole Is Out of the Way for the Time Being

IT WAS A TOUGH GAME FOR THOMPSON TO LOSE

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE wad of balsam soothes the sting of defeat:

The tough-grained Pole is out of the way.

We expected it—and we got it. We didn't get it as overwhelmingly as we thought we were going to, and that is some comfort. Carl Thompson earned only praise for his stubborn defense. And his helpers with him.

Still, it would have been a grand little achievement to have trimmed the Irish Newsboy, while the trimming was so nearly good. One little scratch tally in the ninth, now—

* * *

ANOTHER grain of comfort.

Joe Agler is going to stay with us a while longer.

Major Callaway, president of the Atlanta Baseball Association, traveled to Chattanooga Monday to meet President Lillis, of the Jersey City club. Major Callaway didn't know what Mr. Lillis wanted to see him about, but Mr. Lillis' wire said it was urgent.

Mr. Lillis wanted our old friend, Joe Agler. Mr. Lillis wanted Joe so much that he offered Borton, recently a White Sox, who went to New York in the Chase trade and to J. C. for Jack Knight. Also Mr. Lillis offered boot in the shape of another player.

Major Callaway is reported by the newsfinders—entirely apart from what Joe himself heard about it—as turning down the deal as soon as he found out what Mr. Lillis wanted.

Suits us fine.

* * *

WHEN the official wranglers in any old league run out of wrangling material, they usually dig up the clever and start in on the proposition of a ball player being out if he slides into first base, and, if so, why not?

There are plenty of wranglers on both sides. The last time the crool war broke out it was in the American Association. But it did not stay there.

An honest German umpire named O'Brien called out a guy named Dixie Walker for sliding bean-first to sack No. 1 in St. Paul. Billy Friel, manager of the Saints and incidentally of Mr. Walker, protested to President Chivington.

Chivvy upheld the umpire, saying something about an "unwritten law" promulgated, or words to that effect, by the umpires as a rebuke to baserunners who are merely trying to "make the play close," and confuse the worthy umps.

* * *

RIGHT away some loafer touched off August Herrmann about it.

The august August is about three-fourths of the National Commission—when Ban Johnson is away—and he is ever ready to blow up about anything.

This time he performed as per schedule.

Mr. Herrmann said, in part:

"A player is permitted under the rules to reach any base by any method he sees fit." So long. It is understood, as the said player proceeds under his own steam.

Mr. Herrmann remarked further:

"He may run, jump, crawl or walk on his hands, so long as he travels within the lines. This is provided in the rules of the game, and no umpire or league president or anybody else has any right to change the rule."

* * *

MR. CHIVINGTON, please copy.

But here is another rule:

"Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the accuracy of the umpire's judgment and decision on a play."

Rule 65, if you want to look it up.

And what we should like to inquire is, how is Mr. Herrmann to decide from the protests of outraged managers whether the sliding-to-first-base runner was called out because the umpire was prejudiced against that mode of transportation, or because he really was out?

Mr. Herrmann being notably strong for the rules, you know.

DROP a little tear for Cornelius McGillicuddy.

As if it weren't tough enough to lose half a series to the wretched Browns, and have the furious Naps roaring along, only eight or ten games behind, here comes the news that Jack Coombs, famous iron man, is about ready to come back.

Coombs has been out of the game since early in the spring. Typhoid was the cause. Now he is reported bigger and better than ever, just like a circus.

Pity poor Connie! He was wondering and wondering who would pitch the opening game of the world's series—Bender or Plank.

And now here's Coombs!

EAST MEETS WEST TO-DAY IN BIG TENNIS DOUBLES

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Double teams from the East and West to-day met for the final elimination in the National tennis championships. Clarence Griffin and John Strachan, of San Francisco, Pacific Coast champions, were matched against Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern champions.

The winners of to-day's match will be entitled to play Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bundy, present National champions, at Newport, R. I., on August 18, for the 1913 doubles honors of the United States.

JACK KEATING KNOCKS OUT GALL IN THE FOURTH ROUND

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Jack Keating, the local heavyweight, knocked out George Gall, in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Atlantic A. C. Garden here last night. Gall was reeling around the ring helpless in the fourth round when his seconds threw up the sponge.

John Lester Johnson, the South American heavyweight, knocked out Bob Lee, a dusky-hued boxer of Brooklyn, in the third round of the semi-final bout, scheduled to go ten rounds.

SMITH IN NO-HIT GAME; ARM NOW OUT OF SPLINTS

PITTSFIELD, MASS., Aug. 6.—William I. Smith, of the Pittsfield Eastern Association Baseball Club, who took his injured arm out of splints the day before, pitched a no-hit game against Waterbury yesterday, shutting them out 3 to 0. Smith issued no passes and struck out six men. Only three Waterbury players saw first base, all on errors.

HURLS NO-RUN NO-HIT GAME.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 6.—Pitcher Watson, of Asheville, in the North Carolina league, pitched a no-hit, no-run game here against Winston-Salem. He walked three men, struck out six and out of three trips to the bat got two hits, one of which was a home run.

JAKE STAHL MAY SUCCEED CALLAHAN AS HEAD OF SOX

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—A rumor was industriously circulated in local baseball circles to-day to the effect that Jake Stahl, former manager of the Red Sox, is scheduled to succeed Jimmy Callahan as manager of the Chicago White Sox, at the close of the present year. Stahl has been spending the summer, since his dismissal, at Annisquam, but could not be reached there to-day. Some of Stahl's close personal friends are inclined to ridicule the idea that Stahl will return to baseball.

For the ball yard is deserted
And they can not trim the Sox.

Those Naps have been playing as if they did not realize that the Fourth of July has went from our midst.

Still, it may be that they have fallen for the sane Fourth idea and refuses to blow up.

In answer to the rumor that he intends to quit, Frank Chance avers that he is satisfied with the outlook. It must be great to work for that kind of a boss.

JUMPING OFF.

It was a jilted lover and he sat with drooping frame.
Quoth he: "I do not care to live since I have lost my dame."
And so the lovelorn rummy joined the motorcycle game.

WHITNEY TO GET HERE FRIDAY; WHITE SATURDAY

FRANK WHITNEY will arrive Friday morning for his ten-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory a week from to-night. White will get in Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The "Fighting Carpenter" has been training for a week on his farm in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but yesterday moved his training quarters to O'Connells' gymnasium in Chicago, where he will remain until to-morrow night.

The following wire was received this morning:

Will arrive in Atlanta Friday morning. Am stopping in Chicago for a couple of days so as to get benefit of sparring partners. Working at O'Connell's gym.

There are not any clever lightweights in Atlanta for Frank to work out with. In the Windy City there are plenty of boys who can give the "Fighting Carpenter" just the sort of work he needs.

Tickets for the show will go on sale this afternoon at Shepherd's Cigar Store, corner of Edgewood and Pryor. On account of the size of the Auditorium-Armory, it has been decided to make the prices $1, $1.50 and $2. The balcony brings the low price, the dress circle $1.50 and the ringside seats "two bucks."

Already big orders have been received from Macon, Athens, Augusta and other nearby cities and towns. It is expected that the advance sale will be even heavier than for the Battling Nelson bout, which totaled nearly $2,500.

AMATEUR TEAMS CLASH AT PONCE DE LEON TO-DAY

In order that the visiting merchants may see a good game of ball the Producers and Jones teams, of the Grocers' League, has transferred their game from Piedmont to Ponce De Leon Park. Game will be called at 3:30 p. m. Admission 10 cents.

These two teams are tied in the race for the pennant in the Grocers' League and this game is sure to be a battle royal. Jones won the last game, which will make the Producers fight hard to make it a win.

NEW YORK HEARS THAT YANKEES SEEK HOFMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A report gained circulation here to-day that Artie Hofman, former Cub and Pirate, will be seen in a Yankee uniform next year.

Artie has been playing great ball since he was turned over to Nashville, of the Southern League, by the Pirates. He looks to be just as good as ever.

It is said that Chance promised Artie that he would bring him back into the big leagues if he displayed any of his old form.

Polo To-day---If It Doesn't Rain

Everybody Invited to McPherson

If only J. Pluvius will compromise with the weather man for this one afternoon, he will earn the respect and friendly admiration of several thousand Atlantans, who are planning to witness Atlanta's first polo match on the big parade ground at Fort McPherson, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Everything is set for the contest between a team representing Atlanta and a quartet of officers of the Seventeenth Regiment. The personnel of the officers' team has not been announced, but it is known that there are enough experts with the Seventeenth to make up the requisite four of experienced polo players and have a second four left over for substitutes.

The local four will be Captain J. O. Seamans, of the Governor's Horse Guard, who played the game in the army; who will lead the team; Albert Sidney J. Tucker of Lexington, Va.; E. M. Landrum, of Pensacola, Fla., and Milton Wise, of New York.

Robert F. Maddox will act as timer; Wilmer L. Moore, scorer; James R. Gray and Clark Howell, goal judges, and Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun, referee.

Moving pictures will be taken of the event and will be displayed on local screens at an early date.

In addition to the game there will be a band concert by the regimental band, and music by the Glee Club, of Company M. A tug-of-war on horseback and also wrestling on horseback.

No admission will be charged and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the sport.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Lou Castro is a busy man these days. Lou is dividing his time in eating three squares a day and getting his fighting arena in shape for his big boxing show to be staged at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. Whitney has wired Castro that he will be here Friday.

* * *

Kid Young and Mike Saul are working together for their, coming bouts at the Auditorium. Young takes on Charlie Lee, while Mike will probably don the padded mitts with Eddie Hanlon. Young is developing a terrific kick in his right hand, and expects to topple Lee over long before the tenth round is reached.

* * *

Kid Wonder took a trip to The Georgian Sporting Department yesterday to inform us, that he is after a match with some local featherweight. Wonder is particularly anxious to get on with either Kid Young or Charlie Lee.

* * *

A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast want to meet Willie Ritchie, and have started bidding for the match. Both boys are willing to give the champion a neat side bet.

* * *

Packey McFarland is the latest to put in a boost for Charlie White. Packey says that Charlie is without a doubt the greatest 128-pound boy in the game to-day. Joe Thomas and Jake Abel probably agree with McFarland.

* * *

They are certainly picking soft marks for Carl Morris in the West. Al Benedict, his latest victim, would be easy for a lot of Philadelphia welterweights.

* * *

Three 10-round bouts between heavyweights are to be staged at the St. Nicholas A. C., New York, to-night. Porky Flynn, of Boston, will meet Sailor White, of Newark; Frank McGuinness, the Irish heavyweight, will battle Jack Keating, of the United States Navy, and Al Kubiak is to try conclusions with Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, have been matched to meet in a ten-round go at Omaha on September 12. If Coulon finds that he is right in this bout, he may go to the coast for a scrap with Kid Williams.

* * *

A banner house is expected to attend the Gunboat Smith-Jim Flynn set-to at New York on August 8. Both boys have been doing all their training in the Eastern City, and look to be in great shape. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Cyclone Thompson and Billy Hooper, colored lightweights, may be put on in one of the bouts to be held at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. They are now dickering with Lou Castro.

* * *

Arthur Pelky and Charlie Miller may clash in a long go at Los Angeles. McCarey plans to match the pair for a September date. Tommy Burns, manager of Pelky, took the match with the understanding that if Pelky defeated Miller he was to get a fight with Gunboat Smith.

GA.-ALA. LEAGUE NOTES

Every town in the league around the Georgia-Alabama circuit is glad when the Opelika boys blow in. They're a bunch of collegians and gentlemanly fellows, as well as good ball players.

* * *

* * *

Then there is Bone, of Washington and Lee; Allen and Ragsdale, of Auburn; Cantley and others who have played on college diamonds and gridirons.

* * *

"Chick" Hannon, for years one of the best-known factors in Southern football and baseball, an all-Southern quarter and shortstop at Alabama, has said his "thirty" to active sports, although he will hereafter be assistant coach in athletics at Alabama, his alma mater.

* * *

Before he got an injured wing, resulting from a broken shoulder blade in a football game, Hannon was headed straight for the majors, if he wanted to ascend; but since that accident he has never had the old-time punch to his fling, and to-day his knowledge of the game is his chief asset. He knows that, and he can teach it.

* * *

He has made a success as coach for the Alabama Presbyterian College here, and has played good ball in the Southeastern and Georgia-Alabama despite his handicap. An operation last year failed to restore his arm to its old-time form, and for two seasons he has known that he was passing.

* * *

He is one of the many veterans who the fans sometimes knock, but love nevertheless, and in his exit there goes a gentleman of the field.

* * *

Killingsworth, the big Anniston pitcher, made a bid for a job with Opelika in the game Monday afternoon, should he ever get "canned" by Anniston. A fracas with the umpire caused the parking of three Pelicans, and Killy had to be borrowed for the emergency.

* * *

In right field he pulled down a stellar fly on the run, and when he came to the bat the last time he put Left-fielder Henry up against the fence to gather in a long swat from his own willow. Altogether, his work came near costing his teammates the game. He plays for the love of the thing, and says he forgot to pull in his punch.

PLAYERS MEET IN CHECKER TOURNEY FINALS TO-DAY

In the play which began here yesterday for the championship of the Southern Checker Association the following qualified for the final round to be played to-day: G. C. Anderson, North Carolina; R. W. Evans, J. S. Hall, J. H. Bishop, C. M. Farrar, Georgia; S. S. Hallman, B. Fishburne, South Carolina, and J. M. Allen, Jr., Knoxville, Tenn., the holder of the championship since 1911.

Allen lost three of his first four games and in order to qualify for the finals had to make perfect scores against his last five opponents.

Fuzzy Woodruff Describes Chicago Boy's First Fight in a Ring

CHARLEY WHITE'S DEBUT HOWLING SUCCESS

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

LET a man attain prominence in any field of endeavor—be it finance, politics, medicine, the law, burglary or the stage—some auld acquaintance is as sure to rise up and chirp "I knew when, etc.," as a bleacherite is to yell "win your old game, boy," when the pitcher comes to bat with the score 11 to 2 against him with two down in the ninth inning.

It ranks with "I told you so" and "let's have another" as one of the most useful phrases of conversation.

All of this is merely a preface to a "I knew him when" yarn about Charley White, the wonderful Chicago lightweight, who is to meet Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory arena August 13.

White is a real championship contender now. In fact, in a lightweight division remarkable for the lack of punching power among the top-notchers, White should be regarded as easily the most dangerous man of his poundage.

But when I first saw Charley box, he was as unknown to fame as was Jim Conley before the Phagan mystery's first chapter was written.

If my memory serves me right, it was on Labor Day of 1908, at the old Hawthorne race track, the last of the Windy City's once glorious domain of the thoroughbreds.

That year boxing, racing and pretty much everything else was under the ban in Chicago, but on Labor Day it was announced that the unions were to hold their celebration at the old track and the lid was to be lifted for the occasion.

The bang-tails were to run in the afternoon; there would be fighting at night; handbook men would be allowed to operate unmolested. Every known gambling device was to be in operation.

* * *

A PICTURESQUE scene greeted the visitors. The union men were in the uniforms they had worn in the Labor Day parade. All of Chicago's noted sportsmen were on hand. Old Ed Corrigan walked about the plant of which he was once master much like a ghost is supposed to walk about the scenes of his triumphs.

The gamblers were busy early and late. Half a dozen bank crap games were running. There were a dozen kinds of swindles going. The old army game was being played in four or five different bird cages.

Before the day had gone far, in walked the Sheriff, and the games mysteriously vanished. But the races were run and the brew flowed freely.

The fights were to be held in the old betting shed, and right after the last race the shed was packed.

The star bout was a ten-round go between Cyclone Johnny Thompson, then a lightweight, and Eddie Tancel, a pretty husky boy of the division.

There were two preliminaries. On account of the presence of the Sheriff, the promoters were rather leery about staging the fights. Minutes passed, and then an hour. The spectators began to squirm. Finally two charitably-inclined gents started some fun by having a fist fight all their own at the ringside.

This quelled, the fighting began. The first bout was a tame wrestling affair. The second was a three-round go between two tough mugs, who wanted to continue the scrapping with bare knuckles after the final gong rang.

* * *

THE last preliminary was between Danny Goodman and an unknown kid introduced as Charley White. Yank Kenny refereed, Goodman then was a veteran, and a mighty hard man to beat. He was a corking good ring general, and knew about all there is to know of boxing.

White was pounds lighter, though Goodman weighed no more than 125 pounds. Goodman was all confidence. White was all earnestness. It was his first ring engagement against so seasoned a warrior. In the first round Goodman danced around him, working in and out, and landing lightly pretty much as he wished. But he was not hurting White, and every now and then the novice flashed a left hand out that carried death and destruction, but Goodman was never there.

The second round was about a repetition of the first. White vainly striving to land a crushing blow. The final round was fast and furious. White was on top of Goodman from the gong. Left and right were whipped out with lightning rapidity. Goodman was boxing his best, but finally a left found its way to his stomach. Goodman doubled up and all but collapsed, and the crowd was on its feet yelling.

The veteran, though, quickly covered and stalled through the remaining minute of the round. Though Goodman had landed twenty blows to White's one, the one that Charley put over evened the fight, and he was entitled to a draw.

That was his baptism of fire, and so impressive was his showing that Nate Lewis, who was at the ringside, promptly took the boy under his tutelage and started him on his climb to the championship.

* * *

I DID NOT see White box again until he met Jake Abel in the Auditorium a few weeks ago. I had always believed Abel about as clever a boy as the South boasts. I had no idea that he would knock White out, but I had no idea that White would stop him. The bout seemed destined to go the ten rounds.

But at the first gong White showed more than I have ever seen in an Atlanta ring. Abel was a toy. When White sent him crumbling to the floor in the second round, there was not a man in the house not glad that the bout ended there. It had been one-sided entirely.

In 1908 I had seen White a novice. Just five years later, if he was not a champion he was at least the most dangerous man in his division.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Unless President Groover rescinds his action, Catcher Pierre, of the Valdosta team, will not play ball any more this season in the Empire. He has been suspended for the balance of the season for an attack on Umpire Gentle in Valdosta. In Brunswick Pierre attacked Umpire McLaughlin and was fined for the job.

* * *

President W. J. Clark, of the Waycross Association, says Waycross is going to finish first and fight it out with Valdosta for the pennant. In view of the recent additions to the Waycross team, this may not prove idle talk.

* * *

Despite the certainty of financial loss in almost all cities of the Empire this season, every member of the league is making plans for baseball next season. The experience of the first season has cost some cities a bunch of money, and it is safe to predict that every team will stay within the salary limit another year.

* * *

If Jackson, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., arrange a post-season series, several Empire League teams will be badly crippled if players of those teams have to report for the series. Thomasville and Valdosta will suffer, as each team has strong men from the Cotton States teams that want to have some more baseball.

* * *

The end of this week should see a decided change in the standing of teams in the league. Thomasville has six hard games, three with Cordele and three with Waycross. Some battles worth seeing will go down in baseball history before the week-end, mark the prediction.

* * *

Pitcher Vanderlip, who played with Waycross for some time this season, is now playing with a semi-professional team in his home city, Brooklyn. Shamus O'Brien, known as "Mickey," is signed with the Baltimore team for the remainder of the season, having been turned loose by Waycross.

* * *

Because of the recent talk of a post-season series between the pennant winners of the Southern and the South Atlantic, the talk of a series between the Empire and Sally pennant winners has died down lately. However, it is probable the games will be played.

* * *

When Nance and Leininger, both third basemen, were released by Valdosta, two clever men were cut loose. Nance succeeded Leininger, only to go for Brewster, of the Cotton States.

* * *

Red Stiles, of the Thomasville team, is probably the champion hard luck pitcher of the league. In one game he gave up but two hits and then lost, the hits getting by his teammates failing to come in bunches.

* * *

Unless the dope slips, one of the new men to appear in the Empire this month will startle the fans by his work. Recently the player in question got six hits of seven times up in an extra inning game, three home runs and three three-base hits being the best he could do. On the bases he is said to resemble Ty Cobb.

* * *

Brunswick is taking to Whitey Morse, according to reports from the seaport city. Morse is hitting over .300, and is popular with players and fans alike. Valdosta lost a valuable man when he was allowed to go.

* * *

The attendance trophy, which was won by Waycross on opening day, is on display in Waycross and is attracting a lot of notice.

The Americus team next season will be changed a great deal, judging by comments of the present team. Like other teams in the league, Americus has changed managers several times this season, and there are fans who dislike each manager to such an extent that the team never suits everybody.

* * *

Jack Hawkins, who played ball around Atlanta for some time, and started the Empire season as a Brunswick player, is now in left field for Valdosta. He came back to the Empire from the Cotton States League, where he batted over .300 and fielded in jam-up style. Brewster, another Cotton States player, is on third for Valdosta, succeeding Nance.

* * *

While fans in Waycross regretted the release of "Goat" Holliday, the sensational first baseman, they are delighted at the way Jones is playing the bag. Jones came from Virginia to play with Brunswick, but was not good enough for the Pilots. He made good in Waycross with a rush and fields as well as Holliday.

* * *

Franks has been signed as an outfielder for Brunswick. He was a member of the Valdosta team and is considered one of the best in the league. He had a row of some kind with Jordan and his release followed.

* * *

Lately there has been a revival of the rumor that Albany will become a member of the Empire circuit. It is said that Albany and Americus like nothing better than a scrap on the ball field, and, if for no other reason, Albany would be glad to get into the Empire.

* * *

Of all the youngsters picked up by Empire League teams this season none has developed as rapidly as Anderson, a Georgia boy, now playing third base for Waycross. He has played at short and in the field, and, with another year's experience, will undoubtedly go up. He is fast on the bases and seldom fails to swipe a base if he gets on.

* * *

Pitcher Day, of the Thomasville team, has been given another name. Handsome has given away to Steady. He has won so many close games that fans take his victories as a matter of fact.

* * *

According to the dope furnished by each member of the Empire six teams are going to finish first when the season ends August 27. If the teams don't quit getting bunched around first place it may be necessary to play off a tie for first place. Maybe such a game would not be interesting?

* * *

Of all the dope floating around in the Empire there is but one settled fact—whichever team wins the second half of the season will have to play some baseball to nose Valdosta out of the rag. It is possible Valdosta will win the second season, too—but hardly probable the way the team is playing just now.

Harry Glenn Saucer Favorite

25-Mile Grind Friday Night

HARRY GLENN is the most popular rider at Jack Prince's Motordrome these days. The wonderful improvement the local lad has made in the last few weeks has earned him the plaudits of every "bug." Last night Harry was at his best, and as a result he was given a big hand every time he showed up.

Harry won another match race, this time leading Billy Shields home in two straight heats of two miles each. And Harry made a wonderful showing in the ten-mile race also. Although he finished third, he would surely have copped first honors had the finish line been 25 yards farther off.

Harry took the pace most of the way. But he rode a heady race and figured to come through in the final sprint. On the last lap he gave his "boat" a shot of "oilzum" and drew up on Renel and Richards fast and sure, but he started his spurt just about one second too late. The finish was Renel, first; Richards, second; Glenn, third. A blanket would have covered the entire trio at the finish, however.

The next race meet will be Friday night, a 25-mile event, with ten starters, being the feature.

Following is the summary of the races held last night.

Motordrome Purse.

Heats, 1 mile; finals, 2 miles.

First Heat—Harry Swartz, first; Billy Shields, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Tex Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Final—Jock McNeil, first; Tex Richards, second. Time—1:25 1-5.

Special Match Race.

Harry Glenn defeated Billy Shields in two straight two-mile heats. Time—1:31 3-5, 1:31.

Atlanta Sweepstakes.

Heats, 1 mile; final, 10 miles.

First Heat—Tex Richards, first; Morty Graves, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Harry Glenn, first; Georges Renel, second. Time—45 seconds.

Final—George Renel, first; Tex Richards, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time—7:22.

SAVANNAH CLUB RECALLS REILLY FROM AMERICUS

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 6.—By exercising optional rights, the Savannah Baseball Association has recalled Infielder Reilly, of the Americus club in the Empire State League, to relieve Zimmerman at second base. Owing to the terrible slump with which Zimmerman has been suffering, both in fielding and in batting, because of ill health, he has been suspended from the Indian crew temporarily. If Reilly, who was with Savannah during the early part of the season, makes good, Zimmerman will not be played again this season.

Reilly reported for duty upon the return of the Lipemen from Albany. He is easily the best player in the Empire League. He has batted at a steady clip of never less than .355 all season; has played at second, short, third base and in the outfield, and has taken care of each of these several jobs with success.

The Largest Diamond

The most valuable gems, among which there are some exceeding 100 carats in weight, are generally owned by royal families or treasured by governments as state jewels. One of the largest diamonds ever found is the Koh-i-noor and is owned by the royal family of England. Originally it is said to have weighed 794 carats, but it was reduced to its present size of 102 3-4 carats by repeated cutting. According to legend, it was found in England long before the Christian era, and, after having been handed down through a long line of Indian Princes, it was seized during the British invasion of the Punjab and was taken to England. Probably the largest diamond found in recent years is the DeBeers diamond, weighing 225 carats.

Realty Convention Comes to Atlanta, Thinks S. B. Turman

First Delegate Returns Home—Widening for Mayson and Turner Ferry Road—Business Good.

S. B. Turman, of the real estate firm of Turman, Black & Calhoun, has returned from the convention of real estate men at Winnipeg and expresses the belief that the election of Charles P. Glover to the vice presidency of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges will mean that Atlanta will land the ninth annual convention of realty men in 1916.

"Harris G. White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, presented Atlanta's invitation," declared Mr. Turman, "and many of the delegates told us that they would gladly support Atlanta. Most of these were Southern and Western delegates, the former pledging their support on account of loyalty to a sister city and the latter desiring to come because most of them had never been to this section before. Winnipeg is also with us.

"I am confident that we will win the convention. I left Winnipeg for Duluth a day before the adjournment of the convention and don't know whether or not Memphis invited the realty men.

"We had a great convention and I was very much pleased over the work of the national association."

Mr. White and Mr. Glover are returning to Atlanta by steamer and are expected to arrive Sunday or Monday.

County Commissioners Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of County Commissioners in the Thrower Building Wednesday proved to be of considerable interest in real estate circles. Four or five delegations of property owners, probably 100 people in all, appeared to present various petitions for improvements.

The board voted to widen the Mayson and Turner Ferry road for a distance of about two miles in the Center Hill section, and to extend Hemphill avenue from the waterworks station to Pace's Ferry road. The former was already on the summer program. A large delegation of Center Hill residents appeared. The latter is considered an important work because of the amount of territory opened up.

Plans for resurfacing several city streets were also presented.

Work has piled up on the board, due to the fact that Chairman Smith has been away on a vacation, and the further fact that accumulated business of the past month was brought before the commissioners.

Peachtree Interest Sold.

Clarence Knowles has bought from Paul Goldsmith an undivided one-third interest in a 100 by 562 foot lot on Peachtree road, 640 feet northeast of Piedmont avenue, for $1,750, or at the rate of $53 a front foot. Mr. Goldsmith sold another third to Bryan M. Grant May 31, 1912, and is keeping the remaining third for himself.

Sees Good Times Ahead.

Gid Hanna, the well-known real estate trader from Oakland City, has returned from a trip to Gwinnett and Rockdale Counties, and declares that crop conditions are the best he has ever seen. "With a fine crop and plenty of Government money to move it," asserted Mr. Hanna, "I can see nothing but great activity this fall in all lines of business. Secretary McAdoo seems to have smoked out the people who are holding money, and I look for normal conditions in local real estate. Everything points that way."

Plans for Two Houses.

A. J. & H. F. West have completed plans for two 2-story frame residences on the west side of Williams street, near West Tenth street, to cost $8,000 each. This neighborhood has been opened up in the last few years and now has a number of attractive homes.

Lakewood for Exposition.

Charles I. Branan and others of the local Park Board have a plan for using Lakewood for future expositions or fairs that it may be deemed advisable to hold. The question came up before the Park Board at its monthly meeting Tuesday at the City Hall, when Lakewood concessions were considered. The members of the board seemed to be of the opinion that no further privileges should be sold until it was decided whether or not the park could be profitably used for exposition purposes.

Since Piedmont Park was divested of its exposition trimmings the city has had no place save Lakewood to hold fairs.

Attractive New Building Type.

A new type of business building has appeared in Atlanta, and it is proving beneficial to tenants who want short term leases on vacant central property. This is a low steel affair of moderate cost that presents the appearance of a permanent structure, yet which can be moved on short notice. Investors are managing to get a rental of $200 a month out of a string of these shops in downtown districts.

Four such buildings have been erected at the northeast corner of Edgewood avenue and Equitable place by Andrew Gust, who purchased them from local representatives of portable steel shops. Mr. Gust has leased two compartments and expects to announce more leases shortly. Each store occupies a frontage of about 20 feet, and is 20 to 25 feet deep.

Accused Assailants Of Farmer Give Up

CORDELE, Aug. 6.—After having eluded officers for more than a week, Harley Blanchard and John Warren, who are alleged to have waylaid Ambrose Powell, a farmer, when, he claims, he was seriously cut by Blanchard, have surrendered to the Sheriff. They were released under bonds of $500, on the charge of assault with intent to murder.

There is now a good chance of Powell's recovery.

NAVAL STORES OPERATORS PLAN TO CURTAIL OUTPUT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 6.—Georgia naval stores operators will join in the general plan for the curtailment of the output to the end that prices may be raised to a living figure. A resolution has been adopted calling upon the producers to stop chipping on August 15, which would shorten the season two months, and the output reduced 25 per cent.

This action is preliminary to a general meeting of all operators to take place in Jacksonville Friday. It is proposed to lessen the output half a million barrels and wipe out the excess of rosins carried over from previous years.

RATE ORDER KILLS OLD 'BASING' PLAN

Ruling on Georgia Cases Necessitates Change in All Southeastern Schedules.

Readjustment of all rates in the territory south of the Potomac River and east of the Mississippi will be necessary to conform to the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling giving lower freights to LaGrange, Vienna and Carrollton, according to Watkins & Latimer, attorneys in the case.

The old basing point system, except as applied to ports and to large cities, is doomed under this decisions, they say, although the Commission passed only on the three cases at hand.

Under the old system certain small towns, usually at the head of relatively unimportant rivers, have been made basing points. Rates to other towns of the same size, equidistant or nearer the Ohio River crossings or the large cities in Southeastern territory, have been given the through rate to these points, plus the local from the favored town.

The Commission holds that there is no real reason for giving such places as Cedartown, Ga., through rates, and denying them to such towns as Vienna, Carrollton and LaGrange.

The immediate result, it is believed, will be wider scattering of the small jobbing houses, and more business for the large jobbing houses in the principal cities. The saving in freights is estimated at $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 yearly.

The Commission had the case under advisement from November 11, 1911, until August 4, 1913.

Two Suspects Held In Train Robbery

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 6.—Two suspects whom police believe had a hand in the robbery of the mail car on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad between Calera and Birmingham last night are being questioned at police headquarters. They answer descriptions given by mail clerks, but both strenuously deny their guilt.

Chief of Police Bodeker, of this city, where the men made their escape from the train, has detailed every available detective on the force to be on the lookout for the robbers, the local men being augmented by several railroad detectives. Chief Bodeker says the robbery undoubtedly was the work of professionals. No estimate of the loss by looting of registered mail pouches is yet available.

Express company detectives are working on the theory that the robbery was committed by men who are acquainted with operations of trains on the L. & N. and also with work in mail cars. Descriptions furnished by men who were in the car at the time of the robbery indicate that the robbers were young white men. Their masks extended from face to waist. However, in the breeze at times the features of the robbers were seen. No doubt is expressed by detectives that the men who did the work are residents of or have headquarters in Birmingham.

After the engine of the train had taken water at a tank this side of Calera the robbers boarded the mail car. Then knowing there was no stop between Calera and Birmingham, 30 miles, they went to work rifling the registered mail. At Fourteenth street, four blocks from the passenger station here, the robbers squeezed the airbrake, brought the train to a stop and jumped off. Engineer Wissenger then found the mail clerks handcuffed and tied up.

Wins Plea Against Being Tried on 13th

Mrs. Nellie Wood, who runs a store in Ormewood Park, will be tried in police court on August 14 for the reason that she objects strenuously to being tried on the 13th.

Mrs. Wood is charged with disorderly conduct, and, when her case was called Tuesday afternoon, a postponement was granted. Recorder Pro Tem Preston set the case for the 13th, but the young woman protested vigorously. She frankly told the Recorder she was "very superstitious." Any other date would suit, she said.

Seven Seek Cordele Postmaster's Place

CORDELE, Aug. 6.—That F. G. Boatright, postmaster at Cordele, who was requested several days ago by Postmaster General Burleson to resign because of alleged negligence, will decline to comply with this request is certain.

Seven applicants for the postmastership are actively at work soliciting indorsements, many letters having been sent to Congressman Charles R. Crisp, of the Third District, who will make the recommendation. The appointment is expected to be made within a short time.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

High Cables and Dry Weather Stimulate Buying and Cause Uneasiness Among Bears.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Influenced by steady cables and an absence of rain in Texas, the cotton market opened firm to-day, with first prices at a net advance of 3 to 7 points from last night's close. In view of yesterday's break the short interest was a little nervous. This, coupled with private advices from Texas stating, notwithstanding last week's rains, more moisture is need over the Southwestern belt, resulting in prices soaring some 2 to 8 points from the initial level. The selling was very light and scattered. Shorts were good buyers. Spot interests also bought.

During the forenoon the market was steady on buying on bullish advice from Theodore Price on high temperatures in Oklahoma. High temperature there is usually the forerunner of rain.

There were some telegrams in circulation from the belt stating that there was some deterioration going on, caused by dry weather and high temperatures. Later when the noon weather report was posted, showing extremely high temperatures in the Western belt in many points stimulated the buying and caused more uneasiness among the bear forces.

The weather map complete indicates increasing cloudiness in the Northwestern quarter of the cotton belt; cooler, possibly some showers in Northwest Texas. Part cloudy over rest of the belt, except cloudy with probably some showers in the Gulf coast districts. Gulf disturbance is unchanged in position, but is likely to move West in a few days and give prospects for precipitation in Southern Texas.

While sentiment is generally bearish there is a feeling that higher prices may be expected, just now in the face of the above conditions. Whether the advance will be sustained or not depends on weather conditions over the next few days. The bulls contend that another week of dry weather in the West will cause serious damage and a stampede will follow.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 11 to 15 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.60; October, 11.08; January, 10.94; March, 11.03.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.43; October, 11.13; December, 11.09; January, 11.09; March, 11.20.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 6.—This market was due 2 points higher on August and 2 to 2½ points lower on later positions, but opened steady, at a net decline of 1½ to 2 points. At 12:15 p. m. the market was steady, net unchanged to ½ point higher.

Spot cotton quiet, at 3 points decline; middling, 6.43d; sales, 6,000 bales, including 5,100 American bales; imports, 12,000, of which all were American bales.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 2½ to 4 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

Futures opened barely steady.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Liverpool came in about 2 points better than due on futures to-day, but quotes spots 3 points lower and sales 6,000 bales.

The weather map shows cloudy in Oklahoma and East Tennessee, part cloudy in the Atlantics, fair in rest of the belt. Indications are for increasing cloudiness; cooler weather with possibly some showers in the Northwestern quarter, part cloudy in rest of the belt, except over the Gulf districts.

The market advanced nearly 10 points in the early trading, the buying being based on high temperatures in Oklahoma, which State shows an average of 104 degrees, and absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma. Trading, however, is small and support timid, in the fear of hedge selling, while crop prospects in Oklahoma are declining, the greater part of Texas needs relief from the drouth last week, and the danger of damage there is not yet being considered seriously. Weather and crop conditions in the Central and Eastern States are generally accepted as good.

Reports from New York and advices from there to buy would indicate the work for a reaction, which was spoiled by the good rains in central Texas during the last three days of the past week, and been resumed on the same basis of threatened drouth in the Western States.

The market held the early gain well and is steady around 11.18 for October.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: Sentiment is bearish.

Norman, Mack & Co.: We still continue to believe that it is poor business policy to follow the decline.

COTTON GOSSIP

There were rumors that freight room had been engaged for August shipment from New York stock. Liverpool is understood to be long of August and to own a good bit of the local stock according to Pearsall's.

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce says: "Cotton goods retailers are optimistic concerning fall trade, and many of them are now operating in the local market. Jobbers are asking for shipment at once of all goods due September 1, with requests that new business be booked for September delivery of a volume sufficient to take care of the goods anticipated for immediate shipment."

* * *

Riordan has been an enormous seller of new crops during the last few days. It was believed that he sold for customers of Pell. Last week Riordan's buying was a feature.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy over Oklahoma and east Tennessee; part cloudy to fair over the Atlantics. Fair over rest of the belt. No rain in the West; some nice rains in North Carolina and a few light showers in Georgia. Gulf disturbance formation still there; should move westward in a few days and give prospects of precipitation over south Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool's opening after the holidays was significantly low. Bulls had hoped that foreign spinners would show some concern over the Bureau condition figures promulgated Friday last when the Liverpool market began business yesterday. But they did nothing of the kind; on the contrary, absence of demand for forward cotton proved an active bearish factor. Students of the staple say there can be no question as to the existence of a large forward requirement. Why, then, is demand lacking now, when, under normal conditions, as in ordinary years, consumers cover their fall, winter and spring requirements exporters busily engage in catering into forward commitments, the future markets supply the hedges and the steamships sell ocean freight room?

"To the man who searches for the cause behind every effect the answer comes easy. It is Washington's threat of prohibitive legislation. The effect of this threat is twofold, and its ramifications are both subtle and obvious. Meanwhile, the American rings are short, the volume of business light and the trade in suspense."

* * *

There were no rains shown in the weather map, which brought out a fair amount of buying early. The selling was very much scattered. Weld was principal buyer. There were some unfavorable private reports being received this morning.

Liverpool cables: "Market good on reports of drouth damage in Texas, Oklahoma. Manchester reports poor."

* * *

Map indicates cooler with some precipitation coming in from the Central grain States.

* * *

Austin, Texas, wires: "Farmers in town yesterday complaining of plant shedding and recent rains insufficient."

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF STOCKS

Powerful Interests Are Friendly to Constructive Side of Prices. Undertone Firm.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Trading was active at the opening of the stock market to-day, but the list was irregular and quotations showed a considerable division of sentiment. California Petroleum was again under pressure, declining ⅝ to 18½, while Canadian Pacific sustained the same amount of loss. Lehigh Valley sold off ¾, but rallied and recovered most of its decline.

United States Steel common began at 61⅛ for the loss of ⅛, but within half an hour was selling around 61⅝.

Illinois Central and Union Pacific showed firmness, each advancing ⅜. Later both shaded. Great Northern preferred advanced ⅛. American Smelting, after selling unchanged, shaded ¼. Among the other losses were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; New Haven, ¾; Anaconda Copper, ¼; and Chio Copper, ¼.

Western Union Telegraph spurted, gaining a point. Southern Pacific, Reading and Northern Pacific advanced.

The curb was steady. Americans in London were firm on cablegrams placing a better construction on the United States monetary situation.

"Looks as if the advance in stocks would continue with the usual reactions that we generally have in a bull market. Believe that stocks should be bought on fair reactions, as the character of the buying this week is exceptionally good, and would indicate that powerful interests are friendly to the constructive side of prices.

"Sentiment seems to be more optimistic, public participation is increasing and general conditions favor a higher level of prices.—Potter.

In the last half of the first hour the scarcity of many issues became so pronounced as to cause a sudden stampede of shorts. Union Pacific led a brisk upward movement, advancing nearly 2 points to 152¼, while substantial fractional gains were noted in Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Reading, Great Northern preferred and Steel common.

In the late forenoon the covering movement was completed and fractional recessions were recorded throughout the list. The tone at the end of the second hour was steady.

Time money is loaning and renewing at 3¼ per cent.

Trading in Texas Company was the feature of the day. In the last hour this issue sold around 114½ for a net gain of 4½ on the day. There were reports in Wall street that some person with inside information was buying on the strength of the forthcoming financial report of the company. Steel sold around 61⅝, for a fractional gain and other slight advances were made by Union Pacific and Erie. Reading sold off. The tone was quiet but steady.

The market closed heavy. Governments unchanged; other bonds firm.

Grain Notes

Dry and hot weather.

* * *

The Missouri State report on corn was not as bad as expected.

* * *

Trading in all grains was of enormous volume yesterday. Everybody wanted to sell on reported cooler weather over the larger portion of the grain region. The selling seemed to be profit taking by holders, who were tired of waiting for the anticipated lower temperatures and rains. Offerings were readily absorbed by strong sources. Along toward the close corn led in excitement and strength, but failed to retrieve the early decline.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Wheat has had a break of 3¼c from Monday's high price and the trade seems more bearish because of the big receipts, anticipation of good showing by the Government report Friday, and a lessening of the export demand and the decline in cash premiums. It would not be surprising to see prices drag some lower. What the corn market will do to-day depends on how much rain is shown on the map. With good soaking rains over the belt a sharp break is anticipated, but with only light showers and high temperatures, traders look for prices to hold around present levels and possibly go a little higher."

* * *

Nicolet, of The Kansas City Star, says that Kansas will have one of the smallest corn crops this year ever produced.

* * *

It is intimated that stop-loss orders are heavy in all speculative corn markets, and that a decline of 1½c or so would uncover many. Chicago people report country houses buying, with orders accompanied by sensational crop news.

* * *

John Inglis wired Logan & Bryan: "Southeastern Nebraska, with exception of some of the bottoms, all corn suffering and losing ground. Considerable acreage just tasseling, for which some hopes are entertained, is fast losing, as tasseling period is just when rain is most needed."

* * *

Yields of 739,730,000 bushels of wheat, 2,800,000,000 bushels of corn, 1,003,266,000 bushels of oats and 14,702,000 bales of cotton were estimated for this season in the annual crop report of the Continental and Commercial National Bank made public to-day. Other yields were estimated. Rye 36,854,000 bushels, barley 200,527,000 bushels and hay 66,610,000 tons. The increase in the wheat yield was estimated at 9,000,000 bushels over last year's crop. This is 170,000,000 bushels more than the United States can use in one year.

* * *

Grain region forecast: Illinois cloudy, with showers in north and central portions to-night or Thursday; cooler. Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, showers to-night or Thursday and cooler; Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan, generally fair; Iowa probably light showers to-night or Thursday; Dakotas, cloudy to-night and Thursday; warmer.

* * *

Corn was sold on reports of rains west of the river.

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier Co. says: "Wheat—The weather in the Northwest is clear with seasonable temperatures. Local sentiment is very bearish and the volume of new buying limited. Prices look as though they would drag lower, but the market has had a sharp break since Monday, and we do not care to press short sales on this decline.

"Corn—The weather map shows very light scattered showers at a few points in Nebraska and Iowa through central Illinois. There was a good deal of short corn put out yesterday by locals in anticipation of rains, which is likely to be covered to-day.

"Oats—The volume of trade is lighter, and there has been a good deal of evening-up during the past few days. Offerings of the crop are moderate, but the demand is rather light. Prices will be influenced by wheat and corn.

"Provisions—Liquidation in provisions seems to have been quite thorough again and there was a good class of buying on yesterday's rally."

* * *

From the action of both wheat and corn this morning it looks as though liquidation had been pretty thorough yesterday, and the general belief is that the market will rule higher.

* * *

Price Current estimates corn crop at 2,652,000 bushels, and oats crop at 878,000,000 bushels.

* * *

Temperatures and rainfall: Canadian Northwest clear, 46 to 68; Northwest, 56 to 68; partly cloudy; West cloudy, 64 to 72; Valentine rained, .20; North Platte, .02; Soo City raining, trace; Davenport, .05; Chicago, .01; Peoria, .02; Springfield, Ill., .08; Southwest cloudy, 68 to 82; Ohio Valley part cloudy, 68 to 74; Indianapolis, .14; Cincinnati raining, trace; Evansville, Ind., .01.

STOCK GOSSIP

The stock market exhibited considerable strength yesterday. Public participation is increasing and stocks have every appearance of selling higher.

* * *

"I am bullish on the general situation and firmly believe all securities of merit will apreciate in value before the first of September, on the other hand, I would keep long of the leaders like Union Pacific, United States Steel and A. C. P."—G. D. Potter.

* * *

"The market looks very safe on the long side. I think the trend will continue upward and would advise selections for purchase of stocks, which have not yet responded to general advance."—Clark.

* * *

There will be no cash distribution to be made by Union Pacific in connection with the offering of Southern Pacific certificates. However, Union Pacific may declare an extra dividend.

* * *

House committee Democrats by vote of 11 to 3 indorsed the Administration currency bill with amendment authorizing national banks to organize saving and trust departments and making Federal reserve board by-partisan.

* * *

Treasury officials say the net balance available for deposit in national banks at the close of business Tuesday was $280,892,165.

* * *

Brooklyn Rapid Transit in year ended June 30 earned 9.16 per cent surplus for $49,078,000 stock, against 8.25 per cent the previous year on $475,000,000 stock.

* * *

American stocks in London steady, ⅛ point lower to ⅜ higher.

WHEAT HIGHER ON STRENGTH IN CORN

Shorts Struggle for All Options on Report of a Strong South Wind Cooking Vegetation.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....85¾@88
Corn—No. 2 ....72½@73
Oats—No. 2 ....41 @41¾

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—There was a complete reversal of conditions surrounding the corn market to-day, as the early weakness was changed to a wild and advancing market toward the end of the session. While the highest prices reached were not fully sustained, the undercurrent was one of great strength.

Wheat closed at advances of 1-4@5-8 and oats were up 1-8@3-8. Cash sales reported for the day were 10,000 bushels of wheat, 222,000 bushels of corn, and 255,000 bushels of oats.

Provisions were sharply higher all around.

Butts Adds 5,000 Acres for Taxation

JACKSON, Aug. 6.—The tax returns of Butts County for 1913 amount to $2,243,000, as against $2,191,000 in 1912, a gain of $52,000. But for an error of $22,000 in last year's digest the increase would have been $75,000.

The number of acres of land returned for taxation jumped from 108,000 last year to 113,000 this year, a gain of 5,000. There are still several thousand acres of land in the county not been returned for taxation.

Britain's Sordid Attitude to the Panama Exposition.

Great Britain's refusal to take part in the Panama Canal Exposition of 1915 may be accepted in sorrow rather than in anger—sorrow that the government of so great an empire should have sunk into such a narrow rut of parochial politics that for the sake of a ha'porth of self-advantage it would sacrifice its share in the nobler spirit of rejoicing in a world's great work well done.

Here, then, is the childish retort to the refusal of our Government to submit to arbitration the dispute about the canal tolls—"We won't play in your yard."

Of the dispute itself this newspaper has already on many occasions expressed its emphatic views. Based on a shadowy protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, in which there was never any practical reality, Great Britain undertakes, under the letter of certain treaties made at a time when the idea of a canal at Panama was not dreamed of, to tell the United States that it can not send its own coast-wise traffic at a lower rate than foreign ocean traffic through a canal every dollar of whose vast cost it has itself paid for and which runs through territory entirely under the American flag!

In practical operation the amount involved on the ocean-going traffic of foreign ships would admittedly be so small that the raising of a dispute about it at all by any foreign government becomes a shining example of "hot potato" stand diplomacy.

From a government that acquired the Suez Canal through the devious, if forceful, methods Great Britain employed—always, of course, strictly observing every honorable obligation to its neighbors from the purely and curious British viewpoint—the Panama protest was simply an astonishing exhibition of sordid and envious greed.

It would be difficult to believe that such a decision as this by Great Britain represented anything more than the clamor of its Tory press—the kind of press that a day or two ago exploited an article calling for the abolition in tennis of the overhand service which enabled McLoughlin to win back the Davis cup—if it were not for the fact that the government is so largely radical in its tone. It is difficult, even with that in mind, to believe that this decision about the San Francisco fair can possibly represent general British sentiment toward America.

Americans, generally speaking, are so broad-minded that they do not want fully to realize that it may be only "hands across the sea" when there is something substantial in Uncle Sam's. They know full well that the friendship that has to be bought is not worth paying for. John Bull is surely not so poverty-stricken that he must haggle over a penny with a friend. This show of petty temper is, alas, a deplorable betrayal of a mean spirit.

And to base his position on a high-sounding principle is for John Bull to pose on a pedestal of lofty self-righteousness which history never erected for him, and which would topple if tapped with even a toy hammer of truth.

But, if great nations can sometimes be small, smaller nations can frequently be big. Twenty-two, including even Japan, have agreed to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and its success and interest can not now be materially impaired. The canal itself, the greatest wonder of the world wrought by man, will be open, and ships of all nations, even those of Great Britain, will be passing through it on their voyages over the new trade routes of the oceans, opening up new countries and new enterprises and new profits for all the peoples of the earth to share—among them Great Britain, and not the least.

California and Our Merchant Marine.

California is advancing a wholesome movement to inaugurate a merchant marine with State money, if a laggard Government continues to neglect this truly American policy.

There is a bill in the California Legislature to appoint a board of five merchant marine commissioners—one from the resident shipbuilders, one from the resident shipowners, one from the shippers of domestic goods, one from the consignees of foreign goods and one from the Sailers' Union of the Pacific. This board shall have authority from the State to pay 5 per cent per annum upon one-half the building cost of ships engaged in foreign and domestic commerce from California ports and to help on the payment of the difference between building and operating such American-built ships with American workmen and American officers and the cost of building and operating with foreign workmen and officers. The State's subsidy is to cease if ever the National Government shall aid these ships with a subsidy.

It is plain to see that California, progressive and enterprising among American States, realizes the necessity of a domestic merchant marine, and that California is willing to put her hands in her pockets and help to build such a merchant marine with heroic liberality. It is also substantially evident that California believes a merchant marine will richly repay the original cost.

The California bill will help to point the necessity in our commerce, and will, it is hoped, inspire the Government to its duty.

Somebody has to make a start in our merchant marine. Congress and the Administration seem laggard and indifferent or incapable.

If our maritime States are brave enough and public-spirited enough to make this beginning, the appealing figures are at hand to inspire them, and the example of California may be the object lesson needed to set on foot the greatest and most essential commercial policy of our country.

Mysteries of Science and Nature.

With the Aid of Photography and Ultra-Violet Microscope Man's Power of Vision Is Beginning to Rival That of Insects.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

MAN is beginning to add to his senses. If he has not discovered new ones, he has extended the range of some of those which he already possesses. When this process has been continued for a few hundred, or a few thousand, years, the human race may find that it has got upon a new level, from which it can penetrate much farther and much deeper in the wonders of the universe.

Beginning to See.

Among other things, man is beginning, under the guidance of science, to see, in a roundabout way, with the eyes of insects.

To understand this, let us first consider how we see with our natural power of vision.

Our range of sight is strictly confined within the limits of waves of light, varying in length from about 1-39,000th to about 1-57,000th of an inch. The longest of these waves produces in our brains the impression of red, and the shortest the impression of violet. The other principal colors (orange, yellow, blue and indigo) are produced by intermediate wave-lengths, each color having its own characteristic waves.

If an object reflects light of only one of these colors it assumes the hue of that color; if it reflects them all equally, it appears white, because a combination of the primary colors produces the impression of white.

But there are, in reality, enormous numbers of light waves which are longer than the longest that affect our sense of vision, and also enormous numbers that are shorter than the shortest that we can see. In either case these waves, which lie beyond one end or the other of what is called the "visible spectrum" of light, are, except for scientific devices, totally insensible to us.

Now, it has been found that certain insects, particularly ants, can perceive light waves that are shorter than 1-57,000th of an inch, which is the lower limit for human eyes.

In other words, the ant can "see" a color that lies outside the violet. If the ant has a name for this "ultra-violet" color, we are not likely to find it out.

More than that, the ant (if it possesses microscopic powers) may be able to see objects that are so minute that a "forty-billion-power" microscope would be unable to reveal them to us, because they are smaller than the smallest light wave that lies within our range. An object as small as that would be unable to reflect perfectly a wave of violet light, and consequently no amount of direct magnification would be able to bring it clearly within the limits of sight for us.

What Ant Perceives.

But right here the magic power of photography comes to our aid and enables us to penetrate into this world of the infinitely minute, which the insects may be supposed to have regarded as their exclusive and inviolable domain!

Photography is able to do this because the sensitive plate or film is affected by those same ultra-violet waves that the ant perceives.

Suppose, then, that an object is so small that it can not reflect the violet waves, but can reflect the smaller ultra-violet ones. It is only necessary to make a photograph of it, whereupon the ultra-violet waves that it reflects will produce a chemical change in the sensitive surface of the photographic plate or film and impress an image there, which image may be magnified at will. This is the principle of the "ultra-violet microscope."

There is another way in which man has recently extended his range of vision indirectly, deep into the secrets of the infinitely minute. It has been done by the aid of what is called the "ultra-microscope." This depends for its action upon the fact that a minute object produces a scattering of the rays of light that fall upon it. It surrounds itself with a kind of aureole, as may be noticed when a beam of sunlight enters a dusty room, causing millions of previously invisible floating particles to glow like infinitesimal stars.

Light Reveals Objects.

Suppose that an object of this kind, too small to be seen by direct microscope examination, yet large enough to reflect the light waves that lie within our range, is placed under powerful lenses, in a beam of light so arranged that it does not pour directly into the eye of the observer. It will scatter about itself enough light not only to betray its presence but even in some cases to reveal its shape.

But doubtless we have only just begun to find out the power of the mind by its inventions to extend the range of our senses.

: The Cowboy's Creed :

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the evening paper," said my Arizona friend,
"How a feller was shook by his Missus, and brung her life to an end.
Thar'll be lots to pity the feller, and say that it sarved her right,
And I ain't a-setting in judgment, nor takin' up no one's fight.
But I never could shoot a rabbit, out whar rabbits is thick,
And I figger that shootin' a lady is a similar kind o' trick.
Rabbits and ladies and babies—they can't shoot back, you see,
And the guy was a cur that murdered her!" said Phoenix Phil to me.

"You remember the gal out in Phoenix," said my Arizona friend.
"You remember the home she made me, and the dream that had to end.
I never was able to figger, when I seen I was in the lurch,
How she left my kind of a feller for the rat she met at a church,
But I wasn't no ideal husband; I was always fast and wild,
And she wanted a feller with manners and his shirt all proper biled.
I heard that he made her happy, so I figgered I'd let her be,
Which is harder sometimes than murder," said Phoenix Phil to me.

Taking Inventory

Mothers Should Not Close Their Eyes to the Defects of Their Offspring, but Should Correct Them So ,That in Later Life the Children Will Not Turn Out Badly.

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY now and then every business man goes carefully over his possessions, listing, appraising, advancing and depreciating their worth and valuing them by the market standards of the day. He calls this taking stock. When he is through and has balanced his ledgers, he knows precisely where he stands—what he has to hope and what to fear, where he may fight and where he must hedge.

I have often thought that there would be less failure in the world and fewer of us would come to spiritual bankruptcy if we would follow the same plan and occasionally sit down and take stock of ourselves mentally, morally and physically. It is human and comfortable to think we possess all graces and virtues and charms, but it isn't true any more than it would be for the cross-roads country store merchant to imagine himself a Wanamaker.

Why shouldn't an ugly woman, for instance, face the music and calmly take an inventory of the beauty that she lacks?

Nobody will deny that the woman who is born beautiful draws the prize package in the lottery of life, but she doesn't get everything. There is tact and charm of manner and grace, and the woman who has these has a magic veil that hides a homely face and makes it seem beautiful to those who come in contact with her. Moreover, while beauty must come by nature, these qualities may be cultivated.

It Lies With Every Woman To Be Considerate of Others.

It lies with every woman to learn a delicate consideration for the feelings of others, to acquire the art of listening with interest and to so improve her mind she will always be the most delightful and intelligent of companions. And when she can do these things she needn't worry much about the size of her nose or whether her mouth is cut bias or straight.

It seems a pity, too, doesn't it, that people don't oftener take stock of their children and see just what they are and what might be made out of them? Of course, it's delightful to think that all of our little Sallies and Johnnies and Tommies are geniuses, but our pleasure in the illusion is apt to be a little marred by the subsequent disappointment that we might so easily have saved ourselves if only we had looked at them as they were, instead of as we wished them to be.

We should think a merchant crazy if he had a store full of calico, and homespun, and pots, and kettles, and pans, and in taking stock he listed them as point lace and diamonds and pictures. Yet that is just exactly what we are doing with our children. We are calling commonplace and ordinary qualities by fine names. We won't see them as they are and make the best of them on that basis. We are so determined on raising up geniuses, instead of good business men and citizens, that now and then we convert them into hoodlums and idiots.

Why shouldn't a mother look her own children over just as she does her neighbors' and size up their strength and weakness? She should, at least, then be able to work out the problem of raising them with some sort of knowledge as a foundation and guide, instead of going at it purely as guesswork. She won't do it, however. It takes a courage to look things in the face that she doesn't possess. She won't admit that this child is feeble-minded or that one is dull, and so she deprives them of the marvelous help that modern education can give along these lines.

She shuts her eyes to the fact that Johnny is bowlegged and Tommy is knock-kneed, and she dooms them to go through life a butt for the ridicule of their acquaintances, when the defect could be so easily remedied while they are children. She takes no pains to help the ugly girl correct her awkwardness and learn the things that would make up for her lack of beauty. Even her efforts to help her children are half the time atrocious mistakes, because she has never taken stock and doesn't know what she has on hand to work with.

Life Has Given Very Few All That They Desired.

Every now and then some unhappy and tearful wife comes to me with the tale of her troubles. She is dissatisfied, discontented, disgruntled. Sometimes she is not appreciated, sometimes her heart is hurt by cold treatment, sometimes she feels that she made a mistake in marrying and yearns for a career out in the world. I don't know any remedy as good for such a state of affairs as for the woman to sit calmly down and take stock of her possesions.

Perhaps life hasn't given her all she wanted. Most of the rest of us are in the same fix. Very likely she hasn't gotten all the happiness she expected out of her marriage. Not many dreams come true. What she needs to do is to count up the things she has got and see how she can do a better business and get more happiness and good out of the things she has.

She has a good home, plenty to eat and wear, a respectable position in society, perhaps little children, certainly liberty to enjoy herself in many ways, and a settled freedom from the cares and anxieties that beset many other women. No woman who has got that many goods on her shelves has any right to declare herself a bankrupt in happiness.

If we took stock of ourselves oftener, wouldn't we blame ourselves more for many of the failures of life and other people less? Our husbands no longer show us the attentions that they did when they were our sweethearts and we cry out that marriage is a failure. Do we take as much pains to please the husband as we did the lover?

Mothers Are to Blame if Children Turn Out Badly.

Our children are rude and ill-mannered, and when they grow up they turn out badly. Whose fault but the mothers who raised them? We have no friends. Do we ever go out of our way to make friends or to show love and kindness to any human being? We, who are working women, complain we are ill paid. Are we doing good work that is worth good money? Let's take stock of what we are giving others before we condemn them too severely.

When merchants overhaul their goods there are certain things that they cast aside as worthless. These are old stock. Things outgrown, out of date. Wouldn't it be a good idea to imitate them in that, too? Let's throw away our old prejudices, our antiquated ideas, our moth-eaten fads. They are old stock. We are better off without them.

DAMAGING TESTIMONY OF CONLEY MAY STAY IN, JUDGE'S DECISION

The court refused to entertain the motion.

Judge Roan, following the arguments of counsel on both sides in regard to eliminating part of Conley's testimony, said:

"I have my serious doubts about the admissibility of this evidence but it is already admitted and so you may expunge it from the records, but you can't erase it from the minds of the jury. I rule that it is admissible.

"What that little Phagan girl said to Epps is not admissible."

Judge Roan ruled further that Dalton's testimony regarding the events prior to the day of the murder would be admissible.

"That suits us," remarked Dorsey aside. "This man Dalton doesn't know anything about the happenings of April 26."

When Jim Conley left the witness stand Wednesday, the State's case against Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, practically was completed.

Solicitor Dorsey announced when court reconvened in the afternoon that he proposed to call only one or two new witnesses. It was predicted that even these would be prevented from testifying as the result of Judge Roan's expected ruling on the line of testimony that they were expected to give.

Witness Dalton Is Excused.

With the testimony of Dalton ruled out, as well as that of young George Epps, whom Dorsey proposed to recall and question concerning remarks of Mary Phagan in respect to Frank's conduct, the probability was strong at the opening of the afternoon session that Dr. H. F. Harris and possibly one other witness would be the only ones called by the State before closing the presentation of direct evidence.

Dr. Harris collapsed when on the stand last Friday before the Solicitor had completed his questioning and before Reuben Arnold had been given the opportunity for cross-examination. The Solicitor planned to quiz Dr. Harris more closely concerning the condition of the young girl's body and organs and also to bring out more in detail the physician's conclusion that the girl must have been killed within half an hour after she left home because of the undigested condition of the cabbage he found in her stomach.

Hot Argument Over Excluding Testimony.

The fight to exclude Conley's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged conduct proved one of the exciting incidents of the morning session. The argument was still in progress when court adjourned for the noon recess. That and Conley's sensational declaration that Frank had hid the murder victim's silver-plated mesh bag, for which the detectives have been searching for months, in the safe in the factory office immediately after the crime were the features of the day.

Reuben Arnold argued that it was inadmissible because irrelevant and immaterial, and that it was a violation of the general principle in law that because A committed X last year, it can not be introduced to show that he committed X of which he is now accused.

Early Ruling Is Promised.

Combating the contention of Attorney Hooper that the objection of the defense had not been made until the lawyers for Frank had cross-examined the negro and found that they could get no reversal of statements from him, Arnold cited cases in a large number of States indicating that it is a well defined privilege that testimony may be stricken out at the instance of the defense even after the cross-examination has taken place. Judge Roan said that he would make his ruling early in the afternoon session. Colonel Arnold grew faint during the argument and got the judge's consent to talk sitting.

Attorney Rosser's manner was angry and threatening when he arose for the re-cross examination. He began at once a vicious attack on Conley's story of the mesh bag. He asked when Conley first told this remarkable tale. Conley said he couldn't remember.

"Why didn't you tell all this when you were telling 'the whole

Word by T. R. Worth Army Under Wilson, Says Gov. Johnson

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Criticism of the course of the Wilson Administration was contained in an address by Governor Hiram Johnson, who was the Vice Presidential candidate on the Progressive ticket last year, speaking at the first anniversary celebration of the Progressives.

"The National Administration has not come up to expectations," said Governor Johnson. "We have a foreign policy that is weak and vacillating. One word from Theodore Roosevelt is worth a whole army under Woodrow Wilson.

"We were shocked by the whitewashing of Ballinger by Taft. That differed in no essential from the whitewashing of McReynolds by Wilson."

This Is Comforting! Freezing at Big Bear, Snow in Yellowstone

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., Aug. 6.—Very chilly weather is reported at Big Bear, in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Early yesterday morning there was a thin sheeting of ice around the edges of the lake. At Pine Knot Hotel the thermometer registered 33 degrees.

The minimum in the city of San Bernardino yesterday was 48 degrees, the lowest July record in many years.

HELENA, MONT., Aug. 6.—There was a heavy snowfall in the Yellowstone Park last night and the mountains in the vicinity of Livingston were white with new snow this morning.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 6.—Chancellor T. M. McConnell has instructed the jury in the Great Southern Agency case, in which stockholders are attempting to recover $500,000 which they allege was obtained by fraud, to name C. J. Hebert, H. C. Papineau, A. W. Wills, C. W. Stevenson, W. D. Haggard, John Early, E. C. Morrow, Nathan Hale and Sterling Fort, directors of the defunt company, as defendants.

The jury agreed that fraud had been practiced, but they could not agree upon those to be held responsible. More than 1,000 stockholders in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee are parties to the suit.

Pump Going Again; Stands 2-Day Test

After a test of over two days, the big 18,000,000-gallon pump at the river station of the Atlanta waterworks is again running full time.

Wednesday members of the Board of Water Commissioners and officials of the waterworks department visited the station and were more than pleased with the condition of the big pump.

Mystery in Death of Rich Man in Memphis

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 6.—The body of J. M. Hughes, wealthy lumberman of Senatobia, Miss., was found in the basement of a furniture store to-day. Hughes came to Memphis yesterday and was at the store in the afternoon.

The police are not sure whether he was murdered or fell through an elevator shaft.

Girl Leads Strike Of 10,000 Knitters

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Three thousand more knitting mill operatives joined the strike here to-day, bringing the total number of strikers, mostly women, up to 10,000.

The strike is being led by Miss Jennie Persley, 20 years old.

RAZING COLUMBUS LANDMARK.

COLUMBUS.—D. G. Bloom, a well-known young Columbus business man, has been indicted on charges of assault with intent to murder and carrying concealed weapons and for shooting at Ed Hartman, another young business man, recently.

FILIBUSTER BEATS DRY FORCES

Resolution to Report the Hixon-Searcy Liquor Bill Defeated. Tax Plot Charged.

The filibuster in the House against the resolution of Kidd, of Baker, which instructed the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill for action, and by which Wohlwender, of Muscogee, consumed the entire time of the House Tuesday, came to an end Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with victory resting with the forces against the bill.

In response to a point of order raised by Stewart, of Coffee, Speaker Burwell ruled that Kidd's resolution was not in order for consideration Wednesday, and the efforts of the temperance forces to force a hearing on the bill were therefore in vain.

The point raised by Mr. Stewart was that, inasmuch as the resolution was introduced Tuesday and specifically called upon the Temperance Committee to report the bill back "to-morrow," it was asking the committee to perform a physical impossibility, and was therefore not in order.

Wright Objects to Decision.

Wright, of Floyd, who is generally credited with being behind Mr. Kidd in the introduction of the resolution, protested vigorously against the decision of the Speaker.

"Doesn't the Speaker intend to hear those who favor this resolution?" he demanded.

"You are out of order," the Speaker replied. "The resolution has been ruled out of order, and is not now under discussion."

Representative Wohlwender, backed by Myrick and Shuptrine, of Chatham; Nunnally, of Floyd, and others of the anti-dry forces, appeared when the House convened to-day determined to continue the filibuster until Mr. Kidd consented to withdraw his resolution. This Mr. Kidd and the temperance cohorts absolutely refused to do.

Stewart Then Finds Loophole.

Conferences between the prohis and the antis were numerous, but barren of result, and it looked as though the filibuster would continue, with the anti-dry people holding the whip hand indefinitely, when Mr. Stewart found the loophole through which the resolution was riddled.

The effect of the resolution and the filibuster has been to draw the line sharply between the anti-dry and the temperance forces, and to smother the more important question of tax revision. The victory of the antis precludes the possibility of the Searcy bill getting a hearing at this session, inasmuch as the Rules Committee takes charge and no resolutions similar to the Kidd resolution can be introduced.

Claims Anti-Tax Plot.

Mr. Wohlwender, whose strong lungs and determination defeated the resolution, voiced the opinion Wednesday morning that the resolution was an outgrowth of the tax revision fight.

"Sheppard, of Sumter; Stovall, of Elbert, and the others who are fighting tax revision were behind the resolution," declared Mr. Wohlwender. "They hoped to get that bill brought out because they knew if the House once got busy on it no tax measures could be passed at this session."

'Wilson White' for Male Dress Rules

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—White is the proper color for men who want to be up-to-the-minute in their dress at the National Capital.

The tropical raiment was adopted by the President one day when the mercury was trying to hit the sky. The next day Secretary Bryan made his debut, and within 48 hours "Wilson white" was the fad. The material may be anything from silk to duck.

LATEST NEWS

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 6.—Semi-official information to-day was to the effect that the Boston, Chicago and Cleveland American teams are trying to arrange a three-cornered trade by which Lajoie, of Cleveland, will appear in the uniform of another team. Both Chicago and Boston are in need of a second baseman, while Cleveland needs pitchers and an outfielder.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—The Riverside Compress, with 423 bales of cotton, was destroyed by fire here to-day. The total loss is estimated at $100,000. On the building and machinery $70,000 insurance was carried. President L. G. Doughty says that the compress will be rebuilt.

Postmaster Named By Hayes Resigns

JACKSON, Aug. 6.—After serving as postmaster at Jackson for more than twenty years and with one intermission of four years, having served continuously since the Hayes administration, Mrs. A. B. Harp has sent her resignation to Washington.

Continued ill health is given as the reason. For many months Mrs. Harp has been in feeble health and has been able to be at the office but little. Her present term would have expired in 1915.

Judge's Compliment Pacifies Women Who Battled With Fists

When Mrs. J. T. King, No. 144 Piedmont avenue, and Mrs. M. Greenberg, No. 6 Warren place, were arraigned in Police Court, Wednesday as the result of a fight in the former's home, Recorder Pro Tem Preston sought to pacify them, remarking that "good-looking women like you two ought not to be fighting this way."

The compliment went home, both women smiling their thanks.

Mrs. King said it was all the fault of Mrs. Greenberg. Mrs. Greenberg declared Mrs. King was to blame. They fell out over some sewing and used their fists. Mrs. King pushed Mrs. Greenberg out of the house and shut the door. Mrs. Greenberg is said to have kicked the glass out of a window.

Other witnesses said Mrs. Greenberg was the aggressor. Judge Preston fined her $5.75, dismissing the case of Mrs. King.

Bulgaria's Enemies Relent; Intercede For Conquered Ally

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 6.—Sympathy may yet prevent Bulgaria from losing all the spoils she won in the Turko-Balkan war. Premier Pasitch, of Servia, and Premier Venizelos, of Greece, to-day wired their respective sovereigns for permission to extend the Bulgarian frontier so as to include a big area of the territory in Northeastern Macedonia which was taken away from Turkey.

It had been the original intention of the Servians and Greeks to punish Bulgaria for the atrocities of her soldiers by refusing to allow the Bulgars to profit by the war.

So eloquently did the Bulgarian peace representatives plead their cause, and so graphically did they paint the sufferings undergone by the Bulgarians in the war with Turkey to secure victory for the Balkan league that the Serb and Greek envoys relented.

WEST POINT GIRL WEDS.

CONLEY SAYS FRANK TOOK MARY PHAGAN'S MESH BAG

Lies Down on Floor to Show Jury How He Left Girl's Body in Cellar

truth' to the detectives?'' Rosser shouted.

The attorney apparently sought to create the impression that the mesh bag story was an afterthought, and that it was manufactured by the negro when he heard of the search the detectives were making for the bag.

On Grill Over Thirteen Hours.

When Rosser turned Conley back to Dorsey for the redirect examination, the negro had been under the grill of Rosser's cross-questioning for a total of thirteen hours. His main story of Frank's admitting the killing and of the disposal of Mary Phagan's body at Frank's direction was unshaken except by his own admissions of previous falsehoods. He had been on the stand a total of fifteen and one-half hours. Of this time the Solicitor had questioned him only about two hours.

Conley was called from the stand at 11:10 o'clock.

Conley was taken into an anteroom. He removed his coat and lit a cigarette someone had given him.

''How did you like it?'' he was asked.

''I liked it all right,'' he replied, grinning.

Sheriff Mangum then interrupted the questioning of the reporters, saying that under the judge's orders no one could speak to him.

The next moment Conley picked up a newspaper and became intently interested in the story of his own testimony.

As soon as court opened Mr. Rosser asked the judge if he was ready to hear argument on the proposition to eliminate parts of Conley's testimony. He said he was prepared to support his motion with authorities.

Judge Roan replied that he would postpone his decision until 2 o'clock.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that he had witnesses he expects to put on the stand Wednesday morning to substantiate the part of the negro's testimony in dispute. He said:

"I just want the court to understand that I am going to do this."

Judge Roan replied:

"I'll give you the benefit of whatever you bring out."

Conley was then recalled to the stand for the conclusion of his cross-examination.

Questioned About Affidavit.

Rosser's first question was:

Q. You made this statement just as I read it, didn't you, Jim?—A. Yes, Q. It's all correct?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, Jim, you signed this statement, too, didn't you? (Showing another affidavit.)—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made this one the day after the one I just read? Now, listen, and see if this is what you said?

Mr. Rosser read how Jim Conley for the first time told the story of carrying the body of Mary Phagan to the basement. These were the concluding words:

"The reason I have not told this before is that Mr. Frank said he would get me out, but it don't seem that he is going to get out and I have decided to tell the whole truth. I gave him back the $200. He said he would fix it all right Monday."

Q. This is what you swore, isn't it, Jim?—A. Yes, sir; I swore it.

Q. Jim, didn't Miss Carson ask you on Monday while you were working around her machine when they were going to get you, you answered that you hadn't done nothing?—A. No, sir.

Denies Alarm While Sweeping.

Q. Didn't she say that Mr. Frank was innocent and the real murderer of little Mary Phagan was the man Mrs. White saw near the steps? You dropped your broom and quit sweeping when she said that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say to Mr. Herbert Schiff on Monday after the murder that you were afraid to go out of the factory and that you would give a million dollars to be a white man? A. I didn't say just that, but I told him if I was a white man I would go on out.

Q. He told you to get on out, asking you what you had to be afraid of?—A. Something like that.

Q. Jim, you talked with Julia Fuss on that day and asked her if she had another extra? You asked her if she got one to let you see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. She told you that Mr. Frank was innocent, didn't she? And you said he was innocent as the angels in heaven?—A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Mr. Rosser closed the cross-examination and Solicitor Dorsey began the redirect examination.

Q. Jim, where were you in prison? A. Police headquarters.

Q. Were you ever in jail?—A. Yes.

Q. What were you charged with?—A. Just because I was washing my shirt.

Q. I mean those other times you were arrested. Were you in the county jail then?—A. No, I was in headquarters.

Rosser interrupted:

"The charges are in writing, your honor. They are the last evidence."

"It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways," said Dorsey. "Can't we exclude this evidence?"

Judge Roan: "You can show where he was."

Q. What were you arrested for the first time?—A. I was throwing rocks.

Q. Who arrested you?—A. A police named Edmonds.

Q. The second time?—A. I was fighting.

Q. A white man or a woman?—A. No, I never had any trouble with white folks.

Q. Jim, did you try to see Mr. Frank in jail?

Rosser objected.

Judge Roan—Don't lead him, Mr. Dorsey.

Q. Did you ever see Frank after you went to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Why not?

Rosser objected to the question as immaterial. Dorsey changed his question.

Last Saw Frank at Station.

Q. When was the last time you saw Frank before you saw him here?—A. Over there at the police station.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. No, he just smiled and bowed his head.

Q. When you wrote those notes, did you sit down, and, if so, where?—A. I was sitting at the desk.

Q. Where was Frank sitting?—A. At the other desk.

Attorney Rosser objected. "He went into all that before," he said.

Judge Roan—Did you, Mr. Dorsey?

"No, it is something I omitted," said Dorsey.

Q. What did Frank do when he you wrote those notes?

Rosser objected to the question as leading.

Q. Did Frank touch your pencil when you were writing?

Rosser objected again, declaring that the question was leading.

Judge Roan said the question could be asked without leading.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Frank do when you were writing?—A. He took the pencil out of my hand and told me to rule out that "s" on the "negro."

Q. What hour was it Friday Frank came up on the fourth floor and spoke to you?—A. About 3 o'clock.

Says Frank Took Girl's Bag.

Q. How far was it from where you were Tuesday when he told you to be a good boy?—A. Almost the same place.

Q. How far was it from the water cooler to where her body was dragged?—A. I don't know, sir.

Q. How far from the water cooler? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see Mary Phagan's pocketbook or meshbag?—A. Yes, it was on the desk in Mr. Frank's office.

Q. What did he do with it?—A. He put it in the safe.

Q. How long were you in jail before you wrote for the detectives?—A. About ten or fifteen days.

Q. How long would it take Frank to go down and lock that door?—A. About one minute.

Q. Where was Frank standing when you saw the clock at four minutes to one?—A. He was standing near those stair steps.

Q. Describe that scream you heard. Rosser objected.

"He has gone into that before, your honor," he said.

The question was sustained, Judge Roan saying: "The question cannot be asked because it is reopening a long cross-examination."

Q. Jim, who has asked you the most questions, Mr. Black, Scott, Starnes and Campbell and myself or Mr. Rosser?

Tries to Show Court Grilling.

Rosser objected.

Dorsey: "Your honor, he has tried to bring out the fact that this witness has been grilled. I want to show that altogether he was not questioned as long or as much as Mr. Rosser has questioned him on the stand.

Judge Roan: "You can ask him how long he was questioned out of court, and what has gone on here is public."

Dorsey put the question again.

Q. How long was the longest you was ever questioned before you came here?—A. Mr. Scott came and got me one day and I herd him tell the turnkey it was fifteen minutes to eleven. It was dark when I got back.

Q. How long was that?—A. I'd say about three and one-half hours.

Q. How long has Mr. Rosser questioned you?

"Your honor, I want to get this answer in the records," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan: "Do you object?" looking at Mr. Rosser.

"I do," said Rosser.

"I sustain you," said the court.

Dorsey continued the questioning.

Q. Jim, how did you leave the body in the basement?—A. I left her on her side.

Lies on Floor to Answer Query.

Q. How? (Conley got down on the floor and lay on his left side, his arms against his body. After the illustration he identified a photograph of the basement and pointed out just where he left the body).

Q. Now, Jim, tell the jury in detail everything you did after you looked at the clock at 4 minutes to 1.

Rosser objected. "He has gone into that, your honor," he said.

"Have you, Mr. Dorsey?" Judge Roan asked.

"We have not gone into that detail," Dorsey replied. "We want to show the jury how long it would have taken to do the things there and how long it would have taken Frank to get to his home. Mr. Rosser has brought out this detail to draw his conclusions."

Judge Roan: "Have you asked that?"

Dorsey: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I sustain the objection."

Dorsey: "That's all right, your honor. If you think the State ought not to ask these questions, it is all right with me."

Promised Help in Trouble.

Q. What kind of paper were you talking about when you spoke of green sheets?—A. That one (identifying the white note).

Q. What kind of back did it have?—A. A kind of grayish pad.

Q. What did Frank say about taking you to Brooklyn?—A. He didn't. He said he would take me away, and if I got into trouble he would get me out.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Mincey?—A. No; I saw him at police headquarters.

Q. What did he say?

Rosser objected, and the objection was sustained.

Q. That night at jail, did those newspaper men come on the inside?—A. No.

Q. What did they say? Wait a minute; I want those two men out. (Two newspaper reporters, H. W. Ross and Harllee Branch, of The Atlanta Journal, who were at the press table, retired from the courtroom.)—A. I can't remember that.

Q. Did they offer you anything at all?

Rosser objected, and was sustained. Conley had answered the question, though, declaring that nothing was offered him but a paper.

Q. That day at the factory, were you nervous or not?—A. No; I was not.

Darley Knew He Could Write.

Q. What did Mr. Schiff say to you?—A. They were standing there by the clock and asked if there was a crowd at the front door. Mr. Schiff came in and I said I wish I was a white man; that I would go out from there. One man said he wished he had a pistol. Mr. Schiff said: 'They've got Mr. Frank in jail. I don't see that being white would help."

Q. Did Darley know you could write?—A. Yes.

Rosser objected. "It is immaterial," said he.

Dorsey: "We want to show that this man could write; that he was in jail several days without writing, and the detectives, the Pinkertons employed by the factory, knew he could write.

Q. Could you spell luxury?—A. Yes.

Q. Why?—A. I had to write it several times. Mr. Frank had me to write down the names of the different boxes that pencils were in, and give them to him, so that he could know when they were out.

Attorney Rosser took up the re-cross-examination:

Q. Jim, you were questioned by Mr. Dorsey and myself and all the detectives, and this morning was the first time you ever mentioned that mesh bag.—A. You didn't ask me.

Q. Do you know what I asked you yesterday?—A. Yes, sir; I remember some of the questions.

Q. What?—A. Well, I don't remember just exactly.

Q. You don't remember a single thing that has not been written down?

Dorsey objected. "He must give the witness time to answer," said he.

Q. Jim, haven't you answered my questions?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said this morning that Mr. Frank promised to get you out on bond and send you out of town?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell the detectives that when you told them you were telling all the truth?—A. I did tell them hep romised to get me out.

Q. Mr. Dorsey saw you seven times, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir; I think that's right.

Q. Did he take down what you said? A. He took down something the first time.

Q. How about the next times?—A. I disremember.

Q. How long have you kept up with those boxes?—A. About a year.

Conley Tries Spelling.

Q. And you wrote Mr. Frank reports on these boxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you know "luxury" if you were to see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you write it for Mr. Frank, then?—A. I can write it.

Q. Can you spell it?—I can try it.

Q. Well let's hear you spell 'luxury.'

A. L-u-s-t-r-i-s.

Q. Was that the only kind of pencil boxes up there?—A. No, sir. There was Uncle Remus, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and others.

Q. Did you write reports on them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Uncle Remus.'—A. O-n-e R-i-m-e-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Thomas Jefferson.'—A. T-o-m J-e-i-s-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'George Washington.'—A. J-o-e W-i-s-h-t-o-n.

Q. What did Mr. Frank say about your spelling?—A. He laughed.

Q. How do you spell 'O-x'?—A. O-x.

Q. How did you write him notes to borrow money?—. A. I just wrote them.

Q. Tell me what you wrote?—A. I just said: 'Please let me have fifty cents.'

Q. When you were standing by that box talking, could Mr. Darley hear you?—A. Yes.

Q. Could Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes.

Q. Could that boy?—A. Yes.

Q. The shipping clerk?—A. Yes.

Asked If He Could Write.

Q. When you went into the office to write those notes, Mr. Frank asked you if you could write, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Rosser put the question again.

Dorsey objected to the repetition, and the objection was sustained.

Q. Messrs. Hooper and Dorsey were with you in the jail together, were they not?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. Two or three hours.

Dorsey Wins Ruling.

Q. How long after April 26 was it you saw this man?—A. About a month.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. I want you to describe that pocketbook.—A. It was a wire-ish looking pocketbook, kind of whitish looking.

Q. Did you have anything to copy from when you wrote those words?—A. I could see the boxes.

Dorsey: "Come down, Jim."

Rosser: "Just a minute."

Q. Jim, tell me how large that pocketbook was.—A. I can't say, it was kind of folded up.

Q. Give us your best estimate.—A. It was about like this (indicating about 5 inches.)

Conley was then excused, having been on the stand since 9:45 Monday morning.

Dalton Called to Stand.

C. B. Dalton was called to the stand.

Dalton is the man Conley declared was in the factory with Frank and the women on Saturday afternoons when he watched.

Before questioning Dalton, Solicitor Dorsey obtained consent to tender the notes found by the side of the dead girl and a photograph of the basement as evidence.

Dalton came in and took the chair. He is a man of about 35 years of age, rather rough in appearance. He has brown hair and overhanging brows and thin, tightly compressed lips. Solicitor Dorsey recalled him before putting any questions, and Mrs. Arthur White was called. Dorsey stated that he would call Dalton later. Dorsey questioned Mrs. White. He had Jim Conley brought back into the room.

Q. Mrs. White, look at this man right good. Do you know who he is?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him before?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. At police headquarters.

Q. Does he compare in general size to the man you saw in the National Pencil Factory April 26? ("Put on your hat, Jim," said Dorsey to Conley.)—A. He looks more like him than any man I have seen.

Q. At the time you saw him at the police station did you identify him?—A. I did not.

Rosser objected.

Q. What did you say?

Rosser: "I object. I wasn't there."

Dorsey: "Your representative, Mr. Scott, was there."

Rosser: "I move to rule that out."

A. I said he looked more like the one than any man I have seen.

Rosser: "I move to rule it all out."

Dorsey: "We expect to show by this witness that this was the man. We want to show how he was dressed, his facial expression, etc., and we submit that it is material."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. Describe the man you saw.—A. He was about the size of the one just brought before me whom I have been told is Jim Conley. He was in a dark place and I took him to be black. He had on dark clothes and I don't know whether he had on a hat or not.

Q. Wade Campbell is your brother, and Arthur White your husband, aren't they?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you tell them you saw a negro sitting in that hall?

Rosser objected.

Laughing Spectators Ousted.

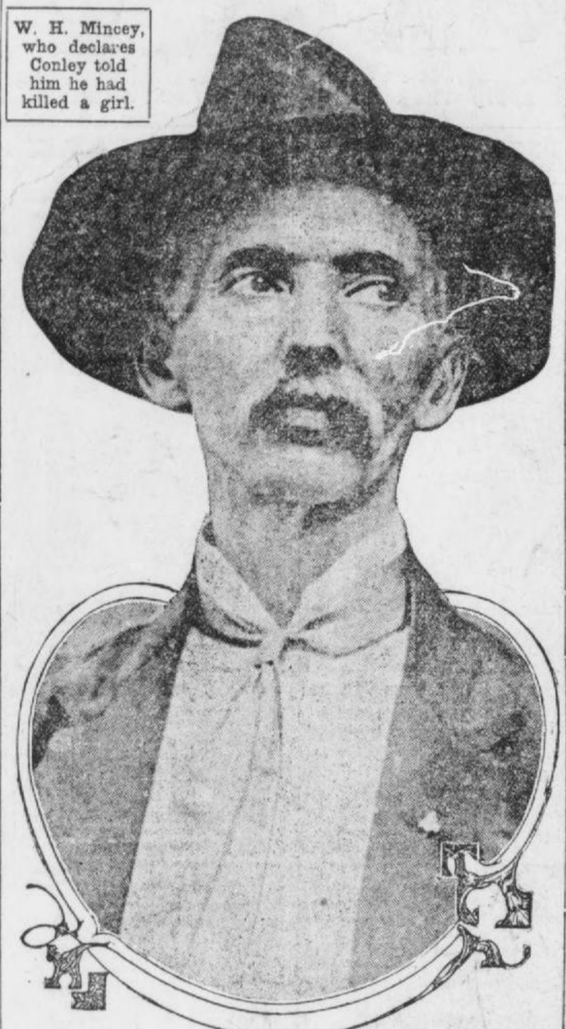

The odd situation of the attorneys for the defense being in possession of the official court records was relieved when Mr. Arnold consented to them being read.

Mr. Rosser, however, found it first in his copy of the testimony of Scott.

Rosser—You were right, Harry Scott did say Mrs. White told Frank

ACCUSER OF CONLEY IS READY TO TESTIFY

W. H. Mincey, who declares Conley told him he had killed a girl.

Deplores Newspaper Publicity, but Poses Merrily for the Camera Brigade.

W. H. Mincey, the school teacher and insurance solicitor who made an affidavit that Jim Conley confessed to him that he had already killed a girl that day and didn't want to kill anyone else, was the center of attraction for the crowd on the outside of the courthouse Wednesday morning.

While deploring newspaper publicity, he readily agreed to pose for a group of newspaper photographers, assuming many poses, some of which were rather grotesque. He followed this with implicit instructions to the photographer that his picture was not to be printed in the papers.

Efforts to get him to state whether he had seen Jim Conley since his arrest proved futile. Mincey declared he would not make this statement or answer until he had taken the stand.

Mincey was located at New Salem, Ga., near Rising Fawn, in Dade County. He is teaching school there, his work being the preparation of students to enter the Martha Berry School at Rome.

"I will not talk of the case and will not tell my story until I take the stand," said Mincey. "If Jim Conley killed little Mary Phagan, I feel that it is my duty to tell of the experience I had with him that Saturday afternoon. I don't think this thing should be discussed in the newspapers, though I regard newspapers as a necessity. These matters should be left to the court hearings. It is a loss to me to be here and I trust the case will soon be over. I think, though, that it is my duty to tell what I know."

Mincey is a man of small stature with piercing eyes and a gray mustache. He wears a black felt slouch hat and a dark suit.

Ready to Rebut Mincey Story.

J. W. Boozer, a collector for Patrick & Thompson, Broad street jewelers, from whom Jim Conley purchased a watch, has been summoned as a witness by the State, but released subject to call. He is ready to give testimony to rebut the Mincey affidavit. When asked what he knew of the case, Mr. Boozer said:

"On Saturday afternoon on the day Mary Phagan was murdered, about 4:15 o'clock, I met Conley on Peters street. I asked him if he had any money and he said no, that he drew his wages on Friday evening and had spent it. He then asked me if I had not collected the installment due from Frank."

"Why should you collect from Frank?" Mr. Boozer was asked.

"We had caused the arrest of Conley several times on account of the failure to pay installments. Frank agreed that if Conley would sign the agreement he would deduct the amount of the installment from the pay of the negro each week. To this Conley assented, and I had from that time collected from Frank."

"That being the case, why did you ask the negro for the money on the Saturday mentioned?" was asked.

"I had instructions from Frank that in case I did not collect the money before 1:30 on Saturday not to come until the next week. I had several accounts due on that date and it was impossible for me to reach the pencil factory earlier."

NEGRO COOL AND UNAFRAID DESPITE FIERCE ATTACK OF DEFENSE ON HIS STORY

Jim Conley was the same cool, unafraid negro when he returned to the stand Wednesday morning in the trial of Leo Frank after almost two whole days under the cross-examination of Luther Rosser. He had passed through fire and didn't seem to mind it. He had no fear of anything that was yet to come.

Mr. Rosser might threaten him or might joke with him; it was all the same to the negro. He had tried both and had established but one thing—that Conley is a liar, and Conley admits that.

Arnold might describe him as "that miserable wretch in the witness chair;" he could gaze calmly out the window as he had done before. He didn't quite understand all those names they were calling him, anyway.

If, in all the time that Conley was under the raking fire of Rosser's cross-examination, he was disturbed in the slightest degree, it was when he was being asked about that mysterious affidavit of William H. Mincey.

The declaration of Mincey that Conley had boasted the afternoon of April 26 of killing a girl was sinister and held in it the possibility that Rosser would finish by blazing forth with a direct charge of murder against the negro. Conley moved uneasily in his seat. He refused to meet the eye of his inquisitor. He fidgeted with his hands, but with his lips he framed a denial of every damning charge contained in the document.

The ordeal soon was over. Conley regained his composure, and when court adjourned a few minutes later a grin of triumph cleft his black face almost in twain.

Attorney Sees Conley.

Conley's attorney, William M. Smith, provided him with supper and breakfast at the jail and talked for some time with the State's star witness. He had been prevented from holding any sort of a conference with his client the night before, and protested at this procedure at the close of court Tuesday night. Judge Roan extended him the privilege of seeing Conley. Reuben Arnold asked that an exception be entered in the record.

Conley slept between nine and ten hours and arose much refreshed.

"I'se telling the truth now," he said to a newspaper man who encountered him outside the jail. "That Mr. Rosser ain't got no chance to get me mixed up because I'm telling just what happened."

Frank occupied his usual cell on the second floor of the Tower. He was joined by his wife and mother as soon as he arrived at the courthouse.

Rosser Reads Affidavits.

Rosser asked Dorsey for the original of Conley's third affidavit. The Solicitor advised Mr. Rosser that the original had never been signed. Rosser took a copy of the affidavit, which the Solicitor said was identical with the original, and read it to Conley. It was a signed statement from the negro, in which he admitted the other two affidavits contained lies and the one which the detectives said was the last word in the great mystery.

The reading consumed nearly fifteen minutes, Rosser enunciating clearly and slowly, emphasizing every statement that differed with Conley's evidence on the stand.

Freely Admits He Lied.

All of Rosser's quiz Tuesday had only the one possible effect—that of casting suspicion in the minds of the jury of the story that Conley now is telling. He spread his lies with a lavish hand in that first affidavit he made to the detectives.

He freely admitted this and rather gloried in his prowess as a first-class liar. He lied in his second affidavit, although he maintained that this was a step nearer the truth. And in his third affidavit, which he and the detectives had joined in proclaiming "the whole truth," there were still little discrepancies and deviations from the straight path of veracity.

But this tale that he was unfolding to the jury, this was the pure, unalloyed, gospel truth. He had raised his right hand and sworn that he was going to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Mr. Rosser was most unkind to throw over it a shadow of suspicion.

And the lawyer labored in vain to shake the negro's story as it had gone before the jury. Rosser midway in the Tuesday forenoon session abandoned his line of interrogation in regard to statements that Conley had made to the police and detectives and began questioning Conley directly on the crime.

Questioned Closely on Time.

He questioned him most closely in regard to the time in an effort to show conclusively to the jury that Frank and Conley did not have the opportunity to accomplish all which the negro narrated before Frank left the factory for luncheon at his home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue, at which place he arrived by 1:30 o'clock, according to the State's own witnesses.

Conley testified, under Rosser's cross-examination, that he went to the rear of the factory at Frank's direction and there found the body of the slain girl. He said that he yelled to Frank that the girl was dead and that Frank told him to bring her to the front of the factory.

Conley said that he did not know how he was going to carry the girl and he asked Frank. Frank, he said, yelled back something about getting some crocus bagging, but he did not quite understand him and walked to the front of the factory so that he could hear the superintendent better. He noticed the clock at this moment. It was four minutes of 1 o'clock.

With this time as a starting point, Rosser began to quiz the negro closely as to how long it took him to accomplish each part of the remainder of the afternoon's events.

It was plain that the negro's estimates did not coincide with what the lawyer thought they should be.

Defense's Views Evidently Differ.

"How long did it take you from the time that you came forward and looked at the clock until you had taken the body down to the cellar and was back again on the second floor, and Frank went to wash his hands?" asked Rosser.

Conley thought it was only four or five minutes. It evidently was the opinion of the defense that it should have been nearer twenty minutes, as it included rolling the body of the girl into the cloth from the cotton box, carrying it to the elevator, the wait while Conley says Frank went into the office after the key, the trip down the elevator, the carrying of the body to the rear of the basement, the disposal of the cloth and the return to the second floor.

Rosser asked how long it took Frank to wash his hands. Conley replied that it was only a minute or two. Rosser then inquired how long Frank had Conley in the closet while the two women were in his office. Conley said it was eight or ten minutes. This incident, if it is as Conley represented it, would have brought the time up to 1:12 or 1:15.

Rosser then asked how long it took Conley to write the four notes, two of which were found by the girl's dead body.

Wrote Notes in a Hurry.

"You couldn't have written those four notes inside of ten minutes to save your soul, could you, Jim?" Rosser inquired.

"Yas, sah; I think I wrote 'em in about a minute and a half," replied the negro.

"You're some rapid writer," retorted Rosser after he had called attention to the laborious scrawl.

Rosser then questioned Conley as to the time of each part of his conversation with Frank while he was in the office that afternoon. He asked him about Frank giving him the cigarettes with the money in the box, about Frank giving him the $200 roll of bills and the attendant conversation, about the conversation in respect to Conley's watch and to Frank's wealthy folks in Brooklyn.

While he did not make the actual computation of time, he impressed strongly on the minds of the jury that it would have been impossible for all this to have occurred in connection with the undisputed fact that Frank arrived home at or before 1:30 that afternoon.

CAN JURY OBEY IF TOLD TO FORGET BASE CHARGE?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

"Gentlemen of the jury, having heard from James Conley, the blackest, most damning story ever told in Atlanta by one human being against another, having sat there and listened as he smudged with unspeakable scandal the defendant in this case, Leo Frank, although it is irrelevant, immaterial, and has nothing to do with this case, you will kindly forget it, being on your oaths as jurymen to consider the evidence declared competent!"

And the jury, being like most other juries, in one way and another, and having heard all the things as aforesaid, will promptly proceed to do as instructed about forgetting it—NOT!

I have heard juries told too many times to "forget" things—such, for instance, as that there is no such thing as "unwritten law" in this land of the free and home of the brave—and I have seen too many times those very same juries proceed to "forget"—NOT!

Juries are, after all, composed of mere human beings, and things such as Conley said to the Frank jury can NOT be forgotten, and will NOT be disregarded by the average jury.

Merely Question of Belief.

It is merely a queston of whether the jury BELIEVES the negro!

There was something infinitely pathetic in the situation Tuesday, when court met in the afternoon.

For one thing, it brought to the cheeks of the defendant's wife, always and ever at his side, the first tears I yet have seen fall from her eyes.

She has borne herself with amazing fortitude thus far—the wonder is that she has not long ago collapsed.

When Reuben Arnold, moving to strike from the record the vile story of Jim Conley, paused a second before reading the exact words he desired expunged, looked a moment in the direction of the defendant's wife, and said, with no show of the spectacular whatever, "Your honor, I would prefer not to read this in the presence of these two ladies, and I therefore pass it to your honor that you may read it in silence!" The moment was tense and tragic!

Weeps For First Time.

I do not know whether it was gratitude to Arnold for the kindness and consideration thus shown, whether it was realization of the weighty purpose of the motion, whether it was the first chilling breath of apprehension, or whether it was just a physical giving way that moved Mrs. Frank. Whatever it was, as Arnold passed the paper along to Judge Roan, the first tear I ever saw from the eyes of Lucile Frank trickled down her cheek and she dropped her head in her hands for a moment or two and sobbed!

Apparently there was nothing in the incident, either upon the part of Arnold or the woman, designed to be the least bit theatrical. The jury had been removed, the stage settings were wanting.

It merely was a natural and minor incident that tugged, somehow, at the heartstrings and caught at the throat.

In all the packed courtroom there were two women only—beyond that, there was a morbidly hungry crowd of men, ready to grasp greedily at anything sensational.

Arnold denied the crowd for the sake of—the women.

And now the jury has been asked to forget the damning thing that has been said to it, that has been said in the presence of the wife and the mother—and that was too vile to say a second time in the presence of the latter!

Do you think the jury WILL forget—do you think it CAN forget?

Maybe you do—I don't!

And as to Conley and his story in its entirety—the spectators in that courtroom have been looking for Conley to "break down," to fall on his knees and confess it all a lie, and all that sort of thing.

There never was any chance that Conley would do that. It should be borne in mind that to "break down" Conley's story does not necessarily mean to break down Conley—to collapse him.

The point is: Can the defense—has or will the defense—so UNDERMINE Conley's story that, through the introduction of other evidence, it eventually will fall to the ground as a mass of lies?

Slowly, but persistently, with deadly intent even if with tediousness of method, Luther Z. Rosser for more than two days has attacked the amazing and terrible story upon which the State hopes to convict Leo Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Rosser has been almost maddening in his patience with the negro. He has gone over the same ground, time after time, in his efforts to get Conley's various stories adjusted to the purpose of the defense.

Conley, rapid-fire enough in direct examination, rattling off his grewsome and frightful story as if it were a recital of an altogether common thing, became quite another Conley under cross-examination.

Where but a few moments ago he had remembered most amazing and inconsequential details—such as the fact that a woman who called to see Frank on Thanksgiving Day wore a blue and white polka dotted dress, a green hat and white shoes and stockings—under cross-examination he could remember nothing at all save after the most persistent prodding.

Time and again Mr. Rosser had to go over the entire ground of an entire situation to draw from Conley one further comment upon it. Questioned on his story under both cross and direct examination, the negro was pat enough in reply—on other points he was as vague as he possibly could be.

Twenty-one times Tuesday he admitted to Mr. Rosser that he had "lied." Seven times in addition to that he admitted that he had been "mistaken."

As the cross-examination progressed, too, it became evident enough that the defense is to hold the entire charge against Frank to be largely a "frame-up," with Conley as the bright and particular star about whom it revolves.

The negro said he at first refused to speak of the crime at all, and when he did speak deliberately lied because he "wished to protect Mr. Frank."

"He was my young superintendent—I would have done anything to save him," said the negro—whether with sinister cunning or genuine sincerity, the jury must say.

Showed How Negro Lied.

And yet, with Conley's own lips Rosser showed how, time and again, he deliberately lied about his movements on the fatal Saturday that was Mary Phagan's last on earth—after he had said that he had looked in vain for help from Frank, and was then determined to tell "the whole truth!"

After Conley's excuse of protecting Frank had been shattered by the negro's own "confession," he had to make three subsequent and different "confessions" before he got things shaped to his liking—and every time he readjusted his story it was changed to meet the ever bobbing up objections to the story of the day or two before.

Continuously Mr. Rosser referred to the fact, always admitted by the negro, that his various affidavits were changed "at police headquarters," in the presence of officers, "after being released from jail and carried to headquarters."

There are dozens of puzzling inconsistencies to be bridged over in Conley's story—scores of things yet to be explained and straightened out.

And yet—

In the average mind I doubt whether Conley's story has been seriously discredited in the main.

There are people who admit, readily enough—hundreds of them—that Conley is a liar, a thousand times over, a loafer, and an utterly undesirable citizen.

Doubt Slowly Crystallizing.

They will say thus and so to his disparagement, but——

Fateful, suggestive, profoundly melancholy "but" for Leo Frank!

It bespeaks a widespread and crystallizing doubt that is dangerously incompatible with Frank's hopes for life and liberty and the restoration of his good name.

With all the undermining and incongruities of Conley's story that the most subtle ingenuity of the defense can conjure to its aid, the jury has been given a story which, if so much as 5 per cent of it sticks, likely will serve to convict.

The primary circumstances—these might be swept aside like chaff before the wind, if only Conley's story might be crushed to earth and made absurd.

But there is the story in all its abundance of sinister detail—the comings and goings of questionable men and women, the negro, time and again, on watch downstairs, responding to signals, the connivance of the negro with the white man in unnatural and perverted practices, the coming of innocent little Mary Phagan, the pattering of anxious feet above, the suppressed scream, the call to Conley for further assistance in consummating unlawful deeds with women—this time murder—the removal of the body, and the promise to pay on some subsequent day!

Will the story thus given to the jury, unless completely and altogether broken down, ever be removed from its mind entirely? And unless it is removed entirely, can Frank hope for acquittal?

If it is, in its essentials, the truth, what will the jury care about the exact time at which Conley bought some whisky on Peters street; or whether he went straight from Peters street to the laundry; or whether he remembers the mythical "woman in green who went up the factory steps," no matter how vitally important these things may be to the sustained truth of Conley's story.

Conley may lie in a dozen details of his story, he may have readjusted it continuously under the direction of Tom, Dick, or Harry, he may be everything he ought not to be—and yet, if one BIG detail in his awful story sticks in the minds of that jury, Leo Frank is undone hopelessly.

If the story Conley tells IS a lie, then it is the most inhumanly devilish, t he most cunningly clever, and the most amazingly sustained lie ever told in Georgia!

Every little detail, as finally adjusted—and not then until Conley went upon the stand Monday—fits the necessities of those bent upon Frank's conviction. If it is, as the defense contends, a "frame-up," it is a diabolically smart "frame-up"—one can not escape that conclusion!

Girl's Visit Dovetails In.

Even the coming an d going of Monteen Stover, the five minutes of time in which the primary circumstances might be made to dovetail into the Conley story, is cited by the witness Conley as the very period of time wherein Conley, sitting in the dark hall below, heard pattering footsteps above, the faint scream, and immediately after Miss Stover went out, the tiptoeing of Frank to the front, and then the story of the death upstairs.

Monteen Stover could not have chosen a more exact and useful moment to wander in—and yet, she heard no scream, although she did not see Frank in his office during the few minutes she remained upstairs.

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

It has come to the point where one, seeking the truth and justice and the right to all men at all times and in all circumstances, can only say he will leave it to the jury—and that the JURY will speak the TRUTH!

Crowd Set in Its Opinions

By O. B. KEELER.

The impression persists that courtroom crowds are made up in the main of two classes, as follows:

(1) People who take it for granted that any person being tried on any charge in any court is guilty, and then some.

(2) People who are constitutionally incapable of believing anybody is guilty of anything whatever.

That is one powerful impression gained at the Frank trial. It is an impression sticking out pointedly in the wake of the Thaw trial, and the Nan Patterson trial, and the Beatty trial, and the Hyde trial.

All three of the Hyde trials, in fact.

Never an Opinion Altered.

At the risk of being convicted of exaggeration in the first degree, the writer, who was rather intimately associated with the celebrated poison case, would estimate that 18,397 persons expressed in his hearing what they insisted were unalterable opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused physician before the jury in the first trial had been impaneled.

And of the 18,397 (estimated) not one single instance is recalled of one single opinion being altered.

The fact that the physician was convicted on his first trial made not the least difference to those who believed him innocent.

Court Ruling Mattered Not.

The fact that the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further trial made not the least difference to those who voted guilty.

The second and third trials, one of which resulted in an escaped juror, fleeing madly by way of a rain spout from the dread lair of the hypothetical question, and the other in a hung jury, had no perceptible effect on the factions.

Except to solidify them in their original beliefs.

One side desired to take steps at once.

The other side named men-children for the object of a persecution unparalleled since the days of Nero.

Arguments Never Will End.

And if Bennett Clark Hyde's annual trials proceed as per schedule until the year 1950, there will be hoary-headed wrangling over the same old points, by the same ancient and original wranglers, lined up the same way as when the greatest mystery of the West came to the fall of the gavel in the opening trial.

Take the Beatty Case.

There were men and women—you know some of them—who raised frantic hands to heaven, that a poor boy should thus be railroaded to his doom.

They were about set to buy mileage and travel to throw themselves and their petitions at the feet of a cruel and callous Governor.

And then Beatty confessed.

Did that still the trouble lachrymal waters?

Not precisely.

They said the poor boy's mind had been weakened by his persecution.

And if you are in a hypercritical mood or are otherwise disposed to stick pins in toy balloons, just ask your memory to inform you how many times you have heard these pronouncements since the trial of Leo M. Frank began:

First: "Well, I've been absolutely certain from the very first that Frank did it."

Second: "Well, I never have believed that Frank was guilty of that crime."

And now do you feel hypercritical?

And now do you fancy that 18,397 is an inflated estimate?

Of course, there must be a Third Estate—a well-balanced, thoughtful, cautious body. Particularly cautious, and slow of speech—mayhap in some sporadic instances slow of thought.

They are the judicial ones. They hold the balance open at both ends, to receive and weigh the testimony and the facts.

At least, they say they do.

That would be the jury, perhaps.

And some others—perhaps.

DORSEY ACCOMPLISHES AIM DESPITE BIG ODDS

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Practically the entire case on which the State of Georgia bases its claim on the life of Leo Frank to pay for that life taken from Mary Phagan is before the jury.

Most of the remaining evidence of importance which the Solicitor General may introduce merely will be rebuttal to testimony presented by Frank's counsel.

Whether the evidence presented is strong enough to convict is a question for the jury to decide. Whether the testimony introduced by the defense will be convincing enough to cause the reasonable doubt which the law says shall make Frank a free man or whether the defense's attack on the State's case has been of sufficient strength to create a question in the minds of the jurors, time alone will tell.

But this fact remains unchallenged: Every single thing that Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey declared in advance that he would get before the jury is there now. It may not be enough to convict, but the case which the State said fastened the crime on Leo Frank has been put in evidence.

Dorsey Had Huge Task.

One by one the prosecutor has forged the links in the chain that he maintains fixes the guilt of the Phagan murder on Leo Frank and Leo Frank alone.

It has been long, tedious work. Dorsey has had to fight against considerable odds, but his work has been well done.

When the defense has its innings, the chain may be torn asunder as though struck by lightning, but that will be the work of the skilled attorneys who are fighting to save the life of the pencil factory superintendent.

Here was Dorsey's work: He had to adduce enough circumstantial evidence to corroborate the testimony of Jim Conley before his case could even be seriously considered. The unsupported word of the negro sweeper would have been about as valuable as a punctured drum. The Solicitor knew this.

First, he had to prove the venue. He had to locate Frank in the National Pencil Company factory at the time Mary Phagan was slain. He did this by the unattacked testimony of many witnesses. He did it so thoroughly that the defense has tacitly admitted that Frank was at the factory about the time he deed was supposed to have been done.

Question of Time Settled.

Then he had to prove the time. According to the State's theory the murder was committed about 12:10 on Memorial Day. Frank himself has said and his employees and his associates have testified he was there at that time. This point also is practically unchallenged.

At last came the hardest task. He had to prove that Leo Frank was the only human being in the pencil factory at that time who could have taken Mary Phagan's life.

By every witness introduced on this point it was shown that as far as human knowledge goes Leo Frank and Jim Conley were the only men in that part of the factory at that time. Either could have committed the crime. It was Dorsey's work to place the blame on Frank alone.

Newt Lee's testimony was introduced to show that Frank sent him away that afternoon. Dr. Harris' testimony tended to show that the slaying must have been done immediately after Frank had given the child her week's wage and had given it to her while they were alone. Mrs. White's testimony tended to show that Jim Conley was sitting downstairs making no attempt at flight after the time the crime is supposed to have been committed.

Then came Conley's direct evidence and the chain was practically complete.

As has been said before, this chain may not stand the acid test of the defense's attack. It may not be strong enough even unattacked to convince the jury that Frank is responsible for Mary Phagan's death.

But it is what Dorsey went out to get before the jury. He has done it.

And he has done it practically unaided. The valuable assistance he had reason to believe he would receive from the police department has been more or less missing. In fact, the greatest blows to the State's case have been delivered by detectives, supposdly expert witnesses who have been unable to withstand the crossfire of Luther Rosser.

The case has meant a lot to Dorsey, and right now, with the thrilling battle approaching its final stages, Dorsey stands out as big and commanding a figure as the brilliant lawyers against whom he is arrayed.

He may lose his case, but if he does he will come out with reputation enhanced.

about seeing this negro Monday after the crime.

Several spectators were put out of the courtroom for laughing at Mr Rosser's admission of the error.

Rosser—I will say it is the first time that you have been right. Your honor, we object. It is immaterial what time this witness made known the fact unless they go further and show she was delayed through the influence of Frank.

The objection was overruled.

Lawyers Clash.

Dorsey—Your honor, I have already shown that Leo Frank knew on Monday, April 28, that she saw this negro there, and that it was May 7 before the State got into possession of this fact.

Rosser—I say that no such evidence has been introduced.

Dorsey—Call for the record of Harry Scott's evidence.

Rosser—I say he has not introduced this evidence, and he saws he has. If your honor can not remember some of the things that happen here we are perfectly helpless.

Stenographer Parry was called. He said he was taking the testimony for Mr. Arnold and he wanted Mr. Arnold's consent before reading it.

Q. When did you report it to anyone else?

Rosser objected.

Dorsey—I want to show who it was who first reported to detectives of the State of Georgia.

The objection was overruled.

Q. When did you report it?—A. May 27.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You never declined to tell anybody?—A. No.

Q. I want to refresh your memory. Didn't you tell Wade Campbell you saw the negro when you went up?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell Wade Campbell that when you came down you heard voice?—A. No; that was when I went up.

The witness was excused.

Sheriff C. W. Mangum was then called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you at the jail when Jim Conley was brought there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Frank about seeing Conley?

Rosser—I object.

Dorsey—We want to show that this white man wouldn't see this ignorant negro, his accuser. Can I ask the question?

Judge Roan—Go ahead.

Frank Didn't Want to See Police.

A. Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Harry Scott, Detective Black and Jim Conley came down and wanted to see Frank. I asked Frank if he wanted to see them. He said no; that his lawyer was not there and he had nobody to defend him.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Frank knew who was there, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Sheriff Mangum was excused, and Solicitor Dorsey called for Mrs. W. J. Coleman and George Epps. Neither answered.

Dorsey—We have got two propositions, and there will be objections to them. They are Dalton and Epps. When we finish with them we only have one more witness—Dr. Harris. We can't get him until 2 o'clock, and we would like to get that argument over.

Judge Roan sent the jury from the room and admonished the attorneys to give only the authorities and not to argue the points.

Dorsey—First, we don't want any evidence taken out that has already gone in. Second, we want to substantiate what Jim Conley said. Third, we want to bring out what Mary Phagan told George Epps on her way to the factory that Saturday, about Frank making eyes at her, and that she was afraid of him.

Attorney Arnold began his argument of objection by reading authorities. He declared he would include all three propositions in one argument.

Defense Compiles Authorities.

During Mr. Arnold's argument, Mr. Rosser climbed up in the witness chair in which Jim Conley sat during the thirteen hours Mr. Rosser was firing questions at him.

Arnold—Do we have to move to rule it out at the time it is presented? My friend, Mr. Leonard Haas, has compiled the authorities, and for this work he is one of the most reliable men I know of.

Arnold then asked the court's permission to remain seated while addressing it, as he was feeling hot and faint. He was allowed to do so. Judge Roan spoke to Solicitor Dorsey and his associates:

"What do you say, gentlemen?"

Dorsey—It looks this way: If this evidence goes in on Conley's testimony unsubstantiated, I can see how it might appear to the advantage of the defense. They can go out fishing, and if they catch something, they don't want to throw it back. They drew out the relation and association of Conley and Frank. Now they can't diminish it; they slept over their rights.

Mr. Arnold, interrupting Mr. Dorsey, read a few more authorities.

"Not Character Evidence," Says Dorsey.

Judge Roan—Dorsey, how can you differentiate this evidence from character evidence? The defense must bring his character in.

Dorsey—No, it is not character evidence. I know I can't bring his character in. If I convict him, of course, I want to hold him. I am not afraid of the higher court reversing your honor.

Roan interrupted—No, I am not either. I don't care anything about that.

Roan then declared court adjourned until 2 o'clock, without any ruling on the questions at bar having been made.

Argument is Resumed.

Court reconvened at 2 o'clock and with the jury still out, Solicitor Dorsey continued his argument on the admissability of the evidence that was stopped by adjournment at the noon recess.

The Solicitor read first a Supreme Court decision in which the defense waived its right to object by not so doing when the evidence was given. He cited a number of Georgia State cases. He declared that proof of another crime, if necessarily an independent crime, was admissable provided it was intended to illustrate the state of the defendant's mind at the time this crime was committed, and the fact that it was a crime did not make it inadmissable, therefore as an original proposition he declared that it was admissable.

"Shall we go on with the other objection," the Solicitor then asked Judge Roan.

"Yes," answered Judge Roan.

Dorsey Cites Example.

Dorsey: "We object to any evidence that is already in being ruled out because we expect to introduce other evidence to substantiate it. Now about the evidence of George Epps. Here is a case. (Dorsey here referred to an authority) in which a man was living with a woman as his wife. She left him and as heard to say she was afraid. This oman was later murdered and this man was [illegible] for the crime. The man who heard the remark she made about being afraid was permitted to testify. Now we want to show that when little Mary Phagan was on her way to the factory where she met her death, she expressed a fear of this defendant. It is a circumstance that points to this man's guilt."

Attorney Hooper here took up the argument.

"The court desires that we oe brief," he said, "and I promise to be brief. I will confine myself to the laws of Georgia, for that, I understand, is what controls this court and not decisions from Missouri or California.

"The Supreme Court of Georgia has held several times that it would not reverse a lower court on a decision unless the objection was made at the time the evidence was submitted.

Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, who testified that Mary Phagan died within half an hour after eating cabbage, was recalled by the State.

Defense Witness Excused.

At this moment, Attorney Rosser interrupted to state that one of the defense's witnesses wished to be excused on account of the death of a relative. This was W. T. Holds, whose relative, J. L. Adair, of Dallas, Ga., was killed by falling off a street car on Marietta street. The witness was excused and promised to be back in court by Friday morning.

Dorsey then took up the examination of Dr. Harris.

Q. What branch in medicine is yours? What special branch?—A. Diagnosis and chemistry.

Q. Why did you say Mary Phagan came to her death from strangulation?—A An examination showed that cause to have been the only probable one for death.

CONLEY PROVES HIMSELF NO SHARK AT ORTHOGRAPHY

Jim Conley gave the court a demonstration of his ability as a speller during the Wednesday morning session of the Frank trial. He had told of writing notes to Mr. Frank advising him when certain stocks of pencil boxes were exhausted.

"How long have you kept up with these boxes?" asked Rosser.—A. About a year.

Q. And you write Mr. Frank reports on these boxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you know "luxury" if you were to see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you write it for Mr. Frank, then?—A. I can write it.

Q. Can you spell it?—A. I can try it.

Q. Well, let's hear you spell "luxury."—A. L-u-s-t-r-i.

Q. Was that the only kind of pencil boxes up there?—A. No, sir. There was Uncle Remus, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and others.

Q.—Did you write reports on them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's hear you spell Uncle Remus.—A. O-n-e R-i-m-e-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell Thomas Jefferson?—A. T-o-m J-e-i-s-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell George Washington?—A. J-o-e W-i-s-h-t-o-n.

Q. What did Mr. Frank say about your spelling?—A. He laughed.

Q. How do you spell ox?—A. O-x.

Q. How did you write him notes to borrow money?—A. I just wrote them.

Q. Tell me what you wrote?—A. I just said: "Please let me have fifty cents."

SAYS DIVORCED PASTOR TOOK 'HUSH' MONEY

Minister Accused of Accepting $1,500 From Own Brother, Who Was Friendly With Wife.

MACON, Aug. 6.—The Rev. E. T. Moore, a Baptist minister, at Andersonville, formerly of Macon, is charged by Attorney Oliver C. Hancock, in a suit brought in the city court of Americus, with extorting $1,500 from his own brother as a price for silence in court as to his brother's alleged intimacy with Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. Moore now is living with her parents at Eufaula, Ala., and the two children are temporarily in her custody. Rev. Mr. Moore, while here, resided in the Mercer University community and was highly esteemed both as a man and a minister.

Last year Rev. Mr. Moore obtained a divorce from his wife in the Bibb Superior Court, after a hotly contested trial. He charged her with being unfaithful. One of the alleged co-respondents swore to improper relations with Mrs. Moore, who is a strikingly handsome woman of about 35 years. It is now charged that Rev. Mr. Moore found his own brother and Mrs. Moore in a compromising position and that he threatened his brother, who was about to be married, with exposure unless given $1,500.

Attorney Hancock alleges that he can prove the facts and the actual payment of the money.

New Tax Reform Bill Framed by Assembly Leaders

Positive assurance that the Georgia Senate will pass some sort of taxing bill which will relieve the financial embarrassment was given Wednesday when Senator Miller, chairman of the Finance Committee, called a meeting to consider a bill which has just been drafted.

Senator Miller and President Anderson wrote the bill. It provides, among other things, it is understood, for a State tax commission, as well as for county boards.

If the substitute bill is adopted, it probably will be presented in the Senate Thursday. The Sheppard bill will be read in the Senate for the third time Thursday.

Girl Is Run Down by Auto on Whitehall

A small girl, who refused to give her name, was knocked down and badly bruised by an automobile driven by Lewis Carhart, on Whitehall street, in front of Rich Brothers' store about noon Wednesday. The child was taken into Cone's store and her bruises bandaged, and then put in a cab and taken home.

Eyewitnesses to the accident say it was unavoidable. The car was going slowly and the girl ran in front of it before it could be stopped. No arrest was made.

Loses Fight to Force Promotion in Army

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Justice Barnard, in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to-day dismissed the rule asked for by Major Beecher B. Ray to compel the War Department to show why he should not be promoted to be Paymaster of the Army.

The court declined to decide the constitutionality of the promotion act of October 1, 1890, saying the "question seems to be one for an executive or administrative officer rather than one of the court."

Deputies Announced By Marshal Davis

MACON, Aug. 6.—Marshal J. S. Davis, for the United States Court for the Southern District of Georgia, this afternoon announced the appointment of his deputies as follows:

FLEETS OF WORLD AT CANAL OPENING

Secretary Daniels Plans Huge Naval Display for 1915—Announces Defense Policy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels to-day announced his plan to have all the world's fleets mobilize in Hampton Roads in February, 1915, and, led by the American squadron, proceed through the Panama canal and up the West Coast to San Francisco.

Secretary Daniels considers that this will form a fitting opening for the Panama canal besides being the greatest naval pageant the world has seen.

In addition to this, Secretary Daniels intends to have the American fleet, headed by the old battleship Oregon, steam through the canal next spring to celebrate the opening of the passageway to ships of commerce.

"It has beeen stated," said the Secretary of the Navy to-day, "that I intend to divide the Atlantic fleet and to keep a portion of it on the Pacific side. This is erroneous. What I intend to do is to divide the time of the fleet so that it will spend six months of the year on one coast and then go to the other, instead of spending all its time on the Atlantic side as at present."

Mothers' Testimony Binds Over Man Who Cruelly Beat Son

Several mothers appeared in police court Wednesday to testify that J. S. Newman, 41 Gaskill street, Tuesday brutally beat his 11-year-old boy, Joe Newman, with a board.

The mothers declared they would never think of whipping a child as severely as Newman did.

Newman insisted that the boy deserved a good thrashing, and quoted "spare the rod and spoil the child."

Judge Preston, declaring it one of the worst case that had come to his notice, bound the father over to the State courts in bond of $300.

HOUSE BILL PUTS TAX ON AUTOS FOR ROADS

Opponents "Poke Fun" in Effort to Defeat It—Urge License for Baby Carriage.

The bill of the House Ways and Means Committee providing for a State registration tax of $5 on automobiles was passed by the House Wednesday morning, 107 to 64, after a fight that raged since Monday morning.

The original bill provided that the funds obtained by the tax should go into the general fund of the State. An amendment offered by McMichael, of Marion County, diverting the proceeds of the tax into the State road fund, was carried, and the purposes of the Ways and Means Committee in presenting the bill to provide more revenue for the general expenses of the State were defeated.

Would Tax Baby Carts.

The opponents of the bill, led by Stovall, of Elbert, and Sheppard, of Sumter, tried to defeat the bill by poking fun at it. To that end half a dozen amendments were offered of a facetious nature, but all were voted down.

Oliver, of Quitman, wanted to amend the bill to tax wagons and buggies in relation to their "horse-power;" Smith, of Fulton County, wanted to amend the bill to place a tax of $1 on all goats and wagons, and Estes, of Lincoln, offered an amendment that placed a tax on ox carts and baby carriages.

Other amendments included those by Lee, of Wilkinson, who wanted to double the tax; Culpepper, of Meriwether, to require two license numbers instead of one, and Myrick, of Chatham, that the autoist register his number with the clerk of his town.

School Tax Bill Up.

Consideration of the bill offering to the voters a constitutional amendment limiting the levy for school purposes to two and one-half mills was begun immediately after the passage of the automobile tax bill, and was in progress when the House adjourned at 1 o'clock. It will be continued at the afternoon session.

The bill for the constitutional amendment was offered by Speaker Burwell, and has the indorsement of the Administration. The Speaker took the floor and spoke for half an hour urging the passage of the bill.

Others who spoke on the bill at the morning session were Representatives Stovall, of Elbert, who opposed it; Shuptrine, of Chatham, who favored it; Fullbright, of Floyd, who is in favor of the measure; Meadows, of Wayne, who opposes it, and Barry Wright, of Floyd, who is against the bill. Mr. Wright had the floor when the House adjourned.

Fulton Legislators Asked to Supplant County Fee System

By unanimous vote the Board of County Commissioners passed a resolution Wednesday requesting the local representatives in the Legislature to draft a bill abolishing fees for county officials and substituting the salary system. The board instructed the clerk, Henry M. Wood, to prepare a copy of the bill and present it at once to the legislators.

At previous meetings of the board various officials had appeared to protest against the proposed change, but this time there was no protest.

The board heard from several delegations with petitions for street improvements. Those present were Chairman Shelby Smith and Commissioners S. B. Turman, Clifford L. Anderson, W. Tom Winn and Tull C. Waters.

Southern Railway Agents Convene at Georgian Terrace

The first session of the fifteenth annual meeting of the Southern Railway Agents' Association began Wednesday in the main dining room of the Georgian Terrace Hotel. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Woodward and W. L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce. A reply was made by President Walker of the Agents' Association.

Routine business was disposed of and short discussions of topics of interest to the agents followed. More than one hundred agents, representing the largest stations of the Southern Railway system, are here for the meeting, which will last through Friday.

Officers of the association are C. G. Walker, Louisville, Ky., president; E. J. Coffey, East St. Louis, Ill., vice president; D. L. Bryan, Augusta, Ga., treasurer, and W. J. Townsend, Columbia, S. C., secretary. J. M. Fagan is chairman of the executive committee.

Americans in Mexico City Declare Removal of Envoy Wilson Was a Mistake.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—Prominent members of the American colony today expressed the opinion that the administration at Washington had made a mistake in removing Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson at this time.

President Wilson's action in sending John Lind, former Governor of Minnesota, here on a special mission has given Provisional President Huerta another excuse to protest against outside interference. That Huerta is becoming exceedingly angry at the Washington Government is evident.

Two unofficial envoys have been sent here within the past six months to study the situation and to report to President Wilson on actual conditions and their presence has piqued Huerta.

Jingoes are making capital out of the present status of affairs by declaring that the United States is afraid of Mexico and will not make any move which would inflame the populace.

Lind Will Investigate Charges Against Envoy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—One of the first duties devolving on former Governor Lind of Minnesota, when he arrives at Mexico City as personal representative of President Wilson, will be to check certain features of the report by Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson and to find out whether certain charges made against the former envoy have any foundation.

It is expected that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy will aid in ascertaining how American influence in the Mexican Captal has been used for the past two years.

At Vera Cruz he will confer with Admiral Fletcher, who will report on conditions in Frontera, Tampico and other points on the east coast. Mr. Lind desires to strip his mind of all possible misinformation he may have acquired through inspired sources before taking any action.

The special envoy will leave Galveston to-morrow on the battleship New Hampshire, it was announced at the Navy Department to-day, and it is expected he will be in Vera Cruz within 36 hours and in Mexico City within 48 hours after he leaves the Texas port.

Sidney Dell, Once Atlanta Attorney, Dead in California

News has been received in Atlanta of the death July 24 near Los Angeles of Sidney Dell, once a leading attorney and prominent Mason in Atlanta. Mr. Dell's wife found him dead in bed. The funeral was held July 28 from the residence in Glendale, near Los Angeles.

Mr. Dell was in Atlanta about the same time that Woodrow Wilson was here, but left soon afterward for the West to seek his fortune. He was elected mayor of Portland and missed, by only a few votes, election to the governorship of Oregon. He went to Washington State and thence, twenty years ago, to Los Angeles.

He claimed to have discovered the right of Los Angeles to tide lands at the harbor worth $50,000,000, which the city gained through the courts. Mr. Dell sought a fee for his services but he never was rewarded.

Among lodgemates of Mr. Dell in Atlanta were General A. J. West and other well-known citizens, who remember Mr. Dell as an unusually brilliant attorney and champion of municipal rights.

35c to 59c All-Linen Cluny Laces at 19c

Visiting merchants can make big profits by buying and reselling them at home

The Aftermath of Inventory! Stock Sheets show that 687 yards of all-linen Cluny laces remain. These are fashionable laces. You have already bought this season more than ten times the amount we have left. But "good" as the laces are they were bought for summer, and must sell in their season. Prices, therefore, drop from 35c, 39c, 50c and 59c to 19c.

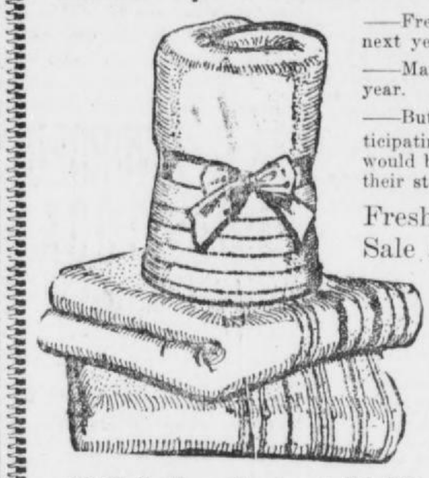

——These are real linen laces in the charming Cluny patterns. (See window display.)
——Since every thread is purest linen, the laces will wash and wear indefinitely.
——Handloom work, hence the designs are intricate, interesting and artistic.
——Matched sets of edges and insertings, in widths from 4 to 7 inches.
——Ideal for trimming bed spreads, table covers and household linens.
——Not a yard worth less than 35c; many yards worth 39c, 50c and 59c; choice 19c.

Bath Mats, Soft, Luxurious & Absorbent

at Prices a Third to a Half Less Than Regular

These bath mats are the product of the best mill in America. In consideration of heavy orders placed throughout the year, they favor us at certain seasons with their accumulation of "seconds"—bath mats which because of some slight defect fail to pass the critical eye of the inspector as absolutely perfect. The "hurts," however, are hard to find; in fact, scarcely noticeable. Each bath mat will give perfect satisfaction.

The bath mats are big thirsty fellows that will soak up water like a sponge. Thick and comfy; soft and luxurious. Firmly looped threads. They should wear almost forever. In various colors and sizes. This is the price range:

39c; values 50c to 65c.
49c; values 75c and 85c.
69c; value $1.00.
89c; value $1.25
$1.50; value $3.00.

300 Factory Women Gamble on Baseball

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball pools, have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed has been held in bail by Magistrate Coward, having been charged with operating a pool.

Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games in Reed's place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost 25 cents each.

China Picks Cornell Grad to Replace Wu

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, CHINA, Aug. 6.—The government, according to latest information, intends to appoint Alfred Sze, a Cornell graduate, as Minister to Washington. It planned to make Wu Ting-fang Ambassador, but the American Government did not agree to raise the status of the legation here and this necessitated the nomination of a junior.

Mr. Sze was nominated Minister to Washington in 1911, but did not go to his post on account of the revolution.

ATLANTA IS 16TH CITY IN U. S. IN PARCEL POST

Remarkable Increase in Volume of Mail Here Arouses Favorable Comment in Washington.

Postmaster Hugh McKee declared Wednesday that the large increase in the amount of mail handled in the Atlanta postoffice was the subject of favorable comment in Washington among department officials.

During the past year more than 50,000,000 letters, not including newspapers and periodicals were stamped or canceled in the Atlanta postoffice This is an increase over the previous year of about 15,000,000 letters.

Showing the progressive spirit of Atlanta merchants in taking advantage of the new parcel post, Mr. McKee said: "We are handling more than 7,000 parcel post packages per day, which is more than are handled in Louisville, Indianapolis and other cities twice the size of Atlanta. The Atlanta office ranks sixteenth in the number of parcel post packages handled in the United States.

"Here in the postoffice we have a chance to keep close tab on Atlanta's activity and correspondence, and I will say that the growth in mail business since I came into office has been marvelous, and scarcely seems believable when you compare the books of previous years with the fiscal year just ended."

Empire Life Plans 20-Story Building

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—Meetings of the building committee of The Empire Life Insurance Company were held here yesterday and to-day to decide on plans and specifications for the new building upon which work will start here on October 1. It is understood the building will be twenty stories.

The members of the committee are W. W. Reid, Atlanta; M. P. Pope, Washington; and H. C. Lorick, H. H. Stafford and C. E. Whitney, Augusta.

CHILD DIES IN VINEGAR.

PARIS, ILL., Aug. 6.—Falling head foremost into an 8-gallon jar of vinegar, Lester David, aged 2 years, son of George David, a farmer, was drowned before his mother could rescue him.

Voliva in Power at Zion City Bars Rum, Drugs and Tobacco

ZION CITY, ILL., Aug. 6.—A city free from beer, whisky, drugs and tobacco was planned to-day by Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor of John Alexander Dowie as the head of Zion City. Voliva's followers dominate the City Council. Counting the women voters of the city, his forces can re-elect its own city officers at the next election.

Beer wagons passing through the streets of Zion City will be prohibihited the use of the streets after the passage of an ordinance Voliva was preparing to-day.

The ordinance will give city authorities the right to go into a man's own home and arrest him for using tobacco.

No drug store will be permitted within the city limits after the adoption of the ordinance.

French Want Trading Base North of Canal

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The commission sent by the French Government to study the effect upon French commerce of the opening of the Panama Canal reports unfavorably upon the establishment of a commercial base either on Guadaloupe or Martinique. These French possessions in the West Indies are too far south of the regular Panama route, says the commission, and shippers will rather coal in Porto Rico or Cuba.

Lieutenant Hallier, representing the Minister of Marine, recommends, however, the establishment of a naval station at Fort DeFrance, Martinique.

Bankrupt Town Has To Let 'Skeeters Nip

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 6. Invaded by a swarm of mosquitoes, this town is too poor to fight them.

The Board of Health asked the Council for $1,000 to fight the pests, and the Council replied that it could not make the appropriation.

CHANGE IN MILITIA LAWS IS OPPOSED

The House Committee on Military Affairs put its members on record Wednesday morning as upholding the present military laws of the State, which give the militia supreme authority during riots and other disturbances, when it reported unfavorably the bills introduced by Mr. Slade of Muscogee. Mr. Slade's bills repealed the act of 1912, and re-established the act of 1910, making the militia subservient to the civil authorities.

Mr. Slade, dissatisfied with the action of the committee, served notice that he will ask the unanimous consent of the House that his bills be placed on the calendar for consideration.

Chairman Spence, of the Military Affairs Committee, stated that he will endeavor to get the members of his committee together Wednesday afternoon for a reopening of the Augusta investigation. He stated that both sides of the trouble will be heard. Several witnesses from Augusta have been requested to attend the meeting and Adjutant Gneral Nash and several militia officers also will be present.

Mr. Spence several times has expressed his opinion that a legislative investigation of the Augusta trouble is useless.

Beware, Poseurs, of 'Soul Photos'

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—"With the development of 'soul photography,'" the latest addition to the picture maker's are, says Miss Emma Gerhard, "the modern photographer will vie with the old masters in producing pictures that will live forever.

"It is wholly a matter of art," said Miss Gerhard. "It consists of bringing out in the subject what is really in him or her, not in making an artificial reproduction of his features and clothes.

"Every human being is constantly posing. There are a thousand and one little superficial things about every man and woman which cover up the real self, and these things overshadow all else in photographs."

PARDON DENIED HAWTHORNE BY M'REYNOLDS

Attorney General Ignores Recommendation of Board Which Made Special Inquiry.

Despite the fact that the Federal Pardon Board strongly recommended after a thorough investigation, that pardons be granted to Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, who are imprisoned in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary on charges of using the mails to defraud in the sale of mining stocks, Attorney General McReynolds has issued a statement from Washington that he has decided to override the recommendations of the board and refuse clemency to the two men.

The action of McReynolds is almost unprecedented in the history of the Department of Justice. The Board of Pardons made the Hawthorne case a subject of thorough and exhaustive investigation. It came to Atlanta and went into every detail of the case. At the end of the investigation it made the Hawthorne case the subject of a special report and a special recommendation for clemency. It had been intimated that the writer had been the scapegoat for others.

Mr. McReynolds' excuse for refusing to grant a pardon to Hawthorne is that he and Dr. Morton have been shown enough leniency.

It is generally understood that one result of Mr. McReynolds' actions in the Hawthorne case will be the redoubling of the efforts of the writer's friends and the case may be taken to President Wilson.

Under the ruling of the Attorney General, Hawthorne and Morton must remain in prison until October. The trial judge, in sentencing them, dated their terms back a year and a day, and their time will be up in about two months.

Deputy Warden Hawk, of the Federal Prison, stated Wednesday morning that the prison authorities have as yet received no formal notification that a pardon had been refused Hawthorne. He stated, however, that it is not usual for them to do so. They are notified when a pardon has been granted, but never when one has been refused.

FOUR KILLED IN WRECK CAUSED BY WASHOUT

L. and N. Freight Engine Submerged—Three of Train Crew and Negro Tramp Perish.

Imprisoned in a locomotive submerged under fifteen feet of water, three members of the crew and a negro tramp met death early Wednesday morning when the Louisville and Nashville freight train No. 5, southbound, ran into a washout a few miles north of Marietta.

The dead are S. K. Farris, the engineer; Fireman Shenell and Brakeman R. P. Merrell, all of Etowah, and the unknown negro.

The wreck was on the Western and Atlantic tracks near Noonday station, and, according to Superintendent J. L. McCollum, was caused by the washout.

The embankment gave way before the engine pulling 30 cars, and the locomotive was thrown into the gully, twelve cars piling on it. Part of the train crew, including Conductor J. L. Brenenizer, was in the caboose on the rear and escaped.

The wrecked train was coming to Atlanta, due here at 7:25 a. m.

Forest Fire Imperils Cape Cod Villages

HYANNIS, MASS., Aug. 6.—With more than forty square miles of Cape Cod timber devastated by a roaring forest fire that has caused a loss of more than $250,000, the fate of this town and nearby villages hung in the balance to-day.

Summer residents have placed automobiles at the disposal of the fire fighters and touring cars and limousines are transporting gallons of water.

Mrs. Anna E. Ham is the name by which the new postmaster is known to her friends.

JOYNER'S SLAYER ELUDES CAPTURE

Screven County Negro Completely Disappears After Tragedy Near Sylvania—Six Arrests.

SYLVANIA, Aug. 6.—Cleveland Michael, the slayer of Dine Joyner, a Screven County farmer, is still uncaptured, no clew whatever being found that would suggest the whereabouts of the murderer. Dogs from the Bulloch County chaingang were put on the trail, but it was too cold for them to make any headway. Men were stationed at all bridges across the Ogeechee River, as it was thought he would make an effort to reach Bulloch, where he has relatives.

A full description of this negro has been published and pictures of him are in the hands of officers in adjoining counties. Six other negroes that were thought to have been plotting with Michael to kill Joyner are in jail here.

More than 500 persons attended the funeral of Joyner at Friendship Church.

JUSTICE AND MERCY IN GEORGIA

"A bruised read shall he not break.
"And the smoking flax shall he not quench."---Isaiah 42:3.
"I will have mercy."---Matt. 11:17.

Justice and mercy for the friendless!

The Senate, without a dissenting vote, has passed the bill providing for Probation.

With only three men voting against it, the Senate has also passed the bill providing for the Indeterminate Sentence.

These two bills are now before the House, having been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee.

And yesterday, Tuesday, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY saved the Girls' Reformatory from oblivion; he called a special meeting of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the Jones-Mills Bill; THE RESULT, it is believed, will be the building of the Reformatory for Girls in Georgia.

Representatives GRIFFIN, GREENE of Houston and BERRY, members of the sub-committee that considered the original bill and reported it back carrying an appropriation of $30,000.00 to the committee for action, spoke in favor of it.

Messrs. CONNOR and METHVIN advocated its adoption.

JOHN Y. SMITH of Fulton then moved that the Committee report favorably the bill as amended.

In favoring this motion, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY explained that he had favored the bill from the beginning.

Both the Chairman and the members of the Committee recognize the APPALLING AND IMMEDIATE NEED for the Reformatory for Girls; they unanimously adopted the motion recommending that the bill, carrying an appropriation of $30,000.00, be passed.

The Prison Commission has urged that the home be built, pointing out that Georgia has no place in which to handle wayward and delinquent girls. And the Penitentiary Committee has also without a dissenting vote recommended the passage of the Jones-Mills Bill providing for the Home.

Remember! This home is not to deal with the hardened woman of the streets, but with children.

To-day if a GIRL OF ELEVEN, TWELVE OR FOURTEEN gets in trouble, there is no place in Georgia either to protect or help her.

This shame is unendurable. To-day seventy-five girls under sixteen years old known to us are without a place.

What will YOU do?

No man has opposed—and it is believed that no man can or will oppose—the bill either in the House or the Senate.

To-day Georgia looks to the Rules Committee of the House.

SPEAKER BURWELL, who is ex-officio its Chairman, and BLACKBURN of Fulton its Vice Chairman, and the men serving with them in the Committee on Rules, namely Messrs. HARDEMAN, MILLER, NUNNALLY, PAULK of Berrien, REDWINE, RHODES, SHUPTRINE, SLADE AND RAGLAND, are to decide whether or not the State will take care of her delinquent and wayward girls—

Whether or not the State shall have Probation and the Indeterminate Sentence—

Whether or not Georgia will take her stand with her Sister States in giving Justice and Mercy to the unfortunate.

Those who know these men believe that they will NOT KILL, but WILL HELP to pass these measures.

Those who know Georgia believe that the men of the House and of the Senate will gladly give the brief time necessary to make these bills the law of Georgia.

They harm no one. But they help the helpless.

They mean life to many a home in Georgia where worse than death—dishonor and shame—will reign if these bills are not enacted into laws at this session of the Legislature.

What will you do?

The Executive Committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

CRASH FATAL TO 2 LAID TO BAD AUTO BRAKE

Car Rolled Into Train's Path, Declares J. P. Heard, Whose Wife and Son Were Killed.

Struck by a Southern Railway train when their automobile went dead on the tracks of a crossing a mile north of McDonough, Ga., late Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Emma Heard, wife of J. P. Heard, of Vienna, Ga., and her ten-year-old son, Lio Lindon Heard, were killed.

Mr. Heard leaped from the car when he saw it would be impossible to escape the crash, and escaped with a few bruises. Mrs. Heard and her son were caught in the cowcatcher of the locomotive and dragged 50 feet.

The bodies of Mrs. Heard and her son were taken to Vienna. The funeral will be held there Wednesday afternoon. They were well known in Atlanta, and many friends of the family here will attend the funeral.

Mrs. Heard was Miss Emma Lashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lashley, and was a leader in the social life of her community. She is survived by her husband, who is a son of the late Senator Heard and president of the Heard Banking Company, and her parents.

Mr. Heard Tells of Accident.

Statements made Wednesday morning by Mr. Heard and J. L. Mable, engineer of the train, indicate that the accident was unavoidable and was the result of the failure of the emergency brake of the automobile.

"My wife, my son Lindon and myself left our home in Vienna, in my two-passenger roadster," said Mr. Heard, "to attend the motorcycle races in Atlanta. We passed through McDonough about 2 o'clock. Ten minutes later we passed over the brow of a long steep hill that leads down to the railroad tracks. A train can not be seen until the crossing is almost reached. We were only a few yards from the track when Mrs. Heard saw the train coming and shouted.

"We were going about 25 miles an hour. I at once shut off my engine and applied the brake, but it failed to work. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable, I leaped from the car and shouted for Mrs. Heard and my son to do likewise. They were probably too frightened to do so. The next thing I remember was hearing their screams as the train struck them."

Engineer Gives His Version.

Engineer Mable declared that when he saw the automobile he applied airbrakes, but the crossing was too near for the air to take effect before the automobile was struck.

"I was running about 25 miles an hour and the crossing was about a hundred yards ahead of me when I saw the automobile. The car was running as fast as my train, and had plenty of time to cross the tracks in front of me.

"When the machine got to within about ten yards of the track, it slowed down and rolled up until the front wheels of the car were on the tracks. Then it stopped. I at once applied the airbrakes, but too late to have any appreciable effect on the speed of the train."

Life Insurance Men Dine; Name Delegates

Atlanta members of the National Association of Life Underwriters enjoyed an informal banquet at Hotel Ansley Tuesday night and elected delegates to the annual convention of the organization in Atlantic City in September.

The delegates are F. W. Burr, J. H. Byrley, Paul H. Dobbins, W. R. Hawkins, R. F. Shedden and A. C. Newell. The following alternates were named: R. L. Foreman, Oscar Palmour, W. R. Hawkins, J. M. Skinner and R. J. Guinn.

Isadore Duncan's Motor Is Wrecked

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Isadora Duncan gave proof of her stoicism the other night when her chauffeur flung her car at full speed in pitch darkness against the closed barriers of a railway crossing at Mondragon village.

Instead of jumping out, under the stress of the ghastly memories of her children's fate, she remained in her seat and a little later reached Orange practically unhurt.

Gerard Threatens to Quit as Ambassador

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Justice James W. Gerard, of New York, the Ambassador to Germany, after inspecting all the available houses in Berlin, says that unless he succeeds in finding a place adapted to the requirements of himself, his family and the embassy, he was seriously considering declining the post of Ambassador.

He has been unable to find quarters, although he is willing to pay for them out of his private means.

'September Morn' Is 'Art' in Augusta

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—"September Morn" has made her appearance in Augusta. Many prints of the painting may be seen in a local bookstore window, but no arrest of the proprietor has been made or threatened arrest.

Augusta takes "September Morn" as a matter of course. The people here deem her graceful and the fact that she is minus a wardrobe does not cause any young girl to blush, for all have seen reproductions of real art before.

How and Why to Eat Watermelon

Cool, but do not chill Mr. Melon.

