JUDGE ROAN BARS ATTACK ON FRANK'S CHARACTER

Cook Repudiates Affidavit; Charges Intimidation

EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY IS DENIED

Executive's Action Comes as the Supreme Court Reverses Ruling Favoring Father.

The Supreme Court Tuesday reversed the decision of Judge Hammond, of Augusta, awarding the two Zachry children to the father, thereby further complicating the sensational case in which requisition papers by Governor Cole Blease for Zachry were refused by Governor Slaton Tuesday morning.

According to the ruling of the Supreme Court, the decision awarding the children to the father is reversed and remanded to Judge Hammond's court for further hearing. The ruling further specifies that Judge Hammond may exercise his discretion in awarding the custody of the children, which is contrary to the opinion rendered by Judge Hammond, who held previously that he was forced to award the children to Zachry because of a previous judgment.

The effect of the ruling will be to put the whole matter back in the Augusta courts, with the possibility that Mrs. Zachry will be awarded the custody of the two children.

Governor Slaton based his refusal on the fact that no State law had been violated by Zachry in South Carolina and that the whole case was against the defendant grew out of the desire of Mrs. Zachry to obtain the custody of the two children.

One of the most spectacular fights for the extradition of a citizen ever recorded in Georgia occurred in the Governor's offices Monday. Charges and counter charges were hurled in turn by counsel for the defense and for the State of South Carolina, and at one time a personal mix-up between Attorney Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, and Attorney Phinizy, representing Mr. Zachry, who charged that the case had been prosecuted with all the "vindictiveness" that Mr. Dunbar could summon, was narrowly averted by the Governor.

Slaton Draws Line.

"You may wax just as enthusiastic as you like," said Governor Slaton to Mr. Phinizy, "but you can't say those things. That will not do here."

The hearing was as unique as it was spectacular. With the Governor sitting as both court and jury, attorneys for the defense and plaintiffs were allowed to argue their cases to their hearts' content with frequent interruptions by the Governor, who kept close tab on every bit of evidence offered.

In addition to the three attorneys for Zachry, Cohen and Phinizy, of Augusta, and West, of Thompson, E. D. Clary, Mayor of Harlem, the defendant's home town, testified in behalf of Zachry. Attorneys Rembert, of Columbia, S. C., and Dunbar, of Augusta, represented the State of South Carolina.

Mayor Clary, of Harlem, created a sensation when he testified that he had on one occasion pulled Mrs. Zachry and her mother off Zachry following an attack. Mrs. Zachry, he declared further, had said in his presence that if she did not get her children she would have to kill her husband.

Kidnaping Charge Irrelevant.

The climax of the hearing was reached, however, when the attorneys for Governor Blease virtually admitted to Governor Slaton that the charge of kidnaping, as incorporated in the requisition papers, was not relevant and that practically all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the custody of the two children.

In substantiation of the latter statement Governor Slaton referred to a letter which he himself had received from Mrs. Zachry, in which, he declared, it seemed that all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the children.

This testimony of the Governor and the startling admission of Attorney Rembert, representing Governor Blease, broke down the whole argument of the plaintiff and really marked the turning point in the hearing.

LATEST NEWS

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The shadow of another war in the Balkans hangs over Europe. Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, announced in the House of Commons to-day that if Turkey refuses to give up Adrianople at the insistence of Bulgaria, the powers will not be able to divert the consequences, "no matter what their character."

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The direct overture of the United States to the Huerta administration—the tender of American aid in the effort to restore peace in Mexico—is expected to be transmitted by Envoy Lind to the Mexican national palace within a few hours.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 12. There will be no formal organization of a National Council of Catholic Women at the convention of the American Federation of Catholics this year. This was practically determined this forenoon at the preliminary meeting of the women called to plan the perfecting of such a council.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 12.—The Ohio River is at the lowest stage in years as a result of the drouth, and coal shipments have suspended. Three million bushels of coal due for shipment south are tied up at Pittsburg.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—Eleanor Fay, who says Louis R. Glavis, of Ballinger case fame, is her fiance, tried to end her life by swallowing carbolic acid while on a ferry boat plying the bay. She asserted she was to wed Glavis soon.

I. T. U. Officers May Serve Indefinitely

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Lynch, of the International Typographical Union, won another victory at the annual convention of the order to-day when the delegates sustained by an overwhelming vote the recommendation of the committee on laws that reported unfavorably on the proposition to make officers of the International Union ineligible to serve for more than two years. This proposition by Delegate Beadle, of Tacoma, Wash., was aimed particularly at President Lynch.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

AUTO TOUR IS LAUDED BY SLATON

Calls Hearst's Sunday American Pathfinding Trip to Pacific a Sign of Progress.

Declaring that the promotion of good roads and cross-country highways, such as the proposed transcontinental route from Atlanta to San Francisco, was the best evidence of the progress of the people, Governor John M. Slaton Tuesday placed his stamp of approval on the campaign of Hearst's Sunday American to "pathfind" an all-Southern coast-to-coast route, which will be inaugurated next Monday.

The Governor declared emphatically that the promotion of a project of this kind meant not only a bigger and better Georgia but a more prosperous Southland through the closer communication of the people of different States by means of good roads.

"No better evidence of the progress of a people can be had," said Governor Slaton, "than promotions of this sort for better road and highway facilities. Obviously better roads within a State bring the people into closer communication with each other and this makes for increased interchange of both trade and mind products.

Chance to Make Friends.

"Of course there is much larger significance in this project which contemplates a highway from our city through the rich and prosperous Southland all the way to the rich Pacific Coast. Such a highway will afford the people of different States the opportunity to become better acquainted with each other, and, surely, no one can question that this can only be highly beneficial to all concerned. It is especially needed in the South with its wonderful resources, much of which has as yet been barely touched in development.

"I can see no reason why this project inaugurated by The Sunday American should not go through as planned. Just such things were done by the ancient Romans—witness the great highways which stretched out in all directions from ancient Rome, making it the very hub of the world. Surely we can do as much if not more."

Practically every plan for the inauguration of the monster campaign is complete. "Pathfinder" Ferguson has had scarcely a minute of rest since arriving in Atlanta Saturday, for he is leaving out not one detail of the big trip.

Reception Pleases Trail Blazer.

He stated Tuesday that he was much pleased with the reception accorded him since arriving in Atlanta, and would leave the city next Monday with deep regret if it were not for the fact that he is engaged in a campaign which means so much not only for Atlanta, but for Georgia and the South.

The official start from Atlanta next Monday will be featured by a great parade strictly in keeping with the monster campaign which is being inaugurated. Among those who will have a place in the parade will be the Fifth Regiment Band, which will head the procession; a big Alco truck, Chief of Police Beavers in his automobile, Chief Cummings of the fire department, other public officials, including Mayor Woodward and members of the Council, in specially decorated automobiles; scores of automobiles and motorcycles that have participated in the races at the Drome.

Great Auto Parade Planned.

If indications apparent one week before the inauguration of the big campaign amount to anything, Atlanta will witness on next Monday one of the biggest motor parades ever pulled off in the city.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a local newspaper man, will go direct to Birmingham, the first official stopping place. From Birmingham the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Tucson, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

SULZER BATTLES IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—At 3:15 p. m. the Assembly took a recess until 8:30 to-night. The majority to pass the impeachment resolution is still lacking, but the anti-Sulzer leaders expect to have the members rounded up to-night.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Governor William Sulzer's political life hangs in the balance to-day. Faced by a hostile Legislature, Governor Sulzer, with his back to the wall, fought with more vigor than he had pressed into any other contest in his long political career.

Before the Assembly convened to vote on the resolution that Sulzer should be impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors" for the alleged private use of political funds and speculation in Wall Street, opponents of the Governor claimed to have enough votes to pass the resolution.

At least five of the judges of the Court of Appeals must participate in the impeachment trial, and supporters of Governor Sulzer rely upon the judicial rather than the legislative action of the proposed court of impeachment for a favorable decision in the involved case.

The resolution of impeachment, whose formulation is based on findings of the Frawley legislative committee, was introduced in the Assembly at 12:15 a. m., when 101 of the 150 members were present, but it was predicted that close to a full attendance would be on hand to-day. Democrats opposed to Governor Sulzer appointed committees to see that every member was in his seat.

PLAN 16 STORIES ON BROWN AND ALLEN SITE

Dr. E. L. Connally and associates will soon start the construction of a sixteen-story office building on the site of Brown & Allen's drug store, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, if plans which are under way are consummated. Announcement was made unofficially at noon Tuesday that Dr. Connally has been in consultation with W. L. Stoddart of New York and Atlanta, and other architects, from whom he has received tentative plans.

In fact, an engineer representing a local architect surveyed the ground last week and made measurements of the stores in the building. Dr. Connally could not be reached for an expression as to his plans, and his son, Thomas W. Connally, refused to be quoted.

Such a move has been in contemplation for several years. Two years ago Dr. Connally had an architect sketch a twenty-story building, and since then he has had more or less definite intentions to erect a building that will be a credit to the section and to the city.

The structure which Dr. Connally is planning will cost probably $750,000, and will be a distinct addition to the line of attractive buildings on Whitehall. It will probably be known as the Connally Building, after its builder, who likewise erected the old structure.

The present building is 30 years old and it must soon be repaired or torn down. About a year ago a brick wall was placed in the center. The structure is three stories and of brick.

The lot is about 90 feet square, and a sixteen-story office building would give 129,600 square feet of floor space. Frontage near this point seldom changes hands, but is estimated to be worth from $7,500 to $10,000 in a transaction with no exchange elements, or $675,000 to $900,000.

Brown & Allen now pay $1,000 a month for the corne, it was declared.

STATE CHARGES THAT ATTACK ON GIRL WAS PLANNED BY ACCUSED

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

State announces its theory that Frank planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan the day before she came to the factory for her money.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified that he had seen women in Frank's office, was shown up by the defense and admitted by Dalton.

Four acquaintances of Dalton testify that they would not believe him under oath and that his reputation for truth and veracity is bad.

C. E. Pollard, expert accountant, testifies that it required him three hours and eleven minutes to compile the financial sheet that the defense claims Frank prepared the afternoon of the murder.

Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer, says that Frank did no work on the financial sheet Saturday morning, the day of the crime.

Jim Conley's declaration that Lemmie Quinn came into the factory and left before the arrival of Monteen Stover, who came at 12:05 o'clock, is challenged by the testimony of Miss Hall, who swears Quinn did not enter the factory before she left at 12:02 o'clock.

Magnolia Kennedy, worker at the pencil factory, testifies she laid her hand and Helen Ferguson's shoulder when they drew their pay and that the girl did not ask for Mary Phagan's wages. She says Schiff paid off. Miss Kennedy says hair found in lathe looked like slain girl's.

Sinister intimations made by Solicitor Dorsey in questioning Will Chambers, a boy in the factory, who denies alleged conversations, are ordered ruled out.

Attorney Arnold threatens to move for a mistrial if any further intimations of this sort are allowed to be heard by the jury.

Minola McKnight, cook in the Frank household, gives evidence against that offered by her husband and declares detectives tried to make her swear to lies. She admitted she signed the affidavit reporting alleged conversations between Mrs. Frank and the prisoner, but insisted it was a lie and that she signed because the detectives threatened to lock her up if she did not.

Determined attempts by the State to introduce further evidence of the alleged degeneracy of Leo M. Frank were frustrated Tuesday afternoon by the protests and objections of Attorney Reuben Arnold.

"If any further effort is made to introduce such testimony, I shall move for a mistrial," declared Arnold to the court.

Solicitor Dorsey sought to get the testimony from Philip Chambers, a 15-year-old office boy who was in the pencil factory from last December until March. The Solicitor Questioned the boy about alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, and the boy denied them. Arnold objected and all the questions along this line were ruled out. Dorsey said he would call Gantt in rebuttal.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook whose sensational affidavit concerning occurrences in the Frank home the day of the tragedy and the night and morning following created a stir early in June, utterly repudiated the affidavit to Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey.

She declared that it all was "a pack of lies" and that she had been browbeaten and bulldozed by the detectives into signing it under threat of spending a term in jail.

All of this, she swore, had been invented by her husband. In addition, she declared her husband had not been at the Frank home April 26. McKnight swore he was there and saw Frank come home and then depart hurriedly without eating anything.

Dorsey was not able to shake her in her denials of the truth of any part of the statement.

Gordon Bailey, one of the sweepers at the factory, testified that he had not heard Frank ask Conley to come early Saturday to the factory and that he never had seen women in Frank's office nor Conley watching at the factory door.

He testified that he saw Conley looking at the newspapers at the police station.

The State definitely announced Tuesday its theory that Frank deliberately premeditated and planned a criminal attack upon Mary Pragan Friday, April 25, the day before she came to the factory and was slain.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, made the surprising announcement of the State's attitude during a heated argument over the admissibility of a portion of the testimony of one of the defense's witnesses. Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer at Montag Bros. and occasionally employed at the National Pencil Factory.

That the State was working upon the theory of premeditation was hinted by the questioning of Helen Ferguson several days ago but Attorney Hooper's address to the court was the first open declaration.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness against Frank, was given an airing by Attorney Arnold. Dalton was recalled to the stand and made to admit that he had been sent to the chaingang in 1884 on three separate counts for stealing in Walton County.

Dalton also admitted that he had been indicted in 1899 in Walton County for theft and had paid a fine of $141.46.

Attorney Arnold showed the witness copies of four indictments and asked if he knew those had been issued against him in Walton County for selling liquor to Don Tillman and Bob Harris. Dalton denied all knowledge of the indictments.

Witnesses Assail Dalton's Character.

As soon as Dalton left the stand V. S. Cooper, J. H. Patrick, W. T. Mitchell and I. M. Patrick, all residents of Walton County, were called to the stand and testified that they knew Dalton and that they wouldn't believe him on oath in a court of justice.

Misses Laura Atkinson and Minnie Smith were called, and denied Walton's testimony in regard to being in their company.

Dalton testified, when he was called by the State last week, that he had visited the factory basement with Miss Daisy Hopkins and that he frequently had seen Frank in his office with women.

An unassailable alibi was the object in view when the attorneys for Frank began the questioning of a long line of witnesses who were called to testify in regard to every known movement of Frank Saturday, April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was slain.

The testimony of Miss Hattie Hall was the first along this line. That of Alonzo Mann, office boy, was next.

That Frank did not do any work on the financial sheet Saturday forenoon was one of the most important declarations made by Miss Hall. She had testified at the Coroner's inquest that she assisted Frank in compiling this sheet, but she explained to Solicitor Dorsey that she was mistaken, and it was only one of the tabulations from which the financial sheet was being made that she had worked on.

Her testimony on this point strikes at the State's theory that Frank did the work in the forenoon.

Miss Hall also testified that Frank signified his desire to have her work for him at the factory in the afternoon and had asked Harry Gothelmer to come back to the factory in the afternoon, requests which the defense will claim establish conclusively that Frank was not arranging for the commission of any crime or wrongdoing Saturday afternoon.

The witness said that she left the factory first at 12 o'clock as the whistles were blowing, but that she forgot her umbrella and returned to Frank's office for it, noting that it was 12:02 as she left finally. She declared that she did not see Lemmie Quinn enter Frank's office. Conley testified that he saw Quinn enter the factory before the arrival of Monteen Stover or Mary Phagan. The Stover girl said she reached the office floor at 12:05 o'clock.

Miss Hall indignantly denied the imputation of Solicitor Dorsey that her salary had been raised as the result of the testimony she was giving. She said that it had been agreed when she entered the employ of Montag Bros. that she was to get an increase of salary August 1, and that she had been unable to get it before this time.

Wade Campbell, an inspector at the factory, came in for a rigorous grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. Campbell testified that his sister, Mrs. Arthur White, had told him she had seen a negro at the foot of the stairs on the first floor when she went into the factory at 12:30 o'clock.

Campbell Grilled On Affidavit.

"Don't you know that what she actually said was that she saw the negro at 12:50 when she left?" inquired the Solicitor.

Campbell denied that this was so. The Solicitor then showed Campbell an affidavit and asked if it was not his signature at the bottom. Campbell said that it looked like his writing, but that he would not say positively. He denied that he had made the statement in the affidavit in which he was quoted as saying his sister had told of seeing the negro as she left the factory.

The witness on his redirect examination testified that he had seen Conley reading in the factory several times after the crime. Conley said on the stand that he was unable to read, except for a few simple words.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

Over Three Hours To Compile Report.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant.

Q. Have you had occasion to go over the financial sheet of the National Pencil Company of the week of April 24 prepared by Leo M. Frank? A. I went over a copy of it.

Q. Have you also seen the factory record called the pencil sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you also furnished data necessary to make that sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state as an expert how long it would take to complete it?—A. I took each sheet, compiled it, and timed myself as to the length of time necessary. I prepared the sheet of the 24th day. It took me ten minutes.

Q. Were there any mistakes?—A. Yes, a little one—of one and one-half gross. It was hard to say whether it was my mistake or his.

Q. Now state the total time it took you?—A. A total of 191 minutes, or 3 hours and 11 minutes.

Q. Was that the quickest?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you took exactly the work that he did?—A. Yes; what I was told he did.

Q. That was steady work without interruption, wasn't it—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been an auditor?—A. Sixteen years.

Q. Have you an office here?—A. I am with the American Audit Company.

Q. That mistake occurred before you took up the sheet, did it not?—A. One mistake was made the Saturday before and one on Friday.

Q. Are those two trifling mistakes—a mistake of 50 cents and a gross and a half of pencils—the only mistakes you found?—A. Yes.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Pollard, this is rather an unusual assignment for you, is it not, to go over a man's business and undertake to state how long it takes him to do it?—A. No, I think not. Frequently we are called on to estimate the time it takes to do work in changing systems.

Q. Is it not true that a man can work his own books better than anyone else's books?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. How many times would a man have to multiply, divide and subtract in making up that sheet?—A. Well, 40 multiplications and 160 additions, and I can't guess on the rest.

Aimed to Show Conduct.

The witness was excused and Miss Hattie Hall was called. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Q. What is your business?—A. Stenographer-bookkeeper at Montag Brothers.

Q. Do you ever go to the National Pencil Company?—A. When necessary.

Q. On Saturday, April 26, did you see Leo M. Frank?—A. About 10 o'clock at Montag Brothers.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he asked me if I could come over and do some work. I told him I didn't know, but thought I could.

Dorsey interrupted:

"I object to anything he said to her."

Arnold: "Your honor, it is part of res gestis in this case."

Dorsey: "Here is this dead girl. They would not let her show what she said at 12 o'clock and I can conceive of no principle of law that would let them show what this man said and not let her show what the deceased said."

Arnold: "This is merely to show a course of conduct."

Judge Roan: "I can see no analogy between the two cases. I rather think you can ask the question."

Dorsey: "Well, this is a very important point, your honor, and we would like to give you some authorities."

Judge Roan: "All right."

Dorsey then read at length from the Eighty-fourth Georgia Report.

Judge Roan: "Do you expect to follow that question by showing that he had certain work to do and engaged her to do it?"

Arnold: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I will let you ask it."

Dorsey threw his book on the table and sat down, laughing. Arnold continued the questioning.

Q. When did you call him first?—A. He called me up before 10 o'clock and said he had work enough to do to keep him busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey: "Is your honor going to let that telephone conversation in?"

The Solicitor's objection was overruled.

Q. Miss Hall, did you recognize his voice?—A. I certainly did.

Q. What time did you see him that Saturday morning?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Had you worked for him before?—A. I had been accustomed to going over and helping him on Saturdays. I asked him if he was going to need me. He said, "Yes," that he had so much work to do that he would be busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey Calls Halt; Roan Sustains Him.

Dorsey interrupted. "You honor, are you going to let that in?"

Judge Roan: "I don't think I will."

Arnold: "Your honor, I wish you would let me argue for a moment. Even the State does not claim any crime was committed at that time. There is no reason in the world to suppose that the accused would not have told the truth at that time. I believe that if a part of the conversation is admissible, all of it is admissible. You must admit it all to explain part. You would do this young man an injustice to shut out this evidence of this day's program, when there was not the slightest motive to be otherwise than truthful."

"Mr. Dorsey has sought to show," continued Mr. Arnold, "that this financial sheet could have been made up in the morning. We are just trying to show that it was impossible. Now I will read you a decision in which I participated with the father of my good friend, the late Judge Dorsey. It was 24 years ago."

Rosser: "Are you that old, Mr. Arnold?"

Arnold: "Yes, I am 24."

"Dorsey: "That case has nothing to do with this one. That was a case where a man on trial for murder swore to a lie."

Arnold: "It was charged that it was a lie. We never did believe it."

Dorsey: "He was convicted."

Arnold: "Yes, he was convicted."

Judge Roan ruled: "Mr. Arnold, this young woman can show that she was called, what she was requested to do, and what was shown her to be done. She can state how long she thinks it would take to finish that work. She can not state, however, what he told her over the telephone about what he expected to do."

Frank Leaves Court With Sheriff.

Arnold: "We want to note an exception to that."

Q. Miss Hall, what time did you go to Mr. Frank's office?—A. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock.

Q. Did you take dictation in his inner office, or in his outer office?—A. In the inner office.

Q. Where did you write it?—A. In the outer office.

At this point Leo Frank went out of the courtroom with Sheriff Mangum. Mr. Hooper jumped up and whispered to Mr. Arnold.

Arnold—Yes, I waived his presence.

Judge Roan—I excused the prisoner properly.

Hooper—I just wanted to know if the defense had waived his presence.

Q. Now, we only have ten orders here. See if they are the ones Frank handed you?—A. Yes. My initials are on them. They are the ones.

Q. Now, the orders are sometimes acknowledged as the first step?—A. Yes; in that case they were.

Q. Do you recall to whom Frank was talking that morning?—A. Yes, but I don't recall the names. A man and his son came in. Then there was Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. White.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. During this time was Mr. Frank working on this financial sheet or any other similar document?—A. He was not.

Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?—A. Not very.

Q. I will get you to look on this order book and see if those orders are entered.

The wintess read the eleven orders from the order book.

Q. Now, is that your handwriting?—A. No; I think it is Mr. Frank's.

Q. Did you write any of these requisitions?—A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I understood Mr. Frank did.

Q. Were the requisitions made before or after the orders were put on the book?—A. After.

Q. Now look at these letters and see whether Frank dictated them?—A. Yes.

Q. How many?—A. Eight, and one he did not dictate.

Q. Did he sign them?—A. Yes, I took them to him after I had typed them.

Q. Did he do any work on that financial sheet while you were there?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Just as I got on my hat and started for the door I heard the whistle blow for noon.

Q. Is there a regular whistle that blows for 12 o'clock?—A. Yes, there are several whistles.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I got to the bottom of the steps and remembered that I had forgotten my umbrella. I went back and got it. It was two minutes past 12 o'clock as I passed the time clock.

Q. Did you see any little girl in the building?—A. I did not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you call Frank or Frank call you that Saturday morning?—A. I called him.

Q. He had a regular stenographer, didn't he?—A. They had a stenographer, but she didn't do but about one-third enough work so I had to go.

Q. Miss Hall, what were you receiving at that time?—A. Ten dollars and fifty cents a week.

Q. What are you getting now?—A. Fifteen dollars a week, and I want to explain——

Q. Never mind, just answer my questions. Didn't you state in a soda fountain last night that the raise came to you without asking for it after it was known that you were to be a witness?—A. Indeed, I did not. I don't go to soda fountains. I want to explain.

Attorney Arnold—Let her explain.

A. I insisted that they give me this raise on July 1, but they wouldn't give it to me until August 1.

Q. Did Frank come to Montag's before or after he called you up?—A. After.

Q. You are the one who called him up?—A. Yes.

Q. You did the insisting about going to his office?—A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you not swear at the Coroner's inquest that Frank left Montag's before you did?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. You acknowledged these orders with a postcard and letter?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote those between 10:30 and 12?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you state to the jury Frank left before you did?—A. I don't recall.

Q. How long would it take you to fill out the blank?—A. I never timed myself.

Talked Over Time With Office Boy

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would not take more than one minute?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you say Frank was at the office when you got there?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. Who came in while you were there?—A. Two men and three women.

Q. What time was it the office boy left?—A. 11:30.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner you could not tell the time?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you know now?—A. The boy told me.

Q. You talked it over with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when those people came in?—A. In the outer office.

Q. How long were you there when these people came in?—A. I do not recall.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner it was fifteen minutes?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How long was it after those let-

FRANK TRIAL WITNESS IS SURE, AT LEAST, OF ONE THING--A 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen, and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over!

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister" more than once—after that, it merely is "You, Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney: "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hang around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-hump-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes "hoot," doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you, speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejeculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise, let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record everything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?"

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

The Grand Climax.

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Attacks on Dr. Harris Give Defense Good Day

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

"No man in the world could examine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of his profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor. His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.
"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled. Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga.—"My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

WONDERFUL HOW RESINOL CURED ITCHING HUMOR

New York, N. Y., May 19, 1913: —"I was taken with a terrible itching and burning in my hands. They would crack and bleed. I could not do my work. I had to walk the floors at night. I tried —— and ——, but no relief, until I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment—then I could go to sleep. The Resinol treatment is something wonderful, for if you could see my hands, you would never think that they were ever sore—they are so nice and soft, and I can do all my work now." (Signed) Mrs. Wm. Sutherland, 135 East 71st St.

For 18 years Resinol has been a doctor's prescription and household remedy for eczema, ringworm, pimples, dandruff, wounds, burns, sores and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. Trial free; Dept. 5-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

RESIDENTS OF DALTON'S HOME COUNTY RIDDLE HIS CHARACTER ON STAND

ters were dictated that you commenced writing?—A. Two minutes.

Q. Can you tell how long you were writing those letters?—A. No.

Q. When you were writing those letters, where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. After you finished, what did he do?—A. I took them in to him.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. He said he would put them in the envelopes and mail them.

Q. He said you need not wait?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get anything there Monday?—A. I got the timebook and some papers.

Q. The previous Saturday when you were over there, do you remember Frank working on the financial sheet that morning?—A. No; I helped him get up something about gross—I found afterward it was the average sheet.

made it up. I helped him by transferring some of the things to the sheet?"—A. Yes, but I thought it was the financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you state at the coroner's inquest that you helped him the Saturday before?—A. Yes.

Found Her Error Herself, She Says.

Q. When was it you discovered it was not the financial sheet?—A. I don't know, but I want you to know I discovered the mistake myself.

Q. Now, were you not at the factory the previous Saturday and helped him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not have that financial sheet before you at the Coroner's inquest, and did you not identify it?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you said he was working on the financial sheet that previous morning?—A. He was not.

Q. Did you not tell the Coroner's jury that you were in the outer office the entire time?—A. I don't know.

Q. Now explain how your mind underwent this change. You said then you were not in his office and now you say you were.—A. I was rattled before the Coroner, because I had never been in a courtroom before.

Q. Now, didn't you say in response to the question, "Do you know what a financial sheet is?" that you did?—A. But I was thinking of the average sheet.

Q. Now, what did you mean by telling the Coroner some of those girls came in for their pay and now saying the only one you know anything about came in for her coat?—A. I just forgot.

Q. Now, didn't Frank say that morning that he would not get up that sheet until Herbert Schiff came down and got up the necessary data?—A. Yes, he said he could not go on with his work until Schiff came down.

Q. You do know that Frank said positively he could not make up that sheet until Schiff had gotten up certain data?—A. He did not positively say so. He said he did not mind Mr. Schiff being off if he had done his work, but that he had not done his work.

Q. Miss Hall, didn't you swear before the Coroner's jury that you worked on this financial sheet which is written in ink the Saturday previous, and now to-day you swear it was this sheet which is written in pencil?—A. I did not. I was identifying the handwriting on that sheet.

Q. You said lots of people wrote slanting, and it was hard to identify?—A. Yes.

Q. While you were working in Frank's outer office, you said he was very quiet and you did not know what he was doing?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether he was working on the financial sheet or not?—A. Yes; I saw the papers on his desk that he was working on, and the financial sheet was not among them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Why did you tell Mr. Frank you had to get away at 12 o'clock?—A. He said something about wanting me to help him in the afternoon. I told him I had to get away at 12 o'clock, and I did get away at 12 o'clock.

Dalton's Prison Record Exposed.

Dorsey objected to the answer, but was overruled.

Miss Hall was excused and C. B. Dalton was recalled to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Who is Andrew Dalton?—A. A brother-in-law.

Q. With the same name?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is John Dalton?—A. He is my brother.

Q. Weren't you three sent to the chaingang at the special term of the Walton County Superior Court in 1894?—A. No.

Q. You were not?—A. I was, but the others paid out.

Q. What did you steal?—A. A chop hammer.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to two more charges?—A. That is the only time I ever went to the chaingang. I don't know how long I served, but I was pardoned in March.

Attorney Arnold moved that the witness' reply in reference to being pardoned be struck from the records.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to three charges all at the same time? And that the sentence was concurrent on the three charges?—A. All I took was a chop hammer. One of the other boys took a plow stock.

Q. At the February term of 1899, were you not indicted for stealing a bale of cotton?—A. For helping.

Q. Were you found guilty?—A. I was fined $146, which I paid.

Q. After that, did you not go into Gwinnett County and steal?—A. I was indicted for stealing some corn, but I was found not guilty.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long since you were in trouble?—A. Eighteen years.

Dorsey to Recall Daisy Hopkins.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is it not a fact that there are now four indictments against you in Walton County for selling liquor?—A. If there are I don't know it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they let you get out of the county and were glad to get rid of you?—A. I have been back there every year.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know that Daisy Hopkins knows Leo Frank?—A. I do.

Q. How do you know?—A. She told me she knew him, and then I saw her talking to him.

Arnold interrupted: "I object to what she said."

"That's all right, then," Dorsey replied. "I will recall her."

Dalton was excused and the defense began an attack on his character with witnesses from Walton County.

B. S. Cooper, the first witness called, was accompanied by a small boy of 6. He held the boy on his lap while he testified on the witness stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A farmer.

Q. How long have you been in Walton County?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

Wouldn't Believe Him Under Oath.

At this point C. B. Dalton was called for but could not be found. Dorsey said he would admit that the witness was speaking of the Dalton who had testified against Frank. Hooper was excused and J. H. Patrick was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. In Walton County.

Q. What do you do?—A. Carpenter and bailiff.

Q. Have you seen Dalton here this morning?—A. I shook hands with him.

Q. Do you know his general character for truth and veracity and is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and W. T. Mitchell was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him this morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and I. M. Hamilton was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, Atlanta, a woman apparently 35 years of age, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the Empire Printing Company.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, for two days.

Denies Dalton's Story of Strolls.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever walk home with him from the Busy Bee Cafe on Forsyth street?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you ever with him around the National Pencil Company?—

Dorsey interrupted: "I object," he said. "The witness said nothing that reflected on this woman."

Arnold: "It was a reflection for him to say that he was with her."

The objection was sustained.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long have you known Dalton?—A. About six months.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. I have been in his company three times.

The witness was excused, and Mrs. Minnie Smith called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. National Pencil Company.

Q. Are you the Mrs. Smith who lives at No. 148 South Pryor street?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the only Mrs. Smith at that address?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. No.

The witness was excused. Alonzo Mann, the office boy at the National Pencil Factory, was then called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company as an office boy.

Q. How long have you been there? A. Since April 1 of this year.

Q. Where do you stay when you are not at work?—A. Right outside the office.

Left Frank and Miss Hall in Office.

Q. How late do you work on Saturdays?—A. I had only been there two Saturdays before the murder.

Q. You don't know how late you stayed?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave the office Memorial Day?—A. At 11:30.

Q. Who did you leave there?—A. Miss Hall and Mr. Frank.

Q. Do you recall what you did that morning?—A. No.

Q. Did you phone Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes. Mr. Frank told me to, but I could not get him

Q. How late did you stay those other Saturdays?—A. 3:30 to 4 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank bring any women there and buy them drinks?—A. No.

Q. Who do you recall seeing there that day?—A. Mr. Holliday, Mr. Irby, Mr. McCrary and Mr. Darley.

Q. Can you recall anybody else?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Corinthia Hall?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you see a man come in to see about his boy?—A. I don't know.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. What time did Mr. Frank get there that morning?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did he go out?—A. One time, as I recall.

Q. Do you know how long he was gone?—A. No, I can't remember.

The witness was excused and Wade Campbell was called.

Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where are you employed?—A. I have been at the National Pencil Company for a year and a half.

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Mrs. White the Monday following the murder?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me what she said?—A. She said that as she went into the factory at 12 o'clock she saw a negro sitting there. She said that when she came down he was not there, and she heard voices, but could not tell where.

Q. Were you at the factory Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. About 9:35.

Q. Did you see Frank?—A. Yes; I went right to his office.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes; I was jollying him and he was jollying me.

Q. Were you on the fourth floor Tuesday morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley up there? A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you board with Mr. Darley? A. I did.

Q. Where were you Saturday night of the murder?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you go to the Bijou that night with Mr. Darley?

"I object," said Rosser.

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Darley is a married man with five children, is he not?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Miss Dixon that night?

Rosser—I object.

Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. You reported to Darley on April 28 that your sister had seen a negro in the pencil factory on Saturday, about 10 o'clock?—A. Yes; he sent me to see my sister.

Q. What did she tell you?—A. She said she saw a negro man on the first floor. She said she heard some indistinct voices as she went in.

Q. You saw that blood on the second floor?—A. I saw what they said was blood.

Q. How did it look?—A. I didn't notice it close enough to tell about it

Grilled Concerning Statement to Dorsey.

Q. Where do you work?—A. As an inspector at the National Pencil Company.

Q. You made a statement on May 12?—A. I made a statement to you. I don't remember the date.

Q. Didn't you state that your sister said she saw the negro as she was coming out?—A. I did not.

Q. You deny it, then?—A. I do.

Q. Is this your signature?—A. It looks very much like it.

Q. You can't swear that this is your signature?—A. No, I would not swear it.

Q. You say that you don't know whether that is your signature?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you deny making this statement?—A. I told you I did.

Q. Did you not read over this statement and make certain corrections?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not say in this statement that your sister went there at 12:30 and could not see her husband and went back?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. How did you come to go to Dorsey's office?—A. I received a subpena.

Q. You thought you had to go?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you know that it was not worth the paper it was written on?—A. No.

Wanted To See Corrections Made.

Q. Did you just point out these corrections, or did you wait and see that they were made?—A. I think I waited.

Q. Who was there?—A. Starnes, Campbell and Dorsey.

Q. Did they all ask you questions?—A. Yes.

Q. All of these 21 pages are your statement?—A. Yes.

Q. You were asked all of these questions?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you asked at the time you were in the office if anyone came in and did you answer "No"?—A. Yes.

Q. You answered that someone came in to get their pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know this negro Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. After this murder do you recall seeing him reading newspapers?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the fourth floor.

Q. How many times?—A. Twice.

Q. Is it anything unusual to see spots on the metal room floor?—A. No.

Q. Have you seen the place where Conley said he found the body?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Where was Conley sitting when he was reading the paper?—A. By the elevator.

Q. Where was he the second time?—A. In the rear of the building.

Q. What paper was he reading?—A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he was reading about the crime?—A. No.

Q. Was it an extra?—A. I think so.

Q. You knew Conley could write?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not report it to the officers?—A. No.

Q. Did Frank know he could write?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did you see him writing?—A. In the boxroom.

Q. Did you ever see him writing with a pencil?—A. Yes.

Q. Who did you tell what your sister told you?—A. Mr. Darley.

Q. How often did you see those spots in the metal room?—A. Occasionally.

Q. How often have you seen those spots in the hall?—A. Oh, very often.

Q. Did you see the spots where those chips were taken up?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw those spots everywhere, what everybody said was blood, and yet you tell the jury you didn't pay any attention to it?—A. Yes.

Q. Other people got down and looked at them, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Rosser interrupted.

"I object to what other people said and saw. It is utterly immaterial and irrelevant," he said.

"We want to show," said Mr. Hooper, interrupting, "that this man was interested and that he went out to see his sister about the negro, and yet he came back there and was in no way interested."

"I think you can ask questions along that line," said the court.

"Well, we want to record an objection," said Rosser.

Q. Where and when have you ever seen on that second floor anything that looked like that spot?—A. I did not look close enough at it to know.

Q. When did you see other spots like it on the floor of the metal room?—A. There were other spots, but I don't know whether they were like that spot or not.

Q. Did you talk to your brother-in-law about what your sister said?—A. He told me about it.

Court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Says Girl Didn't Ask For Mary Phagan's Pay.

When court convened at 2 o'clock the defense called for Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy at the National Pencil Factory, but he did not answer. Philip Chambers was also called, but failed to respond.

Miss Magnolia Kennedy, one of the pencil factory employees in the metal department, was then called and took the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company.

Q. How long have you worked there?—A. Four years.

Q. In what department did you work?—A. In the metal department.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Helen Ferguson?—A. Yes.

Q. On the day before April 26, did you draw your pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you draw it?—A. From Mr. Schiff at the pay window.

Q. Did you see Helen Ferguson? A. I had my hand on her shoulder when she got her money.

Q. Was Mr. Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ask for Mary Phagan's pay?—A. No.

Q. Did you go out with her?—A. Yes. We went downstairs and waited for Grace Hix.

Q. Did Helen Ferguson ever say anything about Mary's pay?—A. She said at 5 o'clock that Mary was not there.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Were you at the factory April 28?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find any hair on that lathing machine?—A. Yes.

Q. Whose was it?—A. It looked like Mary's.

Mary and Ferguson Girl Companions.

Q. You and Mary and Grace Hix were the only girls in that department, were you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did Mary's hair look?—A. It was light.

Q. You don't mean to say you were with Helen all that afternoon?—A. No.

Q. She and Mary were friends and went together all the time, did they not?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't know what she did when you were not with her, do you?—A. No.

Q. You saw those spots on the floor, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did they look?—A. There were white stains all over them.

Q. How large?—A. About as large as that piece of paper, eight by ten inches.

Q. Did you ever notice any spots on the second floor like the one pointed out and said to be blood?—A. No, I never did.

Q. And you have been there four years?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. You told Mr. Dorsey you thought that was Mary Phagan's hair on the lathe. You don't know that it was Mary Phagan's haid, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You went with Helen Ferguson to get your pay that Friday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her speak to Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Was there any necessity for her to see Mr. Frank when Mr. Schiff was at the pay window?—A. No.

Negro Elevator Boy on Stand.

Miss Kennedy was excused and Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy, took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where did you work in April of this year, Snowball?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. On the Friday before Memorial Day did you see Jim Conley talking to Mr. Frank and hear Mr. Frank ask him to come back Saturday?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear Mr. Frank tell Jim to come back?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank bring any women there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Conley watching at that lower door?—A. No.

Q. Were your at the factory last Thanksgiving Day?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever see Conley reading a newspaper?—A. I saw him looking at papers down there at the station house.

Q. You don't know wether he was reading or not?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank make any improper proposal to any lady in that factory?—A. No.

Q. You never saw Mr. Frank talking to Conley at any time, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank at all, Friday?—A. I saw him about 1 o'clock. He was talking to Mr. Schiff.

Dorsey took the witness on the cross-examination.

Q. Snowball, when were you arrested?—A. Monday.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank before you were arrested?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he?—A. On the second floor.

Q. What was he doing?—A. I don't know.

The negro was excused and Phillip Chambers, a boy 14 years old, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes.

Q. Where and in what capacity?—A. I went there in December and stayed until March.

Q. How late did you stay on Saturdays?—A. Until about 4:30 o'clock.

Q. Were you ever absent on Saturdays during the months you were there?—A. Between 11 and 12 o'clock I was sometimes sent to the Bell street plant to get the payrool.

Q. Did you ever see any women around Mr. Frank's office with beer and drinks?—A. His wife came up there once while I was there. She was the only one I ever saw.

Q. Did you ever see Jim Conley around there?—A. Yes. He was around there sweeping, sometimes.

Q. What time?—A. Saturday afternoons.

Q. Didn't Mr. Holloway issue an order that no more sweeping should be done Saturday afternoons?—A. Mr. Darley did.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You and Frank were pretty good friends, were you not?—A. Just like other folks.

The State here referred to several alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, along the lines of Jim Conley's most sinister testimony which the boy denied and Attorney Arnold moved that it all be stricken out.

Dorsey arose to speak, but Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "are we going to allow a speech before the jury on this subject?"

Judge Roan: "Take the jury out."

Arnold: "Never mind, let them stay." The jury remained.

Solicitor Dorsey: "Your Honor, they have gone into the question of Frank's relations to women. We have a right to show if there was anything improper towards this boy. He denies it. I am laying the ground to impeach him by Gantt."

Judge Roan: "I rule out both questions and answers."

Defense Threatens to Move for a Mistrial.

Arnold. "It is the unfairest thing I have ever heard of, brought in in this illegal way. It has been brought up by this miserable negro. It is beyond indignation to sit here and listen to such stuff. The charge could be brought against you or me or any member of the jury by such inuendos if it comes up again I am going to move for a mistrial."

Judge Roan: "I have already ruled it out."

Dorsey: "Well, we will put up Gantt and let you rule on that."

The witness was excused and Minola McKnight, the cook at the Selig residence, was put on the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Were you working with Mrs. Selig last Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. and Mrs. Frank live with Mr. and Mrs. Selig?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was their room?—A. Upstairs

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank the morning of April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did he get his breakfast?—A. About 8.

Q. Did you see him again that day?—A. Yes, about 1:20.

Q. When he came home to dinner?—A. Yes.

Q. Was Albert McKnight there in the kitchen that day?—A. He was not.

Q. Could you see in that mirror in the dining room from the kitchen?—A. No.

Q. Do you recall what time he left after dinner?—A. Sometime after 2 o'clock.

Says She Made False Statement.

Q. What time did he return?—A. About 6:30 o'clock.

Q. You left him there?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you see him again?—A. Sunday, I don't know what time.

Q. Did the detectives come and arrest you?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did they take you?—A. Over on Central avenue.

Q. To the Thrower Building?—A. Yes.

Q. Was this man Dorsey there?—A. Yes.

Q. And these two detectives?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. My husband.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said I told my husband things and tried to make me say I had. I told them it was all lies, but they would not listen to me.

Q. What was your husband trying to get you to tell these detectives?—A. That Miss Lucille was telling her mother Sunday morning that Mr. Frank had made her get out of bed.

Q. What did you tell them?—A. That it was a lie.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said they would put me in jail, and they carried me out and put me in the patrol wagon.

Q. Put you in the patrol wagon? What did they ddo next?—A. They had me in a hole and I signed a paper to get away.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Minola, you made a statement May 3 in my office before this visit you were speaking about. Is not this the statement you made: "I was at the Frank home Saturday, April 26. Frank came there at about 1 o'clock. He did not seem to want to go back to work and stayed there until 3 o'clock?"

The negro woman interrupted Solicitor Dorsey at this point to say she said 2 instead of 3 o'clock.

Q. Before June 2 Mr. Pickett and Mr. Graves, of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, were out to see

NURSES' CLUB TO THROW OPEN NEW HOME

Informal Reception Arranged for Tuesday Afternoon and Evening in Permanent Quarters.

The Atlanta Registered Nurses' Association will formally open its new home in the Herbert Apartments, No. 246 Courtland avenue, Wednesday afternoon with an informal reception. The entertainment will continue into the evening hours.

Several months ago the registered nurses organized a permanent club to establish a central directory and eventually to secure and maintain a nurses' home. The membership includes over 100 graduate nurses who will, as a body, seek to protect the public and promote good fellowship among the members. The home has been comfortablye furnished and will accommodate twenty nurses.

The registered nurses have federated with the City Federation. The association has as its president Miss Kamesky; first vice president, Miss Berta Thompson; second vice president, Miss Caroline Norton; recording secretary; Miss Florence Attwell, corresponding secretary Miss J. M. Candlish; treasurer, Miss Mamie Mobley, and auditor, Miss E. F. Tupman.

The committee work has been divided as follows: Membership, Miss Frances Patton, chairman; register, Miss Alberta Dozier, chairman; nominations, Miss E. B. Whatley, chairman; home, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, chairman; auditing, Miss E. F. Tupman, chairman; publicity, Miss C. M. Johnson, chairman, and Miss Virginia Gibbs. The registrar will be Mrs. Theodosia Wardell.

The advisory board is composed of the following: Dr. Charles Boynton, Dr. William Perrin Nicolson, Dr. C. W. Summerall, J. B. Paulin, Dr. C. W. Strickler, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Fred Hodgson, Mrs. W. L. Peel and Mrs. H. E. W. Palmer.

Italy Adds to Its Seacoast Guard

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 12.—Thirteen new torpedo boat destroyers have been ordered by the Italian Admiralty, it was learned to-day.

This addition to the navy is made necessary by the extension of seacoast which Italy must guard in Africa.

GILMER TO ELECT SHERIFF.

ELLIJAY.—Sheriff J. H. Penland, of Gilmer County, having been appointed a United States Deputy Marshal and having resigned the office of Sheriff, the Ordinary has called a special election for August 28 to fill the unexpired term. Ex-Sheriff Bob Milton and J. H. Ray, present Tax Receiver, are the opposing candidates.

THERE HAS BEEN NO DULL SEASON OVER OUR LINES

Economy and efficiency are so combined in the Atlanta Telephone service that business houses which use both systems instruct their employees to route all possible calls by preference through our exchange.

"Better service at lower rates," is our motto—and we live up to it.

No Hostile Feeling Shown Envoy Lind

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy sent a reassuring note to President Wilson to-day, saying not the slightest antagonism to Mr. Lind's presence has been shown in Mexico City.

LIND CAUTIOUSLY HUNTS KEY TO SITUATION

Studies Conditions in Mexico While Administration Awaits Report Before Planning.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent to Mexico City by President Wilson, is making himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Mexico. The watchword of the present situation is caution, as Mr. Lind and the attaches of the United States Embassy fear that a hasty step will cause complete failure of the Ambassador's mission.

It was reported that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, had contrived to arrange an official visit at the National Palace to-day. It was assumed that he might then present to President Huerta or Foreign Minister Aldape the note given him by Envoy Lind.

Mr. Lind called at the embassy again to-day. He refuses to say anything about his instructions from Washington.

Hostile Acts Are Lacking.

To the layman it seems that the Mexican situation is standing still rather than showing improvement, although to official eyes the lack of any direct hostile action by Mexico or Mexicans is a good omen. The Mexican people are apathetic and conservatives believe that President Huerta virtually stood alone in his defiance of the United States. However, allowance is made for the Latin temperament. If anti-American feeling flares up on a grand scale, it may sweep the republic.

Claiming the Government has been misrepresented, President Huerta has placed a strict censorship upon the cable line. Even telegrams to the United States State Department pass under this careful inquiry.

N. A. Jennings, correspondent for the Hearst papers, and Marvin Ferree, another American newspaper man, released from prison last night after being detained 24 hours, were kept under close surveillance to-day. Both feared they would be expelled under the undesirable alien law.

Embassy Guard Declined.

The arrival at Vera Cruz of more United States warships has caused bitter comment in the Mexican press. The commandante of the rurales has offered to provide a permanent guard about the United States Embassy, but Mr. O'Shaughnessy informed the Mexican Government that the Stars and Stripes provide enough protection.

Mr. Lind, despite warnings of his friends, walks abroad in the streets or rides in an open automobile, making no effort to hide his identity. At the Hotel Lascurain he mingles freely with the other guests.

Mrs. Lind, who suffered a slight indisposition upon her arrival here, was reported better to-day.

President Waits Message From Lind Before Acting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—President Wilson to-day awaited word from Mexico City relative to the success of former Governor Lind and his mission of mediation before announcing, or even formulating any definite Mexican policy. Beyond the proposals which Governor Lind carried, it is understood that the administration has no plans, and that no further steps will be taken until the President's envoy reports on his success in dealing with Huerta.

It is considered likely that Governor Lind will transmit President Wilson's message to President Huerta through Charge O'Shaughnessy either to-day or tomorrow.

It is reported the Senate is considering holding an executive session to discuss the Mexican situation to discover the consensus of opinion in the Upper House concerning the steps taken by the administration in dealing with the matter.

Cruiser Pittsburg Sent Back to Mexican Port.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Aug. 12.—The armored cruiser Pittsburg, which had started for San Diego from Guayamas, turned back to-day to remain at Guayamas pending further instructions from Washington. The Pittsburg was ordered back by wireless.

The supply ship Glacier, which was to have left Guayamas to-day with refugees, was ordered to remain at the Mexican port indefinitely.

Youth Fined Heavily On Flirting Charge

W. R. Livermore, No. 47 Trinity avenue, a bookkeeper, feels convinced that mashing is a costly pastime.

Recorder Pro Tem Preston fined him $25.75 Tuesday for an affront to two girls, sisters, in Trinity avenue, and also gave him 21 days in the stockade for violating the probation ordinance. Livermore admitted that he was intoxicated. He had been on probation since last May for drinking.

Both girls appeared in court.

BILL PROTECTING HEIFER CALVES IS KILLED

House Wastes Time on Measure That Might Have Been Given Child Labor Act.

Take the child slaves, shackle them,
Throttle them if they laugh;
Enslave the women if you will,
But save my darling calf.

That was the burden of the song Monday afternoon in the Georgia House of Representatives—the same House of Representatives that has persistently refused to consider any measure to relieve the condition of the thousands of child-slaves in the State—when the legislators, for two hours, discussed solemnly and earnestly a bill designed to protect the heifer calves of the State from the persecutions of the butcher and the farmer by prohibiting the killing of the "innocent, pure-eyed little things"—that is what one member called them—until they have reached the mature age of 2 years.

Rhetorical thunderbolts were hurled by the champions of the calves at the heads of those who were determined that the last calf should be executed, to be met by bursting bombs of metaphor that shook the rafters and penetrated even to the farthest confines of the gallery; epigrammatic skyrockets threw their trails of fiery language into the running gears of the pinwheels of logic; the defenders of the calf hurled Biblical passages into the camp of the veal eaters, and the bloodthirsty members who wanted blood, red blood, delved into the poets and flung quotation after quotation into the very teeth of the advancing army of calfdom.

Bill Bleated—Then Died.

And after two hours the calf bill poked its head up through the maze of oratory and near-oratory, through the mud of condemnation and the whitewash of appreciation, gave one plaintive, despairing bleat, and died, 91 votes to 73.

Members who had viewed with equanimity and magnificent self-control the smothering of measures to aid the child-slaves felt impelled to rise in their might when the rights of the calf were assailed. Here's how some of them felt:

Mr. Conner, of Spalding—"If this bill is not passed, in five years cows will be as scarce as hens' teeth."

Mr. Ennis, of Baldwin—"Saving the calves is no laughing matter. If you had seen the slaughter of these innocent little things as I have you would vote aye."

Mr. Lloyd, of Newton—"This bill is the worst kind of class legislation. Why can't the bull calf have the same right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness that is granted the heifer calf? A man's calves are his private property and should not be regulated."

Mr. Culpepper, of Meriwether—"Why is it these men want to protect the heifer calves and allow the bull calves to go to their doom, when it is a fact that the 'female of the species is more deadly than the male?'"

Mr. Picquet, of Richmond—"The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and it applies to calves as well as human beings. It makes my heart bleed to see these innocent little calves cruelly, brutally slaughtered to provide a veal eater's holiday."

"Prodigal" Is Provided For.

Mr. Shuptrine, of Chatham—"The bill should not pass under any circumstances. We have the Bible on our side, for it distinctly ordered that the fatted calf be killed for the prodigal son."

Mr. Spence, of Carroll—"I am outraged and indignant. This bill is the most diabolical bill I have ever seen I vote NO!"

Mr. Wimberly, of Bibb—"To kill this bill means that the slaughter of the innocents will be continued, and what man, be he ever so strong, can endure the sight of the wild-eyed, bleating calf being led to the slaughter? There are 365,000 calves butchered in Georgia every year. If they were saved, think of the number of cows we would have in four years and the lowing herds that would wind slowly over the lea! Think of the rivers and lakes of milk, and if we can raise enough strawberries, think of the strawberries and cream we could have."

Mr. Berry, of Whitfield—"I arise to explain that I am not going to explain my vote."

The bill was introduced by Nelson, of Clayton, and favorably reported by the Committee on General Agriculture, of which Kimbrough, of Harris, is chairman.

Crusade Against Short Weight Ice Peddlers Pushed

The campaign against short weight ice peddlers has taken a more aggressive turn. Chief Beavers has detailed Policeman Holley to assist Inspector of Weights and Measures Buchanan in making cases against offenders.

As a result of this increased activity two negro peddlers were tried and fined by Recorder Pro Tem Preston. Five more cases are set for trial Tuesday afternoon.

The crusade, it is believed, will save Atlantans hundreds of dollars during the remainder of the summer. Inspector Buchanan and Officer Holley got direct evidence against the peddlers by following them and weighing the ice just after it had been weighed by the peddlers and delivered to the consumer.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

Saves Girl From Injury in Runaway

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—J. P. Doughty, Jr., a prominent cotton man, proved himself a hero in a runaway here yesterday when he saved Miss Frankie Rubenstein, an attractive Augusta girl, from serious injury. Miss Rubenstein was driving up Broad street when her horse became unmanageable. Doughty attempted to grab the reins, but was unsuccessful, and then he seized a wheel. He was thrown, but he held firm and soon climbed into the buggy and secured the lines, bringing the horse to a stop.

'Sleepiest Man' Is Looking for a Job

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—William O'Leary, described by his wife as the sleepiest man in Chicago, was wide awake to-day and out looking for a job. O'Leary appeared before Judge Sabath to answer charges brought by his wife. She said he had slept all the time during the last two weeks, except the few minutes each day which he spent in eating.

"If you'll kiss your two little babies and promise to wake up and get a job in the next two weeks, I'll let you go," said the judge.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $843 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 281 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

SECRET ORDER IN CONTEST FOR BIG PRIZE

Georgian's Want Ad Offer Arouses Enthusiasm Among Organizations and Individuals.

"Our lodge has been planning to move into new quarters for some time, but we have never had quite enough money to fit up a lodgeroom properly," said a prominent Atlanta secret order member to the Want Ad Man Tuesday. "I talked it over with several friends last night, and we're going out to win that $1,000 first prize in your Want Ad Contest."

"Good luck to you," said the Want Ad Man. "Pitch in and win. And even if you don't land first, that $500 worth of furniture for second prize will go a long way toward making your lodgeroom comfortable."

Several organizations, including churches, lodges and charitable societies, have announced their intention of entering The Georgian Want Ad Contest, rounding up want ads by the thousand and rolling up enough votes to win. The women are especially enthusiastic. They are always workers in their churches.

Individual Prizes.

Individuals, too, are taking on renewed interest with the announcement of the complete prize list. The automobile for the first grand prize and the tour to California for two persons, all expenses paid, will be the goal of every worker. But there is consolation for those who fail to win first or second, for five prizes are offered in each of four classes—men, women, boys and girls—and these prizes include motorcycles, player pianos, bicycles, watches, diamonds and other articles worth trying for.

The Want Ad Man is in his office, fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, every day until 5 o'clock. On Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturdays he remains at his desk until 8 o'clock at night, and he is anxious to have a heart-to-heart chat with every contestant and prospective contestant. He will give every aid possible, explain all details, show how success is to be had, and give every contestant the benefit of his experience. Every contestant should see him this week.

Pretty Woman Aids Restaurant Bandits

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Assisted by a pretty young woman, two automobile bandits to-day raided the cafe of George Angelica, obtained jewelry from Angelica worth $1,150 and $75 in cash.

Angelica was counting his money when a young man and young woman entered the rear door. He refused to serve them because it was after closing hours, but the young woman pleaded so prettily that he went to the ice box for a bottle of champagne. When he turned about he faced a large revolver and another young man.

Slaying Ends Feud Of North Carolinans

ALEXANDER, N. C., Aug. 12—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would have been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

Spooning Couple Sit On Turtle; All Move

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 12.—A young couple, strolling on Sullivan's Island became fatigued. Why not sit on that overturned boat over there? They did. But the "boat" moved. She shrieked and the "boat" moved faster. It was a 600-pound turtle asleep on the beach. The turtle carried six men to the water. In its nest were found 200 eggs.

Spooning couples on Sullivan's Island now carry lanterns.

Mourners Forget Corpse When 3 Are Killed at Funeral

MACON, Aug. 12.—The preacher, a deacon and one of the women mourners were killed in a shooting affair at a negro funeral at Round Oak, in Jones County, late yesterday afternoon.

The preacher stopped the services, upon hearing pistol shots near the church, and rushed out to quell the disorder. He was shot just as he stepped out of the doorway. The other two were killed in a general shooting affray that followed. The negro minister was T. M. Howard, of Macon.

In the excitement the funeral was forgotten, and the corpse lay in the church all night, but this morning another preacher was secured and the interment took place.

Sheriff Roberts went to Round Oak early this morning when news of the affair reached him at Grays.

Must Pay Alimony Or Serve Jail Term

MACON, Aug. 12.—D. F. Arnold, a contractor, has been given an extension to September 5, on or before which date he must pay $285 alimony to his wife or go to jail. When arraigned before Judge Mathews on a contempt charge because he had allowed the alimony to become in arrears, Arnold asked for more time, and the judge allowed him 27 more days. He is under order of the court to pay Mrs. Arnold $75 a month.

Two other Macon men have been put in jail in the last 30 days for not paying alimony.

24 Factories Take Space for Exhibits

Only seven days remain for exhibitors to lease space in the permanent manufacturers' exposition, to be held, in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Twenty-four manufacturers have already contracted.

Tuesday the committee in charge visited the various manufacturers in the city. Meetings will be held each day until next Tuesday.

On each floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building occupied by the exposition, telephones and desk space will be provided for the transaction of business. A competent man will be employed to show visitors around.

Georgia Girl Bathers Startle Charleston

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12.—Two perfectly attractive girls from Georgia, it is said, have made surf bathing on Sullivan's Island more popular than ever by their somewhat advanced style of ocean garb. They wear men's suits, natty affairs, with stripes about the shoulders and knees.

Sullivan's Islanders say they never saw any handsomer or more becoming men's bathing suits than these.

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER'S NEW HOME IS DEDICATED; MANY NOTED MEN SPEAK

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Fifteen thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles, including city and county officials, men of the cloth and members of the leading civic and fraternal organizations, witnessed yesterday the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone and raising the California Bear Flag at the new home of The Los Angeles Examiner, now in course of construction.

These ceremonies were preceded by a great parade throughout the downtown streets, which acted as the escort of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor H. H. Rose to the new building site.

In the speakers' stand were leaders of the civic and religious life in Los Angeles, while in the grandstand was a brilliant assemblage.

The ceremonies were held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, and Ernest Ingold, president of the club, introduced James R. H. Wagner, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Charles Edward Bock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, offered prayer. Mr. Wagner presented the Bear Flag to The Examiner from the people of Southern California. Arthur W. Kinny, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, made the speech of acceptance. The Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Los Angeles, made an address, and the Rev. Father George Donahoo, representing the Right Rev. Thomas J. Conary, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, spoke.

Silver Trowel Given Mr. Hearst.

Douglas White, of the Advertising Club, presented a silver trowel to Mayor Rose, who officially laid the cornerstone and then presented the trowel to Mr. Hearst. Dr. Sigmund Hechtal, rabbi of the B'Nai Brith Congregation, made the closing remarks.

It was in acknowledging the gift of the trowel from Mayor Rose that Mr. Hearst delivered his address, in which he voiced his confidence in the great future of Los Angeles and Southern California. The various speakers paid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to The Examiner's influence in the expanding progress and prosperity of Southern California.

A chorus of several hundred voices rendered patriotic music.

Mr. Hearst said in his address:

I thank you most heartily on behalf of the members of the Los Angeles Examiner staff and on my own behalf for this beautiful memento and for the generous sentiments which have accompanied it. It is a pleasant thing for us to to feel that we are here among so many friends, and it is also a pleasant thing for us to feel, as we all do feel, a sincere reciprocal friendship for the citizens of Los Angeles and a deep devotion to the best interests of this great city.

Notable Occasion for Paper.

This is a notable occasion for us of The Examiner. It marks a milestone in the progress of the paper. It is made doubly memorable by the participation of our Mayor, and by the attendance of so many distinguished citizens. Yet with all its importance and significance it is only one of the many occasions which we gratefully remember where you have kindly encouraged our efforts and stimulated us to further endeavor.

Under such encouragement and stimulus The Examiner has grown until it is one of the biggest and best of all my publications. Certainly there is no publication of mine from Los Angeles to London in the success of which I take a greater pride and pleasure.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner first because I am a Californian and take pleasure in the success of everything Californian. (Applause.)

I was not born in Los Angeles, but I was born in California.

A man is a Los Angelan, no matter on what street of Los Angeles he is born or lives, and a man is a Californian no matter in what part of California he is born or lives.

Bound Together Closely.

We Californians are learning more and more that we are all bound together by the firm bonds of fraternity and that the combined success of all as individuals make the complete success of all as a community. We are learning that a friendly rivalry does not mean a foolish jealousy; that the fullest achievement is through co-operation, and that whatever operates for the benefit of California operates for the benefit of all of us as Californians.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner, too, because I realize that Los Angeles is destined to become, and is fast becoming, one of the greatest cities in the world. (Applause.)

I want my system of publications to be essentially a national institution, and to be national it must have representation in Los Angeles as adequate as in any of the greatest cities of the nation.

Finally, I take pleasure and pride in the success of The Examiner because Los Angeles is not only a leader in material development, but a leader in ethical and intellectual development—a pioneer in political progress.

What are as yet only ideals even in many of the most advanced localities of the world are actualities in Los Angeles.

What are dreaded as threatening theories in conservative centers are established as practical and beneficial facts in this progressive community.

Conservatism a Failing.

The older sections of this country and of every country are hampered and handicapped in their development by also-called conservatism which is too often nothing more than sheer selfishness or inertness.

The phrase "conservatism" is made to cover a multitude of failings.

The lack of imagination to foresee, the lack of energy to attempt, the lack of courage to act, the lack of ability to achieve are all cloaked under that convenient word "conservatism."

Conservatism is the attribute of age. Energy, enthusiasm, courage, confidence and conviction are the characteristics of youth and strength. It is these that have wrought the miracle of Los Angeles.

In New York the citizens are still struggling vainly for that first essential of electoral reform—the direct nomination.

In Los Angeles you have possessed this power long and employed it well. In the East intrenched privilege still is declaiming against the awful possibilities of the recall. For years you have exercised that function of popular government justly and judiciously.

In many localities the citizens are timidly hesitating to adopt woman suffrage. You have not only proved the feasibility of their right, but have demonstrated the definite benefit of it.

Noted Political Achievements.

You have made universal suffrage a fact and popular government a reality. You have exercised the initiative and referendum wisely and temperately.

You have divorced your local city government from national politics and have made it what it should be—a business institution conducted for the business benefit of the stockholders, the citizens.

You have brought water from the cool, clear streams of the distant mountains, undefiled, instead of collecting it from the poisoned and polluted puddles of the populated districts.

You have put your public money honestly and intelligently into great public works instead of into the pockets of greedy promoters and corrupt politicians. You are invading confidently and completely the field of public ownership in spite of the forebodings and forbiddings of interested public service corporations.

You have disproved all the arguments of retained corporation attorneys and dissipated all the opposition of paid corporation politicians.

And behold!

Strides Bring Prosperity.

You have prospered incomparably in spite of your bold advances and striking innovations; nay more, my friends, you have prospered because of them.

In the favoring physical atmosphere of this country, trees and fruits grow big and in the favoring moral and spiritual atmosphere of this community human institutions grow to greatness.

I am truly proud and pleased to have a newspaper here to do its share in the development of this Great city, to play its part in the progress of this great State. I am happy, too, to have a newspaper system to sow the seeds of progress in other parts of the nation and to cultivate it there so that it may take root and flourish and blossom and bear fruit.

My devout wish is that Los Angeles may ever continue to be a leader in the moral and material development of the country; in the economic and political progress of the nation and that The Examiner may be a potent factor in this development, an effective force in this progress—a cornerstone in the splendid structure of Californian achievement.

Tribute Paid to Examiner.

Excerpts from the speeches of prominent Los Angelans follow:

MAYOR H. H. ROSE—The construction of the wonderful building is one of the greatest things that was ever done for a city the size of Los Angeles. A building over 300 feet long and large in proportion, devoted to the uses of one newspaper, in the city of Los Angeles is indeed a magnificent enterprise. While this is the first time I have had occasion to lay the cornerstone of a building, except, maybe, a rough log hut or a stone hut in the mountains, I hope I may have occasion to use these trowels for purposes like this many, many times during my administration.

DOUGLAS WHITE, representing the Advertising Club of Los Angeles—The advertising clubs of the Pacific Coast have been extremely successful in their work up to this time. Every movement needs a leader, and so has the movement for truth in advertising on the Pacific Coast. However, when we entered on this movement it already possessed a leader, for 25 years ago, or about that time, in the city of San Francisco, a publisher arose who made the plain statement that no matter what the circulation of his paper might be, that circulation would be given truthfully and honestly to the people who bought space. That publisher was William Randolph Hearst. From that time up to the present, in all the papers which he has owned and published, he has carried out that same idea of honesty and truth in his advertising, because in the circulation depends the sale of advertising.

THE REV. GEORGE DONAHOE, representing the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty, of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles—What attaches importance to this occasion and to the building that is now laboriously rising here is the fact that this building is destined to become a great center of newspaper activity in our gloriously growing city. As the mission of The Examiner goes forward the power of The Examiner grows stronger. So briefly, then, this is my good wish, first in behalf of us all, newspaper readers of Southern California, that this building which we to-day with ceremony officially begin, may always be to us a source of information, and for the great newspaper genius who honors this occasion with his presence our one hope and good wish and prayer is that the influence, the great influence that he so surely holds—that it may ever be devoted to works of fighting evil in high places, defending the weak and forwarding sound morality the world over.

DR. SIGMUND HECHT, rabbi of the B'nai Brith congregation—In my own and in the name of those whom I have the honor to represent, I bring my meed of congratulations and encouragement and cheer, first of all to those who are primarily affected by this event, to that honored head of this gigantic enterprise, to that man nationally honored for the purity of his character, for the sincerity of his purposes, for the directness of his intentions, for his ability and for the policy with which he inspired The Los Angeles Examiner to favor none and be fair to all—William Randolph Hearst. The Los Angeles Examiner—under God may it grow and prosper and be a power in the development and in the uplift of our glorious country.

ARTHUR W. KINNEY, president of The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce—The people of Southern California offer The Examiner their sincere congratulations upon this memorable occasion which marks an epoch in its wonderful career in our great city. It has always held an unbounded faith in the marvelous destiny of our Southwestern metropolis and it has ever backed up this faith by striving for everything that might contribute to the prosperity of our people. It has, indeed, been one of the sturdy sentinels at this far Western outpost of American idealism. Long ago it enunciated a policy of civic and industrial progress that must appeal to every person who has the welfare of our city at heart—a policy which, if pursued, must hasten to the unfolding of the great movement that is destined to make our Southwest empire world famed.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

Charges Speaker Burwell With Breaking Promise to Bring His Measures to Vote.

A tilt in which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

Shakes Finger at Holtzclaw.

The clash between McCrory and Holtzclaw came during the consideration of the Western and Atlantic Commission bill. Mr. Holtzclaw objected to a motion to dispense with the reading of the bill when the House went into committee of the whole, and Mr. Crory, who was standing near shook a menacing finger at the Houston County Representative and said:

"Holtzclaw, you are trying to kill time to prevent my bill coming to a vote. You had better look out!"

Mr. Holtzclaw was in conversation with a member at the time. He glanced at Mr. McCrory, but made no reply.

The failure of the House to take action on the McCrory bill Monday kills the measure for the rest of the session, inasmuch as the Senate has served notice that it will not consider any House bill passed after Monday.

THIN FOR YEARS--"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work. I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. Either Sargol will increase your weight or it won't, and the only way to know it is to try it. Send for this Free Test Package to-day, inclosing 10c in silver or stamps to help pay postage, packing, etc., and a full size 50c package will be sent to you by return mail free of charge. ATTORNEY FOR DEFENSE AGAIN THREATENS TO MOVE FOR A MISTRIAL you and you made certain statements?—A. I did not.

Q. Now this time when you were at my office, did not your husband beg you to tell the truth, and put his arms around you and beg you to say what you told him was the truth?—A. It was all lies, though.

Q. Did you sign this affidavit? A. They made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your attorney, Mr. George Gordon?—A. I told you they made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your husband?—A. I signed it in the presence of a whole lot of people, but it was a lie.

Mr. Dorsey read the affidavit. It stated that the husband, Albert McKnight, was in the kitchen of the Selig home when Frank came to lunch Saturday, April 26.

When Solicitor Dorsey reached the part where it was stated that Mrs. Frank had claimed to Mrs. Selig that her husband was drinking the night before, and wanted her to get a pistol so that he could kill himself, Minola interrupted:

Declares Statement Was All a Lie.

"That is all a lie my husband fixed up," she shouted. "They made me sign it."

Later the negro woman started to interrupt again at the statement that she had asked Mrs. Frank if the girl who was killed was a Jew girl. Mr. Arnold told her to keep quiet until Mr. Dorsey had finished. She demonstrated her feelings again at the statement that they had raised her pay, and told her to be careful how she talked.

Dorsey, after he had finished reading the affidavit, said: "And you signed this statement?"

"They made me sign it," reiterated the negress. "It was all a lie."

Q. How did they make you sign it? A. They told me if I did not, they would lock me up.

Q. Who told you?—All of them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is this the lie your husband fixed for you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever get any more pay? A. No, sir.

Q. How did the detectives get you? A. They got my husband first.

Q. Did you say anything to Miss Lucille about it being a Jew, and did she say it was a Gentile?—A. No.

Q. Did Mrs. Frank say anything about sleeping on the floor?—A. No.

Q. Is any of this true? Is it a lie out of the whole cloth?—A. Yes, it is all a lie.

Denies Mrs. Selig Gave Her Money.

Q. Did Mrs. Selig ever give you $5?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did she ever tell you to mind how you talk?—A. They told me to tell the whole truth.

Q. Do you know this Man Craven? A. No.

Q. This man Pickett?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Charles Barnhart took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Contractor and architect.

Q. Have you, at the request of Mr. Haas, visited the Selig home and made a drawing of the kitchen and drawing room?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you see the mirror in the dining room from any point standing in the kitchen door?—A. No.

Q. Can you see anybody sitting at the table?—A. No.

Q. Could you see anyone sitting on the north side of the table?—A. No.

Q. Is there any position a man can sit at the table and be seen in the mirror?—A. By sitting about two feet away from him.

Q. If a man said he was sitting in a chair against the jam of the kitchen door, and saw the reflection of a man in the mirror, was he telling the truth?—A. I could not see it.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What you could see in that mirror would depend on the location of the sideboard, wouldn't it?—A. Yes.

Moving of Mirror Would Change View.

Q. If that was moved a little, the whole view of the dining room would be changed, would it not?—A. Yes, but my experiments showed that you could not see whether anyone was eating at the table or not, from any view you could get of that mirror from the kitchen.

The witness was excused and Henry Wood, secretary of the County Commission, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you, at my request, go to the Selig home on Georgia avenue and take some views?—A. I did.

Q. Did you stand in the kitchen and try to see the mirror in the dining room sideboard?—A. I did.

Q. Could you see the mirror from the back kitchen door?—A. I could not.

Q. Could you see the table and the mirror from any part of the kitchen? A. I stood in the door leading into the pantry between the kitchen and dining roo mand all I could see in the mirror was the arm of one chair.

Attorney Rosser here made a side remark that he himself had been out to the Selig home to see if the negro, Albert McKnight, was telling the truth about watching Frank from the kitchen through the sideboard mirror. He said one could not see the dining room table in the mirror from any point in the kitchen.

Q. What you saw in this mirror was right here (the room)?—A. Yes.

Q. The arrangement of the furniture was like it was April 28?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness on redirect examination.

Q. Coming to that door from the back porch you could not see that mirror?—A. I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. If a man were standing where that chair was could you see him?—A. I might have.

Q. Did you mak; the test sitting or standing?—A. A. I tried both ways.

Another Tells of Tests With Mirror.

The witness was excused and Julius Fischer, president of the cemetery commission, took the stand.

Q. You are a contractor and builder?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make an examination of the Selig home?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you stand in that kitchen door to see whether you could see the mirror in the dining room?—A. Yes.

Q. Could you?—A. No.

Q. Is there any place in the kitchen from which you could see in the mirror a man at the table?—A. No.

Q. Were there any evidences of the mirror having been moved?—A. No, but I moved it to see if I could place it anywhere in the dining room and from the kitche.. see any reflection of a person sitting at the table.

Q. Well, what did you find?—A. I found I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. Did you turn the mirror flat against the wall on the east side of the room?—A. No.

Goat Dies Trying to Eat Senator's Speech

WILKESBARRE, PA., Aug. 12.—State Senator Sterling R. Catin has lost his goat—not that kind the jokers like to tell about, but a real one named William.

Catlin kept his pet in the barn where he had stored many of the speeches made during his long term of service at Harrisburg.

The Senator went to the barn to admire William, and to his dismay, found the goat loose among his papers. One voluminous budget was protruding from his mouth. Despite all the Senator's efforts William choked to death. The fatal document was one of Catlin's greatest legislative propositions.

Polaire Will Wear A Ring in Her Nose

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—When Mlle. Polaire, who boasts that she is the thinnest actress in the world, although she resented being called the ugliest by the New York papers—appears in America in the fall she will wear a large gold ring suspended from her nose to amuse New Yorkers with one more novelty.

She has had a ring skilfully fitted into her nose without piercing the flesh, so that she can remove the trinket when off the stage.

Revision of Balkan Borders Agreed To

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, Aug. 12.—Revision of the Balkan territorial boundaries in the peace treaty signed in Bucharest Sunday is likely, Germany having yielded in principle to-day to a reformation of the lines.

The fate of the Turkish islands in the Aegean Sea will be left to the powers.

Bulgarian Heir Is Ill; Poison Plot Reported

SOFIA, Aug. 12.—A mysterious illness has seized Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria. It was announced to-day that the Crown Prince is suffering from a nervous breakdown due to the rigors of the recent military campaign.

In view of Czar Ferdinand's trepidation over the safety of his heir reports were current in some quarters that an attempt had been made to kill Boris with poison.

Last Bill Passed By House Provides W.&A. Investigation

A bill providing for a commission of eight members to investigate the value of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and make recommendations for its lease was passed by the House of Representatives Monday afternoon, being the last House measure that will be passed during the present session.

The commission will be composed of two members from the House, two from the Senate, the chairman of the State Railroad Commission, and two civilians to be appointed by the Governor. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000 for expenses.

The House also passed, by a vote of 120 to 0, the "blue sky" law, which requires registration of securities before stocks and bonds of a concern can be placed on the market. It is designed to prohibit the sale of "wildcat" stocks.

House Begins Move To Shorten Trials

A resolution providing for a commission of seven members to investigate the civil and criminal procedure of Georgia with a view to abolishing long-drawn-out trials and hearings was passed by the House Monday.

The commission will be composed of three members of the House, two of the Senate and two appointed by the Governor. Mr. Slater, of Bryan, in discussing the resolution, referred to the trial of Leo Frank as an example of the slowness of Georgia legal procedure.

$900 in Prizes for Hog Exhibits at Fair

MACON, Aug. 12.—The announcement is made that $900 in prizes will be awarded for the best exhibit of Duroc Jerseys, Berkshire, Poland-China and Tamsworth swine at the Georgia State Fair.

The American Duroc-Jersey Swine Breeders' Association has just placed a cash prize with the fair association and so has the American Berkshire Association. The fair association will distribute $685 and the Southwest Georgia Swine Breeders' Association also offers an award for the best pigs.

Girl's Face Crushed By Kick of Horse

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—Martha Rawls, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Rawls, of this city, has been carried to a hospital in Atlanta for an operation.

The little girl was playing around a horse belonging to her father when it kicked her, striking her left cheek and crushing both the upper and lower jawbones.

Physicians here removed the crushed bones, and later decided to carry the child to Atlanta for treatment in a hospital there.

Negro Is Lynched by Mob at Laurens, S. C.

LAURENS, S. C., Aug. 12.—Overpowering the Sheriff, battering down two doors of the jail and a door to the steel cage, a mob of 2,000 dragged Richard Puckett, a young negro, from his cot and swung him to a railroad trestle.

The negro had attempted an assault on a young white girl Monday morning. He was later captured and confessed his guilt to the Sheriff.

Bloodhounds trailed the negro from the scene of the crime. The young woman could not positively identify the negro.

San Francisco Dry In Wee Sma' Hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—For the first time in history, a restriction was placed on liquor traffic in San Francisco when the new law making it illegal to sell drinks between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. went into effect.

The law was obeyed generally throughout California.

7 MEN STUNNED BY EXPLOSION OF AIR TANK

Hurled Twenty Feet Against Wall, Pratt Laboratory Engineer Is Badly Cut.

W. H. Hutchins, No. 152 Confederate avenue, assistant engineer at the N. P. Pratt Laboratory, No. 88 Auburn avenue, was blown twenty feet against the side of the building Monday morning about 4:30 o'clock when a compressed air tank exploded while Hutchins and half a doze negro workmen were filling it.

The negroes were also thrown against the walls, but none was injured.

Hutchins received several small cuts about his head and face, and was severely jarred. His key ring, which was attached to his belt, was blown off. It was found 50 feet from where the explosion occurred.

The air tanks in the laboratory are about five feet long and two feet in circumference, and are used in the bottling operations. Four of them were being filled under the direction of Hutchins when the accident happened.

The explosion shook buildings a block away, and was heard a quarter of a mile. The noise and jar awoke practically every person in the neighborhood. Many parties rushed to the building expecting to find workmen dead or seriously injured. All of the men in the plant were slightly stunned and were just regaining their feet when the first of the rescuers arrived.

Police Sergeant Hewett, who was more than a quarter of a mile away, at Piedmont avenue and Houston street, heard the explosion and went to the factory. He took charge of the situation and sent Hutchins home. The negroes returned to their work.

3 Held as Swindlers Of Barnum's Cousin

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—The three persons, two women and one man, accused of swindling Mrs. Sarah Barnum, aged 82, of Syracuse, N. Y., cousin of P. T. Barnum, have fled from Chicago, the police learned positively to-day.

Henry Russell, of Spokane, Wash., a mine promoter; Miss Frances Waldo, his private secretary, and Mrs. Kalla Waldo, her mother, were named in the warrants. Deals for $82,000 were charged against the trio, and it was said Mrs. Barnum was left penniless through investments in mines.

Start on $1,000,000 High School in Fall

PULLMAN, ILL., Aug. 12.—Work on the buildings for the Pullman Technical High School, which will cost more than $1,000,000, will begin before the end of autumn, according to an announcement received by Pullman residents to-day.

The board appointed to administer the $1,200,000 bequest made by George M. Pullman for the school will meet here in October and decide upon the final details.

PERIOD FURNITURE

COLONIAL Bed Room
Period Furniture "Blue Tagged"
It is a notable fact that some of the most drastic reductions of the "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale are made on sets and odd pieces of Period Furniture—for the bedroom, living room and dining room.
The homekeeper who would furnish a room in a true and pure style or who would add another piece to a set already started may save richly through the generosity of the "Blue Tag" reductions.
Another notable fact is that ours is the South's greatest stock of Period Furniture—with its many fine reproductions of the old masters—Sheraton, Adam, Hepplewhite, Chippendale—and then the Colonial, William and Mary, Jacobean, Mission and Louis XV. periods.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being.'

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

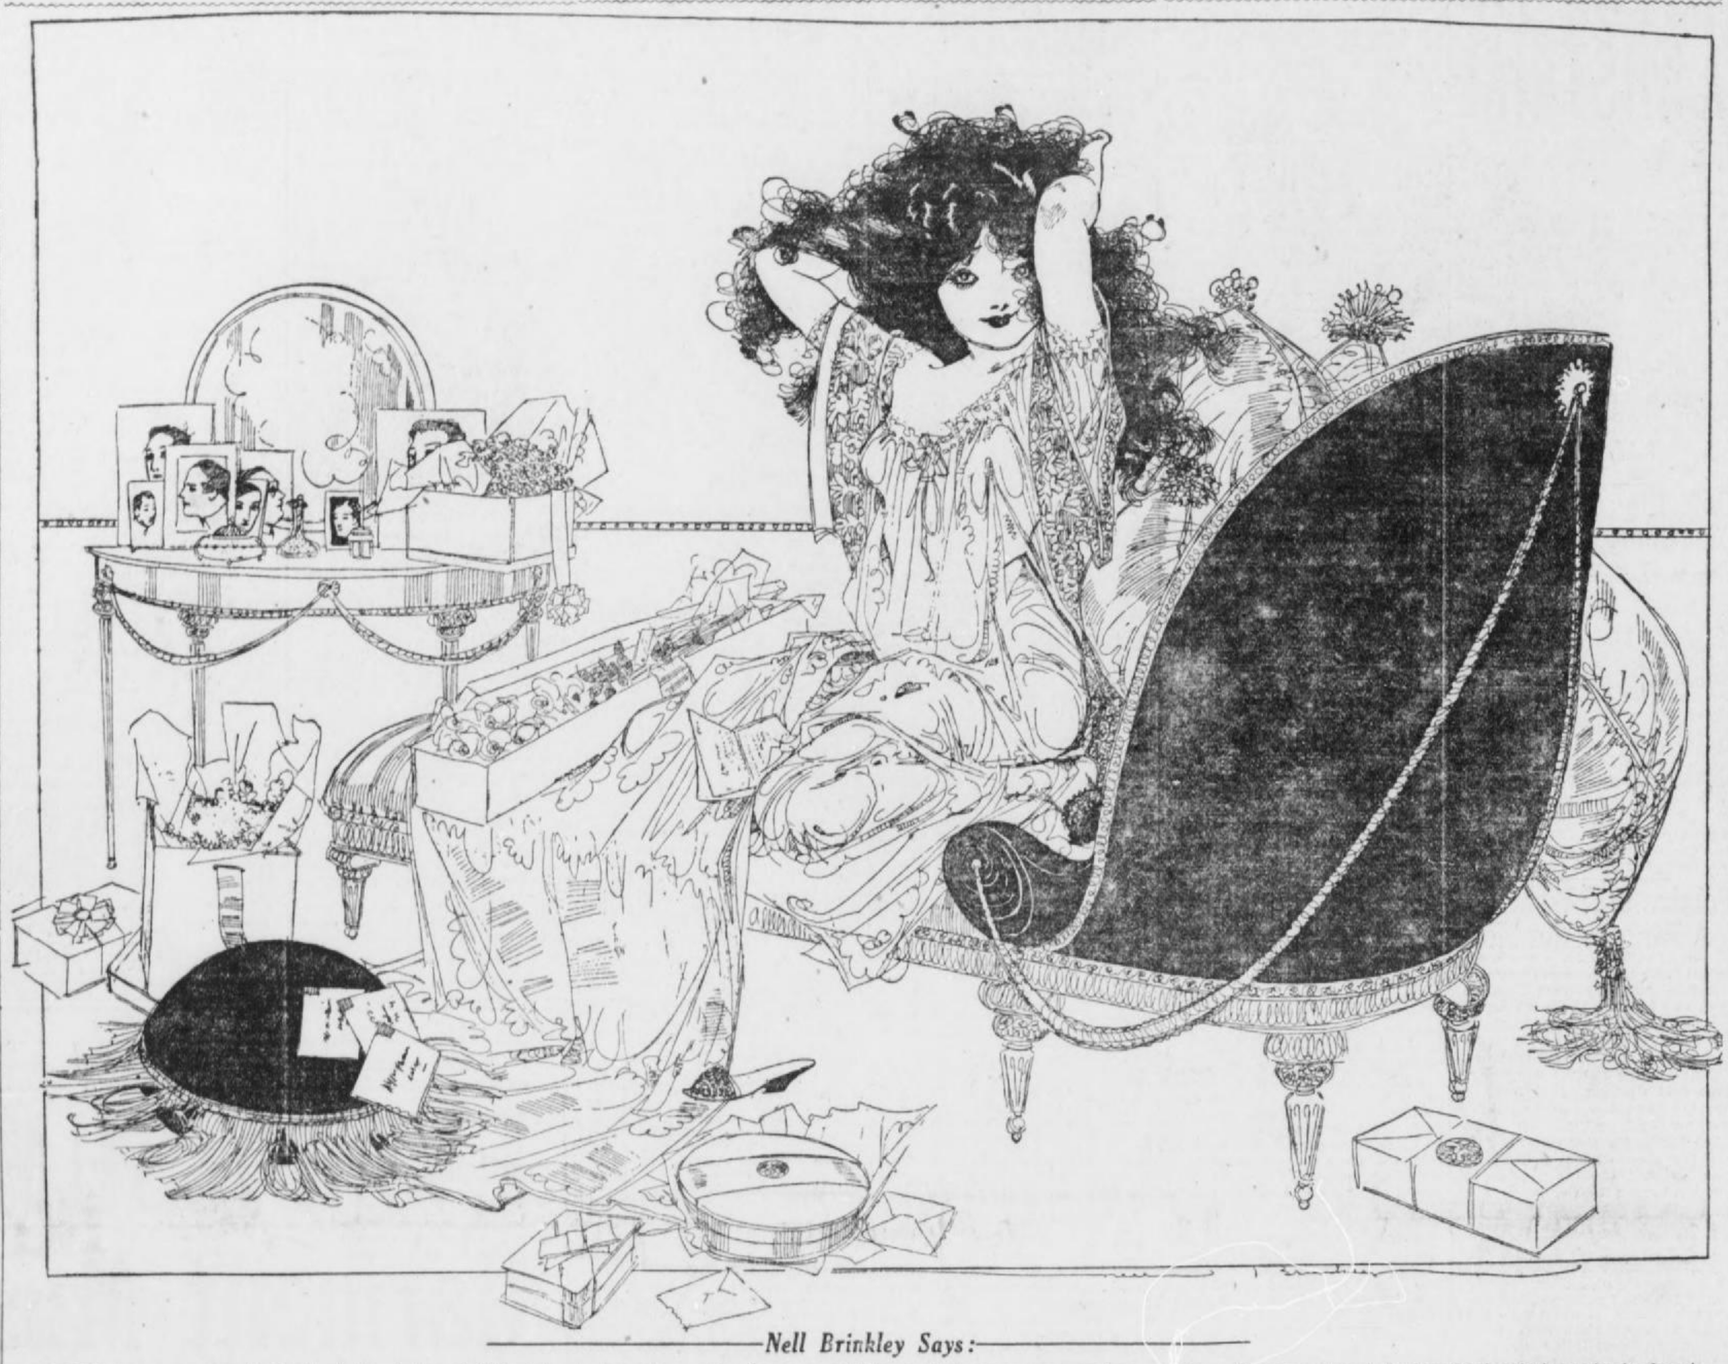

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my flowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curiadje underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away downtown, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night.

"I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!"

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

Go thou to him and teach him.
Who knows not and knows not that
he knoweth not is a fool.
No light shall ever reach him."

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings*"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a steep into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then became feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

These pictures were especially posed for this paper.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched insteps and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl! I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said. "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stagecoaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

* * * * *

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his legs trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28.

Up-to-Date Jokes

An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket and pointing to the head engraved on it said:

"My great-great-grandfather was made a lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."

"What a coincidence?" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."

A birthday gift was given to a wife by her husband and three children. The youngest, a little ten-year-old, was appointed to make the speech of presentation. She did it after much preparation for the occasion, and this was the form it took:

"Dear mamma, this gift is presented to you by your three children and your one husband."

Mrs. Subbub—I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird.

Sarah (the new "general")—I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird-seed for breakfast food.

Gabe—Why do they say that the ghost walks on pay day?

Steve—Because that's the day our spirits rise.

A Redeeming Trait.

"Cannibals have one redeeming feature, after all."

"What is that?"

"They are very fond of children."

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this being due thing.

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Barnca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Coveleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,000. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

GRIFFITH SENDS FIELDER CALVO TO CRACKERS

A TELEGRAM from Clark Griffith to Major Frank Callaway president of the Atlanta ball club, received this morning, announces that Calvo, the Cuban outfielder whom Griff has been carrying all the season, is on his way to join the Crackers and will be in Atlanta to-morrow.

"Griffith is placing Calvo with us as a means of stiffening up our club for the final sprint," Mr. Callaway said. "I expect he will get in the game at once, probably playing in place of Holtz. He is a fast and accurate fielder and a hard hitter, but the class of Griffith's regular outfield has prevented him from getting into the game with the Senators."

Beauty Is Keynote Of 1914 Hudson Six

The 1914 Hudson Six 54 7-passenger body, complete car, at $2,250, is on exhibition to-day at the salesrooms of Mr. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., local dealer for the Hudson motor-cars.

Beauty is the keynote of the new car. The most prominent feature is the pure streamline body. No angles appear at the dash. Running boards are clear. It conforms to the latest European practice. Germany originated the streamline body. By some it is known as the Prince Henry type.

Reliable information from leading factories of Europe indicates that at the Paris show next October practically every European manufacturer will exhibit bodies of this type. This has been adapted by Hudson designers to American use and modified to suit American ideas. The long, sloping hood merges into the lines of the dash. The graceful sweep and smoothness is unbroken from radiator cap to tail-light. The new car is designed for seven passengers. The two extra seats are of the folding type and permanently attached. They fold into the back of the front seat entirely out of the way. Yet owing to the great length of the car—135-inch wheel base—there is ample room for all passengers and all may have the greatest possible ease and comfort.

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

THESE baseball magnates are, proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Voss and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will jug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back.

The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the same skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why
write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with
a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice
on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care
and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mor-
tals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about
the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails
to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and
hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy
who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets
a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again. The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile eevnt, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. But McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

Dr. Louis C. Rouglin returned today from a two weeks' vacation at Eastern resorts. He spent a week fishing off Ocean CView and reported several big catches.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersburg team, of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccanneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Dooin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial consideration of October's classic.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to lead you into the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into tomorrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here today. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

MOTHER IS GIVEN EQUAL RIGHT TO CHILDREN

House Passes Bill Leaving Power to Award Custody in Divorce Cases to the Judge.

A bill giving the mother an equal right with the father to the custody of minor children after decision in divorce cases, and leaving the disposition of the child with the trial judge, was passed by the House Tuesday morning. The vote was 96 to 62. The fight lasted more than an hour.

It was a substitute to the bill introduced by Smith of Fulton and Olive of Richmond, and to the substitute of the General Judiciary Committee. The substitute was offered by Mr. Smith, who stated it was acceptable to the Senate and would be acted upon by that body at this session. The original bill transferred the prima facie right to the child from the father to the mother.

Mr. Smith, explaining his bill, declared the measure is designed to correct an injustice under which Georgia mothers have been held for years. Speeches in favor of the bill were also made by Miller of Bibb and Olive of Richmond.

A number of members opposed the bill, either declaring the present law is good enough or defining their positions clearly by stating the mother is not competent to care for her child.

Those who spoke against the bill were Conner of Spalding, Garlington of Richmond, Moye of Johnson, Picquet of Richmond and Slafer of Bryan.

The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the Atlanta charter bill, providing for a popular vote on the charter, the referendum and the reduction of the power of the Recorder.

OBITUARY

John W. Adair, seventy-nine years old, a well-known resident of Fulton County, died Tuesday morning on his farm on the West Hunter road. He is survived by his wife and one son, Rufus. Six daughters also survive. They are Mrs. W. T. Huff and Mrs. J. M. Thompson, of Savannah; Mrs. J. M. Spinks, of Marietta; Mrs. J. T. Griffith, of Camilla; Mrs. Charles Williams, of Columbia, and Mrs. L. A. Garrison, of Atlanta. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. at the Sharon Church. Interment will be in the church-yard.

Busan E. Landers, fifty-five years old, No. 28 Inman street, died Tuesday at 9 o'clock. She is survived by her husband. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia Heeden, who died Monday, will be held at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Barnes, No. 122 Glennwood avenue. Interment at Hollywood.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $300,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

$100,000 in Stock For Use of Name

GADSDEN, ALA., Aug. 12.—Oliver Hall, a rich merchant of Collinsville, testified in the case of E. C. Drew, the Fort Payne promoter, charged with using the mail to defraud in promoting the DeKalb Etowah Oil and Gas Company, how he had been selected president by Drew and tendered $100,000 in stock in a $300,000 corporation. He said he never gave anything for the stock, but permitted the use of his name. His son, Irby Hall, was made vice president and given $500 in stock.

A sensation developed when it was shown the company had never been incorporated and that there was no system of bookkeeping.

Attorney Shot When Officer Aims at Dog

W. C. Munday, a member of the law firm of Munday & Cornwell, No. 318 Kiser Building, was shot in the leg Monday night when a bullet fired by Policeman Jaffares at a mad dog glanced from the sidewalk at Capitol avenue and Hunter street.

Munday's wound was slight, the bullet penetrating the flesh only and passing out. He was removed to his home.

The dog had created a panic among children playing in the street. The officer ran up and fired. Munday, fifteen feet away, received the bullet.

TAX REFORM BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

Question Put Squarely Up to the House—Validity of Slaton Revenue Bills in Doubt.

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNeill and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 12.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $280,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

The bill provides for a State tax commissioner with offices in the State Capitol and county boards of tax assessors. According to the claims of the authors and supporters of the bill, it will increase the annual revenue of the State by at least $1,000,000, sufficient to pay off the present deficit within the next three years, as well as the teachers.

Passed After Hot Debate.

The bill was passed in the Senate after nearly five hours of debate Monday afternoon. Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint author of the bill, made a vigorous defense of the measure in a two and a half hour speech. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth, followed Senator Miller in a vigorous attack on the bill. He declared the bill did not provide an adequate personal property tax.

Other Senators who spoke briefly in opposition to the bill were McGregor, of the Nineteenth, and Olliff, of the Fourth. Senator McNeill, in supporting the bill, charged that the Lipscomb bill, defeated in the House, had been framed by the Chamber of Commerce of Athens, the home town of Senator DuBose. It was for this reason, he intimated, that the Senator from the Thirtieth opposed the present bill.

Upon motion of Senator Tarver, the previous question was called and the final vote was taken. Following the vote, which was 29 to 12 in favor, President Anderson for the first time during the session congratulated the Senate. The bill was transmitted immediately to the House.

Flies 800 Miles in Day Without Stop

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BREMEN, Aug. 12.—Aviator Seguin, flying for the Pommery trophy, arrived here to-day after covering 800 miles on a non-stop flight. The Pommery trophy goes to the aviator making the longest cross-country flight between sunrise and sunset of the same day.

SNOW SAYS LOSS IN CORN CROP 300,000,000 BUSHELS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—B. W. Snow says: "With the indication Saturday of the possibility of a breaking up of the drouth I sent a special circular of inquiry to my country clients asking for a report on corn condition August 11, and have received sufficient reports to justify the statement that the decline in prospects since the Government report and my own of August 1 was gathered has been much heavier than is generally appreciated.

"I have returns enough to indicate that Indiana has dropped 10 points in condition, Illinois 15 points with an average around 55, Iowa 13 and Missouri 20. Returns from Kansas and Nebraska are as yet scattered, but sufficient to put Kansas out of the field as a corn-producer this year, and the Nebraska crop is of small importance, except in the northwest counties.

"My returns already cover almost one-third of the important corn counties, and if the later reports are in line with those already received, it is quite possible that the loss since August may have reached 300,000,000 bushels."

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Official announcement was made at the War Office that 50 British soldiers of a camel corps were killed or wounded yesterday in fighting in Somaliland, Africa.

COTTON RULED QUITE STRONG

Continued Dry Weather in Southwest Causes Active Bidding, but Sales Were Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—An absence of weather news of features in the cables caused the cotton market to open dull to-day and first prices were from unchanged to 1 point off to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call strength developed and prices rallied 3 to 10 points from the initial level, due mainly to the dry map in the Western belt. The ring apparently seemed to want cotton and purchased rather freely at times. Many of the larger spot houses were noted buyers.

Cordill was out with a report on parts of the Eastern belt, which was considered very favorable. This, coupled with a private telegram from Austin, Texas, stating that no change of consequence is noted in conditions, while the weather has been hot and dry, the temperatures were only 90 degrees yesterday and the entire State toward Oklahoma, cotton is opening fast and in ten days it will be moving freely all south of Waco. This brought out rather active selling from Wall street, but offerings were so rapidly absorbed that prices during the late forenoon were firmly maintained around the early high point.

The high temperatures continue in the West and the weekly weather report just posted shows a bullish condition existing west of the Mississippi, though the Eastern belt is favorable and scattered showers are shown in this section to-day for yesterday, though there are private reports of deterioration in Georgia and Alabama from the lack of moisture in some sections.

Sentiment to-day is somewhat more bullish and higher prices are predicted for the present at least, but there is an element who believe the market is entirely too high and are awaiting rain developments in the West to sell.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 3 points lower to 3 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Precipitation overnight in the west occurred at a few isolated places only. No general rains yet, although it continues generally cloudy over Texas. The map shows cloudy weather in North Carolina, also generally fair in the west of the belt, good rains in North Carolina and in the south central Gulf states. Indications are unchanged, and prospects continue for unsettled weather and precipitation to come on the western States in the near future. Cloudy weather and showers, with a decided fall in temperatures in New Mexico and Colorado promise speedier rain developments for Texas and Oklahoma.

Liverpool is steady, but cables that heavy hedge selling is weighing on the market. Manchester cables: "Weaving worse. Yarns slack. Lower unless bad crop prospects." Our market opened 2 points higher and advanced steadily on small buying to cover on the absence of general rains in the west and in anticipation of an unfavorable weather report for the week.

New York wires that Weld's traveling man reports 12 points deterioration in Texas since July 25. It must be borne in mind, however, that the crop condition in Texas was unusually hgh up to that date.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—There will be showers within the next thirty-six hours in the Lake regions, and the North and Middle Atlantic States. Occasional showers will continue in Florida. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi the weather will be generally fair, to-night and Wednesday.

The temperatures will rise slowly in the northeastern districts during to-night and Wednesday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Fair in west, showers in east portion; to-night or Wednesday; warmer to-night.

North Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair except showers in north portion to-night or Wednesday.

Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A steady tone was shown in all commodities at the metal exchange to-day with the exception of tin, which was weak. Copper, spot and August, 14.72½@15.85; September and October, 14.95@15.75; spelter, 5.75@5.80; lead, 4.50, bid; tin, 41.00¾@42.00; zinc, 5.65@5.75.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows mostly cloudy in Texas and North Carolina, generally fair over rest of the belt. No rains shown on the map, except light shower at Galveston and Amarillo, and raining in far west Texas, at El Paso. Nice rains fell over south central Gulf and North Carolina, but little rain elsewhere.

* * *

F. M. Cordill wires: "Charlotte, Greenville, Atlanta to Montgomery an unbroken stretch of excellent crops is noted. Atlantics show uninterrupted improvement since my last trip. The weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable. Conditions were never better at this date."

Waxahatchie, Texas, wires: "Hot winds hurting cotton badly. We have reports stating western Oklahoma is deteriorating rapidly. Only showers reported to-day at Yoakum and Brenham."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Expected rains did not fall in Oklahoma and Texas and the market was due to advance on the opening Monday morning. But Europe reflected no alarm, Arkansas reported splendid rains, Washington unsettled weather over Oklahoma and the weather prophets among the trade said that Texas rains are imminent. Under the circumstances the market continued under the spell of Washington legislative threat and hung fire.

"Recently students of the crop have devoted much time and thought to the effect of dry weather in Texas. One faction, predicating its opinion on the general reports of lack of moisture made by the Weather Bureau and on the great number of crop damage advices now coming from the west, says the crop in Texas and Oklahoma has deteriorated sharply, and that those States no longer promise a wonderful yield. Another faction, which has looked up the western rainfall records of other years, is equally certain that the present drouthy spell is not only not abnormal, but is confined to a very much smaller area than the trade realizes.

"Thus it is that some traders adhere to the belief that a very large crop is on the way, conditions east of the Mississippi River being excellent, while others are now becoming convinced another year's need will exceed production. Meantime new crop cotton is being absorbed by previously created requirement just as the latest expected it would be, but the demand for later shipments is small, a fact that robs the bull de of the account of much attractiveness."

The Journal of Commerce says the volume of business passing in the cotton goods markets is being underestimated. Jobbers are doing a good general trade. Cotton yarn prices are easier. The lower trend of prices on the cotton exchanges has caused some setback in the goods markets, but there are few goods available for spot delivery. Most mills do not care to go far into another cotton crop until they are better satisfied of the outcome of the crop.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Generally clear, rain at Amarillo and El Paso. Oklahoma—Clear and hot."

* * *

The Government's official record of Texas gives the rainfall average for the month of July as 1.29 inches, which is 1.62 below normal, but .09 inch higher than it was last year.

Official temperature average for Oklahoma yesterday was 104 degrees; Texas, 98, with seven stations recording 100; five 102, and one 104 degrees.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Market easier on hedge selling, tendency here to buy on expected bullish weekly report and anticipation of bullish weather forecast of Government to-day."

* * *

Manchester quotes officially to-day yarns dull and weak.

* * *

The market steadied up on dry map in the Western belt after the call. Weld, Mitchell and Cone were the leading buyers on the advance. Smith was possibly the best seller, supposed to be for Wall street.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Mean temperatures ranged from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Central North Carolina, north Central South Carolina and in the lower coast region of Texas, where there was a slight deficiency. The greatest excess in temperature occurred in Northwestern Arkansas and Northeastern Oklahoma.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern belt, from 82 to 84 degrees over the central and from 82 to 88 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88, occurred at Fort Worth, Texas, and Fort Smith, Ark.

No precipitation occurred during the week in Oklahoma and there was very little in Texas. Rain fell generally over the other portions of the cotton region, except that there was none in the extreme northern portion of Alabama and the southern portion of Middle Tennessee.

The precipitation was unevenly distributed and more than 2 inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, the central portion of Northern Arkansas, Southern Florida and at one station in Alabama and one in North Carolina. The greatest weekly precipitation, 8 inches, occurred at Calico Rock, Ark., and there was 5.66 inches at Minden, La.

MARKED ACTIVITY NOTED IN STOCKS

Street More Cheerful Over Cheap Money Talk—Standard Railroads Led Advance.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Union Pacific made a new high mark for the present movement at the opening of the stock market to-day, when it began selling at 154¼, or ½ abce Monday's final.

The tone was strong and most of the issues showed fractional gains. The accumulation arose from scattered sources and include some shares which for a long time have been neglected.

Among the advances were Woolworth, ⅝; Steel common, ⅜; United States Rubber common, ⅞; Union Pacific, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Bethlehem Steel, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ¼; Texas Company, ½; Southern Pacific, ¼; Reading, ⅝; Pennsylvania Railroad, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅜; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie first preferred ⅜, and Erie common, ⅛.