Cut it lengthwise, not in round slices.

Save the seeds, make "watermelon tea."

Use your teeth—not knives or forks.

Watermelon is refreshing and good for the stomach and kidneys.

P. S.—These tips are furnished by the "champeen" melon-eaters of Congress.

HOWARD ONE OF 8 BEST MELON EATERS

Georgia Congressman Right Up in Race for "Champeen" Title in Capitol Cafes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—State secrets on statesmen's appetites, and particularly watermelons during the present height of the watermelon season, were divulged to-day. The divulger is R. J. Martyn, "boss" of the Capitol Cafes.

Twenty big, fat watermelons are consumed by Congressmen every day, according to "Chef" Martyn. Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is the acknowledged "champeen" watermelon eater. He gets outside of from one to three big slices daily.

Other watermelon "fanatics" who appear to be crowding Clayton for the title are Representative Mann, of Illinois; Sereno Payne, of New York; Sims, of Tennessee; Dietrick, of Massachusetts; Austin, of Tennessee; Stedman, of North Carolina, and Howard, of Georgia.

Approached on his watermelon prowess, Clayton gave the following panegyric:

"Watermelon beats ice cream or lemonade all hollow as a cool refreshment. It is the most luscious, refreshing fruit possible to be secured in summer.

"Some people eat salt on watermelon. That is a mistake. Salt militates against its palatability and digestibility. I take mine straight.

"Watermelon is a splendid diuretic. It cleanses the whole digestive system.

"Watermelon seed tea is an old Southern remedy for kidney trouble.

"I don't care for thick-rind striped melons. I don't like the hybrids between the Georgie 'rattlesnake' melon and the 'scaly bark.' Some of these are a cross between a guinea melon and a horse gourd.

"The best melon grown is in Alabama, with a thin rind, a whitish melon. Lead me to them any time."

RICH MEN RULE CHURCH, SAYS RICHMOND

Morgan Held House of Rishops in Hollow of Hand, Asserts Episcopalian Rector.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—"Our House of Bishops is led in tow by Wall street. The lat J. P. Morgan was the power behind Bishop Greer, and he held our House of Bishops in the hollow of his hand.

"The cathedral on Morningside Heights is a standing monument to our New York corrupt money power. It is the embodiment of ecclesiastical snobbery, spiritual frippery and moral incompetency.

"Since the day of Bishop Potter the diocese of New York has been in control of half a dozen plutocrats. In Philadelphia the Episcopal Church is 'run' by a few rich men. They control the Bishop (Rhinelander), who, in mental ability, personal authority and moral aggressiveness is not, by any means, a great man.

"August Belmont is at the head of our race track gamblers. His career is one of the worst careers for an American youth to imitate. Yet he is prominent in the Church of the Ascension on lower Fifth avenue."

The foregoing quotations are from a sermon delivered in St. John's Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond.

"In most of the large parishes of the Episcopal Church throughout the country we find men like Belmont and the late J. P. Morgan, who curb the spiritual influence of the clergy, make them timid, and in the end cause them to shrivel up morally. Men in humble circumstances distrust our sincerity. The Episcopal Church is not sincere in its present assumed attitude toward labor.

"My own ecclesiastical superior Bishop Rhinelander, was elected two years ago," said Mr. Richmond, "largely through the push and pull of Wall street interests, corporation lawyers and social idlers, together with a few of our clergy among whom towered pre-eminently the Rev. Father Mortimer, of the 'High Church gang,' who has since been disposed from the ministry for gross immorality."

'Country-Bred Folks' Meet at Grant Park

The Country Collective Society will hold a meeting in the main pavilion in Grant Park Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The membership of the Society is made up of country-bred persons residing in and around Atlanta. It was organized to promote better friendship among the members, and to preserve the tradition of ante-bellum days in Dixie.

It is proposed to erect a log cabin in Grant Park and furnish it with old-fashioned articles. R. D. Hawkins is president and Robert P. Martin secretary.

Merchants on Tour Of Factories While Committees Work

Much detail work is yet to be accomplished in the organization of the Southern merchants' convention.

Wednesday will be devoted to work by the various committees, and an inspection of Atlanta's factories and stores by delegates and visitors.

A great deal of important work relating to crops, credit, stock questions and co-operation will come before the convention starting Thursday morning.

Adventists Report On Publishing Work

FORT VALLEY, Aug. 6.—The report of the publishing work of the denomination was the feature of to-day's business session of the Georgia Conference of Seventh-day Adventists which is meeting here in its ten-day annual encampment.

This report showed that the publishing work had grown from one small printing house worth $653, with five employees, printing two periodicals in one language in 1862, to 39 publishing houses, worth $1,175,092, with 610 employees, printing 126 periodicals in 71 languages in 1912.

Banker Gets 5 Years For Embezzlement

MOULTRIE, Aug. 6.—The jury trying J. H. Cason, former cashier of the Bank of Crossland, for embezzling more than $7,000, returned a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Thomas to five years in the penitentiary. G. F. Clark, president of the Crossland Bank, and Assistant State Bank Examiner Anderson, of Atlanta, were the principal witnesses for the prosecution.

It was with difficulty that Cason kept from collapsing as he stood up to hear his sentence. While making his statement to the jury he wept freely.

K. of C. Plan Change In Insurance Rates

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—The election of officers and the reports of the supreme officers featured the two business sessions of the delegates to the Knights of Columbus' thirty-first annual convention to-day. The sessions were held at Hotel Somerset.

Important also among the probable actions of the delegates at to-day's sessions is the changing of the insurance laws so the assessments may rest more easily on the older members.

Aero Manufacturer Fails for $6,000,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Extravagent living and speculation in the silk trade were declared to-day to have caused the downfall of Armand Duperdessin, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of fraudulently raising millions of dollars for the extension of his aeroplane factory.

M. Duperdessin's liabilities amount to $6,000,000, whereas his assets are given at only $2,000,000.

COL. J. P. WILLIAMS DIES AT HIS HOME

Railroad and College Leader, Soldier and Philanthropist Was 70 Years Old.

Captain Jesse P. Williams, one of the best known men in Georgia, died at his home, 478 Peachtree street, Tuesday. He was 70 years old.

Captain Williams formerly operated one of the South's largest naval stores at Savannah. About seven years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and retired from active life, though he attended to his business affairs until the very last. He was president and principal owner of the Georgia, Florida and Southern Railroad.

Captain Williams was born in Wayne County, N. C. He attended the University of Virginia in the late fifties, going to Washington in company with other students of that institution to see Abraham Lincoln inaugurated. When Fort Sumter was fired upon he left the University and enlisted in the Twentieth North Carolina as a private, later rising to the rank of captain.

For many years he was president of the Boards of Trustees of Emory College, to which institution he gave two handsome buildings. He was a deeply religious man, and a steward in the Trinity Methodist Church.

Surviving Captain Williams are his wife; four sisters, Mrs. James Ezzell and Mrs. Olive B. Parks, Misses Hattie and Edith Taylor, of Mount Olive, N. C., and two brothers, Charles and George Williams, also of Mount Olive.

Funeral services will be held at the resident at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. J. E. Dickey, president of Emory College, will officiate, assisted by Bishop Candler. Interment will be at West View.

Cotton Schedule Is Scored by Lippit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Declaring that the schedules in the Democratic tariff bill relating to cotton, silk and wool are "capricious and illogical," Senator Lippitt, of Rhode Island, to-day advocated as substitute provisions the Dingley law rates with a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent.

"I believe the cotton manufacturers as a rule are willing to try the experiment of a reduction in the tariff," said Senator Lippitt. "They protest against revision."

FULTON COUNTY TO HAVE A CARD INDEX

Industrial Survey Ordered by the Chamber of Commerce To Be Best in United States.

Plans for an industrial survey of Fulton County, which will be one of the largest and most complete ever made in the United States, are now being formulated by the industrial and statistical bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. The work will be done by W. H. Leahy, chairman of the bureau, under the supervision of the committee, which is composed of J. R. Smith, E. H. Shaw, M. R. Wilkinson, V. H. Kriegshaber, W. T. Winn, A. R. Colcord, A. A. Floyd, David Woodward, W. R. Collier, and Wilmer L. Moore.

The work of Mr. Leahy and the committee will be to compile data, in card index form, of all manufacturing plants in the county, their output, source of raw material, cost of labor and production, number of employees and the payrolls, and the freight rates on raw materials and finished products.

A complete survey of all banking institutions and commercial enterprises will be made, and data will be obtained on all Southern headquarters of big corporations located in Atlanta and the truck gardening about the city.

The results of the survey will be published in a pamphlet which will be revised monthly. Other pamphlets relating to the commercial and industrial life of Atlanta will be published. Permission will be asked to place a large board in each railway station on which will be written statistics of Atlanta for the information of travelers.

Portugal's President Not Dead, Says Lisbon

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The reported death of President Ariaga, of Portugal, published in the morning newspapers here, is denied in a dispatch received from Lisbon at noon.

Senhor Ariaga is ill of a kidney ailment.

Largest Fire Chief In World Is Dead

PADUCAH, KY., Aug. 6.—James Wood, president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, is dead here.

He was the largest fire chief in the world, weighing 325 pounds.

President Asked to Visit 2 Dixie States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Senators Fletcher, of Florida, and Williams, of Mississippi, and Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, called on President Wilson to-day to invite him to visit their States should he conclude to make a Southern trip this fall.

The President said he would be glad to accept their hospitality should he make the trip. Senator Fletcher especially desires the President to visit Jacksonville, and Senator Williams brought a delegation from Meridian with him.

Mrs. Longstreet in A Rest Sanitarium

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, former postmaster at Gainesville, is under treatment in the sanitarium of Dr. J. H. Lowney here.

The long fight waged by Mrs. Longstreet to retain her commission as postmaster and the part she has taken in politics brought about a breakdown which required rest and medical attention.

Nobleman Sought by Matchmakers Weds

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Lord Rocksavage, heir of the Marquis of Cholmondeley and known in society as "the enigma of matchmaking mothers," ceased to be a riddle to-day when he was married to Miss Sybil Sassoon, an heiress and a leader in the young Bohemian set. Lord Rocksavage is very rich, while his bride is accredited with having a fortune of $10,000,000 in her own right. They were quietly married at a registry office.

'Wilsonade' Routs Bryan Grape Juice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—"Wilsonade," the new Capital drink, made of orange juice and plain water, has completely routed Bryan grape juice out of Washington.

President Wilson is sponsor for the new drink, and it is prepared especially for him in the White House kitchen each morning. A dash of powdered sugar may be added if desired.

MEDICAL MEN OF WORLD GATHER IN LONDON

Militants Threaten to Break Up Meeting at Which America Is Well Represented.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—With upward of 7,000 doctors present and every quarter of the world represented, the International Medical Congress was opened to-day in Albert Hall by Prince Arthur. It is the biggest gathering of its kind ever held.

Among the Americans here are Prof. Harvey W. Cushing, of Harvard University; Doctors Simon Flexner and S. J. Meltzer, of the Rockefeller Institute of New York; Dr. Theo. C. Janeway, Dr. Simon Baruch, Dr. Russell Fowler and Dr. Henry Koplik, all of New York; Dr. Rudolph Matas, of New Orleans; Dr. J. B. Murphy, of Chicago; Dr. F. L. Hupp, of Wheling, W. Va.; Dr. J. O. McReynolds, of Dallas, Texas; Surgeon General Charles F. Stokes, of the United States Navy, and Major Frederick E. Russell, of the Army.

More than 100 policemen were stationed about the hall to prevent any attack by militant suffragettes, who have threatened to break up the convention because their leaders were forcibly fed by medical men in prison. Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst issued a call to her followers to interrupt the medical congress at every opportunity.

"Prison doctors are trying to make imbeciles of suffragettes and the whole fraternity should be punished," said the militant leader.

Julian J. Zachry Denies Charges

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—Julian J. Zachry has made a statement here denying the charges preferred against him in South Carolina. Zachry says he believes Governor Slaton, when fully apprised of the facts, will refuse to grant requisition papers.

One of the charges is kidnaping. He says he does not see why he should be thus charged, when he took his child at the order of a South Carolina court.

He denies charges of ill treatment and cruelty to his children.

Neither Sheriff Crawford, of Columbia County, nor Sheriff Clark, of Richland County, will place Zachry under arrest, as they have no orders to do so. Zachry's attorneys and friends have assured Gov. Slaton that he will make no attempt to escape and that he is perfectly willing for Governor Slaton to hear the case and will cheerfully abide by his decision.

Department Store In Shark's Stomach

VENICE, CAL., Aug. 6.—In a post-mortem operation performed on a shark eighteen feet long, which was cast up on the sands here, the fish was shown to be a collector of no little ability. Here's a list of the contents of the stomach:

Sugar bowl, silver, engraved Pacific Coast S. S. Co., steamer President.
Three corset steels, nearly new.
Dice box, gutta percha.
Baby's shoe.
Four undigested halibut and numerous small fish.

Work Resumed at Thirty Copper Mines

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 6.—Reports from over the Calumet copper region, where 18,000 miners are on strike, indicated that quiet had been restored about all mine shafts. Work was resumed to-day at four mines in the neighborhood of Calumet, making a total of 30 in operation.

Mother Jones addressed a meeting of strikers here this afternoon.

Chicago Suburb in Anti-Negro Uprising

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The uprising in the fashionable suburb of Wilmette against negro residents there reached its crest to-day, and many servants and chauffeurs were out of jobs.

The town board is considering a memorial directed against a real estate firm which isaccused of encouraging negro emigration.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Motion pictures at the Grand have become decidedly popular. It is predicted that in the very near future the fad of going to the Grand to see the movies will be one of the daily matters of routine with thousands of people. The fact that the big building is cool, clean and safe, has added a healthy influence to people who want to see what is new in motion pictures with every convenience. The schedule of performances this week is from 2:30 until 5:15 each afternoon, and from 8:30 until 10:15 at night.

The Forsyth.

There is a splendid vaudeville entertainment at the Forsyth this week, despite the fact there is no feature headliner. It just happened that the Keith people were in position to secure the seven special acts, and each one has registered the sort of hit that has crowded the Forsyth at four performances, and built up an advance sale that has not very often been equalled. The hits are very evenly distributed.

At the Bijou.

The Bijou seems to improve the class of its entertainment each succeeding week. During the past ten weeks the popular theater has been devoted to popular priced musical comedies and each week has seen an improvement over the former, but the present week Lew Cantor's musical farce entitled "Along the Pike" is by far the most pretentious production that has been presented so far.

WANT AD GIVES GIRL START IN WORLD

Contestant Relates Story of How She Climbed, and Now She Knows Advertising Pays.

"I know I can secure want ads by the hundred, for I know what a want ad will do," said one young woman contestant when she entered The Georgian's want ad competition and started out to win an automobile or a trip to California. "I've had experience."

"I'll tell you," replied the young woman. "It lifted me from a $5 a week job to one at $12 and afterward to $15. I'm resting now for the summer and putting in my spare time on the contest.

"I was just beginning stenography when I found my first position. I started in at $5 a week, and though I kept improving in my work the boss just wouldn't give me a raise. He said he could get plenty of girls at that price. I had almost given up.

"One afternoon when he was away I was reading The Georgian and my eye happened to meet the 'Help Wanted, Female,' column. I had never taken interest in want ads before. But right under my nose was a little ad—'Wanted—a good stenographer. Salary $12.'

"I put on my hat, shut up my desk and went after that job, and got it. That's what a want ad did for me. And I can tell others what want ads will do, for I have confidence, and that goes a long way."

The contestants are rolling up votes right along, and those who are thinking of entering and winning first prize had better hurry. There is yet time to enter and get a start, but it will not pay to delay entering.

If You Don't Drink Do Not Read This

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Aug. 6. Henderson Hasty, of Easton, a small town near here, was stripped, plastered with a coat of warm tar and his face painted green last night by a party of citizens, determined to enforce observance of the prohibition law. Hasty was found asleep beside a road in Easton.

That he would sign the pledge is said to have been his declaration when he awoke.

Society Girl Now a $3 Millinery Clerk

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 5.—Miss Delphine Force, a pretty society girl and daughter of wealthy parents, is now a millinery apprentice at $3 a week and says she likes the work. She recently quit society pleasures to become a professional cook.

Miss Force plans to be a teacher of domestic science at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., in the Fall, where millinery is part of the curriculum.

Gainesville Plans Ban on Cigarettes

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Several hundred citizens of Gainesville have petitioned City Council to pass an ordinance making it unlawful for any child under 16 years of age to smoke cigarettes at any place except at the homes of parents or guardians.

It is thought the ordinance will be passed.

BATTLE WITH MOONSHINERS.

LEXINGTON, Aug. 6.—George W. Castel and Sherman Lewis, deputy United States marshals, engaged in a battle with moonshiners in Morgan County, Kentucky, to-day. Lewis was shot in the arm by John Kidd. Marion Kidd was wounded and captured. A 35-gallon still and a lot of beer and whisky were destroyed.

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a Large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdom and Experience.

In almost any settled community there is a grandma who knows Mother's Friend. Not only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recommendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this famous remedy.

Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nausea, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments and prepares the system so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear.

No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Friend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restful. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. Write at once to Bradfield Regulator Company, 133 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their very interesting and instructive book of advice for expectant mothers.

Asks Special Judge To Hear Demurrer

COLUMBUS, Aug. 6.—Alleging that Hugh M. Mooty, a former bookkeeper for the Beehive, a large dry goods establishment in Columbus, is not a resident of Muscogee County, but of Fulton County, and that the Superior Court of this county has no jurisdiction over his affairs, his attorneys have asked for the appointment of a special judge to sit when their demurrer to a recent decision is heard.

Judge Gilbert held that the Clerk of Superior Court should name the judge, but Clerk Marcus held that as the litigation is before Judge Littlejohn, of the Americus circuit, he would refuse to name another jurist.

$1,200 GIVEN FOR BIG COTTON SHOW

Crushers Donate Fourth of the Amount Needed — Committees etG Promises of Support.

With $1,200, one-fourth of the amount needed, contributed by the Cotton Seed Crushers of Georgia, plans for a permanent exhibit of cotton products which it is proposed to establish in the new Chamber of Commerce building have received an impetus that bids fair to carry the project through. Other lines lines of the cotton industry of the State will be asked to contribute an amount in proportion to their importance, and it is thought the entire amount will be raised within a few weeks.

The gift of the Crushers was made through their chairman, W. M. Hutchinson, at a meeting late Tuesday afternoon of the cotton products committee of the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition Committee, of which Mell R. Wilkinson is chairman. The meeting was addressed by Mayor Woodward, Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Wilmer L. Moore, S. A. Carter and others.

Special committees for each branch of the cotton industry will be named Wednesday. These committees will confer with respresentatives of each line, including fertilizers, the textile industry, the cotton oil industry and ginning, and it will be determined to just what extent the movement for an exhibit will be supported.

Trots and Tangos Boon to Chiropodist

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The turkey trot and the tango are to the chiropodists equal to the goose that laid the golden eggs, says Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, the "girl with the perfect foot." Miss Houston, herself a chiropodist, says:

"Those dances put an unaccustomed strain on the toes and instep and since they started women have been flocking to chiropodists in droves to have their feet made over. I hope the craze lasts, but I would never dance any of those dances myself. I think too much of my feet."

BIRMINGHAMERS MAKE A HIT HERE

Atlanta Rotary Club Fills Members of Alabama Organization With Good Cheer.

The Birmingham Rotary Club, 32 strong, entrained at midnight Tuesday for the Alabama village, chuck full of the good cheer provided for them by the Atlanta Rotary Club, and joyful over the day spent in the Gate City.

Purely social was the visit of the Birminghamers, though the spirit of enthusiasm displayed augurs well for the growth of both clubs. Reaching Atlanta at 12:40, they were met by a delegation of fifteen members of the local club and escorted to Hotel Ansley, where they were entertained at luncheon. The afternoon was spent in sightseeing, the places of business of many of the members of the Atlanta Rotary Club coming in for an inspection.

At 7 o'clock the party went to the Capital City Club, where several hours were spent in good fellowship. The festivities broke up shortly before midnight, to enable the visitors to catch the train.

The modesty of Atlanta's business men was illustrated in the opening address of President Hubert Anderson. He described the speaker he was to introduce in flowery terms. He made of him the perfect man and the originator of all things great in Atlanta, and said: "Gentlemen, it is my honor to introduce to you—"

Instantly every member of the Atlanta Rotary Club was on his feet bowing and speaking. The laughter which followed is undoubtedly being heard on Twentieth street in Birmingham to-day.

23 Church 'Drones' Ousted by Elders

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 6.—Twenty-three members were forcibly removed from the First Baptist Church, of this city, last night by the deacons because of negligence in attending church.

No specific charge was made against any individual, but all of them were referred to as "drones" and guilty of "indifference and non-attendance."

IMPROVEMENT AT 'PEN' FARM URGED

Senate Committee Frames Recommendations After Inspecting Milledgeville Institution.

Following a visit to the State Prison Farm at Milledgeville Saturday the Senate Penitentiary Committee of which Senator Tarver, of the Forty-third, is chairman, will make several recommendations for improvement to the Senate.

One of these will be a recommendation for the construction of an annex to the present dormitory for negroes. Another provides for a waterworks system in the women's building.

There is a possibility also that the question of the present location of the prison farm will be considered with a view to removal, although this movement is not indorsed by a majority of the committee.

A further recommendation which probably will be made relates to the separation of the boys' reformatory from the prison farm.

Senator Tarver declared Tuesday that in his opinion this feature of the prison farm was bad, as the younger boys, although separated from the convicts, are sufficiently close to be influenced by the depressing influences of convict life.

Nine members of the Senate committee and one member from the House made the trip to Milledgeville.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But before he had worked his way half through he paused, stepped aside and took up his station against the wall in a position that gave him a good view of the scene, without attracting too much attention to himself. "Since I am at a swell wedding I might as well see the bride," he continued to himself, turning his gaze, however, in any other direction than that by which she was expected to descend. "If she looks more like her photograph than the other girl does, well and good, I am an old fool and it is about time for me to take down my sign and shut up shop. But if, on the contrary, she looks less like it; if her expression varies or she is fairer or larger than one would suppose from the picture they gave me, then I can lay the fault on the photographer and regain some portion at least of my self-esteem." And unmindful of the curious glances which now and then found him out, he retained his place through the weary minutes of waiting that now ensued, amusing himself as usual in gathering together such odds and ends of talk as floated by him and stowing them away in the storehouse of his brain, which already held so many secrets even of some of those who passed him by in gay apparel without a thought that the grave, quiet, rather benignant-looking man who was so occupied with the device on Mr. Gretorex's great hall clock was he who held in his keeping their fortune and possibly their good name.

A Sigh of Relief.

At length, with a sigh of relief that ran through the length of those vast parlors, the strains of the wedding march were heard, and Mr. Gryce, whose interest in the aforementioned device now because absolutely absorbing, shifted his portly figure a step or so, while the throng at his side pressed back and a path was made for Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex, and then after what seemed a long and unnecessary interval for the bride and groom, who, contrary to the usual arrangement, descended together. They passed near, very near that great hall clock; so near that the bride's veil brushed the homely habiliments of the man who stood there; but she did not notice this, nor to all appearance did he, for his eyes never left the clock, though a careful observer might have perceived that his lips pressed a little closer together after she went by, and that he did not wait for her to pass over the threshold of the parlor doof before taking his departure.

But no one thought of him. All eyes were on the bride, and little did any one think, least of all, she whom it most concerned, that the faint, half-suppressed click which they had just heard denoted the withdrawal of one whose powers of observation were more to be dreaded than were those of the whole vast crowd he had left behind him. If she had—but our interest is not at present with the bride, pale and troubled as she is, but with this man who but a short time ago entered the house with feelings of almost beneficent concern for its inmates, only to leave it now, with a sore and humiliated heart.

For in the one glimpse he caught of the bride—and he saw her, though he did not appear to do so—he had discerned nothing to relieve his dissatisfaction with himself. If the other girl was like the picture, this pale, haughty self-contained woman was the picture itself. There was no mistaking this much, as his pride would have been gratified to have found it otherwise.

Details that were lacking in the other girl's countenance were here, and an expression which made him acknowledge to himself that he would henceforth trust no man's eyes, not even his own, in this delicate matter of identification, the least shade of a look making sometimes all the difference between one person and another. He went out of the house, feeling, as I have said, very old, and he even was conscious of a twinge or two of rheumatism as he stepped down the icy steps and prepared to take his way round the house to the street. For this reason perhaps, and also because the walk was more or less slippery, he went very slowly, so that he was just at the corner of the house when that startling scream was heard, which as we know so seriously distured the minds of those who were witnessing the ceremony. A muffled cry it was, and to those outside sounded as if it came from the upper story of the house. But when the detective paused and looked up at the windows overhead he saw nothing, and being in a very indifferent mood, went on his way, remembering the occurrence only as a sort of lagubrious echo to the rather melancholy thoughts in which he had been at that moment indulging.

At the Hotel.

His courst was toward the city. He took it direct, getting on the elevated train at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and getting off again at Twenty-third. Why Twenty-third? Was it not late enough for him to go home? He evidently did not think so. Without hesitation and with a certain determination of manner, he went immediately to the C—— Hotel.

Let us follow him.

"Well, I suppose the wedding has come off."

These were his words to the clerk who was still at his desk in the office.

The clerk looked at him and laughed.

"No," was his quick rejoinder, "it didn't. The bride absconded."

"What is that?"

Mr. Gryce's tone was quite sharp. His face resumed its old expression.

"She ran off; didn't wait for the clergyman; afraid to risk herself with such a glum-looking customer as Moles-Molesworth, I suppose. I can't say I blame her."

"Humph! You interest me. And at what hour was this; how soon after we left?"

"In a few minutes, I should say; for you had not been gone more than half worth. I suppose, I can't say I blame came with the Rev. Mr. Pease at his heels, and she was not here then, nor had been some little time."

"Who saw her go out?"

"The hall boy."

"No one else?"

"I think not."

"Didn't she leave any word behind her?"

"Yes, a note; it was laying on the table in her room. Molesworth got it."

"The door then was open?"

"It was unlocked."

"Curious. There seems to be some difficulty in the way of wedlock tonight. I have just come from a wedding and the bride was three-quarters or more an hour late. But Molesworth, as you call him—how did he take it?"

"That's hard telling; he looked grim enough, but then he was none too cheerful looking before. Anything but a bridegroom in appearance at any time. But, then, it was rather hard lines for him. 'Twould make any man angry; Mr. Pease on hand, and no bride! I declare, I felt cheap myself; and the chambermaid, I believe, shed tears, grieving over the loss of the good fee she expected, I suppose."

"Yes, it's quite thrilling, quite romantic," quoth Mr. Gryce, enthusiastically. Then, in quieter tones, remarked: "You were all in the room, then?"

He Was no Fool.

"No, I didn't know anything about it till Dr. Molesworth came down, and, giving me the price of the room, remarked that there would be no wedding at present, the young lady having preferred to wait till she could have her friends about her."

"Ah!" ejaculated Mr. Gryce.

"Neat, wasn't it?" remarked the clerk. "But he is no fool; and though I knew on the spot that she had run away for good, I couldn't help giving him credit for coolness. But it was all in his words; his look was terrible."

Mr. Gryce's eyes fixed themselves on the small lamp used to light cigars.

"I can imagine it," said he.

"But he wasn't tragic; not a bit of it," continued the clerk. "Not even when he took out the note he had evidently received from the girl, and burned it in the flame of that jet."

"Oh! he burned it, did he?"

"Down to the very end."

"And then went away?"

"Directly."

"Well, this has been a delightful evening!" commented Mr. Gryce; and he lounged away a few more minutes in the office; then went out, and, entering a drug store near by, searched for an address in the directory.

"I can not sleep; why, then, not amuse myself?" his look seemed to say, as, glancing up at the clock, he passed again into the street and betook himself westward.

Certainly one does not run across such a complication every day, and when one is a detective, why not enjoy now and then the advantages of his position?

Mr. Gryce went up the steps of a four-story brick building to which was attached a doctor's sign.

A middle-aged woman, of neat enough appearance, answered his ring, after a short delay.

"Is the doctor in?" he asked.

She shook her head, and glancing at a slate that hung on one of the pegs of the old-fashioned hallrack, declared:

"He won't be home before to-morrow."

"And I am so ill," murmured the detective, with an air of great weakness. He had read her character at a glance.

"You!" she exclaimed.

"And I have come so far," he went on. "I thought surely I should see him to-night, if I came late enough. I know he is going to be married soon, but——"

"Married!" The interruption was full of surprise and incredulity. "Married! Dr. Molesworth! I guess you are mistaken."

"Oh, no," the old gentleman persisted, assuming with every instant a look of greater distress.

"I had it from one who knows him intimately. He is going to be married, but sensible girls don't keep their lovers out too late, and I thought I might find him in. I wish I had, for when I have these turns nothing but opium will help me, and the drug clerks won't give it to me without a doctor's prescription. I must go on."

But the old lady's sympathy as well as curiosity had been aroused. She was a widow and a boarding-house keeper, but she had a heart and was not afraid of showing it.

The Landlady.

She therefore stopped him as he hobbled toward the door, and, showing him the way into the parlor, asked him to sit down by the fire and warm himself a moment before going out.

"I am sitting up," she explained, "because there are still four or five of my young men out, and as I do not give night-keys to any one but the doctor, I have to sit up, or ask some of my hard-working girls to do so. It is deary waiting sometimes, but, on the whole, they are considerate, and I don't complain."

Then as she saw, or thought she saw, the old gentleman's face grow brighter in the really genial glow of the good hard-coal fire before them, she asked in a hospitable tone if he had ever heard whom the doctor was going to marry.

He shook his gray hairs indifferently, picked out with his glance a coal in the fireplace, and began to study it intently.

"I never paid it any attention," said he. "I am getting too old to busy myself much about such matters; and girls are all the same to me, unless it be one girl," he added, with a half-senile, half-pathetic smile, taking from his pocket as he did so a photograph which he looked at fondly.

"Your daughter?" inquired the old lady.

"My granddaughter," he replied, with enthusiasm.

She leaned over as women will at the sight of any picture in the hand of another, and quietly looked at it.

"Good heavens," she exclaimed, "it is Mildred Farley."

"Mildred Farley," he repeated, in mild surprise, "I never heard that name. This is Joanna Handscombe."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Ballroom Tango

A Pretty and Refined Way of Dancing This Popular Whirl

"First of all," says Miss Witchie, "be sure you have good music. Then make sure you know how to point your toe gracefully." This movement is shown in the top picture.

"Then take a waltz position."

(Posed by Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs.)

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"THERE is nothing new under the sun"—as we have been frequently informed, but there are new combinations of all the old ideas, and a clever combination of five or six old things results in one brand new one. Just a year or two ago we fully persuaded ourselves that tangos and turkey-trots and bunny hugs and monkey wrenches were the latest things—but they weren't, bless you—no! They were cakewalks and barn dances and two-steps arranged in a to-be-well-shaken-before-taken conglomeration and accompanied by a little hula-hula or other music native to any other soil but our own.

A New Combination.

Now two of New York's cleverest dancers have thought up a fascinating new combination and permutation of steps taken from the tango Argentina, the Spanish bolero and the beautiful and so completely forgotten as to be really new minuet. In a little three-cornered chat with Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs, of Lew Fields' "All Aboard" company, now playing at the Forty-Fourth Street Roof Garden, I learned just how to do the new tango bolero, as they mean to call it. Of course, most of us lack the inherent grace, the careful training and the untiring study of their artistic calling that the clever couple bring to make their dancing a thing of beauty—even if it is, alas! a joy for but a few fleeting moments instead of the hours and hours one would gladly sit and study their twinkling twirls.

"But we'll show you just how and we'll tell you just how," said pretty little Miss Katherine, "and then if you practice and practice, and if every one who reads follows the same course—why, when we introduce our dance every one will have that at-home feeling of knowing just how to join in the chorus.

Good Music Essential.

"First of all, be sure you have good music—the tango and the bolero. Then make sure that you know how to point your toe gracefully in somewhat the way the ballet dancers do. Then take a waltz position, girl's right hand on her partner's left shoulder, man's left hand at the back of his partner's waist, the other hands clasped loosely and held almost at shoulder height, faces turned toward the outheld arms, and correspondingly the girl's left and the man's right foot pointing straight in the direction of the arm.

"Now, to tango music take the eight steps and the long gliding slide and recoving stamp that are characteristic of this dance of Spanish extraction via Argentina. Then with arms still pointing to the girl's left, do the same steps toward the right. Swing into all the tango steps you know and can do easily and gracefully, and then suddenly the music changes to the real Spanish bolero—little grapevine in and out and in and out by the upstretched fingers. At the end of this movement he is holding her at arm's length, his lifted right arm holding her left hand, and from this position he draws her around in front of him and they do a little flying forward step in perfect unison, right arms held together and weight on the right foot at the beginning of the movement, and left foot pointing to the back and dropping slowly to take the weight.

"Do this back and forth eight times in tango style, and then swing into figure three—hands clased in front, and girl's left and man's right foot pointing toward the side back in a knee-hight position parallel to the floor. Swing from foot to foot, looking in the direction of the uplifted foot; do this eight times, as for all dances of the tango family. And now for the pretty little minuet finish—you, Katherine, please."

Very Fetching.

And murmuring something about "in at the finish," Miss Witchie concluded our profitable little chat with a description of the quaint and dainty steps.

"It is the conventional dancing minuet bow. The man holds his partner's outstretched right hand in his left, with right hand on heart, and left toe pointing forward. The girl points her right foot, and holds her right arm poised with upturned wrist, and then gradually through eight bars they separate into a deep curtsey. Don't you think that a dear little conclusion to our tango-bolero? And don't you think it would be perfectly polite to dance that in any ballroom?"

Perfectly polite, and very fetching and pretty, I think, don't you? And I hope we may all learn to do it with a fraction of the dainty grace and modesty shown by its inventors.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ISN'T IT LATE TO ASK THAT?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am dead in love with a young man of twenty. He says he would not take the whole world for me, and he says that he could not live without me. He has asked me to marry him. I accepted his offer and he gave me a diamond ring last year. I have been going with him for the past two years. I am a girl of eighteen. Do you think that I should marry him or wait?

Neither could live without the other, and this condition has lasted two years.

M. F.

Under the circumstances, my dear, isn't it late to ask such a question? If there is any bar to your marriage further than that of your youth and his, you do not state what it is.

THERE IS A WAY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20 and in love with a girl of 19, and if I don't win this girl I'll go crazy. I proposed, but her parents object because I am of a different religion. The girl loves me, but she waits for her parents' consent. Will you please help me to win this girl, because I think of her all the time?

THOMAS.

She will not marry without her parents' consent, and she is right. You say their objection is based on your church. You do not say what your church is, but do you love the girl so much you would change it?

I do not advise it. I simply suggest that the means of overcoming the objection to you lies in yourself. You must not demand that the girl make the sacrifice.

"My wife," said Mr. Clarke, "sent ten dollars in answer to an advertisement of a sure method of getting rid of superfluous fat."

"And what did she get for the money? Was the information what she wanted?" asked Mr. Simmons.

"Well, she got a reply telling her to sell it to the soap man."

.:. The Snake Charmer .:.

By INGLIS ALLEN.

THE long, lighted car sweeps swiftly up through the night, and the little man, waiting on the curb by my side, deftly extinguishes his cigarette against his coat sleeve and mounts the step before me.

I enter and seat myself by the door, idly noting that the car is otherwise empty save for a huge male form sprawling in the corner at the further end. Opposite me the little man has closed weary eyes. For my own part, I fall to watching through the doorway the crawling market carts, with their huddled drivers, as one by one we overtake and leave them behind.

A touch on my elbow disturbs my contemplations. I turn to find that the large man was vacated his corner and is leaning confidentially toward me.

"'Ere," he observes with a mysterious air, "I want to speak to you."

He is a very large man, indeed, in whom the absence of a collar is made the more noticeable by a high-colored flannel shirt open at the neck. He has twisted himself in his seat so as to face me, and, with sudden disquietude, I make the discovery that the breast of his shirt is undulating with the movements of some live body beneath it. With triumpnant eyes fixed on mine, he inserts his hand beneath the garment, and, withdrawing it impressively, holds up a particularly repulsive-looking snake for my inspection.

"I'm always doing this," he remarks with delight. "I'm an' me's pals. Teddy I call 'im. After my wife's father."

I express my satisfaction at this highly sociable state of affairs and at the same time the conductor makes his appearance.

He accepts a coin mechanically from the semi-somnolent man opposite, his gaze straying curiously over his shoulder toward my neighbor.

A Bedfellow.

The latter, overjoyed at his attention, persuades the snake to further vagaries.

"I'm always doin' this," he explains with the same delight. "Teddy 'is name is. 'E sleeps with me at night."

The conductor grins.

My neighbor falls to caressing his snake again. Soon he leans forward, and with a push at the knee arouses the little man opposite from his slumbers. The latter regards his performance for awhile in stolid silence.

"That ain't nothin'," he observes, and closes his eyes again.

Attention is diverted by the entrance of two new passengers—a young gentleman in rather wide trousers and a young lady in a very narrow skirt. At a glance my neighbor marks them down as his prey. He rises, lurches across the tram, and seats himself beside them. With a beaming smile, he puts the snake through its performance for their benefit the pair watching him with marked apprehension.

"Teddy, I call 'im," he observed affably. "I'm always doin' this."

The information seems in no way reassuring to his audience, who remain watchfully silent. Suddenly he withdraws the snake from his shirt and holds it toward the young man.

"Try 'im yerself," he suggests generously. "I've no objection. Put 'im down your neck, mate."

There is a sudden scuffling sound as the young lady rises precipitately and moves to the farther end of the car. Her escort, about to follow, is detained by a huge hand upon his sleeve.

"'E won't 'urt yer. Put 'im down yer neck, boss. Yer ought to get used to that sort of thing, yer know."

It is evident that the young man has no sense of this duty to himself, by a sharp movement he frees his arm, and with such dignity as he can muster joins his companion at the farther end. The snake-charmer remains looking after him with an outraged stare.

Meanwhile the car has stopped, and there has been an influx of passengers. The conductor, about to ring the bell, suddenly observes the huge figure at the end.

It Disappears.

"'Ere you!" he cries. "You wanted Young's Corner!"

The snake-charmer turns hastily and stumbles down the car. Suddenly he stops and feels tentatively about the upper part of his body.

"'Arf a moment!" he exclaims, anxiously. "Wot's become o' Teddy?"

The new passengers glance up with mild interest. The pair at the end rise expeditiously and peer about them in apprehension. The snake-charmer has gone to the seat lately vacated by him—now occupied by a respectable old lady of sedate aspect.

"Excuse me, mum——" he apepals.

The lady, evidently rather hard of hearing, looks around her inquiringly. The snake-charmer raises his voice.

"It's my snake," he explains. "I think you must be sittin' on 'im."

With a blood-curdling shriek, the lady shoots from the seat like a stone from a catapult. The new passengers rise in panic, and convulsively shake skirts or trousers.

"You ain't got your snake," grumbles the conductor from the step. "Think we're goin' to wait about all—Why, what's that?"

All eyes follow the conductor's finger, pointing toward the snake-charmer's feet. From one of the legs of his trousers a flat, evil head has emerged, and, curling upward, is darting a forked tongue into space. With a proud smile, he stoops and, drawing forth his pet, replaces it in the breast of his shirt and steps out into the road.

The conductor tugs the bell impatiently, and we move on.

The passengers resume their seats, then crane their necks to watch a dwindling figure stationary in the road behind. A genial hall is wafted faintly toward us.

"Teddy, I call 'im. Sleeps with me at night!"

Extra Modest.

"George, there's a burglar in the house."

"Well, keep still. We've got nothing he'll steal."

"I know. But I left my corsets over the back of a chair, and I wouldn't have him see them for the world."

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I GUESS there ain't many real human beings that goes to the boarding houses at the seashore, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I was down to Tybee for a week-end, and I was entertained beautiful by a friend of mine that always does everything right. She and her husband is perfect darlings, George. He always takes her wherever she wants to go, and she thinks he is the only man on this globe. She is one of them kind of wives, George, that thinks when she hears about Julius Caesar that her husband would have had Julius' job if he had been living then.

"But they was the only two regular guys on that porch after we had ate our dinner and went out to let it digest in the shade. There was four married women there about forty years old or so, and two young chaps that had traveled extensively on the trolley cars. They were setting there talking to the old gals, showing how brown their arms was from swimming and how much muscle they had, and the old gals was fine to them, beaming on them just as if they was grown-up men. After the two chaps had went for their third swim that day, the old gals began telling what divine waltzers the kids was, and how one of them was very witty.

"But oh, dear doctor! When the name of one of the younger married ladies came up, a lady that didn't happen to be there at the time, there was sure some scandal.

"'They say her husband drinks something brutal!' says one of the old hens.

"'I wouldn't be surprised,' says another. 'She would drive any man to drink with that temper of hers.'"

"What else do you expect from that kind of folks?" asked the Head Barber. "I never sat on a boarding house porch in my life, unless it was with some of the old Romans, long after the women folks had went to bed. I never could stand all the cruel things they said about the other women. Many a young married lady has been kissed and called 'dearie' by the old fat and forty girls, only to be hammered into pulp when they moved fifty feet away. I was up in the country not long ago and heard some of those rocking-chair dames working. Two of the young chaps there happened to be live ones, and went to the village to get a few steins on a hot day. They mentioned it when they got back home, and the next morning when they started out one of the dames says 'Look at Mr. Doonan and Mr. McSherry!' and another says, 'Yes, there they go!' I suppose when the young fellow got back in the evening every one of the ancients says 'Here they come!'"

"That's the trouble, George,' said the Manicure Lady. "This would be a whole lot different world in which to live in if it wasn't for the 'There they go!' and 'Here they come!' people. If they see a young fellow throwing himself away and going to the dogs, you don't hear many folks shouting 'Come back and get wise!' They all say 'There he goes!' and they say it as cheerful as a kid saying 'Oh Mamma, here comes the circus parade!'

"This is too hot a day to do much demoralizing, George, but I do wish that folks would be kinder to each other and bury the hammer. It ain't hatchets that needs burying in this world, George, it's hammer."

Hints For the Household

When about to make a pudding, well flour your board and rolling-pin and roll the suet out to a thin sheet. Take between your hands and rub down, when you will find the suet as fine as breadcrumbs.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all old bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish clothes for saucepans and pie-dishes.

When washing pudding cloths, throw some orange peelings into the water. This collects the grease and helps to make the cloths white and clean looking.

If great care is not taken flatirons easily become rusted. The following is a good way to clean them when this occurs: Tie a lump of beeswax in a piece of rag, and when theirons are hot rub them with this. Then rub them well with salt on a cloth, and they will be quite smooth and clean.

Before arranging maidenhair fern in vases, soak it for two hours in cold water; then singe the ends of the stems with a match. Ferns thus treated will last three times as long and keep quite green and fresh for several days.

Hot-water marks may be removed from japanned trays by the simple process of rubbing them over well with sweet oil, and then polishing with a little dry flour on a soft duster.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XIV.

MARY DANFORTH awoke early on the morning of her graduation day. She lifted her watch from the table at the head of her bed and glanced at it sleepily, noting with satisfaction that it still lacked more than an hour to breakfast time.

She lay half awake and let happy thoughts drift through her mind—light, girlish thoughts of the beauty of her graduation gown; affectionate thoughts of her father, speeding home from a business trip in the far West to be with his daughter on this important day; tender, timid thoughts of Gordon Craig.

In a letter written a week ago her lover had repeated his assurance that he would see her graduate. This epistle had reached her only the day before yesterday, and since then she had heard nothing from him, yet she was sure that he would be true to his word. She smiled now as she lay in her darkened room, a smile that was full of pure joy. She knew that Craig would have a question to ask when they met, and she also knew what her answer would be. She had no doubt now that she loved him dearly and was proud and happy in her love. The smile faded slowly from her lips, and she slept again.

Her mother's gentle knock on the door awakened her a half hour later.

"It's time to get up, girlie!" she announced, entering the room. "Breakfast will be ready soon and father has telephoned from the Grand Central to say that he will be up to eat it with us, as his train is just in. So try to be ready when he comes."

She kissed Mary as she had done each morning since the girl's birth, then hurried away on household tasks intent.

The trio had a happy breakfast together in the sunlit dining room. Mr. Danforth, haggard and pale—"from a sleepless night on the cars," as he explained—was once more at the head of the table, cheery and happy in spite of his evident weariness.

The morning meal over, he pushed his chair back from the table and, drawing Mary down upon his knees, questioned her with affection and interest about her plans for the day. He did not mention Craig's name. An unusual reticence had kept the Texan from his conversation ever since the young man had returned home, and when Mary had mentioned with studied indifference the fact that "Mr. Craig might possibly happen to be in New York on Commencement Day," her father let the statement pass without comment.

After a few minutes' chat this morning he declared that he must go to his office for a part of the day. At the front door he paused and came back to the dining room to kiss Mary, although he had already bade her an affectionate goodby.

"This is just to kiss my little girl once more," he explained, patting her cheek fondly. "She will be a grownup lady when I see her again."

It was late in the afternoon that Mary left the house to go down to her school. Her class were to have an early farewell supper in the gymnasium and would go directly from that to their graduation exercises.

At 8 o'clock she and the rest of her class took their places in the great school auditorium, which was already crowded. Mary looked vainly among the sea of faces for the three persons who made her small world. Of course, her parents were here, she mused, although she could not discern them—but was Craig here, too?

The white-haired principal arose to speak, and a hush fell on the house. Suddenly Mary knew that her lover had come. She felt his eyes upon her, and, looking up, saw him in the gallery above her. Their glances met and he smiled, but the girl blushed hotly and dropped her eyes. Her heart throbbed wildly. She had been eager to see him, but now she wished to evade his steady gaze and hide herself, yet she was happy to be in his presence. She raised her hand to her throat, and, caressingly, touched the hidden silver trinket he had sent her.

Those who knew her said Mary Danforth had never looked sweeter and fairer than when she rose at the calling of her name and went forward to receive her diploma. She did not think of the thousands of glances resting upon her, but only of the look of the man she loved. She longed to lift her eyes and gaze into his face, but she could not. Through the valedictory she sat silent, unhearing, her eyes upon her diploma and the mass of flowers which had been handed her. She knew some of them were sent by Craig, the rest by her parents.

At last she became aware that it was all over, that people were rising and that everybody about her was talking. A gray-haired, sweet-faced teacher accosted her.

"May I speak to you a moment, dear child?" she said quietly. "Come with me."

Puzzled and vaguely alarmed the girl obeyed the older woman's bidding and followed her into a small anteroom adjoining the auditorium. As Mary noted the woman's grave demeanor a dread clutched at her heart, and she held her breath to listen.

"I have bad news for you," said her teacher simply. "You must go right home to your mother. She has sent for you. Your father"——

She paused, and the girl clasped her hands in an agony of fear.

"Oh, what is it?" she gasped. "Tell me quickly! Is he hurt, or ill, or"—Her voice failed her suddenly, for Gordon Craig stood beside her. She had not seen him enter, and he took her trembling hands in his firm grasp.

"Dear," he said quickly, but softly, while his body shielded her from the glances of persons passing the door, "your father will never be hurt or ill again. Be brave, dear. He died an hour ago."

An Impossible Post.

With tense, eager faces, the great audience of women leaned forward in their seats, eagerly drinking in the noted speaker's every word.

"Mere man," she was saying, "is wont to belittle woman's ability to enter the fields already usurped by him. As a matter of fact, she is capable of filling any post of public or private office now held by man, and, if appointed to it, could even perform man's tasks with greater faithfulness and greater daring.

"Name, if you can, one post for which she can not fit herself! Name one office to which she would not, could not, give the greatest measure of capability, the highest degree of courage, the——"

A mere man, who had slipped, unnoticed, into a back seat, rose at this point, and the light of sudden inspiration gleamed in his eye.

"Rat catcher!" he shouted. And then he fled.

Their Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"THAT must be the landing down there! I can't see that sign, but I'm sure that's where you get the St. Cloud boats."

"Hadn't you better ask some one," ventured Helen. "It's so far to go way down there and find it isn't the place."

"I tell you it IS the place," scowled Warren, who always hated to ask his way, and often wore Helen out trying to find a place without guidance.

Already they had walked across the Alexandre bridge, and Helen was tired and hot. Her feet ached, too, for she had foolishly started out in a pair of white canvas pumps which she had bought the day before.

A gravel path and stone steps led down to what Warren thought was the boat landing. But evidently it was not in use this season, for the place was deserted except for a man who was shearing a dog in an empty shed.

He was sitting on the ground holding on his knees a King Charles spaniel, whose sleek body he was clipping close, leaving only the lion-like ruff of neck and tail. The dog, grateful to be rid of his heavy coat this hot day, lay patiently on his back.

"I'll be darned!" muttered Warren, looking around the deserted landing. "I know those boats used to start from here."

"But it's been seven years since you were in Paris," protested Helen. "You can't expect to find everything just the same! Do ask that man where the right landing is—I CAN'T walk much farther!"

"Well, if it's along here we'll find it," obstinately ignoring her suggestion. "There, I see it now! Isn't that a boat just pulling in?"

Helen Inquires.

Helen's heart sank, for the landing Warren pointed to was back beyond the bridge. And it might not be the right one! Determinedly she approached the man with the dog. If Warren would not ask, she would. Not knowing the French for "boat landing," she repeated "St. Cloud, St. Cloud?" and pointed to the landing beyond.

"Oui, oui, madame," nodded the man, understandingly, while the dog, in spite of his inverted position, wagged a friendly tail.

Warren was already striding back up the stone steps. "Hope you're satisfied," he grumbled, as Helen breathlessly caught up with him. "That's the St. Cloud boat there now. If you hurry we'll get it."

Helen, her shoes hurting her at every step, kept up with Warren's long strides as best she could. As they drew near they could see "St. Cloud" fluttering on a red flag over the boat.

"May have to wait another hour if we don't catch this!" called back Warren, running ahead to get the tickets.

The boat gave a warning whistle. A man was loosening the chain. Were they going to miss it after all? Warren had the tickets now and was waving them at her! Helen, flushed and breathless, reached the boat only a second before it moved off.

"Whee! That was close," and Warren wiped the inside of his hat with his handkerchief. "Pretty good sprint for a hot day."

"Oh, can't you find me a place to sit down?" panted Helen. "My feet hurt so!"

"Don't see any place, do you?" looking around the crowded boat, on which every seat was taken. "What's the matter with your feet, anyway? You've been hobbling ever since we started."

"It's these shoes I bought yesterday. They're plenty big," defiantly, "but they're too stiff. They hurt in the back at the heel."

"Humph, you ought to know you couldn't get a decent shoe in this country. Why on earth didn't you bring enough with you?"

"I did, dear, all except white ones."

"Well, serves you right. They ought to hurt you, if you haven't more sense than to start out on a trip like this with a new pair of shoes."

Paris had been hot, but the Seine was hotter. The sun glittered on the water that was not even rippled by a breath of air. The iron rail, against which Helen was leaning, almost burnt through her gloves. Would she have to stand on her aching feet in this blazing sun all the way to St. Cloud?

Warren Compares.

"They talk so blamed much about the beauty of the Seine—well I don't see it! Can't hold a candle to our Palisades along the Hudson."

"None too clean, either," went on Warren. "Hope they don't drink this water. But that's so—Frenchmen don't drink any water. There's a seat, if you want one," as a man rose to get out at the next landing.

Helen sank into the seat, and with a sigh of relief drew off her slipper under her dress. Warren did not trouble to come and stand by her, but stood where he was, leaning on his cane by the railing.

As they left the outskirts of Paris, the river grew cleaner and the scenery more attractive. But Helen was too hot and much too uncomfortable to enjoy or appreciate the sail.

At last they reached St. Cloud. On the hillside above was a big white hotel, with fluttering flags and white-clothed tables on the green hedged veranda and terrace.

"Well, what do you want to do? Walk around and take a look at the village—or get a cab here and drive through the park first?"

Helen, whose feet still hurt her, suggested the drive.

Several cabmen, spotting the Americans, were already urging them to their vehicles. Warren put Helen into one of the cabs and told the driver to take them through the park.

"What's that?" as the man began to chatter excitedly. "What in the devil's he trying to say?" For Warren's restaurant French was not equal to this conversation.

The driver finally made them understand they were to pay in advance—two francs, for which he presented them with a ticket, which Helen thought was a sort of receipt.

"Why, dear, that's awfully cheap," as they drove off.

"Oh, all cabs are much cheaper over here," explained Warren easily.

They entered the park by a massive gateway, sentinelled by a uniformed soldier. Helen had read in her Baedeker of the beauty of the park at St. Cloud, but the terraced groves, the statuary, the fountains, the vistas through arched trees, the cascades and grottoes surpassed any guide book description.

Pay In Advance.

"I say, this is great!" approved Warren. "Look through there! The fellow who laid out these grounds knew his job."

Thed river now slowed up, to give them a better view of a magnificent fountain at the top of a terraced mound.

"Dear, that must be the fountain which plays every other Sunday. Why didn't I bring the Baedeker?"

"Oh, forget your blamed old guidebook and enjoy what you see. By Jove, just look up there!"

In the distance was another fountain center with marble nymphs and flaming flower beds. Helen, with her slipper off, now leaned back and gave herself up to silent enjoyment of it all—the cool shaded groves, the smell of the woods, and the wonderful vistas through the trees. The whole park was a triumph of landscape art.

Every now and then they passed a festive picnic party with lunch spread in some secluded grove. And there were many courts of lawn-tennis and other field games, the white outing costumes of the players gleaming conspicuously against the green background.

"Well, we're getting our two francs' worth in this drive, all right. This man's got a pretty big tip coming to him."

When they had driven entirely around the great park, they again drew up before the impressive iron gate, which the soldier swung open.

"We don't want to go back to the station yet. Let's get out of here and go up to the hotel and have a drink. How about having dinner there?" and Warren motioned to the driver to let them out.

"Eh? What's that? Now what's he after?" as the driver stared at his tip, climbed down from his seat, and excitedly pointed to a taximeter in front, which they had not seen before.

"Well, what in thunder did we pay that two francs for?" demanded Warren, glacing at the taximeter which registered over seven francs. "If you think you've got a sucker here, you're wrong. You made us pay in advance, and that's all you'll get."

Here the soldier at the gate, overbearing the dispute, came out and explained to Warren, in halting English, that the two francs was the admission charged by the park, and that the taximeter charges was for the drive.

Explanations.

"Oh, if that's the way of it, all right," as Warren paid the seven francs, fifty. "But why in the devil didn't he say so?"

"Why, that's exorbitant," protested Helen indignantly, as they started up the hill to the hotel. "That makes the drive almost ten francs."

"If that's their regular rate—that's all right. All I want to know is that I'm not being held up. Now what? Want to go to the hotel for dinner now? Or take a walk around the village first?"

"I'm afraid I can't walk very far," faltered Helen.

"By George, you're a fine traveler, you are," in a tone of disgust. "Not much pleasure going anywhere with you. You're either too tired, or too hot, or your feet hurt—or some blamed thing's the matter. Come on then, we'll have dinner. Think you can sit up and take nourishment?"

There's Many a Slip.

Smithson had been really a power in his day. At any rate, he had held a job bringing him in some thousands a year—that is to say, until the smash came. After that he failed to hold any job he got, and became permanently out of luck.

His old friend Jenkins was a bit surprised, therefore, when Smithson stopped him in the street one day and angrily exclaimed:

"D'you know, I've just received the prize insult of my life! A chap down in the city offered me a job this morning!"

"Offered you a job?" replied Jenkins. "You call that an insult? I thought you were looking for a job!"

"Yes, but not at ten dollars a week. Hang it all, I can borrow more than that from you!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Cheer up little girl."

CHAPTER XXIII.

AFTER the scene in the office, when Jennie's new employer tried to kiss her, Jennie realized if she demanded her salary—so she could leave—he would not pay her, so she resolved to work the week out if possible and be on her guard in the meantime against any outbursts on his part.

The man saw there was nothing to be gained by forcing his attentions on Jennie, so thought he would play a "waiting game" and be as nice as possible.

He apologized profusely, saying if he had not been drinking it wouldn't have happened, but that Jennie was so pretty he just couldn't help it. Jennie was determined to leave at the end of the week, though, for she could see he was only waiting a more favorable chance.

When Jennie got home that night she found her aunt, the boarding-house keeper, very ill—so sick, in fact, that they had to get a doctor. "Goodness only knows where we can get the money to pay him," thought Jennie.

The only thing the doctor could prescribe was a good rest, change of scene and good, wholesome food. Quite simple to prescribe, but how could Jennie's aunt have these things when they had barely enough to live on as it was? After the doctor had gone Jennie's aunt called her to the bedside and told her: "I know what is the matter with me, Jennie girl; it was useless for you to have called the doctor, for he could not help me and it was just an added expense that we can not afford. I've had these spells for years, but never one before as bad as this—but cheer up, my little girl, everything will be all right and I'll be out of bed soon." But in her heart she KNEW she never would.

A TYPEWRITER COSTS OVER $3000.00

AS a business man you know that the price you pay for a typewriter is a negligible sum, compared with what it really costs.

If you pay your operator fifty dollars per month and she runs the machine five years, the operating cost is $3,000.00. This, plus what you paid for the machine, represents your investment.

The vital question is, "What do I get for that $3,000.00?"

On the

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

you get ten to twenty per cent more work than on any other typewriter made.

The original cost of the machine, therefore, fades into nothingness.

We can prove that our typewriter will do more and better work and do it longer than any other typewriter.

RITCHIE SIGNS TO MEET WELSH SEPTEMBER 1

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Freddie Welsh is to get first crack at Willie Ritchie, leightweight champion of the world. Ritchie today accepted the offer made by a Vancouver club for a twenty-round contest there on September 1 with the Englishman as his opponent.

The taking of the Vancouver match followed a four-hour talk between Ritchie and James W. Coffroth, of this city, who hoped to match Tommy Murphy and the champion for September 9. Ritchie's demand on Coffroth was far greater than the local promoter cared to consent to and negotiations were dropped.

While Ritchie would not say just what he is receiving for fighting Welsh in Vancouver, it is learned on good authority that he will receive a guarantee of $15,000 with a 50 per cent interest in the moving pictures.

The champion will depart to-day for the mountains to shoot deer and incidentally get himself a good start in the training line.

Sports and Such

FAMOUS IN SPORT—III.

The Breed of Horses.

THE BREED OF HORSES IS A good deal like the city government—it is in constant need of improvement. These improvements eat up a lot of kale, but they are necessary, and the kale comes from men who oughtn't be trusted with money, anyway. Auto manufacture may cease at any moment, and you would be up against it without an improved breed of horse to take you to the office, especially if there should be a subway strike on at the same time.

The men who have the Breed of Horses nearest at heart are called Bookmakers, or Personal Friends. They work without pay in the noble cause. When you have paid your $3 matriculation fee to study the subject, they merely show you a list of horses and request you to decide in which the breed has been improved to the greatest extent, charging you for the privilege only such sums of money as you may have about you at the time. If you cannot see how this improves the Breed of Horses, you are an unmitigated bonehead and notoriety-seeker and are against personal liberty, and we wish you wouldn't read this column any more.

The funds thus accumulated are devoted to the purchase of high-grade autos for the bookmakers, as they are fat and so weighted down with bales of cush that it would injure the breed of any horse forced to haul them to the track. The Track is the institution devoted to this form of altruism. In its ideals it is not unlike those devoted to the improving of the rate of call money.

From this you can see that the Breed of Horses is not a complicated subject for the intelligent. You must merely never disagree with a Bookmaker's opinion on the breed of any horse. Of course, he may sometimes make a mistake, and then he is so ashamed that he sneaks out by the back fence before you can find him.

Before taking up the Breed of Horses seriously, devote your paycheck each week to the study of a crooked roulette wheel. It's great training.

Eaglebeak's Admirer Deserts Him for the New Star

Turned Down Trade for Joe Agler

Jersey City Offered Borton for Him

By Joe Agler.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 6.—I reckon I ought to be feeling sort of set up this morning. From what I hear, Major Frank E. Callaway, president of our ball club association, came up here to see President J. L. Lillis, of the Jersey City club, who offered him Borton, recently of the White Sox, and another player for my humble self.

They tell me Mr. Callaway turned down the offer before the deal had got beyond the debating stage.

Well, that makes me feel pretty good. I like to play ball for Atlanta, and it certainly cheers a fellow up to know he is wanted on the job. I'll just keep on doing the best I can for the Crackers and the management.

Getting back to the real business of the ball club, I want to say that we took a licking yesterday and we haven't any yelp coming. Coveleskie was right, and when he is right he is a bear. He ought to have got a shutout except for a break in the luck.

Carl Thompson, too, was in grand trim, though the Lookouts tied up the game in the ninth inning when he hit a batsman with the bases full. Then another hit batsman, an error and a base hit untied it in the tenth.

But now we have the big Pole out of the way, and with Conzelman and Price to work this afternoon, we ought to get no worse than an even break at the outside. Then we tackle the Vols, and you know they looked pretty easy last time.

REDS BUY HARRINGTON FROM N. ENGLAND LEAGUE

LYNN, MASS., Aug. 6.—Frank Harrington, a pitcher of the Lynn club of the New England League, to-day is heading to join the Cincinnati National League team. An offer for Harrington made a month ago was accepted with understanding that the pitcher would not leave Lynn until the close of the New England League season.

But Manager Flaherty received and accepted an offer of a bonus if he would allow Harrington to join the Reds immediately. Harrington is 21 years old.

One Comfort, the Pole Is Out of the Way for the Time Being

IT WAS A TOUGH GAME FOR THOMPSON TO LOSE

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE wad of balsam soothes the sting of defeat:

The tough-grained Pole is out of the way.

We expected it—and we got it. We didn't get it as overwhelmingly as we thought we were going to, and that is some comfort. Carl Thompson earned only praise for his stubborn defense. And his helpers with him.

Still, it would have been a grand little achievement to have trimmed the Irish Newsboy, while the trimming was so nearly good. One little scratch tally in the ninth, now—

ANOTHER grain of comfort.

Joe Agler is going to stay with us a while longer.

Major Callaway, president of the Atlanta Baseball Association, traveled to Chattanooga Monday to meet President Lillis, of the Jersey City club. Major Callaway didn't know what Mr. Lillis wanted to see him about, but Mr. Lillis' wire said it was urgent.

Mr. Lillis wanted our old friend, Joe Agler. Mr. Lillis wanted Joe so much that he offered Borton, recently a White Sox, who went to New York in the Chase trade and to J. C. for Jack Knight. Also Mr. Lillis offered boot in the shape of another player.

Major Callaway is reported by the newsfinders—entirely apart from what Joe himself heard about it—as turning down the deal as soon as he found out what Mr. Lillis wanted.

Suits us fine.

WHEN the official wranglers in any old league run out of wrangling material, they usually dig up the clever and start in on the proposition of a ball player being out if he slides into first base, and, if so, why not?

There are plenty of wranglers on both sides. The last time the crool war broke out it was in the American Association. But it did not stay there.

An honest German umpire named O'Brien called out a guy named Dixie Walker for sliding bean-first to sack No. 1 in St. Paul. Billy Friel, manager of the Saints and incidentally of Mr. Walker, protested to President Chivington.

Chivvy upheld the umpire, saying something about an "unwritten law" promulgated, or words to that effect, by the umpires as a rebuke to baserunners who are merely trying to "make the play close," and confuse the worthy umps.

* * *

RIGHT away some loafer touched off August Herrmann about it.

The august August is about three-fourths of the National Commission—when Ban Johnson is away—and he is ever ready to blow up about anything.

This time he performed as per schedule.

Mr. Herrmann said, in part:

"A player is permitted under the rules to reach any base by any method he sees fit." So long, it is understood, as the said player proceeds under his own steam.

Mr. Herrmann remarked further:

"He may run, jump, crawl or walk on his hands, so long as he travels within the lines. This is provided in the rules of the game, and no umpire or league president or anybody else has any right to change the rule."

* * *

MR. CHIVINGTON, please copy.

But here is another rule:

"Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the accuracy of the umpire's judgment and decision on a play."

Rule 65, if you want to look it up.

And what we should like to inquire is, how is Mr. Herrmann to decide from the protests of outraged managers whether the sliding-to-first-base runner was called out because the umpire was prejudiced against that mode of transportation, or because he really was out?

Mr. Herrmann being notably strong for the rules, you know.

DROP a little tear for Cornelius McGillicuddy.

As if it weren't tough enough to lose half a series to the wretched Browns, and have the furious Naps roaring along, only eight or ten games behind, here comes the news that Jack Coombs, famous iron man, is about ready to come back.

Coombs has been out of the game since early in the spring. Typhoid was the cause. Now he is reported bigger and better than ever, just like a circus.

Pity poor Connie! He was wondering and wondering who would pitch the opening game of the world's series—Bender or Plank.

And now here's Coombs!

EAST MEETS WEST TO-DAY IN BIG TENNIS DOUBLES

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Double teams from the East and West to-day met for the final elimination in the National tennis championships. Clarence Griffin and John Strachan, of San Francisco, Pacific Coast champions, were matched against Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern champions.

The winners of to-day's match will be entitled to play Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bundy, present National champions, at Newport, R. I., on August 18, for the 1913 doubles honors of the United States.

JACK KEATING KNOCKS OUT GALL IN THE FOURTH ROUND

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Jack Keating, the local heavyweight, knocked out George Gall, in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Atlantic A. C. Garden here last night. Gall was reeling around the ring helpless in the fourth round when his seconds threw up the sponge.

John Lester Johnson, the South American heavyweight, knocked out Bob Lee, a dusky-hued boxer of Brooklyn, in the third round of the semi-final bout, scheduled to go ten rounds.

SMITH IN NO-HIT GAME; ARM NOW OUT OF SPLINTS

PITTSFIELD, MASS., Aug. 6.—William I. Smith, of the Pittsfield Eastern Association Baseball Club, who took his injured arm out of splints the day before, pitched a no-hit game against Waterbury yesterday, shuting them out 3 to 0. Smith issued no passes and struck out six men. Only three Waterbury players saw first base, all on errors.

HURLS NO-RUN NO-HIT GAME.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 6.—Pitcher Watson, of Asheville, in the North Carolina league, pitched a no-hit, no-run game here against Winston-Salem. He walked three men, struck out six and out of three trips to the bat got two hits, one of which was a home run.

JAKE STAHL MAY SUCCEED CALLAHAN AS HEAD OF SOX

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—A rumor was industriously circulated in local baseball circles to-day to the effect that Jake Stahl, former manager of the Red Sox, is scheduled to succeed Jimmy Callahan as manager of the Chicago White Sox, at the close of the present year. Stahl has been spending the summer, since his dismissal, at Annisquam, but could not be reached there to-day. Some of Stahl's close personal friends are inclined to ridicule the idea that Stahl will return to baseball.

WHITNEY TO GET HERE FRIDAY; WHITE SATURDAY

FRANK WHITNEY will arrive Friday morning for his ten-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory a week from to-night. White will get in Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The "Fighting Carpenter" has been training for a week on his farm in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but yesterday moved his training quarters to O'Connells' gymnasium in Chicago, where he will remain until to-morrow night.

The following wire was received this morning:

Will arrive in Atlanta Friday morning. Am stopping in Chicago for a couple of days so as to get benefit of sparring partners. Working at O'Connell's gym.

There are not any clever lightweights in Atlanta for Frank to work out with. In the Windy City there are plenty of boys who can give the "Fighting Carpenter" just the sort of work he needs.

Tickets for the show will go on sale this afternoon at Shepherd's Cigar Store, corner of Edgewood and Pryor. On account of the size of the Auditorium-Armory, it has been decided to make the prices $1, $1.50 and $2. The balcony brings the low price, the dress circle $1.50 and the ringside seats "two bucks."

Already big orders have been received from Macon, Athens, Augusta and other nearby cities and towns. It is expected that the advance sale will be even heavier than for the Battling Nelson bout, which totaled nearly $2,500.

AMATEUR TEAMS CLASH AT PONCE DE LEON TO-DAY

In order that the visiting merchants may see a good game of ball the Producers and Jones teams, of the Grocers' League, have transferred their game from Piedmont to Ponce DeLeon Park. Game will be called at 3:30 p. m. Admission 10 cents.

These two teams are tied in the race for the pennant in the Grocers' League and this game is sure to be a battle royal. Jones won the last game, which will make the Producers fight hard to make it a win.

NEW YORK HEARS THAT YANKEES SEEK HOFMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A report gained circulation here to-day that Artie Hofman, former Cub and Pirate, will be seen in a Yankee uniform next year.

Artie has been playing great ball since he was turned over to Nashville, of the Southern League, by the Pirates. He looks to be just as good as ever.

It is said that Chance promised Artie that he would bring him back into the big leagues if he displayed any of his old form.

Polo To-day---If It Doesn't Rain
Everybody Invited to McPherson

If only J. Pluvius will compromise with the weather man for this one afternoon, he will earn the respect and friendly admiration of several thousand Atlantans, who are planning to witness Atlanta's first polo match on the big parade ground at Fort McPherson, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Everything is set for the contest between a team representing Atlanta and a quartet of officers of the Seventeenth Regiment. The personnel of the officers' team has not been announced, but it is known that there are enough experts with the Seventeenth to make up the requisite four of experienced polo players and have a second four left over for substitutes.

The local four will be Captain J. O. Seamans, of the Governor's Horse Guard, who played the game in the army; who will lead the team; Albert Sidney J. Tucker of Lexington, Va.; E. M. Landrum, of Pensacola, Fla., and Milton Wise, of New York.

Robert F. Maddox will act as timer; Wilmer L. Moore, scorer; James R. Gray and Clark Howell, goal judges, and Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun, referee.

Moving pictures will be taken of the event and will be displayed on local screens at an early date.

In addition to the game there will be a band concert by the regimental band, and music by the Glee Club, of Company M. A tug-of-war on horseback and also wrestling on horseback.

No admission will be charged and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the sport.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Lou Castro is a busy man these days. Lou is dividing his time in eating three squares a day and getting his fighting arena in shape for his big boxing show to be staged at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. Whitney has wired Castro that he will be here Friday.

* * *

Kid Young and Mike Saul are working together for their coming bouts at the Auditorium. Young takes on Charlie Lee, while Mike will probably don the padded mitts with Eddie Hanlon. Young is developing a terrific kick in his right hand, and expects to topple Lee over long before the tenth round is reached.

* * *

Kid Wonder took a trip to The Georgian Sporting Department yesterday to inform us, that he is after a match with some local featherweight. Wonder is particularly anxious to get on with either Kid Young or Charlie Lee.

* * *

A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast want to meet Willie Ritchie, and have started bidding for the match-up. Both boys are willing to give the champion a neat side bet.

* * *

Packey McFarland is the latest to put in a boost for Charlie White. Packey says that Charlie is without a doubt the greatest 128-pound boy in the game to-day. Joe Thomas and Jake Abel probably agree with McFarland.

* * *

They are certainly picking soft marks for Carl Morris in the West. Al Benedict, his latest victim, would be easy for a lot of Philadelphia welterweights.

* * *

Three 10-round bouts between heavyweights are to be staged at the St. Nicholas A. C., New York, to-night. Porky Flynn, of Boston, will meet Sailor White, of Newark; Frank McGuinness, the Irish heavyweight, will battle Jack Keating, of the United States Navy, and Al Kubiak is to try conclusions with Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, have been matched to meet in a ten-round go at Omaha on September 12. If Coulon finds that he is right in this bout, he may go to the coast for a scrap with Kid Williams.

* * *

A banner house is expected to attend the Gunboat Smith-Jim Flynn set-to at New York on August 8. Both boys have been doing all their training in the Eastern City, and look to be in great shape. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Cyclone Thompson and Billy Hooper, colored lightweights, may be put on in one of the bouts to be held at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. They are now dickering with Lou Castro.

* * *

Arthur Pelky and Charlie Miller may clash in a long go at Los Angeles. McCarey plans to match the pair for a September date. Tommy Burns, manager of Pelky, took the match with the understanding that if Pelky defeated Miller he was to get a fight with Gunboat Smith.

GA.-ALA. LEAGUE NOTES

Every town in the league around the Georgia-Alabama circuit is glad when the Opelika boys blow in. They're a bunch of collegians and gentlemanly fellows, as well as good ball players.

* * *

* * *

Then there is Bone, of Washington and Lee; Allen and Ragsdale, of Auburn; Cantley and others who have played on college diamonds and gridirons.

* * *

"Chick" Hannon, for years one of the best-known factors in Southern football and baseball, an all-Southern quarter and shortstop at Alabama, has said his "thirty" to active sports, although he will hereafter be assistant coach in athletics at Alabama, his alma mater.

* * *

Before he got an injured wing, resulting from a broken shoulder blade in a football game, Hannon was headed straight for the majors, if he wanted to ascend; but since that accident he has never had the old-time punch to his fling, and to-day his knowledge of the game is his chief asset. He knows that, and he can teach it.

* * *

He has made a success as coach for the Alabama Presbyterian College here, and has played good ball in the Southeastern and Georgia-Alabama despite his handicap. An operation last year failed to restore his arm to its old-time form, and for two seasons he has known that he was passing.

* * *

He is one of the many veterans who the fans sometimes knock, but love nevertheless, and in his exit there goes a gentleman of the field.

* * *

Killingsworth, the big Anniston pitcher, made a bid for a job with Opelika in the game Monday afternoon, should he ever get "canned" by Anniston. A fracas with the umpire caused the parking of three Pelicans, and Killy had to be borrowed for the emergency.

* * *

In right field he pulled down a stellar fly on the run, and when he came to the bat the last time he put Left-fielder Henry up against the fence to gather in a long swat from his own willow. Altogether, his work came near costing his teammates the game. He plays for the love of the thing, and says he forgot to pull in his punch.

PLAYERS MEET IN CHECKER TOURNEY FINALS TO-DAY

In the play which began here yesterday for the championship of the Southern Checker Association the following qualified for the final round to be played to-day: G. C. Anderson, North Carolina; R. W. Evans, J. S. Hall, J. H. Bishop, C. M. Farrar, Georgia; S. S. Hallman, B. Fishburne, South Carolina, and J. M. Allen, Jr., Knoxville, Tenn., the holder of the championship since 1911.

Allen lost three of his first four games and in order to qualify for the finals had to make perfect scores against his last five opponents.

Fuzzy Woodruff Describes Chicago Boy's First Fight in a Ring

CHARLEY WHITE'S DEBUT HOWLING SUCCESS

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

LET a man attain prominence in any field of endeavor—be it finance, politics, medicine, the law, burglary or the stage—some auld acquaintance is as sure to rise up and chirp "I knew when, etc.," as a bleacherite is to yell "win your old game, boy," when the pitcher comes to bat with the score 11 to 2 against him with two down in the ninth inning.

It ranks with "I told you so" and "let's have another" as one of the most useful phrases of conversation.

All of this is merely a preface to a "I knew him when" yarn about Charley White, the wonderful Chicago lightweight, who is to meet Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory arena August 13.

White is a real championship contender now. In fact, in a lightweight division remarkable for the lack of punching power among the top-notchers, White should be regarded as easily the most dangerous man of his poundage a[illegible].

But when I first saw Charley box, he was as unknown to fame as was Jim Conley before the Phagan mystery's first chapter was written.

If my memory serves me right, it was on Labor Day of 1908, at the old Hawthorne race track, the last of the Windy City's once glorious domain of the thoroughbreds.

That year boxing, racing and pretty much everything else was under the ban in Chicago, but on Labor Day it was announced that the unions were to hold their celebration at the old track and the lid was to be lifted for the occasion.

The bang-tails were to run in the afternoon; there would be fighting at night; handbook men would be allowed to operate unmolested. Every known gambling device was to be in operation.

* * *

A PICTURESQUE scene greeted the visitors. The union men were in the uniforms they had worn in the Labor Day parade. All of Chicago's noted sportsmen were on hand. Old Ed Corrigan walked about the plant of which he was once master much like a ghost is supposed to walk about the scenes of his triumphs.

The gamblers were busy early and late. Half a dozen bank crap games were running. There were a dozen kinds of swindles going. The old army game was being played in four or five different bird cages.

Before the day had gone far, in walked the Sheriff, and the games mysteriously vanished. But the races were run and the brew flowed freely.

The fights were to be held in the old betting shed, and right after the last race the shed was packed.

The star bout was a ten-round go between Cyclone Johnny Thompson, then a lightweight, and Eddie Tancel, a pretty husky boy of the division.

There were two preliminaries. On account of the presence of the Sheriff, the promoters were rather leery about staging the fights. Minutes passed, and then an hour. The spectators began to squirm. Finally two charitably-inclined gents started some fun by having a fist fight all their own at the ringside.

This quelled, the fighting began. The first bout was a tame wrestling affair. The second was a three-round go between two tough mugs, who wanted to continue the scrapping with bare knuckles after the final gong rang.

* * *

THE last preliminary was between Danny Goodman and an unknown kid introduced as Charley White. Yank Kenny refereed. Goodman then was a veteran, and a mighty hard man to beat. He was a corking good ring general, and knew about all there is to know of boxing.

White was pounds lighter, though Goodman weighed no more than 125 pounds. Goodman was all confidence. White was all earnestness. It was his first ring engagement against so seasoned a warrior. In the first round Goodman danced around him, working in and out, and landing lightly pretty much as he wished. But he was not hurting White, and every now and then the novice flashed a left hand out that carried death and destruction, but Goodman was never there.

The second round was about a repetition of the first. White vainly striving to land a crushing blow. The final round was fast and furious. White was on top of Goodman from the gong. Left and right were whipped out with lightning rapidity. Goodman was boxing his best, but finally a left found its way to his stomach. Goodman doubled up and all but collapsed, and the crowd was on its feet yelling.

The veteran, though, quickly covered and stalled through the remaining minute of the round. Though Goodman had landed twenty blows to White's one, the one that Charley put over evened the fight, and he was entitled to a draw.

That was his baptism of fire, and so impressive was his showing that Nate Lewis, who was at the ringside, promptly took the boy under his tutelage and started him on his climb to the championship.

* * *

I DID NOT see White box again until he met Jake Abel in the Auditorium a few weeks ago. I had always believed Abel about as clever a boy as the South boasts. I had no idea that he would knock White out, but I had no idea that White would stop him. The bout seemed destined to go the ten rounds.

But at the first gong White showed more than I have ever seen in an Atlanta ring. Abel was a toy. When White sent him crumbling to the floor in the second round, there was not a man in the house not glad that the bout ended there. It had been one-sided entirely.

In 1908 I had seen White a novice. Just five years later, if he was not a champion he was at least the most dangerous man in his division.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Unless President Groover rescinds his action, Catcher Pierre, of the Valdosta team, will not play ball any more this season in the Empire. He has been suspended for the balance of the season for an attack on Umpire Gentle in Valdosta. In Brunswick Pierre attacked Umpire McLaughlin and was fined for the job.

* * *

President W. J. Clark, of the Waycross Association, says Waycross is going to finish first and fight it out with Valdosta for the pennant. In view of the recent additions to the Waycross team, this may not prove idle talk.

* * *

Despite the certainty of financial loss in almost all cities of the Empire this season, every member of the league is making plans for baseball next season. The experience of the first season has cost some cities a bunch of money, and it is safe to predict that every team will stay within the salary limit another year.

* * *

If Jackson, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., arrange a post-season series, several Empire League teams will be badly crippled if players of those teams have to report for the series. Thomasville and Valdosta will suffer, as each team has strong men from the Cotton States teams that want to have some more baseball.

* * *

The end of this week should see a decided change in the standing of teams in the league. Thomasville has six hard games, three with Cordele and three with Waycross. Some battles worth seeing will go down in baseball history before the week-end, mark the prediction.

* * *

Pitcher Vanderlip, who played with Waycross for some time this season, is now playing with a semi-professional team in his home city, Brooklyn. Shamus O'Brien, known as "Mickey," is signed with the Baltimore team for the remainder of the season, having been turned loose by Waycross.

* * *

Because of the recent talk of a post-season series between the pennant winners of the Southern and the South Atlantic, the talk of a series between the Empire and Sally pennant winners has died down lately. However, it is probable the games will be played.

* * *

When Nance and Leininger, both third basemen, were released by Valdosta, two clever men were cut loose. Nance succeeded Leininger, only to go for Brewster, of the Cotton States.

* * *

Red Stiles, of the Thomasville team, is probably the champion hard luck pitcher of the league. In one game he gave up but two hits and then lost, the hits getting by his teammates failing to come in bunches.

* * *

Unless the dope slips, one of the new men to appear in the Empire this month will startle the fans by his work. Recently the player in question got six hits out of seven times up in an extra inning game, three home runs and three three-base hits being the best he could do. On the bases he is said to resemble Ty Cobb.

* * *

Brunswick is taking to Whitey Morse, according to reports from the seaport city. Morse is hitting over .300, and is popular with players and fans alike. Valdosta lost a valuable man when he was allowed to go.

* * *

The attendance trophy, which was won by Waycross on opening day, is on display in Waycross and is attracting a lot of notice.

The Americus team next season will be changed a great deal, judging by comments of the present team. Like other teams in the league, Americus has changed managers several times this season, and there are fans who dislike each manager to such an extent that the team never suits everybody.

* * *

Jack Hawkins, who played ball around Atlanta for some time, and started the Empire season as a Brunswick player, is now in left field for Valdosta. He came back to the Empire from the Cotton States League, where he batted over .300 and fielded in jam-up style. Brewster, another Cotton States player, is on third for Valdosta, succeeding Nance.

* * *

While fans in Waycross regretted the release of "Goat" Holliday, the sensational first baseman, they are delighted at the way Jones is playing the bag. Jones came from Virginia to play with Brunswick, but was not good enough for the Pilots. He made good in Waycross with a rush and fields as well as Holliday.

* * *

Franks has been signed as an outfielder for Brunswick. He was a member of the Valdosta team and is considered one of the best in the league. He had a row of some kind with Jordan and his release followed.

* * *

Lately there has been a revival of the rumor that Albany will become a member of the Empire circuit. It is said that Albany and Americus like nothing better than a scrap on the ball field, and, if for no other reason, Albany would be glad to get into the Empire.

* * *

Of all the youngsters picked up by Empire League teams this season none has developed as rapidly as Anderson, a Georgia boy, now playing third base for Waycross. He has played at short and in the field, and, with another year's experience, will undoubtedly go up. He is fast on the bases and seldom fails to swipe a base if he gets on.

* * *

Pitcher Day, of the Thomasville team, has been given another name. Handsome has given away to Steady. He has won so many close games that fans take his victories as a matter of fact.

* * *

According to the dope furnished by each member of the Empire six teams are going to finish first when the season ends August 27. If the teams don't quit getting bunched around first place it may be necessary to play off a tie for first place. Maybe such a game would not be interesting?

* * *

Of all the dope floating around in the Empire there is but one settled fact—whichever team wins the second half of the season will have to play some baseball to nose Valdosta out of the rag. It is possible Valdosta will win the second season, too—but hardly probable the way the team is playing just now.

HARRY GLENN is the most popular rider at Jack Prince's Motordrome these days. The wonderful improvement the local lad has made in the last few weeks has earned him the plaudits of every "bug." Last night Harry was at his best, and as a result he was given a big hand every time he showed up.

Harry won another match race, this time leading Billy Shields home in two straight heats of two miles each. And Harry made a wonderful showing in the ten-mile race also. Although he finished third, he would surely have copped first honors had the finish line been 25 yards farther off.

Harry took the pace most of the way. But he rode a heady race and figured to come through in the final sprint. On the last lap he gave his "boat" a shot of "oilzum" and drew up on Renel and Richards fast and sure, but he started his spurt just about one second too late. The finish was Renel, first; Richards, second; Glenn, third. A blanket would have covered the entire trio at the finish, however.

The next race meet will be Friday night, a 25-mile event, with ten starters, being the feature.

Following is the summary of the races held last night.

Motordrome Purse.

Heats, 1 mile; finals, 2 miles.

First Heat—Harry Swartz, first; Billy Shields, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Tex Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Final—Jock McNeil, first; Tex Richards, second. Time—1:25 1-5.

Special Match Race.

Harry Glenn defeated Billy Shields in two straight two-mile heats. Time—1:31 3-5, 1:31.

Atlanta Sweepstakes.

Heats, 1 mile; final, 10 miles.

First Heat—Tex Richards, first; Morty Graves, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Harry Glenn, first; Georges Renel, second. Time—45 seconds.

Final—George Renel, first; Tex Richards, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time—7:22.

SAVANNAH CLUB RECALLS REILLY FROM AMERICUS

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 6.—By exercising optional rights, the Savannah Baseball Association has recalled Infielder Reilly, of the Americus club in the Empire State League, to relieve Zimmerman at second base. Owing to the terrible slump with which Zimmerman has been suffering, both in fielding and in batting, because of ill health, he has been suspended from the Indian crew temporarily. If Reilly, who was with Savannah during the early part of the season, makes good, Zimmerman will not be played again this season.

Reilly reported for duty upon the return of the Lipemen from Albany. He is easily the best player in the Empire League. He has batted at a steady clip of never less than .355 all season; has played at second, short, third base and in the outfield, and has taken care of each of these several jobs with success.

The Largest Diamond

The most valuable gems, among which there are some exceeding 100 carats in weight, are generally owned by royal families or treasured by governments as state jewels. One of the largest diamonds ever found is the Koh-i-noor and is owned by the royal family of England. Originally it is said to have weighed 794 carats, but it was reduced to its present size of 102 3-4 carats by repeated cutting. According to legend, it was found in England long before the Christian era, and, after having been handed down through a long line of Indian Princes, it was seized during the British invasion of the Punjab and was taken to England. Probably the largest diamond found in recent years is the DeBeers diamond, weighing 225 carats.

Realty Convention Comes to Atlanta, Thinks S. B. Turman

First Delegate Returns Home—Widening for Mayson and Turner Ferry Road—Business Good.

S. B. Turman, of the real estate firm of Turman, Black & Calhoun, has returned from the convention of real estate men at Winnipeg and expresses the belief that the election of Charles P. Glover to the vice presidency of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges will mean that Atlanta will land the ninth annual convention of realty men in 1916.

"Harris G. White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, presented Atlanta's invitation," declared Mr. Turman, "and many of the delegates told us that they would gladly support Atlanta. Most of these were Southern and Western delegates, the former pledging their support on account of loyalty to a sister city and the latter desiring to come because most of them had never been to this section before. Winnipeg is also with us.

"I am confident that we will win the convention. I left Winnipeg for Duluth a day before the adjournment of the convention and don't know whether or not Memphis invited the realty men.

"We had a great convention and I was very much pleased over the work of the national association."

Mr. White and Mr. Glover are returning to Atlanta by steamer and are expected to arrive Sunday or Monday.

County Commissioners Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of County Commissioners in the Thrower Building Wednesday proved to be of considerable interest in real estate circles. Four or five delegations of property owners, probably 100 people in all, appeared to present various petitions for improvements.

The board voted to widen the Mayson and Turner Ferry road for a distance of about two miles in the Center Hill section, and to extend Hemphill avenue from the waterworks station to Pace's Ferry road. The former was already on the summer program. A large delegation of Center Hill residents appeared. The latter is considered an important work because of the amount of territory opened up.

Plans for resurfacing several city streets were also presented.

Work has piled up on the board, due to the fact that Chairman Smith has been away on a vacation, and the further fact that accumulated business of the past month was brought before the commissioners.

Peachtree Interest Sold.

Clarence Knowles has bought from Paul Goldsmith an undivided one-third interest in a 100 by 562 foot lot on Peachtree road, 640 feet northeast of Piedmont avenue, for $1,750, or at the rate of $53 a front foot. Mr. Goldsmith sold another third to Bryan M. Grant May 31, 1912, and is keeping the remaining third for himself.

Sees Good Times Ahead.

Gid Hanna, the well-known real estate trader from Oakland City, has returned from a trip to Gwinnett and Rockdale Counties, and declares that crop conditions are the best he has ever seen. "With a fine crop and plenty of Government money to move it," asserted Mr. Hanna, "I can see nothing but great activity this fall in all lines of business. Secretary McAdoo seems to have smoked out the people who are holding money, and I look for normal conditions in local real estate. Everything points that way."

Plans for Two Houses.

A. J. & H. F. West have completed plans for two 2-story frame residences on the west side of Williams street, near West Tenth street, to cost $8,000 each. This neighborhood has been opened up in the last few years and now has a number of attractive homes.

Lakewood for Exposition.

Charles I. Branan and others of the local Park Board have a plan for using Lakewood for future expositions or fairs that it may be deemed advisable to hold. The question came up before the Park Board at its monthly meeting Tuesday at the City Hall, when Lakewood concessions were considered. The members of the board seemed to be of the opinion that no further privileges should be sold until it was decided whether or not the park could be profitably used for exposition purposes.

Since Piedmont Park was divested of its exposition trimmings the city has had no place save Lakewood to hold fairs.

Attractive New Building Type.

A new type of business building has appeared in Atlanta, and it is proving beneficial to tenants who want short term leases on vacant central property. This is a low steel affair of moderate cost that presents the appearance of a permanent structure, yet which can be moved on short notice. Investors are managing to get a rental of $200 a month out of a string of these shops in downtown districts.

Four such buildings have been erected at the northeast corner of Edgewood avenue and Equitable place by Andrew Gust, who purchased them from local representatives of portable steel shops. Mr. Gust has leased two compartments and expects to announce more leases shortly. Each store occupies a frontage of about 20 feet, and is 20 to 25 feet deep.

Accused Assailants Of Farmer Give Up

CORDELE, Aug. 6.—After having eluded officers for more than a week, Harley Blanchard and John Warren, who are alleged to have waylaid Ambrose Powell, a farmer, when, he claims, he was seriously cut by Blanchard, have surrendered to the Sheriff. They were released under bonds of $500, on the charge of assault with intent to murder.

There is now a good chance of Powell's recovery.

NAVAL STORES OPERATORS PLAN TO CURTAIL OUTPUT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 6.—Georgia naval stores operators will join in the general plan for the curtailment of the output to the end that prices may be raised to a living figure. A resolution has been adopted calling upon the producers to stop chipping on August 15, which would shorten the season two months, and the output reduced 25 per cent.

This action is preliminary to a general meeting of all operators to take place in Jacksonville Friday. It is proposed to lessen the output half a million barrels and wipe out the excess of rosins carried over from previous years.

RATE ORDER KILLS OLD 'BASING' PLAN

Ruling on Georgia Cases Necessitates Change in All Southeastern Schedules.

Readjustment of all rates in the territory south of the Potomac River and east of the Mississippi will be necessary to conform to the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling giving lower freights to LaGrange, Vienna and Carrollton, according to Watkins & Latimer, attorneys in the case.

The old basing point system, except as applied to ports and to large cities, is doomed under this decisions, they say, although the Commission passed only on the three cases at hand.

Under the old system certain small towns, usually at the head of relatively unimportant rivers, have been made basing points. Rates to other towns of the same size, equidistant or nearer the Ohio River crossings or the large cities in Southeastern territory, have been given the through rate to these points, plus the local from the favored town.

The Commission holds that there is no real reason for giving such places as Cedartown, Ga., through rates, and denying them to such towns as Vienna, Carrollton and LaGrange.

The immediate result, it is believed, will be wider scattering of the small jobbing houses, and more business for the large jobbing houses in the principal cities. The saving in freights is estimated at $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 yearly.

The Commission had the case under advisement from November 11, 1911, until August 4, 1913.

Two Suspects Held In Train Robbery

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 6.—Two suspects whom police believe had a hand in the robbery of the mail car on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad between Calera and Birmingham last night are being questioned at police headquarters. They answer descriptions given by mail clerks, but both strenuously deny their guilt.

Chief of Police Bodeker, of this city, where the men made their escape from the train, has detailed every available detective on the force to be on the lookout for the robbers, the local men being augmented by several railroad detectives. Chief Bodeker says the robbery undoubtedly was the work of professionals. No estimate of the loss by looting of registered mail pouches is yet available.

Express company detectives are working on the theory that the robbery was committed by men who are acquainted with operations of trains on the L. & N. and also with work in mail cars. Descriptions furnished by men who were in the car at the time of the robbery indicate that the robbers were young white men. Their masks extended from face to waist. However, in the breeze at times the features of the robbers were seen. No doubt is expressed by detectives that the men who did the work are residents of or have headquarters in Birmingham.

After the engine of the train had taken water at a tank this side of Calera the robbers boarded the mail car. Then knowing there was no stop between Calera and Birmingham, 30 miles, they went to work rifling the registered mail. At Fourteenth street, four blocks from the passenger station here, the robbers squeezed the airbrake, brought the train to a stop and jumped off. Engineer Wissenger then found the mail clerks handcuffed and tied up.

Wins Plea Against Being Tried on 13th

Mrs. Nellie Wood, who runs a store in Ormewood Park, will be tried in police court on August 14 for the reason that she objects strenuously to being tried on the 13th.

Mrs. Wood is charged with disorderly conduct, and, when her case was called Tuesday afternoon, a postponement was granted. Recorder Pro Tem Preston set the case for the 13th, but the young woman protested vigorously. She frankly told the Recorder she was "very superstitious." Any other date would suit, she said.

Seven Seek Cordele Postmaster's Place

CORDELE, Aug. 6.—That F. G. Boatright, postmaster at Cordele, who was requested several days ago by Postmaster General Burleson to resign because of alleged negligence, will decline to comply with this request is certain.

Seven applicants for the postmastership are actively at work soliciting indorsements, many letters having been sent to Congressman Charles R. Crisp, of the Third District, who will make the recommendation. The appointment is expected to be made within a short time.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

High Cables and Dry Weather Stimulate Buying and Cause Uneasiness Among Bears.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Influenced by steady cables and an absence of rain in Texas, the cotton market opened firm to-day, with first prices at a net advance of 3 to 7 points from last night's close. In view of yesterday's break the short interest was a little nervous. This, coupled with private advices from Texas stating, notwithstanding last week's rains, more moisture is need over the Southwestern belt, resulting in prices soaring some 2 to 8 points from the initial level. The selling was very light and scattered. Shorts were good buyers. Spot interests also bought.

During the forenoon the market was steady on buying on bullish advice from Theodore Price on high temperatures in Oklahoma. High temperature there is usually the forerunner of rain.

There were some telegrams in circulation from the belt stating that there was some deterioration going on, caused by dry weather and high temperatures. Later when the noon weather report was posted, showing extremely high temperatures in the Western belt in many points stimulated the buying and caused more uneasiness among the bear forces.

The weather map complete indicates increasing cloudiness in the Northwestern quarter of the cotton belt; cooler, possibly some showers in Northwest Texas. Part cloudy over rest of the belt, except cloudy with probably some showers in the Gulf coast districts. Gulf disturbance is unchanged in position, but is likely to move West in a few days and give prospects for precipitation in Southern Texas.

While sentiment is generally bearish there is a feeling that higher prices may be expected, just now in the face of the above conditions. Whether the advance will be sustained or not depends on weather conditions over the next few days. The bulls contend that another week of dry weather in the West will cause serious damage and a stampede will follow.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 11 to 15 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.60; October, 11.08; January, 10.94; March, 11.03.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.43; October, 11.13; December, 11.09; January, 11.09; March, 11.20.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Liverpool came in about 2 points better than due on futures to-day, but quotes spots 3 points lower and sales 6,000 bales.

The weather map shows cloudy in Oklahoma and East Tennessee, part cloudy in the Atlantics, fair in rest of the belt. Indications are for increasing cloudiness; cooler weather with possibly some showers in the Northwestern quarter, part cloudy in rest of the belt, except over the Gulf districts.

The market advanced nearly 10 points in the early trading, the buying being based on high temperatures in Oklahoma, which State shows an average of 104 degrees, and absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma. Trading, however, is small and support timid, in the fear of hedge selling, while crop prospects in Oklahoma are declining, the greater part of Texas needs relief from the drouth last week, and the danger of damage there is not yet being considered seriously. Weather and crop conditions in the Central and Eastern States are generally accepted as good.

Reports from New York and advices from there to buy would indicate the work for a reaction, which was spoiled by the good rains in central Texas during the last three days of the past week, ... been resumed on the same basis of threatened drouth in the Western States.

The market held the early gain well and is steady around 11.18 for October.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: Sentiment is bearish.

Norman, Mack & Co.: We still continue to believe that it is poor business policy to follow the decline.

COTTON GOSSIP

There were rumors that freight room had been engaged for August shipment from New York stock. Liverpool is understood to be long of August and to own a good bit of the local stock according to Pearsall's.

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce says: "Cotton goods retailers are optimistic concerning fall trade, and many of them are now operating in the local market. Jobbers are asking for shipment at once of all goods due September 1, with requests that new business be booked for September delivery of a volume sufficient to take care of the goods anticipated for immediate shipment."

Riordan has been an enormous seller of new crops during the last few days. It was believed that he sold for customers of Pell. Last week Riordan's buying was a feature.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy over Oklahoma and east Tennessee; part cloudy to fair over the Atlantics. Fair over rest of the belt. No rain in the West; some nice rains in North Carolina and a few light showers in Georgia. Gulf disturbance formation still there; should move westward in a few days and give prospects of precipitation over south Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool's opening after the holidays was significantly low. Bulls had hoped that foreign spinners would show some concern over the Bureau condition figures promulgated Friday last when the Liverpool market began business yesterday. But they did nothing of the kind; on the contrary, absence of demand for forward cotton proved an active bearish factor. Students of the staple say there can be no question as to the existence of a large forward requirement. Why, then, is demand lacking now, when, under normal conditions, as in ordinary years, consumers cover their fall, winter and spring requirements, exporters busily engage in catering into forward commitments, the future markets supply the hedges and the steamships sell ocean freight room?

"To the man who searches for the cause behind every effect the answer comes easy. It is Washington's threat of prohibitive legislation. The effect of this threat is twofold, and its ramifications are both subtle and obvious. Meanwhile, the American rings are short, the volume of business light and the trade in suspense."

* * *

There were no rains shown in the weather map, which brought out a fair amount of buying early. The selling was very much scattered. Weld was principal buyer. There were some unfavorable private reports being received this morning.

Liverpool cables: "Market good on reports of drouth damage in Texas, Oklahoma. Manchester reports poor."

* * *

Map indicates cooler with some precipitation coming in from the Central grain States.

* * *

Austin, Texas, wires: "Farmers in town yesterday complaining of plant shedding and recent rains insufficient."

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF STOCKS

Powerful Interests Are Friendly to Constructive Side of Prices. Undertone Firm.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Trading was active at the opening of the stock market to-day, but the list was irregular and quotations showed a considerable division of sentiment. California Petroleum was again under pressure, declining ⅝ to 18½, while Canadian Pacific sustained the same amount of loss. Lehigh Valley sold off ¾, but rallied and recovered most of its decline.

United States Steel common began at 61¼ for the loss of ½, but within half an hour was selling around 61⅝.

Illinois Central and Union Pacific showed firmness, each advancing ⅜. Later both shaded. Great Northern preferred advanced ½. American Smelting, after selling unchanged, shaded ¼. Among the other losses were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; New Haven, ⅜; Anaconda Copper, ¼; and Chio Copper, ¼.

Western Union Telegraph spurted, gaining a point. Southern Pacific, Reading and Northern Pacific advanced.

The curb was steady. Americans in London were firm on cablegrams placing a better construction on the United States monetary situation.

"Looks as if the advance in stocks would continue with the usual reactions that we generally have in a bull market. Believe that stocks should be bought on fair reactions, as the character of the buying this week is exceptionally good, and would indicate that powerful interests are friendly to the constructive side of prices.

"Sentiment seems to be more optimistic, public participation is increasing and general conditions favor a higher level of prices.—Potter.

In the last half of the first hour the scarcity of many issues became so pronounced as to cause a sudden stampede of shorts. Union Pacific led a brisk upward movement, advancing nearly 2 points to 152¼, while substantial fractional gains were noted in Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Reading, Great Northern preferred and Steel common.

In the late forenoon the covering movement was completed and fractional recessions were recorded throughout the list. The tone at the end of the second hour was steady.

Time money is loaning and renewing at 2¼ per cent.

Trading in Texas Company was the feature of the day. In the last hour this issue sold around 114½ for a net gain of 4½ on the day. There were reports in Wall street that some person with inside information was buying on the strength of the forthcoming financial report of the company. Steel sold around 61¾, for a fractional gain and other slight advances were made by Union Pacific and Erie. Reading sold off. The tone was quiet but steady.

The market closed heavy. Governments unchanged; other bonds firm.

Grain Notes

Dry and hot weather.

* * *

The Missouri State report on corn was not as bad as expected.

* * *

Trading in all grains was of enormous volume yesterday. Everybody wanted to sell on reported cooler weather over the larger portion of the grain region. The selling seemed to be profit taking by holders, who were tired of waiting for the anticipated lower temperatures and rains. Offerings were readily absorbed by strong sources. Along toward the close corn led in excitement and strength, but failed to retrieve the early decline.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Wheat has had a break of 3¼c from Monday's high price and the trade seems more bearish because of the big receipts, anticipation of good showing by the Government report Friday, and a lessening of the export demand and the decline in cash premiums. It would not be surprising to see prices drag some lower. What the corn market will do to-day depends on how much rain is shown on the map. With good soaking rains over the belt a sharp break is anticipated, but with only light showers and high temperatures, traders look for prices to hold around present levels and possibly go a little higher."

* * *

Nicolet, of The Kansas City Star, says that Kansas will have one of the smallest corn crops this year ever produced.

* * *

It is intimated that stop-loss orders are heavy in all speculative corn markets, and that a decline of 1½c or so would uncover many. Chicago people report country houses buying, with orders accompanied by sensational crop news.

* * *

John Inglis wired Logan & Bryan: "Southeastern Nebraska, with exception of some of the bottoms, all corn suffering and losing ground. Considerable acreage just tasseling, for which some hopes are entertained, is fast losing, as tasseling period is just when rain is most needed."

* * *

Yields of 739,730,000 bushels of wheat, 2,800,000,000 bushels of corn, 1,003,266,000 bushels of oats and 14,702,000 bales of cotton were estimated for this season in the annual crop report of the Continental and Commercial National Bank made public to-day. Other yields were estimated, Rye 36,854,000 bushels, barley 200,527,000 bushels and hay 66,610,000 tons. The increase in the wheat yield was estimated at 9,000,000 bushels over last year's crop. This is 170,000,000 bushels more than the United States can use in one year.

* * *

Grain region forecast: Illinois cloudy, with showers in north and central portions to-night or Thursday; cooler. Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, showers to-night or Thursday and cooler; Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan, generally fair; Iowa probably light showers to-night or Thursday; Dakotas, cloudy to-night and Thursday; warmer.

* * *

Corn was sold on reports of rains west of the river.

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier Co. says: "Wheat—The weather in the Northwest is clear with seasonable temperatures. Local sentiment is very bearish and the volume of new buying limited. Prices look as though they would drag lower, but the market has had a sharp break since Monday, and we do not care to press short sales on this decline.

"Corn—The weather map shows very light scattered showers at a few points in Nebraska and Iowa through central Illinois. There was a good deal of short corn put out yesterday by locals in anticipation of rains, which is likely to be covered to-day.

"Oats—The volume of trade is lighter, and there has been a good deal of evening-up during the past few days. Offerings of the crop are moderate, but the demand is rather light. Prices will be influenced by wheat and corn.

"Provisions—Liquidation in provisions seems to have been quite thorough again and there was a good class of buying on yesterday's rally."

* * *

From the action of both wheat and corn this morning it looks as though liquidation had been pretty thorough yesterday, and the general belief is that the market will rule higher.

* * *

Price Current estimates corn crop at 2,652,000 bushels, and oats crop at 878,-000,000 bushels.

* * *

Temperatures and rainfall: Canadian Northwest clear, 46 to 68; Northwest, 56 to 68; partly cloudy; West cloudy, 64 to 72; Valentine rained, .20; North Platte, .02; Soo City raining, trace; Davenport, .05; Chicago, .01; Peoria, .02; Springfield, Ill., .08; Southwest cloudy, 68 to 82; Ohio Valley part cloudy, 68 to 74; Indianapolis, .14; Cincinnati raining, trace; Evansville, Ind., .01.

STOCK GOSSIP

The stock market exhibited considerable strength yesterday. Public participation is increasing and stocks have every appearance of selling higher.

* * *

"I am bullish on the general situation and firmly believe all securities of merit will apreciate in value before the first of September, on the other hand, I would keep long of the leaders like Union Pacific, United States Steel and A. C. P."—G. D. Potter.

* * *

"The market looks very safe on the long side. I think the trend will continue upward and would advise selections for purchase of stocks, which have not yet responded to general advance."—Clark.

* * *

There will be no cash distribution to be made by Union Pacific in connection with the offering of Southern Pacific certificates. However, Union Pacific may declare an extra dividend.

* * *

House committee Democrats by vote of 11 to 3 indorsed the Administration currency bill with amendment authorizing national banks to organize saving and trust departments and making Federal reserve board by-partisan.

* * *

Treasury officials say the net balance available for deposit in national banks at the close of business Tuesday was $280,892,165.

* * *

Brooklyn Rapid Transit in year ended June 30 earned 9.16 per cent surplus for $49,078,000 stock, against 8.25 per cent the previous year on $475,000,000 stock.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—There was a complete reversal of conditions surrounding the corn market to-day, as the early weakness was changed to a wild and advancing market toward the end of the session. While the highest prices reached were not fully sustained, the undercurrent was one of great strength.

Wheat closed at advances of 1-4@5-8 and oats were up 1-8@3-8. Cash sales reported for the day were 10,000 bushels of wheat, 222,000 bushels of corn, and 255,000 bushels of oats.

Provisions were sharply higher all around.

Butts Adds 5,000 Acres for Taxation

JACKSON, Aug. 6.—The tax returns of Butts County for 1913 amount to $2,243,000, as against $2,191,000 in 1912, a gain of $52,000. But for an error of $22,000 in last year's digest the increase would have been $75,000.

The number of acres of land returned for taxation jumped from 108,-000 last year to 113,000 this year, a gain of 5,000. There are still several thousand acres of land in the county not been returned for taxation.

Britain's Sordid Attitude to the Panama Exposition.

Great Britain's refusal to take part in the Panama Canal Exposition of 1915 may be accepted in sorrow rather than in anger—sorrow that the government of so great an empire should have sunk into such a narrow rut of parochial politics that for the sake of a ha'porth of self-advantage it would sacrifice its share in the nobler spirit of rejoicing in a world's great work well done.

Here, then, is the childish retort to the refusal of our Government to submit to arbitration the dispute about the canal tolls—"We won't play in your yard."

Of the dispute itself this newspaper has already on many occasions expressed its emphatic views. Based on a shadowy protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, in which there was never any practical reality, Great Britain undertakes, under the letter of certain treaties made at a time when the idea of a canal at Panama was not dreamed of, to tell the United States that it can not send its own coast-wise traffic at a lower rate than foreign ocean traffic through a canal every dollar of whose vast cost it has itself paid for and which runs through territory entirely under the American flag!

In practical operation the amount involved on the ocean-going traffic of foreign ships would admittedly be so small that the raising of a dispute about it at all by any foreign government becomes a shining example of "hot potato" stand diplomacy.

From a government that acquired the Suez Canal through the devious, if forceful, methods Great Britain employed—always, of course, strictly observing every honorable obligation to its neighbors from the purely and curious British viewpoint—the Panama protest was simply an astonishing exhibition of sordid and envious greed.

It would be difficult to believe that such a decision as this by Great Britain represented anything more than the clamor of its Tory press—the kind of press that a day or two ago exploited an article calling for the abolition in tennis of the overhand service which enabled McLoughlin to win back the Davis cup—if it were not for the fact that the government is so largely radical in its tone. It is difficult, even with that in mind, to believe that this decision about the San Francisco fair can possibly represent general British sentiment toward America.

Americans, generally speaking, are so broad-minded that they do not want fully to realize that it may be only "hands across the sea" when there is something substantial in Uncle Sam's. They know full well that the friendship that has to be bought is not worth paying for. John Bull is surely not so poverty-stricken that he must haggle over a penny with a friend. This show of petty temper is, alas, a deplorable betrayal of a mean spirit.

And to base his position on a high-sounding principle is for John Bull to pose on a pedestal of lofty self-righteousness which history never erected for him, and which would topple if tapped with even a toy hammer of truth.

But, if great nations can sometimes be small, smaller nations can frequently be big. Twenty-two, including even Japan, have agreed to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and its success and interest can not now be materially impaired. The canal itself, the greatest wonder of the world wrought by man, will be open, and ships of all nations, even those of Great Britain, will be passing through it on their voyages over the new trade routes of the oceans, opening up new countries and new enterprises and new profits for all the peoples of the earth to share—among them Great Britain, and not the least.

California and Our Merchant Marine.

California is advancing a wholesome movement to inaugurate a merchant marine with State money, if a laggard Government continues to neglect this truly American policy.

There is a bill in the California Legislature to appoint a board of five merchant marine commissioners—one from the resident shipbuilders, one from the resident shipowners, one from the shippers of domestic goods, one from the consignees of foreign goods and one from the Sailers' Union of the Pacific. This board shall have authority from the State to pay 5 per cent per annum upon one-half the building cost of ships engaged in foreign and domestic commerce from California ports and to help on the payment of the difference between building and operating such American-built ships with American workmen and American officers and the cost of building and operating with foreign workmen and officers. The State's subsidy is to cease if ever the National Government shall aid these ships with a subsidy.

It is plain to see that California, progressive and enterprising among American States, realizes the necessity of a domestic merchant marine, and that California is willing to put her hands in her pockets and help to build such a merchant marine with heroic liberality. It is also substantially evident that California believes a merchant marine will richly repay the original cost.

The California bill will help to point the necessity in our commerce, and will, it is hoped, inspire the Government to its duty.

Somebody has to make a start in our merchant marine. Congress and the Administration seem laggard and indifferent or incapable.

If our maritime States are brave enough and public-spirited enough to make this beginning, the appealing figures are at hand to inspire them, and the example of California may be the object lesson needed to set on foot the greatest and most essential commercial policy of our country.

Mysteries of Science and Nature.

With the Aid of Photography and Ultra-Violet Microscope Man's Power of Vision Is Beginning to Rival That of Insects.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

MAN is beginning to add to his senses. If he has not discovered new ones, he has extended the range of some of those which he already possesses. When this process has been continued for a few hundred, or a few thousand, years, the human race may find that it has got upon a new level, from which it can penetrate much farther and much deeper in the wonders of the universe.

Beginning to See.

Among other things, man is beginning, under the guidance of science, to see, in a roundabout way, with the eyes of insects.

To understand this, let us first consider how we see with our natural power of vision.

Our range of sight is strictly confined within the limits of waves of light, varying in length from about 1-39,000th to about 1-57,000th of an inch. The longest of these waves produces in our brains the impression of red, and the shortest the impression of violet. The other principal colors (orange, yellow, blue and indigo) are produced by intermediate wave-lengths, each color having its own characteristic waves.

If an object reflects light of only one of these colors it assumes the hue of that color; if it reflects them all equally, it appears white, because a combination of the primary colors produces the impression of white.

But there are, in reality, enormous numbers of light waves which are longer than the longest that affect our sense of vision, and also enormous numbers that are shorter than the shortest that we can see. In either case these waves, which lie beyond one end or the other of what is called the "visible spectrum" of light, are, except for scientific devices, totally insensible to us.

Now, it has been found that certain insects, particularly ants, can perceive light waves that are shorter than 1-57,000th of an inch, which is the lower limit for human eyes.

In other words, the ant can "see" a color that lies outside the violet. If the ant has a name for this "ultra-violet" color, we are not likely to find it out.

More than that, the ant (if it possesses microscopic powers) may be able to see objects that are so minute that a "forty-billion-power" microscope would be unable to reveal them to us, because they are smaller than the smallest light wave that lies within our range. An object as small as that would be unable to reflect perfectly a wave of violet light, and consequently no amount of direct magnification would be able to bring it clearly within the limits of sight for us.

What Ant Perceives.

But right here the magic power of photography comes to our aid and enables us to penetrate into this world of the infinitely minute, which the insects may be supposed to have regarded as their exclusive and inviolable domain!

Photography is able to do this because the sensitive plate or film is affected by those same ultra-violet waves that the ant perceives.

Suppose, then, that an object is so small that it can not reflect the violet waves, but can reflect the smaller ultra-violet ones. It is only necessary to make a photograph of it, whereupon the ultra-violet waves that it reflects will produce a chemical change in the sensitive surface of the photographic plate or film and impress an image there, which image may be magnified at will. This is the principle of the "ultra-violet microscope."

There is another way in which man has recently extended his range of vision indirectly, deep into the secrets of the infinitely minute. It has been done by the aid of what is called the "ultra-microscope." This depends for its action upon the fact that a minute object produces a scattering of the rays of light that fall upon it. It surrounds itself with a kind of aureole, as may be noticed when a beam of sunlight enters a dusty room, causing millions of previously invisible floating particles to glow like infinitesimal stars.

Light Reveals Objects.

Suppose that an object of this kind, too small to be seen by direct microscope examination, yet large enough to reflect the light waves that lie within our range, is placed under powerful lenses, in a beam of light so arranged that it does not pour directly into the eye of the observer. It will scatter about itself enough light not only to betray its presence but even in some cases to reveal its shape.

But doubtless we have only just begun to find out the power of the mind by its inventions to extend the range of our senses.

: The Cowboy's Creed :

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the evening paper," said my Arizona friend,
"How a feller was shook by his Missus, and brung her life to an end.
Thar'll be lots to pity the feller, and say that it served her right,
And I ain't a-setting in judgment, nor takin' up no one's fight.
But I never could shoot a rabbit, out whar rabbits is thick,
And I figger that shootin' a lady is a similar kind o' trick.
Rabbits and ladies and babies—they can't shoot back, you see,
And the guy was a cur that murdered her!" said Phoenix Phil to me.

"You remember the gal out in Phoenix," said my Arizona friend.
"You remember the home she made me, and the dream that had to end.
I never was able to figger, when I seen I was in the lurch,
How she left my kind of a feller for the rat she met at a church,
But I wasn't no ideal husband; I was always fast and wild,
And she wanted a feller with manners and his shirt all proper biled.
I heard that he made her happy, so I figgered I'd let her be,
Which is harder sometimes than murder," said Phoenix Phil to me.

Taking Inventory

Mothers Should Not Close Their Eyes to the Defects of Their Offspring, but Should Correct Them So That in Later Life the Children Will Not Turn Out Badly.

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY now and then every business man goes carefully over his possessions, listing, appraising, advancing and depreciating their worth and valuing them by the market standards of the day. He calls this taking stock. When he is through and has balanced his ledgers, he knows precisely where he stands—what he has to hope and what to fear, where he may fight and where he must hedge.

I have often thought that there would be less failure in the world and fewer of us would come to spiritual bankruptcy if we would follow the same plan and occasionally sit down and take stock of ourselves mentally, morally and physically. It is human and comfortable to think we possess all graces and virtues and charms, but it isn't true any more than it would be for the cross-roads country store merchant to imagine himself a Wanamaker.

Why shouldn't an ugly woman, for instance, face the music and calmly take an inventory of the beauty that she lacks?

Nobody will deny that the woman who is born beautiful draws the prize package in the lottery of life, but she doesn't get everything. There is tact and charm of manner and grace, and the woman who has these has a magic veil that hides a homely face and makes it seem beautiful to those who come in contact with her. Moreover, while beauty must come by nature, these qualities may be cultivated.

It Lies With Every Woman To Be Considerate of Others.

It lies with every woman to learn a delicate consideration for the feelings of others, to acquire the art of listening with interest and to so improve her mind she will always be the most delightful and intelligent of companions. And when she can do these things she needn't worry much about the size of her nose or whether her mouth is cut bias or straight.

It seems a pity, too, doesn't it, that people don't oftener take stock of their children and see just what they are and what might be made out of them? Of course, it's delightful to think that all of our little Sallies and Johnnies and Tommies are geniuses, but our pleasure in the illusion is apt to be a little marred by the subsequent disappointment that we might so easily have saved ourselves if only we had looked at them as they were, instead of as we wished them to be.

We should think a merchant crazy if he had a store full of calico, and homespun, and pots, and kettles, and pans, and in taking stock he listed them as point lace and diamonds and pictures. Yet that is just exactly what we are doing with our children. We are calling commonplace and ordinary qualities by fine names. We won't see them as they are and make the best of them on that basis. We are so determined on raising up geniuses, instead of good business men and citizens, that now and then we convert them into hoodlums and idiots.

Why shouldn't a mother look her own children over just as she does her neighbors' and size up their strength and weakness? She should, at least, then be able to work out the problem of raising them with some sort of knowledge as a foundation and guide, instead of going at it purely as guesswork. She won't do it, however. It takes a courage to look things in the face that she doesn't possess. She won't admit that this child is feeble-minded or that one is dull, and so she deprives them of the marvelous help that modern education can give along these lines.

She shuts her eyes to the fact that Johnny is bowlegged and Tommy is knock-kneed, and she dooms them to go through life a butt for the ridicule of their acquaintances, when the defect could be so easily remedied while they are children. She takes no pains to help the ugly girl correct her awkwardness and learn the things that would make up for her lack of beauty. Even her efforts to help her children are half the time atrocious mistakes, because she has never taken stock and doesn't know what she has on hand to work with.

Life Has Given Very Few All That They Desired.

Every now and then some unhappy and tearful wife comes to me with the tale of her troubles. She is dissatisfied, discontented, disgruntled. Sometimes she is not appreciated, sometimes her heart is hurt by cold treatment, sometimes she feels that she made a mistake in marrying and yearns for a career out in the world. I don't know any remedy as good for such a state of affairs as for the woman to sit calmly down and take stock of her possesions.

Perhaps life hasn't given her all she wanted. Most of the rest of us are in the same fix. Very likely she hasn't gotten all the happiness she expected out of her marriage. Not many dreams come true. What she needs to do is to count up the things she has got and see how she can do a better business and get more happiness and good out of the things she has.

She has a good home, plenty to eat and wear, a respectable position in society, perhaps little children, certainly liberty to enjoy herself in many ways, and a settled freedom from the cares and anxieties that beset many other women. No woman who has got that many goods on her shelves has any right to declare herself a bankrupt in happiness.

If we took stock of ourselves oftener, wouldn't we blame ourselves more for many of the failures of life and other people less? Our husbands no longer show us the attentions that they did when they were our sweethearts and we cry out that marriage is a failure. Do we take as much pains to please the husband as we did the lover?

Mothers Are to Blame if Children Turn Out Badly.

Our children are rude and ill-mannered, and when they grow up they turn out badly. Whose fault but the mothers who raised them? We have no friends. Do we ever go out of our way to make friends or to show love and kindness to any human being? We, who are working women, complain we are ill paid. Are we doing good work that is worth good money? Let's take stock of what we are giving others before we condemn them too severely.

When merchants overhaul their goods there are certain things that they cast aside as worthless. These are old stock. Things outgrown, out of date. Wouldn't it be a good idea to imitate them in that, too? Let's throw away our old prejudices, our antiquated ideas, our moth-eaten fads. They are old stock. We are better off without them.

STATE CALLS LAST WITNESSES

Frank Hid Girl's Purse in Safe, Says Conley

ONE OF WITNESSES FOR DEFENSE

Mrs. Emma Freeman, who will testify for Leo Frank.

'U. S. WOMEN SET TOO FAST A PACE'

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—American society women are accused of setting too fast a pace by Filson Young, a famous English publicist, in an article in The Saturday Review. Supplementing his article by an interview Mr. Young to-day said:

"If a baboon could be trained to play ragtime he would soon be the rage and would be invited out to dine by the idle rich. Where the shepherd goes society women follow like sheep. In the case of questionable dances American women have been to blame.

"'Tango' in Latin means 'I touch' and it is well named.

"American women in London and Paris are the leaders in revels which should cause a blush of shame to redden the cheeks of every modest woman. One by one the English leaders have surrendered to the daring irreverence of the American women."

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Unsettled Wednesday; probably fair Thursday.

Bulgaria's Enemies Relent; Intercede For Conquered Ally

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 6.—Sympathy may yet prevent Bulgaria from losing all the spoils she won in the Turko-Balkan war. Premier Pasitch, of Servia, and Premier Venizelos, of Greece, to-day wired their respective sovereigns for permission to extend the Bulgarian frontier so as to include a big area of the territory in Northeastern Macedonia which was taken away from Turkey.

It had been the original intention of the Servians and Greeks to punish Bulgaria for the atrocities of her soldiers by refusing to allow the Bulgars to profit by the war.

So eloquently did the Bulgarian peace representatives plead their cause and so graphically did they paint the sufferings undergone by the Bulgarians in the war with Turkey to secure victory for the Balkan league that the Serb and Greek envoys relented.

Judge's Compliment Pacifies Women Who Battled With Fists

When Mrs. J. T. King, No. 144 Piedmont avenue, and Mrs. M. Greenberg, No. 6 Warren place, were arraigned in Police Court, Wednesday as the result of a fight in the former's home, Recorder Pro Tem Preston sought to pacify them, remarking that "good-looking women like you two ought not to be fighting this way."

The compliment went home, both women smiling their thanks.

Mrs. King said it was all the fault of Mrs. Greenberg. Mrs. Greenberg declared Mrs. King was to blame. They fell out over some sewing and used their fists. Mrs. King pushed Mrs. Greenberg out of the house and shut the door. Mrs. Greenberg is said to have kicked the glass out of a window.

Other witnesses said Mrs. Greenberg was the aggressor. Judge Preston fined her $5.75, dismissing the case of Mrs. King.

FILIBUSTER BEATS DRY FORCES

Resolution to Report the Hixon-Searcy Liquor Bill Defeated. Tax Plot Charged.

The filibuster in the House against the resolution of Kidd, of Baker, which instructed the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill for action, and by which Wohlwender, of Muscogee, consumed the entire time of the House Tuesday, came to an end Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with victory resting with the forces against the bill.

In response to a point of order raised by Stewart, of Coffee, Speaker Burwell ruled that Kidd's resolution was not in order for consideration Wednesday, and the efforts of the temperance forces to force a hearing on the bill were therefore in vain.

The point raised by Mr. Stewart was that, inasmuch as the resolution was introduced Tuesday and specifically called upon the Temperance Committee to report the bill back "to-morrow," it was asking the committee to perform a physical impossibility, and was therefore not in order.

Wright Objects to Decision.

Wright, of Floyd, who is generally credited with being behind Mr. Kidd in the introduction of the resolution, protested vigorously against the desion of the Speaker.

"Doesn't the Speaker intend to hear those who favor this resolution?" he demanded.

"You are out of order," the Speaker replied. "The resolution has been ruled out of order, and is not now under discussion."

Representative Wohlwender, backed by Myrick and Shuptrine, of Chatham; Nunnally, of Floyd, and others of the anti-dry forces, appeared when the House convened to-day determined to continue the filibuster until Mr. Kidd consented to withdraw his resolution. This Mr. Kidd and the temperance cohorts absolutely refused to do.

Stewart Then Finds Loophole.

Conferences between the prohis and the antis were numerous, but barren of result, and it looked as though the filibuster would continue, with the anti-dry people holding the whip hand indefinitely, when Mr. Stewart found the loophole through which the resolution was riddled.

The effect of the resolution and the filibuster has been to draw the line sharply between the anti-dry and the temperance forces, and to smother the more important question of tax revision. The victory of the antis precludes the possibility of the Searcy bill getting a hearing at this session, inasmuch as the Rules Committee takes charge and no resolutions similar to the Kidd resolution can be introduced.

Claims Anti-Tax Plot.

Mr. Wohlwender, whose strong lungs and determination defeated the resolution, voiced the opinion Wednesday morning that the resolution was an outgrowth of the tax revision fight.

"Sheppard, of Sumter; Stovall, of Elbert, and the others who are fighting tax revision were behing the resolution," declared Mr. Wohlwender. "They hoped to get that bill brought out because they knew if the House once got busy on it no tax measures could be passed at this session."

'Wilson White' for Male Dress Rules

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—White is the proper color for men who want to be up-to-the-minute in their dress at the National Capital.

The tropical raiment was adopted by the President one day when the mercury was trying to hit the sky. The next day Secretary Bryan made his debut, and within 48 hours "Wilson white" was the fad. The material may be anything from silk to duck.

SAYS PASTOR TOOK 'HUSH' MONEY

Minister Accused of Accepting $1,500 From Own Brother, Who Was Friendly With Wife.

MACON, Aug. 6.—The Rev. E. T. Moore, a Baptist minister at Andersonville, formerly of Macon, is charged by Attorney Oliver C. Hancock, in a suit brought in the city court of Americus, with extorting $1,500 from his own brother as a price for silence in court as to his brother's alleged intimacy with Mrs. Moore.

Last year Rev. Mr. Moore obtained a divorce from his wife in the Bibb Superior Court, after a hotly contested trial. He charged her with being unfaithful. One of the alleged corespondents swore to improper relations with Mrs. Moore, who is a strikingly handsome woman of about 35 years. It is now charged that Rev. Mr. Moore found his own brother and Mrs. Moore in a compromising position and that he threatened his brother, who was about to be married, with exposure unless given $1,500.

Attorney Hancock alleges that he can prove the facts and the actual payment of the money.

This charge forms part of a suit brought for the recovery of a fee for legal services. Mr. Hancock claims that Rev. Mr. Moore has not only refused to pay him for services in procuring the divorce, but also borrowed $50 while the case was pending which he also refuses to repay.

Mrs. Moore now is living with her parents at Eufaula, Ala., and the two children are temporarily in her custody. Rev. Mr. Moore, while here, resided in the Mercer University community and was highly esteemed both as a man and a minister.

Arkansas Has Fifth Governor This Year

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 6.—George W. Hays was to-day inaugurated Governor of Arkansas, being the fifth executive the State has had since January 1. He was chosen in a special election July 23.

A special train from Camden, the home of Governor Hays, brought a delegation to attend the ceremony. Hays succeeds to the remainder of the unexpired term of Joe T. Robinson, now United States Senator, who in January succeeded Governor Doughey. The State has had two acting Governors—Senators W. K. Oldham and John M. Futrell—since Robinson resigned on March 10.

Mulhall, Nervous, Gets Quiz Respite

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Pleading that he was suffering from nervousness, Colonel M. M. Mulhall to-day obtained permission of the House Lobby Investigating Committee to go to his home in Baltimore and take a rest.

He promised to be on hand next Monday to testify.

Girl Leads Strike Of 10,000 Knitters

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Three thousand more knitting mill operatives joined the strike here to-day, bringing the total number of strikers, mostly women, up to 10,000.

The strike is being led by Miss Jennie Persley, 20 years old.

Word by T. R. Worth Army Under Wilson, Says Gov. Johnson

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Criticism of the course of the Wilson Administration was contained in an address by Governor Hiram Johnson, who was the Vice Presidential candidate on the Progressive ticket last year, speaking at the first anniversary celebration of the Progressives.

"The National Administration has not come up to expectations," said Governor Johnson. "We have a foreign policy that is weak and vacillating. One word from Theodore Roosevelt is worth a whole army under Woodrow Wilson.

"We were shocked by the whitewashing of Ballinger by Taft. That differed in no essential from the whitewashing of McReynolds by Wilson."

This Is Comforting! Freezing at Big Bear, Snow in Yellowstone

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., Aug. 6.—Very chilly weather is reported at Big Bear, in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Early yesterday morning there was a thin sheeting of ice around the edges of the lake. At Pine Knot Hotel the thermometer registered 33 degrees.

The minimum in the city of San Bernardino yesterday was 48 degrees, the lowest July record in many years.

HELENA, MONT., Aug. 6.—There was a heavy snowfall in the Yellowstone Park last night and the mountains in the vicinity of Livingston were white with new snow this morning.

Directors Liable in Suit for $500,000

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 6.—Chancellor T. M. McConnell has instructed the jury in the Great Southern Agency case, in which stockholders are attempting to recover $500,000 which they allege was obtained by fraud, to name C. J. Hebert, H. C. Papineau, A. W. Wills, C. W. Stevenson, W. D. Haggard, John Early, E. C. Morrow, Nathan Hale and Sterling Fort, directors of the defunt company, as defendants.

The jury agreed that fraud had been practiced, but they could not agree upon those to be held responsible. More than 1,000 stockholders in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee are parties to the suit.

Postmaster Named By Hayes Resigns

JACKSON, Aug. 6.—After serving as postmaster at Jackson for more than twenty years and with one intermission of four years, having served continuously since the Hayes administration, Mrs. A. B. Harp has sent her resignation to Washington.

Continued ill health is given as the reason. For many months Mrs. Harp has been in feeble health and has been able to be at the office but little. Her present term would have expired in 1915.

Pump Going Again; Stands 2-Day Test

After a test of over two days, the big 18,000,000-gallon pump at the river station of the Atlanta waterworks is again running full time.

Wednesday members of the Board of Water Commissioners and officials of the waterworks department visited the station and were more than pleased with the condition of the big pump.

Mystery in Death of Rich Man in Memphis

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 6.—The body of J. M. Hughes, wealthy lumberman of Senatobia, Miss., was found in the basement of a furniture store to-day. Hughes came to Memphis yesterday and was at the store in the afternoon.

The police are not sure whether he was murdered or fell through an elevator shaft.

DORSEY PRACTICALLY COMPLETES HIS CASE; AWAIT JUDGE'S RULING

When Jim Conley left the witness stand Wednesday, the State's case against Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, practically was completed. So far as the presentation of direct evidence against the factory superintendent was concerned, the jury was in posession of practically every piece of testimony.

Solicitor Dorsey announced when court reconvened in the afternoon that he proposed to call only one or two new witnesses. It was predicted that even these would be prevented from testifying as the result of Judge Roan's expected ruling on the line of testimony that they were expected to give.

Witness Dalton Is Excused.

One of the new witnesses was C. B. Dalton, who was called at the forenoon session, but excused after a mysterious side-bar conference. Dalton was to tell of the alleged conduct of Frank at the factory on occasions to which Conley already had referred in his testimony.

With the testimony of Dalton ruled out, as well as that of young George Epps, whom Dorsey proposed to recall and question concerning remarks of Mary Phagan in respect to Frank's conduct, the probability was strong at the opening of the afternoon session that Dr. H. F. Harris and possibly one other witness would be the only ones called by the State before closing the presentation of direct evidence.

Dr. Harris collapsed when on the stand last Friday before the Solicitor had completed his questioning and before Reuben Arnold had been given the opportunity for cross-examination. The Solicitor planned to quiz Dr. Harris more closely concerning the condition of the young girl's body and organs and also to bring out more in detail the physician's conclusion that the girl must have been killed within half an hour after she left home because of the undigested condition of the cabbage he found in her stomach.

Hot Argument Over Excluding Testimony.

The fight to exclude Conley's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged conduct proved one of the exciting incidents of the morning session. The argument was still in progress when court adjourned for the noon recess. That and Conley's sensational declaration that Frank had hid the murder victim's silver-plated mesh bag, for which the detectives have been searching for months, in the safe in the factory office immediately after the crime were the features of the day.

The jury was sent away at noon to permit the lawyers to argue on the admissibility of Conley's testimony in respect to Frank's conduct. Solicitor Dorsey said he wished to call Dalton and others to substantiate it.

Reuben Arnold argued that it was inadmissible because irrelevant and immaterial, and that it was a violation of the general principle in law that because A committed X last year, it can not be introduced to show that he committed X of which he is now accused.

Early Ruling Is Promised.

Combating the contention of Attorney Hooper that the objection of the defense had not been made until the lawyers for Frank had cross-examined the negro and found that they could get no reversal of statements from him, Arnold cited cases in a large number of States indicating that it is a well defined privilege that testimony may be stricken out at the instance of the defense even after the cross-examination has taken place. Judge Roan said that he would make his ruling early in the afternoon session. Colonel Arnold grew faint during the argument and got the judge's consent to talk sitting.

Attorney Rosser's manner was angry and threatening when he arose for the re-cross examination. He began at once a vicious attack on Conley's story of the mesh bag. He asked when Conley first told this remarkable tale. Conley said he couldn't remember.

"Why didn't you tell all this when you were telling 'the whole truth" to the detectives?" Rosser shouted.

The attorney apparently sought to create the impression that the mesh bag story was an afterthought, and that it was manufactured by the negro when he heard of the search the detectives were making for the bag.

On Grill Over Thirteen Hours.

When Rosser turned Conley back to Dorsey for the redirect examination, the negro had been under the grill of Rosser's cross-questioning for a total of thirteen hours. His main story of Frank's admitting the killing and of the disposal of Mary Phagan's body at Frank's direction was unshaken except by his own admissions of previous falsehoods. He had been on the stand a total of fifteen and one-half hours. Of this time the Solicitor had questioned him only about two hours.

Conley was called from the stand at 11:10 o'clock.

Conley was taken into an anteroom. He removed his coat and lit a cigarette someone had given him.

"How did you like it?" he was asked.

"I liked it all right," he replied, grinning.

Sheriff Mangum then interrupted the questioning of the reporters, saying that under the judge's orders no one could speak to him.

The next moment Conley picked up a newspaper and became intently interested in the story of his own testimony.

As soon as court opened Mr. Rosser asked the judge if he was ready to hear argument on the proposition to eliminate parts of Conley's testimony. He said he was prepared to support his motion with authorities.

Judge Roan replied that he would postpone his decision until 2 o'clock.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that he had witnesses he expects to put on the stand Wednesday morning to substantiate the part of the negro's testimony in dispute. He said:

"I just want the court to understand that I am going to do this."

Judge Roan replied:

"I'll give you the benefit of whatever you bring out."

Conley was then recalled to the stand for the conclusion of his cross-examination.

Questioned About Affidavit.

Rosser's first question was:

Q. You made this statement just as I read it, didn't you, Jim?—A. Yes.

Q. It's all correct?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, Jim, you signed this statement, too, didn't you? (Showing another affidavit.)—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made this one the day after the one I just read? Now, listen, and see if this is what you said?

Mr. Rosser read how Jim Conley for the first time told the story of carrying the body of Mary Phagan to the basement. These were the concluding words:

"The reason I have not told this before is that Mr. Frank said he would get me out, but it don't seem that he is going to get out and I have decided to tell the whole truth. I gave him back the $200. He said he would fix it all right Monday."

Q. This is what you swore, isn't it, Jim?—A. Yes, sir; I swore it.

Q. Jim, didn't Miss Carson ask you on Monday while you were working around her machine when they were going to get you, you answered that you hadn't done nothing?—A. No, sir.

Denies Alarm While Sweeping.

Q. Didn't she say that Mr. Frank was innocent and the real murderer of little Mary Phagan was the man Mrs. White saw near the steps? You dropped your broom and quit sweeping when she said that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say to Mr. Herbert Schiff on Monday after the murder that you were afraid to go out of the factory and that you would give a million dollars to be a white man? A. I didn't say just that, but I told him if I was a white man I would go on out.

Q. He told you to get on out, asking you what you had to be afraid of?—A. Something like that.

Q. Jim, you talked with Julia Fuss on that day and asked her if she had another extra? You asked her if she got one to let you see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. She told you that Mr. Frank was innocent, didn't she? And you said he was innocent as the angels in heaven?—A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Mr. Rosser closed the cross-examination and Solicitor Dorsey began the redirect examination.

Q. Jim, where were you in prison? A. Police headquarters.

Q. Were you ever in jail?—A. Yes.

Q. What were you charged with?—A. Just because I was washing my shirt.

Q. I mean those other times you were arrested. Were you in the county jail then?—A. No, I was in headquarters.

Rosser interrupted:

"The charges are in writing, your honor. They are the last evidence."

"It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways," said Dorsey. "Can't we exclude this evidence?"

Judge Roan: "You can show where he was."

Q. What were you arrested for the first time?—A. I was throwing rocks.

Q. Who arrested you?—A. A police named Edmonds.

Q. The second time?—A. I was fighting.

Q. A white man or a woman?—A. No, I never had any trouble with white folks.

Q. Jim, did you try to see Mr. Frank in jail?

Rosser objected.

Judge Roan—Don't lead him, Mr. Dorsey.

Q. Did you ever see Frank after you went to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Why not?

Rosser objected to the question as immaterial. Dorsey changed his question.

Last Saw Frank at Station.

Q. When was the last time you saw Frank before you saw him here?—A. Over there at the police station.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. No, he just smiled and bowed his head.

Q. When you wrote those notes, did you sit down, and, if so, where?—A. I was sitting at the desk.

Q. Where was Frank sitting?—A. At the other desk.

Attorney Rosser objected. "He went into all that before," he said.

Judge Roan—Did you, Mr. Dorsey? "No, it is something I omitted," said Dorsey.

Q. What did Frank do when he you wrote those notes?

Rosser objected to the question as leading.

Q. Did Frank touch your pencil when you were writing?

Rosser objected again, declaring that the question was leading.

Judge Roan said the question could be asked without leading.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Frank do when you were writing?—A. He took the pencil out of my hand and told me to rule out that "s" on the "negro."

Q. What hour was it Friday Frank came up on the fourth floor and spoke to you?—A. About 3 o'clock.

Says Frank Took Girl's Bag.

Q. How far was it from where you were Tuesday when he told you to be a good boy?—A. Almost the same place.

Q. How far was it from the water cooler to where her body was dragged?—A. I don't know, sir.

Q. How far from the water cooler? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see Mary Phagan's pocketbook or meshbag?—A. Yes, it was on the desk in Mr. Frank's office.

Q. What did he do with it?—A. He put it in the safe.

Q. How long were you in jail before you wrote for the detectives?—A. About ten or fifteen days.

Q. How long would it take Frank to go down and lock that door?—A. About one minute.

Q. Where was Frank standing when you saw the clock at four minutes to one?—A. He was standing near those stair steps.

Q. Describe that scream you heard. Rosser objected.

"He has gone into that before, your honor," he said.

The question was sustained, Judge Roan saying: "The question cannot be asked because it is reopening a long cross-examination."

Q. Jim, who has asked you the most questions, Mr. Black, Scott, Starnes and Campbell and myself or Mr. Rosser?

Tries to Show Court Grilling.

Rosser objected.

Dorsey: "Your honor, he has tried to bring out the fact that this witness has been grilled. I want to show that altogether he was not questioned as long or as much as Mr. Rosser has questioned him on the stand.

Judge Roan: "You can ask him how long he was questioned out of court, and what has gone on here is public."

Dorsey put the question again.

Q. How long was the longest you was ever questioned before you came here?—A. Mr. Scott came and got me one day and I herd him tell the turnkey it was fifteen minutes to eleven. It was dark when I got back.

Q. How long was that?—A. I'd say about three and one-half hours.

Q. How long has Mr. Rosser questioned you?

"Your honor, I want to get this answer in the records," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan: "Do you object?" looking at Mr. Rosser.

"I do," said Rosser.

"I sustain you," said the court.

Dorsey continued the questioning.

Q. Jim, how did you leave the body in the basement?—A. I left her on her side.

Lies on Floor to Answer Query.

Q. How? (Conley got down on the floor and lay on his left side, his arms against his body. After the illustration he identified a photograph of the basement and pointed out just where he left the body).

Q. Now, Jim, tell the jury in detail everything you did after you looked at the clock at 4 minutes to 1.

Rosser objected. "He has gone into that, your honor," he said.

"Have you, Mr. Dorsey?" Judge Roan asked.

"We have not gone into that detail," Dorsey replied. "We want to show the jury how long it would have taken to do the things there and how long it would have taken Frank to get to his home. Mr. Rosser has brought out this detail to draw his conclusions."

Judge Roan: "Have you asked that?"

Dorsey: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I sustain the objection."

Dorsey: "That's all right, your honor. If you think the State ought not to ask these questions, it is all right with me."

Promised Help in Trouble.

Q. What kind of paper were you talking about when you spoke of green sheets?—A. That one (identifying the white note).

Q. What kind of back did it have? —A. A kind of grayish pad.

Q. What did Frank say about taking you to Brooklyn?—A. He didn't. He said he would take me away, and if I got into trouble he would get me out.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Mincey?—A. No; I saw him at police headquarters.

Q. What did he say?

Rosser objected, and the objection was sustained.

Q. That night at jail, did those newspaper men come on the inside?—A. No.

Q. What did they say? Wait a minute; I want those two men out. (Two newspaper reporters, H. W. Ross and Harllee Branch, of The Atlanta Journal, who were at the press table, retired from the courtroom.)—A. I can't remember that.

Q. Did they offer you anything at all?

Rosser objected, and was sustained. Conley had answered the question, though, declaring that nothing was offered him but a paper.

Q. That day at the factory, were you nervous or not?—A. No; I was not.

Darley Knew He Could Write.

Q. What did Mr. Schiff say to you? —A. They were standing there by the clock and asked if there was a crowd at the front door. Mr. Schiff came in and I said I wish I was a white man; that I would go out from there. One man said he wished he had a pistol. Mr. Schiff said: "They've got Mr. Frank in jail. I don't see that being white would help."

Q. Did Darley know you could write?—A. Yes.

Rosser objected. "It is immaterial," said he.

Dorsey: "We want to show that this man could write; that he was in jail several days without writing, and the detectives, the Pinkertons employed by the factory, knew he could write.

Q. Could you spell luxury?—A. Yes.

Q. Why?—A. I had to write it several times. Mr. Frank had me to write down the names of the different boxes that pencils were in, and give them to him, so that he could know when they were out.

Attorney Rosser took up the re-cross-examination:

Q. Jim, you were questioned by Mr. Dorsey and myself and all the detectives, and this morning was the first time you ever mentioned that mesh bag.—A. You didn't ask me.

Q. Do you know what I asked you yesterday?—A. Yes, sir; I remember some of the questions.

Q. What?—A. Well, I don't remember just exactly.

Q. You don't remember a single thing that has not been written down?

Dorsey objected. "He must give the witness time to answer," said he.

Q. Jim, haven't you answered my questions?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said this morning that Mr. Frank promised to get you out on bond and send you out of town?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell the detectives that when you told them you were telling all the truth?—A. I did tell them hep romised to get me out.

Q. Mr. Dorsey saw you seven times, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir; I think that's right.

Q. Did he take down what you said? A. He took down something the first time.

Q. How about the next times?—A. I disremember.

Q. How long have you kept up with those boxes?—A. About a year.

Conley Tries Spelling.

Q. And you wrote Mr. Frank reports on these boxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you know "luxury" if you were to see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you write it for Mr. Frank, then?—A. I can write it.

Q. Can you spell it?—I can try it.

Q. Well let's hear you spell 'luxury.'

A. L-u-s-t-r-i-s.

Q. Was that the only kind of pencil boxes up there?—A. No, sir. There was Uncle Remus, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and others.

Q. Did you write reports on them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Uncle Remus.'—A. O-n-e R-i-m-e-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Thomas Jefferson.'—A. T-o-m J-e-l-s-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'George Washington.'—A. J-o-e W-i-s-h-t-o-n.

Q. What did Mr. Frank say about your spelling?—A. He laughed.

Q. How do you spell 'O'?—A. O-x.

Q. How did you write him notes to borrow money?—A. I just wrote them.

Q. Tell me what you wrote?—A. I just said: 'Please let me have fifty cents.'

Q. When you were standing by that box talking, could Mr. Darley hear you?—A. Yes.

Q. Could Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes.

Q. Could that boy?—A. Yes.

Q. The shipping clerk?—A. Yes.

Asked If He Could Write.

Q. When you went into the office to write those notes, Mr. Frank asked you if you could write, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Rosser put the question again.