New Haven, which closed last night at 73⅛, crossed par, opening at 100¼.

St. Paul, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 107½, against 109¾ at the closing last night.

The curb was firm.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in London were strong.

Toward the end of the first hour, large buying orders appeared and nearly everything on the list moved up to new high records for the past six weeks. Gains of more than a point were noted in the leading railroads and industrials, while substantial fractional upturns were recorded in many other issues.

Amalgamated Copper led the upward movement, advancing 1⅜ to 74⅜. Union Pacific moved up 1⅜ to 155⅝, and similar gains were recorded in Canadian Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Steel common, Delaware & Hudson common, United States Rubber, Utah Copper and Tennessee Copper advanced more than ½ each. Southern Pacific was under slight pressure, however, declining ½ to 91¾.

Call money is loaning and renewing at 2¼ per cent.

Union Pacific will sell ex-rights Wednesday.

The tone was strong in the last hour, and a number of issues made substantial gains. United States Rubber common advanced to more than 62, a net gain of more than 1 points since the opening. Steel was strong, selling around 65 for a gain of ¼ since noon. Canadian Pacific was off fractionally. Lehigh Valley and St. Paul held firm and Texas Company was very strong, selling at 118¼, for a gain of more than 2 points on the day. Brokers said there was a good deal of investment buying in Europe.

STOCK GOSSIP

"As I have said many times of late, any activity the stock market displays is when prices are advancing. I hear that the large interests are heavily long of securities and are accumulating more from day to day.

"Although prices have had a good advance from the low of June 11, the advance under way will continue until stocks are at a considerably higher level. I am especially bullish on Union Pacific, Steel, Copper and the Tractions, and believe holdings should be increased in all of these issues on any moderate recession."—G. D. Potter.

Dry, Hot Weather Runs Shorts to Cover—Corn Feature in Activity and Strength.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	85⅝@87¾
Corn—No. 2	77½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42½

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—September corn was up as much as 1⅝c to-day, but it lost ⅝c later, yet the closing price was about 1c higher.

A report was received during the session saying that the losses throughout the dry districts in the corn belt have been sensational since the Government August report made its appearance.

On this a great deal of corn was bought and it was bought by the larger holders and bulls in the trade. December was quite strong and closed 1⅜c higher, and May was up a little over 1c. The big corn market was chock full of excited humanity, as many speculators left the other pits to try their luck in corn.

Wheat closed with gains of ⅛ to ½c and oats were up ⅛ to ⅜c.

Provisions were lower all around.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Plans for Erection of Sixteen-Story Bldg. At Whitehall and Ala.

Dr. E. L. Connally Consults Architects—United Cigar Stores May Take Brown & Allen Corner.

Announcement was made Tuesday of plans for a sixteen-story office building on the Brown & Allen site, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, a full account of which appears elsewhere. Dr. E. L. Connally owns the present building and will erect the new one.

This action will bring about some interesting changes, and may mean that Brown & Allen will move across the street to the place now occupied by Thomas H. Pitts, the tobacconist, and that the United Cigar Stores Company will be located where Brown & Allen now are.

The corner on which the building will stand is one of the busiest in Atlanta and brings a handsome rental.

List of 24 Exhibitors.

Success of the plan to exhibit Atlanta-made goods on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building seems to be assured. Already 24 merchants and manufacturers have signed up for space. They are the Whittier Mills Company, Marcus-Loeb & Co., Nunnally & McCrea, Southern Engraving Company, Frederick Disinfectant Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, E. Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, Southern Upholstering Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Southern Spring Bed Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper, Gholstin-Cunningham Company, All Star Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Norris, Inc., Willingham-Tift Lumber Company, Tripod Paint Company, J. P. Stevens Engraving Company, Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company, White Provision Company, Dowman-Dozier, Foote & Davies.

The plan of the committee has been to put so many "spaces" 10 feet square at the disposal of exhibitors.

Moving on Whitehall.

The Eugene V. Haynes jewelry establishment will move soon from No. 37 to No. 49 Whitehall street. The firm has renovated the latter place and Mr. Haynes has carried out many ideas of the jewelry business gained on trips abroad. Under the old lease this concern was paying $4,000 a year rental, but the owner of No. 37 Whitehall, A. B. Steele, asked $12,000. Unable to reach a compromise at $8,000 the jewelry concern announced that it would move. The change will take place about September 1. An up-to-date moving picture house, it is said, will occupy the old location.

Peachtree Creek Plans.

What can be done to reclaim or "renovate" Peachtree Creek? More than a hundred property owners would like to know. The County Commissioners have a plan to clear out the bed and remove driftwood from the banks. This, they believe, will prevent to a large extent the present overflow in the rainy season, and keep the low places free from standing water. Mosquitoes won't have a chance, and as for the sewage of former days it has been largely removed by the erection of the Peachtree Creek disposal plant.

Some time ago the sugestion was made that the creek be bridged over for a considerable distance. This plan met opposition from Eretus Rivers, who declared that the city and the county had so few streams of size that they should be left exposed to view.

The main permanent trouble with Peachtree Creek seems to be that it is muddy rather than clear. Were it a stream of sparkling water rather than a ditch carrying off Georgia red clay its possibilities would be unlimited. If it were a good stream in this sense the lowlands that now border it could be turned into attractive park spaces for present and future generations.

Spring Street Improvement.

Sooner or later there is going to be a big improvement on Spring street to make it as much as possible a help to Peachtree. The proposition to extend Spring northward to Brookwood has already been announced. It rests where many other good propositions rest, to be revived later when the need becomes greater than it is at present.

Now comes the suggestion that Spring street be turned slightly from its course as it strikes Carnegie way—that a slice be cut from the northeast corner of Cain street (the Governor's Mansion lot) and Spring street be connected up with Cone street, which now ends at Carnegie way, and extended across the railroad tracks by way of a concrete viaduct.

Cone street ends on the south at Marietta street and it is suggested that the street be continued. The viaduct would go straight until the tracks were crossed and then curve slightly to the left, or about due south, and land on Madison avenue, to serve the entire Terminal Station district.

This arrangement, it is pointed out, would make it possible for the viaduct to pass safely to the east of the W. & A. freight depot, and it would put a leading thoroughfare one block closer to the retail district than a viaduct which jumped from the foot of the present Spring street. Not only that, but a first-class, straight-line thoroughfare would be opened up for traffic that would otherwise use Peachtree, and travelers using the Terminal Station could reach their North Side homes much more quickly than by the circuitous route that it is now necessary to travel.

Legislators To Be Paid at Once; Sum Due Them $70,000

That the Georgia legislators will receive every penny of the money due them for their services in the present session of the General Assembly was indicated Tuesday morning following a conference between Governor Slaton and State Treasurer Speer.

The total amount which will be paid to the legislators for salaries and mileage will be $70,000.

State Treasurer Speer declared Tuesday the legislators would be paid in full, regardless of the depleted condition of the treasury, sufficient funds for this purpose being in hand.

A large part of the $70,000 has been paid to the legislators already.

Senate Passes Bill Limiting Militia's Use

Apparently weary from the strenuous campaign for tax revision which culminated in the passage of the substitute to the Shepard bill Monday night, Georgia Senators adjourned Tuesday at noon following the passage of two general bills by McGregor, of the Nineteenth, providing for a revision of the military laws of the State. The vote was 29 to 0. There was no debate.

The bills provide affidavits shall be made by civic authorities before request is made upon the Governor for troops in case of riot or insurrection, thereby decreasing the power of the civil authorities and increasing that of the executive. The measure, according to its supporters, aims to prevent riots between citizens and soldiers such as occurred in Augusta last year.

Tubercular Cattle Barred From State

An order designed to prevent the shipment of tubercular cattle into Georgia was issued Tuesday morning by Dr. Peter F. Balmsen, State Veterinarian, from the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. The order provides that all cattle originating in New York or Illinois, destined to any point in Georgia, must be accompanied by a certificate of health issued by a veterinary inspector of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The order goes into effect immediately.

Girl's Plea for Man Softens Policewoman

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Policewoman Alice Clement to-day was sorry she made an arrest. She was proud of the accomplishment in capturing a young man who insisted upon following her in the downtown streets.

But Miss Alice Brow, the young woman fiance, went to Policewoman Clement and pleaded that she recommend his release. Miss Brown, after several minutes' pleading, cried and then fainted.

When Policewoman Clement started to court to appear against Fred Bentley, 26, the young man she had arrested, she said: "I'm sorry I pinched him."

Parcel Post Stamps Going to Waste Here

The Atlanta postoffice has more than half a million parcel post stamps as a dead weight. Postmaster Hugh McKee has been instructed to sell them at once, but is having a hard job doing it.

Under an order which went into effect July 1 parcel post stamps were declared no longer necessary.

The parcel post stamps immediately fell into disuse, although they are of the same value as other stamps of the same denominations and can be used on all classes of matter.

POSSE SEARCHING FOR LEE SLAYER

South Georgia Farmer Shot Dead by Black He Attempted to Disarm.

LEESBURG, Aug. 12.—Searching parties to-day are scouring the country near this place in an effort to capture Doc Mathis, a negro, who shot and killed R. L. Jessey, a prominent Lee County farmer, last night.

Berry Wallace, a brother-in-law of Jossey, had a difficulty with Will Mathis, a son of the slayer, for beating a mule.

Returning from Leesburg in the automobile of Wallace, accompanied by several other men, a stop was made at the home of the negro, who, it was reported, had secured a rifle with which to avenge the whipping of his boy. It was the intention of the party to disarm the negro. They called to him and he came out, but returned to the house, saying: "Wait until I get my shoes."

Josey followed and told the negro to wait, but the negro shut and fastened the door. His son, Will Mathis, began firing at the party in the automobile from a window. Doc Mathis cracked the door open and fired at Jossey, the ball passing through the right breast.

Jossey's body was secured by the party and brought to Leesburg, where the posse was formed. The negroes in the meantime had escaped.

U. S. Peace Delegate To the Hague Is Dead

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 12.—The funeral of Judge U. M. Rose, member of The Hague Peace Conference, who died here to-day, will be held Thursday from the family residence. Judge Rose was one of the most distinguished members of the Southern bar and at one time was president of the American Bar Association. In 1905, following a visit of President Roosevelt to Little Rock, he was appointed a member of the International Peace Conference at The Hague.

Judge Rose was 79 years of age. His death was hastened by a recent fall, when he sustained a fractured arm.

Rain Halts Mercury As It Starts on Climb

A light shower shortly after noon Tuesday cooled the atmosphere and brought Atlanta relief from heat. The mercury in the official thermometer was forced from 88 degrees down to 78 in less than a half hour. The day started off with the thermometer registering 76 degrees.

Fair weather and cooler is predicted by Government Forecaster VonHerrmann.

Elopers Are Halted By Tifton Sheriff

TIFTON, Aug. 12.—Sheriff Shaw arrested Arthur Harrington, 17-year-old son of Deputy Sheriff R. M. Harrington, of Ocilla, in answer to a telephone message from the young man's father.

Harrington, with a Miss Smith, aged 16, of Ocilla, came to Tifton in an automobile intending to secure a license and get married. When they arrived here Harrington was taken in custody and held until his father came, when he was taken back to Ocilla.

Shirt a la Bulgarian Blouse Jails 2 Men

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., Aug. 12.—Two men were arrested here while strolling along the main thoroughfare wearing shirts hanging loose, a la Bulgarian blouse.

When asked for an explanation, the men said: "Women are wearing suspenders nowadays. Guess we can wear Bulgarian blouses if we want to."

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

Urges U. S. Ban on Alien Conspirators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, to-day introduced a bill aiming at the deportation of Mexicans in this country who may be stirring up trouble between the United States and Mexico.

His bill provides that any alien who shall take advantage of his residence in the United States to conspire for the overthrow of a foreign government in North or South America, with which this country is on friendly terms, shall be deported.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

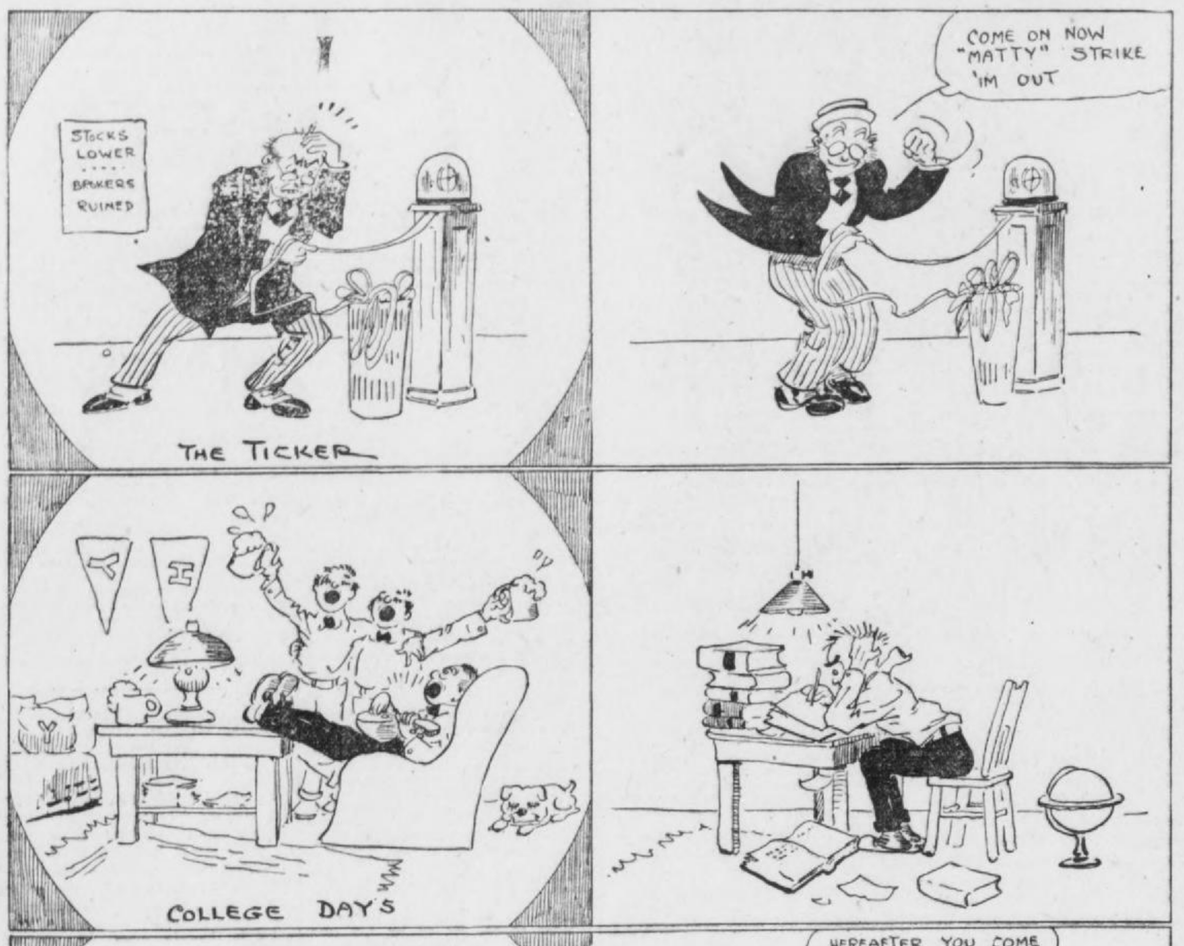

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

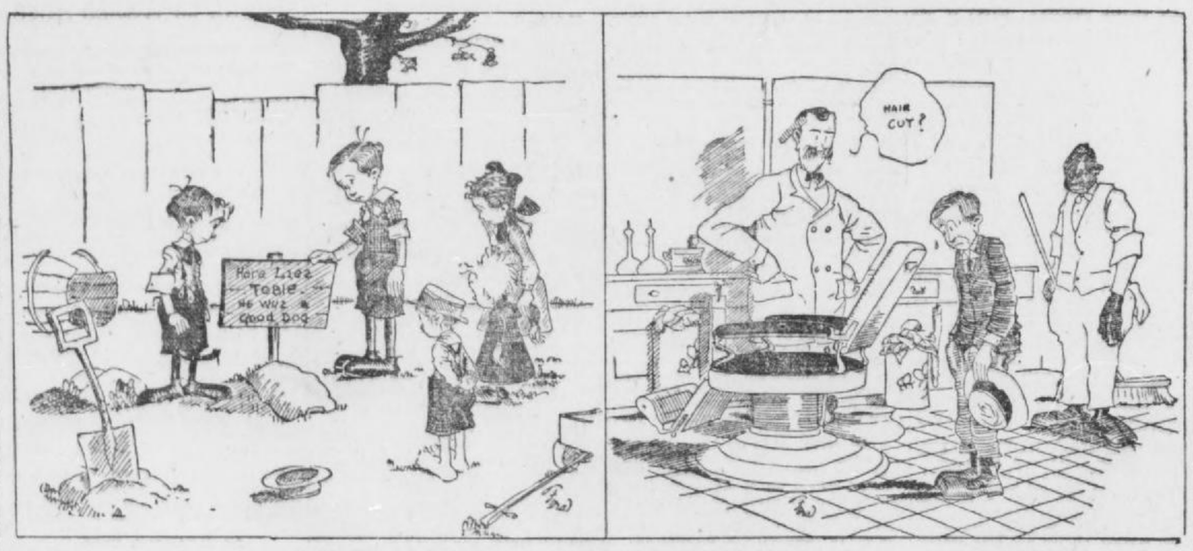

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

.:. Adam Smith .:.

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power.
Great love to that great hour.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY IS DENIED

Executive's Action Comes as the Supreme Court Reverses Ruling Favoring Father.

The Supreme Court Tuesday reversed the decision of Judge Hammond, of Augusta, awarding the two Zachry children to the father, thereby further complicating the sensational case in which requisition papers by Governor Cole Blease for Zachry were refused by Governor Slaton Tuesday morning.

According to the ruling of the Supreme Court, the decision awarding the children to the father is reversed and remanded to Judge Hammond's court for further hearing. The ruling further specifies that Judge Hammond may exercise his discretion in awarding the custody of the children, which is contrary to the opinion rendered by Judge Hammond, who held previously that he was forced to award the children to Zachry because of a previous judgment.

The effect of the ruling will be to put the whole matter back in the Augusta courts, with the possibility that Mrs. Zachry will be awarded the custody of the two children.

Governor Slaton based his refusal on the fact that no State law had been violated by Zachry in South Carolina and that the whole case was against the defendant grew out of the desire of Mrs. Zachry to obtain the custody of the two children.

One of the most spectacular fights for the extradition of a citizen ever recorded in Georgia occurred in the Governor's offices Monday. Charges and counter charges were hurled in turn by counsel for the defense and for the State of South Carolina, and at one time a personal mix-up between Attorney Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, and Attorney Phinizy, representing Mr. Zachry, who charged that the case had been prosecuted with all the "vindictiveness" that Mr. Dunbar could summon, was narrowly averted by the Governor.

Slaton Draws Line.

"You may wax just as enthusiastic as you like," said Governor Slaton to Mr. Phinizy, "but you can't say those things. That will not do here."

The hearing was as unique as it was spectacular. With the Governor sitting as both court and jury, attorneys for the defense and plaintiffs were allowed to argue their cases to their hearts' content with frequent interruptions by the Governor, who kept close tab on every bit of evidence offered.

In addition to the three attorneys for Zachry, Cohen and Phinizy, of Augusta, and West, of Thompson, E. D. Clary, Mayor of Harlem, the defendant's home town, testified in behalf of Zachry. Attorneys Rembert, of Columbia, S. C., and Dunbar, of Augusta, represented the State of South Carolina.

Mayor Clary, of Harlem, created a sensation when he testified that he had on one occasion pulled Mrs. Zachry and her mother off Zachry following an attack. Mrs. Zachry, he declared further, had said in his presence that if she did not get her children she would have to kill her husband.

Kidnaping Charge Irrelevant.

The climax of the hearing was reached, however, when the attorneys for Governor Blease virtually admitted to Governor Slaton that the charge of kidnaping, as incorporated in the requisition papers, was not relevant and that practically all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the custody of the two children.

In substantiation of the latter statement Governor Slaton referred to a letter which he himself had received from Mrs. Zachry, in which, he declared, it seemed that all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the children.

This testimony of the Governor and the startling admission of Attorney Rembert, representing Governor Blease, broke down the whole argument of the plaintiff and really marked the turning point in the hearing.

LATEST NEWS

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 12.—Governor Emmett O'Neal this afternoon appointed Congressman Henry D. Clayton to succeed the late Senator Joseph F. Johnston. Mr. Clayton has received his commission and will proceed immediately to Washington to take his seat in the Senate.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The shadow of another war in the Balkans hangs over Europe. Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, announced in the House of Commons to-day that if Turkey refuses to give up Adrianople at the insistence of Bulgaria, the powers will not be able to divert the consequences, "no matter what their character."

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The direct overture of the United States to the Huerta administration—the tender of American aid in the effort to restore peace in Mexico—is expected to be transmitted by Envoy Lind to the Mexican national palace within a few hours.

MILWAUKEE, WIS. Aug. 12. There will be no formal organization of a National Council of Catholic Women at the convention of the American Federation of Catholics this year. This was practically determined this forenoon at the prelimihary meeting of the women called to plan the perfecting of such a council.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 12.—The Ohio River is at the lowest stage in years as a result of the drouth, and coal shipments have suspended. Three million bushels of coal due for shipment south are tied up at Pittsburg.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—Eleanor Fay, who says Louis R. Glavis, of Ballinger case fame, is her fiance, tried to end her life by swallowing carbolic acid while on a ferry boat plying the bay. She asserted she was to wed Glavis soon.

Bill Providing Home For Wayward Girls Is Passed in House

The bill introduced in the House by Representatives Jones of Coweta and Mills of Butts County providing for a home for wayward girls to be called the "Georgia Industrial Home for Girls," carrying with it an appropriation of $30,000, was passed Tuesday after much discussion, by a vote of 115 to 46.

Twenty thousand dollars will be used as a building fund and the remaining $10,000 will be used as a maintenance fund. The bill met with bitter opposition by Fullbright of Burke County, who declared it was of no use, as the Senate would not act on the measure. The Speaker of the House informed the gentleman from Burke that he had received word from the President of the Senate that the Senate would consider it.

Shuptrine of Chatham made a motion to have the bill tabled. The motion was lost, 106 to 54. The bill also provides for a board of managers consisting of five members, two of which shall be women. Minor amendments to the bill were considered.

I. T. U. Officers May Serve Indefinitely

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Lynch, of the International Typographical Union, won another victory at the annual convention of the order to-day when the delegates sustained by an overwhelming vote the recommendation of the committee on laws that reported unfavorably on the proposition to make officers of the International Union ineligible to serve for more than two years. This proposition by Delegate Beadle, of Tacoma, Wash., was aimed particularly at President Lynch.

Car Hits House and Jars Man From Bed

MUNCIE, IND., Aug. 12.—Albert E. Needham, alone in his big three-story residence, was thrown from his bed and the house was pushed from its foundation by the impact of a heavy interurban car against one corner of the structure to-day. Three men were injured.

The car was being taken to the barn when it jumped the track on a curve, swung across the sidewalk and crashed into the house.

FATHER-IN-LAW SAYS FAMILY DID NOT TALK OF CRIME AT FACTORY

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

It is announced the state will call more than fifty witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's evidence.

State announces its theory that Frank planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan the day before she came to the factory for her money.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified that he had seen women in Frank's office, was shown up by the defense and admitted by Dalton.

Four acquaintances of Dalton testify that they would not believe him under oath and that his reputation for truth and veracity is bad.

C. E. Pollard, expert accountant, testifies that it required him three hours and eleven minutes to compile the financial sheet that the defense claims Frank prepared the afternoon of the murder.

Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer, says that Frank did no work on the financial sheet Saturday morning, the day of the crime.

Jim Conley's declaration that Lemmie Quinn came into the factory and left before the arrival of Monteen Stover, who came at 12:05 o'clock, is challenged by the testimony of Miss Hall, who swears Quinn did not enter the factory before she left at 12:02 o'clock.

Magnolia Kennedy, worker at the pencil factory, testifies she laid her hand and Helen Ferguson's shoulder when they drew their pay and that the girl did not ask for Mary Phagan's wages. She says Schiff paid off. Miss Kennedy says hair found in lathe looked like slain girl's.

Sinister intimations made by Solicitor Dorsey in questioning Will Chambers, a boy in the factory, who denies alleged conversations, are ordered ruled out.

Attorney Arnold threatens to move for a mistrial if any further intimations of this sort are allowed to be heard by the jury.

Minola McKnight, cook in the Frank household, gives evidence against that offered by her husband and declares detectives tried to make her swear to lies. She admitted she signed the affidavit reporting alleged conversations between Mrs. Frank and the prisoner, but insisted it was a lie and that she signed because the detectives threatened to lock her up if she did not.

Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman testified they saw Frank at the factory at 11:35 and left at 11:45. This seems like a strong blow at Jim Conley's story that Frank said to him, "Here comes Corinthia Hall and Emma Clark," when he told him to hide in the wardrobe after the murder—or about 1 o'clock.

However, while Conley swore to this in his third affidavit, after the discrepancy had been pointed out, he said on the stand he wasn't sure what Frank said.

Emil Selig, Frank's father-in-law, testifies to the prisoner's actions at home the day of the murder, and says they were in no way unusual. Several discrepancies in his story compared with his evidence before the coroner's jury are showed up.

Emil Selig, Leo Frank's father-in-law, wa scalled late Tuesdayafternoon to testify to the time Frank left and returned home at the various times on April 26, the day Mary Phagan was slain.

It was announced Tuesday afternoon that the State had subpoened between fifty and sixty witnesse to be on hand Wednesday in readiness to give rebuttal testimony as soon as the defense rests.

Selig was th efirst of the relatives of the accused to be called. Mrs. Selig followed her husband.

Selig declared that he did not see Frank leave Saturday morning, but said he at luncheon with Frank in the afternoon. Frank arrived home at 1:20, Selig testified, and had on him no scratches, bruises or marks of any kind. According to his recollection, Frank's demeanor was in no way unusual.

He said he ate with Frank, Mrs. Selig and Mrs. Frank, the women leaving the table a few minutes after Frank's arrival to attend the Grand Opera matinee.

Selig said that Frank returned at night about 8:30 and remained there the rest of the night, going to bed shortly after 10 o'clock.

Solicitor Dorsey gave the witness a grilling cross-examination and sought t oimpeach the testimony by reference to Selig's evidence before the Coroner's inquest.. The Solicitor wasable to find anumber of discrepancies. Three witnesses were called by the defense Tuesday afternoon, to discredit the story of Albert McKnight wh otestified the first week of the trial that he had seen Frank come home Saturdayafetrnoon at 1:30 o'clock, go hastily to the sideboard and then leave at once on his return to the factory.

C. W. Barnhart, an architect and contractor; Henry Wood, secretary of the County Board of Cimmissioners, and Julius Fischer, contractor and builder, were the other witnesses. All testified they had visited the Selig home at 68 East Georgia avenue, where Frank lives, and had found that no one could see what thenegro, Albert McKnight, described as seeing Saturday afternoon from where he says he sat.

Determined attempts by the State to introduce further evidence of the alleged degeneracy of Leo M. Frank were frustrated Tuesday afternoon by the protests and objections of Attorney Reuben Arnold.

"If any further effort is made to introduce such testimony, I shall move for a mistrial," declared Arnold to the court.

Solicitor Dorsey sought to get the testimony from Philip Chambers, a 15-year-old office boy who was in the pencil factory from last December until March. The Solicitor questioned the boy about alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, and the boy denied them. Arnold objected and all the questions along this line were ruled out. Dorsey said he would call Gantt in rebuttal.

The State definitely announced Tuesday its theory that Frank deliberately premeditated and planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan Friday, April 25, the day before she came to the factory and was slain.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, made the surprising announcement of the State's attitude during a heated argument over the admissibility of a portion of the testimony of one of the defense's witnesses, Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer at Montag Bros. and occasionally employed at the National Pencil Factory.

That the State was working upon the theory of premeditation was hinted by the questioning of Helen Ferguson several days ago but Attorney Hooper's address to the court was the first open declaration.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness against Frank, was given an airing by Attorney Arnold. Dalton was recalled to the stand and made to admit that he had been sent to the chaingang in 1894 on three separate counts for stealing in Walton County.

Dalton also admitted that he had been indicted in 1899 in Walton County for theft and had paid a fine of $141.46.

Attorney Arnold showed the witness copies of four indictments and asked if he knew these had been issued against him in Walton County for selling liquor to Don Tillman and Bob Harris. Dalton denied all knowledge of the indictments.

As soon as Dalton left the stand V. S. Cooper, J. H. Patrick, W. T. Mitchell and I. M. Patrick, all residents of Walton County, were called to the stand and testified that they knew Dalton and that they wouldn't believe him on oath in a court of justice.

Misses Laura Atkinson and Minnie Smith were called and denied Walton's testimony in regard to being in their company.

Dalton testified, when he was called by the State last week, that he had visited the factory basement with Miss Daisy Hopkins and that he frequently had seen Frank in his office with women.

An unassailable alibi was the object in view when the attorneys for Frank began the questioning of a long line of witnesses who were called to testify in regard to every known movement of Frank Saturday, April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was slain.

The testimony of Miss Hattie Hall was the first along this line. That of Alonzo Mann, office boy, was next.

That Frank did not do any work on the financial sheet Saturday forenoon was one of the most important declarations made by Miss Hall. She had testified at the Coroner's inquest that she assisted Frank in compiling this sheet, but she explained to Solicitor Dorsey that she was mistaken, and it was only one of the tabulations from which the financial sheet was being made that she had worked on.

Her testimony on this point strikes at the State's theory that Frank did the work in the forenoon.

Miss Hall also testified that Frank signified his desire to have her work for him at the factory in the afternoon and had asked Harry Gotheimer to come back to the factory in the afternoon, requests which the defense will claim establish conclusively that Frank was not arranging for the commission of any crime or wrongdoing Saturday afternoon.

The witness said that she left the factory first at 12 o'clock as the whistles were blowing, but that she forgot her umbrella and returned to Frank's office for it, noting that it was 12:02 as she left finally. She declared that she did not see Lemmie Quinn enter Frank's office. Conley testified that he saw Quinn enter the factory before the arrival of Monteen Stover or Mary Phagan. The Stover girl said she reached the office floor at 12:05 o'clock.

Miss Hall indignantly denied the imputation of Solicitor Dorsey that her salary had been raised as the result of the testimony she was giving. She said that it had been agreed when she entered the employ of Montag Bros. that she was to get an increase of salary August 1, and that she had been unable to get it before this time.

Wade Campbell, an inspector at the factory, came in for a rigorous grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. Campbell testified that his sister, Mrs. Arthur White, had told him she had seen a negro at the foot of the stairs on the first floor when she went into the factory at 12:30 o'clock.

Campbell Grilled On Affidavit.

"Don't you know that what she actually said was that she saw the negro at 12:50 when she left?" inquired the Solicitor.

Campbell denied that this was so. The Solicitor then showed Campbell an affidavit and asked if it was not his signature at the bottom. Campbell said that it looked like his writing, but that he would not say positively. He denied that he had made the statement in the affidavit in which he was quoted as saying his sister had told of seeing the negro as she left the factory.

The witness on his redirect examination testified that he had seen Conley reading in the factory several times after the crime. Conley said on the stand that he was unable to read, except for a few simple words.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

Over Three Hours To Compile Report.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant.

Q. Have you had occasion to go over the financial sheet of the National Pencil Company of the week of April 24 prepared by Leo M. Frank? A. I went over a copy of it.

Q. Have you also seen the factory record called the pencil sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you also furnished data necessary to make that sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state as an expert how long it would take to complete it?—A. I took each sheet, compiled it, and timed myself as to the length of time necessary. I prepared the sheet of the 24th day. It took me ten minutes.

Q. Were there any mistakes?—A. Yes, a little one—of one and one-half gross. It was hard to say whether it was my mistake or his.

Q. Now state the total time it took you?—A. A total of 191 minutes, or 3 hours and 11 minutes.

Q. Was that the quickest?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you took exactly the work that he did?—A. Yes; what I was told he did.

Q. That was steady work without interruption, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been an auditor?—A. Sixteen years.

Q. Have you an office here?—A. I am with the American Audit Company.

Q. That mistake occurred before you took up the sheet, did it not?—A. One mistake was made the Saturday before and one on Friday.

Q. Are those two trifling mistakes—a mistake of 50 cents and a gross and a half of pencils—the only mistakes you found?—A. Yes.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Pollard, this is rather an unusual assignment for you, is it not, to go over a man's business and undertake to state how long it takes him to do it?—A. No, I think not. Frequently we are called on to estimate the time it takes to do work in changing systems.

Q. Is it not true that a man can work his own books better than anyone else's books?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. How many times would a man have to multiply, divide and subtract in making up that sheet?—A. Well, 40 multiplications and 160 additions, and I can't guess on the rest.

Aimed to Show Conduct.

The witness was excused and Miss Hattie Hall was called. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Q. What is your business?—A. Stenographer-bookkeeper at Montag Brothers.

Q. Do you ever go to the National Pencil Company?—A. When necessary.

Q. On Saturday, April 26, did you see Leo M. Frank?—A. About 10 o'clock at Montag Brothers.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he asked me if I could come over and do some work. I told him I didn't know, but thought I could.

Dorsey interrupted:

"I object to anything he said to her."

Arnold: "Your honor, it is part of res gestis in this case."

Dorsey: "Here is this dead girl. They would not let her show what she said at 12 o'clock and I can conceive of no principle of law that would let them show what this man said and not let her show what the deceased said."

Arnold: "This is merely to show a course of conduct."

Judge Roan: "I can see no analogy between the two cases. I rather think you can ask the question."

Dorsey: "Well, this is a very important point, your honor, and we would like to give you some authorities."

Judge Roan: "All right."

Dorsey then read at length from the Eighty-fourth Georgia Report.

Judge Roan: "Do you expect to follow that question by showing that he had certain work to do and engaged her to do it?"

Arnold: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I will let you ask it."

Dorsey threw his book on the table and sat down, laughing. Arnold continued the questioning.

Q. When did you call him first?—A. He called me up before 10 o'clock and said he had work enough to do to keep him busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey: "Is your honor going to let that telephone conversation in?"

The Solicitor's objection was overruled.

Q. Miss Hall, did you recognize his voice?—A. I certainly did.

Q. What time did you see him that Saturday morning?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Had you worked for him before?—A. I had been accustomed to going over and helping him on Saturdays. I asked him if he was going to need me. He said, "Yes," that he had so much work to do that he would be busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey Calls Halt; Roan Sustains Him.

Dorsey interrupted. "You honor, are you going to let that in?"

Judge Roan: "I don't think I will."

Arnold: "Your honor, I wish you would let me argue for a moment. Even the State does not claim any crime was committed at that time. There is no reason in the world to suppose that the accused would not have told the truth at that time. I believe that if a part of the conversation is admissible, all of it is admissible. You must admit it all to explain part. You would do this young man an injustice to shut out this evidence of this day's program, when there was not the slightest motive to be otherwise than truthful."

"Mr. Dorsey has sought to show," continued Mr. Arnold, "that this financial sheet could have been made up in the morning. We are just trying to show that it was impossible. Now I will read you a decision in which I participated with the father of my good friend, the late Judge Dorsey. It was 24 years ago."

Rosser: "Are you that old, Mr. Arnold?"

Arnold: "Yes, I am 24."

"Dorsey: "That case has nothing to do with this one. That was a case where a man on trial for murder swore to a lie."

Arnold: "It was charged that it was a lie. We never did believe it."

Dorsey: "He was convicted."

Arnold: "Yes, he was convicted."

Judge Roan ruled: "Mr. Arnold, this young woman can show that she was called, what she was requested to do, and what was shown her to be done. She can state how long she thinks it would take to finish that work. She can not state, however, what he told her over the telephone about what he expected to do."

Frank Leaves Court With Sheriff.

Arnold: "We want to note an exception to that."

Q. Miss Hall, what time did you go to Mr. Frank's office?—A. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock.

Q. Did you take dictation in his inner office, or in his outer office?—A. In the inner office.

Q. Where did you write it?—A. In the outer office.

At this point Leo Frank went out of the courtroom with Sheriff Mangum. Mr. Hooper jumped up and whispered to Mr. Arnold.

Arnold—Yes, I waived his presence.

Judge Roan—I excused the prisoner properly.

Hooper—I just wanted to know if the defense had waived his presence.

Q. Now, we only have ten orders here. See if they are the ones Frank handed you?—A. Yes. My initials are on them. They are the ones.

Q. Now, the orders are sometimes acknowledged as the first step?—A. Yes; in that case they were.

Q. Do you recall to whom Frank was talking that morning?—A. Yes, but I don't recall the names. A man and his son came in. Then there was Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. White.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. During this time was Mr. Frank working on this financial sheet or any other similar document?—A. He was not.

Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?—A. Not very.

Q. I will get you to look on this order book and see if those orders are entered.

The wintess read the eleven orders from the order book.

Q. Now, is that your handwriting?—A. No; I think it is Mr. Frank's.

Q Did you write any of these requisitions?—A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I understood Mr. Frank did.

Q. Were the requisitions made before or after the orders were put on the book?—A. After.

Left Factory At 12:02 P. M.

Q. Now look at these letters and see whether Frank dictated them?—A. Yes.

Q. How many?—A. Eight, and one he did not dictate.

Q. Did he sign them?—A. Yes, I took them to him after I had typed them.

Q. Did he do any work on that financial sheet while you were there?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Just as I got on my hat and started for the door I heard the whistle blow for noon.

Q. Is there a regular whistle that blows for 12 o'clock?—A. Yes, there are several whistles.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I got to the bottom of the steps and remembered that I had forgotten my umbrella. I went back and got it. It was two minutes past 12 o'clock as I passed the time clock.

Q. Did you see any little girl in the building?—A. I did not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you call Frank or Frank call you that Saturday morning?—A. I called him.

Q. He had a regular stenographer, didn't he?—A. They had a stenographer, but she didn't do but about one-third enough work so I had to go.

Q. Miss Hall, what were you receiving at that time?—A. Ten dollars and fifty cents a week.

Q. What are you getting now?—A. Fifteen dollars a week, and I want to explain——

Q. Never mind, just answer my questions. Didn't you state in a soda fountain last night that the raise came to you without asking for it after it was known that you were to be a witness?—A. Indeed, I did not. I don't go to soda fountains. I want to explain.

Attorney Arnold—Let her explain. A. I insisted that they give me this raise on July 1, but they wouldn't give it to me until August 1.

Q. Did Frank come to Montag's before or after he called you up?—A. After.

Q. You are the one who called him up?—A. Yes.

Q. You did the insisting about going to his office?—A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you not swear at the Coroner's inquest that Frank left Montag's before you did?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. You acknowledged these orders with a postcard and letter?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote those between 10:30 and 12?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you state to the jury Frank left before you did?—A. I don't recall.

Q. How long would it take you to fill out the blank?—A. I never timed myself.

Talked Over Time With Office Boy

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would not take more than one minute?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you say Frank was at the office when you got there?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. Who came in while you were there?—A. Two men and three women.

Q. What time was the office boy left?—A. 11:30.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner you could not tell the time?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you know now?—A. The boy told me.

Q. You talked it over with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when those people came in?—A. In the outer office.

Q. How long were you there when these people came in?—A. I do not recall.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner it was fifteen minutes?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How long was it after those let-

FRANK TRIAL WITNESS IS SURE, AT LEAST, OF ONE THING--A 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen, and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over!

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister," more than once—after that, it merely is "You, Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney: "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hang around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-hump-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes "hoot," doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you, speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejaculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise, let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record exerything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?"

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

The Grand Climax.

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Augusta to Share Crop-Moving Fund

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—Albert S. Hatch, president of the Merchants' Bank and a member of the committee of the Augusta Clearing House Association, sent to Washington to confer with Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department, in regard to money with which to move the crops, has returned and announces that Augusta spoke for $600,000, which she will get if she wants it. Hatch said Augusta could have probably gotten more had she asked for it.

Georgia J. O. U. A. M. In Session at Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The nineteenth biennial convention of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics met here to-day with about 150 delegates, representing the various councils in the State, in attendance.

It is probable that the next meeting will go to Athens, and that Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected councilor to succeed Judge W. W. Shepard, of Savannah. O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, state treasurer, is assured of re-election.

Extra Police to Curb Thieves Bryan Day

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 12.—Expecting an unusual representation of pickpockets when William J. Bryan makes his chautauqua address here, August 28, the borough fathers, at their regular monthly council meeting, have taken decided action.

Secretary Williams was directed to ask Superintendent Groome to have the State constabulary here on Bryan day. The occasion is expected to draw a larger crowd than any circus day in the last 25 years.

900 Young Women Ask to Join Army

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—The War Minister has received a petition from 900 young Frenchwomen who ask to be allowed to join the army in the auxiliary services.

They declare they are prepared to submit absolutely to military discipline, adding that their dearest hope is to consecrate part of their youth to France, and thus co-operate with their brethren in the national defense.

Attacks on Dr. Harris Give Defense Good Day

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

"No man in the world could examine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of his profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor. His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.
"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled. Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga.—"My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

RESIDENTS OF DALTON'S HOME COUNTY RIDDLE HIS CHARACTER ON STAND

ters were dictated that you commenced writing?—A. Two minutes.

Q. Can you tell how long you were writing those letters?—A. No.

Q. When you were writing those letters, where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. After you finished, what did he do?—A. I took them in to him.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. He said he would put them in the envelopes and mail them.

Q. He said you need not wait?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get anything there Monday?—A. I got the timebook and some papers.

Q. The previous Saturday when you were over there, do you remember Frank working on the financial sheet that morning?—A. No; I helped him get up something about gross—I found afterward it was the average sheet.

made it up. I helped him by transferring some of the things to the sheet?"—A. Yes, but I thought it was the financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you state at the coroner's inquest that you helped him the Saturday before?—A. Yes.

Found Her Error Herself, She Says.

Q.When was it you discovered it was not the financial sheet?—A. I don't know, but I want you to know I discovered the mistake myself.

Q. Now, were you not at the factory the previous Saturday and helped him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not have that financial sheet before you at the Coroner's inquest, and did you not identify it?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you said he was working on the financial sheet that previous morning?—A. He was not.

Q. Did you not tell the Coroner's jury that you were in the outer office the entire time?—A. I don't know.

Q. Now explain how your mind underwent this change. You said then you were not in his office and now you say you were.—A. I was rattled before the Coroner, because I had never been in a courtroom before.

Q. Now, didn't you say in response to the question, "Do you know what a financial sheet is?" that you did?—A. But I was thinking of the average sheet.

Q. Now, what did you mean by telling the Coroner some of those girls came in for their pay and now saying the only one you know anything about came in for her coat?—A. I just forgot.

Q. Now, didn't Frank say that morning that he would not get up that sheet until Herbert Schiff came down and got up the necessary data?—A. Yes, he said he could not go on with his work until Schiff came down.

Q. You do know that Frank said positively he could not make up that sheet until Schiff had gotten up certain data?—A. He did not positively say so. He said he did not mind Mr. Schiff being off if he had done his work, but that he had not done his work.

Q. Miss Hall, didn't you swear before the Coroner's jury that you worked on this financial sheet which is written in ink the Saturday previous, and now to-day you swear it was this sheet which is written in pencil?—A. I did not. I was identifying the handwriting on that sheet.

Q. You said lots of people wrote slanting, and it was hard to identify?—A. Yes.

Q. While you were working in Frank's outer office, you said he was very quiet and you did not know what he was doing?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether he was working on the financial sheet or not?—A. Yes; I saw the papers on his desk that he was working on, and the financial sheet was not among them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Why did you tell Mr. Frank you had to get away at 12 o'clock?—A. He said something about wanting me to help him in the afternoon. I told him I had to get away at 12 o'clock, and I did get away at 12 o'clock.

Dalton's Prison Record Exposed.

Dorsey objected to the answer, but was overruled.

Miss Hall was excused and C. B. Dalton was recalled to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Who is Andrew Dalton?—A. A brother-in-law.

Q. With the same name?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is John Dalton?—A. He is my brother.

Q. Weren't you three sent to the chaingang at the special term of the Walton County Superior Court in 1894?—A. No.

Q. You were not?—A. I was, but the others paid out.

Q. What did you steal?—A. A chop hammer.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to two more charges?—A. That is the only time I ever went to the chaingang. I don't know how long I served, but I was pardoned in March.

Attorney Arnold moved that the witness' reply in reference to being pardoned be struck from the records.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to three charges all at the same time? And that the sentence was concurrent on the three charges?—A. All I took was a chop hammer. One of the other boys took a plow stock.

Q. At the February term of 1899, were you not indicted for stealing a bale of cotton?—A. For helping.

Q. Were you found guilty?—A. I was fined $146, which I paid.

Q. After that, did you not go into Gwinnett County and steal?—A. I was indicted for stealing some corn, but I was found not guilty.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long since you were in trouble?—A. Eighteen years.

Dorsey to Recall Daisy Hopkins.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is it not a fact that there are now four indictments against you in Walton County for selling liquor?—A. If there are I don't know it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they let you get out of the county and were glad to get rid of you?—A. I have been back there every year.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know that Daisy Hopkins knows Leo Frank?—A. I do.

Q. How do you know?—A. She told me she knew him, and then I saw her talking to him.

Arnold interrupted: "I object to what she said."

"That's all right, then," Dorsey replied. "I will recall her."

Dalton was excused and the defense began an attack on his character with witnesses from Walton County.

B. S. Cooper, the first witness called, was accompanied by a small boy of 6. He held the boy on his lap while he testified on the witness stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A farmer.

Q. How long have you been in Walton County?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

Wouldn't Believe Him Under Oath.

At this point C. B. Dalton was called for but could not be found. Dorsey said he would admit that the witness was speaking of the Dalton who had testified against Frank. Hooper was excused and J. H. Patrick was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. In Walton County.

Q. What do you do?—A. Carpenter and bailiff.

Q. Have you seen Dalton here this morning?—A. I shook hands with him.

Q. Do you know his general character for truth and veracity and is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and W. T. Mitchell was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him this morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Mrs. Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, Atlanta, a woman apparently 35 years of age, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the Empire Printing Company.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, for two days.

Denies Dalton's Story of Strolls.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever walk home with him from the Busy Bee Cafe on Forsyth street?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you ever with him around the National Pencil Company?—

Dorsey interrupted: "I object," he said. "The witness said nothing that reflected on this woman."

Arnold: "It was a reflection for him to say that he was with her."

The objection was sustained.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long have you known Dalton?—A. About six months.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. I have been in his company three times.

The witness was excused, and Mrs. Minnie Smith called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. National Pencil Company.

Q. Are you the Mrs. Smith who lives at No. 148 South Pryor street?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the only Mrs. Smith at that address?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. No.

The witness was excused. Alonzo Mann, the office boy at the National Pencil Factory, was then called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company as an office boy.

Q. How long have you been there?—A. Since April 1 of this year.

Q. Where do you stay when you are not at work?—A. Right outside the office.

Left Frank and Miss Hall in Office.

Q. How late do you work on Saturdays?—A. I had only been there two Saturdays before the murder.

Q. You don't know how late you stayed?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave the office Memorial Day?—A. At 11:30.

Q. Who did you leave there?—A. Miss Hall and Mr. Frank.

Q. Do you recall what you did that morning?—A. No.

Q. Did you phone Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes. Mr. Frank told me to, but I could not get him

Q. How late did you stay those other Saturdays?—A. 3:30 to 4 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank bring any women there and buy them drinks?—A. No.

Q. Who do you recall seeing there that day?—A. Mr. Holliday, Mr. Irby, Mr. McCrary and Mr. Darley.

Q. Can you recall anybody else?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Corinthia Hall?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you see a man come in to see about his boy?—A. I don't know.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. What time did Mr. Frank get there that morning?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did he go out?—A. One time, as I recall.

Q. Do you know how long he was gone?—A. No, I can't remember.

The witness was excused and Wade Campbell was called.

Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where are you employed?—A. I have been at the National Pencil Company for a year and a half.

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Mrs. White the Monday following the murder?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me what she said?—A. She said that as she went into the factory at 12 o'clock she saw a negro sitting there. She said that when she came down he was not there, and she heard voices, but could not tell where.

Q. Were you at the factory Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. About 9:35.

Q. Did you see Frank?—A. Yes; I went right to his office.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes; I was jollying him and he was jollying me.

Q. Were you on the fourth floor Tuesday morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley up there?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you board with Mr. Darley?—A. I did.

Q. Where were you Saturday night of the murder?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you go to the Bijou that night with Mr. Darley?

"I object," said Rosser.

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Darley is a married man with five children, is he not?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Miss Dixon that night?

Rosser—I object.

Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. You reported to Darley on April 28 that your sister had seen a negro in the pencil factory on Saturday, about 10 o'clock?—A. Yes; he sent me to see my sister.

Q. What did she tell you?—A. She said she saw a negro man on the first floor. She said she heard some indistinct voices as she went in.

Q. You saw that blood on the second floor?—A. I saw what they said was blood.

Q. How did it look?—A. I didn't notice it close enough to tell about it

Grilled Concerning Statement to Dorsey.

Q. Where do you work?—A. As an inspector at the National Pencil Company.

Q. You made a statement on May 12?—A. I made a statement to you, I don't remember the date.

Q. Didn't you state that your sister said she saw the negro as she was coming out?—A. I did not.

Q. You deny it, then?—A. I do.

Q. Is this your signature?—A. It looks very much like it.

Q. You can't swear that this is your signature?—A. No, I would not swear it.

Q. You say that you don't know whether that is your signature?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you deny making this statement?—A. I told you I did.

Q. Did you not read over this statement and make certain corrections?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not say in this statement that your sister went there at 12:30 and could not see her husband and went back?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. How did you come to go to Dorsey's office?—A. I received a subpena.

Q. You thought you had to go?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you know that it was not worth the paper it was written on?—A. No.

Wanted To See Corrections Made.

Q. Did you just point out these corrections, or did you wait and see that they were made?—A. I think I waited.

Q. Who was there?—A. Starnes, Campbell and Dorsey.

Q. Did they all ask you questions?—A. Yes.

Q. All of these 21 pages are your statement?—A. Yes.

Q. You were asked all of these questions?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you asked at the time you were in the office if anyone came in and did you answer "No"?—A. Yes.

Q. You answered that someone came in to get their pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know this negro Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. After this murder do you recall seeing him reading newspapers?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the fourth floor.

Q. How many times?—A. Twice.

Q. Is it anything unusual to see spots on the metal room floor?—A. No.

Q. Have you seen the place where Conley said he found the body?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Where was Conley sitting when he was reading the paper?—A. By the elevator.

Q. Where was he the second time?—A. In the rear of the building.

Q. What paper was he reading?—A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he was reading about the crime?—A. No.

Q. Was it an extra?—A. I think so.

Q. You knew Conley could write?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not report it to the officers?—A. No.

Q. Did Frank know he could write?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you see him writing?—A. In the boxroom.

Q. Did you ever see him writing with a pencil?—A. Yes.

Q. Who did you tell what your sister told you?—A. Mr. Darley.

Q. How often did you see those spots in the metal room?—A. Occasionally.

Q. How often have you seen those spots in the hall?—A. Oh, very often.

Q. Did you see the spots where those chips were taken up?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw those spots everywhere, what everybody said was blood, and yet you tell the jury you didn't pay any attention to it?—A. Yes.

Q. Other people got down and looked at them, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Rosser interrupted.

"I object to what other people said and saw. It is utterly immaterial and irrelevant," he said.

"We want to show," said Mr. Hooper, interrupting, "that this man was interested and that he went out to see his sister about the negro, and yet he came back there and was in no way interested."

"I think you can ask questions along that line," said the court.

"Well, we want to record an objection," said Rosser.

Q. Where and when have you ever seen on that second floor anything that looked like that spot?—A. I did not look close enough at it to know.

Q. When did you see other spots like it on the floor of the metal room?—A. There were other spots, but I don't know whether they were like that spot or not.

Q. Did you talk to your brother-in-law about what your sister said?—A. He told me about it.

Court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Says Girl Didn't Ask For Mary Phagan's Pay.

When court convened at 2 o'clock the defense called for Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy at the National Pencil Factory, but he did not answer. Philip Chambers was also called, but failed to respond.

Miss Magnolia Kennedy, one of the pencil factory employees in the metal department, was then called and took the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company.

Q. How long have you worked there?—A. Four years.

Q. In what department did you work?—A. In the metal department.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Helen Ferguson?—A. Yes.

Q. On the day before April 26, did you draw your pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you draw it?—A. From Mr. Schiff at the pay window.

Q. Did you see Helen Ferguson? A. I had my hand on her shoulder when she got her money.

Q. Was Mr. Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ask for Mary Phagan's pay?—A. No.

Q. Did you go out with her?—A. Yes. We went downstairs and waited for Grace Hix.

Q. Did Helen Ferguson ever say anything about Mary's pay?—A. She said at 5 o'clock that Mary was not there.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Were you at the factory April 28?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find any hair on that lathing machine?—A. Yes.

Q. Whose was it?—A. It looked like Mary's.

Mary and Ferguson Girl Companions.

Q. You and Mary and Grace Hix were the only girls in that department, were you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did Mary's hair look?—A. It was light.

Q. You don't mean to say you were with Helen all that afternoon?—A. No.

Q. She and Mary were friends and went together all the time, did they not?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't know what she did when you were not with her, do you?—A. No.

Q. You saw those spots on the floor, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did they look?—A. There were white stains all over them.

Q. How large?—A. About as large as that piece of paper, eight by ten inches.

Q. Did you ever notice any spots on the second floor like the one pointed out and said to be blood?—A. No, I never did.

Q. And you have been there four years?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. You told Mr. Dorsey you thought that was Mary Phagan's hair on the lathe. You don't know that it was Mary Phagan's haid, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You went with Helen Ferguson to get your pay that Friday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her speak to Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Was there any necessity for her to see Mr. Frank when Mr. Schiff was at the pay window?—A. No.

Negro Elevator Boy on Stand.

Miss Kennedy was excused and Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy, took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where did you work in April of this year, Snowball?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. On the Friday before Memorial Day did you see Jim Conley talking to Mr. Frank and hear Mr. Frank ask him to come back Saturday?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear Mr. Frank tell Jim to come back?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank bring any women there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Conley watching at that lower door?—A. No.

Q. Were you at the factory last Thanksgiving Day?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever see Conley reading a newspaper?—A. I saw him looking at papers down there at the station house.

Q. You don't know wether he was reading or not?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank make any improper proposal to any lady in that factory?—A. No.

Q. You never saw Mr. Frank talking to Conley at any time, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank at all, Friday?—A. I saw him about 1 o'clock. He was talking to Mr. Schiff.

Dorsey took the witness on the cross-examination.

Q. Snowball, when were you arrested?—A. Monday.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank before you were arrested?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he?—A. On the second floor.

Q. What was he doing?—A. I don't know.

The negro was excused and Phillip Chambers, a boy 14 years old, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes.

Q. Where and in what capacity?—A. I went there in December and stayed until March.

Q. How late did you stay on Saturdays?—A. Until about 4:30 o'clock.

Q. Were you ever absent on Saturdays during the months you were there?—A. Between 11 and 12 o'clock I was sometimes sent to the Bell street plant to get the payrool.

Q. Did you ever see any women around Mr. Frank's office with beer and drinks?—A. His wife came up there once while I was there. She was the only one I ever saw.

Q. Did you ever see Jim Conley around there?—A. Yes. He was around there sweeping, sometimes.

Q. What time?—A. Saturday afternoons.

Q. Didn't Mr. Holloway issue an order that no more sweeping should be done Saturday afternoons?—A. Mr. Darley did.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You and Frank were pretty good friends ,were you not?—A. Just like other folks.

The State here referred to several alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, along the lines of Jim Conley's most sinister testimony which the boy denied and Attorney Arnold moved that it all be stricken out.

Dorsey arose to speak, but Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "are we going to allow a speech before the jury on this subject?"

Judge Roan: "Take the jury out."

Arnold: "Never mind, let them stay." The jury remained.

Solicitor Dorsey: "Your Honor, they have gone into the question of Frank's relations to women. We have a right to show if there was anything improper towards this boy. He denies it. I am laying the ground to impeach him by Gantt."

Judge Roan: "I rule out both questions and answers."

Defense Threatens to Move for a Mistrial.

Arnold. "It is the unfairest thing I have ever heard of, brought in in this illegal way. It has been brought up by this miserable negro. It is beyond indignation to sit here and listen to such stuff. The charge could be brought against you or me or any member of the jury by such inuendos if it comes up again I am going to move for a mistrial."

Judge Roan: "I have already ruled it out."

Dorsey: "Well, we will put up Gantt and let you rule on that."

The witness was excused and Minola McKnight, the cook at the Selig residence, was put on the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Were you working with Mrs. Selig last Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. and Mrs. Frank live with Mr. and Mrs. Selig?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was their room?—A. Upstairs

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank the morning of April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did he get his breakfast?—A. About 8.

Q. Did you see him again that day?—A. Yes, about 1:20.

Q. When he came home to dinner?—A. Yes.

Q. Was Albert McKnight there in the kitchen that day?—A. He was not.

Q. Could you see in that mirror in the dining room from the kitchen?—A. No.

Q. Do you recall what time he left after dinner?—A. Sometime after 2 o'clock.

Says She Made False Statement.

Q. What time did he return?—A. About 6:30 o'clock.

Q. You left him there?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you see him again?—A. Sunday, I don't know what time.

Q. Did the detectives come and arrest you?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did they take you?—A. Over on Central avenue.

Q. To the Thrower Building?—A. Yes.

Q. Was this man Dorsey there?—A. Yes.

Q. And these two detectives?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. My husband.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said I told my husband things and tried to make me say I had. I told them it was all lies, but they would not listen to me.

Q. What was your husband trying to get you to tell these detectives?—A. That Miss Lucille was telling her mother Sunday morning that Mr. Frank had made her get out of bed.

Q. What did you tell them?—A. That it was a lie.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said they would put me in jail, and they carried me out and put me in the patrol wagon.

Q. Put you in the patrol wagon? What did they ddo next?—A. They had me in a hole and I signed a paper to get away.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Minola, you made a statement May 3 in my office before this visit you were speaking about. Is not this the statement you made: "I was at the Frank home Saturday, April 26. Frank came there at about 1 o'clock. He did not seem to want to go back to work and stayed there until 3 o'clock?"

The negro woman interrupted Solicitor Dorsey at this point to say she said 2 instead of 3 o'clock.

Q. Before June 2 Mr. Pickett and Mr. Graves, of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, were out to see

NURSES' CLUB TO THROW OPEN NEW HOME

Informal Reception Arranged for Tuesday Afternoon and Evening in Permanent Quarters.

The Atlanta Registered Nurses' Association will formally open its new home in the Herbert Apartments, No. 246 Courtland avenue, Wednesday afternoon with an informal reception. The entertainment will continue into the evening hours.

Several months ago the registered nurses organized a permanent club to establish a central directory and eventually to secure and maintain a nurses' home. The membership includes over 100 graduate nurses who will, as a body, seek to protect the public and promote good fellowship among the members. The home has been comfortablye furnished and will accommodate twenty nurses.

The registered nurses have federated with the City Federation. The association has as its president Miss Kamesky; first vice president, Miss Berta Thompson; second vice president, Miss Caroline Norton; recording secretary; Miss Florence Attwell corresponding secretary Miss J. M. Candlish; treasurer, Miss Mamie Mobley, and auditor, Miss E. F. Tupman.

The committee work has been divided as follows: Membership, Miss Frances Patton, chairman; register, Miss Alberta Dozier, chairman; nominations, Miss E. B. Whatley, chairman; home, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, chairman; auditing, Miss E. F. Tupman, chairman; publicity, Miss C. M. Johnson, chairman, and Miss Virginia Gibbs. The registrar will be Mrs. Theodosia Wardell.

The advisory board is composed of the following: Dr. Charles Boynton, Dr. William Perrin Nicolson, Dr. C. W. Summerall, J. B. Paulin, Dr. C. W. Strickler, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Fred Hodgson, Mrs. W. L. Peel and Mrs. H. E. W. Palmer.

The association has sent out hundreds of invitations and will be assisted in receiving by the advisory board, the officers of the association and the following superintendents of the hospitals of Atlanta: Miss Phebeck, of Grady Hospital; Miss McGlynn, of the Noble Sanitarium; Miss Morton, of the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium; Miss Morgan, of the Tabernacle Infirmary; Miss Thomas, of the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium, and Miss Albert Dozier, Miss J. M. Candlish, Miss Virginia Gibbs, Miss Mamie Mobley, Miss E. B. Whatley, Miss G. S. Tupman, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg and Miss C. M. Johnson.

Italy Adds to Its Seacoast Guard

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 12.—Thirteen new torpedo boat destroyers have been ordered by the Italian Admiralty, it was learned to-day.

This addition to the navy is made necessary by the extension of seacoast which Italy must guard in Africa.

GILMER TO ELECT SHERIFF.

ELLIJAY.—Sheriff J. H. Penland, of Gilmer County, having been appointed a United States Deputy Marshal and having resigned the office of Sheriff, the Ordinary has called a special election for August 28 to fill the unexpired term. Ex-Sheriff Bob Milton and J. H. Ray, present Tax Receiver, are the opposing candidates.

THERE HAS BEEN NO DULL SEASON OVER OUR LINES

Economy and efficiency are so combined in the Atlanta Telephone service that business houses which use both systems instruct their employees to route all possible calls by preference through our exchange.

No Hostile Feeling Shown Envoy Lind

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy sent a reassuring note to President Wilson to-day, saying not the slightest antagonism to Mr. Lind's presence has been shown in Mexico City.

LIND CAUTIOUSLY HUNTS KEY TO SITUATION

Studies Conditions in Mexico While Administration Awaits Report Before Planning.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent to Mexico City by President Wilson, is making himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Mexico. The watchword of the present situation is caution, as Mr. Lind and the attaches of the United States Embassy fear that a hasty step will cause complete failure of the Ambassador's mission.

It was reported that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, had contrived to arrange an official visit at the National Palace to-day. It was assumed that he might then present to President Huerta or Foreign Minister Aldape the note given him by Envoy Lind.

Mr. Lind called at the embassy again to-day. He refuses to say anything about his instructions from Washington.

Hostile Acts Are Lacking.

To the layman it seems that the Mexican situation is standing still rather than showing improvement, although to official eyes the lack of any direct hostile action by Mexico or Mexicans is a good omen. The Mexican people are apathetic and conservatives believe that President Huerta virtually stood alone in his defiance of the United States. However, allowance is made for the Latin temperament. If anti-American feeling flares up on a grand scale, it may sweep the republic.

Claiming the Government has been misrepresented, President Huerta has placed a strict censorship upon the cable line. Even telegrams to the United States State Department pass under this careful inquiry.

N. A. Jennings, correspondent for the Hearst papers, and Marvin Ferree, another American newspaper man, released from prison last night after being detained 24 hours, were kept under close surveillance to-day. Both feared they would be expelled under the undesirable alien law.

Embassy Guard Declined.

The arrival at Vera Cruz of more United States warships has caused bitter comment in the Mexican press. The commandante of the rurales has offered to provide a permanent guard about the United States Embassy, but Mr. O'Shaughnessy informed the Mexican Government that the Stars and Stripes provide enough protection.

Mr. Lind, despite warnings of his friends, walks abroad in the streets or rides in an open automobile, making no effort to hide his identity. At the Hotel Lascurain he mingles freely with the other guests.

Mrs. Lind, who suffered a slight indisposition upon her arrival here, was reported better to-day.

President Waits Message From Lind Before Acting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—President Wilson to-day awaited word from Mexico City relative to the success of former Governor Lind and his mission of mediation before announcing, or even formulating any definite Mexican policy. Beyond the proposals which Governor Lind carried, it is understood that the administration has no plans, and that no further steps will be taken until the President's envoy reports on his success in dealing with Huerta.

It is considered likely that Governor Lind will transmit President Wilson's message to President Huerta through Charge O'Shaughnessy either to-day or tomorrow.

It is reported the Senate is considering holding an executive session to discuss the Mexican situation to discover the consensus of opinion in the Upper House concerning the steps taken by the administration in dealing with the matter.

Cruiser Pittsburg Sent Back to Mexican Port.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Aug. 12.—The armored cruiser Pittsburg, which had started for San Diego from Guayamas, turned back to-day to remain at Guayamas pending further instructions from Washington. The Pittsburg was ordered back by wireless.

The supply ship Glacier, which was to have left Guayamas to-day with refugees, was ordered to remain at the Mexican port indefi, tely.

Youth Fined Heavily On Flirting Charge

W. R. Livermore, No. 47 Trinity avenue, a bookkeeper, feels convinced that mashing is a costly pastime.

Recorder Pro Tem Preston fined him $25.75 Tuesday for an affront to two girls, sisters, in Trinity avenue, and also gave him 21 days in the stockade for violating the probation ordinance. Livermore admitted that he was intoxicated. He had been on probation since last May for drinking.

Both girls appeared in court.

BILL PROTECTING HEIFER CALVES IS KILLED

House Wastes Time on Measure That Might Have Been Given Child Labor Act.

Take the child slaves, shackle them,
Throttle them if they laugh;
Enslave the women if you will,
But save my darling calf.

That was the burden of the song Monday afternoon in the Georgia House of Representatives—the same House of Representatives that has persistently refused to consider any measure to relieve the condition of the thousands of child-slaves in the State—when the legislators, for two hours, discussed solemnly and earnestly a bill designed to protect the heifer calves of the State from the persecutions of the butcher and the farmer by prohibiting the killing of the "innocent, pure-eyed little things"—that is what one member called them—until they have reached the mature age of 2 years.

Rhetorical thunderbolts were hurled by the champions of the calves at the heads of those who were determined that the last calf should be executed, to be met by bursting bombs of metaphor that shook the rafters and penetrated even to the farthest confines of the gallery; epigrammatic skyrockets threw their trails of fiery language into the running gears of the pinwheels of logic; the defenders of the calf hurled Biblical passages into the camp of the yeal eaters, and the bloodthirsty members who wanted blood, red blood, delved into the poets and flung quotation after quotation into the very teeth of the advancing army of calfdom.

Bill Bleated—Then Died.

And after two hours the calf bill poked its head up through the maze of oratory and near-oratory, through the mud of condemnation and the whitewash of appreciation, gave one plaintive, despairing bleat, and died, 91 votes to 73.

Members who had viewed with equanimity and magnificent self-control the smothering of measures to aid the child-slaves felt impelled to rise in their might when the rights of the calf were assailed. Here's how some of them felt:

Mr. Conner, of Spalding—"If this bill is not passed, in five years cows will be as scarce as hens' teeth."

Mr. Ennis, of Baldwin—"Saving the calves is no laughing matter. If you had seen the slaughter of these innocent little things as I have you would vote aye."

Mr. Lloyd, of Newton—"This bill is the worst kind of class legislation. Why can't the bull calf have the same right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness that is granted the heifer calf? A man's calves are his private property and should not be regulated."

Mr. Culpepper, of Meriwether—"Why is it these men want to protect the heifer calves and allow the bull calves to go to their doom, when it is a fact that the 'female of the species is more deadly than the male?'"

Mr. Picquet, of Richmond—"The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and it applies to calves as well as human beings. It makes my heart bleed to see these innocent little calves cruelly, brutally slaughtered to provide a veal eater's holiday."

"Prodigal" Is Provided For.

Mr. Shuptrine, of Chatham—"The bill should not pass under any circumstances. We have the Bible on our side, for it distinctly ordered that the fatted calf be killed for the prodigal son."

Mr. Spence, of Carroll—"I am outraged and indignant. This bill is the most diabolical bill I have ever seen. I vote NO!"

Mr. Wimberly, of Bibb—"To kill this bill means that the slaughter of the innocents will be continued, and what man, be he ever so strong, can endure the sight of the wild-eyed, bleating calf being led to the slaughter? There are 365,000 calves butchered in Georgia every year. If they were saved, think of the number of cows we would have in four years and the lowing herds that would wind slowly over the lea! Think of the rivers and lakes of milk, and if we can raise enough strawberries, think of the strawberries and cream we could have."

Mr. Berry, of Whitfield—"I arise to explain that I am not going to explain my vote."

The bill was introduced by Nelson, of Clayton, and favorably reported by the Committee on General Agriculture, of which Kimbrough, of Harris, is chairman.

Crusade Against Short Weight Ice Peddlers Pushed

The campaign against short weight ice peddlers has taken a more aggressive turn. Chief Beavers has detailed Policeman Holley to assist Inspector of Weights and Measures Buchanan in making cases against offenders.

As a result of this increased activity two negro peddlers were tried and fined by Recorder Pro Tem Preston. Five more cases are set for trial Tuesday afternoon.

The crusade, it is believed, will save Atlantans hundreds of dollars during the remainder of the summer. Inspector Buchanan and Officer Holley got direct evidence against the peddlers by following them and weighing the ice just after it had been weighed by the peddlers and delivered to the consumer.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

Saves Girl From Injury in Runaway

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—J. P. Doughty, Jr., a prominent cotton man, proved himself a hero in a runaway here yesterday when he saved Miss Frankie Rubenstein, an attractive Augusta girl, from serious injury. Miss Rubenstein was driving up Broad street when her horse became unmanageable. Doughty attempted to grab the reins, but was unsuccessful, and then he seized a wheel. He was thrown, but he held firm and soon climbed into the buggy and secured the lines, bringing the horse to a stop.

'Sleepiest Man' Is Looking for a Job

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—William O'Leary, described by his wife as the sleepiest man in Chicago, was wide awake to-day and out looking for a job. O'Leary appeared before Judge Sabath to answer charges brought by his wife. She said he had slept all the time during the last two weeks, except the few minutes each day which he spent in eating.

"If you'll kiss your two little babies and promise to wake up and get a job in the next two weeks, I'll let you go," said the judge.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $843 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 281 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

PLAN 16 STORIES ON BROWN AND ALLEN SITE

Dr. E. L. Connally and associates will soon start the construction of a sixteen-story office building on the site of Brown & Allen's drug store, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, if plans which are under way are consummated. Announcement was made unofficially at noon Tuesday that Dr. Connally has been in consultation with W. L. Stoddart of New York and Atlanta, and other architects, from whom he has received tentative plans.

In fact, an engineer representing a local architect surveyed the ground last week and made measurements of the stores in the building. Dr. Connally could not be reached for an expression as to his plans, and his son, Thomas W. Connally, refused to be quoted.

Such a move has been in contemplation for several years. Two years ago Dr. Connally had an architect sketch a twenty-story building, and since then he has had more or less definite intentions to erect a building that will be a credit to the section and to the city.

The structure which Dr. Connally is planning will cost probably $750,000, and will be a distinct addition to the line of attractive buildings on Whitehall. It will probably be known as the Connally Building, after its builder, who likewise erected the old structure.

The present building is 30 years old and it must soon be repaired or torn down. About a year ago a brick wall was placed in the center. The structure is three stories and of brick.

The lot is about 90 feet square, and a sixteen-story office building would give 129,600 square feet of floor space. Frontage near this point seldom changes hands, but is estimated to be worth from $7,500 to $10,000 in a transaction with no exchange elements, or $675,000 to $900,000.

Brown & Allen now pay $1,000 a month for the conre, it was declared.

Chamberlain Fills Johnston's Place On War Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—At a meeting of the steering committee of the Senate to-day Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, was selected as chairman of the Military Affairs Committee to succeed the late Senator Johnston, of Alabama. Other appointments which will be recommended along with this were:

Senator Meyers, of Montana, chairman of the Committee on Public Lands; Senator Smith, of Arizona, chairman of the Committee on Irrigation and Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, chairman of the Committee on Conservation.

Fires Bullets Into Bodies of Dead Men

TRENTON, TENN., Aug. 12.—Armed with two automatic pistols, J. A. Alford, a prominent citizen of Rutherford, shot and killed W. F. Coulter and his son, Harry Coulter, two prominent lawyers of this place. After the Coulters had fallen, Alford fired several bullets into their lifeless bodies.

Alford arrived on a M. and O. train and when he alighted he began firing on his victims.

Domestic trouble is said to have caused the killings. Alford surrendered to officers and was lodged in jail.

WRECK ON GEORGIA ROAD.

THOMSON.—A section of through freight train No. 210 on the Georgia Railroad was wrecked here to-day; six cars being piled in a heap. A broken wheel is supposed to have caused the wreck. A tramp was hurt, but no one was killed. Passenger trains were delayed here.

SULZER BATTLES IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—At 3:15 p. m. the Assembly took a recess until 8:30 to-night. The majority to pass the impeachment resolution is still lacking, but the anti-Sulzer leaders expect to have the members rounded up to-night.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Governor William Sulzer's political life hangs in the balance to-day. Faced by a hostile Legislature, Governor Sulzer, with his back to the wall, fought with more vigor than he had pressed into any other contest in his long political career.

Before the Assembly convened to vote on the resolution that Sulzer should be impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors" for the alleged private use of political funds and speculation in Wall Street, opponents of the Governor claimed to have enough votes to pass the resolution.

At least five of the judges of the Court of Appeals must participate in the impeachment trial, and supporters of Governor Sulzer rely upon the judicial rather than the legislative action of the proposed court of impeachment for a favorable decision in the involved case.

The resolution of impeachment, whose formulation is based on findings of the Frawley legislative committee, was introduced in the Assembly at 12:15 a. m., when 101 of the 150 members were present, but it was predicted that close to a full attendance would be on hand to-day. Democrats opposed to Governor Sulzer appointed committees to see that every member was in his seat.

It All Depends on The Point of View

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 12.—Recorder John E. Schwartz fined Miss Bessie Carter $50 for appearing in the shopping district here in a short skirt and low-cut waist.

CLARKESBURG, W. VA., Aug. 12.—A young woman arrested for wearing an "expose gown" was discharged by the Mayor, who called her costume "becoming and artistic."

Georgia Girl Bathers Startle Charleston

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12.—Two perfectly attractive girls from Georgia, it is said, have made surf bathing on Sullivan's Island more popular than ever by their somewhat advanced style of ocean garb. They wear men's suits, natty affairs with stripes about the shoulders and knees.

Sullivan's Islanders say they never saw any handsomer or more becoming men's bathing suits than these.

ALEXANDER, N. C., Aug. 12—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would nave been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER'S NEW HOME IS DEDICATED; MANY NOTED MEN SPEAK

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Fifteen thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles, including city and county officials, men of the cloth and members of the leading civic and fraternal organizations, witnessed yesterday the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone and raising the California Bear Flag at the new home of The Los Angeles Examiner, now in course of construction.

These ceremonies were preceded by a great parade throughout the downtown streets, which acted as the escort of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor H. H. Rose to the new building site.

In the speakers' stand were leaders of the civic and religious life in Los Angeles, while in the grandstand was a brilliant assemblage.

The ceremonies were held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, and Ernest Ingold, president of the club, introduced James R. H. Wagner, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Charles Edward Bock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, offered prayer. Mr. Wagner presented the Bear Flag to The Examiner from the people of Southern California. Arthur W. Kinny, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, made the speech of acceptance. The Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Los Angeles, made an address, and the Rev. Father George Donahoo, representing the Right Rev. Thomas J. Conary, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, spoke.

Silver Trowel Given Mr. Hearst.

Douglas White, of the Advertising Club, presented a silver trowel to Mayor Rose, who officially laid the cornerstone and then presented the trowel to Mr. Hearst. Dr. Sigmund Hechtal, rabbi of the B'Nai Brith Congregation, made the closing remarks.

It was in acknowledging the gift of the trowel from Mayor Rose that Mr. Hearst delivered his address, in which he voiced his confidence in the great future of Los Angeles and Southern California. The various speakers paid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to The Examiner's influence in the expanding progress and prosperity of Southern California.

A chorus of several hundred voices rendered patriotic music.

Mr. Hearst said in his address:

I thank you most heartily on behalf of the members of the Los Angeles Examiner staff and on my own behalf for this beautiful memento and for the generous sentiments which have accompanied it. It is a pleasant thing for us to to feel that we are here among so many friends, and it is also a pleasant thing for us to feel, as we all do feel, a sincere reciprocal friendship for the citizens of Los Angeles and a deep devotion to the best interests of this great city.

Notable Occasion for Paper.

This is a notable occasion for us of The Examiner. It marks a milestone in the progress of the paper. It is made doubly memorable by the participation of our Mayor, and by the attendance of so many distinguished citizens. Yet with all its importance and significance it is only one of the many occasions which we gratefully remember where you have kindly encouraged our efforts and stimulated us to further endeavor.

Under such encouragement and stimulus The Examiner has grown until it is one of the biggest and best of all my publications. Certainly there is no publication of mine from Los Angeles to London in the success of which I take a greater pride and pleasure.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner first because I am a Californian and take pleasure in the success of everything Californian. (Applause.)

I was not born in Los Angeles, but I was born in California.

A man is a Los Angelan, no matter on what street of Los Angeles he is born or lives, and a man is a Californian no matter in what part of California he is born or lives.

Bound Together Closely.

We Californians are learning more and more that we are all bound together by the firm bonds of fraternity and that the combined success of all as individuals make the complete success of all as a community. We are learning that a friendly rivalry does not mean a foolish jealousy; that the fullest achievement is through co-operation, and that whatever operates for the benefit of California operates for the benefit of all of us as Californians.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner, too, because I realize that Los Angeles is destined to become, and is fast becoming, one of the greatest cities in the world. (Applause.)

I want my system of publications to be essentially a national institution, and to be national it must have representation in Los Angeles as adequate as in any of the greatest cities of the nation.

Finally, I take pleasure and pride in the success of The Examiner because Los Angeles is not only a leader in material development, but a leader in ethical and intellectual development—a pioneer in political progress.

What are as yet only ideals even in many of the most advanced localities of the world are actualities in Los Angeles.

What are dreaded as threatening theories in conservative centers are established as practical and beneficial facts in this progressive community.

Conservatism a Failing.

The older sections of this country and of every country are hampered and handicapped in their development by also-called conservatism which is too often nothing more than sheer selfishness or inertness.

The phrase "conservatism" is made to cover a multitude of failings.

The lack of imagination to foresee, the lack of energy to attempt, the lack of courage to act, the lack of ability to achieve are all cloaked under that convenient word "conservatism."

Conservatism is the attribute of age. Energy, enthusiasm, courage, confidence and conviction are the characteristics of youth and strength. It is these that have wrought the miracle of Los Angeles.

In New York the citizens are still struggling vainly for that first essential of electoral reform—the direct nomination.

In Los Angeles you have possessed this power long and employed it well. In the East intrenched privilege still is declaring against the awful possibilities of the recall. For years you have exercised that function of popular government justly and judiciously.

In many localities the citizens are timidly hesitating to adopt woman suffrage. You have not only proved the feasibility of their right, but have demonstrated the definite benefit of it.

Noted Political Achievements.

You have made universal suffrage a fact and popular government a reality. You have exercised the initiative and referendum wisely and temperately.

You have divorced your local city government from national politics and have made it what it should be—a business institution conducted for the business benefit of the stockholders, the citizens.

You have brought water from the cool, clear streams of the distant mountains, undefiled, instead of collecting it from the poisoned and polluted puddles of the populated districts.

You have put your public money honestly and intelligently into great public works instead of into the pockets of greedy promoters and corrupt politicians. You are invading confidently and completely the field of public ownership in spite of the forebodings and forbiddings of interested public service corporations.

You have disproved all the arguments of retained corporation attorneys and dissipated all the opposition of paid corporation politicians.

And behold!

Strides Bring Prosperity.

You have prospered incomparably in spite of your bold advances and striking innovations; nay more, my friends, you have prospered because of them.

In the favoring physical atmosphere of this country, trees and fruits grow big and in the favoring moral and spiritual atmosphere of this community human institutions grow to greatness.

I am truly proud and pleased to have a newspaper here to do its share in the development of this Great city, to play its part in the progress of this great State. I am happy, too, to have a newspaper system to sow the seeds of progress in other parts of the nation and to cultivate it there so that it may take root and flourish and blossom and bear fruit.

My devout wish is that Los Angeles may ever continue to be a leader in the moral and material development of the country; in the economic and political progress of the nation and that The Examiner may be a potent factor in this development, an effective force in this progress—a cornerstone in the splendid structure of Californian achievement.

Tribute Paid to Examiner.

Excerpts from the speeches of prominent Los Angelans follow:

MAYOR H. H. ROSE—The construction of the wonderful building is one of the greatest things that was ever done for a city the size of Los Angeles. A building over 300 feet long and large in proportion, devoted to the uses of one newspaper, in the city of Los Angeles is indeed a magnificent enterprise. While this is the first time I have had occasion to lay the cornerstone of a building, except, maybe, a rough log hut or a stone hut in the mountains, I hope I may have occasion to use these trowels for purposes like this many, many times during my administration.

DOUGLAS WHITE, representing the Advertising Club of Los Angeles—The advertising clubs of the Pacific Coast have been extremely successful in their work up to this time. Every movement needs a leader, and so has the movement for truth in advertising on the Pacific Coast. However, when we entered on this movement it already possessed a leader, for 25 years ago, or about that time, in the city of San Francisco, a publisher arose who made the plain statement that no matter what the circulation of his paper might be, that circulation would be given truthfully and honestly to the people who bought space. That publisher was William Randolph Hearst. From that time up to the present, in all the papers which he has owned and published, he has carried out that same idea of honesty and truth in his advertising, because in the circulation depends the sale of advertising.

THE REV. GEORGE DONAHOE, representing the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty, of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles—What attaches importance to this occasion and to the building that is now laboriously rising here is the fact that this building is destined to become a great center of newspaper activity in our gloriously growing city. As the mission of The Examiner goes forward the power of The Examiner grows stronger. So briefly, then, this is my good wish, first in behalf of us all, newspaper readers of Southern California, that this building which we to-day with ceremony officially begin, may always be to us a source of information, and for the great newspaper genius who honors this occasion with his presence our one hope and good wish and prayer is that the influence, the great influence that he so surely holds—that it may ever be devoted to works of fighting evil in high places, defending the weak and forwarding sound morality the world over.

DR. SIGMUND HECHT, rabbi of the B'nai Brith congregation—In my own and in the name of those whom I have the honor to represent, I bring my meed of congratulations and encouragement and cheer, first of all to those who are primarily affected by this event, to that honored head of this gigantic enterprise, to that man nationally honored for the purity of his character, for the sincerity of his purposes, for the directness of his intentions, for his ability and for the policy with which he inspired The Los Angeles Examiner to favor none and be fair to all—William Randolph Hearst. The Los Angeles Examiner—under God may it grow and prosper and be a power in the development and in the uplift of our glorious country.

ARTHUR W. KINNEY, president of The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce—The people of Southern California offer The Examiner their sincere congratulations upon this memorable occasion which marks an epoch in its wonderful career in our great city. It has always held an unbounded faith in the marvelous destiny of our Southwestern metropolis and it has ever backed up this faith by striving for everything that might contribute to the prosperity of our people. It has, indeed, been one of the sturdy sentinels at this far Western outpost of American idealism. Long ago it enunciated a policy of civic and industrial progress that must appeal to every person who has the welfare of our city at heart—a policy which, if pursued, must hasten to the unfolding of the great movement that is destined to make our Southwest empire world famed.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

Charges Speaker Burwell With Breaking Promise to Bring His Measures to Vote.

A tilt in which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

Shakes Finger at Holtzclaw.

The clash between McCrory and Holtzclaw came during the consideration of the Western and Atlantic Commission bill. Mr. Holtzclaw objected to a motion to dispense with the reading of the bill when the House went into committee of the whole, and Mr. Crory, who was standing near shook a menacing finger at the Houston County Representative and said:

"Holtzclaw, you are trying to kill time to prevent my bill coming to a vote. You had better look out!"

Mr. Holtzclaw was in conversation with a member at the time. He glanced at Mr. McCrory, but made no reply.

The failure of the House to take action on the McCrory bill Monday kills the measure for the rest of the session, inasmuch as the Senate has served notice that it will not consider any House bill passed after Monday.

THIN FOR YEARS—"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meler adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. ATTORNEY FOR DEFENSE AGAIN THREATENS TO MOVE FOR A MISTRIAL

you and you made certain statements?—A. I did not.

Q. Now this time when you were at my office, did not your husband beg you to tell the truth, and put his arms around you and beg you to say what you told him was the truth?—A. It was all lies, though.

Q. Did you sign this affidavit? A. They made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your attorney, Mr. George Gordon?—A. I told you they made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your husband?—A. I signed it in the presence of a whole lot of people, but it was a lie.

Mr. Dorsey read the affidavit. It stated that the husband, Albert McKnight, was in the kitchen of the Selig home when Frank came to lunch Saturday, April 26.

When Solicitor Dorsey reached the part where it was stated that Mrs. Frank had claimed to Mrs. Selig that her husband was drinking the night before, and wanted her to get a pistol so that he could kill himself, Minola interrupted:

Declares Statement Was All a Lie.

"That is all a lie my husband fixed up," she shouted. "They made me sign it."

Later the negro woman started to interrupt again at the statement that she had asked Mrs. Frank if the girl who was killed was a Jew girl. Mr. Arnold told her to keep quiet until Mr. Dorsey had finished. She demonstrated her feelings again at the statement that they had raised her pay, and told her to be careful how she talked.

Dorsey, after he had finished reading the affidavit, said: "And you signed this statement?"

"They made me sign it," reiterated the negress. "It was all a lie."

Q. How did they make you sign it? A. They told me if I did not, they would lock me up.

Q. Who told you?—All of them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is this the lie your husband fixed for you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever get any more pay? A. No, sir.

Q. How did the detectives get you? A. They got my husband first.

Q. Did you say anything to Miss Lucille about it being a Jew, and did she say it was a Gentile?—A. No.

Q. Did Mrs. Frank say anything about sleeping on the floor?—A. No.

Q. Is any of this true? Is it a lie out of the whole cloth?—A. Yes, it is all a lie.

Denies Mrs. Selig Gave Her Money.

Q. Did Mrs. Selig ever give you $5?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did she ever tell you to mind how you talk?—A. They told me to tell the whole truth.

Q. Do you know this Man Craven? A. No.

Q. This man Pickett?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Charles Barnhart took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Contractor and architect.

Q. Have you, at the request of Mr. Haas, visited the Selig home and made a drawing of the kitchen and drawing room?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you see the mirror in the dining room from any point standing in the kitchen door?—A. No.

Q. Can you see anybody sitting at the table?—A. No.

Q. Could you see anyone sitting on the north side of the table?—A. No.

Q. Is there any position a man can sit at the table and be seen in the mirror?—A. By sitting about two feet away from him.

Q. If a man said he was sitting in a chair against the jam of the kitchen door, and saw the reflection of a man in the mirror, was he telling the truth?—A. I could not see it.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What you could see in that mirror would depend on the location of the sideboard, wouldn't it?—A. Yes.

Moving of Mirror Would Change View.

Q. If that was moved a little, the whole view of the dining room would be changed, would it not?—A. Yes, but my experiments showed that you could not see whether anyone was eating at the table or not, from any view you could get of that mirror from the kitchen.

The witness was excused and Henry Wood, secretary of the County Commission, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you, at my request, go to the Selig home on Georgia avenue and take some views?—A. I did.

Q. Did you stand in the kitchen and try to see the mirror in the dining room sideboard?—A. I did.

Q. Could you see the mirror from the back kitchen door?—A. I could not.

Q. Could you see the table and the mirror from any part of the kitchen? A. I stood in the door leading into the pantry between the kitchen and dining roo mand all I could see in the mirror was the arm of one chair.

Attorney Rosser here made a side remark that he himself had been out to the Selig home to see if the negro, Albert McKnight, was telling the truth about watching Frank from the kitchen through the sideboard mirror. He said one could not see the dining room table in the mirror from any point in the kitchen.

Q. What you saw in this mirror was right here (the room)?—A. Yes.

Q. The arrangement of the furniture was like it was April 28?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness on redirect examination.

Q. Coming to that door from the back porch you could not see that mirror?—A. I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. If a man were standing where that chair was could you see him?—A. I might have.

Q. Did you make the test sitting or standing?—A. A. I tried both ways.

Another Tells of Tests With Mirror.

The witness was excused and Julius Fischer, president of the cemetery commission, took the stand.

Q. You are a contractor and builder?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make an examination of the Selig home?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you stand in that kitchen door to see whether you could see the mirror in the dinir- room?—A. Yes.

Q. Could you?—A No.

Q. Is there any place in the kitchen from which you could see in the mirror a man at the table?—A. No.

Q. Were there any evidences of the mirror having been moved?—A. No, but I moved it to see if I could place it anywhere in the dining room and from the kitche see any reflection of a person sitting at the table.

Q. Well, what did you find?—A. I found I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. Did you turn the mirror flat against the wall on the east side of the room?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Corinthia Hall, an employee of the National Pencil Company, was called. Attorney Arnold questioned her:

Q. Did you go to the factory on April 26, Memorial Day?—A. I did.

Q. Was anyone with you?—A. Emma Clark.

Q. What time was it?—A. About 11:35.

Q. How do you know?—A. I got off the East Lake car at 11:30 o'clock.

Q. Did you go to Mr. Frank's office? A. After we had been up to the fourth floor to get Emma's coat.

Q. How long do you think it took you to go up and come down?—A. We went right up and came right down.

Left Factory at Quarter to Twelve.

Q. What was said?—A. She had just married Mr. Freeman. He asked her if she wasn't a bride. She said yes, and he asked how she was feeling. She said she was feeling fine, and wanted to use the telephone.

Q. What time did you leave the factory?—A. About fifteen minutes to twelve.

Q. Who all did you see in the factory?—A. When we first went in, two men were talking to Mr. Frank. Arthur White's wife and a stenographer were in the outer office.

Q. Who else did you see?—A. On the fourth floor we saw Mae Barrett, Arthur White and Harry Denham. Mrs. Barrett's daughter was also on the second floor.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Holloway while going to the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw Lemmie Quinn at the restaurant and talked to him?—A. Yes.

Q. You told the coroner you arrived there at 11:45?—. I said I left at that time.

Q. You saw the stenographer?—A. Yes.

Q. Was she the regular stenographer?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you swear before the coroner that she was the regular stenographer?—A. I don't remember. They change stenographers so much.

Q. Can you tell the jury what time it was you saw Lemmie Quinn?Q. I can not

Miss Hall was excused and Mrs. May Barrett was called. She did not answer.

Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman was the next witness. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Mrs. Freeman Saw Frank in Office.

Q. Did you ever work at the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

Q. What was your name before you were married?—A. Emma Clark.

Q. What day were you married?—A. April 25.

Q. Did you go to the factory April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time?—A. Eleven thirty.

Q. What did you go for?—A. To get a coat.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Talking to two men.

Q. Did you get permission to go on the fourth floor?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Frank say anything to you?—A. He asked me "How's the bride?" I said all right.

Q. Who was in the office with Frank?—A. The stenographer was in the outer office.

Q. What time did you leave the factory?—A. About 11:45.

Q. Where did you go from there?—A. Alabama and Forsyth streets to use the telephone.

Q. I came back and passed by the factory.

Q. Did you see anybody on the street you knew?—A. Mr. Malsby.

Q. Where did you go?—A. I went on to a cafe and ordered some lunch.

Q. Did anybody come in?—A. Yes. Mr. Quinn came in.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he said he had just left Mr. Frank.

Q. Where did you go then?—A. To Harry Molsby's place, where Miss Hall used the phone.

Q. Where did you go then?—A. To Hunter and Whitehall streets.

Q. What time was it then —A. Twenty-five to one.

Q. Did you notice any negro as you went in or out?—A. No.

Solicitor Dorsey did not care to cross-examine the witness and she was excused.

Attorney Arnold asked the deputies to call Mrs. Barrett again. She did not answer and Emil Selig was called. Mr. Selig is the father-in-law of the accused.

Frank's Father-in-Law Tells of Their Home.

Q. Are you related to Mr. Leo M. Frank, the defendant?—A. Yes, I am his father-in-law.

Q. Do you and your wife and Mr. and Mrs Frank live together?—A. We do.

Q. Where?—A. At 68 East Georgia avenue.

Q. How long have you had the sideboard in the dining room in the same place?—A. Ever since I have lived there.

Q. What part of the house is your room in?—A. My wife and I have a room upstairs and so have Mr. and Mrs. Frank.

Q. Where is the telephone?—A. In the dining room.

Q. Can you hear very well from upstairs when the doors are shut?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did you get home to lunch on Saturday, April 26?—A. About 1:15 o'clock.

Q. Was Mr. Frank there?—A. No. The women were at the table. They were going to Grand Opera that afternoon. Mr. Frank came in about five minutes later.

Women Went to the Grand Opera.

Q. Did he eat?—A. Yes.

Q. Who left first?—A. Mrs. Selig got up and left to go to the Grand Opera and left Mr. Frank and myself at the table.

Q. How long were you at the table?—A. About 10 or 15 minutes. I went out into the yard to look at my chickens. When I came in he was standing in the hall. I went to my room and lay down for anap.

Q. When did you see him again?—A. About 6:30 o'clock.

Q. Were you and Mr. Frank there before the women?—A. I think we were.

Q. Did you notice any scratches or scars on Mr. Frank?—A. I did not.

Q. Did Mr. Frank stay at home that night?—A. Yes.

Q. Were there any visitors there?—Or anything to impress the evening upon you?—A. Yes, we had a little party.

Q. Who was there?—A. Mrs. A. E. Marcus, Mr. and Mrs. M. Gholstein and probably others. We played cards.

Q. Did Frank and his wife play? A. No, we were playing just a little game of poker.

Q. You were playing a little game of poker?—A. Yes, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank did not play.

Q. Did Mr. Frank and his wife go to bed before your visitors left?—A. Yes, they went to bed about 10:30. The guests left about 11:30.

Q. What time did you see him Sunday morning?—A. about 11 o'clock.

Q. He went out before you got up? A. Yes.

Q. Did he eat dinner that day? A. Yes.

Q. Did he eat supper that night? A. Yes.

Dorsey Questions About the Sideboard.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Mr. Selig, you don't undertake to tell the jury that the sideboard has not been moved one way or another? A. It has not been moved.

Q. You observed it so particularly that you say it still occupies the same position?—A. Yes.

Q. How can you be so sure it was 1:20 when Frank came to dinner? A. The folks were going to Grand Opera and I just estimate the time that way.

Q. Didn't you say it was after 1 o'clock at the coroner's inquest? A. Yes.

Can't Recall Testimony At Coroner's Inquest.

Q. Then how do you know, now? A. Well, I got there at 1:10.

Q. Now are you sure your wife and daughter were there when he came to dinner?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't know where Frank was when you took that nap, do you?—A. I couldn't say.

Q. He was there when he came in from the chicken yard, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And he was gone after you had taken your nap and gotten up, wasn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner that he was there when you got up?—A. I can't recall.

Q. Do you deny you said it?—A. I can't recall.

Q. You said there was a card party at your house that night?—Do you know where Frank was while you were playing?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear him use the telephone that night?—A. No.

Q. He frequently used the telephone to call the night watchman, did he not?—A. Yes.

Q. When you got up the next morning he had gone, hadn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to him when he returned?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?—A. I cannot recall.

Did Not Refer to Crime All Day.

Q. You knew that a girl had been murdered in that building—the factory where Mr. Frank was superintendent—and you spent the day with your son-in-law—and yet you didn't refer to the finding of this little girl's dead body at all that day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he say anything about it?—A. I think so, but I cannot recall.

Q. Do you deny then that you told the Coroner that Krank never referred to it during the whole day?—A. I don't deny anything. I cannot recall. He did mention it at dinner.

Q. You did not pay any attention to it?—A. No.

Q. You tell the jury that you did not pay any attention to this murder in the factory of which your son-in-law was superintendent?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold then took the witness on the redirect examination.

Q. Mr. Selig, you say you had a party in the house that night?—A. Yes.

Q. What were you doing?—A. We were playing a little game of poker.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Now didn't you tell the Coroner that you did not go into the chicken yard, but stayed in the house that afternoon?—A. I can not recall.

Mr. Selig was then excused and Mrs. Selig was called to the stand. Arnold examined her.

Q. How long have Mr. and Mrs. Frank been living with you and Mr. Selig?—A. About two years.

Sideboard Not Moved, Says Mrs .Selig.

Q. How long has the sideboard been in the same place in the dining room? —A. Ever since we have been living there.

Q. What time did you have lunch on Saturday, April 26?—A. It was about ten minutes past 1 o'clock.

Q. Were Mr. Selig and Mr. Frank there?—A. I don't remember about Mr. Selig, but Mr. Frank did not come in until about 1:20 o'clock.

Q. Did anyone get up from dinner? A. My daughter and I left for the Grand Opera matinee.

Q. When did you see Mr. Frank again?—A. At 6:10 o'clock that afternoon. My daughter and myself were on our way home from the Grand Opera matinee and were on a car when we saw Mr. Frank go into Jacobs' Pharmacy at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama strets.

Q. Did you go directly home?—A. No, I stopped at my sister's on Washington street.

Q. Who was at home when you arrived?—A. Mr. Frank and Mr., Selig.

Q. Did you notice anything unusual about Mr. Frank?—A. Not a thing.

The remainder of Mrs. Selig's story coincided with that of her husband's.

Declares She Saw Frank at Noon.

Dorsey then took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You told the coroner's jury you left Mr. Frank and the cook at home? A. No, I hesitated for a minute and said I thought Mr. Selig was there also.

Q. Aren't you mistaken about seeing Frank at noon?—A. No, I am not mistaken.

Q. That sideboard is on rollers and it hasn't been moved for four or five years? Not even when the room was cleaned—AA. Yes, it was moved for that, and moved right back.

Q. Did Mr. Frank mention the crime when he came home for dinner Sunday?—A. Yes, he mentioned it.

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that you did not think the crime was mentioned?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did Frank seem much concerned over the crime?—A. Yes, he was naturally disturbed.

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that he did not appear concerned?—A. I said that I did not feel particularly concerned.

Q. Didn't you say before the Coroner that he did not express any anxiety or worry over this murder, and did not mention the youth of the child?—A. I don't remember.

Says He Didn't Wear Same Suit.

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that he wore the same suit Saturday, Sunday and Monday?—A. If I said so I was mistaken.

Q. When did you first learn the name of the murdered girl?—A. I don't remember.

Q. You didn't learn it from Mr. Frank?—A. I think I did.

Q. Didn't you first learn the name of the girl from the paper next day? A. I believe so.

Q. And yet you had dinner with him?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. You didn't ask about the facts? —A. No.

Q. You were in bad health?—A. I was operated on the next day.

Q. Now, didn't you say that Frank was naturally curious?—A. Yes, it was such a harrowing crime he would naturally be interested.

Mrs. Selig was excused. Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

A pleasant mode of entertaining at the Executive Mansion is in the informal dinner of six or eight covers which Governor and Mrs. Slaton give often. An affair of this kind was the small dinner of Monday evening, at which Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burwell were the guests of honor, others present being Mrs. Reed, of Elberton, the house guest of the ---wells, and Mrs. W. D. Grant.

Mrs. Slaton was hostess at a pretty luncheon a few days ago for a visitor, Mrs. Charles Donnally, of Pennsylvania, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stocking.

Pink roses from the gardens of Mrs. Slaton's home on the Peachtree road were decorations for the table, and the guests included Mrs. Donnally, Mrs. R. J. Lowry, Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. Albert Howell, Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. Walter Andrews and Miss Stocking.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the W. C. T. U., has requested the members of the association to bring reports of work accomplished this year to the meeting to be held Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Sunday school room of Trinity Church.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being.

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my dowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

"Who knows, and knows he knows,
is wise. Cleave thou to him.
And nevermore forsake him.
Who knows and knows not that he knows—he sleeps;
Go thou to him and wake him.

"Who knoweth not and knows he knoweth not is a child,
Go thou to him and teach him.
Who knows not and knows not that he knoweth not is a fool.
No light shall ever reach him."

Says Marcus Aurelius:

"A man must stand erect and not be held erect by circumstance.

"Everything is only for a day, with that which remembers and that which is remembered.

"The present is the only thing of which a man can be deprived.

"Everything which is in any way beautiful is beautiful in itself—and neither worse nor better is a thing made by being praised."

* * *

Oh, the world has its gloom, and 'tis gloom to spare;
'Twill make you weary and sad;
But there's plenty of gleam, as is only fair,
To make you cheery and glad.

Now the world may seem dark as the shrouding night,
All clad in a pall of black.
But somewhere 'tis day—so just walk toward the light,
And the shadows will fall at your back.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings*"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then become so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away down-town, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night.

"I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

Scene: Far out at sea; stateroom on board a huge transatlantic liner which is being tossed about like a cork in a tremendous sea.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!"

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched insteps and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl! I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said, "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stage-coaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

* * * * * * *

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his lips trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28. —HAL COFFMAN.

"What a coincidence?" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."

A birthday gift was given to a wife by her husband and three children. The youngest, a little ten-year-old, was appointed to make the speech of presentation. She did it after much preparation for the occasion, and this was the form it took:

"Dear mamma, this gift is presented to you by your three children and your one husband."

* * *

Mrs. Subbub—I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird.

Sarah (the new "general")—I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird-seed for breakfast food.

Gabe—Why do they say that the ghost walks on pay day?

Steve—Because that's the day our spirits rise.

A Redeeming Trait.

"Cannibals have one redeeming feature, after all."

"What is that?"

"They are very fond of children."

Might Be Fooled Again.

Mrs. Whimper—John, if I should die, would you marry again?

Whimper—Perhaps; if the trap was set differently.

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this beingidue thing.

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Baraca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Coveleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,000. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

GRIFFITH SENDS FIELDER CALVO TO CRACKERS

A TELEGRAM from Clark Griffith to Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, received this morning, announces that Calvo, the Cuban outfielder whom Griff has been carrying all the season, is on his way to join the Crackers and will be in Atlanta to-morrow.

"Griffith is placing Calvo with us as a means of stiffening up our club for the final sprint," Mr. Callaway said. "I expect he will get in the game at once, probably playing in place of Holtz. He is a fast and accurate fielder and a hard hitter, but the class of Griffith's regular outfield has prevented him from getting into the game with the Senators."

Beauty Is Keynote Of 1914 Hudson Six

The 1914 Hudson Six 54 7-passenger body, complete car, at $2,250, is on exhibition to-day at the salesrooms of Mr. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., local dealer for the Hudson motor-cars.

Beauty is the keynote of the new car. The most prominent feature is the pure streamline body. No angles appear at the dash. Running boards are clear. It conforms to the latest European practice. Germany originated the streamline obdy. By some it is known as the Prince Henry type.