Dorsey objected to the repetition, and the objection was sustained.

Q. Messrs. Hooper and Dorsey were with you in the jail together, were they not?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. Two or three hours.

Dorsey Wins Ruling.

Q. How long after April 26 was it you saw this man?—A. About a month.

Dorsey took the witness again.

Q. I want you to describe that pocketbook.—A. It was a wire-ish looking pocketbook, kind of whitish looking.

Q. Did you have anything to copy from when you wrote those words?—A. I could see the boxes.

Dorsey: "Come down, Jim."

Rosser: "Just a minute."

Q. Jim, tell me how large that pocketbook was.—A. I can't say, it was kind of folded up.

Q. Give us your best estimate.—A. It was about like this (indicating about 5 inches.)

Conley was then excused, having been on the stand since 9:45 Monday morning.

Dalton Called to Stand.

C. B. Dalton was called to the stand.

Dalton is the man Conley declared was in the factory with Frank and the women on Saturday afternoons when he watched.

Before questioning Dalton, Solicitor Dorsey obtained consent to tender the notes found by the side of the dead girl and a photograph of the basement as evidence.

Dalton came in and took the chair. He is a man of about 35 years of age rather rough in appearance. He has brown hair and overhanging brows and thin, tightly compressed lips. Solicitor Dorsey recalled him before putting any questions, and Mrs. Arthur White was called. Dorsey stated that he would call Dalton later. Dorsey questioned Mrs. White. He had Jim Conley brought back into the room.

Q. Mrs. White, look at this man right good. Do you know who he is? —A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him before?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. At police headquarters.

Q. Does he compare in general size to the man you saw in the National Pencil Factory April 26? ("Put on your hat, Jim," said Dorsey to Conley.)—A. He looks more like him than any man I have seen.

Q. At the time you saw him at the police station did you identify him?—A. I did not.

Rosser objected.

Q. What did you say?

Rosser: "I object. I wasn't there."

Dorsey: "Your representative, Mr. Scott, was there."

Rosser: "I move to rule that out."

A. I said he looked more like the one than any man I have seen.

Rosser: "I move to rule it all out."

Dorsey: "We expect to show by this witness that this was the man. We want to show how he was dressed, his facial expression, etc., and we submit that it is material."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. Describe the man you saw.—A. He was about the size of the one just brought before me whom I have been told is Jim Conley. He was in a dark place and I took him to be black. He had on dark clothes and I don't know whether he had on a hat or not.

Q. Wade Campbell is your brother, and Arthur White your husband, aren't they?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you tell them you saw a negro sitting in that hall?

Rosser objected.

Laughing Spectators Ousted.

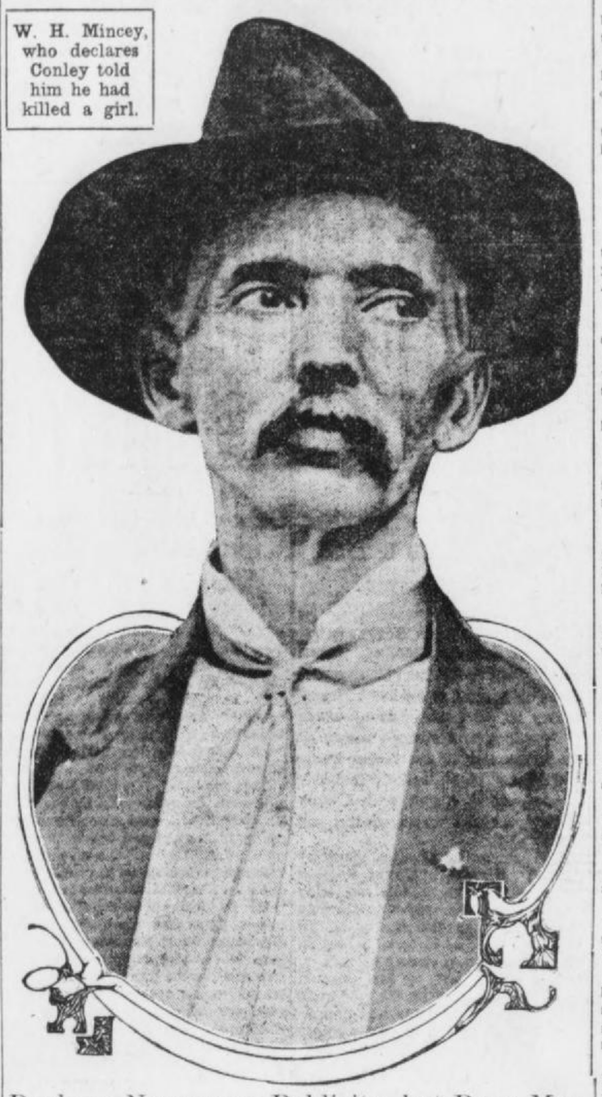

The odd situation of the attorneys for the defense being in possession of the official court records was relieved when Mr. Arnold consented to them being read.

Mr. Rosser, however, found it first in his copy of the testimony of Scott.

Rosser—You were right, Harry Scott did say Mrs. White told Frank

ACCUSER OF CONLEY IS READY TO TESTIFY

W. H. Mincey, who declares Conley told him he had killed a girl.

Deplores Newspaper Publicity, but Poses Merrily for the Camera Brigade.

W. H. Mincey, the school teacher and insurance solicitor who made an affidavit that Jim Conley confessed to him that he had already killed a girl that day and didn't want to kill anyone else, was the center of attraction for the crowd on the outside of the courthouse Wednesday morning.

While deploring newspaper publicity, he readily agreed to pose for a group of newspaper photographers, assuming many poses, some of which were rather grotesque. He followed this with implicit instructions to the photographer that his picture was not to be printed in the papers.

Efforts to get him to state whether he had seen Jim Conley since his arrest proved futile. Mincey declared he would not make this statement or answer until he had taken the stand.

Mincey was located at New Salem, Ga., near Rising Fawn, in Dade County. He is teaching school there, his work being the preparation of students to enter the Martha Berry School at Rome.

"I will not talk of the case and will not tell my story until I take the stand," said Mincey. "If Jim Conley killed little Mary Phagan, I feel that it is my duty to tell of the experience I had with him that Saturday afternoon. I don't think this thing should be discussed in the newspapers, though I regard newspapers as a necessity. These matters should be left to the court hearings. It is a loss to me to be here and I trust the case will soon be over. I think, though, that it is my duty to tell what I know."

Mincey is a man of small stature with piercing eyes and a gray mustache. He wears a black felt slouch hat and a dark suit.

Ready to Rebut Mincey Story.

J. W. Boozer, a collector for Patrick & Thompson, Broad street jewelers, from whom Jim Conley purchased a watch, has been summoned as a witness by the State, but released subject to call. He is ready to give testimony to rebut the Mincey affidavit. When asked what he knew of the case, Mr. Boozer said:

"On Saturday afternoon on the day Mary Phagan was murdered, about 4:15 o'clock, I met Conley on Peters street. I asked him if he had any money and he said no, that he drew his wages on Friday evening and had spent it. He then asked me if I had not collected the installment due from Frank."

"Why should you collect from Frank?" Mr. Boozer was asked.

"We had caused the arrest of Conley several times on account of the failure to pay installments. Frank agreed that if Conley would sign the agreement he would deduct the amount of the installment from the pay of the negro each week. To this Conley assented, and I had from that time collected from Frank."

"That being the case, why did you ask the negro for the money on the Saturday mentioned?" was asked.

"I had instructions from Frank that in case I did not collect the money before 1:30 on Saturday not to come until the next week. I had several accounts due on that date and it was impossible for me to reach the pencil factory earlier."

NEGRO COOL AND UNAFRAID DESPITE FIERCE ATTACK OF DEFENSE ON HIS STORY

Jim Conley was the same cool, unafraid negro when he returned to the stand Wednesday morning in the trial of Leo Frank after almost two whole days under the cross-examination of Luther Rosser. He had passed through fire and didn't seem to mind it. He had no fear of anything that was yet to come.

Mr. Rosser might threaten him or might joke with him; it was all the same to the negro. He had tried both and had established but one thing—that Conley is a liar, and Conley admits that.

Arnold might describe him as "that miserable wretch in the witness chair;" he could gaze calmly out the window as he had done before. He didn't quite understand all those names they were calling him, anyway.

If, in all the time that Conley was under the raking fire of Rosser's cross-examination, he was disturbed in the slightest degree, it was when he was being asked about that mysterious affidavit of William H. Mincey.

The declaration of Mincey that Conley had boasted the afternoon of April 26 of killing a girl was sinister and held in it the possibility that Rosser would finish by blazing forth with a direct charge of murder against the negro. Conley moved uneasily in his seat. He refused to meet the eye of his inquisitor. He fidgeted with his hands, but with his lips he framed a denial of every damning charge contained in the document.

The ordeal soon was over. Conley regained his composure, and when court adjourned a few minutes later a grin of triumph cleft his black face almost in twain.

Attorney Sees Conley.

Conley's attorney, William M. Smith, provided him with supper and breakfast at the jail and talked for some time with the State's star witness. He had been prevented from holding any sort of a conference with his client the night before, and protested at this procedure at the close of court Tuesday night. Judge Roan extended him the privilege of seeing Conley. Reuben Arnold asked that an exception be entered in the record.

Conley slept between nine and ten hours and arose much refreshed.

"I'se telling the truth now," he said to a newspaper man who encountered him outside the jail. "That Mr. Rosser ain't got no chance to get me mixed up because I'm telling just what happened."

Frank occupied his usual cell on the second floor of the Tower. He was joined by his wife and mother as soon as he arrived at the courthouse.

Rosser Reads Affidavits.

Rosser asked Dorsey for the original of Conley's third affidavit. The Solicitor advised Mr. Rosser that the original had never been signed. Rosser took a copy of the affidavit, which the Solicitor said was identical with the original, and read it to Conley. It was a signed statement from the negro, in which he admitted the other two affidavits contained lies and the one which the detectives said was the last word in the great mystery.

The reading consumed nearly fifteen minutes, Rosser enunciating clearly and slowly, emphasizing every statement that differed with Conley's evidence on the stand.

Freely Admits He Lied.

All of Rosser's quiz Tuesday had only the one possible effect—that of casting suspicion in the minds of the jury of the story that Conley now is telling. He spread his lies with a lavish hand in that first affidavit he made to the detectives.

He freely admitted this and rather gloried in his prowess as a first-class liar. He lied in his second affidavit, although he maintained that this was a step nearer the truth. And in his third affidavit, which he and the detectives had joined in proclaiming "the whole truth," there were still little discrepancies and deviations from the straight path of veracity.

But this tale that he was unfolding to the jury, this was the pure, unalloyed, gospel truth. He had raised his right hand and sworn that he was going to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Mr. Rosser was most unkind to throw over it a shadow of suspicion.

And the lawyer labored in vain to shake the negro's story as it had gone before the jury. Rosser midway in the Tuesday forenoon session abandoned his line of interrogation in regard to statements that Conley had made to the police and detectives and began questioning Conley directly on the crime.

Questioned Closely on Time.

He questioned him most closely in regard to the time in an effort to show conclusively to the jury that Frank and Conley did not have the opportunity to accomplish all which the negro narrated before Frank left the factory for luncheon at his home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue, at which place he arrived by 1:30 o'clock, according to the State's own witnesses.

Conley testified, under Rosser's cross-examination, that he went to the rear of the factory at Frank's direction and there found the body of the slain girl. He said that he yelled to Frank that the girl was dead and that Frank told him to bring her to the front of the factory.

Conley said that he did not know how he was going to carry the girl and he asked Frank. Frank, he said, yelled back something about getting some crocus bagging, but he did not quite understand him and walked to the front of the factory so that he could hear the superintendent better. He noticed the clock at this moment. It was four minutes of 1 o'clock.

With this time as a starting point, Rosser began to quiz the negro closely as to how long it took him to accomplish each part of the remainder of the afternoon's events.

It was plain that the negro's estimates did not coincide with what the lawyer thought they should be.

Defense's Views Evidently Differ.

"How long did it take you from the time that you came forward and looked at the clock until you had taken the body down to the cellar and was back again on the second floor, and Frank went to wash his hands?" asked Rosser.

Conley thought it was only four or five minutes. It evidently was the opinion of the defense that it should have been nearer twenty minutes, as it included rolling the body of the girl into the cloth from the cotton box, carrying it to the elevator, the wait while Conley says Frank went into the office after the key, the trip down the elevator, the carrying of the body to the rear of the basement, the disposal of the cloth and the return to the second floor.

Rosser asked how long it took Frank to wash his hands. Conley replied that it was only a minute or two. Rosser then inquired how long Frank had Conley in the closet while the two women were in his office. Conley said it was eight or ten minutes. This incident, if it is as Conley represented it, would have brought the time up to 1:12 or 1:15.

Rosser then asked how long it took Conley to write the four notes, two of which were found by the girl's dead body.

Wrote Notes in a Hurry.

"You couldn't have written those four notes inside of ten minutes to save your soul, could you, Jim?" Rosser inquired.

"Yas, sah; I think I wrote 'em in about a minute and a half," replied the negro.

"You're some rapid writer," retorted Rosser after he had called attention to the laborious scrawl.

Rosser then questioned Conley as to the time of each part of his conversation with Frank while he was in the office that afternoon. He asked him about Frank giving him the cigarettes with the money in the box, about Frank giving him the $200 roll of bills and the attendant conversation, about the conversation in respect to Conley's watch and to Frank's wealthy folks in Brooklyn.

While he did not make the actual computation of time, he impressed strongly on the minds of the jury that it would have been impossible for all this to have occurred in connection with the undisputed fact that Frank arrived home at or before 1:30 that afternoon.

CAN JURY OBEY IF TOLD TO FORGET BASE CHARGE?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

"Gentlemen of the jury, having heard from James Conley, the blackest, most damning story ever told in Atlanta by one human being against another, having sat there and listened as he smudged with unspeakable scandal the defendant in this case, Leo Frank, although it is irrelevant, immaterial, and has nothing to do with this case, you will kindly forget it, being on your oaths as jurymen to consider the evidence declared competent!"

And the jury, being like most other juries, in one way and another, and having heard all the things as aforesaid, will promptly proceed to do as instructed about forgetting it—NOT!

I have heard juries told too many times to "forget" things—such, for instance, as that there is no such thing as "unwritten law" in this land of the free and home of the brave—and I have seen too many times those very same juries proceed to "forget"—NOT!

Juries are, after all, composed of mere human beings, and things such as Conley said to the Frank jury can NOT be forgotten, and will NOT be disregarded by the average jury.

Merely Question of Belief.

It is merely a queston of whether the jury BELIEVES the negro!

There was something infinitely pathetic in the situation Tuesday, when court met in the afternoon.

For one thing, it brought to the cheeks of the defendant's wife, always and ever at his side, the first tears I yet have seen fall from her eyes.

She has borne herself with amazing fortitude thus far—the wonder is that she has not long ago collapsed.

When Reuben Arnold, moving to strike from the record the vile story of Jim Conley, paused a second before reading the exact words he desired expunged, looked a moment in the direction of the defendant's wife, and said, with no show of the spectacular whatever, "Your honor, I would prefer not to read this in the presence of these two ladies, and I therefore pass it to your honor that you may read it in silence!" The moment was tense and tragic!

Weeps For First Time.

I do not know whether it was gratitude to Arnold for the kindness and consideration thus shown, whether it was realization of the weighty purpose of the motion, whether it was the first chilling breath of apprehension, or whether it was just a physical giving way that moved Mrs. Frank. Whatever it was, as Arnold passed the paper along to Judge Roan, the first tear I ever saw from the eyes of Lucile Frank trickled down her cheek and she dropped her head in her hands for a moment, or two and sobbed!

Apparently there was nothing in the incident, either upon the part of Arnold or the woman, designed to be the least bit theatrical. The jury had been removed, the stage settings were wanting.

It merely was a natural and minor incident that tugged, somehow, at the heartstrings and caught at the throat.

In all the packed courtroom there were two women only—beyond that, there was a morbidly hungry crowd of men, ready to grasp greedily at anything sensational.

Arnold denied the crowd for the sake of—the women.

And now the jury has been asked to forget the damning thing that has been said to it, that has been said in the presence of the wife and the mother—and that was too vile to say a second time in the presence of the latter!

Do you think the jury WILL forget—do you think it CAN forget?

Maybe you do—I don't!

And as to Conley and his story in its entirety—the spectators in that courtroom have been looking for Conley to "break down," to fall on his knees and confess it all a lie, and all that sort of thing.

There never was any chance that Conley would do that. It should be borne in mind that to "break down" Conley's story does not necessarily mean to break down Conley—to collapse him.

The point is: Can the defense—has or will the defense—so UNDERMINE Conley's story that, through the introduction of other evidence, it eventually will fall to the ground as a mass of lies?

Slowly, but persistently, with deadly intent even, if with tediousness of method, Luther Z. Rosser for more than two days has attacked the amazing and terrible story upon which the State hopes to convict Leo Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Rosser has been almost maddening in his patience with the negro. He has gone over the same ground, time after time, in his efforts to get Conley's various stories adjusted to the purpose of the defense.

Conley, rapid-fire enough in direct examination, rattling off his grewsome and frightful story as if it were a recital of an altogether common thing, became quite another Conley under cross-examination.

Where but a few moments ago he had remembered most amazing and inconsequential details—such as the fact that a woman who called to see Frank on Thanksgiving Day wore a blue and white polka dotted dress, a green hat and white shoes and stockings—under cross-examination he could remember nothing at all save after the most persistent prodding.

Time and again Mr. Rosser had to go over the entire ground of an entire situation to draw from Conley one further comment upon it. Questioned on his story under both cross and direct examination, the negro was pat enough in reply—on other points he was as vague as he possibly could be.

Twenty-one times Tuesday he admitted to Mr. Rosser that he had "lied." Seven times in addition to that he admitted that he had been "mistaken."

As the cross-examination progressed, too, it became evident enough that the defense is to hold the entire charge against Frank to be largely a "frame-up," with Conley as the bright and particular star about whom it revolves.

The negro said he at first refused to speak of the crime at all, and when he did speak deliberately lied because he "wished to protect Mr. Frank."

"He was my young superintendent—I would have done anything to save him," said the negro—whether with sinister cunning or genuine sincerity, the jury must say.

Showed How Negro Lied.

And yet, with Conley's own lips Rosser showed how, time and again, he deliberately lied about his movements on the fatal Saturday that was Mary Phagan's last on earth—after he had said that he had looked in vain for help from Frank, and was then determined to tell "the whole truth!"

After Conley's excuse of protecting Frank had been shattered by the negro's own "confession," he had to make three subsequent and different "confessions" before he got things shaped to his liking—and every time he readjusted his story it was changed to meet the ever bobbing up objections to the story of the day or two before.

Continuously Mr. Rosser referred to the fact, always admitted by the negro, that his various affidavits were changed "at police headquarters," in the presence of officers, "after being released from jail and carried to headquarters."

There are dozens of puzzling inconsistencies to be bridged over in Conley's story—scores of things yet to be explained and straightened out.

And yet—

In the average mind I doubt whether Conley's story has been seriously discredited in the main.

There are people who admit, readily enough—hundreds of them—that Conley is a liar, a thousand times over, a loafer, and an utterly undesirable citizen.

Doubt Slowly Crystallizing.

They will say thus and so to his disparagement, but——

Fateful, suggestive, profoundly melancholy "but" for Leo Frank!

It bespeaks a widespread and crystallizing doubt that is dangerously incompatible with Frank's hopes for life and liberty and the restoration of his good name.

With all the undermining and incongruities of Conley's story that the most subtle ingenuity of the defense can conjure to its aid, the jury has been given a story which, if so much as 5 per cent of it sticks, likely will serve to convict.

The primary circumstances—these might be swept aside like chaff before the wind, if only Conley's story might be crushed to earth and made absurd.

But there is the story in all its abundance of sinister detail—the comings and goings of questionable men and women, the negro, time and again, on watch downstairs, responding to signals, the connivance of the negro with the white man in unnatural and perverted practices, the coming of innocent little Mary Phagan, the pattering of anxious feet above, the suppressed scream, the call to Conley for further assistance in consummating unlawful deeds with women—this time murder—the removal of the body, and the promise to pay on some subsequent day!

Will the story thus given to the jury, unless completely and altogether broken down, ever be removed from its mind entirely? And unless it is removed entirely, can Frank hope for acquittal?

If it is, in its essentials, the truth, what will the jury care about the exact time at which Conley bought some whisky on Peters street; or whether he went straight from Peters street to the laundry; or whether he remembers the mythical "woman in green who went up the factory steps," no matter how vitally important these things may be to the sustained truth of Conley's story.

Conley may lie in a dozen details of his story, he may have readjusted it continuously under the direction of Tom, Dick, or Harry, he may be everything he ought not to be—and yet, if one BIG detail in his awful story sticks in the minds of that jury, Leo Frank is undone hopelessly.

If the story Conley tells IS a lie, then it is the most inhumanly devilish, the most cunningly clever, and the most amazingly sustained lie ever told in Georgia!

Every little detail, as finally adjusted—and not then until Conley went upon the stand Monday—fits the necessities of those bent upon Frank's conviction. If it is, as the defense contends, a "frame-up," it is a diabolically smart "frame-up"—one can not escape that conclusion!

Girl's Visit Dovetails In.

Even the coming and going of Monteen Stover, the five minutes of time in which the primary circumstances might be made to dovetail into the Conley story, is cited by the witness Conley as the very period of time wherein Conley, sitting in the dark hall below, heard pattering footsteps above, the faint scream, and immediately after Miss Stover went out, the tiptoeing of Frank to the front, and then the story of the death upstairs.

Monteen Stover could not have chosen a more exact and useful moment to wander in—and yet, she heard no scream, although she did not see Frank in his office during the few minutes she remained upstairs.

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

It has come to the point where one, seeking the truth and justice and the right to all men at all times and in all circumstances, can only say he will leave it to the jury—and that the JURY will speak the TRUTH!

SCENE IN COURTROOM AS CONLEY WAS UNDER FIRE OF THE DEFENSE

Crowd Set in Its Opinions

By O. B. KEELER.

The impression persists that courtroom crowds are made up in the main of two classes, as follows:

(1) People who take it for granted that any person being tried on any charge in any court is guilty, and then some.

(2) People who are constitutionally incapable of believing anybody is guilty of anything whatever.

That is one powerful impression gained at the Frank trial. It is an impression sticking out pointedly in the wake of the Thaw trial, and the Nan Patterson trial, and the Beatty trial, and the Hyde trial.

All three of the Hyde trials, in fact.

Never an Opinion Altered.

At the risk of being convicted of exaggeration in the first degree, the writer, who was rather intimately associated with the celebrated poison case, would estimate that 18,397 persons expressed in his hearing what they insisted were unalterable opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused physician before the jury in the first trial had been impaneled.

And of the 18,397 (estimated) not one single instance is recalled of one single opinion being altered.

The fact that the physician was convicted on his first trial made not the least difference to those who believed him innocent.

Court Ruling Mattered Not.

The fact that the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further trial made not the least difference to those who voted guilty.

The second and third trials, one of which resulted in an escaped juror, fleeing madly by way of a rain spout from the dread lair of the hypothetical question, and the other in a hung jury, had no perceptible effect on the factions.

Except to solidify them in their original beliefs.

One side desired to take steps at once.

The other side named men-children for the object of a persecution unparalleled since the days of Nero.

Arguments Never Will End.

And if Bennett Clark Hyde's annual trials proceed as per schedule until the year 1950, there will be hoary-headed wrangling over the same old points, by the same ancient and original wranglers, lined up the same way as when the greatest mystery of the West came to the fall of the gavel in the opening trial.

Take the Beatty Case.

There were men and women—you know some of them—who raised frantic hands to heaven, that a poor boy should thus be railroaded to his doom.

They were about set to buy mileage and travel to throw themselves and their petitions at the feet of a cruel and callous Governor.

And then Beatty confessed.

Did that still the trouble lachrymal waters?

Not precisely.

They said the poor boy's mind had been weakened by his persecution.

And if you are in a hypercritical mood or are otherwise disposed to stick pins in toy balloons, just ask your memory to inform you how many times you have heard these pronouncements since the trial of Leo M. Frank began:

First: "Well, I've been absolutely certain from the very first that Frank did it."

Second: "Well, I never have believed that Frank was guilty of that crime."

And now do you feel hypercritical?

And now do you fancy that 18,397 is an inflated estimate?

Of course, there must be a Third Estate—a well-balanced, thoughtful, cautious body. Particularly cautious, and slow of speech—mayhap in some sporadic instances slow of thought.

They are the judicial ones. They hold the balance open at both ends, to receive and weigh the testimony and the facts.

At least, they say they do.

That would be the jury, perhaps. And some others—perhaps.

DORSEY ACCOMPLISHES AIM DESPITE BIG ODDS

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Practically the entire case on which the State of Georgia bases its claim on the life of Leo Frank to pay for that life taken from Mary Phagan is before the jury.

Most of the remaining evidence of importance which the Solicitor General may introduce merely will be rebuttal to testimony presented by Frank's counsel.

Whether the evidence presented is strong enough to convict is a question for the jury to decide. Whether the testimony introduced by the defense will be convincing enough to cause the reasonable doubt which the law says shall make Frank a free man or whether the defense's attack on the State's case has been of sufficient strength to create a question in the minds of the jurors, time alone will tell.

But this fact remains unchallenged: Every single thing that Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey declared in advance that he would get before the jury is there now. It may not be enough to convict, but the case which the State said fastened the crime on Leo Frank has been put in evidence.

Dorsey Had Huge Task.

One by one the prosecutor has forged the links in the chain that he maintains fixes the guilt of the Phagan murder on Leo Frank and Leo Frank alone.

It has been long, tedious work. Dorsey has had to fight against considerable odds, but his work has been well done.

When the defense has its innings, the chain may be torn asunder as though struck by lightning, but that will be the work of the skilled attorneys who are fighting to save the life of the pencil factory superintendent.

Here was Dorsey's work: He had to adduce enough circumstantial evidence to corroborate the testimony of Jim Conley before his case could even be seriously considered. The unsupported word of the negro sweeper would have been about as valuable as a punctured drum. The Solicitor knew this.

First, he had to prove the venue. He had to locate Frank in the National Pencil Company factory at the time Mary Phagan was slain. He did this by the unattacked testimony of many witnesses. He did it so thoroughly that the defense has tacitly admitted that Frank was at the factory about the time he deed was supposed to have been done.

Question of Time Settled.

Then he had to prove the time. According to the State's theory the murder was committed about 12:10 on Memorial Day. Frank himself has said and his employees and his associates have testified he was there at that time. This point also is practically unchallenged.

At last came the hardest task. He had to prove that Leo Frank was the only human being in the pencil factory at that time who could have taken Mary Phagan's life.

By every witness introduced on this point it was shown that as far as human knowledge goes Leo Frank and Jim Conley were the only men in that part of the factory at that time. Either could have committed the crime. It was Dorsey's work to place the blame on Frank alone.

Newt Lee's testimony was introduced to show that Frank sent him away that afternoon. Dr. Harris' testimony tended to show that the slaying must have been done immediately after Frank had given the child her week's wage and had given it to her while they were alone. Mrs. White's testimony tended to show that Jim Conley was sitting downstairs making no attempt at flight after the time the crime is supposed to have been committed.

Then came Conley's direct evidence and the chain was practically complete.

As has been said before, this chain may not stand the acid test of the defense's attack. It may not be strong enough even unattacked to convince the jury that Frank is responsible for Mary Phagan's death.

But it is what Dorsey went out to get before the jury. He has done it.

And he has done it practically unaided. The valuable assistance he had reason to believe he would receive from the police department has been more or less missing. In fact, the greatest blows to the State's case have been delivered by detectives, supposedly expert witnesses who have been unable to withstand the crossfire of Luther Rosser.

The case has meant a lot to Dorsey, and right now, with the thrilling battle approaching its final stages, Dorsey stands out as big and commanding a figure as the brilliant lawyers against whom he is arrayed.

He may lose his case, but if he does he will come out with reputation enhanced.

about seeing this negro Monday after the crime.

Several spectators were put out of the courtroom for laughing at Mr Rosser's admission of the error.

Rosser—I will say it is the first time that you have been right. Your honor, we object. It is immaterial what time this witness made known the fact unless they go further and show she was delayed through the influence of Frank.

The objection was overruled.

Lawyers Clash.

Dorsey—Your honor, I have already shown that Leo Frank knew on Monday, April 28, that she saw this negro there, and that it was May 7 before the State got into possession of this fact.

Rosser—I say that no such evidence has been introduced.

Dorsey—Call for the record of Harry Scott's evidence.

Rosser—I say he has not introduced this evidence, and he saws he has. If your honor can not remember some of the things that happen here we are perfectly helpless.

Stenographer Parry was called. He said he was taking the testimony for Mr. Arnold and he wanted Mr. Arnold's consent before reading it.

Q. When did you report it to anyone else?

Rosser objected.

Dorsey—I want to show who it was who first reported to detectives of the State of Georgia.

The objection was overruled.

Q. When did you report it?—A. May 27.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You never declined to tell anybody?—A. No.

Q. I want to refresh your memory. Didn't you tell Wade Campbell you saw the negro when you went up?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell Wade Campbell that when you came down you heard voice?—A. No; that was when I went up.

The witness was excused.

Sheriff C. W. Mangum was then called to the stand. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Were you at the jail when Jim Conley was brought there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Frank about seeing Conley?

Rosser—I object.

Dorsey—We want to show that this white man wouldn't see this ignorant negro, his accuser. Can I ask the question?

Judge Roan—Go ahead.

Frank Didn't Want to See Police.

A. Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Harry Scott, Detective Black and Jim Conley came down and wanted to see Frank. I asked Frank if he wanted to see them. He said no; that his lawyer was not there and he had nobody to defend him.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Frank knew who was there, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Sheriff Mangum was excused, and Solicitor Dorsey called for Mrs. W. J. Coleman and George Epps. Neither answered.

Dorsey—We have got two propositions, and there will be objections to them. They are Dalton and Epps. When we finish with them we only have one more witness—Dr. Harris. We can't get him until 2 o'clock, and we would like to get that argument over.

Judge Roan sent the jury from the room and admonished the attorneys to give only the authorities and not to argue the points.

Dorsey—First, we don't want any evidence taken out that has already gone in. Second, we want to substantiate what Jim Conley said. Third, we want to bring out what Mary Phagan told George Epps on her way to the factory that Saturday, about Frank making eyes at her, and that she was afraid of him.

Attorney Arnold began his argument of objection by reading authorities. He declared he would include all three propositions in one argument.

Defense Compiles Authorities.

During Mr. Arnold's argument, Mr. Rosser climbed up in the witness chair in which Jim Conley sat during the thirteen hours Mr. Rosser was firing questions at him.

Arnold—Do we have to move to rule it out at the time it is presented? My friend, Mr. Leonard Haas, has compiled the authorities, and for this work he is one of the most reliable men I know of.

Arnold then asked the court's permission to remain seated while addressing it, as he was feeling hot and faint. He was allowed to do so. Judge Roan spoke to Solicitor Dorsey and his associates:

"What do you say, gentlemen?"

Dorsey—It looks this way: If this evidence goes in on Conley's testimony unsubstantiated, I can see how it might appear to the advantage of the defense. They can go out fishing, and if they catch something, they don't want to throw it back. They drew out the relation and association of Conley and Frank. Now they can't diminish it; they slept over their rights.

Mr. Arnold, interrupting Mr. Dorsey, read a few more authorities.

"Not Character Evidence," Says Dorsey.

Judge Roan—Mr. Dorsey, how can you differentiate this evidence from character evidence? The defense must bring his character in.

Dorsey—No, it is not character evidence. I know I can't bring his character in. If I convict him, of course, I want to hold him. I am not afraid of the higher court reversing your honor.

Roan interrupted—No, I am not either. I don't care anything about that.

Roan then declared court adjourned until 2 o'clock, without any ruling on the questions at bar having been made.

CONLEY PROVES HIMSELF NO SHARK AT ORTHOGRAPHY

Jim Conley gave the court a demonstration of his ability as a speller during the Wednesday morning session of the Frank trial. He had told of writing notes to Mr. Frank advising him when certain stocks of pencil boxes were exhausted.

"How long have you kept up with these boxes?" asked Rosser.—A. About a year.

Q. And you write Mr. Frank reports on these boxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you know "luxury" if you were to see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you write it for Mr. Frank, then?—A. I can write it.

Q. Can you spell it?—A. I can try it.

Q. Well, let's hear you spell "luxury."—A. L-u-s-t-r-i.

Q. Was that the only kind of pencil boxes up there?—A. No, sir. There was Uncle Remus, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and others.

Q.—Did you write reports on them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's hear you spell Uncle Remus.—A. O-n-e R-i-m-e-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell Thomas Jefferson?—A. T-o-m J-e-i-s-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell George Washington?—A. J-o-e W-i-s-h-t-o-n.

Q. What did Mr. Frank say about your spelling?—A. He laughed.

Q. How do you spell ox?—A. O-x.

Q. How did you write him notes to borrow money?—A. I just wrote them.

Q. Tell me what you wrote?—A. I just said: "Please let me have fifty cents."

LEGISLATION FOR W. AND A. LEASE DEFEATED

Senate Amends, Then Kills, the Sweat Bill—Hot Fight Over Adjournment.

All legislation looking to the disposition of the Western and Atlantic Railroad lease was killed in the Senate Wednesday morning, when Senator Sweat's resolution providing for the appointment of a special commission to investigate the future of the road was voted down 23 to 18 after it had received a half dozen amendments.

When the final vote was taken Senator Sweat, the author of the resolution voted against the bill on the grounds that it had been "mutilated" to such an extent by amendments that it would not be effective. The "mutilation," according to the Senator, was the result of Senator Tarver's amendment, striking out the clause providing for an investigation into the proposed extension of the road to the sea and with the further provision that the commission should have authority only to investigate the question of a 30, 50, 75 or 100 year lease.

Among the amendments which were adopted and then voted down in the general bill was that of Senator Dickey, limiting the time of the sitting of th ecommission to 50 days, and the amendment of Senator Tarver striking the clause providing for pay.

Fight Over Adjournment.

The real feature of Wednesday came shortly after 12 o'clock, when unsuccessful efforts were made to adjourn until Thursday at 10 o'clock instead of 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, as recommended by the Rules Committee. Senators Harrell and Miller championed an adjournment until Thursday on the grounds that the Finance Committee and General Judiciary Committees had important business to transact Wednesday afternoon, while Senator McNeill went on record as favoring the afternoon session in order, as he declared, to get through with the load of business on the calendar.

The Senate passed Senator Irwin's bill providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the proposed revision of the judicial system of the State.

Among the new bills introduced was one by Senator Miller, providing for the care of young children in the custody of courts.

The Senate in executive session confirmed the following nominations by the Governor:

Alonzo C. Stone, to be judge of the City Court of Monroe for a term of four years from August 17, 1913.

H. G. Howell, to be Solicitor of the City Court of Monroe for a term of four years from August 17, 1913.

New Tax Reform Bill Framed by Assembly Leaders

Positive assurance that the Georgia Senate will pass ome sort of taxing bill which will relieve the financial embarrassment was given Wednesday when Senator Miller, chairman of the Finance Committee, called a meeting to consider a bill which has just been drawn.

Senator Miller and President Anderson wrote the bill. It provides, among other things, it is understood, for a State Tax Commission, as well as for County Boards.

If the substitute bill is adopted, it probably will be presented in the Senate Thursday. The Sheppard bill will be read in the Senate for the third time Thursday.

Girl Is Run Down by Auto on Whitehall

A small girl, who refused to give her name, was knocked down and badly bruised by an automobile driven by Lewis Carhart, on Whitehall street, in front of Rich Brothers' store about noon Wednesday. The child was taken into Cone's store and her bruises bandaged, and then put in a cab and taken home.

Eyewitnesses to the accident say it was unavoidable. The car was going slowly and the girl ran in front of it before it could be stopped. No arrest was made.

Loses Fight to Force Promotion in Army

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Justice Barnard, in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to-day dismissed the rule asked for by Major Beecher B. Ray to compel the War Department to show why he should not be promoted to be Paymaster of the Army.

The court declined to decide the constitutionality of the promotion act of October 1, 1890, saying the "question seems to be one for an executive or administrative officer rather than one of the court."

Deputies Announced By Marshal Davis

MACON, Aug. 6.—Marshal J. S. Davis, for the United States Court for the Southern District of Georgia, this afternoon announced the appointment of his deputies as follows:

FLEETS OF WORLD AT CANAL OPENING

Secretary Daniels Plans Huge Naval Display for 1915—Announces Defense Policy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels to-day announced his plan to have all the world's fleets mobilize in Hampton Roads in February, 1915, and, led by the American squadron, proceed through the Panama canal and up the West Coast to San Francisco.

Secretary Daniels considers that this will form a fitting opening for the Panama canal besides being the greatest naval pageant the world has seen.

In addition to this, Secretary Daniels intends to have the American fleet, headed by the old battleship Oregon, steam through the canal next spring to celebrate the opening of the passageway to ships of commerce.

"It has beeen stated," said the Secretary of the Navy to-day, "that I intend to divide the Atlantic fleet and to keep a portion of it on the Pacific side. This is erroneous. What I intend to do is to divide the time of the fleet so that it will spend six months of the year on one coast and then go to the other, instead of spending all its time on the Atlantic side as at present."

Mothers' Testimony Binds Over Man Who Cruelly Beat Son

Several mothers appeared in police court Wednesday to testify that J. S. Newman, 41 Gaskill street, Tuesday brutally beat his 11-year-old boy, Joe Newman, with a board.

The mothers declared they would never think of whipping a child as severely as Newman did.

Newman insisted that the boy deserved a good thrashing, and quoted "spare the rod and spoil the child."

Judge Preston, declaring it one of the worst case that had come to his notice, bound the father over to the State courts in bond of $300.

Detroit Wins Cut In Street Car Fare

DETROIT, MICH., Aug. 6.—A compromise in the city's fight for 3-cent street car fares was effected to-day when the Detroit United Railway agreed to sell seven tickets for 25 cents, after an automobile firm offered the city the use of 1,000 automobiles in case the company refused to operate its cars.

A strike of employees, held off by a promise of arbitration, is threatened unless the company's arbitrator agrees with the union's representative upon a third arbitrator within 24 hours.

Woman Injured in Chicago Race Riot

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Mary A. Barrett was in a serious condition to-day as the result of a riot between whites and negroes on a street car.

The trouble was caused by a remark of a negro directed at one of the white passengers.

HOUSE BILL PUTS TAX ON AUTOS FOR ROADS

Opponents "Poke Fun" in Effort to Defeat It—Urge License for Baby Carriage.

The bill of the House Ways and Means Committee providing for a State registration tax of $5 on automobiles, was passed by the House Wednesday morning, 107 to 64, after a fight that raged since Monday morning.

The original bill provided that the funds obtained by the tax should go into the general fund of the State. An amendment offered by McMichael, of Marion County, diverting the proceeds of the tax into the State road fund, was carried, and the purposes of the Ways and Means Committee in presenting the bill, to provide more revenue for the general expenses of the State, were defeated.

Would Tax Baby Carts.

The opponents of the bill, led by Stovall, of Elbert, and Sheppard, of Sumter, tried to defeat the bill by poking fun at it. To that end half a dozen amendments were offered, of a facetious nature, but all were voted down.

Oliver, of Quitman, wanted to amend the bill to tax wagons and buggies in relation to their "horse-power;" Smith, of Fulton County, wanted to amend the bill to place a tax of $1 on all goats and wagons, and Estes, of Lincoln, offered an amendment that placed a tax on ox carts and baby carriages.

Other amendments included those by Lee, of Wilkinson, who wanted to double the tax; Culpepper, of Meriwether, to require two license numbers instead of one, and Myrick, of Chatham, that the autoist register his number with the clerk of his town.

School Tax Bill Up.

Consideration of the bill offering to the voters a constitutional amendment limiting the levy for school purposes to two and one-half mills was begun immediately after the passage of the automobile tax bill, and was in progress when the House adjourned at 1 o'clock. It will be continued at the afternoon session.

The bill for the constitutional amendment was offered by Speaker Burwell, and has the indorsement of the Administration. The Speaker took the floor and spoke for half an hour urging the passage of the bill.

Others who spoke on the bill at the morning session were Representatives Stovall, of Elbert, who opposed it; Sheptrine, of Chatham, who favored it; Fullbright, of Floyd, who is in favor of the measure; Meadows, of Wayne, who opposes it, and Barry Wright, of Floyd, who is against the bill. Mr. Wright had the floor when the House adjourned.

Fulton Legislators Asked to Supplant County Fee System

By unanimous vote the Board of County Commissioners passed a resolution Wednesday requesting the local representatives in the Legislature to draft a bill abolishing fees for county officials and substituting the salary system. The board instructed the clerk, Henry M. Wood, to prepare a copy of the bill and present it at once to the legislators.

At previous meetings of the board various officials had appeared to protest against the proposed change, but this time there was no protest.

The board heard from several delegations with petitions for street improvements. Those present were Chairman Shelby Smith and Commissioners S. B. Turman, Clifford L. Anderson, W. Tom Winn and Tull C. Waters.

Southern Railway Agents Convene at Georgian Terrace

The first session of the fifteenth annual meeting of the Southern Railway Agents' Association began Wednesday in the main dining room of the Georgian Terrace Hotel. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Woodward and W. L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce. A reply was made by President Walker of the Agents' Association.

Routine business was disposed of and short discussions of topics of interest to the agents followed. More than one hundred agents, representing the largest stations of the Southern Railway system, are here for the meeting, which will last through Friday.

Officers of the association are C. G. Walker, Louisville, Ky., president; E. J. Coffey, East St. Louis, Ill., vice president; D. L. Bryan, Augusta, Ga., treasurer, and W. J. Townsend, Columbia, S. C., secretary. J. M. Fagan is chairman of the executive committee.

Arkansas Governor Fourth Since Jan. 1

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Aug. 6.—George W. Hays, the fourth occupant of the Governor's chair in Arkansas since January 1, was inaugurated today. He was chosen Governor at the special election on July 23.

HUERTA PEEVED BY NEW MOVE OF THE U. S.

Americans in Mexico City Declare Removal of Envoy Wilson Was a Mistake.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—Prominent members of the American colony today expressed the opinion that the administration at Washington had made a mistake in removing Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson at this time.

President Wilson's action in sending John Lind, former Governor of Minnesota, here on a special mission has given Provisional President Huerta another excuse to protest against outside interference. That Huerta is becoming exceedingly angry at the Washington Government is evident.

Two unofficial envoys have been sent here within the past six months to study the situation and to report to President Wilson on actual conditions and their presence has piqued Huerta.

Jingoes are making capital out of the present status of affairs by declaring that the United States is afraid of Mexico and will not make any move which would inflame the populace.

Lind Will Investigate Charges Against Envoy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—One of the first duties devolving on former Governor Lind of Minnesota, when he arrives at Mexico City as personal representative of President Wilson, will be to check certain features of the report by Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson and to find out whether certain charges made against the former envoy have any foundation.

It is expected that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy will aid in ascertaining how American influence in the Mexican Capital has been used for the past two years.

At Vera Cruz he will confer with Admiral Fletcher, who will report on conditions in Frontera, Tampico and other points on the east coast. Mr. Lind desires to strip his mind of all possible misinformation he may have acquired through inspired sources before taking any action.

The special envoy will leave Galveston to-morrow on the battleship New Hampshire, it was announced at the Navy Department to-day, and it is expected he will be in Vera Cruz within 36 hours and in Mexico City within 48 hours after he leaves the Texas port.

Sidney Dell, Once Atlanta Attorney, Dead in California

News has been received in Atlanta of the death July 24 near Los Angeles of Sidney Dell, once a leading attorney and prominent Mason in Atlanta. Mr. Dell's wife found him dead in bed. The funeral was held July 28 from the residence in Glendale, near Los Angeles.

Mr. Dell was in Atlanta about the same time that Woodrow Wilson was here, but left soon afterward for the West to seek his fortune. He was elected mayor of Portland and missed, by only a few votes, election to the governorship of Oregon. He went to Washington State and thence, twenty years ago, to Los Angeles.

He claimed to have discovered the right of Los Angeles to tide lands at the harbor worth $50,000,000, which the city gained through the courts. Mr. Dell sought a fee for his services but he never was rewarded.

Among lodgemates of Mr. Dell in Atlanta were General A. J. West and other well-known citizens, who remember Mr. Dell as an unusually brilliant attorney and champion of municipal rights.

35c to 59c All-Linen Cluny Laces at 19c

Visiting merchants can make big profits by buying and reselling them at home

The Aftermath of Inventory! Stock Sheets show that 687 yards of all-linen Cluny laces remain. These are fashionable laces. You have already bought this season more than ten times the amount we have left. But "good" as the laces are they were bought for summer, and must sell in their season. Prices, therefore, drop from 35c, 39c, 50c and 59c to 19c.

——These are real linen laces in the charming Cluny patterns. (See window display.)
——Since every thread is purest linen, the laces will wash and wear indefinitely.
——Handloom work, hence the designs are intricate, interesting and artistic.
——Matched sets of edges and insertings, in widths from 4 to 7 inches.
——Ideal for trimming bed spreads, table covers and household linens.
——Not a yard worth less than 35c; many yards worth 39c, 50c and 59c; choice 19c.

Greater August Blanket Sale

Based Upon Tariff Reductions that Didn't Occur

——Free wool and lower priced blankets may come—next year.

——Many manufacturers thought they were coming this year.

——But they overestimated the speed of the Senate. Anticipating the lower scale which the tariff reductions would bring, they got nervous, and decided "to unload" their stock on hand. Which explains why

Bath Mats, Soft, Luxurious & Absorbent

at Prices a Third to a Half Less Than Regular

These bath mats are the product of the best mill in America. In consideration of heavy orders placed throughout the year, they favor us at certain seasons with their accumulation of "seconds"—bath mats which because of some slight defect fail to pass the critical eye of the inspector as absolutely perfect. The "hurts," however, are hard to find; in fact, scarcely noticeable. Each bath mat will give perfect satisfaction.

The bath mats are big thirsty fellows that will soak up water like a sponge. Thick and comfy; soft and luxurious. Firmly looped threads. They should wear almost forever. In various colors and sizes. This is the price range:

39c; values 50c to 65c.
49c; values 75c and 85c.
69c; value $1.00.
89c; value $1.25.
$1.50; value $3.00.

Imported Austrian Bentwood Furniture in

The August Furniture Sale

at very close to half price

Planning for this August Furniture Sale has been on such a liberal scale that the advertiser is confused with an embarrassment of riches. But one of the "plums" that can wait no longer to be advertised is this imported Bentwood furniture.

Light and graceful, splendidly adapted for living room, library or porch, it makes instant appeal to many cultured customers. The wooden frame is bent to shape by steam heat—it is firm, rigid and durable. The backs and seats are of cane. A list of the articles and the savings:

The Social World

An event of Wednesday afternoon which interests society is the polo match to be played on the parade ground at Fort McPherson.

As this is the first polo match played in Atlanta everyone is anticipating great sport. A team representing the Atlanta Polo Club will meet that of the Seventeenth Infantry, the game to be refereed by Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun. The army team has a group of pretty girls as sponsors; these being Misses Myrt Hancock, Tommie Hancock, Aline Fielder, Lyda Nash, Louise Bradbury, Mary Carl Hurst, Rebie Wilkins, Elise Brown and Virginia Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winecoff and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Freeman, of Greenville, Ga., to chaperone the party of young women.

Many well-known people are interested in the introduction of polo in Atlanta's social and sporting world. Officially connected with the game of Wednesday afternoon are: Robert Maddox, timer; Wilmer Moore, scorer; Clark Howell and James R. Gray, goal judges. Dr. J. A. McLeay has been active in arranging for the polo match.

Wife of Governor Trammell Here.

Mrs. Park Trammell, wife of Governor Trammell of Florida, and her sister, Miss Emma Trammell, are guests of Mrs. Fred Williams for the week. A pleasant event of recent date was the box party given at the Forsyth by Mrs. Fred Williams in honor of her guests. Those present were Mrs. W. S. Thompson, Mrs. J. N. McDonald, Mrs. Park Trammell, Miss Emma Trammell, Mrs. Joe Johnson, Miss Laulle Hyer and Mrs. P. H. Winter.

To Miss McJunkin.

A theater party on Monday evening at the Forsyth was in honor of Miss Rebekah McJunkin, of Dallas, Tex., the guest of Misses Helen and Annie Spencer. The party included Miss McJunkin, Misses Spencer, Mr. Harold N. Cooledge, Mr. H. G. Walker and Mr. W. Vaughn Crowley.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Sunday school room of Trinity Church.

Miss Ryder Hostess.

Miss Martha Ryder entertained the members of her bridge club and several other guests Wednesday morning at her home on West Peachtree.

The house was decorated in pink Killarney roses and ferns. Those present were Misses Helen Thorn, Mary Lucy Turner, Annie Lou Paggett, Gladys Dunson, Edith Dunson, Elizabeth Dunson, Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, and Margaret Bransford, of Nashville, the guests of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan; Mrs. Ernest Durham and Mrs. Julian Prade.

Suffragists' Meeting.

The Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association met Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. in the assembly hall of Carnegie Library. A program of unusual interest had been arranged.

For Miss Harrison.

Mrs. Spencer Atkinson will entertain at bridge Thursday afternoon for her niece, Miss Mary Virginia Harrison, of Brunswick, who will be her guest several weeks.

Invited to meet Miss Harrison are Misses Cobbie Vaughan, Nancy Prince, Mary Helen Moody, Ruth Akin and Winnie McKinnon, of Brunswick; Sarah Rawson, Mary Hines, Virginia Lipscomb, Mary Murray, of Alabama, the guest of Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott; Ruth Stallings, Margaret Hawkins, Annie Lee McKenzie, Emma Kate Amorous, Aimee Hunnicutt, Edith and Antoinette Kirkpatrick, Katherine Richardson, Ruth Northen, Adrienne Battey, Edith Dunson, Frances Clarke and Penelope Clarke.

Miss Dillon Hostess.

Miss Dorothy Dillon entertained at an afternoon reception from 5 to 7 o'clock Wednesday for her guest, Miss Dorothy Browne, of New York.

The house was artistically decorated with bright garden flowers.

About 50 guests were present.

U. D. C. Scholarship.

The Atlanta Chapter, U. D. C., announces, through the chairman, Mrs. T. T. Stevens, two valuable scholarships to be given for the coming school year. These include a scholarship in Miss Woodberry's School for Girls, a full four-year collegiate course, including languages; also a scholarship in Miss Hanna's School for Girls, this to be either in the primary or academic departments. Applicants for these scholarships must be descendants of Confederate veterans and in every way worthy. Applications should be made at once to Mrs. T. T. Stevens, No. 450 Luckie street; phone Ivy 324.

Philathea Social.

The College Park Baptist Philathea Class was delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Camp on Thursday evening, July 31. There also were present several Baraca boys and others. Games were played, refreshments served and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Members of the Philathea class present were Misses Ophelia West, Lottie Dewel, Mattie Camp, Daisy Wilhelt, Anne Lamar, Pauline Trimble, Hazel Foley, Ethel Martin, Nellie Liveoak, Elva Crenshaw, Hettie Cochran, Mrs. Carl Cook and Mrs. T. L. Camp. Others present were Miss Margaret Terry, the Rev. A. F. O'Kelley, Messrs. T. L. Camp, John Hale, Looney Liveoak, Frank Longino, John Jackson, Bernard Smith and Thomas Camp.

For Miss Hazen.

Tuesday evening Messrs. Tyler Waller and Prince Webster gave a swimming party at East Lake for Miss Mildred Hazen, of Orange, N. J., who is the guest of Miss Mignon McCarty. Miss Virginius Hitt chaperoned the party.

Among the guests were Misses Mildred Hazen, Mignon McCarty, Helen Woolfork, guest of Mrs. Hitt; Nancy Prince, Passie May Ottley, Nell Prince, Emma Kate Amorous, Messrs. Tyler Waller, Prince Webster, Moultrie Hitt, Curry Moon, George McCarty, Archie Lee, Gilbert Stout and R. C. C. Black.

Miss Helen Jones entertained at tea at the Piedmont Club Wednesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Mildred Hazen. Tea was served on the terrace, and the table had as its decoration a rustic basket of gay colored flowers.

Miss Jones received her guests wearing yellow crepe with the little coat effect of charmeuse with a blouse of shadow lace.

Miss Buckner, who is visiting Miss Jones, was gowned in mustard-colored crepe with a wide girdle of purple satin.

Twelve girls were guests on this informal occasion.

Surprise Party.

Mrs. George Adair gave a surprise party for her son, Perry Adair, Tuesday evening at their home in Druid Hills in celebration of his fifteenth birthday.

The house was decorated with garden flowers and after a buffet supper dancing was enjoyed.

Among the guests were Misses Annie Bates, Madeline Cullough, Julia Murphey, Ann Patterson, Irene King, Mildred Dobbs, Elizabeth Millard, Margaret Whitman, Quill Orme, Jr., Junius Millard, George Eckford, Earle Eckford, Thomas Hull, Lynn Adams and Perry Day.

For House Party Guests.

Mrs. Robert Hayes is entertaining a house party at her home in Cleburne avenue. The party includes Misses Gladys Tappan, of White Plains; Mattie Cheaves, of Montezuma; Zaretta Estes, of Decatur, and Mary Wolcott, of Boston, Ga.

Tuesday evening Mrs. Hayes gave an al fresco party in compliment to her guests.

Miss Alline Perryman will entertain at bridge Friday evening for the visitors and Miss Willie Belle Mauck will give an informal evening party for them Thursday.

Wheeler-Dabney.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Avery Wheeler announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Ann, to Mr. Merde Jefferson Dabney on Sunday, July 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Dabney are with Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Fussell in Inman Park.

For Mrs. Block.

Colonel and Mrs. Robert Lowry entertained at dinner at the Piedmont Club Tuesday evening in compliment to Mrs. Bates Block, whose birthday it was. It also was the birthday of Mr. L. H. Beck, one of the guests, and appropriate toasts were proposed to each.

The table had as its centerpiece a basket of pink roses, and all the minor details were in pink.

Colonel and Mrs. Peel Entertain.

Colonel and Mrs. William L. Peel gave a dinner Tuesday evening at their home, "Woodbine."

The guests were seated at a long table on the terrace of the garden under a pergola hung with lanterns and decorated with growing vines, and the garden itself was fragrant with many flowering plants.

Sixteen guests were invited.

For Mrs. Salmon's Guests.

Mrs. Charles Salmon entertained at an informal luncheon at the Hotel Ansley in honor of her guests, Miss Agnes Vining, of Savannah, and Miss Pearl Vining, of Covington, Ga. Another affair on Wednesday afternoon was a porch party given by Miss Annie Furgerson in honor of Mrs. Salmon's guests.

300 Factory Women Gamble on Baseball

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball pools, have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed has been held in bail by Magistrate Coward, having been charged with operating a pool.

Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games in Reed's place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost 25 cents each.

China Picks Cornell Grad to Replace Wu

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, CHINA, Aug. 6.—The government, according to latest information, intends to appoint Alfred Sze, a Cornell graduate, as Minister to Washington. It planned to make Wu Tingfang Ambassador, but the American Government did not agree to raise the status of the legation here and this necessitated the nomination of a junior.

Mr. Sze was nominated Minister to Washington in 1911, but did not go to his post on account of the revolution.

ATLANTA IS 16TH CITY IN U. S. IN PARCEL POST

Remarkable Increase in Volume of Mail Here Arouses Favorable Comment in Washington.

Postmaster Hugh McKee declared Wednesday that the large increase in the amount of mail handled in the Atlanta postoffice was the subject of favorable comment in Washington among department officials.

During the past year more than 50,000,000 letters, not including newspapers and periodicals were stamped or canceled in the Atlanta postoffice This is an increase over the previous year of about 15,000,000 letters.

Showing the progressive spirit of Atlanta merchants in taking advantage of the new parcel post, Mr. McKee said: "We are handling more than 7,000 parcel post packages per day, which is more than are handled in Louisville, Indianapolis and other cities twice the size of Atlanta. The Atlanta office ranks sixteenth in the number of parcel post packages handled in the United States.

"Here in the postoffice we have a chance to keep close tab on Atlanta's activity and correspondence, and I will say that the growth in mail business since I came into office has been marvelous, and scarcely seems believable when you compare the books of previous years with the fiscal year just ended."

Empire Life Plans 20-Story Building

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—Meetings of the building committee of The Empire Life Insurance Company were held here yesterday and to-day to decide on plans and specifications for the new building upon which work will start here on October 1. It is understood the building will be twenty stories.

The members of the committee are W. W. Reid, Atlanta; M. P. Pope, Washington, and H. C. Lorick, H. H. Stafford and C. E. Whitney, Augusta.

CHILD DIES IN VINEGAR.

PARIS, ILL., Aug. 6.—Falling head foremost into an 8-gallon jar of vinegar, Lester David, aged 2 years, son of George David, a farmer, was drowned before his mother could rescue him.

Voliva in Power at Zion City Bars Rum, Drugs and Tobacco

ZION CITY, ILL., Aug. 6.—A city free from beer, whisky, drugs and tobacco was planned to-day by Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor of John Alexander Dowie as the head of Zion City. Voliva's followers dominate the City Council. Counting the women voters of the city, his forces can reelect its own city officers at the next election.

Beer wagons passing through the streets of Zion City will be prohibihited the use of the streets after the passage of an ordinance Voliva was preparing to-day.

The ordinance will give city authorities the right to go into a man's own home and arrest him for using tobacco.

No drug store will be permitted within the city limits after the adoption of the ordinance.

French Want Trading Base North of Canal

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The commission sent by the French Government to study the effect upon French commerce of the opening of the Panama Canal reports unfavorably upon the establishment of a commercial base either on Guadaloupe or Martinique. These French possessions in the West Indies are too far south of the regular Panama route, says the commission, and shippers will rather coal in Porto Rico or Cuba.

Lieutenant Hallier, representing the Minister of Marine, recommends, however, the establishment of a naval station at Fort DeFrance, Martinique.

Bankrupt Town Has To Let 'Skeeters Nip

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 6. Invaded by a swarm of mosquitoes, this town is too poor to fight them.

The Board of Health asked the Council for $1,000 to fight the pests, and the Council replied that it could not make the appropriation.

CHANGE IN MILITIA LAWS IS OPPOSED

The House Committee on Military Affairs put its members on record Wednesday morning as upholding the present military laws of the State, which give the militia supreme authority during riots and other disturbances, when it reported unfavorably the bills introduced by Mr. Slade of Muscogee. Mr. Slade's bills repealed the act of 1912, and re-established the act of 1910, making the militia subservient to the civil authorities.

Mr. Slade, dissatisfied with the action of the committee, served notice that he will ask the unanimous consent of the House that his bills be placed on the calendar for consideration.

Chairman Spence, of the Military Affairs Committee, stated that he will endeavor to get the members of his committee together Wednesday afternoon for a reopening of the Augusta investigation. He stated that both sides of the trouble will be heard. Several witnesses from Augusta have been requested to attend the meeting and Adjutant Gneral Nash and several militia officers also will be present.

Mr. Spence several times has expressed his opinion that a legislative investigation of the Augusta trouble is useless.

Beware, Poseurs, of 'Soul Photos'

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—"With the development of 'soul photography,'" the latest addition to the picture maker's are, says Miss Emma Gerhard, "the modern photographer will vie with the old masters in producing pictures that will live forever.

"It is wholly a matter of art," said Miss Gerhard. "It consists of bringing out in the subject what is really in him or her, not in making an artificial reproduction of his features and clothes.

"Every human being is constantly posing. There are a thousand and one little superficial things about every man and woman which cover up the real self, and these things overshadow all else in photographs."

PARDON DENIED HAWTHORNE BY M'REYNOLDS

Attorney General Ignores Recommendation of Board Which Made Special Inquiry.

Despite the fact that the Federal Pardon Board strongly recommended after a thorough investigation, that pardons be granted to Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, who are imprisoned in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary on charges of using the mails to defraud in the sale of mining stocks, Attorney General McReynolds has issued a statement from Washington that he has decided to override the recommendations of the board and refuse clemency to the two men.

The action of McReynolds is almost unprecedented in the history of the Department of Justice. The Board of Pardons made the Hawthorne case a subject of thorough and exhaustive investigation. It came to Atlanta and went into every detail of the case. At the end of the investigation it made the Hawthorne case the subject of a special report and a special recommendation for clemency. It had been intimated that the writer had been the scapegoat for others.

Mr. McReynolds' excuse for refusing to grant a pardon to Hawthorne is that he and Dr. Morton have been shown enough leniency.

It is generally understood that one result of Mr. McReynolds' actions in the Hawthorne case will be the redoubling of the efforts of the writer's friends and the case may be taken to President Wilson.

Under the ruling of the Attorney General, Hawthorne and Morton must remain in prison until October. The trial judge, in sentencing them, dated their terms back a year and a day, and their time will be up in about two months.

Deputy Warden Hawk, of the Federal Prison, stated Wednesday morning that the prison authorities have as yet received no formal notification that a pardon had been refused Hawthorne. He stated, however, that it is not usual for them to do so. They are notified when a pardon has been granted, but never when one has been refused.

FOUR KILLED IN WRECK CAUSED BY WASHOUT

L. and N. Freight Engine Submerged—Three of Train Crew and Negro Tramp Perish.

Imprisoned in a locomotive submerged under fifteen feet of water, three members of the crew and a negro tramp met death early Wednesday morning when the Louisville and Nashville freight train No. 5, southbound, ran into a washout a few miles north of Marietta.

The dead are S. K. Farris, the engineer; Fireman Shenell and Brakeman R. P. Merrell, all of Etowah, and the unknown negro.

The wreck was on the Western and Atlantic tracks near Noonday station, and, according to Superintendent J. L. McCollum, was caused by the washout.

The embankment gave way before the engine pulling 30 cars, and the locomotive was thrown into the gully, twelve cars piling on it. Part of the train crew, including Conductor J. L. Brenenizer, was in the caboose on the rear and escaped.

The wrecked train was coming to Atlanta, due here at 7:25 a. m.

Forest Fire Imperils Cape Cod Villages

HYANNIS, MASS., Aug. 6.—With more than forty square miles of Cape Cod timber devastated by a roaring forest fire that has caused a loss of more than $250,000, the fate of this town and nearby villages hung in the balance to-day.

Summer residents have placed automobiles at the disposal of the fire fighters and touring cars and limousines are transporting gallons of water.

Mystery in Suicide Of Wealthy Shoe Man

NORRISTOWN, PA., Aug. 6.—Addison R. Wright, aged 60, wealthy member of the shoe firm of Weimer, Wright & Watkins, Arch street, Philadelphia, committed suicide in the waiting room of the Philadelphia and Reading station here to-day by shooting himself through the heart.

No cause for the act is known, although a note addressed to a son, Attorney L. Wright, was found on the body. The contents of the note were not divulged.

House Bill Opens Campaign on Flies

War against flies and other germ carriers was declared in the House Wednesday when Representative Allen introduced a bill requiring all hotels, boarding houses, sleeping apartments, wholesale and retail grocery stores, meat markets and drug stores, and all stores that sell refreshments to keep all outer doors and windows thoroughly screened.

The law, according to the provisions of the bill, shall be in effect from April 1 to October 1 of each year. A fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000 is to be imposed for violation.

Mrs. Ham's Name Too Much for P. O. Clerks

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—"Mrs. Henry W. J. Ham" is the form of signature that must be written dozens of times each day by the assistants in the local postoffice here, and employees are complaining because it is long and awkward to write. This is the form in which the appointment of the new postmaster was made and in which the bond was given.

Mrs. Anna E. Ham is the name by which the new postmaster is known to her friends.

JOYNER'S SLAYER ELUDES CAPTURE

Screven County Negro Completely Disappears After Tragedy Near Sylvania—Six Arrests.

SYLVANIA, Aug. 6.—Cleveland Michael, the slayer of Dine Joyner, a Screven County farmer, is still uncaptured, no clew whatever being found that would suggest the whereabouts of the murderer. Dogs from the Bulloch County chaingang were put on the trail, but it was too cold for them to make any headway. Men were stationed at all bridges across the Ogeechee River, as it was thought he would make an effort to reach Bulloch, where he has relatives.

A full description of this negro has been published and pictures of him are in the hands of officers in adjoining counties. Six other negroes that were thought to have been plotting with Michael to kill Joyner are in jail here.

More than 500 persons attended the funeral of Joyner at Friendship Church.

JUSTICE AND MERCY IN GEORGIA

"A bruised reed shall he not break.
"And the smoking flax shall he not quench."---Isaiah 42:3.
"I will have mercy."---Matt. 11:17.

Justice and mercy for the friendless!

The Senate, without a dissenting vote, has passed the bill providing for Probation.

With only three men voting against it, the Senate has also passed the bill providing for the Indeterminate Sentence.

These two bills are now before the House, having been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee.

And yesterday, Tuesday, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY saved the Girls' Reformatory from oblivion; he called a special meeting of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the Jones-Mills Bill; THE RESULT, it is believed, will be the building of the Reformatory for Girls in Georgia.

Representatives GRIFFIN, GREENE of Houston and BERRY, members of the sub-committee that considered the original bill and reported it back carrying an appropriation of $30,000.00 to the committee for action, spoke in favor of it.

Messrs. CONNOR and METHVIN advocated its adoption.

JOHN Y. SMITH of Fulton then moved that the Committee report favorably the bill as amended.

In favoring this motion, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY explained that he had favored the bill from the beginning.

Both the Chairman and the members of the Committee recognize the APPALLING AND IMMEDIATE NEED for the Reformatory for Girls; they unanimously adopted the motion recommending that the bill, carrying an appropriation of $30,000.00, be passed.

The Prison Commission has urged that the home be built, pointing out that Georgia has no place in which to handle wayward and delinquent girls. And the Penitentiary Committee has also without a dissenting vote recommended the passage of the Jones-Mills Bill providing for the Home.

Remember! This home is not to deal with the hardened woman of the streets, but with children.

To-day if a GIRL OF ELEVEN, TWELVE OR FOURTEEN gets in trouble, there is no place in Georgia either to protect or help her.

This shame is unendurable. To-day seventy-five girls under sixteen years old known to us are without a place.

What will YOU do?

No man has opposed—and it is believed that no man can or will oppose—the bill either in the House or the Senate.

To-day Georgia looks to the Rules Committee of the House.

SPEAKER BURWELL, who is ex-officio its Chairman, and BLACKBURN of Fulton its Vice Chairman, and the men serving with them in the Committee on Rules, namely Messrs. HARDEMAN, MILLER, NUNNALLY, PAULK of Berrien, REDWINE, RHODES, SHUPTRINE, SLADE AND RAGLAND, are to decide whether or not the State will take care of her delinquent and wayward girls—

Whether or not the State shall have Probation and the Indeterminate Sentence—

Whether or not Georgia will take her stand with her Sister States in giving Justice and Mercy to the unfortunate.

Those who know these men believe that they will NOT KILL, but WILL HELP to pass these measures.

Those who know Georgia believe that the men of the House and of the Senate will gladly give the brief time necessary to make these bills the law of Georgia.

They harm no one. But they help the helpless.

They mean life to many a home in Georgia where worse than death—dishonor and shame—will reign if these bills are not enacted into laws at this session of the Legislature.

What will you do?

The Executive Committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

CRASH FATAL TO 2 LAID TO BAD AUTO BRAKE

Car Rolled Into Train's Path, Declares J. P. Heard, Whose Wife and Son Were Killed.

Struck by a Southern Railway train when their automobile went dead on the tracks of a crossing a mile north of McDonough, Ga., late Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Emma Heard, wife of J. P. Heard, of Vienna, Ga., and her ten-year-old son, Lio Landon Heard, were killed.

Mr. Heard leaped from the car when he saw it would be impossible to escape the crash, and escaped with a few bruises. Mrs. Heard and her son were caught in the cowcatcher of the locomotive and dragged 50 feet.

The bodies of Mrs. Heard and her son were taken to Vienna. The funeral will be held there Wednesday afternoon. They were well known in Atlanta, and many friends of the family here will attend the funeral.

Mrs. Heard was Miss Emma Lashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lashley, and was a leader in the social life of her community. She is survived by her husband, who is a son of the late Senator Heard and president of the Heard Banking Company, and her parents.

Mr. Heard Tells of Accident.

Statements made Wednesday morning by Mr. Heard and J. L. Mable, engineer of the train, indicate that the accident was unavoidable and was the result of the failure of the emergency brake of the automobile.

"My wife, my son Lindon and myself left our home in Vienna, in my two-passenger roadster," said Mr. Heard, "to attend the motorcycle races in Atlanta. We passed through McDonough about 2 o'clock. Ten minutes later we passed over the brow of a long steep hill that leads down to the railroad tracks. A train can not be seen until the crossing is almost reached. We were only a few yards from the track when Mrs. Heard saw the train coming and shouted.

"We were going about 25 miles an hour. I at once shut off my engine and applied the brake, but it failed to work. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable, I leaped from the car and shouted for Mrs. Heard and my son to do likewise. They were probably too frightened to do so. The next thing I remember was hearing their screams as the train struck them."

Engineer Gives His Version.

Engineer Mable declared that when he saw the automobile he applied airbrakes, but the crossing was too near for the air to take effect before the automobile was struck.

"I was running about 25 miles an hour and the crossing was about a hundred yards ahead of me when I saw the automobile. The car was running as fast as my train, and had plenty of time to cross the tracks in front of me.

"When the machine got to within about ten yards of the track, it slowed down and rolled up until the front wheels of the car were on the tracks. Then it stopped. I at once applied the airbrakes, but too late to have any appreciable effect on the speed of the train."

Life Insurance Men Dine; Name Delegates

Atlanta members of the National Association of Life Underwriters enjoyed an informal banquet at Hotel Ansley Tuesday night and elected delegates to the annual convention of the organization in Atlantic City in September.

The delegates are F. W. Burr, J. H. Byrley, Paul H. Dobbins, W. R. Hawkins, R. F. Shedden and A. C. Newell. The following alternates were named: R. L. Foreman, Oscar Palmour, W. R. Hawkins, J. M. Skinner and R. J. Guinn.

Isadore Duncan's Motor Is Wrecked

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Isadora Duncan gave proof of her stoicism the other night when her chauffeur flung her car at full speed in pitch darkness against the closed barriers of a railway crossing at Mondragon village.

Instead of jumping out, under the stress of the ghastly memories of her children's fate, she remained in her seat and a little later reached Orange practically unhurt.

Gerard Threatens to Quit as Ambassador

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Justice James W. Gerard, of New York, the Ambassador to Germany, after inspecting all the available houses in Berlin, says that unless he succeeds in finding a place adapted to the requirements of himself, his family and the embassy, he was seriously considering declining the post of Ambassador.

He has been unable to find quarters, although he is willing to pay for them out of his private means.

'September Morn' Is 'Art' in Augusta

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—"September Morn" has made her appearance in Augusta. Many prints of the painting may be seen in a local bookstore window, but no arrest of the proprietor has been made or threatened arrest.

Augusta takes "September Morn" as a matter of course. The people here deem her graceful and the fact that she is minus a wardrobe does not cause any young girl to blush, for all have seen reproductions of real art before.

How and Why to Eat Watermelon

Cool, but do not chill Mr. Melon.

Cut it lengthwise, not in round slices.

Save the seeds, make "watermelon tea."

Use your teeth—not knives or forks.

Watermelon is refreshing and good for the stomach and kidneys.

P. S.—These tips are furnished by the "champeen" melon-eaters of Congress.

HOWARD ONE OF 8 BEST MELON EATERS

Georgia Congressman Right Up in Race for "Champeen" Title in Capitol Cafes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—State secrets on statesmen's appetites, and particularly watermelons during the present height of the watermelon season, were divulged to-day. The divulger is R. J. Martyn, "boss" of the Capitol Cafes.

Twenty big, fat watermelons are consumed by Congressmen every day, according to "Chef" Martyn. Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is the acknowledged "champeen" watermelon eater. He gets outside of from one to three big slices daily.

Other watermelon "fanatics" who appear to be crowding Clayton for the title are Representative Mann, of Illinois; Sereno Payne, of New York; Sims, of Tennessee; Dietrick, of Massachusetts; Austin, of Tennessee; Stedman, of North Carolina, and Howard, of Georgia.

Approached on his watermelon prowess, Clayton gave the following panegyric:

"Watermelon beats ice cream or lemonade all hollow as a cool refreshment. It is the most luscious, refreshing fruit possible to be secured in summer.

"Some people eat salt on watermelon. That is a mistake. Salt militates against its palatability and digestibility. I take mine straight.

"Watermelon is a splendid diuretic. It cleanses the whole digestive system.

"Watermelon seed tea is an old Southern remedy for kidney trouble.

"I don't care for thick-rind striped melons. I don't like the hybrids between the Georgie 'rattlesnake' melon and the 'scaly bark.' Some of these are a cross between a guinea melon and a horse gourd.

"The best melon grown is in Alabama, with a thin rind, a whitish melon. Lead me to them any time."

RICH MEN RULE CHURCH, SAYS RICHMOND

Morgan Held House of Bishops in Hollow of Hand, Asserts Episcopalian Rector.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—"Our House of Bishops is led in tow by Wall street. The lat J. P. Morgan was the power behind Bishop Greer, and he held our House of Bishops in the hollow of his hand.

"The cathedral on Morningside Heights is a standing monument to our New York corrupt money power. It is the embodiment of ecclesiastical snobbery, spiritual frippery and moral incompetency.

"Since the day of Bishop Potter the diocese of New York has been in control of half a dozen plutocrats. In Philadelphia the Episcopal Church is 'run' by a few rich men. They control the Bishop (Rhinelander), who, in mental ability, personal authority and moral aggressiveness is not, by any means, a great man.

"August Belmont is at the head of our race track gamblers. His career is one of the worst careers for an American youth to imitate. Yet he is prominent in the Church of the Ascension on lower Fifth avenue."

The foregoing quotations are from a sermon delivered in St. John's Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond.

"In most of the large parishes of the Episcopal Church throughout the country we find men like Belmont and the late J. P. Morgan, who curb the spiritual influence of the clergy, make them timid, and in the end cause them to shrivel up morally. Men in humble circumstances distrust our sincerity. The Episcopal Church is not sincere in its present assumed attitude toward labor.

"My own ecclesiastical superior, Bishop Rhinelander, was elected two years ago," said Mr. Richmond, "largely through the push and pull of Wall street interests, corporation lawyers and social idlers, together with a few of our clergy among whom towered pre-eminently the Rev. Father Mortimer, of the 'High Church gang,' who has since been disposed from the ministry for gross immorality."

'Country-Bred Folks' Meet at Grant Park

The Country Collective Society will hold a meeting in the main pavilion in Grant Park Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The membership of the Society is made up of country-bred persons residing in and around Atlanta. It was organized to promote better friendship among the members, and to preserve the tradition of ante-bellum days in Dixie.

It is proposed to erect a log cabin in Grant Park and furnish it with old-fashioned articles. R. D. Hawkins is president and Robert P. Martin secretary.

Merchants on Tour Of Factories While Committees Work

Much detail work is yet to be accomplished in the organization of the Southern merchants' convention.

Wednesday will be devoted to work by the various committees, and an inspection of Atlanta's factories and stores by delegates and visitors.

A great deal of important work relating to crops, credit, stock questions and co-operation will come before the convention starting Thursday morning.

Adventists Report On Publishing Work

FORT VALLEY, Aug. 6.—The report of the publishing work of the denomination was the feature of to-day's business session of the Georgia Conference of Seventh-day Adventists which is meeting here in its ten-day annual encampment.

This report showed that the publishing work had grown from one small printing house worth $652, with five employees, printing two periodicals in one language in 1862, to 39 publishing houses, worth $1,175,982, with 610 employees, printing 126 periodicals in 71 languages in 1912.

Banker Gets 5 Years For Embezzlement

MOULTRIE, Aug. 6.—The jury trying J. H. Cason, former cashier of the Bank of Crossland, for embezzling more than $7,000, returned a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Thomas to five years in the penitentiary. G. F. Clark, president of the Crossland Bank, and Assistant State Bank Examiner Anderson, of Atlanta, were the principal witnesses for the prosecution.

It was with difficulty that Cason kept from collapsing as he stood up to hear his sentence. While making his statement to the jury he wept freely.

K. of C. Plan Change In Insurance Rates

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—The election of officers and the reports of the supreme officers featured the two business sessions of the delegates to the Knights of Columbus' thirty-first annual convention to-day. The sessions were held at Hotel Somerset.

Important also among the probable actions of the delegates at to-day's sessions is the changing of the insurance laws so the assessments may rest more easily on the older members.

Aero Manufacturer Fails for $6,000,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Extravagent living and speculation in the silk trade were declared to-day to have caused the downfall of Armand Duperdessin, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of fraudulently raising millions of dollars for the extension of his aeroplane factory.

M. Duperdessin's liabilities amount to $5,000,000, whereas his assets are given at only $2,000,000.

COL. J. P. WILLIAMS DIES AT HIS HOME

Railroad and College Leader, Soldier and Philanthropist Was 70 Years Old.

Captain Jesse P. Williams, one of the best known men in Georgia, died at his home, 478 Peachtree street, Tuesday. He was 70 years old.

Captain Williams formerly operated one of the South's largest naval stores at Savannah. About seven years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and retired from active life, though he attended to his business affairs until the very last. He was president and principal owner of the Georgia, Florida and Southern Railroad.

Captain Williams was born in Wayne County, N. C. He attended the University of Virginia in the late fifties, going to Washington in company with other students of that institution to see Abraham Lincoln inaugurated. When Fort Sumter was fired upon he left the University and enlisted in the Twentieth North Carolina as a private, later rising to the rank of captain.

For many years he was president of the Boards of Trustees of Emory College, to which institution he gave two handsome buildings. He was a deeply religious man, and a steward in the Trinity Methodist Church.

Surviving Captain Williams are his wife; four sisters, Mrs. James Ezzell and Mrs. Olive B. Parks, Misses Hattie and Edith Taylor, of Mount Olive, N. C., and two brothers, Charles and George Williams, all of Mount Olive.

Funeral services will be held at the resident at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. J. E. Dickey, president of Emory College, will officiate, assisted by Bisho- Candler. Interment will be at West View.

Cotton Schedule Is Scored by Lippit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Declaring that the schedules in the Democratic tariff bill relating to cotton, silk and wool are "capricious and illogical," Senator Lippitt, of Rhode Island, to-day advocated as substitute provisions the Dingley law rates with a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent.

"I believe the cotton manufacturers as a rule are willing to try the experiment of a reduction in the tariff," said Senator Lippitt. "They protest against revision."

FULTON COUNTY TO HAVE A CARD INDEX

Industrial Survey Ordered by the Chamber of Commerce To Be Best in United States.

Plans for an industrial survey of Fulton County, which will be one of the largest and most complete ever made in the United States, are now being formulated by the industrial and statistical bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. The work will be done by W. H. Leahy, chairman of the bureau, under the supervision of the committee, which is composed of J. R. Smith, E. H. Shaw, M. R. Wilkinson, V. H. Kriegshaber, W. T. Winn, A. R. Colcord, A. A. Floyd, David Woodward, W. R. Collier, and Wilmer L. Moore.

The work of Mr. Leahy and the committee will be to compile data, in card index form, of all manufacturing plants in the county, their output, source of raw material, cost of labor and production, number of employees and the payrolls, and the freight rates on raw materials and finished products.

A complete survey of all banking institutions and commercial enterprises will be made, and data will be obtained on all Southern headquarters of big corporations located in Atlanta and the truck gardening about the city.

The results of the survey will be published in a pamphlet which will be revised monthly. Other pamphlets relating to the commercial and industrial life of Atlanta will be published. Permission will be asked to place a large board in each railway station, on which will be written statistics of Atlanta for the information of travelers.

Portugal's President Not Dead, Says Lisbon

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The reported death of President Ariaga, of Portugal, published in the morning newspapers here, is denied in a dispatch received from Lisbon at noon.

Senhor Ariaga is ill of a kidney ailment.

Largest Fire Chief In World Is Dead

He was the largest fire chief in the world, weighing 325 pounds.

President Asked to Visit 2 Dixie States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Senators Fletcher, of Florida, and Williams, of Mississippi, and Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, called on President Wilson to-day to invite him to visit their States should he conclude to make a Southern trip this fall.

The President said he would be glad to accept their hospitality should he make the trip. Senator Fletcher especially desires the President to visit Jacksonville, and Senator Williams brought a delegation from Meridian with him.

Mrs. Longstreet in A Rest Sanitarium

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, former postmaster at Gainesville, is under treatment in the sanitarium of Dr. J. H. Lowney here.

The long fight waged by Mrs. Longstreet to retain her commission as postmaster and the part she has taken in politics brought about a breakdown which required rest and medical attention.

Nobleman Sought by Matchmakers Weds

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Lord Rocksavage, heir of the Marquis of Cholmondeley and known in society as "the enigma of matchmaking mothers," ceased to be a riddle to-day when he was married to Miss Sybil Sassoon, an heiress and a leader in the young Bohemian set. Lord Rocksavage is very rich, while his bride is accredited with having a fortune of $10,000,000 in her own right. They were quietly married at a registry office.

'Wilsonade' Routs Bryan Grape Juice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—"Wilsonade," the new Capital drink, made of orange juice and plain water, has completely routed Bryan grape juice out of Washington.

President Wilson is sponsor for the new drink, and it is prepared especially for him in the White House kitchen each morning. A dash of powdered sugar may be added if desired.

Circulation Statements Made to the U.S. Gov't., Showing Relative Standing of N. Y. Evening Newspapers

In accordance with a Congressional Act of August 24, 1912, every newspaper is compelled by law to print, twice a year, its net paid daily average circulation. In order that every business man may know the true newspaper situation in New York we reproduce below the circulation statements made by each of the evening newspapers to the Government. This is the first time, in some cases, that advertisers have been able to find out what they are really getting for their money, and the statements published below should prove interesting reading to all business men.

MEDICAL MEN OF WORLD GATHER IN LONDON

Militants Threaten to Break Up Meeting at Which America Is Well Represented.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—With upward of 7,000 doctors present and every quarter of the world represented, the International Medical Congress was opened to-day in Albert Hall by Prince Arthur. It is the biggest gathering of its kind ever held.

Among the Americans here are Prof. Harvey W. Cushing, of Harvard University; Doctors Simon Flexner and S. J. Meltzer, of the Rockefeller Institute of New York; Dr. Theo. C. Janeway, Dr. Simon Baruch, Dr. Russell Fowler and Dr. Henry Koplik, all of New York; Dr. Rudolph Matas, of New Orleans; Dr. J. B. Murphy, of Chicago; Dr. F. L. Hupp, of Wheling, W. Va.; Dr. J. O. McReynolds, of Dallas, Texas; Surgeon General Charles F. Stokes, of the United States Navy, and Major Frederick E. Russell, of the Army.

More than 100 policemen were stationed about the hall to prevent any attack by militant suffragettes, who have threatened to break up the convention because their leaders were forcibly fed by medical men in prison. Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst issued a call to her followers to interrupt the medical congress at every opportunity.

"Prison doctors are trying to make imbeciles of suffragettes and the whole fraternity should be punished," said the militant leader.

Julian J. Zachry Denies Charges

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—Julian J. Zachry has made a statement here denying the charges preferred against him in South Carolina. Zachry says he believes Governor Slaton, when fully apprised of the facts, will refuse to grant requisition papers.

One of the charges is kidnaping. He says he does not see why he should be thus charged, when he took his child at the order of a South Carolina court.

He denies charges of ill treatment and cruelty to his children.

Neither Sheriff Crawford, of Columbia County, nor Sheriff Clark, of Richland County, will place Zachry under arrest, as they have no orders to do so. Zachry's attorneys and friends have assured Gov. Slaton that he will make no attempt to escape and that he is perfectly willing for Governor Slaton to hear the case and will cheerfully abide by his decision.

Department Store In Shark's Stomach

VENICE, CAL., Aug. 6.—In a post-mortem operation performed on a shark eighteen feet long, which was cast up on the sands here, the fish was shown to be a collector of no little ability. Here's a list of the contents of the stomach:

Sugar bowl, silver, engraved Pacific Coast S. S. Co., steamer President.
Three corset steels, nearly new.
Dice box, gutta percha.
Baby's shoe.
Four undigested halibut and numerous small fish.

Work Resumed at Thirty Copper Mines

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 6.—Reports from over the Calumet copper region, where 18,000 miners are on strike, indicated that quiet had been restored about all mine shafts. Work was resumed to-day at four mines in the neighborhood of Calumet, making a total of 30 in operation.

Mother Jones addressed a meeting of strikers here this afternoon.

Chicago Suburb in Anti-Negro Uprising

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The uprising in the fashionable suburb of Wilmette against negro residents there reached its crest to-day, and many servants and chauffeurs were out of jobs.

The town board is considering a memorial directed against a real estate firm which is accused of encouraging negro emigration.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Motion pictures at the Grand have become decidedly popular. It is predicted that in the very near future the fad of going to the Grand to see the movies will be one of the daily matters of routine with thousands of people. The fact that the big building is cool, clean and safe, has added a healthy influence to people who want to see what is new in motion pictures with every convenience. The schedule of performances this week is from 2:30 until 5:15 each afternoon, and from 8:30 until 10:15 at night.

The Forsyth.

There is a splendid vaudeville entertainment at the Forsyth this week, despite the fact there is no feature headliner. It just happened that the Keith people were in position to secure the seven special acts, and each one has registered the sort of hit that has crowded the Forsyth at four performances, and built up an advance sale that has not very often been equalled. The hits are very evenly distributed.

At the Bijou.

The Bijou seems to improve the class of its entertainment each succeeding week. During the past ten weeks the popular theater has been devoted to popular priced musical comedies and each week has seen an improvement over the former, but the present week Lew Cantor's musical farce entitled "Along the Pike" is by far the most pretentious production that has been presented so far.

WANT AD GIVES GIRL START IN WORLD

Contestant Relates Story of How She Climbed, and Now She Knows Advertising Pays.

"I know I can secure want ads by the hundred, for I know what a want ad will do," said one young woman contestant when she entered The Georgian's want ad competition and started out to win an automobile or a trip to California. "I've had experience."

"I'll tell you," replied the young woman. "It lifted me from a $5 a week job to one at $12 and afterward to $15. I'm resting now for the summer and putting in my spare time on the contest.

"I was just beginning stenography when I found my first position. I started in at $5 a week, and though I kept improving in my work the boss just wouldn't give me a raise. He said he could get plenty of girls at that price. I had almost given up.

"One afternoon when he was away I was reading The Georgian and my eye happened to meet the 'Help Wanted, Female,' column. I had never taken interest in want ads before. But right under my nose was a little ad—'Wanted—a good stenographer. Salary $12.'

"I put on my hat, shut up my desk and went after that job, and got it. That's what a want ad did for me. And I can tell others what want ads will do, for I have confidence, and that goes a long way."

The contestants are rolling up votes right along, and those who are thinking of entering and winning first prize had better hurry. There is yet time to enter and get a start, but it will not pay to delay entering.

If You Don't Drink Do Not Read This

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Aug. 6. Henderson Hasty, of Easton, a small town near here, was stripped, plastered with a coat of warm tar and his face painted green last night by a party of citizens, determined to enforce observance of the prohibition law. Hasty was found asleep beside a road in Easton.

That he would sign the pledge is said to have been his declaration when he awoke.

Society Girl Now a $3 Millinery Clerk

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 5.—Miss Delphine Force, a pretty society girl and daughter of wealthy parents, is now a millinery apprentice at $3 a week and says she likes the work. She recently quit society pleasures to become a professional cook.

Miss Force plans to be a teacher of domestic science at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., in the Fall, where millinery is part of the curriculum.

Gainesville Plans Ban on Cigarettes

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Several hundred citizens of Gainesville have petitioned City Council to pass an ordinance making it unlawful for any child under 16 years of age to smoke cigarettes at any place except at the homes of parents or guardians.

It is thought the ordinance will be passed.

BATTLE WITH MOONSHINERS.

LEXINGTON, Aug. 6.—George W. Castel and Sherman Lewis, deputy United States marshals, engaged in a battle with moonshiners in Morgan County, Kentucky, to-day. Lewis was shot in the arm by John Kidd. Marion Kidd was wounded and captured. A 35-gallon still and a lot of beer and whisky were destroyed.

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a Large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdom and Experience.

In almost any settled community there is a grandma who knows Mother's Friend. Not only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recommendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this famous remedy.

Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nausea, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments and prepares the system so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear.

No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Friend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restful. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. Write at once to Bradfield Regulator Company, 123 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their very interesting and instructive book of advice for expectant mothers.

Asks Special Judge To Hear Demurrer

COLUMBUS, Aug. 6.—Alleging that Hugh M. Mooty, a former bookkeeper for the Beehive, a large dry goods establishment in Columbus, is not a resident of Muscogee County, but of Fulton County, and that the Superior Court of this county has no jurisdiction over his affairs, his attorneys have asked for the appointment of a special judge to sit when their demurrer to a recent decision is heard.

Judge Gilbert held that the Clerk of Superior Court should name the judge, but Clerk Marcus held that as the litigation is before Judge Littlejohn, of the Americus circuit, he would refuse to name another jurist.

$1,200 GIVEN FOR BIG COTTON SHOW

Crushers Donate Fourth of the Amount Needed — Committees etG Promises of Support.

With $1,300, one-fourth of the amount needed, contributed by the Cotton Seed Crushers of Georgia, plans for a permanent exhibit of cotton products which it is proposed to establish in the new Champer of Commerce building have received an impetus that bids fair to carry the project through. Other lines lines of the cotton industry of the State will be asked to contribute an amount in proportion to their importance, and it is thought the entire amount will be raised within a few weeks.

The gift of the Crushers was made through their chairman, W. M. Hutchinson, at a meeting late Tuesday afternoon of the cotton products committee of the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition Committee, of which Mell R. Wilkinson is chairman. The meeting was addressed by Mayor Woodward, Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Wilmer L. Moore, S. A. Carter and others.

Special committees for each branch of the cotton industry will be named Wednesday. These committees will confer with respresentatives of each line, including fertilizers, the textile industry, the cotton oil industry and ginning, and it will be determined to just what extent the movement for an exhibit will be supported.

Trots and Tangos Boon to Chiropodist

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The turkey trot and the tango are to the chiropodists equal to the goose that laid the golden eggs, says Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, the "girl with the perfect foot." Miss Houston, herself a chiropodist, says:

"Those dances put an unaccustomed strain on the toes and instep and since they started women have been flocking to chiropodists in droves to have their feet made over. I hope the craze lasts, but I would never dance any of those dances myself. I think too much of my feet."

BIRMINGHAMERS MAKE A HIT HERE

Atlanta Rotary Club Fills Members of Alabama Organization With Good Cheer.

The Birmingham Rotary Club, 32 strong, entrained at midnight Tuesday for the Alabama village, chuck full of the good cheer provided for them by the Atlanta Rotary Club, and joyful over the day spent in the Gate City.

Purely social was the visit of the Birminghamers, though the spirit of enthusiasm displayed augurs well for the growth of both clubs. Reaching Atlanta at 12:40, they were met by a delegation of fifteen members of the local club and escorted to Hotel Ansley, where they were entertained at lunchon. The afternoon was spent in sightseeing, the places of business of many of the members of the Atlanta Rotary Club coming in for an inspection.

At 7 o'clock the party went to the Capital City Club, where several hours were spent in good fellowship. The festivities broke up shortly before midnight, to enable the visitors to catch the train.

The modesty of Atlanta's business men was illustrated in the opening address of President Hubert Anderson. He described the speaker he was to introduce in flowery terms. He made of him the perfect man and the originator of all things great in Atlanta, and said: "Gentlemen, it is my honor to introduce to you—"

Instantly every member of the Atlanta Rotary Club was on his feet bowing and speaking. The laughter which followed is undoubtedly being heard on Twentieth street in Birmingham to-day.

23 Church 'Drones' Ousted by Elders

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 6.—Twenty-three members were forcibly removed from the First Baptist Church, of this city, last night by the deacons because of negligence in attending church.

No specific charge was made against any individual, but all of them were referred to as "drones" and guilty of "indifference and non-attendance."

IMPROVEMENT AT 'PEN' FARM URGED

Senate Committee Frames Recommendations After Inspecting Milledgeville Institution.

Following a visit to the State Prison Farm at Milledgeville Saturday the Senate Penitentiary Committee of which Senator Tarver, of the Forty-third, is chairman, will make several recommendations for improvement to the Senate.

One of these will be a recommendation for the construction of an annex to the present dormitory for negroes. Another provides for a waterworks system in the women's building.

There is a possibility also that the question of the present location of the prison farm will be considered with a view to removal, although this movement is not indorsed by a majority of the committee.

A further recommendation which probably will be made relates to the separation of the boys' reformatory from the prison farm.

Senator Tarver declared Tuesday that in his opinion this feature of the prison farm was bad, as the younger boys, although separated from the convicts, are sufficiently close to be influenced by the depressing influences of convict life.

Nine members of the Senate committee and one member from the House made the trip to Milledgeville.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But before he had worked his way half through he paused, stepped aside and took up his station against the wall in a position that gave him a good view of the scene, without attracting too much attention to himself. "Since I am at a swell wedding I might as well see the bride," he continued to himself, turning his gaze, however, in any other direction than that by which she was expected to descend. "If she looks more like her photograph than the other girl does, well and good, I am an old fool and it is about time for me to take down my sign and shut up shop. But if, on the contrary, she looks less like it; if her expression varies or she is fairer or larger than one would suppose from the picture they gave me, then I can lay the fault on the photographer and regain some portion at least of my self-esteem." And unmindful of the curious glances which now and then found him out, he retained his place through the weary minutes of waiting that now ensued, amusing himself as usual in gathering together such odds and ends of talk as floated by him and stowing them away in the storehouse of his brain, which already held so many secrets even of some of those who passed him by in gay apparel without a thought that the grave, quiet, rather benignant-looking man who was so occupied with the device on Mr. Gretorex's great hall clock was he who held in his keeping their fortune and possibly their good name.

A Sigh of Relief.

At length, with a sigh of relief that ran through the length of those vast parlors, the strains of the wedding march were heard, and Mr. Gryce, whose interest in the aforementioned device now because absolutely absorbing, shifted his portly figure a step or so, while the throng at his side pressed back and a path was made for Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex, and then after what seemed a long and unnecessary interval for the bride and groom, who, contrary to the usual arrangement, descended together. They passed near, very near that great hall clock; so near that the bride's veil brushed the homely habiliments of the man who stood there; but she did not notice this, nor to all appearance did he, for his eyes never left the clock, though a careful observer might have perceived that his lips pressed a little closer together after she went by, and that he did not wait for her to pass over the threshold of the parlor doof before taking his departure.

But no one thought of him. All eyes were on the bride, and little did any one think, least of all, she whom it most concerned, that the faint, half-suppressed click which they had just heard denoted the withdrawal of one whose powers of observation were more to be dreaded than were those of the whole vast crowd he had left behind him. If she had—but our interest is not at present with the bride, pale and troubled as she is, but with this man who but a short time ago entered the house with feelings of almost beneficent concern for its inmates, only to leave it now, with a sore and humiliated heart.

For in the one glimpse he caught of the bride—and he saw her, though he did not appear to do so—he had discerned nothing to relieve his dissatisfaction with himself. If the other girl was like the picture, this pale, haughty self-contained woman was the picture itself. There was no mistaking this much, as his pride would have been gratified to have found it otherwise.

Details that were lacking in the other girl's countenance were here, and an expression which made him acknowledge to himself that he would henceforth trust no man's eyes, not even his own, in this delicate matter of identification, the least shade of a look making sometimes all the difference between one person and another. He went out of the house, feeling, as I have said, very old, and he even was conscious of a twinge or two of rheumatism as he stepped down the icy steps and prepared to take his way round the house to the street. For this reason perhaps, and also because the walk was more or less slippery, he went very slowly, so that he was just at the corner of the house when that startling scream was heard, which as ye know so seriously distured the minds of those who were witnessing the ceremony. A muffled cry it was, and to those outside sounded as if it came from the upper story of the house. But when the detective paused and looked up at the windows overhead he saw nothing, and being in a very indifferent mood, went on his way, remembering the occurrence only as a sort of lagubrious echo to the rather melancholy thoughts in which he had been at that moment indulging.

At the Hotel.

His courst was toward the city. He took it direct, getting on the elevated train at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and getting off again at Twenty-third. Why Twenty-third? Was it not late enough for him to go home? He evidently did not think so. Without hesitation and with a certain determination of manner, he went immediately to the C—— Hotel.

Let us follow him.

"Well, I suppose the wedding has come off."

These were his words to the clerk who was still at his desk in the office. The clerk looked at him and laughed.

"No," was his quick rejoinder, "it didn't. The bride absconded."

"What is that?"

Mr. Gryce's tone was quite sharp. His face resumed its old expression.

"She ran off; didn't wait for the clergyman; afraid to risk herself with such a glum-looking customer as Molesworth, I suppose, I can't say I blame her."

"Humph! You interest me. And at what hour was this; how soon after we left?"

"In a few minutes, I should say; for you had not been gone more than half worth. I suppose, I can't say I blame came with the Rev. Mr. Pease at his heels, and she was not here then, nor had been some little time."

"Who saw her go out?"

"The hall boy."

"No one else?"

"I think not."

"Didn't she leave any word behind her?"

"Yes, a note; it was laying on the table in her room. Molesworth got it."

"The door then was open?"

"It was unlocked."

"Curious. There seems to be some difficulty in the way of wedlock tonight. I have just come from a wedding and the bride was three-quarters or more an hour late. But Molesworth, as you call him—how did he take it?"

"That's hard telling; he looked grim enough, but then he was none too cheerful looking before. Anything but a bridegroom in appearance at any time. But, then, it was rather hard lines for him. 'Twould make any man angry; Mr. Pease on hand, and no bride! I declare, I felt cheap myself; and the chambermaid, I believe, shed tears, grieving over the loss of the good fee she expected, I suppose."

"Yes, it's quite thrilling, quite romantic," quoth Mr. Gryce, enthusiastically. Then, in quieter tones, remarked: "You were all in the room, then?"

He Was no Fool.

"No, I didn't know anything about it till Dr. Molesworth came down, and, giving me the price of the room, remarked that there would be no wedding at present, the young lady having preferred to wait till she could have her friends about her."

"Ah!" ejaculated Mr. Gryce.

"Neat, wasn't it?" remarked the clerk. "But he is no fool; and though I knew on the spot that she had run away for good, I couldn't help giving him credit for coolness. But it was all in his words; his look was terrible."

Mr. Gryce's eyes fixed themselves on the small lamp used to light cigars.

"I can imagine it," said he.

"But he wasn't tragic; not a bit of it," continued the clerk. "Not even when he took out the note he had evidently received from the girl, and burned it in the flame of that jet."

"Oh! he burned it, did he?"

"Down to the very end."

"And then went away?"

"Directly."

"Well, this has been a delightful evening!" commented Mr. Gryce; and he lounged away a few more minutes in the office; then went out, and, entering a drug store near by, searched for an address in the directory.

"I can not sleep; why, then, not amuse myself?" his look seemed to say, as, glancing up at the clock, he passed again into the street and betook himself westward.

Certainly one does not run across such a complication every day, and when one is a detective, why not enjoy now and then the advantages of his position?

Mr. Gryce went up the steps of a four-story brick building to which was attached a doctor's sign.

A middle-aged woman, of neat enough appearance, answered his ring, after a short delay.

"Is the doctor in?" he asked.

She shook her head, and glancing at a slate that hung on one of the pegs of the old-fashioned hallrack, declared: "He won't be home before to-morrow."

"And I am so ill," murmured the detective, with an air of great weakness. He had read her character at a glance.

"You!" she exclaimed.

"And I have come so far," he went on. "I thought surely I should see him to-night, if I came late enough. I know he is going to be married soon, but——"

"Married!" The interruption was full of surprise and incredulity. "Married! Dr. Molesworth! I guess you are mistaken."

"Oh, no," the old gentleman persisted, assuming with every instant a look of greater distress.

"I had it from one who knows him intimately. He is going to be married, but sensible girls don't keep their lovers out too late, and I thought I might find him in. I wish I had, for when I have these turns nothing but opium will help me, and the drug clerks won't give it to me without a doctor's prescription. I must go on."

But the old lady's sympathy as well as curiosity had been aroused. She was a widow and a boarding-house keeper, but she had a heart and was not afraid of showing it.

The Landlady.

She therefore stopped him as he hobbled toward the door, and, showing him the way into the parlor, asked him to sit down by the fire and warm himself a moment before going out.

"I am sitting up," she explained, "because there are still four or five of my young men out, and as I do not give night-keys to any one but the doctor, I have to sit up, or ask some of my hard-working girls to do so. It is deary waiting sometimes, but, on the whole, they are considerate, and I don't complain."

Then as she saw, or thought she saw, the old gentleman's face grow brighter in the really genial glow of the good hard-coal fire before them, she asked in a hospitable tone if he had ever heard whom the doctor was going to marry.

He shook his gray hairs indifferently, picked out with his glance a coal in the fireplace, and began to study it intently.

"I never paid it any attention," said he. "I am getting too old to busy myself much about such matters; and girls are all the same to me, unless it be one girl," he added, with a half-senile, half-pathetic smile, taking from his pocket as he did so a photograph which he looked at fondly.

"Your daughter?" inquired the old lady.

"My granddaughter," he replied, with enthusiasm.

She leaned over as women will at the sight of any picture in the hand of another, and quietly looked at it.

"Good heavens," she exclaimed, "it is Mildred Farley."

"Mildred Farley," he repeated, in mild surprise, "I never heard that name. This is Joanna Handscombe."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Ballroom Tango

A Pretty and Refined Way of Dancing This Popular Whirl

"First of all," says Miss Witchie, "be sure you have good music. Then make sure you know how to point your toe gracefully." This movement is shown in the top picture.

"Then take a waltz position."

(Posed by Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs.)

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"THERE is nothing new under the sun"—as we have been frequently informed, but there are new combinations of all the old ideas, and a clever combination of five or six old things results in one brand new one. Just a year or two ago we fully persuaded ourselves that tangos and turkey-trots and bunny hugs and monkey wrenches were the latest things—but they weren't, bless you—no! They were cakewalks and barn dances and two-steps arranged in a to-be-well-shaken-before-taken conglomeration and accompanied by a little hula-hula or other music native to any other soil but our own.

A New Combination.

Now two of New York's cleverest dancers have thought up a fascinating new combination and permutation of steps taken from the tango Argentina, the Spanish bolero and the beautiful and so completely forgotten as to be really new minuet. In a little three-cornered chat with Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs, of Lew Fields' "All Aboard" company, now playing at the Forty-Fourth Street Roof Garden, I learned just how to do the new tango bolero, as they mean to call it. Of course, most of us lack the inherent grace, the careful training and the untiring study of their artistic calling that the clever couple bring to make their dancing a thing of beauty—even if it is, alas! a joy for but a few fleeting moments instead of the hours and hours one would gladly sit and study their twinkling twirls.

"But we'll show you just how and we'll tell you just how," said pretty little Miss Katherine, "and then if you practice and practice, and if every one who reads follows the same course—why, when we introduce our dance every one will have that at-home feeling of knowing just how to join in the chorus.

Good Music Essential.

"First of all, be sure you have good music—the tango and the bolero. Then make sure that you know how to point your toe gracefully in somewhat the way the ballet dancers do. Then take a waltz position, girl's right hand on her partner's left shoulder, man's left hand at the back of his partner's waist, the other hands clasped loosely and held almost at shoulder height, faces turned toward the outheld arms, and correspondingly the girl's left and the man's right foot pointing straight in the direction of the arm.

"Now, to tango music take the eight steps and the long gliding slide and recoving stamp that are characteristic of this dance of Spanish extraction via Argentina. Then with arms still pointing to the girl's left, do the same steps toward the right. Swing into all the tango steps you know and can do easily and gracefully, and then suddenly the music changes to the real Spanish bolero—and you go on, Ralph," said Miss Witchie, with true sportsmanlike desire to share and share alike.

Mr. Riggs laughed his appreciation of the feminine desire to be the listening partner, and "went on": "As the bolero begins, the girl is left and the man is right. Her left foot points forward, her right arm is held high above the head, just touching the tips of the man's fingers, while the other hands touch at arms' length at waist height.

"Then the man twirls the girl in a little grapevine in and out and in and out by the upstretched fingers. At the end of this movement he is holding her at arm's length, his lifted right arm holding her left hand, and from this position he draws her around in front of him and they do a little flying forward step in perfect unison, right arms held together and weight on the right foot at the beginning of the movement, and left foot pointing to the back and dropping slowly to take the weight.

"Do this back and forth eight times in tango style, and then swing into figure three—hands clased in front, and girl's left and man's right foot pointing toward the side back in a knee-hight position parallel to the floor. Swing from foot to foot, looking in the direction of the uplifted foot; do this eight times, as for all dances of the tango family. And now for the pretty little minuet finish—you, Katherine, please."

Very Fetching.

And murmuring something about "in at the finish," Miss Witchie concluded our profitable little chat with a description of the quaint and dainty steps.

"It is the conventional dancing minuet bow. The man holds his partner's outstretched right hand in his left, with right hand on heart, and left toe pointing forward. The girl points her right foot, and holds her right arm poised with upturned wrist, and then gradually through eight bars they separate into a deep curtsey. Don't you think that a dear little conclusion to our tango-bolero? And don't you think it would be perfectly polite to dance that in any ballroom?"

Perfectly polite, and very fetching and pretty, I think, don't you? And I hope we may all learn to do it with a fraction of the dainty grace and modesty shown by its inventors.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ISN'T IT LATE TO ASK THAT?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am dead in love with a young man of twenty. He says he would not take the whole world for me, and he says that he could not live without me. He has asked me to marry him. I accepted his offer and he gave me a diamond ring last year. I have been going with him for the past two years. I am a girl of eighteen. Do you think that I should marry him or wait?

Neither could live without the other, and this condition has lasted two years.

M. P.

Under the circumstances, my dear, isn't it late to ask such a question? If there is any bar to your marriage further than that of your youth and his, you do not state what it is.

THERE IS A WAY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20 and in love with a girl of 19, and if I don't win this girl I'll go crazy. I proposed, but her parents object because I am of a different religion. The girl loves me, but she waits for her parents' consent. Will you please help me to win this girl, because I think of her all the time?

THOMAS.

She will not marry without her parents' consent, and she is right. You say their objection is based on your church. You do not say what your church is, but do you love the girl so much you would change it?

I do not advise it. I simply suggest that the means of overcoming the objection to you lies in yourself. You must not demand that the girl make the sacrifice.

The Snake Charmer

By INGLIS ALLEN.

THE long, lighted car sweeps swiftly up through the night, and the little man, waiting on the curb by my side, deftly extinguishes his cigarette against his coat sleeve and mounts the step before me.

I enter and seat myself by the door, idly noting that the car is otherwise empty save for a huge male form sprawling in the corner at the further end. Opposite me the little man has closed weary eyes. For my own part, I fall to watching through the doorway the crawling market carts, with their huddled drivers, as one by one we overtake and leave them behind.

A touch on my elbow disturbs my contemplations. I turn to find that the large man was vacated his corner and is leaning confidentially toward me.

"'Ere," he observes with a mysterious air, "I want to speak to you."

He is a very large man, indeed, in whom the absence of a collar is made the more noticeable by a high-colored flannel shirt open at the neck. He has twisted himself in his seat so as to face me, and, with sudden disquietude, I make the discovery that the breast of his shirt is undulating with the movements of some live body beneath it. With triumpnant eyes fixed on mine, he inserts his hand beneath the garment, and, withdrawing it impressively, holds up a particularly repulsive-looking snake for my inspection.

"I'm always doing this," he remarks with delight. "I'm an' me's pals, Teddy I call 'im. After my wife's father."

I express my satisfaction at this highly sociable state of affairs and at the same time the conductor makes his appearance.

He accepts a coin mechanically from the semi-somnolent man opposite, his gaze straying curiously over his shoulder toward my neighbor.

A Bedfellow.

The latter, overjoyed at his attention, persuades the snake to further vagaries.

"I'm always doin' this," he explains with the same delight. "Teddy 'is name is. 'E sleeps with me at night."

The conductor grins.

My neighbor falls to caressing his snake again. Soon he leans forward, and with a push at the knee arouses the little man opposite from his slumbers. The latter regards his performance for awhile in stolid silence.

"That ain't nothin'," he observes, and closes his eyes again.

Attention is diverted by the entrance of two new passengers—a young gentleman in rather wide trousers and a young lady in a very narrow skirt. At a glance my neighbor marks them down as his prey. He rises, lurches across the tram, and seats himself beside them. With a beaming smile, he puts the snake through its performance for their benefit the pair watching him with marked apprehension.

"Teddy, I call 'im," he observed affably. "I'm always doin' this."

The information seems in no way reassuring to his audience, who remain watchfully silent. Suddenly he withdraws the snake from his shirt and holds it toward the young man.

"Try 'im yerself," he suggests generously. "I've no objection. Put 'im down your neck, mate."

There is a sudden scuffling sound as the young lady rises precipitately and moves to the farther end of the car. Her escort, about to follow, is detained by a huge hand upon his sleeve.

"'E won't 'urt yer. Put 'im down yer neck, boes. Yer ought to get used to that sort of thing, yer know."

It is evident that the young man has no sense of this duty to himself; by a sharp movement he frees his arm, and with such dignity as he can muster joins his companion at the farther end. The snake-charmer remains looking after him with an outraged stare.

Meanwhile the car has stopped, and there has been an influx of passengers. The conductor, about to ring the bell, suddenly observes the huge figure at the end.

It Disappears.

"'Ere you!" he cries. "You wanted Young's Corner!"

The snake-charmer turns hastily and stumbles down the car. Suddenly he stops and feels tentatively about the upper part of his body.

"'Arf a moment!" he exclaims, anxiously. "Wot's become o' Teddy?"

The new passengers glance up with mild interest. The pair at the end rise expeditiously and peer about them in apprehension. The snake-charmer has gone to the seat lately vacated by him—now occupied by a respectable old lady of sedate aspect.

"Excuse me, mum——" he apepals.

The lady, evidently rather hard of hearing, looks around her inquiringly. The snake-charmer raises his voice.

"It's my snake," he explains. "I think you must be sittin' on 'im."

With a blood-curdling shriek, the lady shoots from the seat like a stone from a catapult. The new passengers rise in panic, and convulsively shake skirts or trousers.

"You ain't got your snake," grumbles the conductor from the step. "Think we're goin' to wait about all—Why, what's that?"

All eyes follow the conductor's finger, pointing toward the snake-charmer's feet. From one of the legs of his trousers a flat, evil head has emerged, and, curling upward, is darting a forked tongue into space. With a proud smile, he stoops and, drawing forth his pet, replaces it in the breast of his shirt and steps out into the road.

The conductor tugs the bell impatiently, and we move on.

The passengers resume their seats, then crane their necks to watch a dwindling figure stationary in the road behind. A genial hail is wafted faintly toward us.

"Teddy, I call 'im. Sleeps with me at night!"

Extra Modest.

"George, there's a burglar in the house."

"Well, keep still. We've got nothing he'll steal."

"I know. But I left my corsets over the back of a chair, and I wouldn't have him see them for the world."

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I GUESS there ain't many real human beings that goes to the boarding houses at the seashore, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I was down to Tybee for a week-end, and I was entertained beautiful by a friend of mine that always does everything right. She and her husband is perfect darlings, George. He always takes her wherever she wants to go, and she thinks he is the only man on this globe. She is one of them kind of wives, George, that thinks when she hears about Julius Caesar that her husband would have had Julius' Jo> if he had been living then.

"But they was the only two regular guys on that porch after we had ate our dinner and went out to let it digest in the shade. There was four married women there about forty years old or so, and two young chaps that had traveled extensively on the trolley cars. They were setting there talking to the old gals, showing how brown their arms was from swimming and how much muscle they had, and the old gals was fine to them, beaming on them just as if they was grown-up men. After the two chaps had went for their third swim that day, the old gals began telling what divine waltzers the kids was, and how one of them was very witty.

"But oh, dear doctor! When the name of one of the younger married ladies came up, a lady that didn't happen to be there at the time, there was sure some scandal.

"'They say her husband drinks something brutal!' says one of the old hens.

"'I wouldn't be surprised,' says another. 'She would drive any man to drink with that temper of hers.'"

"What else do you expect from that kind of folks?" asked the Head Barber. "I never sat on a boarding house porch in my life, unless it was with some of the old Romans, long after the women folks had went to bed. I never could stand all the cruel things they said about the other women. Many a young married lady has been kissed and called 'dearie' by the old fat and forty girls, only to be hammered into pulp when they moved fifty feet away. I was up in the country not long ago and heard some of those rocking-chair dames working. Two of the young chaps there happened to be live ones, and went to the village to get a few steins on a hot day. They mentioned it when they got back home, and the next morning when they started out one of the dames says 'Look at Mr. Doonan and Mr. McSherry!' and another says, 'Yes, there they go!' I suppose when the young fellow got back in the evening every one of the ancients says 'Here they come!'"

"That's the trouble, George,' said the Manicure Lady. "This would be a whole lot different world in which to live in if it wasn't for the 'There they go!' and 'Here they come!' people. If they see a young fellow throwing himself away and going to the dogs, you don't hear many folks shouting 'Come back and get wise!' They all say 'There he goes!' and they say it as cheerful as a kid saying 'Oh Mamma, here comes the circus parade!'

"This is too hot a day to do much demoralizing, George, but I do wish that folks would be kinder to each other and bury the hammer. It ain't hatchets that needs burying in this world, George, it's hammer."

Hints For the Household

When about to make a pudding, well flour your board and rolling-pin and roll the suet out to a thin sheet. Take between your hands and rub down, when you will find the suet as fine as breadcrumbs.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all old bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish clothes for saucepans and piedishes.

When washing pudding cloths, throw some orange peelings into the water. This collects the grease and helps to make the cloths white and clean looking.

If great care is not taken flatirons easily become rusted. The following is a good way to clean them when this occurs: Tie a lump of beeswax in a piece of rag, and when theirons are hot rub them with this. Then rub them well with salt on a cloth, and they will be quite smooth and clean.

Before arranging maidenhair fern in vases, soak it for two hours in cold water; then singe the ends of the stems with a match. Ferns thus treated will last three times as long and keep quite green and fresh for several days.

Hot-water marks may be removed from japanned trays by the simple process of rubbing them over well with sweet oil, and then polishing with a little dry flour on a soft duster.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XIV.

MARY DANFORTH awoke early on the morning of her graduation day. She lifted her watch from the table at the head of her bed and glanced at it sleepily, noting with satisfaction that it still lacked more than an hour to breakfast time.

She lay half awake and let happy thoughts drift through her mind—light, girlish thoughts of the beauty of her graduation gown; affectionate thoughts of her father, speeding home from a business trip in the far West to be with his daughter on this important day; tender, timid thoughts of Gordon Craig.

In a letter written a week ago her lover had repeated his assurance that he would see her graduate. This epistle had reached her only the day before yesterday, and since then she had heard nothing from him, yet she was sure that he would be true to his word. She smiled now as she lay in her darkened room, a smile that was full of pure joy. She knew that Craig would have a question to ask when they met, and she also knew what her answer would be. She had no doubt now that she loved him dearly and was proud and happy in her love. The smile faded slowly from her lips, and she slept again.

Her mother's gentle knock on the door awakened her a half hour later.

"It's time to get up, girlie!" she announced, entering the room. "Breakfast will be ready soon and father has telephoned from the Grand Central to say that he will be up to eat it with us, as his train is just in. So try to be ready when he comes."

She kissed Mary as she had done each morning since the girl's birth, then hurried away on household tasks intent.

The trio had a happy breakfast together in the sunlit dining room. Mr. Danforth, haggard and pale—"from a sleepless night on the cars," as he explained—was once more at the head of the table, cheery and happy in spite of his evident weariness.

The morning meal over, he pushed his chair back from the table and, drawing Mary down upon his knees, questioned her with affection and interest about her plans for the day. He did not mention Craig's name. An unusual reticence had kept the Texan from his conversation ever since the young man had returned home, and when Mary had mentioned with studied indifference the fact that "Mr. Craig might possibly happen to be in New York on Commencement Day," her father let the statement pass without comment.

After a few minutes' chat this morning he declared that he must go to his office for a part of the day. At the front door he paused and came back to the dining room to kiss Mary, although he had already bade her an affectionate goodby.

"This is just to kiss my little girl once more," he explained, patting her cheek fondly. "She will be a grownup lady when I see her again."

It was late in the afternoon that Mary left the house to go down to her school. Her class were to have an early farewell supper in the gymnasium and would go directly from that to their graduation exercises.

At 8 o'clock she and the rest of the class took their places in the great school auditorium, which was already crowded. Mary looked vainly among the sea of faces for the three persons who made her small world. Of course, her parents were here, she mused, although she could not discern them—but was Craig here, too?

The white-haired principal arose to speak, and a hush fell on the house. Suddenly Mary knew that her lover had come. She felt his eyes upon her, and, looking up, saw him in the gallery above her. Their glances met and he smiled, but the girl blushed hotly and dropped her eyes. Her heart throbbed wildly. She had been eager to see him, but now she wished to evade his steady gaze and hide herself, yet she was happy to be in his presence. She raised her hand to her throat, and, caressingly, touched the hidden silver trinket he had sent her.

Those who knew her said Mary Danforth had never looked sweeter and fairer than when she rose at the calling of her name and went forward to receive her diploma. She did not think of the thousands of glances resting upon her, but only of the look of the man she loved. She longed to lift her eyes and gaze into his face, but she could not. Through the valedictory she sat silent, unhearing, her eyes upon her diploma and the mass of flowers which had been handed her. She knew some of them were sent by Craig, the rest by her parents.

At last she became aware that it was all over, that people were rising and that everybody about her was talking. A gray-haired, sweet-faced teacher accosted her.

"May I speak to you a moment, dear child?" she said quietly. "Come with me."

Puzzled and vaguely alarmed the girl obeyed the older woman's bidding and followed her into a small anteroom adjoining the auditorium. As Mary noted the woman's grave demeanor a dread clutched at her heart, and she held her breath to listen.

"I have bad news for you," said her teacher simply. "You must go right home to your mother. She has sent for you. Your father"——

She paused, and the girl clasped her hands in an agony of fear.

"Oh, what is it?" she gasped. "Tell me quickly! Is he hurt, or ill, or"—her voice failed her suddenly, for Gordon Craig stood beside her. She had not seen him enter, and he took her trembling hands in his firm grasp.

"Dear," he said quickly, but softly, while his body shielded her from the glances of persons passing the door, "your father will never be hurt or ill again. Be brave, dear. He died an hour ago."

An Impossible Post.

With tense, eager faces, the great audience of women leaned forward in their seats, eagerly drinking in the noted speaker's every word.

"Mere man," she was saying, "is wont to belittle woman's ability to enter the fields already usurped by him. As a matter of fact, she is capable of filling any post of public or private office now held by man, and, if appointed to it, could even perform man's tasks with greater faithfulness and greater darlag.

"Name, if you can, one post for which she can not fit herself! Name one office to which she would not, could not, give the greatest measure of capability, the highest degree of courage, the——"

A mere man, who had slipped, unnoticed, into a back seat, rose at this point, and the light of sudden inspiration gleamed in his eye.

"Rat catcher!" he shouted. And then he fled.

Their Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"THAT must be the landing down there! I can't see that sign, but I'm sure that's where you get the St. Cloud boats."

"Hadn't you better ask some one," ventured Helen. "It's so far to go way down there and find it isn't the place."

"I tell you it IS the place," scowled Warren, who always hated to ask his way, and often wore Helen out trying to find a place without guidance.

Already they had walked across the Alexandre bridge, and Helen was tired and hot. Her feet ached, too, for she had foolishly started out in a pair of white canvas pumps which she had bought the day before.

A gravel path and stone steps led down to what Warren thought was the boat landing. But evidently it was not in use this season, for the place was deserted except for a man who was shearing a dog in an empty shed.

He was sitting on the ground holding on his knees a King Charles spaniel, whose sleek body he was clipping close, leaving only the lion-like ruff of neck and tail. The dog, grateful to be rid of his heavy coat this hot day, lay patiently on his back.

"I'll be darned!" muttered Warren, looking around the deserted landing. "I know those boats used to start from here."

"But it's been seven years since you were in Paris," protested Helen. "You can't expect to find everything just the same! Do ask that man where the right landing is—I CAN'T walk much farther!"

"Well, if it's along here we'll find it," obstinately ignoring her suggestion. "There, I see it now! Isn't that a boat just pulling in?"

Helen Inquires.

Helen's heart sank, for the landing Warren pointed to was back beyond the bridge. And it might not be the right one! Determinedly she approached the man with the dog. If Warren would not ask, she would. Not knowing the French for "boat landing," she repeated "St. Cloud, St. Cloud?" and pointed to the landing beyond.

"Oui, oui, madame," nodded the man, understandingly, while the dog, in spite of his inverted position, wagged a friendly tail.

Warren was already striding back up the stone steps. "Hope you're satisfied," he grumbled, as Helen breathlessly caught up with him. "That's the St. Cloud boat there now. If you hurry we'll get it."

Helen, her shoes hurting her at every step, kept up with Warren's long strides as best she could. As they drew near they could see "St. Cloud" fluttering on a red flag over the boat.

"May have to wait another hour if we don't catch this!" called back Warren, running ahead to get the tickets.

The boat gave a warning whistle. A man was loosening the chain. Were they going to miss it after all? Warren had the tickets now and was waving them at her! Helen, flushed and breathless, reached the boat only a second before it moved off.

"Whee! That was close," and Warren wiped the inside of his hat with his handkerchief. "Pretty good sprint for a hot day."

"Oh, can't you find me a place to sit down?" panted Helen. "My feet hurt so!"

"Don't see any place, do you?" looking around the crowded boat, on which every seat was taken. "What's the matter with your feet, anyway? You've been hobbling ever since we started."

"It's these shoes I bought yesterday. They're plenty big," defiantly, "but they're too stiff. They hurt in the back at the heel."

"Humph, you ought to know you couldn't get a decent shoe in this country. Why on earth didn't you bring enough with you?"

"I did, dear, all except white ones."

"Well, serves you right. They ought to hurt you, if you haven't more sense than to start out on a trip like this with a new pair of shoes."

Paris had been hot, but the Seine was hotter. The sun glittered on the water that was not even rippled by a breath of air. The iron rail, against which Helen was leaning, almost burnt through her gloves. Would she have to stand on her aching feet in this blazing sun all the way to St. Cloud?

Warren Compares.

"They talk so blamed much about the beauty of the Seine—well I don't see it! Can't hold a candle to our Palisades along the Hudson."

"None too clean, either," went on Warren. "Hope they don't drink this water. But that's so—Frenchmen don't drink any water. There's a seat, if you want one," as a man rose to get out at the next landing.

Helen sank into the seat, and with a sigh of relief drew off her slipper under her dress. Warren did not trouble to come and stand by her, but stood where he was, leaning on his cane by the railing.

As they left the outskirts of Paris, the river grew cleaner and the scenery more attractive. But Helen was too hot and much too uncomfortable to enjoy or appreciate the sail.

At last they reached St. Cloud. On the hillside above was a big white hotel, with fluttering flags and white-clothed tables on the green hedged veranda and terrace.

"Well, what do you want to do? Walk around and take a look at the village—or get a cab here and drive through the park first?"

Helen, whose feet still hurt her, suggested the drive.

Several cabmen, spotting the Americans, were already urging them to their vehicles. Warren put Helen into one of the cabs and told the driver to take them through the park.

"What's that?" as the man began to chatter excitedly. "What in the devil's he trying to say?" For Warren's restaurant French was not equal to this conversation.

The driver finally made them understand they were to pay in advance—two francs, for which he presented them with a ticket, which Helen thought was a sort of receipt.

"Why, dear, that's awfully cheap," as they drove off.

"Oh, all cabs are much cheaper over here," explained Warren easily.

They entered the park by a massive gateway, sentinelled by a uniformed soldier. Helen had read in her Baedeker of the beauty of the park at St. Cloud, but the terraced groves, the statuary, the fountains, the vistas through arched trees, the cascades and grottoes surpassed any guide book description.

Pay In Advance.

"I say, this is great!" approved Warren. "Look through there! The fellow who laid out these grounds knew his job."

Thed river now slowed up, to give them a better view of a magnificent fountain at the top of a terraced mound.

"Dear, that must be the fountain which plays every other Sunday. Why didn't I bring the Baedeker?"

"Oh, forget your blamed old guidebook and enjoy what you see. By Jove, just look up there!"

In the distance was another fountain center with marble nymphs and flaming flower beds. Helen, with her slipper off, now leaned back and gave herself up to silent enjoyment of it all—the cool shaded groves, the smell of the woods, and the wonderful vistas through the trees. The whole park was a triumph of landscape art.

Every now and then they passed a festive picnic party with lunch spread in some secluded grove. And there were many courts of lawn-tennis and other field games, the white outing costumes of the players gleaming conspicuously against the green background.

"Well, we're getting our two francs' worth in this drive, all right. This man's got a pretty big tip coming to him."

When they had driven entirely around the great park, they again drew up before the impressive iron gate, which the soldier swung open.

"We don't want to go back to the station yet. Let's get out of here and go up to the hotel and have a drink. How about having dinner there?" and Warren motioned to the driver to let them out.

"Eh? What's that? Now what's he after?" as the driver stared at his tip, climbed down from his seat, and excitedly pointed to a taximeter in front, which they had not seen before.

"Well, what in thunder did we pay that two francs for?" demanded Warren, glacing at the taximeter which registered over seven francs. "If you think you've got a sucker here, you're wrong. You made us pay in advance, and that's all you'll get."

Here the soldier at the gate, overhearing the dispute, came out and explained to Warren, in halting English, that the two francs was the admission charged by the park, and that the taximeter charges was for the drive.

Explanations.

"Oh, if that's the way of it, all right," as Warren paid the seven francs, fifty. "But why in the devil didn't he say so?"

"Why, that's exorbitant," protested Helen indignantly, as they started up the hill to the hotel. "That makes the drive almost ten francs."

"If that's their regular rate—that's all right. All I want to know is that I'm not being held up. Now what? Want to go to the hotel for dinner now? Or take a walk around the village first?"

"I'm afraid I can't walk very far," faltered Helen.

"By George, you're a fine traveler, you are," in a tone of disgust. "Not much pleasure going anywhere with you. You're either too tired, or too hot, or your feet hurt—or some blamed thing's the matter. Come on then, we'll have dinner. Think you can sit up and take nourishment?"

There's Many a Slip.

Smithson had been really a power in his day. At any rate, he had held a job bringing him in some thousands a year—that is to say, until the smash came. After that he failed to hold any job he got, and became permanently out of luck.

His old friend Jenkins was a bit surprised, therefore, when Smithson stopped him in the street one day and angrily exclaimed:

"D'you know, I've just received the prize insult of my life! A chap down in the city offered me a job this morning!"

"Offered you a job?" replied Jenkins. "You call that an insult? I thought you were looking for a job!"

"Yes, but not at ten dollars a week. Hang it all, I can borrow more than that from you!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Cheer up little girl."

CHAPTER XXIII.

AFTER the scene in the office, when Jennie's new employer tried to kiss her, Jennie realized if she demanded her salary—so she could leave—he would not pay her, so she resolved to work the week out if possible and be on her guard in the meantime against any outbursts on his part.

The man saw there was nothing to be gained by forcing his attentions on Jennie, so thought he would play a "waiting game" and be as nice as possible.

He apologized profusely, saying if he had not been drinking it wouldn't have happened, but that Jennie was so pretty he just couldn't help it. Jennie was determined to leave at the end of the week, though, for she could see he was only waiting a more favorable chance.

When Jennie got home that night she found her aunt, the boarding-house keeper, very ill—so sick, in fact, that they had to get a doctor. "Goodness only knows where we can get the money to pay him," thought Jennie.

The only thing the doctor could prescribe was a good rest, change of scene and good, wholesome food. Quite simple to prescribe, but how could Jennie's aunt have these things when they had barely enough to live on as it was? After the doctor had gone Jennie's aunt called her to the bedside and told her: "I know what is the matter with me, Jennie girl; it was useless for you to have called the doctor, for he could not help me and it was just an added expense that we can not afford. I've had these spells for years, but never one before as bad as this—but cheer up, my little girl, everything will be all right and I'll be out of bed soon." But in her heart she KNEW she never would.

A TYPEWRITER COSTS OVER $3000.00

AS a business man you know that the price you pay for a typewriter is a negligible sum, compared with what it really costs.

If you pay your operator fifty dollars per month and she runs the machine five years, the operating cost is $3,000.00. This, plus what you paid for the machine, represents your investment.

The vital question is, "What do I get for that $3,000.00?"

On the

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

you get ten to twenty per cent more work than on any other typewriter made.

The original cost of the machine, therefore, fades into nothingness.

We can prove that our typewriter will do more and better work and do it longer than any other typewriter.

Our branch office in Atlanta is always at your service and we will demonstrate our machine in your office, without cost or obligation to you.

RITCHIE SIGNS TO MEET WELSH SEPTEMBER 1

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Freddie Welsh is to get first crack at Willie Ritchie, leightweight champion of the world. Ritchie today accepted the offer made by a Vancouver club for a twenty-round contest there on September 1 with the Englishman as his opponent.

The taking of the Vancouver match followed a four-hour talk between Ritchie and James W. Coffroth, of this city, who hoped to match Tommy Murphy and the champion for September 9. Ritchie's demand on Coffroth was far greater than the local promoter cared to consent to and negotiations were dropped.

While Ritchie would not say just what he is receiving for fighting Welsh in Vancouver, it is learned on good authority that he will receive a guarantee of $15,000 with a 50 per cent interest in the moving pictures.

The champion will depart to-day for the mountains to shoot deer and incidentally get himself a good start in the training line.

Sports and Such

FAMOUS IN SPORT—III.

The Breed of Horses.

THE BREED OF HORSES IS A good deal like the city government—it is in constant need of improvement. These improvements eat up a lot of kale, but they are necessary, and the kale comes from men who oughtn't be trusted with money, anyway. Auto manufacture may cease at any moment, and you would be up against it without an improved breed of horse to take you to the office, especially if there should be a subway strike on at the same time.

The men who have the Breed of Horses nearest at heart are called Bookmakers, or Personal Friends. They work without pay in the noble cause. When you have paid your $3 matriculation fee to study the subject, they merely show you a list of horses and request you to decide in which the breed has been improved to the greatest extent, charging you for the privilege only such sums of money as you may have about you at the time. If you cannot see how this improves the Breed of Horses, you are an unmitigated bonehead and notoriety-seeker and are against personal liberty, and we wish you wouldn't read this column any more.

The funds thus accumulated are devoted to the purchase of high-grade autos for the bookmakers, as they are fat and so weighted down with bales of cush that it would injure the breed of any horse forced to haul them to the track. The Track is the institution devoted to this form of altruism. In its ideals it is not unlike those devoted to the improving of the rate of call money.

From this you can see that the Breed of Horses is not a complicated subject for the intelligent. You must merely never disagree with a Bookmaker's opinion on the breed of any horse. Of course, he may sometimes make a mistake, and then he is so ashamed that he sneaks out by the back fence before you can find him.

Before taking up the Breed of Horses seriously, devote your paycheck each week to the study of a crooked roulette wheel. It's great training.

Turned Down Trade for Joe Agler

Jersey City Offered Borton for Him

By Joe Agler.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 6.—I reckon I ought to be feeling sort of set up this morning. From what I hear, Major Frank E. Callaway, president of our ball club association, came up here to see President J. L. Lillis, of the Jersey City club, who offered him Borton, recently of the White Sox, and another player for my humble self.

They tell me Mr. Callaway turned down the offer before the deal had got beyond the debating stage.

Well, that makes me feel pretty good. I like to play ball for Atlanta, and it certainly cheers a fellow up to know he is wanted on the job. I'll just keep on doing the best I can for the Crackers and the management.

Getting back to the real business of the ball club, I want to say that we took a licking yesterday and we haven't any yelp coming. Coveleskie was right, and when he is right he is a bear. He ought to have got a shutout except for a break in the luck.

Carl Thompson, too, was in grand trim, though the Lookouts tied up the game in the ninth inning when he hit a batsman with the bases full. Then another hit batsman, an error and a base hit untied it in the tenth.

But now we have the big Pole out of the way, and with Conzelman and Price to work this afternoon, we ought to get no worse than an even break at the outside. Then we tackle the Vols, and you know they looked pretty easy last time.

REDS BUY HARRINGTON FROM N. ENGLAND LEAGUE

LYNN, MASS., Aug. 6.—Frank Harrington, a pitcher of the Lynn club of the New England League, to-day is heading to join the Cincinnati National League team. An offer for Harrington made a month ago was accepted with understanding that the pitcher would not leave Lynn until the close of the New England League season.

But Manager Flaherty received and accepted an offer of a bonus if he would allow Harrington to join the Reds immediately. Harrington is 21 years old.

One Comfort, the Pole Is Out of the Way for the Time Being

IT WAS A TOUGH GAME FOR THOMPSON TO LOSE

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE wad of balsam soothes the sting of defeat:

The tough-grained Pole is out of the way.

We expected it—and we got it. We didn't get it as overwhelmingly as we thought we were going to, and that is some comfort. Carl Thompson earned only praise for his stubborn defense. And his helpers with him.

Still, it would have been a grand little achievement to have trimmed the Irish Newsboy, while the trimming was so nearly good. One little scratch tally in the ninth, now—

* * *

ANOTHER grain of comfort.

Joe Agler is going to stay with us a while longer.

Major Callaway, president of the Atlanta Baseball Association, traveled to Chattanooga Monday to meet President Lillis, of the Jersey City club. Major Callaway didn't know what Mr. Lillis wanted to see him about, but Mr. Lillis' wire said it was urgent.

Mr. Lillis wanted our old friend, Joe Agler. Mr. Lillis wanted Joe so much that he offered Borton, recently a White Sox, who went to New York in the Chase trade and to J. C. for Jack Knight. Also Mr. Lillis offered boot in the shape of another player.

Major Callaway is reported by the newsfinders—entirely apart from what Joe himself heard about it—as turning down the deal as soon as he found out what Mr. Lillis wanted.

Suits us fine.

* * *

WHEN the official wranglers in any old league run out of wrangling material, they usually dig up the clever and start in on the proposition of a ball player being out if he slides into first base, and, if so, why not?

There are plenty of wranglers on both sides. The last time the crool war broke out it was in the American Association. But it did not stay there.

An honest German umpire named O'Brien called out a guy named Dixie Walker for sliding bean-first to sack No. 1 in St. Paul. Billy Friel, manager of the Saints and incidentally of Mr. Walker, protested to President Chivington.

Chivvy upheld the umpire, saying something about an "unwritten law" promulgated, or words to that effect, by the umpires as a rebuke to baserunners who are merely trying to "make the play close," and confuse the worthy umps.

* * *

RIGHT away some loafer touched off August Herrmann about it.

The august August is about three-fourths of the National Commission—when Ban Johnson is away—and he is ever ready to blow up about anything.

This time he performed as per schedule.

Mr. Herrmann said, in part:

"A player is permitted under the rules to reach any base by any method he sees fit." So long, it is understood, as the said player proceeds under his own steam.

Mr. Herrmann remarked further:

"He may run, jump, crawl or walk on his hands, so long as he travels within the lines. This is provided in the rules of the game, and no umpire or league president or anybody else has any right to change the rule."

* * *

MR. CHIVINGTON, please copy.

But here is another rule:

"Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the accuracy of the umpire's judgment and decision on a play."

Rule 65, if you want to look it up.

And what we should like to inquire is, how is Mr. Herrmann to decide from the protests of outraged managers whether the sliding-to-first-base runner was called out because the umpire was prejudiced against that mode of transportation, or because he really was out?

Mr. Herrmann being notably strong for the rules, you know.

* * *

DROP a little tear for Cornelius McGillicuddy.

As if it weren't tough enough to lose half a series to the wretched Browns, and have the furious Naps roaring along, only eight or ten games behind, here comes the news that Jack Coombs, famous iron man, is about ready to come back.

Coombs has been out of the game since early in the spring. Typhoid was the cause. Now he is reported bigger and better than ever, just like a circus.

Pity poor Connie! He was wondering and wondering who would pitch the opening game of the world's series—Bender or Plank.

And now here's Coombs!

EAST MEETS WEST TO-DAY IN BIG TENNIS DOUBLES

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Double teams from the East and West to-day met for the final elimination in the National tennis championships. Clarence Griffin and John Strachan, of San Francisco, Pacific Coast champions, were matched against Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern champions.

The winners of to-day's match will be entitled to play Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bundy, present National champions, at Newport, R. I., on August 18, for the 1913 doubles honors of the United States.

JACK KEATING KNOCKS OUT GALL IN THE FOURTH ROUND

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Jack Keating, the local heavyweight, knocked out George Gall, in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Atlantic A. C. Garden here last night. Gall was reeling around the ring helpless in the fourth round when his seconds threw up the sponge.

John Lester Johnson, the South American heavyweight, knocked out Bob Lee, a dusky-hued boxer of Brooklyn, in the third round of the semi-final bout, scheduled to go ten rounds.

SMITH IN NO-HIT GAME; ARM NOW OUT OF SPLINTS

PITTSFIELD, MASS., Aug. 6.—William I. Smith, of the Pittsfield Eastern Asociation Baseball Club, who took his injured arm out of splints the day before, pitched a no-hit game against Waterbury yesterday, shuting them out 3 to 0. Smith issued no passes and struck out six men. Only three Waterbury players saw first base, all on errors.

HURLS NO-RUN NO-HIT GAME.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 6.—Pitcher Watson, of Asheville, in the North Carolina league, pitched a no-hit, no-run game here against Winston-Salem. He walked three men, struck out six and out of three trips to the bat got two hits, one of which was a home run.

JAKE STAHL MAY SUCCEED CALLAHAN AS HEAD OF SOX

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—A rumor was industriously circulated in local baseball circles to-day to the effect that Jake Stahl, former manager of the Red Sox, is scheduled to succeed Jimmy Callahan as manager of the Chicago White Sox, at the close of the present year. Stahl has been spending the summer, since his dismissal, at Annisquam, but could not be reached there to-day. Some of Stahl's close personal friends are inclined to ridicule the idea that Stahl will return to baseball.

WHITNEY TO GET HERE FRIDAY; WHITE SATURDAY

FRANK WHITNEY will arrive Friday morning for his ten-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory a week from to-night. White will get in Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The "Fighting Carpenter" has been training for a week on his farm in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but yesterday moved his training quarters to O'Connells' gymnasium in Chicago, where he will remain until to-morrow night.

The following wire was received this morning:

Will arrive in Atlanta Friday morning. Am stopping in Chicago for a couple of days so as to get benefit of sparring partners. Working at O'Connell's gym.

There are not any clever lightweights in Atlanta for Frank to work out with. In the Windy City there are plenty of boys who can give the "Fighting Carpenter" just the sort of work he needs.

Tickets for the show will go on sale this afternoon at Shepherd's Cigar Store, corner of Edgewood and Pryor. On account of the size of the Auditorium-Armory, it has been decided to make the prices $1, $1.50 and $2. The balcony brings the low price, the dress circle $1.50 and the ringside seats "two bucks."

Already big orders have been received from Macon, Athens, Augusta and other nearby cities and towns. It is expected that the advance sale will be even heavier than for the Battling Nelson bout, which totaled nearly $2,500.

AMATEUR TEAMS CLASH AT PONCE DE LEON TO-DAY

In order that the visiting merchants may see a good game of ball the Producers and Jones teams, of the Grocers' League, has transferred their game from Piedmont to Ponce DeLeon Park. Game will be called at 3:30 p. m. Admission 10 cents.

These two teams are tied in the race for the pennant in the Grocers' League and this game is sure to be a battle royal. Jones won the last game, which will make the Producers fight hard to make it a win.

NEW YORK HEARS THAT YANKEES SEEK HOFMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A report gained circulation here to-day that Artie Hofman, former Cub and Pirate, will be seen in a Yankee uniform next year.

Artie has been playing great ball since he was turned over to Nashville, of the Southern League, by the Pirates. He looks to be just as good as ever.

It is said that Chance promised Artie that he would bring him back into the big leagues if he displayed any of his old form.

Polo To-day---If It Doesn't Rain
Everybody Invited to McPherson

If only J. Pluvius will compromise with the weather man for this one afternoon, he will earn the respect and friendly admiration of several thousand Atlantans, who are planning to witness Atlanta's first polo match on the big parade ground at Fort McPherson, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Everything is set for the contest between a team representing Atlanta and a quartet of officers of the Seventeenth Regiment. The personnel of the officers' team has not been announced, but it is known that there are enough experts with the Seventeenth to make up the requisite four of experienced polo players and have a second four left over for substitutes.

The local four will be Captain J. O. Seamans, of the Governor's Horse Guard, who played the game in the army, who will lead the team; Albert Sidney J. Tucker of Lexington, Va.; E. M. Landrum, of Pensacola, Fla., and Milton Wise, of New York.

Robert F. Maddox will act as timer; Wilmer L. Moore, scorer; James R. Gray and Clark Howell, goal judges, and Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun, referee.

Moving pictures will be taken of the event and will be displayed on local screens at an early date.

In addition to the game there will be a band concert by the regimental band, and music by the Glee Club, of Company M. A tug-of-war on horseback and also wrestling on horseback.

No admission will be charged and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the sport.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Lou Castro is a busy man these days. Lou is dividing his time in eating three squares a day and getting his fighting arena in shape for his big boxing show to be staged at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. Whitney has wired Castro that he will be here Friday.

* * *

Kid Young and Mike Saul are working together for their coming bouts at the Auditorium. Young takes on Charlie Lee, while Mike will probably don the padded mitts with Eddie Hanlon. Young is developing a terrific kick in his right hand, and expects to topple Lee over long before the tenth round is reached.

* * *

Kid Wonder took a trip to The Georgian Sporting Department yesterday to inform us, that he is after a match with some local featherweight. Wonder is particularly anxious to get on with either Kid Young or Charlie Lee.

* * *

A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast want to meet Willie Ritchie, and have started bidding for the match. Both boys are willing to give the champion a neat side bet.

* * *

Packey McFarland is the latest to put in a boost for Charlie White. Packey says that Charlie is without a doubt the greatest 128-pound boy in the game to-day. Joe Thomas and Jake Abel probably agree with McFarland.

* * *

They are certainly picking soft marks for Carl Morris in the West. Al Benedict, his latest victim, would be easy for a lot of Philadelphia welterweights.

* * *

Three 10-round bouts between heavyweights are to be staged at the St. Nicholas A. C., New York, to-night. Porky Flynn, of Boston, will meet Sailor White, of Newark; Frank McGuinness, the Irish heavyweight, will battle Jack Keating, of the United States Navy, and Al Kubiak is to try conclusions with Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, have been matched to meet in a ten-round go at Omaha on September 12. If Coulon finds that he is right in this bout, he may go to the coast for a scrap with Kid Williams.

* * *

A banner house is expected to attend the Gunboat Smith-Jim Flynn set-to at New York on August 8. Both boys have been doing all their training in the Eastern City, and look to be in great shape. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Cyclone Thompson and Billy Hooper, colored lightweights, may be put on in one of the bouts to be held at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. They are now dickering with Lou Castro.

* * *

Arthur Pelky and Charlie Miller may clash in a long go at Los Angeles. McCarey plans to match the pair for a September date. Tommy Burns, manager of Pelky, took the match with the understanding that if Pelky defeated Miller he was to get a fight with Gunboat Smith.

GA.-ALA. LEAGUE NOTES

Every town in the league around the Georgia-Alabama circuit is glad when the Opelika boys blow in. They're a bunch of collegians and gentlemanly fellows, as well as good ball players.

* * *

* * *

Then there is Bone, of Washington and Lee; Allen and Ragsdale, of Auburn; Cantley and others who have played on college diamonds and gridirons.

* * *

"Chick" Hannon, for years one of the best-known factors in Southern football and baseball, an all-Southern quarter and shortstop at Alabama, has said his "thirty" to active sports, although he will hereafter be assistant coach in athletics at Alabama, his alma mater.

* * *

Before he got an injured wing, resulting from a broken shoulder blade in a football game, Hannon was headed straight for the majors, if he wanted to ascend; but since that accident he has never had the old-time punch to his fling, and to-day his knowledge of the game is his chief asset. He knows that, and he can teach it.

* * *

He has made a success as coach for the Alabama Presbyterian College here, and has played good ball in the Southeastern and Georgia-Alabama despite his handicap. An operation last year failed to restore his arm to its old-time form, and for two seasons he has known that he was passing.

* * *

He is one of the many veterans who the fans sometimes knock, but love nevertheless, and in his exit there goes a gentleman of the field.

* * *

Killingsworth, the big Anniston pitcher, made a bid for a job with Opelika in the game Monday afternoon, should he ever get "canned" by Anniston. A fracas with the umpire caused the parking of three Pelicans, and Killy had to be borrowed for the emergency.

* * *

In right field he pulled down a stellar fly on the run, and when he came to the bat the last time he put Left-fielder Henry up against the fence to gather in a long swat from his own willow. Altogether, his work came near costing his teammates the game. He plays for the love of the thing, and says he forgot to pull in his punch.

PLAYERS MEET IN CHECKER TOURNEY FINALS TO-DAY

In the play which began here yesterday for the championship of the Southern Checker Association the following qualified for the final round to be played to-day: G. C. Anderson, North Carolina; R. W. Evans, J. S. Hall, J. H. Bishop, C. M. Farrar, Georgia; S. S. Hallman, B. Fishburne, South Carolina, and J. M. Allen, Jr., Knoxville, Tenn., the holder of the championship since 1911.

Allen lost three of his first four games and in order to qualify for the finals had to make perfect scores against his last five opponents.

Fuzzy Woodruff Describes Chicago Boy's First Fight in a Ring

CHARLEY WHITE'S DEBUT HOWLING SUCCESS

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

LET a man attain prominence in any field of endeavor—be it finance, politics, medicine, the law, burglary or the stage—some auld acquaintance is as sure to rise up and chirp "I knew when, etc.," as a bleacherite is to yell "win your old game, boy," when the pitcher comes to bat with the score 11 to 2 against him with two down in the ninth inning.

It ranks with "I told you so" and "let's have another" as one of the most useful phrases of conversation.

All of this is merely a preface to a "I knew him when" yarn about Charley White, the wonderful Chicago lightweight, who is to meet Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory arena August 13.

White is a real championship contender now. In fact, in a lightweight division remarkable for the lack of punching power among the top-notchers, White should be regarded as easily the most dangerous man of his poundage alive.

But when I first saw Charley box, he was as unknown to fame as was Jim Conley before the Phagan mystery's first chapter was written.

If my memory serves me right, it was on Labor Day of 1908, at the old Hawthorne race track, the last of the Windy City's once glorious domain of the thoroughbreds.

That year boxing, racing and pretty much everything else was under the ban in Chicago, but on Labor Day it was announced that the unions were to hold their celebration at the old track and the lid was to be lifted for the occasion.

The bang-tails were to run in the afternoon; there would be fighting at night; handbook men would be allowed to operate unmolested. Every known gambling device was to be in operation.

* * *

A PICTURESQUE scene greeted the visitors. The union men were in the uniforms they had worn in the Labor Day parade. All of Chicago's noted sportsmen were on hand. Old Ed Corrigan walked about the plant of which he was once master much like a ghost is supposed to walk about the scenes of his triumphs.

The gamblers were busy early and late. Half a dozen bank crap games were running. There were a dozen kinds of swindles going. The old army game was being played in four or five different bird cages.

Before the day had gone far, in walked the Sheriff, and the games mysteriously vanished. But the races were run and the brew flowed freely.

The fights were to be held in the old betting shed, and right after the last race the shed was packed.

The star bout was a ten-round go between Cyclone Johnny Thompson, then a lightweight, and Eddie Tancel, a pretty husky boy of the division.

There were two preliminaries. On account of the presence of the Sheriff, the promoters were rather leery about staging the fights. Minutes passed, and then an hour. The spectators began to squirm. Finally two charitably-inclined gents started some fun by having a fist fight all their own at the ringside.

This quelled, the fighting began. The first bout was a tame wrestling affair. The second was a three-round go between two tough mugs, who wanted to continue the scrapping with bare knuckles after the final gong rang.

* * *

THE last preliminary was between Danny Goodman and an unknown kid introduced as Charley White. Yank Kenny refereed. Goodman then was a veteran, and a mighty hard man to beat. He was a corking good ring general, and knew about all there is to know of boxing.

White was pounds lighter, though Goodman weighed no more than 125 pounds. Goodman was all confidence. White was all earnestness. It was his first ring engagement against so seasoned a warrior. In the first round Goodman danced around him, working in and out, and landing lightly pretty much as he wished. But he was not hurting White, and every now and then the novice flashed a left hand out that carried death and destruction, but Goodman was never there.

The second round was about a repetition of the first. White vainly striving to land a crushing blow. The final round was fast and furious. White was on top of Goodman from the gong. Left and right were whipped out with lightning rapidity. Goodman was boxing his best, but finally a left found its way to his stomach. Goodman doubled up and all but collapsed, and the crowd was on its feet yelling.

The veteran, though, quickly covered and stalled through the remaining minute of the round. Though Goodman had landed twenty blows to White's one, the one that Charley put over evened the fight, and he was entitled to a draw.

That was his baptism of fire, and so impressive was his showing that Nate Lewis, who was at the ringside, promptly took the boy under his tutelage and started him on his climb to the championship.

* * *

I DID NOT see White box again until he met Jake Abel in the Auditorium a few weeks ago. I had always believed Abel about as clever a boy as the South boasts. I had no idea that he would knock White out, but I had no idea that White would stop him. The bout seemed destined to go the ten rounds.

But at the first gong White showed more than I have ever seen in an Atlanta ring. Abel was a toy. When White sent him crumbling to the floor in the second round, there was not a man in the house not glad that the bout ended there. It had been one-sided entirely.

In 1908 I had seen White a novice. Just five years later, if he was not a champion he was at least the most dangerous man in his division.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Unless President Groover rescinds his action, Catcher Pierre, of the Valdosta team, will not play ball any more this season in the Empire. He has been suspended for the balance of the season for an attack on Umpire Gentle in Valdosta. In Brunswick Pierre attacked Umpire McLaughlin and was fined for the job.

* * *

President W. J. Clark, of the Waycross Association, says Waycross is going to finish first and fight it out with Valdosta for the pennant. In view of the recent additions to the Waycross team, this may not prove idle talk.

* * *

Despite the certainty of financial loss in almost all cities of the Empire this season, every member of the league is making plans for baseball next season. The experience of the first season has cost some cities a bunch of money, and it is safe to predict that every team will stay within the salary limit another year.

* * *

If Jackson, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., arrange a post-season series, several Empire League teams will be badly crippled if players of those teams have to report for the series. Thomasville and Valdosta will suffer, as each team has strong men from the Cotton States teams that want to have some more baseball.

* * *

The end of this week should see a decided change in the standing of teams in the league. Thomasville has six hard games, three with Cordele and three with Waycross. Some battles worth seeing will go down in baseball history before the week-end, mark the prediction.

* * *

Pitcher Vanderlip, who played with Waycross for some time this season, is now playing with a semi-professional team in his home city, Brooklyn. Shamus O'Brien, known as "Mickey," is signed with the Baltimore team for the remainder of the season, having been turned loose by Waycross.

* * *

Because of the recent talk of a post-season series between the pennant winners of the Southern and the South Atlantic, the talk of a series between the Empire and Sally pennant winners has died down lately. However, it is probable the games will be played.

* * *

When Nance and Leininger, both third basemen, were released by Valdosta, two clever men were cut loose. Nance succeeded Leininger, only to go for Brewster, of the Cotton States.

* * *

Red Stiles, of the Thomasville team, is probably the champion hard luck pitcher of the league. In one game he gave up but two hits and then lost, the hits getting by his teammates failing to come in bunches.

* * *

Unless the dope slips, one of the new men to appear in the Empire this month will startle the fans by his work. Recently the player in question got six hits out of seven times up in an extra inning game, three home runs and three three-base hits being the best he could do. On the bases he is said to resemble Ty Cobb.

* * *

Brunswick is taking to Whitey Morse, according to reports from the seaport city. Morse is hitting over .350, and is popular with players and fans alike. Valdosta lost a valuable man when he was allowed to go.

* * *

The attendance trophy, which was won by Waycross on opening day, is on display in Waycross and is attracting a lot of notice.

The Americus team next season will be changed a great deal, judging by comments of the present team. Like other teams in the league, Americus has changed managers several times this season, and there are fans who dislike each manager to such an extent that the team never suits everybody.

* * *

Jack Hawkins, who played ball around Atlanta for some time and started the Empire season as a Brunswick player, is now in left field for Valdosta. He came back to the Empire from the Cotton States League, where he batted over .300 and fielded in jam-up style. Brewster, another Cotton States player, is on third for Valdosta, succeeding Nance.

* * *

While fans in Waycross regretted the release of "Goat" Holliday, the sensational first baseman, they are delighted at the way Jones is playing the bag. Jones came from Virginia to play with Brunswick, but was not good enough for the Pilots. He made good in Waycross with a rush and fields as well as Holliday.

* * *

Franks has been signed as an outfielder for Brunswick. He was a member of the Valdosta team and is considered one of the best in the league. He had a row of some kind with Jordan and his release followed.

* * *

Lately there has been a revival of the rumor that Albany will become a member of the Empire circuit. It is said that Albany and Americus like nothing better than a scrap on the ball field, and, if for no other reason, Albany would be glad to get into the Empire.

* * *

Of all the youngsters picked up by Empire League teams this season none has developed as rapidly as Anderson, a Georgia boy, now playing third base for Waycross. He has played at short and in the field, and, with another year's experience, will undoubtedly go up. He is fast on the bases and seldom fails to swipe a base if he gets on.

* * *

Pitcher Day, of the Thomasville team, has been given another name. Handsome has given away to Stendy. He has won so many close games that fans take his victories as a matter of fact.

* * *

According to the dope furnished by each member of the Empire six teams are going to finish first when the season ends August 27. If the teams don't quit getting bunched around first place it may be necessary to play off a tie for first place. Maybe such a game would not be interesting?

* * *

Of all the dope floating around in the Empire there is but one settled fact—whichever team wins the second half of the season will have to play some baseball to nose Valdosta out of the rag. It is possible Valdosta will win the second season, too—but hardly probable the way the team is playing just now.

Harry Glenn Saucer Favorite
25-Mile Grind Friday Night

HARRY GLENN is the most popular rider at Jack Prince's Motordrome these days. The wonderful improvement the local lad has made in the last few weeks has earned him the plaudits of every "bug." Last night Harry was at his best, and as a result he was given a big hand every time he showed up.

Harry won another match race, this time leading Billy Shields home in two straight heats of two miles each. And Harry made a wonderful showing in the ten-mile race also. Although he finished third, he would surely have copped first honors had the finish line been 25 yards farther off.

Harry took the pace most of the way. But he rode a heady race and figured to come through in the final sprint. On the last lap he gave his "boat" a shot of "oilzum" and drew up on Renel and Richards fast and sure, but he started his spurt just about one second too late. The finish was Renel, first; Richards, second; Glenn, third. A blanket would have covered the entire trio at the finish, however.

The next race meet will be Friday night, a 25-mile event, with ten starters, being the feature.

Following is the summary of the races held last night.

Motordrome Purse.

Heats, 1 mile; finals, 2 miles.

First Heat—Harry Swartz, first; Billy Shields, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Tex Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Final—Jock McNeil, first; Tex Richards, second. Time—1:25 1-5.

Special Match Race.

Harry Glenn defeated Billy Shields in two straight two-mile heats. Time—1:31 3-5, 1:31.

Atlanta Sweepstakes.

Heats, 1 mile; final, 10 miles.

First Heat—Tex Richards, first; Morty Graves, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Harry Glenn, first; Georges Renel, second. Time—45 seconds.

Final—George Renel, first; Tex Richards, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time—7:22.

SAVANNAH CLUB RECALLS REILLY FROM AMERICUS

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 6.—By exercising optional rights, the Savannah Baseball Association has recalled Infielder Reilly, of the Americus club in the Empire State League, to relieve Zimmerman at second base. Owing to the terrible slump with which Zimmerman has been suffering, both in fielding and in batting, because of ill health, he has been suspended from the Indian crew temporarily. If Reilly, who was with Savannah during the early part of the season, makes good, Zimmerman will not be played again this season.

Reilly reported for duty upon the return of the Lipemen from Albany. He is easily the best player in the Empire League. He has batted at a steady clip of never less than .355 all season; has played at second, short, third base and in the outfield, and has taken care of each of these several jobs with success.

The Largest Diamond

The most valuable gems, among which there are some exceeding 100 carats in weight, are generally owned by royal families or treasured by governments as state jewels. One of the largest diamonds ever found is the Koh-i-noor and is owned by the royal family of England. Originally it is said to have weighed 794 carats, but it was reduced to its present size of 102 3-4 carats by repeated cutting. According to legend, it was found in England long before the Christian era, and, after having been handed down through a long line of Indian Princes, it was seized during the British invasion of the Punjab and was taken to England. Probably the largest diamond found in recent years is the DeBeers diamond, weighing 225 carats.

Realty Convention Comes to Atlanta, Thinks S. B. Turman

First Delegate Returns Home—Widening for Mayson and Turner Ferry Road—Business Good.

S. B. Turman, of the real estate firm of Turman, Black & Calhoun, has returned from the convention of real estate men at Winnipeg and expresses the belief that the election of Charles P. Glover to the vice presidency of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges will mean that Atlanta will land the ninth annual convention of realty men in 1916.

"Harris G. White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, presented Atlanta's invitation," declared Mr. Turman, "and many of the delegates told us that they would gladly support Atlanta. Most of these were Southern and Western delegates, the former pledging their support on account of loyalty to a sister city and the latter desiring to come because most of them had never been to this section before. Winnipeg is also with us.

"I am confident that we will win the convention. I left Winnipeg for Duluth a day before the adjournment of the convention and don't know whether or not Memphis invited the realty men.

"We had a great convention and I was very much pleased over the work of the national association."

Mr. White and Mr. Glover are returning to Atlanta by steamer and are expected to arrive Sunday or Monday.

County Commissioners Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of County Commissioners in the Thrower Building Wednesday proved to be of considerable interest in real estate circles. Four or five delegations of property owners, probably 100 people in all, appeared to present various petitions for improvements.

The board voted to widen the Mayson and Turner Ferry road for a distance of about two miles in the Center Hill section, and to extend Hemphill avenue from the waterworks station to Pace's Ferry road. The former was already on the summer program. A large delegation of Center Hill residents appeared. The latter is considered an important work because of the amount of territory opened up.

Plans for resurfacing several city streets were also presented.

Work has piled up on the board, due to the fact that Chairman Smith has been away on a vacation, and the further fact that accumulated business of the past month was brought before the commissioners.

Peachtree Interest Sold.

Clarence Knowles has bought from Paul Goldsmith an undivided one-third interest in a 100 by 562 foot lot on Peachtree road, 640 feet northeast of Piedmont avenue, for $1,750, or at the rate of $53 a front foot. Mr. Goldsmith sold another third to Bryan M. Grant May 31, 1912, and is keeping the remaining third for himself.

Sees Good Times Ahead.

Gid Hanna, the well-known real estate trader from Oakland City, has returned from a trip to Gwinnett and Rockdale Counties, and declares that crop conditions are the best he has ever seen. "With a fine crop and plenty of Government money to move it," asserted Mr. Hanna, "I can see nothing but great activity this fall in all lines of business. Secretary McAdoo seems to have smoked out the people who are holding money, and I look for normal conditions in local real estate. Everything points that way."

Plans for Two Houses.

A. J. & H. F. West have completed plans for two 2-story frame residences on the west side of Williams street, near West Tenth street, to cost $8,000 each. This neighborhood has been opened up in the last few years and now has a number of attractive homes.

Lakewood for Exposition.

Charles I. Branan and others of the local Park Board have a plan for using Lakewood for future expositions or fairs that it may be deemed advisable to hold. The question came up before the Park Board at its monthly meeting Tuesday at the City Hall, when Lakewood concessions were considered. The members of the board seemed to be of the opinion that no further privileges should be sold until it was decided whether or not the park could be profitably used for exposition purposes.

Since Piedmont Park was divested of its exposition trimmings the city has had no place save Lakewood to hold fairs.

Attractive New Building Type.

A new type of business building has appeared in Atlanta, and it is proving beneficial to tenants who want short term leases on vacant central property. This is a low steel affair of moderate cost that presents the appearance of a permanent structure, yet which can be moved on short notice. Investors are managing to get a rental of $200 a month out of a string of these shops in downtown districts.

Four such buildings have been erected at the northeast corner of Edgewood avenue and Equitable place by Andrew Gust, who purchased them from local representatives of portable steel shops. Mr. Gust has leased two compartments and expects to announce more leases shortly. Each store occupies a frontage of about 20 feet, and is 20 to 25 feet deep.

RATE ORDER KILLS OLD 'BASING' PLAN

Ruling on Georgia Cases Necessitates Change in All Southeastern Schedules.

Readjustment of all rates in the territory south of the Potomac River and east of the Mississippi will be necessary to conform to the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling giving lower freights to LaGrange, Vienna and Carrollton, according to Watkins & Latimer, attorneys in the case.

The old basing point system, except as applied to ports and to large cities, is doomed under this decisions, they say, although the Commission passed only on the three cases at hand.

Under the old system certain small towns, usually at the head of relatively unimportant rivers, have been made basing points. Rates to other towns of the same size, equidistant or nearer the Ohio River crossings or the large cities in Southeastern territory, have been given the through rate to these points, plus the local from the favored town.

The Commission holds that there is no real reason for giving such places as Cedartown, Ga., through rates, and denying them to such towns as Vienna, Carrollton and LaGrange.

The immediate result, it is believed, will be wider scattering of the small jobbing houses, and more business for the large jobbing houses in the principal cities. The saving in freights is estimated at $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 yearly.

The Commission had the case under advisement from November 11, 1911, until August 4, 1913.

2 SUSPECTS HELD IN TRAIN ROBBERY

Prisoners at Birmingham Answer Descriptions Given by Mail Clerks Held Up.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 6.—Two suspects whom police believe had a hand in the robbery of the mail car on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad between Calera and Birmingham last night are being questioned at police headquarters. They answer descriptions given by mail clerks, but both strenuously deny their guilt.

Chief of Police Bodeker, of this city, where the men made their escape from the train, has detailed every available detective on the force to be on the lookout for the robbers, the local men being augmented by several railroad detectives. Chief Bodeker says the robbery undoubtedly was the work of professionals. No estimate of the loss by looting of registered mail pouches is yet available.

Express company detectives are working on the theory that the robbery was committed by men who are acquainted with operations of trains on the L. & N. and also with work in mail cars. Descriptions furnished by men who were in the car at the time of the robbery indicate that the robbers were young white men. Their masks extended from face to waist. However, in the breeze at times the features of the robbers were seen. No doubt is expressed by detectives that the men who did the work are residents of or have headquarters in Birmingham.

After the engine of the train had taken water at a tank this side of Calera the robbers boarded the mail car. Then knowing there was no stop between Calera and Birmingham, 30 miles, they went to work rifling the registered mail. At Fourteenth street, four blocks from the passenger station here, the robbers squeezed the airbrake, brought the train to a stop and jumped off. Engineer Wissenger then found the mail clerks handcuffed and tied up.

Wins Plea Against Being Tried on 13th

Mrs. Nellie Wood, who runs a store in Ormewood Park, will be tried in police court on August 14 for the reason that she objects strenuously to being tried on the 13th.

Mrs. Wood is charged with disorderly conduct, and, when her case was called Tuesday afternoon, a postponement was granted. Recorder Pro Tem Preston set the case for the 13th, but the young woman protested vigorously. She frankly told the Recorder she was "very superstitious." Any other date would suit, she said.

Accused Assailants Of Farmer Give Up

CORDELE, Aug. 6.—After having eluded officers for more than a week, Harley Blanchard and John Warren, who are alleged to have waylaid Ambrose Powell, a farmer, when, he claims, he was seriously cut by Blanchard, have surrendered to the Sheriff. They were released under bonds of $500, on the charge of assault with intent to murder.

There is now a good chance of Powell's recovery.

NAVAL STORES OPERATORS PLAN TO CURTAIL OUTPUT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 6.—Georgia naval stores operators will join in the general plan for the curtailment of the output to the end that prices may be raised to a living figure. A resolution has been adopted calling upon the producers to stop chipping on August 15, which would shorten the season two months, and the output reduced 25 per cent.

This action is preliminary to a general meeting of all operators to take place in Jacksonville Friday. It is proposed to lessen the output half a million barrels and wipe out the excess of rosins carried over from previous years.

Seven Seek Cordele Postmaster's Place

CORDELE, Aug. 6.—That F. G. Boatright, postmaster at Cordele, who was requested several days ago by Postmaster General Burleson to resign because of alleged negligence, will decline to comply with this request is certain.

Seven applicants for the postmastership are actively at work soliciting indorsements, many letters having been sent to Congressman Charles R. Crisp, of the Third District, who will make the recommendation. The appointment is expected to be made within a short time.

MISCELLANEOUS—Georgia cane syrup 37c, axle grease $1.75, soda crackers 7¼c pound, lemon crackers 8c, oyster 7c, tomatoes (two pounds) $1.65 case, (three pounds) $2.25, navy beans $3.25, Lima beans 7½c, shredded biscuit $3.60, rolled oats $3.90 per case, grits (bags) $2.40, pink salmon $7, cocoa 38c, roast beef $3.80, syrup 30c per gallon, Sterling ball potash $3.30 per case, soap $1.60@4 per case, Rumford baking powder $2.50 per case.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

High Cables and Dry Weather Stimulate Buying and Cause Uneasiness Among Bears.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Influenced by steady cables and an absence of rain in Texas, the cotton market opened firm to-day, with first prices at a net advance of 3 to 7 points from last night's close. In view of yesterday's break the short interest was a little nervous. This, coupled with private advices from Texas stating, notwithstanding last week's rains, more moisture is need over the Southwestern belt, resulting in prices soaring some 2 to 8 points from the initial level. The selling was very light and scattered. Shorts were good buyers. Spot interests also bought.

During the forenoon the market was steady on buying on bullish advice from Theodore Price on high temperatures in Oklahoma. High temperature there is usually the forerunner of rain.

There were some telegrams in circulation from the belt stating that there was some deterioration going on, caused by dry weather and high temperatures. Later when the noon weather report was posted, showing extremely high temperatures in the Western belt in many points stimulated the buying and caused more uneasiness among the bear forces.

The weather map complete indicates increasing cloudiness in the Northwestern quarter of the cotton belt; cooler, possibly some showers in Northwest Texas. Part cloudy over rest of the belt, except cloudy with probably some showers in the Gulf coast districts. Gulf disturbance is unchanged in position, but is likely to move West in a few days and give prospects for precipitation in Southern Texas.

While sentiment is generally bearish there is a feeling that higher prices may be expected, just now in the face of the above conditions. Whether the advance will be sustained or not depends on weather conditions over the next few days. The bulls contend that another week of dry weather in the West will cause serious damage and a stampede will follow.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Liverpool came in about 2 points better than due on futures to-day, but quotes spots 3 points lower and sales 6,000 bales.

The weather map shows cloudy in Oklahoma and East Tennessee, part cloudy in the Atlantics, fair in rest of the belt. Indications are for increasing cloudiness; cooler weather with possibly some showers in the Northwestern quarter, part cloudy in rest of the belt, except over the Gulf districts.

The market advanced nearly 10 points in the early trading, the buying being based on high temperatures in Oklahoma, which State shows an average of 104 degrees, and absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma. Trading, however, is small and support timid, in the fear of hedge selling, while crop prospects in Oklahoma are declining, the greater part of Texas needs relief from the drouth last week, and the danger of damage there is not yet being considered seriously. Weather and crop conditions in the Central and Eastern States are generally accepted as good.

Reports from New York and advices from there to buy would indicate the work for a reaction, which was spoiled by the good rains in central Texas during the last three days of the past week, d been resumed on the same basis of threatened drouth in the Western States.

The market held the early gain well and is steady around 11.18 for October.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The disturbance over the Upper Mississippi Valley will emove eastward, causing showers to-night or Thursday at most places in the Lake Region, the Ohio Valley and the Atlantic States. The temperature will not change decidedly in the region east of the Mississippi River, although the weather will be somewhat cooler in the Lake Region Thursday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Thursday:

Georgia—Unsettled, showers to-night or Thursday.

Virginia—Showers to-night or Thursday; warmer in west portion to-night.

North and South Carolina and Florida—Unsettled, showers to-night or Thursday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Generally fair except showers in extreme south portions to-night or Thursday.

Tennessee—Unsettled, probably showers in east portion to-night or Thursday; warmer in north portion to-night.

Louisiana and Texas—Fair to-night and Thursday.

COTTON GOSSIP

There were rumors that freight room had been engaged for August shipment from New York stock. Liverpool is understood to be long of August and to own a good bit of the local stock according to Pearsall's.

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce says: "Cotton goods retailers are optimistic concerning fall trade, and many of them are now operating in the local market. Jobbers are asking for shipment at once of all goods due September 1, with requests that new business be booked for September delivery of a volume sufficient to take care of the goods anticipated for immediate shipment."

* * *

Riordan has been an enormous seller of new crops during the last few days. It was believed that he sold for customers of Pell. Last week Riordan's buying was a feature.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy over Oklahoma and east Tennessee; part cloudy to fair over the Atlantics. Fair over rest of the belt. No rain in the West; some nice rains in North Carolina and a few light showers in Georgia. Gulf disturbance formation still there; should move westward in a few days and give prospects of precipitation over south Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool's opening after the holidays was significantly low. Bulls had hoped that foreign spinners would show some concern over the Bureau condition figures promulgated Friday last when the Liverpool market began business yesterday. But they did nothing of the kind; on the contrary, absence of demand for forward cotton proved an active bearish factor. Students of the staple say there can be no question as to the existence of a large forward requirement. Why, then, is demand lacking now, when, under normal conditions, as in ordinary years, consumers cover their fall, winter and spring requirements, exporters busily engage in catering into forward commitments, the future markets supply the hedges and the steamships sell ocean freight room?

"To the man who searches for the cause behind every effect the answer comes easy. It is Washington's threat of prohibitive legislation. The effect of this threat is twofold, and its ramifications are both subtle and obvious. Meanwhile, the American rings are short, the volume of business light and the trade in suspense."

* * *

There were no rains shown in the weather map, which brought out a fair amount of buying early. The selling was very much scattered. Weld was principal buyer. There were some unfavorable private reports being received this morning.

Liverpool cables: "Market good on reports of drouth damage in Texas. Oklahoma. Manchester reports poor."

* * *

Map indicates cooler with some precipitation coming in from the Central grain States.

* * *

Austin, Texas, wires: "Farmers in town yesterday complaining of plant shedding and recent rains insufficient."

IRREGULARITY IN PRICE OF STOCKS

Powerful Interests Are Friendly to Constructive Side of Prices. Undertone Firm.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Trading was active at the opening of the stock market to-day, but the list was irregular and quotations showed a considerable division of sentiment. California Petroleum was again under pressure, declining ⅝ to 18½, while Canadian Pacific sustained the same amount of loss. Lehigh Valley sold off ¾, but rallied and recovered most of its decline.

United States Steel common began at 61⅛ for the loss of ½, but within half an hour was selling around 61⅝.

Illinois Central and Union Pacific showed firmness, each advancing ⅜. Later both shaded. Great Northern preferred advanced ½. American Smelting, after selling unchanged, shaded ¼. Among the other losses were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; New Haven, ¾; Anaconda Copper, ⅛; and Chio Copper, ¼.

Western Union Telegraph spurted, gaining a point. Southern Pacific, Reading and Northern Pacific advanced.

The curb was steady. Americans in London were firm on cablegrams placing a better construction on the United States montetary situation.

"Looks as if the advance in stocks would continue with the usual reactions that we generally have in a bull market. Believe that stocks should be bought on fair reactions, as the character of the buying this week is exceptionally good, and would indicate that powerful interests are friendly to the constructive side of prices.

"Sentiment seems to be more optimistic, public participation is increasing and general conditions favor a higher level of prices.—Potter.

In the last half of the first hour the scarcity of many issues became so pronounced as to cause a sudden stampede of shorts. Union Pacific led a brisk upward movement, advancing nearly 2 points to 152¼, while substantial fractional gains were noted in Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Reading, Great Northern preferred and Steel common.

In the late forenoon the covering movement was completed and fractional recessions were recorded throughout the list. The tone at the end of the second hour was steady.

Time money is loaning and renewing at 2¼ per cent.

STOCK GOSSIP

The stock market exhibited considerable strength yesterday. Public participation is increasing and stocks have every appearance of selling higher.

* * *

"I am bullish on the general situation and firmly believe all securities of merit will apreciate in value before the first of September, on the other hand, I would keep long of the leaders like Union Pacific, United States Steel and A. C. P."—G. D. Potter.

Grain Notes

Dry and hot weather.

* * *

The Missouri State report on corn was not as bad as expected.

* * *

Trading in all grains was of enormous volume yesterday. Everybody wanted to sell on reported cooler weather over the larger portion of the grain region. The selling seemed to be profit taking by holders, who were tired of waiting for the anticipated lower temperatures and rains. Offerings were readily absorbed by strong sources. Along toward the close corn led in excitement and strength, but failed to retrieve the early decline.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Wheat has had a break of 3¼c from Monday's high price and the trade seems more bearish because of the big receipts, anticipation of good showing by the Government report Friday, and a lessening of the export demand and the decline in cash premiums. It would not be surprising to see prices drag some lower. What the corn market will do to-day depends on how much rain is shown on the map. With good soaking rains over the belt a sharp break is anticipated, but with only light showers and high temperatures, traders look for prices to hold around present levels and possibly go a little higher."

* * *

Nicolet, of The Kansas City Star, says that Kansas will have one of the smallest corn crops this year ever produced.

* * *

It is intimated that stop-loss orders are heavy in all speculative corn markets, and that a decline of 1½c or so would uncover many. Chicago people report country houses buying, with orders accompanied by sensational crop news.

* * *

John Inglis wired Logan & Bryan: "Southeastern Nebraska, with exception of some of the bottoms, all corn suffering and losing ground. Considerable acreage just tasseling, for which some hopes are entertained, is fast losing, as tasseling period is just when rain is most needed."

* * *

Yields of 739,730,000 bushels of wheat, 2,800,000,000 bushels of corn, 1,003,266,000 bushels of oats and 14,702,000 bales of cotton were estimated for this season in the annual crop report of the Continental and Commercial National Bank made public to-day. Other yields were estimated. Rye 36,854,000 bushels, barley 200,527,000 bushels and hay 66,610,000 tons. The increase in the wheat yield was estimated at 9,000,000 bushels over last year's crop. This is 170,000,000 bushels more than the United States can use in one year.

* * *

Grain region forecast: Illinois cloudy, with showers in north and central portions to-night or Thursday; cooler. Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, showers to-night or Thursday and cooler; Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan, generally fair; Iowa probably light showers to-night or Thursday; Dakotas, cloudy to-night and Thursday; warmer.

* * *

Corn was sold on reports of rains west of the river.

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier Co. says: "Wheat—The weather in the Northwest is clear with seasonable temperatures. Local sentiment is very bearish and the volume of new buying limited. Prices look as though they would drag lower, but the market has had a sharp break since Monday, and we do not care to press short sales on this decline.

"Corn—The weather map shows very light scattered showers at a few points in Nebraska and Iowa through central Illinois. There was a good deal of short corn put out yesterday by locals in anticipation of rains, which is likely to be covered to-day.

"Oats—The volume of trade is lighter, and there has been a good deal of evening-up during the past few days. Offerings of the crop are moderate, but the demand is rather light. Prices will be influenced by wheat and corn.

"Provisions—Liquidation in provisions seems to have been quite thorough again and there was a good class of buying on yesterday's rally."

* * *

From the action of both wheat and corn this morning it looks as though liquidation had been pretty thorough yesterday, and the general belief is that the market will rule higher.

* * *

Price Current estimates corn crop at 2,652,000 bushels, and oats crop at 878,000,000 bushels.

* * *

Butts Adds 5,000 Acres for Taxation

JACKSON, Aug. 6.—The tax returns of Butts County for 1913 amount to $2,243,000, as against $2,191,000 in 1912, a gain of $52,000. But for an error of $22,000 in last year's digest the increase would have been $75,000.

The number of acres of land returned for taxation jumped from 108,000 last year to 113,000 this year, a gain of 5,000. There are still several thousand acres of land in the county not been returned for taxation.

WHEAT HIGHER ON STRENGTH IN CORN

Shorts Struggle for All Options on Report of a Strong South Wind Cooking Vegetation.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The wheat market showed a decline of ⅜ to ½c right at the opening this morning on weaker cables, favorable weather in Russia, some relief from dry conditions in Australia and Argentina, and generally good reports regarding the quality and yield of wheat in Europe. Offerings of European wheat were more liberal and the weather in our own Northwest, as well as Canada, was generally favorable. On the break established the buying element became quite active and values were soon brought back to the resting spots of yesterday, and in some cases slight gains were shown. Northwestern receipts were again light, as was also the case at Winnipeg.

The corn market acted in much the same manner as wheat during the first half of the day, a decline equal to that shown in wheat being recorded only to recover and advance to levels above those ruling at the close of yesterday. Weather over parts of the corn belt was unsettled and rains were reported in a few places. These, however, were in unimportant corn producing sections and of little help to the bears in consequence.

Oats showed a loss of about ⅜ to ½ at the opening, but this market failed to follow the recoveries shown by wheat and corn.

There was a slow trade in hog products during the first half hour, with values showing slight recessions in sympathy with the lower hog market at the yards.

Britain's Sordid Attitude to the Panama Exposition.

Great Britain's refusal to take part in the Panama Canal Exposition of 1915 may be accepted in sorrow rather than in anger—sorrow that the government of so great an empire should have sunk into such a narrow rut of parochial politics that for the sake of a ha'porth of self-advantage it would sacrifice its share in the nobler spirit of rejoicing in a world's great work well done.

Here, then, is the childish retort to the refusal of our Government to submit to arbitration the dispute about the canal tolls—"We won't play in your yard."

Of the dispute itself this newspaper has already on many occasions expressed its emphatic views. Based on a shadowy protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, in which there was never any practical reality, Great Britain undertakes, under the letter of certain treaties made at a time when the idea of a canal at Panama was not dreamed of, to tell the United States that it can not send its own coast-wise traffic at a lower rate than foreign ocean traffic through a canal every dollar of whose vast cost it has itself paid for and which runs through territory entirely under the American flag!

In practical operation the amount involved on the ocean-going traffic of foreign ships would admittedly be so small that the raising of a dispute about it at all by any foreign government becomes a shining example of "hot potato" stand diplomacy.

From a government that acquired the Suez Canal through the devious, if forceful, methods Great Britain employed—always, of course, strictly observing every honorable obligation to its neighbors from the purely and curious British viewpoint—the Panama protest was simply an astonishing exhibition of sordid and envious greed.

It would be difficult to believe that such a decision as this by Great Britain represented anything more than the clamor of its Tory press—the kind of press that a day or two ago exploited an article calling for the abolition in tennis of the overhand service which enabled McLoughlin to win back the Davis cup—if it were not for the fact that the government is so largely radical in its tone. It is difficult, even with that in mind, to believe that this decision about the San Francisco fair can possibly represent general British sentiment toward America.

Americans, generally speaking, are so broad-minded that they do not want fully to realize that it may be only "hands across the sea" when there is something substantial in Uncle Sam's. They know full well that the friendship that has to be bought is not worth paying for. John Bull is surely not so poverty-stricken that he must haggle over a penny with a friend. This show of petty temper is, alas, a deplorable betrayal of a mean spirit.

And to base his position on a high-sounding principle is for John Bull to pose on a pedestal of lofty self-righteousness which history never erected for him, and which would topple if tapped with even a toy hammer of truth.

But, if great nations can sometimes be small, smaller nations can frequently be big. Twenty-two, including even Japan, have agreed to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and its success and interest can not now be materially impaired. The canal itself, the greatest wonder of the world wrought by man, will be open, and ships of all nations, even those of Great Britain, will be passing through it on their voyages over the new trade routes of the oceans, opening up new countries and new enterprises and new profits for all the peoples of the earth to share—among them Great Britain, and not the least.

California and Our Merchant Marine.

California is advancing a wholesome movement to inaugurate a merchant marine with State money, if a laggard Government continues to neglect this truly American policy.

There is a bill in the California Legislature to appoint a board of five merchant marine commissioners—one from the resident shipbuilders, one from the resident shipowners, one from the shippers of domestic goods, one from the consignees of foreign goods and one from the Sailers' Union of the Pacific. This board shall have authority from the State to pay 5 per cent per annum upon one-half the building cost of ships engaged in foreign and domestic commerce from California ports and to help on the payment of the difference between building and operating such American-built ships with American workmen and American officers and the cost of building and operating with foreign workmen and officers. The State's subsidy is to cease if ever the National Government shall aid these ships with a subsidy.

It is plain to see that California, progressive and enterprising among American States, realizes the necessity of a domestic merchant marine, and that California is willing to put her hands in her pockets and help to build such a merchant marine with heroic liberality. It is also substantially evident that California believes a merchant marine will richly repay the original cost.

The California bill will help to point the necessity in our commerce, and will, it is hoped, inspire the Government to its duty.

Somebody has to make a start in our merchant marine. Congress and the Administration seem laggard and indifferent or incapable.

If our maritime States are brave enough and public-spirited enough to make this beginning, the appealing figures are at hand to inspire them, and the example of California may be the object lesson needed to set on foot the greatest and most essential commercial policy of our country.

Mysteries of Science and Nature.

With the Aid of Photography and Ultra-Violet Microscope Man's Power of Vision Is Beginning to Rival That of Insects.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

MAN is beginning to add to his senses. If he has not discovered new ones, he has extended the range of some of those which he already possesses. When this process has been continued for a few hundred, or a few thousand, years, the human race may find that it has got upon a new level, from which it can penetrate much farther and much deeper in the wonders of the universe.

Beginning to See.

Among other things, man is beginning, under the guidance of science, to see, in a roundabout way, with the eyes of insects.

To understand this, let us first consider how we see with our natural power of vision.

Our range of sight is strictly confined within the limits of waves of light, varying in length from about 1-39,000th to about 1-57,000th of an inch. The longest of these waves produces in our brains the impression of red, and the shortest the impression of violet. The other principal colors (orange, yellow, blue and indigo) are produced by intermediate wave-lengths, each color having its own characteristic waves.

If an object reflects light of only one of these colors it assumes the hue of that color; if it reflects them all equally, it appears white, because a combination of the primary colors produces the impression of white.

But there are, in reality, enormous numbers of light waves which are longer than the longest that affect our sense of vision, and also enormous numbers that are shorter than the shortest that we can see. In either case these waves, which lie beyond one end or the other of what is called the "visible spectrum" of light, are, except for scientific devices, totally insensible to us.

Now, it has been found that certain insects, particularly ants, can perceive light waves that are shorter than 1-57,000th of an inch, which is the lower limit for human eyes.

In other words, the ant can "see" a color that lies outside the violet. If the ant has a name for this "ultra-violet" color, we are not likely to find it out.

More than that, the ant (if it possesses microscopic powers) may be able to see objects that are so minute that a "forty-billion-power" microscope would be unable to reveal them to us, because they are smaller than the smallest light wave that lies within our range. An object as small as that would be unable to reflect perfectly a wave of violet light, and consequently no amount of direct magnification would be able to bring it clearly within the limits of sight for us.

What Ant Perceives.

But right here the magic power of photography comes to our aid and enables us to penetrate into this world of the infinitely minute, which the insects may be supposed to have regarded as their exclusive and inviolable domain.

Photography is able to do this because the sensitive plate or film is affected by those same ultra-violet waves that the ant perceives.

Suppose, then, that an object is so small that it can not reflect the violet waves, but can reflect the smaller ultra-violet ones. It is only necessary to make a photograph of it, whereupon the ultra-violet waves that it reflects will produce a chemical change in the sensitive surface of the photographic plate or film and impress an image there, which image may be magnified at will. This is the principle of the "ultra-violet microscope."

There is another way in which man has recently extended his range of vision indirectly, deep into the secrets of the infinitely minute. It has been done by the aid of what is called the "ultra-microscope." This depends for its action upon the fact that a minute object produces a scattering of the rays of light that fall upon it. It surrounds itself with a kind of aureole, as may be noticed when a beam of sunlight enters a dusty room, causing millions of previously invisible floating particles to glow like infinitesimal stars.

Light Reveals Objects.

Suppose that an object of this kind, too small to be seen by direct microscope examination, yet large enough to reflect the light waves that lie within our range, is placed under powerful lenses, in a beam of light so arranged that it does not pour directly into the eye of the observer. It will scatter about itself enough light not only to betray its presence but even in some cases to reveal its shape.

But doubtless we have only just begun to find out the power of the mind by its inventions to extend the range of our senses.

: The Cowboy's Creed :

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the evening paper," said my Arizona friend,
"How a feller was shook by his Missus, and brung her life to an end.
That'll be lots to pity the feller, and say that it served her right,
And I ain't a-setting in judgment, nor takin' up no one's fight.
But I never could shoot a rabbit, out whar rabbits is thick,
And I figger that shootin' a lady is a similar kind o' trick.
Rabbits and ladies and babies—they can't shoot back, you see,
And the guy was a cur that murdered her!" said Phoenix Phil to me.

"You remember the gal out in Phoenix," said my Arizona friend.
"You remember the home she made me, and the dream that had to end.
I never was able to figger, when I seen I was in the lurch,
How she left my kind of a feller for the rat she met at a church.
But I wasn't no ideal husband; I was always fast and wild,
And she wanted a feller with manners and his shirt all proper biled.
I heard that he made her happy, so I figgered I'd let her be,
Which is harder sometimes than murder," said Phoenix Phil to me.

Taking Inventory

Mothers Should Not Close Their Eyes to the Defects of Their Offspring, but Should Correct Them So That in Later Life the Children Will Not Turn Out Badly.

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY now and then every business man goes carefully over his possessions, listing, appraising, advancing and depreciating their worth and valuing them by the market standards of the day. He calls this taking stock. When he is through and has balanced his ledgers, he knows precisely where he stands—what he has to hope and what to fear, where he may fight and where he must hedge.

I have often thought that there would be less failure in the world and fewer of us would come to spiritual bankruptcy if we would follow the same plan and occasionally sit down and take stock of ourselves mentally, morally and physically. It is human and comfortable to think we possess all graces and virtues and charms, but it isn't true any more than it would be for the cross-roads country store merchant to imagine himself a Wanamaker.

Why shouldn't an ugly woman, for instance, face the music and calmly take an inventory of the beauty that she lacks?

Nobody will deny that the woman who is born beautiful draws the prize package in the lottery of life, but she doesn't get everything. There is tact and charm of manner and grace, and the woman who has these has a magic veil that hides a homely face and makes it seem beautiful to those who come in contact with her. Moreover, while beauty must come by nature, these qualities may be cultivated.

It Lies With Every Woman To Be Considerate of Others.

It lies with every woman to learn a delicate consideration for the feelings of others, to acquire the art of listening with interest and to so improve her mind she will always be the most delightful and intelligent of companions. And when she can do these things she needn't worry much about the size of her nose or whether her mouth is cut bias or straight.

It seems a pity, too, doesn't it, that people don't oftener take stock of their children and see just what they are and what might be made out of them? Of course, it's delightful to think that all of our little Sallies and Johnnies and Tommies are geniuses, but our pleasure in the illusion is apt to be a little marred by the subsequent disappointment that we might so easily have saved ourselves if only we had looked at them as they were, instead of as we wished them to be.

We should think a merchant crazy if he had a store full of calico, and homespun, and pots, and kettles, and pans, and in taking stock he listed them as point lace and diamonds and pictures. Yet that is just exactly what we are doing with our children. We are calling commonplace and ordinary qualities by fine names. We won't see them as they are and make the best of them on that basis. We are so determined on raising up geniuses, instead of good business men and citizens, that now and then we convert them into hoodlums and idiots.

Why shouldn't a mother look her own children over just as she does her neighbors' and size up their strength and weakness? She should, at least, then be able to work out the problem of raising them with some sort of knowledge as a foundation and guide, instead of going at it purely as guesswork. She won't do it, however. It takes a courage to look things in the face that she doesn't possess. She won't admit that this child is feeble-minded or that one is dull, and so she deprives them of the marvelous help that modern education can give along these lines.

She shuts her eyes to the fact that Johnny is bowlegged and Tommy is knock-kneed, and she dooms them to go through life a butt for the ridicule of their acquaintances, when the defect could be so easily remedied while they are children. She takes no pains to help the ugly girl correct her awkwardness and learn the things that would make up for her lack of beauty. Even her efforts to help her children are half the time atrocious mistakes, because she has never taken stock and doesn't know what she has on hand to work with.

Life Has Given Very Few All That They Desired.

Every now and then some unhappy and tearful wife comes to me with the tale of her troubles. She is dissatisfied, discontented, disgruntled. Sometimes she is not appreciated, sometimes her heart is hurt by cold treatment, sometimes she feels that she made a mistake in marrying and yearns for a career out in the world. I don't know any remedy as good for such a state of affairs as for the woman to sit calmly down and take stock of her possesions.

Perhaps life hasn't given her all she wanted. Most of the rest of us are in the same fix. Very likely she hasn't gotten all the happiness she expected out of her marriage. Not many dreams come true. What she needs to do is to count up the things she has got and see how she can do a better business and get more happiness and good out of the things she has.

She has a good home, plenty to eat and wear, a respectable position in society, perhaps little children, certainly liberty to enjoy herself in many ways, and a settled freedom from the cares and anxieties that beset many other women. No woman who has got that many goods on her shelves has any right to declare herself a bankrupt in happiness.

If we took stock of ourselves oftener, wouldn't we blame ourselves more for many of the failures of life and other people less? Our husbands no longer show us the attentions that they did when they were our sweethearts and we cry out that marriage is a failure. Do we take as much pains to please the husband as we did the lover?

Mothers Are to Blame if Children Turn Out Badly.

Our children are rude and ill-mannered, and when they grow up they turn out badly. Whose fault but the mothers who raised them? We have no friends. Do we ever go out of our way to make friends or to show love and kindness to any human being? We, who are working women, complain we are ill paid. Are we doing good work that is worth good money? Let's take stock of what we are giving others before we condemn them too severely.

When merchants overhaul their goods there are certain things that they cast aside as worthless. These are old stock. Things outgrown, out of date. Wouldn't it be a good idea to imitate them in that, too? Let's throw away our old prejudices, our antiquated ideas, our moth-eaten fads. They are old stock. We are better off without them.

CONLEY SWEARS FRANK HID PURSE

Sweeper's Grilling Ends After 15½ Hours, His Main Story Unshaken

FILIBUSTER BEATS DRY FORCES

Resolution to Report the Hixon-Searcy Liquor Bill Defeated. Tax Plot Charged.

The filibuster in the House against the resolution of Kidd, of Baker, which instructed the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill for action, and by which Wohlwender, of Muscogee, consumed the entire time of the House Tuesday, came to an end Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with victory resting with the forces against the bill.

In response to a point of order raised by Stewart, of Coffee, Speaker Burwell ruled that Kidd's resolution was not in order for consideration Wednesday, and the efforts of the temperance forces to force a hearing on the bill were therefore in vain.

The point raised by Mr. Stewart was that, inasmuch as the resolution was introduced Tuesday and specifically called upon the Temperance Committee to report the bill back "to-morrow," it was asking the committee to perform a physical impossibility, and was therefore not in order.

Wright Objects to Decision.

Wright, of Floyd, who is generally credited with being behind Mr. Kidd in the introduction of the resolution, protested vigorously against the desion of the Speaker.

"Doesn't the Speaker intend to hear those who favor this resolution?" he demanded.

"You are out of order," the Speaker replied. "The resolution has been ruled out of order, and is not now under discussion."

Representative Wohlwender, backed by Myrick and Shuptrine, of Chatham; Nunnally, of Floyd, and others of the anti-dry forces, appeared when the House convened to-day determined to continue the filibuster until Mr. Kidd consented to withdraw his resolution. This Mr. Kidd and the temperance cohorts absolutely refused to do.

Stewart Then Finds Loophole.

Conferences between the prohis and the antis were numerous, but barren of result, and it looked as though the filibuster would continue, with the anti-dry people holding the whip hand indefinitely, when Mr. Stewart found the loophole through which the resolution was riddled.

The effect of the resolution and the filibuster has been to draw the line sharply between the anti-dry and the temperance forces, and to smother the more important question of tax revision. The victory of the antis precludes the possibility of the Searcy bill getting a hearing at this session, inasmuch as the Rules Committee takes charge and no resolutions similar to the Kidd resolution can be introduced.

Claims Anti-Tax Plot.

Mr. Wohlwender, whose strong lungs and determination defeated the resolution, voiced the opinion Wednesday morning that the resolution was an outgrowth of the tax revision fight.

"Sheppard, of Sumter; Stovall, of Elbert, and the others who are fighting tax revision were behind the resolution," declared Mr. Wohlwender. "They hoped to get that bill brought out because they knew if the House once got busy on it no tax measures could be passed at this session."

'Wilson White' for Male Dress Rules.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—White is the proper color for men who want to be up-to-the-minute in their dress at the National Capital.

The tropical raiment was adopted by the President one day when the mercury was trying to hit the sky. The next day Secretary Bryan made his debut, and within 48 hours "Wilson white" was the fad. The material may be anything from silk to duck.

Bulgaria's Enemies Relent; Intercede For Conquered Ally

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 6.—Sympathy may yet prevent Bulgaria from losing all the spoils she won in the Turko-Balkan war. Premier Pasitch, of Servia, and Premier Venizelos, of Greece, to-day wired their respective sovereigns for permission to extend the Bulgarian frontier so as to include a big area of the territory in Northeastern Macedonia which was taken away from Turkey.

It had been the original intention of the Servians and Greeks to punish Bulgaria for the atrocities of her soldiers by refusing to allow the Bulgars to profit by the war.

So eloquently did the Bulgarian peace representatives plead their cause and so graphically did they paint the sufferings undergone by the Bulgarians in the war with Turkey to secure victory for the Balkan league that the Serb and Greek envoys relented.

Word by T. R. Worth Army Under Wilson, Says Gov. Johnson

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Criticism of the course of the Wilson Administration was contained in an address by Governor Hiram Johnson, who was the Vice Presidential candidate on the Progressive ticket last year, speaking at the first anniversary celebration of the Progressives.

"The National Administration has not come up to expectations," said Governor Johnson. "We have a foreign policy that is weak and vacillating. One word from Theodore Roosevelt is worth a whole army under Woodrow Wilson.

"We were shocked by the whitewashing of Ballinger by Taft. That differed in no essential from the whitewashing of McReynolds by Wilson."

This Is Comforting! Freezing at Big Bear, Snow in Yellowstone

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., Aug. 6.—Very chilly weather is reported at Big Bear, in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The minimum in the city of San Bernardino yesterday was 48 degrees, the lowest July record in many years.

HELENA, MONT., Aug. 6.—There was a heavy snowfall in the Yellowstone Park last night and the mountains in the vicinity of Livingston were white with new snow this morning.

Department Store In Shark's Stomach

VENICE, CAL., Aug. 6.—In a post-mortem operation performed on a shark eighteen feet long, which was cast up on the sands here, the fish was shown to be a collector of no little ability. Here's a list of the contents of the stomach:

Sugar bowl, silver, engraved Pacific Coast S. S. Co., steamer President.
Three corset steels, nearly new.
Dice box, gutta percha.
Baby's shoe.
Four undigested halibut and numerous small fish.

300 Factory Women Gamble on Baseball

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball pools, have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed has been held in bail by Magistrate Coward, having been charged with operating a pool.

Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games in Reed's place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost 25 cents each.

SAYS PASTOR TOOK 'HUSH' MONEY

Minister Accused of Accepting $1,500 From Own Brother, Who Was Friendly With Wife.

MACON, Aug. 6.—The Rev. E. T. Moore, a Baptist minister, at Andersonville, formerly of Macon, is charged by Attorney Oliver C. Hancock, in a suit brought in the city court of Americus, with extorting $1,500 from his own brother as a price for silence in court as to his brother's alleged intimacy with Mrs. Moore.

Last year Rev. Mr. Moore obtained a divorce from his wife in the Bibb Superior Court, after a hotly contested trial. He charged her with being unfaithful. One of the alleged co-respondents swore to improper relations with Mrs. Moore, who is a strikingly handsome woman of about 35 years. It is now charged that Rev. Mr. Moore found his own brother and Mrs. Moore in a compromising position and that he threatened his brother, who was about to be married, with exposure unless given $1,500.

Attorney Hancock alleges that he can prove the facts and the actual payment of the money.

This charge forms part of a suit brought for the recovery of a fee for legal services. Mr. Hancock claims that Rev. Mr. Moore has not only refused to pay him for services in procuring the divorce, but also borrowed $50 while the case was pending which he also refuses to repay.

Mrs. Moore now is living with her parents at Eufaula, Ala., and the two children are temporarily in her custody. Rev. Mr. Moore, while here, resided in the Mercer University community and was highly esteemed both as a man and a minister.

Trots and Tangos Boon to Chiropodist

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The turkey trot and the tango are to the chiropodists equal to the goose that laid the golden eggs, says Miss Ciara Houston, of Chicago, the "girl with the perfect foot." Miss Houston, herself a chiropodist, says:

"Those dances put an unaccustomed strain on the toes and instep and since they started women have been flocking to chiropodists in droves to have their feet made over. I hope the craze lasts, but I would never dance any of those dances myself. I think too much of my feet."

23 Church 'Drones' Ousted by Elders

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 6.—Twenty-three members were forcibly removed from the First Baptist Church, of this city, last night by the deacons because of negligence in attending church.

No specific charge was made against any individual, but all of them were referred to as "drones" and guilty of "indifference and non-attendance."

If You Don't Drink Do Not Read This

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Aug. 6. Henderson Hasty, of Easton, a small town near here, was stripped, plastered with a coat of warm tar and his face painted green last night by a party of citizens, determined to enforce observance of the prohibition law. Hasty was found asleep beside a road in Easton.

That he would sign the pledge is said to have been his declaration when he awoke.

HAWTHORNE IS REFUSED PARDON

McReynolds Ignores Recommendation of Board Which Made Special Inquiry of Case.

Despite the fact that the Federal Pardon Board strongly recommended after a thorough investigation, that pardons be granted to Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, who are imprisoned in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary on charges of using the mails to defraud in the sale of mining stocks, Attorney General McReynolds has issued a statement from Washington that he has decided to override the recommendations of the board and refuse clemency to the two men.

The action of McReynolds is almost unprecedented in the history of the Department of Justice. The Board of Pardons made the Hawthorne case a subject of thorough and exhaustive investigation. It came to Atlanta and went into every detail of the case. At the end of the investigation it made the Hawthorne case the subject of a special report and a special recommendation for clemency. It had been intimated that the writer had been the scapegoat for others.

Mr. McReynolds' excuse for refusing to grant a pardon to Hawthorne is that he and Dr. Morton have been shown enough leniency.

It is generally understood that one result of Mr. McReynolds' actions in the Hawthorne case will be the redoubling of the efforts of the writer's friends and the case may be taken to President Wilson.

Under the ruling of the Attorney General, Hawthorne and Morton must remain in prison until October. The trial judge, in sentencing them, dated their terms back a year and a day, and their time will be up in about two months.

Deputy Warden Hawk, of the Federal Prison, stated Wednesday morning that the prison authorities have as yet received no formal notification that a pardon had been refused Hawthorne. He stated, however, that it is not usual for them to do so. They are notified when a pardon has been granted, but never when one has been refused.

Asks Special Judge To Hear Demurrer

COLUMBUS, Aug. 6.—Alleging that Hugh M. Mooty, a former bookkeeper for the Beehive, a large dry goods establishment in Columbus, is not a resident of Muscogee County, but of Fulton County, and that the Superior Court of this county has no jurisdiction over his affairs, his attorneys have asked for the appointment of a special judge to sit when their demurrer to a recent decision is heard.

Judge Gilbert held that the Clerk of Superior Court should name the judge, but Clerk Marcus held that as the litigation is before Judge Littlejohn, of the Americus circuit, he would refuse to name another jurist.

Gainesville Plans Ban on Cigarettes

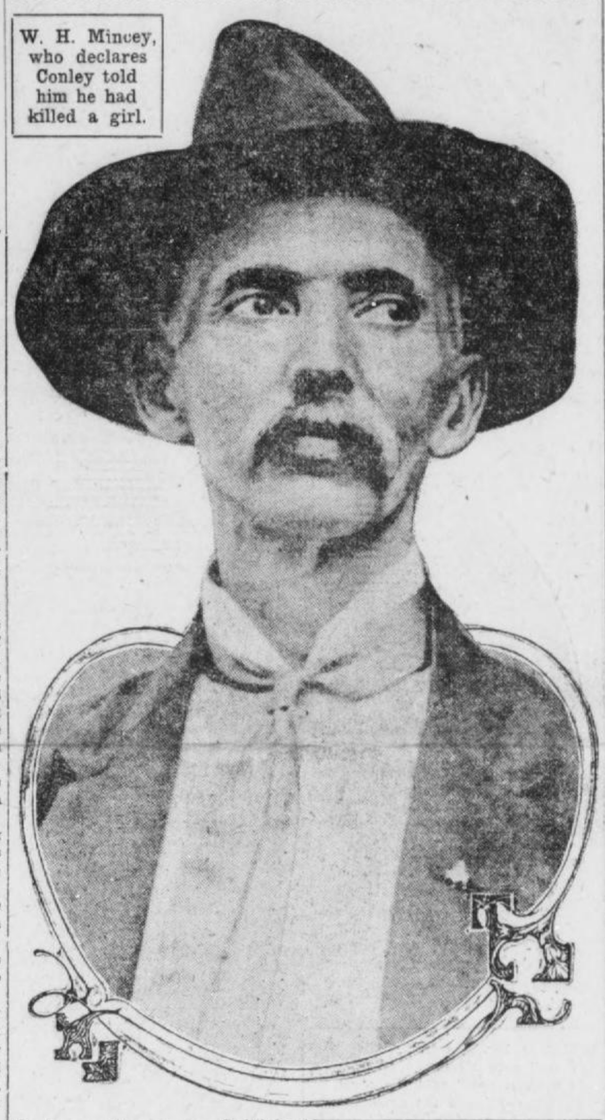

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Several hundred citizens of Gainesville have petitioned City Council to pass an ordinance making it unlawful for any child under 16 years of age to smoke cigarettes at any place except at the homes of parents or guardians.

It is thought the ordinance will be passed.

BATTLE WITH MOONSHINERS.

LEXINGTON, Aug. 6.—George W. Castel and Sherman Lewis, deputy United States marshals, engaged in a battle with moonshiners in Morgan County, Kentucky, to-day. Lewis was shot in the arm by John Kidd. Marion Kidd was wounded and captured. A 35-gallon still and a lot of beer and whisky were destroyed.

ACCUSER OF CONLEY IS READY TO TESTIFY

W. H. Mincey, who declares Conley told him he had killed a girl.

Deplores Newspaper Publicity, but Poses Merrily for the Camera Brigade.

W. H. Mincey, the school teacher and insurance solicitor who made an affidavit that Jim Conley confessed to him that he had already killed a girl that day and didn't want to kill anyone else, was the center of attraction for the crowd on the outside of the courthouse Wednesday morning.

While deploring newspaper publicity, he readily agreed to pose for a group of newspaper photographers, assuming many poses, some of which were rather grotesque. He followed this with implicit instructions to the photographer that his picture was not to be printed in the papers.

Efforts to get him to state whether he had seen Jim Conley since his arrest proved futile. Mincey declared he would not make this statement or answer until he had taken the stand.

Mincey was located at New Salem, Ga., near Rising Fawn, in Dade County. He is teaching school there, his work being the preparation of students to enter the Martha Berry School at Rome.

"I will not talk of the case and will not tell my story until I take the stand," said Mincey. "If Jim Conley killed little Mary Phagan, I feel that it is my duty to tell of the experience I had with him that Saturday afternoon. I don't think this thing should be discussed in the newspapers, though I regard newspapers as a necessity. These matters should be left to the court hearings. It is a loss to me to be here and I trust the case will soon be over. I think, though, that it is my duty to tell what I know."

Mincey is a man of small stature with piercing eyes and a gray mustache. He wears a black felt slouch hat and a dark suit.

'U. S. WOMEN SET TOO FAST A PACE'

Famous English Publicist So Declares in Article Scoring the New American Dances.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—American society women are accused of setting too fast a pace by Filson Young, a famous English publicist, in an article in The Saturday Review. Supplementing his article by an interview Mr. Young to-day said:

"If a baboon could be trained to play ragtime he would soon be the rage and would be invited out to dine by the idle rich. Where the shepherd goes society women follow like sheep. In the case of questionable dances American women have been to blame.

"'Tango' in Latin means 'I touch' and it is well named.

"American women in London and Paris are the leaders in revels which should cause a blush of shame to redden the cheeks of every modest woman. One by one the English leaders have surrendered to the daring irreverence of the American women."

Work Resumed at Thirty Copper Mines

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 6.—"Reports from over the Calumet copper region, where 18,000 miners are on strike, indicated that quiet had been restored about all mine shafts. Work was resumed to-day at four mines in the neighborhood of Calumet, making a total of 30 in operation.

Mother Jones addressed a meeting of strikers here this afternoon.

MYSTERY OF GIRL'S MESH BAG EXPLAINED BY NEGRO ON STAND

That Mary Phagan's silver-plated mesh bag, mysteriously missing since the girl's bruised and lifeless body was found the morning of April 27, was in Leo Frank's office a few minutes after the attack and later was placed in the safe in Frank's office was the startling statement made by the negro Conley Wednesday in the course of his re-direct examination by Solicitor Dorsey. At 11:10 the negro left the stand after being questioned for fifteen and one-half hours.

This testimony was the sensation of the forenoon. Throughout the more than three months of the murder mystery an unavailing search was made for the mesh bag, the city and Pinkerton detectives being convinced that the finding of the bag would go a long distance toward pointing out the person guilty of the Phagan girl's murder.

"Did you ever see a silver mesh bag that Mary Phagan carried?" inquired the Solicitor.

"Yes, sah," replied Conley. "I see it right on Mr. Frank's desk when I went in there."

"What became of the mesh bag?" continued Dorsey.

"He went and put it in his safe," the negro said.

First Word of Mysterious Bag.

It was the first information, authentic or otherwise, that had come to light regarding the disposal of the mesh bag. The homes of Newt Lee and Jim Conley had been searched high and low for the bag or any other clew to the perpetrator of the crime. Except for a vague rumor that a mesh bag had been found by a negro in a shop on Decatur street, a story which later was found to have no connection with the Phagan mystery, not the slightest clew ever was discovered to the whereabouts of the bag which so strangely had disappeared.

Attorney Rosser's manner was angry and threatening when he arose for the re-cross examination. He began at once a vicious attack on Conley's story of the mesh bag. He asked when Conley first told this remarkable tale. Conley said he couldn't remember.

"Why didn't you tell all this when you were telling 'the whole truth' to the detectives?" Rosser shouted.

The attorney apparently sought to create the impression that the mesh bag story was an afterthought, and that it was manufactured by the negro when he heard of the search the detectives were making for the bag.

On Grill Over Thirteen Hours.

When Rosser turned Conley back to Dorsey for the redirect examination, the negro had been under the grill of Rosser's cross-questioning for a total of thirteen hours. His main story of Frank's admitting the killing and of the disposal of Mary Phagan's body at Frank's direction was unshaken except by his own admissions of previous falsehoods. He had been on the stand a total of fifteen and one-half hours. Of this time the Solicitor had questioned him only about two hours.

Conley was called from the stand at 11:10 o'clock.

Conley was taken into an anteroom. He removed his coat and lit a cigarette someone had given him.

"How did you like it?" he was asked.

"I liked it all right," he replied, grinning.

Sheriff Mangum then interrupted the questioning of the reporters, saying that under the judge's orders no one could speak to him.

The next moment Conley picked up a newspaper and became intently interested in the story of his own testimony.

As soon as court opened Mr. Rosser asked the judge if he was ready to hear argument on the proposition to eliminote parts of Conley's testimony. He said he was prepared to support his motion with authorities.

Judge Roan replied that he would postpone his decision until 2 o'clock.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that he had witnesses he expects to put on the stand Wednesday morning to substantiate the part of the negro's testimony in dispute. He said:

"I just want the court to understand that I am going to do this."

Judge Roan replied:

"I'll give you the benefit of whatever you bring out."

Conley was then recalled to the stand for the conclusion of his cross-examination.

Questioned About Affidavit.

Rosser's first question was:

Q. You made this statement just as I read it, didn't you, Jim?—A. Yes.

Q. It's all correct?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, Jim, you signed this statement, too, didn't you? (Showing another affidavit.)—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made this one the day after the one I just read? Now, listen, and see if this is what you said?

Mr. Rosser read how Jim Conley for the first time told the story of carrying the body of Mary Phagan to the basement. These were the concluding words:

"The reason I have not told this before is that Mr. Frank said he would get me out, but it don't seem that he is going to get out and I have decided to tell the whole truth. I gave him back the $200. He said he would fix it all right Monday."

Q. This is what you swore, isn't it, Jim?—A. Yes, sir; I swore it.

Q. Jim, didn't Miss Carson ask you on Monday while you were working around her machine when they were going to get you, you answered that you hadn't done nothing?—A. No, sir.

Denies Alarm While Sweeping.

Q. Didn't she say that Mr. Frank was innocent and the real murderer of little Mary Phagan was the man Mrs. White saw near the steps? You dropped your broom and quit sweeping when she said that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say to Mr. Herbert Schiff on Monday after the murder that you were afraid to go out of the factory and that you would give a million dollars to be a white man? A. I didn't say just that, but I told him if I was a white man I would go on out.

Q. He told you to get on out, asking you what you had to be afraid of?—A. Something like that.

Q. Jim, you talked with Julia Fuss on that day and asked her if she had another extra? You asked her if she got one to let you see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. She told you that Mr. Frank was innocent, didn't she? And you said he was innocent as the angels in heaven?—A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Mr. Rosser closed the cross-examination and Solicitor Dorsey began the redirect examination.

Tells of Prison Record.

Q. Jim, where were you in prison? A. Police headquarters.

Q. Were you ever in jail?—A. Yes.

Q. What were you charged with?—A. Just because I was washing my shirt.

Q. I mean those other times you were arrested. Were you in the county jail then?—A. No, I was in headquarters.

Rosser interrupted:

"The charges are in writing, your honor. They are the last evidence."

"It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways," said Dorsey. "Can't we exclude this evidence?"

Judge Roan: "You can show where he was."

Q. What were you arrested for the first time?—A. I was throwing rocks.

Q. Who arrested you?—A. A police named Edmonds.

Q. The second time?—A. I was fighting.

Q. A white man or a woman?—A. No, I never had any trouble with white folks.

Q. Jim, did you try to see Mr. Frank in jail?

Rosser objected.

Judge Roan—Don't lead him, Mr. Dorsey.

Q. Did you ever see Frank after you went to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Why not?

Rosser objected to the question as immaterial. Dorsey changed his question.

Last Saw Frank at Station.

Q. When was the last time you saw Frank before you saw him here?—A. Over there at the police station.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. No, he just smiled and bowed his head.

Q. When you wrote those notes, did you sit down, and, if so, where?—A. I was sitting at the desk.

Q. Where was Frank sitting?—A. At the other desk.

Attorney Rosser objected. "He went into all that before," he said.

Judge Roan—Did you, Mr. Dorsey?

"No, it is something I omitted," said Dorsey.

Q. What did Frank do when he you wrote those notes?

Rosser objected to the question as leading.

Q. Did Frank touch your pencil when you were writing?

Rosser objected again, declaring that the question was leading.

Judge Roan said the question could be asked without leading.

Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Frank do when you were writing?—A. He took the pencil out of my hand and told me to rule out that "s" on the "negro."

Q. What hour was it Friday Frank came up on the fourth floor and spoke to you?—A. About 3 o'clock.

Says Frank Took Girl's Bag.

Q. How far was it from where you were Tuesday when he told you to be a good boy?—A. Almost the same place.

Q. How far was it from the water cooler to where her body was dragged?—A. I don't know, sir.

Q. How far from the water cooler? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see Mary Phagan's pocketbook or meshbag?—A. Yes, it was on the desk in Mr. Frank's office.

Q. What did he do with it?—A. He put it in the safe.

Q. How long were you in jail before you wrote for the detectives?—A. About ten or fifteen days.

Q. How long would it take Frank to go down and lock that door?—A. About one minute.

Q. Where was Frank standing when you saw the clock at four minutes to one?—A. He was standing near those stair steps.

Q. Describe that scream you heard.

Rosser objected.

"He has gone into that before, your honor," he said.

The question was sustained, Judge Roan saying: "The question cannot be asked because it is reopening a long cross-examination."

Q. Jim, who has asked you the most questions, Mr. Black, Scott, Starnes and Campbell and myself or Mr. Rosser?

Tries to Show Court Grilling.

Rosser objected.

Dorsey: "Your honor, he has tried to bring out the fact that this witness has been grilled. I want to show that altogether he was not questioned as long or as much as Mr. Rosser has questioned him on the stand.

Judge Roan: "You can ask him how long he was questioned out of court, and what has gone on here is public."

Dorsey put the question again.

Q. How long was the longest you was ever questioned before you came here?—A. Mr. Scott came and got me one day and I herd him tell the turnkey it was fifteen minutes to eleven. It was dark when I got back.

Q. How long was that?—A. I'd say about three and one-half hours.

Q. How long has Mr. Rosser questioned you?

"Your honor, I want to get this answer in the records," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan: "Do you object?"

looking at Mr. Rosser.

"I do," said Rosser.

"I sustain you," said the court.

Dorsey continued the questioning.

Q. Jim, how did you leave the body in the basement?—A. I left her on her side.

Lies on Floor to Answer Query.

Q. How? (Conley got down on the floor and lay on his left side, his arms against his body. After the illustration he identified a photograph of the basement and pointed out just where he left the body).

Q. Now, Jim, tell the jury in detail everything you did after you looked at the clock at 4 minutes to 1.

Rosser objected. "He has gone into that, your honor," he said.

"Have you, Mr. Dorsey?" Judge Roan asked.

"We have not gone into that detail," Dorsey replied. "We want to show the jury how long it would have taken to do the things there and how long it would have taken Frank to get to his home. Mr. Rosser has brought out this detail to draw his conclusions."

Judge Roan: "Have you asked that?"

Dorsey: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I sustain the objection."

Dorsey: "That's all right, your honor. If you think the State ought not to ask these questions, it is all right with me."

Promised Help in Trouble.

Q. What kind of paper were you talking about when you spoke of green sheets?—A. That one (identifying the white note).

Q. What kind of back did it have?—A. A kind of grayish pad.

Q. What did Frank say about taking you to Brooklyn?—A. He didn't. He said he would take me away, and if I got into trouble he would get me out.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Mincey?—A. No; I saw him at police headquarters.

Q. What did he say?

Rosser objected, and the objection was sustained.

Q. That night at jail, did those newspaper men come on the inside?—A. No.

Q. What did they say? Wait a minute; I want those two men out. (Two newspaper reporters, H. W. Ross and Harllee Branch, of The Atlanta Journal, who were at the press table, retired from the courtroom.)—A. I can't remember that.

Q. Did they offer you anything at all?

Rosser objected, and was sustained. Conley had answered the question, though, declaring that nothing was offered him but a paper.

Q. That day at the factory, were you nervous or not?—A. No; I was not.

Darley Knew He Could Write.

Q. What did Mr. Schiff say to you?—A. They were standing there by the clock and asked if there was a crowd at the front door. Mr. Schiff came in and I said I wish I was a white man; that I would go out from there. One man said he wished he had a pistol. Mr. Schiff said: 'They've got Mr. Frank in jail. I don't see that being white would help."

Q. Did Darley know you could write?—A. Yes.

Rosser objected. "It is immaterial," said he.

Dorsey: "We want to show that this man could write; that he was in jail several days without writing, and the detectives, the Pinkertons employed by the factory, knew he could write.

Q. Could you spell luxury?—A. Yes.

Q. Why?—A. I had to write it several times. Mr. Frank had me to write down the names of the different boxes that pencils were in, and give them to him, so that he could know when they were out.

"Wasn't Asked Before."

Attorney Rosser took up the re-cross-examination:

Q. Jim, you were questioned by Mr. Dorsey and myself and all the detectives, and this morning was the first time you ever mentioned that mesh bag.—A. You didn't ask me.

Q. Do you know what I asked you yesterday?—A. Yes, sir; I remember some of the questions.

Q. What?—A. Well, I don't remember just exactly.

Q. You don't remember a single thing that has not been written down?

Dorsey objected. "He must give the witness time to answer," said he.

Q. Jim, haven't you answered my questions?—Ar. Yes, sir.

Q. You said this morning that Mr. Frank promised to get you out on bond and send you out of town?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell the detectives that when you told them you were telling all the truth?—A. I did thell them he promised to get me out.

Q. Mr. Dorsey saw you seven times, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir; I think that's right.

Q. Did he take down what you said? A. He took down something the first time.

Q. How about the next times?—A. I disremember.

Q. How long have you kept up with those boxes?—A. About a year.

Conley Tries Spelling.

Q. And you wrote Mr. Frank reports on these boxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you know "luxury" if you were to see it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you write it for Mr. Frank, then?—A. I can write it.

Q. Can you spell it?—I can try it. Well, let's hear you spell 'luxury.'—A. L-u-s-t-r-i-.

Q. Was that the only kind of pencil boxes up there?—A. No, sir. There was Uncle Remus, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and others.

Q. Did you write reports on them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Uncle Remus'?—A. O-n-e R-i-m-e-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'Thomas Jefferson'?—A. T-o-m J-e-i-s-s.

Q. Let's hear you spell 'George Washington'?—A. J-o-e W-i-s-h-t-o-n.

Q. What did Mr. Frank say about your spelling?—A. He laughed.

Q. How do you spell 'Ox'?—A. O-x-.

Q. How did you write him notes to borrow money?—. A. I just wrote them.

Q. Tell me what you wrote?—A. I just said: 'Please let me have fifty cents.'

Q. When you were standing by that box talking, could Mr. Darley hear you?—A. Yes.

Q. Could Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes.

Q. Could that boy?—A. Yes.

Asked If He Could Write.

Q. When you went into the office to write those notes, Mr. Frank asked you if you could write, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Rosser put the question again.

Dorsey objected to the repetition, and the objection was sustained.

Messrs. Hooper and Dorsey were with you in the jail together, were they not?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. Two or three hours.

Dorsey Wins Ruling.

Q. How long after April 26 was it you saw this man?—A. About a month.

Q. At the time you saw him at the police station did you identify him?—A. I did not.

Rosser objected.

Q. What did you say?

Rosser: "I object. I wasn't there."

Dorsey: "Your representative, Mr. Scott, was there."

Rosser: "I move to rule that out."

A. I said he looked more like the one than any man I have seen.

Rosser: "I move to rule it all out."

Dorsey: "We expect to show by this witness that this was the man. We want to show how he was dressed, his facial expression, etc., and we submit that it is material."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. Describe the man you saw.—A. He was about the size of the one just brought before me whom I have been told is Jim Conley. He was in a dark place and I took him to be black. He had on dark clothes and I don't know whether he had on a hat or not.

Q. Wade Campbell is your brother, and Arthur White your husband, aren't they?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you tell them you saw a negro sitting in that hall?

Rosser objected.

Laughing Spectators Ousted.

The odd situation of the attorneys for the defense being in possession of the official court records were relieved when Mr. Arnold consented to it being read.

Mr. Rosser, however, found it first in the copy of the testimony of Scott.

Rosser: "You were right. Harry Scott did say Mrs. White told Frank about seeing this negro Monday after the crime."

Several spectators were put out of the courtroom for laughing at Mr. Rosser's admission of the error.

Rosser: "I will say it is the first time that you have been right. Your honor, we object. It is immaterial what time this witness made known the fact unless they go further and show she was delayed through the influence of Frank."

The objection was overruled.

Lawyers Clash.

Dorsey—Your honor, I have already shown that Leo Frank knew on Monday, April 28, that she saw this negro there, and that it was May 7 before the State got into possession of this fact.

Rosser—I say that no such evidence has been introduced.

Dorsey—Call for the record of Harry Scott's evidence.

Rosser—I say he has not introduced this evidence, and he saws he has. If your honor can not remember some of the things that happen here we are perfectly helpless.

Stenographer Parry was called. He said he was taking the testimony for Mr. Arnold and he wanted Mr. Arnold's consent before reading it.

Jim Conley was the same cool, unafraid negro when he returned to the stand Wednesday morning in the trial of Leo Frank after almost two whole days under the cross-examination of Luther Rosser. He had passed through fire and didn't seem to mind it. He had no fear of anything that was yet to come.

Mr. Rosser might threaten him or might joke with him; it was all the same to the negro. He had tried both and had established but one thing—that Conley is a liar, and Conley admits that.

Arnold might describe him as "that miserable wretch in the witness chair;" he could gaze calmly out the window as he had done before. He didn't quite understand all those names they were calling him, anyway.

If, in all the time that Conley was under the raking fire of Rosser's cross-examination, he was disturbed in the slightest degree, it was when he was being asked about that mysterious affidavit of William H. Mincey.

The declaration of Mincey that Conley had boasted the afternoon of April 26 of killing a girl was sinister and held in it the possibility that Rosser would finish by blazing forth with a direct charge of murder against the negro. Conley moved uneasily in his seat. He refused to meet the eye of his inquisitor. He fidgeted with his hands, but with his lips he framed a denial of every damning charge contained in the document.

The ordeal soon was over. Conley regained his composure, and when court adjourned a few minutes later a grin of triumph cleft his black face almost in twain.

Attorney Sees Conley.

Conley's attorney, William M. Smith, provided him with supper and breakfast at the jail and talked for some time with the State's star witness. He had been prevented from holding any sort of a conference with his client the night before, and protested at this procedure at the close of court Tuesday night. Judge Roan extended him the privilege of seeing Conley. Reuben Arnold asked that an exception be entered in the record.

Conley slept between nine and ten hours and arose much refreshed.

"I'se telling the truth now," he said to a newspaper man who encountered him outside the jail. "That Mr. Rosser ain't got no chance to get me mixed up because I'm telling just what happened."

Frank occupied his usual cell on the second floor of the Tower. He was joined by his wife and mother as soon as he arrived at the courthouse.

CAN JURY OBEY IF TOLD TO FORGET BASE CHARGE?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

"Gentlemen of the jury, having heard from James Conley, the blackest, most damning story ever told in Atlanta by one human being against another, having sat there and listened as he smudged with unspeakable scandal the defendant in this case, Leo Frank, although it is irrelevant, immaterial, and has nothing to do with this case, you will kindly forget it, being on your oaths as jurymen to consider the evidence declared competent!"

And the jury, being like most other juries, in one way and another, and having heard all the things as aforesaid, will promptly proceed to do as instructed about forgetting it—NOT!

I have heard juries told too many times to "forget" things—such, for instance, as that there is no such thing as "unwritten law" in this land of the free and home of the brave—and I have seen too many times those very same juries proceed to "forget"—NOT!

Juries are, after all, composed of mere human beings, and things such as Conley said to the Frank jury can NOT be forgotten, and will NOT be disregarded by the average jury.

Merely Question of Belief.

It is merely a queston of whether the jury BELIEVES the negro!

There was something infinitely pathetic in the situation Tuesday, when court met in the afternoon.

For one thing, it brought to the cheeks of the defendant's wife, always and ever at his side, the first tears I yet have seen fall from her eyes.

She has borne herself with amazing fortitude thus far—the wonder is that she has not long ago collapsed.

When Reuben Arnold, moving to strike from the record the vile story of Jim Conley, paused a second before reading the exact words he desired expunged, looked a moment in the direction of the defendant's wife, and said, with no show of the spectacular whatever, "Your honor, I would prefer not to read this in the presence of these two ladies, and I therefore pass it to your honor that you may read it in silence!" The moment was tense and tragic!

Weeps For First Time.

I do not know whether it was gratitude to Arnold for the kindness and consideration thus shown, whether it was realization of the weighty purpose of the motion, whether it was the first chilling breath of apprehension, or whether it was just a physical giving way that moved Mrs. Frank. Whatever it was, as Arnold passed the paper along to Judge Roan, the first tear I ever saw from the eyes of Lucile Frank trickled down her cheek and she dropped her head in her hands for a moment or two and sobbed!

Apparently there was nothing in the incident, either upon the part of Arnold or the woman, designed to be the least bit theatrical. The jury had been removed, the stage settings were wanting.

It merely was a natural and minor incident that tugged, somehow, at the heartstrings and caught at the throat.

In all the packed courtroom there were two women only—beyond that, there was a morbidly hungry crowd of men, ready to grasp greedily at anything sensational.

Arnold denied the crowd for the sake of—the women.

And now the jury has been asked to forget the damning thing that has been said to it, that has been said in the presence of the wife and the mother—and that was too vile to say a second time in the presence of the latter!

Do you think the jury WILL forget—do you think it CAN forget?

Maybe you do—I don't!

And as to Conley and his story in its entirety—the spectators in that courtroom have been looking for Conley to "break down," to fall on his knees and confess it all a lie, and all that sort of thing.

There never was any chance that Conley would do that. It should be borne in mind that to "break down" Conley's story does not necessarily mean to break down Conley—to collapse him.

The point is: Can the defense—has or will the defense—so UNDERMINE Conley's story that, through the introduction of other evidence, it eventually will fall to the ground as a mass of lies?

Slowly, but persistently, with deadly intent even if with tediousness of method, Luther Z. Rosser for more than two days has attacked the amazing and terrible story upon which the State hopes to convict Leo Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Rosser has been almost maddening in his patience with the negro. He has gone over the same ground, time after time, in his efforts to get Conley's various stories adjusted to the purpose of the defense.

Conley, rapid-fire enough in direct examination, rattling off his grewsome and frightful story as if it were a recital of an altogether common thing, became quite another Conley under cross-examination.

Where but a few moments ago he had remembered most amazing and inconsequential details—such as the fact that a woman who called to see Frank on Thanksgiving Day wore a blue and white polka dotted dress, a green hat and white shoes and stockings—under cross-examination he could remember nothing at all save after the most persistent prodding.

Time and again Mr. Rosser had to go over the entire ground of an entire situation to draw from Conley one further comment upon it. Questioned on his story under both cross and direct examination, the negro was put enough in reply—on other points he was as vague as he possibly could be.

Twenty-one times Tuesday he admitted to Mr. Rosser that he had "lied." Seven times in addition to that he admitted that he had been "mistaken."

As the cross-examination progressed, too, it became evident enough that the defense is to hold the entire charge against Frank to be largely a "frame-up," with Conley as the bright and particular star about whom it revolves.

The negro said he at first refused to speak of the crime at all, and when he did speak deliberately lied because he "wished to protect Mr. Frank."

"He was my young superintendent—I would have done anything to save him," said the negro—whether with sinister cunning or genuine sincerity, the jury must say.

Showed How Negro Lied.

And yet, with Conley's own lips Rosser showed how, time and again, he deliberately lied about his movements on the fatal Saturday that was Mary Phagan's last on earth—after he had said that he had looked in vain for help from Frank, and was then determined to tell "the whole truth!"

After Conley's excuse of protecting Frank had been shattered by the negro's own "confession," he had to make three subsequent and different "confessions" before he got things shaped to his liking—and every time he readjusted his story it was changed to meet the ever bobbing up objections to the story of the day or two before.

Continuously Mr. Rosser referred to the fact, always admitted by the negro, that his various affidavits were changed "at police headquarters," in the presence of officers, "after being released from jail and carried to headquarters."

There are dozens of puzzling inconsistencies to be bridged over in Conley's story—scores of things yet to be explained and straightened out.

And yet—

In the average mind I doubt whether Conley's story has been seriously discredited in the main.

There are people who admit, readily enough—hundreds of them—that Conley is a liar, a thousand times over, a loafer, and an utterly undesirable citizen.

Doubt Slowly Crystallizing.

They will say thus and so to his disparagement, but——

Fateful, suggestive, profoundly melancholy "but" for Leo Frank!

It bespeaks a widespread and crystallizing doubt that is dangerously incompatible with Frank's hopes for life and liberty and the restoration of his good name.

With all the undermining and incongruities of Conley's story that the most subtle ingenuity of the defense can conjure to its aid, the jury has been given a story which, if so much as 5 per cent of it sticks, likely will serve to convict.

The primary circumstances—these might be swept aside like chaff before the wind, if only Conley's story might be crushed to earth and made absurd.

But there is the story in all its abundance of sinister detail—the comings and goings of questionable men and women, the negro, time and again, on watch downstairs, responding to signals, the connivance of the negro with the white man in unnatural and perverted practices, the coming of innocent little Mary Phagan, the pattering of anxious feet above, the suppressed scream, the call to Conley for further assistance in consummating unlawful deeds with women—this time murder—the removal of the body, and the promise to pay on some subsequent day!

Will the story thus given to the jury, unless completely and altogether broken down, ever be removed from its mind entirely? And unless it is removed entirely, can Frank hope for acquittal?

If it is, in its essentials, the truth, what will the jury care about the exact time at which Conley bought some whisky on Peters street; or whether he went straight from Peters street to the laundry; or whether he remembers the mythical "woman in green who went up the factory steps," no matter how vitally important these things may be to the sustained truth of Conley's story.

Conley may lie in a dozen details of his story, he may have readjusted it continuously under the direction of Tom, Dick, or Harry, he may be everything he ought not to be—and yet, if one BIG detail in his awful story sticks in the minds of that jury, Leo Frank is undone hopelessly.

If the story Conley tells IS a lie, then it is the most inhumanly devilish, the most cunningly clever, and the most amazingly sustained lie ever told in Georgia!

Every little detail, as finally adjusted—and not then until Conley went upon the stand Monday—fits the necessities of those bent upon Frank's conviction. If it is, as the defense contends, a "frame-up," it is a diabolically smart "frame-up"—one can not escape that conclusion!

Girl's Visit Dovetails In.

Even the coming and going of Monteen Stover, the five minutes of time in which the primary circumstances might be made to dovetail into the Conley story, is cited by the witness Conley as the very period of time wherein Conley, sitting in the dark hall below, heard pattering footsteps above, the faint scream, and immediately after Miss Stover went out, the tiptoeing of Frank to the front, and then the story of the death upstairs.

Monteen Stover could not have chosen a more exact and useful moment to wander in—and yet, she heard no scream, although she did not see Frank in his office during the few minutes she remained upstairs.

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

It has come to the point where one, seeking the truth and justice and the right to all men at all times and in all circumstances, can only say he will leave it to the jury—and that the JURY will speak the TRUTH!

Crowd Set in Its Opinions

By O. B. KEELER.

The impression persists that courtroom crowds are made up in the main of two classes, as follows:

(1) People who take it for granted that any person being tried on any charge in any court is guilty, and then some.

(2) People who are constitutionally incapable of believing anybody is guilty of anything whatever.

That is one powerful impression gained at the Frank trial. It is an impression sticking out pointedly in the wake of the Thaw trial, and the Nan Patterson trial, and the Beatty trial, and the Hyde trial.

All three of the Hyde trials, in fact.

Never an Opinion Altered.

At the risk of being convicted of exaggeration in the first degree, the writer, who was rather intimately associated with the celebrated poison case, would estimate that 18,397 persons expressed in his hearing what they insisted were unalterable opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused physician before the jury in the first trial had been impaneled.

And of the 18,397 (estimated) not one single instance is recalled of one single opinion being altered.

The fact that the physician was convicted on his first trial made not the least difference to those who believed him innocent.

Court Ruling Mattered Not.

The fact that the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further trial made not the least difference to those who voted guilty.

The second and third trials, one of which resulted in an escaped juror, fleeing madly by way of a rain spout from the dread lair of the hypothetical question, and the other in a hung jury, had no perceptible effect on the factions.

Except to solidify them in their original beliefs.

One side desired to take steps at once.

The other side named men-children for the object of a persecution unparalleled since the days of Nero.

Arguments Never Will End.

And if Bennett Clark Hyde's annual trials proceed as per schedule until the year 1950, there will be hoary-headed wrangling over the same old points, by the same ancient and original wranglers, lined up the same way as when the greatest mystery of the West came to the fall of the gavel in the opening trial.

Take the Beatty Case.

There were men and women—you know some of them—who raised frantic hands to heaven, that a poor boy should thus be railroaded to his doom.

They were about set to buy mileage and travel to throw themselves and their petitions at the feet of a cruel and callous Governor.

And then Beatty confessed.

Did that still the trouble lachrymal waters?

Not precisely.

They said the poor boy's mind had been weakened by his persecution.

And if you are in a hypercritical mood or are otherwise disposed to stick pins in toy balloons, just ask your memory to inform you how many times you have heard these pronouncements since the trial of Leo M. Frank began:

First: "Well, I've been absolutely certain from the very first that Frank did it."

Second: "Well, I never have believed that Frank was guilty of that crime."

And now do you feel hypercritical?

And now do you fancy that 18,397 is an inflated estimate?

Of course, there must be a Third Estate—a well-balanced, thoughtful, cautious body. Particularly cautious, and slow of speech—mayhap in some sporadic instances slow of thought.

They are the judicial ones. They hold the balance open at both ends, to receive and weigh the testimony and the facts.

At least, they say they do.

That would be the jury, perhaps.

And some others—perhaps.

DORSEY ACCOMPLISHES AIM DESPITE BIG ODDS

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Practically the entire case on which the State of Georgia bases its claim on the life of Leo Frank to pay for that life taken from Mary Phagan is before the jury.

Most of the remaining evidence of importance which the Solicitor General may introduce merely will be rebuttal to testimony presented by Frank's counsel.

Whether the evidence presented is strong enough to convict is a question for the jury to decide. Whether the testimony introduced by the defense will be convincing enough to cause the reasonable doubt which the law says shall make Frank a free man or whether the defense's attack on the State's case has been of sufficient strength to create a question in the minds of the jurors, time alone will tell.

But this fact remains unchallenged: Every single thing that Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey declared in advance that he would get before the jury is there now. It may not be enough to convict, but the case which the State said fastened the crime on Leo Frank has been put in evidence.

Dorsey Had Huge Task.

One by one the prosecutor has forged the links in the chain that he maintains fixes the guilt of the Phagan murder on Leo Frank and Leo Frank alone.

It has been long, tedious work. Dorsey has had to fight against considerable odds, but his work has been well done.

When the defense has its innings, the chain may be torn asunder as though struck by lightning, but that will be the work of the skilled attorneys who are fighting to save the life of the pencil factory superintendent.

Here was Dorsey's work: He had to adduce enough circumstantial evidence to corroborate the testimony of Jim Conley before his case could even be seriously considered. The unsupported word of the negro sweeper would have been about as valuable as a punctured drum. The Solicitor knew this.

First, he had to prove the venue. He had to locate Frank in the National Pencil Company factory at the time Mary Phagan was slain. He did this by the unattacked testimony of many witnesses. He did it so thoroughly that the defense has tacitly admitted that Frank was at the factory about the time he deed was supposed to have been done.

Question of Time Settled.

Then he had to prove the time. According to the State's theory the murder was committed about 12:10 on Memorial Day. Frank himself has said and his employees and his associates have testified he was there at that time. This point also is practically unchallenged.

At last came the hardest task. He had to prove that Leo Frank was the only human being in the pencil factory at that time who could have taken Mary Phagan's life.

By every witness introduced on this point it was shown that as far as human knowledge goes Leo Frank and Jim Conley were the only men in that part of the factory at that time. Either could have committed the crime. It was Dorsey's work to place the blame on Frank alone.

Newt Lee's testimony was introduced to show that Frank sent him away that afternoon. Dr. Harris' testimony tended to show that the slaying must have been done immediately after Frank had given the child her week's wage and had given it to her while they were alone. Mrs. White's testimony tended to show that Jim Conley was sitting downstairs making no attempt at flight after the time the crime is supposed to have been committed.

Then came Conley's direct evidence and the chain was practically complete.

As has been said before, this chain may not stand the acid test of the defense's attack. It may not be strong enough even unattacked to convince the jury that Frank is responsible for Mary Phagan's death.

But it is what Dorsey went out to get before the jury. He has done it.

And he has done it practically unaided. The valuable assistance he had reason to believe he would receive from the police department has been more or less missing. In fact, the greatest blows to the State's case have been delivered by detectives, supposedly expert witnesses who have been unable to withstand the crossfire of Luther Rosser.

The case has meant a lot to Dorsey, and right now, with the thrilling battle approaching its final stages, Dorsey stands out as big and commanding a figure as the brilliant lawyers against whom he is arrayed.

He may lose his case, but if he does he will come out with reputation enhanced.

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a Large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdom and Experience.

In almost any settled community there is a grandma who knows Mother's Friend. Not only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recommendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this famous remedy.

Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nausea, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments and prepares the system so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear.

No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Friend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restful. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. Write at once to Bradfield Regulator Company, 133 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their very interesting and instructive book of advice for expectant mothers.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.
(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But before he had worked his way half through he paused, stepped aside and took up his station against the wall in a position that gave him a good view of the scene, without attracting too much attention to himself. "Since I am at a swell wedding I might as well see the bride," he continued to himself, turning his gaze, however, in any other direction than that by which she was expected to descend. "If she looks more like her photograph than the other girl does, well and good, I am an old fool and it is about time for me to take down my sign and shut up shop. But if, on the contrary, she looks less like it; if her expression varies or she is fairer or larger than one would suppose from the picture they gave me, then I can lay the fault on the photographer and regain some portion at least of my self-esteem." And unmindful of the curious glances which now and then found him out, he retained his place through the weary minutes of waiting that now ensued, amusing himself as usual in gathering together such odds and ends of talk as floated by him and stowing them away in the storehouse of his brain, which already held so many secrets even of some of those who passed him by in gay apparel without a thought that the grave, quiet, rather benignant-looking man who was so occupied with the device on Mr. Gretorex's great hall clock was he who held in his keeping their fortune and possibly their good name.

A Sigh of Relief.

At length, with a sigh of relief that ran through the length of those vast parlors, the strains of the wedding march were heard, and Mr. Gryce, whose interest in the aforementioned device now because absolutely absorbing, shifted his portly figure a step or so, while the throng at his side pressed back and a path was made for Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex, and then after what seemed a long and unnecessary interval for the bride and groom, who, contrary to the usual arrangement, descended together. They passed near, very near that great hall clock; so near that the bride's veil brushed the homely habiliments of the man who stood there; but she did not notice this, nor to all appearance did he, for his eyes never left the clock, though a careful observer might have perceived that his lips pressed a little closer together after she went by, and that he did not wait for her to pass over the threshold of the parlor door before taking his departure.

But no one thought of him. All eyes were on the bride, and little did any one think, least of all, she whom it most concerned, that the faint, half-suppressed click which they had just heard denoted the withdrawal of one whose powers of observation were more to be dreaded than were those of the whole vast crowd he had left behind him. If she had—but our interest is not at present with the bride, pale and troubled as she is, but with this man who but a short time ago entered the house with feelings of almost beneficent concern for its inmates, only to leave it now, with a sore and humiliated heart.

For in the one glimpse he caught of the bride—and he saw her, though he did not appear to do so—he had discerned nothing to relieve his dissatisfaction with himself. If the other girl was like the picture, this pale, haughty self-contained woman was the picture itself. There was no mistaking this much, as his pride would have been gratified to have found it otherwise.

Details that were lacking in the other girl's countenance were here, and an expression which made him acknowledge to himself that he would henceforth trust no man's eyes, not even his own, in this delicate matter of identification, the least shade of a look making sometimes all the difference between one person and another. He went out of the house, feeling, as I have said, very old, and he even was conscious of a twinge or two of rheumatism as he stepped down the icy steps and prepared to take his way round the house to the street. For this reason perhaps, and also because the walk was more or less slippery, he went very slowly, so that he was just at the corner of the house when that startling scream was heard, which as we know so seriously distured the minds of those who were witnessing the ceremony. A muffled cry it was, and to those outside sounded as if it came from the upper story of the house. But when the detective paused and looked up at the windows overhead he saw nothing, and being in a very indifferent mood, went on his way, remembering the occurrence only as a sort of lagubrious echo to the rather melancholy thoughts in which he had been at that moment indulging.

At the Hotel.

His course was toward the city. He took it direct, getting on the elevated train at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and getting off again at Twenty-third. Why Twenty-third? Was it not late enough for him to go home? He evidently did not think so. Without hesitation and with a certain determination of manner, he went immediately to the C—— Hotel.

Let us follow him.

"Well, I suppose the wedding has come off."

These were his words to the clerk who was still at his desk in the office.

The clerk looked at him and laughed.

"No," was his quick rejoinder, "it didn't. The bride absconded."

"What is that?"

Mr. Gryce's tone was quite sharp. His face resumed its old expression.

"She ran off; didn't wait for the clergyman; afraid to risk herself with such a glum-looking customer as Moles-Molesworth, I suppose, I can't say I blame her."

"Humph! You interest me. And at what hour was this; how soon after we left?"

"In a few minutes, I should say, for you had not been gone more than half worth. I suppose, I can't say I blame came with the Rev. Mr. Pease at his heels, and she was not here then, nor had been some little time."

"Who saw her go out?"

"The hall boy."

"No one else?"

"I think not."

"Didn't she leave any word behind her?"

"Yes, a note; it was laying on the table in her room. Molesworth got it."

"The door then was open?"

"It was unlocked."

"Curious. There seems to be some difficulty in the way of wedlock tonight. I have just come from a wedding and the bride was three-quarters of more an hour late. But Molesworth, as you call him—how did he take it?"

"That's hard telling; he looked grim enough, but then he was none too cheerful looking before. Anything but a bridegroom in appearance at any time. But, then, it was rather hard lines for him. 'Twould make any man angry; Mr. Pease on hand, and no bride! I declare, I felt cheap myself; and the chambermaid, I believe, shed tears, grieving over the loss of the good fee she expected, I suppose."

"Yes, it's quite thrilling, quite romantic," quoth Mr. Gryce, enthusiastically. Then, in quieter tones, remarked: "You were all in the room, then?"

He Was no Fool.

"No, I didn't know anything about it till Dr. Molesworth came down, and, giving me the price of the room, remarked that there would be no wedding at present, the young lady having preferred to wait till she could have her friends about her."

"Ah!" ejaculated Mr. Gryce.

"Neat, wasn't it?" remarked the clerk. "But he is no fool; and though I knew on the spot that she had run away for good, I couldn't help giving him credit for coolness. But it was all in his words; his look was terrible."

Mr. Gryce's eyes fixed themselves on the small lamp used to light cigars.

"I can imagine it," said he.

"But he wasn't tragic; not a bit of it," continued the clerk. "Not even when he took out the note he had evidently received from the girl, and burned it in the flame of that jet."

"Oh! he burned it, did he?"

"Down to the very end."

"And then went away?"

"Directly."

"Well, this has been a delightful evening!" commented Mr. Gryce; and he lounged away a few more minutes in the office; then went out, and, entering a drug store near by, searched for an address in the directory.

"I can not sleep; why, then, not amuse myself?" his look seemed to say, as, glancing up at the clock, he passed again into the street and betook himself westward.

Certainly one does not run across such a complication every day, and when one is a detective, why not enjoy now and then the advantages of his position?

Mr. Gryce went up the steps of a four-story brick building to which was attached a doctor's sign.

A middle-aged woman, of neat enough appearance, answered his ring, after a short delay.

"Is the doctor in?" he asked.

She shook her head, and glancing at a slate that hung on one of the pegs of the old-fashioned hallrack, declared: "He won't be home before to-morrow."

"And I am so ill," murmured the detective, with an air of great weakness. He had read her character at a glance.

"You!" she exclaimed.

"And I have come so far," he went on. "I thought surely I should see him to-night, if I came late enough. I know he is going to be married soon, but——"

"Married!" The interruption was full of surprise and incredulity. "Married! Dr. Molesworth! I guess you are mistaken."

"Oh, no," the old gentleman persisted, assuming with every instant a look of greater distress.

"I had it from one who knows him intimately. He is going to be married, but sensible girls don't keep their lovers out too late, and I thought I might find him in. I wish I had, for when I have these turns nothing but opium will help me, and the drug clerks won't give it to me without a doctor's prescription. I must go on."

But the old lady's sympathy as well as curiosity had been aroused. She was a widow and a boarding-house keeper, but she had a heart and was not afraid of showing it.

The Landlady.

She therefore stopped him as he hobbled toward the door, and, showing him the way into the parlor, asked him to sit down by the fire and warm himself a moment before going out.

"I am sitting up," she explained, "because there are still four or five of my young men out, and as I do not give night-keys to any one but the doctor, I have to sit up, or ask some of my hard-working girls to do so. It is deary waiting sometimes, but, on the whole, they are considerate, and I don't complain."

Then as she saw, or thought she saw, the old gentleman's face grow brighter in the really genial glow of the good hard-coal fire before them, she asked in a hospitable tone if he had ever heard whom the doctor was going to marry.

He shook his gray hairs indifferently, picked out with his glance a coal in the fireplace, and began to study it intently.

"I never paid it any attention," said he. "I am getting too old to busy myself much about such matters; and girls are all the same to me, unless it be one girl," he added, with a half-senile, half-pathetic smile, taking from his pocket as he did so a photograph which he looked at fondly.

"Your daughter?" inquired the old lady.

"My granddaughter," he replied, with enthusiasm.

She leaned over as women will at the sight of any picture in the hand of another, and quietly looked at it.

"Good heavens," she exclaimed, "it is Mildred Farley."

"Mildred Farley," he repeated, in mild surprise. "I never heard that name. This is Joanna Handscombe."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Ballroom Tango

A Pretty and Refined Way of Dancing This Popular Whirl

"First of all," says Miss Witchie, "be sure you have good music. Then make sure you know how to point your toe gracefully." This movement is shown in the top picture.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"THERE is nothing new under the sun"—as we have been frequently informed, but there are new combinations of all the old ideas, and a clever combination of five or six old things results in one brand new one. Just a year or two ago we fully persuaded ourselves that tangos and turkey-trots and bunny hugs and monkey wrenches were the latest things—but they weren't, bless you—no! They were cakewalks and barn dances and two-steps arranged in a to-be-well-shaken-before-taken conglomeration and accompanied by a little hula-hula or other music native to any other soil but our own.

A New Combination.

Now two of New York's cleverest dancers have thought up a fascinating new combination and permutation of steps taken from the tango Argentina, the Spanish bolero and the beautiful and so completely forgotten as to be really new minuet. In a little three-cornered chat with Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs, of Lew Fields' "All Aboard" company, now playing at the Forty-Fourth Street Roof Garden, I learned just how to do the new tango bolero, as they mean to call it. Of course, most of us lack the inherent grace, the careful training and the untiring study of their artistic calling that the clever couple bring to make their dancing a thing of beauty—even if it is, alas! a joy for but a few fleeting moments instead of the hours and hours one would gladly sit and study their twinkling twirls.

"But we'll show you just how and we'll tell you just how," said pretty little Miss Katherine, "and then if you practice and practice, and if every one who reads follows the same course—why, when we introduce our dance every one will have that at-home feeling of knowing just how to join in the chorus.

Good Music Essential.

"First of all, be sure you have good music—the tango and the bolero. Then make sure that you know how to point your toe gracefully in somewhat the way the ballet dancers do. Then take a waltz position, girl's right hand on her partner's left shoulder, man's left hand at the back of his partner's waist, the other hands clasped loosely and held almost at shoulder height, faces turned toward the outheld arms, and correspondingly the girl's left and the man's right foot pointing straight in the direction of the arm.

"Now, to tango music take the eight steps and the long gliding side and receving stamp that are characteristic of this dance of Spanish extraction via Argentina. Then with arms still pointing to the girl's left, do the same steps toward the right. Swing into all the tango steps you know and can do easily and gracefully, and then suddenly the music changes to the real Spanish bolero—little grapevine in and out and in and out by the outstretched fingers. At the end of this movement he is holding her at arm's length, his lifted right arm holding her left hand, and from this position he draws her around in front of him and they do a little flying forward ste- in perfect unison, right arms held together and weight on the right foot at the beginning of the movement, and left foot pointing to the back and dropping slowly to take the weight.

"Do this back and forth eight times in tango style, and then swing into figure three—hands closed in front, and girl's left and man's right foot pointing toward the side back in a knee-hight position parallel to the floor. Swing from foot to foot, looking in the direction of the uplifted foot; do this eight times, as for all dances of the tango family. And now for the pretty little minuet finish—you, Katherine, please."

Very Fetching.

And murmuring something about "in at the finish," Miss Witchie concluded our profitable little chat with a description of the quaint and dainty steps.

"It is the conventional dancing minuet bow. The man holds his partner's outstretched right hand in his left, with right hand on heart, and left toe pointing forward. The girl points her right foot, and holds her right arm poised with upturned wrist, and then gradually through eight bars they separate into a deep curtsey. Don't you think that a dear little conclusion to our tango-bolero? And don't you think it would be perfectly polite to dance that in any ballroom?"

Perfectly polite, and very fetching and pretty, I think, don't you? And I hope we may all learn to do it with a fraction of the dainty grace and modesty shown by its inventors.

"Then take a waltz position."
(Posed by Katherine Witchie and Ralph Riggs.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ISN'T IT LATE TO ASK THAT?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am dead in love with a young man of twenty. He says he would not take the whole world for me, and he says that he could not live without me. He has asked me to marry him. I accepted his offer and he gave me a diamond ring last year. I have been going with him for the past two years. I am a girl of eighteen. Do you think that I should marry him or wait?

Neither could live without the other, and this condition has lasted two years.

M. F.

Under the circumstances, my dear, isn't it late to ask such a question? If there is any bar to your marriage further than that of your youth and his, you do not state what it is.

THERE IS A WAY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20 and in love with a girl of 19, and if I don't win this girl I'll go crazy. I proposed, but her parents object because I am of a different religion. The girl loves me, but she waits for her parents' consent. Will you please help me to win this girl, because I think of her all the time?

THOMAS.

She will not marry without her parents' consent, and she is right. You say their objection is based on your church. You do not say what your church is, but do you love the girl so much you would change it?

I do not advise it. I simply suggest that the means of overcoming the objection to you lies in yourself. You must not demand that the girl make the sacrifice.

"My wife," said Mr. Clarke, "sent ten dollars in answer to an advertisement of a sure method of getting rid of superfluous fat."

"And what did she get for the money? Was the information what she wanted?" asked Mr. Simmons.

"Well, she got a reply telling her to sell it to the soap man."

The Snake Charmer

By INGLIS ALLEN.

THE long, lighted car sweeps swiftly up through the night, and the little man, waiting on the curb by my side, deftly extinguishes his cigarette against his coat sleeve and mounts the step before me.

I enter and seat myself by the door, idly noting that the car is otherwise empty save for a huge male form sprawling in the corner at the further end. Opposite me the little man has closed weary eyes. For my own part, I fall to watching through the doorway the crawling market carts, with their huddled drivers, as one by one we overtake and leave them behind.

A touch on my elbow disturbs my contemplations. I turn to find that the large man was vacated his corner and is leaning confidentially toward me.

"'Ere," he observes with a mysterious air, "I want to speak to you."

He is a very large man, indeed, in whom the absence of a collar is made the more noticeable by a high-colored flannel shirt open at the neck. He has twisted himself in his seat so as to face me, and, with sudden disquietude, I make the discovery that the breast of his shirt is undulating with the movements of some live body beneath it. With triumphant eyes fixed on mine, he inserts his hand beneath the garment, and, withdrawing it impressively, holds up a particularly repulsive-looking snake for my inspection.

"I'm always doing this," he remarks with delight. "I'm an' me's pals. Teddy I call 'im. After my wife's father."

I express my satisfaction at this highly sociable state of affairs and at the same time the conductor makes his appearance.

He accepts a coin mechanically from the semi-somnolent man opposite, his gaze straying curiously over his shoulder toward my neighbor.

A Bedfellow.

The latter, overjoyed at his attention, persuades the snake to further vagaries.

"I'm always doin' this," he explains with the same delight. "Teddy 'is name is. 'E sleeps with me at night."

The conductor grins.

My neighbor falls to caressing his snake again. Soon he leans forward, and with a push at the knee arouses the little man opposite from his slumbers. The latter regards his performance for awhile in stolid silence.

"That ain't nothin'," he observes, and closes his eyes again.

Attention is diverted by the entrance of two new passengers—a young gentleman in rather wide trousers and a young lady in a very narrow skirt. At a glance my neighbor marks them down as his prey. He rises, lurches across the tram, and seats himself beside them. With a beaming smile, he puts the snake through its performance for their benefit the pair watching him with marked apprehension.

"Teddy, I call 'im," he observed affably. "I'm always doin' this."

The information seems in no way reassuring to his audience, who remain watchfully silent. Suddenly he withdraws the snake from his shirt and holds it toward the young man.

"Try 'im yerself," he suggests generously. "I've no objection. Put 'im down your neck, mate."

There is a sudden scuffling sound as the young lady rises precipitately and moves to the further end of the car. Her escort, about to follow, is detained by a huge hand upon his sleeve.

"'E won't 'urt yer. Put 'im down yer neck, boss. Yer ought to get used to that sort of thing, yer know."

It is evident that the young man has no sense of this duty to himself; by a sharp movement he frees his arm, and with such dignity as he can muster joins his companion at the farther end. The snake-charmer remains looking after him with an outraged stare.

Meanwhile the car has stopped, and there has been an influx of passengers. The conductor, about to ring the bell, suddenly observes the huge figure at the end.

It Disappears.

"'Ere you!" he cries. "You wanted Young's Corner!"

The snake-charmer turns hastily and stumbles down the car. Suddenly he stops and feels tentatively about the upper part of his body.

"'Arf a moment!" he exclaims, anxiously. "Wot's become o' Teddy?"

The new passengers glance up with mild interest. The pair at the end rise expeditiously and peer about them in apprehension. The snake-charmer has gone to the seat lately vacated by him—now occupied by a respectable old lady of sedate aspect.

"Excuse me, mum——" he apepals.

The lady, evidently rather hard of hearing, looks around her inquiringly. The snake-charmer raises his voice.

"It's my snake," he explains. "I think you must be sittin' on 'im."

With a blood-curdling shriek, the lady shoots from the seat like a stone from a catapult. The new passengers rise in panic, and convulsively shake skirts or trousers.

"You ain't got your snake," grumbles the conductor from the step. "Think we're goin' to wait about all—Why, what's that?"

All eyes follow the conductor's finger, pointing toward the snake-charmer's feet. From one of the legs of his trousers a flat, evil head has emerged, and, curling upward, is darting a forked tongue into space. With a proud smile, he stoops and, drawing forth his pet, replaces it in the breast of his shirt and steps out into the road.

The conductor tugs the bell impatiently, and we move on.

The passengers resume their seats, then crane their necks to watch a dwindling figure stationary in the road behind. A genial hail is wafted faintly toward us.

"Teddy, I call 'im. Sleeps with me at night!"

Extra Modest.

"George, there's a burglar in the house."

"Well, keep still. We've got nothing he'll steal."

"I know. But I left my corsets over the back of a chair, and I wouldn't have him see them for the world."

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I GUESS there ain't many real human beings that goes to the boarding houses at the seashore, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I was down to Tybee for a week-end, and I was entertained beautiful by a friend of mine that always does everything right. She and her husband is perfect darlings, George. He always takes her wherever she wants to go, and she thinks he is the only man on this globe. She is one of them kind of wives, George, that thinks when she hears about Julius Caesar that her husband would have had Julius' Joe if he had been living then.

"But they was the only two regular guys on that porch after we had ate our dinner and went out to let it digest in the shade. There was four married women there about forty years old or so, and two young chaps that had traveled extensively on the trolley cars. They were setting there talking to the old gals, showing how brown their arms was from swimming and how much muscle they had, and the old gals was fine to them, beaming on them just as if they was grown-up men. After the two chaps had went for their third swim that day, the old gals began telling what divine waltzers the kids was, and how one of them was very witty.

"But oh, dear doctor! When the name of one of the younger married ladies came up, a lady that didn't happen to be there at the time, there was sure some scandal.

"'They say her husband drinks something brutal!' says one of the old hens.

"'I wouldn't be surprised,' says another. 'She would drive any man to drink with that temper of hers.'"

"What else do you expect from that kind of folks?" asked the Head Barber. "I never sat on a boarding house porch in my life, unless it was with some of the old Romans, long after the women folks had went to bed. I never could stand all the cruel things they said about the other women. Many a young married lady has been kissed and called 'dearie' by the old fat and forty girls, only to be hammered into pulp when they moved fifty feet away. I was up in the country not long ago and heard some of those rocking-chair dames working. Two of the young chaps there happened to be live ones, and went to the village to get a few steins on a hot day. They mentioned it when they got back home, and the next morning when they started out one of the dames says 'Look at Mr. Doonan and Mr. McSherry!' and another says, 'Yes, there they go!' I suppose when the young fellow got back in the evening every one of the ancients says 'Here they come!'"

"That's the trouble, George,' said the Manicure Lady. "This would be a whole lot different world in which to live in if it wasn't for the 'There they go!' and 'Here they come!' people. If they see a young fellow throwing himself away and going to the dogs, you don't hear many folks shouting 'Come back and get wise!' They all say "There he goes!' and they say it as cheerful as a kid saying 'Oh Mamma, here comes the circus parade!'

"This is too hot a day to do much demoralizing, George, but I do wish that folks would be kinder to each other and bury the hammer. It ain't hatchets that needs burying in this world, George, it's hammer."

Hints For the Household

When about to make a pudding, well flour your board and rolling-pin and roll the suet out to a thin sheet. Take between your hands and rub down, when you will find the suet as fine as breadcrumbs.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all old bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish clothes for saucepans and pie-dishes.

When washing pudding cloths, throw some orange peelings into the water. This collects the grease and helps to make the cloths white and clean looking.

If great care is not taken flatirons easily become rusted. The following is a good way to clean them when this occurs: Tie a lump of beeswax in a piece of rag, and when theirons are hot rub them with this. Then rub them well with salt on a cloth, and they will be quite smooth and clean.

Before arranging maidenhair fern in vases, soak it for two hours in cold water; then singe the ends of the stems with a match. Ferns thus treated will last three times as long and keep quite green and fresh for several days.

Hot-water marks may be removed from japanned trays by the simple process of rubbing them over well with sweet oil, and then polishing with a little dry flour on a soft duster.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XIV.

MARY DANFORTH awoke early on the morning of her graduation day. She lifted her watch from the table at the head of her bed and glanced at it sleepily, noting with satisfaction that it still lacked more than an hour to breakfast time.

She lay half awake and let happy thoughts drift through her mind—light, girlish thoughts of the beauty of her graduation gown; affectionate thoughts of her father, speeding home from a business trip in the far West to be with his daughter on this important day; tender, timid thoughts of Gordon Craig.

In a letter written a week ago her lover had repeated his assurance that he would see her graduate. This epistle had reached her only the day before yesterday, and since then she had heard nothing from him, yet she was sure that he would be true to his word. She smiled now as she lay in her darkened room, a smile that was full of pure joy. She knew that Craig would have a question to ask when they met, and she also knew what her answer would be. She had no doubt now that she loved him dearly and was proud and happy in her love. The smile faded slowly from her lips, and she slept again.

Her mother's gentle knock on the door awakened her a half hour later.

"It's time to get up, girlie!" she announced, entering the room. "Breakfast will be ready soon and father has telephoned from the Grand Central to say that he will be up to eat it with us, as his train is just in. So try to be ready when he comes."

She kissed Mary as she had done each morning since the girl's birth, then hurried away on household tasks intent.

The trio had a happy breakfast together in the sunlit dining room. Mr. Danforth, haggard and pale—"from a sleepless night on the cars," as he explained—was once more at the head of the table, cheery and happy in spite of his evident weariness.

The morning meal over, he pushed his chair back from the table and, drawing Mary down upon his knees, questioned her with affection and interest about her plans for the day. He did not mention Craig's name. An unusual reticence had kept the Texan from his conversation ever since the young man had returned home, and when Mary had mentioned with studied indifference the fact that "Mr. Craig might possibly happen to be in New York on Commencement Day," her father let the statement pass without comment.

After a few minutes' chat this morning he declared that he must go to his office for a part of the day. At the front door he paused and came back to the dining room to kiss Mary, although he had already bade her an affectionate goodby.

"This is just to kiss my little girl once more," he explained, patting her cheek fondly. "She will be a grownup lady when I see her again."

It was late in the afternoon that Mary left the house to go down to her school. Her class were to have an early farewell supper in the gymnasium and would go directly from that to their graduation exercises.

At 8 o'clock she and the rest of her class took their places in the great school auditorium, which was already crowded. Mary looked vainly among the sea of faces for the three persons who made her small world. Of course, her parents were here, she mused, although she could not discern them—but was Craig here, too?

The white-haired principal arose to speak, and a hush fell on the house. Suddenly Mary knew that her lover had come. She felt his eyes upon her, and, looking up, saw him in the gallery above her. Their glances met and he smiled, but the girl blushed hotly and dropped her eyes. Her heart throbbed wildly. She had been eager to see him, but now she wished to evade his steady gaze and hide herself, yet she was happy to be in his presence. She raised her hand to her throat, and, caressingly, touched the hidden silver trinket he had sent her.

Those who knew her said Mary Danforth had never looked sweeter and fairer than when she rose at the calling of her name and went forward to receive her diploma. She did not think of the thousands of glances resting upon her, but only of the look of the man she loved. She longed to lift her eyes and gaze into his face, but she could not. Through the valedictory she sat silent, unhearing, her eyes upon her diploma and the mass of flowers which had been handed her. She knew some of them were sent by Craig, the rest by her parents.

At last she became aware that it was all over, that people were rising and that everybody about her was talking. A gray-haired, sweet-faced teacher accosted her.

"May I speak to you a moment, dear child?" she said quietly. "Come with me."

Puzzled and vaguely alarmed the girl obeyed the older woman's bidding and followed her into a small anteroom adjoining the auditorium. As Mary noted the woman's grave demeanor a dread clutched at her heart, and she held her breath to listen.

"I have bad news for you," said her teacher simply. "You must go right home to your mother. She has sent for you. Your father"——

She paused, and the girl clasped her hands in an agony of fear.

"Oh, what is it?" she gasped. "Tell me quickly! Is he hurt, or ill, or"—her voice failed her suddenly, for Gordon Craig stood beside her. She had not seen him enter, and he took her trembling hands in his firm grasp.

"Dear," he said quickly, but softly, while his body shielded her from the glances of persons passing the door, "your father will never be hurt or ill again. Be brave, dear. He died an hour ago."

An Impossible Post.

With tense, eager faces, the great audience of women leaned forward in their seats, eagerly drinking in the noted speaker's every word.

"Mere man," she was saying, "is wont to belittle woman's ability to enter the fields already usurped by him. As a matter of fact, she is capable of filling any post of public or private office now held by man, and, if appointed to it, could even perform man's tasks with greater faithfulness and greater darlng.

"Name, if you can, one post for which she can not fit herself! Name one office to which she would not, could not, give the greatest measure of capability, the highest degree of courage, the——"

A mere man, who had slipped, unnoticed, into a back seat, rose at this point, and the light of sudden inspiration gleamed in his eye.

"Rat catcher!" he shouted. And then he fled.

Their Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"THAT must be the landing down there! I can't see that sign, but I'm sure that's where you get the St. Cloud boats."

"Hadn't you better ask some one," ventured Helen. "It's so far to go way down there and find it isn't the place."

"I tell you it IS the place," scowled Warren, who always hated to ask his way, and often wore Helen out trying to find a place without guidance.

Already they had walked across the Alexandre bridge, and Helen was tired and hot. Her feet ached, too, for she had foolishly started out in a pair of white canvas pumps which she had bought the day before.

A gravel path and stone steps led down to what Warren thought was the boat landing. But evidently it was not in use this season, for the place was deserted except for a man who was shearing a dog in an empty shed.

He was sitting on the ground holding on his knees a King Charles spaniel, whose sleek body he was clipping close, leaving only the lion-like ruff of neck and tail. The dog, grateful to be rid of his heavy coat this hot day, lay patiently on his back.

"I'll be darned!" muttered Warren looking around the deserted landing. "I know those boats used to start from here."

"But it's been seven years since you were in Paris," protested Helen. "You can't expect to find everything just the same! Do ask that man where the right landing is—I CAN'T walk much farther!"

"Well, if it's along here we'll find it," obstinately ignoring her suggestion. "There, I see it now! Isn't that a boat just pulling in?"

Helen Inquires.

Helen's heart sank, for the landing Warren pointed to was back beyond the bridge. And it might not be the right one! Detet rmedly she approached the man with the dog. If Warren would not ask, she would. Not knowing the French for "boat landing," she repeated "St. Cloud, St. Cloud?" and pointed to the landing beyond.

"Oui, oui, madame. nodded the man, understandingly, while the dog, in spite of his inverted position, wagged a friendly tail.

Warren was already striding back up the stone steps. "Hope you're satisfied," he grumbled, as Helen breathlessly caught up with him. "That's the St. Cloud boat there now. If you hurry we'll get it."

Helen, her shoes hurting her at every step, kept up with Warren's long strides as best she could. As they drew near they could see "St. Cloud" fluttering on a red flag over the boat.

"May have to wait another hour if we don't catch this!" called back Warren, running ahead to get the tickets.

The boat gave a warning whistle. A man was loosening the chain. Were they going to miss it after all? Warren had the tickets now and was waving them at her! Helen, flushed and breathless, reached the boat only a second before it moved off.

"Whee! That was close," and Warren wiped the inside of his hat with his handkerchief. "Pretty good sprint for a hot day."

"Oh, can't you find me a place to sit down?" panted Helen. "My feet hurt so!"

"Don't see any place, do you?" looking around the crowded boat, on which every seat was taken. "What's the matter with your feet, anyway? You've been hobbling ever since we started."

"It's these shoes I bought yesterday. They're plenty big," defiantly, "but they're too stiff. They hurt in the back at the heel."

"Humph, you ought to know you couldn't get a decent shoe in this country. Why on earth didn't you bring enough with you?"

"I did, dear, all except white ones."

"Well, serves you right. They ought to hurt you, if you haven't more sense than to start out on a trip like this with a new pair of shoes."

Paris had been hot, but the Seine was hotter. The sun glittered on the water that was not even rippled by a breath of air. The iron rail, against which Helen was leaning, almost burnt through her gloves. Would she have to stand on her aching feet in this blazing sun all the way to St. Cloud?

Warren Compares.

"They talk so blamed much about the beauty of the Seine—well I don't see it! Can't hold a candle to our Palisades along the Hudson."

"None too clean, either," went on Warren. "Hope they don't drink this water. But that's so—Frenchmen don't drink any water. There's a seat, if you want one," as a man rose to get out at the next landing.

Helen sank into the seat, and with a sigh of relief drew off her slipper under her dress. Warren did not trouble to come and stand by her, but stood where he was, leaning on his cane by the railing.

As they left the outskirts of Paris, the river grew cleaner and the scenery more attractive. But Helen was too hot and much too uncomfortable to enjoy or appreciate the sail.

At last they reached St. Cloud. On the hillside above was a big white hotel, with fluttering flags and white-clothed tables on the green hedged veranda and terrace.

"Well, what do you want to do? Walk around and take a look at the village—or get a cab here and drive through the park first?"

Helen, whose feet still hurt her, suggested the drive.

Several cabmen, spotting the Americans, were already urging them to their vehicles. Warren put Helen into one of the cabs and told the driver to take them through the park.

"What's that?" as the man began to chatter excitedly. "What in the devil's he trying to say?" For Warren's restaurant French was not equal to this conversation.

The driver finally made them understand they were to pay in advance—two francs, for which he presented them with a ticket, which Helen thought was a sort of receipt.

"Why, dear, that's awfully cheap," as they drove off.

"Oh, all cabs are much cheaper over here," explained Warren easily.

They entered the park by a massive gateway, sentinelled by a uniformed soldier. Helen had read in her Baedeker of the beauty of the park at St. Cloud, but the terraced groves, the statuary, the fountains, the vistas through arched trees, the cascades and grottoes surpassed any guide book description.

Pay In Advance.

"I say, this is great!" approved Warren. "Look through there! The fellow who laid out these grounds knew his job."

Thed river now slowed up, to give them a better view of a magnificent fountain at the top of a terraced mound.

"Dear, that must be the fountain which plays every other Sunday. Why didn't I bring the Baedeker?"

"Oh, forget your blamed old guidebook and enjoy what you see. By Jove, just look up there!"

In the distance was another fountain center with marble nymphs and flaming flower beds. Helen, with her slipper off, now leaned back and gave herself up to silent enjoyment of it all—the cool shaded groves, the smell of the woods, and the wonderful vistas through the trees. The whole park was a triumph of landscape art.

Every now and then they passed a festive picnic party with lunch spread in some secluded grove. And there were many courts of lawn-tennis and other field games, the white outing costumes of the players gleaming conspicuously against the green background.

"Well, we're getting our two francs' worth in this drive, all right. This man's got a pretty big tip coming to him."

When they had driven entirely around the great park, they again drew up before the impressive iron gate, which the soldier swung open.

"We don't want to go back to the station yet. Let's get out of here and go up to the hotel and have a drink. How about having dinner there?" and Warren motioned to the driver to let them out.

"Eh? What's that? Now what's he after?" as the driver stared at his tip, climbed down from his seat, and excitedly pointed to a taximeter in front, which they had not seen before.

"Well, what in thunder did we pay that two francs for?" demanded Warren, glacing at the taximeter which registered over seven francs. "If you think you've got a sucker here, you're wrong. You made us pay in advance, and that's all you'll get."

Here the soldier at the gate, overhearing the dispute, came out and explained to Warren, in halting English, that the two francs was the admission charged by the park, and that the taximeter charges was for the drive.

Explanations.

"Oh, if that's the way of it, all right," as Warren paid the seven francs, fifty. "But why in the devil didn't he say so?"

"Why, that's exorbitant," protested Helen indignantly, as they started up the hill to the hotel. "That makes the drive almost ten francs."

"If that's their regular rate—that's all right. All I want to know is that I'm not being held up. Now what? Want to go to the hotel for dinner now? Or take a walk around the village first?"

"I'm afraid I can't walk very far," faltered Helen.

"By George, you're a fine traveler, you are," in a tone of disgust. "Not much pleasure going anywhere with you. You're either too tired, or too hot, or your feet hurt—or some blamed thing's the matter. Come on then, we'll have dinner. Think you can sit up and take nourishment?"

There's Many a Slip.

Smithson had been really a power in his day. At any rate, he had held a job bringing him in some thousands a year—that is to say, until the smash came. After that he failed to hold any job he got, and became permanently out of luck.

His old friend Jenkins was a bit surprised, therefore, when Smithson stopped him in the street one day and angrily exclaimed:

"D'you know, I've just received the prize insult of my life! A chap down in the city offered me a job this morning!"

"Offered you a job?" replied Jenkins. "You call that an insult? I thought you were looking for a job!"

"Yes, but not at ten dollars a week. Hang it all, I can borrow more than that from you!"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Cheer up little girl."

CHAPTER XXIII.

AFTER the scene in the office, when Jennie's new employer tried to kiss her, Jennie realized if she demanded her salary—so she could leave—he would not pay her, so she resolved to work the week out if possible and be on her guard in the meantime against any outbursts on his part.

The man saw there was nothing to be gained by forcing his attentions on Jennie, so thought he would play a "waiting game" and be as nice as possible.

He apologized profusely, saying if he had not been drinking it wouldn't have happened, but that Jennie was so pretty he just couldn't help it. Jennie was determined to leave at the end of the week, though, for she could see he was only waiting a more favorable chance.

When Jennie got home that night she found her aunt, the boarding-house keeper, very ill—so sick, in fact, that they had to get a doctor. "Goodness only knows where we can get the money to pay him," thought Jennie.

The only thing the doctor could prescribe was a good rest, change of scene and good, wholesome food. Quite simple to prescribe, but how could Jennie's aunt have these things when they had barely enough to live on as it was? After the doctor had gone Jennie's aunt called her to the bedside and told her: "I know what is the matter with me, Jennie girl; it was useless for you to have called the doctor, for he could not help me and it was just an added expense that we can not afford. I've had these spells for years, but never one before as bad as this—but cheer up, my little girl, everything will be all right and I'll be out of bed soon." But in her heart she KNEW she never would.

A TYPEWRITER COSTS OVER $3000.00

AS a business man you know that the price you pay for a typewriter is a negligible sum, compared with what it really costs.

If you pay your operator fifty dollars per month and she runs the machine five years, the operating cost is $3,000.00. This, plus what you paid for the machine, represents your investment.

The vital question is, "What do I get for that $3,000.00?"

On the

you get ten to twenty per cent more work than on any other typewriter made.

The original cost of the machine, therefore, fades into nothingness.

RITCHIE SIGNS TO MEET WELSH SEPTEMBER 1

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Freddie Welsh is to get first crack at Willie Ritchie, leightweight champion of the world. Ritchie today accepted the offer made by a Vancouver club for a twenty-round contest there on September 1 with the Englishman as his opponent.

The taking of the Vancouver match followed a four-hour talk between Ritchie and James W. Coffroth, of this city, who hoped to match Tommy Murphy and the champion for September 9. Ritchie's demand on Coffroth was far greater than the local promoter cared to consent to and negotiations were dropped.

While Ritchie would not say just what he is receiving for fighting Welsh in Vancouver, it is learned on good authority that he will receive a guarantee of $15,000 with a 50 per cent interest in the moving pictures.

The champion will depart to-day for the mountains to shoot deer and incidentally get himself a good start in the training line.

Sports and Such

FAMOUS IN SPORT—III.

The Breed of Horses.

THE BREED OF HORSES IS A good deal like the city government—it is in constant need of improvement. These improvements eat up a lot of kale, but they are necessary, and the kale comes from men who oughtn't be trusted with money, anyway. Auto manufacture may cease at any moment, and you would be up against it without an improved breed of horse to take you to the office, especially if there should be a subway strike on at the same time.

The men who have the Breed of Horses nearest at heart are called Bookmakers, or Personal Friends. They work without pay in the noble cause. When you have paid your $3 matriculation fee to study the subject, they merely show you a list of horses and request you to decide in which the breed has been improved to the greatest extent, charging you for the privilege only such sums of money as you may have about you at the time. If you cannot see how this improves the Breed of Horses, you are an unmitigated bonehead and notoriety-seeker and are against personal liberty, and we wish you wouldn't read this column any more.

The funds thus accumulated are devoted to the purchase of high-grade autos for the bookmakers, as they are fat and so weighted down with bales of cush that it would injure the breed of any horse forced to haul them to the track. The Track is the institution devoted to this form of altruism. In its ideals it is not unlike those devoted to the improving of the rate of call money.

From this you can see that the Breed of Horses is not a complicated subject for the intelligent. You must merely never disagree with a Bookmaker's opinion on the breed of any horse. Of course, he may sometimes make a mistake, and then he is so ashamed that he sneaks out by the back fence before you can find him.

Before taking up the Breed of Horses seriously, devote your paycheck each week to the study of a crooked roulette wheel. It's great training.

Eaglebeak's Admirer Deserts Him for the New Star

Turned Down Trade for Joe Agler

Jersey City Offered Borton for Him

By Joe Agler.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 6.—I reckon I ought to be feeling sort of set up this morning. From what I hear, Major Frank E. Callaway, president of our ball club association, came up here to see President J. L. Lillis, of the Jersey City club, who offered him Borton, recently of the White Sox, and another player for my humble self.

They tell me Mr. Callaway turned down the offer before the deal had got beyond the debating stage.

Well, that makes me feel pretty good. I like to play ball for Atlanta, and it certainly cheers a fellow up to know he is wanted on the job. I'll just keep on doing the best I can for the Crackers and the management.

Getting back to the real business of the ball club, I want to say that we took a licking yesterday and we haven't any yelp coming. Coveleskie was right, and when he is right he is a bear. He ought to have got a shutout except for a break in the luck.

Carl Thompson, too, was in grand trim, though the Lookouts tied up the game in the ninth inning when he hit a batsman with the bases full. Then another hit batsman, an error and a base hit untied it in the tenth.

But now we have the big Pole out of the way, and with Conzelman and Price to work this afternoon, we ought to get no worse than an even break at the outside. Then we tackle the Vols, and you know they looked pretty easy last time.

REDS BUY HARRINGTON FROM N. ENGLAND LEAGUE

LYNN, MASS., Aug. 6.—Frank Harrington, a pitcher of the Lynn club of the New England League, to-day is heading to join the Cincinnati National League team. An offer for Harrington made a month ago was accepted with understanding that the pitcher would not leave Lynn until the close of the New England League season.

But Manager Flaherty received and accepted an offer of a bonus if he would allow Harrington to join the Reds immediately. Harrington is 21 years old.

One Comfort, the Pole Is Out of the Way for the Time Being

IT WAS A TOUGH GAME FOR THOMPSON TO LOSE

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE wad of balsam soothes the sting of defeat:

The tough-grained Pole is out of the way.

We expected it—and we got it. We didn't get it as overwhelmingly as we thought we were going to, and that is some comfort. Carl Thompson earned only praise for his stubborn defense. And his helpers with him.

Still, it would have been a grand little achievement to have trimmed the Irish Newsboy, while the trimming was so nearly good. One little scratch tally in the ninth, now—

* * *

ANOTHER grain of comfort.

Joe Agler is going to stay with us a while longer.

Major Callaway, president of the Atlanta Baseball Association, traveled to Chattanooga Monday to meet President Lillis, of the Jersey City club. Major Callaway didn't know what Mr. Lillis wanted to see him about, but Mr. Lillis' wire said it was urgent.

Mr. Lillis wanted our old friend, Joe Agler. Mr. Lillis wanted Joe so much that he offered Borton, recently a White Sox, who went to New York in the Chase trade and to J. C. for Jack Knight. Also Mr. Lillis offered boot in the shape of another player.

Major Callaway is reported by the newsfinders—entirely apart from what Joe himself heard about it—as turning down the deal as soon as he found out what Mr. Lillis wanted.

Suits us fine.

* * *

WHEN the official wranglers in any old league run out of wrangling material, they usually dig up the clever and start in on the proposition of a ball player being out if he slides into first base, and, if so, why not?

There are plenty of wranglers on both sides. The last time the crool war broke out it was in the American Association. But it did not stay there.

An honest German umpire named O'Brien called out a guy named Dixie Walker for sliding bean-first to sack No. 1 in St. Paul. Billy Friel, manager of the Saints and incidentally of Mr. Walker, protested to President Chivington.

Chivvy upheld the umpire, saying something about an "unwritten law" promulgated, or words to that effect, by the umpires as a rebuke to baserunners who are merely trying to "make the play close," and confuse the worthy umps.

* * *

RIGHT away some loafer touched off August Herrmann about it.

The august August is about three-fourths of the National Commission—when Ban Johnson is away—and he is ever ready to blow up about anything.

This time he performed as per schedule.

Mr. Herrmann said, in part:

"A player is permitted under the rules to reach any base by any method he sees fit." So long, it is understood, as the said player proceeds under his own steam.

Mr. Herrmann remarked further:

"He may run, jump, crawl or walk on his hands, so long as he travels within the lines. This is provided in the rules of the game, and no umpire or league president or anybody else has any right to change the rule."

* * *

MR. CHIVINGTON, please copy.

But here is another rule:

"Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the accuracy of the umpire's judgment and decision on a play."

Rule 65, if you want to look it up.

And what we should like to inquire is, how is Mr. Herrmann to decide from the protests of outraged managers whether the sliding-to-first-base runner was called out because the umpire was prejudiced against that mode of transportation, or because he really was out?

Mr. Herrmann being notably strong for the rules, you know.

DROP a little tear for Cornelius McGillicuddy.

As if it weren't tough enough to lose half a series to the wretched Browns, and have the furious Naps roaring along, only eight or ten games behind, here comes the news that Jack Coombs, famous iron man, is about ready to come back.

Coombs has been out of the game since early in the spring. Typhoid was the cause. Now he is reported bigger and better than ever, just like a circus.

Pity poor Connie! He was wondering and wondering who would pitch the opening game of the world's series—Bender or Plank.

And now here's Coombs!

EAST MEETS WEST TO-DAY IN BIG TENNIS DOUBLES

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Double teams from the East and West to-day met for the final elimination in the National tennis championships. Clarence Griffin and John Strachan, of San Francisco, Pacific Coast champions, were matched against Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern champions.

The winners of to-day's match will be entitled to play Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bundy, present National champions, at Newport, R. I., on August 18, for the 1913 doubles honors of the United States.

JACK KEATING KNOCKS OUT GALL IN THE FOURTH ROUND

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Jack Keating, the local heavyweight, knocked out George Gall, in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Atlantic A. C. Garden here last night. Gall was reeling around the ring helpless in the fourth round when his seconds threw up the sponge.

John Lester Johnson, the South American heavyweight, knocked out Bob Lee, a dusky-hued boxer of Brooklyn, in the third round of the semi-final bout, scheduled to go ten rounds.

SMITH IN NO-HIT GAME; ARM NOW OUT OF SPLINTS

PITTSFIELD, MASS., Aug. 6.—William I. Smith, of the Pittsfield Eastern Association Baseball Club, who took his injured arm out of splints the day before, pitched a no-hit game against Waterbury yesterday, shuting them out 3 to 0. Smith issued no passes and struck out six men. Only three Waterbury players saw first base, all on errors.

JAKE STAHL MAY SUCCEED CALLAHAN AS HEAD OF SOX

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—A rumor was industriously circulated in local baseball circles to-day to the effect that Jake Stahl, former manager of the Red Sox, is scheduled to succeed Jimmy Callahan as manager of the Chicago White Sox, at the close of the present year. Stahl has been spending the summer, since his dismissal, at Annisquam, but could not be reached there to-day. Some of Stahl's close personal friends are inclined to ridicule the idea that Stahl will return to baseball.

WHITNEY TO GET HERE FRIDAY; WHITE SATURDAY

FRANK WHITNEY will arrive Friday morning for his ten-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory a week from to-night. White will get in Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The "Fighting Carpenter" has been training for a week on his farm in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but yesterday moved his training quarters to O'Connells' gymnasium in Chicago, where he will remain until to-morrow night.

The following wire was received this morning:

Will arrive in Atlanta Friday morning. Am stopping in Chicago for a couple of days so as to get benefit of sparring partners. Working at O'Connell's gym.

There are not any clever lightweights in Atlanta for Frank to work out with. In the Windy City there are plenty of boys who can give the "Fighting Carpenter" just the sort of work he needs.

Tickets for the show will go on sale this afternoon at Shepherd's Cigar Store, corner of Edgewood and Pryor. On account of the size of the Auditorium-Armory, it has been decided to make the prices $1, $1.50 and $2. The balcony brings the low price, the dress circle $1.50 and the ringside seats "two bucks."

Already big orders have been received from Macon, Athens, Augusta and other nearby cities and towns. It is expected that the advance sale will be even heavier than for the Battling Nelson bout, which totaled nearly $2,500.

Polo To-day---If It Doesn't Rain

Everybody Invited to McPherson

If only J. Pluvius will compromise with the weather man for this one afternoon, he will earn the respect and friendly admiration of several thousand Atlantans, who are planning to witness Atlanta's first polo match on the big parade ground at Fort McPherson, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Everything is set for the contest between a team representing Atlanta and a quartet of officers of the Seventeenth Regiment. The personnel of the officers' team has not been announced, but it is known that there are enough experts with the Seventeenth to make up the requisite four of experienced polo players and have a second four left over for substitutes.

The local four will be Captain J. O. Seamans, of the Governor's Horse Guard, who played the game in the army, who will lead the team; Albert Sidney J. Tucker of Lexington, Va.; E. M. Landrum, of Pensacola, Fla., and Milton Wise, of New York.

Robert F. Maddox will act as timer; Wilmer L. Moore, scorer; James R. Gray and Clark Howell, goal judges, and Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun, referee.

Moving pictures will be taken of the event and will be displayed on local screens at an early date.

In addition to the game there will be a band concert by the regimental band, and music by the Glee Club, of Company M. A tug-of-war on horseback and also wrestling on horseback.

No admission will be charged and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the sport.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Lou Castro is a busy man these days. Lou is dividing his time in eating three squares a day and getting his fighting arena in shape for his big boxing show to be staged at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. Whitney has wired Castro that he will be here Friday.

* * *

Kid Young and Mike Saul are working together for their coming bouts at the Auditorium. Young takes on Charlie Lee, while Mike will probably don the padded mitts with Eddie Hanlon. Young is developing a terrific kick in his right hand, and expects to topple Lee over long before the tenth round is reached.

* * *

Kid Wonder took a trip to The Georgian Sporting Department yesterday to inform us, that he is after a match with some local featherweight. Wonder is particularly anxious to get on with either Kid Young or Charlie Lee.

* * *

A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast want to meet Willie Ritchie, and have started bidding for the match. Both boys are willing to give the champion a neat side bet.

* * *

Packey McFarland is the latest to put in a boost for Charlie White. Packey says that Charlie is without a doubt the greatest 128-pound boy in the game to-day. Joe Thomas and Jake Abel probably agree with McFarland.

* * *

They are certainly picking soft marks for Carl Morris in the West. Al Benedict, his latest victim, would be easy for a lot of Philadelphia welterweights.

* * *

Three 10-round bouts between heavyweights are to be staged at the St. Nicholas A. C., New York, to-night. Porky Flynn, of Boston, will meet Sailor White, of Newark; Frank McGuinness, the Irish heavyweight, will battle Jack Keating, of the United States Navy, and Al Kublak is to try conclusions with Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, have been matched to meet in a ten-round go at Omaha on September 12. If Coulon finds that he is right in this bout, he may go to the coast for a scrap with Kid Williams.

* * *

A banner house is expected to attend the Gunboat Smith-Jim Flynn set-to at New York on August 8. Both boys have been doing all their training in the Eastern City, and look to be in great shape. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Cyclone Thompson and Billy Hooper, colored lightweights, may be put on in one of the bouts to be held at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. They are now dickering with Lou Castro.