Reliable information from leading factories of Europe indicates that at the Paris show next October practically every European manufacturer will exhibit bodies of this type. This has been adapted by Hudson designers to American use and modified to suit American ideas. The long, sloping hood merges into the lines of the dash. The graceful sweep and smoothness is unbroken from radiator cap to tail-light. The new car is designed for seven passengers. The two extra seats are of the folding type and permanently attached. They fold into the back of the front seat entirely out of the way. Yet owing to the great length of the car—135-inch wheel base—there is ample room for all passengers and all may have the greatest possible ease and comfort.

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

* * *

THESE baseball magnates are proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Voss and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will lug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the 'Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back.

The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the same skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mortals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again.. The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile eevnt, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. But McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther, Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

DR. ROUGLIN RETURNS.

Dr. Louis C. Rouglin returned to-day from a two weeks' vacation at Eastern resorts. He spent a week fishing off Ocean CView and reported several big catches.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for Infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersburg team, of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccanneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Doolin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial consideration of October's classic.

Need of Backstop.

has been reflected in the trade he negotiated just before he left Pittsburg for this city. He traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. With Meyers out of commission McGraw realized that the hitting strength of his club would be affected. McLean is a finished backstop and a very fine sticker. Crandall, one of the grandest fellows who ever drew breath, had been of great service in former years as a relief twirler and pinch hitter.

But McGraw was well provided with pitching talent that could go the route. He strengthened the club by the trade. We were all very sorry to bid good-bye to Otis. He was a grand influence. Many a time his pleasing personality has helped to chase the blues from camp when we happened to meet with some unexpected misfortune.

I have said, in a previous article, that our pitching staff is the best in the major leagues. With the acquisition of Larry McLean I will back our catching department against any other.

Heretofore, the class was naturally ascribed to the Cubs in Archer and Bresnahan. With the best pitchers and two of the four greatest catchers in the game, I think fandom will agree that New York will boast the greatest battery strength in its company.

Upon the battery strength I confidently rely. I think it will prove an insurmountable obstacle to Philadelphia's pennant hopes.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into tomorrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here today. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

• • •

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

MOTHER IS GIVEN EQUAL RIGHT TO CHILDREN

House Passes Bill Leaving Power to Award Custody in Divorce Cases to the Judge.

A bill giving the mother an equal right with the father to the custody of minor children after decision in divorce cases, and leaving the disposition of the child with the final judge, was passed by the House Tuesday morning. The vote was 96 to 62. The fight lasted more than an hour.

It was a substitute to the bill introduced by Smith of Fulton and Olive of Richmond, and to the substitute of the General Judiciary Committee. The substitute was offered by Mr. Smith, who stated it was acceptable to the Senate and would be acted upon by that body at this session. The original bill transferred the prima facie right to the child from the father to the mother.

Mr. Smith, explaining his bill, declared the measure is designed to correct an injustice under which Georgia mothers have been held for years. Speeches in favor of the bill were also made by Miller of Bibb and Olive of Richmond.

A number of members opposed the bill, either declaring the present law is good enough or defining their positions clearly by stating the mother is not competent to care for her child.

Those who spoke against the bill were Conner of Spalding, Garlington of Richmond, Moye of Johnson, Picquet of Richmond and Slater of Bryan.

The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the Atlanta charter bill, providing for a popular vote on the charter, the referendum and the reduction of the power of the Recorder.

OBITUARY

John W. Adair, seventy-nine years old, a well-known resident of Fulton County, died Tuesday morning on his farm on the West Hunter road. He is survived by his wife and one son, Rufus. Six daughters also survive. They are Mrs. W. T. Huff and Mrs. J. M. Thompson, of Savannah; Mrs. J. M. Spinks, of Marietta; Mrs. J. T. Griffith, of Camilla; Mrs. Charles Williams, of Columbia, and Mrs. L. A. Garrison, of Atlanta. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. at the Sharon Church. Interment will be in the churchyard.

Susan E. Landers, fifty-five years old, No. 28 Inman street, died Tuesday at 9 o'clock. She is survived by her husband. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia Headen, who died Monday, will be held at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Barnes, No. 122 Glennwood avenue. Interment at Hollywood.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $200,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

$100,000 in Stock For Use of Name

GADSDEN, ALA., Aug. 12.—Oliver Hall, a rich merchant of Collinsville, testified in the case of E. C. Drew, the Fort Payne promoter, charged with using the mail to defraud in promoting the DeKalb Etowah Oil and Gas Company, how he had been selected president by Drew and tendered $100,000 in stock in a $300,000 corporation. He said he never gave anything for the stock, but permitted the use of his name. His son, Irby Hall, was made vice president and given $500 in stock.

A sensation developed when it was shown the company had never been incorporated and that there was no system of bookkeeping.

Attorney Shot When Officer Aims at Dog

W. C. Munday, a member of the law firm of Munday & Cornwell, No. 318 Kiser Building, was shot in the leg Monday night when a bullet fired by Policeman Jaffares at a mad dog glanced from the sidewalk at Capitol avenue and Hunter street.

Munday's wound was slight, the bullet penetrating the flesh only and passing out. He was removed to his home.

The dog had created a panic among children playing in the street. The officer ran up and fired. Munday, fifteen feet away, received the bullet.

TAX REFORM BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

Question Put Squarely Up to the House—Validity of Slaton Revenue Bills in Doubt.

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNeill and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 12.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $250,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

The bill provides for a State tax commissioner with offices in the State Capitol and county boards of tax assessors. According to the claims of the authors and supporters of the bill, it will increase the annual revenue of the State by at least $1,000,000, sufficient to pay off the present deficit within the next three years, as well as the teachers.

Passed After Hot Debate.

The bill was passed in the Senate after nearly five hours of debate Monday afternoon. Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint author of the bill, made a vigorous defense of the measure in a two and a half hour speech. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth, followed Senator Miller in a vigorous attack on the bill. He declared the bill did not provide an adequate personal property tax.

Other Senators who spoke briefly in opposition to the bill were McGregor, of the Nineteenth, and Olliff, of the Fourth. Senator McNeill, in supporting the bill, charged that the Lipscomb bill, defeated in the House, had been framed by the Chamber of Commerce of Athens, the home town of Senator DuBose. It was for this reason, he intimated, that the Senator from the Thirtieth opposed the present bill.

Upon motion of Senator Tarver, the previous question was called and the final vote was taken. Following the vote, which was 29 to 12 in favor, President Anderson for the first time during the session congratulated the Senate. The bill was transmitted immediately to the House.

SNOW SAYS LOSS IN CORN CROP 300,000,000 BUSHELS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—B. W. Snow says: "With the indication Saturday of the possibility of a breaking up of the drouth I sent a special circular of inquiry to my country clients asking for a report on corn condition August 11, and have received sufficient reports to justify the statement that the decline in prospects since the Government report and my own of August 1 was gathered has been much heavier than is generally appreciated.

"I have returns enough to indicate that Indiana has dropped 10 points in condition, Illinois 15 points with an average around 55, Iowa 13 and Missouri 20. Returns from Kansas and Nebraska are as yet scattered, but sufficient to put Kansas out of the field as a corn producer this year, and the Nebraska crop is of small importance, except in the northwest counties.

"My returns already cover almost one-third of the important corn counties, and if the later reports are in line with those already received, it is quite possible that the loss since August may have reached 300,000,000 bushels."

COTTON RULED QUITE STRONG

Continued Dry Weather in Southwest Causes Active Bidding, but Sales Were Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—An absence of weather news of features in the cables caused the cotton market to open dull to-day and first prices were from unchanged to 1 point off to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call strength developed and prices rallied 3 to 10 points from the initial level, due mainly to the dry map in the Western belt. The ring apparently seemed to want cotton and purchased rather freely at times. Many of the larger spot houses were noted buyers.

Cordill was out with a report on parts of the Eastern belt, which was considered very favorable. This, coupled with a private telegram from Austin, Texas, stating that no change of consequence is noted in conditions, while the weather has been hot and dry, the temperatures were only 90 degrees yesterday and the entire State toward Oklahoma, cotton is opening fast and in ten days it will be moving freely all south of Waco. This brought out rather active selling from Wall street, but offerings were so rapidly absorbed that prices during the late forenoon were firmly maintained around the early high point.

The high temperatures continue in the West and the weekly weather report just posted shows a bullish condition existing west of the Mississippi, though the Eastern belt is favorable and scattered showers are shown in this section to-day for yesterday, though there are private reports of deterioration in Georgia and Alabama from the lack of moisture in some sections.

Sentiment to-day is somewhat more bullish and higher prices are predicted for the present at least, but there is an element who believe the market is entirely too high and are awaiting rain developments in the West to sell.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 3 points lower to 3 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Precipitation overnight in the west occurred at a few isolated places only. No general rains yet, although it continues generally cloudy over Texas. The map shows cloudy weather in North Carolina, also generally fair in the west of the belt, good rains in North Carolina and in the south central Gulf states. Indications are unchanged and prospects continue for unsettled weather and precipitation to come on in western States in the near future. Cloudy weather and showers, with a decided fall in temperatures in New Mexico and Colorado promise speedier rain developments for Texas and Oklahoma.

Liverpool is steady, but cables that heavy hedge selling is weighing on the market. Manchester cables: "Weaving worse. Yarns slack. Lower unless bad crop prospects." Our market opened 2 points higher and on steadiness of spot houses and covering by shorts, especially in the absence of general rains in the west and in anticipation of an unfavorable weather report for the week.

New York wires that Weld's traveling man reports 12 points deterioration in Texas since July 25. It must be borne in mind, however, that the crop condition in Texas was unusually high up to that date.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—There will be showers within the next thirty-six hours in the Lake regions, and the North and Middle Atlantic States. Occasional showers will continue in Florida. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi the weather will be generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

The temperatures will rise slowly in the northeastern districts during to-night and Wednesday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Fair in west, showers in east portion to-night or Wednesday; warmer to-night.

North Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair except showers in north portion to-night or Wednesday.

Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A steady tone was shown in all commodities at the metal exchange to-day with the exception of tin, which was weak. Copper, spot and August, 14.72½@15.85; September and October, 14.95@15.75; spelter, 5.75@6.80; lead, 4.50, bid; tin, 41.00¾@42.00; zinc, 5.85@6.75.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows mostly cloudy in Texas and North Carolina, generally fair over rest of the belt. No rains shown on the map, except light shower at Galveston and Amarillo, and raining in far west Texas at El Paso. Nice rains fell over south central Gulf and North Carolina, but little rain elsewhere.

* * *

F. M. Cordill wires: "Charlotte, Greenville, Atlanta to Montgomery an unbroken stretch of excellent crops is noted. Atlantics show uninterrupted improvement since my last trip. The weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable. Conditions were never better at this date."

Waxahatchie, Texas, wires: "Hot winds hurting cotton badly. We have reports stating western Oklahoma is deteriorating rapidly. Only showers reported to-day at Yoakum and Brenham."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Expected rains did not fall in Oklahoma and Texas and the market was due to advance on the opening Monday morning. But Europe reflected no alarm, Arkansas reported splendid rains, Washington unsettled weather over Oklahoma and the weather prophets among the trade said that Texas rains are imminent. Under the circumstances the market continued under the spell of Washington legislative threat and hung fire.

"Recently students of the crop have devoted much time and thought to the effect of dry weather in Texas. One faction, predicating its opinion on the general reports of lack of moisture made by the Weather Bureau and on the great number of crop damage advices now coming from the west, says the crop in Texas and Oklahoma has deteriorated sharply, and that those States no longer promise a wonderful yield. Another faction, which has looked up the western rainfall records of other years, is equally certain that the present drouthy spell is not only not abnormal, but is confined to a very much smaller area than the trade realizes.

"Thus it is that some traders adhere to the belief that a very large crop is on the way, conditions east of the Mississippi River being exceptionally fine, others are now becoming convinced another year's need will exceed production. Meantime new crop cotton is being absorbed by previously created requirement just as the talent expected it would be, but the demand for later shipments is small, a fact that robs the bull side of the account of much attractiveness."

The Journal of Commerce says the volume of business passing in the cotton goods market is far below the usual standard. Jobbers are doing a good general trade. Cotton yarn prices are easier. The lower trend of prices on the cotton exchanges has caused some setback in the goods markets, but there are few goods available for spot delivery. Most mills do not care to go far ahead of another cotton crop until they are better satisfied of the outcome of the crop.

Dallas wires: "Texas—Generally clear, rain at Amarillo and El Paso. Oklahoma—Clear and hot."

* * *

The Government's official record of Texas gives the rainfall average for the month of July as 1.29 inches, which is 1.62 below normal, but .09 inch higher than it was last year.

* * *

Official temperature average for Oklahoma yesterday was 104 degrees; Texas, 98, with seven stations recording 100; five 102, and one 104 degrees.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Market easier on hedge selling; tendency here to buy on expected bullish weekly report and anticipation of bullish weather forecast of Government to-day."

* * *

Manchester quotes officially to-day yarns dull and weak.

* * *

The market steadied up on dry map in the Western belt after the call. Weld, Mitchell and Cone were the leading buyers on the advance. Smith was possibly the best seller, supposed to be for Wall street.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Mean temperatures ranged from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Central North Carolina, north Central South Carolina and in the lower coast region of Texas, where there was a slight deficiency. The greatest excess in temperature occurred in Northwestern Arkansas and Northeastern Oklahoma.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern belt, from 82 to 84 degrees over the central and from 82 to 88 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88, occurred at Fort Worth, Texas, and Fort Smith, Ark.

No precipitation occurred during the week in Oklahoma and there was very little in Texas. Rain fell generally over the other portions of the cotton region, except that there was none in the extreme northern portion of Alabama and the southern portion of Middle Tennessee.

The precipitation was unevenly distributed and more than 2 inches occurred in Louisiana, in the central portion of Northern Arkansas, Southern Florida and at one station in Alabama and one in North Carolina. The greatest weekly precipitation, 8 inches, occurred at Calico Rock, Ark., and there was 5.66 inches at Minden, La.

MARKED ACTIVITY NOTED IN STOCKS

Street More Cheerful Over Cheap Money Talk—Standard Railroads Led Advance.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Union Pacific made a new high mark for the present movement at the opening of the stock market to-day, when it began selling at 154¼, or ⅜ above Monday's final.

The tone was strong and most of the issues showed fractional gains. The accumulation arose from scattered sources and include some shares which for a long time have been neglected.

Among the advances were Woolworth, ½; Steel common, ⅛; United States Rubber common, ⅞; Union Pacific, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Bethlehem Steel, ½; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; Texas Company, ½; Southern Pacific, ¼; Reading, ¾; Pennsylvania Railroad, ½; Northern Pacific, ¾; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie first preferred ⅝, and Erie common, ⅛.

New Haven, which closed last night at ⅝, crossed par, opening at 100⅛.

St. Paul, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 107½, against 109¾ at the closing last night.

The curb was firm.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in London were strong.

Toward the end of the first hour, large buying orders appeared and nearly everything on the list moved up to new high records for the past six weeks. Gains of more than a point were noted in the leading railroads and industrials, while substantial fractional upturns were recorded in many other issues.

Amalgamated Copper led the upward movement, advancing 1⅜ to 74⅝. Union Pacific moved up 1⅝ to 155⅜, and similar gains were recorded in Canadian Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Steel common, Wabash common, United States Rubber, Utah & Copper and Tennessee Copper, advancing more than ½ each. Southern Pacific was under slight pressure, however, declining ½ to 91¾.

Call money is loaning and renewing at 2¾ per cent.

Union Pacific will sell ex-rights Wednesday.

The tone was strong in the last hour, and a number of issues made substantial gains. United States Rubber common advanced to more than 62, a net gain of more than 1 points since the opening. Steel, strong, selling around 65 for a gain of ¾ since noon. Canadian Pacific was off fractionally. Lehigh Valley and St. Paul held firm and Texas Company was very strong, selling at 118¾ for a gain or more than 2 points on the day. Broken sale there was a good deal of investment buying in Europe.

STOCK GOSSIP

"As I have said many times of late, any activity the stock market displays is when prices are advancing. I hear that the large interests are heavily long of securities and are accumulating more from day to day.

"Although prices have had a good advance from the low of June 11, the advance under way will continue until stocks are at a considerably higher level. I am especially bullish on Union Pacific, Steel, Copper and the Tractions, and believe holdings should be increased in all of these issues on any moderate recession."—G. D. Potter.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 85⅝@87⅝
Corn—No. 2 ..... 77⅛
Oats—No. 2 ..... 41½@42½

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—September corn was up as much as 1⅛c to-day, but it lost ⅛c later, yet the closing price was about 1c higher.

A report was received during the session saying that the losses throughout the dry districts in the corn belt have been sensational since the Government August report made its appearance.

On this a great deal of corn was bought and it was bought by the larger holders and bulls in the trade. December was quite strong and closed 1⅜c higher, and May was up a little over 1c. The big corn market was chock full of excited humanity, as many speculators left the other pits to try their luck in corn.

Wheat closed with gains of ⅛ to ½c and oats were up ⅛ to ⅜c.

Provisions were lower all around.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Plans for Erection of Sixteen-Story Bldg. At Whitehall and Ala.

Dr. E. L. Connally Consults Architects—United Cigar Stores May Take Brown & Allen Corner.

Announcement was made Tuesday of plans for a sixteen-story office building on the Brown & Allen site, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, a full account of which appears elsewhere. Dr. E. L. Connally owns the present building and will erect the new one.

This action will bring about some interesting changes, and may mean that Brown & Allen will move across the street to the place now occupied by Thomas H. Pitts, the tobacconist, and that the United Cigar Stores Company will be located where Brown & Allen now are.

The corner on which the building will stand is one of the busiest in Atlanta and brings a handsome rental.

List of 24 Exhibitors.

Success of the plan to exhibit Atlanta-made goods on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building seems to be assured. Already 24 merchants and manufacturers have signed up for space. They are the Whittier Mills Company, Marcus-Loeb & Co., Nunnally & McCrea, Southern Engraving Company, Frederick Disinfectant Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, E. Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, Southern Upholstering Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Southern Spring Bed Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper, Gholstin-Cunningham Company, All Star Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Norris, Inc., Willingham-Tift Lumber Company, Tripod Paint Company, J. P. Stevens Engraving Company, Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company, White Provision Company, Dowman-Dozier, Foote & Davies.

The plan of the committee has been to put so many "spaces" 10 feet square at the disposal of exhibitors.

Moving on Whitehall.

The Eugene V. Haynes jewelry establishment will move soon from No. 37 to No. 49 Whitehall street. The firm has renovated the latter place and Mr. Haynes has carried out many ideas of the jewelry business gained on trips abroad. Under the old lease this concern was paying $4,000 a year rental, but the owner of No. 37 Whitehall, A. B. Steele, asked $12,000. Unable to reach a compromise at $8,000 the jewelry concern announced that it would move. The change will take place about September 1. An up-to-date moving picture house, it is said, will occupy the old location.

Peachtree Creek Plans.

What can be done to reclaim or "renovate" Peachtree Creek? More than a hundred property owners would like to know. The County Commissioners have a plan to clear out the bed and remove driftwood from the banks. This, they believe, will prevent to a large extent the present overflow in the rainy season, and keep the low places free from standing water. Mosquitoes won't have a chance, and as for the sewage of former days it has been largely removed by the erection of the Peachtree Creek disposal plant.

Some time ago the sugestion was made that the creek be bridged over for a considerable distance. This plan met opposition from Eretus Rivers, who declared that the city and the county had so few streams of size that they should be left exposed to view.

The main permanent trouble with Peachtree Creek seems to be that it is muddy rather than clear. Were it a stream of sparkling water rather than a ditch carrying off Georgia red clay its possibilities would be unlimited. If it were a good stream in this sense the lowlands that now border it could be turned into attractive park spaces for present and future generations.

Spring Street Improvement.

Sooner or later there is going to be a big improvement on Spring street to make it as much as possible a help to Peachtree. The proposition to extend Spring northward to Brookwood has already been announced. It rests where many other good propositions rest, to be revived later when the need becomes greater than it is at present.

Now comes the suggestion that Spring street be turned slightly from its course as it strikes Carnegie way—that a slice be cut from the northeast corner of Cain street (the Governor's Mansion lot) and Spring street be connected up with Cone street, which now ends at Carnegie way, and extended across the railroad tracks by way of a concrete viaduct.

Cone street ends on the south at Marietta street and it is suggested that the street be continued. The viaduct would go straight until the tracks were crossed and then curve slightly to the left, or about due south, and land on Madison avenue, to serve the entire Terminal Station district.

This arrangement, it is pointed out, would make it possible for the viaduct to pass safely to the east of the W. & A. freight depot, and it would put a leading thoroughfare one block closer to the retail district than a viaduct which jumped from the foot of the present Spring street. Not only that, but a first-class, straight-line thoroughfare would be opened up for traffic that would otherwise use Peachtree, and travelers using the Terminal Station could reach their North Side homes much more quickly than by the circuitous route that it is now necessary to travel.

Legislators To Be Paid at Once; Sum Due Them $70,000

That the Georgia legislators will receive every penny of the money due them for their services in the present session of the General Assembly was indicated Tuesday morning following a conference between Governor Slaton and State Treasurer Speer.

The total amount which will be paid to the legislators for salaries and mileage will be $70,000.

State Treasurer Speer declared Tuesday the legislators would be paid in full, regardless of the depleted condition of the treasury, sufficient funds for this purpose being in hand.

A large part of the $70,000 has been paid to the legislators already.

Senate Passes Bill Limiting Militia's Use

Apparently weary from the strenuous campaign for tax revision which culminated in the passage of the substitute to the Shepard bill Monday night, Georgia Senators adjourned Tuesday at noon following the passage of two general bills by McGregor, of the Nineteenth, providing for a revision of the military laws of the State. The vote was 29 to 0. There was no debate.

The bills provide affidavits shall be made by civic authorities before request is made upon the Governor for troops in case of riot or insurrection, thereby decreasing the power of the civil authorities and increasing that of the executive. The measure, according to its supporters, aims to prevent riots between citizens and soldiers such as occurred in Augusta last year.

Tubercular Cattle Barred From State

An order designed to prevent the shipment of tubercular cattle into Georgia was issued Tuesday morning by Dr. Peter F. Balmsen, State Veterinarian, from the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. The order provides that all cattle originating in New York or Illinois, destined to any point in Georgia, must be accompanied by a certificate of health issued by a veterinary inspector of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The order goes into effect immediately.

Girl's Plea for Man Softens Policewoman

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Policewoman Alice Clement to-day was sorry she made an arrest. She was proud of the accomplishment in capturing a young man who insisted upon following her in the downtown streets.

But Miss Alice Brow, the young woman fiance, went to Policewoman Clement and pleaded that she recommend his release. Miss Brown, after several minutes' pleading, cried and then fainted.

When Policewoman Clement started to court to appear against Fred Bentley, 26, the young man she had arrested, she said: "I'm sorry I pinched him."

Parcel Post Stamps Going to Waste Here

The Atlanta postoffice has more than half a million parcel post stamps as a dead weight. Postmaster Hugh McKee has been instructed to sell them at once, but is having a hard job doing it.

Under an order which went into effect July 1 parcel post stamps were declared no longer necessary.

The parcel post stamps immediately fell into disuse, although they are of the same value as other stamps of the same denominations and can be used on all classes of matter.

POSSE SEARCHING FOR LEE SLAYER

South Georgia Farmer Shot Dead by Black He Attempted to Disarm.

LEESBURG, Aug. 12.—Searching parties to-day are scouring the country near this place in an effort to capture Doc Mathis, a negro, who shot and killed R. L. Jessey, a prominent Lee County farmer, last night.

Berry Wallace, a brother-in-law of Jossey, had a difficulty with Will Mathis, a son of the slayer, for beating a mule.

Returning from Leesburg in the automobile of Wallace, accompanied by several other men, a stop was made at the home of the negro, who, it was reported, had secured a rifle with which to avenge the whipping of his boy. It was the intention of the party to disarm the negro. They called to him and he came out, but returned to the house, saying: "Wait until I get my shoes."

Josey followed and told the negro to wait, but the negro shut and fastened the door. His son, Will Mathis, began firing at the party in the automobile from a window. Doc Mathis cracked the door open and fired at Jossey, the ball passing through the right breast.

Jossey's body was secured by the party and brought to Leesburg, where the posse was formed. The negroes in the meantime had escaped.

U. S. Peace Delegate To the Hague Is Dead

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 12.—The funeral of Judge U. M. Rose, member of The Hague Peace Conference, who died here to-day, will be held Thursday from the family residence. Judge Rose was one of the most distinguished members of the Southern bar and at one time was president of the American Bar Association. In 1905, following a visit of President Roosevelt to Little Rock, he was appointed a member of the International Peace Conference at The Hague.

Judge Rose was 79 years of age. His death was hastened by a recent fall, when he sustained a fractured arm.

Rain Halts Mercury As It Starts on Climb

A light shower shortly after noon Tuesday cooled the atmosphere and brought Atlanta relief from heat. The mercury in the official thermometer was forced from 88 degrees down to 78 in less than a half hour. The day started off with the thermometer registering 76 degrees.

Fair weather and cooler is predicted by Government Forecaster VonHerrmann.

Elopers Are Halted By Tifton Sheriff

TIFTON, Aug. 12.—Sheriff Shaw arrested Arthur Harrington, 17-year-old son of Deputy Sheriff R. M. Harrington, of Ocilla, in answer to a telephone message from the young man's father.

Harrington, with a Miss Smith, aged 16, of Ocilla, came to Tifton in an automobile intending to secure a license and get married. When they arrived here Harrington was taken in custody and held until his father came, when he was taken back to Ocilla.

Shirt a la Bulgarian Blouse Jails 2 Men

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., Aug. 12.—Two men were arrested here while strolling along the main thoroughfare wearing shirts hanging loose, a la Bulgarian blouse.

When asked for an explanation, the men said: "Women are wearing suspenders nowadays. Guess we can wear Bulgarian blouses if we want to."

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

Urges U. S. Ban on Alien Conspirators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, to-day introduced a bill aiming at the deportation of Mexicans in this country who may be stirring up trouble between the United States and Mexico.

His bill provides that any alien who shall take advantage of his residence in the United States to conspire for the overthrow of a foreign government in North or South America, with which this country is on friendly terms, shall be deported.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

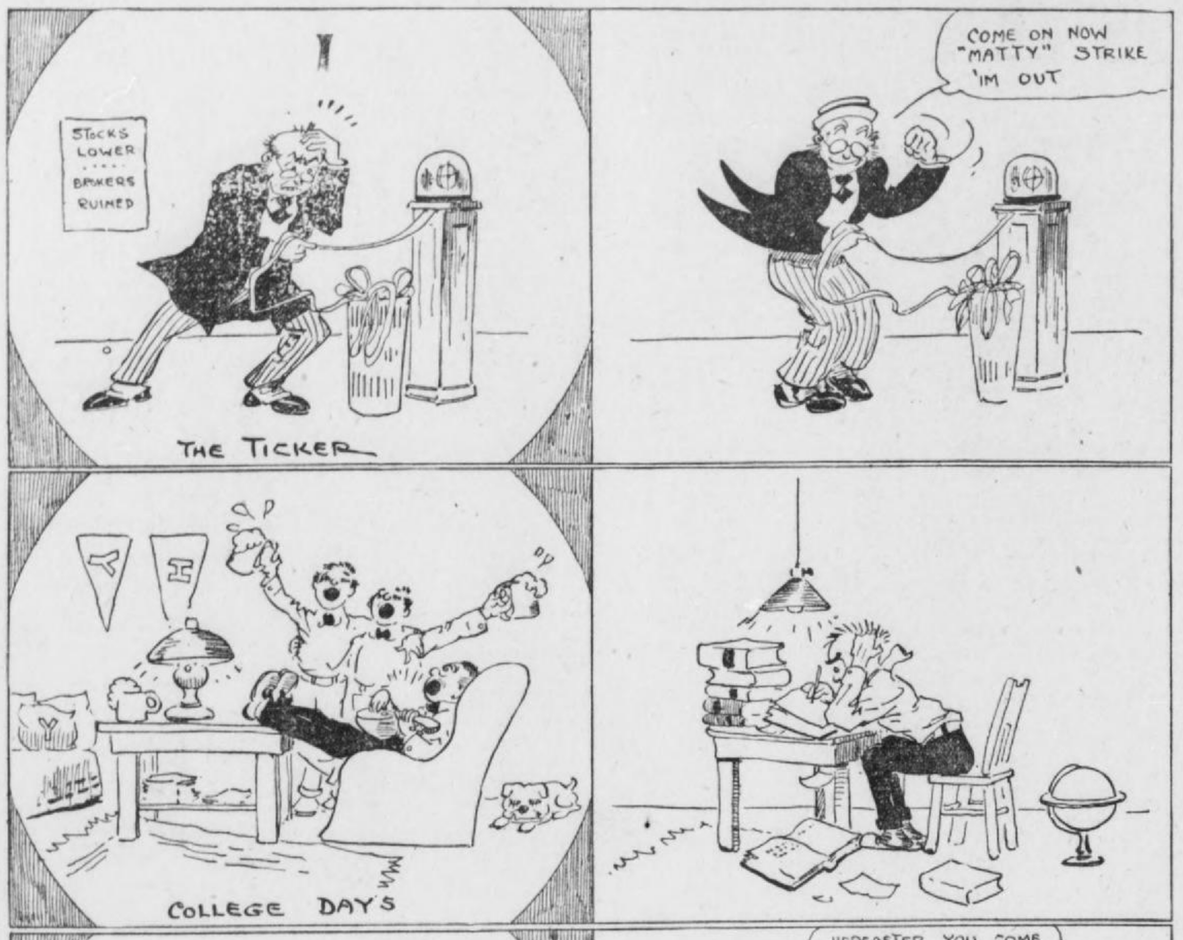

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

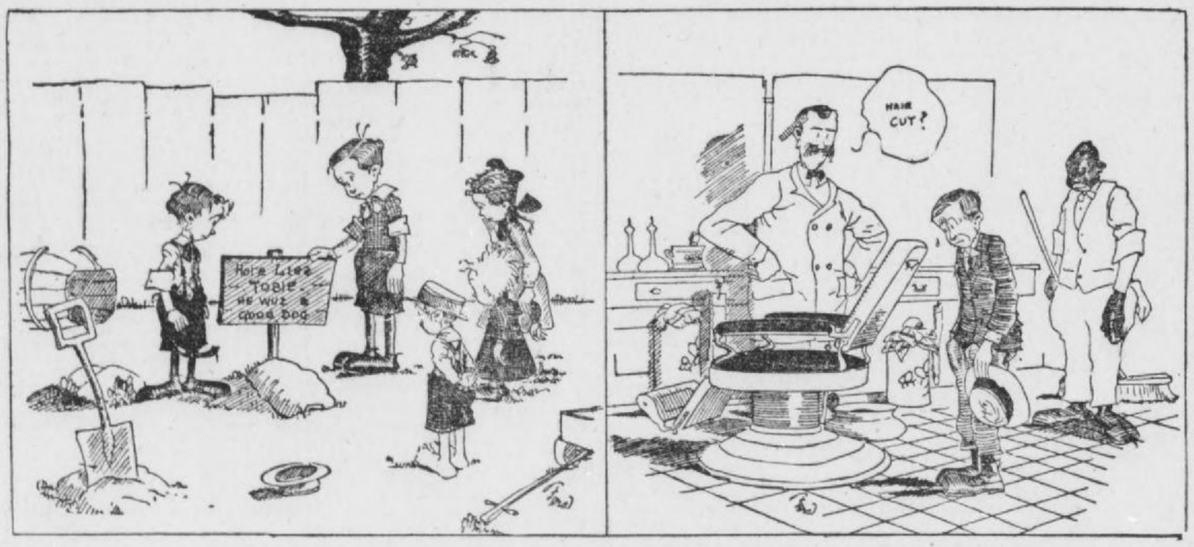

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

Adam Smith

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power.
Great love to that great hour.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

JUDGE ROAN RULES OUT NEW ATTACK ON FRANK'S CHARACTER

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

State announces its theory that Frank planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan the day before she came to the factory for her money.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified that he had seen women in Frank's office, was shown up by the defense and admitted by Dalton.

Four acquaintances of Dalton testify that they would not believe him under oath and that his reputation for truth and veracity is bad.

C. E. Pollard, expert accountant, testifies that it required him three hours and eleven minutes to compile the financial sheet that the defense claims Frank prepared the afternoon of the murder.

Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer, says that Frank did no work on the financial sheet Saturday morning, the day of the crime.

Jim Conley's declaration that Lemmie Quinn came into the factory and left before the arrival of Monteen Stover, who came at 12:05 o'clock, is challenged by the testimony of Miss Hall, who swears Quinn did not enter the factory before she left at 12:02 o'clock.

Magnolia Kennedy, worker at the pencil factory, testifies she laid her hand and Helen Ferguson's shoulder when they drew their pay and that the girl did not ask for Mary Phagan's wages. She says Schiff paid off. Miss Kennedy says hair found in lathe looked like slain girl's.

Sinister intimations made by Solicitor Dorsey in questioning Will Chambers, a boy in the factory, who denies alleged conversations, are ordered ruled out.

Attorney Arnold threatens to move for a mistrial if any further intimations of this sort are allowed to be heard by the jury.

Minola McKnight, cook in the Frank household, gives evidence against that offered by her husband and declares detectives tried to make her swear to lies. She admitted she signed the affidavit reporting alleged conversations between Mrs. Frank and the prisoner, but insisted it was a lie and that she signed because the detectives threatened to lock her up if she did not.

Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman testified they saw Frank at the factory at 11:35 and left at 11:45. This seems like a strong blow at Jim Conley's story that Frank said to him, "Here comes Corinthia Hall and Emma Clark," when he told him to hide in the wardrobe after the murder—or about 1 o'clock.

However, while Conley swore to this in his third affidavit, after the discrepancy had been pointed out, he said on the stand he wasn't sure what Frank said.

Determined attempts by the State to introduce further evidence of the alleged degeneracy of Leo M. Frank were frustrated Tuesday afternoon by the protests and objections of Attorney Reuben Arnold.

"If any further effort is made to introduce such testimony, I shall move for a mistrial," declared Arnold to the court.

Solicitor Dorsey sought to get the testimony from Philip Chambers, a 15-year-old office boy who was in the pencil factory from last December until March. The Solicitor Questioned the boy about alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, and the boy denied them. Arnold objected and all the questions along this line were ruled out. Dorsey said he would call Gantt in rebuttal.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook whose sensational affidavit concerning occurrences in the Frank home the day of the tragedy and the night and morning following created a stir early in June, utterly repudiated the affidavit to Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey.

She declared that it all was "a pack of lies" and that she had been browbeaten and bulldozed by the detectives into signing it under threat of spending a term in jail.

All of this, she swore, had been invented by her husband. In addition, she declared her husband had not been at the Frank home April 26. McKnight swore he was there and saw Frank come home and then depart hurriedly without eating anything.

Dorsey was not able to shake her in her denials of the truth of any part of the statement.

Gordon Bailey, one of the sweepers at the factory, testified that he had not heard Frank ask Conley to come early Saturday to the factory and that he never had seen women in Frank's office nor Conley watching at the factory door.

He testified that he saw Conley looking at the newspapers at the police station.

The State definitely announced Tuesday its theory that Frank deliberately premeditated and planned a criminal attack upon Mary Pragan Friday, April 25, the day before she came to the factory and was slain.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The shadow of another war in the Balkans hangs over Europe. Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, announced in the House of Commons to-day that if Turkey refuses to give up Adrianople at the insistence of Bulgaria, the powers will not be able to divert the consequences, "no matter what their character."

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The direct overture of the United States to the Huerta administration—the tender of American aid in the effort to restore peace in Mexico—is expected to be transmitted by Envoy Lind to the Mexican national palace within a few hours.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 12. There will be no formal organization of a National Council of Catholic Women at the convention of the American Federation of Catholics this year. This was practically determined this forenoon at the preliminary meeting of the women called to plan the perfecting of such a council.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 12.—The Ohio River is at the lowest stage in years as a result of the drouth, and coal shipments have suspended. Three million bushels of coal due for shipment south are tied up at Pittsburg.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—Eleanor Fay, who says Louis R. Glavis, of Ballinger case fame, is her fiance, tried to end her life by swallowing carbolic acid while on a ferry boat plying the bay. She asserted she was to wed Glavis soon.

I. T. U. Officers May Serve Indefinitely

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Lynch, of the International Typographical Union, won another victory at the annual convention of the order to-day when the delegates sustained by an overwhelming vote the recommendation of the committee on laws that reported unfavorably on the proposition to make officers of the International Union ineligible to serve for more than two years. This proposition by Delegate Beadle, of Tacoma, Wash., was aimed particularly at President Lynch.

EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY IS DENIED

Executive's Action Comes as the Supreme Court Reverses Ruling Favoring Father.

The Supreme Court Tuesday reversed the decision of Judge Hammond, of Augusta, awarding the two Zachry children to the father, thereby further complicating the sensational case in which requisition papers by Governor Cole Blease for Zachry were refused by Governor Slaton Tuesday morning.

According to the ruling of the Supreme Court, the decision awarding the children to the father is reversed and remanded to Judge Hammond's court for further hearing. The ruling further specifies that Judge Hammond may exercise his discretion in awarding the custody of the children, which is contrary to the opinion rendered by Judge Hammond, who held previously that he was forced to award the children to Zachry because of a previous judgment.

The effect of the ruling will be to put the whole matter back in the Augusta courts, with the possibility that Mrs. Zachry will be awarded the custody of the two children.

Governor Slaton based his refusal on the fact that no State law had been violated by Zachry in South Carolina and that the whole case was against the defendant grew out of the desire of Mrs. Zachry to obtain the custody of the two children.

One of the most spectacular fights for the extradition of a citizen ever recorded in Georgia occurred in the Governor's offices Monday. Charges and counter charges were hurled in turn by counsel for the defense and for the State of South Carolina, and at one time a personal mix-up between Attorney Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, and Attorney Phinizy, representing Mr. Zachry, who charged that the case had been prosecuted with all the "vindictiveness" that Mr. Dunbar could summon, was narrowly averted by the Governor.

Slaton Draws Line.

"You may wax just as enthusiastic as you like," said Governor Slaton to Mr. Phinizy, "but you can't say those things. That will not do here."

The hearing was as unique as it was spectacular. With the Governor sitting as both court and jury, attorneys for the defense and plaintiffs were allowed to argue their cases to their hearts' content with frequent interruptions by the Governor, who kept close tab on every bit of evidence offered.

In addition to the three attorneys for Zachry, Cohen and Phinizy, of Augusta, and West, of Thompson, E. D. Clary, Mayor of Harlem, the defendant's home town, testified in behalf of Zachry. Attorneys Rembert, of Columbia, S. C., and Dunbar, of Augusta, represented the State of South Carolina.

Mayor Clary, of Harlem, created a sensation when he testified that he had on one occasion pulled Mrs. Zachry and her mother off Zachry following an attack. Mrs. Zachry, he declared further, had said in his presence that if she did not get her children she would have to kill her husband.

Kidnaping Charge Irrelevant.

The climax of the hearing was reached, however, when the attorneys for Governor Blease virtually admitted to Governor Slaton that the charge of kidnaping, as incorporated in the requisition papers, was not relevant and that practically all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the custody of the two children.

In substantiation of the latter statement Governor Slaton referred to a letter which he himself had received from Mrs. Zachry, in which, he declared, it seemed that all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the children.

This testimony of the Governor and the startling admission of Attorney Rembert, representing Governor Blease, broke down the whole argument of the plaintiff and really marked the turning point in the hearing.

Bill Providing Home For Wayward Girls Is Passed in House

The bill introduced in the House by Representatives Jones of Coweta and Mills of Butts County providing for a home for wayward girls to be called the "Georgia Industrial Home for Girls," carrying with it an appropriation of $30,000, was passed Tuesday after much discussion, by a vote of 115 to 46.

Twenty thousand dollars will be used as a building fund and the remaining $10,000 will be used as a maintenance fund. The bill met with bitter opposition by Fullbright of Burke County, who declared it was of no use, as the Senate would not act on the measure. The Speaker of the House informed the gentleman from Burke that he had received word from the President of the Senate that the Senate would consider it.

Shuptrine of Chatham made a motion to have the bill tabled. The motion was lost, 106 to 54. The bill also provides for a board of managers consisting of five members, two of which shall be women. Minor amendments to the bill were considered.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, made the surprising announcement of the State's attitude during a heated argument over the admissibility of a portion of the testimony of one of the defense's witnesses, Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer at Montag Bros. and occasionally employed at the National Pencil Factory.

That the State was working upon the theory of premeditation was hinted by the questioning of Helen Ferguson several days ago but Attorney Hooper's address to the court was the first open declaration.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness against Frank, was given an airing by Attorney Arnold. Dalton was recalled to the stand and made to admit that he had been sent to the chaingang in 1894 on three separate counts for stealing in Walton County.

Dalton also admitted that he had been indicted in 1899 in Walton County for theft and had paid a fine of $141.46.

Attorney Arnold showed the witness copies of four indictments and asked if he knew these had been issued against him in Walton County for selling liquor to Don Tillman and Bob Harris. Dalton denied all knowledge of the indictments.

Witnesses Assail Dalton's Character.

As soon as Dalton left the stand V. S. Cooper, J. H. Patrick, W. T. Mitchell and I. M. Patrick, all residents of Walton County, were called to the stand and testified that they knew Dalton and that they wouldn't believe him on oath in a court of justice.

Misses Laura Atkinson and Minnie Smith were called and denied Walton's testimony in regard to being in their company.

Dalton testified, when he was called by the State last week, that he had visited the factory basement with Miss Daisy Hopkins and that he frequently had seen Frank in his office with women.

An unassailable alibi was the object in view when the attorneys for Frank began the questioning of a long line of witnesses who were called to testify in regard to every known movement of Frank Saturday, April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was slain.

The testimony of Miss Hattie Hall was the first along this line. That of Alonzo Mann, office boy, was next.

That Frank did not do any work on the financial sheet Saturday forenoon was one of the most important declarations made by Miss Hall. She had testified at the Coroner's inquest that she assisted Frank in compiling this sheet, but she explained to Solicitor Dorsey that she was mistaken, and it was only one of the tabulations from which the financial sheet was being made that she had worked on.

Her testimony on this point strikes at the State's theory that Frank did the work in the forenoon.

Miss Hall also testified that Frank signified his desire to have her work for him at the factory in the afternoon and had asked Harry Gotheimer to come back to the factory in the afternoon, requests which the defense will claim establish conclusively that Frank was not arranging for the commission of any crime or wrongdoing Saturday afternoon.

The witness said that she left the factory first at 12 o'clock as the whistles were blowing, but that she forgot her umbrella and returned to Frank's office for it, noting that it was 12:02 as she left finally. She declared that she did not see Lemmie Quinn enter Frank's office. Conley testified that he saw Quinn enter the factory before the arrival of Monteen Stover or Mary Phagan. The Stover girl said she reached the office floor at 12:05 o'clock.

Miss Hall indignantly denied the imputation of Solicitor Dorsey that her salary had been raised as the result of the testimony she was giving. She said that it had been agreed when she entered the employ of Montag Bros. that she was to get an increase of salary August 1, and that she had been unable to get it before this time.

Wade Campbell, an inspector at the factory, came in for a rigorous grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. Campbell testified that his sister, Mrs. Arthur White, had told him she had seen a negro at the foot of the stairs on the first floor when she went into the factory at 12:30 o'clock.

Campbell Grilled On Affidavit.

"Don't you know that what she actually said was that she saw the negro at 12:50 when she left?" inquired the Solicitor.

Campbell denied that this was so. The Solicitor then showed Campbell an affidavit and asked if it was not his signature at the bottom. Campbell said that it looked like his writing, but that he would not say positively. He denied that he had made the statement in the affidavit in which he was quoted as saying his sister had told of seeing the negro as she left the factory.

The witness on his redirect examination testified that he had seen Conley reading in the factory several times after the crime. Conley said on the stand that he was unable to read, except for a few simple words.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

Over Three Hours To Compile Report.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant.

Q. Have you had occasion to go over the financial sheet of the National Pencil Company of the week of April 24 prepared by Leo M. Frank? A. I went over a copy of it.

Q. Have you also seen the factory record called the pencil sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you also furnished data necessary to make that sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state as an expert how long it would take to complete it?—A. I took each sheet, compiled it, and timed myself as to the length of time necessary. I prepared the sheet of the 24th day. It took me ten minutes.

Q. Were there any mistakes?—A. Yes, a little one—of one and one-half gross. It was hard to say whether it was my mistake or his.

Q. Now state the total time it took you?—A. A total of 191 minutes, or 3 hours and 11 minutes.

Q. Was that the quickest?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you took exactly the work that he did?—A. Yes; what I was told he did.

Q. That was steady work without interruption, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been an auditor?—A. Sixteen years.

Q. Have you an office here?—A. I am with the American Audit Company.

Q. That mistake occurred before you took up the sheet, did it not?—A. One mistake was made the Saturday before and one on Friday.

Q. Are those two trifling mistakes—a mistake of 50 cents and a gross and a half of pencils—the only mistakes you found?—A. Yes.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Pollard, this is rather an unusual assignment for you, is it not, to go over a man's business and undertake to state how long it takes him to do it?—A. No, I think not. Frequently we are called on to estimate the time it takes to do work in changing systems.

Q. Is it not true that a man can work his own books better than anyone else's books?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. How many times would a man have to multiply, divide and subtract in making up that sheet?—A. Well, 40 multiplications and 160 additions, and I can't guess on the rest.

Aimed to Show Conduct.

The witness was excused and Miss Hattie Hall was called. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Q. What is your business?—A. Stenographer-bookkeeper at Montag Brothers.

Q. Do you ever go to the National Pencil Company?—A. When necessary.

Q. On Saturday, April 26, did you see Leo M. Frank?—A. About 10 o'clock at Montag Brothers.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he asked me if I could come over and do some work. I told him I didn't know, but thought I could.

Dorsey interrupted:

"I object to anything he said to her."

Arnold: "Your honor, it is part of res gestis in this case."

Dorsey: "Here is this dead girl. They would not let her show what she said at 12 o'clock and I can conceive of no principle of law that would let them show what this man said and not let her show what the deceased said."

Arnold: "This is merely to show a course of conduct."

Judge Roan: "I can see no analogy between the two cases. I rather think you can ask the question."

Dorsey: "Well, this is a very important point, your honor, and we would like to give you some authorities."

Judge Roan: "All right."

Dorsey then read at length from the Eighty-fourth Georgia Report.

Judge Roan: "Do you expect to follow that question by showing that he had certain work to do and engaged her to do it?"

Arnold: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I will let you ask it."

Dorsey threw his book on the table and sat down, laughing. Arnold continued the questioning.

Q. When did you call him first?—A. He called me up before 10 o'clock and said he had work enough to do to keep him busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey: "Is your honor going to let that telephone conversation in?"

The Solicitor's objection was overruled.

Q. Miss Hall, did you recognize his voice?—A. I certainly did.

Q. What time did you see him that Saturday morning?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Had you worked for him before?—A. I had been accustomed to going over and helping him on Saturdays. I asked him if he was going to need me. He said, "Yes," that he had so much work to do that he would be busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey Calls Halt; Roan Sustains Him.

Dorsey interrupted. "You honor, are you going to let that in?"

Judge Roan: "I don't think I will."

Arnold: "Your honor, I wish you would let me argue for a moment. Even the State does not claim any crime was committed at that time. There is no reason in the world to suppose that the accused would not have told the truth at that time. I believe that if a part of the conversation is admissible, all of it is admissible. You must admit it all to explain part. You would do this young man an injustice to shut out this evidence of this day's program, when there was not the slightest motive to be otherwise than truthful."

"Mr. Dorsey has sought to show," continued Mr. Arnold, "that this financial sheet could have been made up in the morning. We are just trying to show that it was impossible. Now I will read you a decision in which I participated with the father of my good friend, the late Judge Dorsey. It was 24 years ago."

Rosser: "Are you that old, Mr. Arnold?"

Arnold: "Yes, I am 24."

"Dorsey: "That case has nothing to do with this one. That was a case where a man on trial for murder swore to a lie."

Arnold: "It was charged that it was a lie. We never did believe it."

Dorsey: "He was convicted."

Arnold: "Yes, he was convicted."

Judge Roan ruled: "Mr. Arnold, this young woman can show that she was called, what she was requested to do, and what was shown her to be done. She can state how long she thinks it would take to finish that work. She can not state, however, what he told her over the telephone about what he expected to do."

Frank Leaves Court With Sheriff.

Arnold: "We want to note an exception to that."

Q. Miss Hall, what time did you go to Mr. Frank's office?—A. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock.

Q. Did you take dictation in his inner office, or in his outer office?—A. In the inner office.

Q. Where did you write it?—A. In the outer office.

At this point Leo Frank went out of the courtroom with Sheriff Mangum. Mr. Hooper jumped up and whispered to Mr. Arnold.

Arnold—Yes, I waived his presence.

Judge Roan—I excused the prisoner properly.

Hooper—I just wanted to know if the defense had waived his presence.

Q. Now, we only have ten orders here. See if they are the ones Frank handed you?—A. Yes. My initials are on them. They are the ones.

Q. Now, the orders are sometimes acknowledged as the first step?—A. Yes; in that case they were.

Q. Do you recall to whom Frank was talking that morning?—A. Yes, but I don't recall the names. A man and his son came in. Then there was Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. White.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. During this time was Mr. Frank working on this financial sheet or any other similar document?—A. He was not.

Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?—A. Not very.

Q. I will get you to look on this order book and see if those orders are entered.

The witness read the eleven orders from the order book.

Q. Now, is that your handwriting?—A. No; I think it is Mr. Frank's.

Q. Did you write any of these requisitions?—A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I understood Mr. Frank did.

Q. Were the requisitions made before or after the orders were put on the book?—A. After.

Left Factory At 12:02 P. M.

Q. Now look at these letters and see whether Frank dictated them?—A. Yes.

Q. How many?—A. Eight, and one he did not dictate.

Q. Did he sign them?—A. Yes, I took them to him after I had typed them.

Q. Did he do any work on that financial sheet while you were there?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Just as I got on my hat and started for the door I heard the whistle blow for noon.

Q. Is there a regular whistle that blows for 12 o'clock?—A. Yes, there are several whistles.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I got to the bottom of the steps and remembered that I had forgotten my umbrella. I went back and got it. It was two minutes past 12 o'clock as I passed the time clock.

Q. Did you see any little girl in the building?—A. I did not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you call Frank or Frank call you that Saturday morning?—A. I called him.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. He had a regular stenographer, didn't he?—A. They had a stenographer, but she didn't do but about one-third enough work so I had to go.

Q. Miss Hall, what were you receiving at that time?—A. Ten dollars and fifty cents a week.

Q. What are you getting now?—A. Fifteen dollars a week, and I want to explain——

Q. Never mind, just answer my questions. Didn't you state in a soda fountain last night that the raise came to you without asking for it after it was known that you were to be a witness?—A. Indeed, I did not. I don't go to soda fountains. I want to explain.

Attorney Arnold—Let her explain.

A. I insisted that they give me this raise on July 1, but they wouldn't give it to me until August 1.

Q. Did Frank come to Montag's before or after he called you up?—A. After.

Q. You are the one who called him up?—A. Yes.

Q. You did the insisting about going to his office?—A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you not swear at the Coroner's inquest that Frank left Montag's before you did?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. You acknowledged these orders with a postcard and letter?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote those between 10:30 and 12?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you state to the jury Frank left before you did?—A. I don't recall.

Q. How long would it take you to fill out the blank?—A. I never timed myself.

Talked Over Time With Office Boy

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would not take more than one minute?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you say Frank was at the office when you got there?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. Who came in while you were there?—A. Two men and three women.

Q. What time was it the office boy left?—A. 11:30.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner you could not tell the time?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you know now?—A. The boy told me.

Q. You talked it over with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when those people came in?—A. In the outer office.

Q. How long were you there when these people came in?—A. I do not recall.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner it was fifteen minutes?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How long was it after those let-

FRANK TRIAL WITNESS IS SURE, AT LEAST, OF ONE THING--A 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen, and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over!

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister," more than once—after that, it merely is "You, Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney: "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hang around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-hump-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes "hoot," doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you, speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejeculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise; let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record everything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?"

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

The Grand Climax.

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Georgia J. O. U. A. M. In Session at Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The nineteenth biennial convention of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics met here to-day with about 150 delegates, representing the various councils in the State, in attendance.

It is probable that the next meeting will go to Athens, and that Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected councilor to succeed Judge W. W. Shepard, of Savannah. O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, state treasurer, is assured of re-election.

Extra Police to Curb Thieves Bryan Day

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 12.—Expecting an unusual representation of pickpockets when William J. Bryan makes his chautauqua address here, August 28, the borough fathers, at their regular monthly council meeting, have taken decided action.

Secretary Williams was directed to ask Superintendent Groome to have the State constabulary here on Bryan day. The occasion is expected to draw a larger crowd than any circus day in the last 25 years.

900 Young Women Ask to Join Army

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—The War Minister has received a petition from 900 young Frenchwomen who ask to be allowed to join the army in the auxiliary services.

They declare they are prepared to submit absolutely to military discipline, adding that their dearest hope is to consecrate part of their youth to France, and thus co-operate with their brethren in the national defense.

WONDERFUL HOW RESINOL CURED ITCHING HUMOR

New York, N. Y., May 19, 1913: —"I was taken with a terrible itching and burning in my hands. They would crack and bleed. I could not do my work. I had to walk the floors at night. I tried —— and ——, but no relief, until I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment—then I could go to sleep. The Resinol treatment is something wonderful, for if you could see my hands, you would never think that they were ever sore—they are so nice and soft, and I can do all my work now." (Signed) Mrs. Wm. Sutherland, 135 East 71st St.

For 18 years Resinol has been a doctor's prescription and household remedy for eczema, ringworm, pimples, dandruff, wounds, burns, sores and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. Trial free; Dept. 5-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SUICIDE BY DYNAMITE.

ALTOONA, PA., Aug. 12.—Placing two sticks of dynamite in his vest pocket, Henry Boldt, 55, applied a match to the fuses and was blown to pieces.

Attacks on Dr. Harris Give Defense Good Day

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

"No man in the world could examine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of his profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor. His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.
"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled. Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga. — "My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

RESIDENTS OF DALTON'S HOME COUNTY RIDDLE HIS CHARACTER ON STAND

ters were dictated that you commenced writing?—A. Two minutes.

Q. Can you tell how long you were writing those letters?—A. No.

Q. When you were writing those letters, where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. After you finished, what did he do?—A. I took them in to him.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. He said he would put them in the envelopes and mail them.

Q. He said you need not wait?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get anything there Monday?—A. I got the timebook and some papers.

Q. The previous Saturday when you were over there, do you remember Frank working on the financial sheet that morning?—A. No; I helped him get up something about gross—I found afterward it was the average sheet.

made it up. I helped him by transferring some of the things to the sheet?"—A. Yes, but I thought it was the financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you state at the coroner's inquest that you helped him the Saturday before?—A. Yes.

Found Her Error Herself, She Says.

Q.When was it you discovered it was not the financial sheet?—A. I don't know, but I want you to know I discovered the mistake myself.

Q. Now, were you not at the factory the previous Saturday and helped him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not have that financial sheet before you at the Coroner's inquest, and did you not identify it?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you said he was working on the financial sheet that previous morning?—A. He was not.

Q. Did you not tell the Coroner's jury that you were in the outer office the entire time?—A. I don't know.

Q. Now explain how your mind underwent this change. You said then you were not in his office and now you say you were.—A. I was rattled before the Coroner, because I had never been in a courtroom before.

Q. Now, didn't you say in response to the question, "Do you know what a financial sheet is?" that you did?—A. But I was thinking of the average sheet.

Q. Now, what did you mean by telling the Coroner some of those girls came in for their pay and now saying the only one you know anything about came in for her coat?—A. I just forgot.

Q. Now, didn't Frank say that morning that he would not get up that sheet until Herbert Schiff came down and got up the necessary data? A. Yes, he said he could not go on with his work until Schiff came down.

Q. You do know that Frank said positively he could not make up that sheet until Schiff had gotten up certain data?—A. He did not positively say so. He said he did not mind Mr. Schiff being off if he had done his work, but that he had not done his work.

Q. Miss Hall, didn't you swear before the Coroner's jury that you worked on this financial sheet which is written in ink the Saturday previous, and now to-day you swear it was this sheet which is written in pencil?—A. I did not. I was identifying the handwriting on that sheet.

Q. You said lots of people wrote slanting, and it was hard to identify?—A. Yes.

Q. While you were working in Frank's outer office, you said he was very quiet and you did not know what he was doing?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether he was working on the financial sheet or not?—A. Yes; I saw the papers on his desk that he was working on, and the financial sheet was not among them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Why did you tell Mr. Frank you had to get away at 12 o'clock?—A. He said something about wanting me to help him in the afternoon. I told him I had to get away at 12 o'clock, and I did get away at 12 o'clock.

Dalton's Prison Record Exposed.

Dorsey objected to the answer, but was overruled.

Miss Hall was excused and C. B. Dalton was recalled to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Who is Andrew Dalton?—A. A brother-in-law.

Q. With the same name?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is John Dalton?—A. He is my brother.

Q. Weren't you three sent to the chaingang at the special term of the Walton County Superior Court in 1894?—A. No.

Q. You were not?—A. I was, but the others paid out.

Q. What did you steal?—A. A chop hammer.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to two more charges?—A. That is the only time I ever went to the chaingang. I don't know how long I served, but I was pardoned in March.

Attorney Arnold moved that the witness' reply in reference to being pardoned be struck from the records.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to three charges all at the same time? And that the sentence was concurrent on the three charges?—A. All I took was a chop hammer. One of the other boys took a plow stock.

Q. At the February term of 1899, were you not indicted for stealing a bale of cotton?—A. For helping.

Q. Were you found guilty?—A. I was fined $146, which I paid.

Q. After that, did you not go into Gwinnett County and steal?—A. I was indicted for stealing some corn, but I was found not guilty.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long since you were in trouble?—A. Eighteen years.

Dorsey to Recall Daisy Hopkins.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is it not a fact that there are now four indictments against you in Walton County for selling liquor?—A. If there are I don't know it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they let you get out of the county and were glad to get rid of you?—A. I have been back there every year.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know that Daisy Hopkins knows Leo Frank?—A. I do.

Q. How do you know?—A. She told me she knew him, and then I saw her talking to him.

Arnold interrupted: "I object to what she said."

"That's all right, then," Dorsey replied. "I will recall her."

Dalton was excused and the defense began an attack on his character with witnesses from Walton County.

B. S. Cooper, the first witness called, was accompanied by a small boy of 6. He held the boy on his lap while he testified on the witness stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A farmer.

Q. How long have you been in Walton County?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

Wouldn't Believe Him Under Oath.

At this point C. B. Dalton was called for but could not be found. Dorsey said he would admit that the witness was speaking of the Dalton who had testified against Frank. Hooper was excused and J. H. Patrick was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. In Walton County.

Q. What do you do?—A. Carpenter and bailiff.

Q. Have you seen Dalton here this morning?—A. I shook hands with him.

Q. Do you know his general character for truth and veracity and is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and W. T. Mitchell was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him this morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and I. M. Hamilton was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, Atlanta, a woman apparently 35 years of age, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the Empire Printing Company.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, for two days.

Denies Dalton's Story of Strolls.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever walk home with him from the Busy Bee Cafe on Forsyth street?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you ever with him around the National Pencil Company?—

Dorsey interrupted: "I object," he said. "The witness said nothing that reflected on this woman."

Arnold: "It was a reflection for him to say that he was with her."

The objection was sustained.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long have you known Dalton?—A. About six months.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. I have been in his company three times.

The witness was excused, and Mrs. Minnie Smith called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. National Pencil Company.

Q. Are you the Mrs. Smith who lives at No. 148 South Pryor street?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the only Mrs. Smith at that address?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. No.

The witness was excused. Alonzo Mann, the office boy at the National Pencil Factory, was then called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company as an office boy.

Q. How long have you been there? A. Since April 1 of this year.

Q. Where do you stay when you are not at work?—A. Right outside the office.

Left Frank and Miss Hall in Office.

Q. How late do you work on Saturdays?—A. I had only been there two Saturdays before the murder.

Q. You don't know how late you stayed?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave the office Memorial Day?—A. At 11:30.

Q. Who did you leave there?—A. Miss Hall and Mr. Frank.

Q. Do you recall what you did that morning?—A. No.

Q. Did you phone Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes. Mr. Frank told me to, but I could not get him

Q. How late did you stay those other Saturdays?—A. 3:30 to 4 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank bring any women there and buy them drinks?—A. No.

Q. Who do you recall seeing there that day?—A. Mr. Holliday, Mr. Irby, Mr. McCrary and Mr. Darley.

Q. Can you recall anybody else?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Corinthia Hall?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you see a man come in to see about his boy?—A. I don't know.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. What time did Mr. Frank get there that morning?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did he go out?—A. One time, as I recall.

Q. Do you know how long he was gone?—A. No, I can't remember.

The witness was excused and Wade Campbell was called.

Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where are you employed?—A. I have been at the National Pencil Company for a year and a half.

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Mrs. White the Monday following the murder?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me what she said?—A. She said that as she went into the factory at 12 o'clock she saw a negro sitting there. She said that when she came down he was not there, and she heard voices, but could not tell where.

Q. Were you at the factory Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. About 9:35.

Q. Did you see Frank?—A. Yes; I went right to his office.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes; I was jollying him and he was jollying me.

Q. Were you on the fourth floor Tuesday morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley up there? A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you board with Mr. Darley? A. I did.

Q. Where were you Saturday night of the murder?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you go to the Bijou that night with Mr. Darley?

"I object," said Rosser.

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Darley is a married man with five children, is he not?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Miss Dixon that night?

Rosser—I object.

Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. You reported to Darley on April 28 that your sister had seen a negro in the pencil factory on Saturday, about 10 o'clock?—A. Yes; he sent me to see my sister.

Q. What did she tell you?—A. She said she saw a negro man on the first floor. She said she heard some indistinct voices as she went in.

Q. You saw that blood on the second floor?—A. I saw what they said was blood.

Q. How did it look?—A. I didn't notice it close enough to tell about it

Grilled Concerning Statement to Dorsey.

Q. Where do you work?—A. As an inspector at the National Pencil Company.

Q. You made a statement on May 12?—A. I made a statement to you. I don't remember the date.

Q. Didn't you state that your sister said she saw the negro as she was coming out?—A. I did not.

Q. You deny it, then?—A. I do.

Q. Is this your signature?—A. It looks very much like it.

Q. You can't swear that this is your signature?—A. No, I would not swear it.

Q. You say that you don't know whether that is your signature?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you deny making this statement?—A. I told you I did.

Q. Did you not read over this statement and make certain corrections?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not say in this statement that your sister went there at 12:30 and could not see her husband and went back?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. How did you come to go to Dorsey's office?—A. I received a subpena.

Q. You thought you had to go?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you know that it was not worth the paper it was written on?—A. No.

Wanted To See Corrections Made.

Q. Did you just point out these corrections, or did you wait and see that they were made?—A. I think I waited.

Q. Who was there?—A. Starnes, Campbell and Dorsey.

Q. Did they all ask you questions?—A. Yes.

Q. All of these 21 pages are your statement?—A. Yes.

Q. You were asked all of these questions?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you asked at the time you were in the office if anyone came in and did you answer "No"?—A. Yes.

Q. You answered that someone came in to get their pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know this negro Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. After this murder do you recall seeing him reading newspapers?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the fourth floor.

Q. How many times?—A. Twice.

Q. Is it anything unusual to see spots on the metal room floor?—A. No.

Q. Have you seen the place where Conley said he found the body?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Where was Conley sitting when he was reading the paper?—A. By the elevator.

Q. Where was he the second time?—A. In the rear of the building.

Q. What paper was he reading?—A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he was reading about the crime?—A. No.

Q. Was it an extra?—A. I think so.

Q. You knew Conley could write?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not report it to the officers?—A. No.

Q. Did Frank know he could write?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did you see him writing?—A. In the boxroom.

Q. Did you ever see him writing with a pencil?—A. Yes.

Q. Who did you tell what your sister told you?—A. Mr. Darley.

Q. How often did you see those spots in the metal room?—A. Occasionally.

Q. How often have you seen those spots in the hall?—A. Oh, very often.

Q. Did you see the spots where those chips were taken up?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw those spots everywhere, what everybody said was blood, and yet you tell the jury you didn't pay any attention to it?—A. Yes.

Q. Other people got down and looked at them, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Rosser interrupted.

"I object to what other people said and saw. It is utterly immaterial and irrelevant," he said.

"We want to show," said Mr. Hooper, interrupting, "that this man was interested and that he went out to see his sister about the negro, and yet he came back there and was in no way interested."

"I think you can ask questions along that line," said the court.

"Well, we want to record an objection," said Rosser.

Q. Where and when have you ever seen on that second floor anything that looked like that spot?—A. I did not look close enough at it to know.

Q. When did you see other spots like it on the floor of the metal room?—A. There were other spots, but I don't know whether they were like that spot or not.

Q. Did you talk to your brother-in-law about what your sister said?—A. He told me about it.

Court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Says Girl Didn't Ask For Mary Phagan's Pay.

When court convened at 2 o'clock the defense called for Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy at the National Pencil Factory, but he did not answer. Philip Chambers was also called, but failed to respond.

Miss Magnolia Kennedy, one of the pencil factory employees in the metal department, was then called and took the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company.

Q. How long have you worked there?—A. Four years.

Q. In what department did you work?—A. In the metal department.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Helen Ferguson?—A. Yes.

Q. On the day before April 26, did you draw your pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you draw it?—A. From Mr. Schiff at the pay window.

Q. Did you see Helen Ferguson? A. I had my hand on her shoulder when she got her money.

Q. Was Mr. Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ask for Mary Phagan's pay?—A. No.

Q. Did you go out with her?—A. Yes. We went downstairs and waited for Grace Hix.

Q. Did Helen Ferguson ever say anything about Mary's pay?—A. She said at 5 o'clock that Mary was not there.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Were you at the factory April 28?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find any hair on that lathing machine?—A. Yes.

Q. Whose was it?—A. It looked like Mary's.

Mary and Ferguson Girl Companions.

Q. You and Mary and Grace Hix were the only girls in that department, were you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did Mary's hair look?—A. It was light.

Q. You don't mean to say you were with Helen all that afternoon?—A. No.

Q. She and Mary were friends and went together all the time, did they not?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't know what she did when you were not with her, do you?—A. No.

Q. You saw those spots on the floor, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did they look?—A. There were white stains all over them.

Q. How large?—A. About as large as that piece of paper, eight by ten inches.

Q. Did you ever notice any spots on the second floor like the one pointed out and said to be blood?—A. No, I never did.

Q. And you have been there four years?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. You told Mr. Dorsey you thought that was Mary Phagan's hair on the lathe. You don't know that it was Mary Phagan's haid, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You went with Helen Ferguson to get your pay that Friday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her speak to Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Was there any necessity for her to see Mr. Frank when Mr. Schiff was at the pay window?—A. No.

Negro Elevator Boy on Stand.

Miss Kennedy was excused and Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy, took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where did you work in April of this year, Snowball?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. On the Friday before Memorial Day did you see Jim Conley talking to Mr. Frank and hear Mr. Frank ask him to come back Saturday?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear Mr. Frank tell Jim to come back?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank bring any women there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Conley watching at that lower door?—A. No.

Q. Were you at the factory last Thanksgiving Day?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever see Conley reading a newspaper?—A. I saw him looking at papers down there at the station house.

Q. You don't know wether he was reading or not?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank make any improper proposal to any lady in that factory?—A. No.

Q. You never saw Mr. Frank talking to Conley at any time, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank at all, Friday?—A. I saw him about 1 o'clock. He was talking to Mr. Schiff.

Dorsey took the witness on the cross-examination.

Q. Snowball, when were you arrested?—A. Monday.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank before you were arrested?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he?—A. On the second floor.

Q. What was he doing?—A. I don't know.

The negro was excused and Phillip Chambers, a boy 14 years old, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes.

Q. Where and in what capacity?—A. I went there in December and stayed until March.

Q. How late did you stay on Saturdays?—A. Until about 4:30 o'clock.

Q. Were you ever absent on Saturdays during the months you were there?—A. Between 11 and 12 o'clock I was sometimes sent to the Bell street plant to get the payrool.

Q. Did you ever see any women around Mr. Frank's office with beer and drinks?—A. His wife came up there once while I was there. She was the only one I ever saw.

Q. Did you ever see Jim Conley around there?—A. Yes. He was around there sweeping, sometimes.

Q. What time?—A. Saturday afternoons.

Q. Didn't Mr. Holloway issue an order that no more sweeping should be done Saturday afternoons?—A. Mr. Darley did.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You and Frank were pretty good friends ,were you not?—A. Just like other folks.

The State here referred to several alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, along the lines of Jim Conley's most sinister testimony which the boy denied and Attorney Arnold moved that it all be stricken out.

Dorsey arose to speak, but Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "are we going to allow a speech before the jury on this subject?"

Judge Roan: "Take the jury out."

Arnold: "Never mind, let them stay." The jury remained.

Solicitor Dorsey: "Your Honor, they have gone into the question of Frank's relations to women. We have a right to show if there was anything improper towards this boy. He denies it. I am laying the ground to impeach him by Gantt."

Judge Roan: "I rule out both questions and answers."

Defense Threatens to Move for a Mistrial.

Arnold. "It is the unfairest thing I have ever heard of, brought in in this illegal way. It has been brought up by this miserable negro. It is beyond indignation to sit here and listen to such stuff. The charge could be brought against you or me or any member of the jury by such inuendos If it comes up again I am going to move for a mistrial."

Judge Roan: "I have already ruled it out."

Dorsey: "Well, we will put up Gantt and let you rule on that."

The witness was excused and Minola McKnight, the cook at the Selig residence, was put on the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Were you working with Mrs. Selig last Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. and Mrs. Frank live with Mr. and Mrs. Selig?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was their room?—A. Upstairs.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank the morning of April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did he get his breakfast?—A. About 8.

Q. Did you see him again that day?—A. Yes, about 1:20.

Q. When he came home to dinner?—A. Yes.

Q. Was Albert McKnight there in the kitchen that day?—A. He was not.

Q. Could you see in that mirror in the dining room from the kitchen?—A. No.

Q. Do you recall what time he left after dinner?—A. Sometime after 2 o'clock.

Says She Made False Statement.

Q. What time did he return?—A. About 6:30 o'clock.

Q. You left him there?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you see him again?—A. Sunday, I don't know what time.

Q. Did the detectives come and arrest you?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did they take you?—A. Over on Central avenue.

Q. To the Thrower Building?—A. Yes.

Q. Was this man Dorsey there?—A. Yes.

Q. And these two detectives?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. My husband.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said I told my husband things and tried to make me say I had. I told them it was all lies, but they would not listen to me.

Q. What was your husband trying to get you to tell these detectives?—A. That Miss Lucille was telling her mother Sunday morning that Mr. Frank had made her get out of bed.

Q. What did you tell them?—A. That it was a lie.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said they would put me in jail, and they carried me out and put me in the patrol wagon.

Q. Put you in the patrol wagon? What did they ddo next?—A. They had me in a hole and I signed a paper to get away.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Minola, you made a statement May 3 in my office before this visit you were speaking about. Is not this the statement you made: "I was at the Frank home Saturday, April 26. Frank came there at about 1 o'clock. He did not seem to want to go back to work and stayed there until 3 o'clock?"

The negro woman interrupted Solicitor Dorsey at this point to say she said 2 instead of 3 o'clock.

Q. Before June 2 Mr. Pickett and Mr. Graves, of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, were out to see

NURSES' CLUB TO THROW OPEN NEW HOME

Informal Reception Arranged for Tuesday Afternoon and Evening in Permanent Quarters.

The Atlanta Registered Nurses' Association will formally open its new home in the Herbert Apartments, No. 246 Courtland avenue, Wednesday afternoon with an informal reception. The entertainment will continue into the evening hours.

Several months ago the registered nurses organized a permanent club to establish a central directory and eventually to secure and maintain a nurses' home. The membership includes over 100 graduate nurses who will, as a body, seek to protect the public and promote good fellowship among the members. The home has been comfortablye furnished and will accommodate twenty nurses.

The registered nurses have federated with the City Federation. The association has as its president Miss Kamesky; first vice president, Miss Berta Thompson; second vice president, Miss Caroline Norton; recording secretary; Miss Florence Attwell, corresponding secretary Miss J. M. Candlish; treasurer, Miss Mamie Mobley, and auditor, Miss E. F. Tupman.

The committee work has been divided as follows: Membership, Miss Frances Patton, chairman; register, Miss Alberta Dozier, chairman; nominations, Miss E. B. Whatley, chairman; home, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, chairman; auditing, Miss E. F. Tupman, chairman; publicity, Miss C. M. Johnson, chairman, and Miss Virginia Gibbs. The registrar will be Mrs. Theodosia Wardell.

The advisory board is composed of the following: Dr. Charles Boynton, Dr. William Perrin Nicolson, Dr. C. W. Summerall, J. B. Paulin, Dr. C. W. Strickler, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Fred Hodgson, Mrs. W. L. Peel and Mrs. H. E. W. Palmer.

The association has sent out hundreds of invitations and will be assisted in receiving by the advisory board, the officers of the association and the following superintendents of the hospitals of Atlanta: Miss Phebeck, of Grady Hospital; Miss McGlynn, of the Noble Sanitarium; Miss Morton, of the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium; Miss Morgan, of the Tabernacle Infirmary; Miss Thomas, of the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium, and Miss Albert Dozier, Miss J. M. Candlish, Miss Virginia Gibbs, Miss Mamie Mobley, Miss E. B. Whatley, Miss G. S. Tupman, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg and Miss C. M. Johnson.

Italy Adds to Its Seacoast Guard

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 12.—Thirteen new torpedo boat destroyers have been ordered by the Italian Admiralty, it was learned to-day.

This addition to the navy is made necessary by the extension of seacoast which Italy must guard in Africa.

GILMER TO ELECT SHERIFF.

ELLIJAY.—Sheriff J. H. Penland, of Gilmer County, having been appointed a United States Deputy Marshal and having resigned the office of Sheriff, the Ordinary has called a special election for August 28 to fill the unexpired term. Ex-Sheriff Bob Milton and J. H. Ray, present Tax Receiver, are the opposing candidates.

THERE HAS BEEN NO DULL SEASON OVER OUR LINES

Economy and efficiency are so combined in the Atlanta Telephone service that business houses which use both systems instruct their employees to route all possible calls by preference through our exchange.

"Better service at lower rates," is our motto—and we live up to it.

No Hostile Feeling Shown Envoy Lind

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy sent a reassuring note to President Wilson to-day, saying not the slightest antagonism to Mr. Lind's presence has been shown in Mexico City.

LIND CAUTIOUSLY HUNTS KEY TO SITUATION

Studies Conditions in Mexico While Administration Awaits Report Before Planning.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent to Mexico City by President Wilson, is making himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Mexico. The watchword of the present situation is caution, as Mr. Lind and the attaches of the United States Embassy fear that a hasty step will cause complete failure of the Ambassador's mission.

It was reported that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, had contrived to arrange an official visit at the National Palace to-day. It was assumed that he might then present to President Huerta or Foreign Minister Aidape the note given him by Envoy Lind.

Mr. Lind called at the embassy again to-day. He refuses to say anything about his instructions from Washington.

Hostile Acts Are Lacking.

To the layman it seems that the Mexican situation is standing still rather than showing improvement, although to official eyes the lack of any direct hostile action by Mexico or Mexicans is a good omen. The Mexican people are apathetic and conservatives believe that President Huerta virtually stood alone in his defiance of the United States. However, allowance is made for the Latin temperament. If anti-American feeling flares up on a grand scale, it may sweep the republic.

Claiming the Government has been misrepresented, President Huerta has placed a strict censorship upon the cable line. Even telegrams to the United States State Department pass under this careful inquiry.

N. A. Jennings, correspondent for the Hearst papers, and Marvin Ferree, another American newspaper man, released from prison last night after being detained 24 hours, were kept under close surveillance to-day. Both feared they would be expelled under the undesirable alien law.

Embassy Guard Declined.

The arrival at Vera Cruz of more United States warships has caused bitter comment in the Mexican press. The commandante of the rurales has offered to provide a permanent guard about the United States Embassy, but Mr. O'Shaughnessy informed the Mexican Government that the Stars and Stripes provide enough protection.

Mr. Lind, despite warnings of his friends, walks abroad in the streets or rides in an open automobile, making no effort to hide his identity. At the Hotel Lascurain he mingles freely with the other guests.

Mrs. Lind, who suffered a slight indisposition upon her arrival here, was reported better to-day.

President Waits Message From Lind Before Acting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—President Wilson to-day awaited word from Mexico City relative to the success of former Governor Lind and his mission of mediation before announcing, or even formulating any definite Mexican policy. Beyond the proposals which Governor Lind carried, it is understood that the administration has no plans, and that no further steps will be taken until the President's envoy reports on his success in dealing with Huerta.

It is considered likely that Governor Lind will transmit President Wilson's message to President Huerta through Charge O'Shaughnessy either to-day or tomorrow.

It is reported the Senate is considering holding an executive session to discuss the Mexican situation to discover the consensus of opinion in the Upper House concerning the steps taken by the administration in dealing with the matter.

Cruiser Pittsburg Sent Back to Mexican Port.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Aug. 12.—The armored cruiser Pittsburg, which had started for San Diego from Guayamas, turned back to-day to remain at Guayamas pending further instructions from Washington. The Pittsburg was ordered back by wireless.

The supply ship Glacier, which was to have left Guayamas to-day with refugees, was ordered to remain at the Mexican port indefinitely.

Youth Fined Heavily On Flirting Charge

W. R. Livermore, No. 47 Trinity avenue, a bookkeeper, feels convinced that mashing is a costly pastime.

Recorder Pro Tem Preston fined him $25.75 Tuesday for an affront to two girls, sisters, in Trinity avenue, and also gave him 21 days in the stockade for violating the probation ordinance. Livermore admitted that he was intoxicated. He had been on probation since last May for drinking.

Both girls appeared in court.

BILL PROTECTING HEIFER CALVES IS KILLED

House Wastes Time on Measure That Might Have Been Given Child Labor Act.

Take the child slaves, shackle them,
Throttle them if they laugh;
Enslave the women if you will,
But save my darling calf.

That was the burden of the song Monday afternoon in the Georgia House of Representatives—the same House of Representatives that has persistently refused to consider any measure to relieve the condition of the thousands of child-slaves in the State—when the legislators, for two hours, discussed solemnly and earnestly a bill designed to protect the heifer calves of the State from the persecutions of the butcher and the farmer by prohibiting the killing of the "innocent, pure-eyed little things"—that is what one member called them—until they have reached the mature age of 2 years.

Rhetorical thunderbolts were hurled by the champions of the calves at the heads of those who were determined that the last calf should be executed, to be met by bursting bombs of metaphor that shook the rafters and penetrated even to the farthest confines of the gallery; epigrammatic skyrockets threw their trails of fiery language into the running gears of the pinwheels of logic; the defenders of the calf hurled Biblical passages into the camp of the veal eaters, and the bloodthirsty members who wanted blood, red blood, delved into the poets and flung quotation after quotation into the very teeth of the advancing army of calfdom.

Bill Bleated—Then Died.

And after two hours the calf bill poked its head up through the maze of oratory and near-oratory, through the mud of condemnation and the whitewash of appreciation, gave one plaintive, despairing bleat, and died, 91 votes to 73.

Members who had viewed with equanimity and magnificent self-control the smothering of measures to aid the child-slaves felt impelled to rise in their might when the rights of the calf were assailed. Here's how some of them felt:

Mr. Conner, of Spalding—"If this bill is not passed, in five years cows will be as scarce as hens' teeth."

Mr. Ennis, of Baldwin—"Saving the calves is no laughing matter. If you had seen the slaughter of these innocent little things as I have you would vote aye."

Mr. Lloyd, of Newton—"This bill is the worst kind of class legislation. Why can't the bull calf have the same right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness that is granted the heifer calf? A man's calves are his private property and should not be regulated."

Mr. Culpepper, of Meriwether—"Why is it these men want to protect the heifer calves and allow the bull calves to go to their doom, when it is a fact that the female of the species is more deadly than the male?"

Mr. Picquet, of Richmond—"The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and it applies to calves as well as human beings. It makes my heart bleed to see these innocent little calves cruelly, brutally slaughtered to provide a veal eater's holiday."

"Prodigal" Is Provided For.

Mr. Shuptrine, of Chatham—"The bill should not pass under any circumstances. We have the Bible on our side, for it distinctly ordered that the fatted calf be killed for the prodigal son."

Mr. Spence, of Carroll—"I am outraged and indignant. This bill is the most diabolical bill I have ever seen. I vote NO!"

Mr. Wimberly, of Bibb—"To kill this bill means that the slaughter of the innocents will be continued, and what man, be he ever so strong, can endure the sight of the wild-eyed, bleating calf being led to the slaughter? There are 365,000 calves butchered in Georgia every year. If they were saved, think of the number of cows we would have in four years and the lowing herds that would wind slowly over the lea! Think of the rivers and lakes of milk, and if we can raise enough strawberries, think of the strawberries and cream we could have."

Mr. Berry, of Whitfield—"I arise to explain that I am not going to explain my vote."

The bill was introduced by Nelson, of Clayton, and favorably reported by the Committee on General Agriculture, of which Kimbrough, of Harris, is chairman.

Crusade Against Short Weight Ice Peddlers Pushed

The campaign against short weight ice peddlers has taken a more aggressive turn. Chief Beavers has detailed Policeman Holley to assist Inspector of Weights and Measures Buchanan in making cases against offenders.

As a result of this increased activity two negro peddlers were tried and fined by Recorder Pro Tem Preston. Five more cases are set for trial Tuesday afternoon.

The crusade, it is believed, will save Atlantans hundreds of dollars during the remainder of the summer. Inspector Buchanan and Officer Holley got direct evidence against the peddlers by following them and weighing the ice just after it had been weighed by the peddlers and delivered to the consumer.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

Saves Girl From Injury in Runaway

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—J. P. Doughty, Jr., a prominent cotton man, proved himself a hero in a runaway here yesterday when he saved Miss Frankie Rubenstein, an attractive Augusta girl, from serious injury. Miss Rubenstein was driving up Broad street when her horse became unmanageable. Doughty attempted to grab the reins, but was unsuccessful, and then he seized a wheel. He was thrown, but he held firm and soon climbed into the buggy and secured the lines, bringing the horse to a stop.

'Sleepiest Man' Is Looking for a Job

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—William O'Leary, described by his wife as the sleepiest man in Chicago, was wide awake to-day and out looking for a job. O'Leary appeared before Judge Sabath to answer charges brought by his wife. She said he had slept all the time during the last two weeks, except the few minutes each day which he spent in eating.

"If you'll kiss your two little babies and promise to wake up and get a job in the next two weeks, I'll let you go," said the judge.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $843 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 281 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

SECRET ORDER IN CONTEST FOR BIG PRIZE

Georgian's Want Ad Offer Arouses Enthusiasm Among Organizations and Individuals.

"Our lodge has been planning to move into new quarters for some time, but we have never had quite enough money to fit up a lodgeroom properly," said a prominent Atlanta secret order member to the Want Ad Man Tuesday. "I talked it over with several friends last night, and we're going out to win that $1,000 first prize in your Want Ad Contest."

"Good luck to you," said the Want Ad Man. "Pitch in and win. And even if you don't land first, that $500 worth of furniture for second prize will go a long way toward making your lodgeroom comfortable."

Several organizations, including churches, lodges and charitable societies, have announced their intention of entering The Georgian Want Ad Contest, rounding up want ads by the thousand and rolling up enough votes to win. The women are especially enthusiastic. They are always workers in their churches.

Individual Prizes.

Individuals, too, are taking on renewed interest with the announcement of the complete prize list. The automobile for the first grand prize and the tour to California for two persons, all expenses paid, will be the goal of every worker. But there is consolation for those who fail to win first or second, for five prizes are offered in each of four classes—men, women, boys and girls—and these prizes include motorcycles, player pianos, bicycles, watches, diamonds and other articles worth trying for.

The Want Ad Man is in his office, fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, every day until 5 o'clock. On Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturdays he remains at his desk until 8 o'clock at night, and he is anxious to have a heart-to-heart chat with every contestant and prospective contestant. He will give every aid possible, explain all details, show how success is to be had, and give every contestant the benefit of his experience. Every contestant should see him this week.

Pretty Woman Aids Restaurant Bandits

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Assisted by a pretty young woman, two automobile bandits to-day raided the cafe of George Angelica, obtained jewelry from Angelica worth $1,150 and $75 in cash.

Angelica was counting his money when a young man and young woman entered the rear door. He refused to serve them because it was after closig hours, but the young woman pleaded so prettily that he went to the ice box for a bottle of champagne. When he turned about he faced a large revolver and another young man.

Slaying Ends Feud Of North Carolinans

ALEXANDER, N. C., Aug. 12—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would have been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

Spooning Couple Sit On Turtle; All Move

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 12.—A young couple, strolling on Sullivan's Island became fatigued. Why not sit on that overturned boat over there? They did. But the "boat" moved. She shrieked and the "boat" moved faster. It was a 600-pound turtle asleep on the beach. The turtle carried six men to the water. In its nest were found 200 eggs.

Spooning couples on Sullivan's Island now carry lanterns.

Mourners Forget Corpse When 3 Are Killed at Funeral

MACON, Aug. 12.—The preacher, a deacon and one of the women mourners were killed in a shooting affair at a negro funeral at Round Oak, in Jones County, late yesterday afternoon.

The preacher stopped the services, upon hearing pistol shots near the church, and rushed out to quell the disorder. He was shot just as he stepped out of the doorway. The other two were killed in a general shooting affray that followed. The negro minister was T. M. Howard, of Macon.

In the excitement the funeral was forgotten, and the corpse lay in the church all night, but this morning another preacher was secured and the interment took place.

Sheriff Roberts went to Round Oak early this morning when news of the affair reached him at Grays.

Must Pay Alimony Or Serve Jail Term

MACON, Aug. 12.—D. F. Arnold, a contractor, has been given an extension to September 5, on or before which date he must pay $285 alimony to his wife or go to jail. When arraigned before Judge Mathews on a contempt charge because he had allowed the alimony to become in arrears, Arnold asked for more time, and the judge allowed him 27 more days. He is under order of the court to pay Mrs. Arnold $75 a month.

Two other Macon men have been put in jail in the last 30 days for not paying alimony.

24 Factories Take Space for Exhibits

Only seven days remain for exhibitors to lease space in the permanent manufacturers' exposition, to be held in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Twenty-four manufacturers have already contracted.

Tuesday the committee in charge visited the various manufacturers in the city. Meetings will be held each day until next Tuesday.

On each floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building occupied by the exposition, telephones and desk space will be provided for the transaction of business. A competent man will be employed to show visitors around.

Georgia Girl Bathers Startle Charleston

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12.—Two perfectly attractive girls from Georgia, it is said, have made surf bathing on Sullivan's Island more popular than ever by their somewhat advanced style of ocean garb. They wear men's suits, natty affairs, with stripes about the shoulders and knees.

Sullivan's Islanders say they never saw any handsomer or more becoming men's bathing suits than these.

The fairy-like summer gowns, which will later be utilized for afternoon wear and informal theater parties, require pretty lace trimming. That is the reason for the popularity of shadow and chantilly laces this season. We have them in all this season's designs—exquisite in effect—in black, cream and white. The bands and edges are of several widths, from 6 to 9 inches, to accommodate any mode of garniture. These are 50c to 85c values, which we do not care to retain until they lose their freshness. 29c

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER'S NEW HOME IS DEDICATED; MANY NOTED MEN SPEAK

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Fifteen thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles, including city and county officials, men of the cloth and members of the leading civic and fraternal organizations, witnessed yesterday the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone and raising the California Bear Flag at the new home of The Los Angeles Examiner, now in course of construction.

These ceremonies were preceded by a great parade throughout the downtown streets, which acted as the escort of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor H. H. Rose to the new building site.

In the speakers' stand were leaders of the civic and religious life in Los Angeles, while in the grandstand was a brilliant assemblage.

The ceremonies were held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, and Ernest Ingold, president of the club, introduced James R. H. Wagner, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Charles Edward Bock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, offered prayer. Mr. Wagner presented the Bear Flag to The Examiner from the people of Southern California. Arthur W. Kinny, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, made the speech of acceptance. The Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Los Angeles, made an address, and the Rev. Father George Donahoo, representing the Right Rev. Thomas J. Conary, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, spoke.

Silver Trowel Given Mr. Hearst.

Douglas White, of the Advertising Club, presented a silver trowel to Mayor Rose, who officially laid the cornerstone and then presented the trowel to Mr. Hearst. Dr. Sigmund Hechtal, rabbi of the B'Nai Brith Congregation, made the closing remarks.

It was in acknowledging the gift of the trowel from Mayor Rose that Mr. Hearst delivered his address, in which he voiced his confidence in the great future of Los Angeles and Southern California. The various speakers paid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to The Examiner's influence in the expanding progress and prosperity of Southern California.

A chorus of several hundred voices rendered patriotic music.

Mr. Hearst said in his address:

I thank you most heartily on behalf of the members of the Los Angeles Examiner staff and on my own behalf for this beautiful memento and for the generous sentiments which have accompanied it. It is a pleasant thing for us to to feel that we are here among so many friends, and it is also a pleasant thing for us to feel, as we all do feel, a sincere reciprocal friendship for the citizens of Los Angeles and a deep devotion to the best interests of this great city.

Notable Occasion for Paper.

This is a notable occasion for us of The Examiner. It marks a milestone in the progress of the paper. It is made doubly memorable by the participation of our Mayor, and by the attendance of so many distinguished citizens. Yet with all its importance and significance it is only one of the many occasions which we gratefully remember where you have kindly encouraged our efforts and stimulated us to further endeavor.

Under such encouragement and stimulus The Examiner has grown until it is one of the biggest and best of all my publications. Certainly there is no publication of mine from Los Angeles to London in the success of which I take a greater pride and pleasure.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner first because I am a Californian and take pleasure in the success of everything Californian. (Applause.)

I was not born in Los Angeles, but I was born in California.

A man is a Los Angelan, no matter on what street of Los Angeles he is born or lives, and a man is a Californian no matter in what part of California he is born or lives.

Bound Together Closely.

We Californians are learning more and more that we are all bound together by the firm bonds of fraternity and that the combined success of all as individuals make the complete success of all as a community. We are learning that a friendly rivalry does not mean a foolish jealousy; that the fullest achievement is through co-operation, and that whatever operates for the benefit of California operates for the benefit of all of us as Californians.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner, too, because I realize that Los Angeles is destined to become, and is fast becoming, one of the greatest cities in the world. (Applause.)

I want my system of publications to be essentially a national institution, and to be national it must have representation in Los Angeles as adequate as in any of the greatest cities of the nation.

Finally, I take pleasure and pride in the success of The Examiner because Los Angeles is not only a leader in material development, but a leader in ethical and intellectual development—a pioneer in political progress.

What are as yet only ideals even in many of the most advanced localities of the world are actualities in Los Angeles.

What are dreaded as threatening theories in conservative centers are established as practical and beneficial facts in this progressive community.

Conservatism a Failing.

The older sections of this country and of every country are hampered and handicapped in their development by also-called conservatism which is too often nothing more than sheer selfishness or inertness.

The phrase "conservatism" is made to cover a multitude of failings.

The lack of imagination to foresee, the lack of energy to attempt, the lack of courage to act, the lack of ability to achieve are all cloaked under that convenient word "conservatism."

Conservatism is the attribute of age. Energy, enthusiasm, courage, confidence and conviction are the characteristics of youth and strength. It is these that have wrought the miracle of Los Angeles.

In New York the citizens are still struggling vainly for that first essential of electoral reform—the direct nomination.

In Los Angeles you have possessed this power long and employed it well. In the East intrenched privilege still is declaring against the awful possibilities of the recall. For years you have exercised that function of popular government justly and judiciously.

In many localities the citizens are timidly hesitating to adopt woman suffrage. You have not only proved the feasibility of their right, but have demonstrated the definite benefit of it.

Noted Political Achievements.

You have made universal suffrage a fact and popular government a reality. You have exercised the initiative and referendum wisely and temperately.

You have divorced your local city government from national politics and have made it what it should be—a business institution conducted for the business benefit of the stockholders, the citizens.

You have brought water from the cool, clear streams of the distant mountains, undefiled, instead of collecting it from the poisoned and polluted puddles of the populated districts.

You have put your public money honestly and intelligently into great public works instead of into the pockets of greedy promoters and corrupt politicians. You are invading confidently and completely the field of public ownership in spite of the foreboddings and forbiddings of interested public service corporations.

You have disproved all the arguments of retained corporation attorneys and dissipated all the opposition of paid corporation politicians.

And behold!

Strides Bring Prosperity.

You have prospered incomparably in spite of your bold advances and striking innovations; nay more, my friends, you have prospered because of them.

In the favoring physical atmosphere of this country, trees and fruits grow big and in the favoring moral and spiritual atmosphere of this community human institutions grow to greatness.

I am truly proud and pleased to have a newspaper here to do its share in the development of this Great city, to play its part in the progress of this great State. I am happy, too, to have a newspaper system to sow the seeds of progress in other parts of the nation and to cultivate it there so that it may take root and flourish and blossom and bear fruit.

My devout wish is that Los Angeles may ever continue to be a leader in the moral and material development of the country; in the economic and political progress of the nation and that The Examiner may be a potent factor in this development, an effective force in this progress—a cornerstone in the splendid structure of Californian achievement.

Tribute Paid to Examiner.

Excerpts from the speeches of prominent Los Angelans follow:

MAYOR H. H. ROSE—The construction of the wonderful building is one of the greatest things that was ever done for a city the size of Los Angeles. A building over 300 feet long and large in proportion, devoted to the uses of one newspaper, in the city of Los Angeles is indeed a magnificent enterprise. While this is the first time I have had occasion to lay the cornerstone of a building, except, maybe, a rough log hut or a stone hut in the mountains, I hope I may have occasion to use these trowels for purposes like this many, many times during my administration.

DOUGLAS WHITE, representing the Advertising Club of Los Angeles—The advertising clubs of the Pacific Coast have been extremely successful in their work up to this time. Every movement needs a leader, and so has the movement for truth in advertising on the Pacific Coast. However, when we entered on this movement it already possessed a leader, for 25 years ago, or about that time, in the city of San Francisco, a publisher arose who made the plain statement that no matter what the circulation of his paper might be, that circulation would be given truthfully and honestly to the people who bought space. That publisher was William Randolph Hearst. From that time up to the present, in all the papers which he has owned and published, he has carried out that same idea of honesty and truth in his advertising, because in the circulation depends the sale of advertising.

THE REV. GEORGE DONAHOE, representing the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty, of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles—What attaches importance to this occasion and to the building that is now laboriously rising here is the fact that this building is destined to become a great center of newspaper activity in our gloriously growing city. As the mission of The Examiner goes forward the power of The Examiner grows stronger. So briefly, then, this is my good wish, first in behalf of us all, newspaper readers of Southern California, that this building which we to-day with ceremony officially begin, may always be to us a source of information, and for the great newspaper genius who honors this occasion with his presence our one hope and good wish and prayer is that the influence, the great influence that he so surely holds—that it may ever be devoted to works of fighting evil in high places, defending the weak and forwarding sound morality the world over.

DR. SIGMUND HECHT, rabbi of the B'nai Brith congregation—In my own and in the name of those whom I have the honor to represent, I bring my meed of congratulations and encouragement and cheer, first of all to those who are primarily affected by this event, to that honored head of this gigantic enterprise, to that man nationally honored for the purity of his character, for the sincerity of his purposes, for the directness of his intentions, for his ability and for the policy with which he inspired The Los Angeles Examiner to favor none and be fair to all—William Randolph Hearst. The Los Angeles Examiner—under God may it grow and prosper and be a power in the development and in the uplift of our glorious country.

ARTHUR W. KINNEY, president of The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce—The people of Southern California offer The Examiner their sincere congratulations upon this memorable occasion which marks an epoch in its wonderful career in our great city. It has always held an unbounded faith in the marvelous destiny of our Southwestern metropolis and it has ever backed up this faith by striving for everything that might contribute to the prosperity of our people. It has, indeed, been one of the sturdy sentinels at this far Western outpost of American idealism. Long ago it enunciated a policy of civic and industrial progress that must appeal to every person who has the welfare of our city at heart—a policy which, if pursued, must hasten to the unfolding of the great movement that is destined to make our Southwest empire world famed.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

Charges Speaker Burwell With Breaking Promise to Bring His Measures to Vote.

A tilt in which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

Shakes Finger at Holtzclaw.

The clash between McCrory and Holtzclaw came during the consideration of the Western and Atlantic Commission bill. Mr. Holtzclaw objected to a motion to dispense with the reading of the bill when the House went into committee of the whole, and Mr. Crory, who was standing near shook a menacing finger at the Houston County Representative and said:

"Holtzclaw, you are trying to kill time to prevent my bill coming to a vote. You had better look out!"

Mr. Holtzclaw was in conversation with a member at the time. He glanced at Mr. McCrory, but made no reply.

The failure of the House to take action on the McCrory bill Monday kills the measure for the rest of the session, inasmuch as the Senate has served notice that it will not consider any House bill passed after Monday.

THIN FOR YEARS--"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. ATTORNEY FOR DEFENSE AGAIN THREATENS TO MOVE FOR A MISTRIAL

you and you made certain statements?—A. I did not.

Q. Now this time when you were at my office, did not your husband beg you to tell the truth, and put his arms around you and beg you to say what you told him was the truth?—A. It was all lies, though.

Q. Did you sign this affidavit? A. They made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your attorney, Mr. George Gordon?—A. I told you they made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your husband?—A. I signed it in the presence of a whole lot of people, but it was a lie.

Mr. Dorsey read the affidavit. It stated that the husband, Albert McKnight, was in the kitchen of the Selig home when Frank came to lunch Saturday, April 26.

When Solicitor Dorsey reached the part where it was stated that Mrs. Frank had claimed to Mrs. Selig that her husband was drinking the night before, and wanted her to get a pistol so that he could kill himself, Minola interrupted:

Declares Statement Was All a Lie.

"That is all a lie my husband fixed up," she shouted. "They made me sign it."

Later the negro woman started to interrupt again at the statement that she had asked Mrs. Frank if the girl who was killed was a Jew girl. Mr. Arnold told her to keep quiet until Mr. Dorsey had finished. She demonstrated her feelings again at the statement that they had raised her pay, and told her to be careful how she talked.

Dorsey, after he had finished reading the affidavit, said: "And you signed this statement?"

"They made me sign it," reiterated the negress. "It was all a lie."

Q. How did they make you sign it? A. They told me if I did not, they would lock me up.

Q. Who told you?—All of them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is this the lie your husband fixed for you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever get any more pay? A. No, sir.

Q. How did the detectives get you? A. They got my husband first.

Q. Did you say anything to Miss Lucille about it being a Jew, and did she say it was a Gentile?—A. No.

Q. Did Mrs. Frank say anything about sleeping on the floor?—A. No.

Q. Is any of this true? Is it a lie out of the whole cloth?—A. Yes, it is all a lie.

Denies Mrs. Selig Gave Her Money.

Q. Did Mrs. Selig ever give you $5?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did she ever tell you to mind how you talk?—A. They told me to tell the whole truth.

Q. Do you know this Man Craven? A. No.

Q. This man Pickett?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Charles Barnhart took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Contractor and architect.

Q. Have you, at the request of Mr. Haas, visited the Selig home and made a drawing of the kitchen and drawing room?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you see the mirror in the dining room from any point standing in the kitchen door?—A. No.

Q. Can you see anybody sitting at the table?—A. No.

Q. Could you see anyone sitting on the north side of the table?—A. No.

Q. Is there any position a man can sit at the table and be seen in the mirror?—A. By sitting about two feet away from him.

Q. If a man said he was sitting in a chair against the jam of the kitchen door, and saw the reflection of a man in the mirror, was he telling the truth?—A. I could not see it.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What you could see in that mirror would depend on the location of the sideboard, wouldn't it?—A. Yes.

Moving of Mirror Would Change View.

Q. If that was moved a little, the whole view of the dining room would be changed, would it not?—A. Yes, but my experiments showed that you could not see whether anyone was eating at the table or not, from any view you could get of that mirror from the kitchen.

The witness was excused and Henry Wood, secretary of the County Commission, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you, at my request, go to the Selig home on Georgia avenue and take some views?—A. I did.

Q. Did you stand in the kitchen and try to see the mirror in the dining room sideboard?—A. I did.

Q. Could you see the mirror from the back kitchen door?—A. I could not.

Q. Could you see the table and the mirror from any part of the kitchen? A. I stood in the door leading into the pantry between the kitchen and dining roo mand all I could see in the mirror was the arm of one chair.

Attorney Rosser here made a side remark that he himself had been out to the Selig home to see if the negro, Albert McKnight, was telling the truth about watching Frank from the kitchen through the sideboard mirror. He said one could not see the dining room table in the mirror from any point in the kitchen.

Q. What you saw in this mirror was right here (the room)?—A. Yes.

Q. The arrangement of the furniture was like it was April 28?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness on redirect examination.

Q. Coming to that door from the back porch you could not see that mirror?—A. I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. If a man were standing where that chair was could you see him?—A. I might have.

Q. Did you make the test sitting or standing?—A. A. I tried both ways.

Another Tells of Tests With Mirror.

The witness was excused and Julius Fischer, president of the cemetery commission, took the stand.

Q. You are a contractor and builder?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make an examination of the Selig home?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you stand in that kitchen door to see whether you could see the mirror in the dining room?—A. Yes.

Q. Could you?—A. No.

Q. Is there any place in the kitchen from which you could see in the mirror a man at the table?—A. No.

Q. Were there any evidences of the mirror having been moved?—A. No, but I moved it to see if I could place it anywhere in the dining room and from the kitchen see any reflection of a person sitting at the table.

Q. Well, what did you find?—A. I found I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. Did you turn the mirror flat against the wall on the east side of the room?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Corinthia Hall, an employee of the National Pencil Company, was called. Attorney Arnold questioned her:

Q. Did you go to the factory on April 26, Memorial Day?—A. I did.

Q. Was anyone with you?—A. Emma Clark.

Q. What time was it?—A. About 11:35.

Q. How do you know?—A. I got off the East Lake car at 11:30 o'clock.

Q. Did you go to Mr. Frank's office? A. After we had been up to the fourth flobr to get Emma's coat.

Q. How long do you think it took you to go up and come down?—A. We went right up and came right down.

Left Factory at Quarter to Twelve.

Q. What was said?—A. She had just married Mr. Freeman. He asked her if she wasn't a bride. She said yes, and he asked how she was feeling. She said she was feeling fine, and wanted to use the telephone.