* * *

Arthur Pelky and Charlie Miller may clash in a long go at Los Angeles. McCarey plans to match the pair for a September date. Tommy Burns, manager of Pelky, took the match with the understanding that if Pelky defeated Miller he was to get a fight with Gunboat Smith.

GA.-ALA. LEAGUE NOTES

Every town in the league around the Georgia-Alabama circuit is glad when the Opelika boys blow in. They're a bunch of collegians and gentlemanly fellows, as well as good ball players.

* * *

Everybody in the South knows Louis Hardage, recently with Waterbirlly, now playing in their left garden. "Chick" Hannan, the old Alabama star, who has just quit the game, is equally well known.

* * *

Then there is Bone, of Washington and Lee; Allen and Ragsdale, of Auburn; Cantley and others who have played on college diamonds and gridirons.

* * *

"Chick" Hannon, for years one of the best-known factors in Southern football and baseball, an all-Southern quarter and shortstop at Alabama, has said his "thirty" to active sports, although he will hereafter be assistant coach in athletics at Alabama, his alma mater.

* * *

Before he got an injured wing, resulting from a broken shoulder blade in a football game, Hannon was headed straight for the majors, if he wanted to ascend; but since that accident he has never had the old-time punch to his fling, and to-day his knowledge of the game is his chief asset. He knows that, and he can teach it.

* * *

He has made a success as coach for the Alabama Presbyterian College here, and has played good ball in the Southeastern and Georgia-Alabama despite his handicap. An operation last year failed to restore his arm to its old-time form, and for two seasons he has known that he was passing.

* * *

He is one of the many veterans who the fans sometimes knock, but love nevertheless, and in his exit there goes a gentleman of the field.

* * *

Killingsworth, the big Anniston pitcher, made a bid for a job with Opelika in the game Monday afternoon, should he ever get "canned" by Anniston. A fracas with the umpire caused the parking of three Pelicans, and Killy had to be borrowed for the emergency.

* * *

In right field he pulled down a stellar fly on the run, and when he came to the bat the last time he put Left-fielder Henry up against the fence to gather in a long swat from his own willow. Altogether, his work came near costing his teammates the game. He plays for the love of the thing, and says he forgot to pull in his punch.

PLAYERS MEET IN CHECKER TOURNEY FINALS TO-DAY

In the play which began here yesterday for the championship of the Southern Checker Association the following qualified for the final round to be played to-day: G. C. Anderson, North Carolina; R. W. Evans, J. S. Hall, J. H. Bishop, C. M. Farrar, Georgia; S. S. Hallman, B. Fishburne, South Carolina, and J. M. Allen, Jr., Knoxville, Tenn., the holder of the championship since 1911.

Allen lost three of his first four games and in order to qualify for the finals had to make perfect scores against his last five opponents.

Fuzzy Woodruff Describes Chicago Boy's First Fight in a Ring

CHARLEY WHITE'S DEBUT HOWLING SUCCESS

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

LET a man attain prominence in any field of endeavor—be it finance, politics, medicine, the law, burglary or the stage—some auld acquaintance is as sure to rise up and chirp "I knew when, etc.," as a bleacherite is to yell "win your old game, boy," when the pitcher comes to bat with the score 11 to 2 against him with two down in the ninth inning.

It ranks with "I told you so" and "let's have another" as one of the most useful phrases of conversation.

All of this is merely a preface to a "I knew him when" yarn about Charley White, the wonderful Chicago lightweight, who is to meet Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory arena August 13.

White is a real championship contender now. In fact, in a lightweight division remarkable for the lack of punching power among the top-notchers, White should be regarded as easily the most dangerous man of his poundage alive.

But when I first saw Charley box he was as unknown to fame as was Jim Conley before the Phagan mystery's first chapter was written.

If my memory serves me right, it was on Labor Day of 1908, at the old Hawthorne race track, the last of the Windy City's once glorious domain of the thoroughbreds.

That year boxing, racing and pretty much everything else was under the ban in Chicago, but on Labor Day it was announced that the unions were to hold their celebration at the old track and the lid was to be lifted for the occasion.

The bang-tails were to run in the afternoon; there would be fighting at night; handbook men would be allowed to operate unmolested. Every known gambling device was to be in operation.

* * *

A PICTURESQUE scene greeted the visitors. The union men were in the uniforms they had worn in the Labor Day parade. All of Chicago's noted sportsmen were on hand. Old Ed Corrigan walked about the plant of which he was once master much like a ghost is supposed to walk about the scenes of his triumphs.

The gamblers were busy early and late. Half a dozen bank crap games were running. There were a dozen kinds of swindles going. The old army game was being played in four or five different bird cages.

Before the day had gone far, in walked the Sheriff, and the games mysteriously vanished. But the races were run and the brew flowed freely.

The fights were to be held in the old betting shed, and right after the last race the shed was packed.

The star bout was a ten-round go between Cyclone Johnny Thompson, then a lightweight, and Eddie Tancel, a pretty husky boy of the division.

There were two preliminaries. On account of the presence of the Sheriff, the promoters were rather leery about staging the fights. Minutes passed, and then an hour. The spectators began to squirm. Finally two charitably-inclined gents started some fun by having a fist fight all their own at the ringside.

This quelled, the fighting began. The first bout was a tame wrestling affair. The second was a three-round go between two tough mugs, who wanted to continue the scrapping with bare knuckles after the final gong rang.

* * *

THE last preliminary was between Danny Goodman and an unknown kid introduced as Charley White. Yank Kenny refereed. Goodman then was a veteran, and a mighty hard man to beat. He was a corking good ring general, and knew about all there is to know of boxing.

White was pounds lighter, though Goodman weighed no more than 125 pounds. Goodman was all confidence. White was all earnestness. It was his first ring engagement against so seasoned a warrior. In the first round Goodman danced around him, working in and out, and landing lightly pretty much as he wished. But he was not hurting White, and every now and then the novice flashed a left hand out that carried death and destruction, but Goodman was never there.

The second round was about a repetition of the first, White vainly striving to land a crushing blow. The final round was fast and furious. White was on top of Goodman from the gong. Left and right were whipped out with lightning rapidity. Goodman was boxing his best, but finally a left found its way to his stomach. Goodman doubled up and all but collapsed, and the crowd was on its feet yelling.

The veteran, though, quickly covered and stalled through the remaining minute of the round. Though Goodman had landed twenty blows to White's one, the one that Charley put over evened the fight, and he was entitled to a draw.

That was his baptism of fire, and so impressive was his showing that Nate Lewis, who was at the ringside, promptly took the boy under his tutelage and started him on his climb to the championship.

* * *

I DID NOT see White box again until he met Jake Abel in the Auditorium a few weeks ago. I had always believed Abel about as clever a boy as the South boasts. I had no idea that he would knock White out, but I had no idea that White would stop him. The bout seemed destined to go the ten rounds.

But at the first gong White showed more than I have ever seen in an Atlanta ring. Abel was a toy. When White sent him crumbling to the floor in the second round, there was not a man in the house not glad that the bout ended there. It had been one-sided entirely.

In 1908 I had seen White a novice. Just five years later, if he was not a champion he was at least the most dangerous man in his division.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Unless President Groover rescinds his action, Catcher Pierre, of the Valdosta team, will not play ball any more this season in the Empire. He has been suspended for the balance of the season for an attack on Umpire Gentle in Valdosta. In Brunswick Pierre attacked Umpire McLaughlin and was fined for the job.

* * *

President W. J. Clark, of the Waycross Association, says Waycross is going to finish first and fight it out with Valdosta for the pennant. In view of the recent additions to the Waycross team, this may not prove idle talk.

* * *

Despite the certainty of financial loss in almost all cities of the Empire this season, every member of the league is making plans for baseball next season. The experience of the first season has cost some cities a bunch of money, and it is safe to predict that every team will stay within the salary limit another year.

* * *

If Jackson, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., arrange a post-season series, several Empire League teams will be badly crippled if players of those teams have to report for the series. Thomasville and Valdosta will suffer, as each team has strong men from the Cotton States teams that want to have some more baseball.

* * *

The end of this week should see a decided change in the standing of teams in the league. Thomasville has six hard games, three with Cordele and three with Waycross. Some battles worth seeing will go down in baseball history before the week-end, mark the prediction.

* * *

Pitcher Vanderlip, who played with Waycross for some time this season, is now playing with a semi-professional team in his home city, Brooklyn. Shamus O'Brien, known as "Mickey," is signed with the Baltimore team for the remainder of the season, having been turned loose by Waycross.

* * *

Because of the recent talk of a post-season series between the pennant winners of the Southern and the South Atlantic, the talk of a series between the Empire and Sally pennant winners has died down lately. However, it is probable the games will be played.

* * *

When Nance and Leininger, both third basemen, were released by Valdosta, two clever men were cut loose. Nance succeeded Leininger, only to go for Brewster, of the Cotton States.

* * *

Red Stiles, of the Thomasville team, is probably the champion hard luck pitcher of the league. In one game he gave up but two hits and then lost, the hits gotten by his teammates failing to come in bunches.

* * *

Unless the dope slips, one of the new men to appear in the Empire this month will startle the fans by his work. Recently the player in question got six hits out of seven times up in an extra inning game, three home runs and three three-base hits being the best he could do. On the bases he is said to resemble Ty Cobb.

* * *

Brunswick is taking to Whitey Morse, according to reports from the seaport city. Morse is hitting over .300, and is popular with players and fans alike. Valdosta lost a valuable man when he was allowed to go.

* * *

The attendance trophy, which was won by Waycross on opening day, is on display in Waycross and is attracting a lot of notice.

* * *

The Americus team next season will be changed a great deal, judging by comments of the present team. Like other teams in the league, Americus has changed managers several times this season, and there are fans who dislike each manager to such an extent that the team never suits everybody.

* * *

Jack Hawkins, who played ball around Atlanta for some time, and started the Empire season as a Brunswick player, is now in left field for Valdosta. He came back to the Empire from the Cotton States League, where he batted over .300 and fielded in jam-up style. Brewster, another Cotton States player, is on third for Valdosta, succeeding Nance.

* * *

While fans in Waycross regretted the release of "Goat" Holliday, the sensational first baseman, they are delighted at the way Jones is playing the bag. Jones came from Virginia to play with Brunswick, but was not good enough for the Pilots. He made good in Waycross with a rush and fields as well as Holliday.

* * *

Franks has been signed as an outfielder for Brunswick. He was a member of the Valdosta team and is considered one of the best in the league. He had a row of some kind with Jordan and his release followed.

* * *

Lately there has been a revival of the rumor that Albany will become a member of the Empire circuit. It is said that Albany and Americus like nothing better than a scrap on the ball field, and, if for no other reason, Albany would be glad to get into the Empire.

* * *

Of all the youngsters picked up by Empire League teams this season none has developed as rapidly as Anderson, a Georgia boy, now playing third base for Waycross. He has played at short and in the field, and, with another year's experience, will undoubtedly go up. He is fast on the bases and seldom fails to swipe a base if he gets on.

* * *

Pitcher Day, of the Thomasville team, has been given another name. Handsome has given away Steady. He has won so many close games that fans take his victories as a matter of fact.

* * *

According to the dope furnished by each member of the Empire six teams are going to finish first when the season ends August 27. If the teams don't quit getting bunched around first place it may be necessary to play off a tie for first place. Maybe such a game would not be interesting?

* * *

Of all the dope floating around in the Empire there is but one settled fact—whichever team wins the second half of the season will have to play some baseball to nose Valdosta out of the rag. It is possible Valdosta will win the second season, too—but hardly probable the way the team is playing just now.

Harry Glenn Saucer Favorite

25-Mile Grind Friday Night

HARRY GLENN is the most popular rider at Jack Prince's Motordrome these days. The wonderful improvement the local lad has made in the last few weeks has earned him the plaudits of every "bug." Last night Harry was at his best, and as a result he was given a big hand every time he showed up.

Harry won another match race, this time leading Billy Shields home in two straight heats of two miles each. And Harry made a wonderful showing in the ten-mile race also. Although he finished third, he would surely have copped first honors had the finish line been 25 yards farther off.

Harry took the pace most of the way. But he rode a heady race and figured to come through in the final sprint. On the last lap he gave his "boat" a shot of "oilzum" and drew up on Renel and Richards fast and sure, but he started his spurt just about one second too late. The finish was Renel, first; Richards, second; Glenn, third. A blanket would have covered the entire trio at the finish, however.

The next race meet will be Friday night, a 25-mile event, with ten starters, being the feature.

Following is the summary of the races held last night.

Motordrome Purse.

Heats, 1 mile; finals, 2 miles.

First Heat—Harry Swarts, first; Billy Shields, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Tex Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Final—Jock McNeil, first; Tex Richards, second. Time—1:25 1-5.

Special Match Race.

Harry Glenn defeated Billy Shields in two straight two-mile heats. Time—1:31 3-5, 1:31.

Atlanta Sweepstakes.

Heats, 1 mile; final, 10 miles.

First Heat—Tex Richards, first; Morty Graves, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Harry Glenn, first; Georges Renel, second. Time—45 seconds.

Final—George Renel, first; Tex Richards, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time—7:22.

SAVANNAH CLUB RECALLS REILLY FROM AMERICUS

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 6.—By exercising optional rights, the Savannah Baseball Association has recalled Infielder Reilly, of the Americus club in the Empire State League, to relieve Zimmerman at second base. Owing to the terrible slump with which Zimmerman has been suffering, both in fielding and in batting, because of ill health, he has been suspended from the Indian crew temporarily. If Reilly, who was with Savannah during the early part of the season, makes good, Zimmerman will not be played again this season.

Reilly reported for duty upon the return of the Lipemen from Albany. He is easily the best player in the Empire League. He has batted at a steady clip of never less than .355 all season; has played at second, short, third base and in the outfield, and has taken care of each of these several jobs with success.

CRASH FATAL TO 2 LAID TO BAD AUTO BRAKE

Car Rolled Into Train's Path, Declares J. P. Heard, Whose Wife and Son Were Killed.

Struck by a Southern Railway train when their automobile went dead on the tracks of a crossing a mile north of McDonough, Ga., late Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Emma Heard, wife of J. P. Heard, of Vienna, Ga., and her ten-year-old son, Lio Lindon Heard, were killed.

Mr. Heard leaped from the car when he saw it would be impossible to escape the crash, and escaped with a few bruises. Mrs. Heard and her son were caught in the cowcatcher of the locomotive and dragged 50 feet.

The bodies of Mrs. Heard and her son were taken to Vienna. The funeral will be held there Wednesday afternoon. They were well known in Atlanta, and many friends of the family here will attend the funeral.

Mrs. Heard was Miss Emma Lashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lashley, and was a leader in the social life of her community. She is survived by her husband, who is a son of the late Senator Heard and president of the Heard Banking Company, and her parents.

Mr. Heard Tells of Accident.

Statements made Wednesday morning by Mr. Heard and J. L. Mable, engineer of the train, indicate that the accident was unavoidable and was the result of the failure of the emergency brake of the automobile.

"My wife, my son Lindon and myself left our home in Vienna, in my two-passenger roadster," said Mr. Heard, "to attend the motorcycle races in Atlanta. We passed through McDonough about 2 o'clock. Ten minutes later we passed over the brow of a long steep hill that leads down to the railroad tracks. A train can not be seen until the crossing is almost reached. We were only a few yards from the track when Mrs. Heard saw the train coming and shouted.

"We were going about 25 miles an hour. I at once shut off my engine and applied the brake, but it failed to work. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable, I leaped from the car and shouted for Mrs. Heard and my son to do likewise. They were probably too frightened to do so. The next thing I remember was hearing their screams as the train struck them."

Engineer Gives His Version.

Engineer Mable declared that when he saw the automobile he applied airbrakes, but the crossing was too near for the air to take effect before the automobile was struck.

"I was running about 25 miles an hour and the crossing was about a hundred yards ahead of me when I saw the automobile. The car was running as fast as my train, and had plenty of time to cross the tracks in front of me.

"When the machine got to within about ten yards of the track, it slowed down and rolled up until the front wheels of the car were on the tracks. Then it stopped. I at once applied the airbrakes, but too late to have any appreciable effect on the speed of the train."

Life Insurance Men Dine; Name Delegates

Atlanta members of the National Association of Life Underwriters enjoyed an informal banquet at Hotel Ansley Tuesday night and elected delegates to the annual convention of the organization in Atlantic City in September.

The delegates are F. W. Burr, J. H. Byrley, Paul H. Dobbins, W. R. Hawkins, R. F. Shedden and A. C. Newell. The following alternates were named: R. L. Foreman, Oscar Palmour, W. R. Hawkins, J. M. Skinner and R. J. Guinn.

Isadore Duncan's Motor Is Wrecked

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Isadora Duncan gave proof of her stoicism the other night when her chauffeur flung her car at full speed in pitch darkness against the closed barriers of a railway crossing at Mondragon village.

Instead of jumping out, under the stress of the ghastly memories of her children's fate, she remained in her seat and a little later reached Orange practically unhurt.

Gerard Threatens to Quit as Ambassador

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Justice James W. Gerard, of New York, the Ambassador to Germany, after inspecting all the available houses in Berlin, says that unless he succeeds in finding a place adapted to the requirements of himself, his family and the embassy, he was seriously considering declining the post of Ambassador.

He has been unable to find quarters, although he is willing to pay for them out of his private means.

'September Morn' Is 'Art' in Augusta

AUGUSTA, Aug. 6.—"September Morn" has made her appearance in Augusta. Many prints of the painting may be seen in a local bookstore window, but no arrest of the proprietor has been made or threatened arrest.

Augusta takes "September Morn" as a matter of course. The people here deem her graceful and the fact that she is minus a wardrobe does not cause any young girl to blush, for all have seen reproductions of real art before.

How and Why to Eat Watermelon

Cool, but do not chill Mr. Melon.

Cut it lengthwise, not in round slices.

Save the seeds, make "watermelon tea."

Use your teeth—not knives or forks.

Watermelon is refreshing and good for the stomach and kidneys.

P. S.—These tips are furnished by the "champeen" melon-eaters of Congress.

HOWARD ONE OF 8 BEST MELON EATERS

Georgia Congressman Right Up in Race for "Champeen" Title in Capitol Cafes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—State secrets on statesmen's appetites, and particularly watermelons during the present height of the watermelon season, were divulged to-day. The divulger is R. J. Martyn, "boss" of the Capitol Cafes.

Twenty big, fat watermelons are consumed by Congressmen every day, according to "Chef" Martyn. Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is the acknowledged "champeen" watermelon eater. He gets outside of from one to three big slices daily.

Other watermelon "fanatics" who appear to be crowding Clayton for the title are Representative Mann, of Illinois; Sereno Payne, of New York; Sims, of Tennessee; Dietrick, of Massachusetts; Austin, of Tennessee; Stedman, of North Carolina, and Howard, of Georgia.

Approached on his watermelon prowess, Clayton gave the following panegyric:

"Watermelon beats ice cream or lemonade all hollow as a cool refreshment. It is the most luscious, refreshing fruit possible to be secured in summer.

"Some people eat salt on watermelon. That is a mistake. Salt militates against its palatability and digestibility. I take mine straight.

"Watermelon is a splendid diuretic. It cleanses the whole digestive system.

"Watermelon seed tea is an old Southern remedy for kidney trouble.

"I don't care for thick-rind striped melons. I don't like the hybrids between the Georgie 'rattlesnake' melon and the 'scaly bark.' Some of these are a cross between a guinea melon and a horse gourd.

"The best melon grown is in Alabama, with a thin rind, a whitish melon. Lead me to them any time."

Adventists Report On Publishing Work

FORT VALLEY, Aug. 6.—The report of the publishing work of the denomination was the feature of to-day's business session of the Georgia Conference of Seventh-day Adventists which is meeting here in its ten-day annual encampment.

This report showed that the publishing work had grown from one small printing house worth $652, with five employees, printing two periodicals in one language in 1862, to 39 publishing houses, worth $1,175,092, with 610 employees, printing 126 periodicals in 71 languages in 1912.

Cotton Schedule Is Scored by Lippit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Declaring that the schedules in the Democratic tariff bill relating to cotton, silk and wool are "capricious and illogical," Senator Lippitt, of Rhode Island, to-day advocated as substitute provisions the Dingley law rates with a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent.

"I believe the cotton manufacturers as a rule are willing to try the experiment of a reduction in the tariff," said Senator Lippitt. "They protest against revision."

Mrs. Longstreet Is Now in Sanitarium

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, former postmaster at Gainesville, is under treatment in the sanitarium of Dr. J. H. Lowney here.

The long fight waged by Mrs. Longstreet to retain her commission as postmaster and the part she has taken in politics brought about a breakdown which required rest and medical attention.

RICH MEN RULE CHURCH, SAYS RICHMOND

Morgan Held House of Rishops in Hollow of Hand, Asserts Episcopalian Rector.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug., 6.—"Our House of Bishops is led in tow by Wall street. The lat J. P. Morgan was the power behind Bishop Greer, and he held our House of Bishops in the hollow of his hand.

"The cathedral on Morningside Heights is a standing monument to our New York corrupt money power. It is the embodiment of ecclesiastical snobbery, spiritual frippery and moral incompetency.

"Since the day of Bishop Potter the diocese of New York has been in control of half a dozen plutocrats. In Philadelphia the Episcopal Church is 'run' by a few rich men. They control the Bishop (Rhinelander), who, in mental ability, personal authority and moral aggressiveness is not, by any means, a great man.

"August Belmont is at the head of our race track gamblers. His career is one of the worst careers for an American youth to imitate. Yet he is prominent in the Church of the Ascension on lower Fifth avenue."

The foregoing quotations are from a sermon delivered in St. John's Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond.

"In most of the large parishes of the Episcopal Church throughout the country we find men like Belmont and the late J. P. Morgan, who curb the spiritual influence of the clergy, make them timid, and in the end cause them to shrivel up morally. Men in humble circumstances distrust our sincerity. The Episcopal Church is not sincere in its present assumed attitude toward labor.

"My own ecclesiastical superior Bishop Rhinelander, was elected two years ago," said Mr. Richmond, "largely through the push and pull of Wall street interests, corporation lawyers and social idlers, together with a few of our clergy among whom towered pre-eminently the Rev. Father Mortimer, of the 'High Church gang,' who has since been disposed from the ministry for gross immorality."

Banker Gets 5 Years For Embezzlement

MOULTRIE, Aug. 6.—The jury trying J. H. Cason, former cashier of the Bank of Crossland, for embezzling more than $7,000, returned a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Thomas to five years in the penitentiary. G. F. Clark, president of the Crossland Bank, and Assistant State Bank Examiner Anderson, of Atlanta, were the principal witnesses for the prosecution.

It was with difficulty that Cason kept from collapsing as he stood up to hear his sentence. While making his statement to the jury he wept freely.

Mrs. Ham's Name Too Much for P. O. Clerks

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 6.—"Mrs Henry W. J. Ham" is the form of signature that must be written dozens of times each day by the assistants in the local postoffice here, and employees are complaining because it is long and awkward to write. This is the form in which the appointment of the new postmaster was made and in which the bond was given.

Mrs. Anna E. Ham is the name by which the new postmaster is known to her friends.

Aero Manufacturer Fails for $6,000,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Extravagent living and speculation in the silk trade were declared to-day to have caused the downfall of Armand Duperdessin, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of fraudulently raising millions of dollars for the extension of his aeroplane factory.

M. Duperdessin's liabilities amount to $6,000,000, whereas his assets are given at only $2,000,000.

A great deal of important work relating to crops, credit, stock questions and co-operation will come before the convention starting Thursday morning.

'Country-Bred Folks' Meet at Grant Park

The Country Collective Society will hold a meeting in the main pavilion in Grant Park Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The membership of the Society is made up of country-bred persons residing in and around Atlanta. It was organized to promote better friendship among the members, and to preserve the tradition of ante-bellum days in Dixie.

It is proposed to erect a log cabin in Grant Park and furnish it with old-fashioned articles. R. D. Hawkins is president and Robert P. Martin secretary.

President Asked to Visit 2 Dixie States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Senators Fletcher, of Florida, and Williams, of Mississippi, and Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, called on President Wilson to-day to invite him to visit their States should he conclude to make a Southern trip this fall.

The President said he would be glad to accept their hospitality should he make the trip. Senator Fletcher especially desires the President to visit Jacksonville, and Senator Williams brought a delegation from Meridian with him.

K. of C. Plan Change In Insurance Rates

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—The election of officers and the reports of the supreme officers featured the two business sessions of the delegates to the Knights of Columbus' thirty-first annual convention to-day. The sessions were held at Hotel Somerset.

Important also among the probable actions of the delegates at to-day's sessions is the changing of the insurance laws so the assessments may rest more easily on the older members.

MEDICAL MEN OF WORLD GATHER IN LONDON

Militants Threaten to Break Up Meeting at Which America Is Well Represented.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—With upward of 7,000 doctors present and every quarter of the world represented, the International Medical Congress was opened to-day in Albert Hall by Prince Arthur. It is the biggest gathering of its kind ever held.

Among the Americans here are Prof. Harvey W. Cushing, of Harvard University; Doctors Simon Flexner and S. J. Meltzer, of the Rockefeller Institute of New York; Dr. Theo. C. Janeway, Dr. Simon Baruch, Dr. Russell Fowler and Dr. Henry Koplik, all of New York; Dr. Rudolph Matas, of New Orleans; Dr. J. B. Murphy, of Chicago; Dr. F. L. Hupp, of Wheling, W. Va.; Dr. J. O. McReynolds, of Dallas, Texas; Surgeon General Charles F. Stokes, of the United States Navy, and Major Frederick E. Russell, of the Army.

More than 100 policemen were stationed about the hall to prevent any attack by militant suffragettes, who have threatened to break up the convention because their leaders were forcibly fed by medical men in prison. Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst issued a call to her followers to interrupt the medical congress at every opportunity.

"Prison doctors are trying to make imbeciles of suffragettes and the whole fraternity should be punished," said the militant leader.

The Lowest Point of Land

The lowest point of land in the United States is in Death Valley, California, 276 feet below the sea level. In the early days this valley was the terror of explorers and the trail through it was marked by the bleaching bones of hundreds of explorers. According to geologists this part of the country was once covered by a great sea, to which they attribute the deposits of borax and salt. Reports have been made at various times about the discovery of gold in this desert and in 1905 it came into considerable prominence when Death Valley Scotty, a miner, made his appearance in Los Angeles and announced the mysterious find of vast riches in this graveyard. Little, however, was ever heard of these supposed riches after the miner had made a spectacular dash to New York in a special train and spent a roll of money on the Great White Way in New York. The mineral deposits of the valley have been capitalized for a number of years and the valley has not the terror for travelers that it previously had. In fact, automobile endurance runs have been made through Death Valley several times. The heat is excessive and a temperature of 122 degrees in the shade has frequently been observed in the summer.

ATLANTA IS 16TH CITY IN U. S. IN PARCEL POST

Remarkable Increase in Volume of Mail Here Arouses Favorable Comment in Washington.

Postmaster Hugh McKee declared Wednesday that the large increase in the amount of mail handled in the Atlanta postoffice was the subject of favorable comment in Washington among department officials.

During the past year more than 50,000,000 letters, not including newspapers and periodicals were stamped or canceled in the Atlanta postoffice This is an increase over the previous year of about 15,000,000 letters.

Showing the progressive spirit of Atlanta merchants in taking advantage of the new parcel post, Mr. McKee said: "We are handling more than 7,000 parcel post packages per day, which is more than are handled in Louisville, Indianapolis and other cities twice the size of Atlanta. The Atlanta office ranks sixteenth in the number of parcel post packages handled in the United States.

"Here in the postoffice we have a chance to keep close tab on Atlanta's activity and correspondence, and I will say that the growth in mail business since I came into office has been marvelous, and scarcely seems believable when you compare the books of previous years with the fiscal year just ended."

$1,200 GIVEN FOR BIG COTTON SHOW

Crushers Donate Fourth of the Amount Needed — Committees etG Promises of Support.

With $1,200, one-fourth of the amount needed, contributed by the Cotton Seed Crushers of Georgia, plans for a permanent exhibit of cotton products which it is proposed to establish in the new Champer of Commerce building have received an impetus that bids fair to carry the profect through. Other lines lines of the cotton industry of the State will be asked to contribute an amount in proportion to their importance, and it is thought the entire amount will be raised within a few weeks.

The gift of the Crushers was made through their chairman, W. M. Hutchinson, at a meeting late Tuesday afternoon of the cotton products committee of the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition Committee, of which Mell R. Wilkinson is chairman. The meeting was addressed by Mayor Woodward, Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Wilmer L. Moore, S. A. Carter and others.

Special committees for each branch of the cotton industry will be named Wednesday. These committees will confer with respresentatives of each line, including fertilizers, the textile industry, the cotton oil industry and ginning, and it will be determined to just what extent the movement for an exhibit will be supported.

Beware, Poseurs, of 'Soul Photos'

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—"With the development of 'soul photography,'" the latest addition to the picture maker's are, says Miss Emma Gerhard, "the modern photographer will vie with the old masters in producing pictures that will live forever.

"It is wholly a matter of art," said Miss Gerhard. "It consists of bringing out in the subject what is really in him or her, not in making an artificial reproduction of his features and clothes.

"Every human being is constantly posing. There are a thousand and one little superficial things about every man and woman which cover up the real self, and these things overshadow all else in photographs."

French Want Trading Base North of Canal

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The commission sent by the French Government to study the effect upon French commerce of the opening of the Panama Canal reports unfavorably upon the establishment of a commercial base either on Guadaloupe or Martinique. These French possessions in the West Indies are too far south of the regular Panama route, says the commission, and shippers will rather coal in Porto Rico or Cuba.

Lieutenant Hallier, representing the Minister of Marine, recommends, however, the establishment of a naval station at Fort DeFrance, Martinique.

China Picks Cornell Grad to Replace Wu

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, CHINA, Aug. 6.—The government, according to latest information, intends to appoint Alfred Sze, a Cornell graduate, as Minister to Washington. It planned to make Wu Tingfang Ambassador, but the American Government did not agree to raise the status of the legation here and this necessitated the nomination of a junior.

Mr. Sze was nominated Minister to Washington in 1911, but did not go to his post on account of the revolution.

CAPE COD TOWNS IN PERIL FROM FOREST FIRE

Summer Residents Flee as the Flames Sweep Over 40 Square Miles—Autos Carry Water.

HYANNIS, MASS., Aug. 6.—With more than forty square miles of Cape Cod timber devastated by a roaring forest fire that has caused a loss of more than $250,000, the fate of this town and nearby villages hung in the balance to-day.

This forenoon the flames raged between here and South Yarmouth depot. If the wind turns to the northwest veteran forest fire fighters declare Hyannis, West Yarmouth and the adjoining villages are doomed.

Hundreds of summer visitors as well as year-round residents are prepared to flee. One thousand volunteer fire fighters have been trying various schemes to check the onward rush. Ditches were dug, advance fires built and tons of water poured on the flames.

Summer residents have placed automobiles at the disposal of the fire fighters and touring cars and limousines are transporting gallons of water.

Residents living in sections remote from the different villages in the threatened districts have been coming into town with all their belongings, leaving their cottages and barns to the flames.

FLEETS OF WORLD AT CANAL OPENING

Secretary Daniels Plans Huge Naval Display for 1915—Announces Defense Policy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels to-day announced his plan to have all the world's fleets mobilize in Hampton Roads in February, 1915, and, led by the American squadron, proceed through the Panama canal and up the West Coast to San Francisco.

Secretary Daniels considers that this will form a fitting opening for the Panama canal besides being the greatest naval pageant the world has seen.

In addition to this, Secretary Daniels intends to have the American fleet, headed by the old battleship Oregon, steam through the canal next spring to celebrate the opening of the passageway to ships of commerce.

"It has beeen stated," said the Secretary of the Navy to-day, "that I intend to divide the Atlantic fleet and to keep a portion of it on the Pacific side. This is erroneous. What I intend to do is to divide the time of the fleet so that it will spend six months of the year on one coast and then go to the other, instead of spending all its time on the Atlantic side as at present."

Grain Notes

Dry and hot weather.

* * *

The Missouri State report on corn was not as bad as expected.

* * *

Trading in all grains was of enormous volume yesterday. Everybody wanted to sell on reported cooler weather over the larger portion of the grain region. The selling seemed to be profit taking by holders, who were tired of waiting for the anticipated lower temperatures and rains. Offerings were readily absorbed by strong sources. Along toward the close corn led in excitement and strength, but failed to retrieve the early decline.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Wheat has had a break of 3¼c from Monday's high price and the trade seems more bearish because of the big receipts, anticipation of good showing by the Government report Friday, and a lessening of the export demand and the decline in cash premiums. It would not be surprising to see prices drag some lower. What the corn market will do to-day depends on how much rain is shown on the map. With good soaking rains over the belt a sharp break is anticipated, but with only light showers and high temperatures, traders look for prices to hold around present levels and possibly go a little higher."

* * *

Nicolet, of The Kansas City Star, says that Kansas will have one of the smallest corn crops this year ever produced.

* * *

It is intimated that stop-loss orders are heavy in all speculative corn markets, and that a decline of 1½c or so would uncover many. Chicago people report country houses buying, with orders accompanied by sensational crop news.

* * *

John Inglis wired Logan & Bryan: "Southeastern Nebraska, with exception of some of the bottoms, all corn suffering and losing ground. Considerable acreage just tasseling, for which some hopes are entertained, is fast losing, as tasseling period is just when rain is most needed."

* * *

Yields of 739,730,000 bushels of wheat, 2,800,000,000 bushels of corn, 1,003,266,000 bushels of oats and 14,702,000 bales of cotton were estimated for this season in the annual crop report of the Continental and Commercial National Bank made public to-day. Other yields were estimated. Rye 36,854,000 bushels, barley 200,527,000 bushels and hay 66,610,000 tons. The increase in the wheat yield was estimated at 9,000,000 bushels over last year's crop. This is 170,000,000 bushels more than the United States can use in one year.

* * *

Grain region forecast: Illinois cloudy, with showers in north and central portions to-night or Thursday; cooler. Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, showers to-night or Thursday and cooler; Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan, generally fair; Iowa probably light showers to-night or Thursday; Dakotas, cloudy to-night and Thursday; warmer.

Corn was sold on reports of rains west of the river.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Influenced by steady cables and an absence of rain in Texas, the cotton market opened firm to-day, with first prices at a net advance of 3 to 7 points from last night's close. In view of yesterday's break the short interest was a little nervous. This, coupled with private advices from Texas stating, notwithstanding last week's rains, more moisture is need over the Southwestern belt, resulting in prices soaring some 2 to 8 points from the initial level. The selling was very light and scattered. Shorts were good buyers. Spot interests also bought.

During the forenoon the market was steady on buying on bullish advice from Theodore Price on high temperatures in Oklahoma. High temperature there is usually the forerunner of rain.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.60; October, 11.08; January, 10.94; March, 11.03.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 6.—This market was due 2 points higher on August and 2 to 2½ points lower on later positions, but opened steady, at a net decline of 1½ to 2 points. At 12:15 p. m. the market was steady, net unchanged to ½ point higher.

Spot cotton quiet, at 3 points decline; middling, 6.43d; sales, 6,000 bales, including 5,100 American bales; imports, 12,000, of which all were American bales.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 2½ to 4 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

Futures opened barely steady.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: Sentiment is bearish.

Norman, Mack & Co.: We still continue to believe that it is poor business policy to follow the decline.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Operators take the view that enough cotton will be for sale on any rally to prevent much advance.

COTTON GOSSIP

There were rumors that freight room had been engaged for August shipment from New York stock. Liverpool is understood to be long of August and to own a good bit of the local stock according to Pearsall's.

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce says: "Cotton goods retailers are optimistic concerning fall trade, and many of them are now operating in the local market. Jobbers are asking for shipment at once of all goods due September 1, with requests that new business be booked for September delivery of a volume sufficient to take care of the goods anticipated for immediate shipment."

* * *

Riordan has been an enormous seller of new crops during the last few days. It was believed that he sold for customers of Pell. Last week Riordan's buying was a feature.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy over Oklahoma and east Tennessee; part cloudy to fair over the Atlantics. Fair over rest of the belt. No rain in the West; some nice rains in North Carolina and a few light showers in Georgia. Gulf disturbance formation still there; should move westward in a few days and give prospects of precipitation over south Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool's opening after the holidays was significantly low. Bulls had hoped that foreign spinners would show some concern over the Bureau condition figures promulgated Friday last when the Liverpool market began business yesterday. But they did nothing of the kind; on the contrary, absence of demand for forward cotton proved an active bearish factor. Students of the staple say there can be no question as to the existence of a large forward requirement. Why, then, is demand lacking now, when, under normal conditions, as in ordinary years, consumers cover their fall, winter and spring requirements, exporters busily engage in catering into forward commitments, the future markets supply the hedges and the steamships sell ocean freight room?

"To the man who searches for the cause behind every effect the answer comes easy. It is Washington's threat of prohibitive legislation. The effect of this threat is twofold, and its ramifications are both subtle and obvious. Meanwhile, the American rings are short, the volume of business light and the trade in suspense."

* * *

There were no rains shown in the weather map, which brought out a fair amount of buying early. The selling was very much scattered. Weld was principal buyer. There were some unfavorable private reports being received this morning.

Liverpool cables: "Market good on reports of drouth damage in Texas, Oklahoma. Manchester reports poor."

* * *

Map indicates cooler with some precipitation coming in from the Central grain States.

* * *

Austin, Texas, wires: "Farmers in town yesterday complaining of plant shedding and recent rains insufficient."

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Trading was active at the opening of the stock market to-day, but the list was irregular and quotations showed a considerable division of sentiment. California Petroleum was again under pressure, declining ⅝ to 18½, while Canadian Pacific sustained the same amount of loss. Lehigh Valley sold off ¾, but rallied and recovered most of its decline.

United States Steel common began at 61⅛ for the loss of ½, but within half an hour was selling around 61⅝.

Illinois Central and Union Pacific showed firmness, each advancing ⅝. Later both shaded. Great Northern preferred advanced ½. American Smelting, after selling unchanged, shaded ¼. Among the other losses were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; New Haven, ⅜; Anaconda Copper, ¼; and Chio Copper, ¼.

Western Union Telegraph spurted, gaining a point. Southern Pacific, Reading and Northern Pacific advanced.

The curb was steady. Americans in London were firm on cablegrams placing a better construction on the United States montetary situation.

Britain's Sordid Attitude to the Panama Exposition.

Great Britain's refusal to take part in the Panama Canal Exposition of 1915 may be accepted in sorrow rather than in anger—sorrow that the government of so great an empire should have sunk into such a narrow rut of parochial politics that for the sake of a ha'porth of self-advantage it would sacrifice its share in the nobler spirit of rejoicing in a world's great work well done.

Here, then, is the childish retort to the refusal of our Government to submit to arbitration the dispute about the canal tolls—"We won't play in your yard."

Of the dispute itself this newspaper has already on many occasions expressed its emphatic views. Based on a shadowy protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, in which there was never any practical reality, Great Britain undertakes, under the letter of certain treaties made at a time when the idea of a canal at Panama was not dreamed of, to tell the United States that it can not send its own coast-wise traffic at a lower rate than foreign ocean traffic through a canal every dollar of whose vast cost it has itself paid for and which runs through territory entirely under the American flag!

In practical operation the amount involved on the ocean-going traffic of foreign ships would admittedly be so small that the raising of a dispute about it at all by any foreign government becomes a shining example of "hot potato" stand diplomacy.

From a government that acquired the Suez Canal through the devious, if forceful, methods Great Britain employed—always, of course, strictly observing every honorable obligation to its neighbors from the purely and curious British viewpoint—the Panama protest was simply an astonishing exhibition of sordid and envious greed.

It would be difficult to believe that such a decision as this by Great Britain represented anything more than the clamor of its Tory press—the kind of press that a day or two ago exploited an article calling for the abolition in tennis of the overhand service which enabled McLoughlin to win back the Davis cup—if it were not for the fact that the government is so largely radical in its tone. It is difficult, even with that in mind, to believe that this decision about the San Francisco fair can possibly represent general British sentiment toward America.

Americans, generally speaking, are so broad-minded that they do not want fully to realize that it may be only "hands across the sea" when there is something substantial in Uncle Sam's. They know full well that the friendship that has to be bought is not worth paying for. John Bull is surely not so poverty-stricken that he must haggle over a penny with a friend. This show of petty temper is, alas, a deplorable betrayal of a mean spirit.

And to base his position on a high-sounding principle is for John Bull to pose on a pedestal of lofty self-righteousness which history never erected for him, and which would topple if tapped with even a toy hammer of truth.

But, if great nations can sometimes be small, smaller nations can frequently be big. Twenty-two, including even Japan, have agreed to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and its success and interest can not now be materially impaired. The canal itself, the greatest wonder of the world wrought by man, will be open, and ships of all nations, even those of Great Britain, will be passing through it on their voyages over the new trade routes of the oceans, opening up new countries and new enterprises and new profits for all the peoples of the earth to share—among them Great Britain, and not the least.

California and Our Merchant Marine.

California is advancing a wholesome movement to inaugurate a merchant marine with State money, if a laggard Government continues to neglect this truly American policy.

There is a bill in the California Legislature to appoint a board of five merchant marine commissioners—one from the resident shipbuilders, one from the resident shipowners, one from the shippers of domestic goods, one from the consignees of foreign goods and one from the Sailers' Union of the Pacific. This board shall have authority from the State to pay 5 per cent per annum upon one-half the building cost of ships engaged in foreign and domestic commerce from California ports and to help on the payment of the difference between building and operating such American-built ships with American workmen and American officers and the cost of building and operating with foreign workmen and officers. The State's subsidy is to cease if ever the National Government shall aid these ships with a subsidy.

It is plain to see that California, progressive and enterprising among American States, realizes the necessity of a domestic merchant marine, and that California is willing to put her hands in her pockets and help to build such a merchant marine with heroic liberality. It is also substantially evident that California believes a merchant marine will richly repay the original cost.

The California bill will help to point the necessity in our commerce, and will, it is hoped, inspire the Government to its duty.

Somebody has to make a start in our merchant marine. Congress and the Administration seem laggard and indifferent or incapable.

If our maritime States are brave enough and public-spirited enough to make this beginning, the appealing figures are at hand to inspire them, and the example of California may be the object lesson needed to set on foot the greatest and most essential commercial policy of our country.

Mysteries of Science and Nature.

With the Aid of Photography and Ultra-Violet Microscope Man's Power of Vision Is Beginning to Rival That of Insects.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

MAN is beginning to add to his senses. If he has not discovered new ones, he has extended the range of some of those which he already possesses. When this process has been continued for a few hundred, or a few thousand, years, the human race may find that it has got upon a new level, from which it can penetrate much farther and much deeper in the wonders of the universe.

Beginning to See.

Among other things, man is beginning, under the guidance of science, to see, in a roundabout way, with the eyes of insects.

To understand this, let us first consider how we see with our natural power of vision.

Our range of sight is strictly confined within the limits of waves of light, varying in length from about 1-39,000th to about 1-57,000th of an inch. The longest of these waves produces in our brains the impression of red, and the shortest the impression of violet. The other principal colors (orange, yellow, blue and indigo) are produced by intermediate wave-lengths, each color having its own characteristic waves.

If an object reflects light of only one of these colors it assumes the hue of that color; if it reflects them all equally, it appears white, because a combination of the primary colors produces the impression of white.

But there are, in reality, enormous numbers of light waves which are longer than the longest that affect our sense of vision, and also enormous numbers that are shorter than the shortest that we can see. In either case these waves, which lie beyond one end or the other of what is called the "visible spectrum" of light, are, except for scientific devices, totally insensible to us.

Now, it has been found that certain insects, particularly ants, can perceive light waves that are shorter than 1-57,000th of an inch, which is the lower limit for human eyes.

In other words, the ant can "see" a color that lies outside the violet. If the ant has a name for this "ultra-violet" color, we are not likely to find it out.

More than that, the ant (if it possesses microscopic powers) may be able to see objects that are so minute that a "forty-billion-power" microscope would be unable to reveal them to us, because they are smaller than the smallest light wave that lies within our range. An object as small as that would be unable to reflect perfectly a wave of violet light, and consequently no amount of direct magnification would be able to bring it clearly within the limits of sight for us.

What Ant Perceives.

But right here the magic power of photography comes to our aid and enables us to penetrate into this world of the infinitely minute, which the insects may be supposed to have regarded as their exclusive and inviolable domain!

Photography is able to do this because the sensitive plate or film is affected by those same ultra-violet waves that the ant perceives.

Suppose, then, that an object is so small that it can not reflect the violet waves, but can reflect the smaller ultra-violet ones. It is only necessary to make a photograph of it, whereupon the ultra-violet waves that it reflects will produce a chemical change in the sensitive surface of the photographic plate or film and impress an image there, which image may be magnified at will. This is the principle of the "ultra-violet microscope."

There is another way in which man has recently extended his range of vision indirectly, deep into the secrets of the infinitely minute. It has been done by the aid of what is called the "ultra-microscope." This depends for its action upon the fact that a minute object produces a scattering of the rays of light that fall upon it. It surrounds itself with a kind of aureole, as may be noticed when a beam of sunlight enters a dusty room, causing millions of previously invisible floating particles to glow like infinitesimal stars.

Light Reveals Objects.

Suppose that an object of this kind, too small to be seen by direct microscope examination, yet large enough to reflect the light waves that lie within our range, is placed under powerful lenses, in a beam of light so arranged that it does not pour directly into the eye of the observer. It will scatter about itself enough light not only to betray its presence but even in some cases to reveal its shape.

But doubtless we have only just begun to find out the power of the mind by its inventions to extend the range of our senses.

: The Cowboy's Creed :

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the evening paper," said my Arizona friend,
"How a feller was shook by his Missus, and brung her life to an end.
Thar'll be lots to pity the feller, and say that it served her right,
And I ain't a-setting in judgment, nor takin' up no one's fight.
But I never could shoot a rabbit, out whar rabbits is thick,
And I figger that shootin' a lady is a similar kind o' trick.
Rabbits and ladies and babies—they can't shoot back, you see,
And the guy was a cur that murdered her!" said Phoenix Phil to me.

"You remember the gal out in Phoeniz," said my Arizona friend.
"You remember the home she made me, and the dream that had to end.
I never was able to figger, when I seen I was in the lurch,
How she left my kind of a feller for the rat she met at a church,
But I wasn't no ideal husband; I was always fast and wild,
And she wanted a feller with manners and his shirt all proper biled.
I heard that he made her happy, so I figgered I'd let her be,
Which is harder sometimes than murder," said Phoenix Phil to me.

Taking Inventory

Mothers Should Not Close Their Eyes to the Defects of Their Offspring, but Should Correct Them So That in Later Life the Children Will Not Turn Out Badly.

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY now and then every business man goes carefully over his possessions, listing, appraising, advancing and depreciating their worth and valuing them by the market standards of the day. He calls this taking stock. When he is through and has balanced his ledgers, he knows precisely where he stands—what he has to hope and what to fear, where he may fight and where he must hedge.

I have often thought that there would be less failure in the world and fewer of us would come to spiritual bankruptcy if we would follow the same plan and occasionally sit down and take stock of ourselves mentally, morally and physically. It is human and comfortable to think we possess all graces and virtues and charms, but it isn't true any more than it would be for the cross-roads country store merchant to imagine himself a Wanamaker.

Why shouldn't an ugly woman, for instance, face the music and calmly take an inventory of the beauty that she lacks?

Nobody will deny that the woman who is born beautiful draws the prize package in the lottery of life, but she doesn't get everything. There is tact and charm of manner and grace, and the woman who has these has a magic veil that hides a homely face and makes it seem beautiful to those who come in contact with her. Moreover, while beauty must come by nature, these qualities may be cultivated.

It Lies With Every Woman To Be Considerate of Others.

It lies with every woman to learn a delicate consideration for the feelings of others, to acquire the art of listening with interest and to so improve her mind she will always be the most delightful and intelligent of companions. And when she can do these things she needn't worry much about the size of her nose or whether her mouth is cut bias or straight.

It seems a pity, too, doesn't it, that people don't oftener take stock of their children and see just what they are and what might be made out of them? Of course, it's delightful to think that all of our little Sallies and Johnnies and Tommies are geniuses, but our pleasure in the illusion is apt to be a little marred by the subsequent disappointment that we might so easily have saved ourselves if only we had looked at them as they were, instead of as we wished them to be.

We should think a merchant crazy if he had a store full of calico, and homespun, and pots, and kettles, and pans, and in taking stock he listed them as point lace and diamonds and pictures. Yet that is just exactly what we are doing with our children. We are calling commonplace and ordinary qualities by fine names. We won't see them as they are and make the best of them on that basis. We are so determined on raising up geniuses, instead of good business men and citizens, that now and then we convert them into hoodlums and idiots.

Why shouldn't a mother look her own children over just as she does her neighbors' and size up their strength and weakness? She should, at least, then be able to work out the problem of raising them with some sort of knowledge as a foundation and guide, instead of going at it purely as guesswork. She won't do it, however. It takes a courage to look things in the face that she doesn't possess. She won't admit that this child is feeble-minded or that one is dull, and so she deprives them of the marvelous help that modern education can give along these lines.

She shuts her eyes to the fact that Johnny is bowlegged and Tommy is knock-kneed, and she dooms them to go through life a butt for the ridicule of their acquaintances, when the defect could be so easily remedied while they are children. She takes no pains to help the ugly girl correct her awkwardness and learn the things that would make up for her lack of beauty. Even her efforts to help her children are half the time atrocious mistakes, because she has never taken stock and doesn't know what she has on hand to work with.

Life Has Given Very Few All That They Desired.

Every now and then some unhappy and tearful wife comes to me with the tale of her troubles. She is dissatisfied, discontented, disgruntled. Sometimes she is not appreciated, sometimes her heart is hurt by cold treatment, sometimes she feels that she made a mistake in marrying and yearns for a career out in the world. I don't know any remedy as good for such a state of affairs as for the woman to sit calmly down and take stock of her possesions.

Perhaps life hasn't given her all she wanted. Most of the rest of us are in the same fix. Very likely she hasn't gotten all the happiness she expected out of her marriage. Not many dreams come true. What she needs to do is to count up the things she has got and see how she can do a better business and get more happiness and good out of the things she has.

She has a good home, plenty to eat and wear, a respectable position in society, perhaps little children, certainly liberty to enjoy herself in many ways, and a settled freedom from the cares and anxieties that beset many other women. No woman who has got that many goods on her shelves has any right to declare herself a bankrupt in happiness.

If we took stock of ourselves oftener, wouldn't we blame ourselves more for many of the failures of life and other people less? Our husbands no longer show us the attentions that they did when they were our sweethearts and we cry out that marriage is a failure. Do we take as much pains to please the husband as we did the lover?

Mothers Are to Blame if Children Turn Out Badly.

Our children are rude and ill-mannered, and when they grow up they turn out badly. Whose fault but the mothers who raised them? We have no friends. Do we ever go out of our way to make friends or to show love and kindness to any human being? We, who are working women, complain we are ill paid. Are we doing good work that is worth good money? Let's take stock of what we are giving others before we condemn them too severely.

When merchants overhaul their goods there are certain things that they cast aside as worthless. These are old stock. Things outgrown, out of date. Wouldn't it be a good idea to imitate them in that, too? Let's throw away our old prejudices, our antiquated ideas, our moth-eaten fads. They are old stock. We are better off without them.

CRISIS IN 1913 ASSEMBLY FACED

House Paralyzed by Temperance Filibuster While Budget, Cut by Senate, Hangs Fire.

With the Senate decks cleared for concerted action on the taxing bill and with a paralyzing filibuster on the action of the temperance bill in full swing in the House, the Georgia General Assembly Wednesday faced the real crisis of the 1913 session. Leaders in both branches are frank to confess that they can not tell just what may happen during the six remaining days of the present session.

In the meantime the decrease in county returns has been bosted to the million mark. Returns from 95 counties received at the Comptroller General's office up to Friday night indicate a total decrease of $1,000,000. Unless the larger counties, including Fulton and Chatham, which have not been heard from, show big increases, nothing will save the State Treasury from the first decrease in its revenue since 1898.

Assembly Aware of Deficit.

The legislators are aware of this condition. They have been apprised of the facts and given the figures by Governor Slaton in a recent message, as well as by President Anderson in the Senate. Acting on this information, the Senate Tuesday concurred in the Appropriations Committee's recommendation of a slash of $280,000 in the House general appropriations bill.

So far so good, the Senate leaders say, but the end, or the final solution, is not yet in sight. The Senate appropriations bill must be transmitted back to the House for the approval of the lower body. Whether or not the threatened veto of the Governor will deter the Lower House from wreaking vngeance on the Senate for slashing its bill, by again raising the appropriations, remains to be seen.

Some Sort of Bill Certain.

In either case, however, under the laws of Georgia, the State will have some sort of an appropriation, as the Governor has the power to veto item by item, and so in such a way he may reduce the general bill to the sum where disbursements balance revenues. Even this must be returned to the House for approval. If the House and Senate then fail to concur in these cuts and in the meantime adjourn, then the bill, unless vetoed as a whole by the Governor, with the cuts stands.

Something like this may happen, for the wheels of the House are clogged even now by a filibuster on the report of the Temperance Committee, which seeks to investigate the constitutionality of the Webb bill.

Senate Works on Tax Act.

In the meantime the Senate is going ahead on the taxing bill. And, according to indications, will have some sort of a bill to present to the House by the end of this week. According to Senator Miller, chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senate probably will pass an out-and-out substitute to the Sheppard House bill which provides only for county boards of tax equalizers.

If such a bill is passed by the Senate the probabilities are that the House will adopt the bill, as the temper of the lower body seems to favor the passage of an adequate taxing bill. In fact, the Sheppard substitute was passed solely to give the Senate a working basis.

China Picks Cornell Grad to Replace Wu

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, CHINA, Aug. 6.—The government, according to latest information, intends to appoint Alfred Sze, a Cornell graduate, as Minister to Washington. It planned to make Wu Tingfang Ambassador, but the American Government did not agree to raise the status of the legation here and this necessitated the nomination of a junior.

Mr. Sze was nominated Minister to Washington in 1911, but did not go to his post on account of the revolution.

This Is Comforting! Freezing at Big Bear, Snow in Yellowstone

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., Aug. 6.—Very chilly weather is reported at Big Bear, in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Early yesterday morning there was a thin sheeting of ice around the edges of the lake. At Pine Knot Hotel the thermometer registered 33 degrees.

The minimum in the city of San Bernardino yesterday was 48 degrees, the lowest July record in many years.

HELENA, MONT., Aug. 6.—There was a heavy snowfall in the Yellowstone Park last night and the mountains in the vicinity of Livingston were white with new snow this morning.

Department Store In Shark's Stomach

VENICE, CAL., Aug. 6.—In a post-mortem operation performed on a shark eighteen feet long, which was cast up on the sands here, the fish was shown to be a collector of no little ability. Here's a list of the contents of the stomach:

Sugar bowl, silver, engraved Pacific Coast S. S. Co., steamer President.
Three corset steels, nearly new.
Dice box, gutta percha.
Baby's shoe.
Four undigested halibut and numerous small fish.

Society Girl Now a $3 Millinery Clerk

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 5.—Miss Delphine Force, a pretty society girl and daughter of wealthy parents, is now a millinery apprentice at $3 a week and says she likes the work. She recently quit society pleasures to become a professional cook.

Miss Force plans to be a teacher of demestic science at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., in the Fall, where millinery is part of the curriculum.

300 Factory Women Gamble on Baseball

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball pools, have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed has been held in ball by Magistrate Coward, having been charged with operating a pool.

Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games in Reed's place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost 25 cents each.

23 Church 'Drones' Ousted by Elders

STOCKTON, CAL., Aug. 6.—Twenty-three members were forcibly removed from the First Baptist Church, of this city, last night by the deacons because of negligence in attending church.

No specific charge was made against any individual, but all of them were referred to as "drones" and guilty of "indifference and non-attendance."

If You Don't Drink Do Not Read This

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Aug. 6. Henderson Hasty, of Easton, a small town near here, was stripped, plastered with a coat of warm tar and his face painted green last night by a party of citizens, determined to enforce observance of the prohibition law. Hasty was found asleep beside a road in Easton.

That he would sign the pledge is said to have been his declaration when he awoke.

'Wilson White' for Male Dress Rules

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—White is the proper color for men who want to be up-to-the-minute in their dress at the National Capital.

The tropical raiment was adopted by the President one day when the mercury was trying to hit the sky. The next day Secretary Bryan made his debut, and within 48 hours "Wilson white" was the fad. The material may be anything from silk to duck.

HAWTHORNE IS REFUSED PARDON

McReynolds Ignores Recommendation of Board Which Made Special Inquiry of Case.

Despite the fact that the Federal Parson Board strongly recommended, after a thorough investigation that pardons by granted to Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, who are imprisoned in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary on charges of using the mails to defraud in the sale of mining stocks, Attorney General McReynolds has issued a statement from Washington that he has decided to override the recommendations of the board and refuse clemency to the two men.

The action of McReynolds is almost unprecedented in the history of the Department of Justice. The Board of Pardons made the Hawthorne case a subject of thorough and exhaustive investigation. It came to Atlanta and went into every detail of the case. At the end of the investigation it made the Hawthorne case the subject of a special report and a special recommendation for clemency. It had been intimated that the writer had been the scapegoat for others.

Mr. McReynold's excuse for refusing to grant a pardon to Hawthorne is that he and Dr. Morton have been shown enough leniency.

It is generally understood that one result of Mr. McReynold's actions in the Hawthorne case will be the redoubling of the efforts of the writer's friends and the case may be taken to President Wilson.

Under the ruling of the Attorney General, Hawthorne and Morton must remain in prison until October. The trial judge, in sentencing them, dated their terms back a year and a day, and their time will be up in about two months.

Deputy Warden Hawk, of the Federal Prison, stated Wednesday morning that the prison authorities have as yet received no formal notification that a pardon had been refused Hawthorne. He stated, however, that it is not usual for them to do so. They are notified when a pardon has been granted, but never when one has been refused.

Bulgaria's Enemies Relent; Intercede For Conquered Ally

Special Cable to The Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 6.—Sympathy may yet prevent Bulgaria from losing all the spoils she won in the Turko-Balkan war. Premier Pasitch, of Servia, an d Premier Venizelos, of Greece, to-day wired their respective sovereigns for permission to extend the Bulgarian frontier so as to include a big area of the territory in Northeastern Macedonia, which was taken away from Turkey.

It had been the original intention of the Servian and Greek to punish Bulgaria for the atrocities of her soldiers by refusing to allow the Bulgars to profit by the war.

So eloquently did the Bulgarian peace representatives plead their cause and so graphically did they paint the sufferings undergone by the Bulgarians in the war with Turkey to secure victory for the Balkan league that the Serb and Greek envoys relented.

Trots and Tantos Boon to Chiropodist

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The turkey trot and the tango are to the chiropodists, equal to the goose that laid the golden eggs, says Miss Clara Houston, of Chicago, the "girl with the perfect foot." Miss Houston, herself a chiropodist, says:

"Those dances put an unaccustomed strain on the toes and instep and since they started women have been flocking to chiropodists in droves to have their feet made over. I hope the craze lasts, but I would never dance any of those dances myself. I think too much of my feet."

FLEETS OF WORLD AT CANAL OPENING

Secretary Daniels Plans Huge Naval Display for 1915—Announces Defense Policy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels to-day announced his plan to have all the world's fleets mobilize in Hampton Roads in February, 1915, and, led by the American squadron, proceed through the Panama canal and up the West Coast to San Francisco.

Secretary Daniels considers that this will form a fitting opening for the Panama canal besides being the greatest naval pageant the world has seen.

In addition to this, Secretary Daniels intends to have the American fleet, headed by the old battleship Oregon, steam through the canal next spring to celebrate the opening of the passageway to ships of commerce.

"It has beeen stated," said the Secretary of the Navy to-day, "that I intend to divide the Atlantic fleet and to keep a portion of it on the Pacific side. This is erroneous. What I intend to do is to divide the time of the fleet so that it will spend six months of the year on one coast and then go to the other, instead of spending all its time on the Atlantic side as at present."

Beware, Poseurs, of 'Soul Photos'

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—"With the development of 'soul photography,'" the latest addition to the picture maker's are, says Miss Emma Gerhard, "the modern photographer will vie with the old masters in producing pictures that will live forever.

"It is wholly a matter of art," said Miss Gerhard. "It consists of bringing out in the subject what is really in him or her, not in making an artificial reproduction of his features and clothes.

"Every human being is constantly posing. There are a thousand and one little superficial things about every man and woman which cover up the real self, and these things overshadow all else in photographs."

DIES FROM HEAT.

SAVANNAH.—Overcome by heat after spending several hours at work in his garden, Bryan L. Heath, aged 66 years, is dead at his home in Bloomingdale. He is survived by his wife, four sons and three daughters.

French Want Trading Base North of Canal

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The commission sent by the French Government to study the effect upon French commerce of the opening of the Panama Canal reports unfavorably upon the establishment of a commercial base either on Guadaloupe or Martinique. These French possessions in the West Indies are too far south of the regular Panama route, says the commission, and shippers will rather coal in Porto Rico or Cuba.

Lieutenant Hallier, representing the Minister of Marine, recommends, however, the establishment of a naval station at Fort DeFrance, Martinique.

JUDGE WILL RULE ON EVIDENCE ATTACKED BY DEFENSE AT 2 P. M.

As soon as court opened Mr. Rosser asked the judge if he was ready to hear argument on the proposition to eliminate parts of Conley's testimony. He said he was prepared to support his motion with authorities.

Judge Roan replied that he would postpone his decision until 2 o'clock.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that he had witnesses he expects to put on the stand Wednesday morning to substantiate the part of the negro's testimony in dispute. He said:

"I just want the court to understand that I am going to do this."

Judge Roan replied:

"I'll give you the benefit of whatever you bring out."

Conley was then recalled to the stand for the conclusion of his cross-examination.

Jim Conley was the same cool, unafraid negro when he returned to the stand Wednesday morning in the trial of Leo Frank after almost two whole days under the cross-examination of Luther Rosser. He had passed through fire and didn't seem to mind it. He had no fear of anything that was yet to come.

Mr. Rosser might threaten him or might joke with him; it was all the same to the negro. He had tried both and had established but one thing—that Conley is a liar, and Conley admits that.

Arnold might describe him as "that miserable wretch in the witness chair;" he could gaze calmly out the window as he had done before. He didn't quite understand all those names they were calling him, anyway.

If, in all the time that Conley was under the raking fire of Rosser's cross-examination, he was disturbed in the slightest degree it was when he was being asked about that mysterious affidavit of William H. Mincey.

The declaration of Mincey that Conley had boasted the afternoon of April 26 of killing a girl was sinister and held in it the possibility that Rosser would finish by blazing forth with a direct charge of murder against the negro. Conley moved uneasily in his seat. He refused to meet the eye of his inquisitor. He fidgeted with his hands, but with his lips he framed a denial of every damning charge contained in the document.

The ordeal soon was over. Conley regained his composure, and when court adjourned a few minutes later a grin of triumph cleft his black face almost in twain.

Attorney Sees Conley.

Conley's attorney, William M. Smith, provided him with supper and breakfast at the jail and talked for some time with the State's star witness. He had been prevented from holding any sort of a conference with his client the night before, and protested at this procedure at the close of court Tuesday night. Judge Roan extended him the privilege of seeing Conley. Reuben Arnold asked that an exception be entered in the record.

Conley slept between nine and ten hours and arose much refreshed.

"I'se telling the truth now," he said to a newspaper man who encountered him outside the jail. "That Mr. Rosser ain't got no chance to get me mixed up because I'm telling just what happened."

Frank occupied his usual cell on the second floor of the Tower. He was joined by his wife and mother as soon as he arrived at the courthouse.

Rosser Reads Affidavits.

Rosser asked Dorsey for the original of Conley's third affidavit. The Solicitor advised Mr. Rosser that the original had never been signed. Rosser took a copy of the affidavit, which the Solicitor said was identical with the original, and read it to Conley. It was a signed statement from the negro, in which he admitted the other two affidavits contained lies and the one which the detectives said was the last word in the great mystery.

The reading consumed nearly fifteen minutes, Rosser enunciating clearly and slowly, emphasizing every statement that differed with Conley's evidence on the stand.

Freely Admits He Lied.

All of Rosser's quiz Tuesday had only the one possible effect—that of casting suspicion in the minds of the jury of the story that Conley now is telling. He spread his lies with a lavish hand in that first affidavit he made to the detectives.

He freely admitted this and rather gloried in his prowess as a first-class liar. He lied in his second affidavit, although he maintained that this was a step nearer the truth. And in his third affidavit, which he and the detectives had joined in proclaiming "the whole truth," there were still little discrepancies and deviations from the straight path of veracity.

But this tale that he was unfolding to the jury, this was the pure, unalloyed, gospel truth. He had raised his right hand and sworn that he was going to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Mr. Rosser was most unkind to throw over it a shadow of suspicion.

And the lawyer labored in vain to shake the negro's storyq as it had gone before the jury. Rosser midway in the Tuesday forenoon session abandoned his line of intrrogation in regard to statments that Conley had made to the police and detectives and began questioning Conley directly on the crime.

Questioned Closely on Time.

He questioned him most closely in regard to the time in an effort to show conclusively to the jury that Frank and Conley did not have the opportunity to accomplish all which the negro narrated before Frank left the factory for luncheon at his home, No. 68 East Georgia avenue, at which place he arrived by 1:30 o'clock, according to the State's own witnesses.

Conley testified, under Rosser's cross-examination, that he went to the rear of the factory at Frank's direction and there found the body of the slain girl. He said that he yelled to Frank that the girl was dead and that Frank told him to bring her to the front of the factory.

Conley said that he did not know how he was going to carry the girl and he asked Frank. Frank, he said, yelled back something about getting some crocus bagging, but he did not quite understand him and walked to the front of the factory so that he could hear the superintendent better. He noticed the clock at this moment. It was four minutes of 1 o'clock.

With this time as a starting point,

CONLEY ON STAND AGAIN; SAYS HE'S NOT 'SCARED'

Rosser began to quiz the negro closely as to how long it took him to accompilsh each part of the remainder of the afternoon's events.

It was plain that the negro's estimates did not coincide with what the lawyer thought they should be.

Defense's Views Evidently Differ.

"How long did it take you from the time that you came forward and looked at the clock until you had taken the body down to the cellar and was back again on the second floor, and Frank went to wash his hands?" asked Rosser.

Conley thought it was only four or five minutes. It evidently was the opinion of the defense that it should have been nearer twenty minutes, as it included rolling the body of the girl into the cloth from the cotton box, carrying it to the elevator, the wait while Conley says Frank went into the office after the key, the trip down the elevator, the carrying of the body to the rear of the basement, the disposal of the cloth and the return to the second floor.

Rosser asked how long it took Frank to wash his hands. Conley replied that it was only a minute or two. Rosser then inquired how long Frank had Conley in the closet while the two women were in his office. Conley said it was eight or ten minutes. This incident, if it is as Conley represented it, would have brought the time up to 1:12 or 1:15.

Rosser then asked how long it took Conley to write the four notes, two of which were found by the girl's dead body.

Wrote Notes in a Hurry.

"You couldn't have written those four notes inside of ten minutes to save your soul, could you, Jim?" Rosser inquired.

"Yas, sah; I think I wrote 'em in about a minute and a half," replied the negro.

"You're some rapid writer," retorted Rosser after he had called attention to the laborious scrawl.

Rosser then questioned Conley as to the time of each part of his conversation with Frank while he was in the office that afternoon. He asked him about Frank giving him the cigarettes with the money in the box, about Frank giving him the $200 roll of bills and the attendant' conversation, about the conversation in respect to Conley's watch and to Frank's wealthy folks in Brooklyn.

While he did not make the actual computation of time, he impressed strongly on the minds of the jury that it would have been impossible for all this to have occurred in connection with the undisputed fact that Frank arrived home at or before 1:30 that afternoon.

Defense to Test Story.

It is understood that persons interested in the defense have rehearsed a number of times every event that the negro says took place in the disposal of the body as Conley narrates it, and that they will be prepared to testify that it could not have been completed by the time that Frank had arrived at his home.

This was by far the most important testimony in the examination of the negro. Rosser also quizzed him sharply regard to the cloth in which he wrapped the body; his evident theory being that, as a matter of fact, no cloth was used at all and that Conley, the only one connected with the crime, simply dragged the body to the rear of the basement. No cloth was found by the police or detectives, although Conley testified that he threw it in the same place he threw the hat and shoe.

The sensation of the day came when Reuben Arnold moved to have stricken from the record all of the testimony regarding Frank's alleged conduct previous to the day of the crime. The motion was met with strenuous opposition on the part of the prosecution but received a favorable ruling from Judge Roan who said that he would hold himself in readiness to reverse the decision before court convened Wednesday morning should the Solicitor be able to show him sufficient law on the subject to warrant a change.

CRASH FATAL TO 2 LAID TO BAD AUTO BRAKE

Struck by a Southern Railway train when their automobile went dead on the tracks of a crossing a mile north of McDonough, Ga., late Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Emma Heard, wife of J. P. Heard, of Vienna, Ga., and her ten-year-old son, Lio Lindon Heard, were killed.

Mr. Heard leaped from the car when he saw it would be impossible to escape the crash, and escaped with a few bruises. Mrs. Heard and her son were caught in the cowcatcher of the locomotive and dragged 50 feet.

The bodies of Mrs. Heard and her son were taken to Vienna. The funeral will be held there Wednesday afternoon. They were well known in Atlanta, and many friends of the family here will attend the funeral.

Mrs. Heard was Miss Emma Lashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lashley, and was a leader in the social life of her community. She is survived by her husband, who is a son of the late Senator Heard and president of the Heard Banking Company, and her parents.

Mr. Heard Tells of Accident.

Statements made Wednesday morning by Mr. Heard and J. L. Mable, engineer of the train, indicate that the accident was unavoidable and was the result of the failure of the emergency brake of the automobile.

"My wife, my son Lindon and myself left our home in Vienna, in my two-passenger roadster," said Mr. Heard, "to attend the motorcycle races in Atlanta. We passed through McDonough about 2 o'clock. Ten minutes later we passed over the brow of a long steep hill that leads down to the railroad tracks. A train can not be seen until the crossing is almost reached. We were only a few yards from the track when Mrs. Heard saw the train coming and shouted.

"We were going about 25 miles an hour. I at once shut off my engine and applied the brake, but it failed to work. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable, I leaped from the car and shouted for Mrs. Heard and my son to do likewise. They were probably too frightened to do so. The next thing I remember was hearing their screams as the train struck them."

Engineer Gives His Version.

Engineer Mable declared that when he saw the automobile he applied airbrakes, but the crossing was too near for the air to take effect before the automobile was struck.

"I was running about 25 miles an hour and the crossing was about a hundred yards ahead of me when I saw the automobile. The car was running as fast as my train, and had plenty of time to cross the tracks in front of me.

"When the machine got to within about ten yards of the track, it slowed down and rolled up until the front wheels of the car were on the tracks. Then it stopped. I at once applied the airbrakes, but too late to have any appreciable effect on the speed of the train."

How and Why to Eat Watermelon

Cool, but do not chill Mr. Melon.

Cut it lengthwise, not in round slices.

Save the seeds, make "watermelon tea."

Use your teeth—not knives or forks.

Watermelon is refreshing and good for the stomach and kidneys.

P. S.—These tips are furnished by the "champeen" melon-eaters of Congress.

HOWARD ONE OF 8 BEST MELON EATERS

Georgia Congressman Right Up in Race for "Champeen" Title in Capitol Cafes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—State secrets on statesmen's appetites, and particularly watermelons during the present height of the watermelon season, were divulged to-day. The divulger is R. J. Martyn, "boss" of the Capitol Cafes.

Twenty big, fat watermelons are consumed by Congressmen every day, according to "Chef" Martyn. Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is the acknowledged "champeen" watermelon eater. He gets outside of from one to three big slices daily.

Other watermelon "fanatics" who appear to be crowding Clayton for the title are Representative Mann, of Illinois; Sereno Payne, of New York; Sims, of Tennessee; Dietrick, of Massachusetts; Austin, of Tennessee; Stedman, of North Carolina, and Howard, of Georgia.

Approached on his watermelon prowess, Clayton gave the following panegyric:

"Watermelon beats ice cream or lemonade all hollow as a cool refreshment. It is the most luscious, refreshing fruit possible to be secured in summer.

"Some people eat salt on watermelon. That is a mistake. Salt militates against its palatability and digestibility. I take mine straight.

"Watermelon is a splendid diuretic. It cleanses the whole digestive system.

"Watermelon seed tea is an old Southern remedy for kidney trouble.

"I don't care for thick-rind striped melons. I don't like the hybrids between the Georgie 'rattlesnake' melon and the 'scaly bark.' Some of these are a cross between a guinea melon and a horse gourd.

"The best melon grown is in Alabama, with a thin rind, a whitish melon. Lead me to them any time."

OFFICERS HUNTING 2 TRAIN BANDITS

White Men Place Handcuffs on Postal Clerks and Rob Mail Car Near Birmingham.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 6.—Officers of Birmingham and vicinity are to-day searching for two unidentified white men, who last night held up Louisville and Nashville passenger train No. 4 and robbed the mail car of all registered mail packets. The amount of the loss has not been estimated by postal officials. There is no definite clew to the bandits.

When the train reached Birmingham last night two of the mail clerks, George Hoover and T. G. York, were found handcuffed. The irons had to be filed from their wrists. Chief Clerk Harry Everett's thumbs were securely tied together with neavy twine.

The robbers boarded the mail car at Calera, on the dark side, after the train had begun to move. The clerks state that they were immediately covered with pistols and ordered to turn their faces to the wall.

Everett looked around once and was fired upon, the shot striking the corner of the car near his head. The robbers jumped from the train at Fourteenth street in Birmingham.

IMPROVEMENT AT 'PEN' FARM URGED

Senate Committee Frames Recommendations After Inspecting Milledgeville Institution.

Following a visit to the State Prison Farm at Milledgeville Saturday the Senate Penitentiary Committee of which Senator Tarver, of the Forty-third, is chairman, will make several recommendations for improvement to the Senate.

One of these will be a recommendation for the construction of an annex to the present dormitory for negroes. Another provides for a waterworks system in the women's building.

There is a possibility also that the question of the present location of the prison farm will be considered with a view to removal, although this movement is not indorsed by a majority of the committee.

A further recommendation which probably will be made relates to the separation of the boys' reformatory from the prison farm.

Senator Tarver declared Tuesday that in his opinion this feature of the prison farm was bad, as the younger boys, although separated from the convicts, are sufficiently close to be influenced by the depressing influences of convict life.

Nine members of the Senate committee and one member from the House made the trip to Milledgeville.

K. of C. Plan Change In Insurance Rates

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—The election of officers and the reports of the supreme officers featured the two business sessions of the delegates to the Knights of Columbus' thirty-first annual convention to-day. The sessions were held at Hotel Somerset.

Important also among the probable actions of the delegates at to-day's sessions is the changing of the insurance laws so the assessments may rest more easily on the older members.

Merchants on Tour Of Factories While Committees Work

Much detail work is yet to be accomplished in the organization of the Southern Merchants convention.

Wednesday will be devoted to work by the various committees, and an inspection of Atlanta's factories and stores by delegates and visitors.

A great deal of important work relating to crops, credit, stock questions and co-operation will come before the convention starting Thursday morning.

'U. S. WOMEN SET TOO FAST A PACE'

Famous English Publicist So Declares in Article Scoring the New American Dances.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—American society women are accused of setting too fast a pace by Filson Young, a famous English publicist, in an article in The Saturday Review. Supplementing his article by an interview Mr. Young to-day said:

"If a baboon could be trained to play ragtime he would soon be the rage and would be invited out to dine by the idle rich. Where the shepherd goes society women follow like sheep. In the case of questionable dances American women have been to blame.

"'Tango' in Latin means 'I touch' and it is well named.

"American women in London and Paris are the leaders in revels which should cause a blush of shame to redden the cheeks of every modest woman. One by one the English leaders have surrendered to the daring irreverence of the American women."

RATE ORDER KILLS OLD 'BASING' PLAN

Ruling on Georgia Cases Necessitates Change in All Southeastern Schedules.

Readjustment of all rates in the territory south of the Potomac River and east of the Mississippi will be necessary to conform to the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling giving lower freights to LaGrange, Vienna and Carrollton, according to Watkins & Latimer, attorneys in the case.

The old basing point system, except as applied to ports and to large cities, is doomed under this decisions, they say, although the Commission passed only on the three cases at hand.

Under the old system certain small towns, usually at the head of relatively unimportant rivers, have been made basing points. Rates to other towns of the same size, equidistant or nearer the Ohio River crossings or the large cities in Southeastern territory, have been given the through rate to these points, plus the local from the favored town.

The Commission holds that there is no real reason for giving such places as Cedartown, Ga., through rates, and denying them to such towns as Vienna, Carrollton and LaGrange.

The immediate result, it is believed, will be wider scattering of the small jobbing houses, and more business for the large jobbing houses in the principal cities. The saving in freights is estimated at $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 yearly.

The Commission had the case under advisement from November 11, 1911, until August 4, 1913.

CONLEY'S MINOR LIES OF LITTLE MOMENT IF JURY BELIEVES MAIN CHARGES

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

"Gentlemen of the jury, having heard from James Conley, the blackest, most damning story ever told in Atlanta by one human being against another, having sat there and listened as he smudged with unspeakable scandal the defendant in this case, Leo Frank, although it is irrelevant, immaterial, and has nothing to do with this case, you will kindly forget it, being on your oaths as jurymen to consider the evidence declared competent!"

And the jury, being like most other juries, in one way and another, and having heard all the things as aforesaid, will promptly proceed to do as instructed about forgetting it—NOT!

I have heard juries told too many times to "forget" things—such, for instance, as that there is no such thing as "unwritten law" in this land of the free and home of the brave—and I have seen too many times those very same juries proceed to "forget"—NOT!

Juries are, after all, composed of mere human beings, and things such as Conley said to the Frank jury can NOT be forgotten, and will NOT be disregarded by the average jury.

Merely Question of Belief.

It is merely a queston of whether the jury BELIEVES the negro!

There was something infinitely pathetic in the situation Tuesday, when court met in the afternoon.

For one thing, it brought to the cheeks of the defendant's wife, always and ever at his side, the first tears I yet have seen fall from her eyes.

She has borne herself with amazing fortitude thus far—the wonder is that she has not long ago collapsed.

When Reuben Arnold, moving to strike from the record the vile story of Jim Conley, paused a second before reading the exact words he desired expunged, looked a moment in the direction of the defendant's wife, and said, with no show of spectacular whatever, "Your honor, I would prefer not to read this in the presence of these two ladies, and I therefore pass it to your honor that you read it in silence!" The moment was tense and tragic!

Weeps For First Time.

I do not know whether it was gratitude to Arnold for the kindness and consideration thus shown, whether it was realization of the weighty purpose of the motion, whether it was the first chilling breath of apprehension, or hether it was just a physical giving way that moved Mrs. Frank. Whatever it was, as Arnold passed the paper along to Judge Roan, the first tear I ever saw from the eyes of Lucile Frank trickled down her cheek and she dropped her head in her hands for a moment or two and sobbed!

Apparently there was nothing in the incident, either upon the part of Arnold or the woman, designed to be the least bit theatrical. The jury had been removed, the stage settings were wanting.

It merely was a natural and minor incident that tugged, somehow, at the heartstrings and caught at the throat.

In all the packed courtroom there were two women only—beyond that, there was a morbidly hungry crowd of men, ready to grasp greedily at anything sensational.

Arnold denied the crod for the sake of—the women.

And now the jury has been asked to forget the damning thing that has been said to it, that has been said in the presence of the wife and the mother—and that was too vile to say a second time in the presence of the latter!

Do you think the jury WILL forget—do you think it CAN forget?

Maybe you do—I don't!

No Chance for Collapse.

And as to Conley and his story in its entirety—the spectators in that courtroom have been looking for Conley to "break down," to fall on his knees and confess it all a lie, and all that sort of thing.

There never was any chance that Conley would do that. It should be borne in mind that to "break down" Conley's story does not necessarily mean to break down Conley—to collapse him.

The point is: Can the defense—has or will the defense—so UNDERMINE Conley's story that, through the introduction of other evidence, it eventually will fall to the ground as a mass of lies?

Slowly, but persistently, with deadly intent even if with tediousness of method, Luther Z. Rosser for more than two days has attacked the amazing and terrible story upon which the State hopes to convict Leo Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Rosser has been almost maddening in his patience with the negro. He has gone over the same ground, time after time, in his efforts to get Conley's various stories adjusted to the purpose of the defense.

Conley, rapid-fire enough in direct examination, rattling off his grewsome and frightful story as if it were a recital of an altogether common thing, became quite another Conley under cross-examination.

Where but a few moments ago he had remembered most amazing and inconsequential details—such as the fact that a woman who called to see Frank on Thanksgiving Day wore a blue and white polka dotted dress, a green hat and white shoes and stockings—under cross-examination he could remember nothing at all save after the most persistent prodding.

Time and again Mr. Rosser had to go over the entire ground of an entire situation to draw from Conley one further comment upon it. Questioned on his story under both cross and direct examination, the negro was put enough in reply—on other points he was as vague as he possibly could be.

Twenty-one times Tuesday he admitted to Mr. Rosser that he had "lied." Seven times in addition to that he admitted that he had been "mistaken."

As the cross-examination progressed, too, it became evident enough that the defense is to hold the entire charge against Frank to be largely a "frame-up," with Conley as the bright and particular star about whom it revolves.

The negro said he at first refused to speak of the crime at all, and when he did speak deliberately lied because he "wished to protect Mr. Frank."

"He was my young superintendent—I would have done anything to save him," said the negro—whether with sinister cunning or genuine sincerity, the jury must say.

Showed How Negro Lied.

And yet, with Conley's own lips Rosser showed how, time and again, he deliberately lied about his movements on the fatal Saturday that was Mary Phagan's last on earth—after he had said that he had looked in vain for help from Frank, and was then determined to tell "the whole truth!"

After Conley's excuse of protecting Frank had been shattered by the negro's own "confession," he had to make three subsequent and different "confessions" before he got things shaped to his liking—and eevry time he readjusted his story it was changed to mee the ever bobbing up objections to the story of the day or two before.

Continuously Mr. Rosser referred to the fact, always admitted by the negro, that his various affidavits were changed "at police headquarters," in the presence of officers, "after being released from jail and carried to headquarters."

There are dozens of puzzling inconsistencies to be bridged over in Conley's story—scores of things yet to be explained and straightened out.

And yet—

In the average mind I doubt whether Conley's story has been seriously discredited in the main.

There are people who admit, readily enough—hundreds of them—that Conley is a liar, a thousand times over, a loafer, and an utterly undesirable citizen.

Doubt Slowly Crystallizing.

They will say thus and so to his disparagement, but——

Fateful, suggestive, profoundly melancholy "but" for Leo Frank!

It bespeaks a widespread and crystallizing doubt that is dangerously incompatible with Frank's hopes for life and liberty and the restoration of his good name.

With all the undermining and incongruities of Conley's story that the most subtle ingenuity of the defense can conjure to its aid, the jury has been given a story which, if so much as 5 per cent of its sticks, likely will serve to convict.

The primary circumstances—these might be swept aside like chaff before the wind, if only Conley's story might be crushed to earth and made absurd.

But there is the story in all its abundance of sinister detail—the comings and goings of questionable men and women, the negro, time and again, on watch downstairs, responding to signals, the connivance of the negro with the white man in unnatural and perverted practices, the coming of innocent little Mary Phagan, the pattering of anxious feet above, the suppressed scream, the call to Conley for further assistance in consummating unlawful deeds with women—this time murder—the removal of the body, and the promise to pay on some subsequent day!

And Details Matter?

Will the story thus given to the jury, unless completely and altogether broken down, ever be removed from its mind entirely? And unless it is removed entirely, can Frank hope for acquittal?

If it is, in its essentials, the truth, what will the jury care about the exact time at which Conley bought some whisky on Peters street; or whether he went straight from Peters street to the laundry; or whether he remembers the mythical "woman in green who went up the factory steps," no matter how vitally important these things may be to the sustained truth of Conley's story.

Conley may lie in a dozen details of his story, he may have readjusted it continuously under the direction of Tom, Dick, or Harry, he may be everything he ought not to be—and yet, if one BIG detail in his awful story sticks in the minds of that jury, Leo Frank is undone hopelessly.

If the story Conley tells IS a lie, then it is the most inhumanly devilish, t he most cunningly clever, and the most amazingly sustained lie ever told in Georgia!

Every little detail, as finally adjusted—and not then until Conley went upon the stand Monday—fits the necessities of those bent upon Frank's conviction. If it is, as the defense contends, a "frame-up," it is a diabolically smart "frame-up"—one can not escape that conclusion!

Girl's Visit Dovetails.

Even the coming an d going of Monteen Stover, the five minutes of time in which the primary circumstances might be made to dovetail into the Conley story, is cited by the witness Conley as the very period of time wherein Conley, sitting in the dark hall below, heard pattering footsteps above, the faint scream, and immediately after Miss Stover went out, the tiptoeing of Frank to the front, and then the story of the death upstairs.

Monteen Stover could not have chosen a more exact and useful moment to wander in—and yet, she heard no scream, although, she did not see Frank in his office during the few minutes she remained upstairs.

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

It has come to the point where one, seeking the truth, a nd justice and the right, to all men at all times and in all circumstances, can only say he will leave it to the jury—and that the JURY will speak the TRUTH!

THE CRUISE OF THE "PIFFLE"!

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

"Cheerily, my hearties! Why, this is indeed a pleasure! To what am I indebted for this unexpectulated impingement? Who are you guys, anyhow?" This sailor-like language was uttered by that bluff old sea dog, Professor Slick, the first navigating officer of the battleship "Piffle," as he surveyed two strangers who had just entered his cabin. "I, sir," said the elder, "am The Spirit of '76! Can I be of any use to you in the Japanese matter?" "And I," said the other, "am the Monroe Doctrine. Is there anything doing in my line in the Mexican mix-up?" "Gentlemen," said Professor Slick, "I am at present considering whether to adopt a policy of discombobulous mediation or rambunktious protectorosity in the matters you refer to. My friend, Admiral Juice, here, will give you a lecture on the subject!" "With pleasure," replied the Admiral, laying down a bunch of Chautauqua reports, "but I'll have to charge you two dollars apiece. You know living is high!" Suddenly the boatswain of the "Piffle" entered, leading two large and active dogs. "What shall I do with these?" he asked. "Put them in the back parlor and tie them up tight!" replied Professor Slick, promptly. At this moment, without any warning whatever, the most frightful and discordant yells were——

Crowd at Frank Trial Set Like Adamant in Opinions

By O. B. KEELER.

The impression persists that courtroom crowds are made up in the main of two classes, as follows:

(1) People who take it for granted that any person being tried on any charge in any court is guilty, and that some.

(2) People who are constitutionally incapable of believing anybody is guilty of anything whatever.

That is one powerful impression gained at the Frank trial. It is an impression sticking out pointedly in the wake of the Thaw trial, and the Nan Patterson trial, and the Beatty trial, and the Hyde trial.

All three of the Hyde trials, in fact.

Never an Opinion Altered.

At the risk of being convicted of exaggeration in the first degree, the writer, who was rather intimately associated with the celebrated poison case, would estimate that 18,397 persons expressed in his hearing what they insisted were unalterable opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused physician before the jury in the first trial had been impaneled.

And of the 18,397 (estimated) not one single instance is recalled of one single opinion being altered.

The fact that the physician was convicted on his first trial made not the least difference to those who believed him innocent.

Court Ruling Mattered Not.

The fact that the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further trial made not the least difference to those who voted guilty.

The second and third trials, one of which resulted in an escaped juror, fleeing madly by way of a rain spout from the dread lair of the hypothetical question, and the other in a hung jury, had no perceptible effect on the factions.

Except to solidify them in their original beliefs.

One side desired to take steps at once.

The other side named men-children for the object of a persecution unparalleled since the days of Nero.

Arguments Never Will End.

And if Bennett Clark Hyde's annual trials proceed as per schedule until the year 1950, there will be hoary-headed wrangling over the same old points, by the same ancient and original wranglers, lined up the same way as when the greatest mystery of the West came to the fall of the gavel in the opening trial.

Take the Beatty Case.

There were men and women—you know some of them—who raised frantic hands to heaven, that a poor boy should thus be railroaded to his doom.

They were about set to buy mileage and travel to throw themselves and their petitions at the feet of a cruel and callous Governor.

And then Beatty confessed.

Did that still the trouble lachrymal waters?

Not precisely.

They said the poor boy's mind had been weakened by his persecution.

And if you are in a hypercritical mood or are otherwise disposed to stick pins in toy balloons, just ask your memory to inform you how many times you have heard these pronouncements since the trial of Leo M. Frank began:

First: "Well, I've been absolutely certain from the very first that Frank did it."

Second: "Well, I never have believed that Frank was guilty of that crime."

And now do you feel hypercritical?

And now do you fancy that 18,397 is an inflated estimate?

Third Estate as Judicious.

Of course, there must be a Third Estate—a well-balanced, thoughtful, cautious body. Particularly cautious, and slow of speech—mayhap in some sporadic instances slow of thought.

They are the judicial ones. They hold the balance open at both ends, to receive and weigh the testimony and the facts.

At least, they say they do.

That would be the jury, perhaps.

And some others—perhaps.

RICH MEN RULE CHURCH, SAYS RICHMOND

Morgan Held House of Rishops in Hollow of Hand, Asserts Episcopalian Rector.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—"Our House of Bishops is led in tow by Wall street. The lat J. P. Morgan was the power behind Bishop Greer, and he held our House of Bishops in the hollow of his hand.

"The cathedral on Morningside Heights is a standing monument to our New York cofrupt money power. It is the embodiment of ecclesiastical snobbery, spiritual frippery and moral incompetency.

"Since the day of Bishop Potter the diocese of New York has been in control of half a dozen plutocrats. In Philadelphia the Episcopal Church is 'run' by a few rich men. They control the Bishop (Rhinelander), who, in mental ability, personal authority and moral aggressiveness is not, by any means, a great man.

"August Belmont is at the head of our race track gamblers. His career is one of the worst careers for an American youth to imitate. Yet he is prominent in the Church of the Ascension on lower Fifth avenue."

The foregoing quotations are from a sermon delivered in St. John's Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond.

"In most of the large parishes of the Episcopal Church throughout the country we find men like Belmont and the late J. P. Morgan, who curb the spiritual influence of the clergy, make them timid, and in the end cause them to shrivel up morally. Men in humble circumstances distrust our sincerity. The Episcopal Church is not sincere in its present assumed attitude toward labor.

"My own ecclesiastical superior, Bishop Rhinelander, was elected two years ago," said Mr. Richmond, "largely through the push and pull of Wall street interests, corporation lawyers and social idlers, together with a few of our clergy among whom towered pre-eminently the Rev. Father Mortimer, of the 'High Church gang,' who has since been disposed from the ministry for gross immorality."

DORSEY ACCOMPLISHES GIGANTIC TASK IN FACE OF OVERWHELMING ODDS

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Practically the entire case on which the State of Georgia bases its claim on the life of Leo Frank to pay for that life taken from Mary Phagan is before the jury.

Most of the remaining evidence of importance which the Solicitor General may introduce merely will be rebuttal to testimony presented by Frank's counsel.

Whether the evidence presented is strong enough to convict is a question for the jury to decide. Whether the testimony introduced by the defense will be convincing enough to cause the reasonable doubt which the law says shall make Frank a free man or whether the defense's attack on the State's case has been of sufficient strength to create a question in the minds of the jurors, time alone will tell.

But this fact remains unchallenged: Every single thing that Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey declared in advance that he would get before the jury is there now. It may not be enough to convict, but the case which the State said fastened the crime on Leo Frank has been put in evidence.

Dorsey Had Huge Task.

One by one the prosecutor has forged the links in the chain that he maintains fixes the guilt of the Phagan murder on Leo Frank and Leo Frank alone.

It has been long, tedious work. Dorsey has had to fight against considerable odds, but his work has been well done.

When the defense has its innings, the chain may be torn asunder as though struck by lightning, but that will be the work of the skilled attorneys who are fighting to save the life of the pencil factory superintendent.

Here was Dorsey's work: He had to adduce enough circumstantial evidence to corroborate the testimony of Jim Conley before his case could even be seriously considered. The unsupported word of the negro sweeper would have been about as valuable as a punctured drum. The Solicitor knew this.

First, he had to prove the venue. He had to locate Frank in the National Pencil Company factory at the time Mary Phagan was slain. He did this by the unattacked testimony of many witnesses. He did it so thoroughly that the defense has tacitly admitted that Frank was at the factory about the time he deed was supposed to have been done.

Question of Time Settled.

Then he had to prove the time. According to the State's theory the murder was committed about 12:10 on Memorial Day. Frank himself has said and his employees and his associates have testified he was there at that time. This point also is practically unchallenged.

At last came the hardest task. He had to prove that Leo Frank was the only human being in the pencil factory at that time who could have taken Mary Phagan's life.

By every witness introduced on this point it was shown that as far as human knowledge goes Leo Frank and Jim Conley were the only men in that part of the factory at that time. Either could have committed the crime. It was Dorsey's work to place the blame on Frank alone.

Newt Lee's testimony was introduced to show that Frank sent him away that afternoon. Dr. Harris' testimony tended to show that the slaying must have been done immediately after Frank had given the child her week's wage and had given it to her while they were alone. Mrs. White's testimony tended to show that Jim Conley was sitting downstairs making no attempt at flight after the time the crime is supposed to have been committed.

Then came Conley's direct evidence ceive from the police department has been more or less missing. In fact, and the chain was practically complete.

As has been said before, this chain may not stand the acid test of the defense's attack. It may not be strong enough even unattacked to convince the jury that Frank is responsible for Mary Phagan's death.

But it is what Dorsey went out to get before the jury. He has done it.

And he has done it practically unaided. The valuable assistance he had reason to believe he would re the greatest blows to the State's case have been delivered by detectives, supposedly expert witnesses who have been unable to withstand the crossfire of Luther Rosser.

The case has meant a lot to Dorsey, and right now, with the thrilling battle approaching its final stages, Dorsey stands out as big and commanding a figure as the brilliant lawyers against whom he is arrayed.

He may lose his case, but if he does he will come out with reputation enhanced.

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a Large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdom and Experience.

In almost any settled community there is a grandma who knows Mother's Friend. Not only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recommendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this famous remedy.

Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nausea, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments and prepares the system so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear.

No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Friend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restful. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. RITCHIE SIGNS TO MEET WELSH SEPTEMBER 1

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Freddie Welsh is to get first crack at Willie Ritchie, leightweight champion of the world. Ritchie today accepted the offer made by a Vancouver club for a twenty-round contest there on September 1 with the Englishman as his opponent.

The taking of the Vancouver match followed a four-hour talk between Ritchie and James W. Coffroth, of this city, who hoped to match Tommy Murphy and the champion for September 9. Ritchie's demand on Coffroth was far greater than the local promoter cared to consent to and negotiations were dropped.

While Ritchie would not say just what he is receiving for fighting Welsh in Vancouver, it is learned on good authority that he will receive a guarantee of $15,000 with a 50 per cent interest in the moving pictures.

The champion will depart to-day for the mountains to shoot deer and incidentally get himself a good start in the training line.

Sports and Such

FAMOUS IN SPORT—III.

The Breed of Horses.

THE BREED OF HORSES IS A good deal like the city government—it is in constant need of improvement. These improvements eat up a lot of kale, but they are necessary, and the kale comes from men who oughtn't be trusted with money, anyway. Auto manufacture may cease at any moment, and you would be up against it without an improved breed of horse to take you to the office, especially if there should be a subway strike on at the same time.

The men who have the Breed of Horses nearest at heart are called Bookmakers, or Personal Friends. They work without pay in the noble cause. When you have paid your $3 matriculation fee to study the subject, they merely show you a list of horses and request you to decide in which the breed has been improved to the greatest extent, charging you for the privilege only such sums of money as you may have about you at the time. If you cannot see how this improves the Breed of Horses, you are an unmitigated bonehead and notoriety-seeker and are against personal liberty, and we wish you wouldn't read this column any more.

The funds thus accumulated are devoted to the purchase of high-grade autos for the bookmakers, as they are fat and so weighted down with bales of cush that it would injure the breed of any horse forced to haul them to the track. The Track is the institution devoted to this form of altruism. In its ideals it is not unlike those devoted to the improving of the rate of call money.

From this you can see that the Breed of Horses is not a complicated subject for the intelligent. You must merely never disagree with a Bookmaker's opinion on the breed of any horse. Of course, he may sometimes make a mistake, and then he is so ashamed that he sneaks out by the back fence before you can find him.

Before taking up the Breed of Horses seriously, devote your paycheck each week to the study of a crooked roulette wheel. It's great training.

Turned Down Trade for Joe Agler

Jersey City Offered Barton for Him

By Joe Agler.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 6.—I reckon I ought to be feeling sort of set up this morning. From what I hear, Major Frank E. Callaway, president of our ball club association, came up here to see President J. L. Lillis, of the Jersey City club, who offered him Borton, recently of the White Sox, and another player for my humble self.

They tell me Mr. Callaway turned down the offer before the deal had got beyond the debating stage.

Well, that makes me feel pretty good. I like to play ball for Atlanta, and it certainly cheers a fellow up to know he is wanted on the job. I'll just keep on doing the best I can for the Crackers and the management.

Getting back to the real business of the ball club, I want to say that we took a licking yesterday and we haven't any yelp coming. Coveleskie was right, and when he is right he is a bear. He ought to have got a shutout except for a break in the luck.

Carl Thompson, too, was in grand trim, though the Lookouts tied up the game in the ninth inning when he hit a batsman with the bases full. Then another hit batsman, an error and a base hit untied it in the tenth.

But now we have the big Pole out of the way, and with Conzelman and Price to work this afternoon, we ought to get no worse than an even break at the outside. Then we tackle the Vols, and you know they looked pretty easy last time.

REDS BUY HARRINGTON FROM N. ENGLAND LEAGUE

LYNN, MASS., Aug. 6.—Frank Harrington, a pitcher of the Lynn club of the New England league, to-day is heading to join the Cincinnati National league crowd. An offer for Harrington made a month ago was accepted with understanding that the pitcher would not leave Lynn until the close of the New England league season.

But Manager Flaherty received and accepted an offer of a bonus if he would allow Harrington to join the Reds immediately. Harrington is 21 years old.

One Comfort, the Pole Is Out of the Way for the Time Being

IT WAS A TOUGH GAME FOR THOMPSON TO LOSE

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE wad of balsam soothes the sting of defeat:

The tough-grained Pole is out of the way.

We expected it—and we got it. We didn't get it as overwhelmingly as we thought we were going to, and that is some comfort. Carl Thompson earned only praise for his stubborn defense. And his helpers with him.

Still, it would have been a grand little achievement to have trimmed the Irish Newsboy, while the trimming was so nearly good. One little scratch tally in the ninth, now—

* * *

ANOTHER grain of comfort.

Joe Agler is going to stay with us a while longer.

Major Callaway, president of the Atlanta Baseball Association, traveled to Chattanooga Monday to meet President Lillis, of the Jersey City club. Major Callaway didn't know what Mr. Lillis wanted to see him about, but Mr. Lillis' wire said it was urgent.

Mr. Lillis wanted our old friend, Joe Agler. Mr. Lillis wanted Joe so much that he offered Borton, recently a White Sox, who went to New York in the Chase trade and to J. C. for Jack Knight. Also Mr. Lillis offered boot in the shape of another player.

Major Callaway is reported by the newsfinders—entirely apart from what Joe himself heard about it—as turning down the deal as soon as he found out what Mr. Lillis wanted.

Suits us fine.

* * *

WHEN the official wranglers in any old league run out of wrangling material, they usually dig up the clever and start in on the proposition of a ball player being out if he slides into first base, and, if so, why not?

There are plenty of wranglers on both sides. The last time the crool war broke out it was in the American Association. But it did not stay there.

An honest German umpire named O'Brien called out a guy named Dixie Walker for sliding bean-first to sack No. 1 in St. Paul. Billy Friel, manager of the Saints and incidentally of Mr. Walker, protested to President Chivington.

Chivvy upheld the umpire, saying something about an "unwritten law" promulgated, or words to that effect, by the umpires as a rebuke to baserunners who are merely trying to "make the play close," and confuse the worthy umps.

* * *

RIGHT away some loafer touched off August Herrmann about it.

The august August is about three-fourths of the National Commission—when Ban Johnson is away—and he is ever ready to blow up about anything.

This time he performed as per schedule.

Mr. Herrmann said, in part:

"A player is permitted under the rules to reach any base by any method he sees fit." So long, it is understood, as the said player proceeds under his own steam.

Mr. Herrmann remarked further:

"He may run, jump, crawl or walk on his hands, so long as he travels within the lines. This is provided in the rules of the game, and no umpire or league president or anybody else has any right to change the rule."

* * *

MR. CHIVINGTON, please copy.

But here is another rule:

"Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the accuracy of the umpire's judgment and decision on a play."

Rule 65, if you want to look it up.

And what we should like to inquire is, how is Mr. Herrmann to decide from the protests of outraged managers whether the sliding-to-first-base runner was called out because the umpire was prejudiced against that mode of transportation, or because he really was out?

DROP a little tear for Cornelius McGillicuddy.

As if it weren't tough enough to lose half a series to the wretched Browns, and have the furious Naps roaring along, only eight or ten games behind, here comes the news that Jack Coombs, famous iron man, is about ready to come back.

Coombs has been out of the game since early in the spring. Typhoid was the cause. Now he is reported bigger and better than ever, just like a circus.

Pity poor Connie! He was wondering and wondering who would pitch the opening game of the world's series—Bender or Plank.

And now here's Coombs!

EAST MEETS WEST TO-DAY IN BIG TENNIS DOUBLES

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Double teams from the East and West to-day met for the final elimination in the National tennis championships. Clarence Griffin and John Strachan, of San Francisco, Pacific Coast champions, were matched against Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern champions.

The winners of to-day's match will be entitled to play Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bundy, present National champions, at Newport, R. I., on August 18, for the 1913 doubles honors of the United States.

JACK KEATING KNOCKS OUT GALL IN THE FOURTH ROUND

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Jack Keating, the local heavyweight, knocked out George Gall, in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Atlantic A. C. Garden here last night. Gall was reeling around the ring helpless in the fourth round when his seconds threw up the sponge.

John Lester Johnson, the South American heavyweight, knocked out Bob Lee, a dusky-hued boxer of Brooklyn, in the third round of the semi-final bout, scheduled to go ten rounds.

SMITH IN NO-HIT GAME; ARM NOW OUT OF SPLINTS

PITTSFIELD, MASS., Aug. 6.—William I. Smith, of the Pittsfield Eastern Association Baseball Club, who took his injured arm out of splints the day before, pitched a no-hit game against Waterbury yesterday, shutting them out 3 to 0. Smith issued no passes and struck out six men. Only three Waterbury players saw first base, all on errors.

HURLS NO-RUN NO-HIT GAME.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 6.—Pitcher Watson, of Asheville, in the North Carolina league, pitched a no-hit, no-run game here against Winston-Salem. He walked three men, struck out six and out of three trips to the bat got two hits, one of which was a home run.

JAKE STAHL MAY SUCCEED CALLAHAN AS HEAD OF SOX

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—A rumor was industriously circulated in local baseball circles to-day to the effect that Jake Stahl, former manager of the Red Sox, is scheduled to succeed Jimmy Callahan as manager of the Chicago White Sox, at the close of the present year. Stahl has been spending the summer, since his dismissal, at Amhisquam, but could not be reached there to-day. Some of Stahl's close personal friends are inclined to ridicule the idea that Stahl will return to baseball.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

VOICE FROM CHICAGO.

Welcome little drops of moisture,
Coming down in healthy flocks,
For the ball yard is deserted
And they can not trim the Sox.

Horace Fogel is in Indianapolis talking things over with the Federal League. Indianapolis has no ordinance prohibiting unnecessary noises.

The way to suppress Mrs. Pankhurst is to sentence her to watch a gang of cricketers playing a double-header.

Belgium refuses to fall for Jack Johnson, but he still has Dahomey and Abyssinia to fall back upon. In fact, his arrival in Abyssinia would cause great rejoicing—in other parts of the world.

As we perpetrate this paragraph the Naps are seven and one-half games behind the Athletics. The said Naps have fully as much show as a horse seven lengths behind Sysonby in the last quarter.

Those Naps have been playing as if they did not realize that the Fourth of July has went from our midst.

Still, it may be that they have fallen for the sane Fourth idea and refuses to blow up.

In answer to the rumor that he intends to quit, Frank Chance avers that he is satisfied with the outlook. It must be great to work for that kind of a boss.

JUMPING OFF.

It was a jilted lover and he sat with drooping frame.
Quoth he: "I do not care to live since I have lost my dame."
And so the lovelorn rummy joined the motorcycle game.

WHITNEY TO GET HERE FRIDAY; WHITE SATURDAY

FRANK WHITNEY will arrive Friday morning for his ten-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory a week from to-night. White will get in Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The "Fighting Carpenter" has been training for a week on his farm in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but yesterday moved his training quarters to McConnell's gymnasium in Chicago, where he will remain until to-morrow night.

The following wire was received this morning:

Will arrive in Atlanta Friday morning. Am stopping in Chicago for a couple of days so as to get benefit of sparring partners. Working at McConnell's gym.

There are not any clever lightweights in Atlanta for Frank to work out with. In the Windy City there are plenty of boys who can give the "Fighting Carpenter" just the sort of work he needs.

Tickets for the show will go on sale this afternoon at Shepherd's Cigar Store, corner of Edgewood and Pryor. On account of the size of the Auditorium-Armory, it has been decided to make the prices $1, $1.50 and $2. The balcony brings the low price, the dress circle $1.50 and the ringside seats "two bucks."

Already big orders have been received from Macon, Athens, Augusta and other nearby cities and towns. It is expected that the advance sale will be even heavier than for the Battling Nelson bout, which totaled nearly $2,500.

Larry Lajoie, of the Cleveland Naps, who has been described for some years as one of the wrecks of the national pastime, trotted up to the bat in Philadelphia and smashed out three hits, one of which was a home run, another a two-bagger and the third a long single.

AMATEUR TEAMS CLASH AT PONCE DE LEON TO-DAY

In order that the visiting merchants may see a good game of ball the Producers and Jones teams, of the Grocers' league, has transferred their game from Piedmont to Ponce DeLeon Park. Game will be called at 3:30 p. m. Admission 10 cents.

These two teams are tied in the race for the pennant in the Grocers' league and this game is sure to be a battle royal. Jones won the last game, which will make the Producers fight hard to make it a win.

NEW YORK HEARS THAT YANKEES SEEK HOEMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A report gained circulation here to-day that Artie Hofman, former Cub and Pirate, will be seen in a Yankee uniform next year.

Artie has been playing great ball since he was turned over to Nashville, of the Southern League, by the Pirates. He looks to be just as good as ever.

It is said that Chance promised Artie that he would bring him back into the big leagues if he displayed any of his old form.

Polo To-day---If It Doesn't Rain Everybody Invited to McPherson

IF only J. Pluvius will compromise with the weather man for this one afternoon, he will earn the respect and friendly admiration of several thousand Atlantans, who are planning to witness Atlanta's first polo match on the big parade ground at Fort McPherson, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Everything is set for the contest between a team representing Atlanta and a quartet of officers of the Seventeenth Regiment. The personnel of the officers' team has not been announced, but it is known that there are enough experts with the Seventeenth to make up the requisite four of experienced polo players and have a second four left over for substitutes.

The local four will be Captain J. O. Seamans, of the Governor's Horse Guard, who played the game in the army; who will lead the team; Albert Sidney J. Tucker of Lexington, Va.; E. M. Landrum, of Pensacola, Fla., and Milton Wise, of New York.

Robert F. Maddox will act as timer; Wilmer L. Moore, scorer; James R. Gray and Clark Howell, goal judges, and Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorstoun, referee.

Moving pictures will be taken of the event and will be displayed on local screens at an early date.

In addition to the game there will be a band concert by the regimental band, and music by the Glee Club, of Company M. A tug-of-war on horseback and also wrestling on horseback.

No admission will be charged and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in the sport.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Lou Castro is a busy man these days. Lou is dividing his time in eating three squares a day and getting his fighting arena in shape for his big boxing show to be staged at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. Whitney has wired Castro that he will be here Friday.

* * *

Kid Young and Mike Saul are working together for their coming bouts at the Auditorium. Young takes on Charlie Lee, while Mike will probably don the padded mitts with Eddie Hanlon. Young is developing a terrific kick in his right hand, and expects to topple Lee over long before the tenth round is reached.

* * *

Kid Wonder took a trip to The Georgian Sporting Department yesterday to inform us that he was after a match with some local featherweight. Wonder is after a scrap with either Kid Young or Charlie Lee.

* * *

A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast want to meet Willie Ritchie, and have started bidding for the match. Both boys are willing to give the champion a neat side bet.

* * *

Packey McFarland is the latest to put in a boost for Charlie White. Packey says that Charlie is without a doubt the greatest 128-pound boy in the game to-day. Joe Thomas and Jake Abel probably agree with McFarland.

* * *

They are certainly picking soft marks for Carl Morris in the West. Al Benedict, his latest victim, would be easy for a lot of Philadelphia welterweights.

* * *

Three 10-round bouts between heavyweights are to be staged at the St. Nicholas A. C., New York, to-night. Porky Flynn, of Boston, will meet Sailor White, of Newark; Frank McGuinness, the Irish heavyweight, will battle Jack Keating, of the United States Navy, and Al Kubiak is to try conclusions with Tim Logan, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, have been matched to meet in a ten-round go at Omaha on September 12. If Coulon finds that he is right in this bout, he may go to the coast for a scrap with Kid Williams.

* * *

A banner house is expected to attend the Gunboat Smith-Jim Flynn set-to at New York on August 8. Both boys have been doing all their training in the Eastern City, and look to be in great shape. They are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Cyclone Thompson and Billy Hooper, colored lightweights, may be put on in one of the bouts to be held at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13. They are now dickering with Lou Castro.

* * *

Arthur Pelky and Charlie Miller may clash in a long go at Los Angeles. McCarey plans to match the pair for a September date. Tommy Burns, manager of Pelky, took the match with the understanding that if Pelky defeated Miller he was to get a fight with Gunboat Smith.

GA.-ALA. LEAGUE NOTES

Every town in the league around the Georgia-Alabama circuit is glad when the Opelika boys blow in. They're a bunch of collegians and gentlemanly fellows, as well as good ball players.

* * *

* * *

Then there is Bone, of Washington and Lee; Allen and Ragsdale, of Auburn; Canley and others who have played on college diamonds and gridirons.

* * *

"Chick" Hannon, for years one of the best-known factors in Southern football and baseball, an all-Southern quarter and shortstop at Alabama, has said his "thirty" to active sports, although he will hereafter be assistant coach in athletics at Alabama, his alma mater.

* * *

Before he got an injured wing, resulting from a broken shoulder blade in a football game, Hannon was headed straight for the majors, if he wanted to ascend; but since that accident he has never had the old-time punch to his fling, and to-day his knowledge of the game is his chief asset. He knows that, and he can teach it.

* * *

He has made a success as coach for the Alabama Presbyterian College here, and has played good ball in the Southeastern and Georgia-Alabama despite his handicap. An operation last year failed to restore his arm to its old-time form, and for two seasons he has known that he was passing.

* * *

He is one of the many veterans who the fans sometimes knock, but love nevertheless, and in his exit there goes a gentleman of the field.

* * *

Killingsworth, the big Anniston pitcher, made a bid for a job with Opelika in the game Monday afternoon, should he ever get "canned" by Anniston. A fracas with the umpire caused the parking of three Pelicans, and Killy had to be borrowed for the emergency.

* * *

In right field he pulled down a stellar fly on the run, and when he came to the bat the last time he put Left-fielder Henry up against the fence to gather in a long swat from his own willow. Altogether, his work came near costing his teammates the game. He plays for the love of the thing, and says he forgot to pull in his punch.

PLAYERS MEET IN CHECKER TOURNEY FINALS TO-DAY

In the play which began here yesterday for the championship of the Southern Checker Association the following qualified for the final round to be played to-day: G. C. Anderson, North Carolina; R. W. Evans, J. S. Hall, J. M. Bishop, C. M. Farrar, Georgia; S. S. Hallman, B. Fishburne, South Carolina, and J. H. Allen, Jr., Knoxville, Tenn., the holder of the championship since 1911.

Allen lost three of his first four games and in order to qualify for the finals had to make perfect scores against his last five opponents.

CHARLEY WHITE'S DEBUT HOWLING SUCCESS

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

LET a man attain prominence in any field of endeavor—be it finance, politics, medicine, the law, burglary or the stage—some auld acquaintance is as sure to rise up and chirp "I knew when, etc.," as a bleacherite is to yell "win your old game, boy," when the pitcher comes to bat with the score 11 to 2 against him with two down in the ninth inning.

It ranks with "I told you so" and "let's have another" as one of the most useful phrases of conversation.

All of this is merely a preface to a "I knew him when" yarn about Charley White, the wonderful Chicago lightweight, who is to meet Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory arena August 13.

White is a real championship contender now. In fact, in a lightweight division remarkable for the lack of punching power among the top-notchers, White should be regarded as easily the most dangerous man of his poundage alive.

But when I first saw Charley box, he was as unknown to fame as was Jim Conley before the Phagan mystery's first chapter was written.

If my memory serves me right, it was on Labor Day of 1908, at the old Hawthorne race track, the last of the Windy City's once glorious domain of the thoroughbreds.

That year boxing, racing and pretty much everything else was under the ban in Chicago, but on Labor Day it was announced that the unions were to hold their celebration at the old track and the lid was to be lifted for the occasion.

The bang-tails were to run in the afternoon; there would be fighting at night; handbook men would be allowed to operate unmolested. Every known gambling device was to be in operation.

* * *

A PICTURESQUE scene greeted the visitors. The union men were in the uniforms they had worn in the Labor Day parade. All of Chicago's noted sportsmen were on hand. Old Ed Corrigan walked about the plant of which he was once master much like a ghost is supposed to walk about the scenes of his triumphs.

The gamblers were busy early and late. Half a dozen bank crap games were running. There were a dozen kinds of swindles going. The old army game was being played in four or five different bird cages.

Before the day had gone far, in walked the Sheriff, and the games mysteriously vanished. But the races were run and the brew flowed freely.

The fights were to be held in the old betting shed, and right after the last race the shed was packed.

The star bout was a ten-round go between Cyclone Johnny Thompson, then a lightweight, and Eddie Tancel, a pretty husky boy of the division.

There were two preliminaries. On account of the presence of the Sheriff, the promoters were rather leery about staging the fights. Minutes passed, and then an hour. The spectators began to squirm. Finally two charitably-inclined gents started some fun by having a fist fight all their own at the ringside.

This quelled the fighting began. The first bout was a tame wrestling affair. The second was a three-round go between two tough mugs, who wanted to continue the scrapping with bare knuckles after the final gong rang.

* * *

THE last preliminary was between Danny Goodman and an unknown kid introduced as Charley White. Yank Kenny refereed. Goodman then was a veteran, and a mighty hard man to beat. He was a corking good ring general, and knew about all there is to know of boxing.

White was pounds lighter, though Goodman weighed no more than 125 pounds. Goodman was all confidence. White was all earnestness. It was his first ring engagement against so seasoned a warrior. In the first round Goodman danced around him, working in and out, and landing lightly pretty much as he wished. But he was not hurting White, and every now and then the novice flashed a left hand out that carried death and destruction, but Goodman was never there.

The second round was about a repetition of the first. White vainly striving to land a crushing blow. The final round was fast and furious. White was on top of Goodman from the gong. Left and right were whipped out with lightning rapidity. Goodman was boxing his best, but finally a left found its way to his stomach. Goodman doubled up and all but collapsed, and the crowd was on its feet yelling.

The veteran, though, quickly covered and stalled through the remaining minute of the round. Though Goodman had landed twenty blows to White's one, the one that Charley put over evened the fight, and he was entitled to a draw.

That was his baptism of fire, and so impressive was his showing that Nate Lewis, who was at the ringside, promptly took the boy under his tutelage and started him on his climb to the championship.

* * *

I DID NOT see White box again until he met Jake Abel in the Auditorium a few weeks ago. I had always believed Abel about as clever a boy as the South boasts. I had no idea that he would knock White out, but I had no idea that White would stop him. The bout seemed destined to go the ten rounds.

But at the first gong White showed more than I have ever seen in an Atlanta ring. Abel was a toy. When White sent him crumbling to the floor in the second round, there was not a man in the house not glad that the bout ended there. It had been one-sided entirely.

In 1908 I had seen White a novice. Just five years later, if he was not a champion he was at least the most dangerous man in his division.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Unless President Groover rescinds his action, Catcher Pierre, of the Valdosta team, will not play ball any more this season in the Empire. He has been suspended for the balance of the season for an attack on Umpire Gentle in Valdosta. In Brunswick Pierre attacked Umpire McLaughlin and was fined for the job.

* * *

President W. J. Clark, of the Waycross Association, says Waycross is going to finish first and fight it out with Valdosta for the pennant. In view of the recent additions to the Waycross team, this may not prove idle talk.

* * *

Despite the certainty of financial loss in almost all cities of the Empire this season, every member of the league is making plans for baseball next season. The experience of the first season has cost some cities a bunch of money, and it is safe to predict that every team will stay within the salary limit another year.

* * *

If Jackson, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., arrange a post-season series, several Empire League teams will be badly crippled if players of those teams have to report for the series. Thomasville and Valdosta will suffer, as each team has strong men from the Cotton States teams that want to have some more baseball.

* * *

The end of this week should see a decided change in the standing of teams in the league. Thomasville has six hard games, three with Cordele and three with Waycross. Some battles worth seeing will go down in baseball history before the week-end, mark the prediction.

* * *

Pitcher Vanderlip, who played with Waycross for some time this season, is now playing with a semi-professional team in his home city, Brooklyn. Shamus O'Brien, known as "Mickey," is signed with the Baltimore team for the remainder of the season, having been turned loose by Waycross.

* * *

Because of the recent talk of a post-season series between the pennant winners of the Southern and the South Atlantic, the talk of a series between the Empire and Sally pennant winners has died down lately. However, it is probable the games will be played.

* * *

When Nance and Leininger, both third basemen, were released by Valdosta, two clever men were cut loose. Nance succeeded Leininger, only to go for Brewster, of the Cotton States.

* * *

Red Stiles, of the Thomasville team, is probably the champion hard luck pitcher of the league. In one game he gave up but two hits and then lost, the hits gotten by his teammates failing to come in bunches.

* * *

Unless the dope slips, one of the new men to appear in the Empire this month will startle the fans by his work. Recently the player in question got six hits out of seven times up in an extra inning game, three home runs and three three-base hits being the best he could do. On the bases he is said to resemble Ty Cobb.

* * *

Brunswick is taking to Whitey Morse, according to reports from the seaport city. Morse is hitting over .300, and is popular with players and fans alike. Valdosta lost a valuable man when he was allowed to go.

* * *

The attendance trophy, which was won by Waycross on opening day, is on display in Waycross and is attracting a lot of notice.

The Americus team next season will be changed a great deal, judging by comments of the present team. Like other teams in the league, Americus has changed managers several times this season, and there are fans who dislike each manager to such an extent that the team never suits everybody.

* * *

Jack Hawkins, who played ball around Atlanta for some time, and started the Empire season as a Brunswick player, is now in left field for Valdosta. He came back to the Empire from the Cotton States League, where he batted over .300 and fielded in jam-up style. Brewster, another Cotton States player, is on third for Valdosta, succeeding Nance.

* * *

While fans in Waycross regretted the release of "Goat" Holliday, the sensational first baseman, they are delighted at the way Jones is playing the bag. Jones came from Virginia to play with Brunswick, but was not good enough for the Pilots. He made good in Waycross with a rush and fields as well as Holliday.

* * *

Franks has been signed as an outfielder for Brunswick. He was a member of the Valdosta team and is considered one of the best in the league. He had a row of some kind with Jordan and his release followed.

* * *

Lately there has been a revival of the rumor that Albany will become a member of the Empire circuit. It is said that Albany and Americus like nothing better than a scrap on the ball field, and, if for no other reason, Albany would be glad to get into the Empire.

* * *

Of all the youngsters picked up by Empire League teams this season none has developed as rapidly as Anderson, a Georgia boy, now playing third base for Waycross. He has played at short and in the field, and, with another year's experience, will undoubtedly go up. He is fast on the bases and seldom fails to swipe a base if he gets on.

* * *

Pitcher Day, of the Thomasville team, has been given another name. Handsome has given away to Steady. He has won so many close games that fans take his victories as a matter of fact.

* * *

According to the done furnished by each member of the Empire six teams are going to finish first when the season ends August 27. If the teams don't quit getting bunched around first place it may be necessary to play off a tie for first place. Maybe such a game would not be interesting?

* * *

Of all the dope floating around in the Empire there is but one settled fact—whichever team wins the second half of the season will have to play some baseball to nose Valdosta out of the rag. It is possible Valdosta will win the second season, too—but hardly probable the way the team is playing just now.

Harry Glenn Saucer Favorite 25-Mile Grind Friday Night

HARRY GLENN is the most popular rider at Jack Prince's Motordrome these days. The wonderful improvement the local lad has made in the last few weeks has earned him the plaudits of every "bug." Last night Harry was at his best, and as a result he was given a big hand every time he showed up.

Harry won another match race, this time leading Billy Shields home in two straight heats of two miles each. And Harry made a wonderful showing in the ten-mile race also. Although he finished third, he would surely have copped first honors had the finish line been 25 yards farther off.

Harry took the pace most of the way. But he rode a heady race and figured to come through in the final sprint. On the last lap he gave his "boat" a shot of "oilzum" and drew up on Renel and Richards fast and sure, but he started his spurt just about one second too late. The finish was Renel, first; Richards, second; Glenn, third. A blanket would have covered the entire trio at the finish, however.

The next race meet will be Friday night, a 25-mile event, with ten starters, being the feature.

Following is the summary of the races held last night.

Motordrome Purse.

Heats, 1 mile; finals, 2 miles.

First Heat—Harry Swartz, first; Billy Shields, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Tex Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time—43 4-5 seconds.

Final—Jock McNeil, first; Tex Richards, second. Time—1:25 1-5.

Special Match Race.

Harry Glenn defeated Billy Shields in two straight two-mile heats. Time—1:31 3-5, 1:31.

Atlanta Sweepstakes.

Heats, 1 mile; final, 10 miles.

First Heat—Tex Richards, first; Morty Graves, second. Time—45 seconds.

Second Heat—Harry Glenn, first; Georges Renel, second. Time—45 seconds.

Final—Tex Richards, first; Georges Renel, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time—7:22.

SAVANNAH CLUB RECALLS REILLY FROM AMERICUS

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 6.—By exercising optional rights, the Savannah Baseball Association has recalled Infielder Reilly, of the Americus club in the Empire State League, to relieve Zimmerman at second base. Owing to the terrible slump with which Zimmerman has been suffering, both in fielding and in batting, because of ill health, he has been suspended from the Indian crew temporarily. If Reilly, who was with Savannah during the early part of the season, makes good, Zimmerman will not be played again this season.

Reilly reported for duty upon the return of the Lipemen from Albany. He is easily the best player in the Empire League. He has batted at a steady clip of never less than .355 all season; has played at second, short, third base and in the outfield, and has taken care of each of these several jobs with success.

The Lowest Point of Land

The lowest point of land in the United States is in Death Valley, California, 276 feet below the sea level. In the early days this valley was the terror of explorers and the trail through it was marked by the bleaching bones of hundreds of explorers. According to geologists this part of the country was once covered by a great sea, to which they attribute the deposits of borax and salt. Reports have been made at various times about the discovery of gold in this desert and in 1905 it came into considerable prominence when Death Valley Scotty, a miner, made his appearance in Los Angeles and announced the mysterious find of vast riches in this graveyard. Little, however, was ever heard of these supposed riches after the miner had made a spectacular dash to New York in a special train and spent a roll of money on the Great White Way in New York. The mineral deposits of the valley have been capitalized for a number of years and the valley has not the terror for travelers that it previously had. In fact, automobile endurance runs have been made through Death Valley several times. The heat is excessive and a temperature of 122 degrees in the shade has frequently been observed in the summer.

Britain's Sordid Attitude to the Panama Exposition.

Great Britain's refusal to take part in the Panama Canal Exposition of 1915 may be accepted in sorrow rather than in anger—sorrow that the government of so great an empire should have sunk into such a narrow rut of parochial politics that for the sake of a ha'porth of self-advantage it would sacrifice its share in the nobler spirit of rejoicing in a world's great work well done.

Here, then, is the childish retort to the refusal of our Government to submit to arbitration the dispute about the canal tolls—"We won't play in your yard."

Of the dispute itself this newspaper has already on many occasions expressed its emphatic views. Based on a shadowy protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, in which there was never any practical reality, Great Britain undertakes, under the letter of certain treaties made at a time when the idea of a canal at Panama was not dreamed of, to tell the United States that it can not send its own coast-wise traffic at a lower rate than foreign ocean traffic through a canal every dollar of whose vast cost it has itself paid for and which runs through territory entirely under the American flag!

In practical operation the amount involved on the ocean-going traffic of foreign ships would admittedly be so small that the raising of a dispute about it at all by any foreign government becomes a shining example of "hot potato" stand diplomacy.

From a government that acquired the Suez Canal through the devious, if forceful, methods Great Britain employed—always, of course, strictly observing every honorable obligation to its neighbors from the purely and curious British viewpoint—the Panama protest was simply an astonishing exhibition of sordid and envious greed.

It would be difficult to believe that such a decision as this by Great Britain represented anything more than the clamor of its Tory press—the kind of press that a day or two ago exploited an article calling for the abolition in tennis of the overhand service which enabled McLoughlin to win back the Davis cup—if it were not for the fact that the government is so largely radical in its tone. It is difficult, even with that in mind, to believe that this decision about the San Francisco fair can possibly represent general British sentiment toward America.

Americans, generally speaking, are so broad-minded that they do not want fully to realize that it may be only "hands across the sea" when there is something substantial in Uncle Sam's. They know full well that the friendship that has to be bought is not worth paying for. John Bull is surely not so poverty-stricken that he must haggle over a penny with a friend. This show of petty temper is, alas, a deplorable betrayal of a mean spirit.

And to base his position on a high-sounding principle is for John Bull to pose on a pedestal of lofty self-righteousness which history never erected for him, and which would topple if tapped with even a toy hammer of truth.

But, if great nations can sometimes be small, smaller nations can frequently be big. Twenty-two, including even Japan, have agreed to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and its success and interest can not now be materially impaired. The canal itself, the greatest wonder of the world wrought by man, will be open, and ships of all nations, even those of Great Britain, will be passing through it on their voyages over the new trade routes of the oceans, opening up new countries and new enterprises and new profits for all the peoples of the earth to share—among them Great Britain, and not the least.

California and Our Merchant Marine.

California is advancing a wholesome movement to inaugurate a merchant marine with State money, if a laggard Government continues to neglect this truly American policy.

There is a bill in the California Legislature to appoint a board of five merchant marine commissioners—one from the resident shipbuilders, one from the resident shipowners, one from the shippers of domestic goods, one from the consignees of foreign goods and one from the Sailers' Union of the Pacific. This board shall have authority from the State to pay 5 per cent per annum upon one-half the building cost of ships engaged in foreign and domestic commerce from California ports and to help on the payment of the difference between building and operating such American-built ships with American workmen and American officers and the cost of building and operating with foreign workmen and officers. The State's subsidy is to cease if ever the National Government shall aid these ships with a subsidy.

It is plain to see that California, progressive and enterprising among American States, realizes the necessity of a domestic merchant marine, and that California is willing to put her hands in her pockets and help to build such a merchant marine with heroic liberality. It is also substantially evident that California believes a merchant marine will richly repay the original cost.

The California bill will help to point the necessity in our commerce, and will, it is hoped, inspire the Government to its duty.

Somebody has to make a start in our merchant marine. Congress and the Administration seem laggard and indifferent or incapable.

If our maritime States are brave enough and public-spirited enough to make this beginning, the appealing figures are at hand to inspire them, and the example of California may be the object lesson needed to set on foot the greatest and most essential commercial policy of our country.

Mysteries of Science and Nature.

With the Aid of Photography and Ultra-Violet Microscope Man's Power of Vision Is Beginning to Rival That of Insects.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

MAN is beginning to add to his senses. If he has not discovered new ones, he has extended the range of some of those which he already possesses. When this process has been continued for a few hundred, or a few thousand, years, the human race may find that it has got upon a new level, from which it can penetrate much farther and much deeper in the wonders of the universe.

Beginning to See.

Among other things, man is beginning, under the guidance of science, to see, in a roundabout way, with the eyes of insects.

To understand this, let us first consider how we see with our natural power of vision.

Our range of sight is strictly confined within the limits of waves of light, varying in length from about 1-39,000th to about 1-57,000th of an inch. The longest of these waves produces in our brains the impression of red, and the shortest the impression of violet. The other principal colors (orange, yellow, blue and indigo) are produced by intermediate wave-lengths, each color having its own characteristic waves.

If an object reflects light of only one of these colors it assumes the hue of that color; if it reflects them all equally, it appears white, because a combination of the primary colors produces the impression of white.

But there are, in reality, enormous numbers of light waves which are longer than the longest that affect our sense of vision, and also enormous numbers that are shorter than the shortest that we can see. In either case these waves, which lie beyond one end or the other of what is called the "visible spectrum" of light, are, except for scientific devices, totally insensible to us.

Now, it has been found that certain insects, particularly ants, can perceive light waves that are shorter than 1-57,000th of an inch, which is the lower limit for human eyes.

In other words, the ant can "see" a color that lies outside the violet. If the ant has a name for this "ultra-violet" color, we are not likely to find it out.

More than that, the ant (if it possesses microscopic powers) may be able to see objects that are so minute that a "forty-billion-power" microscope would be unable to reveal them to us, because they are smaller than the smallest light wave that lies within our range. An object as small as that would be unable to reflect perfectly a wave of violet light, and consequently no amount of direct magnification would be able to bring it clearly within the limits of sight for us.

What Ant Perceives.

But right here the magic power of photography comes to our aid and enables us to penetrate into this world of the infinitely minute, which the insects may be supposed to have regarded as their exclusive and inviolable domain!

Photography is able to do this because the sensitive plate or film is affected by those same ultra-violet waves that the ant perceives.

Suppose, then, that an object is so small that it can not reflect the violet waves, but can reflect the smaller ultra-violet ones. It is only necessary to make a photograph of it, whereupon the ultra-violet waves that it reflects will produce a chemical change in the sensitive surface of the photographic plate or film and impress an image there, which image may be magnified at will. This is the principle of the "ultra-violet microscope."

There is another way in which man has recently extended his range of vision indirectly, deep into the secrets of the infinitely minute. It has been done by the aid of what is called the "ultra-microscope." This depends for its action upon the fact that a minute object produces a scattering of the rays of light that fall upon it. It surrounds itself with a kind of aureole, as may be noticed when a beam of sunlight enters a dusty room, causing millions of previously invisible floating particles to glow like infinitesimal stars.

Light Reveals Objects.

Suppose that an object of this kind, too small to be seen by direct microscope examination, yet large enough to reflect the light waves that lie within our range, is placed under powerful lenses, in a beam of light so arranged that it does not pour directly into the eye of the observer. It will scatter about itself enough light not only to betray its presence but even in some cases to reveal its shape.

But doubtless we have only just begun to find out the power of the mind by its inventions to extend the range of our senses.

"I SEE in the evening paper," said my Arizona friend,
"How a feller was shook by his Missus, and brung her life to an end.
Thar'll be lots to pity the feller, and say that it served her right,
And I ain't a-setting in judgment, nor takin' up no one's fight.
But I never could shoot a rabbit, out whar rabbits is thick,
And I figger that shootin' a lady is a similar kind o' trick.
Rabbits and ladies and babies—they can't shoot back, you see,
And the guy was a cur that murdered her!" said Phoenix Phil to me.

"You remember the gal out in Phoenix," said my Arizona friend.
"You remember the home she made me, and the dream that had to end.
I never was able to figger, when I seen I was in the lurch,
How she left my kind of a feller for the rat she met at a church,
But I wasn't no ideal husband; I was always fast and wild,
And she wanted a feller with manners and his shirt all proper biled.
I heard that he made her happy, so I figgered I'd let her be,
Which is harder sometimes than murder," said Phoenix Phil to me.

Taking Inventory

Mothers Should Not Close Their Eyes to the Defects of Their Offspring, but Should Correct Them So That in Later Life the Children Will Not Turn Out Badly.

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY now and then every business man goes carefully over his possessions, listing, appraising, advancing and depreciating their worth and valuing them by the market standards of the day. He calls this taking stock. When he is through and has balanced his ledgers, he knows precisely where he stands—what he has to hope and what to fear, where he may fight and where he must hedge.

I have often thought that there would be less failure in the world and fewer of us would come to spiritual bankruptcy if we would follow the same plan and occasionally sit down and take stock of ourselves mentally, morally and physically. It is human and comfortable to think we possess all graces and virtues and charms, but it isn't true any more than it would be for the cross-roads country store merchant to imagine himself a Wanamaker.

Why shouldn't an ugly woman, for instance, face the music and calmly take an inventory of the beauty that she lacks?

Nobody will deny that the woman who is born beautiful draws the prize package in the lottery of life, but she doesn't get everything. There is tact and charm of manner and grace, and the woman who has these has a magic veil that hides a homely face and makes it seem beautiful to those who come in contact with her. Moreover, while beauty must come by nature, these qualities may be cultivated.

It Lies With Every Woman To Be Considerate of Others.

It lies with every woman to learn a delicate consideration for the feelings of others, to acquire the art of listening with interest and to so improve her mind she will always be the most delightful and intelligent of companions. And when she can do these things she needn't worry much about the size of her nose or whether her mouth is cut bias or straight.

It seems a pity, too, doesn't it, that people don't oftener take stock of their children and see just what they are and what might be made out of them? Of course, it's delightful to think that all of our little Sallies and Johnnies and Tommies are geniuses, but our pleasure in the illusion is apt to be a little marred by the subsequent disappointment that we might so easily have saved ourselves if only we had looked at them as they were, instead of as we wished them to be.

We should think a merchant crazy if he had a store full of calico, and homespun, and pots, and kettles, and pans, and in taking stock he listed them as point lace and diamonds and pictures. Yet that is just exactly what we are doing with our children. We are calling commonplace and ordinary qualities by fine names. We won't see them as they are and make the best of them on that basis. We are so determined on raising up geniuses, instead of good business men and citizens, that now and then we convert them into hoodlums and idiots.

Why shouldn't a mother look her own children over just as she does her neighbors' and size up their strength and weakness? She should, at least, then be able to work out the problem of raising them with some sort of knowledge as a foundation and guide, instead of going at it purely as guesswork. She won't do it, however. It takes a courage to look things in the face that she doesn't possess. She won't admit that this child is feeble-minded or that one is dull, and so she deprives them of the marvelous help that modern education can give along these lines.

She shuts her eyes to the fact that Johnny is bowlegged and Tommy is knock-kneed, and she dooms them to go through life a butt for the ridicule of their acquaintances, when the defect could be so easily remedied while they are children. She takes no pains to help the ugly girl correct her awkwardness and learn the things that would make up for her lack of beauty. Even her efforts to help her children are half the time atrocious mistakes, because she has never taken stock and doesn't know what she has on hand to work with.

Life Has Given Very Few All That They Desired.

Every now and then some unhappy and tearful wife comes to me with the tale of her troubles. She is dissatisfied, discontented, disgruntled. Sometimes she is not appreciated, sometimes her heart is hurt by cold treatment, sometimes she feels that she made a mistake in marrying and yearns for a career out in the world. I don't know any remedy as good for such a state of affairs as for the woman to sit calmly down and take stock of her possesions.

Perhaps life hasn't given her all she wanted. Most of the rest of us are in the same fix. Very likely she hasn't gotten all the happiness she expected out of her marriage. Not many dreams come true. What she needs to do is to count up the things she has got and see how she can do a better business and get more happiness and good out of the things she has.

She has a good home, plenty to eat and wear, a respectable position in society, perhaps little children, certainly liberty to enjoy herself in many ways, and a settled freedom from the cares and anxieties that beset many other women. No woman who has got that many goods on her shelves has any right to declare herself a bankrupt in happiness.

If we took stock of ourselves oftener, wouldn't we blame ourselves more for many of the failures of life and other people less? Our husbands no longer show us the attentions that they did when they were our sweethearts and we cry out that marriage is a failure. Do we take as much pains to please the husband as we did the lover?

Mothers Are to Blame if Children Turn Out Badly.

Our children are rude and illmannered, and when they grow up they turn out badly. Whose fault but the mothers who raised them? We have no friends. Do we ever go out of our way to make friends or to show love and kindness to any human being? We, who are working women, complain we are ill paid. Are we doing good work that is worth good money? Let's take stock of what we are giving others before we condemn them too severely.

When merchants overhaul their goods there are certain things that they cast aside as worthless. These are old stock. Things outgrown, out of date. Wouldn't it be a good idea to imitate them in that, too? Let's throw away our old prejudices, our antiquated ideas, our moth-eaten fads. They are old stock. We are better off without them.

HUERTA TO DEPORT ENVOY LIND

Mexican President Declares U. S. Representative Must Bear Recognition of New Regime.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—John Lind, now on his way to Mexico City as special representative of the United States, will not be received by President Huerta unless he presents credentials from the President of the United States, accompanied by recognition of the present government of Mexico.

Official announcement of this was made to-day by President Huerta. The statement was delivered to Charge O'Shaughnessy at the American Embassy by Manuel Garza Aldape, Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico. It was also sent to Washington and to the powers of Europe.

Lind, Huerta's announcement said, will be expelled from the country as an undesirable alien unless he goes before the Mexican government and explains his official character and intentions or else brings official recognition of the Huerta administration from the Wilson Administration in Washington.

This is the boldest and most belligerent course yet taken by Huerta, and if the Mexican President carries out his threat Mexico will have accomplished what, in the eyes of international usuage, usually constitutes a casus belli.

In accord with the new aggressive policy of the Mexican government a delegation will wait upon Mr. Lind upon his arrival in this city, probably Saturday, and the attitude of the Mexican government toward the United States will be outlined then in unmistakable terms. The United States battleship carrying Mr. Lind is expected at Vera Cruz to-morrow night.

Must Bear Credentials.

The following official statement was issued to the press to-day by Senor Aldape:

The Mexican Department of Foreign Affairs has sent a note to Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affairs of the United States, stating by order of the President that, if Mr. John Lind, who, the Mexican government is informed, is to come to Mexico intrusted with a mission from President Wilson, does not establish in due manner his official character before the Mexican chancellery, or if he is not the bearer of recognition of the Mexican government by that of the United States, his sojourn in this Republic will not be grateful nor satisfactory to this government.

This was the first time that Huerta formally recognized Mr. Lind as an Ambassador from the United States President.

To some extent the action of Huerta has the approval of some of the Americans here because it establishes plainly the position of the Mexican Government. Otherwise the suspense attending the coming of Mr. Lind and the consequences which may follow would only be prolonged.

In addition to coming as a special

BILL TO AID TEACHERS KILLED

House Defeats Measure Providing Election on Special Levy to Pay Tutors.

Deaf to the appeals of the country schoolteachers of the State, who have not been paid one cent for more than six months, the Georgia House of Representatives on Thursday morning overwhelmingly defeated a constitutional amendment submitting to the voters of the State a proposition for a special tax levy of 1 mill in 1915 and 1-2 mill in 1916.

The revenue derived from both levies was to be added to the common school fund, and would, advocates of the bill claim, have relieved conditions that exist at present under which the State has permitted its schoolteachers to go unpaid.

The vote was: Ayes, 70; nays, 99. It lacked 53 votes of receiving the requisite two-thirds majority.

Called Slap at Slaton.

Besides being a denial of the request of the schoolteachers that they be paid what is due them, the action of the House in defeating the constitutional amendment is construed as a direct slap at Governor Slaton, inasmuch as the additional tax levy is advocated in his platform, and he has made a special request that the bill be passed, allowing the people to decide whether the teachers shall be paid.

The House by its action put itself on record as being opposed to any measure that will provide for the payment of the teachers.

The defeat of the Governor's constitutional amendment Thursday was accomplished by the same combine that defeated his two bills Wednesday afternoon and which has declared it will fight to the bitter end all efforts to pass measures favored by Speaker Burwell and the Governor.

Hardeman Leads Foes.

The fight against the bill was led by Hardeman, of Jefferson, who declared he was opposed to it because it raised the limit of taxation. Among those who spoke in favor of the bill were Fullbright, of Burke County; Gower, of Crisp; Wall, of Elbert; McMichael, of Marion; Wimberly, of Bibb, and Wheatley, of Sumter.

Prior to the defeat of his constitutional amendment bill Governor Slaton secured the enactment of the first of his measures that the Legislature has seen fit to pass. It was the inheritance tax bill, providing for taxation of legacies ranging from 1 per cent on $5,000 to 6 per cent on $1,000,000. The vote was 135 to 13. An amendment proposd by Greene, of Houston, that all inheritances of whatever amount be taxed was lost.

The House also passed a resolution authorizing the Governor to borrow any amount up to $500,000 necessary to supply the deficit in the State's revenues. The vote was 113 to 0.

Senator Vardaman Advocates Lynching Of Negro Assailants

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Lynching for negroes who commit crimes upon women was unreservedly advocated last night by Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, in a speech before an audience composed for the most part of women.

Senator Vardaman said that no person with a spark of manhood would want to see a woman who had been the victim of such an attack dragged through the horrors of a court trial.

Speaking of race segregation in street cars, the Senator declared it his belief that many of the crimes of the negroes have their inception as the result of some negro sitting next to a white woman in a street car. He said that if there is objection to segregating the negroes, then he is in favor of segregating the white people and making it a misdemeanor for negroes to infringe on their rights.

Lineman Killed as He Works on Pole In McDaniel Street

John Weaver, a lineman for the Atlanta Telephone and Telegraph Telegraph Company, was electrocuted on a telephone pole in McDaniel street about 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. He had climbed the pole to straighten out crossed wires, and came in contact with a live wire. Death was instantaneous.

Weaver was about 35 years old, and had been with the company over seven years. He lived on Woodward avenue, and is survived by a wife and small child.

Mrs. Weaver was prostrated with grief over his death.

Married 7 Months, She Doesn't Know Jealous Spouse Yet

When Recorded Pro Tem. Preston Thursday asked Mrs. R. L. Bradley, No. 70 Bartow street, how long she had known her husband, the young woman smiled and replied:

"I don't know him yet."

Mrs. Bradley explained that she has been married but seven months and that the unfounded jealousy and ungovernable temper of her husband have caused her considerable trouble.

Judge Preston advised Bradley to go into a closet and pray whenever he felt one of his "spells" coming on. He then placed the husband on probation.

'Hedging' Charged to Democratic Senators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Charging the Democrats with "hedging" and with being doubtful of the success of their tariff program, Senator Warren, of Wyoming, criticised statements made by Democratic Senators to the effect that Republican Senators were in a conspiracy to bring about hard times, during the consideration or following the passage of the pending tariff bill.

Senator Warren said that he had received thousands of letters during the last three months containing expressions of fears for industries of this country should the Democratic tariff bill become law.

Tax Losses Cut to Less Than $50,000

County tax returns received at the office of the Comptroller General Thursday cut the total losses from more than $1,000,000 to less than $500,000.

Among the counties showing increases are Chattahoochee, Liberty, Bryan, Ware (with a gain alone of $546,349) and Washington. Only one county reporting Thursday showed a loss.

$250,000 Gem Theft Clew Is Unearthed

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Declaring his operatives have evidence that jewels worth $250,000 were taken in the recent robbery of the mansion of John E. Hanan at Narragansett Pier, R. I. and that a large part of the loot was recently offered for sale to a New York dealer in gems, Samuel Samwick, head of a detective agency, said to-day that an arrest is expected within 24 hours that will go far toward solving the mystery.

The sale fell through because the person wanted more than the jeweler was willing to pay.

TRY TO PROVE TIME TOO SHORT FOR FRANK TO DO AS NEGRO SAYS

The attorneys for Leo Frank sprang a surprise Thursday afternoon by recalling Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, to the stand and getting from him that it required Jim Conley six or seven minuets to write one note dictated to him from the shorter note found by Mary Phagan's body, when Conley had declared positively on the stand that he wrote four in Frank's office within a minute and a half or two minutes.

This will prove one of the strongest foundations for the contention of the defense that it was a physical impossibility for all to have taken place which the negro described between four minutes of 1 o'clock and the time that Frank left for his luncheon at home.

Frank is said to have arrived home at or before 1:30.

By Conley's own statement he was imprisoned in a closet in Frank's office eight or ten minutes. He said it required four or five minutes to dispose of the girl's body. Additional time, according to the negro, was consumed by Frank washing his hands, and in conversation about Frank's wealthy folks in Brooklyn, Conley's watch and other topics.

Time Point Made by Defense.

If it required Conley six minutes to write a short note, as Scott testified Thursday afternoon, it is the claim of the defense that it would have taken at least 15 to 25 minutes to write the four. With the disposal of the body and the other things that the negro said were done at that time the defense proposes to show that it would have required close to three-quarters of an hour. But before this time Frank was at home eating luncheon.

Scott, while on the stand, described the "third degrees" that were given Conley in getting from him his affidavits.

Solicitor Dorsey gave Dr. Childs a vigorous cross-examination and brought out that Childs was a general practitioner and not a specialist. He sought to minimize the value of the witness' testimony on this account. The Solicitor, prompted by Dr. R. T. Dorsey, his brother, soon involved Dr. Childs in a maze of technical questions which the physician was unable to answer. Dr. Childs took refuge in the retort that the queries should be answered by a laboratory man. He continued to assert, however, that Dr. Harris was venturing only a wild guess when he said that Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her dinner.

As Dr. Harris left the stand at 12 o'clock Solicitor Dorsey announced that the State rested.

Dr. L. W. Childs, a physician and surgeon, immediately was called by the defense.

Cabbage No Key to Time of Death.

His first testimony of importance, if it was believed by the jury, served utterly to demolish the most sensational declaration of Dr. Harris, who startled his hearers last Friday by announcing with every appearance of certainty that Mary Phagan came to her death probably within 30 minutes of the time she ate her dinner April 26, positively within 45 minutes. Dr. Harris stated that he knew, because the cabbage he found in the girl's stomach hardly had been affected by the digestive juices.

Attorney Arnold showed Dr. Childs the specimen of cabbage from the Phagan girl's stomach.

The medical expert examined it and said:

"I have seen cabbage less changed by the digestive juices than that which had been in a person's stomach for 12 hours."

Dr. Childs continued his rebuttal of testimony of Dr. Harris by saying that it was impossible to tell within hours how long any of the carbo-hydrates, of which cabbage is one, have been in the human stomach.

The digestive process on carbo-hydrates, he declared, are practically nil while this class of foods is in the stomach. Cabbage, for example, may remain in the stomach for hours with little change from the digestive juices. The digestion, for the most part, occurs after the cabbage has passed into the small intestines, the physician said.

Dr. Harris' estimate, he declared, was only a guess.

He characterised in the same manner Dr. Harris' declaration that the blow Mary Phagan received on the back of the head caused unconsciousness.

Arnold propounded to his witness a hypothetical question based on the circumstances under which Mary Phagan's body was exhumed and examined nine days after burial.

"If, under these circumstances," said Arnold, "there was found a wound on the back of her head which one physician said was 1 1-2 inches long and another said was 2 1-4 inches, and there was found no fracture of the skull or injury to the brain, would any physician be justified in saying that the person receiving the blow was rendered unconscious?"

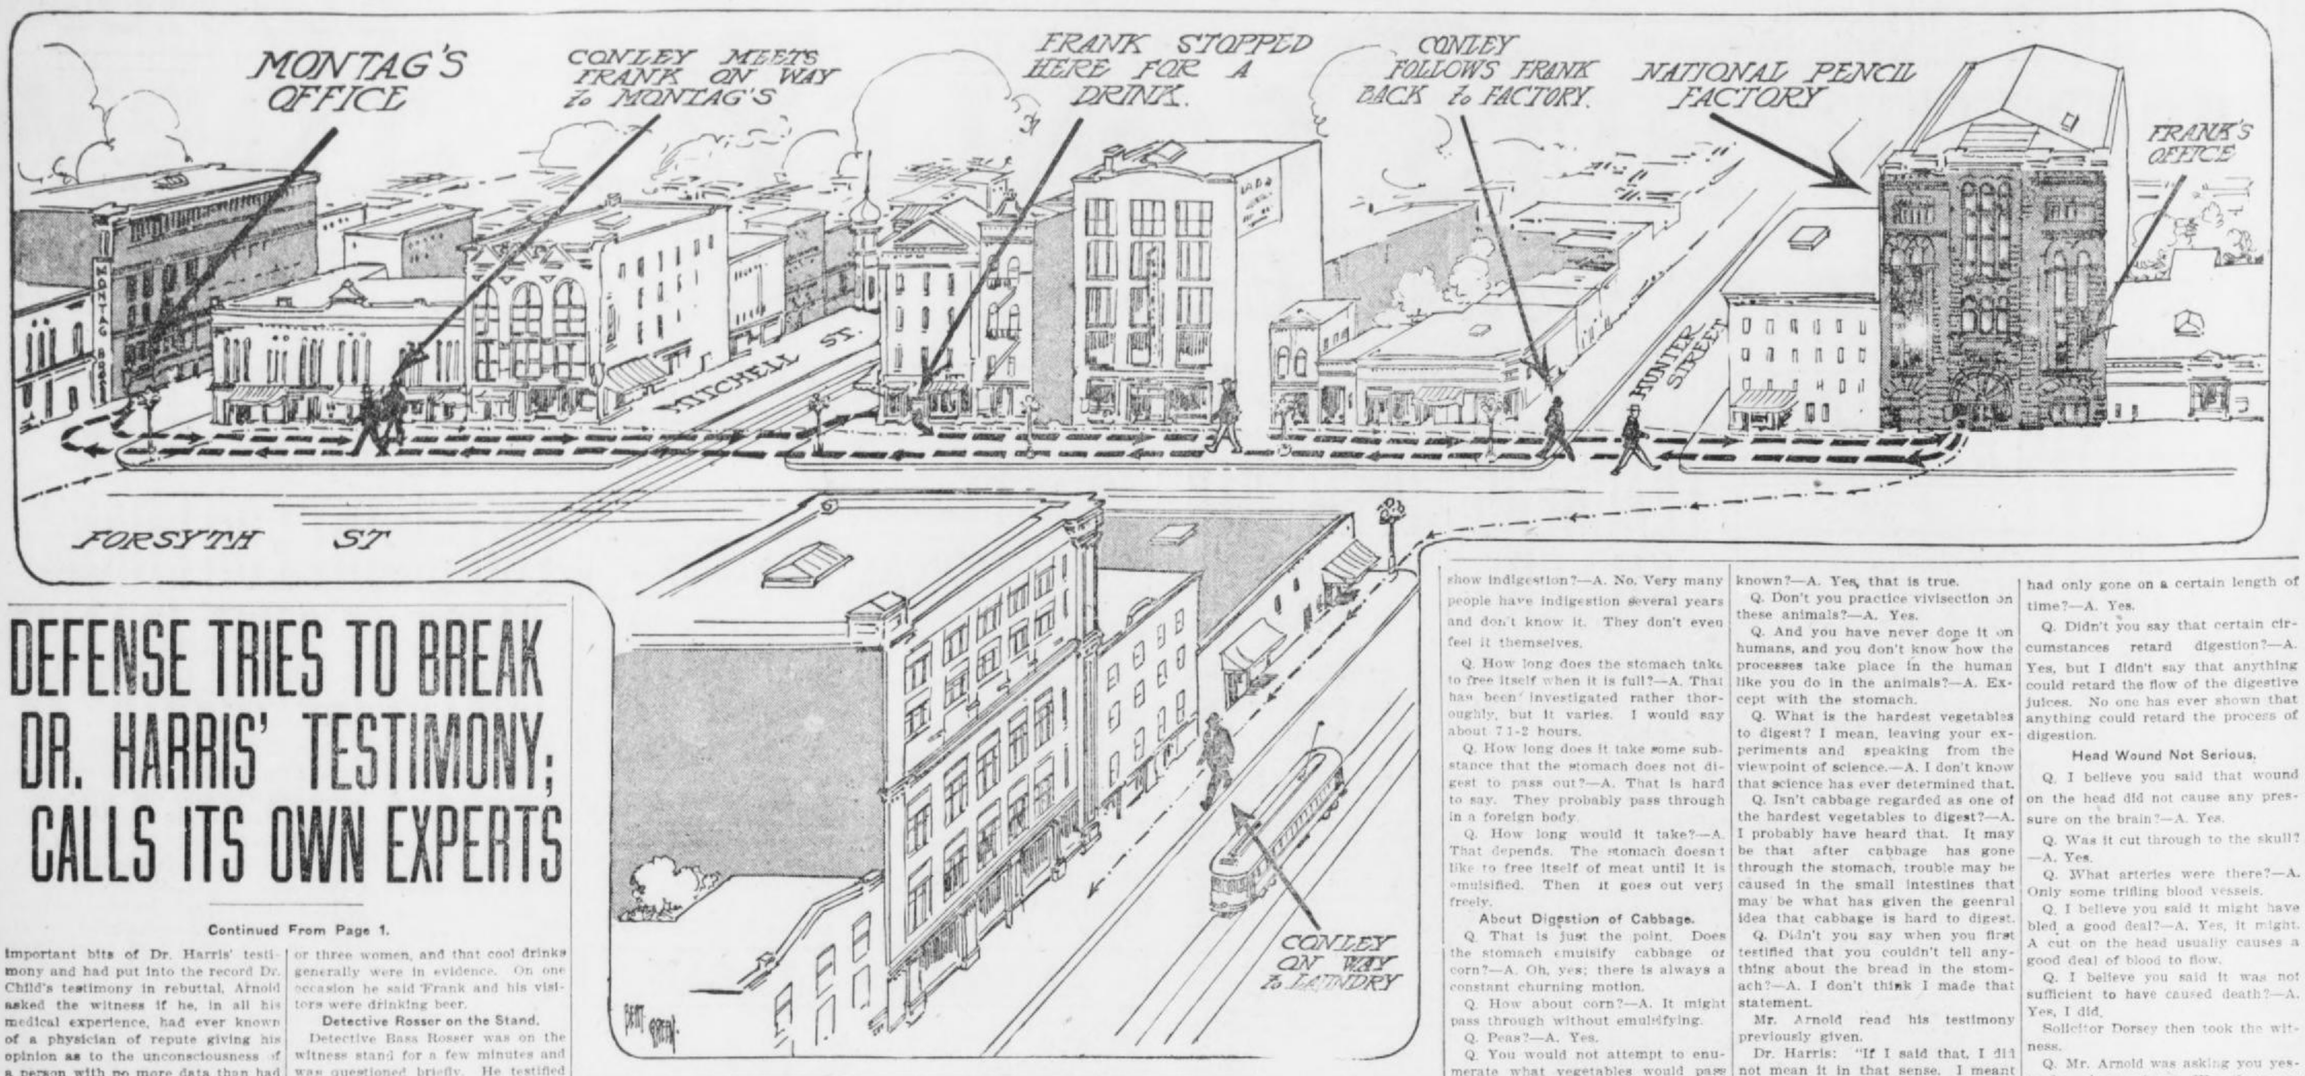

"He would have had to guess one way or the other," said Dr. Childs. "There was absolutely no way t tell whether the blow caused unconsciousness."

Arnold also brought the startling testimony that a wound made from one to three hours after death has the same appearance as a wound shortly before death.

This statement was in direct contradiction of Dr. Harris's testimony and will be used by the defense in strengthening is theory of the manner in which the factory girl came to her death.

After he had reviewed some of the important bits of Dr. Harris' testimony and had put into the record Dr. Child's testimony in rebuttal. Arnold asked the witness if he, in all his medical experience, had ever known of a physician of repute giving his opinion as to the unconsciousness of a person with no more data than had been in the possession of Dr. Harris.

Dr. Childs replied that he never had.

The mysterious C. B. Dalton, who was expected to make sensational revelations of incidents in which Leo Frank was alleged to have participated in the National Pencil Factory, proved a very tabe and commonplace witness when he was called Thursday.

The most that Dalton could say was that, on several of his visits to the factory, he had seen women in Frank's office. He told of no compromising situations. He was not even able to identify the women. He did not know whether or not they were members of Frank's own family. All that he knew was that they did not appear to be stenographers as he never saw them writing.

Dalton, when he was questioned by Luther Rosser, was not even sure of his own birthplace. He thought it was somewhere in Laurens County. He explained his presence by saying that he had gone to the factory with a Miss Daisy Hopkins. He said that he saw Frank in the office with two or three women, and that cool drinks generally were in evidence. On one occasion he said Frank and his visitors were drinking beer.

Detective Rosser on the Stand.

Detective Bass Rosser was on the witness stand for a few minutes and was questioned briefly. He testified that when he saw Mrs. Arthur White the Monday after the crime she failed to tell him that she had seen a negro in the factory the Saturday the girl was killed. He said he did not get possession of this information until May 6 or 7. It is the contention of the State that the defense suppressed these facts.

At the conclusion of Detective Rosser's testimony, Solicitor Dorsey announced that he was prepared to rest as soon as Dr. H. F. Harris had completed the testimony which was interrupted by adjournment Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Harris was unable to appear when court opened at 9 o'clock. The prosecution had nothing more to present at 9:45 and a recess was taken until Dr. Harris arrived at 11:10.

Reuben Arnold began at once on a cross-examination of Dr. Harris as soon as the physician took the stand. He forced Dr. Harris to say that there is much uncertainty in drawing conclusions about digestive functions and their time limitations.

Solicitor Dorsey also asked for the submission of the National Pencil Company's cash book and bank book before he rested his case. This was agreed to by Frank's lawyers.

One of the most interesting pieces of evidence for the purpose of demonstration in the possession of the defense is a large-sized model of the National Pencil Company constructed on an accurate scale.

Frank Chats With Family.

Frank chatted with his wife and mother in the intermission while the court was awaiting Dr. Harris, and a little later engaged in conversation with his attorneys. Dr. Childs entered the courtroom and talked several minutes with the defendant.

Mr. Arnold said:

"Further than this witness I don't know what line we will pursue at present."

"Did you ever work for the National Pencil Factory?" was the first question the Solicitor asked Dalton.

Mr. Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "we want it understood that we object to this testimony—all of it."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

"Well, we want our objection recorded," said Rosser.

Dorsey continued his questioning.

"Do you know Leo Frank and Jim Conley?" continued the Solicitor. A. Yes; I know them both.

Q. Were you ever in the factory of the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes; two or three times.

Q. Did you ever go to Frank's office with Miss Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Was in Basement.

Q. Was Frank there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever go down in the basement?—A. Yes.

The witness then pointed out on the diagram the spot he was in in the basement.

Q. Did you ever see Conley on those visits?—A. Yes; and one time I saw another negro, a watchman.

Q. Did Frank know you were in the basement?—A. He knew I was in the factory. I don't know whether he knew I was in the basement or not.

Dorsey then turned the witness over to the defense for the cross-examination.

"When was the first time you saw Frank at the pencil factory?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Last fall some time."

Q. Where was Frank at that time?—A. At his office.

Q. Who was in there with him?—A. Some ladies.

Q. Were there any other men in there with him?—A. No; he was the only man.

Q. Who was you with?—A. Miss Daisy Hopkins.

Q. Do you know the names of the ladies in the office with Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Where did you go?—A. I went to the basement.

Q. Was Miss Daisy with you?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you go to the factory again?—A. Right before Christmas.

Q. Who introduced you to Frank?—A. Miss Daisy Hopkins.

Q. She just said to Mr. Frank, "This is my friend, Mr. Dalton," did she?—A. Yes.

Went to Basement.

Q. You were never in his office after Christmas?—A. No.

Q. When you went into the factory with Miss Daisy, you went down to the basement with her, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go down into the basement?—A. We went down the ladder by the elevator.

Q. Where did you go in the basement?—A. Right to where there were some boxes in the little room in the rear.

Q. Where did you live last year?—A. No. 337 East Hunter street.

Q. Who did you work for?—A. Mr. Heflin, a contractor.

Q. Where did you work after that?—A. With Captain John McGinnis.

Q. What time did you see Frank in his office?—A. Some time between 2 and 3 o'clock.

Q. Were the windows up?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you see any curtains?—A. No, but the office was very light.

Q. There were two windows in each office, weren't there?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether there was anyone else in the factory when you saw Mr. Frank?—A. Yes; the negroes were there.

Saw Negro Watchman.

Q. What time at night was it when the night watchman was there?—A. I don't know.

Q. Was it a negro watchman?—A. Yes.

Q. Was that this year?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in Walton County?—A. I lived there twenty years.

Q. How long were you away from there?—A. I went to Lawrenceville for about a year.

Q. How long ago?—A. I don't know. I forget just how long ago it was.

Q. Did you ever go with anyone to the pencil factory except Miss Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes. I used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls.

Q. Can you name the girls?—A. Yes; Miss Laura Atkinson and a Miss Laura Smith, of No. 148 South Pryor street.

Q. Do you go there any more?—A. No; I haven't been to the Busy Bee in a long time.

Q. Where were you born?—A. I don't know.

Q. When you first woke up, where were you?—A. Somewhere in Walton County.

Gave Conley Money.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know where your family lived when you were born, don't you?—A. Somewhere near Lawrenceville.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on the redirect examination.

Q. Did you ever give Jim Conley anything?—A. Sometimes I would give him a quarter and sometimes 50 cents. Sometimes they would have cold drinks, and sometimes they would have beer.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. When did you see beer there?—A. On Saturday afternoons—I don't remember the dates.

Q. Can you name specifically any time last fall that you went there?—A. Not the day, but it was some time after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Frank would have the cold drinks on a waiter in his office.

Can't Give Women's Names.

Q. And that is as definite as you can fix it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know the women besides the ones you name?—A. No.

Q. Can you describe them?—A. No. "Come down."

City Detective S. L. Rosser took the stand.

Q. Since April 26, have you been engaged in this case?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you visit Mrs. Arthur White subsequent to that date?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. Monday, April 28.

Q. Did she say anything about seeing a negro at the pencil factory Saturday?—A. No.

Q. What was the first time she mentioned to you seeing a negro at the factory?—A. May 6.

"I want to record an objection to that, your honor," said Rosser.

Rosser took the witness.

She Made Statement.

Q. Did you ask her?—A. No; but she made a statement.

Dorsey took the witness on redirect.

Q. Did you take anything to Dr. Claude Smith?—A. Yes; some chips.

Q. Are these the chips?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make a search of the areaway around the elevator?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find anything like this (showing the bludgeon alleged to have been found by the Pinkertons)?—A. No.

Q. Would you have found it?—A. Yes.

Attorney Rosser took the witness again.

Q. Don't you know this roller has been in that factory two years?—A. It may have been, but it was not on the first floor when we made our search.

State Wins Ruling.

Q. You made a good search?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know these are the same chips?—A. Yes, I am sure of that.

The witness was excused.

Dorsey addressed the court:

"I don't know whether we tendered that bloody shirt or not. If we did not, I want to tender it now. I also want to enter these chips."

Attorney Rosser:

"They haven't been identified."

"They were identified by Detective Starnes and Chief Beavers," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan ruled that he would let them go to the jury.

Dorsey:

State's Case Nearly Finished.

"Now, I want the cash book and the bank book of the National Pencil Company."

Arnold said they would be furnished.

Dorsey:

"I want it understood as soon as Dr. Harris is able to complete his testimony the State is ready to rest its case."

"Mr. Dorsey," said Arnold, "will you tell Mr. Dalton not to leave. We may want to recall him."

Judge Roan declared a recess until Dr. Harris could reach the court. He said it would be about 10 o'clock.

Dalton Recalled for Moment.

Dorsey recalled the witness.

Q. Were you ever in the pencil factory with Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to the factory with her?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. Where did you go?—A. In the basement.

Q. Did he know you were there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Conley know you were there? A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. The night watchman at one time.

Court then had a recess until Dr. H. F. Harris, who was excused from the witness stand Wednesday on account of illness, could arrive in court. The recess lasted for more than an hour. Dr. Harris, when he arrived upon the stand, was questioned upon cross-examination by Attorney Reuben Arnold.

Q. Unfavorable circumstances sometimes retard digestion, don't they?—A. Well, that is a very grave matter, and there is so little data on the subject it is hard to answer.

About External Circumstances.

Q. You would not say then that external circumstances, some undue mental excitement, might delay digestion?—A. I really don't know. There was an old Roman proverb that a person should take a walk after eating. Others say sleeping after a meal aids digestion.

Q. Then there is no set rule for digestion? Everybody is a rule unto themselves?—A. Not altogether. The average normal stomach is about the same in digestion.

Q. There is no indication on the outside of the body that would indicate how far digestion has gone?—A. None whatever.

Q. Don't the pulse or temperature show indigestion?—A. No. Very many people have indigestion several years and don't know it. They don't even feel it themselves.

Q. How long does the stomach take to free itself when it is full?—A. That has been investigated rather thoroughly, but it varies. I would say about 7 1-2 hours.

Q. How long does it take some substance that the stomach does not digest to pass out?—A. That is hard to say. They probably pass through in a foreign body.

Q. How long would it take?—A. That depends. The stomach doesn't like to free itself of meat until it is emulsified. Then it goes out very freely.

About Digestion of Cabbage.

Q. That is just the point. Does the stomach emulsify cabbage or corn?—A. Oh, yes; there is always a constant churning motion.

Q. How about corn?—A. It might pass through without emulsifying.

Q. Peas?—A. Yes.

Q. You would not attempt to enumerate what vegetables would pass through the stomach to the intestines? A. No, I would not.

Q. Is it not a fact that the first knowledge of digestion comes from that Canadian case?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that the only experiments before that time were made on rabbits and other animals for vegetables, and animals for meat? A. Yes.

Q. Is there any animal that eats everything that man does?—A. Yes, the swine.

Q. Any other?—A. I rather think the cat does.

Q. Well, isn't the wildcat a carnivorous animal strictly?—A. I don't know. I never associated with one.

Q. You will admit that the experiments along this line are very limited with the exception of that Canadian case?—A. Yes.

Processes Not All Understood.

Q. It is practically in its infancy?—A. Well, I would not say that. We are fairly familiar with the various juices and the process of digestion. But there is still much to learn.

Q. Just what part does the mouth and saliva play in connection with the stomach and the gastric juices, and the lower bowels? Is not this something that is not definitely known?—A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Don't you practice vivisection on these animals?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have never done it on humans, and you don't know how the processes take place in the human like you do in the animals?—A. Except with the stomach.

Q. What is the hardest vegetables to digest? I mean, leaving your experiments and speaking from the viewpoint of science.—A. I don't know that science has ever determined that.

Q. Isn't cabbage regarded as one of the hardest vegetables to digest?—A. I probably have heard that. It may be that after cabbage has gone through the stomach, trouble may be caused in the small intestines that may be what has given the geenral idea that cabbage is hard to digest.

Q. Didn't you say when you first testified that you couldn't tell anything about the bread in the stomach?—A. I don't think I made that statement.

Mr. Arnold read his testimony previously given.

Dr. Harris: "If I said that, I did not mean it in that sense. I meant that you could tell nothing about it by observing with the naked eye."

Q. You said it was impossible to state absolutely how long that cabbage had been in Mary Phagan's stomach?—A. I meant I could not state within a minute.

Q. Could you tell within two minutes?—A. No, not within 3, or 4, or 5. Probably not within 10 minutes. But I could tell that it was somewhere between 30 and 45 minutes.

Q. Doesn't it all depend on how much digestion is delayed?—A. To an extent.

Q. All you are attempting to say, then, is that the process of digestion had only gone on a certain length of time?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you say that certain circumstances retard digestion?—A. Yes, but I didn't say that anything could retard the flow of the digestive juices. No one has ever shown that anything could retard the process of digestion.

Head Wound Not Serious.

Q. I believe you said that wound on the head did not cause any pressure on the brain?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it cut through to the skull?—A. Yes.

Q. What arteries were there?—A. Only some trifling blood vessels.

Q. I believe you said it might have bled a good deal?—A. Yes, it might. A cut on the head usually causes a good deal of blood to flow.

Q. I believe you said it was not sufficient to have caused death?—A. Yes, I did.

Solicitor Dorsey then took the witness.

Q. Mr. Arnold was asking you yesterday about poisons. Was there any evidence on the mucous membrane of poisons?—A. There could not have been any irritant poisons. Their evidence is always unmistakable.

Dr. Harris was excused.

Dorsey addressed the court: "Your honor, I wish to tender these samples of cabbage as evidence."

Arnold—We want to object to all except that taken from Mary Phagan.

JIM CONLEY, THE EBONY CHEVALIER OF CRIME, IS DARKTOWN'S OWN HERO

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Now that James Conley has been dismissed from the Frank trial, now that he has stood safely the fire of Mr. Rosser's most exhaustive grilling, what of him?

If Frank is convicted, Conley subsequently will be convicted, no doubt, of being an accessory after the fact of Mary Phagan's murder—and that will mean three years, at most, in the penitentiary.

After that—when the Frank trial, more or less, has been forgotten—Conley will be at liberty to come back amongst the people of Atlanta.

Not far from Five Points, a little due east along one of the big thoroughfares meeting there, there is a negro bootblack who now and then, when he is on the job, which frequently he isn't, gives me a "shine" so much to my liking that it brings me back on other days.

He is a sort of Jim Conley negro—at least, he has a smattering of education, an ingratiating air, and is polite, particularly when it pays him to be.

Quite without previous design, I stopped at this negro's stand Wednesday afternoon, and it was not long before he mentioned the famous trial. He having started the conversation, I asked him a few questions—and his replies, given herein in part, rather set me to thinking.

"Complimented on All Sides."

"George," I said—not that I know his name is George, but that it so happens I address negroes unknown of name that way—"what do your friends down on Decatur street think of Jim Conley's story over yonder in the big court? Rather clever, negro, Jim, eh?" said I to this bootblack.

"Well, boss, dat Mr. Rosser ain't made nothing on Jim yit, is he?" replied George.

I ventured the opinion that Mr. Rosser failed, at least, to make Jim out so many different kinds of a liar that his story might not stick in spots.

"Well, boss," continued my bureau of information, "dem niggers down on Decatur street, dey ain't talking of nothing but Jim Conley. He's de most talked about nigger anywhere, I guess. I hears him complimented on all sides!"

"In other words, Jim's a sort of hero along Decatur street nowadays?" said I.

"Yassir, dat's it—Jim's a hero. Niggers all talking about him. He done got de best of de smartest of 'um. Nobody can't fool er nigger like Jim!"

Hero Around "Butt In" Bar.

I presume, too, that something of the same condition prevails over on Peters street—particularly in the neighborhood of the "Butt In" bar over there.

You remember the "Butt In" boozorium in Peters street is the one wherein Conley filled up rather freely on beer, the morning of the Phagan murder, also on beer mixed with wine.

The "Butt In", it also will be recalled, is where Conley obtained a "double-header" beer—"double-headers" being the order of the day always in the "Butt In;" there being, perhaps, some subtly humorous connection between "Butt In" and "double-header!"

It Is Not Improbable.

It is not improbable that many a foaming "double-header" has been dumped into dusky citizens along the way of the "Butt In" of late—in honor of Jim, and the way he "done got de best of de smartest of um over dar in de big court!"

If Jim Conley ever gets back to Decatur street, and hereafter he be permitted to tread the primrose way of the "Butt In" bar over on Peters, in all probability the drinks will not cost him anything for many days.

The proprietor of the "Butt In" doubtless right now would scorn to take Mr. Conley's honest money—the violent presumption being that Jim ever had, or ever will have, that kind of money—even for "double-headers."

Jim has just passed through the fire. And he got through, his reputation more or less damaged for truthfulness, to be sure, but not utterly shattered beyond patching up in such wise that it might be worked one more time, at least, if necessary.

True, Conley already had been in jail seven times that he admits of, and several times more that he can not recall precisely, and that had served to make him something of a hero in darkest Darktown; but Jim's involuntary residence in durance vile heretofore has been in police circles and mere county chaingangs exclusively. So that didn't make him a particularly big hero—albeit it made him a hero not altogether to be sneezed at!

Now, however, Jim has been in "de big court," tangled all up in a murder case, suspected by some of being a principal to the murder, indeed, but cleverly side-stepping that too deadly peril—and his name has been in all the newspapers hundreds of times, and his picture dozens of times, and before he gets through with it, he will be decorated by the State's majesty in stripes—but the latter not so long that it will seriously inconvenience anybody, particularly Jim!

All in all, Jims' a real hero in darkest Darktown, at last—a real ebony chevalier of crime—and those brethren who frequent the "Butt Ins" and the "Butt Outs," and booze dispensaries of like persuasion will bow down and worship Jim—for, in their philosophy, of such as Jim is the Decatur street "kingdom of heaven."

Ruling Generally Approved.

The general impression seems to be that Judge Roan did the right thing in permitting the Conley story to go to the jury in its entirety, inasmuch as it had gone in deadly part, anyway.

Perhaps the evidence fixing upon Leo Frank another crime than the one he stands charged with under the present indictment was, primarily, inadmissible, but there was no way to relieve the jury of the charge Conley made, and it would have been hardly fair either to the jury, the court and even to the defendant, to cut the story off there.

If the State is able to sustain its terrible charge against Frank, it perhaps is common sense now to let it proceed to the corroborating of Conley, if it can corroborate him.

To have left Conley's charge neither contradicted nor corroborated—that would merely have resulted in its probable corroroboration in the minds of the public, if not elsewhere.

The things Conley said to the Frank jury can not be said and then forgotten.

It would have been folly to have ASKED the jury to forget—it would have been imposing upon it an impossible mental task.

Other Charge as Serious.

If it so be that error was committed in not ruling out the story, a new trial will be granted, on appeal, in the event of Frank's conviction—and the trial next time undoubtedly will proceed without this particular evidence in.

The State can, if it fails to sustain eventually its charge of murder, still move against Frank, if it so elects, in the other direction—which crime, under the Code, is quite as serious as murder.

One may feel the injustice of flinging at Frank, while on trial for murder, another capital charge—still, since the additional charge was admitted, with protest, as an original proposition few people will contend strenuously that the State should not be permitted to proceed to the conclusion of a line of evidence begun without protest.

I have heard Judge Roan's ruling discussed about town last night, and to-day, and I heard few who find fault in it.

Indeed, as matter of simple justice to Frank, no less than to the State—and it will not do to forget that the State has large rights at stake in this matter—it seems common sense and elementary justice that the State, having made its awful charge, be required either to corroborate it or not.

That apepars to be the public attitude in the matter.

PROSECUTOR DORSEY SNAPPED IN ACTION

This shows the Solicitor in an argument at the Frank trial.

ROAN'S RULING HEAVY BLOW TO DEFENSE

Judge Declined to Order Out of Record Any of Jim Conley's Testimony.

Judge Roan administered a severe blow to the defense Wednesday when he ruled that all of Conley's story should stand, although portions of it, he acknowledged, would have been inadmissible had objection been made at the time the testimony was offered.

It was a particularly difficult allegation to combat. Unlike many allegations, it was exactly as hard to fight in the event it was false as in case it was founded on fact.

Judge Roan said in regard to the testimony of Dalton that he did not know what it was to be and that he would allow it to be presented so that he might rule on its admissibility as it came up.

Solicitor Dorsey put the final rivet in his case so far as it rested upon the testimony of Conley when at the close of his redirect examination of the negro he brought to light the State's theory of the disposition that had been made of the Phagan girl's mesh bag.

Practically no mention of the mesh bag had been made during the week and a half of the trial. The only reference made to it was in the examination of Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of the slain girl, and of the officers who visited the scene of the crime immediately after police headquarters was called by the negro nightwatchman, Newt Lee.

Tells of Mesh Bag.

Mrs. Coleman testified that Mary left home with the mesh bag in her hand. The detectives and policemen all testified that they were able to find no trace of it either the morning after the crime or in the search that had been conducted since then.

"Did you ever see the murdered girl's mesh bag?" Dorsey asked Conley, just as it appeared that he had finished his questioning.

"Yes, sah, I see it," Conley replied.

"Where was it?"

"It was right on Mr. Frank's desk when I went in there to write the notes."

"Did you see what became of it?"

"Yes, sah; Mr. Frank went and put it in his safe."

Conley left the stand at 11:10 o'clock still sticking to his charge that Leo Frank killed the Phagan girl and that, at Frank's direction, he (Conley) assisted in the disposal of the body. He had been on the stand fifteen and one-half hours and under the grilling cross-examination of Luther Rosser for more than thirteen hours.

Practically the only addition he made to his story as it appeared in his direct examination was his declaration that while he was writing the murder notes Frank took the pencil out of his hand and then an instant later made him rub out the "s" he had written as he spelled out "negros." Conley said he wrote the note at first:

"A long tall black negros did this by hisself."

A long argument over the admissibility of Conley's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged conduct with women previous to the murder of Mary Phagan took place after the jury had been sent from the courtroom at noon. Court recessed before the arguments were concluded, and the debate was resumed in the afternoon.

Reuben Arnold cited opinions from courts in States from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but his arguments were unavailing and the decision went against the defense. There was a murmur of applause and a stamping of feet.

Arnold instantly was on his feet with a motion for a mistrial, but he realized at once that the jury was not present and withdrew the motion. He threatened, however, to make a motion that the courtroom be cleared if such a demonstration occurred again.

Dr. Harris Recalled.

Dr. Harris was recalled to complete the testimony which he was giving when he collapsed on the stand the Friday before. He repeated his assertion as to the time Mary Phagan came to her death after eating dinner at her home in Bellwood Saturday shortly before noon.

"I can say with almost absolute certainty," he declared, "that this little girl was killed within 30 or 40 minutes after she ate her meal that day."

He refused, under cross-examination, to change his testimony in the least in respect to the cause of death.

"It was easily apparent that strangulation was the cause," he declared.

"An examination of the lungs was unnecessary and even useless because of the embalming preparation that had been employed. It was plainly evident that the rope had been placed about the girl's neck before death and the deep indentation showed that it was sufficient to choke off her breath and cause death within a brief time."

Although Arnold was unable to make the physician alter the statement of his opinion, he obtained an admission that a blow on the head sufficient to cause death might immediately precede garroting and still the same manifestations of strangulation exist.

Dr. Harris, however, did not believe that the blow on Mary Phagan's head was enough to cause death. He said that the blow was not severe and that, aside from a little spot of blood on the brain which could not have caused any pressure, the brain was entirely normal.

Attorney Arnold in the latter part of the afternoon session engaged in an exhaustive and highly technical examination of the witness in regard to the action of the digestive juices, the percentages, that were present in Mary Phagan's stomach and the tests that were made for poisons.

FORSYTH NEGRO'S CABIN DYNAMITED

John Woolsey Suffers Broken Leg When Blown Through the Roof of House.

CUMMING, Aug. 7.—John Woolsey, the only negro in Forsyth County, was blown out of bed through the roof of his cabin, eight miles north of Cumming, and suffered a broken leg, when dynamite was set off under the house, according to information that has reached Cumming. The dynamiting took place on the farm of Wyley Smith. The dynamiters cut all telephone wires into that part of the county, which prevented the news reaching here sooner. Woolsey was hurried out of the county to Gainesville by Smith.

The negro had moved to the Smith place just a few days ago. He was warned to leave the county and Smith was warned to get rid of him. Neither took heed. The dynamiting resulted. The cabin occupied by Woolsey was completely wrecked.

I. W. W. Leaders Plan Great Lakes Strike

DULUTH, Aug. 7.—One of the most widespread strikes ever attempted by Great Lakes dock workers was in prospect to-day. Plans were being formed to extend the strike from all the docks in Duluth to the ore shipping points in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Industrial Workers of the World planning the strike, contemplated calling out the dock workers at Two Harbors, Mich.; Superior, Wis.; Ashland, Wis.; Marquette, Mich., and Escanaba, Mich.

MOVE TEST FARM, COMMITTEES ASK

Senate and House Bodies in Joint Meeting Agree to Favor the Ellis Bill.

The bill introduced into the House by Representative Ellis of Tift County to remove the Georgia Experiment Station from Griffin, Ga., to the Southern part of the State, will be recommended for passage by both the Senate Committee on Agriculture and the House Committee No. 2 on Agriculture.

The favorable report on the bill was prepared at a joint meeting of the committees Wednesday afternoon. The bill has been favorably considered once by the Senate Committee, which later voted to reconsider its action when pressure was brought to bear. The House Committee had not acted prior to the Wednesday meeting.

The report is expected to precipitate a fight in the House. It is regarded as unlikely that any definite action on the bill will be taken at this session of the Legislature. Members of the General Assembly who advocate Griffin as the place for the station have been active in their fight on the bill.

The meeting Wednesday was attended by many adherents of Griffin, and a number of those who want the station removed to South Georgia, as well as several who desire its removal to Athens.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Dr. A. C. True, of the Agricultural Department of Washington, who has supervision over all State experiment stations, and Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price. Dr. True said the removal of the station would not affect the Federal appropriation. Mr. Price advocated the present location.

Battlefield of 1763 To Be Memorial Park

GREENSBURG, PA., Aug. 7.—At the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Bushy Run, one of the principal engagements of the French and Indian war here, a movement was started to obtain 25 acres of the famous battlefield for a memorial park, and to erect a bronze statue with a large bronze tablet to Colonel Henry Bouquet.

The historical and patriotic societies of Pennsylvania are behind the movement.

TRIAL AS VARIED AS VAUDEVILLE EXHIBITION

Every Change in Chromatic Scale Rung — All Georgia Types Seen in Court.

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Every change in the chromatic scale has been rung in the Frank trial. With the single exception of the skyrocket oratory that will mark the last stage of the trial, everything that has ever been done in the trial of a criminal case has been enacted in the fight to fix on the superintendent of the National Pencil Factory the guilt of the murder of Mary Phagan.

There has been comedy. There has been tragedy. There has been periods as dull as a hookworm victim. There have been occasions as startling as the feat of a circus daredevil. There have been pathos and performances worthy of a clown. The somber has been mixed with the gay until the entire trial seems the work of a futurist artist who has had a hard night with the drinking cups before he started the painting.

Jim Conley was on the stand something like sixteen hours. His story was a ragtime composition, with the weirdest syncopations, and then came Dr. Harris right on his heels and gave evidence full of soundness and learnedness. To the spectators it seemed that they had just heard "Alexander's Ragtime Band" played and then a Bach fugue for an encore.

One Simple, Other Complex.

Conley's story was as simple in words as "Old Black Joe," while Dr. Harris' was as complex as a Wagnerian overture.

Jim Conley spoke in terms of the street, of the near-beer saloon, of the blind alley crap game. Dr. Harris spoke in the language of the laboratory and the library.

Jim Conley could not enunciate a word of more than one syllable. Dr. Harris was as polysyllabic as the word "heterogeneous." And the spectators had to gasp after the shift.

Conley's story, while it was as full of contradictions as a hive is of bees, was as easy to understand as a baby's "da-da" is to a fond parent. Dr. Harris evidence was as loaded with medical lore as a physician's library.

And, although it seems impossible, there is more still to come. Before the trial has ended practically every type that Georgia knows will have been paraded in the courtroom.

Types Seen in Court.

Right now, the spectators have seen the scholarly defendant whose court attitude is still an enigma—as unsolvable as the crime with which he is charged. There are his loving mother and his devoted wife.

Here is the massive figure of Luther Rosser, attacking every opponent with a battleax ferocity. Here is the erudite Arnold, with rapier thrusts to send in the death blow when the enemy is beaten down by the more direct assault of his ally.

Here is the young Solicitor, struggling against tremendous odds, upsetting tradition by fighting Rosser with his own weapons, burning Arnold with his own fire.

Here is his learned associate, quick to grasp a point as a drowning man is a straw.

Here are factory girls and business men. Here are the comical figure of Newt Lee and the sinister figure of Jim Conley. Here are the learned scientist and the sleuth hound.

It seems that everything has been shown, but still there will be more. It is impossible that Rosser and Arnold will not show something just as novel and bizarre as the State has presented.

Color for a Dickens.

There is Mincey to come with his startling story—Mincey, as typical of the red clay soil of the Cracker country as peanuts and watermelons; Mincey, so typically the country school teacher that he will have to carry a rod of hickory and a blueback speller to the stand to feel at home while he is giving his evidence.

And there will be a lot more.

Tragic as is the trial, it has been Atlanta's greatest vaudeville show. Dickens could have spent one week in Judge Roan's courtroom and written four novels around the types he saw listening to and playing parts in the drama that hovers around the life and death of a little girl of the factory.

FRANK DEFENSE OPENS WITH ATTACK ON DR. HARRIS' EVIDENCE

Dalton Corroborates Jim Conley's Story of Women Calling at Pencil Factory

OPINIONS AS TO TIME OF GIRL'S DEATH GUESSES, IS DR. CHILDS' TESTIMONY

We don't want to argue it. We just want to be recorded as objecting.

Judge Roan permitted all of the samples to go in.

Solicitor Dorsey asked for the bank book and the cash book of the National Pencil Company. They had not been secured.

Dorsey—We will rest our case, anyway.

The State rested its case exactly at 12 o'clock.

Dr. L. W. Childs, a prominent young surgeon of Atlanta, was the first witness called by the defense.

Attorney Arnold questioned Dr. Childs.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Surgery and general medicine.

Q. Where did you graduate?—A. University of Michigan in 1906.

Q. Where did you practice?—A. I was first assistant at the Michigan University Hospital.

Q. How long have you been in Atlanta?—A. About five years.

Q. A body is found at 3 o'clock in the morning. It is not embalmed until 10 o'clock that morning. It is dug up nine days later and a cut is found in back of the head. There is only a drop of blood found on the skull. There was no pressure on the brain. Could a physician have said whether that blow produced unconsciousness? A. He might hazard a guess. He could not tell.

Calls Opinion Mere Guess.

Q. The presence of a drop of blood would have had nothing to do with it? A. Absolutely nothing. There was no pressure, you said.

Q. No pressure at all—A. Then its effect was negligible.

Q. Now is there any way for a doctor telling definitely whether or not that blow caused unconsciousness?—A. I should say it would be a guess.

Q. Is it possible to tell whether a wound or cut such as I have described with the appearance of blood was inflicted before or after death?—A. If it was inflicted in from one to three hours after death it would have the appearance of having been inflicted just before death.

Q. Would you say that such a wound as I have described could have been inflicted one hour after death?—A. It would practically be a guess to say so.

Q. Would the fact that this body had been embalmed and buried for nine days add to the difficulties of making an examination or not?—A. It would greatly add to the difficulties.

Q. Have you ever heard of a case on record when an opinion on unconsciousness and the length of time the person was unconscious before death was placed on what data we have?—A. Absolutely no.

Blows Often Cause Death.

Q. Have you heard of cases of blows on the head causing death without fracturing the skull?—A. Yes, I have seen several cases of sandbagging where the person would die of concussion of the brain and there would only be a slight swelling where the blow had been struck.

Q. Then there is absolutely no way of telling the exact result of a blow on the head after a post-mortem held nine days after interment?—A. No.

Q. What class of food does cabbage come in?—A. Carbohydrates.

Q. Are they considered hard to digest?—A. As such they are not, but in cabbage the carbohydrate is mixed with cellulose, a woody fiber on which the digestive juices have practically no effect, therefore, it is very hard.

Q. Look at this sample (Arnold showed the witness the cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach). Was that well masticated?—A. Not very well.

Q. Isn't it a fact that cooked cabbage is harder to digest than raw cabbage?—A. Yes; raw cabbage is the easiest of all forms of cabbage to digest.

Cabbage in Digestive State.

Q. What part does the saliva play? A. It acts on the carbohydrates.

Q. What part of the cabbage is the carbohydrates?—A. Seven or eight per cent.

Q. So saliva only affects that part of the cabbage?—A. Yes.

Q. Does the stomach do anything about digesting cabbage?—A. The muscular effect—the churning—might break it up to some extent.

Q. So the juices of the stomach instead of digesting cabbage merely retard it?—A. Yes.

Q. Then where is cabbage really digested?—A. In the small intestines.

Q. How long would it take boiled cabbage to pass out of the stomach? A. About four and one-half hours.

Q. Then when it goes out of the stomach it is really undigested, is it not?—A. Yes. It may pass out of the body entirely in the undigested form.

Digestion Easily Retarded.

Q. Are there not a great many things that retard digestion?—A. Yes, the psychic causes—fright, anger and sudden mental excitement—materially retard it.

Q. Would walking retard it?—A. Yes, if the walking was immediately after the meal, digestion would be retarded. These other causes might totally stop digestion.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you might find substances in a stomach that had laid there quite a while and practically no digestive action had begun?—A. Yes, if the psychic influence had taken place.

Q. Don't stomachs differ as much as minds?—A. Yes. To understand a stomach you must study it as an individual.

Mr. Arnold held up a sample of cabbage taken from the Phagan girl's stomach.

Q. Would you hazard a guess that this cabbage had only been in a stomach one half hour before death—?A. I would not.

Q. Why?—A. For the reasons I have stated. The cause of the psychic influences—I know not of—that might have been brought to bear and because of the varying effects of stomachs on such a substance.

Denies Accurate Opinions.

Q. Do you think a doctor could give an accurate scientific opinion by making such a statement?—A. I do not.

Q. How long would you say it was possible for cabbage like this to stay in the stomach?—A. I have seen cabbage less digested than that which had been in the stomach for twelve hours.

Q. When the process of digestion begins, it begins very slowly, doesn't it?—A. Yes, it is really indeterminate. It has not advanced very far when the food goes to the stomach.

Q. How long would it take wheat bread?—A. I would say about two and one-half hours.

Q. Then solids like cabbage and wheat bread would be at least two and one-half hours passing out of the stomach, would they not?—A. Yes.

At this point court was adjourned until 2 o'clock.

'Blow Would Discolor Eyes.'

Q. Please state whether a bruise could be inflicted over the eye after death similar to a wound in life.—A. Yes, as much after two hours.

Q. Could a blow on the back of the head cause a discolored eye?—A. Yes, or both eyes.

Q. What becomes of that epithelium after death?—A. Before or after embalming?

Q. Would it be decomposed before embalming?—A. It would.

Solicitor Dorsey then took the witness. His brother, Dr. Rufus T. Dorsey, a prominent Atlanta physician, sat by the questioner and frequently coached him in his examination of the witness.

Q. How old are you?—A. 31.

Q. Where have you lived?—A. Ann Arbor and Atlanta.

Q. How long have you practiced?—A. Seven years.

Q. What do you practice?—A. Surgery and general medicine.

Q. Don't most specialists confine themselves to one study and find their hands full?—A. They learn more by branching out.

Q. Do you undertake to tell this jury that digestion begins in the mouth?—A. Yes.

Q. I thought mastication was the office of the mouth?—A. It is.

Q. Then doesn't digestion begin as much when the food begins to cook as in the mouth?—A. No; the digestion begins when the salivary glands begin to yield their juices.

Q. Is a turnip of about the same property as a cabbage?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider Dr. Crittenden, of Yale, an authority?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with his table on the relative properties of food?—A. Yes.

Differs With Authority.

Q. If he says it takes about 3 1-2 hours to digest a cabbage and the same time for a turnip it is about right, is it not?—A. I think he says that he is at variance with the other authorities.

Q. Then you are at variance with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is your authority?—A. Dr. Peterson, an eminent medical expert and authority.

Q. In speaking of digestion of cabbage and turnips, you have as a standard, a normal stomach?—A. Yes.

Q. How long after taking food into a stomach would you find pure hydrochloric acid?—A. I tis in the stomach before food is taken in and you will find it there at any stage.

Q. Do you mean to give this as your opinion?—A. It would depend upon the condition of the glands of the gastric membrance.

Q. I am speaking of a normal stomach. Are you familiar with the Ewald breakfast test? According to this test, how long would it be before you would find pure hydrochloric acid?—A. It would depend on the glands.

Q. I am asking you about a normal stomach.

Judge Warns Against Haste.

Arnold objected—He does not give the witness time to answer.

Judge Roan cautioned Dorsey regarding this.

Q. How much acid would occur in a normal stomach one hour after the Ewald breakfast test?—A. About 2 grams.

Q. Give me the amount in degrees. A. That is essentially a question for a laboratory man. We don't use those terms in general practice.

Q. Well, standard authorities use degrees.—A. It is essentially a laboratory test and I would prefer not to answer.

Q. Well, if you can't answer it I will try you on something else. Is this man Hemeter an authority?—A. If he gives any tables he is.

Q. Do you know of him?—A. I have heard of him.

Q. Is he a standard?—A. Yes.

Q. I want you to give this jury the acidity of an Ewald test breakfast one hour after taking.—A. That is a question for a laboratory man.

Q. Well, if you can't that I will ask you something else. Can you give me the percentages of the gastric juices in digestion?—A. No, that is in a branch that is seldom taught.

Q. Don't you know that they teach that as one of the fundamental principles of medicine?—A. I take exception with you on that.

Q. Can you tell me the functions of the gastric juices—A. Yes.

Dr. Childs then gave an extensive scientific explanation, after which Dorsey propounded a long hypothetical question, to bring out, if possible, an admission that the cabbage might not have been in the stomach more than an hour. Dr. Childs replied that it would be the wildest guess to try and place the time within two hours.

Q. I will get you to tell the jury why?—A. I will cite a case that came to my attention when cabbage was taken from a stomach after twelve hours.

Arnold Protests at Mirth.

Q. I am speaking of a normal stomach.—A. That might have been a normal stomach.

Q. Well, it certainly would not have been normal if it was that diseased, so diseased the cabbage had to be taken from it.—A. The structure was normal.

Q. Will you tell the jury that the juices were normal?—A. No.

Dorsey remarked: "Why, of course not," and there was a ripple of laughter in the courtroom when Attorney Arnold jumped to his feet to object to the Solicitor's comment.

"Your honor," Arnold said, "that laughter will have to cease. There is a bunch of hoodlums back there who laugh at my friend's witticisms."

Judge Roan—You will have to keep order in the courtroom, Mr. Sheriff.

Q. What is a normal stomach—A. A normal stomach is one that is under normal conditions will digest a normal amount of food in a normally accepted time.

Q. Did you ever see any experiments except in that case where you made a man vomit?—A. No, I am not quoting myself.

Scott Called to Stand.

Q. If a little girl were found sixteen to twenty hours after she was murdered with a moist blood spot on her hair, with a scar on the back of her head, deep indentations in her neck, her tongue out, her nails blue, what would you say caused her death?—A. I would certainly say it was not the blow on the head.

The witness was excused.

Harry Scott, the Pinkerton detective employed by the National Pencil Company, who has already appeared as a witness for the prosecution, was called by the defense. Attorney Rosser questioned him.

Q. Mr. Scott, you knew on Monday after the crime that Mrs. Arthur White saw a negro near the stairway on the Saturday before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell the city detectives? A. It is my recollection that I did.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Frank if Conley could write?—A. No.

Q. When did you discover Jim Conley could write?—A. Sunday, May 18.

Q. On May 18, you dictated to Conley "that long, tall, black negro did it by hisself." How long did it take him to write it?—A. About six or seven minutes.

Q. You were present when he was brought before Mrs. White?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he move his lips?—A. Yes; he chewed his lips and looked very excited.

Q. Did he look nervous, and, if so, why?—A. Well, he could not stand still. He twirled a cigarette and looked very excited.

Q. Did he deny on May 18 that he had anything to do with the murder or had been to the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you try to make him talk?—A. Yes.

Treated Him 'Pretty Roughly.'

Q. How did you talk to him?—A. I was very stern with him. I tried to get from him a confession of the murder.

Q. Did you give him the third degree?—A. That depends on what you call the third degree.

Q. Well, you tell me what did?—A. Oh, we just talked to him, and cursed him and treated him pretty roughly.

Q. Did you beat him?—A. No.

Q. Just a scientific third degree?—A. Well, we did everything we could.

Q. You and the city detectives worked in harmony, each one giving the other what he had discovered, did you not?—A. Yes.

Mr. Rosser showed Scott the first statement made by Jim Conley.

Q. Did you hear him make this statement?—A. Yes, I wrote it.

Q. Is that all he said?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't know he could write? A. Yes, I had already discovered he could write.

Q. This information that he could write came from Schiff and Darley, of the pencil factory, didn't it?—A. Yes.

Brings Up Second Statement.

Q. When Conley made that second statement about the notes, was that gone over with Mr. Dorsey?—A. Yes.

Q. He said: "It did not say anything about the little girl's body"?—A. Yes.

Q. He repeated againthe buying of the beer and whisky on Peters street? —A. Yes.

Q. Conley told you the second time he was going to tell the truth?—A. Yes. He sent for Mr. Black and made a voluntary statement.

Q. That was his first sworn statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On May 25, after that statement, you and Black called on Conley again and questioned him, didn't you?—A. Yes. About three hours.

Q. You gave him the same third degree you illustrated just now, didn't you?—A. No, I was stern, but nothing more.

Q. On May 27 you question him again, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you told him Mr. Frank would not have written those notes on Friday and that his story would not fit?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did you question him? —A. Five or six hours.

Q. The next day you had him again, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. About Five or six hours.

Q. And he told you he had already told the truth and would tell no more? —A. Yes.

Changed Day to Saturday.

Q. On May 28, he made you another long statement, after being told that his former statement showed deliberation and would not fit; then he changed the date to Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you he had made up his mind to tell you the whole truth?—A. Yes.

Q. But he still stuck to the statement that he got up that morning about 9 or 9:30 o'clock and later went to the "Butt In" saloon and bought a glass of beer?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you about writing the notes? How many notes did he say he wrote?—A. He said he wrote three on white paper, as I remember.

Q. Did he say Mr. Frank took a piece of green paper and wrote something like an "M" on it?—A. Yes.

Q. Still, he didn't say anything about seeing the body?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Scott, what sort of a looking negro was Conley the first time you saw him?—A. He was dirty and ragged.

Q. You saw him here the other day and he was spick as an onion, wasn't he?—A. Yes.

Tells of Frank's Arrest.

Q. What time of the day was Frank arrested?—A. About 2 or 3 o'clock.

Q. Didn't you go to the factory and get him at 11:30 o'clock?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that all I did about it was to get him a guard so that he would not be put in a cell?—A. Yes.

Q. Conley told you that the reason he had been washing the shirt was that he had been wearing it three weeks?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that you told Conley every time you thought he was lying, "That won't do, you will have to do better than that"?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he say when he gave you that final affidavit that it was the whole truth?—A. Yes.

The jury at this moment took a five minutes recess, during which time they were served with soft drinks.

TRIAL EXPERTS CONFLICT ON TIME OF GIRL'S DEATH

Here is a sample of the testimony of Dr. Harris, for the State, given Wednesday afternoon, and conflicting evidence given for the defense by Dr. Childs on Thursday:

Dr. Harris said:

"I want to state that the amount of secretive juice in this stomach was considerably less than would have collected in an hour. The hydrochloride acid had not been in long enough to become free. The amount of confined hydrochloric was 32 degrees. In a normal stomach, the amount would have been 55 or 60 degrees. It was just about the amount one would have supposed to have collected in half an hour or 35 to 40 minutes. I can say with absolute certainty that she was unconscious within 30 or 40 minutes after she ate the cabbage."

Shortly after the defense opened Mr. Arnold held up a sample of cabbage taken from the Phagan girl's stomach.

Q. Would you hazard a guess that this cabbage had only been in a stomach one-half hour before death?—A. I would not.

Q. Why?—A. For the reasons I have stated. The cause of the psychic influences I know not of that might have been brought to bear and because of the varying effects of stomachs on such a substance.

Q. Do you think a doctor could give an accurate scientific opinion by making such a statement?—A. I do not.

SENATE REFUSES TO RECONSIDER MANSION SALE

President Anderson Casts Deciding Vote—Bills Abolishing Atlanta J. P. Courts Passed.

The Georgia Senate refused Thursday morning after a heated debate to reconsider the Stark bill providing for the appointment of a commissioner to dispose of the Governor's Mansion; agreed to reconsider the joint resolution looking to the release of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, which was defeated Wednesday afternoon, and passed two bills of importance, the first providing for the election of United States Senators by the people so as to conform with the Federal amendment, and the second making the wife a competent but not compelable witness against the husband.

The effort to have the Senate reconsider its action in defeating the bill looking to the disposition of the Governor's Mansion precipitated debate even spicier than that indulged in Wednesday afternoon.

Senator McGregor, of the Nineteenth, created a sensation when he charged that the "Andrew Carnegie of the South" had bought up all the property in the neighborhood of the Governor's Mansion and now evidently wanted that.

Anderson Breaks Tie.

"I don't want to see one man buy up the whole State of Georgia," he said.

The proposed commission, consisting of the Governor, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, three Representatives and two Senators, the Senator declared further, was composed of human beings "and human being are always susceptible to influence," he added.

The motion to reconsider was finally lost 22 to 21, President Anderson breaking the tie by voting against the measure, inasmuch as he was one of the members of the proposed commission.

The motion to reconsider the Western and Atlantic Railroad lease resolution was passed unanimously by the Senate, and, upon motion of Senator Sweat, author of the original bill, was recommended to the General Judiciary Committee.

In addition to the two general bills the Senate Thursday morning passed two important House bills. One provided for the creation of a municipal court in Atlanta by abolishing the present justice courts, justices of the peace and constables, and the other raises the tax on corporations.

State Farm Removal Opposed.

According to Senator Miller, of the Finance Committee, the State Treasury will receive approximately $48,000 more than it now receives by this bill. A companion House bill providing for the increase in the tax on bottling beverages was also passed.

Senator Hule's bill providing for an increase of State Senatorial Districts, adding sixteen Senators to the present membership, was being debated when the Senate adjourned at 1 o'clock.

The Senate Agricultural Committee Thursday reported unfavorably on the bill providing for the removal of the experiment station from Griffin.

Among the new bills introduced in the Senate Thursday morning was one by Senator Elkins, of the Fifteenth, providing for the protection of birds and fish.

Striker Arrested on Charge of Assault

MOBILE, Aug. 7.—Joseph Mahler, a union machinist, was arrested here to-day by City Detective J. W. Murphy on a warrant charging him with assaulting William Agnew, a strike-breaker, last night after he left the Home Industry Foundry.

William Kling, operator of the foundry where Agnew was employed, denounced the swearing out of the warrant for disorderly conduct as a farce, as it was purely a case of assault. The police to-day are guarding all the iron plants in anticipation of trouble.

FALLS 3 STORIES IN SLEEP.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 7.—Neal Rowe, a plumber, dreamed that his wife asked him to get her a drink of water. He seized a convenient jar and walked out of a third story window, falling to the yard below. His head was injured, but otherwise he was unhurt.

Dixie Major Shot In Battle in Africa

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 7.—Major Charles S. Young, U. S. A., in charge of the military expedition sent to Liberia by the United States to train the Liberian army in modern warfare, was shot in the right arm and seriously wounded while leading Liberian in a battle with one of the fierce tribes of the interior. A letter from Major Wilson Ballard, of Louisville, told of the fray.

Young has been ordered to his home in Green County until he recovers from the wound and "black fever" which followed.

TELEGRAPHER BANKRUPT.

Allen C. Travis, a telegrapher, Thursday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. He admitted liabilities of $479.13, with no assets.

K. of C. Vote Not to Move Headquarters

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—The Knights of Columbus at the thirty-first annual convention to-day voted down the plan to remove the national headquarters of the order from New Haven, Conn., to Washington.

Those who favored the plan declared that, if the headquarters were moved, a $1,000,000 home would be erected at the National Capital.

Barrow Appointed Customs Collector

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the following nominations:

Madison R. Smith, of Missouri, to be Minister to Haiti, and David C. Barrow, Jr., of Georgia, to be Collector of Customs for the District of Georgia.

CAN'T REBUILD COMPRESS.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 7.—The Riverside Compress will be unable to rebuild in time to do any business this year. At least this is the opinion of L. G. Doughty, president of the $100,000 concern which was burned to the ground here yesterday.

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have it Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

We have in our possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that we think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So we have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write us for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and we are convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

We think we owe it to our fellowmen to send them a copy in confidence, so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what we believe is the quickest acting restorative, upbuilding SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop us a line like this: Interstate Remedy Co., 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and we will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but we send it entirely free.

CABAL TO BLOCK SLATON TAX ACT IS CHARGED TO 'DRYS' AND REFORM FOES

The "dry" members of the House of Representatives and those members who oppose the enactment of tax reform measures have formed a combine to defeat all bills introduced or favored by Speaker Burwell, because the Speaker ruled that the resolution of Mr. Kidd, of Baker, ordering the Temperance Committee to report the Hixon-Searcy (Webb) bill back to the House was out of order Wednesday morning, after Wohlwender, of Muscogee, had held up the business of the House for an entire day with a filibuster.

The formation of the combine is virtually a defiance of Governor John M. Slaton and a refusal to accede to his wishes that tax reform measures and bills putting the taxation system of the State on a business basis be passed. It is a dare to the Governor to veto the House appropriation bill or call an extra session, both of which the Governor has said he will do if the House does not enact tax reform measures or keep its appropriations within the estimated revenues of the State.

Plan to Resurrect Bill.

In addition to trying to defeat the bills of Speaker Burwell and Governor Slaton, the combine will make every effort possible to resurrect the Hixon-Searcy Senate bill from the pigeonhole to which it has been consigned by the Temperance Committee. Mr. Kidd, the apparent author of the resolution which met such an inglorious finish Wednesday morning, declared that he will try to introduce his resolution at the first opportunity.

"We intend to try in every way possible to get the bill out of the committee and before the House at this session," said Mr. Kidd. "I intend to offer my resolution again, and if I can not do that we will try to find some other means of combating the enemies of the bill. We were not treated right by the Speaker when he ruled my resolution out of order. We are prepared to fight for our rights, and if the bill can not come up for the consideration of this House there are a lot of other measures that will receive scant consideration at the hands of the friends of the measure.

Organized Fight on Burwell.

"We intend to defeat every measure offered or favored by Speaker Burwell or the men who aided in the defeat of the resolution ordering the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill. Burwell's bills have no chance of passing this House during the present session. I have nothing personally against any of the Speaker's bills, but we are going to get even for the treatment we got during the consideration of my resolution and for not being given a chance to pass, or at least attempt to pass, the Webb bill that passed the Senate."

The combination of the "dry" forces and those opposed to tax revision was formed the day before the introduction of Mr. Kidd's resolution. Mr. Wohlwender, who started and carried through a successful filibuster, declared Wednesday that the resolution was drawn up by Barry Wright, of Floyd County, one of the prohibition leaders. It was the result of a combination formed at that time between Mr. Wright and other temperance leaders and Messrs. Stovall, of Elbert; Sheppard, of Sumter, and other members who have consistently opposed tax reform measures.

Unite Against Tax Reform.

It was agreed, it is generally understood, that the enemies of tax reform were to support the Kidd resolution on condition that the prohibition members aid them in their efforts to prevent the passage of tax bills. The idea was this:

If the Hixon-Searcy bill were brought out from the committee and consideration of it begun by the House, it would precipitate a "wet" and "dry" fight pure and simple. Debate would naturally wax fast and furious, and the members who oppose tax reform measures figured that the discussion of the bill would occupy the time of the House until adjournment, or at least create such a spirit of unrest and antagonism that the ranks of the tax reformers would be broken.

Then, when Speaker Burwell ruled the Kidd resolution out of order on the grounds that it asked a physical impossibility of the Temperance Committee, the strength of the combine was directed against the presiding officer of the House and his bills, and the bills of others that he favored, and the bills of the other members who opposed the resolution.

Controls Half of House.

The combine at present controls probably half the votes of the House, and renders impossible the passage of any measure that requires a two-thirds vote, and makes exceedingly difficult the passage of any measure requiring even a bare majority. Wednesday afternoon the combine displayed strength enough to defeat two of Speaker Burwell's bills, both constitutional amendments requiring a two-thirds majority to carry. They were administration bills, and the word has been passed among the members of the House that Governor Slaton favored them and desired that they be enacted. Both were overwhelmingly defeated.

The first bill to feel the strength of the combine was Burwell's measure submitting to the qualified voters of the State a proposition to amend the constitution so that the school levy of any one year should not exceed 2 1-2 mills, in addition to the regular school fund provided by the Constitution.

Two of His Measures Beaten.

Though the Speaker himself took the floor and explained the purpose of the bill—that it was merely one of a series of bills designed to place the State on a sound business basis—the bill was defeated by a vote of 106 to 67, lacking by 17 votes the necessary two-thirds majority. The other administration bill, a companion bill to the one defeated first, submitted a proposition that the annual levy for pensions should not exceed 1 1-2 mills. It was defeated, the vote being 79 to 79. It lacked 44 votes of having a two-thirds majority.

Unless the combine can be broken, the result will be that little or no legislation of importance will be enacted during the balance of the session. It means that the Legislature, having already attained the name by doing less than any Legislature in years, will go down in history as a Legislature that did absolutely nothing of importance.

Want to Live Long? Tackle Hardships

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Hardships cause long life, Lord Strathcona, the "grand old man of England and Canada," who celebrated his 93d birthday yesterday, declared so to-day.

"No man's life has been filled with more hardships than mine," he declared, "and yet I am happy and healthy and believe that I will live to be 100. My early experiences in Canada were filled with the hardest kind of work, and I have never gone out of my way to avoid stress, nor distress, either, for that matter.

Stern Policewoman Makes Masher Move

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—"Policeman" Alice Clements, one of the ten newly appointed women police officers, today reported the first police duty any of the ten have performed. She drove a "masher" from a street corner where he was annoying passing women and girls.

Display of her police star and a threat to arrest him if he did not obey her order to move on were sufficient to urge the man from the corner.

Bulgars Prepare To Turn on Turks

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 7.—A third war is imminent in the Balkans, according to a report which was current here to-day during the final stages of the peace conference. A telegram from Sofia intimated strongly that Bulgaria would independently declare war on Turkey after her army is relieved of present operations against her former allies.

Dreams He's in War And Shoots Himself

WARREN, OHIO, Aug. 7.—While dreaming about a Balkan war battle, witnessed in a moving picture theater early in the evening, William H. Grace early to-day reached under his pillow, secured his loaded revolver and shot and killed himself.

Mrs. Grace said her husband had been muttering in his sleep about the Balkan war.

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

On Face and Head. Was Very Disfigured. Hair Fell Out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Falmouth, Ky. — "Two years ago I was troubled with skin and scalp troubles. I would have pimples that would break out and form sores on my face and head with terrible itching. The eczema on my face and head itched and burned and when I scratched it, it made sores and I was very disfigured for the time being. My head became so sore I could not touch it with a comb; it became a mass of sores. My hair fell out gradually.

"After trying several remedies without much benefit a friend that had been cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment told me and I decided to try them. I was afflicted about a year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them three weeks I was getting better and in less than three months, after using eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and five boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured of eczema." (Signed) Frank Vastine, Dec. 12, 1912.

If you wish a skin clear of pimples, blackheads and other annoying eruptions, hands soft and white, hair live and glossy, and scalp free from dandruff and itching, begin to-day the regular use of Cuticura Soap for the toilet, bath and shampoo, assisted by occasional light applications of Cuticura Ointment. No other method is so agreeable or economical. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Bullard Bound Over As Slayer of Spain

WAYCROSS, Aug. 7.—Following a long hearing before Justice C. H. Smith, Tom Bullard, 20 years old, held for the murder of Mack Spain, near Waycross, a month ago, was bound over to-day for action by the Grand Jury. One of the witnesses testified that Bullard tried to get him to kill Spain. The defense contended that the remark was made in fun.

The plea of suicide was not introduced but probably will figure in Bullard's trial if he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

CAFE ORDER ENDS BUBBLE ROMANCE

Vain Longing for Filet Mignon Causes Rich Paul Picard's Bride to File Suit.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—The iridescent bubble of romance in the whirlwind courtship and marriage of Paul Picard, Jr., and Miss Stella Griffin was punctured by a quarrel over an order of filet mignon and an extra charge of 30 cents on the bride's dinner check. To-day Mrs. Picard employed an attorney to file suit for divorce.

Two weeks ago at the Hotel Knickerbocker in New York the couple met. They went to a baseball game at the Polo Grounds. Miss Griffin bet on the Giants and won. The next day they were married.

Coming to Chicago Picard, Jr., and his bride went to the fashionable Hotel Virginia, and Paul Picard, Sr., installed them in the adjoining suite. For years the parents of Paul, Jr., have been socially prominent in Chicago. Their wealth originated in France. Not long ago Paul Picard, Jr., inherited a considerable fortune from a French grandfather.

Mrs. Paul Picard, Jr., said her husband was sober the first two nights after their marriage. Since then, she said, he has not been free from the influence of liquor. She said she, her husband and his parents were eating the 75-cent table de hote dinner of the hotel when she had a craving for filet mignon. It was not on the bill of fare. It cost 30 cents extra.

The elder Picard, she said, refused to pay the extra charge and humiliated her. That was the final straw, she said.

Life of U. S. Rifles Is 10 Years, Say Experts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The present model of rifle used by the United States should have a life of usefulness at least ten years, in the opinion of ordnance officers and a determined effort is being made to prevent the condemnation of thousands of rifles that are turned in as worn out when they are really serviceable.

A circular issued to-day declares that one of these rifles should be capable of firing 8,000 to 13,000 rounds before becoming so worn as to become inaccurate.

THOUSAND GIRLS SEE POLO GAME AT FORT

Milton Wise, (left) and F. A. Savage, (right) in action.

Atlanta Team Defeats Soldiers by Score of 2 to 1 in First Match of Sport De Luxe.

With nearly 1,000 pretty girls looking on and applauding, polo, the game de luxe of society, was given its Atlanta premiere at Fort McPherson Wednesday afternoon, and Thursday it was the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the society folk, especially the younger ones, who were thrilled with the riding and dash of the players.

The crowd that saw the Atlanta team defeat the Fort McPherson team, 2 to 1, was one of the largest that has ever been on the parade grounds at the army post. Scores of automobiles lined the sides of the playing field, and a tally-ho filled with hilarious young people added color and gayety to the scene.

The preliminaries, a tug of war on horses and wrestling on horseback, thrilled the spectators. Eight privates, four on a side, engaged in the tug of war. No saddles were used. Private Veotick, Todd, Purdue and Houston dragged Privates Flynn, Williams, Pryde and Reynolds from their horses three times in succession.

Wrestling Bouts Exciting.

The same men engaged in the wrestling on horseback. The contest between Todd and Reynolds was long and strenuous. Purdue and Flynn were evenly matched and it was nip and tuck all the way through. The match between George Veotick and John Pryle was applauded warmly. Pryle finally threw his adversary. At one time their horses galloped the entire length of the field while the wrestlers struggled.

Owing to some misunderstanding, four of the polo contestants failed to appear and the game was called at 4:30 with two men on a side instead of four. J. O. Seamon and F. A. Savage represented Atlanta, while T. C. Miller and Milton Wise represented Fort McPherson. After ten minutes of strenuous play the Atlanta team succeeded in driving the ball through the fort goal twice in quick succession. Not long afterward Milton Wise scored for the Fort.

More Matches Are Planned.

Dr. John A. McLeay, who refereed the game, stated that the exhibition was merely for the purpose of giving Atlanta a sample of what real polo would be like.

"The players are a little out of practice," said he, "but after the newness wears off should be able to give a better account of themselves."

No admission was charged, as this is against the law when Government property is used. It is expected that more games will be arranged.

Shiny Berlin Streets Amaze U. S. Tourists

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—American tourists here have succumbed to the cleanliness of Berlin, which they believe is unsurpassed.

"When I rode over the asphalt pavements the night I arrived," said one to-day, "I thought they were glass, so shiny and smoth were they."

The visitors also are impressed with the power-driven street cleaners, which flush and then wipe the streets, making them as clean as a kitchen floor.

Smokes in Dynamite Warehouse-That's All

OSYKA, MISS., Aug. 7.—The entire town of Osyka was shaken, Sid Taylor, 18 years old, was blown to pieces and three other persons were hurt by the explosion of 200 pounds of dynamite to-day.

Taylor entered a warehouse with a lighted cigarette in his mouth. One of his legs was found nearly a quarter of a mile away.

TRADE IS CALLED GREAT POWER FOR UPLIFT

Dixie Merchants Hear Stirring Addresses—Organization and Advertising Emphasized.

Business is a developer of character; business is a science; the great rewards of the future are for business men, and to them the world must look for the economic development which shall eradicate poverty, disease and crime.

These are the messages given by the speakers at the Southern Merchants' Convention Thursday.

It was the second day's session and Wednesday was a holiday for the delegates. Thursday night, at the Piedmont Driving Club, a reception will be held, the delegates going out in special cars which leave from the Equitable Building.

There will be another meeting Friday at which store management will be the theme.

Delegates are in Atlanta from Georgia, the Carolinas, Alabama and Florida. Key West men are the "travelers" of the gathering, having come the greatest distance.

Commerce Builds Character.

W. W. Orr, the first speaker on Thursday, lauded commerce as the means of developing the highest type of character and the keenest intellect. He cited Marshall Field, Harry Selfridge, John Wanamaker and John B. Stetson as examples, and who gave generously of their time, money and thought for aiding the uplift of their employees. He said:

"Marshall Field turned out fourteen junior partners as millionaries. Selfridge employs 10,000 persons who esteem it a privilege to be allowed to work under the ideal conditions he has created. Wanamaker conducts a school for boys and girls, and makes their promotion dependent on school progress as well as efficient work in his store."

Norman Johnson, editor of a Virginia trade publication, declared the merchant to-day must study his business closer than ever before. He urged organization extension.

He has no sympathy for the merchant who wails about the inroads of the catalogue houses.

"If you would climb down off the dry goods box, stop whittling, and go after business with good, hot letters, you would get the trade the mail order houses now get. You can undersell them," he asserted.

Emphasize Need of Advertising.

He spoke of the growth of jobbing in the South, giving as an instance the increase in the number of dry goods wholesalers from 25 to 105 in twenty years.

W. P. Riley, of Evergreen, Ala., talked about combating the catalogue houses.

Paul T. Harbor, of Commerce, Ga., editor of a newspaper, took "Aggressive Advertising" as his theme.

J. H. McGhee, of Lawrenceville, Ga., led the "Open Parliament" discussion.

"Advertising is an absolute essential to the local merchant," he declared. "We must turn trade from the mail order houses back to the local dealer through the greatest advertising campaign the country ever has seen."

'13' Is Happy Omen to Miss Wilson as Bride

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Lovers of the mystic have discovered the letters in the name of Miss Jessie Wilson's fiance, Francis B. Sayre, number thirteen. Therefore, Miss Wilson will not only be the daughter of the "Lucky Thirteen President," and the thirteenth White House bride, but have as a husband a man about whose career thirteen appears an alluring halo.

Washington society hopes the wedding will take place November 13. It may be stated Miss Wilson will not have thirteen bridesmaids.

Fleet 'Takes' Brest France's 'Gibraltar'

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The French Government was thrown into consternation to-day by the unprecedented feat of a submarine flotilla in penetrating the supposed impregnable harbor at Brest.

The fleet crawled through the water under the very guns of the great forts guarding the approach to the harbor and despite the use of every scientific device known to modern warfare, got through undetected.

Abstainers Pray for Aid in Fighting Drink

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—With a solemn high mass celebrated in the cathedral by Bishop McCort, the national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America was opened here.

The scene was an impressive and significant one as the total abstainers knelt to ask a blessing upon their work in spreading the gospel of total abstinence from strong drink and combating the curse of drunkenness.

SEVERE QUAKE RECORDED.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The Georgetown University observatory announced to-day that a severe earthquake shock was recorded there last night. It is estimated to have been about 4,000 miles from Washington.

NEGRO BOY THIEF CAUGHT.

Two negro boys were seen robbing a saloon at No. 230 Decatur street early Thursday. The police made a quick run to the saloon and caught Jim Thomas, 14, at the back door. The other boy, who was acting as "lookout," escaped.

AVIATOR CODY IS KILLED IN FALL IN ENGLAND

Plunges One Thousand Feet to Death With Passenger—Sons See Tragedy.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ALDERSHOT, ENG., Aug. 7.—Colonel Samuel F. Cody, a former citizen of the United States and one of the most famous aviators in the world, and a passenger were killed here to-day while testing a new aeroplane over the military aerodrome.

These two fatalities bring the aviation death list up to 305.

Colonel Cody was one of the pioneer airmen and was commissioned by the British Government to build up the aviation corps of the Imperial army, which he fulfilled to the perfect satisfaction of the War Office. Cody was a relative of William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, and in appearance he resembled the famous American.

Protested Taking Passenger.

The name of the passenger who was killed with Colonel Cody was Evans. The aviator protested against any one accompanying him, saying that he was going to try out a new machine and the risk would be great. Evans was insistent and finally Cody relented.

After a "grass-cutting" circuit Cody shot the machine upward and soon the car was 1,000 feet in the air. Spectators on the field saw the machine begin to wabble as though one of the planes had buckled. Suddenly it turned over on its side and plunged downward. With a crash the machine struck the earth and the petrol tank burst, scattering the fuel over the bodies of the two men.

Cody and Evans were picked up and rushed to a hospital in the cantonments, but the spark of life already had been extinguished.

How He Got His Title.

The manner in which Cody got his title of "Colonel" is interesting. Shortly after King George ascended the throne he wrote a note of congratulation to Cody for some air feats he had performed and called him "Colonel" Cody, evidently confusing him with "Buffalo Bill." The aviator seized the opportunity to acquire a title and since had styled himself Colonel Cody.

Last August Cody won the British army flying tests, taking $25,000 in prizes.

Before taking up aviation Cody was an aeronaut of note and once made a balloon flight over London.

He planned a trip to India in an aeroplane-balloon of his own invention, but his death cuts off all plans for the future. Cody is survived by a widow, who, like her husband, has always been fond of excitement and adventure. She was the first woman in England to make a flight in an aeroplane and is herself an accomplished air car driver.

Colonel Cody came to England from the United States about ten years ago and became a naturalized British subject.

The ill-fated machine was of Cody's own construction and he had intended to attempt a flight across the Atlantic ocean in it.

Two sons of the dead aviator witnessed the tragedy. One of them rushed forward and threw himself on his father's body.

Medical examination showed that Cody's neck had been broken while one arm and several ribs were fractured. One rib had punctured the lung.

Chicago 'Trilby' Has Most Perfect Foot

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The center of attraction and interest at the meeting of the National Association of Chiropodists at the Hotel Marlborough to-day was the American "Trilby," personified in Miss Clara S. Houston, of Chicago.

Seated in an extremely business-like looking office, Miss Houston exposed for the benefit of visitors her well-shaped foot, which by all experts has been unanimously declared the most perfect in America.

Calls Mosquito King Of Disease Carriers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Mosquitoes were to-day branded the "king disease carriers" of the insect world by Dr. Nelson Du Vaj Breicht, formerly of the Public Health Service.

Besides their implements of torture, these insects carry about with them germs of leprosy, yellow fever, malaria, breakbone fever, typhoid and five other brands of malady. Dr. Breicht awarded the gnat second honors as a disease carrier.

AMERICANS SHOT IN SACKING OF DURANGO

Stores Belonging to Foreigners Burned by Rebels—Women and Girls Attacked.

investigator, Mr. Lind is commissioned to act as a peacemaker between the leaders of the various revolutionary factions, but it is doubtful if Huerta will allow an alien to act in such a capacity.

Huerta Has New Slogan.

"Mexican affairs for Mexicans," was the laconic remark made by President Huerta to-day to his followers in Congress who called at the National Palace.

Previous to the statement issued to-day by the Mexican Minister, the United States Embassy had received the following note from Secretary of State Bryan:

You may say to the Mexican Foreign Minister that Governor Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace, and that President Wilson feels that his presence there will contribute toward a settlement of existing difficulties.

The Mexican Government should await the President's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers

Not only in this city but throughout the entire republic increased antagonism toward Americans is being shown Huerta and his advisers believe that if war should be declared it would result in making a unit of all the revolutionary bands so that a solid front could be presented against any foreign foe.

Within the past seven months the Government has placed orders for 100,000 rifles and a commensurate supply of ammunition, as well as mountain and field guns.

President Wilson Will Not Tolerate Insult to Lind.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The American Government and the Huerta government apparently have locked horns over the status which John Lind, the President's special envoy to Mexico, will have when he arrives at the Mexican capital.

Reports from Mexico City show that General Huerta is preparing what officials term a "grandstand" play over the coming of Lind, in an effort to force the latter into an embarrassing position.

Administration officials say that the sensational statement emanating from Huerta to-day is in the nature of a blind, by which he hopes to scare the United States Government out of an aggressive campaign for mediation. They laugh at reports that Mr. Lind will not be treated by Huerta with due respect when he reaches Mexico City.

Anxious as is the President to keep hands off Mexico, officials say he will not tolerate any premeditated humiliation to his personal representative.

Secretary of State Bryan declined to comment in any way upon the reports from Mexico City to-day concerning the decision of President Huerta to bar Governor Lind from Mexico. The Secretary said that the State Department has not been informed of his intended action and that, even if it were informed of it, the United States Government could not take a decisive move until after the personal representative of the President has actually been deported from Mexico or otherwise denied by President Huerta's government.

Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, refused to make any comment on the ultimatum issued by the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Americans Shot in Sacking of Durango.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—M. A. Leach, a business man of San Francisco, told Secretary of State Bryan to-day a thrilling story of the sacking of the city of Durango by Revolutionists on June 18, which he witnessed.

The entire city was looted, he says, and German, French and American stores were burned, entailing a property loss of more than $5,000,000.

Scores of Mexicans were shot down and dragged through the streets.

Roger Palmer, an Englishman, employed by the Mexican National Railway, was killed because he failed to open a safe.

Carlos Bombrandis, mining man, and L. W. Elder, both Americans, were wounded by a bomb used to force the doors of the McDonald Institute, where many of the foreigners had assembled for protection.

H. W. Stepp, an American civil engineer, was shot through the leg because he failed to deliver 500 pesos he did not have.

Leach says a number of women sought safety in the archbishop's palace but the bishop was taken prisoner and held for ransom of half a million pesos. Hundreds of women and girls were outraged.

Special Envoy Leaves Galveston on Battleship.

GALVESTON, Aug. 7.—John E. Lind, special representative of President Woodrow Wilson, sailed at 10 o'clock this morning on the battleship New Hampshire for Vera Cruz, Mexico. From Vera Cruz he will go direct to Mexico City to lay the message of President Wilson before President Huerta of Mexico.

Former Governor Lind was accompanied by Mrs. Lind. They were delayed by a railroad wreck. A special interurban electric car brought them from Houston.

At the outskirts of the city an automobile was waiting. Mr. and Mrs. Lind entered the machine and were driven to the water front. A tender from the battleship took them to the vessel, anchored four miles out.

On board the special envoy refused to see visitors. On the way from the interurban to the water front Governor Lind consented to see newspaper men.

"I do not know how long I will remain in Mexico," he said. "I do not expect to be offered the permanent Ambassadorship, and if I am, the offer will be declined. My mission in Mexico has already, I believe, been well defined, and I will communicate with no one except the President."

When told of President Huerta's statements as appearing in press dispatches to-day, Governor Lind said he could form no opinion on this matter until thoroughly acquainted with all the facts in the case. Further than that he refused to comment.

Before departing from Galveston, Governor Lind was in communication with the State Department at Washington.

Scholar Says Devil Designed New Styles

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Current fashions in women's gowns are incentives to immorality, according to Professor Allan Hoben, of the University of Chicago School of Divinity, at the Sunday school institute in session at the university. The latest styles, he said, were the devil's designs.

'For any woman to be well dressed to-day," he said, "is for her to be measurably harmful. Women have distracted attention from their faces to their forms. This is distinctly unfortunate."

Militants Active as Mrs. Pankhurst Sinks

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ABERGAVENNY, ENG., Aug. 7.—Militant suffragettes burned a cricket pavilion and a hayrick near here to-day.

Before the pavilion had been fired a big banner was stretched on poles near by, on which was the inscription: "Just to Remind You That Mrs. Pankhurst Is Dying."

STAID OLD NORWICH, TOO.

NORWICH, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Following the appearance here of women wearing a skirt slit to the knees and with nothing under it but flesh-colored tights, Mayor Silas W. Berry has ordered the arrest of any woman who wears the slashed garment.

ALL SAMEE MEN.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 7.—Mayor Bading has declared that the women of Milwaukee may wear any kind of bathing suit as long as they wear as much as the men do.

SECOND MOVE TO RESCUE WEBB BILL FAILS

Resolution, Backed by Anti-Slaton Forces in the House, Ruled Out of Order.

A second attempt to rescue the Hixon-Searcy (Webb) bill from the subcommittee to which it has been assigned by the Temperance Committee, was made Thursday morning by Representative Kidd, of Baker County, backed by the combine of the dry and anti-tax reform forces that has declared war on the Speaker and the Governor.

The attempt, which if it had been success would have effectually blocked legislation, was frustrated by Speaker Burwell, who ruled that Mr. Kidd's resolution calling out the bill could not be introduced under the rules of the day. The resolution was prevented from getting to the desk of the Clerk only by about ten minutes. Shortly after the House convened Blackburn introduced an "order of the day," which failed to provide for the introduction of resolutions. Five minutes later Kidd tried to introduce his resolution.

"Resolutions can not be introduced at this time," said Speaker Burwell.

"This is a privilege resolution," Mr. Kidd insisted.

"It makes no difference what kind of a resolution it is," replied the Speaker. "The order of the day has been adopted and resolutions can not be introduced."

The following bills were introduced into the House Thursday morning:

By Wheatley, of Sumter—A bill to appropriate $13,286.80 to pay for work already done on the State Capitol and the Executive Mansion, and work that is to be done.

By Hart, of Warren; Allen, of Blasscock, and Turner, of Bulloch—A bill regulating the inspection of asylums, sanitariums and convents.

Negro Sentenced to Death for Attack

WAYCROSS, Aug. 7.—For attacking a white woman at Homerville early this year, Lige Lane, a negro, will hang at Homerville September 10. He was sentenced at a special session of the Clinch Superior Court to-day by Judge T. A. Parker.

Lane's motion for a new trial was refused by Judge Parker and the Court's position upheld by the Supreme Court.

SEA WATERSPOUTS SEEN.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 7.—Three huge water spouts formed at Rockville forty miles from Charleston, afforded several thousand visitors attending the annual Sea Island yacht races, a rare marine spectacle. The spouts were visible for 30 minutes.

Masons' Convention Opens in Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 7.—The Masons of the Ninth Congressional District are in annual convention here. Sixty-nine lodges are represented by 100 delegates.

The address by Thomas H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, Past Grand Master, was a public part of the program at Brenau Auditorium Wednesday.

On the stage was Colonel John E. Redwine, of Gainesville, one of the oldest Masons in Georgia. He has held many offices of honor. He is about 80 years old.

Dr. J. C. Bennett, of Jefferson, presided. Business and secret sessions were held, with initiation. A trolley ride to the river with a watermelon cutting was one feature of the entertainment.

Convent for Negro Girls Opened Here

Catholics of Atlanta will tender a welcome Friday afternoon from 5 to 7 to four Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, who arrived in Atlanta some days ago to take charge of the Catholic school for negro children, 103 North Boulevard.

The school was built by the Fathers of the African Mission and was opened in October, 1912. A convent for negro girls will be opened by the four sisters and the public will be shown through the school and convent for the first time Friday.

After the welcome there will be a benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

K. of C. Debate on $1,000,000 Offices

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—A proposition to move the national headquarters from New Haven, Conn., to Washington and erect a $1,000,000 building at the Capital was the principal subject for consideration at the closing business session to-day of the thirty-first annual convention of the Knights of Columbus. It was predicted the proposition would be defeated as the various councils have rejected the measure in a semi-referendum vote.

Changes in the insurance laws also were considered. One plan was to reduce the assessment paid by the older members, and the other was to issue a paid-up policy to all members who are 70 years old.

Man's Plea in Court Is Heard for Block

SANTA MONICA, CAL., Aug. 7.—E. C. Shapiro, held on a charge of passing a worthless check, pleaded his case before Judge G. Edwin Brown with such vigor that he was heard half a block from the court room. Despite the vocal strength of his plea, Shapiro was held to answer before the Superior Court.

The Numbers 4, 11, 21 in Georgia

When you have destroyed the boy's pride and honor,
When you have killed the soul of the girl,
This year,
Next year to adopt
Probation and a home for the wayward
Will not help them or their mothers.
For those now in need we plead.

Cholera serum for hogs has been provided.

Good!

Protection for cows from the tick—

Fine!

Expert knowledge of bugs and chemicals to save and foster our crops—

Splendid!

Higher education for men and boys—

Excellent!

But the miserable—the unfortunate—those who are slipping down into the slime which underlies—what of these?

In one home lives a mother. Her boy cut four stalks of sugarcane and with another boy stole them from a field.

Your court and ours fined them forty dollars apiece.

They were strangers, one nineteen and the other twenty. They had thirty cents between them and no friends. Eight months in our chaingang was their sentence for not having forty dollars each. A minister found them in stripes at Christmas. He got them out. Their parents had not known of their plight.

IS THIS RIGHT? You can—you will prevent the recurrence of such cases. Pass the Probation Bill. Give your Judge the power to save first offenders.

E. C. Branson of the Normal College at Athens states that crime has increased in Georgia since 1880 approximately twice as fast as the population.

Think of this. Then consider Illinois.

In that State, commitments have decreased forty per cent in the ten years since the adoption of the Indeterminate Sentence, despite the great increase of population. Half of the States have incorporated the Indeterminate Sentence in their laws.

Its aim is "to retain the convict in prison until he is fitted for freedom, making such fitness for freedom the condition precedent of his release."

IT WILL ENCOURAGE ROAD BUILDING.

To the fear of the lash it adds the far greater incentive, the hope of winning freedom by good work.

Senate Bill No. 11 provides for Probation. Senate Bill No. 21 covers the Indeterminate Sentence. The Senate has passed both of them without opposition. And the Judiciary Committee of the House has again favorably reported both Bills for passage in the House.

To incorporate them into the laws of Georgia only an opportunity for a vote in the House is needed.

With them goes House Bill No. 4. This provides the home for wayward girls. They to-day are the pressing problem in our courts. They are prisoners. Yet you would not place them in the chaingang or with hardened criminals.

Since you will not do that with a boy under sixteen for whom you provide a home, you can scarcely do it with a girl.

And yet the State has to care for them.

While providing serum for sick hogs, and a tick cure for cattle, and horticulture and entomology for our fields, and college training for our boys, surely you will provide for these, our girls.

The Prison Commission urges this. The Appropriations Committee and the Penitentiary Committee report favorably House Bill No. 4.

THESE NUMBERS, 4, 11 and 21, entitle these bills to a hearing.

But more than this, the meaning of these measures to Georgia and the unfortunate—that there is nothing in them for any one excepting the miserable at the bottom of the pit—these facts make certain, we believe, that they will be heard and made the law of our State.

Stop and think of the homes they touch.

And you will urge and give them the right of way.

Remember the purpose of the Crucified—

Jesus died, not alone that you might live, but "to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

SENATE AWAITS BILL PROVIDING TAX REFORM

Miller-Anderson Measure Creating Office of State Assessor Expected to Pass Monday.

The Senate Finance Committee will take the firing line Friday in an effort to have the upper House pass a tax equalization bill revolutionizing the present State taxing methods. The bill, drawn by Chairman Miller and President Anderson, has been agreed upon by the Finance Committee and will be reported upon favorably Friday morning, and probably will be passed not later than Monday.

The bill provides for a State Tax Assessor to be appointed by the Governor for a term of six years, who shall determine if the counties are returning a just amount of taxable property. He will have all the powers outlined for the proposed State Tax Commission.

Should the State Tax Assessor and the county boards fail to agree the bill provides that a hearing may be held before an arbitration board of three members, one to be appointed by the County Board, one by the State Tax Assessor and the third by the Governor. The county boards are to consist of three members.

County Treasurers Hit.

Wednesday afternoon two important bills were passed; the first by Senator Stark providing for the permanent registration of voters, and the other by Senator Watts, giving to counties the option to abolish the office of County Treasurer.

The bill providing for the appointment of a special commission to dispose of the present Governor's mansion was defeated by the close vote of 21 to 19 after a heated debate.

Senator McNeill declared the bill gave too much power to the commission, as $500,000 of the State's money was involved. Senator Harrell declared that a lobby of land dealers favoring the bill had existed a long time.

New Registration Bill Passes.

Senator Stark's permanent registration bill was passed after a vigorous fight by Senator Harrell who declared the measure would tear down the registration laws which keep the negro from voting.

In reply Senator Miller assured the Senate that there were sufficient provisions in the bill to eliminate the negro vote just as it is eliminated now. Senator Burtz's amendment, which was passed, provides that the voter shall be entitled to permanent registration unless registered under the provisions of subsections 1 and 2 of paragraph 4, section of the Code of 1910.

These clauses qualify for voting the Civil War and the Indian war, the Civil War and the Indian Wars, and all persons legally descended from these.

Airman's Aide Sues Him for Losing Race

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Aug. 7.—Roy F. Donaldson, who entered the recent international elimination balloon race at Kansas City, was the defendant today in an unusual suit, the aftermath of Donaldson's mishap in the air race.

Emery F. Lanning, who was aide to Donaldson, filed suit for the return of $150 he contributed as his share of the expenses of the flight. Lanning asserts Donaldson became afflicted with "cold feet." Donaldson in return states Lanning spoiled the flight by dropping several bags of ballast when he was trying to correct a mistake he (Lanning) made.

SAVANNAH EAGLE HONORED.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 7.—Colonel William L. Grayson, of Savannah, who has been active in the affairs of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, has been nominated for Grand Chaplain at the annual convention now in session in Baltimore.

ONION IS A STRONG NAME!

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Edward D. Onion got permission from Justice Guy to change his name to Bartlett, on the plea that his right name brought upon him "jokes, banter and sarcasm."

Woman Admits She Defrauded Veterans

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 7.—Lying on her deathbed, Mrs. J. K. McCloud, of Charleston, S. C., widow of a Confederate soldier, admitted to-day to J. A. Rector, an attorney of St. Louis, that she had secured thousands of dollars from Confederate organizations of the South posing as a widow of the late J. K. Alcorn, former Governor and United States Senator of Mississippi.

Mrs. McCloud, who is 90 years of age, operated as an imposter in practically every city in the South. Attorney Rector is a grandson of the late Governor Alcorn and tracked the woman all over the South.

Cartersville Pays Sam Jones Tribute

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 7.—Tomorrow will be Sam Jones Memorial Day at Sam Jones Tabernacle. The 10 o'clock service will be given up to the life and work of the evangelist. Talks will be made by "Gypsy" Smith, Bob Jones and John Callahan. This is one of the feature services of the meeting and will be an annual affair.

To-morrow afternoon services will be held at which negro people will have an opportunity to pay tribute to the famous revivalist, who was a great friend of the race.

Non-union Men May Prolong Mine Strike

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 7.—Indications to-day were that the strike of 18,000 copper miners in the Calumet region would be prolonged.

The non-union miners are united now and are demanding the same concessions from the operators as the striking union men. They wanted an eight-hour day and a minimum wage of $3.

Col. M. Paul LeGrand Of Montgomery Dies

Dinner Dance at Club.

Each Thursday evening the dinner dances at the Capital City Country Club are becoming more popular. Already several parties have been planned for the regular dinner dance, and fully 200 people will dine on the attractive veranda and terrace.

One of the largest parties will be that given by Mr. and Mrs. George Forrester in compliment to Mrs. Everett Ginn, of Winchester, Mass., who is spending August with her sister, Mrs. Laura Wyatt. Mr. and Mrs. Forrester's guests will include Mrs. Ginn, Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lipscomb, of Athens; Miss Eugenia Richardson and Mr. Robert Forrester.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Paxon give a swimming party in the afternoon, after which they will have dinner and later enjoy the dance. In this party there will be twelve guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block will be among those entertaining. The guest of honor of this party will be Miss Anna Lowry Eason, of Lenoir, Tenn., who is visiting Miss Emma Lowry Freeman. Besides Miss Eason and Miss Freeman, the guests will be Miss Alice May Freeman, Mr. Arthur Clarke, Mr. Walter Nash and Mr. James Ragan.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown will entertain a party of eight for Miss Mary Brown and Miss Jessie McKee, who has just returned from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKee will be their guests also.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sciple will have a few friends as their guests.

Others entertaining parties are Mr. and Mrs. William Kiser, Messrs. Lee Harvey, S. C. Flemming, A. S. Watson, Joseph Brown Connally, J. M. Moore, Winter Alfriend, Edward Alfriend and William Dickey.

Mrs. Glover Hostess.

Mrs. H. B. Glover entertained at an informal luncheon Thursday at her home on Seventh street. As she is going away to live, this affair was in the form of a farewell party to her friends. The table was decorated with roses and covers were laid for six.

The Ten Club.

The Ten Club will be entertained by Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin Saturday at the East Lake Country Club, in honor of Dr. William Warren Landrum, of Louisville, the past, present and ever-will-be czar of the club.

Members of the club will leave at 3:30 in hte afternoon. A committee consisting of Mr. W. W. Orr and Professor M. L. Brittain have arranged an exceedingly interesting program. In addition to the members of the club, Judge Lumpkin has invited the following, and each has accepted his invitation:

Governor John M. Slaton, Judge Arthur G. Powell, Dr. E. L. Connally and Mr. Henry H. Cabaniss.

Tallyho Ride.

Miss Ruth Moody will entertain at a tallyho party Thursday evening for Miss Louise des Vergers, the guest of Mrs. W. A. Wimbish, and for Mrs. King, who is with Mrs. John Ryan for the summer.

The guests will be Misses Edith Hammond, Josephine Stoney, Elizabeth Morgan, Eleanor Macey, Mary Adelaide Caverly, Penelope Clarke, Lula Black, Marguerite Olson, Elizabeth Evans, Mamie Kirkpatrick, Mary Bowen and her guest, Margaret Lowman, of Birmingham; Louise Ryan, Marquis Ritch, Messrs. Creed, Ralph Kimball, Charles Goldson, Herman Evans, Stewart Hazzard, J. H. Lucas, Paul Corrigan, T. S. Lockwood, Charles Turner, Dr. Edmondson, Captain and Mrs. John Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wimbish, Captain and Mrs. Thomas Moody will chaperone the party.

For Mr. and Mrs. Paxon.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Brown entertained at an informal dinner Wednesday evening at their home on Piedmont avenue for Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Paxon, whose marriage was a recent event.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Paxon the guests were Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally.

Afternoon Reception.

Mrs. William Fambrough and Miss Marie Norris entertained at an afternoon reception Thursday in compliment to Miss Minnie Fambrough, of Boston, the guest of Mrs. Fambrough, and Miss Marie Beatle, of New York, the guest of Miss Norris.

The house was elaborately decorated with yellow flowers. Punch was served on the porch by Misses Lillie Tipton and Winnie Ison.

Assisting in the entertainment of the guests were Misses Edith Norris, Margaret Farnsworth, Allene Parryman, Charisle McClain, Irene Bennet, Eugenia Jarrard, Alma Norris, Mrs. J. C. Norris, Mrs. A. L. Norris and Miss Marian Fambrough, of Rock Mart, Ga.

About 100 guests called between the hours of 5 o'clock and 7 o'clock.

For Mrs. Hall.

Mrs. J. T. Harrison will entertain at a shower on Friday afternoon for Mrs. Ethel B. Hall, whose wedding to Mr. Wilson Brown, of Mississippi, will be an event of August 14.

About 100 guests have been invited.

Mrs. Loveman Hostess.

Mr. Bert A. Loveman entertained at a bridge luncheon Thursday morning; twelve guests were present.

For Miss Harrison.

Mrs. Spencer Atkinson entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for her niece, Miss Mary Virginia Harrison, of Brunswick.

The house was artistically decorated with brilliant colored flowers, marigolds, gladioli and asters. The dining room table had as its centerpiece a basket of white asters, and here all the details were in white.

The score cards were hand painted in flowers and were tied with lavender bows.

The prizes were a French print and a bridge set. Twenty girls were present.

Church Holds Candy Sale.

The ladies of Wesley Memorial Church will hold a cake and candy sale at Kenny's Tea Store Saturday, for the benefit of the church fund.

COLUMBUS WATER PURE.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 7.—In the midst of the waterworks controversy in Columbus, when some have attempted to make it appear that there is an epidemic of typhoid fever, a report of the analysis of the water has been received from Ray C. Werner, of Atlanta, State analyist, showing that it is pure and wholesome.

SE5K TO JOIN CIVIC BODIES.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 7.—An unsuccessful effort has been made here to combine the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. It is believed, however, that soon the two organizations will be combined.

An Outclearing of One Hundred Seventy-Five Dresses

Dresses of Cotton Crepes and Voiles, Linens, Silk Foulards and Poplins and Black China Silks

The Most Drastic Pricing We Have Done This Season

A wonderfully attractive collection of dresses, styled and fashioned in ways that were charming enough to win them a place in our ready-to-wear section.

However, we are putting the good ship in shape for its fall voyage---which, alone, accounts for the pricing. But it is no time nor occasion for the whys and wherefores of such prices, the prices themselves tell the big facts---women of Atlanta will know what to expect of a Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. sale wherein the former prices and sale prices differ as these do.

At 8:30, then, to-morrow!

$2.19 For $5.75 to $7.50 Linen Dresses

Forty-seven of these.

Of French linen in tans, browns, blues, lavenders—about all colors—and various styles, trimmed with folds and bands of contrasting colors and buttons, some have lace-trimmed collars.

$5.00 For $10.00 to $21.75 Lingerie Dresses

Seventy-seven of these:

Splendid choosing here—a number of these have been in the house but a few days. Of sheer soft lingerie cloth, plain and striped crepe and voile, made attractive with rich laces and embroideries. White and white touched with colors.

$9.75 For $16.95 to $25.00 Dresses

In all there are thirty-one of these. Dresses of black China silks, of foulards, of crepe de chines, of nets and laces and of cotton crepes—these hand-embroidered. Too many different models to attempt picturing them. See them! Not one was less than $16.95, and from that to $25.00.

$11.95 For New $15.00 Silk Dresses

Both Silk and Cotton Dresses.

Twenty new Fall dresses of soft and gracefully draping silk poplins have been added to this outclearing. Why? Because we would! Rather simple but elegant affairs showing many style points to be in favor this fall—you will like them. Choose from Copenhagen, navy, gray, lavender and black.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Their Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WITH no prices on the menu!" repeated Helen in amazement. "Then they can charge us anything they please?"

"That's the idea. Most of the smart places in Paris never price their food. They're supposed to cater to people who are concerned only with the quality of the dishes—not with the price."

"But, Warren, WE don't want to go to such a place! I'd be so worried about what the check was going to be—I couldn't eat a thing."

"Well we're going to one right now for dinner—Cafe D'Armenonville. One of the show places in the Bois. You'll see more smart Parisians there than you've seen yet. While we're over here we're going to do Paris. What difference does a few dollars make one way or the other?"

"But, dear, I'm not dressed for a pretentious place."

"Well, put on something light then—anything will do. They don't expect Americans to dress much. They think we all come from a sort of wild and woolly West. All they want is our money."

"Well, I don't think we've got so much," laughed Helen. "Not enough to go to a place where they don't price their food."

"Guess we can stand it for once. Hurry up—it's almost 7."

A little later they left the hotel. Outside Warren raised his cane at a passing taxi.

Warren Determined.

"Of course we've got to have a cab," impatiently, as Helen made her usual protest. "It's the only way you can get to that place. Now, you leave this to me. We're going to Armenonville's to-night, and we're going to do the thing right. Hang the expense!"

When Warren started out in this spirit Helen knew it was useless to try to curb him. He was in the mood to spend money—and he was going to spend it. She leaned back in the cab with a sigh of resignation.

But as this was Helen's first drive through the Champs Elysees, she soon forgot everything else in the beauty of the scene.

Under the trees, along the drive, were chairs and tables, mostly deserted now. But from the gay gowns of the few people who still lingered Helen could imagine what it must have been an hour earlier.

"I'll not have the time, but you ought to come out to the Bois some afternoon for tea," suggested Warren. "Nothing like it in the world. There's Armenonville's through there," pointing to a mass of brilliant lights glimmering through a grove of trees.

Cabs, taxies and victorias were lined up three and four abreast in the wide graveled driveways before this famous restaurant.

"But we're not going to keep this taxi?" asked Helen anxiously, as they waited their turn to draw up before the entrance.

"That's just what we're going to do," snapped Warren. "We'll not take any chances of getting one when we're through."

To order dinner from an unpriced menu, and to feel that a taxi was industriously ticking up the francs—the evening held little prospect of pleasure for Helen.

Warren led the way through the spacious hallway to the garden beyond. The place was like fairyland, with banks of red geraniums, a gleaming fountain, and ropes of colored lights festooned through trees and shrubbery. There must have been a hundred or more tables on the lawn, yet all were taken, and a group of people were waiting.

"You stay here," Warren strode off determinedly after a headwaiter.

Helen's gaze followed him anxiously. She saw him slip some money into the hand of the suave Frenchman, and a moment later they were being seated at one of the few tables that had been "reserved."

"Warren, I thought you didn't believe in bribing headwaiters?"

"Well, you've got to do it here. This is a show place, I tell you, and you've got to come across. We'd have stood there all night without a table if I hadn't forked up."

Helen's first concern was in the menu—a large card with a fantastically decorated border of lobsters and crabs. She had hoped all along that Warren was wrong and that the prices would be given, but there was not a single figure. This bill of fare was to show only what you could get—not what you would have to pay for it.

"Oh, dear, just order one or two things! I'm not very hungry—and you had luncheon, didn't you?"

But Warren only glowered at her, and gave his order to the waiter by checking off with his pencil some of the dishes with the longest and, as Helen thought, most expensive looking French names.

"Now, see here," when the waiter had gone, "this isn't so bad as you think. The theory of this is that they charge in proportion to what you order. For instance, if you only have a roast and a salad, you pay more proportionately for those two dishes than you would if you had four or five. That's fair enough."

"Well, if that's their method, then why don't they put down the prices and deduct a certain percentage when you order a number of things? Wouldn't that be a good idea for any restaurant? Think how much more people would order if they felt they were getting a discount."

"Huh! Sort of on the principle of five cents apiece, six for a quarter!" grinned Warren.

"But don't you see people WOULD order more," insisted Helen, growing enthusiastic over her idea. "I'm sure any of the big New York restaurants would coin money on that plan."

"Better try to sell 'em the idea when you get back," scoffed Warren. "They might pay you something for it."

"Well, they might!" defiantly.

Just then a striking beauty, in a clinging white gown and a drooping leghorn hat with red poppies, swept by, leaving a trail of perfume.

"Dear, some of the gowns ARE beautiful," mused Helen, now giving herself up to a study of the place.

A Pretty Girl.

"Not a bad-looking girl over there in yellow," commented Warren.

"I was just going to speak of her—that's the most WONDERFUL gown!"

The girl was dark and slender, with heavy brown hair drawn low into a simple coil on her neck. Her dress was of pale yellow chiffon, with brown fringe; her hat of the same chiffon was wreathed with yellow-petaled, brown-eyed daisies, and the streamers of brown velvet ribbon were knotted under her chin.

Most of the hats had either ties or streamers, with the trimming placed at some daring angle. While they must have looked very extreme in the shop windows, they were charming on the women who wore them.

"After all, the French women DO know how to wear their clothes."

"The ones you see here ought to," was Warren's comment. "That's about their only job."

"Dear, I haven't any idea what I'm eating," Helen exclaimed suddenly.

"Well, it's good, isn't it? That's sweetbread with truffles and wine sauce, en casserole—one of their specialties here. Only place in Paris you can get it like this."

But to Helen the food was always secondary to the atmosphere of the place and the people. And now she absent-mindedly ate her dinner, intent upon the scene about her.

"A woman never has any palate," grumbled Warren. "This dish is a work of art. There's a smoothness and flavor to this sauce that you wouldn't get anywhere else in the world. But you don't appreciate it! A dinner like this is wasted on any woman."

"Why, dear, that isn't fair," indignantly. "I think it's delicious, and I'm eating every bit of it."

A Treat.

"Oh, you're eating it, but might as well be eating corned beef hash in a dairy lunch room. I tell you this is a treat! No wonder the chef who made that sauce didn't want a price put on it. You can't price a thing like that any more than you can price a rare picture," enthused Warren, growing eloquent under the influence of the vintage wine.

Even Helen forgot her dread of the check and became enthusiastic when the waiter served the fruits au champagne. It was a tall glass dish of cut fruit, wonderful strawberries, cherries, pineapples and peaches floating in an iced syrup of blended wines and cordials.

When later the check was brought face down on a plate, instinctively Helen leaned forward to see the total. But Warren took it up quickly, glanced over the items, drew a crisp note from his wallet and laid it over the check. Helen was not familiar enough with French money to know the amount of the note, nor could she tell by the change returned.

"Dear, how much was that check?" unable to keep back the question.

"Well, I've paid it, haven't I? And it was a blamed good dinner. Now we'll have no harangues over expenses this evening. Come on—let's see if we can find that cab."

The cab! Helen had wholly forgotten that the cab was waiting—and they had been there almost three hours!

Warren located their driver and in a few moments they were whirling back through the Champs Elysees, now more beautiful than ever with the lights gleaming through the dark trees, and with every now and then a glimpse of the Seine and its jeweled bridges.

But the charm of all this was lost on Helen. She was not leaning back and enjoying the beauty of the drive. Instead she was sitting bolt upright, every muscle strained, as she tensely tried to figure out how much that dinner and the three hours' wait of the cab must have cost.

LIFE'S STRUGGLE WITH ILLNESS

Miss Stewart Tells How She Suffered from 16 to 45 years old—How Finally Cured.

EUPHEMIA, OHIO.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister, and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicine was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old, and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can not tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month, and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age, and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse, and being wholly self-supporting I can not overestimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing since I was 52 years old. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss Evelyn Acelia Stewart, Euphemia, Ohio.

The Brighter Side of Turkey Trotting

An Expert's Advice of How This Famous Dance Can Be Purged of All Objectionable Features.

(Top picture) "This is a dance where shoulders count."
(Bottom picture) "There should be a foot of space between partners."

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE new school of turkey trotting has brought into existence two groups of rabid partisans—those who do the dance and know how jolly is the dancing, and those who look on and see how shocking is the prancing. And meanwhile turkey trotting is so earnestly done that it seems in a fair way to be done to death—and a fallow field for humorists will thus become sterile and barren of little jokes like the famous, "She is more trotted against than trotting."

In our age of specialization, turkey trotting is not sufficiently specialized, and every little freak step that wriggles its way into life masquerades under the one name or that of some barnyard or menagerie relative. There is a brighter side to turkey trotting; there is a possibility of having it become a dance as well regulated as the two-step, and yet free to express the true dancing joy-of-living of the partners who merrily whirl through its mazes.

For confirmation of this theory, while in New York I went to Leon Errol, the clever originator of "turkish trottishness," one of the features of the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," and with clever Stella Chatelaine, the partner of dances and of life to help him, Mr. Errol showed me how you should and how you shouldn't do the "trot."

Correct Position.

"Here is the correct position for learning the trot," said Mr. Erroll, illustrating the while. "The girl places her hands on the shoulders of her partner. The man places one hand under the elbow of his partner and his bent elbow under her other arm. In this position every sway of a partner who knows the dance throws the shoulders of the other partner into the proper swing; not a wriggle or a suggestive movement, but the swaying to music that is the natural expression used in all dances that are a real expression of joy set to music instead of conventional ballroom steps.

"If you want to see the art of dancing naturally you go to see Genee, and you enjoy without any thought of spending years in trying to master the art of dancing as she has done.

"But when you go to see the modern, up-to-date dancing of the stage you have a weather eye on learning to do it, too—and springing a new step at the next cabaret you favor. Here are three things to remember about stage dancing—it consists of tempo, a trick step and a bit of acting to catch the eye. In comedy dancing like mine, the tempo is very quick—whirlingly rapid without a break in its movements, that fairly pile up on top of one another. Then there is the trick step worked out to be as different as possible, and finally the comic element to make it go with the audience.

Allow For Freedom.

"The amateur turkey trotter must copy the first two parts of stage turkey trotting, and avoid the acting like grim death.

"Don't play to the gallery—don't do an exaggerated step and fairly revel in the idea that the people are looking at you in admiring wonder. They are probably wondering all right—how you can be so vulgar or so foolish.

"Take a refined position that leaves at least a foot of space between the partners and allow for freedom of motion. Holding your partner too closely not only makes the dance suggestive, and gives too much chance to the critical enemies of turkey trotting to get in their work, but makes it impossible for the amateur to dance with the graceful free sway that is the chief beauty of turkey trotting.

"Then with a clear picture in your mind of what you want to do, work out a step. Sometimes Miss Chatelaine and I see little children dancing to an organ grinder's tunes on the streets—that suggests a step—and we may spend as much as two hours in working out the one step.

"Turkey trotting demands a free yet firm position that lets the partners work together; an absolute feeling for time, and ability to follow the music without a break; the utmost patience in working out a step, and ability and imagination to work out little trick steps that will add to the mere sway that is the basis of all turkey trotting and allied dances.

"We must always keep in mind that this is a dance in which shoulders count. In the now sedate waltz, the position of arm-around-waist used to be considered rather risque—well, you don't have to assume that position if you are going to trot correctly. The position I suggest—girl's arms on man's shoulders, and man's arms used as levers under girl's elbows, is staid, respectable and guaranteed to produce graceful rhythmical trotting.

"As in other departments of life, and dancing," concluded Mr. Errol, "there is a right way and there is a wrong way. But the right way to turkey trot is pleasing to observe and pleasing to do. If the amateur will assume the position I teach and practice one step at a time patiently and in faithful effort to keep in perfect rhythm with the music, he will soon find himself able to do a modern dance without a shade of vulgarity and without a trace of amateurish ill-at-easeness."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WE got a other new white hired gurl, her naim is Vera. Ma sed it is a pritty naim, but I think it is a funny naim for a hired gurl. Hired gurls used to be called Bridget & Nora & thay was good hired gurls, too. But things is different now. The last three hired gurls we had was Marguerite & Sylvia & Belladonna, & now we have Vera. She is vary pritty. Pa sed she had dreemy eyes & Ma sed it was from sleeping too sound that her eyes was dreemy.

Vera is riteing a play. She wuddent tell Pa & Ma that she was riteing it, but she toald me so I promised her that I wuddent say a word to Pa & Ma. The naim of the play is Alone in Milledgeville, & it tells about a butiful young gurl that fell in luv with a keeper in the Milledgeville insane asilum. He was a vilyun. The gurl goes to Milledgeville to see him beekaus he had toald her that he owned a grate big estate. He took the gurl to the asilum & toald her that all the insane peepul thare was his servants. She beleeved him at first and then the horrible truth dawned on her. Then she sed in poetry to the vilyun:

You have me at yure mercy here
Of that thare ain't no doubt;
I think I shall go bughouse, deer,
If you don't git me out.
I'd rather be a peasant's bride
& housekeep in a hut
Than wed a chump in this here dump
& get to be a nut.

Then Vera toald me that finished the first act. The curtain goes down wen she is reading them lines to the vilyun. The second act is the saim as the first, in the asilum. One of the pashunts thare isent crazy at all, he is a rich young man wich is beeing kep in thare so his relatives can git all his munny. He falls in luv with the poor gurl wich is being held thare by the vilyun & tells her that they will find some way to escape. She looked up into his eyes & recsited a other peece of poetry. She was all the time reesiting poetry she rote, Vera toald me. Vera sed that the longer the heroine stayed in the asilum the moar poetry she rote. She looked up into the eyes of the hero & recsited.

Oh yes, I will fly away with you
And marry you for luv.
Yure munny all can stay with you,
I have no use for it, duv.
But what if you mite be insane
& not what you represent?
Then to this place I wud return
& be sorry I ever had went.

If you are reely sane, my own,
Our lives will pleasant be,
But if sum nite I'd heer you groan
I'd hide away from thee.
It is a awful, haunting feer
To feer one's husband is dippy,
& if I ever see you thus
I'll jump in the Mississippi.

The last act isent finished yet, Vera toald me. She is pritty smart for a hired gurl. She says wen she gits rich I can marry her wen I grow up.

Excused.

Bob—Will you take a ticket in this raffle for a poor widow——

Simp—Nix. I wouldn't have any use for a poor widow if I won.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

NOT WORTH YOUR WORRY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and recently met a young man about the same age. He made quite an impression upon me and we have met by appointment a few times. Last week I happened to misunderstand a date the young man made in his letter and disappointed him. Now he is angry, and although I tried to explain the matter to him, he will not believe my excuse. I am quite heartbroken over it. RAY.

Your humble attitude doesn't do you credit. You did no wrong and owed neither apology nor explanation. Please, for your own sake, let the matter end here, and if he attempts to see you, refuse.

THERE COULD BE NO OBJECTION.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16, and have a friend two years my senior. His birthday is quite near and I would like to know if it is proper for me to send him a birthday card, so as to let him know I think of him. ANXIOUS.

A cordial little note, wishing him many happy returns, will prove your friendship.

You are so young; will you promise me to regard no man as more than a friend for a few years longer?

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am deeply in love with a young man 21 years old. I meet him often and he gives me hints that he loves me, but he also tells me he hasn't courage to propose. Now please tell me how I should act. Should I tell him that I love him or not? HILDA.

The girl worth having is worth asking for. Tell him so the next time he hints. Also hint that there are other men not quite so slow. But save your avowal of love until he has earned it.

THE DIFFERENCE IMMATERIAL

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl four years my senior, which difference in our ages seems to stand between us. I have tried in every way possible to convince her of my love, but so far have not succeeded. I do not believe I can ever be happy without her. E.

You do not state your age. If you are old enough to marry, her four years seniority should be no bar.

I am convinced she refuses you because she does not love you. Be persistent in your devotion, and if that does not melt her heart, try giving your attention to some other girl.

CERTAINLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am eighteen and am keeping company with a young man for the past year. Now this young man's folks live out of town and invited me to their home. Should I accept their invitation? A. B. S.

If the invitation is from his mother I would have you accept by all means. It will mean a great deal to your future happiness to get on good terms with them, and the visit may give you an enlightening view of your lover. I hope it will prove favorable.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

On Fancy's Wings.

A sweet young thing in white fluttered toward the aeroplane mechanic, and resolutely took possession of him, asking all those usual senseless questions that now have become the common lot of aviators and their assistants.

But this particular assistant—and who can wonder; was not the sweet young thing in white a damsel quite adorable?—strove bravely to satisfy the curiosity of his fair inquirer; and explained with remarkable clearness the working of a monoplane.

Still, there is a limit even to the patience shown by susceptible man toward charming maid.

"Tell me," inquired the sweet young thing in white, "what happens when your engine stops in the air? Can't you come down?"

"That's just the trouble," sighed the mechanic, mastered by his sense of the ridiculous. "D'you know, there are a dozen or so airmen now stranded above France. Their engines have stopped; they can't get down, and they are starving to death!"

Later she learned the truth. So ended what might have been a romance.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XV.

THERE is a numbing quality to all sudden and great sorrow. Psychologists tell us that the mind is so dazed by the shock of grief that it can not grasp the fearful truth in all its details. Whatever causes this partial insensibility, we are thankful for it.

Mary Danforth was like one stunned during the days that followed her father's death. She listened in stony silence while the facts of his seizure were related to her. He had come up from the office, and after dinner dressed to go to her graduation exercises, but had dropped to the floor as he started to leave the apartment, and in five minutes stopped breathing. He had never regained consciousness.

This was no time for subterfuges, and Mrs. Danforth was soon made acquainted with the state of affairs between her daughter and Gordon Craig. She was told that no formal engagement existed, but that the pair loved each other and were going to wait for each other until such time as they were ready to marry. The bereaved wife, made suddenly old by the great sorrow of her life, clung to the young man, and sobbed out her woe and her trust in him.

"I have found a son," she said at last. "God bless you, dear boy!"

Craig bent his tall head to kiss her pale cheek. "I shall try to be worthy of your daughter," he whispered, "and of your confidence in me."

He remained in New York for a week. The changes in his business, of which he told Mary, would keep him from the road hereafter, another man having been deputed to travel for his firm, while he was to remain at the home office.

"Hard times have hit us as well as the rest of the world," he said regretfully, "and matters do not look as bright as they did. But I shall stick to one job and shall hope for a salary that will warrant my marrying in a year or two. Heaven speed the time!"

And Mary was not ashamed to add a sincere "Amen!" to this hope.

It was on the day after the funeral that the mother and the daughter learned that, added to the loss of husband and father, another trouble had befallen them. Investigation of Mr. Danforth's affairs brought to light the fact that his business was in a desperate condition and that he had lived right up to his income. His lawyer told the two women the painful truth that when the funeral expenses were paid and a few bills that Mr. Danforth had contracted were settled the pair would be well-nigh penniless except for a small life insurance the deceased had carried in favor of his wife.

"Your husband took that Western trip on the chance of saving the day," the lawyer explained to the widow. "He hoped to put a business deal through out there, but he failed. I think the disappointment, coupled with the dread of what was before him, hastened his death."

"He did it all for us," Mary told Craig. "He lived just to make us happy. He wanted us to have a pretty home and all that we wanted, and he could not bear to tell us that we must part with these things. Now I can see why he was taken from us. It would have broken his heart had he lived to see us lose what we have been accustomed to."

Mary spoke firmly, yet gently. "I am going to work, mother," she asserted. "No, do not look distressed at the idea! It is what father would wish—what he always told me I must be prepared to do if the need arose."

"It will not be for long," Craig reminded the mother. "I hope that matters will go so well with me that I can come for you and Mary soon. Then we three will have a little home of our own."

"I could not accept it even from Gordon," remarked Mrs. Danforth later to her daughter, "if I did not have that insurance money of my own."

The daughter said nothing. She could not bear to tell her unsophisticated mother what a little way the money, of which she spoke so confidently, would go. The income from it would not support one woman, no matter how economical she might be, and the girl knew the principal would be drawn upon gradually until it was all gone. And then?

"I will be able to support her myself," she thought bravely. "She shall use as little of her own money as possible. I would not want her to be entirely dependent upon Gordon—even though he is willing to care for her. I must get to work at once."

The place she secured was not a brilliant one, but she had not expected that it would be. She was engaged as stenographer and typewriter to a kindly, middle-aged real estate agent. He had a small office and her salary matched the office. But what else could a beginner hope for?

Thus it came about that when Gordon Craig turned his face westward again he knew that the girl he loved was the sole dependence of her widowed mother. His heart ached when he remembered that the pretty home must be given up, and the handsome furniture sold—except such pieces as the two lonely women would need to furnish the tiny flat they would take in an unfashionable part of town. He longed to stay and help them.

"But my job won't wait for me!" he muttered with a bitter sigh. "If I were only rich!"

Which exclamation is such a common one that it is hardly worth recording.

Barber—Poor Jim has been sent to an asylum.

Victim (in the chair)—Who is Jim?

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been brooding over the hard times, an' I suppose he finally got crazy."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. He and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so alike we couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded, too. No money in this business now."

"What's the reason?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo it doesn't pay to shave or hair-cut. Poor Jim! I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me sad. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let him slash all he wanted to. It might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Yes!"

It was Pat's first day in the sawmill, and his duties consisted of working the circular saw. The foreman directed him as to its use, then left him in order to attend to some pressing matter. Having occasion, however, to pass Pat's way again, he was somewhat annoyed to see him standing idly surveying his hand.

"Well, what's wrong?" he said sharply.

"Sure and begorra I've lost a finger," replied Pat.

"How did it happen?" inquired the foreman.

"Sure, I was jist doin' like this when—bejabbers! There's another one off!"

The daughter of the house had just returned from a visit to her cousins, during which she had become engaged to a rising young man whom she had met at the home of her relatives. To her mother she was extolling the virtues of her intended.

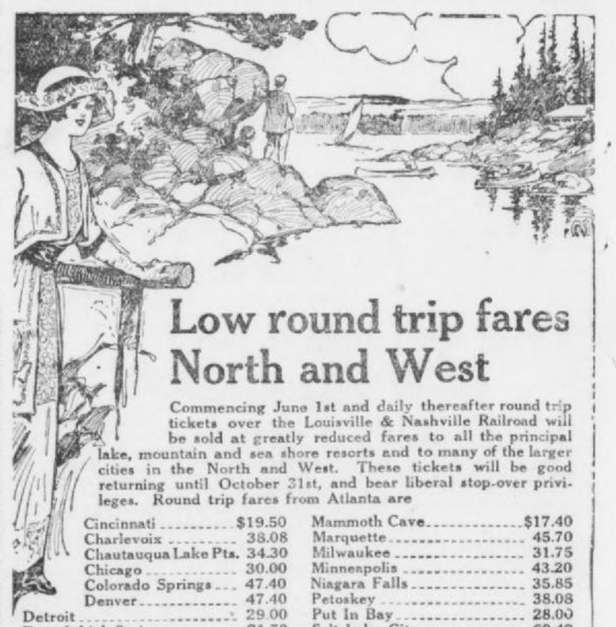

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "he's just grand! So square, so upright, so highly polished. Why, even in his notes there is such a sympathetic tone that sometimes I wonder if I am not reading the music of the gods!"

"Mercy's sake, child!" interrupted mother, "are you talking about a young man or a piano?"

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see, I'm rather busy just now. I hung Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your church warden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE two pillow cushions, which, with the Honorable Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States, compose the Pillow Cushion Club, sat stiff, upright and unbending in their corners, waiting for the meeting to begin.

It was a joy for the speaker of the evening to look at them. So well-stuffed, so self-satisfied, so blank of expression; they looked like women whose sole ambition in life is to keep their figures, and who place all their hope in a straight-front corset.

Lysander John gave them an encouraging smile. "My wife and daughter," he said, "who spend most of their time from home reading papers on How to Make Home Life Beautiful, never had audiences more intelligent and appreciative than mine, Ladies, I thank you!

"I have delved into Emerson, I have wandered through Carlyle, and I have failed to find any problems more serious than those I will submit tonight. As members of the Pillow Cushion Club we must grapple with these questions. We must never again shirk our share of the burden of the world's progress.

"Doubt, my dear audience, if my wife and daughter at any of their various clubs in the past month have wrestled with more vital questions than those I will lay before you this evening.

"First, How soon after an article is borrowed is it proper to go over with an excuse demandin~ its return?

"If a friend buys an automobile, can it be construed as a gentle hint if you buy yourself an automobile coat?

"When a man's family consists of himself and wife, and he buys a four-passenger car, does that indicate a kind, generous disposition, or a desire to escape being bored to death by riding alone with his wife?

"If either must be slighted in a meal, the soup or the pudding, which should it be? In other words, is it wiser to smooth down the bristles of temperamental man by starting him feeling good at a meal, or to finish him feeling satisfied?

"Is it economical and proper these hard times to bury a woman's false hair with her, when, with a little change in the color, her husband's next wife might wear it?

"My next problem," he concluded "is one which will not permit of our speedy adjournment if we attempt to solve it. It is this: How many different ways are there for a man to act the fool?"

'Phone or Wire.

The following letter appears in a Boston newspaper:

Sir—I called at your editorial rooms yesterday, entering the outer chamber. The boy was absent. On the door, which was closed, leading to the sanctum sanctorium, was a sign, "No Admittance." On the wall next to the door was another sign, "No Loitering Here." The question is, what's a feller to do? F. H. L.

"I hear you're going to marry Archie Blueblood, Diana. Is it true?" asked one young society woman of another.

"Marry him? I should think not! What on earth could I do with the man? He can't ride, he can't play tennis, golf, nor, for that matter, can he even drive a motor car!"

"Oh," said the friend, "but he can swim beautifully, you know."

"Swim, indeed! Now, I ask you, would you like a husband you had to keep in an aquarium?"

FROM LUCILE'S DIARY

AUNT RACHEL has been staying with us on her way home from California, and I have passed a good deal of time with her, as I am exceedingly fond of her. I really think I am her favorite niece. One morning when I was helping her dress—I love to pay her little attentions—I found that there were no buttonholes in the new lingerie blouse she had intended to wear.

"Dear me!" I said "We must get Cousin Fannie to rectify this at once. She'll be delighted to make the buttonholes for you."

"Why don't you make them for me, Lucile?" asked Aunt Rachel.

"Why, you see——" I began, and then hesitated.

"Yes, I see, Lucile," Aunt Rachel said. "You don't count buttonhole-making among your accomplishments. In my day a young woman was not considered well bred if she could not make a perfect buttonhole."

"You make me quite ashamed of my shortcomings," I told her. "You see, Cousin Fannie has always been rather proud of her beautiful buttonholes, and it would have seemed like infringing on her rights if I had taken to making them, too. Dear Cousin Fannie is a little sensitive, and I don't like to hurt her feelings."

"It's quite possible that she would like you to share her glory," Aunt Rachel remarked. "If you wish to learn, I'll agree to make it right with Fannie."

That afternoon I went to Cousin Fannie's room and asked her to give me a lesson in making buttonholes.

"I'm awfully busy, Lucile," she said, "for I'm trying to finish this waist that Aunt Rachel gave me the silk for. I wish to wear it to-night at the settlement reception. If you have buttonholes to make I'll be glad to do them for you to-morrow."

I felt so disappointed that I said: "Aunt Rachel criticises me because I don't know how to make buttonholes, and you won't take the time to teach me. I did so wish to learn this afternoon." I could scarcely restrain my tears as I spoke.

"Why, Lucile, if you are so much in earnest about it of course I'll show you how," said Cousin Fannie.

So we went to work. I made buttonhole after buttonhole all afternoon, for I was determined if I made them at all to excel. Cousin Fannie told me that evening that with a little more practice I should soon equal her. So I kept at it every spare minute for two days until I felt competent to make the buttonholes in Aunt Rachel's blouse. When she saw them she was so surprised and delighted at my skill that she immediately offered to buy me the perfectly charming chiffon set that I had been talking to her about.

I was so enchanted at owning the coveted set that I made an occasion to wear it by calling on Gertrude Bates every day I received it.

She was busy with the dressmaker, but I sat quite a while chatting until her brother, Carl, came home. I was just going when Gertrude remarked that the little silk coat which was being made was all done but the three large buttonholes. I offered to make them.

"Why, do you know how to make buttonholes?" she exclaimed.

I replied by taking the garment and setting to work with a nonchalance that I was amused to see alarmed her.

"Well, you're a wonder," said Carl when I had made a buttonhole and he had examined it. "I don't believe my tailor could beat this."

As it was growing late, I suggested that Gertrude allow me to take the coat home and finish the buttonholes the next day.

Rather Tired.

I was rather tired the next morning, as I had been sewing so much more than I was accustomed to do, so I asked Cousin Fannie to make the two remaining buttonholes in Gertrude's coat. She works so rapidly that I knew it would be no trouble to her. I was glad to have them done, for George Requier called up on the phone and asked me to go out to his tennis club that afternoon.

As I had so suitable wrap, I wore Gertrude's fascinating little coat. I thought she would be glad to have me wear it after all the work I had done for her. I was astonished when I saw her walking toward me across the courts, for I naturally supposed she was at home with the dressmaker.

"This is a jolly surprise," I said gayly, trying to make room for her on the bench.

"It's certainly a surprise," she replied coldly, and, looking fixedly at the jacket, she passed on.

I explained to George she must be suffering from one of her severe headaches, for I could not bear to have him think any friend of mine would be so rude.

Although I sent her the coat by parcel post the next day, I have not had a single word of acknowledgment or thanks from her. Gertrude, I fear, does not number gratitude among her graces.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Let me see it," cried she, and Mr. Gryce, greatly pleased at the success of his trick, handed her the picture of Genevieve Gretorex, satisfied that if this good woman continued to find it like the Mildred Farley she had mentioned, he should find that Mildred Farley was the name the young woman he had himself first taken for the original of this picture, and in whose fate despite his reason and his years he had found himself so much interested that he had come here at this late hour of the night to learn her name, and if possible, her dwelling place.

His success surpassed his hopes. The old lady looked at the picture, shook her head and looked again.

Somewhat Different.

"How these photographs can deceive?" cried she. "If I had not stopped to look at this twice, I would have sworn it was Mildred Farley's face, but I see now that she wears her hair quite different, and that she is older and much better dressed than Mildred could ever hope to be. Nevertheless, there is a very striking similarity, and I should like to see Miss—— Miss——"

"Handscombe," put in the detective.

"——and Mildred together. It would be a pleasing study." And she stared long and earnestly at the picture, winding up with: "I should like to show it to Mildred."

This was putting herself exactly in the position desired by Mr. Gryce.

"You can do so," he observed, "if you do not have to carry it far nor keep it long. Does Mildred live anywhere near you? Can you see her to-night?"

"She lives in my fourth story front room, sir; Mildred Farley is one of my boarders."

Mr. Gryce stroked his trembling right knee with a very loving hand. "One of your boarders," he repeated. "She is doubtless then upstairs asleep."

"No, poor girl, no. She is a dressmaker and sometimes does not close her eyes till 1 o'clock at night. She is not asleep, but come to think of it, she is not in the house at all. She went away for a short vacation a few days ago, and though she promised to be home this afternoon, I believe she did not come. It has always been my hope that Dr. Molesworth would marry her. She is a lovely girl and he is a very fine man. Why, then, shouldn't they come together?"

"And what you makes you think they will not? Why shouldn't it be she he is going to marry?"

"Why? Because they would have told me. He knows and she knows there is nothing I wish so much. It would be preposterous for them to keep it to themselves after all I have said. No, if Dr. Molesworth is going to marry any one (and I don't believe yet he is), it must be some ridiculous chit of a girl he has met away from here; and—Mildred——why, Lena!"

This exclamation was caused by the appearance at the door of a young girl who the moment she saw Mr. Gryce, shrank back and started to run away.

But the emphatic "Lena!" stopped her, and in a moment the old lady was in the hall; a whispered conference ensued, followed by the re-entrance of the good woman with a note in her hand.

"Well, I never!" she exclaimed, looking first at the letter she held and then at the feeble figure of the old man who had risen with well feigned indifference as if to go. "A note from Dr. Molesworth, which he left on purpose for me! and that girl forgot to give it to me till now! What can he have to say!" And breaking the seal, she read the few enclosed lines with a growing wonder that ended in the joyous exclamation of "Good gracious, it is Mildred, after all! He is going to marry her to-night, and bring her home to-morrow. Well, I will give up. Never a word to me about it, and I so fond of them both! I don't understand it, folks are so queer." And she fluttered to and fro in ill-disguised joy, talking and muttering to herself, while Mr. Gryce pulled his muffler about him and began to move slowly toward the door.

"I declare," she broke in, as her attention was recalled to him by this movement, "it does seem a pity for you to go out again into the cold. If you think you would be better here, I have an empty room." But at this moment a carriage was heard to stop before the door, and, startled into a new train of thought by this unwonted occurrence, she moved towards the front windows, exclaiming: "I do believe they have come now!"

A Tragedy.

But at her first glance through the curtains she drew back with a frightened air, and crying, "Oh, what can this mean!" hurried towards the door with every sign of intense agitation.

Mr. Gryce at once took her place at the window, but he did not look out, for at that moment a man's voice was heard in the hall, and the wary detective thought it prudent to resume his role of the self-absorbed, semi-oblivious old man whose infirmities were so engrossing he had neither eyes nor ears for what went on about him. It was well he did so, for in another moment his imperturbality received a great shock by the certainly unlooked-for entrance of two men bearing a burden which, at one glance, showed itself to be the inert form of a young woman. From the appearance of one of these he judged him to be Dr. Molesworth. They were followed by the landlady, crying and wringing her hands.

"Mildred! Mildred! What has happened to you, poor girl!" came in piercing tones from the latter, as the sad burden, having been deposited on a sofa, she approached, and drew aside the cloak which had hitherto concealed the face.

"O God! how pale she is; how cold! Doctor, has she only fainted or is she—"

"Dead," came from his lips in deep and thrilling tones, while his gaze sought the landlady's face and rested there with an intentness he might not have displayed had he noticed the old manmumbling and chattering to himself in a corner.

"And what has killed her? What has destroyed my poor girl, the very night you hoped to marry her?"

"Shall I tell you?" The doctor had waved the man aside who had assisted him in his fearful task, and now stood with folded arms side by side with the landlady, looking down upon the still, set face which, with the blue robe that enshrouded the form, were already so well known to the watching detective. "She preferred this bridal to the one I had planned for her. Now you know all." And with just one more deep and searching look at the landlady's startled face, he walked up to his assistant.

"That is all," said he, "I will do the rest. The coroner will probably be here soon and—who are you?"

This was aid to a small, slight man who at this moment appeared in the doorway.

"I am a detective, sir," was the reply, and he was doubtless going to say more, but he caught an unexpected sight of Mr Gryce, and paused in some confusion. He had recognized a superior.

As for Mr. Gryce himself he had scarcely noticed the young man; he was too intent upon the doctor who, at the utterance of the word detective, had wheeled suddenly about with the evident intention of hiding his surprise. But a mirror hung oposite him, and in this the watchful eye of Mr. Gryce detected such an expression of uncontrollable shock and anxiety that he inwardly congratulated himself over the curiosity which had drawn him to this house.

The confusion, if there was such, in the physician's mind, was but momentary. In an instant he turned and confronting the intruder, asked with some severity:

"And what work is there for a detective here? The young lady has taken poison and is dead. I have notified the coroner——"

"Pardon me," interrupted the other, with every appearance of humility and respect. "I have come from the coroner. I am only a messenger and my errand is to say that as he can not come until morning it might relieve you to have me to stop here and see that there is no interference with the remains. It is a common duty and it is not the first time I have performed it."

A Word of Protest.

"But it is nobody's duty to watch over this poor girl's body but myself," broke in the landlady, with hearty indignation. "Do you forget that it is a woman and a lady you are talking about, and do you think I will stand by and see any man, much less a stranger, take the place which only one of her own sex should occupy? She is no relative of mine, but I loved her and—doctor, you have some regard for her memory, I am sure; send that man away; he has already been here too long."

And with a care that was almost motherly in its tenderness, she drew the end of the cloak once again over the poor dead face, dropping a tear as she did so, which was not unseen by Mr. Gryce if it was unappreciated by the stern and bitter-souled physician.

"But, madam"—that stranger began.

"Stop!" cried Dr. Molesworth, "I will explain to her." And in a few words he told her how in cases of violent death, it was thought advisable for the Coroner to see the victim as soon after decease as possible, and when, as in this case, circumstances demanded delay, no one, not even a mother could rightfully interfere with whatever surveillance the Coroner thought it his duty to impose. So you will let this man stay here, and I will stay, too; for it is as much my wish as yours that every respect should be shown the one whom living I honored sufficiently to wish to make my wife."

The landlady shook her head with an aggressive air, but made no further protest. Dr. Molesworth pointed to a chair and the representative of the Coroner sat down; then while the former glanced at Mr. Gryce, who had just caught his attention, a slight noise was heard in the hall and a second stranger entered.

"What does this mean?" angrily cried the doctor. "Is it possible that the front door has been left open?" And brusquely pushing by the newcomer, he shut the offending door and then coming back, asked his business of the last arrival.

The fellow, who was slimmer than the other and much more dapper, pulled a small book and pencil from his pocket. It was enough. Dr. Molesworth recognized a reporter, and gave his irritation full play.

"You are intruding," cried he. "This is a private house and no one asked you to enter. As for the calamity which has occurred, learn of it how and where you will; I shall tell you nothing."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

EVANS ADVISES BOYS TO CADDY ON GOLF LINKS

By Chick Evans.

MY business takes me to many offices throughout the city, and these little visits bring many interesting experiences. Not long ago, as I was entering a certain office, the boy near the door looked squarely at me for a moment, then brightened up and said: "Hello, Chick, don't you remember me? I caddied for you at Wheaton and you called me Walter." It was a very pleasant memory that the boy evoked and in a moment he was recalling some particular lucky shot that I had played and long ago forgotten. It was a great pleasure to me to be remembered by this young boy and it was a double pleasure to bring to mind once more a very happy occasion.

This little incident, however, merely leads to a subject very near to my heart—the future of the little caddie, for this boy is not the only caddie that I have met in offices in my tramps about the city. What becomes of the caddy when the short, too short, period of his school days is past and he must desert the links for other employment?

Caddie's Work Healthful.

I do not think that there can be a better all-around employment for the small boy than caddying. It is wholesome, outdoor work, and has brought health to many a delicate boy. Almost every other form of labor is injurious to the small boy, and, of course, caddy bags can be cruelly heavy, but as a rule, the player with a heavy bag does not choose a small caddy. The caddy enjoys fresh air and interest in a game which are all the advantages of play. It has always seemed to me that it is more interesting to carry a bag full of clubs when a fine golf match is in progress than to occupy a good seat at a game of baseball or football. From a physical point of view it is certainly better for a boy to tramp happily over yielding turf than to sit in cramped attitude on crowded stands to watch other men exercise. The caddy is really a part of the game; he has the same exercise as his employer; he sees the play and is interested, and is frequently consulted as to choice of club. Furthermore, he has the advantage of association with the members of the golf club, and these members are usually the leading business and professional men of the community.

Most of Them "Making Good."

There is a general belief that club members are dissipated, mere club rounders, in fact. My experience flatly contradicts this. The influence of the golf links is wholesome, physically and morally, and the boy fully enjoys its advantages. When the time comes for the caddy to go to work he usually obtains his first job through the good offices of a club member. I should not like to think that the majority of caddies become professionals, good as that work is, and I believe that only a small percentage do so. It is easy to trace from caddy to office boy, but in higher positions the caddy identity is sometimes hidden. I believe, however, that caddies are to be found in every walk of life, and I am sure that they are "making good."

White Sees Whitney Work Out

Frank Dons Mitts With Packey

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 7.—Has Charley White, pound for pound the best boxer in the game today, put one over on Frank Whitney, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa? This is the question fans who were at O'Connell's gymnasium yesterday are asking around sporting circles to-day. Whitney and White meet in Atlanta next Wednesday.