Q. What time did you leave the factory?—A. About fifteen minutes to twelve.

Q. Who all did you see in the factory?—A. When we first went in, two men were talking to Mr. Frank. Arthur White's wife and a stenographer were in the outer office.

Q. Who else did you see?—A. On the fourth floor we saw Mae Barrett, Arthur White and Harry Denham. Mrs. Barrett's daughter was also on the second floor.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Holloway while going to the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw Lemmie Quinn at the restaurant and talked to him?—A. Yes.

Q. You told the coroner you arrived there at 11:45?—. I said I left at that time.

Q. You saw the stenographer?—A. Yes.

Q. Was she the regular stenographer?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you swear before the coroner that she was the regular stenographer?—A. I don't remember. They change stenographers so much.

Q. Can you tell the jury what time it was you saw Lemmie Quinn?Q. I can not

Miss Hall was excused and Mrs. May Barrett was called. She did not answer.

Mrs. Emma Clark Freeman was the next witness. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Mrs. Freeman Saw Frank in Office.

Q. Did you ever work at the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

Q. What was your name before you were married?—A. Emma Clark.

Q. What day were you married?—A. April 26.

Q. Did you go to the factory April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time?—A. Eleven thirty

Q. What did you go for?—A. To get a coat.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Talking to two men.

Q. Did you get permission to go on the fourth floor?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Frank say anything to you?—A. He asked me "How's the bride?" I said all right.

Q. Who was in the office with Frank?—A. The stenographer was in the outer office.

Q. What time did you leave the factory?—A. About 11:45.

Q. Where did you go from there?—A. Alabama and Forsyth streets to use the telephone.

Q. I came back and passed by the factory.

Q. Did you see anybody on the street you knew?—A. Mr. Maisby.

Q. Where did you go?—A. I went on to a cafe and ordered some lunch.

Q. Did anybody come in?—A. Yes. Mr. Quinn came in.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he said he had just left Mr. Frank.

Q. Where did you go then?—A. To Harry Molsby's place, where Miss Hall used the phone.

Q. Where did you go then?—A. To Hunter and Whitehall streets.

Q. What time was it then —A. Twenty-five to one.

Q. Did you notice any negro as you went in or out?—A. No.

Solicitor Dorsey did not care to cross-examine the witness and she was excused.

Attorney Arnold asked the deputies to call Mrs. Barrett again. She did not answer and Emil Selig was called. Mr. Selig is the father-in-law of the accused.

Frank's Father-in-Law Tells of Their Home.

Q. Are you related to Mr. Leo M. Frank, the defendant?—A. Yes, I am his father-in-law.

Q. Do you and your wife and Mr. and Mrs Frank live together?—A. We do.

Q. Where?—A. At 68 East Georgia avenue.

Q. How long have you had the sideboard in the dining room in the same place?—A. Ever since I have lived there.

Q. What part of the house is your room in?—A. My wife and I have a room upstairs and so have Mr. and Mrs. Frank.

Q. Where is the telephone?—A. In the dining room.

Q. Can you hear very well from upstairs when the doors are shut?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did you get home to lunch on Saturday, April 26?—A. About 1:15 o'clock.

Q. Was Mr. Frank there?—A. No. The women were at the table. They were going to Grand Opera that afternoon. Mr. Frank came in about five minutes later.

Last Bill Passed By House Provides W.&A. Investigation

A bill providing for a commission of eight members to investigate the value of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and make recommendations for its lease was passed by the House of Representatives Monday afternoon, being the last House measure that will be passed during the present session.

The commission will be composed of two members from the House, two from the Senate, the chairman of the State Railroad Commission, and two civilians to be appointed by the Governor. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000 for expenses.

The House also passed, by a vote of 120 to 0, the "blue sky" law, which requires registration of securities before stocks and bonds of a concern can be placed on the market. It is designed to prohibit the sale of "wildcat" stocks.

House Begins Move To Shorten Trials

A resolution providing for a commission of seven members to investigate the civil and criminal procedure of Georgia with a view to abolishing long-drawn-out trials and hearings was passed by the House Monday.

The commission will be composed of three members of the House, two of the Senate and two appointed by the Governor. Mr. Slater, of Bryan, in discussing the resolution, referred to the trial of Leo Frank as an example of the slowness of Georgia legal procedure.

7 MEN STUNNED BY EXPLOSION OF AIR TANK

Hurled Twenty Feet Against Wall, Pratt Laboratory Engineer Is Badly Cut.

W. H. Hutchins, No. 152 Confederate avenue, assistant engineer at the N. P. Pratt Laboratory, No. 88 Auburn avenue, was blown twenty feet against the side of the building Monday morning about 4:30 o'clock when a compressed air tank exploded while Hutchins and half a doze negro workmen were filling it.

The negroes were also thrown against the walls, but none was injured.

Hutchins received several small cuts about his head and face, and was severely jarred. His key ring, which was attached to his belt, was blown off. It was found 50 feet from where the explosion occurred.

The air tanks in the laboratory are about five feet long and two feet in circumference, and are used in the bottling operations. Four of them were being filled under the direction of Hutchins when the accident happened.

The explosion shook buildings a block away, and was heard a quarter of a mile. The noise and jar awoke practically every person in the neighborhood. Many parties rushed to the building expecting to find workmen dead or seriously injured. All of the men in the plant were slightly stunned and were just regaining their feet when the first of the rescuers arrived.

Police Sergeant Hewett, who was more than a quarter of a mile away, at Piedmont avenue and Houston street, heard the explosion and went to the factory. He took charge of the situation and sent Hutchins home. The negroes returned to their work.

3 Held as Swindlers Of Barnum's Cousin

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—The three persons, two women and one man, accused of swindling Mrs. Sarah Barnum, aged 82, of Syracuse, N. Y., cousin of P. T. Barnum, have fled from Chicago, the police learned positively to-day.

Henry Russell, of Spokane, Wash., a mine promoter; Miss Frances Waldo, his private secretary, and Mrs. Kalla Waldo, her mother, were named in the warrants. Deals for $82,000 were charged against the trio, and it was said Mrs. Barnum was left penniless through investments in mines.

Start on $1,000,000 High School in Fall

PULLMAN, ILL., Aug. 12.—Work on the buildings for the Pullman Technical High School, which will cost more than $1,000,000, will begin before the end of autumn, according to an announcement received by Pullman residents to-day.

The board appointed to administer the $1,200,000 bequest made by George M. Pullman for the school will meet here in October and decide upon the final details.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

A pleasant mode of entertaining at the Executive Mansion is in the informal dinner of six or eight covers which Governor and Mrs. Slaton give often. An affair of this kind was the small dinner of Monday evening, at which Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burwell were the guests of honor, others present being Mrs. Reed, of Elberton, the house guest of the ~ wells, and Mrs. W. D. Grant.

Mrs. Slaton was hostess at a pretty luncheon a few days ago for a visitor, Mrs. Charles Donnally, of Pennsylvania, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stocking.

Pink roses from the gardens of Mrs. Slaton's home on the Peachtree road were decorations for the table, and the guests included Mrs. Donnally, Mrs. R. J. Lowry, Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. Albert Howell, Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. Walter Andrews and Miss Stocking.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being.

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

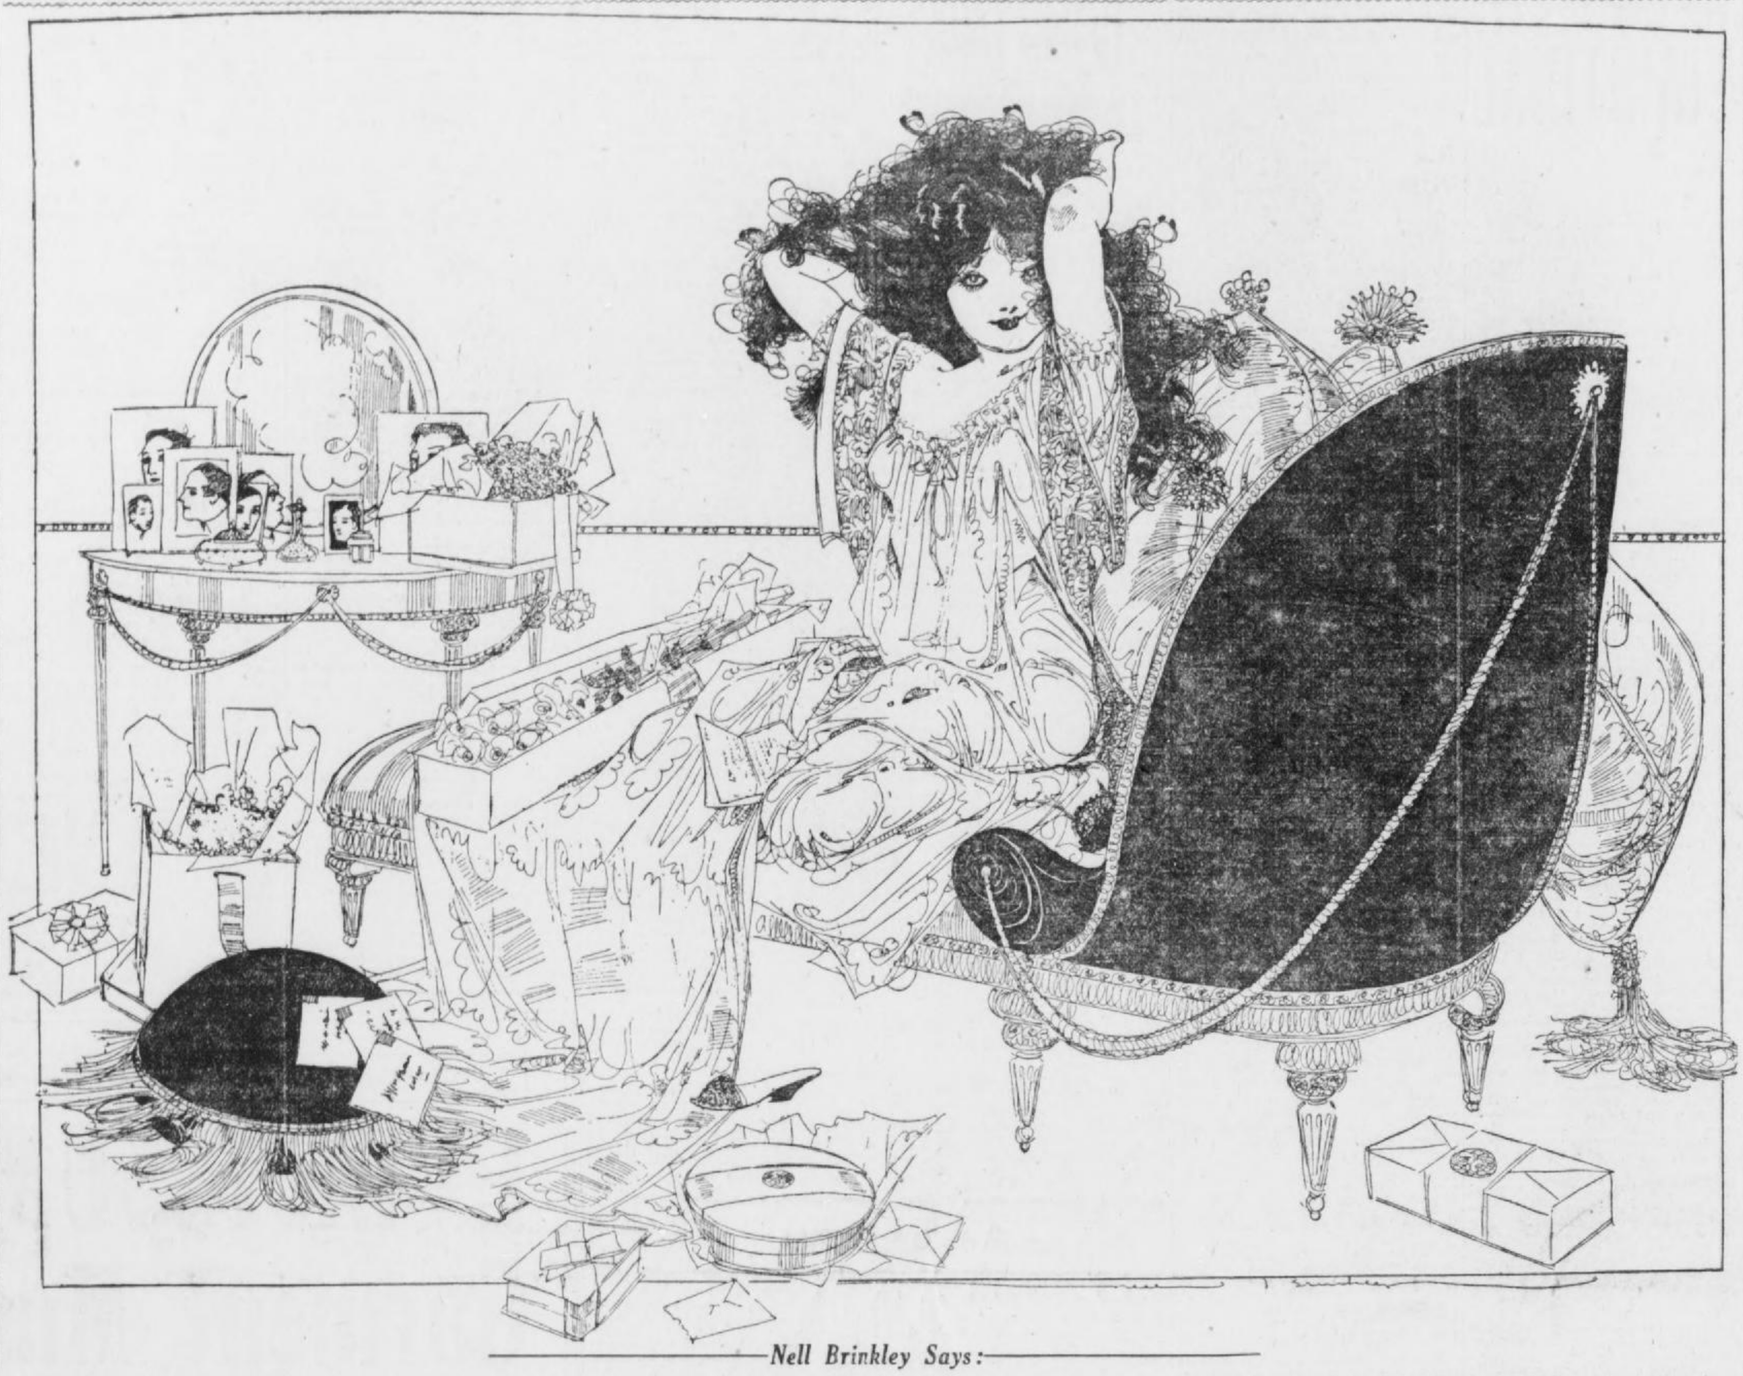

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my dowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away downtown, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night.

"I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

Scene: Far out at sea; stateroom on board a huge transatlantic liner which is being tossed about like a cork in a tremendous sea.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!"

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

Oh, the world has its gloom, and 'tis
gloom to spare;
'Twill make you weary and sad;
But there's plenty of gleam, as is

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings*"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then become so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

PHOTOS © BY WHITE STUDIOS

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

These pictures were especially posed for this paper.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched instep and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl! I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said. "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Ever at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stage-coaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

* * * * * *

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his legs trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28. —HAL COFFMAN.

A birthday gift was given to a wife by her husband and three children. The youngest, a little ten-year-old, was appointed to make the speech of presentation. She did it after much preparation for the occasion, and this was the form it took:

"Dear mamma, this gift is presented to you by your three children and your one husband."

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this being due thing.

* * *

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Baraca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Covcleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,000. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

GRIFFITH SENDS FIELDER CALVO TO CRACKERS

A TELEGRAM from Clark Griffith to Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, received this morning, announces that Calvo, the Cuban outfielder whom Griff has been carrying all the season, is on his way to join the Crackers and will be in Atlanta to-morrow.

"Griffith is placing Calvo with us as a means of stiffening up our club for the final sprint," Mr. Callaway said. "I expect he will get in the game at once, probably playing in place of Holtz. He is a fast and accurate fielder and a hard hitter, but the class of Griffith's regular outfield has prevented him from getting into the game with the Senators."

Beauty Is Keynote Of 1914 Hudson Six

The 1914 Hudson Six 54 7-passenger body, complete car, at $2,250, is on exhibition to-day at the salesrooms of Mr. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., local dealer for the Hudson motor-cars.

Beauty is the keynote of the new car. The most prominent feature is the pure streamline body. No angles appear at the dash. Running boards are clear. It conforms to the latest European practice. Germany originated the streamline body. By some it is known as the Prince Henry type.

Reliable information from leading factories of Europe indicates that at the Paris show next October practically every European manufacturer will exhibit bodies of this type. This has been adapted by Hudson designers to American use and modified to suit American ideas. The long, sloping hood merges into the lines of the dash. The graceful sweep and smoothness is unbroken from radiator cap to tail-light. The new car is designed for seven passengers. The two extra seats are of the folding type and permanently attached. They fold into the back of the front seat entirely out of the way. Yet owing to the great length of the car—135-inch wheel base—there is ample room for all passengers and all may have the greatest possible ease and comfort.

Provision has been made for entrance to the driver's section from either side of the car. The steering wheel is at the left, with control levers in center at driver's right, and tires are carried in advance of the left fore door. Thus access is obtained from either door.

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

* * *

THESE baseball magnates are proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

* * *

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

* * *

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Voss and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will lug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

* * *

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back. The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the same skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

Sporting Food

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mortals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again. The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile event, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. But McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

DR. ROUGLIN RETURNS.

Dr. Louis C. Rouglin returned to-day from a two weeks' vacation at Eastern resorts. He spent a week fishing off Ocean CView and reported several big catches.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for Infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersburg team, of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccaneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Dooin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial consideration of October's classic.

Need of Backstop.

Manager McGraw has been reflected in the trade he negotiated just before he left Pittsburg for this city. He traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. With Meyers out of commission McGraw realized that the hitting strength of his club would be affected. McLean is a finished backstop and a very fine sticker. Crandall, one of the grandest fellows who ever drew breath, had been of great service in former years as a relief twirler and pinch hitter.

But McGraw was well provided with pitching talent that could go the route. He strengthened the club by the trade. We were all very sorry to bid good-bye to Otis. He was a grand influence. Many a time his pleasing personality has helped to chase the blues from camp when we happened to meet with some unexpected misfortune.

I have said, in a previous article, that our pitching staff is the best in the major leagues. With the acquisition of Larry McLean I will back our catching department against any other.

Heretofore, the class was naturally ascribed to the Cubs in Archer and Bresnahan. With the best pitchers and two of the four greatest catchers in the game, I think fandom will agree that New York will boast the greatest battery strength in its company.

Upon the battery strength I confidently rely. I think it will prove an insurmountable obstacle to Philadelphia's pennant hopes.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

The National Baseball Commission has handed down a decision in which it allows the claim of Player Ralph Myers, of the Boston National League club, for $900 due him from the Spokane club, of the Northwestern League.

VAUGHN HURLS ONE-HIT GAME AGAINST INDIANS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—Jim Vaughn, recently acquired by the Cubs in exchange for Lew Richie, added another sensational victory to his string by defeating Indianapolis, 2 to 0. Vaughn allowed the Indians one hit. He has pitched in more games than any other American Association hurler and leads the league in strikeouts and bases on balls. In forty games he has struck out 165 batters and has given 145 free transportations to first base. He also has a no-hit game to his credit for this year. Vaughn left after the game to join the Cubs in Boston.

SALLY LEAGUE INFIELDER IS BOUGHT BY STALLINGS

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—The Boston Nationals have obtained four additional men toward strengthening the team for next season. Two are infielders and two are outfielders.

The infielders are Dugey, second baseman of the Waco team, of the Texas League, and McCleskey, a third baseman of the Albany club, of the South Atlantic League.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

• • •

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into tomorrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here today. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

• • •

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

MOTHER IS GIVEN EQUAL RIGHT TO CHILDREN

House Passes Bill Leaving Power to Award Custody in Divorce Cases to the Judge.

A bill giving the mother an equal right with the father to the custody of minor children after decision in divorce cases, and leaving the disposition of the child with the trial judge, was passed by the House Tuesday morning. The vote was 96 to 62. The fight lasted more than an hour.

It was a substitute to the bill introduced by Smith of Fulton and Olive of Richmond, and to the substitute of the General Judiciary Committee. The substitute was offered by Mr. Smith, who stated it was acceptable to the Senate and would be acted upon by that body at this session. The original bill transferred the prima facie right to the child from the father to the mother.

Mr. Smith, explaining his bill, declared the measure is designed to correct an injustice under which Georgia mothers have been held for years. Speeches in favor of the bill were also made by Miller of Bibb and Olive of Richmond.

A number of members opposed the bill, either declaring the present law is good enough or defining their positions clearly by stating the mother is not competent to care for the child.

Those who spoke against the bill were Conner of Spalding, Garlington of Richmond, Moye of Johnson, Picquet of Richmond and Slater of Bryan.

The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the Atlanta charter bill, providing for a popular vote on the charter, the referendum and the reduction of the power of the Recorder.

OBITUARY

John W. Adair, seventy-nine years old, a well-known resident of Fulton County, died Tuesday morning on his farm on the West Hunter road. He is survived by his wife and one son, Rufus. Six daughters also survive. They are Mrs. W. T. Huff and Mrs. J. M. Thompson, of Savannah; Mrs. J. M. Spinks, of Marietta; Mrs. J. T. Griffith, of Camilla; Mrs. Charles Williams, of Columbia, and Mrs. L. A. Garrison, of Atlanta. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. at the Sharon Church. Interment will be in the churchyard.

Susan E. Landers, fifty-five years old, No. 28 Inman street, died Tuesday at 9 o'clock. She is survived by her husband. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia Heeden, who died Monday, will be held at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Barnes, No. 122 Glennwood avenue. Interment at Hollywood.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $200,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

$100,000 in Stock For Use of Name

GADSDEN, ALA., Aug. 12.—Oliver Hall, a rich merchant of Collinsville, testified in the case of E. C. Drew, the Fort Payne promoter, charged with using the mail to defraud in promoting the DeKalb Etowah Oil and Gas Company, how he had been selected president by Drew and tendered $100,000 in stock in a $300,000 corporation. He said he never gave anything for the stock, but permitted the use of his name. His son, Irby Hall, was made vice president and given $500 in stock.

A sensation developed when it was shown the company had never been incorporated and that there was no system of bookkeeping.

Attorney Shot When Officer Aims at Dog

W. C. Munday, a member of the law firm of Munday & Cornwell, No. 318 Kiser Building, was shot in the leg Monday night when a bullet fired by Policeman Jaffares at a mad dog glanced from the sidewalk at Capitol avenue and Hunter street.

Munday's wound was slight, the bullet penetrating the flesh only and passing out. He was removed to his home.

The dog had created a panic among children playing in the street. The officer ran up and fired. Munday, fifteen feet away, received the bullet.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 12.—Governor O'Neal returned to Montgomery this morning and left the impression here that he would appoint a successor to Senator Johnson shortly, notwithstanding advice from Washington to call a special session of the Legislature.

TAX REFORM BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

Question Put Squarely Up to the House—Validity of Slaton Revenue Bills in Doubt.

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNeill and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 12.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $250,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

The bill provides for a State tax commissioner with offices in the State Capitol and county boards of tax assessors. According to the claims of the authors and supporters of the bill, it will increase the annual revenue of the State by at least $1,000,000, sufficient to pay off the present deficit within the next three years, as well as the teachers.

Passed After Hot Debate.

The bill was passed in the Senate after nearly five hours of debate Monday afternoon. Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint author of the bill, made a vigorous defense of the measure in a two and a half hour speech. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth, followed Senator Miller in a vigorous attack on the bill. He declared the bill did not provide an adequate personal property tax.

Other Senators who spoke briefly in opposition to the bill were McGregor, of the Nineteenth, and Olliff, of the Fourth. Senator McNeill, in supporting the bill, charged that the Lipscomb bill, defeated in the House, had been framed by the Chamber of Commerce of Athens, the home town of Senator DuBose. It was for this reason, he intimated, that the Senator from the Thirtieth opposed the present bill.

Upon motion of Senator Tarver, the previous question was called and the final vote was taken. Following the vote, which was 29 to 12 in favor, President Anderson for the first time during the session congratulated the Senate. The bill was transmitted immediately to the House.

SNOW SAYS LOSS IN CORN CROP 300,000,000 BUSHELS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—B. W. Snow says: "With the indication Saturday of the possibility of a breaking up of the drouth I sent a special circular of inquiry to my country clients asking for a report on corn condition August 11, and have received sufficient reports to justify the statement that the decline in prospects since the Government report and my own of August 1 was gathered has been much heavier than is generally appreciated.

"I have returns enough to indicate that Indiana has dropped 10 points in condition, Illinois 15 points with an average around 55, Iowa 13 and Missouri 20. Returns from Kansas and Nebraska are as yet scattered, but sufficient to put Kansas out of the field as a corn producer this year, and the Nebraska crop is of small importance, except in the northwest counties.

"My returns already cover almost one-third of the important corn counties, and if the later reports are in line with those already received, it is quite possible that the loss since August may have reached 300,000,000 bushels."

COTTON RULED QUITE STRONG

Continued Dry Weather in Southwest Causes Active Bidding, but Sales Were Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—An absence of weather news of features in the cables caused the cotton market to open dull to-day and first prices were from unchanged to 1 point off to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call strength developed and prices rallied 3 to 10 points from the initial level, due mainly to the dry map in the Western belt. The ring apparently seemed to want cotton and purchased rather freely at times. Many of the larger spot houses were noted buyers.

Cordill was out with a report on parts of the Eastern belt, which was considered very favorable. This, coupled with a private telegram from Austin, Texas, stating that no change of consequence is noted in conditions, while the weather has been hot and dry, the temperatures were only 90 degrees yesterday and the entire State toward Oklahoma, cotton is opening fast and the crop that it will be moving freely all south of Waco. This brought out rather active selling from Wall street, but offerings were so rapidly absorbed that prices during the late forenoon were firmly maintained around the early high point.

The high temperatures continue in the West and the weekly weather report just posted shows a bullish condition existing west of the Mississippi, though the Eastern belt is favorable and scattered showers are shown in this section to-day for yesterday, though there are private reports of deterioration in Georgia and Alabama from the lack of moisture in some sections.

Sentiment to-day is somewhat more bullish and higher prices are predicted for the present at least, but there is an element who believe the market is entirely too high and are awaiting rain developments in the West to sell.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 3 points lower to 3 points higher than the preceding quotations of Monday.

Following are the bids in New York: August, 11.65; October, 11.11; December, 11.05; March, 11.04; January, 10.84.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Precipitation overnight in the west occurred at a few isolated places only. No general rains yet, although it continues generally cloudy over Texas. The map shows cloudy weather in North Carolina, also generally fair in the west of the belt, good rains in North Carolina and in the south central Gulf states. Indications are unchanged, and prospects continue for unsettled weather and precipitation to come on the western States in the near future. Cloudy weather and showers, with a decided fall in temperatures in New Mexico and Colorado promise speedier rain developments for Texas and Oklahoma.

Liverpool is steady but cables that heavy hedge selling is weighing on the market. Manchester cables: "Weaving worse. Yarns slack. Lower unless bad crop prospects." Our market opened 2 points higher and advanced steadily on small buying to cover on the absence of general rains in the west and in anticipation of an unfavorable weather report for the week.

New York wires that Weld's traveling man reports 12 points deterioration in Texas since July 25. It must be borne in mind, however, that the crop condition in Texas was unusually high up to that date.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—There will be showers within the next thirty-six hours in the Lake regions and the North and Middle Atlantic States. Occasional showers will continue in Florida. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi the weather will be generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

The temperatures will rise slowly in the northeastern districts during to-night and Wednesday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Fair in west, showers in east portion to-night or Wednesday; warmer to-night.

North Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair except showers in north portion to-night or Wednesday.

Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A steady tone was shown in all commodities at the metal exchange to-day with the exception of tin, which was weak. Copper, spot and August, 14.72½@15.85; September and October, 14.85@15.75; spelter, 5.75@5.80; lead, 4.30, bid; tin, 41.00¾@42.90, since, 5.65@5.75.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows mostly cloudy in Texas and North Carolina, generally fair over rest of the belt. No rains shown on the map, except light shower at Galveston and Amarillo, and raining in far west Texas, at El Paso. Slight rains fell over south central Gulf and North Carolina, but little rain elsewhere.

* * *

F. M. Cordill wires: "Charlotte, Greenville, Atlanta to Montgomery an unbroken stretch of excellent crops is noted. Atlantics show uninterrupted improvement since my last trip. The weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable. Conditions were never better at this date."

* * *

Waxahatchie, Texas, wires: "Hot winds hurting cotton badly. We have reports floating western Oklahoma is deteriorating rapidly. Only showers reported to-day at Yoakum and Brenham."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Expected rains did not fall in Oklahoma and Texas and the market was due to advance on the opening Monday morning. But Europe reflected no alarm. Arkansas reported splendid rains, Washington unsettled weather over Oklahoma and the weather prophets among the trade said that Texas rains are imminent. Under the circumstances the market continued under the spell of Washington legislative threat and hung fire.

"Recently students of the crop have devoted much time and thought to the effect of dry weather in Texas. One faction, predicating its opinion on the general reports of lack of moisture made by the Weather Bureau and the great number of crop damage advices now coming from the west, says the crop in Texas and Oklahoma has deteriorated sharply, and that those States no longer promise a wonderful yield. Another faction, which has looked up the western rainfall records of other years, is equally certain that the present drouthy spell is not only not abnormal, but is confined to a very much smaller area than the trade realizes.

"Thus it is that some traders adhere to the belief that a very large crop is on the way, conditions east of the Mississippi River being excellent, while others are now becoming convinced another year's need will exceed production. Meantime new crop cotton is being absorbed by previously created requirement just as the latest expected it would be, but the demand for later shipments is small, a fact that robs the bull side of the account of much attractiveness."

The Journal of Commerce says the volume of business passing in the cotton goods markets is being underestimated. Jobbers are doing a good general trade. Cotton yarn prices are easier. The lower trend of prices on the cotton exchanges has caused some setback in the goods markets, but there are few goods available for spot delivery. Most mills do not care to go far into another cotton crop until they are better satisfied of the outcome of the crop.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Generally clear, rain at Amarillo and El Paso. Oklahoma—Clear and hot."

* * *

The Government's official record of Texas gives the rainfall average for the month of July as 1.29 inches, which is 1.62 below normal, but .09 inch higher than it was last year.

* * *

Official temperature average for Oklahoma yesterday was 104 degrees; Texas, 98, with seven stations recording 100; five 102, and one 104 degrees.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Market easier on hedge selling; tendency here to buy on expected bullish weekly report and anticipation of bullish weather forecast of Government to-day."

* * *

Manchester quotes officially to-day yarns dull and weak.

* * *

The market steadied up on dry map in the Western belt after the call. Weld, Mitchell and Cone were the leading buyers on the advance. Smith was possibly the best seller, supposed to be for Wall street.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Mean temperatures ranged from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Central North Carolina, north Central South Carolina and in the lower coast region of Texas, where there was a slight deficiency. The greatest excess in temperature occurred in Northwestern Arkansas and Northeastern Oklahoma.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern belt, from 82 to 84 degrees over the central and from 82 to 88 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88, occurred at Fort Worth, Texas, and Fort Smith, Ark.

No precipitation occurred during the week in Oklahoma and there was very little in Texas. Rain fell generally over the other portions of the cotton region, except that there was none in the extreme northern portion of Alabama and the southern portion of Middle Tennessee.

The precipitation was unevenly distributed and more than 2 inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, the central portion of Northern Arkansas, Southern Florida and at one station in Alabama and one in North Carolina. The greatest weekly precipitation, 8 inches, occurred at Calico Rock, Ark., and there was 5.66 inches at Minden, La.

MARKED ACTIVITY NOTED IN STOCKS

Street More Cheerful Over Cheap Money Talk—Standard Railroads Led Advance.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Union Pacific made a new high mark for the present movement at the opening of the stock market to-day, when it began selling at 154¼, or ⅛ above Monday's final.

The tone was strong and most of the issues showed fractional gains. The accumulation arose from scattered sources and include some shares which for a long time have been neglected.

Among the advances were Woolworth, ½; Steel common, ⅝; United States Rubber common, ⅞; Union Pacific, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Bethlehem Steel, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; Texas Company, ½; Southern Pacific, ¼; Reading, ⅝; Pennsylvania Railroad, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅜; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie first preferred ⅝, and Erie common, ⅛.

New Haven, which closed last night at 107⅛, crossed par, opening at 100⅛.

St. Paul, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 107½, against 109¾ at the closing last night.

The curb was firm.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in London were strong.

Toward the end of the first hour, large buying orders appeared and nearly everything on the list moved up to new high records for the past six weeks. Gains of more than a point were noted in the leading railroads and industrials, while substantial fractional upturns were recorded in many other issues.

Amalgamated Copper led the upward movement, advancing 1⅜ to 71⅝. Union Pacific moved up 1⅜ to 155⅜, and similar gains were recorded in Canadian Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Steel common, Wabash common, United States Rubber, Utah Copper and Tennessee Copper, advanced more than ½ each. Southern Pacific was under slight pressure, however, declining ⅛ to 91⅜.

Call money is loaning and renewing at 2¾ per cent.

Union Pacific will sell ex-rights Wednesday.

The tone was strong in the last hour, and a number of issues made substantial gains. United States Rubber common advanced to more than 62, a net gain of more than 1 point since the opening. Steel was strong, selling around 65 for a gain of ¼ since noon. Canadian Pacific was off fractionally. Lehigh Valley and St. Paul held firm and Texas Company was very strong, selling at 118¼, or a gain of more than 2 points on the day. Brokers said there was a good deal of investment buying in Europe.

STOCK GOSSIP

"As I have said many times of late, any activity the stock market displays is when prices are advancing. I hear that the large interests are heavily long of securities and are accumulating more from day to day.

"Although prices have had a good advance from the low of June 11, the advance under way will continue until stocks are at a considerably higher level. I am especially bullish on Union Pacific, Steel, Copper and the Tractions, and believe holdings should be increased in all of these issues on any moderate recession."—G. D. Potter.

Dry, Hot Weather Runs Shorts to Cover—Corn Feature in Activity and Strength.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	85⅝@87⅝
Corn—No. 2	77½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42½

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—September corn was up as much as 1½c to-day, but it lost ½c later, yet the closing price was about 1c higher.

A report was received during the session saying that the losses throughout the dry districts in the corn belt have been sensational since the Government August report made its appearance.

On this a great deal of corn was bought and it was bought by the larger holders and bulls in the trade. December was quite strong and closed 1¾c higher, and May was up a little over 1c. The big corn market was chock full of excited humanity, as many speculators left the other pits to try their luck in corn.

Wheat closed with gains of ⅛ to 1½c and oats were up ½ to ¾c.

Provisions were lower all around.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Plans for Erection of Sixteen-Story Bldg. At Whitehall and Ala.

Dr. E. L. Connally Consults Architects—United Cigar Stores May Take Brown & Allen Corner.

Announcement was made Tuesday of plans for a sixteen-story office building on the Brown & Allen site, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, a full account of which appears elsewhere. Dr. E. L. Connally owns the present building and will erect the new one.

This action will bring about some interesting changes, and may mean that Brown & Allen will move across the street to the place now occupied by Thomas H. Pitts, the tobacconist, and that the United Cigar Stores Company will be located where Brown & Allen now are.

The corner on which the building will stand is one of the busiest in Atlanta and brings a handsome rental.

List of 24 Exhibitors.

Success of the plan to exhibit Atlanta-made goods on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building seems to be assured. Already 24 merchants and manufacturers have signed up for space. They are the Whittier Mills Company, Marcus-Loeb & Co., Nunnally & McCrea, Southern Engraving Company, Frederick Disinfectant Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, E. Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, Southern Upholstering Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Southern Spring Bed Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper, Gholstin-Cunningham Company, All Star Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Norris, Inc., Willingham-Tift Lumber Company, Tripod Paint Company, J. P. Stevens Engraving Company, Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company, White Provision Company, Dowman-Dozier, Foote & Davies.

The plan of the committee has been to put so many "spaces" 10 feet square at the disposal of exhibitors.

Moving on Whitehall.

The Eugene V. Haynes jewelry establishment will move soon from No. 37 to No. 49 Whitehall street. The firm has renovated the latter place and Mr. Haynes has carried out many ideas of the jewelry business gained on trips abroad. Under the old lease this concern was paying $4,000 a year rental, but the owner of No. 37 Whitehall, A. B. Steele, asked $12,000. Unable to reach a compromise at $8,000 the jewelry concern announced that it would move. The change will take place about September 1. An up-to-date moving picture house, it is said, will occupy the old location.

Peachtree Creek Plans.

What can be done to reclaim or "renovate" Peachtree Creek? More than a hundred property owners would like to know. The County Commissioners have a plan to clear out the bed and remove driftwood from the banks. This, they believe, will prevent to a large extent the present overflow in the rainy season, and keep the low places free from standing water. Mosquitoes won't have a chance, and as for the sewage of former days it has been largely removed by the erection of the Peachtree Creek disposal plant.

Some time ago the sugestion was made that the creek be bridged over for a considerable distance. This plan met opposition from Eretus Rivers, who declared that the city and the county had so few streams of size that they should be left exposed to view.

The main permanent trouble with Peachtree Creek seems to be that it is muddy rather than clear. Were it a stream of sparkling water rather than a ditch carrying off Georgia red clay its possibilities would be unlimited. If it were a good stream in this sense the lowlands that now border it could be turned into attractive park spaces for present and future generations.

Spring Street Improvement.

Sooner or later there is going to be a big improvement on Spring street to make it as much as possible a help to Peachtree. The proposition to extend Spring northward to Brookwood has already been announced. It rests where many other good propositions rest, to be revived later when the need becomes greater than it is at present.

Now comes the suggestion that Spring street be turned slightly from its course as it strikes Carnegie way—that a slice be cut from the northeast corner of Cain street (the Governor's Mansion lot) and Spring street be connected up with Cone street, which now ends at Carnegie way, and extended across the railroad tracks by way of a concrete viaduct.

Cone street ends on the south at Marietta street and it is suggested that the street be continued. The viaduct would go straight until the tracks were crossed and then curve slightly to the left, or about due south, and land on Madison avenue, to serve the entire Terminal Station district.

This arrangement, it is pointed out, would make it possible for the viaduct to pass safely to the east of the W. & A. freight depot, and it would put a leading thoroughfare one block closer to the retail district than a viaduct which jumped from the foot of the present Spring street. Not only that, but a first-class, straight-line thoroughfare would be opened up for traffic that would otherwise use Peachtree, and travelers using the Terminal Station could reach their North Side homes much more quickly than by the circuitous route that it is now necessary to travel.

Legislators To Be Paid at Once; Sum Due Them $70,000

That the Georgia legislators will receive every penny of the money due them for their services in the present session of the General Assembly was indicated Tuesday morning following a conference between Governor Slaton and State Treasurer Speer.

The total amount which will be paid to the legislators for salaries and mileage will be $70,000.

State Treasurer Speer declared Tuesday the legislators would be paid in full, regardless of the depleted condition of the treasury, sufficient funds for this purpose being in hand.

A large part of the $70,000 has been paid to the legislators already.

Senate Passes Bill Limiting Militia's Use

Apparently weary from the strenuous campaign for tax revision which culminated in the passage of the substitute to the Shepard bill Monday night, Georgia Senators adjourned Tuesday at noon following the passage of two general bills by McGregor, of the Nineteenth, providing for a revision of the military laws of the State. The vote was 29 to 0. There was no debate.

The bills provide affidavits shall be made by civic authorities before request is made upon the Governor for troops in case of riot or insurrection, thereby decreasing the power of the civil authorities and increasing that of the executive. The measure, according to its supporters, aims to prevent riots between citizens and soldiers such as occurred in Augusta last year.

Tubercular Cattle Barred From State

An order designed to prevent the shipment of tubercular cattle into Georgia was issued Tuesday morning by Dr. Peter F. Balmsen, State Veterinarian, from the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. The order provides that all cattle originating in New York or Illinois, destined to any point in Georgia, must be accompanied by a certificate of health issued by a veterinary inspector of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The order goes into effect immediately.

Girl's Plea for Man Softens Policewoman

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Policewoman Alice Clement to-day was sorry she made an arrest. She was proud of the accomplishment in capturing a young man who insisted upon following her in the downtown streets.

But Miss Alice Brow, the young woman fiance, went to Policewoman Clement and pleaded that she recommend his release. Miss Brown, after several minutes' pleading, cried and then fainted.

When Policewoman Clement started to court to appear against Fred Bentley, 26, the young man she had arrested, she said: "I'm sorry I pinched him."

Parcel Post Stamps Going to Waste Here

The Atlanta postoffice has more than half a million parcel post stamps as a dead weight. Postmaster Hugh McKee has been instructed to sell them at once, but is having a hard job doing it.

Under an order which went into effect July 1 parcel post stamps were declared no longer necessary.

The parcel post stamps immediately fell into disuse, although they are of the same value as other stamps of the same denominations and can be used on all classes of matter.

POSSE SEARCHING FOR LEE SLAYER

South Georgia Farmer Shot Dead by Black He Attempted to Disarm.

LEESBURG, Aug. 12.—Searching parties to-day are scouring the country near this place in an effort to capture Doc Mathis, a negro, who shot and killed R. L. Jessey, a prominent Lee County farmer, last night.

Berry Wallace, a brother-in-law of Jossey, had a difficulty with Will Mathis, a son of the slayer, for beating a mule.

Returning from Leesburg in the automobile of Wallace, accompanied by several other men, a stop was made at the home of the negro, who, it was reported, had secured a rifle with which to avenge the whipping of his boy. It was the intention of the party to disarm the negro. They called to him and he came out, but returned to the house, saying: "Wait until I get my shoes."

Josey followed and told the negro to wait, but the negro shut and fastened the door. His son, Will Mathis, began firing at the party in the automobile from a window. Doc Mathis cracked the door open and fired at Jossey, the ball passing through the right breast.

Jossey's body was secured by the party and brought to Leesburg, where the posse was formed. The negroes in the meantime had escaped.

U. S. Peace Delegate To the Hague Is Dead

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 12.—The funeral of Judge U. M. Rose, member of The Hague Peace Conference, who died here to-day, will be held Thursday from the family residence. Judge Rose was one of the most distinguished members of the Southern bar and at one time was president of the American Bar Association. In 1905, following a visit of President Roosevelt to Little Rock, he was appointed a member of the International Peace Conference at The Hague.

Judge Rose was 79 years of age. His death was hastened by a recent fall, when he sustained a fractured arm.

Rain Halts Mercury As It Starts on Climb

A light shower shortly after noon Tuesday cooled the atmosphere and brought Atlanta relief from heat. The mercury in the official thermometer was forced from 88 degrees down to 78 in less than a half hour. The day started off with the thermometer registering 76 degrees.

Fair weather and cooler is predicted by Government Forecaster VonHerrmann.

Castro's Revolt in Venezuela Crushed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The revolution in Venezuela, reported to have been led by General Cipriano Castro and his cousin, General Torres Castro, has collapsed entirely, according to information received at the State Department to-day.

General Torres Castro and all his staff have been captured by the Federal forces.

Preference Given Whites by Blalock

Collector of Internal Revenue A. O. Blalock, recently appointed successor to Henry S. Jackson, has started to carry out his pledge to appoint no negroes to any position that a white man may fill without demeaning himself.

Tuesday morning Mr. Blalock appointed a white man to succeed a negro elevator runner in the Federal building.

Elopers Are Halted By Tifton Sheriff

TIFTON, Aug. 12.—Sheriff Shaw arrested Arthur Harrington, 17-year-old son of Deputy Sheriff R. M. Harrington, of Ocilla, in answer to a telephone message from the young man's father.

Harrington, with a Miss Smith, aged 16, of Ocilla, came to Tifton in an automobile intending to secure a license and get married. When they arrived here Harrington was taken in custody and held until his father came, when he was taken back to Ocilla.

Shirt a la Bulgarian Blouse Jails 2 Men

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., Aug. 12.—Two men were arrested here while strolling along the main thoroughfare wearing shirts hanging loose, a la Bulgarian blouse.

When asked for an explanation, the men said: "Women are wearing suspenders nowadays. Guess we can wear Bulgarian blouses if we want to."

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

Urges U. S. Ban on Alien Conspirators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, to-day introduced a bill aiming at the deportation of Mexicans in this country who may be stirring up trouble between the United States and Mexico.

His bill provides that any alien who shall take advantage of his residence in the United States to conspire for the overthrow of a foreign government in North or South America, with which this country is on friendly terms, shall be deported.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1912.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funpy so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

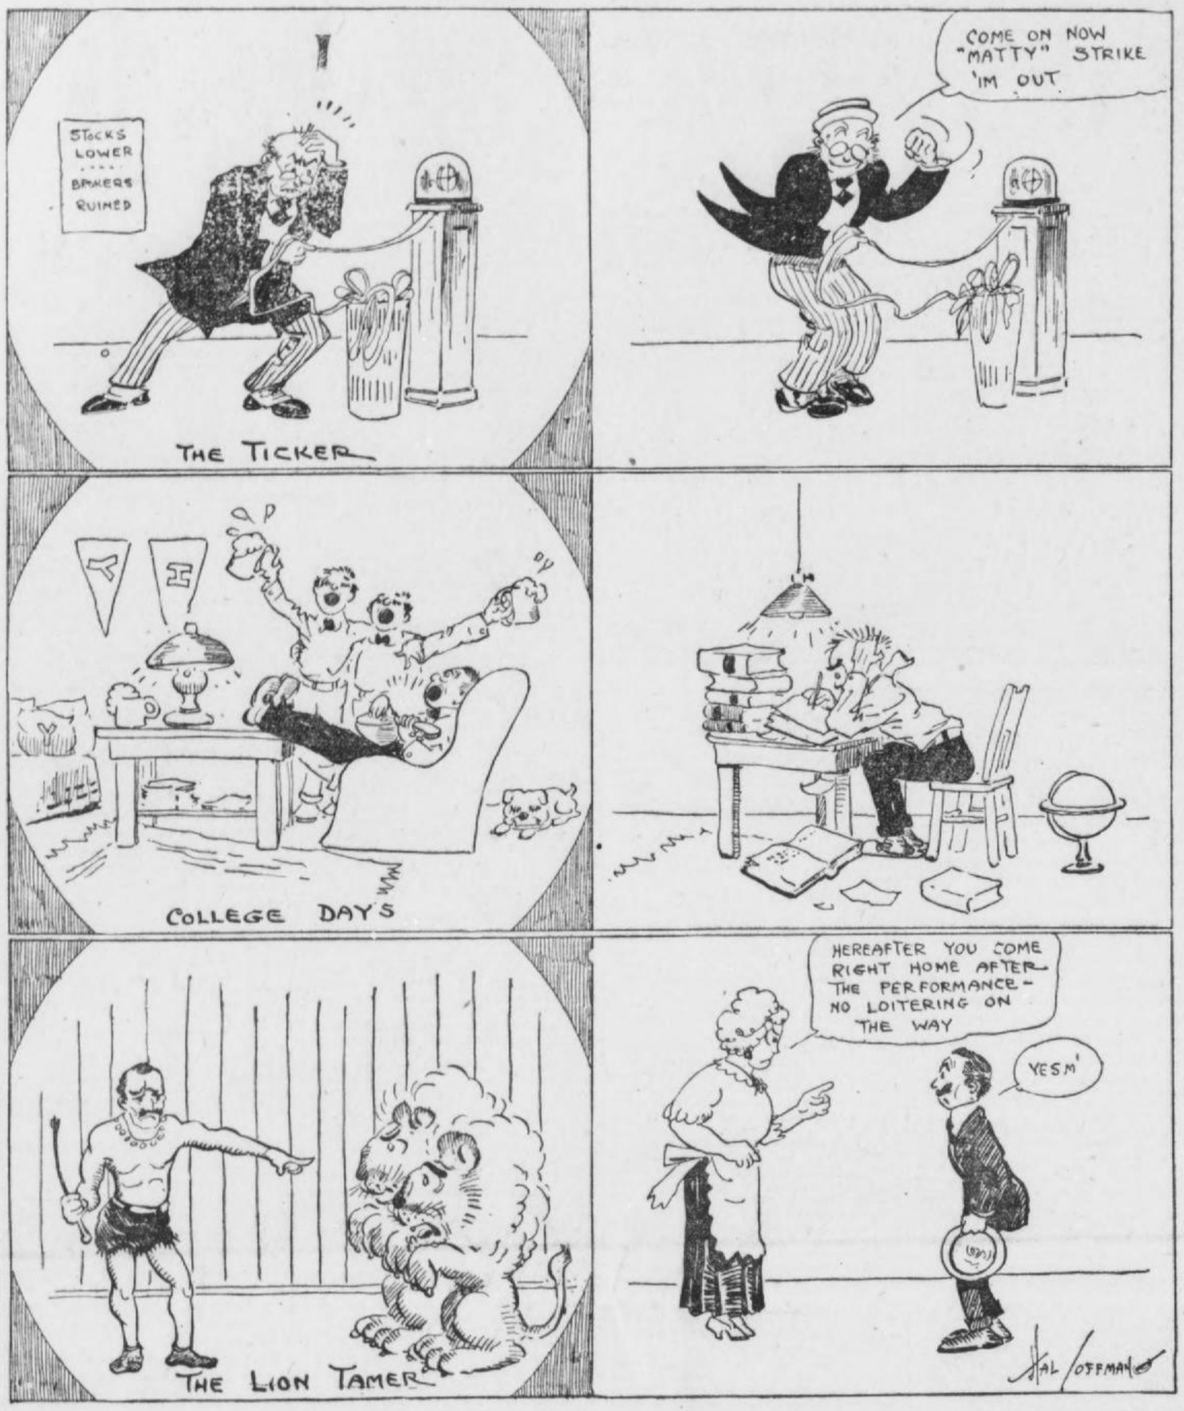

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

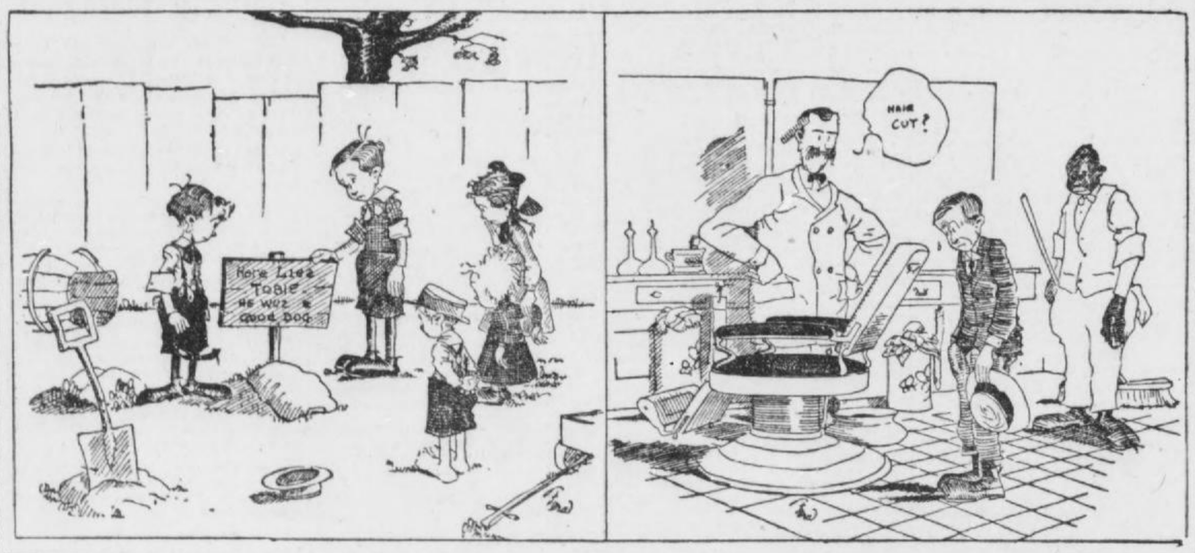

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

Adam Smith

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nation[illegible]

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power.
Great love to that great hour.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

JUDGE ROAN BARS ATTACK ON FRANK'S CHARACTER

Cook Repudiates Affidavit; Charges Intimidation

EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY IS DENIED

Executive's Action Comes as the Supreme Court Reverses Ruling Favoring Father.

The Supreme Court Tuesday reversed the decision of Judge Hammond, of Augusta, awarding the two Zachry children to the father, thereby further complicating the sensational case in which requisition papers by Governor Cole Blease for Zachry were refused by Governor Slaton Tuesday morning.

According to the ruling of the Supreme Court, the decision awarding the children to the father is reversed and remanded to Judge Hammond's court for further hearing. The ruling further specifies that Judge Hammond may exercise his discretion in awarding the custody of the children, which is contrary to the opinion rendered by Judge Hammond, who held previously that he was forced to award the children to Zachry because of a previous judgment.

The effect of the ruling will be to put the whole matter back in the Augusta courts, with the possibility that Mrs. Zachry will be awarded the custody of the two children.

Governor Slaton based his refusal on the fact that no State law had been violated by Zachry in South Carolina and that the whole case was against the defendant grew out of the desire of Mrs. Zachry to obtain the custody of the two children.

One of the most spectacular fights for the extradition of a citizen ever recorded in Georgia occurred in the Governor's offices Monday. Charges and counter charges were hurled in turn by counsel for the defense and for the State of South Carolina, and at one time a personal mix-up between Attorney Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, and Attorney Phinizy, representing Mr. Zachry, who charged that the case had been prosecuted with all the "vindictiveness" that Mr. Dunbar could summon, was narrowly averted by the Governor.

Slaton Draws Line.

"You may wax just as enthusiastic as you like," said Governor Slaton to Mr. Phinizy, "but you can't say those things. That will not do here."

The hearing was as unique as it was spectacular. With the Governor sitting as both court and jury, attorneys for the defense and plaintiffs were allowed to argue their cases to their hearts' content with frequent interruptions by the Governor, who kept close tab on every bit of evidence offered.

In addition to the three attorneys for Zachry, Cohen and Phinizy, of Augusta, and West, of Thompson, E. D. Clary, Mayor of Harlem, the defendant's home town, testified in behalf of Zachry. Attorneys Rembert, of Columbia, S. C., and Dunbar, of Augusta, represented the State of South Carolina.

Mayor Clary, of Harlem, created a sensation when he testified that he had on one occasion pulled Mrs. Zachry and her mother off Zachry following an attack. Mrs. Zachry, he declared further, had said in his presence that if she did not get her children she would have to kill her husband.

Kidnaping Charge Irrelevant.

The climax of the hearing was reached, however, when the attorneys for Governor Blease virtually admitted to Governor Slaton that the charge of kidnaping, as incorporated in the requisition papers, was not relevant and that practically all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the custody of the two children.

In substantiation of the latter statement Governor Slaton referred to a letter which he himself had received from Mrs. Zachry, in which, he declared, it seemed that all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the children.

This testimony of the Governor and the startling admission of Attorney Rembert, representing Governor Blease, broke down the whole argument of the plaintiff and really marked the turning point in the hearing.

LATEST NEWS

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The shadow of another war in the Balkans hangs over Europe. Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, announced in the House of Commons to-day that if Turkey refuses to give up Adrianople at the insistence of Bulgaria, the powers will not be able to divert the consequences, "no matter what their character."

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The direct overture of the United States to the Huerta administration—the tender of American aid in the effort to restore peace in Mexico—is expected to be transmitted by Envoy Lind to the Mexican national palace within a few hours.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 12. There will be no formal organization of a National Council of Catholic Women at the convention of the American Federation of Catholics this year. This was practically determined this forenoon at the preliminary meeting of the women called to plan the perfecting of such a council.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 12.—The Ohio River is at the lowest stage in years as a result of the drouth, and coal shipments have suspended. Three million bushels of coal due for shipment south are tied up at Pittsburg.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—Eleanor Fay, who says Louis R. Glavis, of Ballinger case fame, is her fiance, tried to end her life by swallowing carbolic acid while on a ferry boat plying the bay. She asserted she was to wed Glavis soon.

I. T. U. Officers May Serve Indefinitely

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Lynch, of the International Typographical Union, won another victory at the annual convention of the order to-day when the delegates sustained by an overwhelming vote the recommendation of the committee on laws that reported unfavorably on the proposition to make officers of the International Union ineligible to serve for more than two years. This proposition by Delegate Beadle, of Tacoma, Wash., was aimed particularly at President Lynch.

AUTO TOUR IS LAUDED BY SLATON

Calls Hearst's Sunday American Pathfinding Trip to Pacific a Sign of Progress.

Declaring that the promotion of good roads and cross-country highways, such as the proposed transcontinental route from Atlanta to San Francisco, was the best evidence of the progress of the people, Governor John M. Slaton Tuesday placed his stamp of approval on the campaign of Hearst's Sunday American to "pathfind" an all-Southern coast-to-coast route, which will be inaugurated next Monday.

The Governor declared emphatically that the promotion of a project of this kind meant not only a bigger and better Georgia but a more prosperous Southland through the closer communication of the people of different States by means of good roads.

"No better evidence of the progress of a people can be had," said Governor Slaton, "than promotions of this sort for better road and highway facilities. Obviously better roads within a State bring the people into closer communication with each other and this makes for increased interchange of both trade and mind products.

Chance to Make Friends.

"Of course there is much larger significance in this project which contemplates a highway from our city through the rich and prosperous Southland all the way to the rich Pacific Coast. Such a highway will afford the people of different States the opportunity to become better acquainted with each other, and, surely, no one can question that this can only be highly beneficial to all concerned. It is especially needed in the South with its wonderful resources, much of which has as yet been barely touched in development.

"I can see no reason why this project inaugurated by The Sunday American should not go through as planned. Just such things were done by the ancient Romans—witness the great highways which stretched out in all directions from ancient Rome, making it the very hub of the world. Surely we can do as much if not more."

Practically every plan for the inauguration of the monster campaign is complete. "Pathfinder" Ferguson has had scarcely a minute of rest since arriving in Atlanta Saturday, for he is leaving out not one detail of the big trip.

Reception Pleases Trail Blazer.

He stated Tuesday that he was much pleased with the reception accorded him since arriving in Atlanta, and would leave the city next Monday with deep regret if it were not for the fact that he is engaged in a campaign which means so much not only for Atlanta, but for Georgia and the South.

The official start from Atlanta next Monday will be featured by a great parade strictly in keeping with the monster campaign which is being inaugurated. Among those who will have a place in the parade will be the Fifth Regiment Band, which will head the procession: a big Alco truck, Chief of Police Beavers in his automobile, Chief Cummings of the fire department, other public officials, including Mayor Woodward and members of the Council, in specially decorated automobiles; scores of automobiles and motorcycles that have participated in the races at the Drome.

Great Auto Parade Planned.

If indications apparent one week before the inauguration of the big campaign amount to anything, Atlanta will witness on next Monday one of the biggest motor parades ever pulled off in the city.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a local newspaper man, will go direct to Birmingham, the first official stopping place. From Birmingham the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Tucson, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

SULZER BATTLES IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—At 3:15 p. m. the Assembly took a recess until 8:30 to-night. The majority to pass the impeachment resolution is still lacking, but the anti-Sulzer leaders expect to have the members rounded up to-night.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Governor William Sulzer's political life hangs in the balance to-day. Faced by a hostile Legislature, Governor Sulzer, with his back to the wall, fought with more vigor than he had pressed into any other contest in his long political career.

Before the Assembly convened to vote on the resolution that Sulzer should be impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors" for the alleged private use of political funds and speculation in Wall Street, opponents of the Governor claimed to have enough votes to pass the resolution.

At least five of the judges of the Court of Appeals must participate in the impeachment trial, and supporters of Governor Sulzer rely upon the judicial rather than the legislative action of the proposed court of impeachment for a favorable decision in the involved case.

The resolution of impeachment, whose formulation is based on findings of the Frawley legislative committee, was introduced in the Assembly at 12:15 a. m., when 101 of the 150 members were present, but it was predicted that close to a full attendance would be on hand to-day. Democrats opposed to Governor Sulzer appointed committees to see that every member was in his seat.

PLAN 16 STORIES ON BROWN AND ALLEN SITE

Dr. E. L. Connally and associates will soon start the construction of a sixteen-story office building on the site of Brown & Allen's drug store, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, if plans which are under way are consummated. Announcement was made unofficially at noon Tuesday that Dr. Connally has been in consultation with W. L. Stoddart of New York and Atlanta, and other architects, from whom he has received tentative plans.

In fact, an engineer representing a local architect surveyed the ground last week and made measurements of the stores in the building. Dr. Connally could not be reached for an expression as to his plans, and his son, Thomas W. Connally, refused to be quoted.

Such a move has been in contemplation for several years. Two years ago Dr. Connally had an architect sketch a twenty-story building, and since then he has had more or less definite intentions to erect a building that will be a credit to the section and to the city.

The structure which Dr. Connally is planning will cost probably $750,000, and will be a distinct addition to the line of attractive buildings on Whitehall. It will probably be known as the Connally Building, after its builder, who likewise erected the old structure.

The present building is 30 years old and it must soon be repaired or torn down. About a year ago a brick wall was placed in the center. The structure is three stories and of brick.

The lot is about 90 feet square, and a sixteen-story office building would give 129,600 square feet of floor space. Frontage near this point seldom changes hands, but is estimated to be worth from $7,500 to $10,000 in a transaction with no exchange elements, or $675,000 to $900,000.

Brown & Allen now pay $1,000 a month for the conre, it was declared.

STATE CHARGES THAT ATTACK ON GIRL WAS PLANNED BY ACCUSED

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

State announces its theory that Frank planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan the day before she came to the factory for her money.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified that he had seen women in Frank's office, was shown up by the defense and admitted by Dalton.

Four acquaintances of Dalton testify that they would not believe him under oath and that his reputation for truth and veracity is bad.

C. E. Pollard, expert accountant, testifies that it required him three hours and eleven minutes to compile the financial sheet that the defense claims Frank prepared the afternoon of the murder.

Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer, says that Frank did no work on the financial sheet Saturday morning, the day of the crime.

Jim Conley's declaration that Lemmie Quinn came into the factory and left before the arrival of Monteen Stover, who came at 12:05 o'clock, is challenged by the testimony of Miss Hall, who swears Quinn did not enter the factory before she left at 12:02 o'clock.

Magnolia Kennedy, worker at the pencil factory, testifies she laid her hand and Helen Ferguson's shoulder when they drew their pay and that the girl did not ask for Mary Phagan's wages. She says Schiff paid off. Miss Kennedy says hair found in lathe looked like slain girl's.

Sinister intimations made by Solicitor Dorsey in questioning Will Chambers, a boy in the factory, who denies alleged conversations, are ordered ruled out.

Attorney Arnold threatens to move for a mistrial if any further intimations of this sort are allowed to be heard by the jury.

Minola McKnight, cook in the Frank household, gives evidence against that offered by her husband and declares detectives tried to make her swear to lies. She admitted she signed the affidavit reporting alleged conversations between Mrs. Frank and the prisoner, but insisted it was a lie and that she signed because the detectives threatened to lock her up if she did not.

Determined attempts by the State to introduce further evidence of the alleged degeneracy of Leo M. Frank were frustrated Tuesday afternoon by the protests and objections of Attorney Reuben Arnold.

"If any further effort is made to introduce such testimony, I shall move for a mistrial," declared Arnold to the court.

Solicitor Dorsey sought to get the testimony from Philip Chambers, a 15-year-old office boy who was in the pencil factory from last December until March. The Solicitor Questioned the boy about alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, and the boy denied them. Arnold objected and all the questions along this line were ruled out. Dorsey said he would call Gantt in rebuttal.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook whose sensational affidavit concerning occurrences in the Frank home the day of the tragedy and the night and morning following created a stir early in June, utterly repudiated the affidavit to Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey.

She declared that it all was "a pack of lies" and that she had been browbeaten and bulldozed by the detectives into signing it under threat of spending a term in jail.

All of this, she swore, had been invented by her husband. In addition, she declared her husband had not been at the Frank home April 26. McKnight swore he was there and saw Frank come home and then depart hurriedly without eating anything.

Dorsey was not able to shake her in her denials of the truth of any part of the statement.

Gordon Bailey, one of the sweepers at the factory, testified that he had not heard Frank ask Conley to come early Saturday to the factory and that he never had seen women in Frank's office nor Conley watching at the factory door.

He testified that he saw Conley looking at the newspapers at the police station.

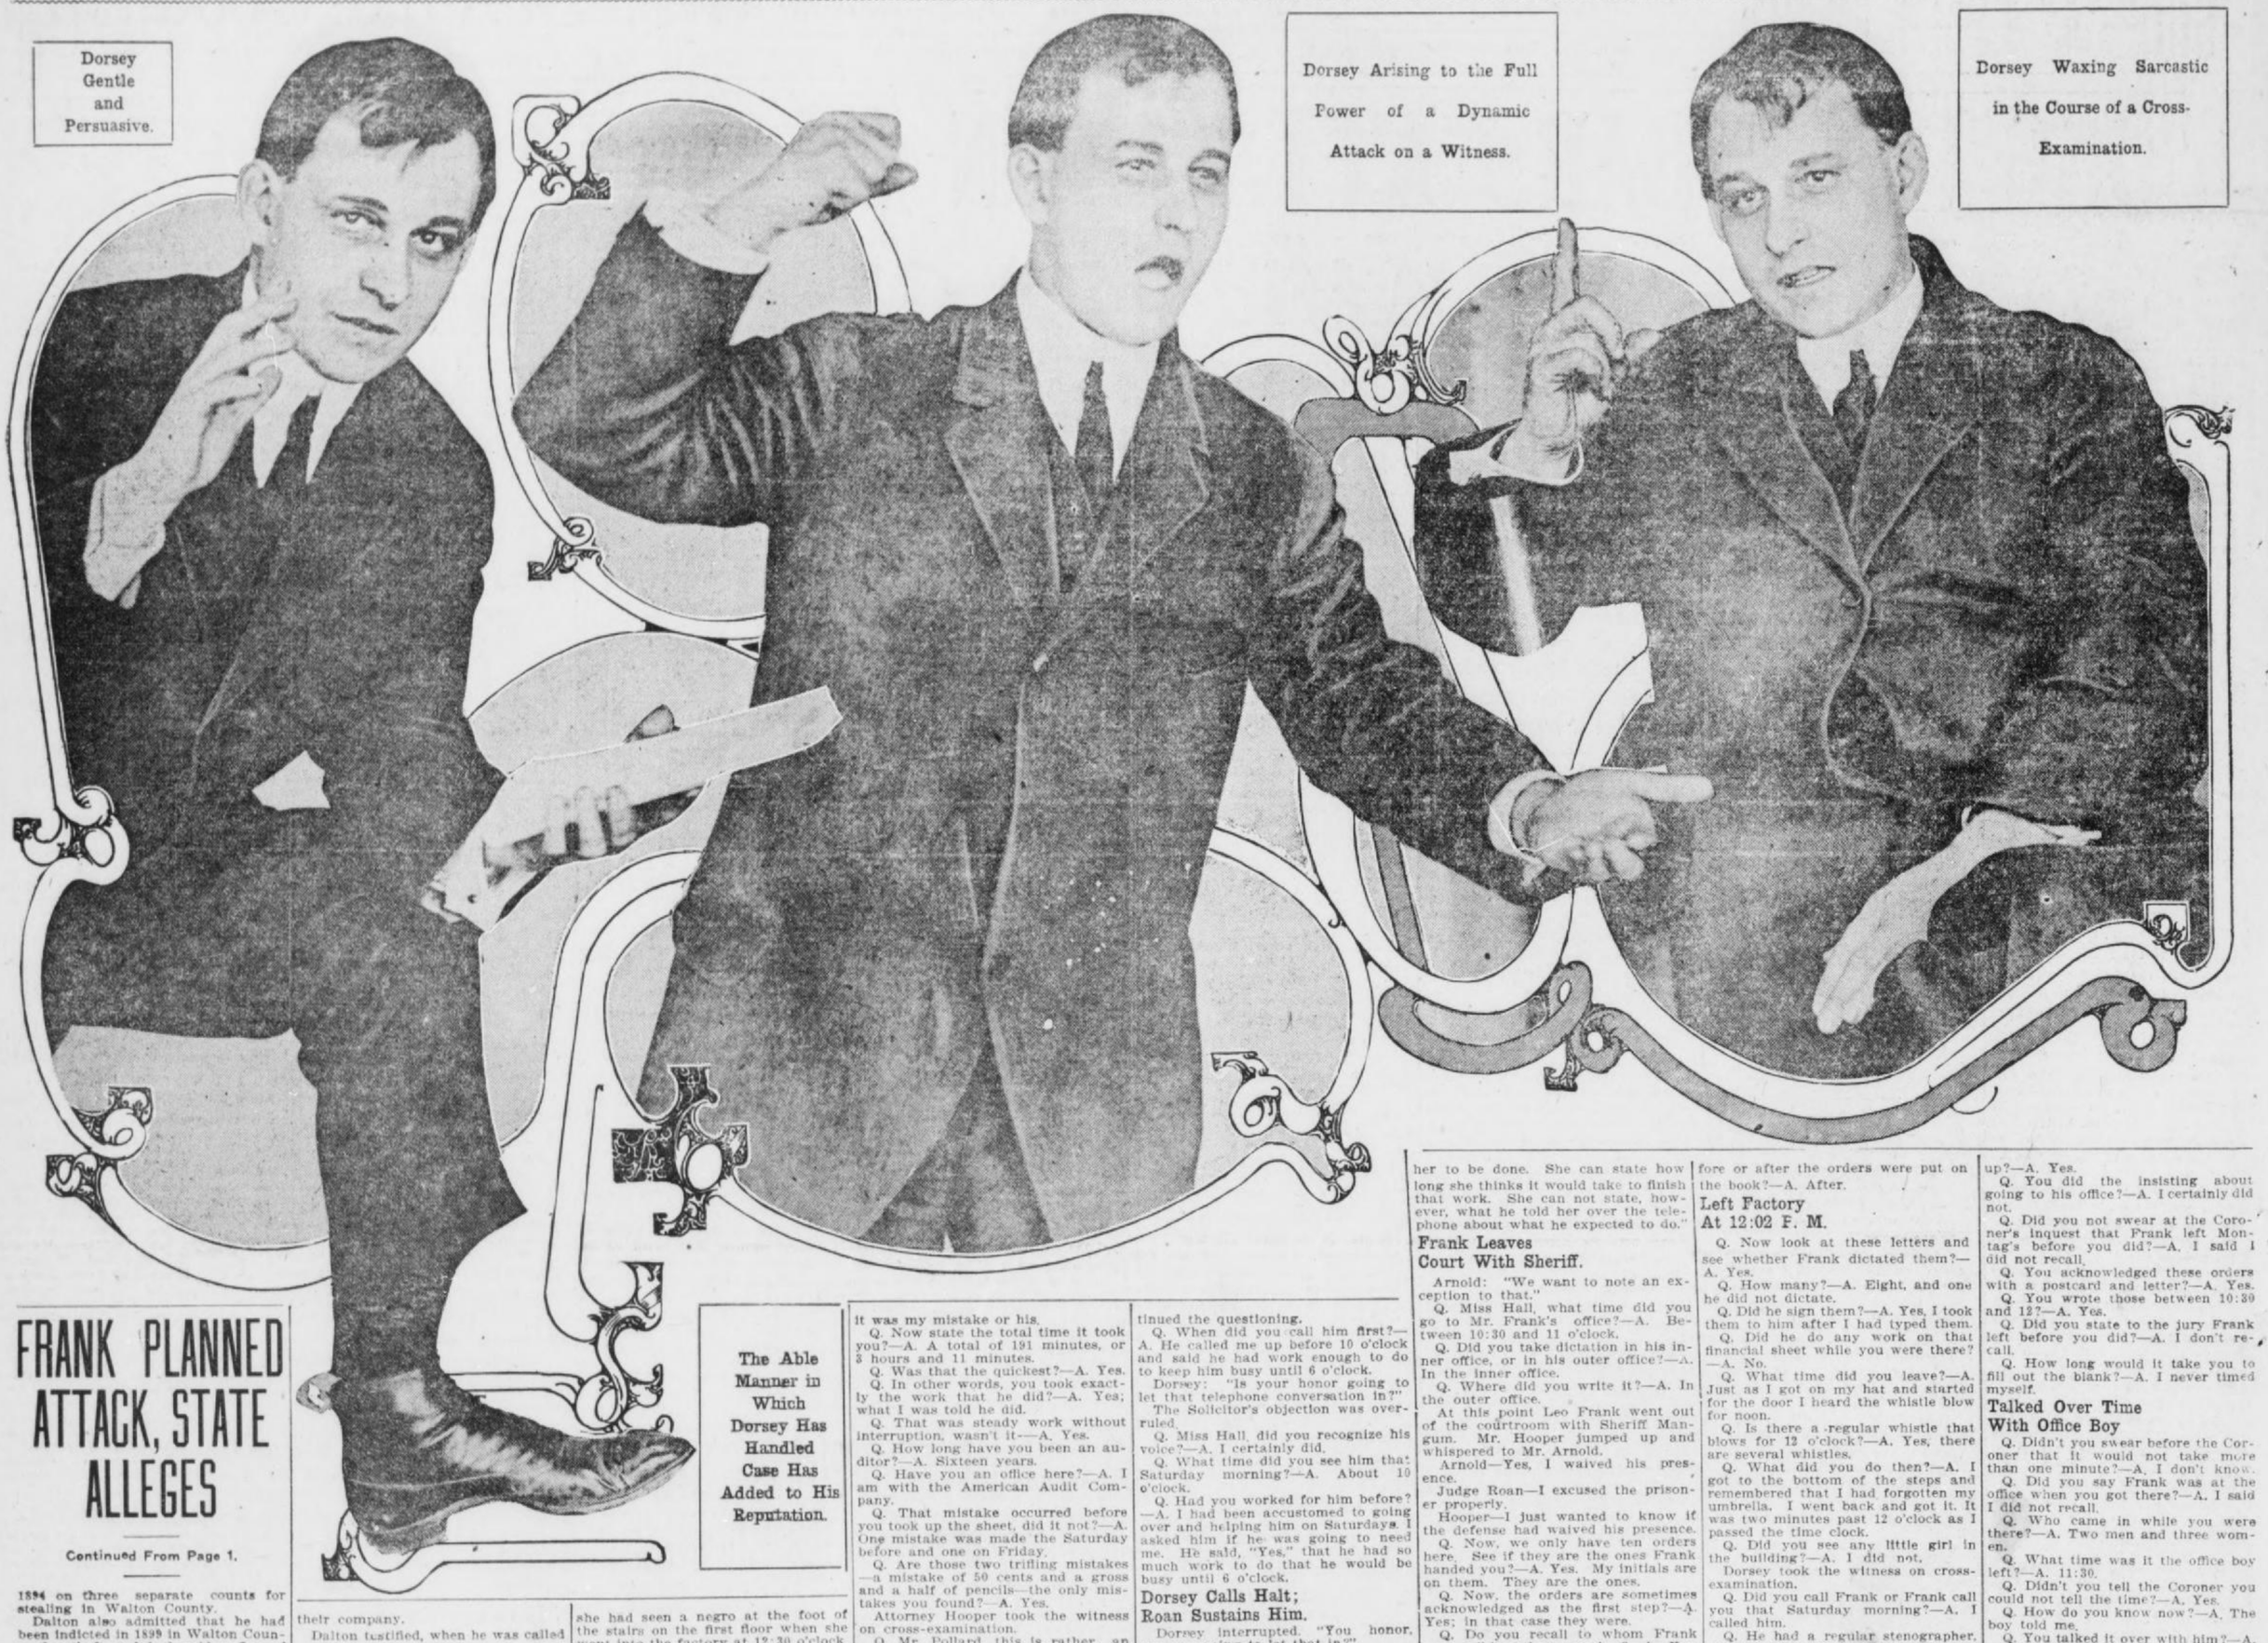

The State definitely announced Tuesday its theory that Frank deliberately premeditated and planned a criminal attack upon Mary Pragan Friday, April 25, the day before she came to the factory and was slain.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, made the surprising announcement of the State's attitude during a heated argument over the admissibility of a portion of the testimony of one of the defense's witnesses, Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer at Montag Bros. and occasionally employed at the National Pencil Factory.

That the State was working upon the theory of premeditation was hinted by the questioning of Helen Ferguson several days ago but Attorney Hooper's address to the court was the first open declaration.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness against Frank, was given an airing by Attorney Arnold. Dalton was recalled to the stand and made to admit that he had been sent to the chaingang in 1894 on three separate counts for stealing in Walton County.

Dalton also admitted that he had been indicted in 1899 in Walton County for theft and had paid a fine of $141.46.

Attorney Arnold showed the witness copies of four indictments and asked if he knew these had been issued against him in Walton County for selling liquor to Don Tillman and Bob Harris. Dalton denied all knowledge of the indictments.

Witnesses Assail Dalton's Character.

As soon as Dalton left the stand V. S. Cooper, J. H. Patrick, W. T. Mitchell and I. M. Patrick, all residents of Walton County, were called to the stand and testified that they knew Dalton and that they wouldn't believe him on oath in a court of justice.

Misses Laura Atkinson and Minnie Smith were called and denied Walton's testimony in regard to being in their company.

Dalton testified, when he was called by the State last week, that he had visited the factory basement with Miss Daisy Hopkins and that he frequently had seen Frank in his office with women.

An unassailable alibi was the object in view when the attorneys for Frank began the questioning of a long line of witnesses who were called to testify in regard to every known movement of Frank Saturday, April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was slain.

The testimony of Miss Hattie Hall was the first along this line. That of Alonzo Mann, office boy, was next.

That Frank did not do any work on the financial sheet Saturday forenoon was one of the most important declarations made by Miss Hall. She had testified at the Coroner's inquest that she assisted Frank in compiling this sheet, but she explained to Solicitor Dorsey that she was mistaken, and it was only one of the tabulations from which the financial sheet was being made that she had worked on.

Her testimony on this point strikes at the State's theory that Frank did the work in the forenoon.

Miss Hall also testified that Frank signified his desire to have her work for him at the factory in the afternoon and had asked Harry Gotheimer to come back to the factory in the afternoon, requests which the defense will claim establish conclusively that Frank was not arranging for the commission of any crime or wrongdoing Saturday afternoon.

The witness said that she left the factory first at 12 o'clock as the whistles were blowing, but that she forgot her umbrella and returned to Frank's office for it, noting that it was 12:02 as she left finally. She declared that she did not see Lemmie Quinn enter Frank's office. Conley testified that he asw Quinn enter the factory before the arrival of Monteen Stover or Mary Phagan. The Stover girl said she reached the office floor at 12:05 o'clock.

Miss Hall indignantly denied the imputation of Solicitor Dorsey that her salary had been raised as the result of the testimony she was giving. She said that it had been agreed when she entered the employ of Montag Bros. that she was to get an increase of salary August 1, and that she had been unable to get it before this time.

Wade Campbell, an inspector at the factory, came in for a rigorous grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. Campbell testified that his sister, Mrs. Arthur White, had told him she had seen a negro at the foot of the stairs on the first floor when she went into the factory at 12:30 o'clock.

Campbell Grilled On Affidavit.

"Don't you know that what she actually said was that she saw the negro at 12:50 when she left?" inquired the Solicitor.

Campbell denied that this was so. The Solicitor then showed Campbell an affidavit and asked if it was not his signature at the bottom. Campbell said that it looked like his writing, but that he would not say positively. He denied that he had made the statement in the affidavit in which he was quoted as saying his sister had told of seeing the negro as she left the factory.

The witness on his redirect examination testified that he had seen Conley reading in the factory several times after the crime. Conley said on the stand that he was unable to read, except for a few simple words.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

Over Three Hours To Compile Report.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant.

Q. Have you had occasion to go over the financial sheet of the National Pencil Company of the week of April 24 prepared by Leo M. Frank? A. I went over a copy of it.

Q. Have you also seen the factory record called the pencil sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you also furnished data necessary to make that sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state as an expert how long it would take to complete it?—A. I took each sheet, compiled it, and timed myself as to the length of time necessary. I prepared the sheet of the 24th day. It took me ten minutes.

Q. Were there any mistakes?—A. Yes, a little one—of one and one-half gross. It was hard to say whether it was my mistake or his.

Q. Now state the total time it took you?—A. A total of 191 minutes, or 3 hours and 11 minutes.

Q. Was that the quickest?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you took exactly the work that he did?—A. Yes; what I was told he did.

Q. That was steady work without interruption, wasn't it—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been an auditor?—A. Sixteen years.

Q. Have you an office here?—A. I am with the American Audit Company.

Q. That mistake occurred before you took up the sheet, did it not?—A. One mistake was made the Saturday before and one on Friday.

Q. Are those two trifling mistakes—a mistake of 50 cents and a gross and a half of pencils—the only mistakes you found?—A. Yes.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Pollard, this is rather an unusual assignment for you, is it not, to go over a man's business and undertake to state how long it takes him to do it?—A. No, I think not. Frequently we are called on to estimate the time it takes to do work in changing systems.

Q. Is it not true that a man can work his own books better than anyone else's books?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. How many times would a man have to multiply, divide and subtract in making up that sheet?—A. Well, 40 multiplications and 160 additions, and I can't guess on the rest.

Aimed to Show Conduct.

The witness was excused and Miss Hattie Hall was called. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Q. What is your business?—A. Stenographer-bookkeeper at Montag Brothers.

Q. Do you ever go to the National Pencil Company?—A. When necessary.

Q. On Saturday, April 26, did you see Leo M. Frank?—A. About 10 o'clock at Montag Brothers.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he asked me if I could come over and do some work. I told him I didn't know, but thought I could.

Dorsey interrupted:

"I object to anything he said to her."

Arnold: "Your honor, it is part of res gestis in this case."

Dorsey: "Here is this dead girl. They would not let her show what she said at 12 o'clock and I can conceive of no principle of law that would let them show what this man said and not let her show what the deceased said."

Arnold: "This is merely to show a course of conduct."

Judge Roan: "I can see no analogy between the two cases. I rather think you can ask the question."

Dorsey: "Well, this is a very important point, your honor, and we would like to give you some authorities."

Judge Roan: "All right."

Dorsey then read at length from the Eighty-fourth Georgia Report.

Judge Roan: "Do you expect to follow that question by showing that he had certain work to do and engaged her to do it?"

Arnold: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I will let you ask it."

Dorsey threw his book on the table and sat down, laughing. Arnold continued the questioning.

Q. When did you call him first?—A. He called me up before 10 o'clock and said he had work enough to do to keep him busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey: "Is your honor going to let that telephone conversation in?"

The Solicitor's objection was overruled.

Q. Miss Hall, did you recognize his voice?—A. I certainly did.

Q. What time did you see him that Saturday morning?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Had you worked for him before?—A. I had been accustomed to going over and helping him on Saturdays. I asked him if he was going to need me. He said, "Yes," that he had so much work to do that he would be busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey Calls Halt; Roan Sustains Him.

Dorsey interrupted. "You honor, are you going to let that in?"

Judge Roan: "I don't think I will."

Arnold: "Your honor, I wish you would let me argue for a moment. Even the State does not claim any crime was committed at that time. There is no reason in the world to suppose that the accused would not have told the truth at that time. I believe that if a part of the conversation is admissible, all of it is admissible. You must admit it all to explain part. You would do this young man an injustice to shut out this evidence of this day's program, when there was not the slightest motive to be otherwise than truthful."

"Mr. Dorsey has sought to show," continued Mr. Arnold, "that this financial sheet could have been made up in the morning. We are just trying to show that it was impossible. Now I will read you a decision in which I participated with the father of my good friend, the late Judge Dorsey. It was 24 years ago."

Rosser: "Are you that old, Mr. Arnold?"

Arnold: "Yes, I am 24."

"Dorsey: "That case has nothing to do with this one. That was a case where a man on trial for murder swore to a lie."

Arnold: "It was charged that it was a lie. We never did believe it."

Dorsey: "He was convicted."

Arnold: "Yes, he was convicted."

Judge Roan ruled: "Mr. Arnold, this young woman can show that she was called, what she was requested to do, and what was shown her to be done. She can state how long she thinks it would take to finish that work. She can not state, however, what he told her over the telephone about what he expected to do."

Frank Leaves Court With Sheriff.

Arnold: "We want to note an exception to that."

Q. Miss Hall, what time did you go to Mr. Frank's office?—A. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock.

Q. Did you take dictation in his inner office, or in his outer office?—A. In the inner office.

Q. Where did you write it?—A. In the outer office.

At this point Leo Frank went out of the courtroom with Sheriff Mangum. Mr. Hooper jumped up and whispered to Mr. Arnold.

Arnold—Yes, I waived his presence.

Judge Roan—I excused the prisoner properly.

Hooper—I just wanted to know if the defense had waived his presence.

Q. Now, we only have ten orders here. See if they are the ones Frank handed you?—A. Yes. My initials are on them. They are the ones.

Q. Now, the orders are sometimes acknowledged as the first step?—A. Yes; in that case they were.

Q. Do you recall to whom Frank was talking that morning?—A. Yes, but I don't recall the names. A man and his son came in. Then there was Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. White.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. During this time was Mr. Frank working on this financial sheet or any other similar document?—A. He was not.

Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?—A. Not very.

Q. I will get you to look on this order book and see if those orders are entered.

The witness read the eleven orders from the order book.

Q. Now, is that your handwriting?—A. No; I think it is Mr. Frank's.

Q. Did you write any of these requisitions?—A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I understood Mr. Frank did.

Q. Were the requisitions made before or after the orders were put on the book?—A. After.

Left Factory At 12:02 F. M.

Q. Now look at these letters and see whether Frank dictated them?—A. Yes.

Q. How many?—A. Eight, and one he did not dictate.

Q. Did he sign them?—A. Yes, I took them to him after I had typed them.

Q. Did he do any work on that financial sheet while you were there?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Just as I got on my hat and started for the door I heard the whistle blow for noon.

Q. Is there a regular whistle that blows for 12 o'clock?—A. Yes, there are several whistles.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I got to the bottom of the steps and remembered that I had forgotten my umbrella. I went back and got it. It was two minutes past 12 o'clock as I passed the time clock.

Q. Did you see any little girl in the building?—A. I did not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you call Frank or Frank call you that Saturday morning?—A. I called him.

Q. He had a regular stenographer, didn't he?—A. They had a stenographer, but she didn't do but about one-third enough work, so I had to go.

Q. Miss Hall, what were you receiving at that time?—A. Ten dollars and fifty cents a week.

Q. What are you getting now?—A. Fifteen dollars a week, and I want to explain——

Q. Never mind, just answer my questions. Didn't you state in a soda fountain last night that the raise came to you without asking for it after it was known that you were to be a witness?—A. Indeed, I did not. I don't go to soda fountains. I want to explain.

Attorney Arnold—Let her explain. A. I insisted that they give me this raise on July 1, but they wouldn't give it to me until August 1.

Q. Did Frank come to Montag's before or after he called you up?—A. After.

Q. You are the one who called him up?—A. Yes.

Q. You did the insisting about going to his office?—A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you not swear at the Coroner's inquest that Frank left Montag's before you did?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. You acknowledged these orders with a postcard and letter?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote those between 10:30 and 12?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you state to the jury Frank left before you did?—A. I don't recall.

Q. How long would it take you to fill out the blank?—A. I never timed myself.

Talked Over Time With Office Boy

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would not take more than one minute?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you say Frank was at the office when you got there?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. Who came in while you were there?—A. Two men and three women.

Q. What time was it the office boy left?—A. 11:30.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner you could not tell the time?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you know now?—A. The boy told me.

Q. You talked it over with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when those people came in?—A. In the outer office.

Q. How long were you there when these people came in?—A. I do not recall.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner it was fifteen minutes?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How long was it after those let-

FRANK TRIAL WITNESS IS SURE, AT LEAST, OF ONE THING--A 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen, and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over!

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister," more than once—after that, it merely is "You, Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney: "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hang around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-hump-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes "hoot," doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you, speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejeculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise, let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record exerything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?".

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

The Grand Climax.

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Augusta to Share Crop-Moving Fund

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—Albert S. Hatch, president of the Merchants' Bank and a member of the committee of the Augusta Clearing House Association, sent to Washington to confer with Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department, in regard to money with which to move the crops, has returned and announces that Augusta spoke for $600,000, which she will get if she wants it. Hatch said Augusta could have probably gotten more had she asked for it.

Georgia J. O. U. A. M. In Session at Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The nineteenth biennial convention of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics met here to-day with about 150 delegates, representing the various councils in the State, in attendance.

It is probable that the next meeting will go to Athens, and that Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected councilor to succeed Judge W. W. Shepard, of Savannah. O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, state treasurer, is assured of re-election.

Extra Police to Curb Thieves Bryan Day

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 12.—Expecting an unusual representation of pickpockets when William J. Bryan makes his chautauqua address here, August 28, the borough fathers, at their regular monthly council meeting, have taken decided action.

Secretary Williams was directed to ask Superintendent Groome to have the State constabulary here on Bryan day. The occasion is expected to draw a larger crowd than any circus day in the last 25 years.

Attacks on Dr. Harris Give Defense Good Day

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

"No man in the world could examine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of his profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor. His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.
"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled. Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga. — "My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

RESIDENTS OF DALTON'S HOME COUNTY RIDDLE HIS CHARACTER ON STAND

ters were dictated that you commenced writing?—A. Two minutes.

Q. Can you tell how long you were writing those letters?—A. No.

Q. When you were writing those letters, where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. After you finished, what did he do?—A. I took them in to him.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. He said he would put them in the envelopes and mail them.

Q. He said you need not wait?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get anything there Monday?—A. I got the timebook and some papers.

Q. The previous Saturday when you were over there, do you remember Frank working on the financial sheet that morning?—A. No; I helped him get up something about gross—I found afterward it was the average sheet.

made it up. I helped him by transferring some of the things to the sheet?"—A. Yes, but I thought it was the financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you state at the coroner's inquest that you helped him the Saturday before?—A. Yes.

Found Her Error Herself, She Says.

Q.When was it you discovered it was not the financial sheet?—A. I don't know, but I want you to know I discovered the mistake myself.

Q. Now, were you not at the factory the previous Saturday and helped him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not have that financial sheet before you at the Coroner's inquest, and did you not identify it?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you said he was working on the financial sheet that previous morning?—A. He was not.

Q. Did you not tell the Coroner's jury that you were in the outer office the entire time?—A. I don't know.

Q. Now explain how your mind underwent this change. You said then you were not in his office and now you say you were.—A. I was rattled before the Coroner, because I had never been in a courtroom before.

Q. Now, didn't you say in response to the question, "Do you know what a financial sheet is?" that you did?—A. But I was thinking of the average sheet.

Q. Now, what did you mean by telling the Coroner some of those girls came in for their pay and now saying the only one you know anything about came in for her coat?—A. I just forgot.

Q. Now, didn't Frank say that morning that he would not get up that sheet until Herbert Schiff came down and got up the necessary data? A. Yes, he said he could not go on with his work until Schiff came down.

Q. You do know that Frank said positively he could not make up that sheet until Schiff had gotten up certain data?—A. He did not positively say so. He said he did not mind Mr. Schiff being off if he had done his work, but that he had not done his work.

Q. Miss Hall, didn't you swear before the Coroner's jury that you worked on this financial sheet which is written in ink the Saturday previous, and now to-day you swear it was this sheet which is written in pencil?—A. I did not. I was identifying the handwriting on that sheet.

Q. You said lots of people wrote slanting, and it was hard to identify?—A. Yes.

Q. While you were working in Frank's outer office, you said he was very quiet and you did not know what he was doing?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether he was working on the financial sheet or not?—A. Yes; I saw the papers on his desk that he was working on, and the financial sheet was not among them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Why did you tell Mr. Frank you had to get away at 12 o'clock?—A. He said something about wanting me to help him in the afternoon. I told him I had to get away at 12 o'clock, and I did get away at 12 o'clock.

Dalton's Prison Record Exposed.

Dorsey objected to the answer, but was overruled.

Miss Hall was excused and C. B. Dalton was recalled to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Who is Andrew Dalton?—A. A brother-in-law.

Q. With the same name?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is John Dalton?—A. He is my brother.

Q. Weren't you three sent to the chaingang at the special term of the Walton County Superior Court in 1894?—A. No.

Q. You were not?—A. I was, but the others paid out.

Q. What did you steal?—A. A chop hammer.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to two more charges?—A. That is the only time I ever went to the chaingang. I don't know how long I served, but I was pardoned in March.

Attorney Arnold moved that the witness' reply in reference to being pardoned be struck from the records.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to three charges all at the same time? And that the sentence was concurrent on the three charges?—A. All I took was a chop hammer. One of the other boys took a plow stock.

Q. At the February term of 1899, were you not indicted for stealing a bale of cotton?—A. For helping.

Q. Were you found guilty?—A. I was fined $146, which I paid.

Q. After that, did you not go into Gwinnett County and steal?—A. I was indicted for stealing some corn, but I was found not guilty.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long since you were in trouble?—A. Eighteen years.

Dorsey to Recall Daisy Hopkins.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is it not a fact that there are now four indictments against you in Walton County for selling liquor?—A. If there are I don't know it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they let you get out of the county and were glad to get rid of you?—A. I have been back there every year.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know that Daisy Hopkins knows Leo Frank?—A. I do.

Q. How do you know?—A. She told me she knew him, and then I saw her talking to him.

Arnold interrupted: "I object to what she said."

"That's all right, then," Dorsey replied. "I will recall her."

Dalton was excused and the defense began an attack on his character with witnesses from Walton County.

B. S. Cooper, the first witness called, was accompanied by a small boy of 6. He held the boy on his lap while he testified on the witness stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A farmer.

Q. How long have you been in Walton County?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

Wouldn't Believe Him Under Oath.

At this point C. B. Dalton was called for but could not be found. Dorsey said he would admit that the witness was speaking of the Dalton who had testified against Frank. Hooper was excused and J. H. Patrick was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. In Walton County.

Q. What do you do?—A. Carpenter and bailiff.

Q. Have you seen Dalton here this morning?—A. I shook hands with him.

Q. Do you know his general character for truth and veracity and is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and W. T. Mitchell was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him this morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and I. M. Hamilton was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, Atlanta, a woman apparently 35 years of age, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the Empire Printing Company.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, for two days.

Denies Dalton's Story of Strolls.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever walk home with him from the Busy Bee Cafe on Forsyth street?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you ever with him around the National Pencil Company?—

Dorsey interrupted: "I object," he said. "The witness said nothing that reflected on this woman."

Arnold: "It was a reflection for him to say that he was with her."

The objection was sustained.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long have you known Dalton?—A. About six months.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. I have been in his company three times.

The witness was excused, and Mrs. Minnie Smith called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. National Pencil Company.

Q. Are you the Mrs. Smith who lives at No. 148 South Pryor street?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the only Mrs. Smith at that address?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. No.

The witness was excused. Alonzo Mann, the office boy at the National Pencil Factory, was then called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company as an office boy.

Q. How long have you been there? A. Since April 1 of this year.

Q. Where do you stay when you are not at work?—A. Right outside the office.

Left Frank and Miss Hall in Office.

Q. How late do you work on Saturdays?—A. I had only been there two Saturdays before the murder.

Q. You don't know how late you stayed?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave the office Memorial Day?—A. At 11:30.

Q. Who did you leave there?—A. Miss Hall and Mr. Frank.

Q. Do you recall what you did that morning?—A. No.

Q. Did you phone Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes. Mr. Frank told me to, but I could not get him

Q. How late did you stay those other Saturdays?—A. 3:30 to 4 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank bring any women there and buy them drinks?—A. No.

Q. Who do you recall seeing there that day?—A. Mr. Holliday, Mr. Irby, Mr. McCrary and Mr. Darley.

Q. Can you recall anybody else?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Corinthia Hall?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you see a man come in to see about his boy?—A. I don't know.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. What time did Mr. Frank get there that morning?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did he go out?—A. One time, as I recall.

Q. Do you know how long he was gone?—A. No, I can't remember.

The witness was excused and Wade Campbell was called.

Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where are you employed?—A. I have been at the National Pencil Company for a year and a half.

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Mrs. White the Monday following the murder?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me what she said?—A. She said that as she went into the factory at 12 o'clock she saw a negro sitting there. She said that when she came down he was not there, and she heard voices, but could not tell where.

Q. Were you at the factory Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. About 9:35.

Q. Did you see Frank?—A. Yes; I went right to his office.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes; I was jollying him and he was jollying me.

Q. Were you on the fourth floor Tuesday morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley up there? A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you board with Mr. Darley? A. I did.

Q. Where were you Saturday night of the murder?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you go to the Bijou that night with Mr. Darley?

"I object," said Rosser.

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Darley is a married man with five children, is he not?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Miss Dixon that night?

Rosser—I object.

Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. You reported to Darley on April 28 that your sister had seen a negro in the pencil factory on Saturday, about 10 o'clock?—A. Yes; he sent me to see my sister.

Q. What did she tell you?—A. She said she saw a negro man on the first floor. She said she heard some indistinct voices as she went in.

Q. You saw that blood on the second floor?—A. I saw what they said was blood.

Q. How did it look?—A. I didn't notice it close enough to tell about it

Grilled Concerning Statement to Dorsey.

Q. Where do you work?—A. As an inspector at the National Pencil Company.

Q. You made a statement on May 12?—A. I made a statement to you. I don't remember the date.

Q. Didn't you state that your sister said she saw the negro as she was coming out?—A. I did not.

Q. You deny it, then?—A. I do.

Q. Is this your signature?—A. It looks very much like it.

Q. You can't swear that this is your signature?—A. No, I would not swear it.

Q. You say that you don't know whether that is your signature?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you deny making this statement?—A. I told you I did.

Q. Did you not read over this statement and make certain corrections?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not say in this statement that your sister went there at 12:30 and could not see her husband and went back?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. How did you come to go to Dorsey's office?—A. I received a subpena.

Q. You thought you had to go?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you know that it was not worth the paper it was written on?—A. No.

Wanted To See Corrections Made.

Q. Did you just point out these corrections, or did you wait and see that they were made?—A. I think I waited.

Q. Who was there?—A. Starnes, Campbell and Dorsey.

Q. Did they all ask you questions?—A. Yes.

Q. All of these 21 pages are your statement?—A. Yes.

Q. You were asked all of these questions?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you asked at the time you were in the office if anyone came in and did you answer "No"?—A. Yes.

Q. You answered that someone came in to get their pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know this negro Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. After this murder do you recall seeing him reading newspapers?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the fourth floor.

Q. How many times?—A. Twice.

Q. Is it anything unusual to see spots on the metal room floor?—A. No.

Q. Have you seen the place where Conley said he found the body?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Where was Conley sitting when he was reading the paper?—A. By the elevator.

Q. Where was he the second time?—A. In the rear of the building.

Q. What paper was he reading?—A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he was reading about the crime?—A. No.

Q. Was it an extra?—A. I think so.

Q. You knew Conley could write?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not report it to the officers?—A. No.

Q. Did Frank know he could write?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did you see him writing?—A. In the boxroom?

Q. Did you ever see him writing with a pencil?—A. Yes.

Q. Who did you tell what your sister told you?—A. Mr. Darley.

Q. How often did you see those spots in the metal room?—A. Occasionally.

Q. How often have you seen those spots in the hall?—A. Oh, very often.

Q. Did you see the spots where those chips were taken up?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw those spots everywhere, what everybody said was blood, and yet you tell the jury you didn't pay any attention to it?—A. Yes.

Q. Other people got down and looked at them, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Rosser interrupted.

"I object to what other people said and saw. It is utterly immaterial and irrelevant," he said.

"We want to show," said Mr. Hooper, interrupting, "that this man was interested and that he went out to see his sister about the negro, and yet he came back there and was in no way interested."

"I think you can ask questions along that line," said the court.

"Well, we want to record an objection," said Rosser.

Q. Where and when have you ever seen on that second floor anything that looked like that spot?—A. I did not look close enough at it to know.

Q. When did you see other spots like it on the floor of the metal room?—A. There were other spots, but I don't know whether they were like that spot or not.

Q. Did you talk to your brother-in-law about what your sister said?—A. He told me about it.

Court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Says Girl Didn't Ask For Mary Phagan's Pay.

When court convened at 2 o'clock the defense called for Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy at the National Pencil Factory, but he did not answer. Philip Chambers was also called, but failed to respond.

Miss Magnolia Kennedy, one of the pencil factory employees in the metal department, was then called and took the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company.

Q. How long have you worked there?—A. Four years.

Q. In what department did you work?—A. In the metal department.

Q. Did you know Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Helen Ferguson?—A. Yes.

Q. On the day before April 26, did you draw your pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you draw it?—A. From Mr. Schiff at the pay window.

Q. Did you see Helen Ferguson? A. I had my hand on her shoulder when she got her money.

Q. Was Mr. Frank there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ask for Mary Phagan's pay?—A. No.

Q. Did you go out with her?—A. Yes. We went downstairs and waited for Grace Hix.

Q. Did Helen Ferguson ever say anything about Mary's pay?—A. She said at 5 o'clock that Mary was not there.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Were you at the factory April 28?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find any hair on that lathing machine?—A. Yes.

Q. Whose was it?—A. It looked like Mary's.

Mary and Ferguson Girl Companions.

Q. You and Mary and Grace Hix were the only girls in that department, were you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did Mary's hair look?—A. It was light.

Q. You don't mean to say you were with Helen all that afternoon?—A. No.

Q. She and Mary were friends and went together all the time, did they not?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't know what she did when you were not with her, do you?—A. No.

Q. You saw those spots on the floor, did you not?—A. Yes.

Q. How did they look?—A. There were white stains all over them.

Q. How large?—A. About as large as that piece of paper, eight by ten inches.

Q. Did you ever notice any spots on the second floor like the one pointed out and said to be blood?—A. No, I never did.

Q. And you have been there four years?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. You told Mr. Dorsey you thought that was Mary Phagan's hair on the lathe. You don't know that it was Mary Phagan's hair, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You went with Helen Ferguson to get your pay that Friday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her speak, to Mr. Frank?—A. No.

Q. Was there any necessity for her to see Mr. Frank when Mr. Schiff was at the pay window?—A. No.

Negro Elevator Boy on Stand.

Miss Kennedy was excused and Gordon Bailey, the negro elevator boy, took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where did you work in April of this year, Snowball?—A. At the pencil factory.

Q. On the Friday before Memorial Day did you see Jim Conley talking to Mr. Frank and hear Mr. Frank ask him to come back Saturday?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear Mr. Frank tell Jim to come back?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank bring any women there?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Conley watching at that lower door?—A. No.

Q. Were you at the factory last Thanksgiving Day?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever see Conley reading a newspaper?—A. I saw him looking at papers down there at the station house.

Q. You don't know wether he was reading or not?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank make any improper proposal to any lady in that factory?—A. No.

Q. You never saw Mr. Frank talking to Conley at any time, did you?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank at all, Friday?—A. I saw him about 1 o'clock. He was talking to Mr. Schiff.

Dorsey took the witness on the cross-examination.

Q. Snowball, when were you arrested?—A. Monday.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank before you were arrested?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he?—A. On the second floor.

Q. What was he doing?—A. I don't know.

The negro was excused and Phillip Chambers, a boy 14 years old, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes.

Q. Where and in what capacity?—A. I went there in December and stayed until March.

Q. How late did you stay on Saturdays?—A. Until about 4:30 o'clock.

Q. Were you ever absent on Saturdays during the months you were there?—A. Between 11 and 12 o'clock I was sometimes sent to the Bell street plant to get the payrool.

Q. Did you ever see any women around Mr. Frank's office with beer and drinks?—A. His wife came up there once while I was there. She was the only one I ever saw.

Q. Did you ever see Jim Conley around there?—A. Yes. He was around there sweeping, sometimes.

Q. What time?—A. Saturday afternoons.

Q. Didn't Mr. Holloway issue an order that no more sweeping should be done Saturday afternoons?—A. Mr. Darley did.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. You and Frank were pretty good friends were you not?—A. Just like other folks.

The State here referred to several alleged conversations with J. N. Gantt, along the lines of Jim Conley's most sinister testimony which the boy denied and Attorney Arnold moved that it all be stricken out.

Dorsey arose to speak, but Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "are we going to allow a speech before the jury on this subject?"

Judge Roan: "Take the jury out."

Arnold: "Never mind, let them stay." The jury remained.

Solicitor Dorsey: "Your Honor, they have gone into the question of Frank's relations to women. We have a right to show if there was anything improper towards this boy. He denies it. I am laying the ground to impeach him by Gantt."

Judge Roan: "I rule out both questions and answers."

Defense Threatens to Move for a Mistrial.

Arnold. "It is the unfairest thing I have ever heard of, brought in in this illegal way. It has been brought up by this miserable negro. It is beyond indignation to sit here and listen to such stuff. The charge could be brought against you or me or any member of the jury by such inuendos If it comes up again I am going to move for a mistrial."

Judge Roan: "I have already ruled it out."

Dorsey: "Well, we will put up Gantt and let you rule on that."

The witness was excused and Minola McKnight, the cook at the Selig residence, was put on the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Were you working with Mrs. Selig last Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. and Mrs. Frank live with Mr. and Mrs. Selig?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was their room?—A. Upstairs

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank the morning of April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did he get his breakfast?—A. About 8.

Q. Did you see him again that day?—A. Yes, about 1:30.

Q. When he came home to dinner?—A. Yes.

Q. Was Albert McKnight there in the kitchen that day?—A. He was not.

Q. Could you see in that mirror in the dining room from the kitchen?—A. No.

Q. Do you recall what time he left after dinner?—A. Sometime after 2 o'clock.

Says She Made False Statement.

Q. What time did he return?—A. About 6:30 o'clock.

Q. You left him there?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you see him again?—A. Sunday, I don't know what time.

Q. Did the detectives come and arrest you?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did they take you?—A. Over on Central avenue.

Q. To the Thrower Building?—A. Yes.

Q. Was this man Dorsey there?—A. Yes.

Q. And these two detectives?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. My husband.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said I told my husband things and tried to make me say I had. I told them it was all lies, but they would not listen to me.

Q. What was your husband trying to get you to tell these detectives?—A. That Miss Lucille was telling her mother Sunday morning that Mr. Frank had made her get out of bed.

Q. What did you tell them?—A. That it was a lie.

Q. What did they do?—A. They said they would put me in jail, and they carried me out and put me in the patrol wagon.

Q. Put you in the patrol wagon? What did they ddo next?—A. They had me in a hole and I signed a paper to get away.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Minola, you made a statement May 3 in my office before this visit you were speaking about. Is not this the statement you made: "I was at the Frank home Saturday, April 26. Frank came there at about 1 o'clock. He did not seem to want to go back to work and stayed there until 3 o'clock?"

The negro woman interrupted Solicitor Dorsey at this point to say she said 2 instead of 3 o'clock.

Q. Before June 2 Mr. Pickett and Mr. Graves, of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Company, were out to see

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

NURSES' CLUB TO THROW OPEN NEW HOME

Informal Reception Arranged for Tuesday Afternoon and Evening in Permanent Quarters.

The Atlanta Registered Nurses' Association will formally open its new home in the Herbert Apartments, No. 246 Courtland avenue, Wednesday afternoon with an informal reception. The entertainment will continue into the evening hours.

Several months ago the registered nurses organized a permanent club to establish a central directory and eventually to secure and maintain a nurses' home. The membership includes over 100 graduate nurses who will, as a body, seek to protect the public and promote good fellowship among the members. The home has been comfortablye furnished and will accommodate twenty nurses.

The registered nurses have federated with the City Federation. The association has as its president Miss Kamesky; first vice president, Miss Berta Thompson; second vice president, Miss Caroline Norton; recording secretary; Miss Florence Attwell, corresponding secretary, Miss J. M. Candlish; treasurer, Miss Mamie Mobley, and auditor, Miss E. F. Tupman.

The committee work has been divided as follows: Membership, Miss Frances Patton, chairman; register, Miss Alberta Dozier, chairman; nominations, Miss E. B. Whatley, chairman; home, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, chairman; auditing, Miss E. F. Tupman, chairman; publicity, Miss C. M. Johnson, chairman, and Miss Virginia Gibbs. The registrar will be Mrs. Theodosia Wardell.

The advisory board is composed of the following: Dr. Charles Boynton, Dr. William Perrin Nicolson, Dr. C. W. Summerall, J. B. Paulin, Dr. C. W. Strickler, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Fred Hodgson, Mrs. W. L. Peel and Mrs. H. E. W. Palmer.

The association has sent out hundreds of invitations and will be assisted in receiving by the advisory board, the officers of the association and the following superintendents of the hospitals of Atlanta: Miss Phebeck, of Grady Hospital; Miss McGlynn, of the Noble Sanitarium; Miss Morton, of the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium; Miss Morgan, of the Tabernacle Infirmary; Miss Thomas, of the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium, and Miss Albert Dozier, Miss J. M. Candlish, Miss Virginia Gibbs, Miss Mamie Mobley, Miss E. B. Whatley, Miss G. S. Tupman, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg and Miss C. M. Johnson.

Italy Adds to Its Seacoast Guard

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 12.—Thirteen new torpedo boat destroyers have been ordered by the Italian Admiralty, it was learned to-day.

This addition to the navy is made necessary by the extension of seacoast which Italy must guard in Africa.

GILMER TO ELECT SHERIFF.

ELLIJAY.—Sheriff J. H. Penland, of Gilmer County, having been appointed a United States Deputy Marshal and having resigned the office of Sheriff, the Ordinary has called a special election for August 28 to fill the unexpired term. Ex-Sheriff Bob Milton and J. H. Ray, present Tax Receiver, are the opposing candidates.

THERE HAS BEEN NO DULL SEASON OVER OUR LINES

Economy, and efficiency are so combined in the Atlanta Telephone service that business houses which use both systems instruct their employees to route all possible calls by preference through our exchange.

No Hostile Feeling Shown Envoy Lind

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy sent a reassuring note to President Wilson to-day, saying not the slightest antagonism to Mr. Lind's presence has been shown in Mexico City.

LIND CAUTIOUSLY HUNTS KEY TO SITUATION

Studies Conditions in Mexico While Administration Awaits Report Before Planning.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent to Mexico City by President Wilson, is making himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Mexico. The watchword of the present situation is caution, as Mr. Lind and the attaches of the United States Embassy fear that a hasty step will cause complete failure of the Ambassador's mission.

It was reported that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, had contrived to arrange an official visit at the National Palace to-day. It was assumed that he might then present to President Huerta or Foreign Minister Aldape the note given him by Envoy Lind.

Mr. Lind called at the embassy again to-day. He refuses to say anything about his instructions from Washington.

Hostile Acts Are Lacking.

To the layman it seems that the Mexican situation is standing still rather than showing improvement, although to official eyes the lack of any direct hostile action by Mexico or Mexicans is a good omen. The Mexican people are apathetic and conservatives believe that President Huerta virtually stood alone in his defiance of the United States. However, allowance is made for the Latin temperament. If anti-American feeling flares up on a grand scale, it may sweep the republic.

Claiming the Government has been misrepresented, President Huerta has placed a strict censorship upon the cable line. Even telegrams to the United States State Department pass under this careful inquiry.

N. A. Jennings, correspondent for the Hearst papers, and Marvin Ferree, another American newspaper man, released from prison last night after being detained 24 hours, were kept under close surveillance to-day. Both feared they would be expelled under the undesirable alien law.

Embassy Guard Declined.

The arrival at Vera Cruz of more United States warships has caused bitter comment in the Mexican press. The commandante of the rurales has offered to provide a permanent guard about the United States Embassy, but Mr. O'Shaughnessy informed the Mexican Government that the Stars and Stripes provide enough protection.

Mr. Lind, despite warnings of his friends, walks abroad in the streets or rides in an open automobile, making no effort to hide his identity. At the Hotel Lascurain he mingles freely with the other guests.

Mrs. Lind, who suffered a slight indisposition upon her arrival here, was reported better to-day.

President Waits Message From Lind Before Acting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—President Wilson to-day awaited word from Mexico City relative to the success of former Governor Lind and his mission of mediation before announcing, or even formulating any definite Mexican policy. Beyond the proposals which Governor Lind carried, it is understood that the administration has no plans, and that no further steps will be taken until the President's envoy reports on his success in dealing with Huerta.

It is considered likely that Governor Lind will transmit President Wilson's message to President Huerta through Charge O'Shaughnessy either to-day or tomorrow.

It is reported the Senate is considering holding an executive session to discuss the Mexican situation to discover the consensus of opinion in the Upper House concerning the steps taken by the administration in dealing with the matter.

Cruiser Pittsburg Sent Back to Mexican Port.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Aug. 12.—The armored cruiser Pittsburg, which had started for San Diego from Guayamas, turned back to-day to remain at Guayamas pending further instructions from Washington. The Pittsburg was ordered back by wireless.

The supply ship Glacier, which was to have left Guayamas to-day with refugees, was ordered to remain at the Mexican port indefinitely.

Youth Fined Heavily On Flirting Charge

W. R. Livermore, No. 47 Trinity avenue, a bookkeeper, feels convinced that mashing is a costly pastime.

Recorder Pro Tem Preston fined him $25.75 Tuesday for an affront to two girls, sisters, in Trinity avenue, and also gave him 21 days in the stockade for violating the probation ordinance. Livermore admitted that he was intoxicated. He had been on probation since last May for drinking.

Both girls appeared in court.

BILL PROTECTING HEIFER CALVES IS KILLED

House Wastes Time on Measure That Might Have Been Given Child Labor Act.

Take the child slaves, shackle them,
Throttle them if they laugh;
Enslave the women if you will,
But save my darling calf.

That was the burden of the song Monday afternoon in the Georgia House of Representatives—the same House of Representatives that has persistently refused to consider any measure to relieve the condition of the thousands of child-slaves in the State—when the legislators, for two hours, discussed solemnly and earnestly a bill designed to protect the heifer calves of the State from the persecutions of the butcher and the farmer by prohibiting the killing of the "innocent, pure-eyed little things"—that is what one member called them—until they have reached the mature age of 2 years.

Rhetorical thunderbolts were hurled by the champions of the calves at the heads of those who were determined that the last calf should be executed, to be met by bursting bombs of metaphor that shook the rafters and penetrated even to the farthest confines of the gallery. Epigrammatic skyrockets threw their trails of fiery language into the running gears of the pinwheels of logic; the defenders of the calf hurled Biblical passages into the camp of the veal eaters, and the bloodthirsty members who wanted blood, red blood, delved into the poets and flung quotation after quotation into the very teeth of the advancing army of calfdom.

Bill Bleated—Then Died.

And after two hours the calf bill poked its head up through the maze of oratory and near-oratory, through the mud of condemnation and the whitewash of appreciation, gave one plaintive, despairing bleat, and died, 91 votes to 73.

Members who had viewed with equanimity and magnificent self-control the smothering of measures to aid the child-slaves felt impelled to rise in their might when the rights of the calf were assailed. Here's how some of them felt:

Mr. Conner, of Spalding—"If this bill is not passed, in five years cows will be as scarce as hens' teeth."

Mr. Ennis, of Baldwin—"Saving the calves is no laughing matter. If you had seen the slaughter of these innocent little things as I have you would vote aye."

Mr. Lloyd, of Newton—"This bill is the worst kind of class legislation. Why can't the bull calf have the same right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness that is granted the heifer calf? A man's calves are his private property and should not be regulated."

Mr. Culpepper, of Meriwether—"Why is it these men want to protect the heifer calves and allow the bull calves to go to their doom, when it is a fact that the female of the species is more deadly than the male?"

Mr. Picquet, of Richmond—"The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and it applies to calves as well as human beings. It makes my heart bleed to see these innocent little calves cruelly, brutally slaughtered to provide a veal eater's holiday."

"Prodigal" Is Provided For.

Mr. Shuptrine, of Chatham—"The bill should not pass under any circumstances. We have the Bible on our side, for it distinctly ordered that the fatted calf be killed for the prodigal son."

Mr. Spence, of Carroll—"I am outraged and indignant. This bill is the most diabolical bill I have ever seen. I vote NO!"

Mr. Wimberly, of Bibb—"To kill this bill means that the slaughter of the innocents will be continued, and what man, be he ever so strong, can endure the sight of the wild-eyed, bleating calf being led to the slaughter? There are 365,000 calves butchered in Georgia every year. If they were saved, think of the number of cows we would have in four years and the lowing herds that would wind slowly over the lea! Think of the rivers and lakes of milk, and if we can raise enough strawberries, think of the strawberries and cream we could have."

Mr. Berry, of Whitfield—"I arise to explain that I am not going to explain my vote."

The bill was introduced by Nelson, of Clayton, and favorably reported by the Committee on General Agriculture, of which Kimbrough, of Harris, is chairman.

Crusade Against Short Weight Ice Peddlers Pushed

The campaign against short weight ice peddlers has taken a more aggressive turn. Chief Beavers has detailed Policeman Holley to assist Inspector of Weights and Measures Buchanan in making cases against offenders.

As a result of this increased activity two negro peddlers were tried and fined by Recorder Pro Tem Preston. Five more cases are set for trial Tuesday afternoon.

The crusade, it is believed, will save Atlantans hundreds of dollars during the remainder of the summer. Inspector Buchanan and Officer Holley got direct evidence against the peddlers by following them and weighing the ice just after it had been weighed by the peddlers and delivered to the consumer.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

Saves Girl From Injury in Runaway

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—J. P. Doughty, Jr., a prominent cotton man, proved himself a hero in a runaway here yesterday when he saved Miss Frankie Rubenstein, an attractive Augusta girl, from serious injury. Miss Rubenstein was driving up Broad street when her horse became unmanageable. Doughty attempted to grab the reins, but was unsuccessful, and then he seized a wheel. He was thrown, but he held firm and soon climbed into the buggy and secured the lines, bringing the horse to a stop.

'Sleepiest Man' Is Looking for a Job

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—William O'Leary, described by his wife as the sleepiest man in Chicago, was wide awake to-day and out looking for a job. O'Leary appeared before Judge Sabath to answer charges brought by his wife. She said he had slept all the time during the last two weeks, except the few minutes each day which he spent in eating.

"If you'll kiss your two little babies and promise to wake up and get a job in the next two weeks, I'll let you go," said the judge.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $843 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 281 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

SECRET ORDER IN CONTEST FOR BIG PRIZE

Georgian's Want Ad Offer Arouses Enthusiasm Among Organizations and Individuals.

"Our lodge has been planning to move into new quarters for some time, but we have never had quite enough money to fit up a lodgeroom properly," said a prominent Atlanta secret order member to the Want Ad Man Tuesday. "I talked it over with several friends last night, and we're going out to win that $1,000 first prize in your Want Ad Contest."

"Good luck to you," said the Want Ad Man. "Pitch in and win. And even if you don't land first, that $500 worth of furniture for second prize will go a long way toward making your lodgeroom comfortable."

Several organizations, including churches, lodges and charitable societies, have announced their intention of entering The Georgian Want Ad Contest, rounding up want ads by the thousand and rolling up enough votes to win. The women are especially enthusiastic. They are always workers in their churches.

Individual Prizes.

Individuals, too, are taking on renewed interest with the announcement of the complete prize list. The automobile for the first grand prize and the tour to California for two persons, all expenses paid, will be the goal of every worker. But there is consolation for those who fail to win first or second, for five prizes are offered in each of four classes—men, women, boys and girls—and these prizes include motorcycles, player pianos, bicycles, watches, diamonds and other articles worth trying for.

The Want Ad Man is in his office, fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, every day until 5 o'clock. On Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturdays he remains at his desk until 8 o'clock at night, and he is anxious to have a heart-to-heart chat with every contestant and prospective contestant. He will give every aid possible, explain all details, show how success is to be had, and give every contestant the benefit of his experience. Every contestant should see him this week.

Pretty Woman Aids Restaurant Bandits

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Assisted by a pretty young woman, two automobile bandits to-day raided the cafe of George Angelica, obtained jewelry from Angelica worth $1,150 and $75 in cash.

Angelica was counting his money when a young man and young woman entered the rear door. He refused to serve them because it was after closig hours, but the young woman pleaded so prettily that he went to the ice box for a bottle of champagne. When he turned about he faced a large revolver and another young man.

Slaying Ends Feud Of North Carolinans

ALEXANDER, N. C., Aug. 12—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would have been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

Spooning Couple Sit On Turtle; All Move

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 12.—A young couple, strolling on Sullivan's Island became fatigued. Why not sit on that overturned boat over there? They did. But the "boat" moved. She shrieked and the "boat" moved faster. It was a 600-pound turtle asleep on the beach. The turtle carried six men to the water. In its nest were found 200 eggs.

Spooning couples on Sullivan's Island now carry lanterns.

Mourners Forget Corpse When 3 Are Killed at Funeral

MACON, Aug. 12.—The preacher, a deacon and one of the women mourners were killed in a shooting affair at a negro funeral at Round Oak, in Jones County, late yesterday afternoon.

The preacher stopped the services, upon hearing pistol shots near the church, and rushed out to quell the disorder. He was shot just as he stepped out of the doorway. The other two were killed in a general shooting affray that followed. The negro minister was T. M. Howard, of Macon.

In the excitement the funeral was forgotten, and the corpse lay in the church all night, but this morning another preacher was secured and the interment took place.

Sheriff Roberts went to Round Oak early this morning when news of the affair reached him at Grays.

Must Pay Alimony Or Serve Jail Term

MACON, Aug. 12.—D. F. Arnold, a contractor, has been given an extension to September 5, on or before which date he must pay $285 alimony to his wife or go to jail. When arraigned before Judge Mathews on a contempt charge because he had allowed the alimony to become in arrears, Arnold asked for more time, and the judge allowed him 27 more days. He is under order of the court to pay Mrs. Arnold $75 a month.

Two other Macon men have been put in jail in the last 30 days for not paying alimony.

24 Factories Take Space for Exhibits

Only seven days remain for exhibitors to lease space in the permanent manufacturers' exposition, to be held in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Twenty-four manufacturers have already contracted.

Tuesday the committee in charge visited the various manufacturers in the city. Meetings will be held each day until next Tuesday.

On each floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building occupied by the exposition, telephones and desk space will be provided for the transaction of business. A competent man will be employed to show visitors around.

Georgia Girl Bathers Startle Charleston

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12.—Two perfectly attractive girls from Georgia, it is said, have made surf bathing on Sullivan's Island more popular than ever by their somewhat advanced style of ocean garb. They wear men's suits, natty affairs, with stripes about the shoulders and knees.

Sullivan's Islanders say they never saw any handsomer or more becoming men's bathing suits than these.

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER'S NEW HOME IS DEDICATED; MANY NOTED MEN SPEAK

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Fifteen thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles, including city and county officials, men of the cloth and members of the leading civic and fraternal organizations, witnessed yesterday the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone and raising the California Bear Flag at the new home of The Los Angeles Examiner, now in course of construction.

These ceremonies were preceded by a great parade throughout the downtown streets, which acted as the escort of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor H. H. Rose to the new building site.

In the speakers' stand were leaders of the civic and religious life in Los Angeles, while in the grandstand was a brilliant assemblage.

The ceremonies were held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, and Ernest Ingold, president of the club, introduced James R. H. Wagner, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Charles Edward Bock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, offered prayer. Mr. Wagner presented the Bear Flag to The Examiner from the people of Southern California. Arthur W. Kinny, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, made the speech of acceptance. The Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Los Angeles, made an address, and the Rev. Father George Donahoo, representing the Right Rev. Thomas J. Conary, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, spoke.

Silver Trowel Given Mr. Hearst.

Douglas White, of the Advertising Club, presented a silver trowel to Mayor Rose, who officially laid the cornerstone and then presented the trowel to Mr. Hearst. Dr. Sigmund Hechtal, rabbi of the B'Nai Brith Congregation, made the closing remarks.

It was in acknowledging the gift of the trowel from Mayor Rose that Mr. Hearst delivered his address, in which he voiced his confidence in the great future of Los Angeles and Southern California. The various speakers paid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to The Examiner's influence in the expanding progress and prosperity of Southern California.

A chorus of several hundred voices rendered patriotic music.

Mr. Hearst said in his address:

I thank you most heartily on behalf of the members of the Los Angeles Examiner staff and on my own behalf for this beautiful memento and for the generous sentiments which have accompanied it. It is a pleasant thing for us to to feel that we are here among so many friends, and it is also a pleasant thing for us to feel, as we all do feel, a sincere reciprocal friendship for the citizens of Los Angeles and a deep devotion to the best interests of this great city.

Notable Occasion for Paper.

This is a notable occasion for us of The Examiner. It marks a milestone in the progress of the paper. It is made doubly memorable by the participation of our Mayor, and by the attendance of so many distinguished citizens. Yet with all its importance and significance it is only one of the many occasions which we gratefully remember where you have kindly encouraged our efforts and stimulated us to further endeavor.

Under such encouragement and stimulus The Examiner has grown until it is one of the biggest and best of all my publications. Certainly there is no publication of mine from Los Angeles to London in the success of which I take a greater pride and pleasure.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner first because I am a Californian and take pleasure in the success of everything Californian. (Applause.)

I was not born in Los Angeles, but I was born in California.

A man is a Los Angelan, no matter on what street of Los Angeles he is born or lives, and a man is a Californian no matter in what part of California he is born or lives.

Bound Together Closely.

We Californians are learning more and more that we are all bound together by the firm bonds of fraternity and that the combined success of all as individuals make the complete success of all as a community. We are learning that a friendly rivalry does not mean a foolish jealousy; that the fullest achievement is through co-operation, and that whatever operates for the benefit of California operates for the benefit of all of us as Californians.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner, too, because I realize that Los Angeles is destined to become, and is fast becoming, one of the greatest cities in the world. (Applause.)

I want my system of publications to be essentially a national institution, and to be national it must have representation in Los Angeles as adequate as in any of the greatest cities of the nation.

Finally, I take pleasure and pride in the success of The Examiner because Los Angeles is not only a leader in material development, but a leader in ethical and intellectual development—a pioneer in political progress.

What are as yet only ideals even in many of the most advanced localities of the world are actualities in Los Angeles.

What are dreaded as threatening theories in conservative centers are established as practical and beneficial facts in this progressive community.

Conservatism a Failing.

The older sections of this country and of every country are hampered and handicapped in their development by also-called conservatism which is too often nothing more than sheer selfishness or inertness.

The phrase "conservatism" is made to cover a multitude of failings.

The lack of imagination to foresee, the lack of energy to attempt, the lack of courage to act, the lack of ability to achieve are all cloaked under that convenient word "conservatism."

Conservatism is the attribute of age. Energy, enthusiasm, courage, confidence and conviction are the characteristics of youth and strength. It is these that have wrought the miracle of Los Angeles.

In New York the citizens are still struggling vainly for that first essential of electoral reform—the direct nomination.

In Los Angeles you have possessed this power long and employed it well. In the East intrenched privilege still is declaring against the awful possibilities of the recall. For years you have exercised that function of popular government justly and judiciously.

In many localities the citizens are timidly hesitating to adopt woman suffrage. You have not only proved the feasibility of their right, but have demonstrated the definite benefit of it.

Noted Political Achievements.

You have made universal suffrage a fact and popular government a reality. You have exercised the initiative and referendum wisely and temperately.

You have divorced your local city government from national politics and have made it what it should be—a business institution conducted for the business benefit of the stockholders, the citizens.

You have brought water from the cool, clear streams of the distant mountains, undefiled, instead of collecting it from the poisoned and polluted puddles of the populated districts.

You have put your public money honestly and intelligently into great public works instead of into the pockets of greedy promoters and corrupt politicians. You are invading confidently and completely the field of public ownership in spite of the forebodings and forbiddings of interested public service corporations.

You have disproved all the arguments of retained corporation attorneys and dissipated all the opposition of paid corporation politicians.

And behold!

Strides Bring Prosperity.

You have prospered incomparably in spite of your bold advances and striking innovations; nay more, my friends, you have prospered because of them.

In the favoring physical atmosphere of this country, trees and fruits grow big and in the favoring moral and spiritual atmosphere of this community human institutions grow to greatness.

I am truly proud and pleased to have a newspaper here to do its share in the development of this Great city, to play its part in the progress of this great State. I am happy, too, to have a newspaper system to sow the seeds of progress in other parts of the nation and to cultivate it there so that it may take root and flourish and blossom and bear fruit.

My devout wish is that Los Angeles may ever continue to be a leader in the moral and material development of the country; in the economic and political progress of the nation and that The Examiner may be a potent factor in this development, an effective force in this progress—a cornerstone in the splendid structure of Californian achievement.

Tribute Paid to Examiner.

Excerpts from the speeches of prominent Los Angelans follow:

MAYOR H. H. ROSE—The construction of the wonderful building is one of the greatest things that was ever done for a city the size of Los Angeles. A building over 300 feet long and large in proportion, devoted to the uses of one newspaper, in the city of Los Angeles is indeed a magnificent enterprise. While this is the first time I have had occasion to lay the cornerstone of a building, except, maybe, a rough log hut or a stone hut in the mountains, I hope I may have occasion to use these trowels for purposes like this many, many times during my administration.

DOUGLAS WHITE, representing the Advertising Club of Los Angeles—The advertising clubs of the Pacific Coast have been extremely successful in their work up to this time. Every movement needs a leader, and so has the movement for truth in advertising on the Pacific Coast. However, when we entered on this movement it already possessed a leader, for 25 years ago, or about that time, in the city of San Francisco, a publisher arose who made the plain statement that no matter what the circulation of his paper might be, that circulation would be given truthfully and honestly to the people who bought space. That publisher was William Randolph Hearst. From that time up to the present, in all the papers which he has owned and published, he has carried out that same idea of honesty and truth in his advertising, because in the circulation depends the sale of advertising.

THE REV. GEORGE DONAHOE, representing the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty, of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles—What attaches importance to this occasion and to the building that is now laboriously rising here is the fact that this building is destined to become a great center of newspaper activity in our gloriously growing city. As the mission of The Examiner goes forward the power of The Examiner grows stronger. So briefly, then, this is my good wish, first in behalf of us all, newspaper readers of Southern California, that this building which we to-day with ceremony officially begin, may always be to us a source of information, and for the great newspaper genius who honors this occasion with his presence our one hope and good wish and prayer is that the influence, the great influence that he so surely holds—that it may ever be devoted to works of fighting evil in high places, defending the weak and forwarding sound morality the world over.

DR. SIGMUND HECHT, rabbi of the B'nai Brith congregation—In my own and in the name of those whom I have the honor to represent I bring my meed of congratulations and encouragement and cheer, first of all to those who are primarily affected by this event, to that honored head of this gigantic enterprise, to that man nationally honored for the purity of his character, for the sincerity of his purposes, for the directness of his intentions, for his ability and for the policy with which he inspired The Los Angeles Examiner to favor none and be fair to all—William Randolph Hearst. The Los Angeles Examiner—under God may it grow and prosper and be a power in the development and in the uplift of our glorious country.

ARTHUR W. KINNEY, president of The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce—The people of Southern California offer The Examiner their sincere congratulations upon this memorable occasion which marks an epoch in its wonderful career in our great city. It has always held an unbounded faith in the marvelous destiny of our Southwestern metropolis and it has ever backed up this faith by striving for everything that might contribute to the prosperity of our people. It has, indeed, been one of the sturdy sentinels at this far Western outpost of American idealism. Long ago it enunciated a policy of civic and industrial progress that must appeal to every person who has the welfare of our city at heart—a policy which, if pursued, must hasten to the unfolding of the great movement that is destined to make our Southwest empire world famed.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

Charges Speaker Burwell With Breaking Promise to Bring His Measures to Vote.

A tilt in which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

Shakes Finger at Holtzclaw.

The clash between McCrory and Holtzclaw came during the consideration of the Western and Atlantic Commission bill. Mr. Holtzclaw objected to a motion to dispense with the reading of the bill when the House went into committee of the whole, and Mr. Crory, who was standing near shook a menacing finger at the Houston County Representative and said:

"Holtzclaw, you are trying to kill time to prevent my bill coming to a vote. You had better look out!"

Mr. Holtzclaw was in conversation with a member at the time. He glanced at Mr. McCrory, but made no reply.

The failure of the House to take action on the McCrory bill Monday kills the measure for the rest of the session, inasmuch as the Senate has served notice that it will not consider any House bill passed after Monday.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

THIN FOR YEARS--"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. Either Sargol will increase your weight or it won't, and the only way to know it is to try it. Send for this Free Test Package to-day, inclosing 10c in silver or stamps to help pay postage, packing, etc., and a full size 50c package will be sent by return mail free of charge. Ready Instantly

Place a level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup, pour on hot water, stir until dissolved, add sugar and cream to taste—and you have instantly

a most delicious beverage

This makes Instant Postum right for most people. Some like it stronger and use a heaping teaspoonful and plenty of cream. Experiment until you get it right for your taste and have it always made that way.

INSTANT POSTUM

is regular Postom reduced to powder form and soluble in hot water.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum must be boiled.

Instant Postum requires no boiling, but is made in the cup—instantly.

Postum is a pure food-drink made from whole wheat and a small percent of New Orleans molasses. It is entirely free from the coffee drug, caffeine, and is used by hundreds of thousands who appreciate the comfort and advantage of being well.

If coffee don't agree, try Instant Postum.

ATTORNEY FOR DEFENSE AGAIN THREATENS TO MOVE FOR A MISTRIAL

you and you made certain statements?—A. I did not.

Q. Now this time when you were at my office, did not your husband beg you to tell the truth, and put his arms around you and beg you to say what you told him was the truth?—A. It was all lies, though.

Q. Did you sign this affidavit? A. They made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your attorney, Mr. George Gordon?—A. I told you they made me sign it.

Q. Didn't you sign it in the presence of your husband?—A. I signed it in the presence of a whole lot of people, but it was a lie.

Mr. Dorsey read the affidavit. It stated that the husband, Albert McKnight, was in the kitchen of the Selig home when Frank came to lunch Saturday, April 26.

When Solicitor Dorsey reached the part where it was stated that Mrs. Frank had claimed to Mrs. Selig that her husband was drinking the night before, and wanted her to get a pistol so that he could kill himself, Minola interrupted:

Declares Statement Was All a Lie.

"That is all a lie my husband fixed up," she shouted. "They made me sign it."

Later the negro woman started to interrupt again at the statement that she had asked Mrs. Frank if the girl who was killed was a Jew girl. Mr. Arnold told her to keep quiet until Mr. Dorsey had finished. She demonstrated her feelings again at the statement that they had raised her pay, and told her to be careful how she talked.

Dorsey, after he had finished reading the affidavit, said: "And you signed this statement?"

"They made me sign it," reiterated the negress. "It was all a lie."

Q. How did they make you sign it? A. They told me if I did not, they would lock me up.

Q. Who told you?—All of them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is this the lie your husband fixed for you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever get any more pay? A. No, sir.

Q. How did the detectives get you? A. They got my husband first.

Q. Did you say anything to Miss Lucille about it being a Jew, and did she say it was a Gentile?—A. No.

Q. Did Mrs. Frank say anything about sleeping on the floor?—A. No.

Q. Is any of this true? Is it a lie out of the whole cloth?—A. Yes, it is all a lie.

Denies Mrs. Selig Gave Her Money.

Q. Did Mrs. Selig ever give you $5?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did she ever tell you to mind how you talk?—A. They told me to tell the whole truth.

Q. Do you know this Man Craven? A. No.

Q. This man Pickett?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Charles Barnhart took the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Contractor and architect.

Q. Have you, at the request of Mr. Haas, visited the Selig home and made a drawing of the kitchen and drawing room?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you see the mirror in the dining room from any point standing in the kitchen door?—A. No.

Q. Can you see anybody sitting at the table?—A. No.

Q. Could you see anyone sitting on the north side of the table?—A. No.

Q. Is there any position a man can sit at the table and be seen in the mirror?—A. By sitting about two feet away from him.

Q. If a man said he was sitting in a chair against the jam of the kitchen door, and saw the reflection of a man in the mirror, was he telling the truth?—A. I could not see it.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. What you could see in that mirror would depend on the location of the sideboard, wouldn't it?—A. Yes.

Moving of Mirror Would Change View.

Q. If that was moved a little, the whole view of the dining room would be changed, would it not?—A. Yes, but my experiments showed that you could not see whether anyone was eating at the table or not, from any view you could get of that mirror from the kitchen.

The witness was excused and Henry Wood, secretary of the County Commission, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you, at my request, go to the Selig home on Georgia avenue and take some views?—A. I did.

Q. Did you stand in the kitchen and try to see the mirror in the dining room sideboard?—A. I did.

Q. Could you see the mirror from the back kitchen door?—A. I could not.

Q. Could you see the table and the mirror from any part of the kitchen? A. I stood in the door leading into the pantry between the kitchen and dining roo mand all I could see in the mirror was the arm of one chair.

Attorney Rosser here made a side remark that he himself had been out to the Selig home to see if the negro, Albert McKnight, was telling the truth about watching Frank from the kitchen through the sideboard mirror. He said one could not see the dining room table in the mirror from any point in the kitchen.

Q. What you saw in this mirror was right here (the room)?—A. Yes.

Q. The arrangement of the furniture was like it was April 28?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness on redirect examination.

Q. Coming to that door from the back porch you could not see that mirror?—A. I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. If a man were standing where that chair was could you see him?—A. I might have.

Q. Did you make the test sitting or standing?—A. A. I tried both ways.

Another Tells of Tests With Mirror.

The witness was excused and Julius Fischer, president of the cemetery commission, took the stand.

Q. You are a contractor and builder?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make an examination of the Selig home?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you stand in that kitchen door to see whether you could see the mirror in the dining room?—A. Yes.

Q. Could you?—A. No.

Q. Is there any place in the kitchen from which you could see in the mirror a man at the table?—A. No.

Q. Were there any evidences of the mirror having been moved?—A. No, but I moved it to see if I could place it anywhere in the dining room and from the kitchen see any reflection of a person sitting at the table.

Q. Well, what did you find?—A. I found I could not.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. Did you turn the mirror flat against the wall on the east side of the room?—A. No.

Goat Dies Trying to Eat Senator's Speech

WILKESBARRE, PA., Aug. 12.—State Senator Sterling R. Catin has lost his goat—not that kind the jokers like to tell about, but a real one named William.

Catlin kept his pet in the barn where he had stored many of the speeches made during his long term of service at Harrisburg.

The Senator went to the barn to admire William, and to his dismay, found the goat loose among his papers. One voluminous budget was protruding from his mouth. Despite all the Senator's efforts William choked to death. The fatal document was one of Catlin's greatest legislative propositions.

Polaire Will Wear A Ring in Her Nose

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—When Mlle. Polaire, who boasts that she is the thinnest actress in the world, although she resented being called the ugliest by the New York papers—appears in America in the fall she will wear a large gold ring suspended from her nose to amuse New Yorkers with one more novelty.

She has had a ring skilfully fitted into her nose without piercing the flesh, so that she can remove the trinket when off the stage.

Revision of Balkan Borders Agreed To

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, Aug. 12.—Revision of the Balkan territorial boundaries in the peace treaty signed in Bucharest Sunday is likely, Germany having yielded in principle to-day to a reformation of the lines.

The fate of the Turkish islands in the Aegean Sea will be left to the powers.

Bulgarian Heir Is Ill; Poison Plot Reported

SOFIA, Aug. 12.—A mysterious illness has seized Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria. It was announced to-day that the Crown Prince is suffering from a nervous breakdown due to the rigors of the recent military campaign.

In view of Czar Ferdinand's trepidation over the safety of his heir reports were current in some quarters that an attempt had been made to kill Boris with poison.

INCREASE IN TAX RETURNS.

DUBLIN.—The tax returns for Laurens County this year show an increase of more than $500,000 over the returns of last year. The total taxable property on the books this year is $7,106,075.

Last Bill Passed By House Provides W.&A. Investigation

A bill providing for a commission of eight members to investigate the value of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and make recommendations for its lease was passed by the House of Representatives Monday afternoon, being the last House measure that will be passed during the present session.

The commission will be composed of two members from the House, two from the Senate, the chairman of the State Railroad Commission, and two civilians to be appointed by the Governor. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000 for expenses.

The House also passed, by a vote of 120 to 0, the "blue sky" law, which requires registration of securities before stocks and bonds of a concern can be placed on the market. It is designed to prohibit the sale of "wildcat" stocks.

House Begins Move To Shorten Trials

A resolution providing for a commission of seven members to investigate the civil and criminal procedure of Georgia with a view to abolishing long-drawn-out trials and hearings was passed by the House Monday.

The commission will be composed of three members of the House, two of the Senate and two appointed by the Governor. Mr. Slater, of Bryan, in discussing the resolution, referred to the trial of Leo Frank as an example of the slowness of Georgia legal procedure.

$900 in Prizes for Hog Exhibits at Fair

MACON, Aug. 12.—The announcement is made that $900 in prizes will be awarded for the best exhibit of Duroc Jerseys, Berkshire, Poland-China and Tamsworth swine at the Georgia State Fair.

The American Duroc-Jersey Swine Breeders' Association has just placed a cash prize with the fair association and so has the American Berkshire Association. The fair association will distribute $685 and the Southwest Georgia Swine Breeders' Association also offers an award for the best pigs.

Girl's Face Crushed By Kick of Horse

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—Martha Rawls, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Rawls, of this city, has been carried to a hospital in Atlanta for an operation.

The little girl was playing around a horse belonging to her father when it kicked her, striking her left cheek and crushing both the upper and lower jawbones.

Physicians here removed the crushed bones, and later decided to carry the child to Atlanta for treatment in a hospital there.

Negro Is Lynched by Mob at Laurens, S. C.

LAURENS, S. C., Aug. 12.—Overpowering the Sheriff, battering down two doors of the jail and a door to the steel cage, a mob of 2,000 dragged Richard Puckett, a young negro, from his cot and swung him to a railroad trestle.

The negro had attempted an assault on a young white girl Monday morning. He was later captured and confessed his guilt to the Sheriff.

Bloodhounds trailed the negro from the scene of the crime. The young woman could not positively identify the negro.

San Francisco Dry In Wee Sma' Hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—For the first time in history, a restriction was placed on liquor traffic in San Francisco when the new law making it illegal to sell drinks between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. went into effect.

The law was obeyed generally throughout California.

7 MEN STUNNED BY EXPLOSION OF AIR TANK

Hurled Twenty Feet Against Wall, Pratt Laboratory Engineer Is Badly Cut.

W. H. Hutchins, No. 152 Confederate avenue, assistant engineer at the N. P. Pratt Laboratory, No. 88 Auburn avenue, was blown twenty feet against the side of the building Monday morning about 4:30 o'clock when a compressed air tank exploded while Hutchins and half a dozen negro workmen were filling it.

The negroes were also thrown against the walls, but none was injured.

Hutchins received several small cuts about his head and face, and was severely jarred. His key ring, which was attached to his belt, was blown off. It was found 50 feet from where the explosion occurred.

The air tanks in the laboratory are about five feet long and two feet in circumference, and are used in the bottling operations. Four of them were being filled under the direction of Hutchins when the accident happened.

The explosion shook buildings a block away, and was heard a quarter of a mile. The noise and jar awoke practically every person in the neighborhood. Many parties rushed to the building expecting to find workmen dead or seriously injured. All of the men in the plant were slightly stunned and were just regaining their feet when the first of the rescuers arrived.

Police Sergeant Hewett, who was more than a quarter of a mile away, at Piedmont avenue and Houston street, heard the explosion and went to the factory. He took charge of the situation and sent Hutchins home. The negroes returned to their work.

3 Held as Swindlers Of Barnum's Cousin

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—The three persons, two women and one man, accused of swindling Mrs. Sarah Barnum, aged 82, of Syracuse, N. Y., cousin of P. T. Barnum, have fled from Chicago, the police learned positively to-day.

Henry Russell, of Spokane, Wash., a mine promoter; Miss Frances Waldo, his private secretary, and Mrs. Kalla Waldo, her mother, were named in the warrants. Deals for $82,000 were charged against the trio, and it was said Mrs. Barnum was left penniless through investments in mines.

Start on $1,000,000 High School in Fall

PULLMAN, ILL., Aug. 12.—Work on the buildings for the Pullman Technical High School, which will cost more than $1,000,000, will begin before the end of autumn, according to an announcement received by Pullman residents to-day.

The board appointed to administer the $1,200,000 bequest made by George M. Pullman for the school will meet here in October and decide upon the final details.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

A pleasant mode of entertaining at the Executive Mansion is in the informal dinner of six or eight covers which Governor and Mrs. Slaton give often. An affair of this kind was the small dinner of Monday evening, at which Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burwell were the guests of honor, others present being Mrs. Reed, of Elberton, the house guest of the Burwells, and Mrs. W. D. Grant.

Mrs. Slaton was hostess at a pretty luncheon a few days ago for a visitor, Mrs. Charles Donnally, of Pennsylvania, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stocking.

Pink roses from the gardens of Mrs. Slaton's home on the Peachtree road were decorations for the table, and the guests included Mrs. Donnally, Mrs. R. J. Lowry, Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. Albert Howell, Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. Walter Andrews and Miss Stocking.

PERIOD FURNITURE

Period Furniture "Blue Tagged"

It is a notable fact that some of the most drastic reductions of the "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale are made on sets and odd pieces of Period Furniture—for the bedroom, living room and dining room.

The homekeeper who would furnish a room in a true and pure style or who would add another piece to a set already started may save richly through the generosity of the "Blue Tag" reductions.

Another notable fact is that ours is the South's greatest stock of Period Furniture—with its many fine reproductions of the old masters—Sheraton, Adam, Hepplewhite, Chippendale—and then the Colonial, William and Mary, Jacobean, Mission and Louis XV. periods.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being.'

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

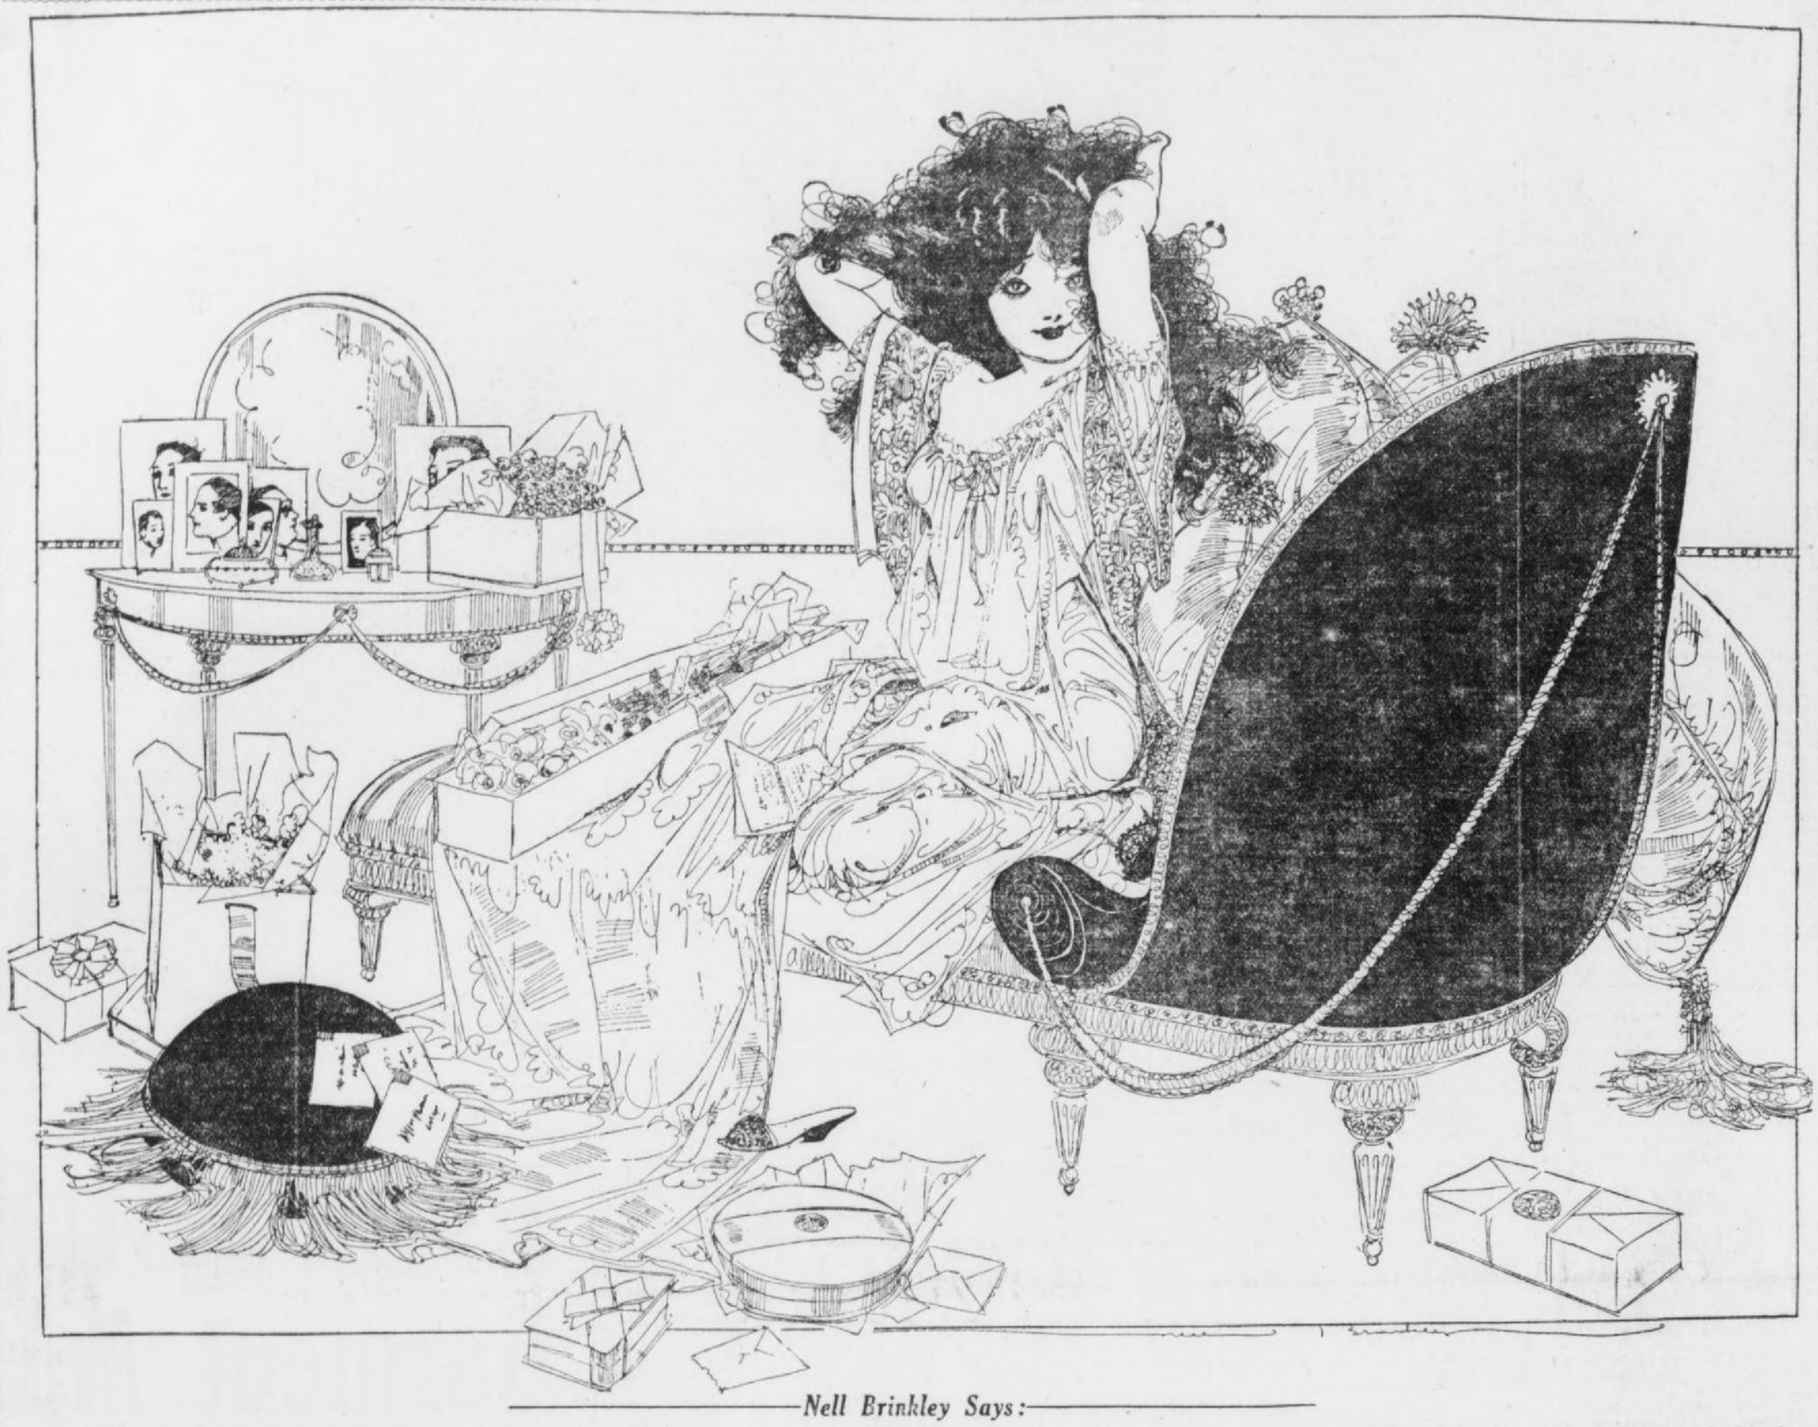

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my flowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!' "

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

'Who knows, and knows he knows,
is wise. Cleave thou to him,
And nevermore forsake him.
Who knows and knows not that he knows—he sleeps;
Go thou to him and wake him.

"Who knoweth not and knows he knoweth not is a child,
Go thou to him and teach him.
Who knows not and knows not that
he knoweth not is a fool.
No light shall ever reach him."

Says Marcus Aurelius:

"A man must stand erect and not be held erect by circumstance.

"Everything is only for a day, with that which remembers and that which is remembered.

"The present is the only thing of which a man can be deprived.

"Everything which is in any way beautiful is beautiful in itself—and neither worse nor better is a thing made by being praised."

Oh, the world has its gloom, and 'tis
gloom to spare;
'Twill make you weary and sad;
But there's plenty of gleam, as is only fair,
To make you cheery and glad.

Now the world may seem dark as the shrouding night,
All clad in a pall of black.
But somewhere 'tis day—so just walk toward the light,
And the shadows will fall at your back.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings*"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then became so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away downtown, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night. "I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!"

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

PHOTOS © BY WHITE STUDIOS

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

These pictures were especially posed for this paper.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy; I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched insteps and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down dropping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl, I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said, "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvoane threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stagecoaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his legs trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28. —HAL COFFMAN.

Up-to-Date Jokes

An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket and pointing to the head engraved on it said:

"My great-great-grandfather was made a lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."

"What a coincidence?" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."

A birthday gift was given to a wife by her husband and three children. The youngest, a little ten-year-old, was appointed to make the speech of presentation. She did it after much preparation for the occasion, and this was the form it took:

"Dear mamma, this gift is presented to you by your three children and your one husband."

* * *

Mrs. Subbub—I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird.

Sarah (the new "general")—I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird-seed for breakfast food.

Gabe—Why do they say that the ghost walks on pay day?

Steve—Because that's the day our spirits rise.

A Redeeming Trait.

"Cannibals have one redeeming feature, after all."

"What is that?"

"They are very fond of children."

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this being due thing.

* * *

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Barnca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Coveleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,000. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

GRIFFITH SENDS FIELDER CALVO TO CRACKERS

A TELEGRAM from Clark Griffith to Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, received this morning, announces that Calvo, the Cuban outfielder whom Griff has been carrying all the season, is on his way to join the Crackers and will be in Atlanta to-morrow.

"Griffith is placing Calvo with us as a means of stiffening up our club for the final sprint," Mr. Callaway said. "I expect he will get in the game at once, probably playing in place of Holtz. He is a fast and accurate fielder and a hard hitter, but the class of Griffith's regular outfield has prevented him from getting into the game with the Senators."

Beauty Is Keynote Of 1914 Hudson Six

The 1914 Hudson Six 54 7-passenger body, complete car, at $2,250, is on exhibition to-day at the salesrooms of Mr. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., local dealer for the Hudson motor-cars.

Beauty is the keynote of the new car. The most prominent feature is the pure streamline body. No angles appear at the dash. Running boards are clear. It conforms to the latest European practice. Germany originated the streamline obdy. By some it is known as the Prince Henry type.

Reliable information from leading factories of Europe indicates that at the Paris show next October practically every European manufacturer will exhibit bodies of this type. This has been adapted by Hudson designers to American use and modified to suit American ideas. The long, sloping hood merges into the lines of the dash. The graceful sweep and smoothness is unbroken from radiator cap to tail-light. The new car is designed for seven passengers. The two extra seats are of the folding type and permanently attached. They fold into the back of the front seat entirely out of the way. Yet owing to the great length of the car—135-inch wheel base—there is ample room for all passengers and all may have the greatest possible ease and comfort.

Provision has been made for entrance to the driver's section from either side of the car. The steering wheel is at the left, with control levers in center at driver's right, and tires are carried in advance of the left fore door. Thus access is obtained from either door.

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

* * *

THESE baseball magnates are proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

* * *

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

* * *

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Voss and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will lug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back.

The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the sams skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

Sporting Food

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mortals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again... The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile eevnt, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. But McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

DR. ROUGLIN RETURNS.

Dr. Louis C. Rouglin returned today from a two weeks' vacation at Eastern resorts. He spent a week fishing off Ocean CView and reported several big catches.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for Infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersburg team, of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccaneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Doolin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial considération of October's classic.

Need of Backstop.

has been reflected in the trade he negotiated just before he left Pittsburg for this city. He traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. With Meyers out of commission McGraw realized that the hitting strength of his club would be affected. McLean is a finished backstop and a very fine sticker. Crandall, one of the grandest fellows who ever drew breath, had been of great service in former years as a relief twirler and pinch hitter.

But McGraw was well provided with pitching talent that could go the route. He strengthened the club by the trade. We were all very sorry to bid good-bye to Otis. He was a grand influence. Many a time his pleasing personality has helped to chase the blues from camp when we happened to meet with some unexpected misfortune.

I have said, in a previous article, that our pitching staff is the best in the major leagues. With the acquisition of Larry McLean I will back our catching department against any other.

Heretofore, the class was naturally ascribed to the Cubs in Archer and Bresnahan. With the best pitchers and two of the four greatest catchers in the game, I think fandom will agree that New York will boast the greatest battery strength in its company.

Upon the battery strength I confidently rely. I think it will prove an insurmountable obstacle to Philadelphia's pennant hopes.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. VAUGHN HURLS ONE-HIT GAME AGAINST INDIANS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—Jim Vaughn, recently acquired by the Cubs in exchange for Lew Richie, added another sensational victory to his string by defeating Indianapolis, 2 to 0. Vaughn allowed the Indians one hit. He has pitched in more games than any other American Association hurler and leads the league in strikeouts and bases on balls. In forty games he has struck out 165 batters and has given 145 free transportations to first base. He also has a no-hit game to his credit for this year. Vaughn left after the game to join the Cubs in Boston.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

• • •

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into tomorrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here today. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

• • •

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

MOTHER IS GIVEN EQUAL RIGHT TO CHILDREN

House Passes Bill Leaving Power to Award Custody in Divorce Cases to the Judge.

A bill giving the mother an equal right with the father to the custody of minor children after decision in divorce cases, and leaving the disposition of the child with the trial judge, was passed by the House Tuesday morning. The vote was 96 to 62. The fight lasted more than an hour.

It was a substitute to the bill introduced by Smith of Fulton and Olive of Richmond, and to the substitute of the General Judiciary Committee. The substitute was offered by Mr. Smith, who stated it was acceptable to the Senate and would be acted upon by that body at this session. The original bill transferred the prima facie right to the child from the father to the mother.

Mr. Smith, explaining his bill, declared the measure is designed to correct an injustice under which Georgia mothers have been held for years. Speeches in favor of the bill were also made by Miller of Bibb and Olive of Richmond.

A number of members opposed the bill, either declaring the present law is good enough or defining their positions clearly by stating the mother is not competent to care for the child.

Those who spoke against the bill were Conner of Spalding, Garlington of Richmond, Moye of Johnson, Picquet of Richmond and Slater of Bryan.

The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the Atlanta charter bill, providing for a popular vote on the charter, the referendum and the reduction of the power of the Recorder.

OBITUARY

John W. Adair, seventy-nine years old, a well-known resident of Fulton County, died Tuesday morning on his farm on the West Hunter road. He is survived by his wife and one son, Rufus. Six daughters also survive. They are Mrs. W. T. Huff and Mrs. J. M. Thompson, of Savannah; Mrs. J. M. Spinks, of Marietta; Mrs. J. T. Griffith, of Camilla; Mrs. Charles Williams, of Columbia, and Mrs. L. A. Garrison, of Atlanta. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. at the Sharon Church. Interment will be in the churchyard.

Susan E. Landers, fifty-five years old, No. 28 Inman street, died Tuesday at 9 o'clock. She is survived by her husband. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia Heeden, who died Monday, will be held at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Barnes, No. 122 Glennwood avenue. Interment at Hollywood.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $300,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

$100,000 in Stock For Use of Name

GADSDEN, ALA., Aug. 12.—Oliver Hall, a rich merchant of Collinsville, testified in the case of E. C. Drew, the Fort Payne promoter, charged with using the mail to defraud in promoting the DeKalb Etowah Oil and Gas Company, how he had been selected president by Drew and tendered $100,000 in stock in a $300,000 corporation. He said he never gave anything for the stock, but permitted the use of his name. His son, Irby Hall, was made vice president and given $500 in stock.

A sensation developed when it was shown the company had never been incorporated and that there was no system of bookkeeping.

Attorney Shot When Officer Aims at Dog

W. C. Munday, a member of the law firm of Munday & Cornwell, No. 318 Kiser Building, was shot in the leg Monday night when a bullet fired by Policeman Jaffares at a mad dog glanced from the sidewalk at Capitol avenue and Hunter street.

Munday's wound was slight, the bullet penetrating the flesh only and passing out. He was removed to his home.

The dog had created a panic among children playing in the street. The officer ran up and fired. Munday, fifteen feet away, received the bullet.

TAX REFORM BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

Question Put Squarely Up to the House—Validity of Slaton Revenue Bills in Doubt.

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNeill and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 13.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $280,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

The bill provides for a State tax commissioner with offices in the State Capitol and county boards of tax assessors. According to the claims of the authors and supporters of the bill, it will increase the annual revenue of the State by at least $1,000,000, sufficient to pay off the present deficit within the next three years, as well as the teachers.

Passed After Hot Debate.

The bill was passed in the Senate after nearly five hours of debate Monday afternoon. Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint author of the bill, made a vigorous defense of the measure in a two and a half hour speech. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth, followed Senator Miller in a vigorous attack on the bill. He declared the bill did not provide an adequate personal property tax.

Other Senators who spoke briefly in opposition to the bill were McGregor, of the Nineteenth, and Olliff, of the Fourth, Senator McNeill, in supporting the bill, charged that the Lipscomb bill, defeated in the House, had been framed by the Chamber of Commerce of Athens, the home town of Senator DuBose. It was for this reason, he intimated, that the Senator from the Thirtieth opposed the present bill.

Upon motion of Senator Tarver, the previous question was called and the final vote was taken. Following the vote, which was 29 to 12 in favor, President Anderson for the first time during the session congratulated the Senate. The bill was transmitted immediately to the House.

SNOW SAYS LOSS IN CORN CROP 300,000,000 BUSHELS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—B. W. Snow says: "With the indication Saturday of the possibility of a breaking up of the drouth I sent a special circular of inquiry to my country clients asking for a report on corn condition August 11, and have received sufficient reports to justify the statement that the decline in prospects since the Government report and my own of August 1 was gathered has been much heavier than is generally appreciated.

"I have returns enough to indicate that Indiana has dropped 10 points in condition, Illinois 15 points with an average around 55, Iowa 13 and Missouri 20. Returns from Kansas and Nebraska are as yet scattered, but sufficient to put Kansas out of the field as a corn-producer this year, and the Nebraska crop is of small importance, except in the northwest counties.

"My returns already cover almost one-third of the important corn counties, and if the later reports are in line with the already received, it is quite possible that the loss since August may have reached 300,000,000 bushels."

COTTON RULED QUITE STRONG

Continued Dry Weather in Southwest Causes Active Bidding, but Sales Were Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—An absence of weather news of features in the cables caused the cotton market to open dull to-day and first prices were from unchanged to 1 point off to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call strength developed and prices rallied 3 to 10 points from the initial level, due mainly to the dry map in the Western belt. The ring apparently seemed to want cotton and purchased rather freely at times. Many of the larger spot houses were noted buyers.

Cordill was out with a report on parts of the Eastern belt, which was considered very favorable. This, coupled with a private telegram from Austin, Texas, stating that no change of consequence is noted in conditions, while the weather has been hot and dry, the temperatures were only 90 degrees yesterday and the entire State toward Oklahoma, cotton is opening fast and in ten days it will be moving freely all south of Waco. This brought out rather active selling from Wall street, but offerings were so rapidly absorbed that prices during the late forenoon were firmly maintained around the early high point.

The high temperatures continue in the West and the weekly weather report just posted shows a bullish condition existing west of the Mississippi, though the Eastern belt is favorable and scattered showers are shown in this section to-day for yesterday, though there are private reports of deterioration in Georgia and Alabama from the lack of moisture in some sections.

Sentiment to-day is somewhat more bullish and higher prices are predicted for the present at least, but there is an element who believe the market is entirely too high and are waiting rain developments in the West to sell.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 3 points lower to 3 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.65; October, 11.11; December, 11.05; March, 11.04; January, 10.84.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Precipitation overnight in the west occurred at a few isolated places only. No general rains fell, although it continues generally cloudy over Texas. The map shows cloudy weather in North Carolina, also generally fair in the west of the belt, good rains in North Carolina and in the south central Gulf states. Indications are unchanged. The map will continue for unsettled weather and precipitation to come on the western States in the near future. Cloudy weather and showers, with a decided fall in temperatures in New Mexico and Colorado promise speedier rain developments for Texas and Oklahoma.

Liverpool is steady, but cables that heavy hedge selling is weighing on the market. Manchester cables: "Weaving worse. Yarns slack. Lower unless bad crop prospects." Our market opened 2 points higher and advanced steadily on small buying to cover on the absence of general rains in the west and in anticipation of an unfavorable weather report for the week.

New York wires that Weld's traveling man reports 12 points deterioration in Texas since July 25. It must be borne in mind, however, that the crop condition in Texas was unusually high up to that date.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—There will be showers within the next thirty-six hours in the Lake regions, and the North and Middle Atlantic States. Occasional showers will continue in Florida. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi the weather will be generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

The temperatures will rise slowly in the northeastern districts during to-night and Wednesday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Fair in west, showers in east portion to-night or Wednesday; warmer to-night.

North Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair except showers in north portion to-night or Wednesday.

Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

METALS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A steady tone was shown in all commodities at the metal exchange to-day with the exception of tin, which was weak. Copper, spot and August, 14.72½@15.85; September and October, 14.95@15.75; spelter, 5.75@5.80; lead, 4.50, bid; tin, 41.00¾@42.00; zinc, 5.65@5.75.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows mostly cloudy in Texas and North Carolina, generally fair over rest of the belt. No rains shown on the map, except light shower at Galveston and Amarillo, and raining in far west Texas at El Paso. Nice rains fell over south central Gulf and North Carolina, but little rain elsewhere.

* * *

F. M. Cordill wires: "Charlotte, Greenville, Atlanta to Montgomery an unbroken stretch of excellent crops is noted. Atlantics show uninterrupted improvement since my last trip. The weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable. Conditions were never better at this date."

* * *

Waxahatchie, Texas, wires: "Hot winds hurting cotton badly. We have reports stating western Oklahoma is deteriorating rapidly. Only showers reported to-day at Yoakum and Brenham."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Expected rains did not fall in Oklahoma and Texas and the market was due to advance on the opening Monday morning. But Europe reflected no alarm. Arkansas reported splendid rains. Washington unsettled weather over Oklahoma and the weather prophets among the trade said that Texas rains are imminent. Under the circumstances the market continued under the spell of Washington legislative threat and hung fire.

"Recently students of the crop have devoted much time and thought to the effect of dry weather in Texas. One faction, predicating its opinion on the general reports of lack of moisture made by the Weather Bureau and on the great number of crop damage advices now coming from the west, says the crop in Texas and Oklahoma has deteriorated sharply, and that those States no longer promise a wonderful yield. Another faction, which has looked up the western rainfall records of other years, is equally certain that the present drouthy spell is not only not abnormal, but is confined to a very much smaller area than the trade realizes.

"Thus it is that some traders adhere to the belief that a very large crop is on the way, conditions east of the Mississippi River being excellent, while others are now becoming convinced another year's need will exceed production. Meantime new crop cotton is being absorbed by previously created requirement just as the talent expected it would be, but the demand for later shipments is small, a fact that robs the bull side of the account of much attractiveness."

The Journal of Commerce says the volume of business passing in the cotton goods markets is being underestimated. Jobbers are doing a good general trade. Cotton yarn prices are easier. The lower trend of prices on the cotton exchanges has caused some setback in the goods markets, but there are few goods available for spot delivery. Most mills do not care to go far into another cotton crop until they are better satisfied of the outcome of the crop.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Generally clear, rain at Amarillo and El Paso. Oklahoma—Clear and hot."

* * *

The Government's official record of Texas gives the rainfall average for the month of July as 1.29 inches, which is 1.62 below normal, but .09 inch higher than it was last year.

* * *

Official temperature average for Oklahoma yesterday was 104 degrees; Texas, 98, with seven stations recording 100; five 102, and one 104 degrees.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Market easier on hedge selling; tendency here to buy on expected bullish weekly report and anticipation of bullish weather forecast of Government to-day."

* * *

Manchester quotes officially to-day yarns dull and weak.

* * *

The market steadied up on dry map in the Western belt after the call. Weld, Mitchell and Cone were the leading buyers on the advance. Smith was possibly the best seller, supposed to be for Wall street.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Mean temperatures ranged from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Central North Carolina, north Central South Carolina and in the lower coast region of Texas, where there was a slight deficiency. The greatest excess in temperature occurred in Northwestern Arkansas and Northeastern Oklahoma.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern belt, from 82 to 84 degrees over the central and from 82 to 88 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88, occurred at Fort Worth, Texas, and Fort Smith, Ark.

No precipitation occurred during the week in Oklahoma and there was very little in Texas. Rain fell generally over the other portions of the cotton region, except that there was none in the extreme northern portion of Alabama and the southern portion of Middle Tennessee.

The precipitation was unevenly distributed and more than 2 inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, the central portion of Northern Arkansas, Southern Florida and at one station in Alabama and one in North Carolina. The greatest weekly precipitation, 8 inches, occurred at Calico Rock, Ark., and there was 5.66 inches at Minden, La.

MARKED ACTIVITY NOTED IN STOCKS

Street More Cheerful Over Cheap Money Talk—Standard Railroads Led Advance.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Union Pacific made a new high mark for the present movement at the opening of the stock market to-day, when it began selling at 154¼, or ½ above Monday's final.

The tone was strong and most of the issues showed fractional gains. The accumulation arose from scattered sources and include some shares which for a long time have been neglected.

Among the advances were Woolworth, 4½; Steel common, ⅛; United States Rubber common, ⅝; Union Pacific, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ¼; American Can, ¾; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Bethlehem Steel, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; Texas Company, ½; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Reading, ⅜; Pennsylvania Railroad, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅜; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie first preferred ⅝, and Erie common, ⅛.

New Haven, which closed last night at 78⅞, crossed par, opening at 100⅛.

St. Paul, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 107½, against 109¾ at the closing last night.

The curb was firm.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in London were strong.

Toward the end of the first hour, large buying orders appeared and nearly everything on the list moved up to new high records for the past six weeks. Gains of more than a point were noted in the leading railroads and industrials, while substantial fractional upturns were recorded in many other issues.

Amalgamated Copper led the upward movement, advancing 1⅜ to 74⅝. Union Pacific moved up 1⅜ to 155⅜, and similar gains were recorded in Canadian Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Steel common, Wabash common, United States Rubber, Utah Copper and Tennessee Copper advanced more than ½ each. Southern Pacific was under slight pressure, however, declining ½ to 91⅝.

Call money is loaning and renewing at 2¾ per cent.

Union Pacific will sell ex-rights Wednesday.

The tone was strong in the last hour, and a number of issues made substantial gains. United States Rubber common advanced to more than 62, a net gain of more than 1 points since the opening. Steel was strong, selling around 65 for a gain of ¼ since noon. Canadian Pacific was conspicuously fractionally. Lehigh Valley and St. Paul held firm and Texas Company was very strong, selling at 118¾ for a gain or more than 2 points on the day. Brokers said there was a good deal of investment buying in Europe.

STOCK GOSSIP

"As I have said many times of late, any activity the stock market displays is when prices are advancing. I hear that the large interests are heavily long of securities and are accumulating more from day to day.

"Although prices have had a good advance from the low of June 11, the advance under way will continue until stocks are at a considerably higher level. I am especially bullish on Union Pacific, Steel, Copper and the Tractions, and believe holdings should be increased in all of these issues on any moderate recession."—G. D. Potter.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	85⅝@87⅜
Corn—No. 2	77½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42½

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—September corn was up as much as 1½c to-day, but it lost ½c later, yet the closing price was about 1c higher.

A report was received during the session saying that the losses throughout the dry districts in the corn belt have been sensational since the Government August report made its appearance.

On this a great deal of corn was bought and it was bought by the larger holders and bulls in the trade. December was quite strong and closed 1⅝c higher, and May was up a little over 1c. The big corn market was chock full of excited humanity, as many speculators left the other pits to try their luck in corn.

Wheat closed with gains of ⅛ to ½c and oats were up ¼ to ⅝c.

Provisions were lower all around.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Plans for Erection of Sixteen-Story Bldg. At Whitehall and Ala.

Dr. E. L. Connally Consults Architects—United Cigar Stores May Take Brown & Allen Corner.

Announcement was made Tuesday of plans for a sixteen-story office building on the Brown & Allen site, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, a full account of which appears elsewhere. Dr. E. L. Connally owns the present building and will erect the new one.

This action will bring about some interesting changes, and may mean that Brown & Allen will move across the street to the place now occupied by Thomas H. Pitts, the tobacconist, and that the United Cigar Stores Company will be located where Brown & Allen now are.

The corner on which the building will stand is one of the busiest in Atlanta and brings a handsome rental.

List of 24 Exhibitors.

Success of the plan to exhibit Atlanta-made goods on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building seems to be assured. Already 24 merchants and manufacturers have signed up for space. They are the Whitlier Mills Company, Marcus-Loeb & Co., Nunnally & McCrea, Southern Engraving Company, Frederick Disinfectant Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, E. Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, Southern Upholstering Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Southern Spring Bed Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper, Gholstin-Cunningham Company, All Star Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Norris, Inc., Willingham-Tift Lumber Company, Tripod Paint Company, J. P. Stevens Engraving Company, Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company, White Provision Company, Dowman-Dozier, Foote & Davies.

The plan of the committee has been to put so many "spaces" 10 feet square at the disposal of exhibitors.

Moving on Whitehall.

The Eugene V. Haynes jewelry establishment will move soon from No. 37 to No. 49 Whitehall street. The firm has renovated the latter place and Mr. Haynes has carried out many ideas of the jewelry business gained on trips abroad. Under the old lease this concern was paying $4,000 a year rental, but the owner of No. 37 Whitehall, A. B. Steele, asked $12,000. Unable to reach a compromise at $8,000 the jewelry concern announced that it would move. The change will take place about September 1. An up-to-date moving picture house, it is said, will occupy the old location.

Peachtree Creek Plans.

What can be done to reclaim or "renovate" Peachtree Creek? More than a hundred property owners would like to know. The County Commissioners have a plan to clear out the bed and remove driftwood from the banks. This, they believe, will prevent to a large extent the present overflow in the rainy season, and keep the low places free from standing water. Mosquitoes won't have a chance, and as for the sewage of former days it has been largely removed by the erection of the Peachtree Creek disposal plant.

Some time ago the sugestion was made that the creek be bridged over for a considerable distance. This plan met opposition from Eretus Rivers, who declared that the city and the county had so few streams of size that they should be left exposed to view.

The main permanent trouble with Peachtree Creek seems to be that it is muddy rather than clear. Were it a stream of sparkling water rather than a ditch carrying off Georgia red clay its possibilities would be unlimited. If it were a good stream in this sense the lowlands that now border it could be turned into attractive park spaces for present and future generations.

Spring Street Improvement.

Sooner or later there is going to be a big improvement on Spring street to make it as much as possible a help to Peachtree. The proposition to extend Spring northward to Brookwood has already been announced. It rests where many other good propositions rest, to be revived later when the need becomes greater than it is at present.

Now comes the suggestion that Spring street be turned slightly from its course as it strikes Carnegie way—that a slice be cut from the northeast corner of Cain street (the Governor's Mansion lot) and Spring street be connected up with Cone street, which now ends at Carnegie way, and extended across the railroad tracks by way of a concrete viaduct.

Cone street ends on the south at Marietta street and it is suggested that the street be continued. The viaduct would go straight until the tracks were crossed and then curve slightly to the left, or about due south, and land on Madison avenue, to serve the entire Terminal Station district.

This arrangement, it is pointed out, would make it possible for the viaduct to pass safely to the east of the W. & A. freight depot, and it would put a leading thoroughfare one block closer to the retail district than a viaduct which jumped from the foot of the present Spring street. Not only that, but a first-class, straight-line thoroughfare would be opened up for traffic that would otherwise use Peachtree, and travelers using the Terminal Station could reach their North Side homes much more quickly than by the circuitous route that it is now necessary to travel.

Legislators To Be Paid at Once; Sum Due Them $70,000

That the Georgia legislators will receive every penny of the money due them for their services in the present session of the General Assembly was indicated Tuesday morning following a conference between Governor Slaton and State Treasurer Speer.

The total amount which will be paid to the legislators for salaries and mileage will be $70,000.

State Treasurer Speer declared Tuesday the legislators would be paid in full, regardless of the depleted condition of the treasury, sufficient funds for this purpose being in hand.

A large part of the $70,000 has been paid to the legislators already.

Senate Passes Bill Limiting Militia's Use

Apparently weary from the strenuous campaign for tax revision which culminated in the passage of the substitute to the Shepard bill Monday night, Georgia Senators adjourned Tuesday at noon following the passage of two general bills by McGregor, of the Nineteenth, providing for a revision of the military laws of the State. The vote was 29 to 0. There was no debate.

The bills provide affidavits shall be made by civic authorities before request is made upon the Governor for troops in case of riot or insurrection, thereby decreasing the power of the civil authorities and increasing that of the executive. The measure, according to its supporters, aims to prevent riots between citizens and soldiers such as occurred in Augusta last year.

Tubercular Cattle Barred From State

An order designed to prevent the shipment of tubercular cattle into Georgia was issued Tuesday morning by Dr. Peter F. Balmsen, State Veterinarian, from the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. The order provides that all cattle originating in New York or Illinois, destined to any point in Georgia, must be accompanied by a certificate of health issued by a veterinary inspector of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The order goes into effect immediately.

Girl's Plea for Man Softens Policewoman

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Policewoman Alice Clement to-day was sorry she made an arrest. She was proud of the accomplishment in capturing a young man who insisted upon following her in the downtown streets.

But Miss Alice Brow, the young woman fiance, went to Policewoman Clement and pleaded that she recommend his release. Miss Brown, after several minutes' pleading, cried and then fainted.

When Policewoman Clement started to court to appear against Fred Bentley, 26, the young man she had arrested, she said: "I'm sorry I pinched him."

Parcel Post Stamps Going to Waste Here

The Atlanta postoffice has more than half a million parcel post stamps as a dead weight. Postmaster Hugh McKee has been instructed to sell them at once, but is having a hard job doing it.

Under an order which went into effect July 1 parcel post stamps were declared no longer necessary.

The parcel post stamps immediately fell into disuse, although they are of the same value as other stamps of the same denominations and can be used on all classes of matter.

POSSE SEARCHING FOR LEE SLAYER

South Georgia Farmer Shot Dead by Black He Attempted to Disarm.

LEESBURG, Aug. 12.—Searching parties to-day are scouring the country near this place in an effort to capture Doc Mathis, a negro, who shot and killed R. L. Jessey, a prominent Lee County farmer, last night.

Berry Wallace, a brother-in-law of Jossey, had a difficulty with Will Mathis, a son of the slayer, for beating a mule.

Returning from Leesburg in the automobile of Wallace, accompanied by several other men, a stop was made at the home of the negro, who, it was reported, had secured a rifle with which to avenge the whipping of his boy. It was the intention of the party to disarm the negro. They called to him and he came out, but returned to the house, saying: "Wait until I get my shoes."

Josey followed and told the negro to wait, but the negro shut and fastened the door. His son, Will Mathis, began firing at the party in the automobile from a window. Doc Mathis cracked the door open and fired at Jossey, the ball passing through the right breast.

Jossey's body was secured by the party and brought to Leesburg, where the posse was formed. The negroes in the meantime had escaped.

U. S. Peace Delegate To the Hague Is Dead

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 12.—The funeral of Judge U. M. Rose, member of The Hague Peace Conference, who died here to-day, will be held Thursday from the family residence. Judge Rose was one of the most distinguished members of the Southern bar and at one time was president of the American Bar Association. In 1905, following a visit of President Roosevelt to Little Rock, he was appointed a member of the International Peace Conference at The Hague.

Judge Rose was 79 years of age. His death was hastened by a recent fall, when he sustained a fractured arm.

Rain Halts Mercury As It Starts on Climb

A light shower shortly after noon Tuesday cooled the atmosphere and brought Atlanta relief from heat. The mercury in the official thermometer was forced from 88 degrees down to 78 in less than a half hour. The day started off with the thermometer registering 76 degrees.

Fair weather and cooler is predicted by Government Forecaster VonHerrmann.

Castro's Revolt in Venezuela Crushed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The revolution in Venezuela, reported to have been led by General Cipriano Castro and his cousin, General Torres Castro, has collapsed entirely, according to information received at the State Department to-day.

General Torres Castro and all his staff have been captured by the Federal forces.

Preference Given Whites by Blalock

Collector of Internal Revenue A. O. Blalock, recently appointed successor to Henry S. Jackson, has started to carry out his pledge to appoint no negroes to any position that a white man may fill without demeaning himself.

Tuesday morning Mr. Blalock appointed a white man to succeed a negro elevator runner in the Federal building.

Elopers Are Halted By Tifton Sheriff

TIFTON, Aug. 12.—Sheriff Shaw arrested Arthur Harrington, 17-year-old son of Deputy Sheriff R. M. Harrington, of Ocilla, in answer to a telephone message from the young man's father.

Harrington, with a Miss Smith, aged 16, of Ocilla, came to Tifton in an automobile intending to secure a license and get married. When they arrived here Harrington was taken in custody and held until his father came, when he was taken back to Ocilla.

Shirt a la Bulgarian Blouse Jails 2 Men

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., Aug. 12.—Two men were arrested here while strolling along the main thoroughfare wearing shirts hanging loose, a la Bulgarian blouse.

When asked for an explanation, the men said: "Women are wearing suspenders nowadays. Guess we can wear Bulgarian blouses if we want to."

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

Urges U. S. Ban on Alien Conspirators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, to-day introduced a bill aiming at the deportation of Mexicans in this country who may be stirring up trouble between the United States and Mexico.

His bill provides that any alien who shall take advantage of his residence in the United States to conspire for the overthrow of a foreign government in North or South America, with which this country is on friendly terms, shall be deported.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

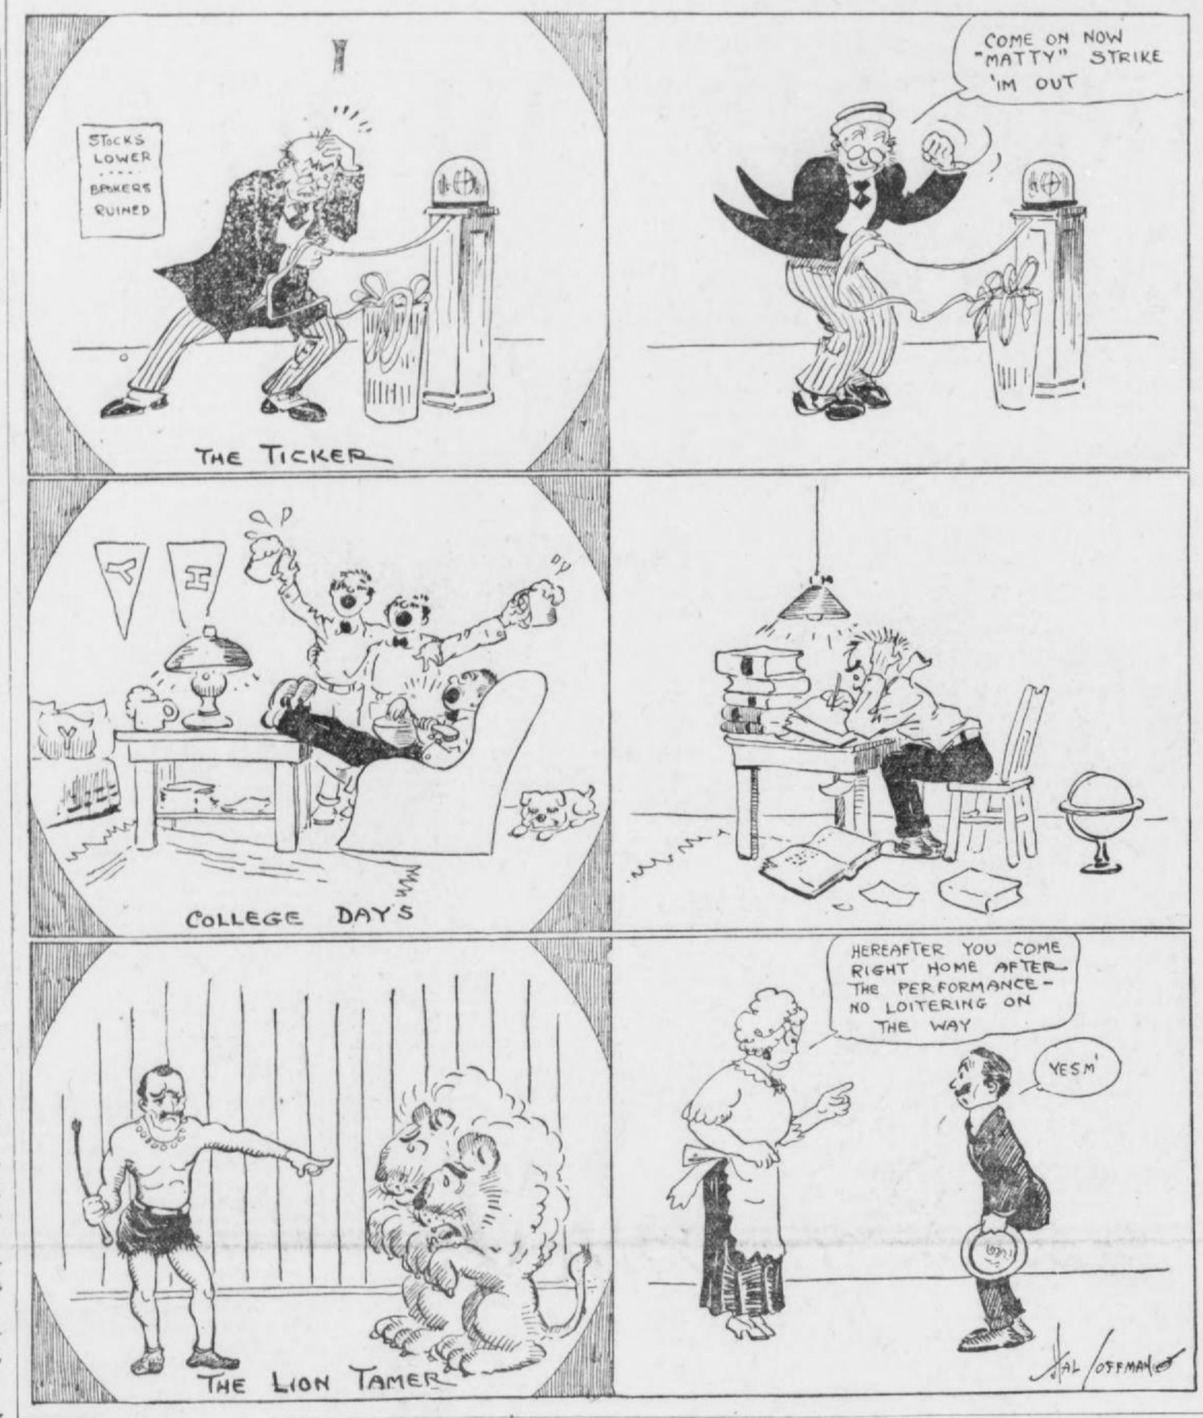

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

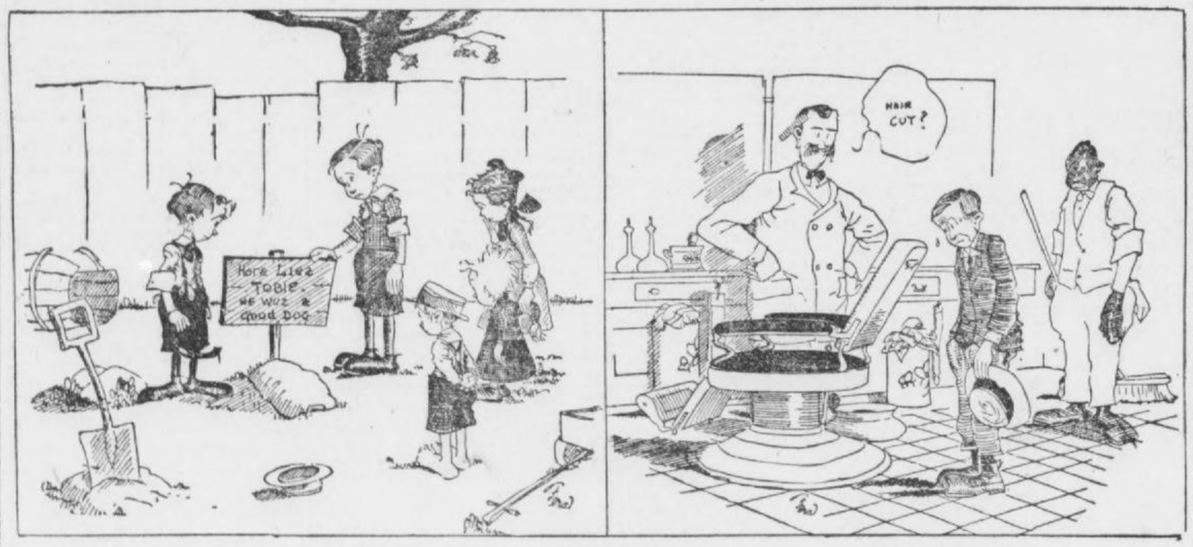

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

Adam Smith

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power.
Great love to that great hour.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

STATE CHARGES PREMEDITATED CRIME

Defense Forces Dalton to Admit Jail Record

EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY IS DENIED

Executive's Action Comes as the Supreme Court Reverses Ruling Favoring Father.

The Supreme Court Tuesday reversed the decision of Judge Hammond, of Augusta, awarding the two Zachry children to the father, thereby further complicating the sensational case in which requisition papers by Governor Cole Blease for Zachry were refused by Governor Slaton Tuesday morning.

According to the ruling of the Supreme Court, the decision awarding the children to the father is reversed and remanded to Judge Hammond's court for further hearing. The ruling further specifies that Judge Hammond may exercise his discretion in awarding the custody of the children, which is contrary to the opinion rendered by Judge Hammond, who held previously that he was forced to award the children to Zachry because of a previous judgment.

The effect of the ruling will be to put the whole matter back in the Augusta courts, with the possibility that Mrs. Zachry will be awarded the custody of the two children.

Governor Slaton based his refusal on the fact that no State law had been violated by Zachry in South Carolina and that the whole case was against the defendant grew out of the desire of Mrs. Zachry to obtain the custody of the two children.

One of the most spectacular fights for the extradition of a citizen ever recorded in Georgia occurred in the Governor's offices Monday. Charges and counter charges were hurled in turn by counsel for the defense and for the State of South Carolina, and at one time a personal mix-up between Attorney Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, and Attorney Phinizy, representing Mr. Zachry, who charged that the case had been prosecuted with all the "vindictiveness" that Mr. Dunbar could summon, was narrowly averted by the Governor.

Slaton Draws Line.

"You may wax just as enthusiastic as you like," said Governor Slaton to Mr. Phinizy, "but you can't say those things. That will not do here."

The hearing was as unique as it was spectacular. With the Governor sitting as both court and jury, attorneys for the defense and plaintiffs were allowed to argue their cases to their hearts' content with frequent interruptions by the Governor, who kept close tab on every bit of evidence offered.

In addition to the three attorneys for Zachry, Cohen and Phinizy, of Augusta, and West, of Thompson, E. D. Clary, Mayor of Harlem, the defendant's home town, testified in behalf of Zachry. Attorneys Rembert, of Columbia, S. C., and Dunbar, of Augusta, represented the State of South Carolina.

Mayor Clary, of Harlem, created a sensation when he testified that he had on one occasion pulled Mrs. Zachry and her mother off Zachry following an attack. Mrs. Zachry, he declared further, had said in his presence that if she did not get her children she would have to kill her husband.

Kidnaping Charge Irrelevant.

The climax of the hearing was reached, however, when the attorneys for Governor Blease virtually admitted to Governor Slaton that the charge of kidnaping, as incorporated in the requisition papers, was not relevant and that practically all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the custody of the two children.

In substantiation of the latter statement Governor Slaton referred to a letter which he himself had received from Mrs. Zachry, in which, he declared, it seemed that all that Mrs. Zachry wanted was the children.

This testimony of the Governor and the startling admission of Attorney Rembert, representing Governor Blease, broke down the whole argument of the plaintiff and really marked the turning point in the hearing.

AUTO TOUR IS LAUDED BY SLATON

Calls Hearst's Sunday American Pathfinding Trip to Pacific a Sign of Progress.

Declaring that the promotion of good roads and cross-country highways, such as the proposed transcontinental route from Atlanta to San Francisco, was the best evidence of the progress of the people, Governor John M. Slaton Tuesday placed his stamp of approval on the campaign of Hearst's Sunday American to "pathfind" an all-Southern coast-to-coast route, which will be inaugurated next Monday.

The Governor declared emphatically that the promotion of a project of this kind meant not only a bigger and better Georgia but a more prosperous Southland through the closer communication of the people of different States by means of good roads.

"No better evidence of the progress of a people can be had," said Governor Slaton, "than promotions of this sort for better road and highway facilities. Obviously better roads within a State bring the people into closer communication with each other and this makes for increased interchange of both trade and mind products.

Chance to Make Friends.

"Of course there is much larger significance in this project which contemplates a highway from our city through the rich and prosperous Southland all the way to the rich Pacific Coast. Such a highway will afford the people of different States the opportunity to become better acquainted with each other, and, surely, no one can question that this can only be highly beneficial to all concerned. It is especially needed in the South with its wonderful resources, much of which has as yet been barely touched in development.

"I can see no reason why this project inaugurated by The Sunday American should not go through as planned. Just such things were done by the ancient Romans—witness the great highways which stretched out in all directions from ancient Rome, making it the very hub of the world. Surely we can do as much if not more."

Practically every plan for the inauguration of the monster campaign is complete. "Pathfinder" Ferguson has had scarcely a minute of rest since arriving in Atlanta Saturday, for he is leaving out not one detail of the big trip.

Reception Pleases Trail Blazer.

He stated Tuesday that he was much pleased with the reception accorded him since arriving in Atlanta, and would leave the city next Monday with deep regret if it were not for the fact that he is engaged in a campaign which means so much not only for Atlanta, but for Georgia and the South.

The official start from Atlanta next Monday will be featured by a great parade strictly in keeping with the monster campaign which is being inaugurated. Among those who will have a place in the parade will be the Fifth Regiment Band, which will head the procession; a big Alco truck, Chief of Police Beavers in his automobile, Chief Cummings of the fire department, other public officials, including Mayor Woodward and members of the Council, in specially decorated automobiles; scores of automobiles and motorcycles that have participated in the races at the 'Drome.

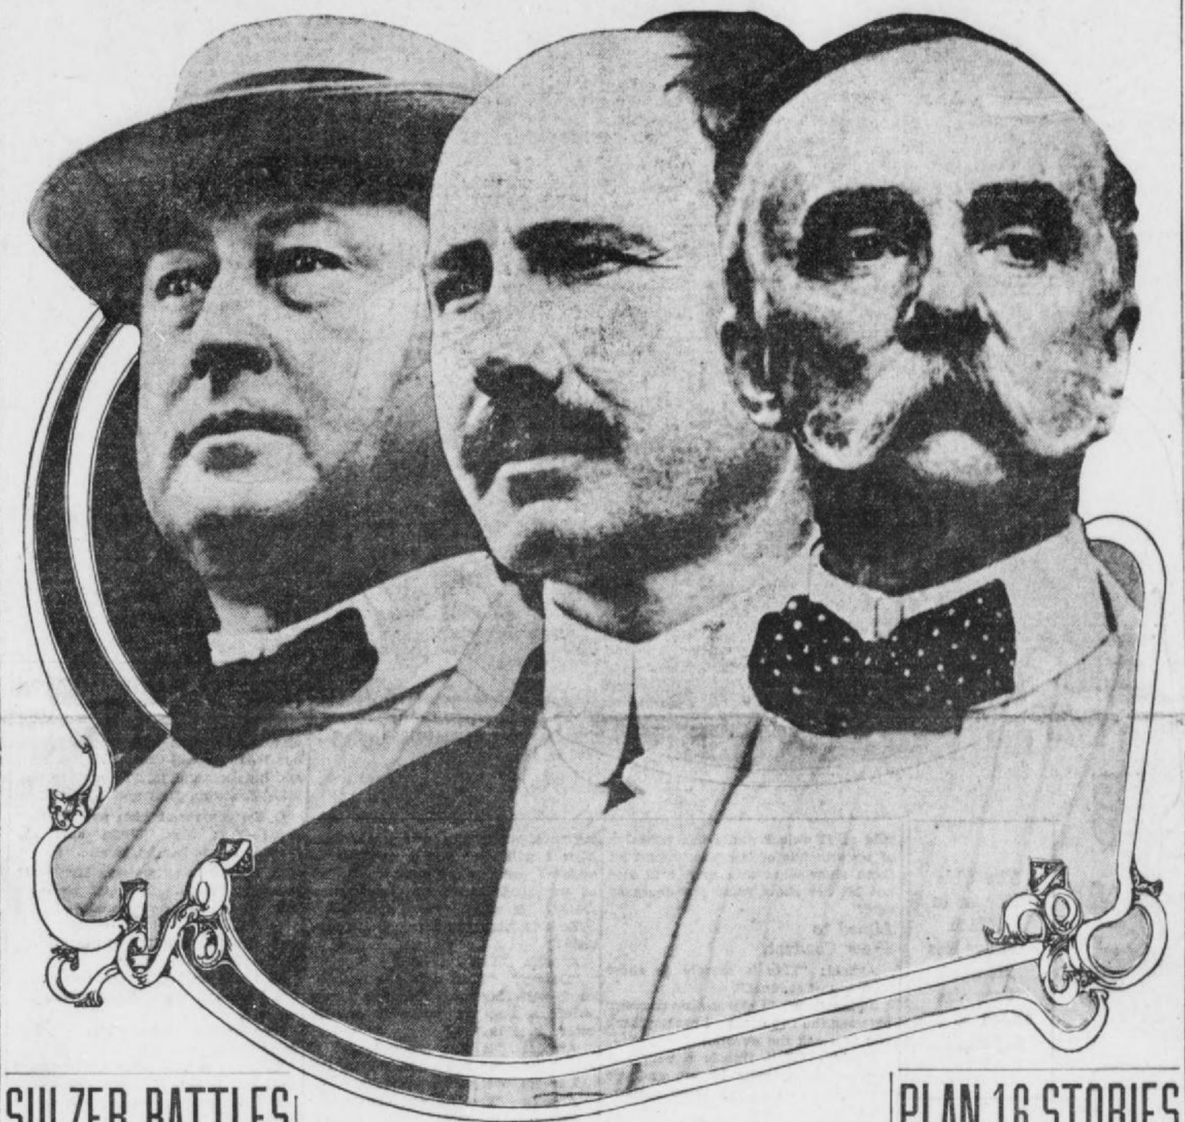

Great Auto Parade Planned.

If indications apparent one week before the inauguration of the big campaign amount to anything, Atlanta will witness on next Monday one of the biggest motor parades ever pulled off in the city.

Mr. Ferguson, accompanied by his wife and two children and a local newspaper man, will go direct to Birmingham, the first official stopping place. From Birmingham the party will proceed to Montgomery, thence to New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Tucson, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

SULZER BATTLES IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Governor William Sulzer's political life hangs in the balance to-day. Faced by a hostile Legislature, Governor Sulzer, with his back to the wall, fought with more vigor than he had pressed into any other contest in his long political career.

Before the Assembly convened to vote on the resolution that Sulzer should be impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors" for the alleged private use of political funds and speculation in Wall Street, opponents of the Governor claimed to have enough votes to pass the resolution.

At least five of the judges of the Court of Appeals must participate in the impeachment trial, and supporters of Governor Sulzer rely upon the judicial rather than the legislative action of the proposed court of impeachment for a favorable decision in the involved case.

The resolution of impeachment, whose formulation is based on findings of the Frawley legislative committee, was introduced in the Assembly at 12:15 a. m., when 101 of the 150 members were present, but it was predicted that close to a full attendance would be on hand to-day. Democrats opposed to Governor Sulzer appointed committees to see that every member was in his seat.

Bill Providing Home For Wayward Girls Is Passed in House

The bill introduced in the House by Representatives Jones of Coweta and Mills of Butts County providing for a home for wayward girls to be called the "Georgia Industrial Home for Girls," carrying with it an appropriation of $30,000, was passed Tuesday after much discussion, by a vote of 115 to 46.

Twenty thousand dollars will be used as a building fund and the remaining $10,000 will be used as a maintenance fund. The bill met with bitter opposition by Fullbright of Burke County, who declared it was of no use, as the Senate would not act on the measure. The Speaker of the House informed the gentleman from Burke that he had received word from the President of the Senate that the Senate would consider it.

Shuptrine of Chatham made a motion to have the bill tabled. The motion was lost, 106 to 54. The bill also provides for a board of managers consisting of five members, two of which shall be women. Minor amendments to the bill were considered.

PLAN 16 STORIES ON BROWN AND ALLEN SITE

Dr. E. L. Connally and associates will soon start the construction of a sixteen-story office building on the site of Brown & Allen's drug store, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, if plans which are under way are consummated. Announcement was made unofficially at noon Tuesday that Dr. Connally has been in consultation with W. L. Stoddart of New York and Atlanta, and other architects, from whom he has received tentative plans.

In fact, an engineer representing a local architect surveyed the ground last week and made measurements of the stores in the building. Dr. Connally could not be reached for an expression as to his plans, and his son, Thomas W. Connally, refused to be quoted.

Such a move has been in contemplation for several years. Two years ago Dr. Connally had an architect sketch a twenty-story building, and since then he has had more or less definite intentions to erect a building that will be a credit to the section and to the city.

The structure which Dr. Connally is planning will cost probably $750,000, and will be a distinct addition to the line of attractive buildings on Whitehall. It will probably be known as the Connally Building, after its builder, who likewise erected the old structure.

The present building is 30 years old and it must soon be repaired or torn down. About a year ago a brick wall was placed in the center. The structure is three stories and of brick.

The lot is about 90 feet square, and a sixteen-story office building would give 129,600 square feet of floor space. Frontage near this point seldom changes hands, but is estimated to be worth from $7,500 to $10,000 in a transaction with no exchange elements, or $675,000 to $900,000.

Brown & Allen now pay $1,000 a month for the conre, it was declared.

GIRL DENIES STATE'S VERSION OF FRANK'S WORK ON FATAL DAY

Here are the important developments Tuesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan:

State announces its theory that Frank planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan the day before she came to the factory for her money.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, the State's witness who testified that he had seen women in Frank's office, was shown up by the defense and admitted by Dalton.

Four acquaintances of Dalton testify that they would not believe him under oath and that his reputation for truth and veracity is bad.

C. E. Pollard, expert accountant, testifies that it required him three hours and eleven minutes to compile the financial sheet that the defense claims Frank prepared the afternoon of the murder.

Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer, says that Frank did no work on the financial sheet Saturday morning, the day of the crime.

Jim Conley's declaration that Lemmie Quinn came into the factory and left before the arrival of Monteen Stover, who came at 12:05 o'clock, is challenged by the testimony of Miss Hall, who swears Quinn did not enter the factory before she left at 12:02 o'clock.

State Announces Theory.