Several hundred fans saw Whitney and McFarland box three rounds at breakneck speed yesterday. They were also aware of the fact that Charley was an interested spectator. Probably every one in the gymnasium, with the exception of Whitney, knew this. Maybe, if Frank had known White was present he would have ceased in his grind. But, nevertheless, he didn't and the battle Whitney and McFarland put up was worth any one's time.

* * *

THE two boys had a merry battle. They mixed it at close quarters and boxed at long range. Packey wanted the work-out, as he is training for a busy fall campaign. Whitney is a rough and tough scrapper, just the kind McFarland likes to work with. The rounds were full of action and the crowd was on its feet during several stages of the combat.

Two glaring eyes kept watching every move made by the boy from Cedar Rapids. These same eyes also noticed that McFarland, who knows White's style of boxing better than any other ringman in the world, was mixing it with Whitney. He also was aware of the fact that Whitney's defense was kept high and that Packey was having the time of his life trying to get home his left hook.

* * *

NOW, every one knows that Charley's best blow is his left hook, followed by a right cross. Whether White beats Whitney or not the writer does not care to predict. But one thing is certain, and that is that Charley will have the time of his life hitting Whitney with this punch.

Whitney knows White's style, and he has solved a defense for the Chicago boy's favorite wallop. Charley saw Whitney box yesterday. Frank didn't know it. He showed everything he had in his scrap with Packey, and White was present to pick up a few pointers. When Whitney jumped out of the ring it was the first time he knew that his coming opponent was an interested spectator. But Frank is not one of those who worries over things of this kind. He simply smiled and stated that he would stroll over to Lewis' gymnasium to-morrow and watch Charley in action.

* * *

WHEN White left the gymnasium many of those who were present thought he was bound for home. White evidently wanted them to think so, but he had another errand on. Charley does his boxing at Lewis' gymnasium and that was where he was bound for. The writer knows Charley like a book and thought it best to take a trip to the "gym" and see just what the Chicago boy was going to put over.

Just as we surmised, Charley picked up "Special Delivery" Hirsch, a tough lightweight, on his way to work out, and it wasn't many more minutes before he was hard at work. And it was not long before Hirsch threw up the gloves in disgust. But the blow that made Hirsch quit was not a left hook to the jaw. It was a left to the stomach. It did not take Charley long to find out that he would have to perfect some other punch if he hoped to defeat Whitney. He wanted to try out a new punch, and it is dollars to doughnuts that it will be the left to the stomach instead of a left hook to the jaw that Mr. White uses against Whitney in Atlanta on August 13.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

SPORT BY PROXY.

A rhymster sat at his type machine
And wrote him a gladsome lay
Of fish that gleam in the woodland stream
And leap in the silver spray.
He sang of musky and bass and trout
And his little canoe of birch,
But the only fish he had ever pulled out
Was a little anemic perch.

He sang a song of the virgin wood,
Of the forest old and sere
Where the hunters creep in the runways deep
And wait for the nimble deer.
He sang of the moose that he longed to pot
As it called in its far-flung tones,
But the only thing he ever shot
Was a pair of the rolling bones.

He sang a song of the bounding main
Where the gulls and the mermaids play,
Of the whistling gale and the bulging sail
And the tang of the drifting spray.
He sang of the joy as he lightly tripped
O'er the sea on his bounding bark,
But the only boat he had ever skipped
Was a rowboat in Piedmont Park.

The rush for shelter in the American League is due to the rumor that Jimmy Callahan intends to perpetrate another trade. But as for Mrs. Havenor, she should be annoyed, as it were.

Frank Chance avers that he will stick with the Yanks until they bust into the first division. Mr. Chance evidently expects to live a long time.

Cleveland comes to the front with a yacht called the Psammiad II. One of the beauties of the said Psammiad II is that a yachtsman can always prove his sobriety by pronouncing it.

SPEED.

Old Joe Dunn smote it to the fence,
It was an awful bingle,
And by a burst of fearful speed
He almost made a single.

The president of the Federal League has retired on account of overwork, but there is no truth in the rumor that he was overworked in the act of counting gate receipts.

While there are skeptical persons who do not believe that Mr. Dunn is fast, it is a well-known fact that he can cling faster to a base than any athlete in baseball.

We are indebted to the Federal League for the custom of granting magnates an occasional leave of absence. If the practice only spreads to the National League all will be well.

Old King Cole looms up like a world beater in the American Association. So, also, did Laverne Chappell.

TWENTY-FIVE MILE RACE AT SAUCER FRIDAY

A TWENTY-FIVE-MILE race is to be the feature event of a swell-looking program that Jack Prince has scheduled at his saucer Friday night. All ten of the famous riders now here will start, and the way their machines are traveling these days it is almost a cinch that a new record will be established for the distance.

This race is for the championship of the South. Richards wants that title, so does McNeil and all the others. And an Atlanta boy, Harry Glenn, has a fine chance of copping this event, too. Harry showed marked improvement last Tuesday night, and he ought to be even better Friday.

By the way, Glenn is to be seen in another match race. He hasn't been defeated yet in a two-handed, or rather a two-machine event. But in George Lockner he is going up against a real racer this time. It will be a two-mile affair, two best heats in three.

The Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles.

Following is the complete program for Friday night:

First Event.

Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.

Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.

Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

Fourth Event.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.
(Two-mile heats; two best in three.)

Fifth Event.

Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

Sixth Event.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Invitation Race—Distance, 5 miles. Open to all comers.

Eighth Event.

Special Match Race—Third heat, if necessary.

Ninth Event.

Twenty-five-mile race for championship of the South—Graves, Swartz, Shields, Lockner, Richards, Luther, Renel, McNeil, Lewis, Glenn.

GRIFFIN AND STRACHM QUALIFY FOR NET TITLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Clarence Griffin and John Strachm, of San Francisco, will meet Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bunday for the national tennis championship in doubles at Newport, R. I., on August 18. They won this right by defeating in straight sets Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern tennis champions. The scores in the games yesterday at Onwentsia were 6-1, 8-6 and 6-4. The Easterners were outplayed and outgeneraled in every game.

FITTERY IN NO-HIT GAME.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 7.—Jake Fittery, pitcher for the Evansville club, of the Central League, yesterday shut out Terre Haute, not allowing a hit during the nine innings. Only four local players reached first, and two went to second, where they were left.

Baby Cross a Real Boxing Fan

Roots for Pa to Capture Title

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Baby Cross is a boxing fan.

She is not familiar with left hooks and right uppercuts, but she does know her daddy is going to be the next lightweight champion of the world. And all one needs to be convinced is a two-minute talk with her.

Cross has won many friends through his earnest work in the ring, but he has no more enthusiastic admirer than his little daughter. "When daddy is champion" she will reach the mecca of all her dreams, and plans for that day fill many of her waking hours.

Of course, she never has seen daddy in a real battle, but often during training work she and her mother are at the ringside watching him in his practice bouts. She is fond of the rope skipping and weight pulling, and always is interested in the boxing which forms part of the daily program, but most of all she loves the frolic with daddy after his strenuous work is done, and the kiss which is sure to follow the fun.

Baby Has Warm Friends.

Many who have seen Cross work will be glad to see him lightweight champion if he attains that honor, but happiest and proudest of all will be his baby daughter.

Baby Cross was at her father's training camp while he prepared for his bouts with "Bud" Anderson and Matty Baldwin. The New Yorker won both contests, and he says that in future his little daughter will have to accompany him on his tours of the country. In this way he believes that he will never be defeated.

Cross is not the first boxer who has visited the coast that has had a baby daughter for a mascot. Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, has two baby mascots and they are always at his training camp when he is preparing for a match. It is a pretty picture to see the Cleveland boy playing on the white sand at Venice with his two children while his young wife sits near by.

Cross has hopes of securing a bout with Champion Willie Ritchie. Leach claims that he would be able to defeat the Frisco boy over the 20-round route. He declares that he would surely knock out the champion if he could land his famous right-hand punch which has flattened many a famous ringman.

May Battle Joe Rivers.

If Cross does not get a date with Ritchie, he will probably be signed to clash with Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight.

Rivers is a favorite on the coast, even though he was beaten by Ritchie, and he would be a big drawing card if pitted against a boxer of Cross' ability.

In the meantime, Baby Cross is rooting for her dad to become champion. And maybe she wouldn't be glad if Leach would permit her to see a regular ring bout. But the hard-hitting lightweight says that the baby's charm might be broken if she occupied a ringside seat.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Charley White, the Chicago sensation, who meets Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13, is doing his training at Nate Lewis's gymnasium in Chicago. Charley plans to arrive in Atlanta Saturday morning, one day later than Whitney.

* * *

This will give the fans several days to look over the rival lightweights. Both boys will complete their training grind here. Whitney will work at the Atlanta Athletic Club, while White is expected to train at Ponce DeLeon ball park.

* * *

Despite the fact that Gunboat Smith has won every fight in which he has participated in the past year, experts predict defeat for him when he tackles Jim Flynn on next Friday night at Madison Square Garden, New York. Most of the experts claim that Flynn's experience will bring him home a winner over the Easterner.

* * *

Both Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers were sidetracked by Willie Ritchie. The champion has decided to defend his title against Freddie Welsh in a 20-round engagement at Vancouver on September 1.

* * *

Wolgast, however, appears to be the big loser. The Mexican has signed articles to meet Leach Cross in Tom McCarey's arena at Los Angeles, and it would not surprise many to see this bout draw as much money as the Ritchie-Welsh set-to. On the other hand, Wolgast must now look for a suitable opponent to meet.

Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, and "Knockout" Brown, of Chicago, may wage battle soon. Nate Lewis, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that he has signed his protege to box Dillon at Indianapolis. The bout will take place some time next month at Terre Haute, Ind. They have agreed to weigh 158 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Mike Glover, the Boston lightweight, is earnestly striving to get a match with Jack Britton. The former showed much class in his recent mills in the "Bean Town" city.

* * *

Packey McFarland wants it to be known that there is no chance to drag him into the welterweight class. He says he is able to do 135 pounds and will continue to box at that weight.

* * *

Jack White has been made an even money bet against Johnny Dundee for the 20-round clash at Los Angeles on August 12. Since Joe Levy has taken hold of Jack he has shown a 50 per cent improvement.

ED WALSH TO HAVE ARM EXAMINED AT YOUNGSTOWN

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Ed. Walsh, star pitcher of of Chicago American League club, left yesterday to visit a specialist at Youngstown, Ohio, where he will undergo an examination to ascertain whether his career as twirler is at an end. His last apearance with the White Sox was in Chicago July 19, when he was obliged to retire after pitching two innings against the Philadelphia Athletics. He declared that if he finds himself unable to pitch again, he will make an effort to become an outfielder.

SCHWARTZ RELEASES TWO.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 7.—Manager Schwartz, of the Nashville club, announced last night that infielder Bob Baumgardner had been sold to the New Haven club, of the Connecticut League, while Infielder Dave Bunting has been given his unconditional release.

TILLIS SELLS MONTGOMERY BALL CLUB

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 7.—It was announced here last night that Richard Tillis, owner of the Montgomery Baseball club's franchise, has sold out to an organization of business men, headed by M. P. Wilcox.

The price was reported as $12,800. The transfer of ownership took place at once.

This is taken to mean that Montgomery will remain indefinitely in the Southern League. The new owners are popular here, and it also is expected that there will be a considerable revival of interest among local fans.

Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy That Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.

Acne attacks the glandular structure of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

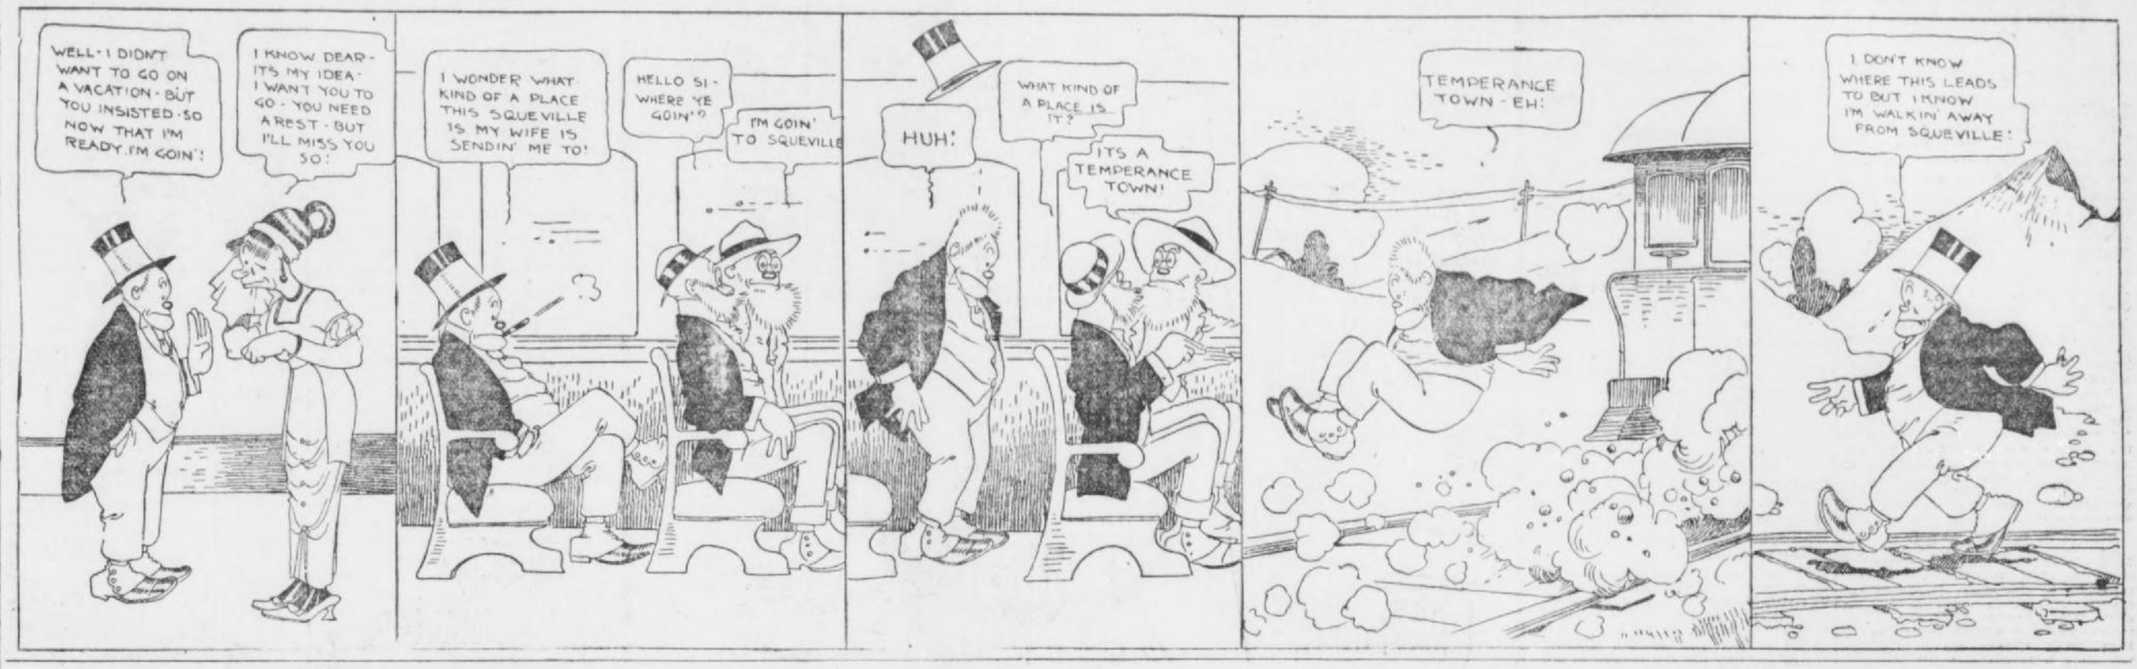

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. the purpose of which it is to stimulate the cells in the tissues that thus select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a natural tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammatory process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with. It requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 181 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Speaking of That Diaphanous Stuff

Even Break With the Lookouts

Giants and Sox May Play Here

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE more vindication of the theory that the conventional manner of prorating a doubleheader is for each side to take one.

It was largely a matter of pitchers. In the first game Joe Conzelman wasn't quite so good as Floyd Kroh, and in the aftermath, Gilbert Price plus Elliott Dent, had a thin edge on Howell and Coveleskie.

The fact that the tall Pole was summoned again from the lumber yard testifies to the gentle affection for the Crackers that abounds in the shadow of Lookout Mountain.

The Tabasco Kid was doing his durndest to beat us all two of the games.

And quite properly.

Let's trim 'em fighting, or get trimmed the same way.

That's what makes baseball worth while.

* * *

WE are going to have some distinguished company in a few days.

Ted Sullivan, one-time Southern Leaguer and now managing director of the Giants-White Sox world tour, is in New Orleans to-day arranging a lease on the Pelicans' ball park for an exhibition game late in October.

Mr. Sullivan expects to visit Birmingham and Mobile on a similar mission. And then he is coming to Atlanta.

Would Atlanta fans care to watch the White Sox and the Giants play ball?

We pause for no answer.

* * *

MAJOR CALLAWAY, home again from Chattanooga, says he hasn't heard anything about the proposed visitation, but doesn't see anything in the way of pulling it off. The president of the Crackers fancies there should be no trouble in arranging to let the big leaguers have Ponce DeLeon Park as a battle ground.

And he is of the opinion that it would be some considerable drawing card.

* * *

IT is rumored that Jud Daley, left fielder for the Vols, may wear an Atlanta uniform soon. The understanding hereabout is indefinite, and Bill Smith probably will make the decision while in Nashville on the series beginning to-day.

Daley is a good ball player and is very popular in Atlanta, but it appears unlikely that the Atlanta club will take him on if anything substantial has to be paid for him.

If it comes about that Judson is available for his stipend alone, he may but into the present series against his old friends.

HERE'S one we lamp from up Syracuse-way, in the New York State League:

An umpire named Harrison had a tumultuous run-in with a ball player working under the entire mispomer of Good. Good had tried to steal third and was tagged when about fifteen feet off the bag.

True to his reputation, Good let out an awful yelp and the fans answered the call of the wild.

"You're out of the game!" the umpire ordered.

Good declined to see it that way.

"Get out of the lot," was the next command.

Good stayed where he was as if he had taken root.

Harrison called a big cop, standing in the crowd near the bleachers.

"Take that man off the field," he directed.

The cop shook his head. "Nope," he said firmly.

Harrison was outraged. "You won't?" he roared, "And why not?"

"He wasn't out," said the cop. And he stuck to it.

ONCE more is the eternal and Emersonian law of compensation glutted with justification.

For weeks the sport columns have echoed with the piteous roars of F. Chance, sometime Peerless Leader. It seems Mr. Chance swapped Hal Chase for Zeider and Borton, of the White Sox, with the idea that Rollie was sound in wind and limb and his sidekick able to swing on the pill like a garden gate.

We gather from the twittering that Mr. Zeider was afflicted with a bunion and had to do his running on one side, while Mr. Borton's batting resembled the performance of the oldest inhabitant of the Soldiers' Home killing flies with a newspaper.

So.

But now comes Mr. Callahan, who lately paid $18,500 in Comiskey coin and White Sox players for Larry Chappelle.

"He's got a warped knee and a kink in his hip," wails Jimmy, "and he had 'em when I got him!"

Mr. Chance should lie awake nights and grieve.

Great Tribute Paid Hal Chase by Harry Lord, of White Sox

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Harry Lord, the White Sox captain, discussing first basemen to-day, paid a great tribute to Hal Chase. Here is what the third baseman of the White Sox has to say about the former Yankee player:

"Chase will save any infielder thirty errors in a season if the pair would work together through the year. Look what Chase did for me in the one game at St. Louis. I would have had two black marks to my discredit on that day. The papers would have said Lord's errors were responsible for the White Sox losing to the Browns 6 to 3, or something like that. With Chase over there we don't have to worry. We can field the ball, shut our eyes, and make a throw, and he will get it some way or other."

PLAIN NUTTY.

He'd seen upon the sport page
The way that Ty Cobb collars,
And all the other dope that deals
With betting odds and dollars;
With gate receipts, percentages,
Expenses, kicks and hollers.

And then he put a question;
His friends were filled with gloom.
With sorrow did they cast him
Into a padded room.
He'd asked: "Is there a sport guy
Not out for the mazuma?"

NO CHANCE FOR LAJOIE TO LEAVE NAPS, SAYS BARNARD

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 7.—An absolute denial of the rumor that Chicago, Boston and Cleveland teams are arranging a three-cornered deal which will take Second Baseman Lajoie awy from Cleveland was made to-day by E. S. Barnard, vice president of the Naps, Manager Birmingham, of the Cleveland team, wired from Philadelphia saying he had no trade under way for Lajoie.

ALLIS STARTED PLAYING GOLF WHEN 5 YRS. OLD

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Ned Allis, who was runner-up in the Western Golf Association at Chicago and is the sensation in the Western golf world, began to play golf when he was only five years old, taking part in a tournament that year, with his father as tutor. It was not until four or five years ago, however, that Ned began to come to the front with the older men.

His first public performance of consequence was in an invitation tournament held by the Milwaukee Country Club in which he met Harold Wyatt, of Fond du Lac. The two youngsters then only 17 years old, gave the fastest exhibition of match play of the entire tournament.

Allis is a very fine putter, as may be seen by the fact that in his match against R. A. Gardner, ex-national champion, in the semi-final at Homewood, Allis had only 27 puts for the 18 holes of the morning round.

To learn how a golfer's game may improve in a few months one has but to consult the United States Golf Association's handicap rating list for 1913. There Allis is placed among the handicap five men. Among the others in the five list are Devereux Lord, the three-time winner of The Brooklyn Eagle trophy; B. T. Allen, Fox Hills; Chisholm Beach, Fox Hills; S. D. Bowers, Brooklawn; T. V. Bermingham, Wykagyl; James R. Hyde, South Shore; Phillip Carter, Nassau, Metropolitan junior champion; Max R. Marston, Baltusrol, interscholastic champion; C. H. Seely, ex-Metropolitan champion, and others. Allis would more likely be handicapped at 2, or 3, at least.

The only time that Metropolitan District golfers have seen the quality of Allis' golf was at Lakewood, N. J., on April 17-19, last. Here Allis just fell outside the medal prize in the qualifying round by a single stroke, tying with Walter J. Travis, of Garden City, at 78, while H. K. Kerr, South Shore, got the best card with a 77.

Allis lasted till the semi-final, when he was defeated by Horace C. Cook, of Trenton, the youthful player from Trenton, N. J., who, in the afternoon final with Travis, held the former international champion at evens till a penalty stroke at the seventeenth hole threw him off his game on the home hole, the match going to Travis by two up. On his way to the semi-final Allis had beaten J. F. Shanley, the best of the Deal players.

Since Allis first swung a club at the age of five, he has been carefully coached by his father, Louis Allis, who firmly believes that his boy will some day be the premier amateur golfer of the world.

PRESIDENT WILSON WANTS 'SQUARE DEAL' FROM 'UMPS'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Wilson wants a "square deal" from baseball umpires, should they have occasion to pass upon his political decisions. He told George Hildebrand and "Billy" Evans so in an interview at the White House. Hildebrand and Evans are arbiters of the American League. They promised to grant the President's request.

RITCHIE IS LOSING PRESTIGE BY POLICY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Willie Ritchie has lost much of his following here and there are no few fans who are of the belief now that Billy Nolan spoke the truth when he declared that Ritchie would not tackle tough game unless forced into it.

The champion's unwillingness to take on Tommy Murphy and his acceptance of Freddie Welsh instead, and in a strange land, has caused this belief to win favor.

CARPENTER KNOCKS OUT WILLIAMS IN FOURTH

VICHY, FRANCE, Aug. 7.—Georges Carpentier, the light heavyweight champion of France to-day knocked out Williams, an English heavyweight, in the fourth round.

Carpentier is considering a bout with Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight champion of the world, who recently left the United States after he had been convicted of white slavery.

Carpentier said to-day that he would probably meet Johnson if the inducements were sufficiently large.

CHURCH HEALERS BEGIN FIGHT ON MEDICAL BILL

Christian Scientists Take Campaign Into the House After Defeat in Senate.

Christian Scientists have begun a campaign against those provisions of the Medical Practice bill regulating their methods for healing in Georgia. The Senate has passed the bill and it is expected to come before the House soon. An amendment to the bill framed by Christian Scientists failed in the Senate by three votes.

The amendment is worded similar to the one President Taft added to the Medical Practice bill for the Canal Zone at the request of Christian Scientists there.

Edward H. Carman, of Atlanta, president of the Christian Science State Publication Committee, has sent to Christian Scientists all over Georgia a letter which says in part:

"Get influential members of your church to go to three or four of their good friends—influential men—get them to write or wire their Representative in the lower House of the Legislature asking them to support the following amendment which will be offered to the Medical Practice bill when it comes up:

This act shall not apply to any person who ministers to or treats the sick or suffering by mental or spiritual means, whether gratuitously or for compensation, and without the use of any drug or material remedy.

Mr. Carman Thursday refused to comment on the subject, saying he preferred not to even have it known that Christian Scientists felt any anxiety over the passage of the bill.

It is understood, however, that if the bill is passed without the amendment Christian Scientists will at once declare it unconstitutional and will cite as their authority the Constitution of the United States.

Diving Suit Nearly Coffin for Inventor

SANTA MONICA, CAL., Aug. 7.—Tom Yamishi, from Japan, invented a rubber diving suit which, at its trial dive this afternoon, sprung a leak and nearly formed a coffin for the inventor.

J. L. Green, in a rowboat, picked up the Japanese as he was sinking and towed him ashore. After being rolled on a barrel, the inventor left for home.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Forsyth.

At the cool and busy Forsyth Theater this week a seven-act bill is offered that contains a splendid mixture of variety. Every act is making good its indorsement. The Eight Berlin Madcaps, eight bewitching young misses, dance themselves into their audiences' hearts and execute some clever acrobatics.

Vanloven, in his dippy magician act, is met with roars of laughter from the start until the finish of his act. His antics on the stage with two little boys, whom he selects from the audience to assist him in a trick, creates one spasm of laughter after another. Robert Everest has the best monkey act seen on a local stage.

BILL WITHDRAWS TWO PER CENT U. S. BONDS

Senator Owen Offers Plan to Increase Gold Reserve and to Unify Currency.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A bill providing for increasing the gold reserve in the redemption division of the Treasury, retiring the 2 per cent bonds and unifying the currency issues of the United States, was introduced in the Senate to-day by Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee.

The measure provides that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed, as gold certificates come into the Treasury or subtreasuries of the United States, to have them canceled and the gold represented by such certificates transferred to the redemption division. In place of these canceled gold certificates, the Secretary is to issue treasury notes of the United States, redeemable in gold at the Treasury.

The Secretary is authorized, in his discretion, when requested to do so by national banks having outstanding national bank notes secured by 2 per cent bonds, to purchase these bonds at par and accrued interest and to assume the redemption at par of the bank notes secured by these bonds, charging the amount of the notes against the proceeds of the 2 per cent bonds and paying the balance in cash to the national banks.

These 2 per cent bonds shall then be canceled, and a like amount of twenty-year 3 per cent bonds shall be placed in the redemption division and the annual interest on them credited to the funds of the redemption division.

When the national bank notes the redemption of which has been assumed shall come into the Treasury they shall be canceled and retired and in place of these notes the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue treasury notes in like amount.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Castro Is Denounced By His Namesake

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Cipriano Castro, the would-be dictator of Venezuela, is not a real Castro, or even a gentleman, according to Victor Cita Castro, who reached here on the French liner La Lorraine, and who shouted indignation from all directions when delayed for a time by federal officials in the belief that he was a possible ally of the redoubtable Cipriano.

"I know why you are keeping me here," he said. "You think I am going to participate in the revolt down there. You wound me; you pierce my heart with your words. Oh, vile! He is a peon and a peddler; not a Castro or a gentleman."

Colorado Women Are Asking More Offices

DENVER, Aug. 7.—The victory of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young and the uprising of Chicago women in her behalf have aroused Chicago women voters, who state they will demand their full share of State and city offices.

Find Girls Lost in Snow on Mt. Rainier

TACOMA, WASH., Aug. 7.—Lost in the snow on the Cowlitz trail on Mount Rainier, two school teachers, Miss Kitty Roberts, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Bernice Royce, of San Francisco, were found by rescuers too exhausted to walk.

"SOME SEASON---BELIEVE THE DOC"

Tells How It Feels to Face Death by Rabies

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Facing death from rabies is a grim ordeal. This is the feeling expressed by Elsie Parish, noted writer of children's verses, who confidently awaits the outcome of treatment begun to forestall infection to which she laid herself open by sucking the wounds of two little girls who had been bitten by a rabid dog.

"Did you ever read an improbable story and then say to yourself that it couldn't have happened?" asked Miss Parish. "That's the way I feel. Of course, there is a horror in it all, but I just say, feeling as I do now, that I just know I'm not going to die."

Appeals to Wilson To Save His Teeth

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Dr. John Grant Lyman, Federal prisoner, charged with misusing the mails, has made an appeal to President Wilson for a hasty trial.

In a night lettergram sent to Washington the physician complained that his teeth have become worn to a razor edge and he is unable to masticate his food.

BROUGHTON RIVAL OF KING IN LONDON

"In London you hear of but two people—King George and Dr. Len G. Broughton—and possibly you hear a little more of the latter than you do of the former," said W. S. Witham, Atlanta banker and church worker, in an address at the Wesley Memorial Church Wednesday night.

The subject of his address was the "Impression of Zurich," and he told of a trip through Europe in connection with the International Sunday School Convention. He declared that Broughton was following out the same line of work which he carried on in Atlanta; that he spoke fearlessly of things politic, and was the most talked of man in the English Capital.

Mr. Witham was discussing the praising of a man's virtues while he lived, and remarked that the trend of the times now is to praise the living more than the dead.

"Why, more people visit the tomb of Pasteur than they do Napoleon's. It is the man who lives for his country who is getting the praise of the world to-day, not the man who dies for it."

Catholic Women To Oppose 'The Cause'

BUFFALO, Aug. 7.—Organization of a Catholic women's league that proposes to counteract the radical tendencies of the women's movement, including their demand for the ballot, marked to-day's session of the German Roman Catholic Central Verein.

"The femininist movement," said Mrs. Joseph Frey, honorary president, "is being promoted by women whose views are decidedly Pagan. If their demands were to be realized the Christian family would cease to exist and woman's condition would lapse into paganism."

Sues as Wife Turns Tango Gown Model

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 7.—Pasquale L. Montani, a musician, says in a divorce complaint filed to-day that his wife told him she preferred to be a living model in a tango gown than live with him.

He says he is fully able to provide for her, but she became a model in a downtown department store, wearing a tango gown which he says in his complaint "is designed to display the leg from the ankle to the knee."

Bedridden 27 Years, Ossified Author Dies

WELLINGTON, MO., Aug. 7.—Thomas F. Lockhart, who spent 27 years in bed, practically in one position, is dead here. His joints were ossified so that he could move only his right shoulder and the middle joints of two fingers.

He wrote many books, among them an autobiography, which brought him enough to pay for a nurse.

Town Terrorized by Fatal Gun Battle

VALDOSTA, Aug. 7.—C. W. Cobb, the Hazlehurst real estate dealer who was seriously wounded in a fight with the Crawford brothers at Moniac, Ga., is doing well. It is believed now he will recover.

The fight, over a realty deal, occurred in the woods some distance from the town, and a report received here to-day from Moniac says that J. M. Crawford, who was shot dead by Cobb, and Cobb, apparently dead, were left out all night, the people in the town being afraid to go out and make an investigation. Another report that a Coroner's jury had rendered a verdict justifying Cobb could not be confirmed to-day.

Society Couple Divide House in Quarantine

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, leaders in the social set of Chicago and prominent in Eastern social circles, are living apart.

The separation is temporary, for it is believed Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor will have recovered from the chickenpox and be released from quarantine within a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor divided their mansion so that half the house belongs to Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor. The husband retained the other half and he meets social and business friends there.

Georgia Slayer Freed By 'Unwritten Law'

SAVANNAH, Aug. 7.—Another homicide was justified under the "unwritten law" here when a jury last night acquitted Lathrop George of the charge of murdering Henry McClellan, who was shot and killed while lying in the bedroom of Mrs. Fannie George, wife of the defendant.

George claimed self-defense in a personal statement to the court, saying McClellan was about to attack him when the fatal shot was fired, but his counsel relied almost entirely upon the theory of justification.

Accused Swindlers Face 28 Warrants

GREENSBORO, Aug. 7.—D. E. Moorefield and G. W. Bishop, arrested in Arcadia, Fla., on charges of cheating and swindling, are in the custody of Sheriff E. C. Hixon, of Greene County.

They arrived this morning, two beautiful women accompanying them. Twenty-eight warrants await them after Greene County is through.

Justice Is Dispensed From Rail Fence Top

SPOKANE, Aug. 7.—Too busy harvesting to go to his office, Justice of Peace H. H. Wilson to-day sat on the fence of his farm at Medical Lake, heard a youth plead guilty and fined him $50 and costs for taking liquor into prohibition territory.

LONG LOST NANA FOUND IN HOME OF MORGAN

Manuscript of Zola Novel Sought For Years for French Government.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A nation-wide hunt by an American correspondent of Mme. Zola for the manuscript of Emile Zola's novel of Paris gutter life "Nana" has resulted in finding the original copy of this story in the J. P. Morgan collection in this city. "Nana" is the only one of the Zola manuscripts that is not in the possession of the French Government. The others were given by Mme. Zola. Neither she nor the collectors for the Government have yet been informed where the "Nana" manuscript is.

Government Owns Others.

J. P. Morgan said yesterday that the manuscript was in his collection and that according to his records it was the only one not owned by the Government of France. Mme. Zola was looking for the manuscript and that no request for it had ever come to him from the French Government or the widow of the novelist. Mr. Morgan said that he did not know what his attitude would be if such a request should be made. It probably will be made to Mr. Morgan within a few days by Guyot Cameron, formerly professor of French in Princeton University, who has been commissioned by Mme. Zola to locate the manuscript.

An Old Friend of the Zolas.

Mr. Cameron formely lived in Paris and is an old friend of the Zola family. His search began several years ago with scant clues. The proprietor of a book-shop in Paris remembered having sold the manuscript to an American, and that was about all Mr. Cameron had to work on. He made an exhaustive investigation in this country by correspondence and personal search among dealers and private collectors in various cities; but the discovery finally came when a friend told Mr. Cameron that he had seen the "Nana" manuscript listed in the Morgan collection in a foreign paper at the time of the death of J. P. Morgan, Sr.

He will write the story of its discovery to Mme. Zola and ill probably ask Mr. Morgan for the manuscript in her behalf.

U. S. Leads Europe In Child Welfare Work

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—"American obstetrical methods and child welfare work in general were shown by the papers and discussions at the infant mortality cnference just ended in London to be superior to those of England," said Dr. Julius H. Hess, of Chicago, to-day. "Indeed, our child welfare work now surpasses that in Germany, where such work had its origin.

"The methods in the British colonies are also in advance of those in Europe."

Bullfrogs Imported; Skins Used in Purses

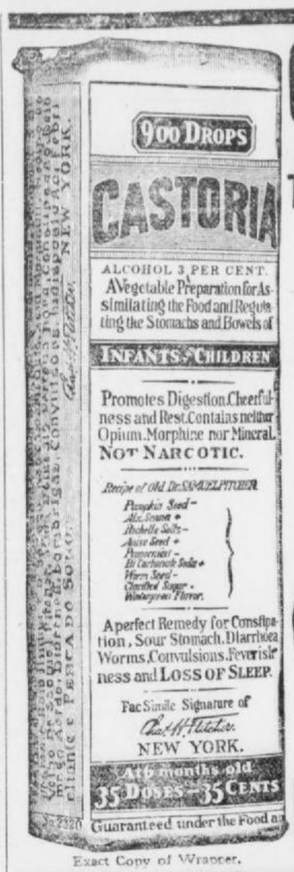

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Eighteen big mountain frogs have been brought here from the Philippines by Dr. F. M. McAllister, ship's surgeon on the Korea. He will give them to the Park Commission for propagation in Stow Lake.

The mouse-colored skin, mottled with spots of darker hue, may be used for the manufacture of women's purses and chatelaine sacks.

The frogs are edlicate in spite of their size, and five died on the voyage.

WOMAN DRIVES CAB.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Mrs. L. J. Moses has secured a hack license, took up a position at the New Haven Railroad Station here with her new surrey and a spirited horse and put in a bid for "fares."

Still In The Lead

For over fifteen years Grape-Nuts, the pioneer health cereal, has had no equal, either in flavour or nutrition.

Thousands of families use it regularly because

Grape-Nuts

Has qualities which make it the ideal food—

Delicious Flavour,
Rich Nourishment,
Quick Preparation,

and withal, easily digested.

Grape-Nuts and cream, in place of heavy, indigestible food, helps to make one cooler and more comfortable on hot days; and builds body and brain in a way that gives zest and energy.

STRONG WORDS
From a Doctor with 40 Years Experience.

"In my 40 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Calif. physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people.

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts, and Postum in place of coffee, when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition, Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in a perfect, healthy tone." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

West Peachtree Lot $100 a Front Foot

Peachtree Road Parcel Also Bought. 80-Acre Tract of City Leased. Seventeen Loan Deeds.

A number of interesting realty sales were reported Thursday, among the transfers being a Peachtree road parcel, an Ormewood property and a West Peachtree parcel, all for good prices.

W. S. Witham has sold to John C. Wayt an irregular-shaped lot on the west side of Peachtree road adjoining the Witham place on one side and the property of Harriet Wayt on the other, for $4,410.

A. L. Bartlett has bought from the West End Bank a West Peachtree lot 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000, or $100 a front foot. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Hugh T. Burton has bought from R. D. Hicks, of Ohio, the northeast corner of Oglethorpe avenue and Lawton street, 64 by 140 feet, for $3,250.

Bruno Bukofzer has bought from A. D. Thomson and Carlos Lynes the southwest corner of Ormewood and South Moreland avenues, 70 by 129 1-2, for $3,500.

City Acreage at Work.

Eighty acres which the City of Atlanta bought some time ago on the Collier road will soon be made to yield an income. The tract has been leased to the Autodrome Association for $750 a year as a site for the automobile racing track which will soon be built by John S. Cohen, John Aldredge and others. The situation is about one-quarter of a mile west of Peachtree road, in the Brookwood section.

This property was bought by the city as a site for a sewage disposal plant, but has never been used.

The presence of a motordrome in this section, by the way, is expected to draw great crowds of people toward Brookwood, and to make the street car business profitable. Real estate men have not decided what the effect on property will be, but they expect some development on the road leading to the track.

Paving for Penn Street.

Bituminous macadam and not chert is to be the material used to pave Penn street, according to announcement of Street Engineer Hurt. The original intention was to use chert or rock, but this plan has been changed. The engineering department has decided that it will be cheaper to put down binder roads such as were built in West End Park.

Loan Funds Hold Up.

Loan funds for local real estate continue to hold up steady. Last week the loans printed in The Fulton County Report were not numerous enough to attract attention, but this week there have been an unusually large number. Early in the week there were 32 deeds in small amounts, one insurance company making six, and Wednesday there were 17. The latter varied in amounts from $150 to $4,000. Real estate men take this condition as a good sign. When there is a wide range of loans, the indication is that money is easy and there is plenty of confidence.

Referring to the 32 loans of Monday, a well-known realty man declared he had never seen a greater number recorded in a day, and he has been in the business here about fifteen years.

New Ansley Park Home.

Building Inspector Ed H. Hays has issued a permit to W. W. Brown to build a two-story brick-veneer dwelling at 96 Prado, Ansley Park. The house will cost $7,200. John Starr has the contract to build it.

To Renew Mansion Fight.

Although the matter of disposing of the present Governor's Mansion at Peachtree and Cain streets has been set aside by the State Senate, there is every probability that the question will be reopened at the next session of the Legislature, and will be presented until something is done.

Citizens comment daily on the inadequacy of the present mansion and say a better place must be provided, and these expressions have had as much effect in keeping the matter open as the desire of people to effect a trade with the State.

The Senate voted 21 to 19 against the creation of a commission composed of the Governor, the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate and others to sell or exchange the site. This action was taken in spite of the declaration of Senator Miller that the mansion must be sold sometime, and it might as well be sold now.

Probably a dozen attractive and interesting propositions were brewing among the real estate men, and these will be shelved until the question is taken up again.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease Business Waking Up.

The approach of autumn always causes extensive preparations for renting and leasing. Some of the most important leases in the city expire September 1 and October 1 and renewals will be in order, or new locations will be taken. Other concerns' leases are up at the end of the year.

The renting business also takes on a roseate hue in the fall. People away at summer resorts are returning by hundreds and changes of residence are in order for a large part of them. Local agencies are accordingly preparing for the rush. Some agencies are extending. Porter & Swift and Hurt & Cone, for instance, have recently installed renting departments.

ZACHRY HEARING IS POSTPONED BY SLATON

Augusta Attorney Denies Blease's Right to Ask Extradition for Alleged Kidnaping.

Declaring that Governor Blease, of South Carolina, was acting under no legal right whatever in demanding his extradition from Georgia, P. B. Zachry, of Harlem, charged with kidnaping his own child in Columbia, S. C., called upon Governor Slaton Thursday morning to arrange for the hearing which will be held Monday morning. Governor Slaton changed the time of the hearing from Friday until Monday upon the request of Mr. Zachry.

Mr. Zachry declared he would fight the requisition to the last ditch. He will be represented at the hearing by Hamilton Phinizy and C. Henry Cohen, of Augusta, and John T. West, of Thomson. The requisition papers of Governor Blease probably will be the only testimony offered by the plaintiffs.

Mr. Zachry told a graphic story of the case Thursday morning. He had been awarded the two children four times, he declared, when Mrs. Zachry left with them on the very day that the Superior Court judge in Augusta upheld the decision of the ordinary favorable to Zachry.

Sued in South Carolina.

It was then, he declared further, that he took his automobile and hastened to South Carolina, where he entered suit again for the children in the Columbia court.

"I did not want to make out requisition papers for Mrs. Zachry," declared Mr. Zachry, "because I do not believe in fighting a woman in that way. That is the reason I instituted court proceedings in South Carolina.

"When I entered the courtroom there was my little daughter Frances, the older of the two, and the first thing she said was 'Hello, papa, are you going to take me?' She always was fond of me and she was the one I wanted. However, according to a previous agreement with Mrs. Zachry, I allowed even this one to visit her mother once a month."

Friends Rally to Aid Him.

Following the decision of Judge Gary awarding the children to him as claimed, Mr. Zachry declared he took the older, just three years of age, in his automobile and started for Georgia. Several times on the way, he says, he was warned that he was being followed, and at a bride near the Georgia line he was fully prepared for interference by the South Carolina authorities acting under orders of Governor Blease.

"They would not have stopped me, though," declared Mr. Zachry, "for I was bound for Georgia with my little girl, and I meant to get there at all odds."

Mr. Zachry is a prominent attorney in Augusta and resides in Harlem, a suburb. Less than a week ago, when Governor Blease demanded the extradition of Zachry, a host of friends of the latter held a mass meeting in Augusta and sent a telegram to Governor Blease requesting a hearing before any decision was made.

Dog Catcher, Tags Too, Are All Ready

The city dog catcher starts on his annual round Monday and all dogs caught without a tag will be placed in the pound.

City Clerk Walter Taylor has a supply of tags on hand and those who desire may secure same by calling at his office and paying the tax. No dog is exempt.

30 Kansas Towns Suffering for Water

TOPEKA, Aug. 7.—The month of July, 1913, was the second driest month since the local weather bureau was established 30 years ago.

Kansas streams that have never been known to go dry are dry now. More than 30 Kansas towns have been compelled to shut off all water for lawns.

Charter Election Is Plan of Legislature

The proposed new charter for Atlanta, including the provisions for the initiative, referendum and recall of heads of departments, and the limitation of the recorder's power, will be submitted to the people, according to an agreement reached by the House and Senate committee Thursday.

According to this agreement the charter as a whole will be submitted to the people first and the question of the referendum and recall, as well as the limitation of the recorder's power, will be submitted separately.

SHOW MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS.

COLUMBUS, GA., Aug. 7.—A suggestion made some time ago, which looks as if it will be turned into a reality, is that an exhibit of the manufactured products of Columbus be gathered at some central point in the city, and kept on exhibition the year around, in order that visitors to Columbus might have an opportunity to see something of the wide variety of articles made here.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise caution as to short sales around the 11c level.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Spinners have not become anxious as yet.

Miller & Co.: Everything depends upon climatic conditions in the Southwest.

Logan & Bryan: We believe that it may be well not to press the selling side too closely, for as indicated in our advices of to-day shorts displayed some nervousness and were disposed to reduce lines pending further developments in the western belt.

COTTON EASIER ON PROMISE OF RAINS

Both Elements Hesitate Pending Texas Weather Outlook—Sentiment Continues Bearish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Continued dry weather over Texas and Oklahoma led to further buying at the opening of the cotton market to-day and first prices were 1 to 5 points higher than the closing quotations of Wednesday. August made the best gain. There was a great deal of warehouse buying. After the call further bullish advices relative to the weather were received and prices advanced still further.

There was no rain shown on the map which was an incentive for buying, but there is disturbance in the Gulf, which local weather experts claim may bring rain in the next two days over the western belt. This is causing hesitancy on the part of bulls to buy aggressively. Every one seemed to await the noon detailed weather report to see how high the temperatures may run and whether or not the local experts are correct in their predictions. The volume of trading was small and the range was very narrow throughout the early session.

The detailed weather record showed temperatures ranging from 100 to 107 degrees and no rain. The temperatures were not so high in the eastern belt and very little rain was shown. These high temperatures are causing uneasiness among the bear forces and some short covering was in evidence about noon. On the other hand, the bull element hesitated when the ring, Wall street and uptown crowd so'd the market off a few points. Should rain materialize in the Western belt between now and Sunday undoubtedly it will promote sufficient selling to send the market back into last week's low level.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 5 to 7 points from the final quotations of Wednesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due on futures, but shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 6 points higher quotations. The map shows a generally fair belt. Temperatures entirely normal, except somewhat above in Arkansas and Tennessee. The disturbance in the Gulf remained stationary, holding forth additional promise for a change in the weather in the west.

The market opened at unchanged figures, but soon rallied a few points on the buying in anticipation of a better demand possibly from Europe on the conclusion of peace. The advance was checked by prospects of more favorable weather in the west.

August in New York showed additional strength on a report that 10,000 bales export room had been engaged and that the stock would be reduced to the low figure of 18,000 bales.

The market eased after the close of Liverpool to 12.15 for October, with trading small and waiting for news of weather developments in the west.

COTTON GOSSIP

Bulls are afraid.

• • •

The market after the call was sold on forecast of increasing cloudiness in Arkansas and predictions of local weather experts of rain in the next three days for the western belt. The ring crowd were apparently the leading sellers. Montgomery, Dick Bros., Mitchell and Wilson led the buying and bid the market up. Very little cotton was offered at the outset. Weld was reported a good buyer; also the South and West were booked as buyers.

• • •

On the call, Gifford and Schill bought August. Hentz and Rothschild sold. Starr, Rothschild and Lehman bought October. Shantz, Norden and Mitchell sold. Flinn, Starr and Gifford bought December. Shantz, Norden, Burnett and Hentz sold. Starr and Shearson bought January. Rothschild and Bashford sold.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says:

"According to the bears, yesterday's advance was a revival of last week's price boom, which week-end rains had interfered with. According to the bulls, the talent has begun to realize the danger of selling short, because of the continued need of rain in the west and also because of the approach of a showdown on the Clarke and Smith bills affecting cotton contract trading.

"Meanwhile, the market is very narrow, and a light excess of buying or selling orders serves to move values a little way. Damage reports are beginning to come in from the west in sufficient number to cause some concern, and the Gulf storm, which big-yield men now depend on to bring rains to Texas, is only in process of formation and may not form at all. Dry weather advices are causing some shorts to cover.

"Yesterday exporters and forward sellers received some inquiries from Europe for supplies, but very little business was reported done."

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 7.—Texas at the present time and Oklahoma are dry and hot. This put the market up early, but experts were able to find Gulf storm or other disturbance somewhere, and on their assurance of rain some time in the near future prices declined a few points. It is a dull, pointless market that waits on the weather. Without rain and with the present high temperatures continued considerable deterioration will take place in the Southwest, but if rains come, the situation will be entirely different. Eastern belt reports are brilliant.

STOCKS DULL BUT ARE VERY STRONG

Report of Peace Abroad Causes Steady Buying of Big Issues by Strong Concerns.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Texas Company was the most prominent feature at the opening of the stock market to-day, advancing 2 points to 115. However, nearly all issues were higher following the lead of the foreign markets, which were up on reports of re-established peace in the Balkans.

Among the gains in the New York market were: Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; Steel common, ¼; Western Maryland, ¼; Utah Copper, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; Southern Railway, ¼; Reading, ¼; Pennsylvania, ⅜; New York, New Haven and Hartford, ¼; Missouri Pacific, ⅛; Katy, ⅜; Car Foundry, ⅛; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Erie, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜.

Canadian Pacific shaded ½, while American Sugar Refining lost the same amount.

At the end of half an hour Union Pacific was up 1 point.

The transfer books for subscription of Union Pacific close to-day, but the Stock Exchange ruled that sales of the issue during the morning would not be ex-rights, but that a due bill would be given for rights because the company did not announce the price, at which Southern Pacific certificates of interest would be offered.

The curb was strong.

Americans in London were steady in a narrow range.

Trading in the late forenoon was dull and price movements in the leading railroads and industrials were confined within a narrow margin. Union Pacific sold off ½ to 151 and similar recessions were recorded in Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Steel common, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Canadian Pacific and American Sme'ting. American Writing preferred was under severe pressure, declining 2 points.

Toward the end of the second hour business became more brisk and fractional recoveries were made in many of the leading issues.

Call money is loaning at 2¼ per cent.

The tone was steady in the last hour, with prices generally above the opening. Steel sold around 62¼ for a gain of about half on the day. New Haven so'd off and the late quotations were around par. Union Pacific was unusually strong, holding at 152½ for a net advance of a point. Missouri Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific and Reading advanced. The tone was strong.

The market closed firm. Governments unchanged; other bonds strong.

Corn—No. 2 ....73½
Oats—No. 2 ....41¾

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—While wheat and corn both closed at lower levels to-day, oats were better. The changes in wheat showed net losse of ¼⅜¾c, the latter being the May option, which was under considerable pressure. September corn was up ⅛, but the more deferred months were ⅝@⅞c lower. Oats had gains of ⅛@⅜c.

The reports on corn were the worst on th crop, especially those from Kansas and Missouri, but this was overbalanced by scattered rains in the belt and the feeling that corn is high enough. There were cash sales of wheat of only 45,000 bushels at Chicago and export sales were reported as dull.

The sharp break in corn during the morning was the result of profit-taking by one of the largest holders in the trade, and who is located at Fort Worth, Texas.

Provisions closed rather unsettled after a session of dullness.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Sentiment in wheat is mostly bearish as viewed by local traders on the big receipts and light export business. Shrewd operators, however, only selling on bulges, and say that caution should be used so long as the bull movement in corn continues. While a majority of corn traders are bullish, there are a number who are afraid to follow the advance much further, because prices are unprecedentedly high for this season for December and May. There is a good deal of spreading between corn and wheat, the latter being sold and corn bought on the carrying charge theory.

• • •

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—Weather in Western Europe generally favorable. Partly cloudy conditions prevail in the Northwest this morning, with light rains reported at a number of points in both North and South Dakota. The market shows a rather steadier tone and there seems to be more friendly sentiment to wheat around these prices.

"Corn—According to reports thus far received there have been some light showers in parts of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and the River Valley, with temperatures running slightly lower. We look for a nervous market to-day, and until general rains occur do not expect any lasting decline.

"Oats—There seems to be more commission house buying, but local professionals work on the short side of the market. Receipts are of fair volume, though offerings of the new crop are moderate.

"Provisions—There was fair realizing on the advance yesterday, but the buying was of a good character. Packers bought October ribs. Cash trade was fair with shipments of lard larger than those of last year."

The "Why" of the South's Greatest Sunday Paper

SIX days we labor and do all our work.
And Sunday we rest—and catch step with the world.
That is, most of us.

Most of us work six days in the week. Most of us work pretty hard. Most of us are tired when night comes.

That is a good, healthy state of affairs, and it keeps us out of mischief.

But it doesn't give us much chance to keep pace with things outside our own little march. And sometimes that is in lock-step.

And that answers the query, "Why is a Sunday paper?"

The Sunday paper tells us that there is something stirring outside of Atlanta; that there are other States than the Empire State of the South; other nations than the Union; other continents than America; other worlds than the earth.

The Sunday paper tells us about other people than the kind we know so well; other professions, other aims, other thoughts and creeds.

The Sunday paper marks the time by which we catch step with all the world.

Depending, of course, largely on the kind and scope of the Sunday paper.

Which brings us to The Sunday American in general, and the next Sunday American in particular.

Starting with Atlanta—for that's where a lot of us live—the next Sunday American will have the freshest and fullest possible news of America's great murder case—the Frank trial. There will be pictures. Special features will be covered by special writers. The news will be handled frankly and honestly—and fully.

But there are other things than the Frank trial.

Polly Peachtree and her inimitable comment and gossip of society—you don't know Polly Peachtree, do you? No—but you read her sprightly gossip and you wonder—and so do people over all the South. Polly Peachtree is an institution.

Well, and that brings on the fashions, and the frills, and all the dainty arabesques (or is that architectural?) of feminine apparel. With pictures. Don't forget the pictures.

Then the drama.

Reviews and criticisms of the new plays which, probably owing to the season, haven't been produced yet, or possibly even written; gossip of stageland and its people, the wonderful people that to most of us live and move and have their being in the golden country back of the footlights. We always like to hear of something that connects them with our own little work-a-day world. And we are treated to such anecdotes quite frequently in the Sunday paper.

Sports—pennant chases in our own league; in the Big Show; boxing and gossip of the padded square; racing, golf, tennis—all handled by experts, trained to keep ever an eye on the Main Chance; to play up a world event for what it is worth; to value truly the importance of local news. There's O. B. Keeler, Charles Dryden, W. J. McBeth, "Tick" Tichenor, J. W. Heisman, Innis Brown, Damon Runyon, W. S. Farnsworth, Ed W. Smith, W. W. Naughton and George E. Phair, who are known from coast to coast in the respective lines.

In the lighter vein the comics contribute the bit of nonsense now and then, traditionally relished by the "best of men"—who, after all, probably are just plain folks like us, who have a soft spot in our hearts (art critics say in our heads) for the quaint conceits of Powers and Fisher and the rest. When you're tired, you know, a series of pictures is mighty easy to read, and the point isn't easy to miss.

But if you're serious, you can find what other people think in the editorials; you can match your ideas against theirs—and you're the judge. Clashing opinions sharpen wits. It's fine exercise for the mind.

Or turn to a serial novel. You'll find the latest and best in The Sunday American. Just now it's "Adam's Clay," by Cosmo Hamilton. Pretty soon it will be "The Plot for a Pennant," and you baseball fans might guess the author—Hugh Fullerton. You know what that means. But they all are the freshest and the best that can be had.

And the cable service and the news of all the world.

That might be the headliner of all. No other service has the far-reaching tentacles—the "feelers" that touch this old mud-ball at every point, and gather that which is new and strange and worthy, to tell it with spirit and truth in the Sunday paper.

For next Sunday features—"Art or the Woman?" A brilliant consideration of Ida Rubenstein, the strange, fiery Russian dancer who has cast her spell on the flower of the artists, the composers and the dramatists of our time. And then the strange case of Alfred Vanderbilt, frozen out of American society, finding on his return with his new wife to Newport that his first wife is the leader in a social ostracism the most rigid in history.

Then there will be another proof that truth can be stranger than fiction in the narrative of the cruel lover who tried to frighten into his arms a belle of our Southland—and by a horror in the guise of a monster frog.

And what else? Well, King George of England has a quaint idea of destroying "American frivolity" by imposing old-fashioned and outrageous duties on the members of his court—the good King desiring to "sober it down." And Madame Cavalieri explains beauty hints—she really ought to know, you know—and a scientist tells how a child becomes a man, and a psychologist details his discovery of why lovers can't help quarreling.

By way of contrast, Sophie Lyons, queen of the burglars, tells why crime doesn't pay, and Lady Duff Gordon produces an essay on mannish tendencies in women's dress, notably waistcoats, a Parisian fancy.

It's all in The Sunday American. And with it the news of all the earth.

And that's how we catch step with the world, on Sunday.

The Pictures in the Ice

The man— to whom the cost of ice doesn't matter—sees in it merely an added fillip to a long drink. The woman—to whom the cost of ice is a heart-breaking matter—sees in it relief, perhaps life itself, for her child, sweltering in the poor cottage which they call home.

A Glimpse of the Cowed Women of Japan

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM

MARIAN COX has recently written her reminiscences of Japan, and Mitchell Kennerley has published them under the title of "The Man-Made Woman of Japan." The picturesque pen of Mrs. Cox gives us a striking chronicle, and I take from it the following:

"The easiest way to arrive at a conception of the Japanese woman is to think of every quality directly contrary to the qualities of the typical American woman, and to see her as the embodiment of these. She is as docile as the American woman is aggressive; as demure as the American is flamboyant; as modest as the American is impudent; as humble as the American is snobbish; as conservative as the American is faddish; as reticent as the American is effusive.

"There is no romance between the sexes in Japan. The relation is either crude and businesslike in marriage, or unmentionable and bestial out of marriage. No wonder there is no word in the Japanese language which can be translated as 'love' in our language. The only love that can be spoken or written of in Japan is the filial. There are no words of endearment for lovers, nor for husband and wife. Marriage is without courtship; courtship without kisses, caresses or pet names.

Loveless Women.

"No Japanese knight has ever performed a deed of valor for the love of a woman. No Japanese poet has ever written a poem of 'love' that could be read to a pure woman. These people have put all their refinement into their etiquette of life, and so have had none left for the elmental facts of life; they have put all their imagination in a hair-splitting epicureanism, and so have had none left with which they might dignify humanity's greatest passion. When the Japanese nation evolves the kiss of man and woman she may cease to be a mimicker and become a molder of civilization.

"In reading of the loveless, kissless, woman-denouncing Japanese, one might believe him austerely chaste, puritanical, the true ascetic; and to those unversed in the duality of human nature it comes with a shock of surprise to learn that, on the contrary, his ruthless immorality and licentiousness are notorious and the scandal of Japan.

"There is one feature of this so unique and so illustrative of the vicious outgrowths of man's lopsided civilizations that it has a claim upon the interest of every student of Japan or of human nature; the institution of the Yoshiwara.

"Classified with our 'white slave traffic' and the sordid evils that nightly stalk Broadway, Piccadilly and the Parisian boulevard, it yet differs from them all in certain elements which make it the most sickening and tragic exhibition the world affords of the human injustice and shame accorded women in civilizations made strictly of the men, for the men, by the men.

"At a temple in Nikko there is a famous picture of three monkeys, one with his hands covering his eyes, which means see no evil; another with hands covering ears, which means hear no evil; the other with hands covering mouth, which means speak no evil. This is evidently the Buddhistic formula for peace on earth, good will to men; but, thanks to the men who have not observed it, humanity has evolved from some of its barbarities, and most of the barbarities that exist to-day endure because women have been too long and thoroughly trained by men—to see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil.

With Official Sanction.

"No one can understand the Japanese people until he has seen the menagerielike spectacle of that portion of its womankind whom they place outside of human rights in a hideous travesty of human dignity. In the dusk of every evening, just as the temple bells are pealing forth their summons to the strange gods of Nippon, this spectacle begins: women, girls—the majority mere children in appearance—file into cages which open onto the streets, exactly like the cages in a zoo, and sit for hours behind those wooden bars like merchandise for sale, with an aureole of tortoise shell combs around their heads and bedecked in garish splendor of attire. The spectacle arouses disgust and scorn until one learns the hidden springs behind this system of woman-sale, and then there comes only pity.

"The Government has placed its sanction upon this institution; 'thus sayeth the law' is more powerful in Japan than in any other civilized country. So the idea has been perpetuated among the people that parents have a moral (because legal) right to dispose of their daughters to their own advantage, and the inmates of the Yoshiwara are sold by their parents or adopted parents when too young and ignorant to understand the nature of the transaction or the ghastly future it will bring. But even if she knew, the Japanese daughter is as powerless to resist the parental will as her brother, the soldier, would be to resist the will of his Emperor. As we know, she is taught filial devotion as her religion.

Agitation Going On.

"It is not true, as has been so frequently stated, that unchastity does not dishonor a woman in Japan. Even these slaves of the Yoshiwara, involuntary victims, are treated as below human kind. Until a few years ago they had no chance of escape from what even the Japanese call 'the bitter sea of misery.' When there were runaways, the law authorized their capture, punishment and return to their keepers. That there were many runaways we can believe when we learn that the average number of suicides among these girls throughout the land was 40 and 50 a month.

"During the past four years there has been a lively agitation in Japan for a complete change in its social and moral system. The leaders of public opinion proclaim that something is radically wrong, but do not seem to know what it is that must be changed, nor just what new laws to enact—for more laws is the masculine solution to every difficulty."

The Secret of Prayer

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

For he who climbs to make his prayer
Meets half way the descending grace.
—Elsa Barker in British Review.

THIS is the secret of all prayers
That in God's sight have worth;
They must be uttered from the stairs
That wind away from earth.
And he who mounts to speak the word,
He shall be heard, he shall be heard.

And he who will not leave himself,
But stays down with his cares
(Or with his thoughts of power and pelf),
Though loud and loud his prayers,
Beyond earth's dome of arching skies
They shall not rise, they shall not rise.

Oh ye, who seek for strength and power,
Seek first some quiet spot,
And fashion, through a silent hour,
Your stairway, thought by thought.
Then climb, and pray to God on high.
He shall reply, He shall reply.

John Temple Graves Writes on A Ringing Alarm to the Farmer

He Quotes President Charles S. Barrett, of the Farmers' Union, Regarding Foreign Ownership of Cotton Fields in the South.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

IF any man thinks that the millions of American farmers are asleep or indifferent to economic changes and passing events, that man is mistaken.

On the tariff, on the currency, on farm credits, and on the outside investments in agriculture every farmer is reading, thinking—and preparing to vote!

Even if the farmer were ignorant or apathetic upon public questions, he has wise and watchful leaders who, upon the watchtower, are sounding continually the bugles of advance or the alarms of retreat.

Among the ablest of these is Charles Barrett, president of the Farmers' Union, with two and a half million enrolled members—perhaps the most popular and influential of all American farmers.

Foreign Ownership.

I asked this great farmer recently if he wished to use the far-reaching columns of the Hearst newspapers to sound any new counsel to the American farmer. And he promptly responded:

"Yes; I never omit an opportunity to use that vast newspaper circulation to speak for my people.

"I have something now to say about the alien or foreign ownership of our lands, particularly those lands in the South adaptable to cotton. I have said that the steady reach of foreigners after that imperial staple was an alarming development! I believed years ago that this was a serious menace, and now I am sure of it.

"Now, listen, you scoffers and unbelievers. Do you know that between twelve and thirteen million acres of the finest cotton lands in the South are now owned outright by foreign individuals and corporations? Do you know that agents of these foreign individuals and corporations are constantly working to get more millions of acres of the cream of cotton lands? Do you know that foreign spinners are sending men here to be educated in our agricultural colleges and schools to take charge of these broad acres, cultivate and raise cotton to ship to spinners in England, France and other foreign countries?

Our Richest Heritage.

"Do you think deep and sense what this means? Do you know that it means the actual production of cotton in the South on farms owned and cultivated by foreigners, and whose product will go direct to their mills in England, France and other countries? In plain words, we are sitting supinely by while foreign capital and corporations are taking our oldest, richest and greatest heritage right from under our noses.

"Time may not be far distant when our own people, the men who have raised and supplied the world with its cotton for generations, will be restricted absolutely to the home market. Sounds scary, and I want it to sound so, for it is time to get scared.

"This is a vital question which I would thank the Hearst newspapers and other great conservators of American interests to help our people to solve."

Life as Seen in the Movies

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FIRST we see Harold folding Susie in his arms. In the background is the train that is to take Harold to the West, where he will make his fortune, after which he will return and make Susie the happiest girl in the world. In the background is George sneering like the plotting villain we know him to be the moment we set eyes on him. The conductor, who has been very patient, gives the signal. Harold climbs aboard at the last minute.

The Telegram.

Next we behold George and Susie speeding homeward in George's six-cylinder car. George is talking in what looks like a low, earnest voice, but Susie refuses to be interested. Suddenly he pulls from his pocket a telegram. Susie sits up suddenly. And well she may. For the film announces that the contents of the telegram are to the effect that Harold has gone to the West to marry another. What other we do not yet know.

We now behold Susie weeping at a desk in a room so full of furniture that no burglar could get halfway across it without waking up all the people in the next block. In her little hand she holds the telegram for a time, then tears it spitefully into bits that flutter out on the breeze that is blowing the Valenciennes curtains in twelve windows. George enters. He looks at the fragmentary telegram and sneers. Then he looks at Susie and smiles. Presently he engages in more low, earnest conversation, and you judge he is describing his yacht, his bank account and his country place at Mamaroneck. But Susie shrinks from these things.

"At Last!"

But evidently George knows more of Susie's disposition than we do. He points to the telegram and sneers, this time for three seconds. Susie sits bolt upright and thinks. Then she rises and paces the floor, deftly threading her way in and out among the furniture like a guide in the North Woods. At last she nods her head, but when George approaches enthusiastically she shakes it.

Here in the West, which is denoted by a lonely cabin in a stone quarry, is Harold. He is sitting by a fire examining nuggets. Evidently none of them is good for much but concrete work. But now he leans forward intently and examines one. Reaching for the only article of wardrobe in evidence, a coat, he dashes madly from the room and we next behold him entering an opening in the stone quarry through which trickles a rivulet. Bending over the rivulet, he picks up more nuggets. "At last" are the words we see plainly on his lips. They are subsequently verified by the text on the screen.

Harold re-enters the lonely cabin, and carefully hangs the coat on the same nail. A rough, unshaved person enters and hands him a letter. He opens it. His face clouds. Bad news from home, we conjecture. Right. Mighty bad news. Harold is being invited to Susie's wedding and George is going to be the bridegroom.

Throwing the newly found nugget out of the window, Harold hurriedly leaves the room.

Harold to the Rescue.

Here comes the Overland Limited. Nearer and nearer till we fear it will collide with the audience. But across the track suddenly darts a man waving a campaign hat. It is Harold. Will he be run over? No. The train stops. Harold climbs on. The train moves into nothingness just as we duck to avoid being hit by the pilot.

At the same old station Harold alights. He commandeers an automobile, and, taking the wheel, departs while the owner indignantly shakes his fist after him.

Same room, full of same furniture, but further embellished with a wedding bell and a minister. Enter Harold from one door and Susie from another. Harold steps forward just as George enters from a third. Susie, being in something of a dilemma, gets out of it neatly by fainting. George attempts to sneer, but doesn't get away with it. The .44 Harold has in his hand interferes. Evidently there are explanations. Susie's father, a gentleman with a limousine body, comes in and revives her. George, discovering that his fake telegram has been exposed, sneers for the last time and goes out a window. Harold folds Susie to his stalwart breast. The minister steps forward and the play is done.

CONLEY GUIDED IN MAKING AFFIDAVITS, SCOTT SWEARS

NEGRO REVISED TALE AS OFFICERS GRILLED HIM, SAYS DETECTIVE

Virtual admission that Jim Conley was guided and directed by the detectives in the making of his series of affidavits against Leo Frank, was made on the stand Thursday by Harry Scott, Pinkerton detective.

Scott also told Attorney Rosser taht he had grilled Conley repeatedly in regard to the mysteriously missing mesh bag of Mary Phagan after the negro had made his confessions and that Conley persistently had denied that he ever had seen the purse.

Conley, under Solicitor Dorsey's questioning, said just before he left the witness chair Wednesday that he saw the mesh bag on Frank's desk just after the two carried the body into the basement and that Frank later put it in the safe.

Scott also declared that, although he had questioned the negro closely, Conley never had amditted that he had seen Mary Phagan, Monteen Stover or Lemmie Quinn enter the factory, nor had her admitted that, after Mary Phagan entered the factory, he heard retreating footsteps and then a girl's scream.

Conley, on the stand, testified that he had seen all three enter the factory and that he had heard Mary Phagan's scream, presumably when she was attacked.

Scott said that Conley had denied all knowledge of the girl's parasol. Conley said when he testified that he saw the parasol as he was carrying the body.

Conley also denide, according to Scott, that Frank ever mentioned the plan of burning the body, although the negro testified on the stand that the young superintendent had tried to induce him to place the body in the furnace and incinerate it.

Brings Out Big Discrepancies.

Rosser proceeded along this line of questioning most of the afternoon, brining out in strong relief the glaring discrepancies between Conley's story as he told it to Scott and as he later told it on the stand. Conley said on the stand he had told all to Scott.

Scott testified that the detectives refused to believe the first affidavits of the negro and that they had poined out the improbabilities and that Conley had proceeded to harmonize them with otherf events at the time of the crime.

The attorneys for Leo Frank sprang a surprise by recalling Scott, and getting from him that it required Jim Conley six or seven minuets to write one note dictated to him from the shorter note found by Mary Phagan's body, when Conley had declared positively on the stand that he wrote four in Frank's office within a minute and a half or two minutes.

This will prove one of the strongest foundations for the contention of the defense that it was a physical impossibility for all to have taken place which the negro described between four minutes of 1 o'clock and the time that Frank left for his luncheon at home.

Frank is said to have arrived home at or before 1:30.

By Conley's own statement he was imprisoned in a closet in Frank's office eight or ten minutes. He said it required four or five minutes to dispose of the girl's body. Additional time, according to the negro, was consumed by Frank washing his hands, and in conversation about Frank's wealthy folks in Brooklyn, Conley's watch and other topics.

Time Point Made by Defense.

If it required Conley six minutes to write a short note, as Scott testified Thursday afternoon, it is the claim of the defense that it would have taken at least 15 to 25 minutes to write the four. With the disposal of the body and the other things that the negro said were done at that time the defense proposes to show that it would have required close to three-quarters of an hour. But before this time Frank was at home eating luncheon.

Scott, while on the stand, described the "third degrees" that were given Conley in getting from him his affidavits.

Solicitor Dorsey gave Dr. Childs a vigorous cross-examination and brought out that Childs was a general practitioner and not a specialist. He sought to minimize the value of the witness' testimony on this account. The Solicitor, prompted by Dr. R. T. Dorsey, his brother, soon involved Dr. Childs in a maze of technical questions which the physician was unable to answer. Dr. Childs took refuge in the retort that the queries should be answered by a laboratory man. He continued to assert, however, that Dr. Harris was venturing only a wild guess when he said that Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her dinner.

As Dr. Harris left the stand at 12 o'clock Solicitor Dorsey announced that the State rested.

Dr. L. W. Childs, a physician and surgeon, immediately was called by the defense.

Lineman Killed as He Works on Pole In McDaniel Street

John Weaver, a lineman for the Atlanta Telephone and Telegraph Telegraph Company, was electrocuted on a telephone pole in McDaniel street about 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. He had climbed the pole to straighten out crossed wires, and came in contact with a live wire. Death was instantaneous.

Weaver was about 35 years old, and had been with the company over seven years. He lived on Woodward avenue, and is survived by a wife and small child.

Mrs. Weaver was prostrated with grief over his death.

LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED.

GAINESCHLLE, FLA., Aug. 7.—J. R. Peterson, with the Southern Bell construction force, 28 years old, was electrocuted this morning at the top of a pole when he came in contact with an exposed electric light wire. He leaves a wife and two children in Jacksonville.

GEN. HUERTA TO DEPORT LIND

Mexican President Declares U. S. Representative Must Bear Recognition of New Regime.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—John Lind, now on his way to Mexico City as special representative of the United States, will not be received by President Huerta unless he presents credentials from the President of the United States, accompanied by recognition of the present government of Mexico.

Official announcement of this was made to-day by President Huerta. The statement was delivered to Charge O'Shaughnessy at the American Embassy by Manuel Garza Aldape, Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico. It was also sent to Washington and to the powers of Europe.

Lind, Huerta's announcement said, will be expelled from the country as an undesirable alien unless he goes before the Mexican government and explains his official character and intentions or else brings official recognition of the Huerta administration from the Wilson Administration in Washington.

This is the boldest and most belligerent course yet taken by Huerta, and if the Mexican President carries out his threat Mexico will have accomplished what, in the eyes of international usuage, usually constitutes a casus belli.

In accord with the new aggressive policy of the Mexican government a delegation will wait upon Mr. Lind upon his arrival in this city, probably Saturday, and the attitude of the Mexican government toward the United States will be outlined then in unmistakable terms. The United States battleship carrying Mr. Lind is expected at Vera Cruz to-morrow night.

Must Bear Credentials.

The following official statement was issued to the press to-day by Senor Aldape:

The Mexican Department of Foreign Affairs has sent a note to Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affairs of the United States, stating by order of the President that, if Mr. John Lind, who, the Mexican government is informed, is to come to Mexico intrusted with a mission from President Wilson, does not establish in due manner his official character before the Mexican chancellery, or if he is not the bearer of recognition of the Mexican government by that of the United States, his sojourn in this Republic will not be grateful not satisfactory to this government.

This was the first time that Huerta formally recognized Mr. Lind as an Ambassador from the United States President.

To some extent the action of Huerta has the approval of some of the Americans here because it establishes plainly the position of the Mexican Government. Otherwise the suspense attending the coming of Mr. Lind and the consequences which may follow would only be prolonged.

In addition to coming as a special

HOW CONLEY SAYS HE AND FRANK WENT TO THE FACTORY

DEFENSE TRIES TO BREAK DR. HARRIS' TESTIMONY; CALLS ITS OWN EXPERTS

His first testimony of importance, if it was believed by the jury, served utterly to demolish the most sensational declaration of Dr. Harris, who startled his hearers last Friday by announcing with every appearance of certainty that Mary Phagan came to her death probably within 30 minutes of the time she ateh er dinner April 26, positively within 45 minutes. Dr. Harris stated that he knew, because the cabbage he found in the girl's stomach hardly had been affected by the digestive juices.

Attorney Arnold showed Dr. Childs the specimen of cabbage from the Phagan girl's stomach.

The medical expert examined it and said:

"I have seen cabbage less changed by the digestive juices than that which had been in a person's stomach for twelve hours."

Dr. Childs continued his rebuttal of testimony of Dr. Harris by saying that it was impossible to tell within hours how long any of the carbohydrates, of which cabbage is one, have been in the human stomach.

The digestive process on carbohydrates, he declared, are practically nil while this class of foods is in the stomach. Cabbage, for example, may remain in the stomach for hours with little change from the digestive juices. The digestion, for the most part, occurs after the cabbage has passed into the small intestines, the physician said.

Dr. Harris' estimate, he declared, was only a guess.

He characterised in the same manner Dr. Harris' declaration that the blow Mary Phagan received on the back of the head caused unconsciousness.

Arnold propounded to his witness a hypothetical question based on the circumstances under which Mary Phagan's body was exhumed and examined nine days after burial.

"If, under these circumstances," said Arnold, "there was found a wound on the back of her head which one physician said was 1 1-2 inches long and another said was 2 1-4 inches, and there was found no fracture of the skull or injury to the brain, would any physician be justified in saying that the person receiving the blow was rendered unconscious?"

"He would have had to guess one way or the other," said Dr. Childs. "There was absolutely no way t tell whether the blow caused unconsciousness."

Arnold also brought the startling testimony that a wound made from one to three hours after death has the same appearance as a wound shortly before death.

This statement was in direct contradiction of Dr. Harris's testimony and will be used by the defense in strengthening is theory of the manner in which the factory girl came to her death.

After he had reviewed some of the important bits of Dr. Harris' testimony and had put into the record Dr. Child's testimony in rebuttal, Arnold asked the witness if he, in all his medical experience, had ever known of a physician of repute giving his opinion as to the unconsciousness of a person with no more data than had been in the possession of Dr. Harris.

Dr. Childs replied that he never had.

The mysterious C. B. Dalton, who was expected to make sensational revelations of incidents in which Leo Frank was alleged to have participated in the National Pencil Factory, proved a very tabe and commonplace witness when he was called Thursday.

The most that Dalton could say was that, on several of his visits to the factory, he had seen women in Frank's office. He told of no compromising situations. He was not even able to identify the women. He did not know whether or not they were members of Frank's own family. All that he knew was that they did not appear to be stenographers as he never saw them writing.

Dalton, when he was questioned by Luther Rosser, was not even sure of his own birthplace. He thought it was somewhere in Laurens County. He explained his presence by saying that he had gone to the factory with a Miss Daisy Hopkins. He said that he saw Frank in the office with two or three women, and that cool drinks generally were in evidence. On one occasion he said Frank and his visitors were drinking beer.

Detective Rosser on the Stand.

Detective Bass Rosser was on the witness stand for a few minutes and was questioned briefly. He testified that when he saw Mrs. Arthur White the Monday after the crime she failed to tell him that she had seen a negro in the factory the Saturday the girl was killed. He said he did not get possession of this information until May 6 or 7. It is the contention of the State that the defense suppressed there facts.

At the conclusion of Detective Rosser's testimony, Solicitor Dorsey announced that he was prepared to rest as soon as Dr. H. F. Harris had completed the testimony which was interrupted by adjournment Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Harris was unable to appear when court opened at 9 o'clock. The prosecution had nothing more to present at 9:45 and a recess was taken until Dr. Harris arrived at 11:10.

Reuben Arnold began at once on a cross-examination of Dr. Harris as soon as the physician took the stand. He forced Dr. Harris to say that there is much uncertainty in drawing conclusions about digestive functions and their time limitations.

Solicitor Dorsey also asked for the submission of the National Pencil Company's cash book and bank book before he rested his case. This was agreed to by Frank's lawyers.

One of the most interesting pieces of evidence for the purpose of demonknow what line we will pursue at present."

"Did you ever work for the National Pencil Factory?" was the first question the Solicitor asked Dalton.

Mr. Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "we want it understood that we object to this testimony—all of it."

Judge Roan overruled the objection. "Well, we want our objection recorded," said Rosser.

Dorsey continued his questioning.

"Do you know Leo Frank and Jim Conley?" continued the Solicitor. A. Yes; I know them both.

Q. Were you ever in the factory of the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes; two or three times.

Q. Did you ever go to Frank's office with Miss Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Was in Basement.

Q. Was Frank there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever go down in the basement?—A. Yes.

The witness then pointed out on the diagram the spot he was in in the basement.

Q. Did you ever see Conley on those visits?—A. Yes; and one time I saw another negro, a watchman.

Q. Did Frank know you were in the basement?—A. He knew I was in the factory. I don't know whether he knew I was in the basement or not.

Dorsey then turned the witness over to the defense for the cross-examination.

"When was the first time you saw stration in the possession of the defense is a large-sized model of the National Pencil Company constructed on an accurate scale.

Frank Chats With Family.

Frank chatted with his wife and mother in the intermission while the court was awaiting Dr. Harris, and a little later engaged in conversation with his attorneys. Dr. Childs entered the courtroom and talked several minutes with the defendant.

Mr. Arnold said:

"Further than this witness I don't Frank at the pencil factory?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Last fall some time."

Q. Where was Frank at that time?—A. At his office.

Q. Who was in there with him?—A. Some ladies.

Q. Were there any other men in there with him?—A. No; he was the only man.

Q. Who was you with?—A. Miss Daisy Hopkins.

Q. Do you know the names of the ladies in the office with Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Where did you go?—A. I went to the basement.

Q. Was Miss Daisy with you?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you go to the factory again?—A. Right before Christmas.

Q. Who introduced you to Frank?—A. Miss Daisy Hopkins.

Q. She just said to Mr. Frank, "This is my friend, Mr. Dalton," did she?—A. Yes.

Went to Basement.

Q. You were never in his office after Christmas?—A. No.

Q. When you went into the factory with Miss Daisy, you went down to the basement with her, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go down into the basement?—A. We went down the ladder by the elevator.

Q. Where did you go in the basement?—A. Right to where there were some boxes in the little room in the rear.

Q. Where did you live last year?—A. No. 337 East Hunter street.

Q. Who did you work for?—A. Mr. Heflin, a contractor.

Q. Where did you work after that?—A. With Captain John McGinnis.

Q. What time did you see Frank in his office?—A. Some time between 2 and 3 o'clock.

Q. Were the windows up?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you see any curtains?—A. No, but the office was very light.

Q. There were two windows in each office, weren't there?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether there was anyone else in the factory when you saw Mr. Frank?—A. Yes; the negroes were there.

Saw Negro Watchman.

Q. What time at night was it when the night watchman was there?—A. I don't know.

Q. Was it a negro watchman?—A. Yes.

Q. Was that this year?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in Walton County?—A. I lived there twenty years.

Q. How long were you away from there?—A. I went to Lawrenceville for about a year.

Q. How long ago?—A. I don't know. I forget just how long ago it was.

Q. Did you ever go with anyone to the pencil factory except Miss Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes. I used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls.

Q. Can you name the girls?—A. Yes; Miss Laura Atkinson and a Miss Laura Smith, of No. 148 South Pryor street.

Q. Do you go there any more?—A. No; I haven't been to the Busy Bee in a long time.

Q. Where were you born?—A. I don't know.

Q. When you first woke up, where were you?—A. Somewhere in Walton County.

Gave Conley Money.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know where your family lived when you were born, don't you?—A. Somewhere near Lawrenceville.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on the redirect examination.

Q. Did you ever give Jim Conley anything?—A. Sometimes I would give him a quarter and sometimes 50 cents. Sometimes they would have cold drinks, and sometimes they would have beer.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. When did you see beer there?—A. On Saturday afternoons—I don't remember the dates.

Q. Can you name specifically any time last fall that you went there?—A. Not the day, but it was some time after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Frank would have the cold drinks on a waiter in his office.

Can't Give Women's Names.

Q. And that is as definite as you can fix it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know the women besides the ones you name?—A. No.

Q. Can you describe them?—A. No. "Come down."

City Detective S. L. Rosser took the stand.

Q. Since April 26, have you been engaged in this case?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you visit Mrs. Arthur White subsequent to that date?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. Monday, April 28.

Q. Did she say anything about seeing a negro at the pencil factory Saturday?—A. No.

Q. What was the first time she mentioned to you seeing a negro at the factory?—A. May 6.

"I want to record an objection to that, your honor," said Rosser.

Rosser took the witness.

She Made Statement.

Q. Did you ask her?—A. No; but she made a statement.

Dorsey took the witness on redirect.

Q. Did you take anything to Dr. Claude Smith?—A. Yes; some chips.

Q. Are these the chips?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make a search of the areaway around the elevator?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find anything like this (showing the bludgeon alleged to have been found by the Pinkertons)?—A. No.

Q. Would you have found it?—A. Yes.

Attorney Rosser took the witness again.

Q. Don't you know this roller has been in that factory two years?—A. It may have been, but it was not on the first floor when we made our search.

State Wins Ruling.

Q. You made a good search?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know these are the same chips?—A. Yes, I am sure of that.

The witness was excused.

Dorsey addressed the court:

"I don't know whether we tendered that bloody shirt or not. If we did not, I want to tender it now. I also want to enter these chips."

Attorney Rosser:

"They haven't been identified."

"They were identified by Detective Starnes and Chief Beavers," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan ruled that he would let them go to the jury.

Dorsey:

State's Case Nearly Finished.

"Now, I want the cash book and the bank book of the National Pencil Company."

Arnold said they would be furnished.

Dorsey:

"I want it understood as soon as Dr. Harris is able to complete his testimony the State is ready to rest its case."

"Mr. Dorsey," said Arnold, "will you tell Mr. Dalton not to leave. We may want to recall him."

Judge Roan declared a recess until Dr. Harris could reach the court. He said it would be about 10 o'clock.

Dalton Recalled for Moment.

Dorsey recalled the witness.

Q. Were you ever in the pencil factory with Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to the factory with her?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. Where did you go?—A. In the basement.

Q. Did he know you were there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Conley know you were there? A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. The night watchman at one time.

Court then had a recess until Dr. H. F. Harris, who was excused from the witness stand Wednesday on account of illness, could arrive in court. The recess lasted for more than an hour. Dr. Harris, when he arrived upon the stand, was questioned upon cross-examination by Attorney Reuben Arnold.

Q. Unfavorable circumstances sometimes retard digestion, don't they?—A. Well, that is a very grave matter, and there is so little data on the subject it is hard to answer.

About External Circumstances.

Q. You would not say then that external circumstances, some undue mental excitement, might delay digestion?—A. I really don't know. There was an old Roman proverb that a person should take a walk after eating. Others say sleeping after a meal aids digestion.

Q. Then there is no set rule for digestion? Everybody is a rule unto themselves?—A. Not altogether. The average normal stomach is about the same in digestion.

Q. There is no indication on the outside of the body that would indicate how far digestion has gone?—A. None whatever.

Q. Don't the pulse or temperature show indigestion?—A. No. Very many people have indigestion several years and don't know it. They don't even feel it themselves.

Q. How long does the stomach take to free itself when it is full?—A. That has been investigated rather thoroughly, but it varies. I would say about 7 1-2 hours.

Q. How long does it take some substance that the stomach does not digest to pass out?—A. That is hard to say. They probably pass through in a foreign body.

Q. How long would it take?—A. That depends. The stomach doesn't like to free itself of meat until it is emulsified. Then it goes out very freely.

About Digestion of Cabbage.

Q. That is just the point. Does the stomach emulsify cabbage or corn?—A. Oh, yes; there is always a constant churning motion.

Q. How about corn?—A. It might pass through without emulsifying.

Q. Peas?—A. Yes.

Q. You would not attempt to enumerate what vegetables would pass through the stomach to the intestines? A. No, I would not.

Q. Is it not a fact that the first knowledge of digestion comes from that Canadian case?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that the only experiments before that time were made on rabbits and other animals for vegetables, and animals for meat? A. Yes.

Q. Is there any animal that eats everything that man does?—A. Yes, the swine.

Q. Any other?—A. I rather think the cat does.

Q. Well, isn't the wildcat a carnivorous animal strictly?—A. I don't know. I never associated with one.

Q. You will admit that the experiments along this line are very limited with the exception of that Canadian case?—A. Yes.

Processes Not All Understood.

Q. It is practically in its infancy?—A. Well, I would not say that. We are fairly familiar with the various juices and the process of digestion. But there is still much to learn.

Q. Just what part does the mouth and saliva play in connection with the stomach and the gastric juices, and the lower bowels? Is not this something that is not definitely known?—A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Don't you practice vivisection on these animals?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have never done it on humans, and you don't know how the processes take place in the human like you do in the animals?—A. Except with the stomach.

Q. What is the hardest vegetables to digest? I mean, leaving your experiments and speaking from the viewpoint of science.—A. I don't know that science has ever determined that.

Q. Isn't cabbage regarded as one of the hardest vegetables to digest?—A. I probably have heard that. It may be that after cabbage has gone through the stomach, trouble may be caused in the small intestines that may be what has given the geenral idea that cabbage is hard to digest.

Q. Didn't you say when you first testified that you couldn't tell anything about the bread in the stomach?—A. I don't think I made that statement.

Mr. Arnold read his testimony previously given.

Dr. Harris: "If I said that, I did not mean it in that sense. I meant that you could tell nothing about it by observing with the naked eye."

Q. You said it was impossible to state absolutely how long that cabbage had been in Mary Phagan's stomach?—A. I meant I could not state within a minute.

Q. Could you tell within two minutes?—A. No, not within 3, or 4, or 5. Probably not within 10 minutes. But I could tell that it was somewhere between 30 and 45 minutes.

Q. Doesn't it all depend on how much digestion is delayed?—A. To an extent.

Q. All you are attempting to say, then, is that the process of digestion had only gone on a certain length of time?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you say that certain circumstances retard digestion?—A. Yes, but I didn't say that anything could retard the flow of the digestive juices. No one has ever shown that anything could retard the process of digestion.

Head Wound Not Serious.

Q. I believe you said that wound on the head did not cause any pressure on the brain?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it cut through to the skull?—A. Yes.

Q. What arteries were there?—A. Only some trifling blood vessels.

Q. I believe you said it might have bled a good deal?—A. Yes, it might. A cut on the head usually causes a good deal of blood to flow.

Q. I believe you said it was not sufficient to have caused death?—A. Yes, I did.

Solicitor Dorsey then took the witness.

Q. Mr. Arnold was asking you yesterday about poisons. Was there any evidence on the mucous membrane of poisons?—A. There could not have been any irritant poisons. Their evidence is always unmistakable.

Dr. Harris was excused.

Dorsey addressed the court: "Your honor, I wish to tender these samples of cabbage as evidence."

Arnold—We want to object to all except that taken from Mary Phagan.

JIM CONLEY, THE EBONY CHEVALIER OF CRIME, IS DARKTOWN'S OWN HERO

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Now that James Conley has been dismissed from the Frank trial, now that he has stood safely the fire of Mr. Rosser's most exhaustive grilling, what of him?

If Frank is convicted, Conley subsequently will be convicted, no doubt, of being an accessory after the fact of Mary Phagan's murder—and that will mean three years, at most, in the penitentiary.

After that—when the Frank trial, more or less, has been forgotten—Conley will be at liberty to come back amongst the people of Atlanta.

Not far from Five Points, a little due east along one of the big thoroughfares meeting there, there is a negro bootblack who now and then, when he is on the job, which frequently he isn't, gives me a "shine" so much to my liking that it brings me back on other days.

He is a sort of Jim Conley negro—at least, he has a smattering of education, an ingratiating air, and is polite, particularly when it pays him to be.

Quite without previous design, I stopped at this negro's stand Wednesday afternoon, and it was not long before he mentioned the famous trial. He having started the conversation, I asked him a few questions—and his replies, given herein in part, rather set me to thinking.

"Complimented on All Sides."

"George," I said—not that I know his name is George, but that it so happens I address negroes unknown of name that way—"what do your friends down on Decatur street think of Jim Conley's story over yonder in the big court? Rather clever, negro, Jim, eh?" said I to this bootblack.

"Well, boss, dat Mr. Rosser ain't made nothing on Jim yit, is he?" replied George.

I ventured the opinion that Mr. Rosser failed, at least, to make Jim out so many different kinds of a liar that his story might not stick in spots.

"Well, boss," continued my bureau of information, "dem niggers down on Decatur street, dey ain't talking of nothing but Jim Conley. He's de most talked about nigger anywhere, I guess. I hears him complimented on all sides!"

"In other words, Jim's a sort of hero along Decatur street nowadays?" said I.

"Yassir, dat's it—Jim's a hero. Niggers all talking about him. He done got de best of de smartest of 'um. Nobody can't fool er nigger like Jim!"

Hero Around "Butt In" Bar.

I presume, too, that something of the same condition prevails over on Peters street—particularly in the neighborhood of the "Butt In" bar over there.

You remember the "Butt In" boozorium in Peters street is the one wherein Conley filled up rather freely on beer, the morning of the Phagan murder, also on beer mixed with wine.

The "Butt In", it also will be recalled, is where Conley obtained a "double-header" beer—"double-headers" being the order of the day always in the "Butt In;" there being, perhaps, some subtly humorous connection between "Butt In" and "double-header!"

It Is Not Improbable.

It is not improbable that many a foaming "double-header" has been dumped into dusky citizens along the way of the "Butt In" of late—in honor of Jim, and the way he "done got de best of de smartest of um over dar in de big court!"

If Jim Conley ever gets back to Decatur street, and hereafter he be permitted to tread the primrose way of the "Butt In" bar over on Peters, in all probability the drinks will not cost him anything for many days.

The proprietor of the "Butt In" doubtless right now would scorn to take Mr. Conley's honest money—the violent presumption being that Jim ever had, or ever will have, that kind of money—even for "double-headers."

Jim has just passed through the fire. And he got through, his reputation more or less damaged for truthfulness, to be sure, but not utterly shattered beyond patching up in such wise that it might be worked one more time, at least, if necessary.

True, Conley already had been in jail seven times that he admits of, and several times more that he can not recall precisely, and that had served to make him something of a hero in darkest Darktown; but Jim's involuntary residence in durance vile heretofore has been in police circles and mere county chaingangs exclusively. So that didn't make him a particularly big hero—albeit it made him a hero not altogether to be sneezed at!

Now, however, Jim has been in "de big court," tangled all up in a murder case, suspected by some of being a principal to the murder, indeed, but cleverly side-stepping that too deadly peril—and his name has been in all the newspapers hundreds of times, and his picture dozens of times, and before he gets through with it, he will be decorated by the State's majesty in stripes—but the latter not so long that it will seriously inconvenience anybody, particularly Jim!

All in all, Jims' a real hero in darkest Darktown, at last—a real ebony chevalier of crime—and those brethren who frequent the "Butt Ins" and the "Butt Outs," and booze dispensaries of like persuasion will bow down and worship Jim—for, in their philosophy, of such as Jim is the Decatur street "kingdom of heaven."

Ruling Generally Approved.

The general impression seems to be that Judge Roan did the right thing in permitting the Conley story to go to the jury in its entirety, inasmuch as it had gone in deadly part, anyway.

Perhaps the evidence fixing upon Leo Frank another crime than the one he stands charged with under the present indictment was, primarily, inadmissible, but there was no way to relieve the jury of the charge Conley made, and it would have been hardly fair either to the jury, the court and even to the defendant, to cut the story off there.

If the State is able to sustain its terrible charge against Frank, it perhaps is common sense now to let it proceed to the corroborating of Conley, if it can corroborate him.

To have left Conley's charge neither contradicted nor corroborated—that would merely have resulted in its probable corroroboration in the minds of the public, if not elsewhere.

The things Conley said to the Frank jury can not be said and then forgotten.

It would have been folly to have ASKED the jury to forget—it would have been imposing upon it an impossible mental task.

Other Charge as Serious.

If it so be that error was committed in not ruling out the story, a new trial will be granted, on appeal, in the event of Frank's conviction—and the trial next time undoubtedly will proceed without this particular evidence in.

The State can, if it fails to sustain eventually its charge of murder, still move against Frank, if it so elects, in the other direction—which crime, under the Code, is quite as serious as murder.

One may feel the injustice of flinging at Frank, while on trial for murder, another capital charge—still, since the additional charge was admitted, with protest, as an original proposition few people will contend strenuously that the State should not be permitted to proceed to the conclusion of a line of evidence begun without protest.

I have heard Judge Roan's ruling discussed about town last night, and to-day, and I heard few who find fault in it.

Indeed, as matter of simple justice to Frank, no less than to the State—and it will not do to forget that the State has large rights at stake in this matter—it seems common sense and elementary justice that the State, having made its awful charge, be required either to corroborate it or not.

That apepars to be the public attitude in the matter.

PROSECUTOR DORSEY SNAPPED IN ACTION

This shows the Solicitor in an argument at the Frank trial.

ROAN'S RULING HEAVY BLOW TO DEFENSE

Judge Declined to Order Out of Record Any of Jim Conley's Testimony.

Judge Roan administered a severe blow to the defense Wednesday when he ruled that all of Conley's story should stand, although portions of it, he acknowledged, would have been inadmissible had objection been made at the time the testimony was offered.

It was a particularly difficult allegation to combat. Unlike many allegations, it was exactly as hard to fight in the event it was false as in case it was founded on fact.

Judge Roan said in regard to the testimony of Dalton that he did not know what it was to be and that he would allow it to be presented so that he might rule on its admissibility as it came up.

Solicitor Dorsey put the final rivet in his case so far as it rested upon the testimony of Conley when at the close of his redirect examination of the negro he brought to light the State's theory of the disposition that had been made of the Phagan girl's mesh bag.

Practically no mention of the mesh bag had been made during the week and a half of the trial. The only reference made to it was in the examination of Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of the slain girl, and of the officers who visited the scene of the crime immediately after police headquarters was called by the negro nightwatchman, Newt Lee.

Tells of Mesh Bag.

Mrs. Coleman testified that Mary left home with the mesh bag in her hand. The detectives and policemen all testified that they were able to find no trace of it either the morning after the crime or in the search that had been conducted since then.

"Did you ever see the murdered girl's mesh bag?" Dorsey asked Conley, just as it appeared that he had finished his questioning.

"Yes, sah, I see it," Conley replied.

"Where was it?"

"It was right on Mr. Frank's desk when I went in there to write the notes."

"Did you see what became of it?"

"Yes, sah; Mr. Frank went and put it in his safe."

Conley left the stand at 11:10 o'clock still sticking to his charge that Leo Frank killed the Phagan girl and that, at Frank's direction, he (Conley) assisted in the disposal of the body. He had been on the stand fifteen and one-half hours and under the grilling cross-examination of Luther Rosser for more than thirteen hours.

Practically the only addition he made to his story as it appeared in his direct examination was his declaration that while he was writing the murder notes Frank took the pencil out of his hand and then an instant later made him rub out the "s" he had written as he spelled out "negros." Conley said he wrote the note at first:

"A long tall black negros did this by hisself."

A long argument over the admissibility of Conley's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged conduct with women previous to the murder of Mary Phagan took place after the jury had been sent from the courtroom at noon. Court recessed before the arguments were concluded, and the debate was resumed in the afternoon.

Reuben Arnold cited opinions from courts in States from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but his arguments were unavailing and the decision went against the defense. There was a murmur of applause and a stamping of feet.

Arnold instantly was on his feet with a motion for a mistrial, but he realized at once that the jury was not present and withdrew the motion. He threatened, however, to make a motion that the courtroom be cleared if such a demonstration occurred again.

Dr. Harris Recalled.

Dr. Harris was recalled to complete the testimony which he was giving when he collapsed on the stand the Friday before. He repeated his assertion as to the time Mary Phagan came to her death after eating dinner at her home in Bellwood Saturday shortly before noon.

"I can say with almost absolute certainty," he declared, "that this little girl was killed within 30 or 40 minutes after she ate her meal that day."

He refused, under cross-examination, to change his testimony in the least in respect to the cause of death.

"It was easily apparent that strangulation was the cause," he declared.

"An examination of the lungs was unnecessary and even useless because of the embalming preparation that had been employed. It was plainly evident that the rope had been placed about the girl's neck before death and the deep indentation showed that it was sufficient to choke off her breath and cause death within a brief time."

Although Arnold was unable to make the physician alter the statement of his opinion, he obtained an admission that a blow on the head sufficient to cause death might immediately precede garroting and still the same manifestations of strangulation exist.

Dr. Harris, however, did not believe that the blow on Mary Phagan's head was enough to cause death. He said that the blow was not severe and that, aside from a little spot of blood on the brain which could not have caused any pressure, the brain was entirely normal.

Attorney Arnold in the latter part of the afternoon session engaged in an exhaustive and highly technical examination of the witness in regard to the action of the digestive juices, the percentages, that were present in Mary Phagan's stomach and the tests that were made for poisons.

FORSYTH NEGRO'S CABIN DYNAMITED

John Woolsey Suffers Broken Leg When Blown Through the Roof of House.

CUMMING, Aug. 7.—John Woolsey, the only negro in Forsyth County, was blown out of bed through the roof of his cabin, eight miles north of Cumming, and suffered a broken leg, when dynamite was set off under the house, according to information that has reached Cumming. The dynamiting took place on the farm of Wyley Smith. The dynamiters cut all telephone wires into that part of the county, which prevented the news reaching here sooner. Woolsey was hurried out of the county to Gainesville by Smith.

The negro had moved to the Smith place just a few days ago. He was warned to leave the county and Smith was warned to get rid of him. Neither took heed. The dynamiting resulted. The cabin occupied by Woolsey was completely wrecked.

I. W. W. Leaders Plan Great Lakes Strike

DULUTH, Aug. 7.—One of the most widespread strikes ever attempted by Great Lakes dock workers was in prospect to-day. Plans were being formed to extend the strike from all the docks in Duluth to the ore shipping points in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Industrial Workers of the World planning the strike, contemplated calling out the dock workers at Two Harbors, Mich.; Superior, Wis.; Ashland, Wis.; Marquette, Mich., and Escanaba, Mich.

MOVE TEST FARM, COMMITTEES ASK

Senate and House Bodies in Joint Meeting Agree to Favor the Ellis Bill.

The bill introduced into the House by Representative Ellis of Tift County to remove the Georgia Experiment Station from Griffin, Ga., to the Southern part of the State, will be recommended for passage by both the Senate Committee on Agriculture and the House Committee No. 2 on Agriculture.

The favorable report on the bill was prepared at a joint meeting of the committees Wednesday afternoon. The bill has been favorably considered once by the Senate Committee, which later voted to reconsider its action when pressure was brought to bear. The House Committee had not acted prior to the Wednesday meeting.

The report is expected to precipitate a fight in the House. It is regarded as unlikely that any definite action on the bill will be taken at this session of the Legislature. Members of the General Assembly who advocate Griffin as the place for the station have been active in their fight on the bill.

The meeting Wednesday was attended by many adherents of Griffin, and a number of those who want the station removed to South Georgia, as well as several who desire its removal to Athens.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Dr. A. C. True, of the Agricultural Department of Washington, who has supervision over all State experiment stations, and Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price. Dr. True said the removal of the station would not affect the Federal appropriation. Mr. Price advocated the present location.

Battlefield of 1763 To Be Memorial Park

GREENSBURG, PA., Aug. 7.—At the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Bushy Run, one of the principal engagements of the French and Indian war here, a movement was started to obtain 25 acres of the famous battlefield for a memorial park, and to erect a bronze statue with a large bronze tablet to Colonel Henry Bouquet.

The historical and patriotic societies of Pennsylvania are behind the movement.

TRIAL AS VARIED AS VAUDEVILLE EXHIBITION

Every Change in Chromatic Scale Rung — All Georgia Types Seen in Court.

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Every change in the chromatic scale has been rung in the Frank trial. With the single exception of the skyrocket oratory that will mark the last stage of the trial, everything that has ever been done in the trial of a criminal case has been enacted in the fight to fix on the superintendent of the National Pencil Factory the guilt of the murder of Mary Phagan.

There has been comedy. There has been tragedy. There has been periods as dull as a hookworm victim. There have been occasions as startling as the feat of a circus daredevil. There have been pathos and performances worthy of a clown. The somber has been mixed with the gay until the entire trial seems the work of a futurist artist who has had a hard night with the drinking cups before he started the painting.

Jim Conley was on the stand something like sixteen hours. His story was a ragtime composition, with the weirdest syncopations, and then came Dr. Harris right on his heels and gave evidence full of soundness and learnedness. To the spectators it seemed that they had just heard "Alexander's Ragtime Band" played and then a Bach fugue for an encore.

One Simple, Other Complex.

Conley's story was as simple in words as "Old Black Joe," while Dr. Harris' was as complex as a Wagnerian overture.

Jim Conley spoke in terms of the street, of the near-beer saloon, of the blind alley crap game. Dr. Harris spoke in the language of the laboratory and the library.

Jim Conley could not enunciate a word of more than one syllable. Dr. Harris was as polysyllabic as the word "heterogeneous." And the spectators had to grasp after the shift.

Conley's story, while it was as full of contradictions as a hive is of bees, was as easy to understand as a baby's "da-da" is to a fond parent. Dr. Harris evidence was as loaded with medical lore as a physician's library.

And, although it seems impossible, there is more still to come. Before the trial has ended practically every type that Georgia knows will have been paraded in the courtroom.

Types Seen in Court.

Right now, the spectators have seen the scholarly defendant whose court attitude is still an enigma—as unsolvable as the crime with which he is charged. There are his loving mother and his devoted wife.

Here is the massive figure of Luther Rosser, attacking every opponent with a battleax ferocity. Here is the erudite Arnold, with rapier thrusts to send in the death blow when the enemy is beaten down by the more direct assault of his ally.

Here is the young Solicitor, struggling against tremendous odds, upsetting tradition by fighting Rosser with his own weapons, burning Arnold with his own fire.

Here is his learned associate, quick to grasp a point as a drowning man is a straw.

Here are factory girls and business men. Here are the comical figure of Newt Lee and the sinister figure of Jim Conley. Here are the learned scientist and the sleuth hound.

It seems that everything has been shown, but still there will be more. It is impossible that Rosser and Arnold will not show something just as novel and bizarre as the State has presented.

Color for a Dickens.

There is Mincey to come with his startling story—Mincey, as typical of the red clay soil of the Cracker country as peanuts and watermelons; Mincey, so typically the country school teacher that he will have to carry a rod of hickory and a blueback speller to the stand to feel at home while he is giving his evidence.

And there will be a lot more.

Tragic as is the trial, it has been Atlanta's greatest vaudeville show. Dickens could have spent one week in Judge Roan's courtroom and written four novels around the types he saw listening to and playing parts in the drama that hovers around the life and death of a little girl of the factory.

FRANK DEFENSE OPENS WITH ATTACK ON DR. HARRIS' EVIDENCE

Dalton Corroborates Jim Conley's Story of Women Calling at Pencil Factory

OPINIONS AS TO TIME OF GIRL'S DEATH GUESSES, IS DR. CHILDS' TESTIMONY

We don't want to argue it. We just want to be recorded as objecting.

Judge Roan permitted all of the samples to go in.

Solicitor Dorsey asked for the bank book and the cash book of the National Pencil Company. They had not been secured.

Dorsey—We will rest our case, anyway.

The State rested its case exactly at 12 o'clock.

Dr. L. W. Childs, a prominent young surgeon of Atlanta, was the first witness called by the defense.

Attorney Arnold questioned Dr. Childs.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Surgery and general medicine.

Q. Where did you graduate?—A. University of Michigan in 1906.

Q. Where did you practice?—A. I was first assistant at the Michigan University Hospital.

Q. How long have you been in Atlanta?—A. About five years.

Q. A body is found at 3 o'clock in the morning. It is not embalmed until 10 o'clock that morning. It is dug up nine days later and a cut is found in back of the head. There is only a drop of blood found on the skull. There was no pressure on the brain. Could a physician have said whether that blow produced unconsciousness? A. He might hazard a guess. He could not tell.

Calls Opinion Mere Guess.

Q. The presence of a drop of blood would have had nothing to do with it? A. Absolutely nothing. There was no pressure, you said.

Q. No pressure at all.—A. Then its effect was negligible.

Q. Now is there any way for a doctor telling definitely whether or not that blow caused unconsciousness?—A. I should say it would be a guess.

Q. Is it possible to tell whether a wound or cut such as I have described with the appearance of blood was inflicted before or after death?—A. If it was inflicted in from one to three hours after death it would have the appearance of having been inflicted just before death.

Q. Would you say that such a wound as I have described could have been inflicted one hour after death?—A. It would practically be a guess to say so.

Q. Would the fact that this body had been embalmed and buried for nine days add to the difficulties of making an examination or not?—A. It would greatly add to the difficulties.

Q. Have you ever heard of a case on record when an opinion on unconsciousness and the length of time the person was unconscious before death was placed on what data we have?—A. Absolutely no.

Blows Often Cause Death.

Q. Have you heard of cases of blows on the head causing death without fracturing the skull?—A. Yes, I have seen several cases of sandbagging where the person would die of concussion of the brain and there would only be a slight swelling where the blow had been struck.

Q. Then there is absolutely no way of telling the exact result of a blow on the head after a post-mortem held nine days after interment?—A. No.

Q. What class of food does cabbage come in?—A. Carbohydrates.

Q. Are they considered hard to digest?—A. As such they are not, but in cabbage the carbohydrate is mixed with cellulose, a woody fiber on which the digestive juices have practically no effect, therefore, it is very hard.

Q. Look at this sample (Arnold showed the witness the cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach). Was that well masticated?—A. Not very well.

Q. Isn't it a fact that cooked cabbage is harder to digest than raw cabbage?—A. Yes; raw cabbage is the easiest of all forms of cabbage to digest.

Cabbage in Digestive State.

Q. What part does the saliva play? A. It acts on the carbohydrates.

Q. What part of the cabbage is the carbohydrates?—A. Seven or eight per cent.

Q. So saliva only affects that part of the cabbage?—A. Yes.

Q. Does the stomach do anything about digesting cabbage?—A. The muscular effect—the churning—might break it up to some extent.

Q. So the juices of the stomach instead of digesting cabbage merely retard it?—A. Yes.

Q. Then where is cabbage really digested?—A. In the small intestines.

Q. How long would it take boiled cabbage to pass out of the stomach? A. About four and one-half hours.

Q. Then when it goes out of the stomach it is really undigested, is it not?—A. Yes. It may pass out of the body entirely in the undigested form.

Digestion Easily Retarded.

Q. Are there not a great many things that retard digestion?—A. Yes, the psychic causes—fright, anger and sudden mental excitement—materially retard it.

Q. Would walking retard it?—A. Yes, if the walking was immediately after the meal, digestion would be retarded. These other causes might totally stop digestion.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you might find substances in a stomach that had laid there quite a while and practically no digestive action had begun?—A. Yes, if the psychic influence had taken place.

Q. Don't stomachs differ as much as minds?—A. Yes. To understand a stomach you must study it as an individual.

Mr. Arnold held up a sample of cabbage taken from the Phagan girl's stomach.

Q. Would you hazard a guess that this cabbage had only been in a stomach one half hour before death—?A. I would not.

Q. Why?—A. For the reasons I have stated. The cause of the psychic influences—I know not of—that might have been brought to bear and because of the varying effects of stomachs on such a substance.

Denies Accurate Opinions.

Q. Do you think a doctor could give an accurate scientific opinion by making such a statement?—A. I do not.

Q. How long would you say it was possible for cabbage like this to stay in the stomach?—A. I have seen cabbage less digested than that which had been in the stomach for twelve hours.

Q. When the process of digestion begins, it begins very slowly, doesn't it?—A. Yes, it is really indeterminate. It has not advanced very far when the food goes to the stomach.

Q. How long would it take wheat bread?—A. I would say about two and one-half hours.

Q. Then solids like cabbage and wheat bread would be at least two and one-half hours passing out of the stomach, would they not?—A. Yes.

At this point court was adjourned until 9 o'clock.

'Blow Would Discolor Eyes.'

Q. Please state whether a bruise could be inflicted over the eye after death similar to a wound in life.—A. Yes, as much after two hours.

Q. Could a blow on the back of the head cause a discolored eye?—A. Yes, or both eyes.

Q. What becomes of that epithelium after death?—A. Before or after embalming?

Q. Would it be decomposed before embalming?—A. It would.

Solicitor Dorsey then took the witness. His brother, Dr. Rufus T. Dorsey, a prominent Atlanta physician, sat by the questioner and frequently coached him in his examination of the witness.

Q. How old are you?—A. 31.

Q. Where have you lived?—A. Ann Arbor and Atlanta.

Q. How long have you practiced?—A. Seven years.

Q. What do you practice?—A. Surgery and general medicine.

Q. Don't most specialists confine themselves to one study and find their hands full?—A. They learn more by branching out.

Q. Do you undertake to tell this jury that digestion begins in the mouth?—A. Yes.

Q. I thought mastication was the office of the mouth?—A. It is.

Q. Then doesn't digestion begin as much when the food begins to cook as in the mouth?—A. No; the digestion begins when the salivary glands begin to yield their juices.

Q. Is a turnip of about the same property as a cabbage?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider Dr. Crittenden, of Yale, an authority?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with his table on the relative properties of food?—A. Yes.

Differs With Authority.

Q. If he says it takes about 3 1-2 hours to digest a cabbage and the same time for a turnip it is about right, is it not?—A. I think he says that he is at variance with the other authorities.

Q. Then you are at variance with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is your authority?—A. Dr. Peterson, an eminent medical expert and authority.

Q. In speaking of digestion of cabbage and turnips, you have as a standard, a normal stomach?—A. Yes.

Q. How long after taking food into a stomach would you find pure hydrochloric acid?—A. I tis in the stomach before food is taken in and you will find it there at any stage.

Q. Do you mean to give this as your opinion?—A. It would depend upon the condition of the glands of the gastric membrance.

Q. I am speaking of a normal stomach. Are you familiar with the Ewald breakfast test? According to this test, how long would it be before you would find pure hydrochloric acid?—A. It would depend on the glands.

Q. I am asking you about a normal stomach.

Judge Warns Against Haste.

Arnold objected—He does not give the witness time to answer.

Judge Roan cautioned Dorsey regarding this.

Q. How much acid would occur in a normal stomach one hour after the Ewald breakfast test?—A. About 2 grams.

Q. Give me the amount in degrees. A. That is essentially a question for a laboratory man. We don't use those terms in general practice.

Q. Well, standard authorities use degrees.—A. It is essentially a laboratory test and I would prefer not to answer.

Q. Well, if you can't answer it I will try you on something else. Is this man Hemeter an authority?—A. If he gives any tables he is.

Q. Do you know of him?—A. I have heard of him.

Q. Is he a standard?—A. Yes.

Q. I want you to give this jury the acidity of an Ewald test breakfast one hour after taking.—A. That is a question for a laboratory man.

Q. Well, if you can't that I will ask you something else. Can you give me the percentages of the gastric juices in digestion?—A. No, that is in a branch that is seldom taught.

Q. Don't you know that they teach that as one of the fundamental principles of medicine?—A. I take exception with you on that.

Q. Can you tell me the functions of the gastric juices—A. Yes.

Dr. Childs then gave an extensive scientific explanation, after which Dorsey propounded a long hypothetical question, to bring out, if possible, an admission that the cabbage might not have been in the stomach more than an hour. Dr. Childs replied that it would be the wildest guess to try and place the time within two hours.

Q. I will get you to tell the jury why?—A. I will cite a case that came to my attention when cabbage was taken from a stomach after twelve hours.

Arnold Protests at Mirth.

Q. I am speaking of a normal stomach.—A. That might have been a normal stomach.

Q. Well, it certainly would not have been normal if it was that diseased, so diseased the cabbage had to be taken from it.—A. The structure was normal.

Q. Will you tell the jury that the juices were normal?—A. No.

Dorsey remarked: "Why, of course not," and there was a ripple of laughter in the courtroom when Attorney Arnold jumped to his feet to object to the Solicitor's comment.

"Your honor," Arnold said, "that laughter will have to cease. There is a bunch of hoodlums back there who laugh at my friend's witticisms."

Judge Roan—You will have to keep order in the courtroom, Mr. Sheriff.

Q. What is a normal stomach—A. A normal stomach is one that is under normal conditions will digest a normal amount of food in a normally accepted time.

Q. Did you ever see any experiments except in that case where you made a man vomit?—A. No, I am not quoting myself.

Scott Called to Stand.

Q. If a little girl were found sixteen to twenty hours after she was murdered with a moist blood spot on her hair, with a scar on the back of her head, deep indentations in her neck, her tongue out, her nails blue, what would you say caused her death?—A. I would certainly say it was not the blow on the head.

The witness was excused.

Harry Scott, the Pinkerton detective employed by the National Pencil Company, who has already appeared as a witness for the prosecution, was called by the defense. Attorney Rosser questioned him.

Q. Mr. Scott, you knew on Monday after the crime that Mrs. Arthur White saw a negro near the stairway on the Saturday before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell the city detectives? A. It is my recollection that I did.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Frank if Conley could write?—A. No.

Q. When did you discover Jim Conley could write?—A. Sunday, May 18.

Q. On May 18 you dictated to Conley "that long, tall, black negro did it by hisself." How long did it take him to write it?—A. About six or seven minutes.

Q. You were present when he was brought before Mrs. White?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he move his lips?—A. Yes; he chewed his lips and looked very excited.

Q. Did he look nervous, and, if so, why?—A. Well, he could not stand still. He twirled a cigarette and looked very excited.

Q. Did he deny on May 18 that he had anything to do with the murder or had been to the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you try to make him talk?—A. Yes.

Treated Him 'Pretty Roughly.'

Q. How did you talk to him?—A. I was very stern with him. I tried to get from him a confession of the murder.

Q. Did you give him the third degree?—A. That depends on what you call the third degree.

Q. Well, you tell me what did?—A. Oh, we just talked to him, and cursed him and treated him pretty roughly.

Q. Did you beat him?—A. No.

Q. Just a scientific third degree?—A. Well, we did everything we could.

Q. You and the city detectives worked in harmony, each one giving the other what he had discovered, did you not?—A. Yes.

Mr. Rosser showed Scott the first statement made by Jim Conley.

Q. Did you hear him make this statement?—A. Yes, I wrote it.

Q. Is that all he said?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't know he could write? A. Yes, I had already discovered he could write.

Q. This information that he could write came from Schiff and Darley, of the pencil factory, didn't it?—A. Yes.

Brings Up Second Statement.

Q. When Conley made that second statement about the notes, was that gone over with Mr. Dorsey?—A. Yes.

Q. He said: "It did not say anything about the little girl's body"?—A. Yes

Q. He repeated againthe buying of the beer and whisky on Peters street?—A. Yes.

Q. Conley told you the second time he was going to tell the truth?—A. Yes. He sent for Mr. Black and made a voluntary statement.

Q. That was his first sworn statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On May 25, after that statement, you and Black called on Conley again and questioned him, didn't you?—A. Yes. About three hours.

Q. You gave him the same third degree you illustrated just now, didn't you?—A. No, I was stern, but nothing more.

Q. On May 27 you question him again didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you told him Mr. Frank would not have written those notes on Friday and that his story would not fit?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did you question him?—A. Five or six hours.

Q. The next day you had him again, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. About Five or six hours.

Q. And he told you he had already told the truth and would tell no more?—A. Yes.

Changed Day to Saturday.

Q. On May 28, he made you another long statement, after being told that his former statement showed deliberation and would not fit: then he changed the date to Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you he had made up his mind to tell you the whole truth?—A. Yes.

Q. But he still stuck to the statement that he got up that morning about 9 or 9:30 o'clock and later went to the "Butt In" saloon and bought a glass of beer?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you about writing the notes? How many notes did he say he wrote?—A. He said he wrote three on white paper, as I remember.

Q. Did he say Mr. Frank took a piece of green paper and wrote something like an "M" on it?—A. Yes.

Q. Still, he didn't say anything about seeing the body?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Scott, what sort of a looking negro was Conley the first time you saw him?—A. He was dirty and ragged.

Q. You saw him here the other day and he was spick as an onion, wasn't he?—A. Yes.

Tells of Frank's Arrest.

Q. What time of the day was Frank arrested?—A. About 2 or 3 o'clock.

Q. Didn't you go to the factory and get him at 11:30 o'clock?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that all I did about it was to get him a guard so that he would not be put in a cell?—A. Yes.

Q. Conley told you that the reason he had been washing the shirt was that he had been wearing it three weeks?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that you told Conley every time you thought he was lying, "That won't do, you will have to do better than that"?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he say when he gave you that final affidavit that it was the whole truth?—A. Yes.

The jury at this moment took a five minutes recess, during which time they were served with soft drinks.

Q. Conley stated nothing about Frank asking him to watch for him?—A. No.

Q. He said nothing about seeing Monteen Stover go up to the steps?—A. No.

Q. He said nothing about Mr. Frank stamping for him?—A. No.

Q. He said only that Mr. Frank whistled for him?—A. Yes, that was all.

Q. Did you ever get him to tell you about that little mesh bag?—A. Yes, I did my best.

Q. He never intimated at that time that he saw it in Frank's office?—A. No.

Said Nothing of Parasol.

Q. Did you ever ask him about the parasol?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you he saw it, or not?—A. My memory is not clear.

Q. Do you want to refresh your memory (Rosser handed Scott the affidavit)?—A. No, he did not tell me anything about it.

Rosser paused to partake of a soft drink, smacking his lips, he remarked: "I wish it was a little more sustaining."

Q. Mr. Scott, he didn't tell you anything about Mr. Frank's stumbling on the floor of the elevator and hitting him on the back, did he?—A. No, sir.

Q. How long did he tell you he stayed in that wardrobe?—A. Fifteen or twenty minutes, I think, I am not clear.

Q. In his last statement he said he wrote only one note, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long before the beginning of this trial did you cease communicating with Conley?—A. May 29.

Q. He gave you two statements in which he said he told all the truth?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you he had money and cigarettes in a box, or money and cigarettes in a cigarette box?—A. I understood him to say in a cigarette box.

Q. Did he tell you that he never saw Lemmie Quinn go in or out of the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he ever tell you that poor little unfortunate girl was name Mary Perkins?—A. No.

Didn't Tell of Screams.

Q. Did Conley ever tell you he heard screams?—A. No.

Q. Did you ask him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you Mr. Frank told you he had hit her too hard, or had dropped her?—A. He said he let her fall.

Q. Did he say anything about hearing someone running?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you Frank stamped first and the next thing he heard was whistling?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you when he got to the top of the stairs that Frank was standing there with a cord in his hand?—A. No.

Q. Did you find cords like the one we have been exhibiting here?—A. Yes.

Q. He didn't say anything about a rope about the girl's neck, did he?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he say she had a piece of underskirt around her neck?—A. He did not.

Q. What time did he tell you Frank whistled when he went up to steps?—A. Four minutes to 1 o'clock.

While Mr. Rosser studied his notes, Mrs. Leo Frank leaned over and whispered in his ear. Rosser remarked loud enough to be heard at the press table: "No, I won't question him about that."

Looks for Discrepancies.

Q. He told you Frank sent him back there and he hollered back, "This girl is dead," and Frank hollered back, "Bring her up here, anyway." He didn't say he went up to Mr. Frank and told him the girl was dead?—A. That is the way he stated it.

Q. He told you it was a crocus sack that he wrapped her up in, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. What did Jim tell——

Dorsey interrupted: "Your honor, if I am not mistaken, Conley has admitted all of this."

Rosser: "No, he didn't. He said he told Mr. Scott and Mr. Black, and I want to show that he didn't if I can."

Q. Did he tell you he put this sack with the girl's body in it over his shoulders and it dangled about his legs?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will get you to state if you said anything about a slipper or a ribbon being near the body upstairs?—A. He mentioned the slipper and the hat, but he didn't say anything about a ribbon.

Q. He told you that Frank stumbled at the top floor and not at the bottom floor, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. He didn't tell you anything about Frank leaving the elevator unlocked, did he?—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything to you about complaining to Mr. Frank after he had been in the wardrobe—"you got me in a tight place?"—A. No, he said he told Mr. Frank he was sweaty.

Q. He told you Mr. Frank gave him $200 and then took it back?—A. Yes.

Q. I noticed that in his written statement there is some writing in long hand in addition to the typewritten statement. Explain how that happened.—A. The stenographer took down his statement and wrote it out I remembered that all of Conley's statement about the $200 was not in it. We had him repeat it and added it to the statement in long hand.

Q. Did you ask him whether there was any thought of burning the body?—A. He said he didn't know anything about that.

Q. Did he tell you that he promised to come back in 40 minutes and burn the body, but he went to sleep and forgot it?—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything about telling Mr. Frank "You are a white man and you done it. You go down there and do it; I am scared?"—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything about getting away?—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything about Frank saying there would be a way for him to get into the factory when he came back?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you anything about going across to the saloon and taking a fish and liver sandwich and looking up at the clock?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you the reason he didn't go back and burn the body was that he fell asleep and didn't wake up until 6 o'clock?—A. No.

Q. Did Conley tell you that he talked to Frank on the steps or on the fourth floor?—A. The fourth floor.

Q. Did he tell you that Frank said to him: "If you had come back there Saturday and done what Itold you, there would not have been any trouble?"—A. No.

Q. Describe to me the scene when you convinced Conley he could write?—A. I called him upto Chief Lanford's office and told him I heard he had told Detective Black he could not write. I told him learned he could write and that if he didn't write we would produce the source of our information. He took up a pencil and wrote as I dictated.

Q. You had to convince him you knew he could write before he would write for you?—A. Yes.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Mr. Scott, did you get any information from the people at the National Pencil Factory about Conley being able to write?—A. Not personally.

Q. Didn't you get it from people wholly disconnected with the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't the National Pencil people know that Conley was arrested May 1?

Rosser objected.

Dorsey said that it was desired to show the connection between these people and the defendant. Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. What official did you tell about Mrs. White seeing a negro on the steps?

Says Pinkertons Divided.

Rosser objected again. The objection was overruled.

A. I told Mr. Black, Chief Lanford and Detective Rosser.

Q. Wasn't Attorney Rosser the first man told?—A. He was among the first.

Q. Wasn't it May 7 and wasn't he the first one you told?—A. It was soon after I heard of it. I am not sure of either fact.

Q. What time did the State first learn of this big stick?

Rosser objected and Dorsey said he was trying to show the attitude of "these people."

"I want to prove," he said, "that the Pinkertons were divided. Part of them went with the defense. Mr. Scott is the only one who sought to aid the State."

Q. Were you denied seeing Frank?

Arnold interrupted. "I object to all of this as being irrevelant."

Judge Roan: "He can state when he tried to see him.

A. With Detective Black and Jim Conley I went to the jail. Sheriff Mangum went up to see Frank.

Anold objected and was sustained by Judge Roan, in his objections to statements on the part of the witness that were conclusions.

Q. When was the last time you saw Leo M. Frank?—A. May 3.

Q. Was there any difference in his appearance from the first time you saw him?—A. No.

Conley Made "Things Fit."

Q. Did Conley eliminate any of the statements you objected to?—A. Yes.

Q. Did the changes come from the detectives or from Conley?—A. They came from Conley.

Rosser Took the Witness Again.

Q. You all would say "Jim, this don't fit," and then Jim would change it, wouldn't he?—A. He made changes after we told him his statements wouldn't fit.

Judge Roan said here that he had received a request from the jury to allow three musicians among them to play the piano at the Kimball House. He granted the request.

Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

Dixie Major Shot In Battle in Africa

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 7.—Major Charles S. Young, U. S. A., in charge of the military expedition sent to Liberia by the United States to train the Liberian army in modern warfare, was shot in the right arm and seriously wounded while leading Liberian in a battle with one of the fierce tribes of the interior. A letter from Major Wilson Ballard, of Louisville, told of the fray.

Young has been ordered to his home in Green County until he recovers from the wound and "black fever" which followed.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Men

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

We have in our possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that we think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So we have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write us for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and we are convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

We think we owe it to our fellowmen to send them a copy in confidence, so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what we believe is the quickest acting restorative, upbuilding SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop us a line like this: Interstate Remedy Co., 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and we will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but we send it entirely free.

CABAL TO BLOCK SLATON TAX ACT IS CHARGED TO 'DRYS' AND REFORM FOES

The "dry" members of the House of Representatives and those members who oppose the enactment of tax reform measures have formed a combine to defeat all bills introduced or favored by Speaker Burwell, because the Speaker ruled that the resolution of Mr. Kidd, of Baker, ordering the Temperance Committee to report the Hixon-Searcy (Webb) bill back to the House was out of order Wednesday morning, after Wohlwender, of Muscogee, had held up the business of the House for an entire day with a filibuster.

The formation of the combine is virtually a defiance of Governor John M. Slaton and a refusal to accede to his wishes that tax reform measures and bills putting the taxation system of the State on a business basis be passed. It is a dare to the Governor to veto the House appropriation bill or call an extra session, both of which the Governor has said he will do if the House does not enact tax reform measures or keep its appropriations within the estimated revenues of the State.

Plan to Resurrect Bill.

In addition to trying to defeat the bills of Speaker Burwell and Governor Slaton, the combine will make every effort possible to resurrect the Hixon-Searcy Senate bill from the pigeonhole to which it has been consigned by the Temperance Committee. Mr. Kidd, the apparent author of the resolution which met such an inglorious finish Wednesday morning, declared that he will try to introduce his resolution at the first opportunity.

"We intend to try in every way possible to get the bill out of the committee and before the House at this session," said Mr. Kidd. "I intend to offer my resolution again, and if I can not do that we will try to find some other means of combating the enemies of the bill. We were not treated right by the Speaker when he ruled my resolution out of order. We are prepared to fight for our rights, and if the bill can not come up for the consideration of this House there are a lot of other measures that will receive scant consideration at the hands of the friends of the measure.

Organized Fight on Burwell.

"We intend to defeat every measure offered or favored by Speaker Burwell or the men who aided in the defeat of the resolution ordering the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill. Burwell's bills have no chance of passing this House during the present session. I have nothing personally against any of the Speaker's bills, but we are going to get even for the treatment we got during the consideration of my resolution and for not being given a chance to pass, or at least attempt to pass, the Webb bill that passed the Senate."

The combination of the "dry" forces and those opposed to tax revision was formed the day before the introduction of Mr. Kidd's resolution. Mr. Wohlwender, who started and carried through a successful filibuster, declared Wednesday that the resolution was drawn up by Barry Wright, of Floyd County, one of the prohibition leaders. It was the result of a combination formed at that time between Mr. Wright and other temperance leaders and Messrs. Stovall, of Elbert; Sheppard, of Sumter, and other members who have consistently opposed tax reform measures.

Unite Against Tax Reform.

It was agreed, it is generally understood, that the enemies of tax reform were to support the Kidd resolution on condition that the prohibition members aid them in their efforts to prevent the passage of tax bills. The idea was this:

If the Hixon-Searcy bill were brought out from the committee and consideration of it begun by the House, it would precipitate a "wet" and "dry" fight pure and simple. Debate would naturally wax fast and furious, and the members who oppose tax reform measures figured that the discussion of the bill would occupy the time of the House until adjournment, or at least create such a spirit of unrest and antagonism that the ranks of the tax reformers would be broken.

Then, when Speaker Burwell ruled the Kidd resolution out of order on the grounds that it asked a physical impossibility of the Temperance Committee, the strength of the combine was directed against the presiding officer of the House and his bills, and the bills of others that he favored, and the bills of the other members who opposed the resolution.

Controls Half of House.

The combine at present controls probably half the votes of the House, and renders impossible the passage of any measure that requires a two-thirds vote, and makes exceedingly difficult the passage of any measure requiring even a bare majority. Wednesday afternoon the combine displayed strength enough to defeat two of Speaker Burwell's bills, both constitutional amendments requiring a two-thirds majority to carry. They were administration bills, and the word has been passed among the members of the House that Governor Slaton favored them and desired that they be enacted. Both were overwhelmingly defeated.

The first bill to feel the strength of the combine was Burwell's measure submitting to the qualified voters of the State a proposition to amend the constitution so that the school levy of any one year should not exceed 2 1-2 mills, in addition to the regular school fund provided by the Constitution.

Two of His Measures Beaten.

Though the Speaker himself took the floor and explained the purpose of the bill—that it was merely one of a series of bills designed to place the State on a sound business basis—the bill was defeated by a vote of 106 to 67, lacking by 17 votes the necessary two-thirds majority. The other administration bill, a companion bill to the one defeated first, submitted a proposition that the annual levy for pensions should not exceed 1 1-2 mills. It was defeated, the vote being 79 to 79. It lacked 44 votes of having a two-thirds majority.

Unless the combine can be broken, the result will be that little or no legislation of importance will be enacted during the balance of the session. It means that the Legislature, having already attained the name by doing less than any Legislature in years, will go down in history as a Legislature that did absolutely nothing of importance.

Want to Live Long? Tackle Hardships

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Hardships cause long life, Lord Strathcona, the "grand old man of England and Canada," who celebrated his 93d birthday yesterday, declared so to-day.

"No man's life has been filled with more hardships than mine," he declared, "and yet I am happy and healthy and believe that I will live to be 100. My early experiences in Canada were filled with the hardest kind of work, and I have never gone out of my way to avoid stress, nor distress, either, for that matter.

Stern Policewoman Makes Masher Move

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—"Policeman" Alice Clements, one of the ten newly appointed women police officers, today reported the first police duty any of the ten have performed. She drove a "masher" from a street corner where he was annoying passing women and girls.

Display of her police star and a threat to arrest him if he did not obey her order to move on were sufficient to urge the man from the corner.

Bulgars Prepare To Turn on Turks

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 7.—A third war is imminent in the Balkans, according to a report which was current here to-day during the final stages of the peace conference. A telegram from Sofia intimated strongly that Bulgaria would independently declare war on Turkey after her army is relieved of present operations against her former allies.

Dreams He's in War And Shoots Himself

WARREN, OHIO, Aug. 7.—While dreaming about a Balkan war battle, witnessed in a moving picture theater early in the evening, William H. Grace early to-day reached under his pillow, secured his loaded revolver and shot and killed himself.

Mrs. Grace said her husband had been muttering in his sleep about the Balkan war.

Bullard Bound Over As Slayer of Spain

WAYCROSS, Aug. 7.—Following a long hearing before Justice C. H. Smith, Tom Bullard, 20 years old, held for the murder of Mack Spain, near Waycross, a month ago, was bound over to-day for action by the Grand Jury. One of the witnesses testified that Bullard tried to get him to kill Spain. The defense contended that the remark was made in fun.

The plea of suicide was not introduced but probably will figure in Bullard's trial if he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

HELP DENIED TO TEACHERS BY LEGISLATURE

House Defeats Measure Providing Election on Special Levy to Pay Tutors.

Deaf to the appeals of the country schoolteachers of the State, who have not been paid one cent for more than six months, the Georgia House of Representatives on Thursday morning overwhelmingly defeated a constitutional amendment submitting to the voters of the State a proposition for a special tax levy of 1 mill in 1915 and 1-2 mill in 1916.

The revenue derived from both levies was to be added to the common school fund, and would, advocates of the bill claim, have relieved conditions that exist at present under which the State has permitted its schoolteachers to go unpaid.

The vote was: Ayes, 70; nays, 92. It lacked 53 votes of receiving the requisite two-thirds majority.

Called Slap at Slaton.

Besides being a denial of the request of the schoolteachers that they be paid what is due them, the action of the House in defeating the constitutional amendment is construed as a direct slap at Governor Slaton, inasmuch as the additional tax levy is advocated in his platform, and he has made a special request that the bill be passed, allowing the people to decide whether the teachers shall be paid.

The House by its action put itself on record as being opposed to any measure that will provide for the payment of the teachers.

The defeat of the Governor's constitutional amendment Thursday was accomplished by the same combine that defeated his two bills Wednesday afternoon and which has declared it will fight to the bitter end all efforts to pass measures favored by Speaker Burwell and the Governor.

Hardeman Leads Foes.

The fight against the bill was led by Hardeman, of Jefferson, who declared he was opposed to it because it raised the limit of taxation. Among those who spoke in favor of the bill were Fullbright, of Burke County; Gower, of Crisp; Wall, of Elbert; McMichael, of Marion; Wimberly, of Bibb, and Wheatley, of Sumter.

Prior to the defeat of his constitutional amendment bill Governor Slaton secured the enactment of the first of his measures that the Legislature has seen fit to pass. It was the inheritance tax bill, providing for taxation of legacies ranging from 1 per cent on $5,000 to 6 per cent on $1,000,000. The vote was 135 to 13. An amendment proposd by Greene, of Houston, that all inheritances of whatever amount be taxed was lost.

The House also passed a resolution authorizing the Governor to borrow any amount up to $500,000 necessary to supply the deficit in the State's revenues. The vote was 113 to 0.

Atlanta Team Defeats Soldiers by Score of 2 to 1 in First Match of Sport De Luxe.

With nearly 1,000 pretty girls looking on and applauding, polo, the game de luxe of society, was given its Atlanta premiere at Fort McPherson Wednesday afternoon, and Thursday it was the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the society folk, especially the younger ones, who were thrilled with the riding and dash of the players.

The crowd that saw the Atlanta team defeat the Fort McPherson team, 2 to 1, was one of the largest that has ever been on the parade grounds at the army post. Scores of automobiles lined the sides of the playing field, and a tally-ho filled with hilarious young people added color and gayety to the scene.

The preliminaries, a tug of war on horses and wrestling on horseback, thrilled the spectators. Eight privates, four on a side, engaged in the tug of war. No saddles were used. Private Veotick, Todd, Purdue and Houston dragged Privates Flynn, Williams, Pryde and Reynolds from their horses three times in succession.

Wrestling Bouts Exciting.

The same men engaged in the wrestling on horseback. The contest between Todd and Reynolds was long and strenuous. Purdue and Flynn were evenly matched and it was nip and tuck all the way through. The match between George Veotick and John Pryle was applauded warmly. Pryle finally threw his adversary. At one time their horses galloped the entire length of the field while the wrestlers struggled.

Owing to some misunderstanding, four of the polo contestants failed to appear and the game was called at 4:30 with two men on a side instead of four. J. O. Seamon and F. A. Savage represented Atlanta, while T. C. Miller and Milton Wise represented Fort McPherson. After ten minutes of strenuous play the Atlanta team succeeded in driving the ball through the fort goal twice in quick succession. Not long afterward Milton Wise scored for the Fort.

More Matches Are Planned.

Dr. John A. McLeay, who refereed the game, stated that the exhibition was merely for the purpose of giving Atlanta a sample of what real polo would be like.

"The players are a little out of practice," said he, "but after the newness wears off should be able to give a better account of themselves."

No admission was charged, as this is against the law when Government property is used. It is expected that more games will be arranged.

Shiny Berlin Streets Amaze U. S. Tourists

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—American tourists here have succumbed to the cleanliness of Berlin, which they believe is unsurpassed.

"When I rode over the asphalt pavements the night I arrived," said one to-day, "I thought they were glass, so shiny and smoth were they."

The visitors also are impressed with the power-driven street cleaners, which flush and then wipe the streets, making them as clean as a kitchen floor.

Smokes in Dynamite Warehouse-That's All

OSYKA, MISS., Aug. 7.—The entire town of Osyka was shaken, Sid Taylor, 18 years old, was blown to pieces and three other persons were hurt by the explosion of 200 pounds of dynamite to-day.

Taylor entered a warehouse with a lighted cigarette in his mouth. One of his legs was found nearly a quarter of a mile away.

TRADE IS CALLED GREAT POWER FOR UPLIFT

Dixie Merchants Hear Stirring Addresses—Organization and Advertising Emphasized.

Business is a developer of character; business is a science; the great rewards of the future are for business men, and to them the world must look for the economic development which shall eradicate poverty, disease and crime.

These are the messages given by the speakers at the Southern Merchants' Convention Thursday.

It was the second day's session and Wednesday was a holiday for the delegates. Thursday night, at the Piedmont Driving Club, a reception will be held, the delegates going out in special cars which leave from the Equitable Building.

There will be another meeting Friday at which store management will be the theme.

Delegates are in Atlanta from Georgia, the Carolinas, Alabama and Florida. Key West men are the "travelers" of the gathering, having come the greatest distance.

Commerce Builds Character.

W. W. Orr, the first speaker on Thursday, lauded commerce as the means of developing the highest type of character and the keenest intellect. He cited Marshall Field, Harry Selfridge, John Wanamaker and John B. Stetson as examples, and who gave generously of their time, money and thought for aiding the uplift of their employees. He said:

"Marshall Field turned out fourteen junior partners as millionaries. Selfridge employs 10,000 persons who esteem it a privilege to be allowed to work under the ideal conditions he has created. Wanamaker conducts a school for boys and girls, and makes their promotion dependent on school progress as well as efficient work in his store."

Norman Johnson, editor of a Virginia trade publication, declared the merchant to-day must study his business closer than ever before. He urged organization extension.

He has no sympathy for the merchant who wails about the inroads of the catalogue houses.

"If you would climb down off the dry goods box, stop whittling, and go after business with good, hot letters, you would get the trade the mail order houses now get. You can undersell them," he asserted.

Emphasize Need of Advertising.

He spoke of the growth of jobbing in the South, giving as an instance the increase in the number of dry goods wholesalers from 25 to 105 in twenty years.

W. P. Riley, of Evergreen, Ala., talked about combating the catalogue houses.

Paul T. Harbor, of Commerce, Ga., editor of a newspaper, took "Aggressive Advertising" as his theme.

J. H. McGhee, of Lawrenceville, Ga., led the "Open Parliament" discussion.

"Advertising is an absolute essential to the local merchant," he declared. "We must turn trade from the mail order houses back to the local dealer through the greatest advertising campaign the country ever has seen."

'13' Is Happy Omen to Miss Wilson as Bride

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Lovers of the mystic have discovered the letters in the name of Miss Jessie Wilson's fiance, Francis B. Sayre, number thirteen. Therefore, Miss Wilson will not only be the daughter of the "Lucky Thirteen President," and the thirteenth White House bride, but have as a husband a man about whose career thirteen appears an alluring halo.

Washington society hopes the wedding will take place November 13. It may be stated Miss Wilson will not have thirteen bridesmaids.

Fleet 'Takes' Brest France's 'Gibraltar'

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The French Government was thrown into consternation to-day by the unprecedented feat of a submarine flotilla in penetrating the supposed impregnable harbor at Brest.

The fleet crawled through the water under the very guns of the great forts guarding the approach to the harbor and despite the use of every scientific device known to modern warfare, got through undetected.

Abstainers Pray for Aid in Fighting Drink

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—With a solemn high mass celebrated in the cathedral by Bishop McCort, the national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America was opened here.

The scene was an impressive and significant one as the total abstainers knelt to ask a blessing upon their work in spreading the gospel of total abstinence from strong drink and combating the curse of drunkenness.

SEVERE QUAKE RECORDED.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The Georgetown University observatory announced to-day that a severe earthquake shock was recorded there last night. It is estimated to have been about 4,000 miles from Washington.

NEGRO BOY THIEF CAUGHT.

Two negro boys were seen robbing a saloon at No. 230 Decatur street early Thursday. The police made a quick run to the saloon and caught Jim Thomas, 14, at the back door. The other boy, who was acting as "lookout," escaped.

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

On Face and Head. Was Very Disfigured. Hair Fell Out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Falmouth, Ky. — "Two years ago I was troubled with skin and scalp troubles. I would have pimples that would break out and form sores on my face and head with terrible itching. The eczema on my face and head itched and burned and when I scratched it, it made sores and I was very disfigured for the time being. My head became so sore I could not touch it with a comb; it became a mass of sores. My hair fell out gradually.

"After trying several remedies without much benefit a friend that had been cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment told me and I decided to try them. I was afflicted about a year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them three weeks I was getting better and in less than three months, after using eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and five boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured of eczema." (Signed) Frank Vastine, Dec. 12, 1912.

If you wish a skin clear of pimples, blackheads and other annoying eruptions, hands soft and white, hair live and glossy, and scalp free from dandruff and itching, begin to-day the regular use of Cuticura Soap for the toilet, bath and shampoo, assisted by occasional light applications of Cuticura Ointment. No other method is so agreeable or economical. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

AVIATOR CODY IS KILLED IN FALL IN ENGLAND

Plunges One Thousand Feet to Death With Passenger—Sons See Tragedy.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ALDERSHOT, ENG., Aug. 7.—Colonel Samuel F. Cody, a former citizen of the United States and one of the most famous aviators in the world, and a passenger were killed here to-day while testing a new aeroplane over the military aerodrome.

These two fatalities bring the aviation death list up to 305.

Colonel Cody was one of the pioneer airmen and was commissioned by the British Government to build up the aviation corps of the Imperial army, which he fulfilled to the perfect satisfaction of the War Office. Cody was a relative of William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, and in appearance he resembled the famous American.

Protested Taking Passenger.

The name of the passenger who was killed with Colonel Cody was Evans. The aviator protested against any one accompanying him, saying that he was going to try out a new machine and the risk would be great. Evans was insistent and finally Cody relented.