The State definitely announced Tuesday its theory that Frank deliberately premeditated and planned a criminal attack upon Mary Phagan Friday, April 25, the day before she came to the factory and was slain.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, made the surprising announcement of the State's attitude during a heated argument over the admissibility of a portion of the testimony of one of the defense's witnesses, Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer at Montag Bros. and occasionally employed at the National Pencil Factory.

Dorsey and Hooper were objecting strenuously to the admission of a phone conversation between Frank and Miss Hall in which Frank was reported to have asked Miss Hall to come over to the pencil factory to assist in the clerical work, saying: "I've got so much work to do that it will take me until 6 o'clock to get it done."

Hooper, after the Solicitor had objected to the question on the ground that it was self-serving and proved nothing, declared that the conversation not only was self-serving, but was made in deliberate anticipation of Mary Phagan's visit to the factory in the afternoon.

"This remark was made on Saturday morning, the day after Mary Phagan's pay envelope was refused Helen Ferguson," said Mr. Hooper. "It was made in anticipation of her visit in the afternoon. It is the State's contention that Frank deliberately pre-arranged circumstances favorable to an attack upon the girl and incidents serving to divert any suspicion from himself."

That the State was working upon the theory of premediation was hinted by the questioning of Helen Ferguson several days ago, but Attorney Hooper's address to the court was the first open declaration.

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness against Frank, was given an airing by Attorney Arnold. Dalton was recalled to the stand and made to admit that he had been sent to the chaingang in 1894 on three separate counts for stealing in Walton County.

Dalton also admitted that he had been indicted in 1899 in Walton County for theft and had paid a fine of $141.46.

Attorney Arnold showed the witness copies of four indictments and asked if he knew these had been issued against him in Walton County for selling liquor to Don Tillman and Bob Harris. Dalton denied all knowledge of the indictments.

Witnesses Assail Dalton's Character.

As soon as Dalton left the stand V. S. Cooper, J. H. Patrick, W. T. Mitchell and I. M. Patrick, all residents of Walton County, were called to the stand and testified that they knew Dalton and that they wouldn't believe him on oath in a court of justice.

Misses Laura Atkinson and Minnie Smith were called and denied Walton's testimony in regard to being in their company.

Dalton testified, when he was called by the State last week, that he had visited the factory basement with Miss Daisy Hopkins and that he frequently had seen Frank in his office with women.

An unassailable alibi was the object in view when the attorneys for Frank began the questioning of a long line of witnesses who were called to testify in regard to every known movement of Frank Saturday, April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was slain.

The testimony of Miss Hattie Hall was the first along this line. That of Alonzo Mann, office boy, was next.

That Frank did not do any work on the financial sheet Saturday forenoon was one of the most important declarations made by Miss Hall. She had testified at the Coroner's inquest that she assisted Frank in compiling this sheet, but she explained to Solicitor Dorsey that she was mistaken, and it was only one of the tabulations from which the financial sheet was being made that she had worked on.

Her testimony on this point strikes at the State's theory that Frank did the work in the forenoon.

Miss Hall also testified that Frank signified his desire to have his work for him at the factory in the afternoon and had asked Harry Gothelmer to come back to the factory in the afternoon, requests which the defense will claim establish conclusively that Frank was not arranging for the commission of any crime or wrongdoing Saturday afternoon.

The witness said that she left the factory first at 12 o'clock as the whistles were blowing, but that she forgot her umbrella and returned to Frank's office for it, noting that it was 12:02 as she left finally. She declared that she did not see Lemmie Quinn enter Frank's office. Conley testified that he asw Quinn enter the factory before the arrival of Monteen Stover or Mary Phagan. The Stover girl said she reached the office floor at 12:05 o'clock.

Miss Hall indignantly denied the imputation of Solicitor Dorsey that her salary had been raised as the result of the testimony she was giving. She said that it had been agreed when she entered the employ of Montag Bros. that she was to get an increase of salary August 1, and that she had been unable to get it before this time.

Wade Campbell, an inspector at the factory, came in for a rigorous grilling at the hands of Solicitor Dorsey. Campbell testified that his sister, Mrs. Arthur White, had told him she had seen a negro at the foot of the stairs on the first floor when she went into the factory at 12:30 o'clock.

Campbell Grilled On Affidavit.

"Don't you know that what she actually said was that she saw the negro at 12:50 when she left?" inquired the Solicitor.

Campbell denied that this was so. The Solicitor then showed Campbell an affidavit and asked if it was not his signature at the bottom. Campbell said that it looked like his writing, but that he would not say positively. He denied that he had made the statement in the affidavit in which he was quoted as saying his sister had told of seeing the negro as she left the factory.

The witness on his redirect examination testified that he had seen Conley reading in the factory several times after the crime. Conley said on the stand that he was unable to read, except for a few simple words.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

Over Three Hours To Compile Report.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant.

Q. Have you had occasion to go over the financial sheet of the National Pencil Company of the week of April 24 prepared by Leo M. Frank? A. I went over a copy of it.

Q. Have you also seen the factory record called the pencil sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you also furnished data necessary to make that sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state as an expert how long it would take to complete it?—A. I took each sheet, compiled it, and timed myself as to the length of time necessary. I prepared the sheet of the 24th day. It took me ten minutes.

Q. Were there any mistakes?—A. Yes, a little one—of one and one-half gross. It was hard to say whether it was my mistake or his.

Q. Now state the total time it took you?—A. A total of 191 minutes, or 3 hours and 11 minutes.

Q. Was that the quickest?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you took exactly the work that he did?—A. Yes; what I was told he did.

Q. That was steady work without interruption, wasn't it—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been an auditor?—A. Sixteen years.

Q. Have you an office here?—A. I am with the American Audit Company.

Q. That mistake occurred before you took up the sheet, did it not?—A. One mistake was made the Saturday before and one on Friday.

Q. Are those two trifling mistakes—a mistake of 50 cents and a gross and a half of pencils—the only mistakes you found?—A. Yes.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Pollard, this is rather an unusual assignment for you, is it not, to go over a man's business and undertake to state how long it takes him to do it?—A. No, I think not. Frequently we are called on to estimate the time it takes to do work in changing systems.

Q. Is it not true that a man can work his own books better than anyone else's books?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. How many times would a man have to multiply, divide and subtract in making up that sheet?—A. Well, 40 multiplications and 160 additions, and I can't guess on the rest.

The witness was excused and Miss Hattie Hall was called. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Q. What is your business?—A. Stenographer-bookkeeper at Montag Brothers.

Q. Do you ever go to the National Pencil Company?—A. When necessary.

Q. On Saturday, April 26, did you see Leo M. Frank?—A. About 10 o'clock at Montag Brothers.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he asked me if I could come over and do some work. I told him I didn't know, but thought I could.

Dorsey interrupted:

"I object to anything he said to her."

Arnold: "Your honor, it is part of res gestis in this case."

Dorsey: "Here is this dead girl. They would not let her show what she said at 12 o'clock and I can conceive of no principle of law that would let them show what this man said and not let her show what the deceased said."

Aimed to Show Conduct.

Arnold: "This is merely to show a course of conduct."

Judge Roan: "I can see no analogy between the two cases. I rather think you can ask the question."

Dorsey: "Well, this is a very important point, your honor, and we would like to give you some authorities."

Judge Roan: "All right."

Dorsey then read at length from the Eighty-fourth Georgia Report.

Judge Roan: "Do you expect to follow that question by showing that he had certain work to do and engaged her to do it?"

Arnold: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I will let you ask it."

Dorsey threw his book on the table and sat down, laughing. Arnold continued the questioning.

Q. When did you call him first?—A. He called me up before 10 o'clock and said he had work enough to do to keep him busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey: "Is your honor going to let that telephone conversation in?"

The Solicitor's objection was overruled.

Q. Miss Hall, did you recognize his voice?—A. I certainly did.

Q. What time did you see him that Saturday morning?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Had you worked for him before?—A. I had been accustomed to going over and helping him on Saturdays. I asked him if he was going to need me. He said, "Yes," that he had so much work to do that he would be busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey Calls Halt; Roan Sustains Him.

Dorsey interrupted. "You honor, are you going to let that in?"

Judge Roan: "I don't think I will."

Arnold: "Your honor, I wish you would let me argue for a moment. Even the State does not claim any crime was committed at that time. There is no reason in the world to suppose that the accused would not have told the truth at that time. I believe that if a part of the conversation is admissible, all of it is admissible. You must admit it all to explain part. You would do this young man an injustice to shut out this evidence of this day's program, when there was not the slightest motive to be otherwise than truthful."

"Mr. Dorsey has sought to show," continued Mr. Arnold, "that this financial sheet could have been made up in the morning. We are just trying to show that it was impossible. Now I will read you a decision in which I participated with the father of my good friend, the late Judge Dorsey. It was 24 years ago."

Rosser: "Are you that old, Mr. Arnold?"

Arnold: "Yes, I am 24."

"Dorsey: "That case has nothing to do with this one. That was a case where a man on trial for murder swore to a lie."

Arnold: "It was charged that it was a lie. We never did believe it."

Dorsey: "He was convicted."

Arnold: "Yes, he was convicted."

Judge Roan ruled: "Mr. Arnold, this young woman can show that she was called, what she was requested to do and what was shown her to be done. She can state how long she thinks it would take to finish that work. She can not state, however, what he told her over the telephone about what he expected to do."

Frank Leaves Court With Sheriff.

Arnold: "We want to note an exception to that."

Q. Miss Hall, what time did you go to Mr. Frank's office?—A. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock.

Q. Did you take dictation in his inner office, or in his outer office?—A. In the inner office.

Q. Where did you write it?—A. In the outer office.

At this point Leo Frank went out of the courtroom with Sheriff Mangum. Mr. Hooper jumped up and whispered to Mr. Arnold.

Arnold—Yes, I waived his presence.

Judge Roan—I excused the prisoner properly.

Hooper—I just wanted to know if the defense had waived his presence.

Q. Now, we only have ten orders here. See if they are the ones Frank handed you?—A. Yes. My initials are on them. They are the ones.

Q. Now, the orders are sometimes acknowledged as the first step?—A. Yes; in that case they were.

Q. Do you recall to whom Frank was talking that morning?—A. Yes, but I don't recall the names. A man and his son came in. Then there was Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. White.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. During this time was Mr. Frank working on this financial sheet or any other similar document?—A. He was not.

Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?—A. Not very.

Q. I will get you to look on this order book and see if those orders are entered.

The witness read the eleven orders from the order book.

Q. Now, is that your handwriting?—A. No; I think it is Mr. Frank's.

Q. Did you write any of these requisitions?—A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I understood Mr. Frank did.

Q. Were the requisitions made before or after the orders were put on the book?—A. After.

Left Factory At 12:02 P. M.

Q. Now look at these letters and see whether Frank dictated them?—A. Yes.

Q. How many?—A. Eight, and one he did not dictate.

Q. Did he sign them?—A. Yes, I took them to him after I had typed them.

Q. Did he do any work on that financial sheet while you were there?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Just as I got on my hat and started for the door I heard the whistle blow for noon.

Q. Is there a regular whistle that blows for 12 o'clock?—A. Yes, there are several whistles.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I got to the bottom of the steps and remembered that I had forgotten my umbrella. I went back and got it. It was two minutes past 12 o'clock as I passed the time clock.

Q. Did you see any little girl in the building?—A. I did not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you call Frank or Frank call you that Saturday morning?—A. I called him.

Q. He had a regular stenographer, didn't he?—A. They had a stenographer, but she didn't do but about one-third enough work so I had to go.

Q. Miss Hall, what were you receiving at that time?—A. Ten dollars and fifty cents a week.

Q. What are you getting now?—A. Fifteen dollars a week, and I want to explain——

Q. Never mind, just answer my questions. Didn't you state in a soda fountain last night that the raise came to you without asking for it after it was known that you were to be a witness?—A. Indeed, I did not. I don't go to soda fountains. I want to explain.

Attorney Arnold—Let her explain.

A. I insisted that they give me this raise on July 1, but they wouldn't give it to me until August 1.

Q. Did Frank come to Montag's before or after he called you up?—A. After.

Q. You are the one who called him up?—A. Yes.

Q. You did the insisting about going to his office?—A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you not swear at the Coroner's inquest that Frank left Montag's before you did?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. You acknowledged these orders with a postcard and letter?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote those between 10:30 and 12?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you state to the jury Frank left before you did?—A. I don't recall.

Q. How long would it take you to fill out the blank?—A. I never timed myself.

Talked Over Time With Office Boy

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would not take more than one minute?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you say Frank was at the office when you got there?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. Who came in while you were there?—A. Two men and three women.

Q. What time was it the office boy left?—A. 11:30.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner you could not tell the time?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you know now?—A. The boy told me.

Q. You talked it over with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when those people came in?—A. In the outer office.

Q. How long were you there when these people came in?—A. I do not recall.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner it

FRANK TRIAL WITNESS IS SURE, AT LEAST, OF ONE THING--A 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over.

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister," more than once—after that, it merely is "You, Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney: "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hang around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-hump-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes "hoot," doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you, speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejeculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise, let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record everything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?"

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

The Grand Climax.

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Augusta to Share Crop-Moving Fund

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—Albert S. Hatch, president of the Merchants' Bank and a member of the committee of the Augusta Clearing House Association, sent to Washington to confer with Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department, in regard to money with which to move the crops, has returned and announces that Augusta spoke for $600,000, which she will get if she wants it. Hatch said Augusta could have probably gotten more had she asked for it.

Georgia J. O. U. A. M. In Session at Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The nineteenth biennial convention of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics met here to-day with about 150 delegates, representing the various councils in the State, in attendance.

It is probable that the next meeting will go to Athens, and that Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected councilor to succeed Judge W. W. Shepard, of Savannah. O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, state treasurer, is assured of re-election.

Extra Police to Curb Thieves Bryan Day

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 12.—Expecting an unusual representation of pickpockets when William J. Bryan makes his chautauqua address here, August 28, the borough fathers, at their regular monthly council meeting, have taken decided action.

Secretary Williams was directed to ask Superintendent Groome to have the State constabulary here on Bryan day. The occasion is expected to draw a larger crowd than any circus day in the last 25 years.

Attacks on Dr. Harris Give Defense Good Day

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

"No man in the world could examine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of his profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor. His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.
"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled. Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga. — "My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

WONDERFUL HOW RESINOL CURED ITCHING HUMOR

New York, N. Y., May 19, 1913: —"I was taken with a terrible itching and burning in my hands. They would crack and bleed. I could not do my work. I had to walk the floors at night. I tried —— and ——, but no relief, until I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment—then I could go to sleep. The Resinol treatment is something wonderful, for if you could see my hands, you would never think that they were ever sore—they are so nice and soft, and I can do all my work now." (Signed) Mrs. Wm. Sutherland, 135 East 71st St.

For 18 years Resinol has been a doctor's prescription and household remedy for eczema, ringworm, pimples, dandruff, wounds, burns, sores and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. Trial free; Dept. 5-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Q. How long was it after those letters were dictated that you commenced writing?—A. Two minutes.

Q. Can you tell how long you were writing those letters?—A. No.

Q. When you were writing those letters, where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. After you finished, what did he do?—A. I took them in to him.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. He said he would put them in the envelopes and mail them.

Q. He said you need not wait?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get anything there Monday?—A. I got the timebook and some papers.

Q. The previous Saturday when you were over there, do you remember Frank working on the financial sheet that morning?—A. No; I helped him get up something about gross—I found afterward it was the average sheet.

made it up. I helped him by transferring some of the things to the sheet?"—A. Yes, but I thought it was the financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you state at the coroner's inquest that you helped him the Saturday before?—A. Yes.

Found Her Error Herself, She Says.

Q. When was it you discovered it was not the financial sheet?—A. I don't know, but I want you to know I discovered the mistake myself.

Q. Now, were you not at the factory the previous Saturday and helped him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not have that financial sheet before you at the Coroner's inquest, and did you not identify it?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you said he was working on the financial sheet that previous morning?—A. He was not.

Q. Did you not tell the Coroner's jury that you were in the outer office the entire time?—A. I don't know.

Q. Now explain how your mind underwent this change. You said then you were not in his office and now you say you were.—A. I was rattled before the Coroner, because I had never been in a courtroom before.

Q. Now, didn't you say in response to the question, "Do you know what a financial sheet is?" that you did?—A. But I was thinking of the average sheet.

Q. Now, what did you mean by telling the Coroner some of those girls came in for their pay and now saying the only one you know anything about came in for her coat?—A. I just forgot.

Q. Now, didn't Frank say that morning that he would not get up that sheet until Herbert Schiff came down and got up the necessary data?—A. Yes, he said he could not go on with his work until Schiff came down.

Q. You do know that Frank said positively he could not make up that sheet until Schiff had gotten up certain data?—A. He did not positively say so. He said he did not mind Mr. Schiff being off if he had done his work, but that he had not done his work.

Q. Miss Hall, didn't you swear before the Coroner's jury that you worked on this financial sheet which is written in ink the Saturday previous, and now to-day you swear it was this sheet which is written in pencil?—A. I did not. I was identifying the handwriting on that sheet.

Q. You said lots of people wrote slanting, and it was hard to identify?—A. Yes.

Q. While you were working in Frank's outer office, you said he was very quiet and you did not know what he was doing?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether he was working on the financial sheet or not?—A. Yes; I saw the papers on his desk that he was working on, and the financial sheet was not among them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Why did you tell Mr. Frank you had to get away at 12 o'clock?—A. He said something about wanting me to help him in the afternoon. I told him I had to get away at 12 o'clock, and I did get away at 12 o'clock.

Dalton's Prison Record Exposed.

Dorsey objected to the answer, but was overruled.

Miss Hall was excused and C. B. Dalton was recalled to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Who is Andrew Dalton?—A. A brother-in-law.

Q. With the same name?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is John Dalton?—A. He is my brother.

Q. Weren't you three sent to the chaingang at the special term of the Walton County Superior Court in 1894?—A. No.

Q. You were not?—A. I was, but the others paid out.

Q. What did you steal?—A. A chop hammer.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to two more charges?—A. That is the only time I ever went to the chaingang. I don't know how long I served, but I was pardoned in March.

Attorney Arnold moved that the witness' reply in reference to being pardoned be struck from the records.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to three charges all at the same time? And that the sentence was concurrent on the three charges?—A. All I took was a chop hammer. One of the other boys took a plow stock.

Q. At the February term of 1899, were you not indicted for stealing a bale of cotton?—A. For helping.

Q. Were you found guilty?—A. I was fined $146, which I paid.

Q. After that, did you not go into Gwinnett County and steal?—A. I was indicted for stealing some corn, but I was found not guilty.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long since you were in trouble?—A. Eighteen years.

Dorsey to Recall Daisy Hopkins.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is it not a fact that there are now four indictments against you in Walton County for selling liquor?—A. If there are I don't know it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they let you get out of the county and were glad to get rid of you?—A. I have been back there every year.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know that Daisy Hopkins knows Leo Frank?—A. I do.

Q. How do you know?—A. She told me she knew him, and then I saw her talking to him.

Arnold interrupted: "I object to what she said."

"That's all right; then," Dorsey replied. "I will recall her."

Dalton was excused and the defense began an attack on his character with witnesses from Walton County.

B. S. Cooper, the first witness called, was accompanied by a small boy of 6. He held the boy on his lap while he testified on the witness stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A farmer.

Q. How long have you been in Walton County?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

Wouldn't Believe Him Under Oath.

At this point C. B. Dalton was called for but could not be found. Dorsey said he would admit that the witness was speaking of the Dalton who had testified against Frank. Hooper was excused and J. H. Patrick was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. In Walton County.

Q. What do you do?—A. Carpenter and bailiff.

Q. Have you seen Dalton here this morning?—A. I shook hands with him.

Q. Do you know his general character for truth and veracity and is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him on oath? A. No.

The witness was excused and W. T. Mitchell was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him this morning? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and I. M. Hamilton was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, Atlanta, a woman apparently 35 years of age, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the Empire Printing Company.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, for two days.

Denies Dalton's Story of Strolls.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever walk home with him from the Busy Bee Cafe on Forsyth street?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you ever with him around the National Pencil Company?—

Dorsey interrupted: "I object," he said. "The witness said nothing that reflected on this woman."

Arnold: "It was a reflection for him to say that he was with her."

The objection was sustained.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long have you known Dalton?—A. About six months.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. I have been in his company three times.

The witness was excused, and Mrs. Minnie Smith called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. National Pencil Company.

Q. Are you the Mrs. Smith who lives at No. 148 South Pryor street?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the only Mrs. Smith at that address?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. No.

The witness was excused. Alonzo Mann, the office boy at the National Pencil Factory, was then called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the National Pencil Company as an office boy.

Q. How long have you been there? A. Since April 1 of this year.

Q. Where do you stay when you are not at work?—A. Right outside the office.

Left Frank and Miss Hall in Office.

Q. How late do you work on Saturdays?—A. I had only been there two Saturdays before the murder.

Q. You don't know how late you stayed?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave the office Memorial Day?—A. At 11:30.

Q. Who did you leave there?—A. Miss Hall and Mr. Frank.

Q. Do you recall what you did that morning?—A. No.

Q. Did you phone Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes. Mr. Frank told me to, but I could not get him

Q. How late did you stay those other Saturdays?—A. 3:30 to 4 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank bring any women there and buy them drinks?—A. No.

Q. Who do you recall seeing there that day?—A. Mr. Holliday, Mr. Irby, Mr. McCrary and Mr. Darley.

Q. Can you recall anybody else?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Corinthia Hall?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you see a man come in to see about his boy?—A. I don't know.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. What time did Mr. Frank get there that morning?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Did he go out?—A. One time, as I recall.

Q. Do you know how long he was gone?—A. No, I can't remember.

The witness was excused and Wade Campbell was called.

Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where are you employed?—A. I have been at the National Pencil Company for a year and a half.

Q. Do you recall a conversation with Mrs. White the Monday following the murder?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me what she said?—A. She said that as she went into the factory at 12 o'clock she saw a negro sitting there. She said that when she came down he was not there, and she heard voices, but could not tell where.

Q. Were you at the factory Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. About 9:35.

Q. Did you see Frank?—A. Yes; I went right to his office.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes; I was jollying him and he was jollying me.

Q. Were you on the fourth floor Tuesday morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley up there? A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you board with Mr. Darley? A. I did.

Q. Where were you Saturday night of the murder?—A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you go to the Bijou that night with Mr. Darley?

"I object," said Rosser.

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Darley is a married man with five children, is he not?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Miss Dixon that night?

Rosser—I object.

Judge Roan sustained him.

Q. You reported to Darley on April 28 that your sister had seen a negro in the pencil factory on Saturday, about 10 o'clock?—A. Yes; he sent me to see my sister.

Q. What did she tell you?—A. She said she saw a negro man on the first floor. She said she heard some indistinct voices as she went in.

Q. You saw that blood on the second floor?—A. I saw what they said was blood.

Q. How did it look?—A. I didn't notice it close enough to tell about it

Grilled Concerning Statement to Dorsey.

Q. Where do you work?—A. As an inspector at the National Pencil Company.

Q. You made a statement on May 12?—A. I made a statement to you. I don't remember the date.

Q. Didn't you state that your sister said she saw the negro as she was coming out?—A. I did not.

Q. You deny it, then?—A. I do.

Q. Is this your signature?—A. It looks very much like it.

Q. You can't swear that this is your signature?—A. No, I would not swear it.

Q. You say that you don't know whether that is your signature?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you deny making this statement?—A. I told you I did.

Q. Did you not read over this statement and make certain corrections?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not say in this statement that your sister went there at 12:30 and could not see her husband and went back?—A. I don't know.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. How did you come to go to Dorsey's office?—A. I received a subpena.

Q. You thought you had to go?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you know that it was not worth the paper it was written on?—A. No.

Wanted To See Corrections Made.

Q. Did you just point out these corrections, or did you wait and see that they were made?—A. I think I waited.

Q. Who was there?—A. Starnes, Campbell and Dorsey.

Q. Did they all ask you questions?—A. Yes.

Q. All of these 21 pages are your statement?—A. Yes.

Q. You were asked all of these questions?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you asked at the time you were in the office if anyone came in and did you answer "No"?—A. Yes.

Q. You answered that someone came in to get their pay?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know this negro Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. After this murder do you recall seeing him reading newspapers?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the fourth floor.

Q. How many times?—A. Twice.

Q. Is it anything unusual to see spots on the metal room floor?—A. No.

Q. Have you seen the place where Conley said he found the body?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Where was Conley sitting when he was reading the paper?—A. By the elevator.

Q. Where was he the second time?—A. In the rear of the building.

Q. What paper was he reading?—A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he was reading about the crime?—A. No.

Q. Was it an extra?—A. I think so.

Q. You knew Conley could write?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not report it to the officers?—A. No.

Q. Did Frank know he could write?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did you see him writing?—A. In the boxroom.

Q. Did you ever see him writing with a pencil?—A. Yes.

Q. Who did you tell what your sister told you?—A. Mr. Darley.

Q. How often did you see those spots in the metal room?—A. Occasionally.

Q. How often have you seen those spots in the hall?—A. Oh, very often.

Q. Did you see the spots where those chips were taken up?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw those spots everywhere, what everybody said was blood, and yet you tell the jury you didn't pay any attention to it?—A. Yes.

Q. Other people got down and looked at them, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Rosser interrupted.

"I object to what other people said and saw. It is utterly immaterial and irrelevant," he said.

"We want to show," said Mr. Hooper, interrupting, "that this man was interested and that he went out to see his sister about the negro, and yet he came back there and was in no way interested."

"I think you can ask questions along that line," said the court.

"Well, we want to record an objection," said Rosser.

Q. Where and when have you ever seen on that second floor anything that looked like that spot?—A. I did not look close enough at it to know.

Q. When did you see other spots like it on the floor of the metal room?—A. There were other spots, but I don't know whether they were like that spot or not.

Q. Did you talk to your brother-in-law about what your sister said?—A. He told me about it.

Court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

NURSES' CLUB TO THROW OPEN NEW HOME

Informal Reception Arranged for Tuesday Afternoon and Evening in Permanent Quarters.

The Atlanta Registered Nurses' Association will formally open its new home in the Herbert Apartments, No. 246 Courtland avenue, Wednesday afternoon with an informal reception. The entertainment will continue into the evening hours.

Several months ago the registered nurses organized a permanent club to establish a central directory and eventually to secure and maintain a nurses' home. The membership includes over 100 graduate nurses who will, as a body, seek to protect the public and promote good-fellowship among the members. The home has been comfortablye furnished and will accommodate twenty nurses.

The registered nurses have federated with the City Federation. The association has as its president Miss Kamesky; first vice president, Miss Berta Thompson; second vice president, Miss Caroline Norton; recording secretary; Miss Florence Attwell corresponding secretary Miss J. M. Candlish; treasurer, Miss Mamie Mobley, and auditor, Miss E. F. Tupman.

The committee work has been divided as follows: Membership, Miss Frances Patton, chairman; register, Miss Alberta Dozier, chairman; nominations, Miss E. B. Whatley, chairman; home, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg, chairman; auditing, Miss E. F. Tupman, chairman; publicity, Miss C. M. Johnson, chairman, and Miss Virginia Gibbs. The registrar will be Mrs. Theodosia Wardell.

The advisory board is composed of the following: Dr. Charles Boynton, Dr. William Perrin Nicolson, Dr. C. W. Summerall, J. B. Paulin, Dr. C. W. Strickler, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Fred Hodgson, Mrs. W. L. Peel and Mrs. H. E. W. Palmer.

The association has sent out hundreds of invitations and will be assisted in receiving by the advisory board, the officers of the association and the following superintendents of the hospitals of Atlanta: Miss Phebeck, of Grady Hospital; Miss McGlynn, of the Noble Sanitarium; Miss Morton, of the Davis-Fischer Sanitarium; Miss Morgan, of the Tabernacle Infirmary; Miss Thomas, of the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium, and Miss Albert Dozier, Miss J. M. Candlish, Miss Virginia Gibbs, Miss Mamie Mobley, Miss E. B. Whatley, Miss G. S. Tupman, Mrs. Mollie Rosenberg and Miss C. M. Johnson.

Italy Adds to Its Seacoast Guard

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Aug. 12.—Thirteen new torpedo boat destroyers have been ordered by the Italian Admiralty, it was learned to-day.

This addition to the navy is made necessary by the extension of seacoast which Italy must guard in Africa.

GILMER TO ELECT SHERIFF.

ELLIJAY.—Sheriff J. H. Penland, of Gilmer County, having been appointed a United States Deputy Marshal and having resigned the office of Sheriff, the Ordinary has called a special election for August 28 to fill the unexpired term. Ex-Sheriff Bob Milton and J. H. Ray, present Tax Receiver, are the opposing candidates.

THERE HAS BEEN NO DULL SEASON OVER OUR LINES

Economy and efficiency are so combined in the Atlanta Telephone service that business houses which use both systems instruct their employees to route all possible calls by preference through our exchange.

No Hostile Feeling Shown Envoy Lind

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy sent a reassuring note to President Wilson to-day, saying not the slightest antagonism to Mr. Lind's presence has been shown in Mexico City.

LIND CAUTIOUSLY HUNTS KEY TO SITUATION

Studies Conditions in Mexico While Administration Awaits Report Before Planning.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent to Mexico City by President Wilson, is making himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Mexico. The watchword of the present situation is caution, as Mr. Lind and the attaches of the United States Embassy fear that a hasty step will cause complete failure of the Ambassador's mission.

It was reported that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, had contrived to arrange an official visit at the National Palace to-day. It was assumed that he might then present to President Huerta or Foreign Minister Aidape the note given him by Envoy Lind.

Mr. Lind called at the embassy again to-day. He refuses to say anything about his instructions from Washington.

Hostile Acts Are Lacking.

To the layman it seems that the Mexican situation is standing still rather than showing improvement, although to official eyes the lack of any direct hostile action by Mexico or Mexicans is a good omen. The Mexican people are apathetic and conservatives believe that President Huerta virtually stood alone in his defiance of the United States. Howeyer, allowance is made for the Latin temperament. If anti-American feeling flares up on a grand scale, it may sweep the republic.

Claiming the Government has been misrepresented, President Huerta has placed a strict censorship upon the cable line. Even telegrams to the United States State Department-pass under this careful inquiry.

N. A. Jennings, correspondent for the Hearst papers, and Marvin Ferree, another American newspaper man, released from prison last night after being detained 24 hours, were kept under close surveillance to-day. Both feared they would be expelled under the undesirable alien law.

Embassy Guard Declined.

The arrival at Vera Cruz of more United States warships has caused bitter comment in the Mexican press. The commandante of the rurales has offered to provide a permanent guard about the United States Embassy, but Mr. O'Shaughnessy informed the Mexican Government that the Stars and Stripes provide enough protection.

Mr. Lind, despite warnings of his friends, walks abroad in the streets or rides in an open automobile, making no effort to hide his identity. At the Hotel Lascurain he mingles freely with the other guests.

Mrs. Lind, who suffered a slight indisposition upon her arrival here, was reported better to-day.

President Waits Message From Lind Before Acting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—President Wilson to-day awaited word from Mexico City relative to the success of former Governor Lind and his mission of mediation before announcing, or even formulating any definite Mexican policy. Beyond the proposals which Governor Lind carried, it is understood that the administration has no plans, and that no further steps will be taken until the President's envoy reports on his success in dealing with Huerta.

It is considered likely that Governor Lind will transmit President Wilson's message to President Huerta through Charge O'Shaughnessy either to-day or tomorrow.

It is reported the Senate is considering holding an executive session to discuss the Mexican situation to discover the consensus of opinion in the Upper House concerning the steps taken by the administration in dealing with the matter.

Cruiser Pittsburg Sent Back to Mexican Port.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Aug. 12.—The armored cruiser Pittsburg, which had started for San Diego from Guayamas, turned back to-day to remain at Guayamas pending further instructions from Washington. The Pittsburg was ordered back by wireless.

The supply ship Glacier, which was to have left Guayamas to-day with refugees, was ordered to remain at the Mexican port indefinitely.

Youth Fined Heavily On Flirting Charge

W. R. Livermore, No. 47 Trinity avenue, a bookkeeper, feels convinced that mashing is a costly pastime.

Recorder Pro Tem Preston fined him $25.75 Tuesday for an affront to two girls, sisters, in Trinity avenue, and also gave him 21 days in the stockade for violating the probation ordinance. Livermore admitted that he was intoxicated. He had been on probation since last May for drinking.

Both girls appeared in court.

BILL PROTECTING HEIFER CALVES IS KILLED

House Wastes Time on Measure That Might Have Been Given Child Labor Act.

Take the child slaves, shackle them,
Throttle them if they laugh;
Enslave the women if you will,
But save my darling calf.

That was the burden of the song Monday afternoon in the Georgia House of Representatives—the same House of Representatives that has persistently refused to consider any measure to relieve the condition of the thousands of child-slaves in the State—when the legislators, for two hours, discussed solemnly and earnestly a bill designed to protect the heifer calves of the State from the persecutions of the butcher and the farmer by prohibiting the killing of the "innocent, pure-eyed little things"—that is what one member called them—until they have reached the mature age of 2 years.

Rhetorical thunderbolts were hurled by the champions of the calves at the heads of those who were determined that the last calf should be executed, to be met by bursting bombs of metaphor that shook the rafters and penetrated even to the farthest confines of the gallery; epigrammatic skyrockets threw their trails of fiery language into the running gears of the pinwheels of logic; the defenders of the calf hurled Biblical passages into the camp of the veal eaters, and the bloodthirsty members who wanted blood, red blood, delved into the poets and flung quotation after quotation into the very teeth of the advancing army of calfdom.

Bill Bleated—Then Died.

And after two hours the calf bill poked its head up through the maze of oratory and near-oratory, through the mud of condemnation and the whitewash of appreciation, gave one plaintive, despairing bleat, and died, 91 votes to 73.

Members who had viewed with equanimity and magnificent self-control the smothering of measures to aid the child-slaves felt impelled to rise in their might when the rights of the calf were assailed. Here's how some of them felt:

Mr. Conner, of Spalding—"If this bill is not passed, in five years cows will be as scarce as hens' teeth."

Mr. Ennis, of Baldwin—"Saving the calves is no laughing matter. If you had seen the slaughter of these innocent little things as I have you would vote aye."

Mr. Lloyd, of Newton—"This bill is the worst kind of class legislation. Why can't the bull calf have the same right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness that is granted the heifer calf? A man's calves are his private property and should not be regulated."

Mr. Culpepper, of Meriwether—"Why is it these men want to protect the heifer calves and allow the bull calves to go to their doom, when it is a fact that the female of the species is more deadly than the male?"

Mr. Picquet, of Richmond—"The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and it applies to calves as well as human beings. It makes my heart bleed to see these innocent little calves cruelly, brutally slaughtered to provide a veal eater's holiday."

"Prodigal" Is Provided For.

Mr. Shuptrine, of Chatham—"The bill should not pass under any circumstances. We have the Bible on our side, for it distinctly ordered that the fatted calf be killed for the prodigal son."

Mr. Spence, of Carroll—"I am outraged and indignant. This bill is the most diabolical bill I have ever seen. I vote NO!"

Mr. Wimberly, of Bibb—"To kill this bill means that the slaughter of the innocents will be continued, and what man, be he ever so strong, can endure the sight of the wild-eyed, bleating calf being led to the slaughter? There are 365,000 calves butchered in Georgia every year. If they were saved, think of the number of cows we would have in four years and the lowing herds that would wind slowly over the lea! Think of the rivers and lakes of milk, and if we can raise enough strawberries, think of the strawberries and cream we could have."

Mr. Berry, of Whitfield—"I arise to explain that I am not going to explain my vote."

The bill was introduced by Nelson, of Clayton, and favorably reported by the Committee on General Agriculture, of which Kimbrough, of Harris, is chairman.

Crusade Against Short Weight Ice Peddlers Pushed

The campaign against short weight ice peddlers has taken a more aggressive turn. Chief Beavers has detailed Policeman Holley to assist Inspector of Weights and Measures Buchanan in making cases against offenders.

As a result of this increased activity two negro peddlers were tried and fined by Recorder Pro Tem Preston. Five more cases are set for trial Tuesday afternoon.

The crusade, it is believed, will save Atlantans hundreds of dollars during the remainder of the summer. Inspector Buchanan and Officer Holley got direct evidence against the peddlers by following them and weighing the ice just after it had been weighed by the peddlers and delivered to the consumer.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

Saves Girl From Injury in Runaway

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—J. P. Doughty, Jr., a prominent cotton man, proved himself a hero in a runaway here yesterday when he saved Miss Frankie Rubenstein, an attractive Augusta girl, from serious injury. Miss Rubenstein was driving up Broad street when her horse became unmanageable. Doughty attempted to grab the reins, but was unsuccessful, and then he seized a wheel. He was thrown, but he held firm and soon climbed into the buggy and secured the lines, bringing the horse to a stop.

'Sleepiest Man' Is Looking for a Job

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—William O'Leary, described by his wife as the sleepiest man in Chicago, was wide awake to-day and out looking for a job. O'Leary appeared before Judge Sabath to answer charges brought by his wife. She said he had slept all the time during the last two weeks, except the few minutes each day which he spent in eating.

"If you'll kiss your two little babies and promise to wake up and get a job in the next two weeks, I'll let you go," said the judge.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $843 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 281 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

SECRET ORDER IN CONTEST FOR BIG PRIZE

Georgian's Want Ad Offer Arouses Enthusiasm Among Organizations and Individuals.

"Our lodge has been planning to move into new quarters for some time, but we have never had quite enough money to fit up a lodgeroom properly," said a prominent Atlanta secret order member to the Want Ad Man Tuesday. "I talked it over with several friends last night, and we're going out to win that $1,000 first prize in your Want Ad Contest."

"Good luck to you," said the Want Ad Man. "Pitch in and win. And even if you don't land first, that $500 worth of furniture for second prize will go a long way toward making your lodgeroom comfortable."

Several organizations, including churches, lodges and charitable societies, have announced their intention of entering The Georgian Want Ad Contest, rounding up want ads by the thousand and rolling up enough votes to win. The women are especially enthusiastic. They are always workers in their churches.

Individual Prizes.

Individuals, too, are taking on renewed interest with the announcement of the complete prize list. The automobile for the first grand prize and the tour to California for two persons, all expenses paid, will be the goal of every worker. But there is consolation for those who fail to win first or second, for five prizes are offered in each of four classes—men, women, boys and girls—and these prizes include motorcycles, player pianos, bicycles, watches, diamonds and other articles worth trying for.

The Want Ad Man is in his office, fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, every day until 5 o'clock. On Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturdays he remains at his desk until 8 o'clock at night, and he is anxious to have a heart-to-heart chat with every contestant and prospective contestant. He will give every aid possible, explain all details, show how success is to be had, and give every contestant the benefit of his experience. Every contestant should see him this week.

Pretty Woman Aids Restaurant Bandits

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Assisted by a pretty young woman, two automobile bandits to-day raided the cafe of George Angelica, obtained jewelry from Angelica worth $1,150 and $75 in cash.

Angelica was counting his money when a young man and young woman entered the rear door. He refused to serve them because it was after closig hours, but the young woman pleaded so prettily that he went to the ice box for a bottle of champagne. When he turned about he faced a large revolver and another young man.

Slaying Ends Feud Of North Carolinans

ALEXANDER, N. C., Aug. 12—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would have been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

Spooning Couple Sit On Turtle; All Move

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 12.—A young couple, strolling on Sullivan's Island became fatigued. Why not sit on that overturned boat over there? They did. But the "boat" moved. She shrieked and the "boat" moved faster. It was a 600-pound turtle asleep on the beach. The turtle carried six men to the water. In its nest were found 200 eggs.

Spooning couples on Sullivan's Island now carry lanterns.

Mourners Forget Corpse When 3 Are Killed at Funeral

MACON, Aug. 12.—The preacher, a deacon and one of the women mourners were killed in a shooting affair at a negro funeral at Round Oak, in Jones County, late yesterday afternoon.

The preacher stopped the services, upon hearing pistol shots near the church, and rushed out to quell the disorder. He was shot just as he stepped out of the doorway. The other two were killed in a general shooting affray that followed. The negro minister was T. M. Howard, of Macon.

In the excitement the funeral was forgotten, and the corpse lay in the church all night, but this morning another preacher was secured and the interment took place.

Sheriff Roberts went to Round Oak early this morning when news of the affair reached him at Grays.

Must Pay Alimony Or Serve Jail Term

MACON, Aug. 12.—D. F. Arnold, a contractor, has been given an extension to September 5, on or before which date he must pay $285 alimony to his wife or go to jail. When arraigned before Judge Mathews on a contempt charge because he had allowed the alimony to become in arrears, Arnold asked for more time, and the judge allowed him 27 more days. He is under order of the court to pay Mrs. Arnold $75 a month.

Two other Macon men have been put in jail in the last 30 days for not paying alimony.

24 Factories Take Space for Exhibits

Only seven days remain for exhibitors to lease space in the permanent manufacturers' exposition, to be held in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Twenty-four manufacturers have already contracted.

Tuesday the committee in charge visited the various manufacturers in the city. Meetings will be held each day until next Tuesday.

On each floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building occupied by the exposition, telephones and desk space will be provided for the transaction of business. A competent man will be employed to show visitors around.

Georgia Girl Bathers Startle Charleston

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12.—Two perfectly attractive girls from Georgia, it is said, have made surf bathing on Sullivan's Island more popular than ever by their somewhat advanced style of ocean garb. They wear men's suits, natty affairs, with stripes about the shoulders and knees.

Sullivan's Islanders say they never saw any handsomer or more becoming men's bathing suits than these.

Kansas Heat Wave Unchecked by Rain

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 12.—New heat records were reported to-day from several cities in Kansas. Showers in some parts of Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas failed to break the general wave of heat that has gripped this section of the country more than a week.

At Great Bend, Kans., a maximum temperature of 110 was reported yesterday. Joplin, Mo., reported 106 and Oklahoma City 102.

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER'S NEW HOME IS DEDICATED; MANY NOTED MEN SPEAK

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Fifteen thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles, including city and county officials, men of the cloth and members of the leading civic and fraternal organizations, witnessed yesterday the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone and raising the California Bear Flag at the new home of The Los Angeles Examiner, now in course of construction.

These ceremonies were preceded by a great parade throughout the downtown streets, which acted as the escort of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor H. H. Rose to the new building site.

In the speakers' stand were leaders of the civic and religious life in Los Angeles, while in the grandstand was a brilliant assemblage.

The ceremonies were held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, and Ernest Ingold, president of the club, introduced James R. H. Wagner, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Charles Edward Bock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, offered prayer. Mr. Wagner presented the Bear Flag to The Examiner from the people of Southern California. Arthur W. Kinny, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, made the speech of acceptance. The Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Los Angeles, made an address, and the Rev. Father George Donahoo, representing the Right Rev. Thomas J. Conary, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, spoke.

Silver Trowel Given Mr. Hearst.

Douglas White, of the Advertising Club, presented a silver trowel to Mayor Rose, who officially laid the cornerstone and then presented the trowel to Mr. Hearst. Dr. Sigmund Hechtal, rabbi of the B'Nai Brith Congregation, made the closing remarks.

It was in acknowledging the gift of the trowel from Mayor Rose that Mr. Hearst delivered his address, in which he voiced his confidence in the great future of Los Angeles and Southern California. The various speakers paid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to The Examiner's influence in the expanding progress and prosperity of Southern California.

A chorus of several hundred voices rendered patriotic music.

Mr. Hearst said in his address:

I thank you most heartily on behalf of the members of the Los Angeles Examiner staff and on my own behalf for this beautiful memento and for the generous sentiments which have accompanied it. It is a pleasant thing for us to to feel that we are here among so many friends, and it is also a pleasant thing for us to feel, as we all do feel, a sincere reciprocal friendship for the citizens of Los Angeles and a deep devotion to the best interests of this great city.

Notable Occasion for Paper.

This is a notable occasion for us of The Examiner. It marks a milestone in the progress of the paper. It is made doubly memorable by the participation of our Mayor, and by the attendance of so many distinguished citizens. Yet with all its importance and significance it is only one of the many occasions which we gratefully remember where you have kindly encouraged our efforts and stimulated us to further endeavor.

Under such encouragement and stimulus The Examiner has grown until it is one of the biggest and best of all my publications. Certainly there is no publication of mine from Los Angeles to London in the success of which I take a greater pride and pleasure.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner first because I am a Californian and take pleasure in the success of everything Californian. (Applause.)

I was not born in Los Angeles, but I was born in California.

A man is a Los Angelan, no matter on what street of Los Angeles he is born or lives, and a man is a Californian no matter in what part of California he is born or lives.

Bound Together Closely.

We Californians are learning more and more that we are all bound together by the firm bonds of fraternity and that the combined success of all as individuals make the complete success of all as a community. We are learning that a friendly rivalry does not mean a foolish jealousy; that the fullest achievement is through co-operation, and that whatever operates for the benefit of California operates for the benefit of all of us as Californians.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner, too, because I realize that Los Angeles is destined to become, and is fast becoming, one of the greatest cities in the world. (Applause.)

I want my system of publications to be essentially a national institution, and to be national it must have representation in Los Angeles as adequate as in any of the greatest cities of the nation.

Finally, I take pleasure and pride in the success of The Examiner because Los Angeles is not only a leader in material development, but a leader in ethical and intellectual development—a pioneer in political progress.

What are as yet only ideals even in many of the most advanced localities of the world are actualities in Los Angeles.

What are dreaded as threatening theories in conservative centers are established as practical and beneficial facts in this progressive community.

Conservatism a Failing.

The older sections of this country and of every country are hampered and handicapped in their development by also-called conservatism which is too often nothing more than sheer selfishness or inertness.

The phrase "conservatism" is made to cover a multitude of failings.

The lack of imagination to foresee, the lack of energy to attempt, the lack of courage to act, the lack of ability to achieve are all cloaked under that convenient word "conservatism."

Conservatism is the attribute of age. Energy, enthusiasm, courage, confidence and conviction are the characteristics of youth and strength. It is these that have wrought the miracle of Los Angeles.

In New York the citizens are still struggling vainly for that first essential of electoral reform—the direct nomination.

In Los Angeles you have possessed this power long and employed it well. In the East intrenched privilege still is declaring against the awful possibilities of the recall. For years you have exercised that function of popular government justly and judiciously.

In many localities the citizens are timidly hesitating to adopt woman suffrage. You have not only proved the feasibility of their right, but have demonstrated the definite benefit of it.

Noted Political Achievements.

You have made universal suffrage a fact and popular government a reality. You have exercised the initiative and referendum wisely and temperately.

You have divorced your local city government from national politics and have made it what it should be—a business institution conducted for the business benefit of the stockholders, the citizens.

You have brought water from the cool, clear streams of the distant mountains, undefiled, instead of collecting it from the poisoned and polluted puddles of the populated districts.

You have put your public money honestly and intelligently into great public works instead of into the pockets of greedy promoters and corrupt politicians. You are invading confidently and completely the field of public ownership in spite of the forebodings and forbiddings of interested public service corporations.

You have disproved all the arguments of retained corporation attorneys and dissipated all the opposition of paid corporation politicians.

And behold!

Strides Bring Prosperity.

You have prospered incomparably in spite of your bold advances and striking innovations; nay more, my friends, you have prospered because of them.

In the favoring physical atmosphere of this country, trees and fruits grow big and in the favoring moral and spiritual atmosphere of this community human institutions grow to greatness.

I am truly proud and pleased to have a newspaper here to do its share in the development of this Great city, to play its part in the progress of this great State. I am happy, too, to have a newspaper system to sow the seeds of progress in other parts of the nation and to cultivate it there so that it may take root and flourish and blossom and bear fruit.

My devout wish is that Los Angeles may ever continue to be a leader in the moral and material development of the country; in the economic and political progress of the nation and that The Examiner may be a potent factor in this development, an effective force in this progress—a cornerstone in the splendid structure of Californian achievement.

Tribute Paid to Examiner.

Excerpts from the speeches of prominent Los Angelans follow:

MAYOR H. H. ROSE—The construction of the wonderful building is one of the greatest things that was ever done for a city the size of Los Angeles. A building over 300 feet long and large in proportion, devoted to the uses of one newspaper, in the city of Los Angeles is indeed a magnificent enterprise. While this is the first time I have had occasion to lay the cornerstone of a building, except, maybe, a rough log hut or a stone hut in the mountains, I hope I may have occasion to use these trowels for purposes like this many, many times during my administration.

DOUGLAS WHITE, representing the Advertising Club of Los Angeles—The advertising clubs of the Pacific Coast have been extremely successful in their work up to this time. Every movement needs a leader, and so has the movement for truth in advertising on the Pacific Coast. However, when we entered on this movement it already possessed a leader, for 25 years ago, or about that time, in the city of San Francisco, a publisher arose who made the plain statement that no matter what the circulation of his paper might be, that circulation would be given truthfully and honestly to the people who bought space. That publisher was William Randolph Hearst. From that time up to the present, in all the papers which he has owned and published, he has carried out that same idea of honesty and truth in his advertising, because in the circulation depends the sale of advertising.

THE REV. GEORGE DONAHOE, representing the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty, of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles—What attaches importance to this occasion and to the building that is now laboriously rising here is the fact that this building is destined to become a great center of newspaper activity in our gloriously growing city. As the mission of The Examiner goes forward the power of The Examiner grows stronger. So briefly, then, this is my good wish, first in behalf of us all, newspaper readers of Southern California, that this building which we to-day with ceremony officially begin, may always be to us a source of information, and for the great newspaper genius who honors this occasion with his presence our one hope and good wish and prayer is that the influence, the great influence that he so surely holds—that it may ever be devoted to works of fighting evil in high places, defending the weak and forwarding sound morality the world over.

DR. SIGMUND HECHT, rabbi of the B'nai Brith congregation—In my own and in the name of those whom I have the honor to represent, I bring my meed of congratulations and encouragement and cheer, first of all to those who are primarily affected by this event, to that honored head of this gigantic enterprise, to that man nationally honored for the purity of his character, for the sincerity of his purposes, for the directness of his intentions, for his ability and for the policy with which he inspired The Los Angeles Examiner to favor none and be fair to all—William Randolph Hearst. The Los Angeles Examiner—under God may it grow and prosper and be a power in the development and in the uplift of our glorious country.

ARTHUR W. KINNEY, president of The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce—The people of Southern California offer The Examiner their sincere congratulations upon this memorable occasion which marks an epoch in its wonderful career in our great city. It has always held an unbounded faith in the marvelous destiny of our Southwestern metropolis and it has ever backed up this faith by striving for everything that might contribute to the prosperity of our people. It has, indeed, been one of the sturdy sentinels at this far Western outpost of American idealism. Long ago it enunciated a policy of civic and industrial progress that must appeal to every person who has the welfare of our city at heart—a policy which, if pursued, must hasten to the unfolding of the great movement that is destined to make our Southwest empire world famed.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

Charges Speaker Burwell With Breaking Promise to Bring His Measures to Vote.

A tilt in which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

Shakes Finger at Holtzclaw.

The clash between McCrory and Holtzclaw came during the consideration of the Western and Atlantic Commission bill. Mr. Holtzclaw objected to a motion to dispense with the reading of the bill when the House went into committee of the whole, and Mr. Crory, who was standing near shook a menacing finger at the Houston County Representative and said:

"Holtzclaw, you are trying to kill time to prevent my bill coming to a vote. You had better look out!"

Mr. Holtzclaw was in conversation with a member at the time. He glanced at Mr. McCrory, but made no reply.

The failure of the House to take action on the McCrory bill Monday kills the measure for the rest of the session, inasmuch as the Senate has served notice that it will not consider any House bill passed after Monday.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

THIN FOR YEARS—"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. 7 MEN STUNNED BY EXPLOSION OF AIR TANK

Hurled Twenty Feet Against Wall, Pratt Laboratory Engineer Is Badly Cut.

W. H. Hutchins, No. 152 Confederate avenue, assistant engineer at the N. P. Pratt Laboratory, No. 88 Auburn avenue, was blown twenty feet against the side of the building Monday morning about 4:30 o'clock when a compressed air tank exploded while Hutchins and half a doz negro workmen were filling it.

The negroes were also thrown against the walls, but none was injured.

Hutchins received several small cuts about his head and face, and was severely jarred. His key ring, which was attached to his belt, was blown off. It was found 50 feet from where the explosion occurred.

The air tanks in the laboratory are about five feet long and two feet in circumference, and are used in the bottling operations. Four of them were being filled under the direction of Hutchins when the accident happened.

The explosion shook buildings a block away, and was heard a quarter of a mile. The noise and jar awoke practically every person in the neighborhood. Many parties rushed to the building expecting to find workmen dead or seriously injured. All of the men in the plant were slightly stunned and were just regaining their feet when the first of the rescuers arrived.

Police Sergeant Hewett, who was more than a quarter of a mile away, at Piedmont avenue and Houston street, heard the explosion and went to the factory. He took charge of the situation and sent Hutchins home. The negroes returned to their work.

Fires Bullets Into Bodies of Dead Men

TRENTON, TENN., Aug. 12.—Armed with two automatic pistols, J. A. Alford, a prominent citizen of Rutherford, shot and killed W. F. Coulter and his son, Harry Coulter, two prominent lawyers of this place. After the Coulters had fallen, Alford fired several bullets into their lifeless bodies.

Alford arrived on a M. and O. train and when he alighted he began firing on his victims.

Domestic trouble is said to have caused the killings. Alford surrendered to officers and was lodged in jail.

Beveridge Accused Of Forming Lobby

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—In an effort to minimize the connection between James Watson, former Representative from Indiana, and the National Association of Manufacturers, counsel for the latter association intends to show the Senate Lobby Committee that former Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, really was responsible for the organization of a tariff commission association to boost his own measure.

The National Tariff Commission Association was put on its feet by the National Association of Manufacturers officials, but only, they will seek to prove, after friends of Beveridge had laid the plans.

45,000 in Knights Templar Pageant

DENVER, Aug. 12.—Forty-five thousand Knights Templars, resplendent in uniforms, marched through the streets of Denver to-day, formally opening the thirty-second triennial conclave of the order. Scores of bands of music, interspersed throughout the line, played Templar hymns.

It was the most brilliant, solemn spectacle ever witnessed in Denver. The parade was separated into fifteen division, with 3,000 men in each division.

Car Hits House and Jars Man From Bed

MUNCIE, IND., Aug. 12.—Albert E. Needham, alone in his big three-story residence, was thrown from his bed and the house was pushed from its foundation by the impact of a heavy interurban car against one corner of the structure to-day. Three men were injured.

The car was being taken to the barn when it jumped the track on a curve, swung across the sidewalk and crashed into the house.

Postal Receipts Here Top 2 Larger Cities

Figures made public by Postmaster Hugh McKee show that the receipts for the last fiscal year at the Atlanta postoffice were greater than the offices at Louisville and New Orleans, both larger cities than Atlanta.

The receipts at the local office were $1,328,011.14, at New Orleans $1,182,761.72 and at Louisville $1,163,598.18.

WRECK ON GEORGIA ROAD.

THOMSON.—A section of through freight train No. 210 on the Georgia Railroad was wrecked here to-day; six cars being piled in a heap. A broken wheel is supposed to have caused the wreck. A tramp was hurt, but no one was killed. Passenger trains were delayed here.

If You Want to Get In the Swim, Wear Bathing Bloomers

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Fashion to-day stamped its approval on bloomers as the proper bathing beach apparel. Designers attending the national convention of their profession in Chicago were unanimous in declaring that bloomers were the things for the beaches. Women bathers must not appear with legs bare, although half hose, leaving the knees exposed, are approved.

At the annual style show at Orchestra Hall to-night all the coming styles will be paraded. Transparent skirts will be shown, although they will not be officially sanctioned.

The women next year, the designers voted, must look more womanly. Waists must be more full and three tiers of flounces will be proper. Furs dyed green and cherry red will be popular.

Goat Dies Trying to Eat Senator's Speech

WILKESBARRE, PA., Aug. 12.—State Senator Sterling R. Catin has lost his goat—not that kind the jokers like to tell about, but a real one named William.

Catlin kept his pet in the barn where he had stored many of the speeches made during his long term of service at Harrisburg.

The Senator went to the barn to admire William, and to his dismay, found the goat loose among his papers. One voluminous budget was protruding from his mouth. Despite all the Senator's efforts William choked to death. The fatal document was one of Catlin's greatest legislative propositions.

Toughest Town in Wyoming Is Closed

CHEYENNE, WYO., Aug. 12.—Jackpot, the toughest town in Wyoming, has been closed by the Sheriff, and its Mayor, Councilmen and inhabitants are ither under arrest or have been driven out of the country.

Jackpot was a sort of half-way place, where whisky was sold to herders and others, and where gambling was carried on in open violation of the law.

The authorities left a Deputy Sheriff behind to see that Jackpot was not reinhabited

Polaire Will Wear A Ring in Her Nose

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—When Mlle. Polaire, who boasts that she is the thinnest actress in the world, although she resented being called the ugliest by the New York papers—appears in America in the fall she will wear a large gold ring suspended from her nose to amuse New Yorkers with one more novelty.

She has had a ring skilfully fitted into her nose without piercing the flesh, so that she can remove the trinket when off the stage.

Revision of Balkan Borders Agreed To

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, Aug. 12.—Revision of the Balkan territorial boundaries in the peace treaty signed in Bucharest Sunday is likely, Germany having yielded in principle to-day to a reformation of the lines.

The fate of the Turkish islands in the Aegean Sea will be left to the powers.

Bulgarian Heir Is Ill; Poison Plot Reported

SOFIA, Aug. 12.—A mysterious illness has seized Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria. It was announced to-day that the Crown Prince is suffering from a nervous breakdown due to the rigors of the recent military campaign.

In view of Czar Ferdinand's trepidation over the safety of his heir reports were current in some quarters that an attempt had been made to kill Boris with poison.

MUSIC HEARD BY HELEN KELLER; FIRST TIME

Places Teeth to Violin Bridge and Strains of "The Swan" Reach Her Brain.

PETROSKEY, MICH., Aug. 12.—Miss Helen Keller, the noted blind, deaf and dumb girl, has heard her first note of music. She caught the vibrations of a violin string through her teeth, held against the bridge of the instrument.

Although her eardrums are useless Professor Franz Kohler, of the Oberlin Conservatory, declared to-day that the harmonies had been communicated to her brain, and she had caught the strain.

The first note which the former concertmeister of the Pittsburg Symphony Orchestra played for Miss Keller was on the E string of his rare old violin. Miss Keller was astonished. She held her teeth firmly against the scroll while Professor Kohler played strains of Saint-Saens' "The Sivan," using both the high and low registers.

"Like the voices of singing angels," Miss Keller communicated to Miss Macy, her teacher.

Miss Keller was exhausted from the excitement. Miss Macy declared to-day this was the first musical sound that has reached the brain of Miss Keller, despite reports of her violin playing which have stated that she has known musical harmony before.

3 Held as Swindlers Of Barnum's Cousin

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—The three persons, two women and one man, accused of swindling Mrs. Sarah Barnum, aged 82, of Syracuse, N. Y., cousin of P. T. Barnum, have fled from Chicago, the police learned positively to-day.

Henry Russell, of Spokane, Wash., a mine promoter; Miss Frances Waldo, his private secretary, and Mrs. Kalla Waldo, her mother, were named in the warrants. Deals for $82,000 were charged against the trio, and it was said Mrs. Barnum was left penniless through investments in mines.

Girl's Face Crushed By Kick of Horse

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—Martha Rawls, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Rawls, of this city, has been carried to a hospital in Atlanta for an operation.

The little girl was playing around a horse belonging to her father when it kicked her, striking her left cheek and crushing both the upper and lower jawbones.

Physicians here removed the crushed bones, and later decided to carry the child to Atlanta for treatment in a hospital there.

Start on $1,000,000 High School in Fall

PULLMAN, ILL., Aug. 12.—Work on the buildings for the Pullman Technical High School, which will cost more than $1,000,000, will begin before the end of autumn, according to an announcement received by Pullman residents to-day.

The board appointed to administer the $1,200,000 bequest made by George M. Pullman for the school will meet here in October and decide upon the final details.

San Francisco Dry In Wee Sma' Hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—For the first time in history, a restriction was placed on liquor traffic in San Francisco when the new law making it illegal to sell drinks between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. went into effect.

The law was obeyed generally throughout California

Last Bill Passed By House Provides W.&A. Investigation

A bill providing for a commission of eight members to investigate the value of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and make recommendations for its lease was passed by the House of Representatives Monday afternoon, being the last House measure that will be passed during the present session.

The commission will be composed of two members from the House, two from the Senate, the chairman of the State Railroad Commission, and two civilians to be appointed by the Governor. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000 for expenses.

The House also passed, by a vote of 120 to 0, the "blue sky" law, which requires registration of securities before stocks and bonds of a concern can be placed on the market. It is designed to prohibit the sale of "wildcat" stocks.

House Begins Move To Shorten Trials

A resolution providing for a commission of seven members to investigate the civil and criminal procedure of Georgia with a view to abolishing long-drawn-out trials and hearings was passed by the House Monday.

The commission will be composed of three members of the House, two of the Senate and two appointed by the Governor. Mr. Slater, of Bryan, in discussing the resolution, referred to the trial of Leo Frank as an example of the slowness of Georgia legal procedure.

$900 in Prizes for Hog Exhibits at Fair

MACON, Aug. 12.—The announcement is made that $900 in prizes will be awarded for the best exhibit of Duroc Jerseys, Berkshire, Poland-China and Tamsworth swine at the Georgia State Fair.

The American Duroc-Jersey Swine Breeders' Association has just placed a cash prize with the fair association and so has the American Berkshire Association. The fair association will distribute $685 and the Southwest Georgia Swine Breeders' Association also offers an award for the best pigs.

Negro Is Lynched by Mob at Laurens, S. C.

LAURENS, S. C., Aug. 12.—Overpowering the Sheriff, battering down two doors of the jail and a door to the steel cage, a mob of 2,000 dragged Richard Puckett, a young negro, from his cot and swung him to a railroad trestle.

The negro had attempted an assault on a young white girl Monday morning. He was later captured and confessed his guilt to the Sheriff.

Bloodhounds trailed the negro from the scene of the crime. The young woman could not positively identify the negro.

INCREASE IN TAX RETURNS.

DUBLIN.—The tax returns for Laurens County this year show an increase of more than $500,000 over the returns of last year. The total taxable property on the books this year is $7,106,075.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

A pleasant mode of entertaining at the Executive Mansion is in the informal dinner of six or eight covers which Governor and Mrs. Slaton give often. An affair of this kind was the small dinner of Monday evening, at which Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burwell were the guests of honor, others present being Mrs. Reed, of Elberton, the house guest of the Misses Howells, and Mrs. W. D. Grant.

Mrs. Slaton was hostess at a pretty luncheon a few days ago for a visitor, Mrs. Charles Donnally, of Pennsylvania, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stocking.

Pink roses from the gardens of Mrs. Slaton's home on the Peachtree road were decorations for the table, and the guests included Mrs. Donnally, Mrs. R. J. Lowry, Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. Albert Howell, Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. Walter Andrews and Miss Stocking.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

Period Furniture "Blue Tagged"

It is a notable fact that some of the most drastic reductions of the "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale are made on sets and odd pieces of Period Furniture—for the bedroom, living room and dining room.

The homekeeper who would furnish a room in a true and pure style or who would add another piece to a set already started may save richly through the generosity of the "Blue Tag" reductions.

Another notable fact is that ours is the South's greatest stock of Period Furniture—with its many fine reproductions of the old masters—Sheraton, Adam, Hepplewhite, Chippendale—and then the Colonial, William and Mary, Jacobean, Mission and Louis XV. periods.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being.

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 509 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

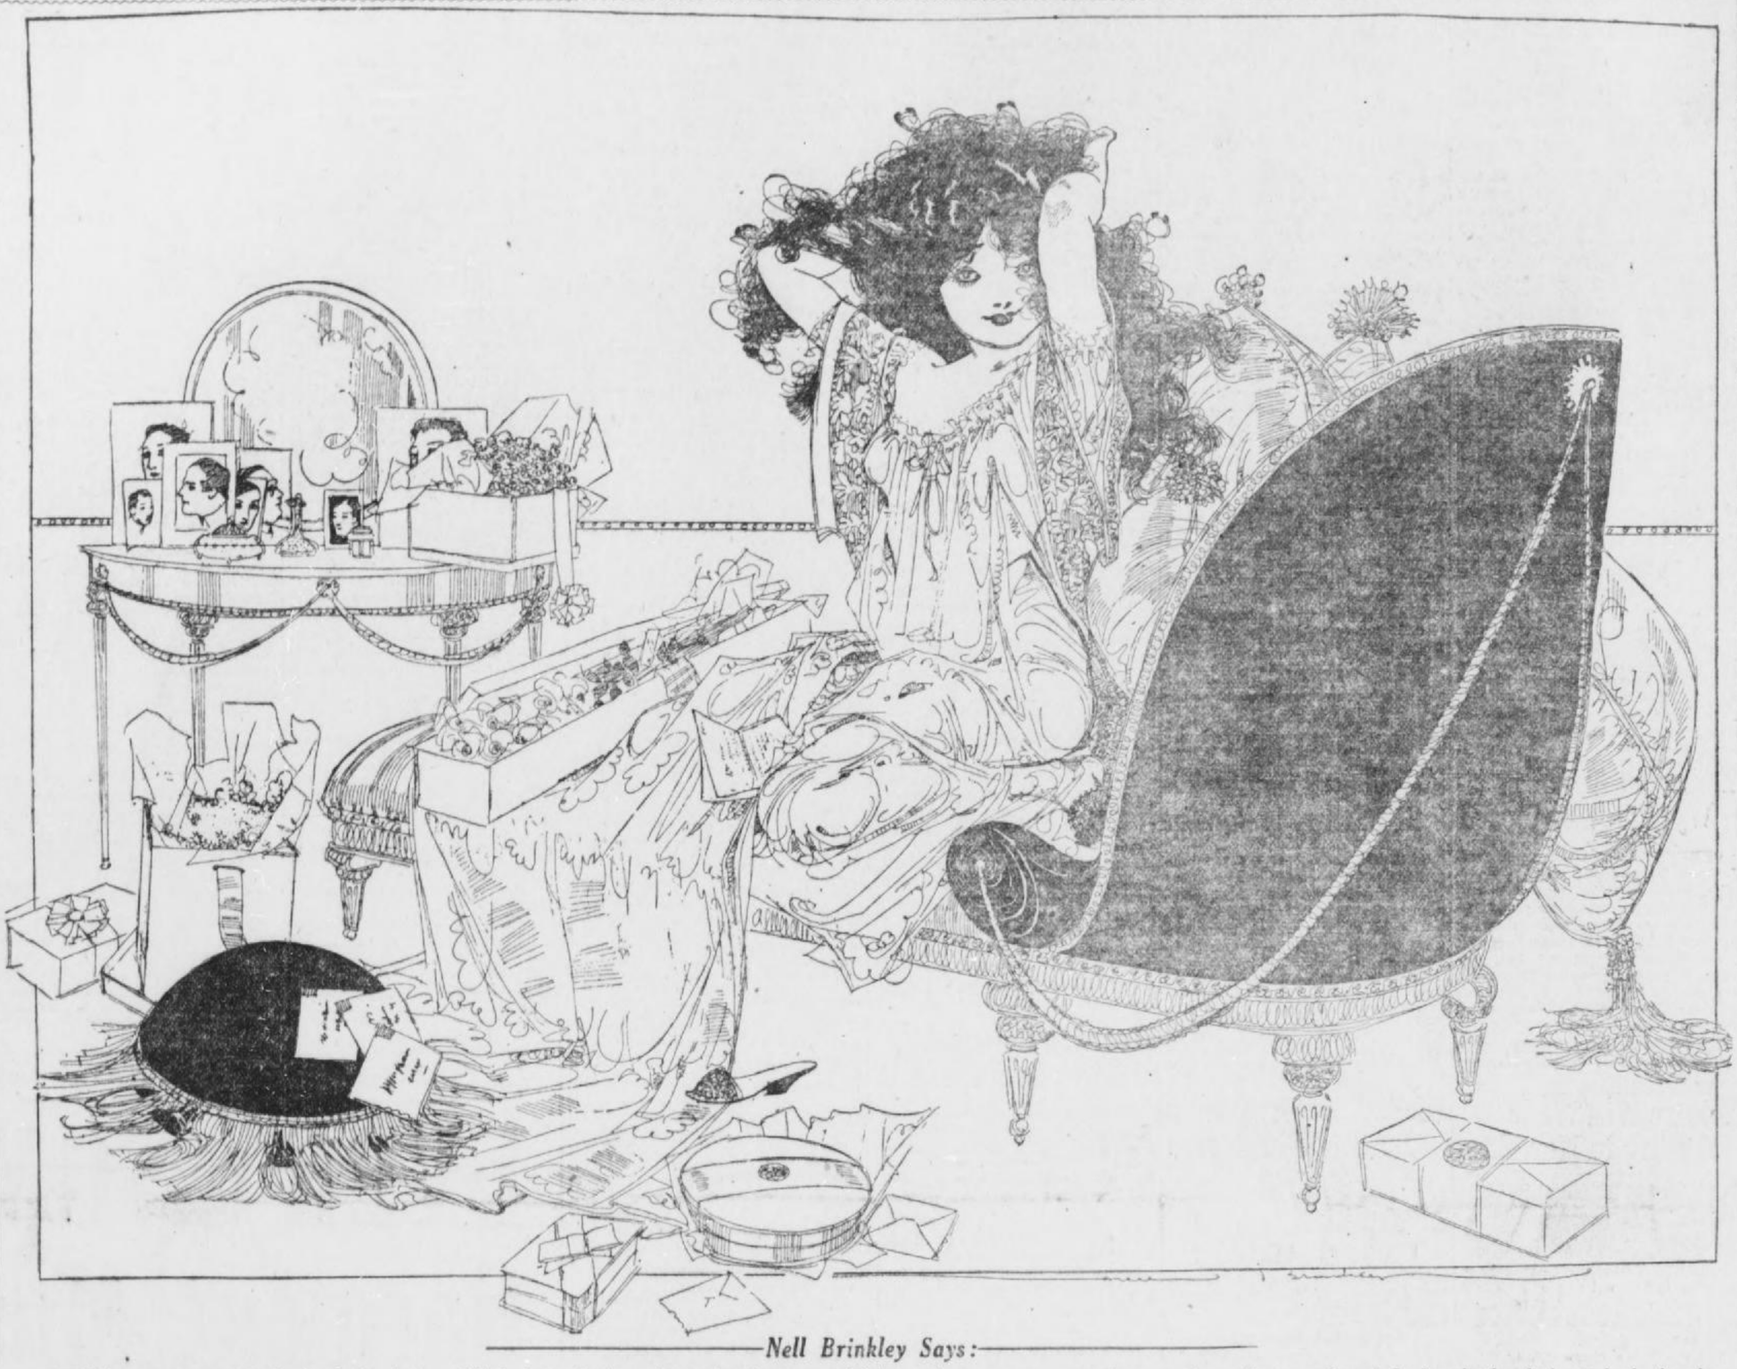

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my flowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away downtown, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night. "I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

Scene: Far out at sea; stateroom on board a huge transatlantic liner which is being tossed about like a cork in a tremendous sea.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!"

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

SPLENDID HOT WEATHER FOOD.

You should eat meat very sparingly during hot weather—meat heats the body. At the same time you must eat nutritious food.

Try Faust Spaghetti. It is a nutritious, non-heating food. Made from Durum Wheat, the cereal that overflows in gluten, a muscle, bone and flesh builder. A 10c package of Faust's Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef—ask your doctor.

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

* * *

Who knows, and knows he knows,
Is wise. Cleave thou to him,
And nevermore forsake him.
Who knows and knows not that he knows—he sleeps;
Go thou to him and wake him.

Who knoweth not and knows he knoweth not is a child.
Go thou to him and teach him.
Who knows not and knows not that he knoweth not is a fool.
No light shall ever reach him."

* * *

Says Marcus Aurelius:

"A man must stand erect and not be held erect by circumstance.

"Everything is only for a day, with that which remembers and that which is remembered.

"The present is the only thing of which a man can be deprived.

"Everything which is in any way beautiful is beautiful in itself—and neither worse nor better is a thing made by being praised."

* * *

Oh, the world has its gloom, and 'tis gloom to spare;
'Twill make you weary and sad;
But there's plenty of gleam, as is only fair,
To make you cheery and glad.

Now the world may seem dark as the shrouding night,
All clad in a pall of black.
But somewhere 'tis day—so just walk toward the light,
And the shadows will fall at your back.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then became so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?"

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts, it is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to finger-tips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched instep and a lithe swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body swaying from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl; I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said. "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stage-coaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

* * * * * *

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his legs trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tinge while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28. —HAL COFFMAN.

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this being due thing.

* * *

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Baraca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Coveleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,600. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

MONDAY'S GAME.

GRIFFITH SENDS FIELDER CALVO TO CRACKERS

A TELEGRAM from Clark Griffith to Major Frank Callaway president of the Atlanta ball club, received this morning, announces that Calvo, the Cuban outfielder whom Griff has been carrying all the season, is on his way to join the Crackers and will be in Atlanta to-morrow.

"Griffith in placing Calvo with us as a means of stiffening up our club for the final sprint," Mr. Callaway said. "I expect he will get in the game at once, probably playing in place of Holtz. He is a fast and accurate fielder and a hard hitter, but the class of Griffith's regular outfield has prevented him from getting into the game with the Senators."

Beauty Is Keynote Of 1914 Hudson Six

The 1914 Hudson Six 54 7-passenger body, complete car, at $2,250, is on exhibition to-day at the salesrooms of Mr. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., local dealer for the Hudson motor-cars.

Beauty is the keynote of the new car. The most prominent feature is the pure streamline body. No angles appear at the dash. Running boards are clear. It conforms to the latest European practice. Germany originated the streamline body. By some it is known as the Prince Henry type.

Reliable information from leading factories of Europe indicates that at the Paris show next October practically every European manufacturer will exhibit bodies of this type. This has been adapted by Hudson designers to American use and modified to suit American ideas. The long, sloping hood merges into the lines of the dash. The graceful sweep and smoothness is unbroken from radiator cap to tail-light. The new car is designed for seven passengers. The two extra seats are of the folding type and permanently attached. They fold into the back of the front seat entirely out of the way. Yet owing to the great length of the car—135-inch wheel base—there is ample room for all passengers and all may have the greatest possible ease and comfort.

Provision has been made for entrance to the driver's section from either side of the car. The steering wheel is at the left, with control levers in center at driver's right, and tires are carried in advance of the left fore door. Thus access is obtained from either door.

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

* * *

THESE baseball magnates are proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

* * *

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

* * *

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Voss and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will lug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back.

The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the same skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his
heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why
write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with
a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice
on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to
make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care
and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My
life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or
censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mor-
tals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about
the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails
to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and
hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy
who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets
a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again. The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile eevnt, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. Bus McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

DR. ROUGLIN RETURNS.

Dr. Louis C. Rouglin returned today from a two weeks' vacation at Eastern resorts. He spent a week fishing off Ocean CView and reported several big catches.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for Infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersburg team of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccaneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Doolin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial consideration of October's classic.

Need of Backstop.

McGraw's earnestness of purpose has been reflected in the trade he negotiated just before he left Pittsburg for this city. He traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. With Meyers out of commission McGraw realized that the hitting strength of his club would be affected. McLean is a finished backstop and a very fine sticker. Crandall, one of the grandest fellows who ever drew breath, had been of great service in former years as a relief twirler and pinch hitter.

But McGraw was well provided with pitching talent that could go the route. He strengthened the club by the trade. We were all very sorry to bid good-bye to Otis. He was a grand influence. Many a time his pleasing personality has helped to chase the blues from camp when we happened to meet with some unexpected misfortune.

I have said, in a previous article, that our pitching staff is the best in the major leagues. With the acquisition of Larry McLean I will back our catching department against any other.

Heretofore, the class was naturally ascribed to the Cubs in Archer and Bresnahan. With the best pitchers and two of the four greatest catchers in the game, I think fandom will agree that New York will boast the greatest battery strength in its company.

Upon the battery strength I confidently rely. I think it will prove an insurmountable obstacle to Philadelphia's pennant hopes.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over substituting "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

PIRATES RELEASE KOMMERS TO COLUMBUS BALL CLUB

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 12.—Fred Kommers, Pittsburg National League outfielder, has been released to the Columbus American Association team and will report here today. Kommers will take the place of Jimmy Jones, Columbus' outfielder, who was seriously injured last week when he collided with Kemper Shelton in running for a fly ball.

JACK PRINCE'S DEL REY MOTORDROME IS BURNED

SALE OF POLE TO TIGERS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 12.—President O. B. Andrews, of the local club, has announced the sale of Harry Coveleskie, the famed "Giant Killer," to the Detroit Americans. The star left-hander was secured under a blanket option held on the Chattanooga club by the Tiger management.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Out in Los Angeles to-night Jack White, a brother to Charley White, and Johnny Dundee are to clash in a 20-round bout. This will be the second meeting between the pair and the winner is to box Ad Wolgast on September 9. Charley is pulling for his brother to bring home the bacon.

* * *

Frank Whitney is getting in the best shape of his life for his scrap with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory to-morrow night. Frank knows he has a tough man before him and has worked like a Trojan for the mill. Charley is also in wonderful condition. Some scrap this should be.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, has probably the largest string of fighters ever corralled by any manager. Among the list are Barney Williams, Young Ahearn, K. O. Brown, Jack Britton, Young Caldwell, Young Solsberg, Jim Coffey, Sailor White, Tommy McCann, Young Otto and several others that Morgan can't call to mind off-hand.

* * *

Two bouts already arranged for the St. Nicholas A. C. look to be about the best obtainable. On September 10, Jack Britton, the young, clever Chicagoan, will hook up with Young Shugru, the aggressive boy from Jersey City. They will clash at 133 pounds, weigh in at 10 o'clock on the night of the bout.

* * *

Another card will bring together Al Palzer, the tenacious Iowan, and Frank Moran, the Pittsburger, on August 20 or 27. The date will be selected by Dan Ketrick and Tom O'Rourke, the managers of the two heavyweights.

* * *

While good boxers are on his trail, Champion Johnny Coulon sidetracks them by signing up with an easy mark. Bobby Burns is to be his opponent early next month at Omaha.

* * *

Young Jack O'Brien, the 18-year-old brother of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, has been matched with Percy Cove for six rounds, the match to be staged at Bellingham, Wash., during the Mount Baker marathon carnival.

* * *

Jack Keating and Soldier Bachus, heavyweights, will clash in a 10-round battle at New York to-morrow night. This will be the first meeting between the pair.

VAUGHN HURLS ONE-HIT GAME AGAINST INDIANS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—Jim Vaughn, recently acquired by the Cubs in exchange for Lew Richie, added another sensational victory to his string by defeating Indianapolis, 2 to 0. Vaughn allowed the Indians one hit. He has pitched in more games than any other American Association hurler and leads the league in strikeouts and bases on balls. In forty games he has struck out 165 batters and has given 145 free transportations to first base. He also has a no-hit game to his credit for this year. Vaughn left after the game to join the Cubs in Boston.

SALLY LEAGUE INFIELDER IS BOUGHT BY STALLINGS

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—The Boston Nationals have obtained four additional men toward strengthening the team for next season. Two are infielders and two are outfielders.

The infielders are Dugey, second baseman of the Waco team, of the Texas League, and McCleskey, a third baseman of the Albany club, of the South Atlantic League.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

* * *

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

* * *

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

* * *

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into to-morrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here to-day. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

* * *

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

MOTHER IS GIVEN EQUAL RIGHT TO CHILDREN

House Passes Bill Leaving Power to Award Custody in Divorce Cases to the Judge.

A bill giving the mother an equal right with the father to the custody of minor children after decision in divorce cases, and leaving the disposition of the child with the trial judge, was passed by the House Tuesday morning. The vote was 96 to 62. The fight lasted more than an hour.

It was a substitute to the bill introduced by Smith of Fulton and Olive of Richmond, and to the substitute of the General Judiciary Committee. The substitute was offered by Mr. Smith, who stated it was acceptable to the Senate and would be acted upon by that body at this session. The original bill transferred the prima facie right to the child from the father to the mother.

Mr. Smith, explaining his bill, declared the measure is designed to correct an injustice under which Georgia mothers have been held for years. Speeches in favor of the bill were also made by Miller of Bibb and Olive of Richmond.

A number of members opposed the bill, either declaring the present law is good enough or defining their positions clearly by stating the mother is not competent to care for her child.

Those who spoke against the bill were Conner of Spalding, Garlington of Richmond, Moye of Johnson, Picquet of Richmond and Slater of Bryan.

The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the Atlanta charter bill, providing for a popular vote on the charter, the referendum and the reduction of the power of the Recorder.

OBITUARY

John W. Adair, seventy-nine years old, a well-known resident of Fulton County, died Tuesday morning on his farm on the West Hunter road. He is survived by his wife and one son, Rufus. Six daughters also survive. They are Mrs. W. T. Huff and Mrs. J. M. Thompson, of Savannah; Mrs. J. M. Spinks, of Marietta; Mrs. J. T. Griffith, of Camilla; Mrs. Charles Williams, of Columbia, and Mrs. L. A. Garrison, of Atlanta. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. at the Sharon Church. Interment will be in the churchyard.

Susan E. Landers, fifty-five years old, No. 28 Inman street, died Tuesday at 9 o'clock. She is survived by her husband. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia Heeden, who died Monday, will be held at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Barnes, No. 122 Glennwood avenue. Interment at Hollywood.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $300,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

$100,000 in Stock For Use of Name

GADSDEN, ALA., Aug. 12.—Oliver Hall, a rich merchant of Collinsville, testified in the case of E. C. Drew, the Fort Payne promoter, charged with using the mail to defraud in promoting the DeKalb Etowah Oil and Gas Company, how he had been selected president by Drew and tendered $100,000 in stock in a $300,000 corporation. He said he never gave anything for the stock, but permitted the use of his name. His son, Irby Hall, was made vice president and given $500 in stock.

A sensation developed when it was shown the company had never been incorporated and that there was no system of bookkeeping.

Attorney Shot When Officer Aims at Dog

W. C. Munday, a member of the law firm of Munday & Cornwell, No. 318 Kiser Building, was shot in the leg Monday night when a bullet fired by Policeman Jaffares at a mad dog glanced from the sidewalk at Capitol avenue and Hunter street.

Munday's wound was slight, the bullet penetrating the flesh only and passing out. He was removed to his home.

The dog had created a panic among children playing in the street. The officer ran up and fired. Munday, fifteen feet away, received the bullet.

TAX REFORM BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

Question Put Squarely Up to the House—Validity of Slaton Revenue Bills in Doubt.

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNelil and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 12.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $280,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

The bill provides for a State tax commissioner with offices in the State Capitol and county boards of tax assessors. According to the claims of the authors and supporters of the bill, it will increase the annual revenue of the State by at least $1,000,000, sufficient to pay off the present deficit within the next three years, as well as the teachers.

Passed After Hot Debate.

The bill was passed in the Senate after nearly five hours of debate Monday afternoon. Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint author of the bill, made a vigorous defense of the measure in a two and a half hour speech. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth, followed Senator Miller in a vigorous attack on the bill. He declared the bill did not provide an adequate personal property tax.

Other Senators who spoke briefly in opposition to the bill were McGregor, of the Nineteenth, and Olliff, of the Fourth. Senator McNeil, in supporting the bill, charged that the Lipscomb bill, defeated in the House, had been framed by the Chamber of Commerce of Athens, the home town of Senator DuBose. It was for this reason, he intimated, that the Senator from the Thirtieth opposed the present bill.

Upon motion of Senator Tarver, the previous question was called and the final vote was taken. Following the vote, which was 29 to 12 in favor, President Anderson for the first time during the session congratulated the Senate. The bill was transmitted immediately to the House.

SNOW SAYS LOSS IN CORN CROP 300,000,000 BUSHELS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—B. W. Snow says: "With the indication Saturday of the possibility of a breaking up of the drouth I sent a special circular of inquiry to my country clients asking for a report on corn condition August 11, and have received sufficient reports to justify the statement that the decline in prospects since the Government report and my own of August 1 was gathered has been much heavier than is generally appreciated.

"I have returns enough to indicate that Indiana has dropped 10 points in condition, Illinois 15 points with an average around 55, Iowa 13 and Missouri 20. Returns from Kansas and Nebraska are as yet scattered, but sufficient to put Kansas out of the field as a corn-producer this year, and the Nebraska crop is of small importance, except in the northwest counties.

"My returns already cover almost one-third of the important corn counties, and if the later reports are in line with those already received, it is quite possible that the loss since August may have reached 300,000,000 bushels."

COTTON RULED QUITE STRONG

Continued Dry Weather in Southwest Causes Active Bidding, but Sales Were Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—An absence of weather news of features in the cables caused the cotton market to open dull to-day and first prices were from unchanged to 1 point off to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call strength developed and prices rallied 3 to 10 points from the initial level, due mainly to the dry map in the Western belt. The ring apparently seemed to want cotton and purchased rather freely at times. Many of the larger spot houses were noted buyers.

Cordill was out with a report on parts of the Eastern belt, which was considered very favorable. This, coupled with a private telegram from Austin, Texas, stating that no change of consequence is noted in conditions, while the weather has been hot and dry, the temperatures were only 90 degrees yesterday and the entire State toward Oklahoma, cotton is opening fast and in ten days it will be moving freely all south of Waco. This brought out rather active selling from Wall street, but offerings were so rapidly absorbed that prices during the late forenoon were firmly maintained around the early high point.

The high temperatures continue in the West and the weekly weather report just posted shows a bullish condition existing west of the Mississippi, though the Eastern belt is favorable and scattered showers are shown in this section to-day for yesterday, though there are private reports of deterioration in Georgia and Alabama from the lack of moisture in some sections.

Sentiment to-day is somewhat more bullish and higher prices are predicted for the present at least, but there is an element who believe the market is entirely too high and are awaiting rain developments in the West to sell.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 3 points lower to 3 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are to-day's bids in New York: August, 11.65; October, 11.11; December, 11.05; March, 11.04; January, 10.84.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.50; October, 11.12; December, 11.10; January, 11.11; March, 11.20.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Precipitation overnight in the west occurred at a few isolated places only. No general rains yet, although it continues generally cloudy over Texas. The map shows cloudy weather in North Carolina, also generally fair in the west of the belt, good rains in North Carolina and in the south central Gulf states. Indications are unchanged, and prospects continue for unsettled weather and precipitation to come on the western States in the near future. Cloudy weather and showers, with a decided fall in temperatures in New Mexico and Colorado promise speedier rain developments for Texas and Oklahoma.

Liverpool is steady, but cables that heavy hedge selling is weighing on the market. Manchester cables: "Weaving worse. Yarns slack. Lower unless bad crop prospects." Our market opened 2 points higher and advanced steadily on small buying to cover on the absence of general rains in the west and in anticipation of an unfavorable weather report for the week.

New York wires that Weld's traveling man reports 12 points deterioration in Texas since July 25. It must be borne in mind, however, that the crop condition in Texas was unusually high up to that date.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—There will be showers within the next thirty-six hours in the Lake regions, and the North and Middle Atlantic States. Occasional showers will continue in Florida. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi the weather will be generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

The temperatures will rise slowly in the northeastern districts during to-night and Wednesday.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Fair in west, showers in east portion to-night or Wednesday; warmer to-night.

North Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair except showers in north portion to-night or Wednesday.

Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows mostly cloudy in Texas and North Carolina, generally fair over rest of the belt. No rains shown on the map, except light shower at Galveston and Amarillo, and raining in far west Texas at El Paso. Now rains fell over south central Gulf and North Carolina, but little rain elsewhere.

* * *

F. M. Cordill wires: "Charlotte, Greenville, Atlanta to Montgomery an unbroken stretch of excellent crops is noted. Atlantics show uninterrupted improvement since my last trip. The weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable. Conditions were never better at this date."

* * *

Waxahatchie, Texas, wires: "Hot winds hurting cotton badly. We have reports stating western Oklahoma is deteriorating rapidly. Only showers reported to-day at Yoakum and Brenham."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Expected rains did not fall in Oklahoma and Texas and the market was due to advance on the opening Monday morning. But Europe reflected no alarm, Arkansas reported splendid rains, Washington unsettled weather over Oklahoma and the weather prophets among the trade said that Texas rains are imminent. Under the circumstances the market continued under the spell of Washington legislative threat and hung fire.

"Recently students of the crop have devoted much time and thought to the effect of dry weather in Texas. One faction, predicating its opinion on the general reports of lack of moisture made by the Weather Bureau and on the great number of crop damage advices now coming from the west, says the crop in Texas and Oklahoma has deteriorated sharply, and that those States no longer promise a wonderful yield. Another faction, which has looked up the western rainfall records of other years, is equally certain that the present drouthy spell is not only not abnormal, but is confined to a very much smaller area than the trade realizes.

"Thus it is that some traders adhere to the belief that a very large crop is on the way, conditions east of the Mississippi River being excellent, while others are now becoming convinced another year's need will exceed production. Meantime new crop cotton is being absorbed by previously created requirement, just as the talent expected it would be. The demand for later shipments is small, a fact that robs the bull side of the account of much attractiveness."

The Journal of Commerce says the volume of business passing in the cotton goods markets is being underestimated. Fairly good general trade is reported. Cotton yarn prices are easier. The lower trend of prices on the cotton exchanges has caused some setback in the goods markets, but there are few goods available for spot delivery. Most mills do not care to go far into another cotton crop until they are better satisfied of the outcome of the crop.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Generally clear, rain at Amarillo and El Paso. Oklahoma—Clear and hot."

* * *

The Government's official record of Texas gives the rainfall average for the month of July as 1.29 inches, which is 1.62 below normal, but .09 inch higher than it was last year.

* * *

Official temperature average for Oklahoma yesterday was 104 degrees; Texas, 98, with seven stations recording 100; five 102, and one 104 degrees.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Market easier on hedge selling; tendency here to buy on expected bullish weekly report and anticipation of bullish weather forecast of Government to-day."

* * *

Manchester quotes officially to-day yarns dull and weak.

The market steadied up on dry map in the Western belt after the call. Weld, Mitchell and Cone were the leading buyers on the advance. Smith was possibly the best seller, supposed to be for Wall street.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Mean temperatures ranged from 1 to 8 degrees above normal, except in Central North Carolina, north Central South Carolina and in the lower coast region of Texas, where there was a slight deficiency. The greatest excess in temperature occurred in Northwestern Arkansas and Northeastern Oklahoma.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 72 to 82 degrees over the eastern belt, from 82 to 84 degrees over the central and from 82 to 88 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 72 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88, occurred at Fort Worth, Texas, and Fort Smith, Ark.

No precipitation occurred during the week in Oklahoma and there was very little in Texas. Rain fell generally over the other portions of the cotton region, except that there was none in the extreme northern portion of Alabama and the southern portion of Middle Tennessee.

The precipitation was unevenly distributed and more than 2 inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, the central portion of Northern Arkansas, Southern Florida and one station in Alabama and one in North Carolina. The greatest weekly precipitation, 8 inches, occurred at Calico Rock, Ark., and there was 5.66 inches at Minden, La.

MARKED ACTIVITY NOTED IN STOCKS

Street More Cheerful Over Cheap Money Talk—Standard Railroads Led Advance.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Union Pacific made a new high mark for the present movement at the opening of the stock market to-day, when it began selling at 154¼, or ½ above Monday's final.

The tone was strong and most of the issues showed fractional gains. The accumulation arose from scattered sources and include some shares which for a long time have been neglected.

Among the advances were Woolworth, ½; Steel common, ⅛; United States Rubber common, ⅞; Union Pacific, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Bethlehem Steel, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; Texas Company, ¼; Southern Pacific, ¼; Reading, ⅜; Pennsylvania Railroad, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅜; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie first preferred ⅜, and Erie common, ⅛.

New Haven, which closed last night at ⅞, crossed par, opening at 100⅛.

St. Paul, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 107½, against 109¾ at the closing last night.

The curb was firm.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in London were strong.

Toward the end of the first hour, large buying orders appeared and nearly everything on the list moved up to new high records for the past six weeks. Gains of more than a point were noted in the leading railroads and industrials, while substantial fractional upturns were recorded in many other issues.

Amalgamated Copper led the upward movement, advancing 1⅞ to 74⅝. Union Pacific moved up 1⅝ to 155⅜, and similar gains were recorded in Canadian Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Steel common, Wabash common, United States Rubber, Utah Copper and Tennessee Copper, advanced more than 1½ each. Southern Pacific was under slight pressure, however, declining ½ to 91¾.

Call money is loaning and renewing at 2½ per cent.

Union Pacific will sell ex-rights Wednesday.

The tone was strong in the last hour, and a number of issues made substantial gains. United States Rubber common advanced to more than 62, a net gain of more than 1 points since the opening. Steel was strong, selling around 65 for a gain of ¼ since noon. Canadian Pacific was off fractionally. Lehigh Valley and St. Paul held firm and Texas Company was very strong, selling at 118¼ for a gain or more than 2 points on the day. Brokers said there was a good deal of investment buying in Europe.

STOCK GOSSIP

"As I have said many times of late, any activity the stock market displays is when prices are advancing. I hear that the large interests are heavily long of securities and are accumulating more from day to day.

"Although prices have had a good advance from the low of June 11, the advance under way will continue until stocks are at a considerably higher level. I am especially bullish on Union Pacific, Steel, Copper and the Tractions, and believe holdings should be increased in all of these issues on any moderate recession."—G. D. Potter.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	85¾@87¾
Corn—No. 2	77½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42½

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—September corn was up as much as 1½c to-day, but it lost ½c later, yet the closing price was about 1c higher.

A report was received during the session saying that the losses throughout the dry districts in the corn belt have been sensational since the Government August report made its appearance.

On this a great deal of corn was bought and it was bought by the larger holders and bulls in the trade. December was quite strong and closed 1¾c higher, and May was up a little over 1c. The big corn market was chock full of excited humanity, as many speculators left the other pits to try their luck in corn.

Wheat closed with gains of ⅛ to ½c and oats were up ¼ to ⅝c.

Provisions were lower all around.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Plans for Erection of Sixteen-Story Bldg. At Whitehall and Ala.

Dr. E. L. Connally Consults Architects—United Cigar Stores May Take Brown & Allen Corner.

Announcement was made Tuesday of plans for a sixteen-story office building on the Brown & Allen site, southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, a full account of which appears elsewhere. Dr. E. L. Connally owns the present building and will erect the new one.

This action will bring about some interesting changes, and may mean that Brown & Allen will move across the street to the place now occupied by Thomas H. Pitts, the tobacconist, and that the United Cigar Stores Company will be located where Brown & Allen now are.

The corner on which the building will stand is one of the busiest in Atlanta and brings a handsome rental.

List of 24 Exhibitors.

Success of the plan to exhibit Atlanta-made goods on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building seems to be assured. Already 24 merchants and manufacturers have signed up for space. They are the Whittier Mills Company, Marcus-Loeb & Co., Nunnally & McCrea, Southern Engraving Company, Frederick Disinfectant Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, E. Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, Southern Upholstering Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Southern Spring Bed Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper, Gholstin-Cunningham Company, All Star Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Norris, Inc., Willingham-Tift Lumber Company, Tripod Paint Company, J. P. Stevens Engraving Company, Atlanta Blank Book Manufacturing Company, White Provision Company, Dowman-Dozier, Foote & Davies.

The plan of the committee has been to put so many "spaces" 10 feet square at the disposal of exhibitors.

Moving on Whitehall.

The Eugene V. Haynes jewelry establishment will move soon from No. 37 to No. 49 Whitehall street. The firm has renovated the latter place and Mr. Haynes has carried out many ideas of the jewelry business gained on trips abroad. Under the old lease this concern was paying $4,000 a year rental, but the owner of No. 37 Whitehall, A. B. Steele, asked $12,000. Unable to reach a compromise at $8,000 the jewelry concern announced that it would move. The change will take place about September 1. An up-to-date moving picture house, it is said will occupy the old location.

Peachtree Creek Plans.

What can be done to reclaim or "renovate" Peachtree Creek? More than a hundred property owners would like to know. The County Commissioners have a plan to clear out the bed and remove driftwood from the banks. This, they believe, will prevent to a large extent the present overflow in the rainy season, and keep the low places free from standing water. Mosquitoes won't have a chance, and as for the sewage of former days it has been largely removed by the erection of the Peachtree Creek disposal plant.

Some time ago the sugestion was made that the creek be bridged over for a considerable distance. This plan met opposition from Eretus Rivers, who declared that the city and the county had so few streams of size that they should be left exposed to view.

The main permanent trouble with Peachtree Creek seems to be that it is muddy rather than clear. Were it a stream of sparkling water rather than a ditch carrying off Georgia red clay its possibilities would be unlimited. If it were a good stream in this sense the lowlands that now border it could be turned into attractive park spaces for present and future generations.

Spring Street Improvement.

Sooner or later there is going to be a big improvement on Spring street to make it as much as possible a help to Peachtree. The proposition to extend Spring northward to Brookwood has already been announced. It rests where many other good propositions rest, to be revived later when the need becomes greater than it is at present.

Now comes the suggestion that Spring street be turned slightly from its course as it strikes Carnegie way—that a slice be cut from the northeast corner of Cain street (the Governor's Mansion lot) and Spring street be connected up with Cone street, which now ends at Carnegie way, and extended across the railroad tracks by way of a concrete viaduct.

Cone street ends on the south at Marietta street and it is suggested that the street be continued. The viaduct would go straight until the tracks were crossed and then curve slightly to the left, or about due south, and land on Madison avenue, to serve the entire Terminal Station district.

This arrangement, it is pointed out, would make it possible for the viaduct to pass safely to the east of the W. & A. freight depot, and it would put a leading thoroughfare one block closer to the retail district than a viaduct which jumped from the foot of the present Spring street. Not only that, but a first-class, straight-line thoroughfare would be opened up for traffic that would otherwise use Peachtree, and travelers using the Terminal Station could reach their North Side homes much more quickly than by the circuitous route that it is now necessary to travel.

Legislators To Be Paid at Once; Sum Due Them $70,000

That the Georgia legislators will receive every penny of the money due them for their services in the present session of the General Assembly was indicated Tuesday morning following a conference between Governor Slaton and State Treasurer Speer.

The total amount which will be paid to the legislators for salaries and mileage will be $70,000.

State Treasurer Speer declared Tuesday the legislators would be paid in full, regardless of the depleted condition of the treasury, sufficient funds for this purpose being in hand.

A large part of the $70,000 has been paid to the legislators already.

Senate Passes Bill Limiting Militia's Use

Apparently weary from the strenuous campaign for tax revision which culminated in the passage of the substitute to the Shepard bill Monday night, Georgia Senators adjourned Tuesday at noon following the passage of two general bills by McGregor, of the Nineteenth, providing for a revision of the military laws of the State. The vote was 29 to 0. There was no debate.

The bills provide affidavits shall be made by civic authorities before request is made upon the Governor for troops in case of riot or insurrection, thereby decreasing the power of the civil authorities and increasing that of the executive. The measure, according to its supporters, aims to prevent riots between citizens and soldiers such as occurred in Augusta last year.

Tubercular Cattle Barred From State

An order designed to prevent the shipment of tubercular cattle into Georgia was issued Tuesday morning by Dr. Peter F. Balmsen, State Veterinarian, from the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. The order provides that all cattle originating in New York or Illinois, destined to any point in Georgia, must be accompanied by a certificate of health issued by a veterinary inspector of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry.

The order goes into effect immediately.

Girl's Plea for Man Softens Policewoman

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Policewoman Alice Clement to-day was sorry she made an arrest. She was proud of the accomplishment in capturing a young man who insisted upon following her in the downtown streets.

But Miss Alice Brow, the young woman fiance, went to Policewoman Clement and pleaded that she recommend his release. Miss Brown, after several minutes' pleading, cried and then fainted.

When Policewoman Clement started to court to appear against Fred Bentley, 26, the young man she had arrested, she said: "I'm sorry I pinched him."

Parcel Post Stamps Going to Waste Here

The Atlanta postoffice has more than half a million parcel post stamps as a dead weight. Postmaster Hugh McKee has been instructed to sell them at once, but is having a hard job doing it.

Under an order which went into effect July 1 parcel post stamps were declared no longer necessary.

The parcel post stamps immediately fell into disuse, although they are of the same value as other stamps of the same denominations and can be used on all classes of matter.

POSSE SEARCHING FOR LEE SLAYER

South Georgia Farmer Shot Dead by Black He Attempted to Disarm.

LEESBURG, Aug. 12.—Searching parties to-day are scouring the country near this place in an effort to capture Doc Mathis, a negro, who shot and killed R. L. Jessey, a prominent Lee County farmer, last night.

Berry Wallace, a brother-in-law of Jossey, had a difficulty with Will Mathis, a son of the slayer, for beating a mule.

Returning from Leesburg in the automobile of Wallace, accompanied by several other men, a stop was made at the home of the negro, who, it was reported, had secured a rifle with which to avenge the whipping of his boy. It was the intention of the party to disarm the negro. They called to him and he came out, but returned to the house, saying: "Wait until I get my shoes."

Jossey followed and told the negro to wait, but the negro shut and fastened the door. His son, Will Mathis, began firing at the party in the automobile from a window. Doc Mathis cracked the door open and fired at Jossey, the ball passing through the right breast.

Jossey's body was secured by the party and brought to Leesburg, where the posse was formed. The negroes in the meantime had escaped.

U. S. Peace Delegate To the Hague Is Dead

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 12.—The funeral of Judge U. M. Rose, member of The Hague Peace Conference, who died here to-day, will be held Thursday from the family residence. Judge Rose was one of the most distinguished members of the Southern bar and at one time was president of the American Bar Association. In 1905, following a visit of President Roosevelt to Little Rock, he was appointed a member of the International Peace Conference at The Hague.

Judge Rose was 79 years of age. His death was hastened by a recent fall, when he sustained a fractured arm.

Rain Halts Mercury As It Starts on Climb

A light shower shortly after noon Tuesday cooled the atmosphere and brought Atlanta relief from heat. The mercury in the official thermometer was forced from 88 degrees down to 78 in less than a half hour. The day started off with the thermometer registering 76 degrees.

Fair weather and cooler is predicted by Government Forecaster VonHerrmann.

Castro's Revolt in Venezuela Crushed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The revolution in Venezuela, reported to have been led by General Cipriano Castro and his cousin, General Torres Castro, has collapsed entirely, according to information received at the State Department to-day.

General Torres Castro and all his staff have been captured by the Federal forces.

Preference Given Whites by Blalock

Collector of Internal Revenue A. O. Blalock, recently appointed successor to Henry S. Jackson, has started to carry out his pledge to appoint no negroes to any position that a white man may fill without demeaning himself.

Tuesday morning Mr. Blalock appointed a white man to succeed a negro elevator runner in the Federal building.

Elopers Are Halted By Tifton Sheriff

TIFTON, Aug. 12.—Sheriff Shaw arrested Arthur Harrington, 17-year-old son of Deputy Sheriff R. M. Harrington, of Ocilla, in answer to a telephone message from the young man's father.

Harrington, with a Miss Smith, aged 16, of Ocilla, came to Tifton in an automobile intending to secure a license and get married. When they arrived here Harrington was taken in custody and held until his father came, when he was taken back to Ocilla.

Shirt a la Bulgarian Blouse Jails 2 Men

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., Aug. 12.—Two men were arrested here while strolling along the main thoroughfare wearing shirts hanging loose, a la Bulgarian blouse.

When asked for an explanation, the men said: "Women are wearing suspenders nowadays. Guess we can wear Bulgarian blouses if we want to."

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

Urges U. S. Ban on Alien Conspirators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, to-day introduced a bill aiming at the deportation of Mexicans in this country who may be stirring up trouble between the United States and Mexico.

His bill provides that any alien who shall take advantage of his resilence in the United States to conspire for the overthrow of a foreign government in North or South America, with which this country is on friendly terms, shall be deported.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

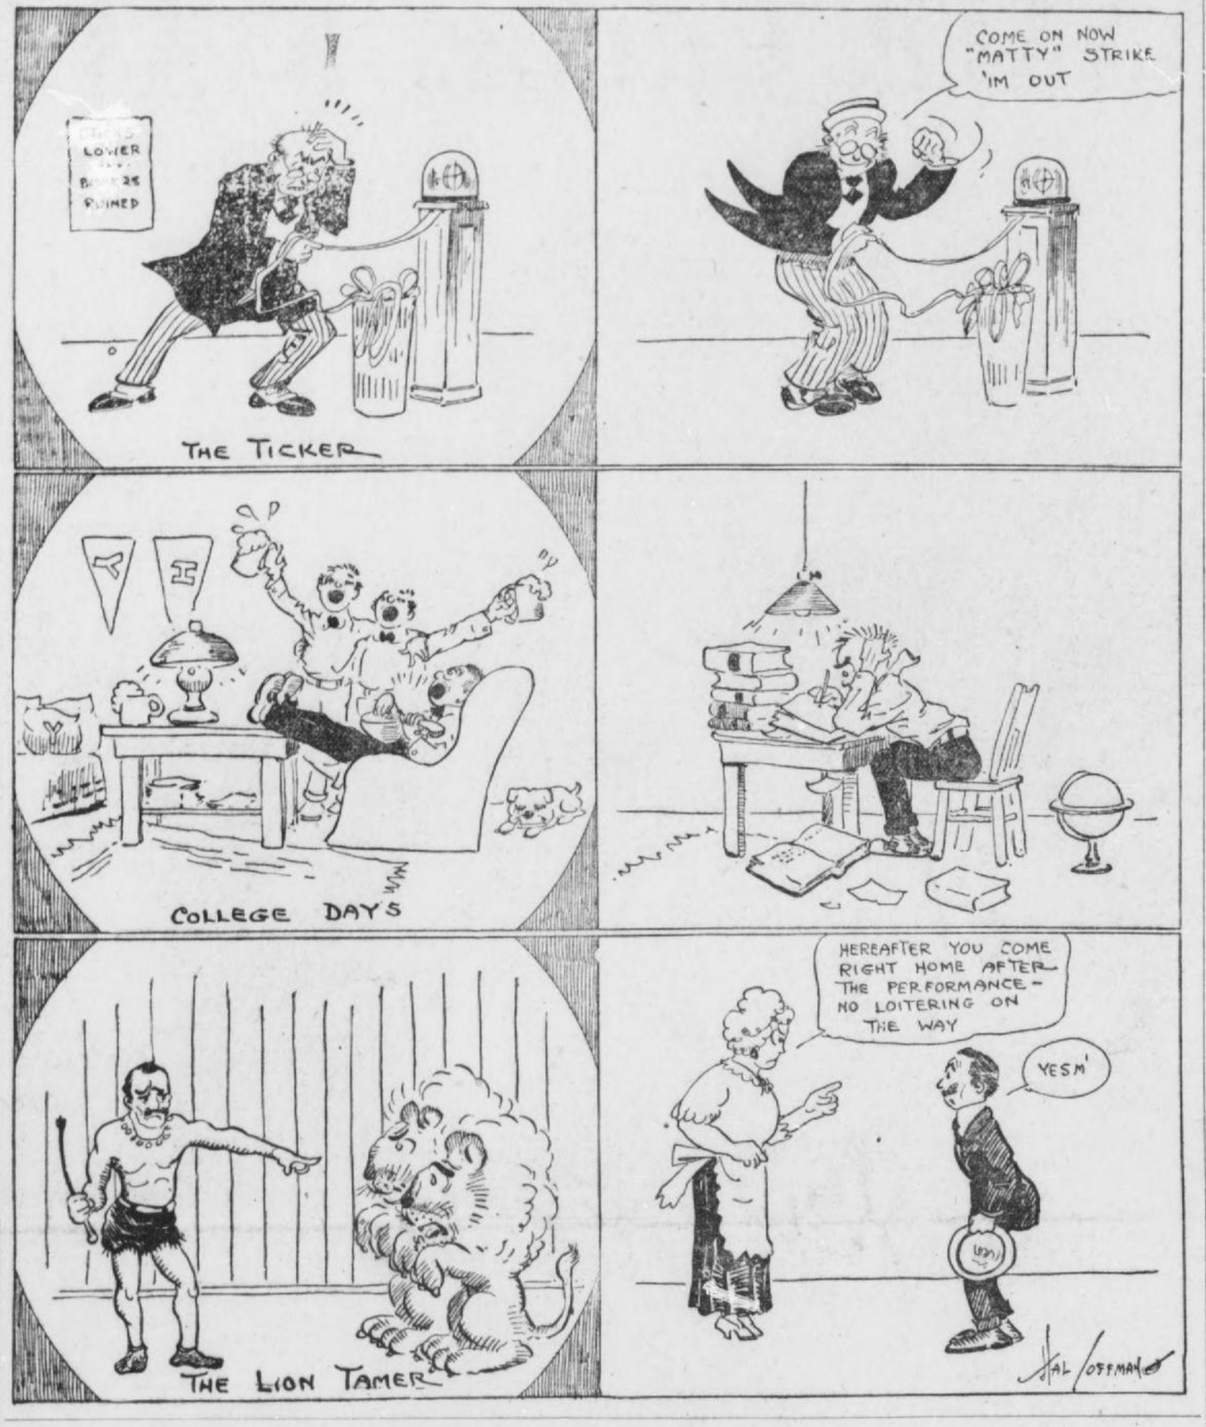

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

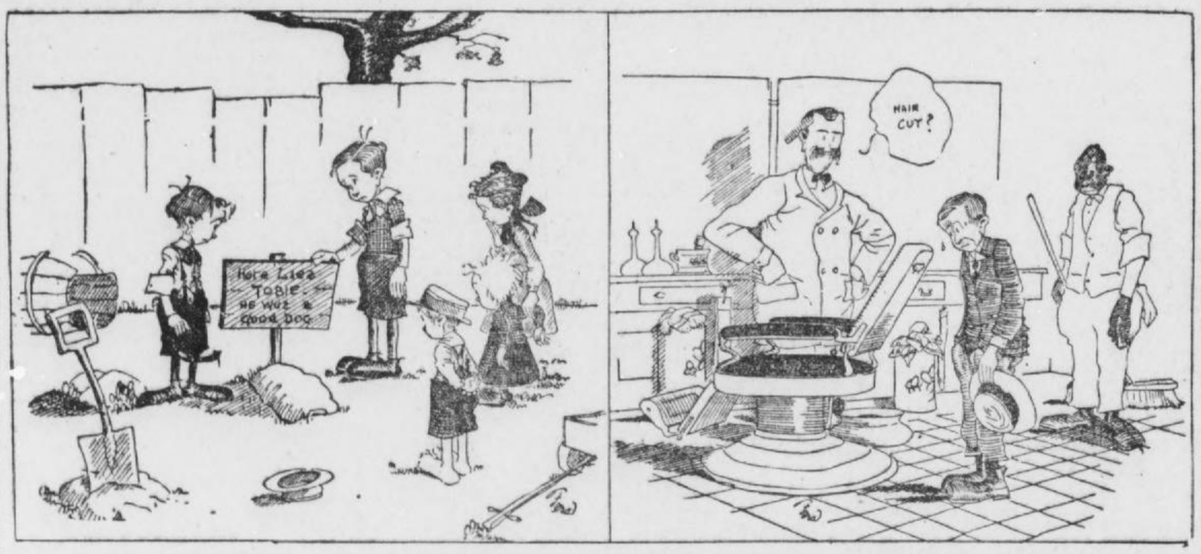

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

Adam Smith

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

SO many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power,
Great love to that great hour.

BURSTINGAIR TANK STUNS 7 MEN

W. H. Hutchins, No. 152 Confederate avenue, assistant engineer at the N. P. Pratt Laboratory, No. 88 Auburn avenue, was blown twenty feet against the side of the building Monday morning about 4:20 o'clock when a compressed air tank exploded while Hutchins and half a doz negro workmen were filling it.

The negroes were also thrown against the walls, but none was injured.

Hutchins received several small cuts about his head and face, and was severely jarred. His key ring, which was attached to his belt, was blown off. It was found 50 feet from where the explosion occurred.

The air tanks in the laboratory are about five feet long and two feet in circumference, and are used in the bottling operations. Four of them were being filled under the direction of Hutchins when the accident happened.

The explosion shook buildings a block away, and was heard a quarter of a mile. The noise and jar awoke practically every person in the neighborhood. Many parties rushed to the building expecting to find workmen dead or seriously injured. All of the men in the plant were slightly stunned and were just regaining their feet when the first of the rescuers arrived.

Police Sergeant Hewett, who was more than a quarter of a mile away, at Piedmont avenue and Houston street, heard the explosion and went to the factory. He took charge of the situation and sent Hutchins home. The negroes returned to their work.

It All Depends on The Point of View

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 12.—Recorder John E. Schwartz fined Miss Bessie Carter $50 for appearing in the shopping district here in a short skirt and low-cut waist.

Fires Bullets Into Bodies of Dead Men

TRENTON, TENN., Aug. 12.—Armed with two automatic pistols, J. A. Alford, a prominent citizen of Rutherford, shot and killed W. F. Coulter and his son, Harry Coulter, two prominent lawyers of this place. After the Coulters had fallen, Alford fired several bullets into their lifeless bodies.

Alford arrived on a M. and O. train and when he alighted he began firing on his victims.

Domestic trouble is said to have caused the killings. Alford surrendered to officers and was lodged in jail.

Postal Receipts Here Top 2 Larger Cities

Figures made public by Postmaster Hugh McKee show that the receipts for the last fiscal year at the Atlanta postoffice were greater than the offices at Louisville and New Orleans, both larger cities than Atlanta.

The receipts at the local office were $1,328,011.14, at New Orleans $1,182,761.72 and at Louisville $1,163,598.18.

EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY IS DENIED

Governor Slaton Tuesday refused to honor the requisition papers of Governor Cole Blease, of South Carolina, for J. J. Zachry, of Augusta, who was charged with kidnaping his own child. The decision of the Governor followed a sensational hearing in the executive offices late Monday.

Governor Slaton based his refusal on the fact that no State law had been violated by Zachry in South Carolina and that the whole case was against the defendant grew out of the desire of Mrs. Zachry to obtain the custody of the two children.

One of the most spectacular fights for the extradition of a citizen ever recorded in Georgia occurred in the Governor's offices Monday. Charges and counter charges were hurled in turn by counsel for the defense and for the State of South Carolina, and at one time a personal mix-up between Attorney Dunbar, representing Mrs. Zachry, and Attorney Phinizy, representing Mr. Zachry, who charged that the case had been prosecuted with all the "vindictiveness" that Mr. Dunbar could summon, was narrowly averted by the Governor.

"You may wax just as enthusiastic as you like," said Governor Slaton to Mr. Phinizy, "but you can't say those things. That will not do here."

The hearing was as unique as it was spectacular. With the Governor sitting as both court and jury, attorneys for the defense and plaintiffs were allowed to argue their cases to their hearts' content with frequent interruptions by the Governor, who kept close tab on every bit of evidence offered.

TAX REFORM ACT PASSES IN SENATE

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNeill and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 12.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $280,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

Last Bill Passed By House Provides W.&A. Investigation

A bill providing for a commission of eight members to investigate the value of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and make recommendations for its lease was passed by the House of Representatives Monday afternoon, being the last House measure that will be passed during the present session.

The commission will be composed of two members from the House, two from the Senate, the chairman of the State Railroad Commission, and two civilians to be appointed by the Governor. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000 for expenses.

The House also passed, by a vote of 120 to 0, the "blue sky" law which requires registration of securities before stocks and bonds of a concern can be placed on the market. It is designed to prohibit the sale of "wildcat" stocks.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

DALTON IS FORCED TO ADMIT JAIL RECORD

The State definitely announced Tuesday in court at the Frank trial its theory that Frank deliberately premeditated and planned a crimina' attack upon Mary Phagan Friday, April 25, the day before she came to the factory and was slain.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, made the surprising announcement of the State's attitude during a heated argument over the admissibility of a portion of the testimony of one of the defense's witnesses, Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer at Montag Bros. and occasionally employed at the National Pencil Factory.

Dorsey and Hooper were objecting strenuously to the admission of a phone conversation between Frank and Miss Hall in which Frank was reported to have asked Miss Hall to come over to the pencil factory to assist in the clerical work, saying: "I've got so much work to do that it will take me until 6 o'clock to get it done."

Hooper, after the Solicitor had objected to the question on the ground that it was self-serving and proved nothing, declared that the conversation not only was self-serving, but was made in deliberate anticipation of Mary Phagan's visit to the factory in the afternoon.

"This remark was made on Saturday morning, the day after Mary Phagan's pay envelope was refused Helen Ferguson," said Mr. Hooper. "It was made in anticipation of her visit in the afternoon. It is the State's contention that Frank deliberately pre-arranged corcumstances favorable to an attack upon the girl and incidents serving to divert any suspicion from himself."

That the State was working upon the theory of premediation was hintd by the questioning of Helen Ferguson several days ago, but Attorney Hooper's address to the court was the first open declaration.

RESIDENTS OF DALTON'S HOME COUNTY RIDDLE HIS CHARACTER ON STAND

The court and chaingang record of C. B. Dalton, a State's witness against Frank, was given an airing by Attorney Arnold. Dalton was recalled to the stand and made to dmit tht he had been sent to the chaingang in 1894 on three separate counts for stealing in Walton County.

Dalton also admitted that he had been indicted in 1899 in Walton County for theft and had paid a fine of $141.66.

Attorney Arnold showed the witness copies of four indictments and asked if he knew these had been issued against him in Walton County for selling liquor to Don Tillman and Bob Harris. Dalton denied all knowledge of the indictments.

Witnesses Assail Dalton's Character.

As soon as Dalton left the stand V. S. Cooper, J. H. Patrick, W. T. Mitchell and I. M. Patrick, all residents of Walton County, were called to the stand and testified that they knew Dalton and that they wouldn't believe him on oath in a court of justice.

Misses Laura Atkinson and Minnie Smith were called and denied Walton's testimony in regard to being in their company.

Dalton testified, when he was called by the State last week, that he had visited the factory basement with Miss Daisy Hopkins and that he frequently had seen Frank in his office with women.

An unassailable alibi was the object in view when the attorneys for Frank began the questioning of a long line of witnesses who were called to testify in regard to every known movement of Frank Saturday, April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was slain.

The testimony of Miss Hattie Hall was the first along this line. That of Alonzo Mann, office boy, was next.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

Over Three Hours To Compile Report.

Q. What is your business?—A. Certified public accountant.

Q. Have you had occasion to go over the financial sheet of the National Pencil Company of the week of April 24 prepared by Leo M. Frank? A. I went over a copy of it.

Q. Have you also seen the factory record called the pencil sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you also furnished data necessary to make that sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state as an expert how long it would take to complete it?—A. I took each sheet, compiled it, and timed myself as to the length of time necessary. I prepared the sheet of the 24th day. It took me ten minutes.

Q. Were there any mistakes?—A. Yes, a little one—of one and one-half gross. It was hard to say whether it was my mistake or his.

Q. Now state the total time it took you?—A. A total of 191 minutes, or 3 hours and 11 minutes.

Q. Was that the quickest?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you took exactly the work that he did?—A. Yes; what I was told he did.

Q. That was steady work without interruption, wasn't it—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been an auditor?—A. Sixteen years.

Q. Have you an office here?—A. I am with the American Audit Company.

Q. That mistake occurred before you took up the sheet, did it not?—A. One mistake was made the Saturday before and one on Friday.

Q. Are those two trifling mistakes—a mistake of 50 cents and a gross and a half of pencils—the only mistakes you found?—A. Yes.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Pollard, this is rather an unusual assignment for you, is it not, to go over a man's business and undertake to state how long it takes him to do it?—A. No, I think not. Frequently we are called on to estimate the time it takes to do work in changing systems.

Q. Is it not true that a man can work his own books better than anyone else's books?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. How many times would a man have to multiply, divide and subtract in making up that sheet?—A. Well, 40 multiplications and 160 additions, and I can't guess on the rest.

The witness was excused and Miss Hattie Hall was called. She was questioned by Attorney Arnold.

Q. What is your business?—A. Stenographer-bookkeeper at Montag Brothers.

Q. Do you ever go to the National Pencil Company?—A. When necessary.

Q. On Saturday, April 26, did you see Leo M. Frank?—A. About 10 o'clock at Montag Brothers.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. Yes, he asked me if I could come over and do some work. I told him I didn't know, but thought I could.

Dorsey interrupted:

"I object to anything he said to her."

Arnold: "Your honor, it is part of res gestis in this case."

Dorsey: "Here is this dead girl. They would not let her show what she said at 12 o'clock and I can conceive of no principle of law that would let them show what this man said and not let her show what the deceased said."

Aimed to Show Conduct.

Arnold: "This is merely to show a course of conduct."

Judge Roan: "I can see no analogy between the two cases. I rather think you can ask the question."

Dorsey: "Well, this is a very important point, your honor, and we would like to give you some authorities."

Judge Roan: "All right."

Dorsey then read at length from the Eighty-fourth Georgia Report.

Judge Roan: "Do you expect to follow that question by showing that he had certain work to do and engaged her to do it?"

Arnold: "Yes."

Judge Roan: "Then I will let you ask it."

Dorsey threw his book on the table and sat down, laughing. Arnold continued the questioning.

Q. When did you call him first?—A. He called me up before 10 o'clock and said he had work enough to do to keep him busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey: "Is your honor going to let that telephone conversation in?"

The Solicitor's objection was overruled.

Q. Miss Hall, did you recognize his voice?—A. I certainly did.

Q. What time did you see him that Saturday morning?—A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Had you worked for him before?—A. I had been accustomed to going over and helping him on Saturdays. I asked him if he was going to need me. He said, "Yes," that he had so much work to do that he would be busy until 6 o'clock.

Dorsey Calls Halt; Frank Leaves Court.

Dorsey interrupted. "You honor, are you going to let that in?"

Judge Roan: "I don't think I will."

Arnold: "Your honor, I wish you would let me argue for a moment. Even the State does not claim any crime was committed at that time. There is no reason in the world to suppose that the accused would not have told the truth at that time. I believe that if a part of the conversation is admissible, all of it is admissible. You must admit it all to explain part. You would do this young man an injustice to shut out this evidence of this day's program, when there was not the slightest motive to be otherwise than truthful."

Frank at this moment left the courtroom and Hooper jumped to his feet for a whispered conference with Arnold.

Arnold—Yes, I waived his presence.

Judge Roan—I excused the prisoner properly.

Hooper—I just wanted to know if the defense had waived his presence.

Q. Now, we only have ten orders here. See if they are the ones Frank handed you?—A. Yes. My initials are on them. They are the ones.

Q. Now, the orders are sometimes acknowledged as the first step?—A. Yes; in that case they were.

Q. Do you recall to whom Frank was talking that morning?—A. Yes, but I don't recall the names. A man and his son came in. Then there was Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. White.

Q. Do you recall what any of them said?—Yes; Mrs. White said she wanted to see her husband.

Q. During this time was Mr. Frank working on this financial sheet or any other similar document?—A. He was not.

Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?—A. Not very.

Q. I will get you to look on this order book and see if those orders are entered.

The witness read the eleven orders from the order book.

Q. Now, is that your handwriting?—A. No; I think it is Mr. Frank's.

Q. Did you write any of these requisitions?—A. No.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I understood Mr. Frank did.

Q. Were the requisitions made before or after the orders were put on the book?—A. After.

Left Factory At 12:02 P. M.

Q. Now look at these letters and see whether Frank dictated them?—A. Yes.

Q. How many?—A. Eight, and one he did not dictate.

Q. Did he sign them?—A. Yes, I took them to him after I had typed them.

Q. Did he do any work on that financial sheet while you were there?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Just as I got on my hat and started for the door I heard the whistle blow for noon.

Q. Is there a regular whistle that blows for 12 o'clock?—A. Yes, there are several whistles.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I got to the bottom of the steps and remembered that I had forgotten my umbrella. I went back and got it. It was two minutes past 12 o'clock as I passed the time clock.

Q. Did you see any little girl in the building?—A. I did not.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you call Frank or Frank call you that Saturday morning?—A. I called him.

Q. He had a regular stenographer, didn't he?—A. They had a stenographer, but she didn't do but about one-third enough work so I had to go.

Q. Miss Hall, what were you receiving at that time?—A. Ten dollars and fifty cents a week.

Q. What are you getting now?—A. Fifteen dollars a week, and I want to explain——

Q. Never mind, just answer my questions. Didn't you state in a soda fountain last night that the raise came to you without asking for it after it was known that you were to be a witness?—A. Indeed, I did not. I don't go to soda fountains. I want to explain.

Attorney Arnold—Let her explain.

A. I insisted that they give me this raise on July 1, but they wouldn't give it to me until August 1.

Q. Did Frank come to Montag's before or after he called you up?—A. After.

Q. You are the one who called him up?—A. Yes.

Q. You did the insisting about going to his office?—A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you not swear at the Coroner's inquest that Frank left Montag's before you did?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. You acknowledged these orders with a postcard and letter?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote those between 10:30 and 12?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you state to the jury Frank left before you did?—A. I don't recall.

Q. How long would it take you to fill out the blank?—A. I never timed myself.

Talked Over Time With Office Boy

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would not take more than one minute?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you say Frank was at the office when you got there?—A. I said I did not recall.

Q. Who came in while you were there?—A. Two men and three women.

Q. What time was it the office boy left?—A. 11:30.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner you could not tell the time?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you know now?—A. The boy told me.

Q. You talked it over with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Where were you when those people came in?—A. In the outer office.

Q. How long were you there when these people came in?—A. I do not recall.

Q. Didn't you tell the Coroner it was fifteen minutes?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How long was it after those letters were dictated that you commenced writing?—A. Two minutes.

Q. Can you tell how long you were writing those letters?—A. No.

Q. When you were writing those letters, where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. After you finished, what did he do?—A. I took them in to him.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. He said he would put them in the envelopes and mail them.

Q. He said you need not wait?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get anything there Monday?—A. I got the timebook and some papers.

Q. The previous Saturday when you were over there, do you remember Frank working on the financial sheet that morning?—A. No; I helped him get up something about gross—I found afterward it was the average sheet.

made it up. I helped him by transferring some of the things to the sheet?"—A. Yes, but I thought it was the financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you state at the coroner's inquest that you helped him the Saturday before?—A. Yes.

Herself, She Says. Found Her Error

Q. When was it you discovered it was not the financial sheet?—A. I don't know, but I want you to know I discovered the mistake myself.

Q. Now, were you not at the factory the previous Saturday and helped him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you not have that financial sheet before you at the Coroner's inquest, and did you not identify it?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you said he was working on the financial sheet that previous morning?—A. He was not.

Q. Did you not tell the Coroner's jury that you were in the outer office the entire time?—A. I don't know.

Q. Now explain how your mind underwent this change. You said then you were not in his office and now you say you were.—A. I was rattled before the Coroner, because I had never been in a courtroom before.

Q. Now, didn't you say in response to th equestion, "Do you know what a financial sheet is?" that you did?—A. But I was thinking of the average sheet.

Q. Now what did you mean by telling the Coroner some of those girls came in for their pay and now saying the only one you know anything about came in for her coat?—A. I just forgot.

Q. Nok didn't Frank say that morning that he would not get up that sheet until Herbert Schiff came down and got up the necessary data? A. Yes, he said he could not go on with his work until Schiff came down.

Q. You do know that Frank said positively he could not make up that sheet until Schiff had gotten up certain data?—A. He did not positively say so. He said he did not mind Mr. Schiff being off if he had done his work, but that he had not done his work.

Q. Miss Hall, didn't you swear before the Coroner's jury that you worked on this financial sheet which is written in ink the Saturday previous, and now to-day you swear it was this sheet which is written in pencil?—A. I did not. I was identifying the handwriting on that sheet.

Q. You said lots of people wrote slanting, and it was hard to identify?—A. Yes.

Q. While you were working in Frank's outer office, you said he was very quiet and you did not know what he was doing?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether he was working on the financial sheet or not?—A. Yes; I saw the papers on his desk that he was working on, and the financial sheet was not among them.

Attorney Arnold took the witness.

Q. Why did you tell Mr. Frank you had to get away at 12 o'clock?—A. He said something about wanting me to help him in the afternoon. I told him I had to get away at 12 o'clock, and I did get away at 12 o'clock.

Dalton's Prison Record Exposed.

Dorsey objected to the answer, but was overruled.

Miss Hall was excused and C. B. Dalton was recalled to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Who is Andrew Dalton?—A. A brother-in-law.

Q. With the same name?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is John Dalton?—A. He is my brother.

Q. Weren't you three sent to the chaingang at the special term of the Walton County Superior Court in 1894?—A. No.

Q. You were not?—A. I was, but the others paid out.

Q. What did you steal?—A. A chop hammer.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to two more charges?—A. That is the only time I ever went to the chaingang. I don't know how long I served, but I was pardoned in March.

Attorney Arnold moved that the witness' reply in reference to being pardoned be struck from the records.

Q. Didn't you plead guilty to three charges all at the same time? And that the sentence was concurrent on the three charges?—A. All I took was a chop hammer. One of the other boys took a plow stock.

Q. At the February term of 1899, were you not indicted for stealing a bale of cotton?—A. For helping.

Q. Were you found guilty?—A. I was fined $146, which I paid.

Q. After that, did you not go into Gwinnett County and steal?—A. I was indicted for stealing some corn, but I was found not guilty.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long since you were in trouble?—A. Eighteen years.

Dorsey to Recall Daisy Hopkins.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Is it not a fact that there are now four indictments against you in Walton County for selling liquor?—A. If there are I don't know it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they let you get out of the county and were glad to get rid of you?—A. I have been back there every year.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Do you know that Daisy Hopkins knows Leo Frank?—A. I do.

Q. How do you know?—A. She told me she knew him, and then I saw her talking to him.

Arnold interrupted: "I object to what she said."

"That's all right, then," Dorsey replied. "I will recall her."

Dalton was excused and the defense began an attack on his character with witnesses from Walton County.

B. S. Cooper, the first witness called, was accompanied by a small boy of 6. He held the boy on his lap while he testified on the witness stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. A farmer.

Q. How long have you been in Walton County?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

Wouldn't Believe Him Under Oath.

At this point C. B. Dalton was called for but could not be found. Dorsey said he would admit that the witness was speaking of the Dalton who had testified against Frank. Hooper was excused and J. H. Patrick was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. In Walton County.

Q. What do you do?—A. Carpenter and bailiff.

Q. Have you seen Dalton here this morning?—A. I shook hands with him.

Q. Do you know his general character for truth and veracity and is it good or bad?—A. Bad.

Q. Would you believe him on oath? A. No.

The witness was excused and W. T. Mitchell was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him this morning? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his general character?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and I. M. Hamilton was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Walton County.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. No.

The witness was excused and Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, Atlanta, a woman apparently 35 years of age, was called to the stand. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. At the Empire Printing Company.

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, for two days.

Denies Dalton's Story of Strolls.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever walk home with him from the Busy Bee Cafe on Forsyth street?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you ever with him around the National Pencil Company?—

Dorsey interrupted: "I object," he said. "The witness said nothing that reflected on this woman."

Arnold: "It was a reflection for him to say that he was with her."

The objection was sustained.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. How long have you known Dalton?—A. About six months.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. I have been in his company three times.

The witness was excused, and Mrs. Minnie Smith called. Arnold questioned her.

Q. Where do you work?—A. National Pencil Company.

Q. Are you the Mrs. Smith who lives at No. 148 South Pryor street?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the only Mrs. Smith at that address?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever in his company?—A. No.

SULZER BATTLES IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

Fights for Political Life While Hostile Legislature Considers Charges Against Him.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Governor William Sulzer's political life hangs in the balance to-day. Faced by a hostile Legislature, Governor Sulzer, with his back to the wall, fought with more vigor than he had pressed into any other contest in his long political career.

Before the Assembly convened to vote on the resolution that Sulzer should be impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors" for the alleged private use of political funds and speculation in Wall Street, opponents of the Governor claimed to have enough votes to pass the resolution.

At least five of the judges of the Court of Appeals must participate in the impeachment trial, and supporters of Governor Sulzer rely upon the judicial rather than the legislative action of the proposed court of impeachment for a favorable decision in the involved case.

The resolution of impeachment, whose formulation is based on findings of the Frawley legislative committee, was introduced in the Assembly at 12:15 a. m., when 101 of the 150 members were present, but it was predicted that close to a full attendance would be on hand to-day. Democrats opposed to Governor Sulzer appointed committees to see that every member was in his seat.

Assemblyman Schaap, a Progressive, and Assemblyman Louis Gibbs, an independent Democrat, were the two nominal leaders of the pro-Sulzer forces, and they relied upon a good following of Republicans in their fight despite the fact that Governor Sulzer is a Democrat.

Beveridge Accused Of Forming Lobby

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—In an effort to minimize the connection between James Watson, former Representative from Indiana, and the National Association of Manufacturers, counsel for the latter association intends to show the Senate Lobby Committee that former Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, really was responsible for the organization of a tariff commission association to boost his own measure.

The National Tariff Commission Association was put on its feet by the National Association of Manufacturers officials, but only, they will seek to prove, after friends of Beveridge had laid the plans.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $300,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

ACWORTH.—The Cobb County Farmers' Institute, held in Acworth, was addressed by President A. P. McLain, of Acworth, and experts from the United States and State Departments of Agriculture. George M. Orr, of Acworth, was elected president, and Aubur Davenport, of Acworth, secretary for the ensuing year.

FRANK TRIAL WITNESS IS SURE, AT LEAST, OF ONE THING--A 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen, and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over!

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister," more than once—after that, it merely is "You, Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney: "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hang around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-Hump-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes "hoot," doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejeculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise, let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record everything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?"

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

The Grand Climax.

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Augusta to Share Crop-Moving Fund

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—Albert S. Hatch, president of the Merchants' Bank and a member of the committee of the Augusta Clearing House Association, sent to Washington to confer with Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department, in regard to money with which to move the crops, has returned and announces that Augusta spoke for $600,000, which she will get if she wants it. Hatch said Augusta could have probably gotten more had she asked for it.

Georgia J. O. U. A. M. In Session at Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The nineteenth biennial convention of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics met here to-day with about 150 delegates, representing the various councils in the State, in attendance.

It is probable that the next meeting will go to Athens, and that Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected councilor to succeed Judge W. W. Shepard, of Savannah. O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, state treasurer, is assured of re-election.

Extra Police to Curb Thieves Bryan Day

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 12.—Expecting an unusual representation of pickpockets when William J. Bryan makes his chautauqua address here, August 28, the borough fathers, at their regular monthly council meeting, have taken decided action.

Secretary Williams was directed to ask Superintendent Groome to have the State constabulary here on Bryan day. The occasion is expected to draw a larger crowd than any circus day in the last 25 years.

Attacks on Dr. Harris Give Defense Good Day

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

"No man in the world could examine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of the profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor! His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.
"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled. Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga. — "My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting aporlexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being."

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

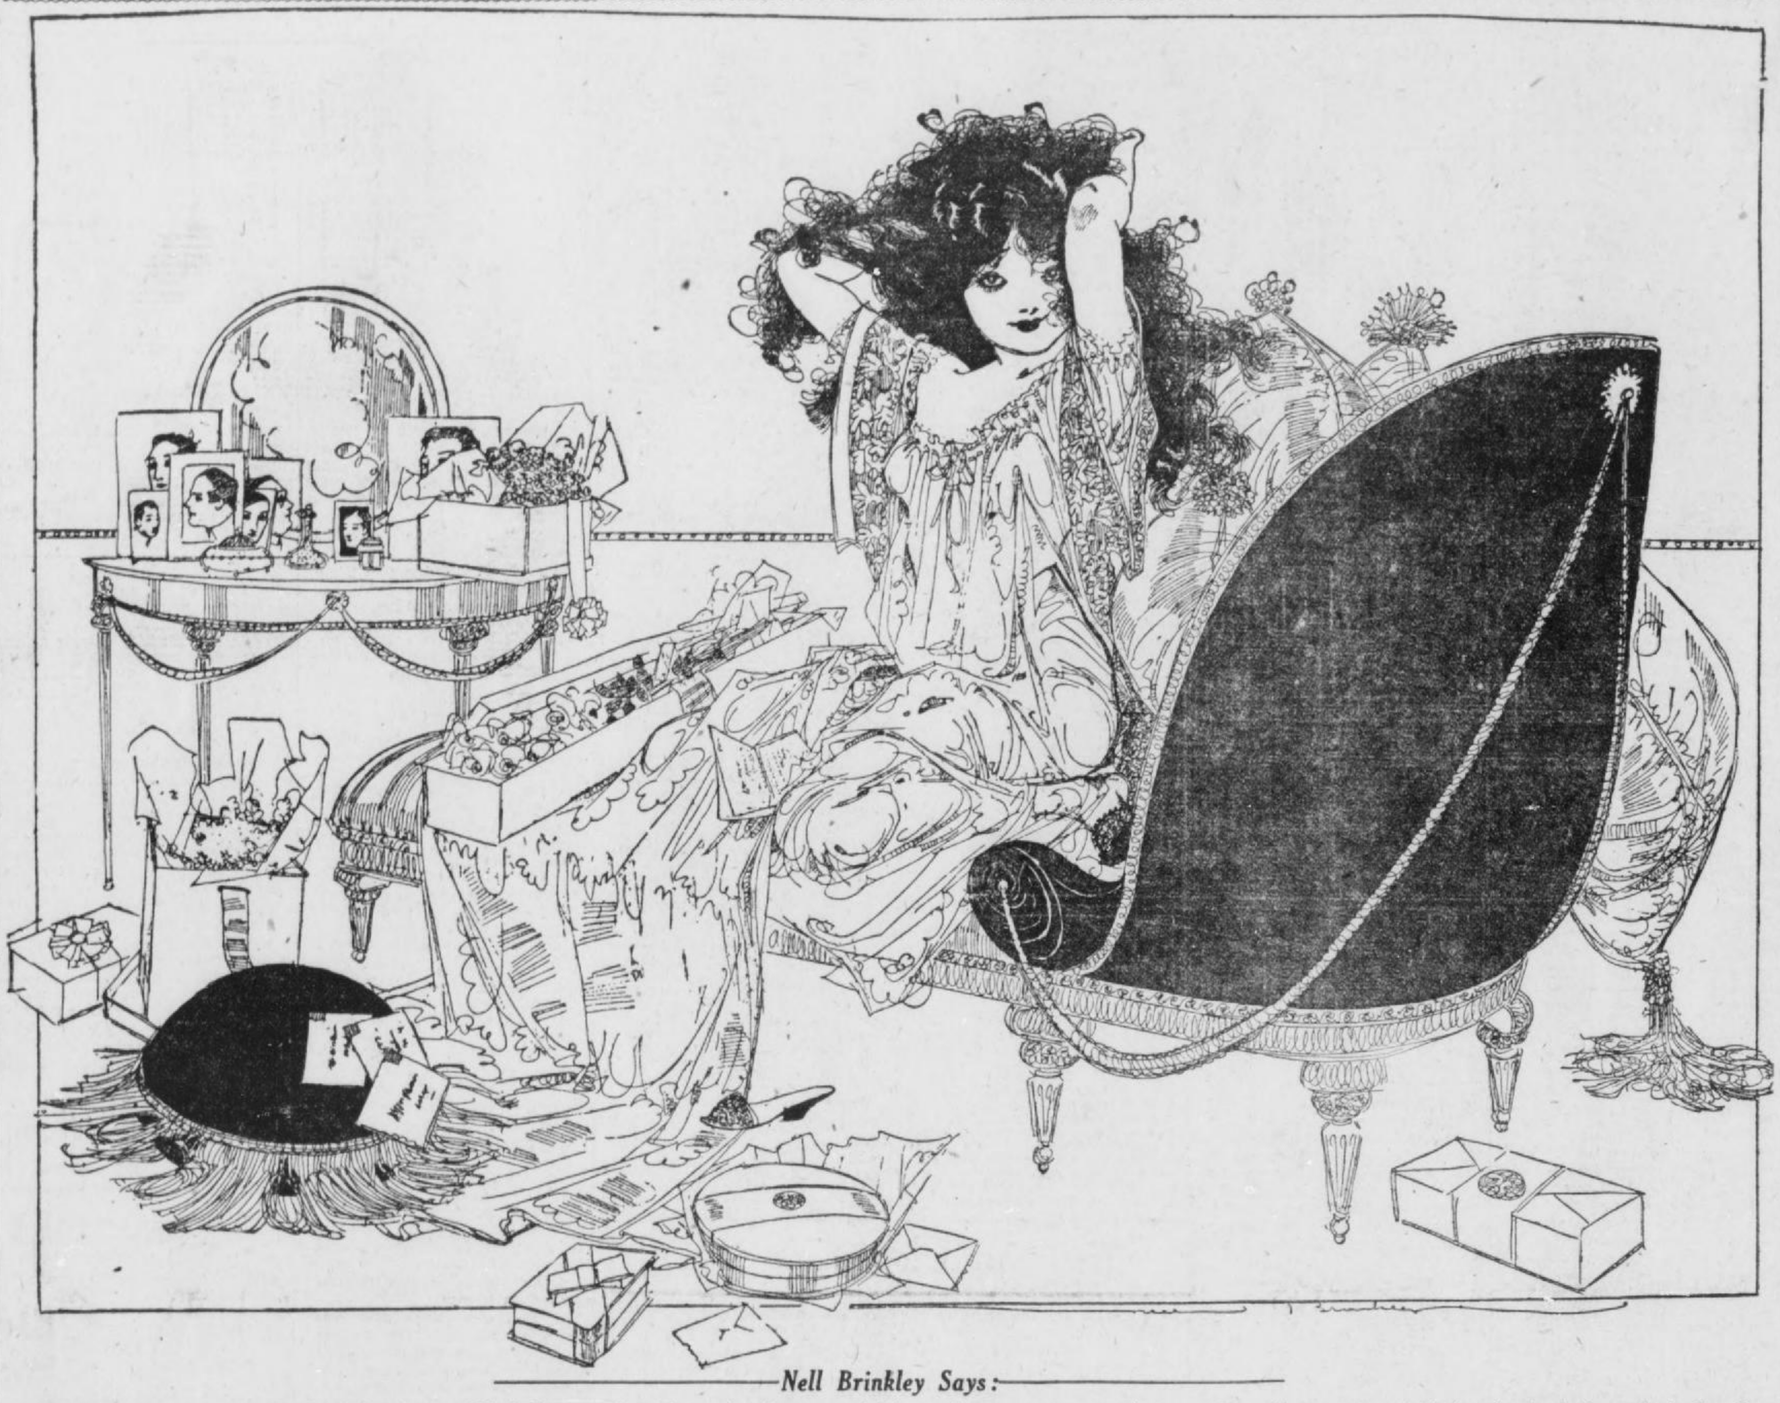

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my flowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away downtown, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night. "I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

Scene: Far out at sea; stateroom on board a huge transatlantic liner which is being tossed about like a cork in a tremendous sea.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!".

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are.
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings*"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then become so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a light flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched insteps and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl! I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said, "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stage-coaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his lips trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28.

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this being due thing.

* * *

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Baraca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Coveleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,000. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

GRIFFITH SENDS FIELDER CALVO TO CRACKERS

A TELEGRAM from Clark Griffith to Major Frank Callaway president of the Atlanta ball club, received this morning, announces that Calvo, the Cuban outfielder whom Griff has been carrying all the season, is on his way to join the Crackers and will be in Atlanta to-morrow.

"Griffith is placing Calvo with us as a means of stiffening up our club for the final sprint," Mr. Callaway said. "I expect he will get in the game at once, probably playing in place of Holtz. He is a fast and accurate fielder and a hard hitter, but the class of Griffith's regular outfield has prevented him from getting into the game with the Senators."

Beauty Is Keynote Of 1914 Hudson Six

The 1914 Hudson Six 54 7-passenger body, complete car, at $2,250, is on exhibition to-day at the salesrooms of Mr. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., local dealer for the Hudson motor-cars.

Beauty is the keynote of the new car. The most prominent feature is the pure streamline body. No angles appear at the dash. Running boards are clear. It conforms to the latest European practice. Germany originated the streamline obdy. By some it is known as the Prince Henry type.

Reliable information from leading factories of Europe indicates that at the Paris show next October practically every European manufacturer will exhibit bodies of this type. This has been adapted by Hudson designers to American use and modified to suit American ideas. The long, sloping hood merges into the lines of the dash. The graceful sweep and smoothness is unbroken from radiator cap to tail-light. The new car is designed for seven passengers. The two extra seats are of the folding type and permanently attached. They fold into the back of the front seat entirely out of the way. Yet owing to the great length of the car—135-inch wheel base—there is ample room for all passengers and all may have the greatest possible ease and comfort.

Provision has been made for entrance to the driver's section from either side of the car. The steering wheel is at the left, with control levers in center at driver's right, and tires are carried in advance of the left fore door. Thus access is obtained from either door.

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

* * *

THESE baseball magnates are proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

* * *

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

* * *

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Voss and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will lug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back.

The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the same skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mortals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again. The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile event, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. But McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther, Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

DR. ROUGLIN RETURNS.

Dr. Louis C. Rouglin returned today from a two weeks' vacation at Eastern resorts. He spent a week fishing off Ocean CView and reported several big catches.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for Infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersburg team, of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccaneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Doolin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial consideration of October's classic.

Need of Backstop.

McGraw's earnestness of purpose has been reflected in the trade he negotiated just before he left Pittsburg for this city. He traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. With Meyers out of commission McGraw realized that the hitting strength of his club would be affected. McLean is a finished backstop and a very fine sticker. Crandall, one of the grandest fellows who ever drew breath, had been of great service in former years as a relief twirler and pinch hitter.

But McGraw was well provided with pitching talent that could go the route. He strengthened the club by the trade. We were all very sorry to bid good-bye to Otis. He was a grand influence. Many a time his pleasing personality has helped to chase the blues from camp when we happened to meet with some unexpected misfortune.

I have said, in a previous article, that our pitching staff is the best in the major leagues. With the acquisition of Larry McLean I will back our catching department against any other.

Heretofore, the class was naturally ascribed to the Cubs in Archer and Bresnahan. With the best pitchers and two of the four greatest catchers in the game, I think fandom will agree that New York will boast the greatest battery strength in its company.

Upon the battery strength I confidently rely. I think it will prove an insurmountable obstacle to Philadelphia's pennant hopes.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 182 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to lavish the atmosphere in eloquence over substitutes. "Just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

PIRATES RELEASE KOMMERS TO COLUMBUS BALL CLUB

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 12.—Fred Kommers, Pittsburg National League outfielder, has been released to the Columbus American Association team and will report here today. Kommers will take the place of Jimmy Jones, Columbus' outfielder, who was seriously injured last week when he collided with Kemper Shelton in running for a fly ball.

JACK PRINCE'S DEL REY MOTORDROME IS BURNED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—The Del Rey motordrome, scene of several record-breaking performances and the largest in the world, was destroyed by fire last night. The motordrome was built by Jack Prince, of Atlanta.

SALE OF POLE TO TIGERS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 12.—President O. B. Andrews, of the local club, has announced the sale of Harry Coveleskie, the famed "Giant Killer," to the Detroit Americans. The star left-hander was secured under a blanket option held on the Chattanooga club by the Tiger management.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Out in Los Angeles to-night Jack White, a brother to Charley White, and Johnny Dundee are to clash in a 20-round bout. This will be the second meeting between the pair and the winner is to box Ad Wolgast on September 9. Charley is pulling for his brother to bring home the bacon.

* * *

Frank Whitney is getting in the best shape of his life for his scrap with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory to-morrow night. Frank knows he has a tough man before him and has worked like a Trojan for the mill. Charley is also in wonderful condition. Some scrap this should be.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, has probably the largest string of fighters ever corralled by any manager. Among the list are Barney Williams, Young Ahearn, K. O. Brown, Jack Britton, Young Caldwell, Young Solsberg, Jim Coffey, Sailor White, Tommy McCann, Young Otto and several others that Morgan can't call to mind off-hand.

* * *

Two bouts already arranged for the St. Nicholas A. C. look to be about the best obtainable. On September 10, Jack Britton, the young, clever Chicagoan, will hook up with Young Shugru, the aggressive boy from Jersey City. They will clash at 133 pounds, weigh in at 10 o'clock on the night of the bout.

* * *

Another card will bring together Al Palzer, the tenacious Iowan, and Frank Moran, the Pittsburger, on August 20 or 27. The date will be selected by Dan Ketrick and Tom O'Rourke, the managers of the two heavyweights.

* * *

While good boxers are on his trail, Champion Johnny Coulon sidetracks them by signing up with an easy mark. Bobby Burns is to be his opponent early next month at Omaha.

* * *

Young Jack O'Brien, the 18-year-old brother of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, has been matched with Percy Cove for six rounds, the match to be staged at Bellingham, Wash., during the Mount Baker marathon carnival.

* * *

Jack Keating and Soldier Bachus, heavyweights, will clash in a 10-round battle at New York to-morrow night. This will be the first meeting between the pair.

* * *

Billy Grupp, the tough St. Louis middleweight, will take on Al McCoy in a 10-round engagement at New York to-night. They have agreed to weigh 158 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Ad Wolgast believes that he will get a bout with Champion Ritchie on the coast somewhere about next November. But Ad is foolish when he says that he will bet $25,000 he beats the champ and half this amount that he knocks him out in twenty rounds. Some boxers smoke very peculiar dope.

* * *

The Arthur Pelky-Charley Miller go will be staged in Los Angeles on September 23. All details were closed yesterday. The heavyweights are scheduled to go twenty rounds.

CRACKERS OPEN WITH TWO GAMES HERE THURSDAY

The management of the Atlanta ball club announces a bargain day attraction at Ponce DeLeon Thursday, when the Lookouts will open the long stay of the Crackers at home with a double-header, the first game beginning at 2:15 o'clock. The second game is to be the play-off of a tie affair early in the season.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Cincinnati Reds played off two postponed games in Pittsburg, each club getting a victory. No other National League games were scheduled Monday.

* * *

First Baseman Miller, of the Pirates, crossed home plate four times in the second Reds'-Buccaneers' contest.

* * *

President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn club, announces that $60,000 will immediately be spent in the acquisition of new players. Pitcher Elmer Brown, of Montgomery, Ala., will report to the Dodgers September 2. Other players have been secured from Vancouver, Newark, N. J., and Grand Rapids, Mich.

* * *

Ty Cobb alone drove in enough runs to defeat the Red Sox, but the other Tigers also batted hard and the result was Detroit 6, Boston 2.

* * *

With the bases full Frank Baker, the home run driver of the Athletics, drove out a three-bagger, defeating the White Sox.

* * *

With Fred Maisel, the $18,000 beauty, cavorting on third base, the Yanks had little trouble defeating the St. Louis Browns.

* * *

The National Baseball Commission has handed down a decision in which it allows the claim of Player Ralph Myers, of the Boston National League club, for $90 due him from the Spokane club, of the Northwestern League.

VAUGHN HURLS ONE-HIT GAME AGAINST INDIANS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—Jim Vaughn, recently acquired by the Cubs in exchange for Lew Richie, added another sensational victory to his string by defeating Indianapolis, 2 to 0. Vaughn allowed the Indians one hit. He has pitched in more games than any other American Association hurler and leads the league in strikeouts and bases on balls. In forty games he has struck out 165 batters and has given 145 free transportations to first base. He also has a no-hit game to his credit for this year. Vaughn left after the game to join the Cubs in Boston.

SALLY LEAGUE INFIELDER IS BOUGHT BY STALLINGS

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—The Boston Nationals have obtained four additional men toward strengthening the team for next season. Two are infielders and two are outfielders.

The infielders are Dugey, second baseman of the Waco team, of the Texas League, and McCleskey, a third baseman of the Albany club, of the South Atlantic League.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

* * *

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

* * *

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

* * *

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into tomorrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here today. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

* * *

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER'S NEW HOME IS DEDICATED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Fifteen thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles, including city and county officials, men of the cloth and members of the leading civic and fraternal organizations, witnessed yesterday the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone and raising the California Bear Flag at the new home of The Los Angeles Examiner, now in course of construction.

These ceremonies were preceded by a great parade throughout the downtown streets, which acted as the escort of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor H. H. Rose to the new building site.

In the speakers' stand were leaders of the civic and religious life in Los Angeles, while in the grandstand was a brilliant assemblage.

The ceremonies were held under the auspices of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, and Ernest Ingold, president of the club, introduced James R. H. Wagner, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Charles Edward Bock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, offered prayer. Mr. Wagner presented the Bear Flag to The Examiner from the people of Southern California. Arthur W. Kinny, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, made the speech of acceptance. The Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Los Angeles, made an address, and the Rev. Father George Donahoo, representing the Right Rev. Thomas J. Conary, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, spoke.

Silver Trowel Given Mr. Hearst.

Douglas White, of the Advertising Club, presented a silver trowel to Mayor Rose, who officially laid the cornerstone and then presented the trowel to Mr. Hearst. Dr. Sigmund Hechtal, rabbi of the B'Nai Brith Congregation, made the closing remarks.

It was in acknowledging the gift of the trowel from Mayor Rose that Mr. Hearst delivered his address, in which he voiced his confidence in the great future of Los Angeles and Southern California. The various speakers paid tribute to Mr. Hearst and to The Examiner's influence in the expanding progress and prosperity of Southern California.

A chorus of several hundred voices rendered patriotic music.

Mr. Hearst said in his address:

I thank you most heartily on behalf of the members of the Los Angeles Examiner staff and on my own behalf for this beautiful memento and for the generous sentiments which have accompanied it. It is a pleasant thing for us to to feel that we are here among so many friends, and it is also a pleasant thing for us to feel, as we all do feel, a sincere reciprocal friendship for the citizens of Los Angeles and a deep devotion to the best interests of this great city.

Notable Occasion for Paper.

This is a notable occasion for us of The Examiner. It marks a milestone in the progress of the paper. It is made doubly memorable by the participation of our Mayor, and by the attendance of so many distinguished citizens. Yet with all its importance and significance it is only one of the many occasions which we gratefully remember where you have kindly encouraged our efforts and stimulated us to further endeavor.

Under such encouragement and stimulus The Examiner has grown until it is one of the biggest and best of all my publications. Certainly there is no publication of mine from Los Angeles to London in the success of which I take a greater pride and pleasure.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner first because I am a Californian and take pleasure in the success of everything Californian. (Applause.)

I was not born in Los Angeles, but I was born in California.

A man is a Los Angelan, no matter on what street of Los Angeles he is born or lives, and a man is a Californian no matter in what part of California he is born or lives.

Bound Together Closely.

We Californians are learning more and more that we are all bound together by the firm bonds of fraternity and that the combined success of all as individuals make the complete success of all as a community. We are learning that a friendly rivalry does not mean a foolish jealousy; that the fullest achievement is through co-operation, and that whatever operates for the benefit of California operates for the benefit of all of us as Californians.

I take pleasure in the success of The Examiner, too, because I realize that Los Angeles is destined to become, and is fast becoming, one of the greatest cities in the world. (Applause.)

I want my system of publications to be essentially a national institution, and to be national it must have representation in Los Angeles as adequate as in any of the greatest cities of the nation.

Finally, I take pleasure and pride in the success of The Examiner because Los Angeles is not only a leader in material development, but a leader in ethical and intellectual development—a pioneer in political progress.

What are as yet only ideals even in many of the most advanced localities of the world are actualities in Los Angeles.

What are dreaded as threatening theories in conservative centers are established as practical and beneficial facts in this progressive community.

Conservatism a Failing.

The older sections of this country and of every country are hampered and handicapped in their development by also-called conservatism which is too often nothing more than sheer selfishness or inertness.

The phrase "conservatism" is made to cover a multitude of failings.

The lack of imagination to foresee, the lack of energy to attempt, the lack of courage to act, the lack of ability to achieve are all cloaked under that convenient word "conservatism."

Conservatism is the attribute of age. Energy, enthusiasm, courage, confidence and conviction are the characteristics of youth and strength. It is these that have wrought the miracle of Los Angeles.

In New York the citizens are still struggling vainly for that first essential of electoral reform—the direct nomination.

In Los Angeles you have possessed this power long and employed it well. In the East intrenched privilege still is declaring against the awful possibilities of the recall. For years you have exercised that function of popular government justly and judiciously.

In many localities the citizens are timidly hesitating to adopt woman suffrage. You have not only proved the feasibility of their right, but have demonstrated the definite benefit of it.

Noted Political Achievements.

You have made universal suffrage a fact and popular government a reality. You have exercised the initiative and referendum wisely and temperately.

You have divorced your local city government from national politics and have made it what it should be—a business institution conducted for the business benefit of the stockholders, the citizens.

You have brought water from the cool, clear streams of the distant mountains, undefiled, instead of collecting it from the poisoned and polluted puddles of the populated districts.

You have put your public money honestly and intelligently into great public works instead of into the pockets of greedy promoters and corrupt politicians. You are invading confidently and completely the field of public ownership in spite of the forebodings and forbiddings of interested public service corporations.

You have disproved all the arguments of retained corporation attorneys and dissipated all the opposition of paid corporation politicians.

And behold!

Strides Bring Prosperity.

You have prospered incomparably in spite of your bold advances and striking innovations; nay more, my friends, you have prospered because of them.

In the favoring physical atmosphere of this country, trees and fruits grow big and in the favoring moral and spiritual atmosphere of this community human institutions grow to greatness.

I am truly proud and pleased to have a newspaper here to do its share in the development of this Great city, to play its part in the progress of this great State. I am happy, too, to have a newspaper system to sow the seeds of progress in other parts of the nation and to cultivate it there so that it may take root and flourish and blossom and bear fruit.

My devout wish is that Los Angeles may ever continue to be a leader in the moral and material development of the country; in the economic and political progress of the nation and that The Examiner may be a potent factor in this development, an effective force in this progress—a cornerstone in the splendid structure of Californian achievement.

Tribute Paid to Examiner.

Excerpts from the speeches of prominent Los Angelans follow:

MAYOR H. H. ROSE—The construction of the wonderful building is one of the greatest things that was ever done for a city the size of Los Angeles. A building over 300 feet long and large in proportion, devoted to the uses of one newspaper, in the city of Los Angeles is indeed a magnificent enterprise. While this is the first time I have had occasion to lay the cornerstone of a building, except, maybe, a rough log hut or a stone hut in the mountains, I hope I may have occasion to use these trowels for purposes like this many, many times during my administration.

DOUGLAS WHITE, representing the Advertising Club of Los Angeles—The advertising clubs of the Pacific Coast have been extremely successful in their work up to this time. Every movement needs a leader, and so has the movement for truth in advertising on the Pacific Coast. However, when we entered on this movement it already possessed a leader, for 25 years ago, or about that time, in the city of San Francisco, a publisher arose who made the plain statement that no matter what the circulation of his paper might be, that circulation would be given truthfully and honestly to the people who bought space. That publisher was William Randolph Hearst. From that time up to the present, in all the papers which he has owned and published, he has carried out that same idea of honesty and truth in his advertising, because in the circulation depends the sale of advertising.

THE REV. GEORGE DONAHOE representing the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty, of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles—What attaches importance to this occasion and to the building that is now laboriously rising here is the fact that this building is destined to become a great center of newspaper activity in our gloriously growing city. As the mission of The Examiner goes forward the power of The Examiner grows stronger. So briefly, then, this is my good wish, first in behalf of us all, newspaper readers of Southern California, that this building which we to-day with ceremony officially begin, may always be to us a source of information, and for the great newspaper genius who honors this occasion with his presence our one hope and good wish and prayer is that the influence, the great influence that he so surely holds—that it may ever be devoted to works of fighting evil in high places, defending the weak and forwarding sound morality the world over.

DR. SIGMUND HECHT, rabbi of the B'nai Brith congregation—In my own and in the name of those whom I have the honor to represent I bring my meed of congratulations and encouragement and cheer, first of all to those who are primarily affected by this event, to that honored head of this gigantic enterprise, to that man nationally honored for the purity of his character, for the sincerity of his purposes, for the directness of his intentions, for his ability and for the policy with which he inspired The Los Angeles Examiner to favor none and be fair to all—William Randolph Hearst. The Los Angeles Examiner—under God may it grow and prosper and be a power in the development and in the uplift of our glorious country.

ARTHUR W. KINNEY, president of The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce—The people of Southern California offer The Examiner their sincere congratulations upon this memorable occasion which marks an epoch in its wonderful career in our great city. It has always held an unbounded faith in the marvelous destiny of our Southwestern metropolis and it has ever backed up this faith by striving for everything that might contribute to the prosperity of our people. It has, indeed, been one of the sturdy sentinels at this far Western outpost of American idealism. Long ago it enunciated a policy of civic and industrial progress that must appeal to every person who has the welfare of our city at heart—a policy which, if pursued, must hasten to the unfolding of the great movement that is destined to make our Southwest empire world famed. Mr. Hearst has ever shown a most friendly interest in the development of Los Angeles, and the erection by him of the magnificent and commodious new home of The Examiner is indicative of the fact that he sees a glorious future for this splendid city. All Southern California must wish for this splendid newspaper the prosperity that the great magnitude of its enterprise and public spirit deserves.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

Charges Speaker Burwell With Breaking Promise to Bring His Measures to Vote.

A tilt in which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

Shakes Finger at Holtzclaw.

The clash between McCrory and Holtzclaw came during the consideration of the Western and Atlantic Commission bill. Mr. Holtzclaw objected to a motion to dispense with the reading of the bill when the House went into committee of the whole, and Mr. Crory, who was standing near shook a menacing finger at the Houston County Representative and said:

"Holtzclaw, you are trying to kill time to prevent my bill coming to a vote. You had better look out!"

Mr. Holtzclaw was in conversation with a member at the time. He glanced at Mr. McCrory, but made no reply.

The failure of the House to take action on the McCrory bill Monday kills the measure for the rest of the session, inasmuch as the Senate has served notice that it will not consider any House bill passed after Monday.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

THIN FOR YEARS--"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon, Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

LIND CAUTIOUSLY HUNTS KEY TO SITUATION

Studies Conditions in Mexico While Administration Awaits Report Before Planning.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent to Mexico City by President Wilson, is making himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Mexico. The watchword of the present situation is caution, as Mr. Lind and the attaches of the United States Embassy fear that a hasty step will cause complete failure of the Ambassador's mission.

It was reported that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, had contrived to arrange an official visit at the National Palace to-day. It was assumed that he might then present to President Huerta or Foreign Minister Aldape the note given him by Envoy Lind.

Mr. Lind called at the embassy again to-day. He refuses to say anything about his instructions from Washington.

Hostile Acts Are Lacking.

To the layman it seems that the Mexican situation is standing still rather than showing improvement, although to official eyes the lack of any direct hostile action by Mexico or Mexicans is a good omen. The Mexican people are apathetic and conservatives believe that President Huerta virtually stood alone in his defiance of the United States. However, allowance is made for the Latin temperament. If anti-American feeling flares up on a grand scale, it may sweep the republic.

Claiming the Government has been misrepresented, President Huerta has placed a strict censorship upon the cable line. Even telegrams to the United States State Department pass under this careful inquiry.

N. A. Jennings, correspondent for the Hearst papers, and Marvin Ferree, another American newspaper man, released from prison last night after being detained 24 hours, were kept under close surveillance to-day. Both feared they would be expelled under the undesirable alien law.

Embassy Guard Declined.

The arrival at Vera Cruz of more United States warships has caused bitter comment in the Mexican press. The commandante of the rurales has offered to provide a permanent guard about the United States Embassy, but Mr. O'Shaughnessy informed the Mexican Government that the Stars and Stripes provide enough protection.

Mr. Lind, despite warnings of his friends, walks abroad in the streets or rides in an open automobile, making no effort to hide his identity. At the Hotel Lascurain he mingles freely with the other guests.

Mrs. Lind, who suffered a slight indisposition upon her arrival here, was reported better to-day.

Saves Girl From Injury in Runaway

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—J. P. Doughty, Jr., a prominent cotton man, proved himself a hero in a runaway here yesterday when he saved Miss Frankie Rubenstein, an attractive Augusta girl, from serious injury. Miss Rubenstein was driving up Broad street when her horse became unmanageable. Doughty attempted to grab the reins, but was unsuccessful, and then he seized a wheel. He was thrown, but he held firm and soon climbed into the buggy and secured the lines, bringing the horse to a stop.

Charlton Goes Back To Italy in Steerage

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Porter Charlton will be taken back to Italy next Thursday in the steerage of the steamer Re d'Italia.

A lieutenant and a brigadier of the Italian military police have been sent over to take charge of the prisoner and have notified the Italian Consul that they were instructed to get steerage tickets for their return journey.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $843 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 281 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

Spooning Couple Sit On Turtle; All Move

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 12.—A young couple, strolling on Sullivan's Island became fatigued. Why not sit on that overturned boat over there? They did. But the "boat" moved. She shrieked and the "boat" moved faster. It was a 600-pound turtle asleep on the beach. The turtle carried six men to the water. In its nest were found 200 eggs.

Spooning couples on Sullivan's Island now carry lanterns.

GRADE ADDED TO SCHOOLS.

ACWORTH.—At a meeting of the board of education to-day it was ordered that an additional grade be added to the Acworth High School and the Smith Lemon Institute, and that the school be made to conform to all the requirements to become a State accredited school.

Slaying Ends Feud Of North Carolinans

ALEXANDER, N. C., Aug. 12—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would have been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

GILMER TO ELECT SHERIFF.

ELLIJAY.—Sheriff J. H. Penland, of Gilmer County, having been appointed a United States Deputy Marshal and having resigned the office of Sheriff, the Ordinary has called a special election for August 28 to fill the unexpired term. Ex-Sheriff Bob Milton and J. H. Ray, present Tax Receiver, are the opposing candidates.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—An absence of weather news of features in the cables caused the cotton market to open dull to-day and first prices were from unchanged to 1 point off to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call strength developed and prices rallied 3 to 10 points from the initial level, due mainly to the dry map in the Western belt. The ring apparently seemed to want cotton and purchased rather freely at times. Many of the larger spot houses were noted buyers.

Cordill was out with a report on parts of the Eastern belt, which was considered very favorable. This, coupled with a private telegram from Austin, Texas, stating that no change of consequence is noted in conditions, while the weather has been hot and dry, the temperatures were only 90 degrees yesterday and the entire State toward Oklahoma, cotton is opening fast and in ten days it will be moving freely all south of Waco. This brought out rather active selling from Wall street, but offerings were so rapidly absorbed that prices during the late forenoon were firmly maintained around the early high point.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.45; October, 11.11; December, 11.05; March, 11.04; January, 10.84.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.50; October, 11.12; December, 11.10; January, 11.11; March, 11.20.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Chisholm & Chapman: Private reports are being received in numbers from the Southwest advising of general deterioration, but the trade here is so intensely bearish and speculation is so limited that those reports have little or no effect.

Raymond Pynchon & Co.: We do not look for much further depression in prices under present conditions.

Josephthal, Louchheim & Co.: We continue to advise sales on all strong spots.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We feel that current prices are very full, and the market can be advantageously sold on all rallies.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows mostly cloudy in Texas and North Carolina, generally fair over rest of the belt. No rains shown on the map, except light shower at Galveston and Amarillo, and raining in far west Texas at El Paso. Nice rains fell over south central Gulf and North Carolina, but little rain elsewhere.

* * *

F. M. Cordill wires: "Charlotte, Greenville, Atlanta to Montgomery an unbroken stretch of excellent crops is noted. Atlantics show uninterrupted improvement since my last trip. The weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable. Conditions were never better at this date."

* * *

Waxahatchie, Texas, wires: "Hot winds hurting cotton badly. We have reports stating western Oklahoma is deteriorating rapidly. Only showers reported to-day at Yoakum and Brenham."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Expected rains did not fall in Oklahoma and Texas and the market was due to advance on the opening Monday morning. But Europe reflected no alarm, Arkansas reported splendid rains, Washington unsettled weather over Oklahoma and the weather prophets among the trade said that Texas rains are imminent. Under the circumstances the market continued under the spell of Washington legislative threat and hung fire.

"Recently students of the crop have devoted much time and thought to the effect of dry weather in Texas. One faction, predicating its opinion on the general reports of lack of moisture made by the Weather Bureau and on the great number of crop damage advices now coming from the west, says the crop in Texas and Oklahoma has deteriorated sharply, and that those States no longer promise a wonderful yield. Another faction, which has looked up the western rainfall records of other years, is equally certain that the present drouthy spell is not only not abnormal, but is confined to a very much smaller area than the trade realizes.

"Thus it is that some traders adhere to the belief that a very large crop is on the way, conditions east of the Mississippi River being excellent, while others are now becoming convinced another year's need will exceed production. Meantime new crop cotton is being absorbed by previously created requirement just as the talent expected it would be, but the demand for later shipments is small, a fact that robs the bull side of the account of much attractiveness."

The Journal of Commerce says the volume of business passing in the cotton goods markets is being underestimated. Jobbers are doing a good general trade. Cotton yarn prices are easier. The lower trend of prices on the cotton exchanges has caused some setback in the goods markets, but there are few goods available for spot delivery. Most mills do not care to go far into another cotton crop until they are better satisfied of the outcome of the crop.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Generally clear, rain at Amarillo and El Paso. Oklahoma—Clear and hot."

3 Held as Swindlers Of Barnum's Cousin

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—The three persons, two women and one man, accused of swindling Mrs. Sarah Barnum, aged 82, of Syracuse, N. Y., cousin of P. T. Barnum, have fled from Chicago, the police learned positively to-day.

Henry Russell, of Spokane, Wash., a mine promoter; Miss Frances Waldo, his private secretary, and Mrs. Kaila Waldo, her mother, were named in the warrants. Deals for $82,000 were charged against the trio, and it was said Mrs. Barnum was left penniless through investments in mines.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—The corn market again led in the matter of strength and activity at the opening of to-day's session on the Board of Trade, early advances of ¼c to ⅜c being shown over last night's close. The principal factor of strength in this cereal proved to be dry and hot weather in the Southwest, although rains have worked a little farther south in Illinois. Shorts covering in a free manner at the opening on the weather reports, and holders refused to let go their lines unless they were able to secure advances.

Foreign advices were against the price of wheat, and included declines of ⅝d to ½d in futures at Liverpool and ½d to 1d in the spot article. Favorable weather was reported throughout Europe. Russia reported larger arrivals and the offerings of Russia and Danubia were also of increased quantities. Northwestern receipts were again small.

Outs were ⅛c to ¼c higher at the start, the strength shown in the corn market being the principal influence.

Liquidation of provisions was on in earnest and sharp price losses were recorded in the absence of adequate buying power.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "Sentiment in wheat is inclined to be more conservative, although a majority of the local professionals are bearish. There is little new in the situation and for the time being traders are waiting developments in the Northwest, as the season is at hand for frost scares there. The trade in September corn is decreasing and looking for bullish crop reports within the next few days.

"A report of the development of agriculture says the general crop conditions on August 1 averaged for the United States 82 per cent lower than on the same date last year; also 4.3 per cent lower than average condition to August 1 of recent years. Weather conditions about August 1 were unfavorable for crops in general. Lowest conditions are found in Kansas, with 31.6 per cent, Oklahoma 18, Kentucky 12.6, California 12.8, Illinois 12.3 and Maryland 12.2 below average. Highest are in Wisconsin with 7.6, Washington 8.3, Florida 5.2, Minnesota 4.3 above the average."

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Union Pacific made a new high mark for the present movement at the opening of the stock market to-day, when it began selling at 154⅛, or ⅜ above Monday's final.

The tone was strong and most of the issues showed fractional gains. The accumulation arose from scattered sources and include some shares which for a long time have been neglected.

Among the advances were Woolworth, ½; Stees common, ⅛; United States Rubber common, ⅜; Union Pacific, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Anaconda Copper, ¼; Bethlehem Steel, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; Texas Company, ½; Southern Pacific, ¼; Reading, ⅝; Pennsylvania Railroad, ⅛; Northern Pacific, ⅝; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie first preferred ⅝, and Erie common, ⅛.

New Haven, which closed last night at ⅞, crossed par, opening at 100⅛.

St. Paul, which sold ex-dividend, opened at 107⅛, against 108¾ at the closing last night.

The curb was firm.

Americans and Canadian Pacific in London were strong.

STOCK GOSSIP

"As I have said many times of late, any activity the stock market displays is when prices are advancing. I hear that the large interests are heavily long of securities and are accumulating more from day to day.

"Although prices have had a good advance from the low of June 11, the advance under way will continue until stocks are at a considerably higher level. I am especially bullish on Union Pacific, Steel, Copper and the Tractions, and believe holdings should be increased in all of these issues on any moderate recession."—G. D. Potter.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

.:. Adam Smith .:.

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

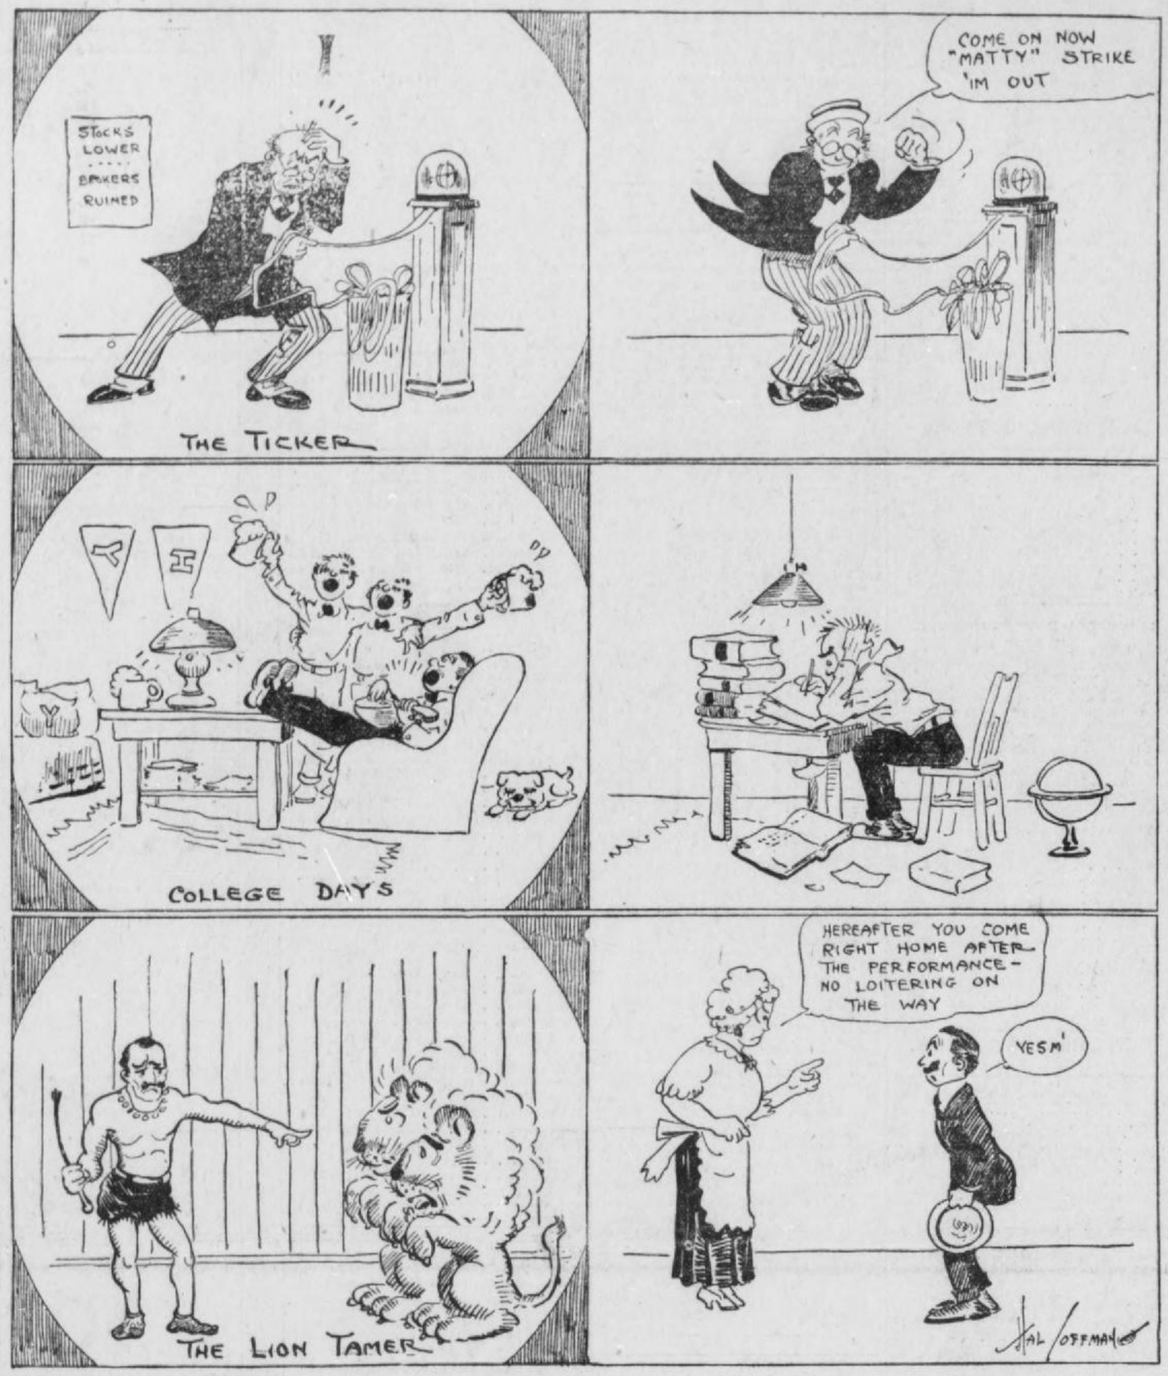

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

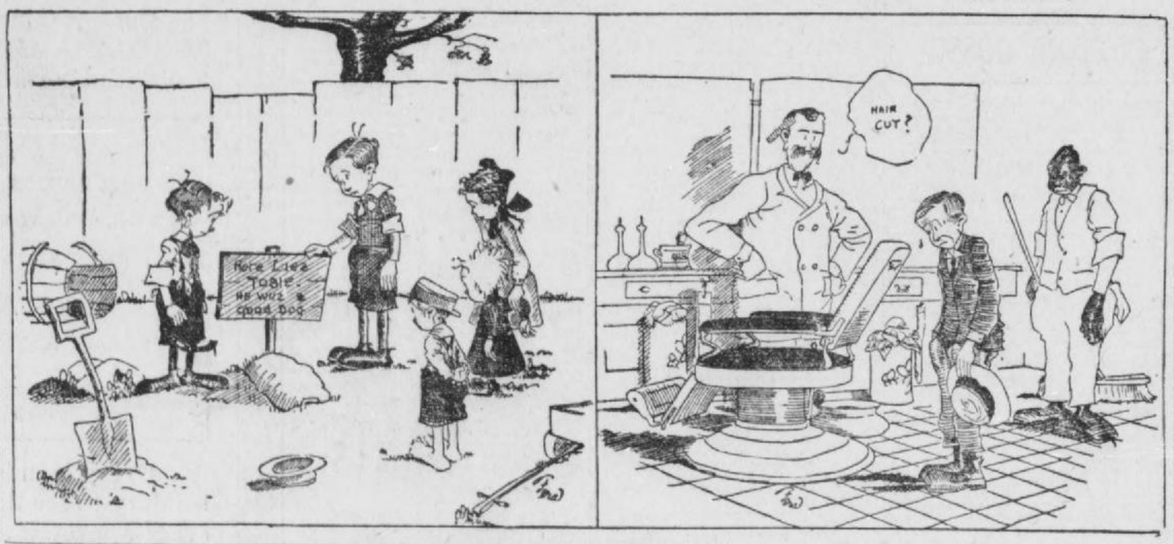

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless.
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power.
Great love to that great hour.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

M'CRORY IN HOT CLASHES OVER BOOK BILL

A t[illegible]n which Representative McCrory, of Schley County, charged Speaker Burwell with having failed to keep his promise in regard to placing the McCrory schoolbook bill on the calendar, followed by another in which McCrory shook a menacing finger at Representative Holtzclaw and warned him to "look out," enlivened the proceedings of the House Monday afternoon.

Mr. McCrory arose to a question of personal privilege shortly after the disposition of the "calf bill."

"I was promised by the Speaker of this House," he declared, "that he would place my schoolbook bill on the calendar for consideration today. He has not done it. I've heard enough about calves this afternoon to stock a book, and it seems to me that the members of the House consider calves more important than the 500,000 school children of Georgia.

Studied Opposition Charged.

"If any man loves a child better than he does a calf, let him help me get this schoolbook bill up for consideration. It looks to me like there is a studied effort to suppress my bill."

Speaker Burwell denied that he had promised Mr. McCrory to place his bill on the calendar.

"I did not state that I would have the bill placed at the head of the order for the day," replied the Speaker. "I told Mr. McCrory that I would request the Rules Committee to place his bill on the calendar, but not being the entire committee, I had no power to so place it. The bill was placed on the calendar for consideration today, but no one could foresee that the time of the House would be taken up by little things."

House Begins Move To Shorten Trials

A resolution providing for a commission of seven members to investigate the civil and criminal procedure of Georgia with a view to abolishing long-drawn-out trials and hearings was passed by the House Monday.

The commission will be composed of three members of the House, two of the Senate and two appointed by the Governor. Mr. Slater, of Bryan, in discussing the resolution, referred to the trial of Leo Frank as an example of the slowness of Georgia legal procedure.

Start on $1,000,000 High School in Fall

PULLMAN, ILL., Aug. 12.—Work on the buildings for the Pullman Technical High School, which will cost more than $1,000,000, will begin before the end of autumn, according to an announcement received by Pullman residents to-day.

The board appointed to administer the $1,200,000 bequest made by George M. Pullman for the school will meet here in October and decide upon the final details.

San Francisco Dry In Wee Sma' Hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—For the first time in history, a restriction was placed on liquor traffic in San Francisco when the new law making it illegal to sell drinks between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. went into effect.

The law was obeyed generally throughout California.

Negro Is Lynched by Mob at Laurens, S. C.

LAURENS, S. C., Aug. 12.—Overpowering the Sheriff, battering down two doors of the jail and a door to the steel cage, a mob of 2,000 dragged Richard Puckett, a young negro, from his cot and swung him to a railroad trestle.

The negro had attempted an assault on a young white girl Monday morning. He was later captured and confessed his guilt to the Sheriff.

Bloodhounds trailed the negro from the scene of the crime. The young woman could not positively identify the negro.

$900 in Prizes for Hog Exhibits at Fair

MACON, Aug. 12.—The announcement is made that $900 in prizes will be awarded for the best exhibit of Duroc Jerseys, Berkshire, Poland-China and Tamsworth swine at the Georgia State Fair.

The American Duroc-Jersey Swine Breeders' Association has just placed a cash prize with the fair association, and so has the American Berkshire Association. The fair association will distribute $685 and the Southwest Georgia Swine Breeders' Association also offers an award for the best pigs.

Electric Light Men To Meet in Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The annual convention of the Southeastern section of the National Electric Light Association, comprising the States of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, will begin in Macon Thursday morning. About 400 electric light men are expected to attend.

Thursday night there will be a reception at the Dempsey Hotel and Friday a barbecue for the visitors at the Log Cabin Club. A number of prominent men are scheduled to make addresses.

TAX REFORM ACT PASSES IN SENATE

Question Put Squarely Up to the House—Validity of Slaton Revenue Bills in Doubt.

With the Senate substitute for the Sheppard House taxing bill back in the House for ratification after passage in the Senate in a night session Monday, and the possibility of the Administration taxing bills being thrown out on constitutional grounds, the wave of tax reform in this session of the Legislature reached its crest Tuesday morning.

Leaders in the Senate declared Tuesday morning that a serious doubt exists as to the constitutionality of presenting the three Administration taxing bills which were defeated in the House last week. The legal point is said to rest upon the constitutionality of presenting bills in one house after they have been defeated in the other. Should this opinion hold, the three bills offered for the Administration by Senators Miller, McNeill and Tarver will be thrown out and the Senate will rest on its laurels earned late Monday evening when the substitute to the Sheppard bill was passed, 29 to 12.

Question Put Up to House.

Senate leaders declared Tuesday morning that it was now squarely up to the Lower House to redeem itself and adopt the taxing bill as passed by the Senate. Should the House assume a generous attitude in the matter and ratify the Senate bill, the Senate in turn, the leaders of this body say, will put back the $280,000 appropriation which it sliced off of the House general appropriation bill last week. This can be done, it is claimed, without financially embarrassing the State Treasury with such a taxing law on the statute books as the Miller-Anderson bill passed by the Senate.

The bill provides for a State tax commissioner with offices in the State Capitol and county boards of tax assessors. According to the claims of the authors and supporters of the bill, it will increase the annual revenue of the State by at least $1,000,000, sufficient to pay off the present deficit within the next three years, as well as the teachers.

Passed After Hot Debate.

The bill was passed in the Senate after nearly five hours of debate Monday afternoon. Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint author of the bill, made a vigorous defense of the measure in a two and a half hour speech. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth, followed Senator Miller in a vigorous attack on the bill. He declared the bill did not provide an adequate personal property tax.

Other Senators who spoke briefly in opposition to the bill were McGregor, of the Nineteenth, and Olliff, of the Fourth. Senator McNeill, in supporting the bill, charged that the Lipscomb bill, defeated in the House, had been framed by the Chamber of Commerce of Athens, the home town of Senator DuBose. It was for this reason, he intimated, that the Senator from the Thirtieth opposed the present bill.

Upon motion of Senator Tarver, the previous question was called and the final vote was taken. Following the vote, which was 29 to 12 in favor, President Anderson for the first time during the session congratulated the Senate. The bill was transmitted immediately to the House.

Postal Receipts Here Top 2 Larger Cities

Figures made public by Postmaster Hugh McKee show that the receipts for the last fiscal year at the Atlanta postoffice were greater than the offices at Louisville and New Orleans, both larger cities than Atlanta.

The receipts at the local office were $1,328,011.14, at New Orleans $1,182,761.72 and at Louisville $1,163,598.13.

BURSTING AIR TANK STUNS 7 MEN

Hurled Twenty Feet Against Wall, Pratt Laboratory Engineer Is Badly Cut.

W. H. Hutchins, No. 152 Confederate avenue, assistant engineer at the N. P. Pratt Laboratory, No. 88 Auburn avenue, was blown twenty feet against the side of the building Monday morning about 4:30 o'clock when a compressed air tank exploded while Hutchins and half a dozen negro workmen were filling it.

The negroes were also thrown against the walls, but none was injured.

Hutchins received several small cuts about his head and face, and was severely jarred. His key ring, which was attached to his belt, was blown off. It was found 50 feet from where the explosion cocurred.

The air tanks in the laboratory are about five feet long and two feet in circumference, and are used in the bottling operations. Four of them were being filled under the direction of Hutchins when the accident happened.

The explosion shook buildings a block away, and was heard a quarter of a mile. The noise and jar awoke practically every person in the neighborhood. Many parties rushed to the building expecting to find workmen dead or seriously injured. All of the men in the plant were slightly stunned and were just regaining their feet when the first of the rescuers arrived.

Police Sergeant Hewett, who was more than a quarter of a mile away, at Piedmont avenue and Houston street, heard the explosion and went to the factory. He took charge of the situation and sent Hutchins home. The negroes returned to their work.

"Poor Old Dad," Poem Touches Ham Lewis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis isn't the Lewis who is advocating a "Father's Day," although hundreds of correspondents think he is; but—

He has received a copy of a song from a man in Decatur, Ill., entitled "Poor Old Dad." The chorus ran:

No, it isn't meant to slight him,
But it looks a little sad;
All the bouquets made for Mother,
Not a bloom for Poor Old Dad.

"Poor Old Dad!" sighed Senator Lewis. "Now I know we must do something for him."

Extra Police to Curb Thieves Bryan Day

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 12.—Expecting an unusual representation of pickpockets when William J. Bryan makes his chautauqua address here, August 28, the borough fathers, at their regular monthly council meeting, have taken decided action.

Secretary Williams was directed to ask Superintendent Groome to have the State constabulary here on Bryan day. The occasion is expected to draw a larger crowd than any circus day in the last 25 years.

900 Young Women Ask to Join Army

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—The War Minister has received a petition from 900 young Frenchwomen who ask to be allowed to join the army in the auxiliary services.

They declare they are prepared to submit absolutely to military discipline, adding that their dearest hope is to consecrate part of their youth to France, and thus co-operate with their brethren in the national defense.

Last Bill Passed By House Provides W.&A. Investigation

A bill providing for a commission of eight members to investigate the value of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and make recommendations for its lease was passed by the House of Representatives Monday afternoon, being the last House measure that will be passed during the present session.

The commission will be composed of two members from the House, two from the Senate, the chairman of the State Railroad Commission, and two civilians to be appointed by the Governor. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000 for expenses.

The House also passed, by a vote of 120 to 0, the "blue sky" law, which requires registration of securities before stocks and bonds of a concern can be placed on the market. It is designed to prohibit the sale of "wildcat" stocks.

Disease Turns White Children Into Black

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 12.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black.

The disease is pseudo leucamia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

Girl's Face Crushed By Kick of Horse

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—Martha Rawls, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Rawls, of this city, has been carried to a hospital in Atlanta for an operation.

The little girl was playing around a horse belonging to her father when it kicked her, striking her left cheek and crushing both the upper and lower jawbones.

Physicians here removed the crushed bones, and later decided to carry the child to Atlanta for treatment in a hospital there.

Charlton Goes Back To Italy in Steerage

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Porter Charlton will be taken back to Italy next Thursday in the steerage of the steamer Re d'Italia.

A lieutenant and a brigadier of the Italian military police have been sent over to take charge of the prisoner and have notified the Italian Consul that they were instructed to get steerage tickets for their return journey.

State Pays $1 Per Minute for Prayers

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 12.—Prayers for the Legislature cost the State $842 during the session of 1913. Officiating chaplains receive $3 for each invocation. In the Assembly 153 invocations were offered, at a total compensation of $459, while in the Senate there were 218 invocations, costing $384.

Estimating the length of each of the 581 prayers at three minutes they cost $1 a minute.

DEFENSE BEGINS ALIBI TASK; RELATIVES OF ACCUSED ARE CALLED

Having cuffed and battered the theories of Dr. H. F. Harris about to its satisfaction, the defense in the trial of Leo M. Frank settled down Tuesday to spend most of the day in establishing exactly where Frank was practically every minute Saturday, April 26, the date upon which Mary Phagan came to her death in the National Pencil Factory.

Among those to be called were Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Frank's parents-in-law, who know of the time at which he left and arrived home the day of the tragedy; J. C. Loeb, who rode on the street car with Frank on his return to the factory in the afternoon; Miss Rebecca Carson, who met Frank on the street on his way to the factory, other acquaintances who saw him during the day, and employees at the pencil factory who know of some of his movements in the factory Saturday forenoon and afternoon.

For the first time since the trial began there were vacant seats in the courtroom when Tuesday's session opened. All who desired were given admittance, but there was room for many others

The convening of court was delayed for several minutes because of await for Attorney Reuben Arnold. During that time Frank talked animatedly with his attorney, Luther Rosser. They stood in the middle of the courtroom and the prisoner seemed perfectly composed. Attorney Arnold arrived and asked that C. B. Dalton be called. He said he did not want him on the stand, but wanted to be sure he was there.

C. E. Pollard, an expert accountant, was the first witness called. He began to testify as to the time required to make out the finance sheet. Attorney Rosser said that the defense probably would conclude its expert testimony with Mr. Pollard, and that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, would be the next witness.

Pollard testified that the minimum time in which Frank could have compiled the finance sheet was three hours and eleven minutes. This bore out the testimony of Herbert Schiff, Frank's co-worker, and Joel Hunter, expert accountant.

The defense had what was probably its best day on Monday. Medical experts were on the witness stand the larger part of the day. The purpose of their testimony was to knock down, one after another, the sensational statements of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health. All of the witnesses joined in ridiculing every important theory or conclusion that was reached by the distinguished chemist and physician.

Experts for Defense.

These are the medical experts called by the defense to combat the testimony of Dr. Harris:

Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland, first president of the Georgia State Board of Health, and president of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Professor George Bachman, demonstrator in physiology at the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons; formerly one of the faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, a specialist in surgical practice.

Dr. J. C. Olmstead, a graduate of Columbia University, and a practitioner in Atlanta for 32 years.

Here is a summary of Dr. Harris' theories on the death of Mary Phagan and the consensus of the four medical experts' opinions in regard to the theories:

How Views Clashed.

Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour of the time she ate her meal of cabbage and wheat bread at home. The condition of the cabbage shows it had been in her stomach no longer than that when death stopped the digestive processes.

Mourners Forget Corpse When 3 Are Killed at Funeral

MACON, Aug. 12.—The preacher, a deason and one of the women mourners were killed in a shooting affair at a negro funeral at Round Oak, in Jones County, late yesterday afternoon.

The preacher stopped the services, upon hearing pistol shots near the church, and rushed out to quell the disorder. He was shot just as he stepped out of the doorway. The other two were killed in a general shooting affray that followed. The negro minister was T. M. Howard, of Macon.

In the excitement the funeral was forgotten, and the corpse lay in the church all night, but this morning another preacher was secured and the interment took place.

Sheriff Roberts went to Round Oak early this morning when news of the affair reached him at Grays.

Augusta to Share Crop-Moving Fund

AUGUSTA, Aug. 12.—Albert S. Hatch, president of the Merchants' Bank and a member of the committee of the Augusta Clearing House Association, sent to Washington to confer with Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department, in regard to money with which to move the crops, has returned and announces that Augusta spoke for $600,000, which she will get if she wants it. Hatch said Augusta could have probably gotten more had she asked for it.

Georgia J. O. U. A. M. In Session at Macon

MACON, Aug. 12.—The nineteenth biennial convention of the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics met here to-day, with about 150 delegates, representing the various councils in the State, in attendance.

It is probable that the next meeting will go to Athens, and that Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected councilor to succeed Judge W. W. Shepard, of Savannah. O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, state treasurer, is assured of re-election.

Slaying Ends Feud Of North Carolinans

ALEXANDER, U. C., Aug. 12.—A feud of four years' standing ended in the killing Monday evening of Dr. W. J. Clontz by O. M. West, a rural mail carrier. Three bullets were fired, either of which would have been fatal.

West met Dr. Clontz on the street and, with the remark, "I hear you said you would kill me on sight," drew a revolver and began firing.

West surrendered to an officer and later was carried to Asheville and lodged in jail.

amine those specimens of cabbage and tell either from their condition or from the conditions found in the stomach of the murdered girl nine days after death within hours of the time that elapsed between her meal and her death."

The wound on the back of the girl's head indicates that she was knocked unconscious and later strangled to death.

Called Reckless Conjecture.

"From the data at hand, it is absolutely impossible to tell that the wound on the head caused unconsciousness. It is only a rash and reckless conjecture."

Mary Phagan was the victim of criminal violence other than that superficially apparent.

"This is the most extraordinary surmise that could be imagined. As a matter of fact, he could not have told from the conditions he says were present that she was a victim of criminal violence, even if he had made the examination within a few hours after death, instead of nine days later."

Dr. Harris not only was buffeted about on account of his startling theories and conclusions, but because of his conduct in the case. Attorney Reuben Arnold asked Dr. Westmoreland what he would think of a physician or chemist who was called into a case like that of the Phagan murder; who made the examinations admittedly for the reason that he "liked the Solicitor"; who conducted all of his analyses and experiments in absolute secrecy, who had not even a collaborator to check up on him, and who saved none of the material for the use of chemists who might be engaged by the defense.

Solicitor Dorsey at once made objection to the question.

"I don't know that the question is admissible, but it ought to be," retorted Arnold. "We wish to show that Dr. Harris has violated all of the ethics of his profession, as well as the principles of honesty and decency and fairness. A man's life is at stake, your honor. His case should not be affected by one man's word who deliberately has destroyed all of the material upon which he says he bases his theories."

Dr. Westmoreland was permitted to answer. He said:

"It is the ethical rule that a chemist or physician either call in another expert or preserve the specimens of his test."

Solicitor Dorsey endeavored to show that Dr. Westmoreland might be influenced in his testimony by a breach of professional relations with Dr. Harris which occurred some time ago.

Attempts to Show Dislike.

"How is you feeling toward Dr. Harris?" he asked. "Is it kindly or unkindly?"

The witness replied that it was neither one nor the other.

Asked by Attorney Arnold to go into the matter to which the Solicitor referred, Dr. Westmoreland said that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. Harris and that the charges had been found well grounded, but were not regarded as sufficiently grave to warrant any action. He thereupon resigned from the State Board of Health, he said, leaving Dr. Harris in his position of secretary.

Joel Hunter, an expert public accountant, testified just before adjournment that it would have taken Leo Frank at least three hours to make up the financial sheet and balance his accounts on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered.

"That wouldn't have given him much time to go to the ball game, would it?" inquired Attorney Hooper.

It is the theory of the State that Frank was planning to go to the ball game Saturday afternoon and that he compiled practically all of the financial sheet Saturday forenoon. This is in opposition to the contention of the defense that Frank did all of the difficult mathematical work in the afternoon, something he could not have done had he just committed a brutal murder.

24 Factories Take Space for Exhibits

Only seven days remain for exhibitors to lease space in the permanent manufacturers' exposition, to be held in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Twenty-four manufacturers have already contracted.

Tuesday the committee in charge visited the various manufacturers in the city. Meetings will be held each day until next Tuesday.

On each floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building occupied by the exposition, telephones and desk space will be provided for the transaction of business. A competent man will be employed to show visitors around.

Must Pay Alimony Or Serve Jail Term

MACON, Aug. 12.—D. F. Arnold, a contractor, has been given an extension to September 5, on or before which date he must pay $285 alimony to his wife or go to jail. When arraigned before Judge Mathews on a contempt charge because he had allowed the alimony to become in arrears, Arnold asked for more time, and the judge allowed him 27 more days. He is under order of the court to pay Mrs. Arnold $75 a month.

Two other Macon men have been put in jail in the last 30 days for not paying alimony.

South Georgia Road In Receiver's Hands

VALDOSTA, Aug. 12.—The Valdosta, Moultrie and Western Railroad, operating 42 miles from this city to Moultrie, has been placed in the hands of a temporary receiver through foreclosure of a mortgage held by the Valdosta Bank and Trust Company, trustee, acting for the bondholder. B. P. Jones, of this city, owner of the $300,000 bonds, was appointed receiver and the railroad cited to show cause on August 23 why the action should not be made permanent.

The railroad was built entirely with local capital four years ago. It was started on a capital stock of $100,000. The $200,000 of bonds were issued before it was completed.

C. I. Harrel, general manager, will continue to operate the road for the receiver.

Fires Bullets Into Bodies of Dead Men

TRENTON, TENN., Aug. 12.—Armed with two automatic pistols, J. A. Alford, a prominent citizen of Rutherford, shot and killed W. F. Coulter and his son, Harry Coulter, two prominent lawyers of this place. After the Coulters had fallen, Alford fired several bullets into their lifeless bodies.

Alford arrived on a M. and O. train and when he alighted he began firing on his victims.

Domestic trouble is said to have caused the killings. Alford surrendered to officers and was lodged in jail.

Kansas Heat Wave Unchecked by Rain

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 12.—New heat records were reported to-day from several cities in Kansas. Showers in some parts of Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas failed to break the general wave of heat that has gripped this section of the country more than a week.

At Great Bend, Kans., a maximum temperature of 110 was reported yesterday. Joplin, Mo., reported 106 and Oklahoma City 102.

MASONIC CONVENTION.

ACWORTH.—The annual meeting of the Cobb County Masonic Convention was held at Powder Springs and fully 2,000 persons were in attendance. Among the speakers were Thomas H. Jefferies, past grand master of Georgia; N. H. Ballard, deputy grand master, and Wilber Colvin.

NEW MUSICAL JOURNAL.

EASTMAN.—The Musical Star, a new monthly musical journal published in this city, has just made its appearance. Professor A. M. Pace is managing editor. Associated with him are J. C. Lenderman, of McRae, and George W. Stapleton, of this city.

BILL PROTECTING HEIFER CALVES IS KILLED

House Wastes Time on Measure That Might Have Been Given Child Labor Act.

Take the child slaves, shackle them,
Throttle them if they laugh;
Enslave the women if you will,
But save my darling calf.

That was the burden of the song Monday afternoon in the Georgia House of Representatives—the same House of Representatives that has persistently refused to consider any measure to relieve the condition of the thousands of child-slaves in the State—when the legislators, for two hours, discussed solemnly and earnestly a bill designed to protect the heifer calves of the State from the persecutions of the butcher and the farmer by prohibiting the killing of the "innocent, pure-eyed little things"—that is what one member called them—until they have reached the mature age of 2 years.

Rhetorical thunderbolts were hurled by the champions of the calves at the heads of those who were determined that the last calf should be executed, to be met by bursting bombs of metaphor that shook the rafters and penetrated even to the farthest confines of the gallery; epigrammatic skyrockets threw their trails of fiery language into the running gears of the pinwheels of logic; the defenders of the calf hurled Biblical passages into the camp of the veal eaters, and the bloodthirsty members who wanted blood, red blood, delved into the poets and flung quotation after quotation into the very teeth of the advancing army of calfdom.

Bill Bleated—Then Died.

And after two hours the calf bill poked its head up through the maze of oratory and near-oratory, through the mud of condemnation and the whitewash of appreciation, gave one plaintive, despairing bleat, and died, 91 votes to 73.

Members who had viewed with equanimity and magnificent self-control the smothering of measures to aid the child-slaves felt impelled to rise in their might when the rights of the calf were assailed. Here's how some of them felt:

Mr. Conner, of Spalding—"If this bill is not passed, in five years cows will be as scarce as hens' teeth."

Mr. Ennis, of Baldwin—"Saving the calves is no laughing matter. If you had seen the slaughter of these innocent little things as I have you would vote aye."

Mr. Lloyd, of Newton—"This bill is the worst kind of class legislation. Why can't the bull calf have the same right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness that is granted the heifer calf? A man's calves are his private property and should not be regulated."

Mr. Culpepper, of Meriwether—"Why is it these men want to protect the heifer calves and allow the bull calves to go to their doom, when it is a fact that the 'female of the species is more deadly than the male?'"

Mr. Picquet, of Richmond—"The Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and it applies to calves as well as human beings. It makes my heart bleed to see these innocent little calves cruelly, brutally slaughtered to provide a veal eater's holiday."

"Prodigal" Is Provided For.

Mr. Shuptrine, of Chatham—"The bill should not pass under any circumstances. We have the Bible on our side, for it distinctly ordered that the fatted calf be killed for the prodigal son."

Mr. Spence, of Carroll—"I am outraged and indignant. This bill is the most diabolical bill I have ever seen. I vote NO!"

Mr. Wimberly, of Bibb—"To kill this bill means that the slaughter of the innocents will be continued, and what man, be he ever so strong, can endure the sight of the wild-eyed, bleating calf being led to the slaughter? There are 365,000 calves butchered in Georgia every year. If they were saved, think of the number of cows we would have in four years and the lowing herds that would wind slowly over the lea! Think of the rivers and lakes of milk, and if we can raise enough strawberries, think of the strawberries and cream we could have."

Mr. Berry, of Whitfield—"I arise to explain that I am not going to explain my vote."

The bill was introduced by Nelson, of Clayton, and favorably reported by the Committee on General Agriculture, of which Kimbrough, of Harris, is chairman.

Goat Dies Trying to Eat Senator's Speech

WILKESBARRE, PA., Aug. 12.—State Senator Sterling R. Catin has lost his goat—not that kind the jokers like to tell about, but a real one named William.

Catlin kept his pet in the barn where he had stored many of the speeches made during his long term of service at Harrisburg.

The Senator went to the barn to admire William, and to his dismay, found the goat loose among his papers. One voluminous budget was protruding from his mouth. Despite all the Senator's efforts William choked to death. The fatal document was one of Catlin's greatest legislative propositions.

Polaire Will Wear A Ring in Her Nose

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—When Mlle. Polaire, who boasts that she is the thinnest actress in the world, although she resented being called the ugliest by the New York papers—appears in America in the fall she will wear a large gold ring suspended from her nose to amuse New Yorkers with one more novelty.

She has had a ring skilfully fitted into her nose without piercing the flesh, so that she can remove the trinket when off the stage.

Toughest Town in Wyoming Is Closed

CHEYENNE, WYO., Aug. 12.—Jackpot, the toughest town in Wyoming, has been closed by the Sheriff, and its Mayor, Councilmen and inhabitants are ither under arrest or have been driven out of the country.

Jackpot was a sort of half-way place, where whisky was sold to herders and others, and where gambling was carried on in open violation of the law.

The authorities left a Deputy Sheriff behind to see that Jackpot was not reinhabited

Resents 'Weakling;' Wants to Box Heflin

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—John Black, secretary of the Bronx Men's League for Woman Suffrage, has sent a letter to Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, protesting against the characterization of men who believe in equal suffrage as effeminate and weaklings.

He says perhaps an offer to go ten rounds with the Congressman at some local club would please him, adding that some things have to be whipped into some men.

Car Hits House and Jars Man From Bed

MUNCIE, IND., Aug. 12.—Albert E. Needham, alone in his big three-story residence, was thrown from his bed and the house was pushed from its foundation by the impact of a heavy interurban car against one corner of the structure to-day. Three men were injured.