After a "grass-cutting" circuit Cody shot the machine upward and soon the car was 1,000 feet in the air. Spectators on the field saw the machine begin to wabble as though one of the planes had buckled. Suddenly it turned over on its side and plunged downward. With a crash the machine struck the earth and the petrol tank burst, scattering the fuel over the bodies of the two men.

Cody and Evans were picked up and rushed to a hospital in the cantonments, but the spark of life already had been extinguished.

How He Got His Title.

The manner in which Cody got his title of "Colonel" is interesting. Shortly after King George ascended the throne he wrote a note of congratulation to Cody for some air feats he had performed and called him "Colonel" Cody, evidently confusing him with "Buffalo Bill." The aviator seized the opportunity to acquire a title and since had styled himself Colonel Cody.

Last August Cody won the British army flying tests, taking $25,000 in prizes.

Before taking up aviation Cody was an aeronaut of note and once made a balloon flight over London.

He planned a trip to India in an aeroplane-balloon of his own invention, but his death cuts off all plans for the future. Cody is survived by a widow, who, like her husband, has always been fond of excitement and adventure. She was the first woman in England to make a flight in an aeroplane and is herself an accomplished air car driver.

Colonel Cody came to England from the United States about ten years ago and became a naturalized British subject.

The ill-fated machine was of Cody's own construction and he had intended to attempt a flight across the Atlantic ocean in it.

Two sons of the dead aviator witnessed the tragedy. One of them rushed forward and threw himself on his father's body.

Medical examination showed that Cody's neck had been broken while one arm and several ribs were fractured. One rib had punctured the lung.

Chicago 'Trilby' Has Most Perfect Foot

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The center of attraction and interest at the meeting of the National Association of Chiropodists at the Hotel Marlborough to-day was the American "Trilby," personified in Miss Clara S. Houston, of Chicago.

Seated in an extremely business-like looking office, Miss Houston exposed for the benefit of visitors her well-shaped foot, which by all experts has been unanimously declared the most perfect in America.

Calls Mosquito King Of Disease Carriers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Mosquitoes were to-day branded the "king disease carriers" of the insect world by Dr. Nelson Du Vaj Breicht, formerly of the Public Health Service.

Besides their implements of torture, these insects carry about with them germs of leprosy, yellow fever, malaria, breakbone fever, typhoid and five other brands of malady. Dr. Breicht awarded the gnat second honors as a disease carrier.

AMERICANS SHOT IN SACKING OF DURANGO

investigator, Mr. Lind is commissioned to act as a peacemaker between the leaders of the various revolutionary factions, but it is doubtful if Huerta will allow an alien to act in such a capacity.

Huerta Has New Slogan.

"Mexican affairs for Mexicans," was the laconic remark made by President Huerta to-day to his followers in Congress who called at the National Palace.

Previous to the statement issued to-day by the Mexican Minister, the United States Embassy had received the following note from Secretary of State Bryan:

You may say to the Mexican Foreign Minister that Governor Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace, and that President Wilson feels that his presence there will contribute toward a settlement of existing difficulties.

The Mexican Government should await the President's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers.

Not only in this city but throughout the entire republic increased antagonism toward Americans is being shown Huerta and his advisers believe that if war should be declared it would result in making a unit of all the revolutionary bands so that a solid front could be presented against any foreign foe.

Within the past seven months the Government has placed orders for 100,000 rifles and a commensurate supply of ammunition, as well as mountain and field guns.

President Wilson Will Not Tolerate Insult to Lind.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The American Government and the Huerta government apparently have locked horns over the status which John Lind, the President's special envoy to Mexico, will have when he arrives at the Mexican capital.

Reports from Mexico City show that General Huerta is preparing what officials term a "grandstand" play over the coming of Lind, in an effort to force the latter into an embarrassing position.

Administration officials say that the sensational statement emanating from Huerta to-day is in the nature of a blind, by which he hopes to scare the United States Government out of an aggressive campaign for mediation. They laugh at reports that Mr. Lind will not be treated by Huerta with due respect when he reaches Mexico City.

Anxious as is the President to keep hands off Mexico, officials say he will not tolerate any premeditated humiliation to his personal representative.

Secretary of State Bryan declined to comment in any way upon the reports from Mexico City to-day concerning the decision of President Huerta to bar Governor Lind from Mexico. The Secretary said that the State Department has not been informed of his intended action and that, even if it were informed of it, the United States Government could not take a decisive move until after the personal representative of the President has actually been deported from Mexico or otherwise denied by President Huerta's government.

Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, refused to make any comment on the ultimatum issued by the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Americans Shot in Sacking of Durango.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—M. A. Leach, a business man of San Francisco, told Secretary of State Bryan to-day a thrilling story of the sacking of the city of Durango by Revolutionists on June 18, which he witnessed.

The entire city was looted, he says, and German, French and American stores were burned, entailing a property loss of more than $5,000,000.

Scores of Mexicans were shot down and dragged through the streets.

Roger Palmer, an Englishman, employed by the Mexican National Railway, was killed because he failed to open a safe.

Carlos Bombrandis, mining man, and L. W. Elder, both Americans, were wounded by a bomb used to force the doors of the McDonald Institute, where many of the foreigners had assembled for protection.

H. W. Stepp, an American civil engineer, was shot through the leg because he failed to deliver 500 pesos he did not have.

Leach says a number of women sought safety in the archbishop's palace but the bishop was taken prisoner and held for ransom of half a million pesos. Hundreds of women and girls were outraged.

Special Envoy Leaves Galveston on Battleship.

GALVESTON, Aug. 7.—John E. Lind, special representative of President Woodrow Wilson, sailed at 10 o'clock this morning on the battleship New Hampshire for Vera Cruz, Mexico. From Vera Cruz he will go direct to Mexico City to lay the message of President Wilson before President Huerta of Mexico.

Former Governor Lind was accompanied by Mrs. Lind. They were delayed by a railroad wreck. A special interurban electric car brought them from Houston.

At the outskirts of the city an automobile was waiting. Mr. and Mrs. Lind entered the machine and were driven to the water front. A tender from the battleship took them to the vessel, anchored four miles out.

On board the special envoy refused to see visitors. On the way from the interurban to the water front Governor Lind consented to see newspaper men.

"I do not know how long I will remain in Mexico," he said. "I do not expect to be offered the permanent Ambassadorship, and if I am, the offer will be declined. My mission in Mexico has already, I believe, been well defined, and I will communicate with no one except the President."

When told of President Huerta's statements as appearing in press dispatches to-day, Governor Lind said he could form no opinion on this matter until thoroughly acquainted with all the facts in the case. Further than that he refused to comment.

Before departing from Galveston, Governor Lind was in communication with the State Department at Washington.

Scholar Says Devil Designed New Styles

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Current fashions in women's gowns are incentives to immorality, according to Professor Allan Hoben, of the University of Chicago School of Divinity, at the Sunday school institute in session at the university. The latest styles, he said, were the devil's designs.

"For any woman to be well dressed to-day," he said, "is for her to be measurably harmful. Women have distracted attention from their faces to their forms. This is distinctly unfortunate."

Militants Active as Mrs. Pankhurst Sinks

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ABERGAVENNY, ENG., Aug. 7.—Militant suffragettes burned a cricket pavilion and a hayrick near here to-day.

Before the pavilion had been fired a big banner was stretched on poles near by, on which was the inscription: "Just to Remind You That Mrs. Pankhurst Is Dying."

STAID OLD NORWICH, TOO.

NORWICH, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Following the appearance here of women wearing a skirt slit to the knees and with nothing under it but flesh-colored tights, Mayor Silas W. Berry has ordered the arrest of any woman who wears the slashed garment.

ALL SAMEE MEN.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 7.—Mayor Bading has declared that the women of Milwaukee may wear any kind of bathing suit as long as they wear as much as the men do.

SECOND MOVE TO RESCUE WEBB BILL FAILS

Resolution, Backed by Anti-Slaton Forces in the House, Ruled Out of Order.

A second attempt to rescue the Hixon-Searcy (Webb) bill from the subcommittee to which it has been assigned by the Temperance Committee, was made Thursday morning by Representative Kidd, of Baker County, backed by the combine of the dry and anti-tax reform forces that has declared war on the Speaker and the Governor.

The attempt, which if it had been success would have effectually blocked legislation, was frustrated by Speaker Burwell, who ruled that Mr. Kidd's resolution calling out the bill could not be introduced under the rules of the day. The resolution was prevented from getting to the desk of the Clerk only by about ten minutes. Shortly after the House convened Blackburn introduced an "order of the day," which failed to provide for the introduction of resolutions. Five minutes later Kidd tried to introduce his resolution.

"Resolutions can not be introduced at this time," said Speaker Burwell.

"This is a privilege resolution," Mr. Kidd insisted.

"It makes no difference what kind of a resolution it is," replied the Speaker. "The order of the day has been adopted and resolutions can not be introduced."

The following bills were introduced into the House Thursday morning:

By Wheatley, of Sumter—A bill to appropriate $13,286.80 to pay for work already done on the State Capitol and the Executive Mansion, and work that is to be done.

By Hart, of Warren; Allen, of Blasscock, and Turner, of Bulloch—A bill regulating the inspection of asylums, sanitariums and convents.

Negro Sentenced to Death for Attack

WAYCROSS, Aug. 7.—For attacking a white woman at Homerville early this year, Lige Lane, a negro, will hang at Homerville September 10. He was sentenced at a special session of the Clinch Superior Court to-day by Judge T. A. Parker.

Lane's motion for a new trial was refused by Judge Parker and the Court's position upheld by the Supreme Court.

SEA WATERSPOUTS SEEN.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 7.—Three huge water spouts formed at Rockville forty miles from Charleston, afforded several thousand visitors attending the annual Sea Island yacht races a rare marine spectacle. The spouts were visible for 30 minutes.

Masons' Convention Opens in Gainesville

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 7.—The Masons of the Ninth Congressional District are in annual convention here. Sixty-nine lodges are represented by 100 delegates.

The address by Thomas H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, Past Grand Master, was a public part of the program at Brenau Auditorium Wednesday.

On the stage was Colonel John E. Redwine, of Gainesville, one of the oldest Masons in Georgia. He has held many offices of honor. He is about 80 years old.

Dr. J. C. Bennett, of Jefferson, presided. Business and secret sessions were held, with initiation. A trolley ride to the river with a watermelon cutting was one feature of the entertainment.

Convent for Negro Girls Opened Here

Catholics of Atlanta will tender a welcome Friday afternoon from 5 to 7 to four Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, who arrived in Atlanta some days ago to take charge of the Catholic school for negro children, 103 North Boulevard.

The school was built by the Fathers of the African Mission and was opened in October, 1912. A convent for negro girls will be opened by the four sisters and the public will be shown through the school and convent for the first time Friday.

After the welcome there will be a benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

K. of C. Debate on $1,000,000 Offices

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—A proposition to move the national headquarters from New Haven, Conn., to Washington and erect a $1,000,000 building at the Capital was the principal subject for consideration at the closing business session to-day of the thirty-first annual convention of the Knights of Columbus. It was predicted the proposition would be defeated as the various councils have rejected the measure in a semi-referendum vote.

Changes in the insurance laws also were considered. One plan was to reduce the assessment paid by the older members, and the other was to issue a paid-up policy to all members who are 70 years old.

Man's Plea in Court Is Heard for Block

SANTA MONICA, CAL., Aug. 7.—E. C. Shapiro, held on a charge of passing a worthless check, pleaded his case before Judge G. Edwin Brown with such vigor that he was heard half a block from the court room. Despite the vocal strength of his plea, Shapiro was held to answer before the Superior Court.

The Numbers 4, 11, 21 in Georgia

When you have destroyed the boy's pride and honor,
When you have killed the soul of the girl,
This year,
Next year to adopt
Probation and a home for the wayward
Will not help them or their mothers.
For those now in need we plead.

Cholera serum for hogs has been provided.

Good!

Protection for cows from the tick—

Fine!

Expert knowledge of bugs and chemicals to save and foster our crops—

Splendid!

Higher education for men and boys—

Excellent!

But the miserable—the unfortunate—those who are slipping down into the slime which underlies—what of these?

In one home lives a mother. Her boy cut four stalks of sugarcane and with another boy stole them from a field.

Your court and ours fined them forty dollars apiece.

They were strangers, one nineteen and the other twenty. They had thirty cents between them and no friends. Eight months in our chaingang was their sentence for not having forty dollars each. A minister found them in stripes at Christmas. He got them out. Their parents had not known of their plight.

IS THIS RIGHT? You can—you will prevent the recurrence of such cases. Pass the Probation Bill. Give your Judge the power to save first offenders.

E. C. Branson of the Normal College at Athens states that crime has increased in Georgia since 1880 approximately twice as fast as the population.

Think of this. Then consider Illinois.

In that State, commitments have decreased forty per cent in the ten years since the adoption of the Indeterminate Sentence, despite the great increase of population. Half of the States have incorporated the Indeterminate Sentence in their laws.

Its aim is "to retain the convict in prison until he is fitted for freedom, making such fitness for freedom the condition precedent of his release."

IT WILL ENCOURAGE ROAD BUILDING.

To the fear of the lash it adds the far greater incentive, the hope of winning freedom by good work.

Senate Bill No. 11 provides for Probation. Senate Bill No. 21 covers the Indeterminate Sentence. The Senate has passed both of them without opposition. And the Judiciary Committee of the House has again favorably reported both Bills for passage in the House.

To incorporate them into the laws of Georgia only an opportunity for a vote in the House is needed.

With them goes House Bill No. 4. This provides the home for wayward girls. They to-day are the pressing problem in our courts. They are prisoners. Yet you would not place them in the chaingang or with hardened criminals.

Since you will not do that with a boy under sixteen for whom you provide a home, you can scarcely do it with a girl.

And yet the State has to care for them.

While providing serum for sick hogs, and a tick cure for cattle, and horticulture and entomology for our fields, and college training for our boys, surely you will provide for these, our girls.

The Prison Commission urges this. The Appropriations Committee and the Penitentiary Committee report favorably House Bill No. 4.

THESE NUMBERS, 4, 11 and 21, entitle these bills to a hearing.

But more than this, the meaning of these measures to Georgia and the unfortunate—that there is nothing in them for any one excepting the miserable at the bottom of the pit—these facts make certain, we believe, that they will be heard and made the law of our State.

Stop and think of the homes they touch.

And you will urge and give them the right of way.

Remember the purpose of the Crucified—

Jesus died, not alone that you might live, but "to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

SENATE AWAITS BILL PROVIDING TAX REFORM

Miller-Anderson Measure Creating Office of State Assessor Expected to Pass Monday.

The Senate Finance Committee will take the firing line Friday in an effort to have the upper House pass a tax equalization bill revolutionizing the present State taxing methods. The bill, drawn by Chairman Miller and President Anderson, has been agreed upon by the Finance Committee and will be reported upon favorably Friday morning, and probably will be passed not later than Monday.

The bill provides for a State Tax Assessor to be appointed by the Governor for a term of six years, who shall determine if the counties are returning a just amount of taxable property. He will have all the powers outlined for the proposed State Tax Commission.

Should the State Tax Assessor and the county boards fail to agree the bill provides that a hearing may be held before an arbitration board of three members, one to be appointed by the County Board, one by the State Tax Assessor and the third by the Governor. The county boards are to consist of three members.

County Treasurers Hit.

Wednesday afternoon two important bills were passed; the first by Senator Stark providing for the permanent registration of voters, and the other by Senator Watts, giving to counties the option to abolish the office of County Treasurer.

The bill providing for the appointment of a special commission to dispose of the present Governor's mansion was defeated by the close vote of 21 to 19 after a heated debate.

Senator McNeill declared the bill gave too much power to the commission, as $500,000 of the State's money was involved. Senator Harrell declared that a lobby of land dealers favoring the bill had existed a long time.

New Registration Bill Passes.

Senator Stark's permanent registration bill was passed after a vigorous fight by Senator Harrell who declared the measure would tear down the registration laws which keep the negro from voting.

In reply Senator Miller assured the Senate that there were sufficient provisions in the bill to eliminate the negro vote just as it is eliminated now. Senator Burts's amendment, which was passed, provides that the voter shall be entitled to permanent registration unless registered under the provisions of subsections 1 and 2 of paragraph 4, section of the Code of 1910.

These clauses qualify for voting the Civil War and the Indian war, the Civil War and the Indian Wars, and all persons legally descended from these.

Airman's Aide Sues Him for Losing Race

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Aug. 7.—Roy F. Donaldson, who entered the recent international elimination balloon race at Kansas City, was the defendant today in an unusual suit, the aftermath of Donaldson's mishap in the air race.

Emery F. Lanning, who was aide to Donaldson, filed suit for the return of $150 he contributed as his share of the expenses of the flight. Lanning asserts Donaldson became afflicted with "cold feet." Donaldson in return states Lanning spoiled the flight by dropping several bags of ballast when he was trying to correct a mistake he (Lanning) made.

SAVANNAH EAGLE HONORED.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 7.—Colonel William L. Grayson, of Savannah, who has been active in the affairs of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, has been nominated for Grand Chaplain at the annual convention now in session in Baltimore.

ONION IS A STRONG NAME!

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Edward D. Onion got permission from Justice Guy to change his name to Bartlett, on the plea that his right name brought upon him "jokes, banter and sarcasm."

Woman Admits She Defrauded Veterans

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 7.—Lying on her deathbed, Mrs. J. K. McCloud, of Charleston, S. C., widow of a Confederate soldier, admitted to-day to J. A. Rector, an attorney of St. Louis, that she had secured thousands of dollars from Confederate organizations of the South posing as a widow of the late J. K. Alcorn, former Governor and United States Senator of Mississippi.

Mrs. McCloud, who is 90 years of age, operated as an imposter in practically every city in the South. Attorney Rector is a grandson of the late Governor Alcorn and tracked the woman all over the South.

Cartersville Pays Sam Jones Tribute

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 7.—To-morrow will be Sam Jones Memorial Day at Sam Jones Tabernacle. The 10 o'clock service will be given up to the life and work of the evangelist. Talks will be made by "Gypsy" Smith, Bob Jones and John Callahan. This is one of the feature services of the meeting and will be an annual affair.

To-morrow afternoon services will be held at which negro people will have an opportunity to pay tribute to the famous revivalist, who was a great friend of the race.

Non-union Men May Prolong Mine Strike

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 7.—Indications to-day were that the strike of 18,000 copper miners in the Calumet region would be prolonged.

The non-union miners are united now and are demanding the same concessions from the operators as the striking union men. They wanted an eight-hour day and a minimum wage of $3.

Col. M. Paul LeGrand Of Montgomery Dies

MOBILE, Aug. 7.—Colonel M. Paul LeGrand, one of the leading business men of Montgomery, and one of the most beloved men in the entire State, died at his home at Perdido Bay, near here, last night.

He was one of the pioneer bankers of Alabama, having been vice president of the Merchants and Planters Bank and one of the founders of the First National Bank. He was a trustee of the University of Alabama.

Dinner Dance at Club.

Each Thursday evening the dinner dances at the Capital City Country Club are becoming more popular. Already several parties have been planned for the regular dinner dance, and fully 200 people will dine on the attractive veranda and terrace.

One of the largest parties will be that given by Mr. and Mrs. George Forrester in compliment to Mrs. Everett Ginn, of Winchester, Mass., who is spending August with her sister, Mrs. Laura Wyatt. Mr. and Mrs. Forrester's guests will include Mrs. Ginn, Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lipscomb, of Athens; Miss Eugenia Richardson and Mr. Robert Forrester.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Paxon give a swimming party in the afternoon, after which they will have dinner and later enjoy the dance. In this party there will be twelve guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block will be among those entertaining. The guest of honor of this party will be Miss Anna Lowry Eason, of Lenoir, Tenn., who is visiting Miss Emma Lowry Freeman. Besides Miss Eason and Miss Freeman, the guests will be Miss Alice May Freeman, Mr. Arthur Clarke, Mr. Walter Nash and Mr. James Ragan.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown will entertain a party of eight for Miss Mary Brown and Miss Jessie McKee, who has just returned from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKee will be their guests also.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sciple will have a few friends as their guests.

Others entertaining parties are Mr. and Mrs. William Kiser, Messrs. Lee Harvey, S. C. Flemming, A. S. Watson, Joseph Brown Connally, J. M. Moore, Winter Alfriend, Edward Alfriend and William Dickey.

Mrs. Glover Hostess.

Mrs. H. B. Glover entertained at an informal luncheon Thursday at her home on Seventh street. As she is going away to live, this affair was in the form of a farewell party to her friends. The table was decorated with roses and covers were laid for six.

The Ten Club.

The Ten Club will be entertained by Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin Saturday at the East Lake Country Club, in honor of Dr. William Warren Landrum, of Louisville, the past, present and ever-will-be czar of the club.

Members of the club will leave at 3:30 in hte afternoon. A committee consisting of Mr. W. W. Orr and Professor M. L. Brittain have arranged an exceedingly interesting program. In addition to the members of the club, Judge Lumpkin has invited the following, and each has accepted his invitation:

Governor John M. Slaton, Judge Arthur G. Powell, Dr. E. L. Connally and Mr. Henry H. Cabaniss.

Tallyho Ride.

Miss Ruth Moody will entertain at a tallyho party Thursday evening for Miss Louise des Vergers, the guest of Mrs. W. A. Wimbish, and for Mrs. King, who is with Mrs. John Ryan for the summer.

The guests will be Misses Edith Hammond, Josephine Stoney, Elizabeth Morgan, Eleanor Macey, Mary Adelaide Caverly, Penelope Clarke, Lula Black, Marguerite Olson, Elizabeth Evans, Mamie Kirkpatrick, Mary Bowen and her guest, Margaret Lowman, of Birmingham; Louise Ryan, Marquis Ritch, Messrs. Creed, Ralph Kimball, Charles Goldson, Herman Evans, Stewart Hazzard, J. H. Lucas, Paul Corrigan, T. S. Lockwood, Charles Turner, Dr. Edmondson, Captain and Mrs. John Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wimbish, Captain and Mrs. Thomas Moody will chaperone the party.

For Mr. and Mrs. Paxon.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Brown entertained at an informal dinner Wednesday evening at their home on Piedmont avenue for Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Paxon, whose marriage was a recent event.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Paxon the guests were Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally.

Afternoon Reception.

Mrs. William Fambrough and Miss Marie Norris entertained at an afternoon reception Thursday in compliment to Miss Minnie Fambrough, of Boston, the guest of Mrs. Fambrough, and Miss Marie Beatie, of New York, the guest of Miss Norris.

The house was elaborately decorated with yellow flowers. Punch was served on the porch by Misses Lillie Tipton and Winnie Ison.

Assisting in the entertainment of the guests were Misses Edith Norris, Margaret Farnsworth, Allene Parryman, Charisle McClain, Irene Bennet, Eugenia Jarrard, Alma Norris, Mrs. J. C. Norris, Mrs. A. L. Norris and Miss Marian Fambrough, of Rock Mart, Ga.

About 100 guests called between the hours of 5 o'clock and 7 o'clock.

For Mrs. Hall.

Mrs. J. T. Harrison will entertain at a shower on Friday afternoon for Mrs. Ethel B. Hall, whose wedding to Mr. Wilson Brown, of Mississippi, will be an event of August 14.

About 100 guests have been invited.

Mrs. Loveman Hostess.

Mr. Bert A. Loveman entertained at a bridge luncheon Thursday morning; twelve guests were present.

For Miss Harrison.

Mrs. Spencer Atkinson entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for her niece, Miss Mary Virginia Harrison, of Brunswick.

The house was artistically decorated with brilliant colored flowers, marigolds, gladioli and asters. The dining room table had as its centerpiece a basket of white asters, and here all the details were in white.

The score cards were hand painted in flowers and were tied with lavender bows.

The prizes were a French print and a bridge set. Twenty girls were present.

Church Holds Candy Sale.

The ladies of Wesley Memorial Church will hold a cake and candy sale at Kenny's Tea Store Saturday, for the benefit of the church fund.

COLUMBUS WATER PURE.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 7.—In the midst of the waterworks controversy in Columbus, when some have attempted to make it appear that there is an epidemic of typhoid fever, a report of the analysis of the water has been received from Ray C. Werner, of Atlanta, State analyst, showing that it is pure and wholesome.

SEEK TO JOIN CIVIC BODIES.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 7.—An unsuccessful effort has been made here to combine the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. It is believed, however, that soon the two organizations will be combined.

An Outclearing of One Hundred Seventy-Five Dresses

Dresses of Cotton Crepes and Voiles, Linens, Silk Foulards and Poplins and Black China Silks

The Most Drastic Pricing We Have Done This Season

A wonderfully attractive collection of dresses, styled and fashioned in ways that were charming enough to win them a place in our ready-to-wear section.

However, we are putting the good ship in shape for its fall voyage---which, alone, accounts for the pricing. But it is no time nor occasion for the whys and wherefores of such prices, the prices themselves tell the big facts---women of Atlanta will know what to expect of a Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. sale wherein the former prices and sale prices differ as these do.

At 8:30, then, to-morrow!

$2.19 For $5.75 to $7.50 Linen Dresses

Forty-seven of these.

Of French linen in tans, browns, blues, lavenders—about all colors—and various styles, trimmed with folds and bands of contrasting colors and buttons, some have lace-trimmed collars.

$5.00 For $10.00 to $21.75 Lingerie Dresses

Seventy-seven of these:

Splendid choosing here—a number of these have been in the house but a few days. Of sheer soft lingerie cloth, plain and striped crepe and voile, made attractive with rich laces and embroideries. White and white touched with colors.

$9.75 For $16.95 to $25.00 Dresses

In all there are thirty-one of these. Dresses of black China silks, of foulards, of crepe de chines, of nets and laces and of cotton crepes—these hand-embroidered. Too many different models to attempt picturing them. See them! Not one was less than $16.95, and from that to $25.00.

$11.95 For New $15.00 Silk Dresses

Both Silk and Cotton Dresses.

Twenty new Fall dresses of soft and gracefully draping silk poplins have been added to this outclearing. Why? Because we would! Rather simple but elegant affairs showing many style points to be in favor this fall—you will like them. Choose from Copenhagen, navy, gray, lavender and black.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

.:. Their Married Life .:.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WITH no prices on the menu!" repeated Helen in amazement. "Then they can charge us anything they please?"

"That's the idea. Most of the smart places in Paris never price their food. They're supposed to cater to people who are concerned only with the quality of the dishes—not with the price."

"But, Warren, WE don't want to go to such a place! I'd be so worried about what the check was going to be—I couldn't eat a thing."

"Well we're going to one right now for dinner—Cafe D'Armenonville. One of the show places in the Bois. You'll see more smart Parisians there than you've seen yet. While we're over here we're going to do Paris. What difference does a few dollars make one way or the other?"

"But, dear, I'm not dressed for a pretentious place."

"Well, put on something light then—anything will do. They don't expect Americans to dress much. They think we all come from a sort of wild and woolly West. All they want is our money."

"Well, I don't think we've got so much," laughed Helen. "Not enough to go to a place where they don't price their food."

"Guess we can stand it for once. Hurry up—it's almost 7."

A little later they left the hotel. Outside Warren raised his cane at a passing taxi.

Warren Determined.

"Of course we've got to have a cab," impatiently, as Helen made her usual protest. "It's the only way you can get to that place. Now, you leave this to me. We're going to Armenonville's to-night, and we're going to do the thing right. Hang the expense!"

When Warren started out in this spirit Helen knew it was useless to try to curb him. He was in the mood to spend money—and he was going to spend it. She leaned back in the cab with a sigh of resignation.

But as this was Helen's first drive through the Champs Elysees, she soon forgot everything else in the beauty of the scene.

Under the trees, along the drive, were chairs and tables, mostly deserted now. But from the gay gowns of the few people who still lingered Helen could imagine what it must have been an hour earlier.

"I'll not have the time, but you ought to come out to the Bois some afternoon for tea," suggested Warren. "Nothing like it in the world. There's Armenonville's through there," pointing to a mass of brilliant lights glimmering through a grove of trees.

Cabs, taxies and victorias were lined up three and four abreast in the wide graveled driveways before this famous restaurant.

"But we're not going to keep this taxi?" asked Helen anxiously, as they waited their turn to draw up before the entrance.

"That's just what we're going to do," snapped Warren. "We'll not take any chances of getting one when we're through."

To order dinner from an unpriced menu, and to feel that a taxi was industriously ticking up the francs—the evening held little prospect of pleasure for Helen.

Warren led the way through the spacious hallway to the garden beyond. The place was like fairyland, with banks of red geraniums, a gleaming fountain, and ropes of colored lights festooned through trees and shrubbery. There must have been a hundred or more tables on the lawn, yet all were taken, and a group of people were waiting.

"You stay here." Warren strode off determinedly after a headwaiter.

Helen's gaze followed him anxiously. She saw him slip some money into the hand of the suave Frenchman, and a moment later they were being seated at one of the few tables that had been "reserved."

"Warren, I thought you didn't believe in bribing headwaiters?"

"Well, you've got to do it here. This is a show place, I tell you, and you've got to come across. We'd have stood there all night without a table if I hadn't forked up."

Helen's first concern was in the menu—a large card with a fantastically decorated border of lobsters and crabs. She had hoped all along that Warren was wrong and that the prices would be given, but there was not a single figure. This bill of fare was to show only what you could get—not what you would have to pay for it.

"Oh, dear, just order one or two things! I'm not very hungry—and you had luncheon, didn't you?"

But Warren only glowered at her, and gave his order to the waiter by checking off with his pencil some of the dishes with the longest and, as Helen thought, most expensive looking French names.

"Now, see here," when the waiter had gone, "this isn't so bad as you think. The theory of this is that they charge in proportion to what you order. For instance, if you only have a roast and a salad, you pay more proportionately for those two dishes than you would if you had four or five. That's fair enough."

"Well, if that's their method, then why don't they put down the prices and deduct a certain percentage when you order a number of things? Wouldn't that be a good idea for any restaurant? Think how much more people would order if they felt they were getting a discount."

"Huh! Sort of on the principle of five cents apiece, six for a quarter!" grinned Warren.

"But don't you see people WOULD order more," insisted Helen, growing enthusiastic over her idea. "I'm sure any of the big New York restaurants would coin money on that plan."

"Better try to sell 'em the idea when you get back," scoffed Warren. "They might pay you something for it."

"Well, they might!" defiantly.

Just then a striking beauty, in a clinging white gown and a drooping leghorn hat with red poppies, swept by, leaving a trail of perfume.

"Dear, some of the gowns ARE beautiful," mused Helen, now giving herself up to a study of the place.

A Pretty Girl.

"Not a bad-looking girl over there in yellow," commented Warren.

"I was just going to speak of her—that's the most WONDERFUL gown!"

The girl was dark and slender, with heavy brown hair drawn low into a simple coil on her neck. Her dress was of pale yellow chiffon, with brown fringe; her hat of the same chiffon was wreathed with yellow-petaled, brown-eyed daisies, and the streamers of brown velvet ribbon were knotted under her chin.

Most of the hats had either ties or streamers, with the trimming placed at some daring angle. While they must have looked very extreme in the shop windows, they were charming on the women who wore them.

"After all, the French women DO know how to wear their clothes."

"The ones you see here ought to," was Warren's comment. "That's about their only job."

"Dear, I haven't any idea what I'm eating," Helen exclaimed suddenly.

"Well, it's good, isn't it? That's sweetbread with truffles and wine sauce, en casserole—one of their specialties here. Only place in Paris you can get it like this."

But to Helen the food was always secondary to the atmosphere of the place and the people. And now she absent-mindedly ate her dinner, intent upon the scene about her.

"A woman never has any palate," grumbled Warren. "This dish is a work of art. There's a smoothness and flavor to this sauce that you wouldn't get anywhere else in the world. But you don't appreciate it! A dinner like this is wasted on any woman."

"Why, dear, that isn't fair," indignantly. "I think it's delicious, and I'm eating every bit of it."

A Treat.

"Oh, you're eating it, but might as well be eating corned beef hash in a dairy lunch room. I tell you this is a treat! No wonder the chef who made that sauce didn't want a price put on it. You can't price a thing like that any more than you can price a rare picture," enthused Warren, growing eloquent under the influence of the vintage wine.

Even Helen forgot her dread of the check and became enthusiastic when the waiter served the fruits au champagne. It was a tall glass dish of cut fruit, wonderful strawberries, cherries, pineapples and peaches floating in an iced syrup of blended wines and cordials.

When later the check was brought face down on a plate, instinctively Helen leaned forward to see the total. But Warren took it up quickly, glanced over the items, drew a crisp note from his wallet and laid it over the check. Helen was not familiar enough with French money to know the amount of the note, nor could she tell by the change returned.

"Dear, how much was that check?" unable to keep back the question.

"Well, I've paid it, haven't I? And it was a blamed good dinner. Now we'll have no harangues over expenses this evening. Come on—let's see if we can find that cab."

The cab! Helen had wholly forgotten that the cab was waiting—and they had been there almost three hours!

Warren located their driver and in a few moments they were whirling back through the Champs Elysees, now more beautiful than ever with the lights gleaming through the dark trees, and with every now and then a glimpse of the Seine and its jeweled bridges.

But the charm of all this was lost on Helen. She was not leaning back and enjoying the beauty of the drive. Instead she was sitting bolt upright, every muscle strained, as she tensely tried to figure out how much that dinner and the three hours' wait of the cab must have cost.

The Brighter Side of Turkey Trotting

An Expert's Advice of How This Famous Dance Can Be Purged of All Objectionable Features.

(Top picture) "This is a dance where shoulders count."
(Bottom picture) "There should be a foot of space between partners."

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE new school of turkey trotting has brought into existence two groups of rabid partisans—those who do the dance and know how jolly is the dancing, and those who look on and see how shocking is the prancing. And meanwhile turkey trotting is so earnestly done that it seems in a fair way to be done to death—and a fallow field for humorists will thus become sterile and barren of little jokes like the famous, "She is more trotted against than trotting."

In our age of specialization, turkey trotting is not sufficiently specialized, and every little freak step that wriggles its way into life masquerades under the one name or that of some barnyard or menageric relative. There is a brighter side to turkey trotting; there is a possibility of having it become a dance as well regulated as the two-step, and yet free to express the true dancing joy-of-living of the partners who merrily whirl through its mazes.

For confirmation of this theory, while in New York I went to Leon Errol, the clever originator of "turkish trottishness," one of the features of the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," and with clever Stella Chatelaine, the partner of dances and of life to help him, Mr. Errol showed me how you should and how you shouldn't do the "trot."

Correct Position.

"Here is the correct position for learning the trot," said Mr. Erroll, illustrating the while. "The girl places her hands on the shoulders of her partner. The man places one hand under the elbow of his partner and his bent elbow under her other arm. In this position every sway of a partner who knows the dance throws the shoulders of the other partner into the proper swing; not a wriggle or a suggestive movement, but the swaying to music that is the natural expression used in all dances that are a real expression of joy set to music instead of conventional ballroom steps.

"If you want to see the art of dancing, naturally you go to see Genee, and you enjoy without any thought of spending years in trying to master the art of dancing as she has done.

"But when you go to see the modern, up-to-date dancing of the stage you have a weather eye on learning to do it, too—and springing a new step, at the next rather plays you false. Here are three things to remember about stage dancing—it consists of tempo, a trick step and a bit of acting to catch the eye. In comedy dancing like mine, the tempo is very quick—whirlingly rapid without a break in its movements, that fairly pile up on top of one another. Then there is the trick step worked out to be as different as possible, and finally the comic element to make it go with the audience.

Allow For Freedom.

"The amateur turkey trotter must copy the first two parts of stage turkey trotting, and avoid the acting like grim death.

"Don't play to the gallery—don't do an exaggerated step and fairly revel in the idea that the people are looking at you in admiring wonder. They are probably wondering all right—how you can be so vulgar or so foolish.

"Take a refined position that leaves at least a foot of space between the partners and allow for freedom of motion. Holding your partner too closely not only makes the dance suggestive, and gives too much chance to the critical enemies of turkey trotting to get in their work, but makes it impossible for the amateur to dance with the graceful free sway that is the chief beauty of turkey trotting.

"Then with a clear picture in your mind of what you want to do, work out a step. Sometimes Miss Chatelaine and I see little children dancing to an organ grinder's tunes on the streets—that suggests a step—and we may spend as much as two hours in working out the one step.

"Turkey trotting demands a free yet firm position that lets the partners work together; an absolute feeling for time, and ability to follow the music without a break; the utmost patience in working out a step, and ability and imagination to work out little trick steps that will add to the mere sway that is the basis of all turkey trotting and allied dances.

"We must always keep in mind that this is a dance in which shoulders count. In the now sedate waltz, the position of arm-around-waist used to be considered rather risque—well, you don't have to assume that position if you are going to trot correctly. The position I suggest—girl's arms on man's shoulders, and man's arms used as levers under girl's elbows, is staid, respectable and guaranteed to produce graceful rhythmical trotting.

"As in other departments of life, and dancing," concluded Mr. Errol, "there is a right way and there is a wrong way. But the right way to turkey trot is pleasing to observe and pleasing to do. If the amateur will assume the position I teach and practice one step at a time patiently and in faithful effort to keep in perfect rhythm with the music, he will soon find himself able to do a modern dance without a shade of vulgarity and without a trace of amateurish ill-at-easeness."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WE got a other new white hired gurl, her naim is Vera. Ma sed it is a pritty naim, but I think it is a funny naim for a hired gurl. Hired gurls used to be called Bridget & Nora & thay was good hired gurls, too. But things is different now. The last three hired gurls we had was Marguerite & Sylvia & Belladonna, & now we have Vera. She is vary pritty. Pa sed she had dreemy eyes & Ma sed it was from sleeping too sound that her eyes was dreemy.

Vera is riteing a play. She wuddent tell Pa & Ma that she was riteing it, but she tealed me so I promised her that I wuddent say a word to Pa & Ma. The naim of the play is Alone in Milledgeville, & it tells about a butiful young gurl that fell in luv with a keaper in the Milledgeville insane asilum. He was a vilyun. The gurl goes to Milledgeville to see him beekaus he had tealed her that he owned a grate big estate. He took the gurl to the asilum & toald her that all the insane peepul thare was his servants. She beleeved him at first and then the horriberl truth dawned on her. Then she sed in poetry to the vilyun:

You have me at yure mercy here
Of that thare ain't no doubt;
I think I shall go bughouse, deer,
If you don't git me out.
I'd rather be a peasant's bride
& housekeep in a hut
Than wed a chump in this here dump
& get to be a nut.

Then Vera toald me that finished the first act. The curtain goes down wen she is reading them lines to the vilyun. The second act is the saim as the first, in the asilum. One of the pashunts thare isent crazy at all, he is a rich young man wich is beeing kep in thare so his relatives can git all his munny. He falls in luv with the poor gurl wich is being held thare by the vilyun & tells her that they will find some way to escape. She looked up into his eyes & recited a other peece of poetry. She was all the time recsiting poetry she rote, Vera toald me. Vera sed that the longer the heroine stayed in the asilum the moar poetry she rote. She looked up into the eyes of the hero & recsited.

Oh yes, I will fly away with you
And marry you for luv.
Yure muuny all can stay with you,
I have no use for it, duv,
But what if you mite be insane
& not what you represcut?
Then to this place I wud return
& be sorry I ever had went.

If you are reely sane, my own,
Our lives will pleasant be,
But if sum nite I'd heer you groan
I'd hide away from thee.
It is a awful, haunting feer
To feer one's husband is dippy,
& if I ever see you thus
I'll jump in the Mississippi.

The last act isent finished yet, Vera toald me. She is pritty smart for a hired gurl. She says wen she gits rich I can marry her wen I grow up.

Excused.

Bob—Will you take a ticket in this raffle for a poor widow——

Simp—Nix. I wouldn't have any use for a poor widow if I won.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

NOT WORTH YOUR WORRY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and recently met a young man about the same age. He made quite an impression upon me and we have met by appointment a few times. Last week I happened to misunderstand a date the young man made in his letter and disappointed him. Now he is angry, and although I tried to explain the matter to him, he will not believe my excuse. I am quite heartbroken over it. RAY.

Your humble attitude doesn't do you credit. You did no wrong and owed neither apology nor explanation. Please, for your own sake, let the matter end here, and if he attempts to see you, refuse.

THERE COULD BE NO OBJECTION.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16, and have a friend two years my senior. His birthday is quite near and I would like to know if it is proper for me to send him a birthday card, so as to let him know I think of him. ANXIOUS.

A cordial little note, wishing him many happy returns, will prove your friendship.

You are so young; will you promise me to regard no man as more than a friend for a few years longer?

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am deeply in love with a young man 2? years old. I meet him often and he gives me hints that he loves me, but he also tells me he hasn't courage to propose. Now please tell me how I should act. Should I tell him that I love him or not? HILDA.

The girl worth having is worth asking for. Tell him so the next time he hints. Also hint that there are other men not quite so slow. But save your avowal of love until he has earned it.

THE DIFFERENCE IMMATERIAL.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl four years my senior, which difference in our ages seems to stand between us. I have tried in every way possible to convince her of my love, but so far have not succeeded. I do not believe I can ever be happy without her. E.

You do not state your age. If you are old enough to marry, her four years seniority should be no bar.

I am convinced she refuses you because she does not love you. Be persistent in your devotion, and if that does not melt her heart, try giving your atention to some other girl.

CERTAINLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am eighteen and am keeping company with a young man for the past year. Now this young man's folks live out of town and invited me to their home. Should I accept their invitation? A. B. S.

If the invitation is from his mother I would have you accept by all means. It will mean a great deal to your future happiness to get on good terms with them, and the visit may give you an enlightening view of your lover. I hope it will prove favorable.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

On Fancy's Wings.

A sweet young thing in white fluttered toward the aeroplane mechanic, and resolutely took possession of him, asking all those usual senseless questions that now have become the common lot of aviators and their assistants.

But this particular assistant—and who can wonder; was not the sweet young thing in white a damsel quite adorable?—strove bravely to satisfy the curiosity of his fair inquirer; and explained with remarkable clearness the working of a monoplane.

Still, there is a limit even to the patience shown by susceptible man toward charming maid.

"Tell me," inquired the sweet young thing in white, "what happens when your engine stops in the air? Can't you come down?"

"That's just the trouble," sighed the mechanic, mastered by his sense of the ridiculous. "D'you know, there are a dozen or so airmen now stranded above France. Their engines have stopped; they can't get down, and they are starving to death!"

Later she learned the truth. So ended what might have been a romance.

CHAPTER XV.

THERE is a numbing quality to all sudden and great sorrow. Psychologists tell us that the mind is so dazed by the shock of grief that it can not grasp the fearful truth in all its details. Whatever causes this partial insensibility, we are thankful for it.

Mary Danforth was like one stunned during the days that followed her father's death. She listened in stony silence while the facts of his seizure were related to her. He had come up from the office, and after dinner dressed to go to her graduation exercises, but had dropped to the floor as he started to leave the apartment, and in five minutes stopped breathing. He had never regained consciousness.

This was no time for subterfuges, and Mrs. Danforth was soon made acquainted with the state of affairs between her daughter and Gordon Craig. She was told that no formal engagement existed, but that the pair loved each other and were going to wait for each other until such time as they were ready to marry. The bereaved wife, made suddenly old by the great sorrow of her life, clung to the young man, and sobbed out her woe and her trust in him.

"I have found a son," she said at last. "God bless you, dear boy!"

Craig bent his tall head to kiss her pale cheek. "I shall try to be worthy of your daughter," he whispered, "and of your confidence in me."

He remained in New York for a week. The changes in his business, of which he told Mary, would keep him from the road hereafter, another man having been deputed to travel for his firm, while he was to remain at the home office.

"Hard times have hit us as well as the rest of the world," he said regretfully, "and matters do not look as bright as they did. But I shall stick to one job and shall hope for a salary that will warrant my marrying in a year or two. Heaven speed the time!"

And Mary was not ashamed to add a sincere "Amen!" to this hope.

It was on the day after the funeral that the mother and the daughter learned that, added to the loss of husband and father, another trouble had befallen them. Investigation of Mr. Danforth's affairs brought to light the fact that his business was in a desperate condition and that he had lived right up to his income. His lawyer told the two women the painful truth that when the funeral expenses were paid and a few bills that Mr. Danforth had contracted were settled the pair would be well-nigh penniless except for a small life insurance the deceased had carried in favor of his wife.

"Your husband took that Western trip on the chance of saving the day," the lawyer explained to the widow. "He hoped to put a business deal through out there, but he failed. I think the disappointment, coupled with the dread of what was before him, hastened his death."

"He did it all for us," Mary told Craig. "He lived just to make us happy. He wanted us to have a pretty home and all that we wanted, and he could not bear to tell us that we must part with these things. Now I can see why he was taken from us. It would have broken his heart had he lived to see us lose what we have been accustomed to."

Mary spoke firmly, yet gently. "I am going to work, mother," she asserted. "No, do not look distressed at the idea! It is what father would wish—what he always told me I must be prepared to do if the need arose."

"It will not be for long," Craig reminded the mother. "I hope that matters will go so well with me that I can come for you and Mary soon. Then we three will have a little home of our own."

"I could not accept it even from Gordon," remarked Mrs. Danforth later to her daughter, "if I did not have that insurance money of my own."

The daughter said nothing. She could not bear to tell her unsophisticated mother what a little way the money, of which she spoke so confidently, would go. The income from it would not support one woman, no matter how economical she might be, and the girl knew the principal would be drawn upon gradually until it was all gone. And then?

"I will be able to support her myself," she thought bravely. "She shall use as little of her own money as possible. I would not want her to be entirely dependent upon Gordon—even though he is willing to care for her. I get to work at once."

The place she secured was not a brilliant one, but she had not expected that it would be. She was engaged as stenographer and typewriter to a kindly, middle-aged real estate agent. He had a small office and her salary matched the office. But what else could a beginner hope for?

Thus it came about that when Gordon Craig turned his face westward again he knew that the girl he loved was the sole dependence of her widowed mother. His heart ached when he remembered that the pretty home must be given up, and the handsome furniture sold—except such pieces as the two lonely women would need to furnish the tiny flat they would take in an unfashionable part of town. He longed to stay and help them.

"But my job won't wait for me!" he muttered with a bitter sign. "If I were only rich!"

Which exclamation is such a common one that it is hardly worth recording.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Barber—Poor Jim has been sent to an asylum.

Victim (in the chair)—Who is Jim?

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been brooding over the hard times, an' I suppose he finally got crazy."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. He and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so alike we couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded, too. No money in this business now."

"What's the reason?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo it doesn't pay to shave or hair-cut. Poor Jim! I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me sad. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let him slash all he wanted to. It might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Yes!"

It was Pat's first day in the sawmill, and his duties consisted of working the circular saw. The foreman directed him as to its use, then left him in order to attend to some pressing matter. Having occasion, however, to pass Pat's way again, he was somewhat annoyed to see him standing idly surveying his hand.

"Well, what's wrong?" he said sharply.

"Sure and begorra I've lost a finger," replied Pat.

"How did it happen?" inquired the foreman.

"Sure, I was jist doin' like this when—bejabbers! There's anither one off!"

The daughter of the house had just returned from a visit to her cousins, during which she had become engaged to a rising young man whom she had met at the home of her relatives. To her mother she was extolling the virtues of her intended.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "he's just grand! So square, so upright, so highly polished. Why, even in his notes there is such a sympathetic tone that sometimes I wonder if I am not reading the music of the gods!"

"Mercy's sake, child!" interrupted mother, "are you talking about a young man or a piano?"

"I want you to put up some wall paper I have bought," said the country clergyman, meeting the local man-of-all-work. "When can you do it?"

"Well, sir," he exclaimed, "you see, I'm rather busy just now. I hang Mrs. S—— yesterday; I'm hanging your church warden to-day; but, if it's convenient, I'll drop round and hang your reverence on Wednesday."

LIFE'S STRUGGLE WITH ILLNESS

Miss Stewart Tells How She Suffered from 16 to 45 years old—How Finally Cured.

EUPHEMIA, OHIO.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister, and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicine was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old, and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can not tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month, and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age, and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse, and being wholly self-supporting I can not overestimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing since I was 52 years old. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss Evelyn Adella Stewart, Euphemia, Ohio.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE two pillow cushions, which, with the Honorable Lysander John Appleton, Kin Commissioner General of the United States compose the Pillow Cushion Club, sat stiff, upright and unbending in their corners, waiting for the meeting to begin.

It was a joy for the speaker of the evening to look at them. So well-stuffed, so self-satisfied, so blank of expression; they looked like women whose sole ambition in life is to keep their figures, and who place all their hope in a straight-front corset.

Lysander John gave them an encouraging smile. "My wife and daughter," he said, "who spend most of their time from home reading papers on How to Make Home Life Beautiful, never had audiences more intelligent and appreciative than mine, Ladies. I thank you!

"I have delved into Emerson, I have wandered through Carlyle, and I have failed to find any problems more serious than those I will submit tonight. As members of the Pillow Cushion Club we must grapple with these questions. We must never again shirk our share of the burden of the world's progress.

"Doubt, my dear audience, if my wife and daughter at any of their various clubs in the past month have wrestled with more vital questions than those I will lay before you this evening.

"First, How soon after an article is borrowed is it proper to go over with an excuse demanding its return?

"If a friend buys an automobile, can it be construed as a gentle hint if you buy yourself an automobile coat?

"When a man's family consists of himself and wife, and he buys a four-passenger car, does that indicate a kind, generous disposition, or a desire to escape being bored to death by riding alone with his wife?

"If either must be slighted in a meal, the soup or the pudding, which should it be? In other words, is it wiser to smooth down the bristles of temperamental man by starting him feeling good at a meal, or to finish him feeling satisfied?

"Is it economical and proper these hard times to bury a woman's false hair with her, when, with a little change in the color, her husband's next wife might wear it?

"My next problem," he concluded, "is one which will not permit of our speedy adjournment if we attempt to solve it. It is this: How many different ways are there for a man to act the fool?"

'Phone or Wire.

The following letter appears in a Boston newspaper:

Sir—I called at your editorial rooms yesterday, entering the outer chamber. The boy was absent. On the door, which was closed, leading to the sanctum sanctorium, was a sign, "No Admittance." On the wall next to the door was another sign, "No Loitering Here." The question is, what's a feller to do? F. H. L.

"I hear you're going to marry Archie Blueblood, Diana. Is it true?" asked one young society woman of another.

"Marry him? I should think not! What on earth could I do with the man? He can't ride, he can't play tennis, golf, nor, for that matter, can he even drive a motor car!"

"Oh," said the friend, "but he can swim beautifully, you know."

"Swim, indeed? Now, I ask you, would you like a husband you had to keep in an aquarium?"

FROM LUCILE'S DIARY

AUNT RACHEL has been staying with us on her way home from California, and I have passed a good deal of time with her, as I am exceedingly fond of her. I really think I am her favorite niece. One morning when I was helping her dress—I love to pay her little attentions—I found that there were no buttonholes in the new lingerie blouse she had intended to wear.

"Dear me!" I said. "We must get Cousin Fannie to rectify this at once. She'll be delighted to make the buttonholes for you."

"Why don't you make them for me, Lucile?" asked Aunt Rachel.

"Why, you see——" I began, and then hesitated.

"Yes, I see, Lucile," Aunt Rachel said. "You don't count buttonhole-making among your accomplishments. In my day a young woman was not considered well bred if she could not make a perfect buttonhole."

"You make me quite ashamed of my shortcomings," I told her. "You see, Cousin Fannie has always been rather proud of her beautiful buttonholes, and it would have seemed like infringing on her rights if I had taken to making them, too. Dear Cousin Fannie is a little sensitive, and I don't like to hurt her feelings."

"It's quite possible that she would like you to share her glory," Aunt Rachel remarked. "If you wish to learn, I'll agree to make it right with Fannie."

That afternoon I went to Cousin Fannie's room and asked her to give me a lesson in making buttonholes.

"I'm awfully busy, Lucile," she said, "for I'm trying to finish this waist that Aunt Rachel gave me the silk for. I wish to wear it to-night at the settlement reception. If you have buttonholes to make I'll be glad to do them for you to-morrow."

I felt so disappointed that I said: "Aunt Rachel criticises me because I don't know how to make buttonholes, and you won't take the time to teach me. I did so wish to learn this afternoon." I could scarcely restrain my tears as I spoke.

"Why, Lucile, if you are so much in earnest about it of course I'll show you how," said Cousin Fannie.

So we went to work. I made buttonhole after buttonhole all afternoon, for I was determined if I made them at all to excel. Cousin Fannie told me that evening that with a little more practice I should soon equal her. So I kept at it every spare minute for two days until I felt competent to make the buttonholes in Aunt Rachel's blouse. When she saw them she was so surprised and delighted at my skill that she immediately offered to buy me the perfectly charming chiffon set that I had been talking to her about.

I was so enchanted at owning the coveted set that I made an occasion to wear it by calling on Gertrude Bates the very day I received it.

She was busy with the dressmaker, but I sat quite a while chatting until her brother, Carl, came home. I was just going when Gertrude remarked that the little silk coat which was being made was all done but the three large buttonholes. I offered to make them.

"Why, do you know how to make buttonholes?" she exclaimed.

I replied by taking the garment and setting to work with a nonchalance that I was amused to see alarmed her.

"Well, you're a wonder," said Carl when I had made a buttonhole and he had examined it. "I don't believe my tailor could beat this."

As it was growing late, I suggested that Gertrude allow me to take the coat home and finish the buttonholes the next day.

Rather Tired.

I was rather tired the next morning, as I had been sewing so much more than I was accustomed to do, so I asked Cousin Fannie to make the two remaining buttonholes in Gertrude's coat. She works so rapidly that I knew it would be no trouble to her. I was glad to have them done, for George Requier called up on the phone and asked me to go out to his tennis club that afternoon.

As I had so suitable wrap, I wore Gertrude's fascinating little coat. I thought she would be glad to have me wear it after all the work I had done for her. I was astonished when I saw her walking toward me across the courts, for I naturally supposed she was at home with the dressmaker.

"This is a jolly surprise," I said gayly, trying to make room for her on the bench.

"It's certainly a surprise," she replied coldly, and, looking fixedly at the jacket, she passed on.

I explained to George she must be suffering from one of her severe headaches, for I could not bear to have him think any friend of mine would be so rude.

Although I sent her the coat by parcel post the next day, I have not had a single word of acknowledgment or thanks from her. Gertrude, I fear, does not number gratitude among her graces.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Let me see it," cried she, and Mr. Gryce, greatly pleased at the success of his trick, handed her the picture of Genevieve Gretorex, satisfied that if this good woman continued to find it like the Mildred Farley she had mentioned, he should find that Mildred Farley was the name the young woman he had himself first taken for the original of this picture, and in whose fate despite his reason and his years he had found himself so much interested that he had come here at this late hour of the night to learn her name, and if possible, her dwelling place.

His success surpassed his hopes. The old lady looked at the picture, shook her head and looked again.

Somewhat Different.

"How these photographs can deceive?" cried she. "If I had not stopped to look at this twice, I would have sworn it was Mildred Farley's face, but I see now that she wears her hair quite different, and that she is older and much better dressed than Mildred could ever hope to be. Nevertheless, there is a very striking similarity, and I should like to see Miss—— Miss——"

"Handscombe," put in the detective.

"——and Mildred together. It would be a pleasing study." And she stared long and earnestly at the picture, winding up with: "I should like to show it to Mildred."

This was putting herself exactly in the position desired by Mr. Gryce.

"You can do so," he observed, "if you do not have to carry it far nor keep it long. Does Mildred live anywhere near you? Can you see her to-night?"

"She lives in my fourth story front room, sir; Mildred Farley is one of my boarders."

Mr. Gryce stroked his trembling right knee with a very loving hand. "One of your boarders," he repeated. "She is doubtless then upstairs asleep."

"No, poor girl, no. She is a dressmaker and sometimes does not close her eyes till 1 o'clock at night. She is not asleep, but come to think of it, she is not in the house at all. She went away for a short vacation a few days ago, and though she promised to be home this afternoon, I believe she did not come. It has always been my hope that Dr. Molesworth would marry her. She is a lovely girl and he is a very fine man. Why, then, shouldn't they come together?"

"And what you makes you think they will not? Why shouldn't it be she he is going to marry?"

"Why? Because they would have told me. He knows and she knows there is nothing I wish so much. It would be preposterous for them to keep it to themselves after all I have said. No, if Dr. Molesworth is going to marry any one (and I don't believe yet he is), it must be some ridiculous chit of a girl he has met away from here; and—Mildred——why, Lena!"

This exclamation was caused by the appearance at the door of a young girl who the moment she saw Mr. Gryce, shrank back and started to run away.

But the emphatic "Lena!" stopped her, and in a moment the old lady was in the hall; a whispered conference ensued, followed by the re-entrance of the good woman with a note in her hand.

"Well, I never!" she exclaimed, looking first at the letter she held and then at the feeble figure of the old man who had risen with well feigned indifference as if to go. A note from Dr. Molesworth, which he left on purpose for me! and that girl forgot to give it to me till now! What can he have to say!" And breaking the seal, she read the few enclosed lines with a growing wonder that ended in the joyous exclamation of "Good gracious, it is Mildred, after all! He is going to marry her to-night, and bring her home to-morrow. Well, I will give up. Never a word to me about it, and I so fond of them both! I don't understand it, folks are so queer." And she fluttered to and fro in ill-disguised joy, talking and muttering to herself, while Mr. Gryce pulled his muffler about him and began to move slowly toward the door.

"I declare," she broke in, as her attention was recalled to him by this movement, "it does seem a pity for you to go out again into the cold. If you think you would be better here, I have an empty room." But at this moment a carriage was heard to stop before the door, and, startled into a new train of thought by this unwonted occurrence, she moved towards the front windows, exclaiming: "I do believe they have come now!"

A Tragedy.

But at her first glance through the curtains she drew back with a frightened air, and crying, "Oh, what can this mean!" hurried towards the door with every sign of intense agitation.

Mr. Gryce at once took her place at the window, but he did not look out, for at that moment a man's voice was heard in the hall, and the wary detective thought it prudent to resume his role of the self-absorbed, semi-oblivious old man whose infirmities were so engrossing he had neither eyes nor ears for what went on about him. It was well he did so, for in another moment his imperturbability received a great shock by the certainly unlooked-for entrance of two men bearing a burden which, at one glance, showed itself to be the inert form of a young woman. From the appearance of one of these he judged him to be Dr. Molesworth. They were followed by the landlady, crying and wringing her hands.

"Mildred! Mildred! What has happened to you, poor girl!" came in piercing tones from the latter, as the sad burden, having been deposited on a sofa, she approached, and drew aside the cloak which had hitherto concealed the face.

"O God! how pale she is; how cold! Doctor, has she only fainted or is she—"

"Dead," came from his lips in deep and thrilling tones, while his gaze sought the landlady's face and rested there with an intentness he might not have displayed had he noticed the old man mumbling and chattering to himself in a corner.

"And what has killed her? What has destroyed my poor girl, the very night you hoped to marry her?"

"Shall I tell you?" The doctor had waved the man aside who had assisted him in his fearful task, and now stood with folded arms side by side with the landlady, looking down upon the still, set face which, with the blue robe that enshrouded the form, were already so well known to the watching detective. "She preferred this bridal to the one I had planned for her. Now you know all." And with just one more deep and searching look at the landlady's startled face, he walked up to his assistant.

"That is all," said he, "I will do the rest. The coroner will probably be here soon and—who are you?"

This was aid to a small, slight man who at this moment appeared in the doorway.

"I am a detective, sir," was the reply, and he was doubtless going to say more, but he caught an unexpected sight of Mr Gryce, and paused in some confusion. He had recognized a superior.

As for Mr. Gryce himself he had scarcely noticed the young man; he was too intent upon the doctor who at the utterance of the word detective, had wheeled suddenly about with the evident intention of hiding his surprise. But a mirror hung oposite him, and in this the watchful eye of Mr. Gryce detected such an expression of uncontrollable shock and anxiety that he inwardly congratulated himself over the curiosity which had drawn him to this house.

The confusion, if there was such, in the physician's mind, was but momentary. In an instant he turned and confronting the intruder, asked with some severity:

"And what work is there for a detective here? The young lady has taken poison and is dead. I have notified the coroner——"

"Pardon me," interrupted the other, with every appearance of humility and respect. "I have come from the coroner. I am only a messenger and my errand is to say that as he can not come until morning it might relieve you to have me to stop here and see that there is no interference with the remains. It is a common duty and it is not the first time I have performed it."

A Word of Protest.

"But it is nobody's duty to watch over this poor girl's body but myself," broke in the landlady, with hearty indignation. "Do you forget that it is a woman and a lady you are talking about, and do you think I will stand by and see any man, much less a stranger, take the place which only one of her own sex should occupy? She is no relative of mine, but I loved her and—doctor, you have some regard for her memory, I am sure; send that man away; he has already been here too long."

And with a care that was almost motherly in its tenderness, she drew the end of the cloak once again over the poor dead face, dropping a tear as she did so, which was not unseen by Mr. Gryce if it was unappreciated by the stern and bitter-souled physician.

"But, madam"—that stranger began.

"Stop!" cried Dr. Molesworth, "I will explain to her." And in a few words he told her how in cases of violent death, it was thought advisable for the Coroner to see the victim as soon after decease as possible, and when, as in this case, circumstances demanded delay, no one, not even a mother could rightfully interfere with whatever surveillance the Coroner thought it his duty to impose. So you will let this man stay here, and I will stay, too; for it is as much my wish as yours that every respect should be shown the one whom living I honored sufficiently to wish to make my wife."

The landlady shook her head with an aggressive air, but made no further protest. Dr. Molesworth pointed to a chair and the representative of the Coroner sat down; then while the former glanced at Mr. Gryce, who had just caught his attention, a slight noise was heard in the hall and a second stranger entered.

"What does this mean?" angrily cried the doctor. "Is it possible that the front door has been left open?" And brusquely pushing by the newcomer, he shut the offending door and then coming back, asked his business of the last arrival.

The fellow, who was slimmer than the other and much more dapper, pulled a small book and pencil from his pocket. It was enough. Dr. Molesworth recognized a reporter, and gave his irritation full play.

"You are intruding," cried he. "This is a private house and no one asked you to enter. As for the calamity which has occurred, learn of it how and where you will; I shall tell you nothing."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

EVANS ADVISES BOYS TO CADDY ON GOLF LINKS

By Chick Evans.

MY business takes me to many offices throughout the city, and these little visits bring many interesting experiences. Not long ago, as I was entering a certain office, the boy near the door looked squarely at me for a moment, then brightened up and said: "Hello, Chick, don't you remember me? I caddied for you at Wheaton and you called me Walter." It was a very pleasant memory that the boy evoked and in a moment he was recalling some particular lucky shot that I had played and long ago forgotten. It was a great pleasure to me to be remembered by this young boy and it was a double pleasure to bring to mind once more a very happy occasion.

This little incident, however, merely leads to a subject very near to my heart—the future of the little caddie, for this boy is not the only caddie that I have met in offices in my tramps about the city. What becomes of the caddy when the short, too short, period of his school days is past and he must desert the links for other employment?

Caddie's Work Healthful.

I do not think that there can be a better all-around employment for the small boy than caddying. It is wholesome, outdoor work, and has brought health to many a delicate boy. Almost every other form of labor is injurious to the small boy, and, of course, caddy bags can be cruelly heavy, but as a rule, the player with a heavy bag does not choose a small caddy. The caddy enjoys fresh air and interest in a game which are all the advantages of play. It has always seemed to me that it is more interesting to carry a bag full of clubs when a fine golf match is in progress than to occupy a good seat at a game of baseball or football. From a physical point of view it is certainly better for a boy to tramp happily over yielding turf than to sit in cramped attitude on crowded stands to watch other men exercise. The caddy is really a part of the game; he has the same exercise as his employer; he sees the play and is interested, and is frequently consulted as to choice of club. Furthermore, he has the advantage of association with the members of the golf club, and these members are usually the leading business and professional men of the community.

Most of Them "Making Good."

There is a general belief that club members are dissipated, mere club rounders, in fact. My experience flatly contradicts this. The influence of the golf links is wholesome, physically and morally, and the boy fully enjoys its advantages. When the time comes for the caddy to go to work he usually obtains his first job through the good offices of a club member. I should not like to think that the majority of caddies become professionals, good as that work is, and I believe that only a small percentage do so. It is easy to trace from caddy to office boy, but in higher positions the caddy identity is sometimes hidden. I believe, however, that caddies are to be found in every walk of life, and I am sure that they are "making good."

White Sees Whitney Work Out

Frank Dons Mitts With Packey

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 7.—Has Charley White, pound for pound the best boxer in the game today, put one over on Frank Whitney, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa? This is the question fans who were at O'Connell's gymnasium yesterday are asking around sporting circles to-day. Whitney and White meet in Atlanta next Wednesday.

Several hundred fans saw Whitney and McFarland box three rounds at breakneck speed yesterday. They were also aware of the fact that Charley was an interested spectator. Probably every one in the gymnasium, with the exception of Whitney, knew this. Maybe, if Frank had known White was present he would have ceased in his grind. But, nevertheless, he didn't and the battle Whitney and McFarland put up was worth any one's time.

* * *

THE two boys had a merry battle. They mixed it at close quarters and boxed at long range. Packey wanted the work-out, as he is training for a busy fall campaign. Whitney is a rough and tough scrapper, just the kind McFarland likes to work with. The rounds were full of action and the crowd was on its feet during several stages of the combat.

Two glaring eyes kept watching every move made by the boy from Cedar Rapids. These same eyes also noticed that McFarland, who knows White's style of boxing better than any other ringman in the world, was mixing it with Whitney. He also was aware of the fact that Whitney's defense was kept high and that Packey was having the time of his life trying to get home his left hook.

* * *

NOW, every one knows that Charley's best blow is his left hook, followed by a right cross. Whether White beats Whitney or not the writer does not care to predict. But one thing is certain, and that is that Charley will have the time of his life hitting Whitney with this punch.

Whitney knows White's style, and he has solved a defense for the Chicago boy's favorite wallop. Charley saw Whitney box yesterday. Frank didn't know it. He showed everything he had in his scrap with Packey, and White was present to pick up a few pointers. When Whitney jumped out of the ring it was the first time he knew that his coming opponent was an interested spectator. But Frank is not one of those who worries over things of this kind. He simply smiled and stated that he would stroll over to Lewis' gymnasium to-morrow and watch Charley in action.

* * *

WHEN White left the gymnasium many of those who were present thought he was bound for home. White evidently wanted them to think so, but he had another errand on. Charley does his boxing at Lewis' gymnasium and that was where he was bound for. The writer knows Charley like a book and thought it best to take a trip to the "gym" and see just what the Chicago boy was going to put over.

Just as we surmised, Charley picked up "Special Delivery" Hirsch, a tough lightweight, on his way to work out, and it wasn't many more minutes before he was hard at work. And it was not long before Hirsch threw up the gloves in disgust. But the blow that made Hirsch quit was not a left hook to the jaw. It was a left to the stomach. It did not take Charley long to find out that he would have to perfect some other punch if he hoped to defeat Whitney. He wanted to try out a new punch, and it is dollars to doughnuts that it will be the left to the stomach instead of a left hook to the jaw that Mr. White uses against Whitney in Atlanta on August 13.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

SPORT BY PROXY.

A rhymster sat at his type machine
And wrote him a gladsome lay
Of fish that gleam in the woodland stream
And leap in the silver spray.
He sang of musky and bass and trout
And his little canoe of birch,
But the only fish he had ever pulled out
Was a little anemic perch.

He sang a song of the virgin wood,
Of the forest old and sere
Where the hunters creep in the runways deep
And wait for the nimble deer.
He sang of the moose that he longed to pot
As it called in its far-flung tones,
But the only thing he ever shot
Was a pair of the rolling bones.

He sang a song of the bounding main
Where the gulls and the mermaids play,
Of the whistling gale and the bulging sail
And the tang of the drifting spray.
He sang of the joy as he lightly tripped
O'er the sea on his bounding bark,
But the only boat he had ever skipped
Was a rowboat in Piedmont Park.

The rush for shelter in the American League is due to the rumor that Jimmy Callahan intends to perpetrate another trade. But as for Mrs. Havenor, she should be annoyed, as it were.

Frank Chance avers that he will stick with the Yanks until they bust into the first division. Mr. Chance evidently expects to live a long time.

Cleveland comes to the front with a yacht called the Psammiad II. One of the beauties of the said Psammiad II is that a yachtsman can always prove his sobriety by pronouncing it.

SPEED.

Old Joe Dunn smote it to the fence,
It was an awful bingle,
And by a burst of fearful speed
He almost made a single.

The president of the Federal League has retired on account of overwork, but there is no truth in the rumor that he was overworked in the act of counting gate receipts.

While there are skeptical persons who do not believe that Mr. Dunn is fast, it is a well-known fact that he can cling faster to a base than any athlete in baseball.

We are indebted to the Federal League for the custom of granting magnates an occasional leave of absence. If the practice only spreads to the National League all will be well.

Old King Cole looms up like a world beater in the American Association. So, also, did Laverne Cheppell.

TWENTY-FIVE MILE RACE AT SAUCER FRIDAY

A TWENTY-FIVE-MILE race is to be the feature event of a swell-looking program that Jack Prince has scheduled at his saucer Friday night. All ten of the famous riders now here will start, and the way their machines are traveling these days it is almost a cinch that a new record will be established for the distance.

This race is for the championship of the South. Richards wants that title, so does McNeil and all the others. And an Atlanta boy, Harry Glenn, has a fine chance of copping this event, too. Harry showed marked improvement last Tuesday night, and he ought to be even better Friday.

By the way, Glenn is to be seen in another match race. He hasn't been defeated yet in a two-handed, or rather a two-machine event. But in George Lockner he is going up against a racer this time. It will be a two-mile affair, two best heats in three.

The Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles.

Following is the complete program for Friday night:

First Event.

Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.

Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.

Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

Fourth Event.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs Lockner. (Two-mile heats; two best in three.)

Fifth Event.

Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

Sixth Event.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.

Seventh Event.

Invitation Race—Distance, 5 miles. Open to all comers.

Eighth Event.

Special Match Race—Third heat, if necessary.

Ninth Event.

Twenty-five-mile race for championship of the South—Graves, Swartz, Shields, Lockner, Richards, Luther, Renel, McNeil, Lewis, Glenn.

GRIFFIN AND STRACHM QUALIFY FOR NET TITLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Clarence Griffin and John Strachm, of San Francisco, will meet Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bunday for the national tennis championship in doubles at Newport, R. I., on August 18. They won this right by defeating straight sets Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern tennis champions. The scores in the games yesterday at Onwentsia were 6-1, 4-6 and 6-4. The Easterners were outplayed and outgeneraled in every game.

FITTERY IN NO-HIT GAME.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 7.—Jake Fittery, pitcher for the Evansville club, of the Central League, yesterday shut out Terre Haute, not allowing a hit during the nine innings. Only four local players reached first and two went to second, where they were left.

Baby Cross a Real Boxing Fan

Roots for Pa to Capture Title

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Baby Cross is a boxing fan.

She is not familiar with left hooks and right uppercuts, but she does know her daddy is going to be the next lightweight champion of the world. And all one needs to be convinced is a two-minute talk with her.

Cross has won many friends through his earnest work in the ring, but he has no more enthusiastic admirer than his little daughter. "When daddy is champion" she will reach the mecca of all her dreams, and plans for that day fill many of her waking hours.

Of course, she never has seen daddy in a real battle, but often during training work she and her mother are at the ringside watching him in his practice bouts. She is fond of the rope skipping and weight pulling, and always is interested in the boxing which forms part of the daily program, but most of all she loves the frolic with daddy after his strenuous work is done, and the kiss which is sure to follow the fun.

Baby Has Warm Friends.

Many who have seen Cross work will be glad to see him lightweight champion if he attains that honor, but happiest and proudest of all will be his baby daughter.

Baby Cross was at her father's training camp while he prepared for his bouts with "Bud" Anderson and Matty Baldwin. The New Yorker won both contests, and he says that in future his little daughter will have to accompany him on his tours of the country. In this way he believes that he will never be defeated.

Cross is not the first boxer who has visited the coast that has had a baby daughter for a mascot. Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, has two baby mascots and they are always at his training camp when he is preparing for a match. It is a pretty picture to see the Cleveland boy playing on the white sand at Venice with his two children while his young wife sits near by.

Cross has hopes of securing a bout with Champion Willie Ritchie. Leach claims that he would be able to defeat the Frisco boy over the 20-round route. He declares that he would surely knock out the champion if he could land his famous right-hand punch which has flattened many a famous ringman.

May Battle Joe Rivers.

If Cross does not get a date with Ritchie, he will probably be signed to clash with Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight.

Rivers is a favorite on the coast, even though he was beaten by Ritchie, and he would be a big drawing card if pitted against a boxer of Cross' ability.

In the meantime, Baby Cross is rooting for her dad to become champion. And maybe she wouldn't be glad if Leach would permit her to see a regular ring bout. But the hard-hitting lightweight says that the baby's charm might be broken if she occupied a ringside seat.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Charley White, the Chicago sensation, who meets Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13, is doing his training at Nate Lewis's gymnasium in Chicago. Charley plans to arrive in Atlanta Saturday morning, one day later than Whitney.

* * *

This will give the fans several days to look over the rival lightweights. Both boys will complete their training grind here. Whitney will work at the Atlanta Athletic Club, while White is expected to train at Ponce DeLeon ball park.

* * *

Despite the fact that Gunboat Smith has won every fight in which he has participated in the past year, experts predict defeat for him when he tackles Jim Flynn on next Friday night at Madison Square Garden, New York. Most of the experts claim that Flynn's experience will bring him home a winner over the Easterner.

* * *

Both Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers were sidetracked by Willie Ritchie. The champion has decided to defend his title against Freddie Welsh in a 20-round engagement at Vancouver on September 1.

* * *

Wolgast, however, appears to be the big loser. The Mexican has signed articles to meet Leach Cross in Tom McCarey's arena at Los Angeles, and it would not surprise many to see this bout draw as much money as the Ritchie-Welsh set-to. On the other hand, Wolgast must now look for a suitable opponent to meet.

Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, and "Knockout" Brown, of Chicago, may wage battle soon. Nate Lewis, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that he has signed his protege to box Dillon at Indianapolis. The bout will take place some time next month at Terre Haute, Ind. They have agreed to weigh 158 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Mike Glover, the Boston lightweight, is earnestly striving to get a match with Jack Britton. The former showed much class in his recent mills in the "Bean Town" city.

* * *

Packey McFarland wants it to be known that there is no chance to drag him into the welterweight class. He says he is able to do 135 pounds and will continue to box at that weight.

* * *

Jack White has been made an even money bet against Johnny Dundee for the 20-round clash at Los Angeles on August 12. Since Joe Levy has taken hold of Jack he has shown a 50 per cent improvement.

TILLIS SELLS MONTGOMERY BALL CLUB

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 7.—It was announced here last night that Richard Tillis, owner of the Montgomery Baseball club's franchise, has sold out to an organization of business men, headed by M. P. Wilcox.

The price was reported as $12,800. The transfer of ownership took place at once.

This is taken to mean that Montgomery will remain indefinitely in the Southern League. The new owners are popular here, and it also is expected that there will be a considerable revival of interest among local fans.

Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy That Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.

Acne attacks the glandular structure of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

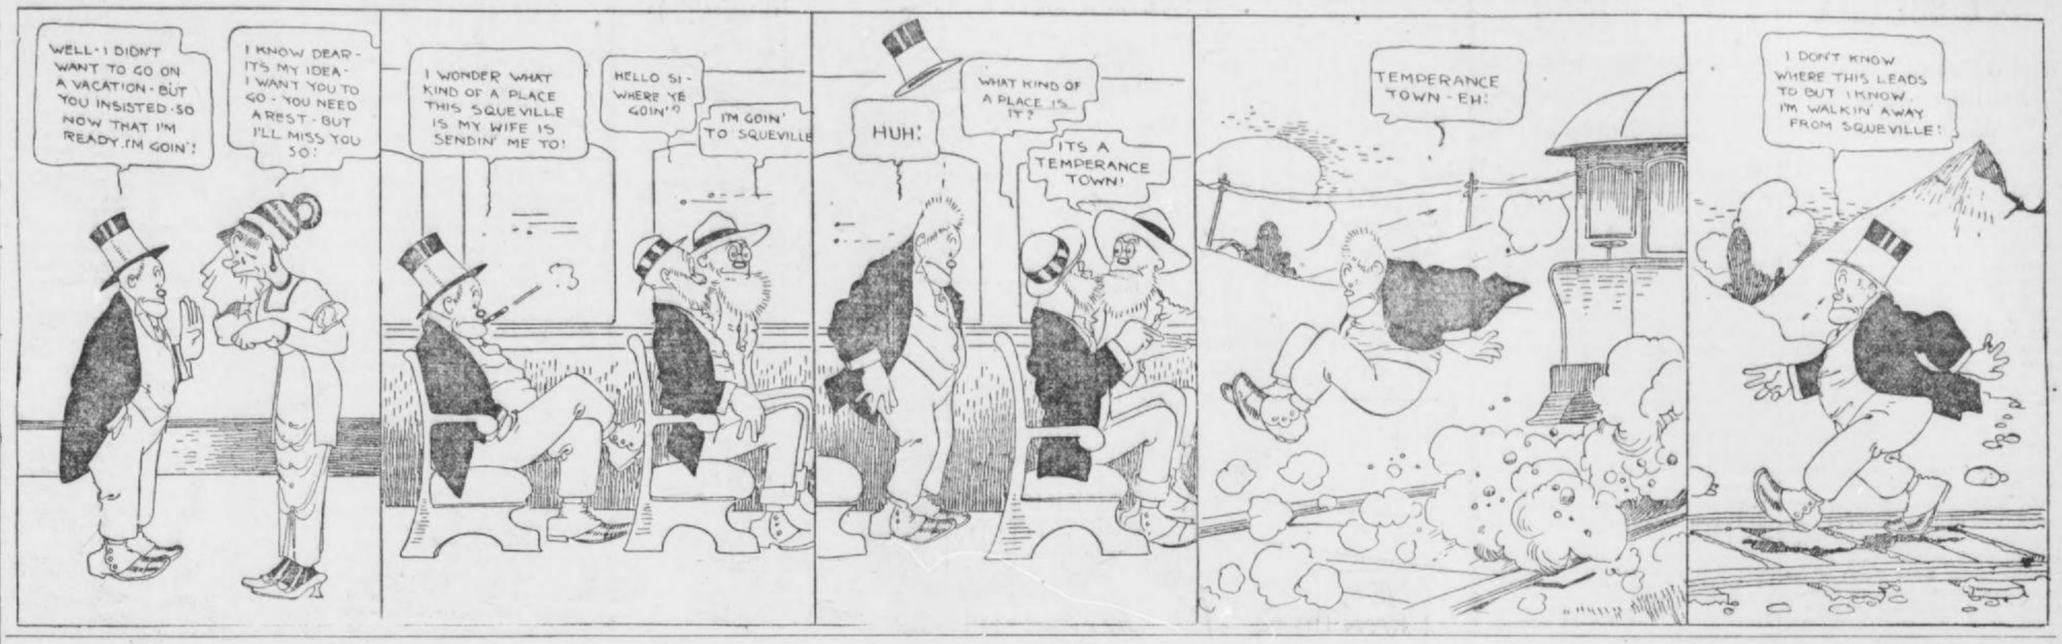

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. the purpose of which it is to stimulate the cells in the tissues that thus select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a natural tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammatory process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with. It requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 181 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Speaking of That Diaphanous Stuff

Even Break With the Lookouts

Giants and Sox May Play Here

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE more vindication of the theory that the conventional manner of prorating a double-header is for each side to take one.

It was largely a matter of pitchers. In the first game Joe Conzelman wasn't quite so good as Floyd Kroh, and in the aftermath, Gilbert Price plus Elliott Dent, had a thin edge on Howell and Coveleskie.

The fact that the tall Pole was summoned again from the lumber yard testifies to the gentle affection for the Crackers that abounds in the shadow of Lookout Mountain.

The Tabasco Kid was doing his durndest to beat us all two of the games.

And quite properly.

Let's trim 'em fighting, or get trimmed the same way.

That's what makes baseball worth while.

* * *

WE are going to have some distinguished company in a few days. Ted Sullivan, one-time Southern Leaguer and now managing director of the Giants-White Sox world tour, is in New Orleans to-day arranging a lease on the Pelicans' ball park for an exhibition game late in October.

Mr. Sullivan expects to visit Birmingham and Mobile on a similar mission. And then he is coming to Atlanta.

Would Atlanta fans care to watch the White Sox and the Giants play ball?

We pause for no answer.

* * *

MAJOR CALLAWAY, home again from Chattanooga, says he hasn't heard anything about the proposed visitation, but doesn't see anything in the way of pulling it off. The president of the Crackers fancies there should be no trouble in arranging to let the big leaguers have Ponce DeLeon Park as a battle ground.

And he is of the opinion that it would be some considerable drawing card.

* * *

IT is rumored that Jud Daley, left fielder for the Vols, may wear an Atlanta uniform soon. The understanding hereabout is indefinite, and Bill Smith probably will make the decision while in Nashville on the series beginning to-day.

Daley is a good ball player and is very popular in Atlanta, but it appears unlikely that the Atlanta club will take him on if anything substantial has to be paid for him.

If it comes about that Judson is available for his stipend alone, he may but into the present series against his old friends.

* * *

HERE'S one we lamp from up Syracuse-way, in the New York State League:

An umpire named Harrison had a tumultuous run-in with a ball player working under the entire misnomer of Good. Good had tried to steal third and was tagged when about fifteen feet off the bag.

True to his reputation, Good let out an awful yelp and the fans answered the call of the wild.

"You're out of the game!" the umpire ordered.

Good declined to see it that way.

"Get out of the lot," was the next command.

Good stayed where he was as if he had taken root.

Harrison called a big cop, standing in the crowd near the bleachers.

"Take that man off the field," he directed.

The cop shook his head. "Nope," he said firmly.

Harrison was outraged. "You won't?" he roared, "And why not?"

"He wasn't out," said the cop. And he stuck to it.

ONCE more is the eternal and Emersonian law of compensation glutted with justification.

For weeks the sport columns have echoed with the piteous roars of F. Chance, sometime Peerless Leader. It seems Mr. Chance swapped Hal Chase for Zeider and Borton, of the White Sox, with the idea that Rollie was sound in wind and limb and his sidekick able to swing on the pill like a garden gate.

We gather from the twittering that Mr. Zelder was afflicted with a bunion and had to do his running on one side, while Mr. Borton's batting resembled the performance of the oldest inhabitant of the Soldiers' Home killing flies with a newspaper.

So.

But now comes Mr. Callahan, who lately paid $18,500 in Comiskey coin and White Sox players for Larry Chappelle.

"He's got a warped knee and a kink in his hip," wails Jimmy, "and he had 'em when I got him!"

Mr. Chance should lie awake nights and grieve.

Great Tribute Paid Hal Chase by Harry Lord, of White Sox

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Harry Lord, the White Sox captain, discussing first basemen to-day, paid a great tribute to Hal Chase. Here is what the third baseman of the White Sox has to say about the former Yankee player:

"Chase will save any infielder thirty errors in a season if the pair would work together through the year. Look what Chase did for me in the one game at St. Louis. I would have had two black marks to my discredit on that day. The papers would have said Lord's errors were responsible for the White Sox losing to the Browns 6 to 3, or something like that. With Chase over there we don't have to worry. We can field the ball, shut our eyes, and make a throw, and he will get it some way or other."

Sports and Such

PLAIN NUTTY.

He'd seen upon the sport page
The way that Ty Cobb collars,
And all the other dope that deals
With betting odds and dollars;
With gate receipts, percentages,
Expenses, kicks and hollers.

And then he put a question;
His friends were filled with gloom.
With sorrow did they cast him
Into a padded room.
He'd asked: "Is there a sport guy
Not out for the mazuma?"

HAVING DEMONSTRATED TO our entire satisfaction that the Pacific coast players do not play tennis properly, the Eastern experts now have nothing to do but dig up some one to beat them. Still it seems a man's size assignment.

BOTH GUNBOAT SMITH and Jim Flynn announce that they are training earnestly for their coming spear-running, but both omit to say why.

THE FIGHT PROMOTERS in Montana are breaking the law again. The Legislature having authorized fights the promoters put on Jimmy Clabby and Freddy Hicks.

YALE HAS NOT decided on her rowing system for next year. After her experience with English coaching she has apparently decided only on what system she won't use.

JOHNSON AND LANGFORD are to fight in Paris for a small fortune; not so small, either. But the French are notoriously callous about inculcating these principles of manliness and fair play in the youth of their city. They are so unrefined that they want to see a fight when they pay for one.

* * *

"THE FANS ARE plentifully supplied with amusement in the two big leagues," observes Hughey Jennings. Sure! There is the $18,000 outfielder, the Chase deal, the Browns and the Cardinals—a new laugh every day.

ENCOURAGE BY THE attendance at the opening day the turf bosses at Saratoga will extend that conference five days, feeling that the breed of horses will be immeasurably benefitted in the extra time.

NO CHANCE FOR LAJOIE TO LEAVE NAPS, SAYS BARNARD

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 7.—An absolute denial of the rumor that Chicago, Boston and Cleveland teams are arranging a three-cornered deal which will take Second Baseman Lajoie away from Cleveland was made to-day by E. S. Barnard, vice president of the Naps, Manager Birmingham, of the Cleveland team, wired from Philadelphia saying he had no trade under way for Lajoie.

ALLIS STARTED PLAYING GOLF WHEN 5 YRS. OLD

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Ned Allis, who was runner-up in the Western Golf Association at Chicago and is the sensation in the Western golf world, began to play golf when he was only five years old, taking part in a tournament that year, with his father as tutor. It was not until four or five years ago, however, that Ned began to come to the front with the older men.

His first public performance of consequence was in an invitation tournament held by the Milwaukee Country Club in which he met Harold Wyatt, of Fond du Lac. The two youngsters then only 17 years old, gave the fastest exhibition of match play of the entire tournament.

Allis is a very fine putter, as may be seen by the fact that in his match against R. A. Gardner, ex-national champion, in the semi-final at Homewood, Allis had only 27 puts for the 18 holes of the morning round.

To learn how a golfer's game may improve in a few months one has but to consult the United States Golf Association's handicap rating list for 1913. There Allis is placed among the handicap five men. Among the others in the five list are Devereux Lord, the three-time winner of The Brooklyn Eagle trophy; B. T. Allen, Fox Hills; Chisholm Beach, Fox Hills; S. D. Bowers, Brooklawn; T. V. Berminghan, Wykagyl; James R. Hyde, South Shore; Philip Carter, Nassau, Metropolitan junior champion; Max R. Marston, Baltusrol, interscholastic champion; C. H. Seely, ex-Metropolitan champion, and others. Allis would more likely be handicapped at 2, or 3, at least.

The only time that Metropolitan District golfers have seen the quality of Allis' golf was at Lakewood, N. J., on April 17-19, last. Here Allis just fell outside the medal prize in the qualifying round by a single stroke, tying with Walter J. Travis, of Garden City, at 78, while H. K. Kerr, South Shore, got the best card with a 77.

Allis lasted till the semi-final, when he was defeated by Horace C. Cook, of Trenton, the youthful player from Trenton, N. J., who, in the afternoon final with Travis, held the former international champion at evens till a penalty stroke at the seventeenth hole threw him off his game on the home hole, the match going to Travis by two up. On his way to the semi-final Allis had beaten J. F. Shanley, the best of the Deal players.

Since Allis first swung a club at the age of five, he has been carefully coached by his father, Louis Allis, who firmly believes that his boy will some day be the premier amateur golfer of the world.

PRESIDENT WILSON WANTS 'SQUARE DEAL' FROM 'UMPS'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Wilson wants a "square deal" from baseball umpires, should they have occasion to pass upon his political decisions. He told George Hildebrand and "Billy" Evans so in an interview at the White House. Hildebrand and Evans are arbiters of the American League. They promised to grant the President's request.

RITCHIE IS LOSING PRESTIGE BY POLICY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Willie Ritchie has lost much of his following here and there are no few fans who are of the belief now that Billy Nolan spoke the truth when he declared that Ritchie would not tackle tough game unless forced into it.

The champion's unwillingness to take on Tommy Murphy and his acceptance of Freddie Welsh instead, and in a strange land, has caused this belief to win favor.

CARPENTER KNOCKS OUT WILLIAMS IN FOURTH

VICHY, FRANCE, Aug. 7.—Georges Carpentier, the light heavyweight champion of France, to-day knocked out Williams, an English heavyweight, in the fourth round.

Carpentier is considering a bout with Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight champion of the world, who recently left the United States after he had been convicted of white slavery.

Carpentier said to-day that he would probably meet Johnson if the inducements were sufficiently large.

CHURCH HEALERS BEGIN FIGHT ON MEDICAL BILL

Christian Scientists Take Campaign Into the House After Defeat in Senate.

Christian Scientists have begun a campaign against those provisions of the Medical Practice bill regulating their methods for healing in Georgia. The Senate has passed the bill and it is expected to come before the House soon. An amendment to the bill framed by Christian Scientists failed in the Senate by three votes.

The amendment is worded similar to the one President Taft added to the Medical Practice bill for the Canal Zone at the request of Christian Scientists there.

Edward H. Carman, of Atlanta, president of the Christian Science State Publication Committee, has sent to Christian Scientists all over Georgia a letter which says in part:

"Get influential members of your church to go to three or four of their good friends—influential men—get them to write or wire their Representative in the lower House of the Legislature asking them to support the following amendment which will be offered to the Medical Practice bill when it comes up:

This act shall not apply to any person who ministers to or treats the sick or suffering by mental or spiritual means, whether gratuitously or for compensation, and without the use of any drug or material remedy.

Mr. Carman Thursday refused to comment on the subject, saying he preferred not to even have it known that Christian Scientists felt any anxiety over the passage of the bill.

It is understood, however, that if the bill is passed without the amendment Christian Scientists will at once declare it unconstitutional and will cite as their authority the Constitution of the United States.

Diving Suit Nearly Coffin for Inventor

SANTA MONICA, CAL., Aug. 7.—Tom Yamishi, from Japan, invented a rubber diving suit which, at its trial dive this afternoon, sprung a leak and nearly formed a coffin for the inventor.

J. L. Green, in a rowboat, picked up the Japanese as he was sinking and towed him ashore. After being rolled on a barrel, the inventor left for home.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Forsyth.

At the cool and busy Forsyth Theater this week a seven-act bill is offered that contains a splendid mixture of variety. Every act is making good its indorsement. The Eight Berlin Madcaps, eight bewitching young misses, dance themselves into their audiences' hearts and execute some clever acrobatics.

VanHoven, in his dippy magician act, is met with roars of laughter from the start until the finish of his act. His antics on the stage with two little boys, whom he selects from the audience to assist him in a trick, creates one spasm of laughter after another. Robert Everest has the best monkey act seen on a local stage.

At the Grand.

Hundreds of new patrons are finding their way into the comfortable, roomy, safe, clean and cool Grand, where the new established motion picture policy is meeting with the regular patronage of a pleased clientele. Everything in the way of convenience has been done to make the Grand delightful.

BILL WITHDRAWS TWO PER CENT U. S. BONDS

Senator Owen Offers Plan to Increase Gold Reserve and to Unify Currency.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A bill providing for increasing the gold reserve in the redemption division of the Treasury, retiring the 2 per cent bonds and unifying the currency issues of the United States, was introduced in the Senate to-day by Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee.

The measure provides that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed, as gold certificates come into the Treasury or subtreasuries of the United States, to have them canceled and the gold represented by such certificates transferred to the redemption division. In place of these canceled gold certificates, the Secretary is to issue treasury notes of the United States, redeemable in gold at the Treasury.

The Secretary is authorized, in his discretion, when requested to do so by national banks having outstanding national bank notes secured by 2 per cent bonds, to purchase these bonds at par and accrued interest, and to assume the redemption at par of the bank notes secured by these bonds, charging the amount of the notes against the proceeds of the 2 per cent bonds and paying the balance in cash to the national banks.

These 2 per cent bonds shall then be canceled, and a like amount of twenty-year 3 per cent bonds shall be placed in the redemption division and the annual interest on them credited to the funds of the redemption division.

When the national bank notes the redemption of which has been assumed shall come into the Treasury they shall be canceled and retired and in place of these notes the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue treasury notes in like amount.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Castro Is Denounced By His Namesake

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Cipriano Castro, the would-be dictator of Venezuela, is not a real Castro, or even a gentleman, according to Victor Cita Castro, who reached here on the French liner La Lorraine, and who shouted indignation from all directions when delayed for a time by federal officials in the belief that he was a possible ally of the redoubtable Cipriano.

"I know why you are keeping me here," he said. "You think I am going to participate in the revolt down there. You wound me; you pierce my heart with your words. Oh, vile! He is a peon and a peddler; not a Castro or a gentleman."

Colorado Women Are Asking More Offices

DENVER, Aug. 7.—The victory of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young and the uprising of Chicago women in her behalf have aroused Chicago women voters, who state they will demand their full share of State and city offices.

Find Girls Lost in Snow on Mt. Rainier

TACOMA, WASH., Aug. 7.—Lost in the snow on the Cowlitz trail on Mount Rainier, two school teachers, Miss Kitty Roberts, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Bernice Royce, of San Francisco, were found by rescuers too exhausted to walk.

Tells How It Feels to Face Death by Rabies

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Facing death from rabies is a grim ordeal. This is the feeling expressed by Elsie Parish, noted writer of children's verses, who confidently awaits the outcome of treatment begun to forestall infection to which she laid herself open by sucking the wounds of two little girls who had been bitten by a rabid dog.

"Did you ever read an improbable story and then say to yourself that it couldn't have happened?" asked Miss Parish. "That's the way I feel. Of course, there is a horror in it all, but I just say, feeling as I do now, that I just know I'm not going to die."

Appeals to Wilson To Save His Teeth

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Dr. John Grant Lyman, Federal prisoner, charged with misusing the mails, has made an appeal to President Wilson for a hasty trial.

In a night lettergram sent to Washington the physician complained that his teeth have become worn to a razor edge and he is unable to masticate his food.

BROUGHTON RIVAL OF KING IN LONDON

"In London you hear of but two people—King George and Dr. Len G. Broughton—and possibly you hear a little more of the latter than you do of the former," said W. S. Witham, Atlanta banker and church worker, in an address at the Wesley Memorial Church Wednesday night.

The subject of his address was the "Impression of Zurich," and he told of a trip through Europe in connection with the International Sunday School Convention. He declared that Broughton was following out the same line of work which he carried on in Atlanta; that he spoke fearlessly of things politic, and was the most talked of man in the English Capital.

Mr. Witham was discussing the praising of a man's virtues while he lived, and remarked that the trend of the times now is to praise the living more than the dead.

"Why, more people visit the tomb of Pasteur than they do Napoleon's. It is the man who lives for his country who is getting the praise of the world to-day, not the man who dies for it."

Catholic Women To Oppose 'The Cause'

BUFFALO, Aug. 7.—Organization of a Catholic women's league that proposes to counteract the radical tendencies of the women's movement, including their demand for the ballot, marked to-day's session of the German Roman Catholic Central Verein.

"The femininist movement," said Mrs. Joseph Frey, honorary president, "is being promoted by women whose views are decidedly Pagan. If their demands were to be realized the Christian family would cease to exist and woman's condition would lapse into paganism."

Sues as Wife Turns Tango Gown Model

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 7.—Pasquale L. Montant, a musician, says in a divorce complaint filed to-day that his wife told him she preferred to be a living model in a tango gown than live with him.

He says he is fully able to provide for her, but she became a model in a downtown department store, wearing a tango gown which he says in his complaint "is designed to display the leg from the ankle to the knee."

Bedridden 27 Years, Ossified Author Dies

WELLINGTON, MO., Aug. 7.—Thomas F. Lockhart, who spent 27 years in bed, practically in one position, is dead here. His joints were ossified so that he could move only his right shoulder and the middle joints of two fingers.

He wrote many books, among them an autobiography, which brought him enough to pay for a nurse.

Town Terrorized by Fatal Gun Battle

VALDOSTA, Aug. 7.—C. W. Cobb, the Hazlehurt real estate dealer who was seriously wounded in a fight with the Crawford brothers at Moniac, Ga., is doing well. It is believed now he will recover.

The fight, over a realty deal, occurred in the woods some distance from the town, and a report received here to-day from Moniac says that J. M. Crawford, who was shot dead by Cobb, and Cobb, apparently dead, were left out all night, the people in the town being afraid to go out and make an investigation. Another report that a Coroner's jury had rendered a verdict justifying Cobb could not be confirmed to-day.

Society Couple Divide House in Quarantine

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, leaders in the social set of Chicago and prominent in Eastern social circles, are living apart.

The separation is temporary, for it is believed Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor will have recovered from the chickenpox and be released from quarantine within a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor divided their mansion so that half the house belongs to Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor. The husband retained the other half and he meets social and business friends there.

Georgia Slayer Freed By 'Unwritten Law'

SAVANNAH, Aug. 7.—Another homicide was justified under the "unwritten law" here when a jury last night acquitted Lathrop George of the charge of murdering Henry McClellan, who was shot and killed while lying in the bedroom of Mrs. Fannie George, wife of the defendant.

George claimed self-defense in a personal statement to the court, saying McClellan was about to attack him when the fatal shot was fired, but his counsel relied almost entirely upon the theory of justification.

Accused Swindlers Face 28 Warrants

GREENSBORO, Aug. 7.—D. E. Moorefield and G. W. Bishop, arrested in Arcadia, Fla., on charges of cheating and swindling, are in the custody of Sheriff E. C. Hixon, of Greene County.

They arrived this morning, two beautiful women accompanying them.

Twenty-eight warrants await them after Greene County is through.

Justice Is Dispensed From Rail Fence Top

SPOKANE, Aug. 7.—Too busy harvesting to go to his office, Justice of Peace H. H. Wilson to-day sat on the fence of his farm at Medical Lake, heard a youth plead guilty and fined him $50 and costs for taking liquor into prohibition territory.

LONG LOST NANA FOUND IN HOME OF MORGAN

Manuscript of Zola Novel Sought For Years for French Government.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A nationwide hunt by an American correspondent of Mme. Zola for the manuscript of Emile Zola's novel of Paris gutter life "Nana" has resulted in finding the original copy of this story in the J. P. Morgan collection in this city. "Nana" is the only one of the Zola manuscripts that is not in the possession of the French Government. The others were given by Mme. Zola. Neither she nor the collectors for the Government have yet been informed where the "Nana" manuscript is.

Government Owns Others.

J. P. Morgan said yesterday that the manuscript was in his collection and that according to his records it was the only one not owned by the Government of France. Mme. Zola was looking for the manuscript and that no request for it had ever come to him from the French Government or the widow of the novelist. Mr. Morgan said that he did not know what his attitude would be if such a request should be made. It probably will be made to Mr. Morgan within a few days by Guyot Cameron, formerly professor of French in Princeton University, who has been commissioned by Mme. Zola to locate the manuscript.

An Old Friend of the Zolas.

Mr. Cameron formely lived in Paris and is an old friend of the Zola family. His search began several years ago with scant clues. The proprietor of a book-shop in Paris remembered having sold the manuscript to an American, and that was about all Mr. Cameron had to work on. He made an exhaustive investigation in this country by correspondence and personal search among dealers and private collectors in various cities; but the discovery finally came when a friend told Mr. Cameron that he had seen the "Nana" manuscript listed in the Morgan collection in a foreign paper at the time of the death of J. P. Morgan, Sr.

He will write the story of its discovery to Mme. Zola and ill probably ask Mr. Morgan for the manuscript in her behalf.

U. S. Leads Europe In Child Welfare Work

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—"American obstetrical methods and child welfare work in general were shown by the papers and discussions at the infant mortality cnference just ended in London to be superior to those of England," said Dr. Julius H. Hess, of Chicago, to-day. "Indeed, our child welfare work now surpasses that in Germany, where such work had its origin.

"The methods in the British colonies are also in advance of those in Europe."

Bullfrogs Imported; Skins Used in Purses

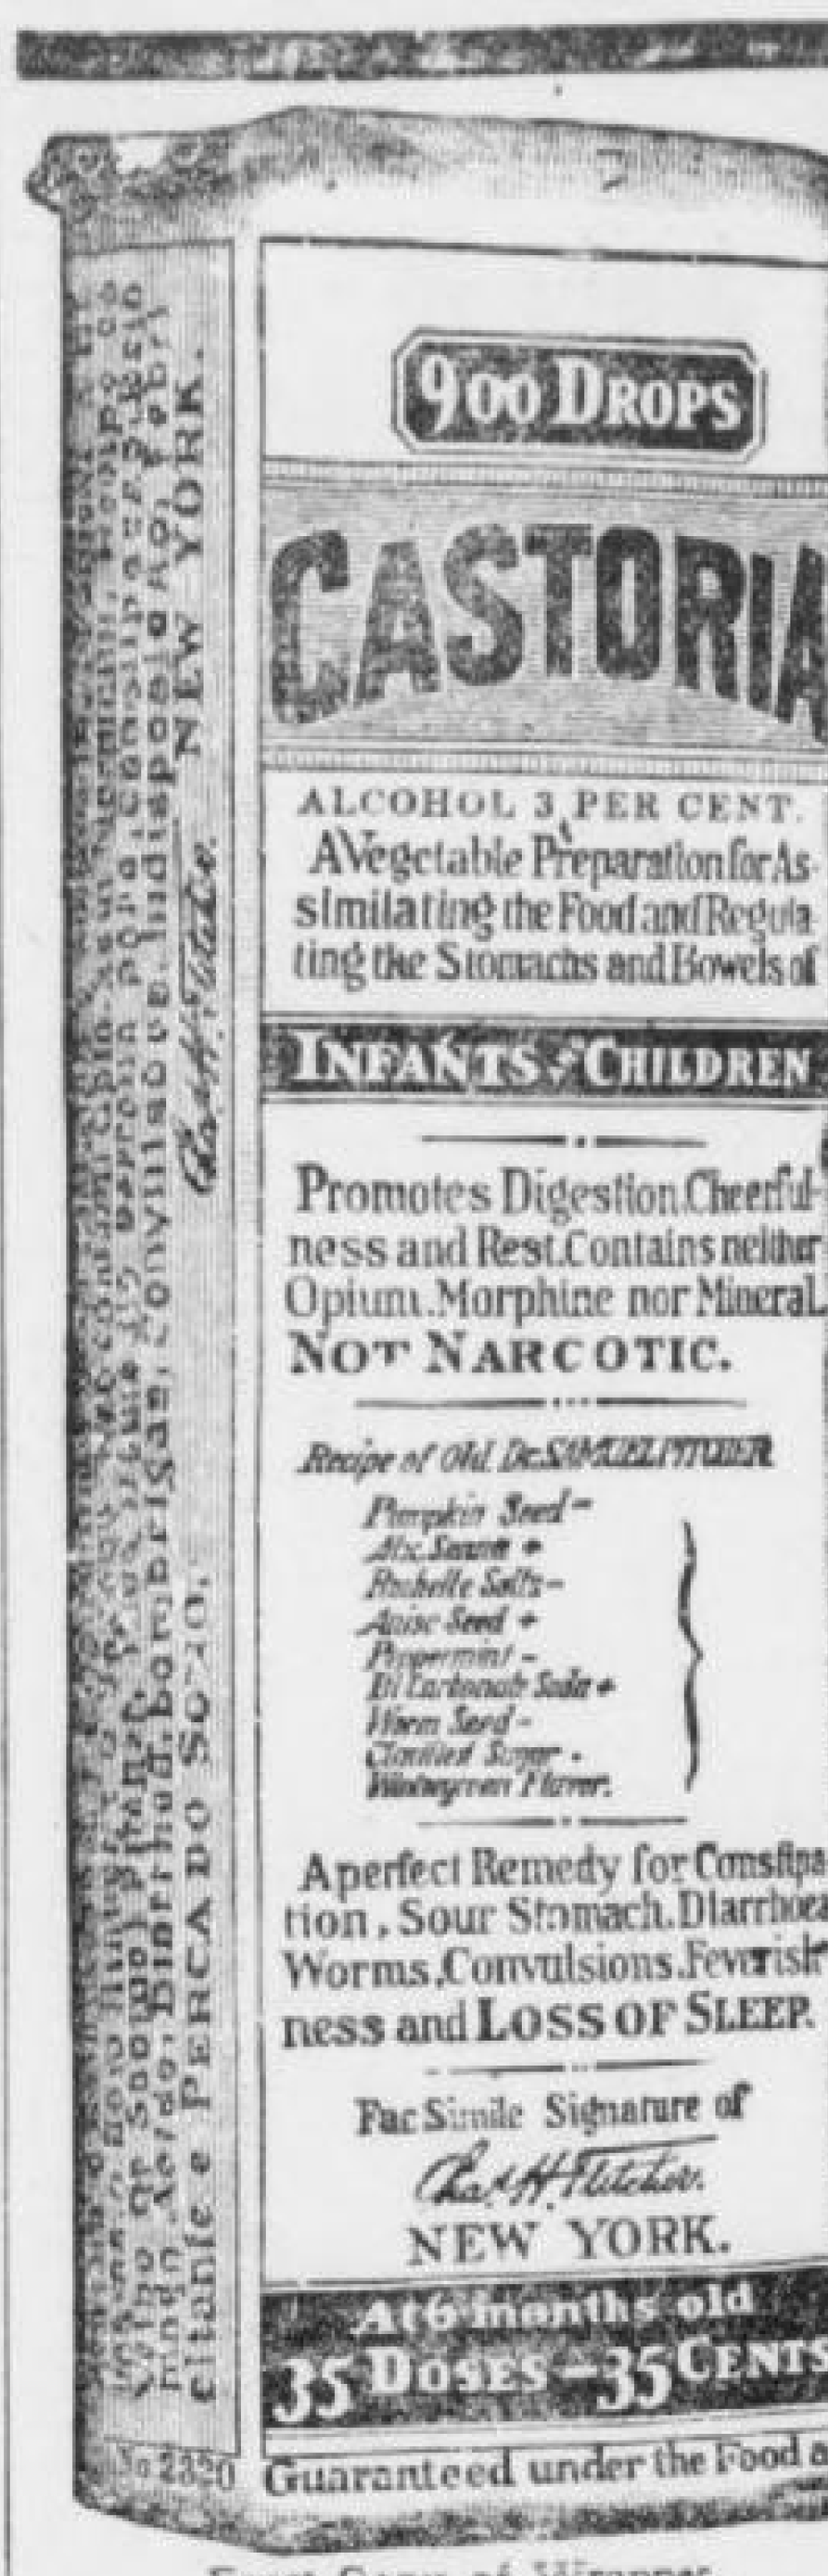

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Eighteen big mountain frogs have been brought here from the Philippines by Dr. F. M. McAllister, ship's surgeon on the Korea. He will give them to the Park Commission for propagation in Stow Lake.

The mouse-colored skin, mottled with spots of darker hue, may be used for the manufacture of women's purses and chatelaine sacks.

The frogs are edlicate in spite of their size, and five died on the voyage.

WOMAN DRIVES CAB.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Mrs. L. J. Moses has secured a hack license, took up a position at the New Haven Railroad Station here with her new surrey and a spirited horse and put in a bid for "fares."

Still In The Lead

For over fifteen years Grape-Nuts, the pioneer health cereal, has had no equal, either in flavour or nutrition.

Thousands of families use it regularly because

Grape-Nuts

Has qualities which make it the ideal food—

Delicious Flavour,
Rich Nourishment,
Quick Preparation,

and withal, easily digested.

Grape-Nuts and cream, in place of heavy, indigestible food, helps to make one cooler and more comfortable on hot days; and builds body and brain in a way that gives zest and energy.

STRONG WORDS

From a Doctor with 40 Years Experience.

"In my 40 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Calif. physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people.

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts, and Postum in place of coffee, when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition, Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in a perfect, healthy tone." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

West Peachtree Lot $100 a Front Foot

Peachtree Road Parcel Also Bought, 80-Acre Tract of City Leased, Seventeen Loan Deeds.

A number of interesting realty sales were reported Thursday, among the transfers being a Peachtree road parcel, an Ormewood property and a West Peachtree parcel, all for good prices.

W. S. Witham has sold to John C. Wayt an irregular-shaped lot on the west side of Peachtree road adjoining the Witham place on one side and the property of Harriet Wayt on the other, for $4,410.

A. L. Bartlett has bought from the West End Bank a West Peachtree lot 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000, or $100 a front foot. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Hugh T. Burton has bought from R. D. Hicks, of Ohio, the northeast corner of Oglethorpe avenue and Lawton street, 64 by 140 feet, for $3,250.

Bruno Bukofzer has bought from A. D. Thomson and Carlos Lynes the southwest corner of Ormewood and South Moreland avenues, 70 by 129 1-2, for $3,500.

City Acreage at Work.

Eighty acres which the City of Atlanta bought some time ago on the Collier road will soon be made to yield an income. The tract has been leased to the Autodrome Association for $750 a year as a site for the automobile racing track which will soon be built by John S. Cohen, John Aldredge and others. The situation is about one-quarter of a mile west of Peachtree road, in the Brookwood section.

This property was bought by the city as a site for a sewage disposal plant, but has never been used.

The presence of a motordrome in this section, by the way, is expected to draw great crowds of people toward Brookwood, and to make the street car business profitable. Real estate men have not decided what the effect on property will be, but they expect some development on the road leading to the track.

Paving for Penn Street.

Bituminous macadam and not chert is to be the material used to pave Penn street, according to announcement of Street Engineer Hurt. The original intention was to use chert or rock, but this plan has been changed. The engineering department has decided that it will be cheaper to put down binder roads such as were built in West End Park.

Loan Funds Hold Up.

Loan funds for local real estate continue to hold up steady. Last week the loans printed in The Fulton County Report were not numerous enough to attract attention, but this week there have been an unusually large number. Early in the week there were 32 deeds in small amounts, one insurance company making six, and Wednesday there were 17. The latter varied in amounts from $150 to $4,000. Real estate men take this condition as a good sign. When there is a wide range of loans, the indication is that money is easy and there is plenty of confidence.

Referring to the 32 loans of Monday, a well-known realty man declared he had never seen a greater number recorded in a day, and he has been in the business here about fifteen years.

New Ansley Park Home.

Building Inspector Ed H. Hays has issued a permit to W. W. Brown to build a two-story brick-veneer dwelling at 96 Prado, Ansley Park. The house will cost $7,200. John Starr has the contract to build it.

To Renew Mansion Fight.

Although the matter of disposing of the present Governor's Mansion at Peachtree and Cain streets has been set aside by the State Senate, there is every probability that the question will be reopened at the next session of the Legislature, and will be presented until something is done.

Citizens comment daily on the inadequacy of the present mansion and say a better place must be provided, and these expressions have had as much effect in keeping the matter open as the desire of people to effect a trade with the State.

The Senate voted 21 to 19 against the creation of a commission composed of the Governor, the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate and others to sell or exchange the site. This action was taken in spite of the declaration of Senator Miller that the mansion must be sold sometime, and it might as well be sold now.

Probably a dozen attractive and interesting propositions were brewing among the real estate men, and these will be shelved until the question is taken up again.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease Business Waking Up.

The approach of autumn always causes extensive preparations for renting and leasing. Some of the most important leases in the city expire September 1 and October 1 and renewals will be in order, or new locations will be taken. Other concerns' leases are up at the end of the year.

The renting business also takes on a roseate hue in the fall. People away at summer resorts are returning by hundreds and changes of residence are in order for a large part of them. Local agencies are accordingly preparing for the rush. Some agencies are extending. Porter & Swift and Hurt & Cone, for instance, have recently installed renting departments.

ZACHRY HEARING IS POSTPONED BY SLATON

Augusta Attorney Denies Blease's Right to Ask Extradition for Alleged Kidnaping.

Declaring that Governor Blease, of South Carolina, was acting under no legal right whatever in demanding his extradition from Georgia, P. B. Zachry, of Harlem, charged with kidnaping his own child in Columbia, S. C., called upon Governor Slaton Thursday morning to arrange for the hearing which will be held Monday morning. Governor Slaton changed the time of the hearing from Friday until Monday upon the request of Mr. Zachry.

Mr. Zachry declared he would fight the requisition to the last ditch. He will be represented at the hearing by Hamilton Phinizy and C. Henry Cohen, of Augusta, and John T. West, of Thomson. The requisition papers of Governor Blease probably will be the only testimony offered by the plaintiffs.

Mr. Zachry told a graphic story of the case Thursday morning. He had been awarded the two children four times, he declared, when Mrs. Zachry left with them on the very day that the Superior Court judge in Augusta upheld the decision of the ordinary favorable to Zachry.

Sued In South Carolina.

It was then, he declared further, that he took his automobile and hastened to South Carolina, where he entered suit again for the children in the Columbia court.

"I did not want to make out requisition papers for Mrs. Zachry," declared Mr. Zachry, "because I do not believe in fighting a woman in that way. That is the reason I instituted court proceedings in South Carolina.

"When I entered the courtroom there was my little daughter Frances, the older of the two, and the first thing she said was 'Hello, papa, are you going to take me?' She always was fond of me and she was the one I wanted. However, according to a previous agreement with Mrs. Zachry, I allowed even this one to visit her mother once a month."

Friends Rally to Aid Him.

Following the decision of Judge Gary awarding the children to him as claimed, Mr. Zachry declared he took the older, just three years of age, in his automobile and started for Georgia. Several times on the way, he says, he was warned that he was being followed, and at a bride near the Georgia line he was fully prepared for interference by the South Carolina authorities acting under orders of Governor Blease.

"They would not have stopped me, though," declared Mr. Zachry, "for I was bound for Georgia with my little girl, and I meant to get there at all odds."

Mr. Zachry is a prominent attorney in Augusta and resides in Harlem, a suburb. Less than a week ago, when Governor Blease demanded the extradition of Zachry, a host of friends of the latter held a mass meeting in Augusta and sent a telegram to Governor Blease requesting a hearing before any decision was made.

Dog Catcher, Tags Too, Are All Ready

The city dog catcher starts on his annual round Monday and all dogs caught without a tag will be placed in the pound.

City Clerk Walter Taylor has a supply of tags on hand and those who desire may secure same by calling at his office and paying the tax. No dog is exempt.

30 Kansas Towns Suffering for Water

TOPEKA, Aug. 7.—The month of July, 1913, was the second driest month since the local weather bureau was established 30 years ago.

Kansas streams that have never been known to go dry are dry now. More than 30 Kansas towns have been compelled to shut off all water for lawns.

Charter Election Is Plan of Legislature

The proposed new charter for Atlanta, including the provisions for the initiative, referendum and recall of heads of departments, and the limitation of the recorder's power, will be submitted to the people, according to an agreement reached by the House and Senate committee Thursday.

According to this agreement the charter as a whole will be submitted to the people first and the question of the referendum and recall, as well as the limitation of the recorder's power, will be submitted separately.

COTTON EASIER ON PROMISE OF RAINS

Both Elements Hesitate Pending Texas Weather Outlook—Sentiment Continues Bearish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Continued dry weather over Texas and Oklahoma led to further buying at the opening of the cotton market to-day and first prices were 1 to 5 points higher than the closing quotations of Wednesday. August made the best gain. There was a great deal of warehouse buying. After the call further bullish advices relative to the weather were received and prices advanced still further.

There was na rain shown on the map which was an incentive for buying, but there is disturbance in the Gulf, which local weather experts claim may bring rain in the next two days over the western belt. This is causing hesitancy on the part of bulls to buy aggressively. Every one seemed to await the noon detailed weather report to see how high the temperatures may run and whether or not the local experts are correct in their predictions. The volume of trading was small and the range was very narrow throughout the early session.

The detailed weather record showed temperatures ranging from 100 to 107 degrees and no rain. The temperatures were not so high in the eastern belt and very little rain was shown. These high temperatures are causing uneasiness among the bear forces and some short covering was in evidence about noon. On the other hand, the bull element hesitated when the ring, Wall street and uptown crowd so'd the market off a few points. Should rain materialize in the Western belt between now and Sunday undoubtedly it will promote sufficient selling to send the market back into last week's low level.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 5 to 7 points from the final quotations of Wednesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due on futures, but shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 6 points higher quotations. The map shows a generally fair belt. Temperatures entirely normal, except somewhat above in Arkansas and Tennessee. The disturbance in the Gulf remained stationary, holding forth additional promise for a change in the weather in the west.

The market opened at unchanged figures, but soon rallied a few points on the buying in anticipation of a better demand possibly from Europe on the conclusion of peace. The advance was checked by prospects of more favorable weather in the west.

August in New York showed additional strength on a report that 10,500 bales export room had been engaged and that the stock would be reduced to the low figure of 18,000 bales.

The market eased after the close of Liverpool to 12.15 for October, with trading small and waiting for news of weather developments in the west.

COTTON GOSSIP

Bulls are afraid.

* * *

The market after the call was sold on forecast of increasing cloudiness in Arkansas and predictions of local weather experts of rain in the next three days for the western belt. The ring crowd were apparently the leading sellers. Montgomery, Dick Bros., Mitchell and Wilson led the buying and bid the market up. Very little cotton was offered at the outset. Weld was reported a good buyer; also the South and West were booked as buyers.

On the call, Gifford and Schill bought August. Hentz and Rothschild sold. Starr, Rothschild and Lehman bought October. Shantz, Norden and Mitchell sold. Flinn, Starr and Gifford bought December. Shantz, Norden, Burnett and Hentz sold. Starr and Shearson bought January. Rothschild and Bashford sold.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says:

"According to the bears, yesterday's advance was a revival of last week's price boom, which week-end rains had interfered with. According to the bulls, the talent has begun to realize the danger of selling short, because of the continued need of rain in the west, and also because of the approach of a showdown on the Clarke and Smith bills affecting cotton contract trading.

"Meanwhile, the market is very narrow, and a light excess of buying or selling orders serves to move values a little way. Damage reports are beginning to come in from the west in sufficient number to cause some concern, and the Gulf storm, which big-yield men now depend on to bring rains to Texas, is only in process of formation and may not form at all. Dry weather advices are causing some shorts to cover.

"Yesterday exporters and forward sellers received some inquiries from Europe for supplies, but very little business was reported done."

William Schweigert, Albert Hatch and Paul Mustin were named on a committee to go to Washington city to confer with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo in regard to loans for the bank of the South with which to move the crop.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 7.—Texas at the present time and Oklahoma are dry and hot. This put the market up early, but experts were able to find Gulf storm or other disturbance somewhere, and on their assurance of rain some time in the near future prices declined a few points. It is a dull, pointless market that waits on the weather. Without rain and with the present high temperatures continued considerable deterioration will take place in the Southwest, but if rains come, the situation will be entirely different. Eastern belt reports are brilliant.

STOCKS DULL BUT ARE VERY STRONG

Report of Peace Abroad Causes Steady Buying of Big Issues by Strong Concerns.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Texas Company was the most prominent feature at the opening of the stock market to-day, advancing 2 points to 115. However, nearly all issues were higher following the lead of the foreign markets, which were up on reports of re-established peace in the Balkans.

Among the gains in the New York market were: Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; Steel common, ¼; Western Maryland, ¼; Utah Copper, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; Southern Railway, ¼; Reading, ¼; Pennsylvania, ⅜; New York, New Haven and Hartford, ¼; Missouri Pacific, ¼; Katy, ⅜; Car Foundry, ¼; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Erie, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜.

Canadian Pacific shaded ½, while American Sugar Refining lost the same amount.

At the end of half an hour Union Pacific was up 1 point.

The transfer books for subscription of Union Pacific close to-day, but the Stock Exchange ruled that sales of the issue during the morning would not be ex-rights, but that a due bill would be given for rights because the company did not announce the price, at which Southern Pacific certificates of interest would be offered.

The curb was strong.

Americans in London were steady in a narrow range.

Trading in the late forenoon was dull and price movements in the leading railroads and industrials were confined within a narrow margin. Union Pacific sold off ½ to 151 and similar recessions were recorded in Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Steel common, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Canadian Pacific and American Smelting. American Writing preferred was under severe pressure, declining 2 points.

Toward the end of the second hour business became more brisk and fractional recoveries were made in many of the leading issues.

Call money is loaning at 2¼ per cent.

The tone was steady in the last hour, with prices generally above the opening. Steel sold around 62¼ for a gain of about half on the day. New Haven so'd off and the late quotations were around par. Union Pacific was unusually strong, holding at 152½ for a net advance of a point. Missouri Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific and Reading advanced. The tone was strong.

The market closed firm. Governments unchanged; other bonds strong.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....85½@86½
Corn—No. 2 ....73½
Oats—No. 2 ....41¾

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—While wheat and corn both closed at lower levels to-day, oats were better. The changes in wheat showed net losse of ¼¾⅜c, the latter being the May option, which was under considerable pressure. September corn was up ⅛, but the more deferred months were ⅝@⅞c lower. Oats had gains of ⅛@⅜c.

The reports on corn were the worst on th crop, especially those from Kansas and Missouri, but this was overbalanced by scattered rains in the belt and the feeling that corn is high enough. There were cash sales of wheat of only 45,000 bushels at Chicago and export sales were reported as dull.

The sharp break in corn during the morning was the result of profit-taking by one of the largest holders in the trade, and who is located at Fort Worth, Texas.

Provisions closed rather unsettled after a session of dullness.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "Sentiment in wheat is mostly bearish as viewed by local traders on the big receipts and light export business. Shrewd operators, however, only selling on bulges, and say that caution should be used so long as the bull movement in corn continues. While a majority of corn traders are bullish, there are a number who are afraid to follow the advance much further, because prices are unprecedentedly high for this season for December and May. There is a good deal of spreading between corn and wheat, the latter being sold and corn bought on the carrying charge theory.

Chicago, partly cloudy, 76; Minneapolis, clear, showers, 65; Springfield, partly cloudy, 72; Terre Haute, cloudy, light sprinkle, fine rain reported 10 miles south, 80; Peoria, raining all morning, 72; St. Louis and Kansas City, clear, 80; Omaha, cloudy, 72 degrees, no rain.

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—Weather in Western Europe generally favorable. Partly cloudy conditions prevail in the Northwest this morning, with light rains reported at a number of points in both North and South Dakota. The market shows a rather steadier tone and there seems to be more friendly sentiment to wheat around these prices.

"Corn—According to reports thus far received there have been some light showers in parts of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and the River Valley, with temperatures running slightly lower. We look for a nervous market to-day, and until general rains occur do not expect any lasting decline.

"Oats—There seems to be more commission house buying, but local professionals work on the short side of the market. Receipts are of fair volume, though offerings of the new crop are moderate.

"Provisions—There was fair realizing on the advance yesterday, but the buying was of a good character. Packers bought October ribs. Cash trade was fair with shipments of lard larger than those of last year."

Michigan report: August corn condition, 87; July, 87; last August 70, when crop was 52,000,000 bushels; wheat yield per acre 15 bushels; July 14½; last August 11. Crop about 12,000,000 bushels; quality good. Plowing done for wheat, 18 per cent. Oat yield 29.2 bushels; year ago 31. Rye yield, per acre, 13.52; July, 13.8; last August, 13.

King, of Toledo, makes Ohio August wheat crop 101 per cent; July, 94; last August, 40; July Government report, 89 per cent. Oats, 82 per cent; July, 81; last August, 105. They figure 15 bushels per acre for wheat and 30 for oats as par.

* * *

The selling in corn has been quite general to-day. Commission houses were good buyers. Palmyra, Mo., says corn is going back every day. Already damaged 50 per cent. Unless we get rain within a week or ten days the crop will be a total loss.

Kansas City corn and wheat region bulletin shows rain at Dresden, Kans., 14; maximum temperatures, Kansas, 98 to 102; Missouri, 94 to 108 degrees.

The "Why" of the South's Greatest Sunday Paper

SIX days we labor and do all our work.
And Sunday we rest—and catch step with the world.
That is, most of us.

Most of us work six days in the week. Most of us work pretty hard. Most of us are tired when night comes.

That is a good, healthy state of affairs, and it keeps us out of mischief.

But it doesn't give us much chance to keep pace with things outside our own little march. And sometimes that is in lockstep.

And that answers the query, "Why is a Sunday paper?"

The Sunday paper tells us that there is something stirring outside of Atlanta; that there are other States than the Empire State of the South; other nations than the Union; other continents than America; other worlds than the earth.

The Sunday paper tells us about other people than the kind we know so well; other professions, other aims, other thoughts and creeds.

The Sunday paper marks the time by which we catch step with all the world.

Depending, of course, largely on the kind and scope of the Sunday paper.

Which brings us to The Sunday American in general, and the next Sunday American in particular.

Starting with Atlanta—for that's where a lot of us live—the next Sunday American will have the freshest and fullest possible news of America's great murder case—the Frank trial. There will be pictures. Special features will be covered by special writers. The news will be handled frankly and honestly—and fully.

But there are other things than the Frank trial.

Polly Peachtree and her inimitable comment and gossip of society—you don't know Polly Peachtree, do you? No—but you read her sprightly gossip and you wonder—and so do people over all the South. Polly Peachtree is an institution.

Well, and that brings on the fashions, and the frills, and all the dainty arabesques (or is that architectural?) of feminine apparel. With pictures. Don't forget the pictures.

Then the drama.

Reviews and criticisms of the new plays which, probably owing to the season, haven't been produced yet, or possibly even written; gossip of stageland and its people, the wonderful people that to most of us live and move and have their being in the golden country back of the footlights. We always like to hear of something that connects them with our own little work-a-day world. And we are treated to such anecdotes quite frequently in the Sunday paper.

Sports—pennant chases in our own league; in the Big Show; boxing and gossip of the padded square; racing, golf, tennis—all handled by experts, trained to keep ever an eye on the Main Chance; to play up a world event for what it is worth; to value truly the importance of local news. There's O. B. Keeler, Charles Dryden, W. J. McBeth, "Tick" Tichenor, J. W. Heisman, Innis Brown, Damon Runyon, W. S. Farnsworth, Ed W. Smith, W. W. Naughton and George E. Phair, who are known from coast to coast in the respective lines.

In the lighter vein the comics contribute the bit of nonsense now and then, traditionally relished by the "best of men"—who, after all, probably are just plain folks like us, who have a soft spot in our hearts (art critics say in our heads) for the quaint conceits of Powers and Fisher and the rest. When you're tired, you know, a series of pictures is mighty easy to read, and the point isn't easy to miss.

But if you're serious, you can find what other people think in the editorials; you can match your ideas against theirs—and you're the judge. Clashing opinions sharpen wits. It's fine exercise for the mind.

Or turn to a serial novel. You'll find the latest and best in The Sunday American. Just now it's "Adam's Clay," by Cosmo Hamilton. Pretty soon it will be "The Plot for a Pennant," and you baseball fans might guess the author—Hugh Fullerton. You know what that means. But they all are the freshest and the best that can be had.

And the cable service and the news of all the world.

That might be the headliner of all. No other service has the far-reaching tentacles—the "feelers" that touch this old mudball at every point, and gather that which is new and strange and worthy, to tell it with spirit and truth in the Sunday paper.

For next Sunday features—"Art or the Woman?" A brilliant consideration of Ida Rubenstein, the strange, fiery Russian dancer who has cast her spell on the flower of the artists, the composers and the dramatists of our time. And then the strange case of Alfred Vanderbilt, frozen out of American society, finding on his return with his new wife to Newport that his first wife is the leader in a social ostracism the most rigid in history.

Then there will be another proof that truth can be stranger than fiction in the narrative of the cruel lover who tried to frighten into his arms a belle of our Southland—and by a horror in the guise of a monster frog.

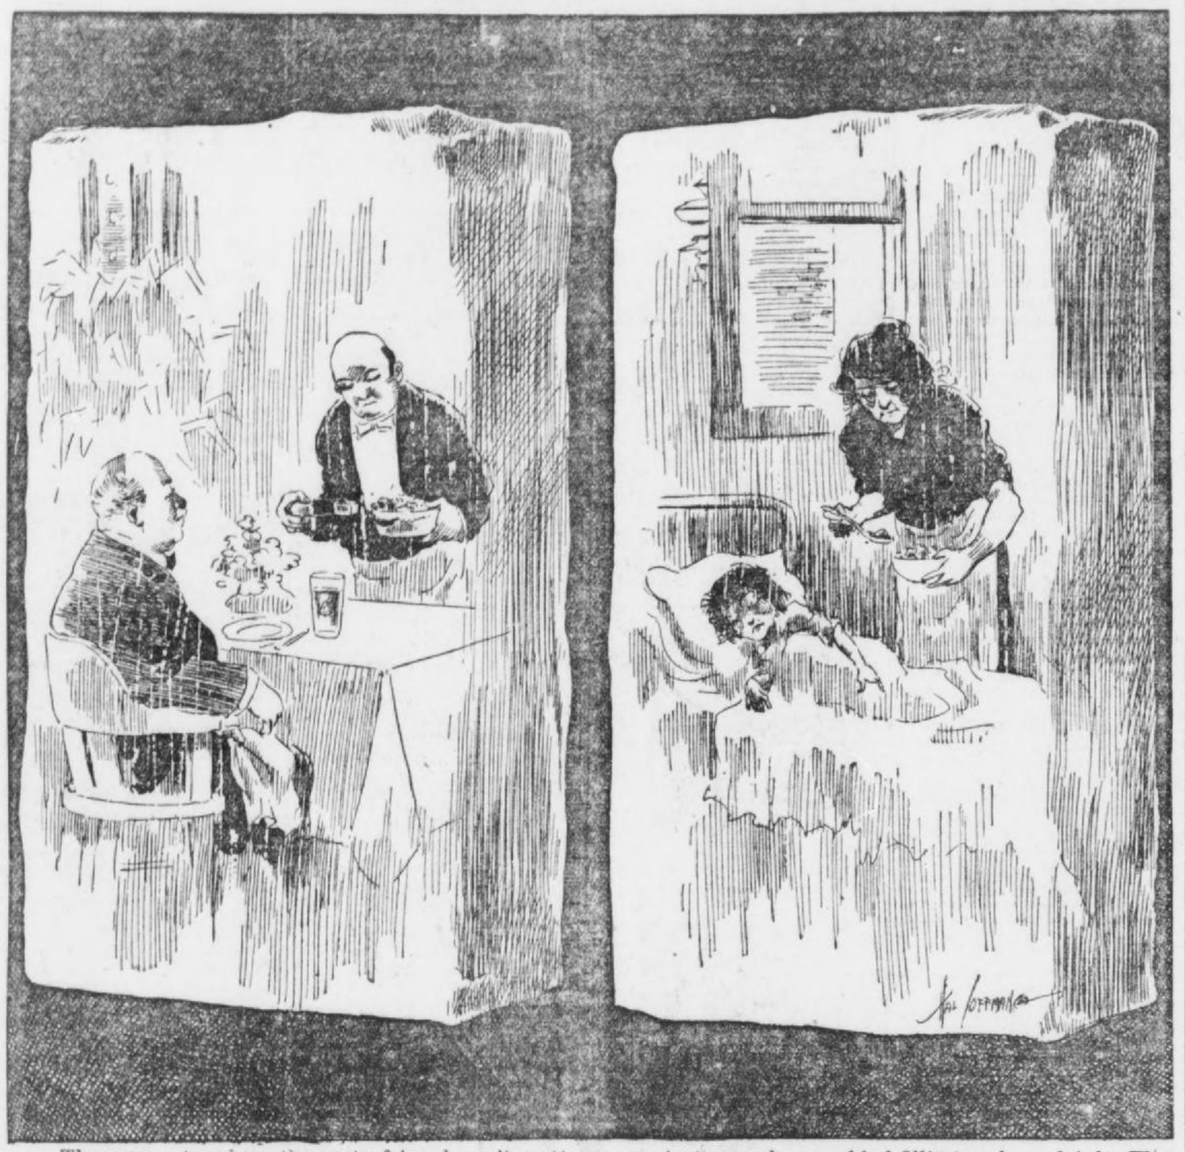

And what else? Well, King George of England has a quaint idea of destroying "American frivolity" by imposing old-fashioned and outrageous duties on the members of his court—the good King desiring to "sober it down." And Madame Cavalieri explains beauty hints—she really ought to know, you know—and a scientist tells how a child becomes a man, and a psychologist details his discovery of why lovers can't help quarreling.

By way of contrast, Sophie Lyons, queen of the burglars, tells why crime doesn't pay, and Lady Duff Gordon produces an essay on mannish tendencies in women's dress, notably waistcoats, a Parisian fancy.

It's all in The Sunday American. And with it the news of all the earth.

And that's how we catch step with the world, on Sunday.

The Pictures in the Ice

The man—to whom the cost of ice doesn't matter—sees in it merely an added fillip to a long drink. The woman—to whom the cost of ice is a heart-breaking matter—sees in it relief, perhaps life itself, for her child, sweltering in the poor cottage which they call home.

A Glimpse of the Cowed Women of Japan

Selected by EDWIN MARKHAM

MARIAN COX has recently written her reminiscences of Japan, and Mitchell Kennerley has published them under the title of "The Man-Made Woman of Japan." The picturesque pen of Mrs. Cox gives us a striking chronicle, and I take from it the following:

"The easiest way to arrive at a conception of the Japanese woman is to think of every quality directly contrary to the qualities of the typical American woman, and to see her as the embodiment of these. She is as docile as the American woman is aggressive; as demure as the American is flamboyant; as modest as the American is impudent; as humble as the American is snobbish; as conservative as the American is faddish; as reticent as the American is effusive.

"There is no romance between the sexes in Japan. The relation is either crude and businesslike in marriage, or unmentionable and bestial out of marriage. No wonder there is no word in the Japanese language which can be translated as 'love' in our language. The only love that can be spoken or written of in Japan is the filial. There are no words of endearment for lovers, nor for husband and wife. Marriage is without courtship; courtship without kisses, caresses or pet names.

Loveless Women.

"No Japanese knight has ever performed a deed of valor for the love of a woman. No Japanese poet has ever written a poem of 'love' that could be read to a pure woman. These people have put all their refinement into their etiquette of life, and so have had none left for the elmental facts of life; they have put all their imagination in a hair-splitting epicureanism, and so have had none left with which they might dignify humanity's greatest passion. When the Japanese nation evolves the kiss of man and woman she may cease to be a mimicker and become a molder of civilization.

"In reading of the loveless, kissless, woman-denouncing Japanese, one might believe him austerely chaste, puritanical, the true ascetic; and to those unversed in the duality of human nature it comes with a shock of surprise to learn that, on the contrary, his ruthless immorality and licentiousness are notorious and the scandal of Japan.

"There is one feature of this so unique and so illustrative of the vicious outgrowths of man's lopsided civilizations that it has a claim upon the interest of every student of Japan or of human nature; the institution of the Yoshiwara.

"Classified with our 'white slave traffic' and the sordid evils that nightly stalk Broadway, Piccadilly and the Parisian boulevard, it yet differs from them all in certain elements which make it the most sickening and tragic exhibition the world affords of the human injustice and shame accorded women in civilizations made strictly of the men, for the men, by the men.

"At a temple in Nikko there is a famous picture of three monkeys, one with his hands covering his eyes, which means see no evil; another with hands covering ears, which means hear no evil; the other with hands covering mouth, which means speak no evil. This is evidently the Buddhistic formula for peace on earth, good will to men; but, thanks to the men who have not observed it, humanity has evolved from some of its barbarities, and most of the barbarities that exist to-day endure because women have been too long and thoroughly trained by men—to see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil.

With Official Sanction.

"No one can understand the Japanese people until he has seen the menagerielike spectacle of that portion of its womankind whom they place outside of human rights in a hideous travesty of human dignity. In the dusk of every evening, just as the temple bells are pealing forth their summons to the strange gods of Nippon, this spectacle begins: women, girls—the majority mere children in appearance—file into cages which open onto the streets, exactly like the cages in a zoo, and sit for hours behind those wooden bars like merchandise for sale, with an aureole of tortoise shell combs around their heads and bedecked in garish splendor of attire. The spectacle arouses disgust and scorn until one learns the hidden springs behind this system of woman-sale, and then there comes only pity.

"The Government has placed its sanction upon this institution; 'thus sayeth the law' is more powerful in Japan than in any other civilized country. So the idea has been perpetuated among the people that parents have a moral (because legal) right to dispose of their daughters to their own advantage, and the inmates of the Yoshiwara are sold by their parents or adopted parents when too young and ignorant to understand the nature of the transaction or the ghastly future it will bring. But even if she knew, the Japanese daughter is as powerless to resist the parental will as her brother, the soldier, would be to resist the will of his Emperor. As we know, she is taught filial devotion as her religion.

Agitation Going On.

"It is not true, as has been so frequently stated, that unchastity does not dishonor a woman in Japan. Even these slaves of the Yoshiwara, involuntary victims, are treated as below human kind. Until a few years ago they had no chance of escape from what even the Japanese call 'the bitter sea of misery.' When there were runaways, the law authorized their capture, punishment and return to their keepers. That there were many runaways we can believe when we learn that the average number of suicides among these girls throughout the land was 40 and 50 a month.

"During the past four years there has been a lively agitation in Japan for a complete change in its social and moral system. The leaders of public opinion proclaim that something is radically wrong, but do not seem to know what it is that must be changed, nor just what new laws to enact—for more laws is the masculine solution to every difficulty."

The Secret of Prayer

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

For he who climbs to make his prayer
Meets half way the descending grace.
—Elsa Barker in British Review.

THIS is the secret of all prayers
That in God's sight have worth;
They must be uttered from the stairs
That wind away from earth.
And he who mounts to speak the word,
He shall be heard, he shall be heard.

And he who will not leave himself,
But stays down with his cares
(Or with his thoughts of power and pelf),
Though loud and loud his prayers,
Beyond earth's dome of arching skies
They shall not rise, they shall not rise.

Oh ye, who seek for strength and power,
Seek first some quiet spot,
And fashion, through a silent hour,
Your stairway, thought by thought.
Then climb, and pray to God on high.
He shall reply, He shall reply.

A Ringing Alarm to the Farmer

He Quotes President Charles S. Barrett, of the Farmers' Union, Regarding Foreign Ownership of Cotton Fields in the South.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

IF any man thinks that the millions of American farmers are asleep or indifferent to economic changes and passing events, that man is mistaken.

On the tariff, on the currency, on farm credits, and on the outside investments in agriculture every farmer is reading, thinking—and preparing to vote!

Even if the farmer were ignorant or apathetic upon public questions, he has wise and watchful leaders who, upon the watchtower, are sounding continually the bugles of advance or the alarms of retreat.

Among the ablest of these is Charles Barrett, president of the Farmers' Union, with two and a half million enrolled members—perhaps the most popular and influential of all American farmers.

Foreign Ownership.

I asked this great farmer recently if he wished to use the far-reaching columns of the Hearst newspapers to sound any new counsel to the American farmer. And he promptly responded:

"Yes; I never omit an opportunity to use that vast newspaper circulation to speak for my people.

"I have something now to say about the alien or foreign ownership of our lands, particularly those lands in the South adaptable to cotton. I have said that the steady reach of foreigners after that imperial staple was an alarming development! I believed years ago that this was a serious menace, and now I am sure of it.

"Now, listen, you scoffers and unbelievers. Do you know that between twelve and thirteen million acres of the finest cotton lands in the South are now owned outright by foreign individuals and corporations? Do you know that agents of these foreign individuals and corporations are constantly working to get more millions of acres of the cream of cotton lands? Do you know that foreign spinners are sending men here to be educated in our agricultural colleges and schools to take charge of these broad acres, cultivate and raise cotton to ship to spinners in England, France and other foreign countries?

Our Richest Heritage.

"Do you think deep and sense what this means? Do you know that it means the actual production of cotton in the South on farms owned and cultivated by foreigners, and whose product will go direct to their mills in England, France and other countries? In plain words, we are sitting supinely by while foreign capital and corporations are taking our oldest, richest and greatest heritage right from under our noses.

"Time may not be far distant when our own people, the men who have raised and supplied the world with its cotton for generations, will be restricted absolutely to the home market. Sounds scary, and I want it to sound so, for it is time to get scared.

"This is a vital question which I would thank the Hearst newspapers and other great conservators of American interests to help our people to solve."

Life as Seen in the Movies

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FIRST we see Harold folding Susie in his arms. In the background is the train that is to take Harold to the West, where he will make his fortune, after which he will return and make Susie the happiest girl in the world. In the background is George sneering like the plotting villain we know him to be the moment we set eyes on him. The conductor, who has been very patient, gives the signal. Harold climbs aboard at the last minute.

The Telegram.

Next we behold George and Susie speeding homeward in George's six-cylinder car. George is talking in what looks like a low, earnest voice, but Susie refuses to be interested. Suddenly he pulls from his pocket a telegram. Susie sits up suddenly. And well she may. For the film announces that the contents of the telegram are to the effect that Harold has gone to the West to marry another. What other we do not yet know.

We now behold Susie weeping at a desk in a room so full of furniture that no burglar could get halfway across it without waking up all the people in the next block. In her little hand she holds the telegram for a time, then tears it spitefully into bits that flutter out on the breeze that is blowing the Valenciennes curtains in twelve windows. George enters. He looks at the fragmentary telegram and sneers. Then he looks at Susie and smiles. Presently he engages in more low, earnest conversation, and you judge he is describing his yacht, his bank account and his country place at Mamaroneck. But Susie shrinks from these things.

"At Last!"

But evidently George knows more of Susie's disposition than we do. He points to the telegram and sneers, this time for three seconds. Susie sits bolt upright and thinks. Then she rises and paces the floor, deftly threading her way in and out among the furniture like a guide in the North Woods. At last she nods her head, but when George approaches enthusiastically she shakes it.

Here in the West, which is denoted by a lonely cabin in a stone quarry, is Harold. He is sitting by a fire examining nuggets. Evidently none of them is good for much but concrete work. But now he leans forward intently and examines one. Reaching for the only article of wardrobe in evidence, a coat, he dashes madly from the room and we next behold him entering an opening in the stone quarry through which trickles a rivulet. Bending over the rivulet, he picks up more nuggets. "At last" are the words we see plainly on his lips. They are subsequently verified by the text on the screen.

Harold re-enters the lonely cabin, and carefully hangs the coat on the same nail. A rough, unshaved person enters and hands him a letter. He opens it. His face clouds. Bad news from home, we conjecture. Right. Mighty bad news. Harold is being invited to Susie's wedding and George is going to be the bridegroom.

Throwing the newly found nugget out of the window, Harold hurriedly leaves the room.

Harold to the Rescue.

Here comes the Overland Limited. Nearer and nearer till we fear it will collide with the audience. But across the track suddenly darts a man waving a campaign hat. It is Harold. Will he be run over? No. The train stops. Harold climbs on. The train moves into nothingness just as we duck to avoid being hit by the pilot.

At the same old station Harold alights. He commandeers an automobile, and, taking the wheel, departs while the owner indignantly shakes his fist after him.

Same room, full of same furniture, but further embellished with a wedding bell and a minister. Enter Harold from one door and Susie from another. Harold steps forward just as George enters from a third. Susie, being in something of a dilemma, gets out of it neatly by fainting. George attempts to sneer, but doesn't get away with it. The .44 Harold has in his hand interferes. Evidently there are explanations. Susie's father, a gentleman with a limousine body, comes in and revives her. George, discovering that his fake telegram has been exposed, sneers for the last time and goes out a window. Harold folds Susie to his stalwart breast. The minister steps forward and the play is done.