The car was being taken to the barn when it jumped the track on a curve, swung across the sidewalk and crashed into the house.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

ACWORTH.—The Cobb County Farmers' Institute, held in Acworth, was addressed by President A. P. McLain, of Acworth, and experts from the United States and State Departments of Agriculture. George M. Orr, of Acworth, was elected president, and Aubur Davenport, of Acworth, secretary for the ensuing year.

WITNESS IS CERTAIN OF 2 THINGS----HE WILL GET FEE AND 'GOOD RAGGING'

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Reader, proverbially gentle, if not always so, be glad, be joyful, and be filled with exceeding thankfulness that you have not been summoned, no matter which way, as a witness in the Frank trial!

Of course, there is a large, fat chance that you have been summoned—most everybody has—but be all those nice things aforesaid, if you haven't.

And even at that, knock on wood.

The trial is young yet—it is not quite three weeks old, three weeks, count 'em—and there still is time for somebody or other to remember that you may know something or other about something or other that may have something or other to do with the case.

Anyway, if you can't be glad and all the rest of it, be just as glad and as nearly all the rest of it as you can, while the being is good or in anywise promising.

If you are a witness in the Frank case, you are skating on about the thinnest ice ever—it makes no difference whatever whose pond you are skating on.

You are ambrosia and cake to one side and you likewise are gall and wormwood to the other—be very sure of that!

If your wife will have anything at all to do with you, and if the neighbors love you any more, when you get back home, it will be entirely because one side or the other forgot to mention the fact that once upon a time you were a horse thief, or somebody said you were a horse thief, or that you had an uncle who was a horse thief, or some pleasant little thing like that.

They don't care particularly whether you ever look like anything any more, after they get through with you down there in the big court nowadays.

Cross-Examining Is What Hurts.

Always on the direct examination, of course, the sledding is elegant.

The gentlemanly party then asking you gentlemanly questions wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world.

He knows you are a law-abiding citizen, and worthy of any trust. He dotes upon you. He loves you. He is your friend until that thing that now and then breaks loose in Georgia freezes over!

Mighty fine—but you haven't yet discovered what's coming to you!

Wait until the cross-examining attorney gets you in his demoniac clutches!

Far be it from him to remember that you have any kinfolks outside the penitentiary, or that you ever told a truth in your life.

He plainly but pointedly is perfectly willing to bet, right there, that you couldn't tell the truth in three trials, and he will lay you big odds on it, moreover!

Now, of course, the following is not precisely a sample of what has been going on in the courthouse of late, ever since the trial began, in fact, but it is about the way it must seem to many witnesses and spectators to have been, after the day is over and they undertake to recall the things that transpired.

"Mr. Witness," begins the cross-examiner, "you told the learned counsel (sarcastic smile) upon the other side, I believe, that you saw an owl sitting on the back fence about three minutes and two ticks past 8:34 on the night of the killing?"

"Mr. Witness" needn't be the least, tiny bit fooled by that "Mr." business—the cross-examiner would scorn to call a witness "Mister," more than once—after that, it merely is "You Smith," or "Smith," or "Look here, now," or something snappy and snortish.

Witness: "I said I thought it was an owl—it looked like an owl."

Begins to Shake Finger.

Attorney "W-H-A-T! Didn't you just now, in the presence of this erudite jury (shaking finger vigorously under witness' nose), swear positively (shake) and without reserve (shake), sir (shake, shake, shake), that it WAS (shake) an OWL?"

Witness: "Why-er-um-I couldn't swear it was an owl exactly—it has big eyes, anyhow!"

Attorney: "Big eyes? B-A-H! Also B-A-H, B-A-H! Likewise B-A-H, B-A-H, B-A-H!! Then (very sarcastically) it might have been a cat, eh?"

Witness: "Well, sir (very apologetically), I don't think it was a cat—it didn't say 'Meow!'"

Attorney: "Come, come, person, I don't want to know what you THINK—how dare you think, anyway?—you didn't hank around there to HEAR whether it said 'Meow,' did you?"

Witness: "No, sir (very much abashed); I admit I didn't hang around. Owls make me nervous, anyway!"

Attorney: "I've no doubt (sardonic smile) they make you nervous! By the way, person, didn't one of your honorable ancestors (profound sarcasm) come over to this country with Captain Kidd, the well-known pirate?"

Witness: "Um, oh, I——"

Attorney: "Come, come now, answer me; speak right out; tell the truth, if you CAN; did he?"

Drags Wife Into Mix-Up.

Witness: "I really can not say, sir. You see that's been so long ago, and I wasn't there, either, and——"

Attorney: "Well, you won't (more finger shaking under witness' nose) DENY that one of your ancestors may have been a pirate, will you?"

Witness: "I-er-hum-can't say. I'll ask my wife when I get home. Maybe she knows."

Attorney: "You'll ask you wife, will you? Is she your OWN wife?"

Here the Pleasant Lawyer gets up, and says:

"Your honor, I object to that question. What has a man's own wife got to do with this case?"

His honor doesn't answer right off the reel, so the other lawyer jumps up and withdraws the question.

This makes the witness feel pretty good, for he knew he had a wife when he left home that morning, but he doubts that he can swear positively to any such circumstance now.

Attorney, beginning cross-examination once more: "Let's go back to that owl. What sort of an owl was it, if (more sarcasm) it WAS an owl?"

Witness: "It LOOKED like a screech owl."

Attorney: "Well, a screech owl goes 'screech' and a hoot-owl goes 'hott,' doesn't it?"

Witness: "I am not sure, sir. I think that's the way it is. I don't know much about owls."

Misleading the Poor Jury?

Attorney, shocked almost speechless: "And here you have been telling this poor, unprotected, orphaned jury, these swell, elegant gentlemen, ALL about owls, and now you say you don't know anything about them."

Witness: "Well, ah, oh, I sup——"

Attorney: "Don't you know an owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Of the Who-ges family?"

Attorney: "Come, now, don't get gay with me, atom. Don't you know the owl is a member of the striges family?"

Witness: "Never met such a family. They don't live on my side of town."

Attorney: "Well, if you saw in the big dictionary that the owl is of such a family, would you say it was true?"

Witness, perking up a bit: "If I saw it in the city directory, I might believe it, but what's the dictionary got to do with it?"

Attorney, waxing superlatively sarcastic: "Will you speck on the face of creation, kindly permit ME to ask the questions? All I ask of you is that you let ME do that, then YOU answer, if you CAN."

Then the Pleasant Lawyer gets up again.

It certainly is a relief to a witness when the P. L. arises to ejeculate a few broken observations. He is the only rainbow in sight, once things get going.

Pleasant Lawyer: "Your honor, I submit that the big dictionary itself is the highest evidence of what the big dictionary says. If the learned counsel on the other side (great gobs, clusters and festoons of sarcasm) wishes to know WHAT the big dictionary says about owls, screech or otherwise, let him tender the BIG DICTIONARY, and stop snarling and beefing at this gentlemanly, talented, honest and exceptionally bright witness!"

The witness thanks the pleasant lawyer for them kind words, all right, for they are the first he has heard in many hours.

Mean Attorney: "Well, animal, have you a big dictionary at home?"

Witness: "No, sir; the one I use is over in the State Library."

Pleasant Lawyer: "Now, then, your honor, since this accommodating witness has answered the questions, I move that the able (withering contempt) counsel on the other side be required to bring the State Library into court, or shut off their questions about owls. I move to strike from the record everything this downtrodden witness has said about owls, unless the State Library be brought over and handed to the jury for inspection."

Mean Attorney: "Does your honor mean to tell me—ME—that I must bring the entire State Library into court, in order to prove that an owl is a member of the striges family, merely because this stubborn and evidently partisan witness will not say?"

His honor, sighing, patiently: "Well, gentlemen, what has this aforesaid and hereinbefore mentioned owl TO DO WITH THIS CASE, ANYWAY?"

Mean Attorney, getting red in the face, probably about to explode with righteous indignation: "What has it to DO with the case? Why, your honor, opposing counsel brought out the question of owls. Didn't this witness, brazenly and with palpable malice aforethought, say to this grand and magnificent jury that when he went home last Thanksgiving night he saw an owl sitting on the back fence?"

Pleasant Attorney: "I don't think the gentleman said Thanksgiving night; I think it was Christmas. It makes a lot of difference in the matter of seeing things at night, as your honor may know, or—er—may have heard, whether it be Thanksgiving or Christmas. Besides, he didn't say he saw an owl sitting on the back fence. He merely said he went home that night on an owl car."

Everything about owls, the owl car and the back fence is ruled out, and the Mean Lawyer sits down, evidently greatly chagrined and angered.

And the witness?

About all the witness hopes as he leaves the stand is that his wife at home—if she's still there—loves him, anyway, and will continue to think well of him hereafter, notwithstanding the fact that he has been a witness in Atlanta's most famous murder trial.

It makes no difference whatever which side summons you to testify in the Frank case, it's tough luck! You can't win.

You will be made to wish you never had been born before they get through with you—that's the surest thing you know!

Bulgarian Heir Is Ill; Poison Plot Reported

SOFIA, Aug. 12.—A mysterious illness has seized Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria. It was announced to-day that the Crown Prince is suffering from a nervous breakdown due to the rigors of the recent military campaign.

In view of Czar Ferdinand's trepidation over the safety of his heir reports were current in some quarters that an attempt had been made to kill Boris with poison.

People's Cry for Justice Is Proof Sentiment Still Lives

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

There is as much sentiment in the world to-day as there was in 1861 or 1776 or 1492 or 1066 or any other date that may come to your recollection.

It's not fashionable to say so, but it's true. People to-day are too prone to accuse themselves and their neighbors of being worshippers of Mammon and declaring that the money-grubbing instinct has crushed out sentiment, patriotism and honesty.

But right now in Atlanta, there is a striking example of the goodness that is man's to-day, just as much as it has ever been.

It is the one bright spot in the hideous slaying of Mary Phagan and the terrors of the trial of Leo Frank.

More people are interested in the case probably than in any criminal action the South has ever known. They are thrilled by it, for they knew that the officers of the law and the Government of the State are spending thousands of dollars to find the man guilty of her murder and punish him.

Had Mary Phagan been of a prominent house, had she been wealthy, had her family or friends been influential there would be no room for comment.

The cynic could say, "Oh, she was a rich girl, what chance would there be for a child of the masses?"

But the Phagan case gives this the lie.

Mary Phagan's family is not wealthy. It is not prominent. It is not influential.

And still the great public has arisen with a demand that can be heard the length and breadth of the nation that her slayer be found and punished.

Had Mary Phagan been a princess of Peachtree instead of just a little Atlanta girl—as good as she was pretty—who had to struggle to make her living, the sentiment would not have been half so fervid.

The sympathy that has gone out to her and her family is a lasting proof of Atlanta's and the South's democracy.

WONDERFUL HOW RESINOL CURED ITCHING HUMOR

New York, N. Y., May 19, 1913: —"I was taken with a terrible itching and burning in my hands. They would crack and bleed. I could not do my work. I had to walk the floors at night. I tried —— and ——, but no relief, until I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment—then I could go to sleep. The Resinol treatment is something wonderful, for if you could see my hands, you would never think that they were ever sore—they are so nice and soft, and I can do all my work now." (Signed) Mrs. Wm. Sutherland, 135 East 71st St.

For 18 years Resinol has been a doctor's prescription and household remedy for eczema, ringworm, pimples, dandruff, wounds, burns, sores and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. Trial free; Dept. 5-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND

Itched So Scratched Till Bled, Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga. —"My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used —— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Josie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

THIN FOR YEARS--"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon, Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work, I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh-building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd given most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and can not know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh-producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more under weight, to easily make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free. Either Sargol will increase your weight or it won't, and the only way to know it is to try it. THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a post that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being."

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my own work even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

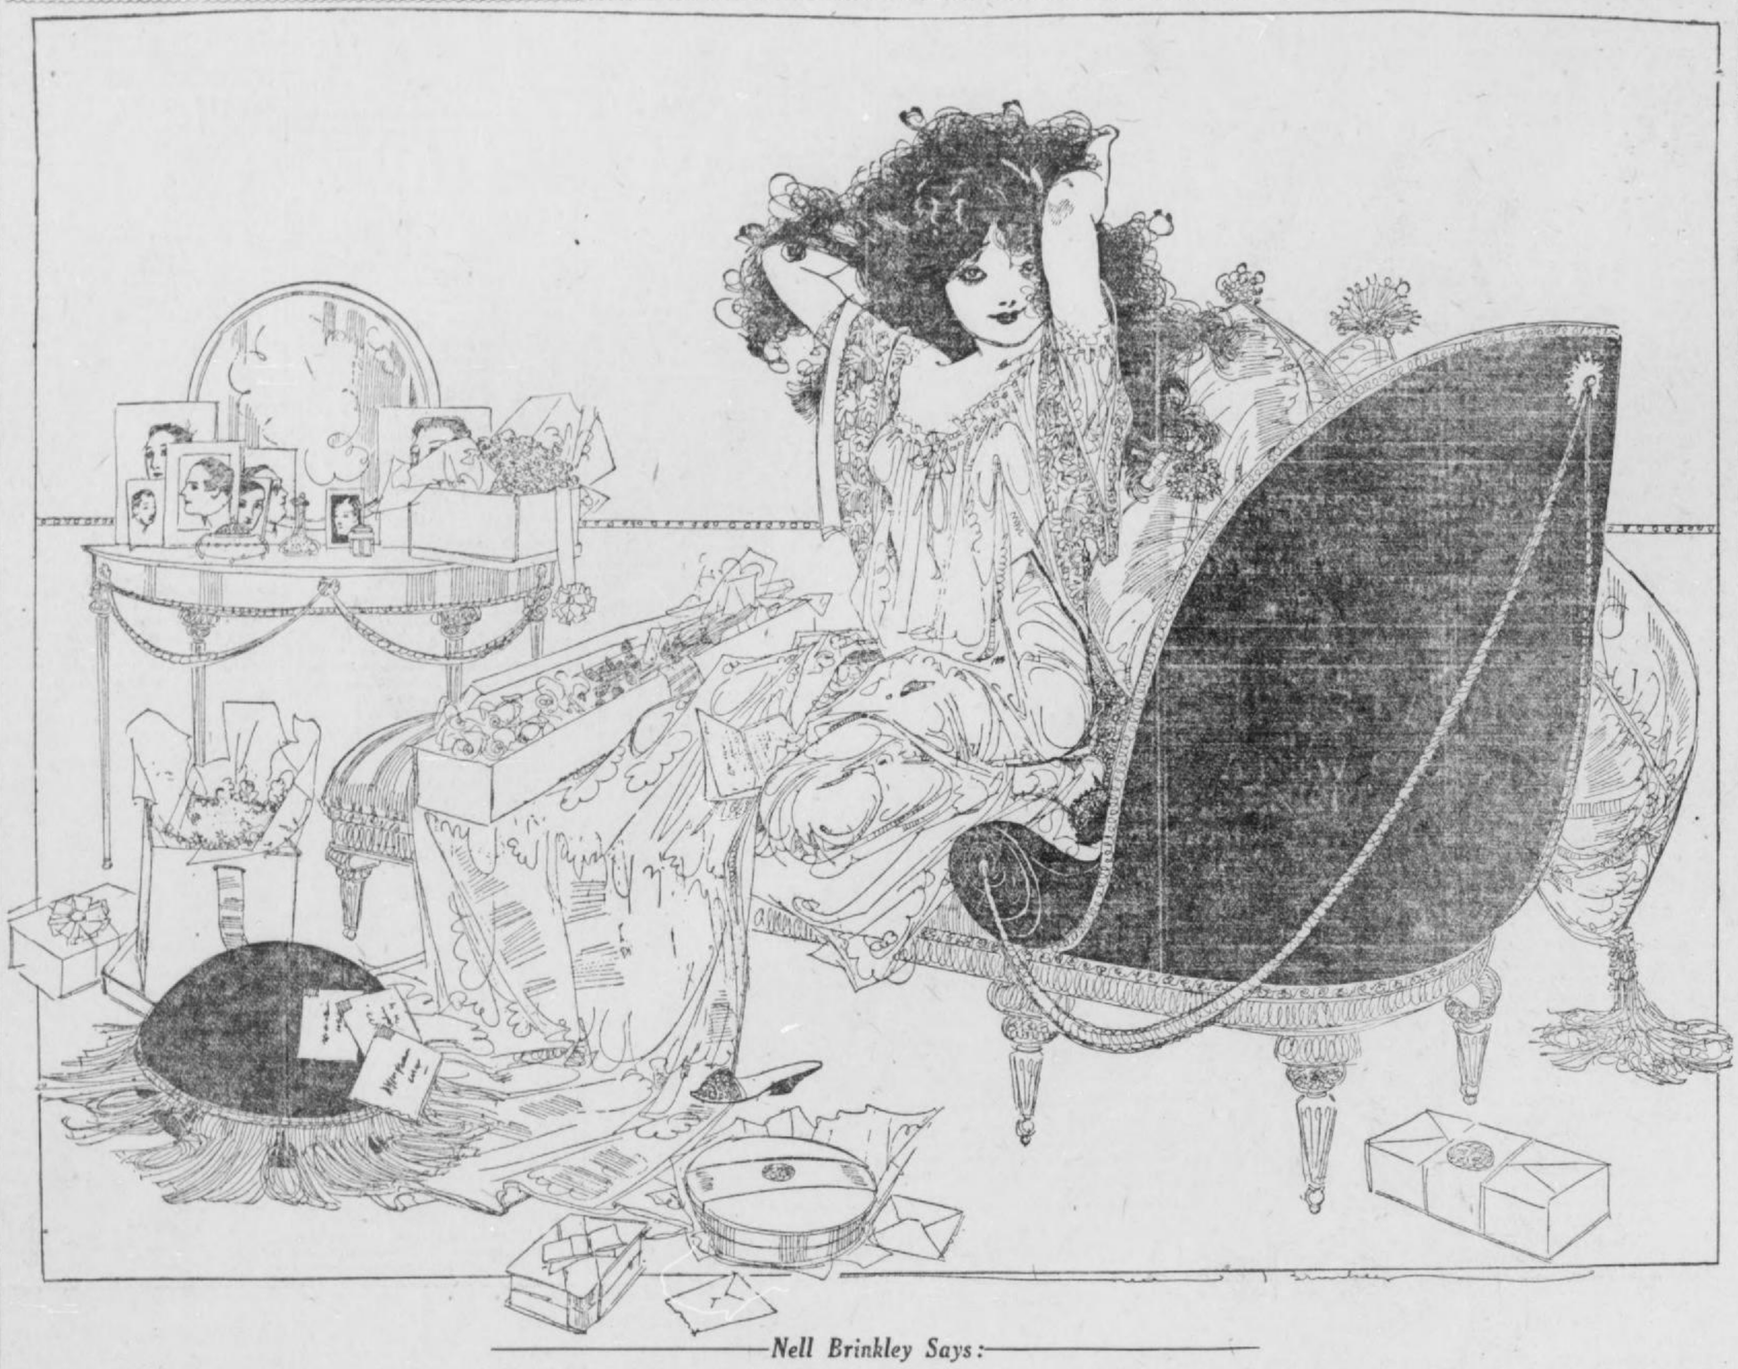

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my flowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

Who knows, and knows he knows,
is wise. Cleave thou to him,
And nevermore forsake him.
Who knows and knows not that he knows—he sleeps;
Go thou to him and wake him.

Who knoweth not and knows he knoweth not is a child,
Go thou to him and teach him.
Who knows not and knows not that he knoweth not is a fool.
No light shall ever reach him."

Says Marcus Aurelius:
"A man must stand erect and not be held erect by circumstance.
"Everything is only for a day, with that which remembers and that which is remembered.
"The present is the only thing of which a man can be deprived.
"Everything which is in any way beautiful is beautiful in itself—and neither worse nor better is a thing made by being praised."

* * *

Oh, the world has its gloom, and 'tis gloom to spare;
'Twill make you weary and sad;
But there's plenty of gleam, as is only fair,
To make you cheery and glad.

Now the world may seem dark as the shrouding night,
All clad in a pall of black.
But somewhere 'tis day—so just walk toward the light,
And the shadows will fall at your back.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings*"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then become so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place off the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away downtown, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night. "I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

PHOTOS © by WHITE STUDIOS

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

These pictures were especially posed for this paper.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched insteps and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions:

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best, it is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl! I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said. "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

An Elopement

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stagecoaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

* * * *

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his lips trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie; "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28.

E. DENT PITCHES AGAINST PROUGH IN SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 12.—Elliott Dent and Chapman will be in the heavy roles at the matinee this afternoon, and we are all hoping to collect again at the expense of the Barons.

They certainly were easy yesterday, and it was a relief to us to get away with an easy game after all the tough ones, both wins and loses, we have had recently.

To begin with, the Barons couldn't hit Gil Price. Up to the ninth he pitched air-tight ball, and then with the score 8 to 0 in his favor he eased up a little and they scored a couple of runs.

We did all our scoring in pairs, the whole line-up batting hard, and Tommy Long starred with a grand running catch of a terrific drive from Kniseley's bat that started off like a sure home run.

With the jump game safely stored away, we should take at least two of the three. But this chap Prough is due to work to-day, and even with Dent working for us we will probably have the time of our young lives trimming him. He has won his last ten games in a row, and is due to crack, but I have noticed there isn't much to this being due thing.

* * *

JOHN VOSS, the Mercer and Sally League star, blew in yesterday and was out in uniform. He looks like a real pitcher to me. George Clarke is the one to go to make a place for the new man, not because George isn't a good pitcher, for he is, when right. But he has been very wild lately, so it was back to dear old Washington for George.

* * *

NOW it is announced that I have been sold to Jersey City. Well, if the report is true, of course I'll go and do my best. But I never can tell the Atlanta fans—and the Atlanta manager—how much I appreciate the kind treatment I have received while playing for the Crackers. I am glad I don't have to report until this little pennant scrap is settled. I believe we will have some lively doings from now on.

CITY AMATEUR TEAMS TO BATTLE FOR TITLE

What should prove interesting to the fans and followers of amateur ball in the city is the announcement of a proposed city championship.

The winners of the pennants of each league will contest for the title. All details are to be worked out later.

The championship of the city will be decided by the following teams:

Atlanta National Bank (Manufacturers' League); First Baptist or St. Philip's (Sunday School); Standard Oil Co. (Railroad League); Agogas or Wesley (Baraca League); Exposition Mills (Saturday Afternoon League).

TIGERS TO GET CAVET.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 12.—The Detroit American League club has exercised its option on Pitcher Teller Cavet, of Mobile, and the latter will report to Jennings at the close of the season. With Cavet and Coveleskie on the staff for next season, the Tgers have two of the best minor league southpaws to help the veterans.

ANOTHER FOR REDS.

SEATTLE, WASH., Aug. 12.—Second Baseman Rawlings, of the Victoria Northwestern League team, was sold to the Cincinnati team of the National League for $2,000. Rawlings will report to Cincinnati next spring.

CHAVEZ BEATS BRANNIGAN.

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 12.—Benny Chavez, of Trinidad, defeated Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, in ten rounds here last night.

'YOU CAN'T HIT WHEN YOU ARE IN SLUMP,' HANS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—"So Mathewson gets my goat by watching my feet, does he?" was Hans Wagner's query, when his attention was called to the statement by John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, that the New York star twirler fooled the mighty Dutchman during the last series at the Polo Grounds by watching how he was standing at the plate.

"Say," he added, "when a man isn't hitting, the pitcher doesn't even have to watch his feet. He would walk up to within ten feet of the plate and toss up a dewdrop and the chances are that the batsman would either miss it or pop up an easy one.

"I'VE been in the game a good while and I've faced a lot of twirlers, but I never saw any that had any reason to fear me when I was in a slump. And I've never seen any I was afraid of when I was in a clouting mood.

"Matty may have watched my feet, but that didn't make me strike out. I was simply in a slump and I could not hit a balloon.

"There is no doubt that Christy studies opposing batsmen very closely. I'll give him all the credit in the world. He's a wise pitcher, and no mistake. The batter who gets just what he wants from Mathewson is a lucky fellow.

* * *

"BUT I'll tell you what I've done and seen others do. I've seen home runs made off balls that were intended to be 'wasted' pitches. I've seen batters hit balls that were never near the plate into two-baggers. I've seen bat-handle singles and all sorts of lucky ones, but I never saw a batter who could hit when he was in a slump, did you?"

Are We Going to Lose Joe Agler

Base Changed in Jersey City Deal

By O. B. Keeler.

IT appears that some lively scribe in Chattanooga jumped at a conclusion in regard to the case of Joe Agler and Jersey City. Also, he jumped too far, and jumped the wrong way.

Aside from those trifling circumstances, he made a very accurate crack at it when he reported that the Atlanta club had scornfully turned down an offer for Joe by the J. C. president.

That report, by the way, was to the effect that Borton and some unknown person were to be swapped to Atlanta for Agler. The best information on the present deal is $3,000 in cash, Joe to report when the Southern League season is over.

* * *

THESE baseball magnates are proverbially dark and mysterious in their little deals, and not much information can be extracted from them. The prevailing sentiment is one of mild wonder at the disposition of Agler, the best first baseman in the Southern League, considering the announcement that the management is keen for a pennant next year, as well as this.

* * *

HERE, however, another factor enters the proposition.

Agler very likely would have been drafted had he not been disposed of before the season began.

Still, it does seem that Joey could have been covered up and concealed with the assistance of some friendly power—C. Griffith, for example.

But it never is the part of wisdom to tip off decisions without having all the facts.

We're willing to let it cook a while.

* * *

AND speaking of C. Griffith and covering up, it appears the Old Fox in acquiring our human office building, Slim Love, is making a bona fide trade.

The wise old boy, carried away by the work of Joe Boehling, comes out flat-footed with the announcement that he wants a complete staff of fork-handers for next season—with Walter Johnson on the side, of course. The other side, you might put it.

All right, Clark, old boy. But if you draw any George Edward Waddells in the collection, we don't envy you the job of managing 'em.

WITH further reference to the growing popularity of the fork-hand slabman, we note that President Hirsig, of the Vols, is rushing madly toward Detroit to close a deal with the Tigers, who are after Claude Williams, the brilliant young southpaw for whom an offer of $3,500 has been made.

Detroit now has a corner on the likeliest left-handers in the Southern League, Coveleskie and Cavet already having been cinched by Navin.

Query: Did Jennings take a tip from C. Griffith, or v. v.?

* * *

IF Bill Smith, with Dent, Love, Vose and Conzelman to choose from, can take one of the two remaining games in Birmingham, he will lug his collection of athletes home next Thursday in third place, and within striking distance of his third pennant for this town.

He might be in striking distance, anyway, even if he lost both games to the Barons.

But the striking would be a good deal harder.

If by any happy chance or combination of good fortune and ball playing Bill should lick the Slagrollers a complete series, prospects would be even better for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

* * *

AT any rate, it now appears that the Crackers can not lose enough games on this final road trip to be hopelessly out of it by the time they deploy for action in the old Cow Pasture, bounded by the well-known Red Mountain on the east, a vast expanse of prairie on the north, and thousands of frantic bugs on the south and west.

Thousands being an estimate, of course.

* * *

BUT the Crackers won't be hopelessly out of it when they get back. The same old hope that has been springing eternal in the human breast for a considerable period of time will be bouncing up and down in the voice producers of the aforesaid thousands, according to whether Holland caresses one on the bugle or pops the same skyward with the towpath jingled.

Here's to the good old hope that springs eternal!

To say nothing of the dope.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

He manages a baseball team; his
heart is full of woe;
And sadly he remarks to me, "Why
write about me so?
You sit and wield the hammer with
a calm and careless air
While I am up against it and my heart is full of care.

"You sit and hand me out advice
on how to run my job,
And some of it is punk enough to
make me heave a sob.
You do your labor free from care
and spring a lot of bunk
And no one ever tells you how to write your daily junk."

"Ah, yes," I made reply to him, "My
life is calm and free.
No stranger ever hands advice or
censure unto me
Except about a score of kindly mor-
tals every day
Who strive to hand me dope about
the way to earn my pay.

"And he who clutters up the mails
to tell me what to do
Will sit in yonder park to-day and
hand advice to you.
And though he seems to be a guy
who leads a carefree life,
When he gets home I'll bet he gets
a bawling from his wife."

Larry McLean has been hoisted from a tail-end team to a flock of world's series money. This is a temperance sermon with reversed English.

Not that names have anything to do with it, but the eighth annual Western championship at the Omaha Gun Club was won by C. A. Gunning.

Joe Birmingham says he still hopes his team will win. Faith and Charity are strangers in our midst, but Hope we have always with us.

Reports from Columbus indicate that King Cole's artistic temperament has broken out again. The most serious feature of the case is that Bonesetter Reese is on a vacation.

While Jack Johnson finds it impossible to stir up a fight in Europe, there is reason to believe that he could find plenty of it if he ever returned to his old home, Galveston, Tex.

AFTER THE GAME IS OVER.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
We must hang around a while—
That a passenger encumbers
Every inch of seat and aisle.

Let us then be up and going,
With a heart for any fate,
Or the missus will be throwing
Cups and saucers at our plate.

Graves, McNeil and Swartz Race

Royal Clash at Drome To-night

RECORDS are likely to be given a terrible kick in the ribs to-night at the Motordrome when Swartz, McNeil and Graves meet in a three-cornered race of three heats. These lads have the fastest "boats" at the track and they are going just right these days.

There will be three heats to this three-cornered affair. The first heat will be a one-mile event, the second for two miles and the third three miles.

Graves has a new machine that he will ride to-night. He is confident of winning in straight heats. But McNeil, too, has a brand-new Jap, and it is going great guns. Swartz's machine was the sensation of the last two meets and he figures that the race is "in" already.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is going to be another bearcat event. This affair will be run in two trial heats and a final. The opening heat will bring together Glenn, Lockner and Richards. The other will find Luther Lewis and Renel fighting it out. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest trial heat will start in the final.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race which was started last Friday night. One heat was even and the riders divided the other two.

Following is the revised program for to-night:

First Event.

Southern Merchants' Purse (1-mile trial heats and 2-mile final). First Heat—Swartz, McNeil, Luther.

Second Event.

Second Heat Merchants' Purse—Graves, Renel, Richards.

Third Event.

Third Heat Merchants' Purse—Lockner, Lewis, Glenn.

Fourth Event.

Three-cornered Match Race (one mile). First Heat—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Fifth Event.

Special Match Race (carried over from Friday, when Glenn won a heat and Lockner won a heat, while the other heat was declared a dead heat); two miles—Harry Glenn vs. George Lockner.

Sixth Event.

Final Heat Merchants' Purse. (Starters—Winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat).

Seventh Event.

Second Heat Three-cornered Race—two miles—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eighth Event.

Forrest Adair Sweepstakes (2-mile trial heats and 5-mile final.) First Heat—Glenn, Lockner, Richards.

Ninth Event.

Second Heat Forrest Adair Sweepstakes—Luther, Lewis, Renel.

Tenth Event.

Third Heat three-cornered Race (three miles)—Graves, Swartz, McNeil.

Eleventh Event.

Final Forrest Adair Sweepstakes. (Starters—Winners and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat.)

HOOSIERS PURCHASE PITCHER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—The purchase of Pitcher Gaskill, of the Troy (New York State League) club, has been announced by the Indianapolis team. The Hoosiers have also recalled John McCarthy, an outfielder, sent to Troy early in the season, and Catcher Vann, sent to the Sioux City (Western League) club.

DUNDEE VS. WHITE.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Johnnie Dundee and Jack White will endeavor to entertain the public here to-night in a scheduled 20-round contest before the Pacific A. C. at Vernon.

Yankees Pay $9,000 For Three Pitchers

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Realizing that he has one of the best managers that the game can claim, but that in order to have a winning organization he must have the material, President Farrell, of the Yankees, is spending money right and left securing new men. Following his spending of $12,000 and giving two regular players for Infielder Maisel, of Baltimore, Farrell yesterday invested $9,000 for three minor league pitchers.

Pitcher Marty McHale, formerly with the Red Sox, was purchased from the Jersey City club for $6,000, and will report to Manager Chance here to-day. McHale, though a member of a tail-end club, has won more than half his games this season, and Manager Schlafly, of the Jersey City club, says he is now ripe for a return to the big leagues.

Farrell has also purchased Cy Pieh from the Dayton club, of the Central League, for $1,500. Pieh is a right-handed pitcher. The third pitcher is Paddy Cooper, of the Petersbrug team, of the Virginia League. He also cost $1,500.

PHILLIES SECURE DEVORE FROM CINCINNATI REDS

PITTSBURG, Aug. 12.—Josh Devore, center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds for the past few weeks, is now the property of the Philadelphia Nationals. He left the team last night for Philadelphia. Devore declared himself satisfied with the transfer, as it gives him a chance in the fight against McGraw's Giants, who discarded him.

Great Hurler Declares Champions Unperturbed by Philly Spurt

GIANTS NOT UNDER STRAIN, SAYS MARQUARD

By Rube Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Our second Western trip did not prove so successful as did the first. The Phillies gained some ground on us. But I do not think our pennant chances have been materially damaged. Indeed, our team has done remarkably well on the road, and but for the unusual spurt of the Quakers no one would be at all anxious over the fact that the race has tightened a bit.

Pittsburg jolted us in a manner I did not expect. But then the Pirates did no better than two out of three; and goodness knows, it was about time they won a series from us at Forbes Field. It has been long enough coming to be excused, and did not wipe out the rough treatment we handed Clarke's men on their last call at the Polo Grounds.

As a usual thing, our club trims the Pirates in Smoke Town, while the Buccaneers, in turn, make life miserable for us at home. If these conditions have been reversed it makes practically no difference.

I was pretty sore when that Smoke Town gang handed me a drubbing on Tuesday. It broke a string of ten straight victories. I didn't care to attempt to better my championship performance of a year ago. That involves too much strain. Yet I should have liked very much to beat the eleven straight of young Boehling, my illustrious contemporary of the American League.

Within Game of Record.

I was somewhat piqued because of the fact that I was within one game of his mark. Only the fact that he was a southpaw and a recruit aroused my ambition to go out for a season's record. One day cured all my disappointment and made me look upon my reverse in a philosophical manner.

I was much more disappointed when Matty lost out on Wednesday. We had all been pulling for the "grand old master" to maintain his wonderful performance when it became apparent that he had a chance for a record of straight wins. He had rung up seven straight before he fell a victim to the Pirates.

Now, I think that these reverses will do us both a lot of good. Neither of us had been under any strain and we should come back stronger than ever. It was simply a case of Pittsburg catching us when, by all law of percentage, we were overdue to lose.

I have learned from bitter experience that record making is no good thing for a pitcher who happens to be a main dependency of a box corps. The reaction from the first defeat unsettles him for a long time.

Phillies Hang On Grimly.

We have not won the pennant yet, but Philadelphia will have the merriest time of its life catching us. To my mind, the only chance of the Quakers is for them to clean up the games remaining with us. Such a possibility, in the light of what we have done to Dooin's men to date, seems far-fetched. Philadelphia has played great ball lately and hung on grimly to us. But, sooner or later, the slump must hit them.

We haven't had exactly what you might call a slump on this trip, but we have had our share of the bad breaks. Larry Doyle has been out of commission most of the time, while Chief Meyers is in New York with a lacerated thumb. This pair has always been of inestimable strength to our team, both offensively and defensively. I think that we have done very well in the West considering their absence from the line-up.

I have never seen a man who was so set upon winning a pennant and a world's championship as is McGraw this season. Our manager wishes to take a real club around the world with the White Sox. McGraw is continually drilling into us the importance of fighting every game to the last ditch. He is not worrying over the Quakers, but he is trying to impress upon all of us the importance of never for a moment letting up in our work.

And I think he has all of us pulling together as harmoniously as any club in the history of baseball. Every man on the club is doing his level best—more, I believe, to please the boss than for the financial consideration of October's classic.

Need of Backstop.

McGraw's earnestness of purpose has been reflected in the trade he negotiated just before he left Pittsburg for this city. He traded Otis Crandall for Larry McLean. With Meyers out of commission McGraw realized that the hitting strength of his club would be affected. McLean is a finished backstop and a very fine sticker. Crandall, one of the grandest fellows who ever drew breath, had been of great service in former years as a relief twirler and pinch hitter.

But McGraw was well provided with pitching talent that could go the route. He strengthened the club by the trade. We were all very sorry to bid good-bye to Otis. He was a grand influence. Many a time his pleasing personality has helped to chase the blues from camp when we happened to meet with some unexpected misfortune.

I have said, in a previous article, that our pitching staff is the best in the major leagues. With the acquisition of Larry McLean I will back our catching department against any other.

Heretofore, the class was naturally ascribed to the Cubs in Archer and Bresnahan. With the best pitchers and two of the four greatest catchers in the game, I think fandom will agree that New York will boast the greatest battery strength in its company.

Upon the battery strength I confidently rely. I think it will prove an insurmountable obstacle to Philadelphia's pennant hopes.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or Any Other Skin Disease Will Go Skulking Away If You Use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to lessen the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

PIRATES RELEASE KOMMERS TO COLUMBUS BALL CLUB

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 12.—Fred Kommers, Pittsburg National League outfielder, has been released to the Columbus American Association team and will report here today. Kommers will take the place of Jimmy Jones, Columbus' outfielder, who was seriously injured last week when he collided with Kemper Shelton in running for a fly ball.

JACK PRINCE'S DEL REY MOTORDROME IS BURNED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—The Del Rey motordrome, scene of several record-breaking performances and the largest in the world, was destroyed by fire last night. The motordrome was built by Jack Prince, of Atlanta.

SALE OF POLE TO TIGERS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 12.—President O. B. Andrews, of the local club, has announced the sale of Harry Coveleskie, the famed "Giant Killer," to the Detroit Americans. The star left-hander was secured under a blanket option held on the Chattanooga club by the Tiger management.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Out in Los Angeles to-night Jack White, a brother to Charley White, and Johnny Dundee are to clash in a 20-round bout. This will be the second meeting between the pair and the winner is to box Ad Wolgast on September 9. Charley is pulling for his brother to bring home the bacon.

* * *

Frank Whitney is getting in the best shape of his life for his scrap with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory to-morrow night. Frank knows he has a tough man before him and has worked like a Trojan for the mill. Charley is also in wonderful condition. Some scrap this should be.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, has probably the largest string of fighters ever corralled by any manager. Among the list are Barney Williams, Young Ahearn, K. O. Brown, Jack Britton, Young Caldwell, Young Solsberg, Jim Coffey, Sailor White, Tommy McCann, Young Otto and several others that Morgan can't call to mind off-hand.

* * *

Two bouts already arranged for the St. Nicholas A. C. look to be about the best obtainable. On September 10, Jack Britton, the young, clever Chicagoan, will hook up with Young Shugru, the aggressive boy from Jersey City. They will clash at 133 pounds, weigh in at 10 o'clock on the night of the bout.

* * *

Another card will bring together Al Palzer, the tenacious Iowan, and Frank Moran, the Pittsburger, on August 26 or 27. The date will be selected by Dan Ketrick and Tom O'Rourke, the managers of the two heavyweights.

* * *

While good boxers are on his trail, Champion Johnny Coulon sidetracks them by signing up with an easy mark. Bobby Burns is to be his opponent early next month at Omaha.

* * *

Young Jack O'Brien, the 18-year-old brother of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, has been matched with Percy Cove for six rounds, the match to be staged at Bellingham, Wash., during the Mount Baker marathon carnival.

* * *

Jack Keating and Soldier Bachus, heavyweights, will clash in a 10-round battle at New York to-morrow night. This will be the first meeting between the pair.

* * *

Billy Grupp, the tough St. Louis middleweight, will take on Al McCoy in a 10-round engagement at New York to-night. They have agreed to weigh 158 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Ad Welgast believes that he will get a bout with Champion Ritchie on the coast somewhere about next November. But Ad is foolish when he says that he will bet $25,000 he beats the champ and half this amount that he knocks him out in twenty rounds. Some boxers smoke very peculiar dope.

* * *

The Arthur Pelky-Charley Miller go will be staged in Los Angeles on September 23. All details were closed yesterday. The heavyweights are scheduled to go twenty rounds.

CRACKERS OPEN WITH TWO GAMES HERE THURSDAY

The management of the Atlanta ball club announces a bargain day attraction at Ponce DeLeon Thursday, when the Lookouts will open the long stay of the Crackers at home with a double-header, the first game beginning at 2:15 o'clock. The second game is to be the play-off of a tie affair early in the season.

BASEBALL

Diamond News and Gossip

The Cincinnati Reds played off two postponed games in Pittsburg, each club getting a victory. No other National League games were scheduled Monday.

* * *

First Baseman Miller, of the Pirates, crossed home plate four times in the second Reds'-Buccaneers' contest.

* * *

President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn club, announces that $60,000 will immediately be spent in the acquisition of new players. Pitcher Elmer Brown, of Montgomery, Ala., will report to the Dodgers September 2. Other players have been secured from Vancouver, Newark, N. J., and Grand Rapids, Mich.

* * *

Ty Cobb alone drove in enough runs to defeat the Red Sox, but the other Tigers also batted hard and the result was Detroit 6, Boston 2.

* * *

With the bases full Frank Baker, the home run driver of the Athletics, drove out a three-bagger, defeating the White Sox.

* * *

With Fred Maisel, the $18,000 beauty, cavorting on third base, the Yanks had little trouble defeating the St. Louis Browns.

* * *

The National Baseball Commission has handed down a decision in which it allows the claim of Player Ralph Myers, of the Boston National League club, for 500 due him from the Spokane club, of the Northwestern League.

VAUGHN HURLS ONE-HIT GAME AGAINST INDIANS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 12.—Jim Vaughn, recently acquired by the Cubs in exchange for Lew Richie, added another sensational victory to his string by defeating Indianapolis, 2 to 0. Vaughn allowed the Indians one hit. He has pitched in more games than any other American Association hurler and leads the league in strikeouts and bases on balls. In forty games he has struck out 165 batters and has given 145 free transportations to first base. He also has a no-hit game to his credit for this year. Vaughn left after the game to join the Cubs in Boston.

SALLY LEAGUE INFIELDER IS BOUGHT BY STALLINGS

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—The Boston Nationals have obtained four additional men toward strengthening the team for next season. Two are infielders and two are outfielders.

The infielders are Dugey, second baseman of the Waco team, of the Texas League, and McCleskey, a third baseman of the Albany club, of the South Atlantic League.

Manager Was Cause of Hot Wrangle in Chicago Gymnasium

WHITE-WHITNEY BOUT TO BE GRUDGE AFFAIR

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY is hot under the collar. Frank holds a personal grudge against Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, and says he will get his revenge when he meets White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

Several days ago Whitney was in Chicago. Nate Lewis and White were also in the Windy City. Last Wednesday afternoon Lewis and White took a trip to Whitney's training quarters to see the latter in action. They had the opportunity. Frank donned the mitts with Packey McFarland for three rounds and the air was full of flying gloves.

* * *

A LARGE crowd witnessed the affair and, when it was over, an argument at once took place between the White and Whitney factions. Frank is also a great favorite in Chicago. Just as Whitney was about to leave the gymnasium he encountered Nate Lewis. One word followed the other, and before many minutes had passed, Whitney told Lewis to get White and he would fight him then and there.

The wrangle started when Lewis told Whitney that he had better get into shape for Charley or he would follow the path of Joe Thomas and Jake Abel. Evidently Lewis was trying to get Frank's goat. Whitney was not in love with this line of talk and it did not take him long to get heated up.

* * *

"GO get your champion and I'll fight him right here," flashed Frank when Lewis told him to get a reputation. "That's a go," retorted Lewis, who started after White. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Lewis let Whitney go on his way.

This information did not come from Frank first-handed. True, Frank admitted to the quarrel after a bit of sharp questioning. A personal friend of White wrote us yesterday telling of the encounter between the pair.

* * *

"I'M sick of hearing these people saying that White will stop me," said Frank yesterday after he finished boxing three rounds at the Atlanta Athletic Club. "In the first place, I have never been stopped in my fighting career and am ready to bet my end of the purse that White doesn't floor me. This fellow might be a wonder, but, believe me, he isn't stopping Frank Whitney. And besides, don't be surprised if Referee Castro lifts my hand at the end of the tenth round.

"Frank Whitney is going into tomorrow's fight ready to do or die. This Lewis fellow has gone far enough with me and I look for him to be a pretty sad-eyed fellow after the fifth round. I have watched White fight and know his style. On the other hand, he has never seen me in action. This talk of mine may seem like boasting, but nevertheless I mean every word of it. Anyway, those who think White is going to beat Whitney kindly be at the Auditorium and they will get the surprise of their life."

THE above quarrel between White and Lewis means that the two boys are to clash in a grudge affair. Lewis will send White after Frank from the gong, and Whitney has never backed up for an opponent in an Atlanta ring. Will he do it to-morrow night? This is the question puzzling fight fans around these parts.

White and Lewis will be here today. Charley has finished training and will step in the ring in the pink of condition. Those who have seen Whitney will tell you that Frank was never better in his life. Therefore, neither boy will have an excuse to offer if defeated.

* * *

FANS around town are going wild over the fight. On nearly every street corner the name White and Whitney can be heard. Many of them are for White and others for Frank.

Tickets for the fight are going fast and a banner house should attend the affair. The pasteboards can be purchased at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Detroit Gets Williams, Vols' Star Southpaw

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 12.—President Hirsig left last night for Detroit to close a deal involving Pitcher Claude Williams, the sensational young southpaw of the Vols, for whom the Tigers have offered $3,500. Williams will report at the end of the season.

The purchase of Williams completes the "corner" obtained by the Tigers on the three leading southpaws in the Southern League, options on Coveleskie and Cavet having already been secured by that club.

Announcement was also made of the recall of Pitcher Sam Hendee, from the Cairo Club of the Kitty League, and of Pitcher Johnson, from Hopkinsville, of the same league, in an effort to strengthen the Vols' slab corps.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

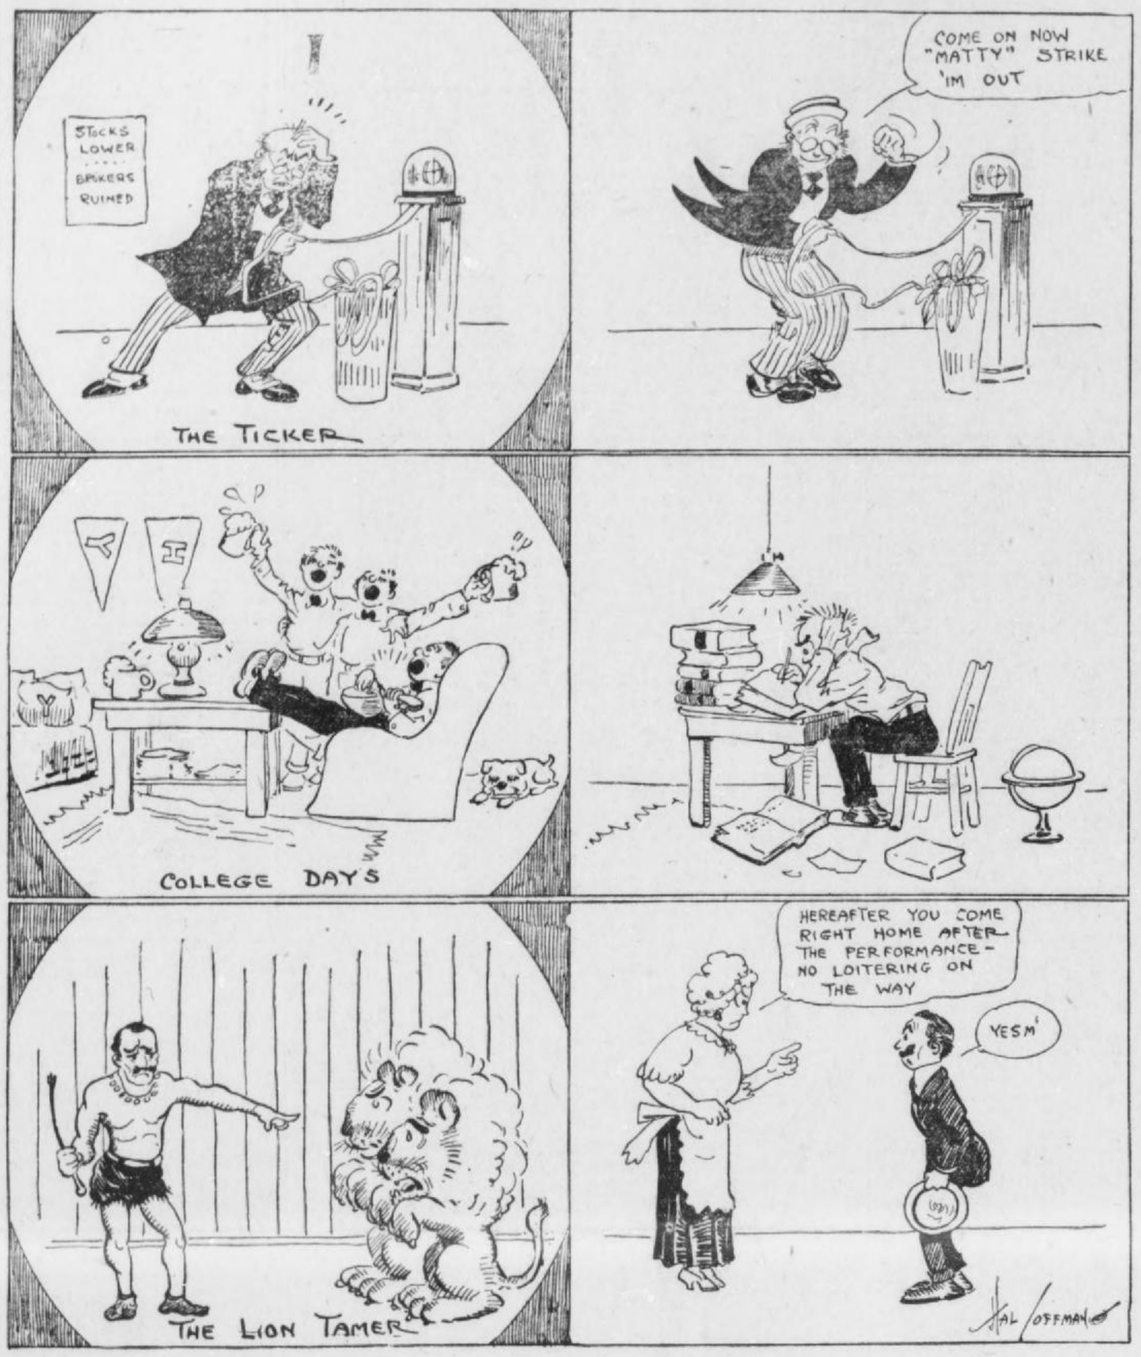

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

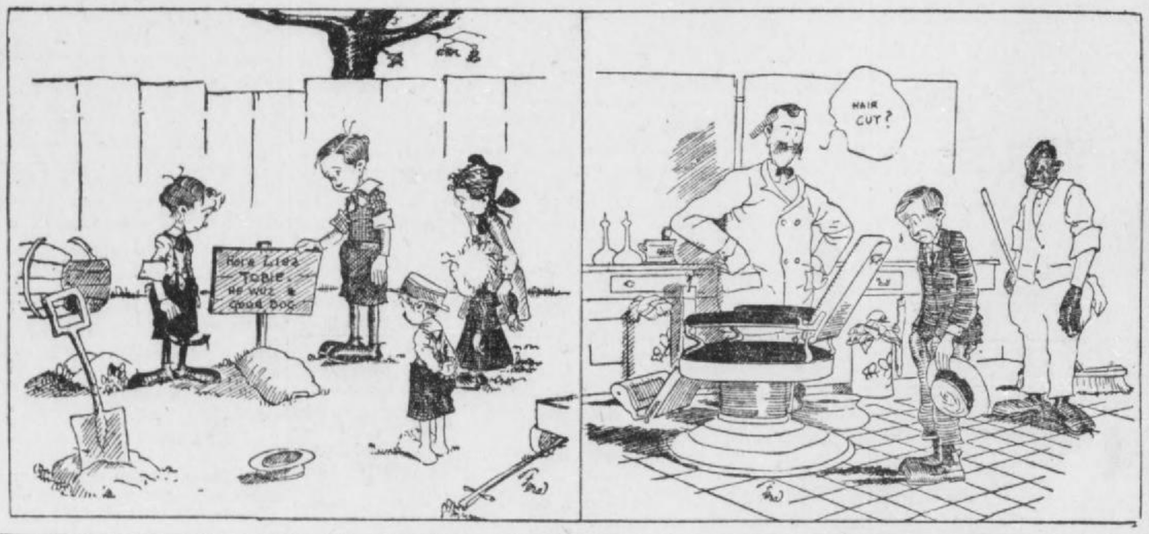

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her. Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.

Adam Smith

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contribution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman; when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower,
Of majesty and power,
Great love to that great hour.

FIGHT OF FOOD EXPERTS RENEWED

DIAGRAM OF THEORY AS ADVANCED BY DEFENSE

The defense's theory of the killing of Mary Phagan is that the little girl, after leaving Frank's office unmolested, was seized by the negro Conley at the foot of the stairs, crowded back into the rear room and there battered into insensibility, if not instant death, after which she was dragged to the trapdoor in the extreme rear and thrown into the cellar below. Later the negro went into the cellar, placed the cord around the girl's neck, and drew it very tight, perhaps thus snffing out the last fluttering breath of life in the insensible body. The motive assigned to the negro is robbery.

BOMB RAZES ALABAMA VILLAGE

CASTLEBERRY, ALA., Aug. 11.—A bomb thrown into the Skinner Hardware Company building here last night demolished that store, and fire which followed destroyed the entire block in which the Skinner store was located. The loss is $50,000, partially covered by insurance.

Early to-day the Sheriff from Greenville and a posse of regular and special deputies arrested a negro, charging him with being the man who placed the bomb in the Skinner building. While the officers claim to have strong evidence against the black man, they have not stated what it is. The feeling against the accused is running high, and it is reported that the negro has been spirited away by two deputies to prevent any possibility of a lynching.

The buildings destroyed are as follows: Skinner Hardware Company, loss $6,000, insurance $3,000; Meacham & Kirkland drug store, loss $3,000, insurance, $1,500; S. E. Berham clothing store, loss $3,500, insurance $1,000; People's Bank, all fixtures lost, but vault and valuables saved; House & Ballard barber shop, loss about $500.

Mr. Skinner owned all of the buildings destroyed. The offices of the Mayor and a number of the city officials were in the bank building. They lost their office fixtures.

Practically all of the residents were attending church when the explosion occurred, and turned out in a body to fight the fire, their efforts confining the blaze to the one block. There is no regular fire department in the town.

No reason can be assigned for the motive of the person or persons in throwing the bomb into the store, unless it was due to some grudge against some of the occupants.

SLATON ASKS TAX LAW IN MESSAGE

In a vigorous message pointing out the need of speedy action, Governor John M. Slaton Monday urged the Legislature to enact laws looking to the reform of the tax system and the equalization of taxes in the State.

Asserting that the greatest disparity in the tax returns of the State is not between the city and rural communities, but between the rural communities themselves, Governor Slaton urged the enactment of a law that would compel each county to pay its proportionate share of the expenses of the State.

Shows Disparity in Returns.

"One rural county will make returns three times as much in proportion to values as its neighbors," said the Governor's message. "What sound argument can be offered in favor of this injustice? County lines are but imaginary, separating Georgians only by a fiction, and all should be and I believe are willing to contribute their proportion to the general burden.

"Legislation accomplishing this purpose, both in regard to visible and invisible property, will so operate as to make the same percentage effective on every citizen, regardless of the county in which he lives."

Scores State of Treasury.

In his message Governor Slaton emphasizes the deplorable condition of the State Treasury, which has not nearly enough funds to meet the expenses of the State Government and asserts that under a system of tax equalization a deficit of this size could not exist.

"Tax equalization does not necessarily mean increase of taxes," he says. "The man giving in now more than his due should have his valuation reduced to such proportionate amount as universally enforced will economically support the State. The man who is delinquent in this regard should be raised."

Senate Clears Decks For Tax Reform Work.

With the decks cleared at last of local bills, the Georgia Senate Monday afternoon faced a sharp fight on the substitute to the Sheppard tax reform bill following the filing of a minority report by four of the members of the Finance Committee.

Senator DuBose, one of the minority signers, declared he would fight the measure when it comes up for passage. The bill, he declared, was not fair to the people and was framed as a result of "bulldozing" efforts by the Governor.

On the other hand, Senator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, joint framer of the bill and chairman of the Finance Committee, declared himself ready to

Joe Agler Sold to Jersey City Club; Price Is $3,000

Joe Agler, the sensational first baseman of the Crackers, was sold this afternoon to the Jersey City club, of the International League. It is understood that the price paid for the young athlete is $3,000.

Agler will report to the Skeeters at the end of the Southern League season. The International League schedule calls for games two weeks after the Southern closes, and Agler will probably catch the first train East after the last game is played at Poncey Park.

DR. BACHMAN TRIPPED BY DORSEY; ARRAY OF MEDICAL MEN CALLED

Professor George Bachman, a native Frenchman, one time an instructor in the well-known Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and now at the head of the Physiological Department of Physicians and Surgeons, was the star witness of the defense at the Frank trial Monday, forming one of the brilliant array of medical experts gathered by Leo Frank's lawyers to batter down the theories and conclusions presented to the jury by Dr. H. F. Harris, Secretary and Director of the State Board of Health.

Among the distinguished physicians to follow him at the afternoon session of court were Drs. Willis F. Westmoreland, T. H. Hancock and J. L. Olmstead, Dr. L. W. Childs, a graduate of the University of Michigan, was called at the opening of the defense's case.

Dr. Bachman had no hesitancy in belittling the testimony of Dr. Harris. He seconded Dr. Childs in saying that it was mere guesswork to say that Mary Phagan was killed within half or three-quarters of an hour after she had eaten her simple dinner of cabbage and biscuit. He was shown the specimen of cabbage taken from the stomach of the murdered girl and declared that there was no way of telling by its appearance that it had not been in the stomach seven or eight hours before death came.

Appears to Trip Up Expert.

Solicitor Dorsey set out in the cross-examination to test minutely the witness' qualifications as an expert. He appeared to trap him in one or two instances. One was when he asked Dr. Bachman the meaning of the word "amidulin," as used in the description of starch in its various stages of digestion.

"I never heard of such a word," said the witness.

"You never did?"

"No, and no one else ever did. It isn't in any dictionary."

"Nor in any medical work?" inquired the Solicitor.

Webster's International Dictionary gives the definition of "amidulin" as "a variety of starch made soluble by heating."

Dr. Bachman was called to the stand after Solicitor Dorsey had finished a searching cross-examination of Herbert G. Schiff, assistant to Frank at the Pencil Factory.

Says Cabbage Was in Stomach Long Time.

The medical expert said that the average time required for the digestion of cabbage, according to the standard of his profession, was four and a half hours. The principal process of digestion took place in the small intestine in the case of cabbage and other carbohydrates, he testified.

Attorney Reuben Arnold showed him the specimens of cabbage taken from the stomach of Mary Phagan.

"Those pieces apparently were not masticated at all," the physician said. "They would have interfered with digestion and the passage of food out of the stomach into the small intestine by obstructing the pylorus. They would undoubtedly have kept all of the solid contents in the stomach for some time.

"Just from my observation of those pieces of cabbage I would say that they could have been in the girl's stomach for seven or eight hours before passing out."

Attacks Dr. Harris' Conclusion.

He attacked Dr. Harris' conclusions based on the fact that only 32 degrees of acidity were found in the girl's stomach on the ground that there was no way of telling whether the acidity at the time digestion was stopped was ascending or descending. If it were descending, he said, it would indicate that the acidity had risen to its maximum point and was on its downward course, a condition which obtains only when the food has been in the stomach for a considerable period.

Dr. Harris' theory that no digestion had taken place in the small intestine he combated by declaring that the formalin in the embalming fluid would have destroyed the ferments of the pancreatic juice and would have left no way of telling whether or not Dr. Harris' theory was correct.

Impossible to Make a Guess.

Attorney Arnold then propounded a hypothetical question to the witness embracing all of the conditions which were found in the stomach of Mary Phagan and then asked him if he or any other doctor could hazard a guess as to how long the food had been in her body before death.

Dr. Bachman replied that it would be impossible.

The most important admission that the Solicitor wrung from the witness was that if one didn't find maltose in the stomach, but did find starch it would be probable that digestion had not progressed very far.

On the redirect, Arnold asked the witness:

"Do you know of anyone else in the world, except Dr. H. F. Harris, who would venture an opinion of the nature he has given on the data in his possession?"

Dr. Bachman said he did not. He added also that the medical profession never accepted a pronouncement of this sort unless it was confirmed by other experts.

New Theory Sprung.

A new and important development in the State's theory of the murder of Mary Phagan came to light Monday when Solicitor Dorsey sought to establish that Leo Frank very easily could have compiled Saturday forenoon, instead of Saturday afternoon following the crime, the intricate financial sheet which the defense has introduced.

Herbert Schiff, assistant superintendent of the National Pencil Factory, already had identified the financial sheet as the work of Frank, presumably done by the superintendent on Saturday afternoon, as this was his usual time for doing it.

Reuben Arnold had displayed the sheet to the jury and had drawn the jurors' attention to the fact that the writing was regular, clear and without any sign of trembling or nervousness on the part of the writer. The evident purpose was to show that Frank, after brutally murdering a

8 CONFESS IN PENSACOLA VOTE PLOT

PENSACOLA, FLA., Aug. 11.—Ten of the parties charged with conspiracy to defraud the registration books and illegal voting in the recent city election were arraigned before Court of Record Monday morning.

Four pleaded guilty to the charge of illegal voting; two pleaded guilty to voting when under age, and the other two admitted they were not citizens of the United States. Two latter were Greeks, not naturalized. They were fined $10 and costs or 45 days at hard labor each.

Police and Fire Commissioner Pou, Registration Officer Maura and others, charged with conspiracy to defraud registration lists, pleaded not guilty and trial was set for September 16.

Of the fourteen arrests following investigation, eight have now pleaded guilty and the others say they will fight the case to the end.

Clayton Leads for Senate in Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 11.—While Governor O'Neal did not feel ready to make an announcement as to the appointment of a successor to the late Senator Joseph F. Johnston, it was generally understood this afternoon that the Governor will make an appointment, several judges having made briefs on the subject. The appointment may be announced in Montgomery Tuesday afternoon. Congressman Henry D. Clayton, according to popular report, will most likely get the appointment.

The Governor and staff this afternoon reviewed the Fourth Regiment in camp here.

No Knox-Hobson Trade.

ANNISTON, Aug. 11.—Friends of Colonel John B. Knox, the noted Anniston lawyer, deny that there has been any coalition between his friends and the Hobson adherents to get Knox appointed to succeed Senator Johnston, with the understanding that Knox will not oppose Hobson in an open election.

Electric Plant Site Causes Mayor to Quit

MILTON, FLA., Aug. 11.—Mayor W. W. Clark announced to-day that he will resign when Council meets to-morrow afternoon, and that as soon as his resignation is accepted he will file injunction proceedings against the city to restrain the bond trustees from erecting an electric power plant near his handsome residence. When the site was selected the Mayor protested, but was ignored.

W. A. McLeod, former Representative of Santa Rosa County in the Legislature, will probably be elected to succeed Mayor Clark.

Rector Arouses Ire Of Congregation by Defense of Socialist

MOBILE, Aug. 11.—Dr. Matthew Brewster, rector of exclusive Christ Church, of this city, in whose edifice only the wealthy and select worship, has aroused the ire of his congregation by coming out as a defender of W. M. Doyle, a socialist speaker, who was arrested here for blocking the streets while preaching the doctrine of the Socialist party.

When Dr. Brewster, who before coming to Mobile was the rector of the leading Episcopal church of New Orleans, heard of the arrest of Doyle, he rushed to the police station and denounced the arrest as an outrage, saying that no one should be stopped from free speech. Doyle is a striking machinist and on eof the foundries where machinists are on strike is owned by one of Dr. Brewster's leading church members. The affair created a sensation in church circles.

Negro Drowns Self To Escape Capture

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 11.—John Balkman, a negro, who two months ago seriously shot Deputy Sheriff Matthis, drowned himself in Lake Jackson rather than be captured by Sheriff Houston and a posse.

The negro was located three miles from Tallahassee, where dogs were put on his trail, and ran into the lake. When he saw the posse approaching and it was evident that he would be arrested, he sank in the water, after he had attempted to shoot a member of the posse. His body was recovered.

Girls Burn to Death In Home at Bartow

TAMPA, Aug. 11.—The home of J. O. Bradley, at Bartow, burned to the ground last night and their two daughters, Emily and Geneva, were burned to death.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley were sleeping on the second floor. In the confusion they did not notice that the young women had not escaped. When they got out doors the house was enveloped in flames and rescue was impossible. The screams of the girls, one of whom was 20 and the other 14, could be heard as they burned to death.

New Passenger Rate Ends Alabama Fight

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 11.—Tariff sheets for the 2 1-2-cent passenger fare on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad were received at ticket offices throughout the State to-day. The new rate becomes effective at midnight.

The adoption of the rate probably ends the fight that the Railroad Commission has waged for four years, although the railroad threatens to appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

BLIND TIGERS CAPTURED.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 11.—Sheriff Perry and deputies to-day brought in five negroes charged with operating blind tigers in the country. They were caught in raids made Saturday night and Sunday.

COAST ROUTE PATHFINDER IS READY

Plans for the great automobile tour which Hearst's Sunday American will inaugurate to find a new All-Southern, open-all-the-year-round route from Atlanta to the Pacific Coast, virtually have been completed, and the tour will start on Monday, August 18, under conditions that practically assure the success of the movement.

The proposed route, which will be thoroughly mapped and charted by the pathfinding expedition, will extend from Atlanta through Birmingham, Montgomery, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Tucson, Phoenix and Yuma, and will then connect with the State roads of California for San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The pathfinder will be E. L. Ferguson, one of the most widely known automobile drivers and tourists in America. He has been in Atlanta for several days, making preliminary preparations for the tour, and is much pleased with the response that greeted the publication of the details of the movement in yesterday's American.

Southern automobilists, who heretofore have been barred from touring across the continent via a Southern, open-all-the-year-round route because no such route has ever been explored and mapped, have greeted the movement with enthusiasm and many offers of assistance.

Big Send-Off Is Planned.

Some idea of the sentiment that exists among Atlanta motorists can be gained from the plans that are being made to godspeed Mr. Ferguson when he starts on his journey. When he leaves Atlanta next Monday in the big touring car that has traveled most of the roads of the country, he will be escorted out of the city by many local automobilists and motorcyclists who realize what the proposed tourists route would do for the South, and who are indorsing the movement with their usual energy and enthusiasm.

It is Mr. Ferguson's intention, during the path-finding expedition, to put forth every effort to interest the farmers and the citizens of the cities and towns he visits in the proposed route and in good road building all over the South. The lack of good roads is all that has prevented the Southern States from being the Mecca of motorists the year round, and it is the purpose of the newspapers that are behind the expedition to make Mr. Ferguson's trip a "good roads booster" from start to finish, so as to make the proposed Southern route a reality before the beginning of the Panama Exposition at San Francisco in 1915.

It is estimated that more than 5,000 motor cars will cross the continent from the Atlantic coast during the exposition, and the mapping and charting of a Southern route, with its advantages in climate and scenery, will divert the greater part of the traffic from the established Northern route through Chicago and Denver.

Hope of Early Vote on Tariff Bill Given Up

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—All predictions of an early passage of the Democratic tariff bill by the Senate are going glimmering. Majority leaders realize that, notwithstanding the fact that they have set a new record in pushing consideration of this measure, only a beginning has been made, and the earliest anyone now will promise completion of the task is September 15.

Ten days ago, when a member of the Finance Committee said he thought the Senate would pass the bill by August 20, there were some who thought it might be possible, but only four schedules have now been considered, 36 paragraphs in these having been passed over for future consideration.

Sylvia Pankhurst Captured in Fierce Riot of Militants

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—"You women are overstepping the ordinary bounds of lawlessness—you are becoming anarchists," said the magistrate in Bow Street Police Court to-day in sentencing militant suffragettes who took part in street fighting yesterday when Miss Sylvia Pankhurst led a mob of 10,000 women in an assault upon the residence of Premier Asquith.

Sunday's fighting was the bloodiest of all militant riots. Screaming and struggling with maniacal fury the suffragettes and their bodyguard of hired dock workers gave the police such a furious contest that more than 50 persons were hurt.

Miss Sylvia Pankhurst had a special bodyguard of men, but her escort was overpowered and she was taken to Holloway jail.

Gainsville Claims 10,200 Population

GAINESVILLE, FLA., Aug. 11.—The new city directory being published will show a population for Gainesville of over 10,200.

Although Gainesville has now the best water in the State, the supply is not sufficient from the Boulware Springs, and there is under construction new waterworks, a corporation supplying in addition inexhaustible supply from artesian wells. A large standpipe is also being erected for fire purposes.

Attached to this plant is to be electric light plant with capacity to meet all demands. Poles and wire are already placed and current will be turned on about November 1.

BOY HELD FOR MAIL THEFT.

GADSDEN, Aug. 11.—David C. Claborn, a 15-year-old boy, was found guilty in Federal Court to-day on a charge of larceny of mail from a box in the Boaz postoffice. Sentence was suspended until next term of court.

MOTHER GIVES AWAY BABY.

MOBILE, Aug. 11.—A pretty blue-eyed baby, 6 weeks old, was given to the Salvation Army by a 15-year-old mother at Meridian, Miss., and since that time has been given over to a couple of considerable wealth.

girl, could not have done all the difficult mathematical work without error and without signs of agitation in his writing.

The Solicitor, however, started right out on a line of questioning that indicated his opinion was that Frank had done the work during the morning hours instead of after Mary Phagan had been slain.

Time for Making Report.

Dorsey first asked Schiff, who was recalled to the stand, if it would not have been possible for Frank to have done the work on the financial sheet between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon before he went to Montag Bros., and between 11:30 and 12:00 o'clock, after he returned from the Montag plant. Schiff said that there would have been time for the work.

Dorsey recalled to the witness' mind a conversation between Frank and C. E. Ersenbach Friday afternoon, in which Frank said he would try to get his work in shape in time to go to the baseball game on the following day.

It was the implication of the Solicitor that Frank had hurried through with his work Saturday morning and, as a matter of fact, had it completed or nearly completed before the afternoon.

Finishing with this line of questioning, the Solicitor began an attack on the time element which the defense has introduced in the trial. Dorsey questioned Schiff at length as to the accuracy of the clock in the office floor, with the apparent intention of arguing that when Monteen Stover came into the factory and saw the clock hands pointing to 12:05 o'clock, the correct time really might have been 12:12 or 12:15 after Mary Phagan entered the factory and went to Frank's office. Schiff maintained that the clock always was kept on time by W. and A. yard whistles.

Mrs. Frank at Office.

On the redirect examination Schiff said that the financial sheet always was made up Saturday afternoon, and never in the morning. He said the correspondence and entering and acknowledgment of orders always were taken care of in the forenoon.

Attorney Arnold also brought out the testimony that Frank's wife frequently came to the factory Saturday afternoons to help her husband in stenographic work.

Schiff explained keeping Jim Conley in the employ in the factory after discovering his unreliability by saying that it was difficult to teach new negroes the work. He denied that he ever had tried to discharge Conley and that Frank had prevented it.

Frank's Aunt in Court.

Mrs. Jacob Selig, aunt of Leo Frank, was the third woman visitor of his family to the court Monday morning. She had a seat near the prisoner and his mother and wife.

Before court convened Frank asked permission to examine the paper model of the National Pencil Company that had been offered in evidence by the defense. He spent some 30 minutes closely examining this model.

Frank was in court early. His wife and mother came in and kissed him, taking seats on either side of him.

It was reported around the courtroom that the jury would be taken to visit the National Pencil Company building. Attorney Reuben Arnold for the defense said that he personally would be very glad for the jury to make the examination. Solicitor Dorsey said he did not know whether he would consent.

Just before Schiff was recalled to the stand Mr. Arnold announced that Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer for Montag Brothers, who was at the factory Saturday, April 26, to take some dictation from Frank, probably would be the next witness. Solicitor Dorsey resumed his cross-examination of Schiff.

Schiff's "Darta" Puzzles Dorsey.

Q. Mr. Schiff, of course you don't know to your personal knowledge that this finance sheet was made up on Saturday?—A. It couldn't have been made up before.

Q. Why?—A. I had not accumulated the "darta" (data) Friday, as I always did.

Q. The what?—A. The data (pronouncing it as though it were "darta.")

Mr. Arnold interrupted: "He means data."

Mr. Dorsey said he didn't know whether Schiff meant data or some sort of sheet he was accustomed to making out.

Q. Couldn't you take the data gathered by Miss Eula May Flowers and the others and have gotten up this sheet?—A. I think I might have.

Frank Not an Expert, He Says.

Q. You haven't made up one since Frank left?—A. No; simply because we have not had time.

Q. Don't you consider him an expert?—A. I do not.

Q. Go ahead and tell me what he would have to know.—A. The slat record.

Q. Is that here?—A. No.

Q. Can you get me a slat record?—A. Yes.

Q. Well you get one and bring it back here. Now, is the slat record more complicated than this forelady's report?—A. It is a great long sheet.

Dorsey Questions Sharply.

Q. Tell me the truth. Is it more complicated?—A. I am telling you the truth, Mr. Dorsey.

Q. Well, doesn't he just take the total from all the reports?—A. No, he has to do some figuring and other work.

Q. Well, what else?—A. He has to get the tipping record and several others.

Q. Do you mean to tell me, then, that the totals in these reports and the body of the report are not the same handwriting?—A. I do.

Q. Now this financial sheet? Do you mean to tell me it is all in the same handwriting?—A. It certainly is.

Q. You are sure of it?—A. Yes.

Could Have Done It in Two Hours.

Q. Now, entering all these eleven orders and this financial sheet, was that all Frank had to do that Saturday?—A. All I can think of.

Q. Do you know that it was done Saturday?—A. No, but it was not done Friday, and he did not work on it then.

Q. When did you see this work?—A. Sometime Monday or Tuesday.

Q. Now, could Frank have done this work between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock that morning?—A. Yes, if he was not interrupted.

Q. Well, didn't you tell us Saturday that Frank could do that work in one and one-half hours?—A. I did not.

Q. Well, all the work you know that was done there Saturday was the financial sheet and entering those orders?—A. So far as I know.

Orders in Frank's Writing.

Q. Were you paid off April 26?—No.

Q. Was Frank?—A. No.

Q. Now, are you quite sure Frank entered those orders?—A. They are in his handwriting.

Q. Now, it took about two minutes to put down these things and a minute to add them over?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you look there and tell me whether there is an entry on April 26 for $2 advanced Arthur White?—A. It is not on this book; it is on the time book.

Q. Who entered it?—A. Mr. Frank.

Q. Have you got the receipt for $2?—A. I can get it.

Q. Who made note of that on the record?—A. Mr. Frank did. I entered it on the time book the following week.

Mr. Arnold interrupted. "You had better make a note of these various things Mr. Dorsey wants," he said.

No Record of Orders.

"I know exactly what he wants," replied Schiff. Dorsey continued the examination.

Q. Is there any record on this financial sheet of the orders you said came in on Saturday?—A. No.

Q. You told Mr. Arnold there was?—A. I told him that as a rule there was.

Q. But there is no record here?—A. I was telling Mr. Arnold what Mr. Frank did on Saturday. I don't see any place on the financial sheet for it.

Q. Now tell this jury what there is to show that these orders did not come in before Saturday, April 26.—A. They were not there Friday night. I had looked through the files.

Q. Was there any reason why the sheet had to be at Montag's Monday?—A. It was our custom.

Q. Mr. Frank was a man who always stuck to his business? He would never go away unless his business was up?—A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Schiff, didn't you swear before the Coroner that it would take two hours and thirty minutes to get up the data and make up the sheet?—A. I may have misunderstood the question. I say now that it would have taken from two and one-half to three hours.

Frank Faster Than He Is.

Q. If he had an engagement and wanted to speed up, couldn't he do it within two and one-half hours?—A. Not and make it look the same.

Q. Is Frank a faster man than you?—A. Yes. He is a faster man on a financial sheet.

Q. Didn't you swear before the Coroner that Frank could have gotten the sheet up thirty minutes quicker than you?—A. I could not have specified any time. I have never made up the sheet.

Q. Then you deny this statement before the Coroner?—A. No, I didn't deny it. It is not in my exact language.

Q. How long did you say it would take Frank to balance the $69 in petty cash?—A. That is hard to say. I think I said before the Coroner that it would have taken from one to one and one-half hours.

Q. How do you remember where you were last Thanksgiving?—A. One thing I intended to do was to go to Athens to attend a football game. It snowed. The B'Nai Brith had an affair that night. I helped Mr. Frank carry some packages there.

Q. Do you mean to tell the jury that you recall every Saturday?—A. I recall that I have never missed a day since my vacation.

Tells of Thanksgiving Day.

Q. Do you know what time you left the factory that Thanksgiving Day?—A. Yes; I left with Frank at 12:30. He went home.

Q. Do you know whether he went back that afternoon?—A. Yes; a friend who was with him told me where he was.

Q. Then from your knowledge you do not know whether he went back or not?—A. No.

Q. Now, how do you recall that Helen Ferguson came there Friday?—A. I just remember it.

Q. Well, who else came?—The witness enumerated fifteen other employees.

Q. Can you tell me who came the Saturday before?—A. No; I had an idea in looking up and refreshing my memory as to that day.

Q. Now, that sheet had to be made up by Monday. Why was that data not ready Friday night?—A. I don't know.

Q. How were the pay envelopes numbered?—A. One to two hundred.

Q. Where was the number?—A. That varied. The office boy had no regular place for it.

Questioned About Basement.

Q. Now, this place where the chute is located is pretty dark, and few people go there?—A. Yes.

Q. It is one of the most remote spots in the basement?—A. Yes.

Q. This place down there is not used?—A. Yes; we put schlich down there to keep it cool.

Q. How often do you go down there?—A. Every two or three days.

Q. Now, you saw that place where the blood was?—A. In the metal room?

Q. Yes. A.—Yes, I saw it.

Q. Did you notice anything about it?—A. I was under something white that looked like a compound.

Q. Was it smeared?—A. No, it looked like other spots in the factory.

Q. When did you notice the door leading from the chute?—A. I came up there two or three days after the murder, and it was open.

Q. You are sure of it?—A. Yes.

Never Lost a Day.

Q. Now, you told Mr. Arnold that you were at the factory May 31. How do you recall that?—A. For the simple reason that I have never lost a day.

Q. Well, did you mean by that that you were there that Saturday afternoon after 12:30?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't consider it losing time, then, if you left Saturday afternoon?—A. I certainly did. I remained there at work.

Q. Then you do say you were there that Saturday afternoon?—A. Yes.

Q. Was that clock always right?—A. Usually it was on time.

Q. Who set it?—A. Holloway, I think.

Q. Who saw that it was right?—A. I don't know.

Q. How do you set that clock?—A. I set it. Holloway sometimes winds it up.

Q. Is it correct? Does it ever get five minutes fast?—A. Whenever I looked at it it was on time.

Q. What did you set it by?—A. A watch or whistle.

Q. You employ reliable people at the pencil factory? You don't keep those who lie and are untrustworthy?—A. Some of them are not.

The defense objected to this question and was sustained.

Q. When did you discuss the worthlessness of Jim Conley?—A. A long time ago. About the first time I ever spoke to him.

Q. And you continued to keep him?—A. We moved him from the elevator to the fourth floor.

Q. Whom did you tell he was worthless?—A. It was talked to me.

Q. By whom?—A. Schiff named a long list of employees who had complained about Conley borrowing money and being worthless.

Q. Didn't you complain to Frank about him, and did Frank overrule you?—A. Mr. Frank is not over me.

Q. Did you have the authority to fire Jim Conley?—A. I did.

Q. If he was so worthless, why didn't you fire him?—A. It was so hard to get a negro who knew anything about the work.

Q. And you kept him there for two years?—A. He was in the chaingang two or three times.

Saw Conley on Chaingang.

Q. How do you know?—A. I saw him once working on Forsyth street in front of the factory.

Q. You swear that he was on the chaingang two or three times?—A. Women came to me once or twice to get money to pay him out.

Q. Out of what?—A. The chaingang or the calaboose. I am not versed in those things.

Q. Why did you swear he was on the chaingang three times?

Arnold interrupted: "Your honor, I object. He doesn't cross-examine a witness. He just quarrels with him.

The best evidence of Conley's stockade career is the record."

Dorsey—I have got the record, and I am going to introduce it. That is why I want to pin this witness down.

Judge Roan ruled the witness must answer the question, but the witness should not be any more explicit.

Knew Conley Could Write.

Q. If any of these books got down into the basement, they went into the trash, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, these other books?—A. They were kept all over the place. We gave them to the negroes.

Q. Just who did you give them to?—A. I gave one to Jim Conley. He wanted to write home.

Q. Then you knew he could write?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you know his home was right here?—A. I did not.

Q. What did these negroes do with these pads when you gave them to them?—A. They got on the elevator and went to the basement to write.

Q. How did they get light?—A. In front of the boiler.

Q. Did you ever see Conley there?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, Frank was very anxious to have the Pinkertons at work?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you report Conley's strange action to the Pinkertons or the police?—A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you report it to Mr. Frank? He was anxious to have the murderer caught?—A. I think so.

Arnold Balks at Hurrying.

Q. Now, where would a person have to stand on the fourth floor to see the office floor?—A. He could not.

Q. Where were Denham and White on the fourth floor?—A. I was told——

Q. Then don't bother. Were you at the factory when detectives made certain experiments with the elevator?—A. Yes.

Arnold then took the witness on the redirect examination.

Judge Roan said: "Hurry up, Mr Arnold."

Rosser spoke up: "Your honor, time should not be considered. A man's life is at stake."

Judge Roan: "Go ahead."

Q. Was that sheet usually made up in the morning or afternoon?—A. Afternoon.

Q. Now, is it not a fact that Frank is interrupted almost constantly by salesmen or employees who have some adjustment of their pay envelope to request?—A. Yes, quite a few interruptions.

Q. Do you not change your opinion that it would take one and one-half hours to fill out these requisitions and enter the orders?—A. I do not. It would take about that time.

Q. When was this made up?—A. In the morning.

More About Financial Sheet.

Q. Was the financial sheet ever made up in the morning?—A. No.

Q. Do you change your opinion that it would take two and one-half to three hours to make up the financial sheet?—A. I do not.

Q. What length of time would you say he worked there Saturday?—A. My original estimate—six hours.

Q. Is this financial sheet of April 26 any different from the reports of three months previous?—A. It is not.

Q. Mr. Dorsey asked you whether these initials, "H. H." of April 26 did not mean the last work that was done on that sheet? That it might have been entered two or three days before? Now, what does it really mean?—A. Nothing, really. Those initials and that date would have been there if it had been entered Saturday, regardless of the date it was acknowledged by Miss Hall.

Dorsey Objects to Slur.

Q. Now, Mr. Schiff (I am going to call him Mister. I am not as familiar with him as Mr. Dorsey seems to be. He calls him "Schiff" all the time), you say the murder caused you to remember paying off Helen Ferguson on Friday?—I said that.

Dorsey objected.

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Mr. Arnold put the question in a different form, and received the same answer.

Q. Mr. Schiff, this diagram (pointing to the prosecution's diagram of the factory) does not show the openings into the Clark woodenware department, does it?—A. It does not.

Q. Mr. Schiff, it is rather unpleasant to fire a negro and then have to hire a new one and teach him the work, is it?—A. It is.

Hooper interrupted: "Your honor, if he is not leading this witness, I do not know what you would call it."

Judge Roan sustained the objection, and Mr. Arnold again changed his question.

Didn't Know of Detectives' Hunt.

Q. Mr. Schiff, you didn't know the detectives were trying to find out if Conley could write?—A. Not for some time.

Q. Mr. Schiff, did Mr. Dorsey subpena you to come to his office, and did you know you didn't have to go?—A. Yes; I was subpenaed—he telephoned me.

Q. Do you know where the sacks in which you keep the cotton were kept?—A. Just outside the metal room.

Q. Were there any empty sacks there?—A. I don't know. We never keep empty ones there except for a few hours after they are empty.

Dorsey took the witness on the recross-examination.

Q. Mr. Schiff, you talked to Mr. Arnold about customs up there. Was it Mr. Frank's custom to make engagements Friday afternoon for Saturday afternoon, and neglect his financial sheet?—A. It was not.

Arnold interrupted: "We don't want to argue this point. We just want to be recorded as objecting."

Dorsey was allowed to continue.

Q. Was it Mr. Frank's custom to keep his engagements?

Arnold objected: "We must oppose this."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Noted Conley's Attitude.

Q. How long did it take Frank to go from the pencil factory to Montag's?—A. From three to five minutes.

Q. How far is it?—A. About two and one-half blocks.

Q. What time was it Monday you observed this peculiar bearing of Jim Conley?—A. Between 7:30 and 8 o'clock.

Q. What time did you go with Detective Starnes to arrest Gantt?—A. Some time late in the day.

Q. After you had observed all of the suspicious conduct on the part of Conley you have just been telling about?—A. I think it was.

Q. When you looked at this white stuff and the red spots under it, were all of those blinds on the north side open or closed?—A. Open.

Q. If they had been closed it would have been much darker in there, would it not?—A. Yes.

Dorsey and Schiff Argue.

Mr. Schiff differed with Mr. Dorsey about the location of the ladies' dressing room on the second floor. After considerable argument, they agreed on the locaton, and the examination continued.

Q. Is it not true that most of the light that shines on the spot where the blood was comes from the windows on the north side?—A. No, sir.

Q. Would it make any difference whether those blinds were closed?—A. Yes; but about as much light comes from the west as from the north side.

Arnold took the witness again.

Q. Mr. Dorsey has the door to the ladies' dressing room and the door to the metal room out of position, hasn't he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank talking to little Mary Phagan?—A. I never did.

Professor Bachman on Stand.

Schiff was excused from the witness stand and Professor G. Bachman was called as the next witness in rebuttal to the expert testimony of Dr. H. F. Harris.

Attorney Arnold examined him.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Professor of physiology in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Q. Have you made any study of digestion?—A. Yes, I teach it.

Q. What time would it take cabbage to digest?—A. Four and one-half hours to get out of the stomach.

Q. What is the time required for biscuit to digest?—A. Not less than three hours.

Q. What time would you say a meal of cabbage and bread would take to digest?—A. It would depend on conditions.

Q. Is it possible to say how long it would take to digest anything?—A. It is not. The failure to masticate would materially retard any digestive process.

Might Stay Long in Stomach.

Q. Suppose a person had not properly masticated cabbage, would the unmasticated portions come in contact with the pyloris and keep the rest of the food in the stomach any length of time?—A. Seven to eight hours.

Q. Suppose a physician made an examination of the contents of the stomach, could he say how long it had been there?—A. He could only hazard a guess.

Q. What part of digestion goes on in the stomach.—A. Only about half.

Q. Look at this cabbage and tell me whether it has been masticated (handing him the specimen of cabbage eaten by Mary Phagan).—A. Hardly at all.

Q. How long would it take this to pass out?—A. It would depend on the acidity.

Q. In a dead body, if you find 32 degrees of acidity could you tell whether it was ascending or descending?—A. Absolutely not.

Q. After a body dies and is thoroughly embalmed, what effect would it have on the pancreatic juices?—A. It would destroy the ferment.

Q. Does it affect the hydrochloric acid?—A. No.

Q. You investigate and find probably a drop and a half of hydrochloric acid. Did you ever hear of a drop of it?—A. No; it is a gas.

Calls Time Estimated Impossible.

Q. Investigating this body several days after death, would it have been possible for anyone to say how long that food had been in the stomach?—A. It would have been absolutely impossible.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Where were you born?—A. Mulchausen.

Q. French or German?—A. French.

Q. How long have you been in this country?—A. Since 1903.

Q. How long have you been where you are now?—A. Four years.

Q. What do you teach?—A. Physiological chemistry.

Q. Are you an expert chemist?—A. I am so far as the body is concerned.

Q. What is the principal property of wheat bread?—A. Starch.

Q. Where does starch digestion begin?—A. In the mouth.

No Such Word, Says Expert.

Q. What is amidulin?—A. I never heard the word.

Q. What is erythrodextrin (Dorsey spelled the word slowly)?—A. Write it out (Mr. Dorsey wrote both words). There is no such word as the first and the second is a stage in the digestion of starch.

Solicitor Dorsey launched into technical examination, spelling most of the words. Deputy Plennie Minner had to rap often to hush the laughter in the courtroom.

Q. With an Ewald test breakfast, how long would it take to get a positive starch test?—A. All the time the food is in the stomach.

Q. Didn't you know that medical authorities agree that it takes from 30 to 40 minutes to get such a test?—A. There is no authority for such a statement as you put it.

Q. Would finding a positive starch test indicate how long the food had been there?—A. It would indicate nothing. Starch is not digested in the stomach.

Q. Then how are doctors able to prepare tables on the process of digestion?—A. They can tell from the proteins combined with the hydrochloric acid. Starch does not. There is nothing certain or clear about these matters.

Calls It Only a Hazard.

Q. How do medical men agree it takes about four hours to digest cabbage?—A. That is a hazard.

Q. Then, tell me what the average condition would be if you found starch but no maltose in the stomach?—A. I would say the food had not been there very long.

Mr. Rosser interrupted. "I want to say that we are not dealing with an Ewald breakfast. We are dealing with cabbage and bread. We want the young Solicitor to come down to fried cabbage and bread—the matters we are dealing with.

Judge Roan ruled that the Solicitor might question the doctor to determine his scientific knowledge.

Q. You never heard of any one making any experiments with the various stages of digestion or have you made any yourself?—A. That is true.

Questioned on Cabbage Specimens.

Q. Doctor, take these two samples (handing him Dr. Harris' vials of cabbage). Assuming that this one has been in a normal stomach one hour, how long would you say this one had been in (the cabbage Mary Phagan ate) had been in a normal?—A. I would say seven or eight hours.

Q. Why?—A. The pieces are so large they would delay the substances in passing from the stomach into the small intestines.

Q. Don't you know there have been coins to be known to pass from them?—A. After seven or eight hours.

Q. Do you mean to say they stop up the alimentary canal?—A. No, but they don't go in for several hours.

Q. Now, leave out the time required to pass out of the stomach—what would you say?—A. That would depend on the conditions.

Q. Well, suppose that all conditions were the same?—A. I would say that the digestive processes could not reach those larger pieces at all.

Refuses to Venture Opinion.

Q. Why do you reject the hypothetical proposition that these two specimens were masticated the same way and that this specimen was taken way and aht this specimen was taken out in a period of from 45 to 60 mintes, and how long would you say this one (Mary Phagan's) had been there? A. I could not say.

Q. But if everything were equal—we would say?—A. I still could not say.

Q. What is the difference between a meal of bread and water and a meal of bread and cabbage? (The physician gave a technical discussion of the different properties of the foods).

Arnold took up the redirect examination.

Q. Would you take one man's word about these tests?—A. No. The medical profession never takes one man's statement unless it is confirmed.

Q. Do you know any doctor besides Dr. H. F. Harris who would venture an opinion on how long cabbage had been in a stomach?—A. I do not.

Court recessed until 2 o'clock.

Dr. Mancock Is Called.

Dr. T. H. Hancock, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, was the first witness of the afternoon session. Before the examination began he made a statement to the effect that he had examined Leo Frank and had found him to be a perfectly normal man, physically and mentally.

Attorney Arnold took up the examination.

Q. Take a body embalmed eight hours after death and one gallon of embalming fluid containing 8 per cent formaldehyde, the body exhumed eight days after death, a cut one and one-half inches long found behind the ear, no fracture of the skull—could any physician say whether that blow caused unconsciousness?—A. No, the bone might have been fractured and still not produce unconsciousness.

Q. How long would it have bled after death?—A. Maybe eight hours.

Q. Could any doctor say whether such a blow produced death or not?—A. No.

Q. If it had been a sharp cut, would it have bled more than otherwise?—A. A live person would bleed more than a corpse.

Q. Where is the best evidence of strangulation?—A. I don't know from my own knowledge, and the authorities differ.

Mr. Arnold explainer the condition of Mary Phagan's stomach as described by Dr. Harris.

Q. Could you give any intelligent idea of how long that cabbage had been in the stomach before death when the analysis was made nine days after burial and after the body had been embalmed with a fluid in which there was formaldehyde?—A. I could not.

Q. Could anyone?—A. I think not.

Q. Why?—A. Because of the variability of processes of digestion and the amount of acidity.

Tells of Tests With Cabbage.

Q. Doctor, where does digestion begin?—A. I am not an authority on digestion. I am just telling you what I know from study.

Q. Well, I would rather have the opinion of a man of practical experience than an expert.—A. Digestion begins in the mouth.

Q. Do you believe that any man by any chemical analysis could give any dependable information on how long this cabbage was in the little girl's stomach?—A. I do not.

Q. Have you made any experiments of the process of digestion on cabbage?—A. Yes; on one man and four women.

Dr. Hancock produced the cabbage with which he had experimented. The first sample had a chocolate color. The cabbage was well chewed.

Q. What is this chocolate color?—A. The young woman said she drank a chocolate milk about three and one-half hours before I gave her the cabbage.

Q. And how long was the cabbage in her stomach?—A. Sixty minutes.

Q. And here is the chocolate three and one-half hours after being taken?—A. Yes.

Q. Now take this speciment—what

MARY PHAGAN AND WOMEN TO WHOM TRIAL IS PITIFUL ORDEAL

Miss Monteen Stover, friend of Mary Phagan | Mrs. J. W. Coleman, Mary's mother. | Mary Phagan, victim of tragedy. | Mrs. Rea Frank, mother of accused. | Mrs. Leo Frank, wife of accused.

GRIEF-STRICKEN MOTHER SHOWS NO VENGEFULNESS

By TARLETON COLLIER.

That black-clad woman in the corner of the courtroom—nobody has noticed her much. Things have happened so swiftly in the Frank trial that all eyes are on the rush of events, waiting for a quiver on the face of Leo Frank, watching with morbid gaze the brave faces of Frank's wife and his mother, studying the passing show that the numerous witnesses present.

And the woman is so unobtrusive, so plainly out of it all. The tears, whose traces are evident on her face, were not shed as a result of this trial. The lines under her eyes are older than two weeks. Her sorrow—and it is plain that she has undergone sorrow—came some time ago. Now, the first poignant pain of it has passed and only a dull ache remains.

All that is plain as she sits in the courtroom in an attitude which bespeaks much of listlessness and resignation. The thoughts that pass in her mind are revealed in that attitude and in her placid face. And the sum of them is this:

No matter what happens, the dull ache will always be there at her heart.

Mary Phagan's Mother.

Because, you see, it is her little girl that all this is about. The black-clad woman is Mrs. W. J. Coleman, Mary Phagan's mother, and Mary Phagan is dead.

Mrs. Coleman has not been in the courtroom during all the trial. Much of the time she has been in the room upstairs, kept there because she was a witness. And witnesses must not see nor hear what is going on in the courtroom before they are called, even if the names of their own little girls are bandied back and forth.

But now Mrs. Coleman has testified. She has looked upon the blood-stained, pitiful clothing of her daughter, the clothing that was publicly shown, the intimate garments that were upheld before hundreds of eyes. She has announced for purposes of court record that they were Mary's.

She has explained how she last saw her daughter alive. She has told how Mary Phagan ate her last hurried meal of cabbage and bread and then went out to a horrible death. Now, she may come out of the witness room and listen to all that other persons have to say about Mary, alive and dead.

Now she may sit in a corner of the courtroom and hear that her daughter was beaten and choked and killed.

She may listen, perhaps with a pang of jealousy, to other persons tell that they saw Mary Phagan alive, happy and serene, long after she kissed the little girl good-by for the last time.

It is her Mary that they are talking about, the little girl whom she held in her arms as a baby, whom she watched grow up to be a capable worker, with a spirit unspoiled, with a laugh as free as in the baby days, with a hundred dreams and hopes there on the edge of young womanhood.

Testimony Bewilders.

Mrs. Coleman wears a look of bewilderment at times, as she tries hard to follow the intricacies of the testimony. Sometimes they are not talking about Mary Phagan at all, but about expense accounts and balance sheets and clocks. What has all that to do with her little girl?

It is when the witnesses are talking about these incidental bits in the chain of circumstantial evidence that the black-clad mother is most the listless and passive figure of resignation. It is then that she looks around, with her wide-open stare, as if in wonder that her little girl could be the cause of it all.

But even when the name of Mary Phagan is mentioned, the mother is not noticeably attentive. Her eyes cease their wandering, but her body changes nothing of its posture of listlessness, loses none of its air of being detached from the courtroom and its incidents.

She is there plainly without resentment toward any one in particular. There is no vengefulness in her soul—you can read that in her face. It is almost as if she, having suffered so much, is unwilling that any others suffer. She sits there and looks, curiously, wonderingly, a little dully.

And sometimes they mention Mary Phagan's last meal of cabbage. It is remarkable that a dish of homely cabbage should become a great thing. There is something grimly ludicrous in the situation. And there are some the irreverent and the unfeeling, who have made it a subject of jest.

Glorified in Love.

But to Mrs. Coleman there must be something appealingly intimate in the subject. She cooked the cabbage. She chopped it and prepared it as her little daughter liked. The simple meal was glorified by the love that must have gone into its making—housewife love for those in her care, mother-love for the whims and desires of her children. The cabbage subject must be of tremendous interest to Mrs. Coleman.

Whatever her interest, though, it is never keenly shown. Apathy seems to be the chief characteristic of her in the courtroom—no, not apathy, but just a dull wonder.

You read plainly from her worn face and her figure that she is not seeking vengeance. Sometimes you might wonder why she is there in the courtroom. You establish curiosity as the motive, curiosity and the natural, jealous, mother-desire to hear directly from the mouths of others something about her little girl as she last was seen.

It must be almost like awaiting a message that she is there, nursing her dull grief.

Many Years' Test of Eckman's Alterative

For several years a large number of voluntarily written testimonials from persons who recovered from Lung Trouble have been received by the makers of Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for the treatment of Throat and Lung Trouble. Surely plenty of time to demonstrate its lasting value. You can write to any of them for confirmation. Here is one:

5323 Girard Ave., Phila., Pa.

"Gentlemen: In the winter of 1903 I had an attack of Grippe, followed by Pneumonia and later by Consumption. In the winter of 1904 I had cough, night sweats, fever and raised quantities of awful-looking stuff and later I had many hemorrhages; at one time three in three successive days. Milk and eggs became so distasteful I could keep nothing down. Three physicians treated me. I was ordered to the mountains, but did not go. Eckman's Alterative was recommended by a friend. After taking a small quantity I had the first quiet night's sleep for weeks. My improvement was marked from the first. I gained strength and weight and appetite. I never had another hemorrhage and my cough gradually lessened until entirely gone. I am perfectly well."

Interest Unabated as Dramatic Frank Trial Enters Third Week

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The third week of the most remarkable murder trial ever known in Georgia opened to-day with no apparent lessening of the acute interest and grim appeal heretofore attaching to it.

The public has come to realize thoroughly and completely that the issue is a battle not only between the State and the defendant, Leo Frank, but between Leo Frank and the negro Jim Conley.

Presumably, the defense will take the entire week rounding out its case and perfecting its undermining of Conley's story.

If it does get through within the week, it will have employed approximately the same amount of time in telling its story that the State employed in telling the other side.

The first powerful and bewildering shock of Conley's tale, unanticipated in its full sinister detail, has passed away in a measure, it seems.

It is but the simple truth to say that the day of and the day following Conley's awful charge, in addition to the one of murder, marked the climax of the State's case and the zenith of feeling against Frank.

Then it was that the outlook for the defense seemed to be the most dismal, and then it was that even Frank's most loyal friends and sympathizers began to grow apprehensive and sore afraid.

Doubt Begins to Grow.

Since the defense began its pleading, however, there has been something of a revulsion of feeling—or, at least, there appears to have been created a doubt in the minds of many people as to the complete and convincing probability of Conley's revelations.

Not that the defense is out of the woods yet, by any means—as a matter of fact, the defense still is very deep in the woods, and while there may be those who think the defense likely sees daylight and sunshine somewhere through the darkness, it generally is admitted that the darkness still very much is there.

As the frightful charge of perversion was the most prejudicial thing injected by the State against Frank, so, as a natural consequence, is the seeming determination of the defense to put his character frankly in issue the thing seemingly most likely to remove that prejudice, if possible.

To put Frank's character in issue, in the face of the fact that the defense alone has that right, despite the dramatically delivered and certainly impressive testimony of Conley against it, will seem in the mind of many to argue that the defense is in no way afraid to meet that issue fairly and squarely—and it is not at all illogical to conclude that the successfully tendering of his character as an issue will have the effect, in large measure anyway, of removing from the mind of the jury the horrible charge of the negro.

Depends on Conley's Word.

As the matter stands now, the attack on Frank's character rests entirely upon Conley's word—Conley has been corroborated not at all on the direct charge, and he has been corroborated, even indirectly, in the most doubtful way.

It may be, on the other hand, that the State, once given the right to go after Frank's character hammer and tongs, will be prepared to attack it with heavy artillery, and perhaps demolish it entirely. Certainly the necessity of doing this, in the circumstances then, will be apparent enough.

The Supreme Court of Georgia has held definitely that character may be tendered as evidence of a positive fact, and it asks significantly this question, through the late Chief Justice Warner:

"Of what use is good character, which a man may have been years in establishing, if it is to avail him nothing in his hour of peril?"

It is rather curious, in a way, that practically every vitally effective and controlling point in this case should reduce itself eventually to a question of truth between Frank and Conley.

Nothing Fidgety About Frank.

The Leo Frank of this week of his trial is not the Leo Frank of last week and week before last.

If spectators were inclined for a time to think the quiet, repressed, spectacled young man sitting over there beyond Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, the slight person immediately between the only two women in the entire courtroom, was in any wise indifferent to or unmindful of the progress of the trial—his own trial, and for a brutal murder, at that—they have changed their minds now.

They have changed their minds as completely as Leo Frank has changed his attitude.

If there is anything in external appearances and surface indications, I should say that Frank is, in practically any and all circumstances, a man of very marked patience. I doubt that he ordinarily hurries, or frets unduly, or grows especially restless, any way.

He is brisk enough in his movements, getting up now and then, with a quickness of action easily enough to be seen, either to say a word to one of his lawyers or to leave the courtroom for a moment—but there is nothing the least "fidgety" about the man.

While the State was making out its case—even when Conley was on the stand, hurling his charge of immorality against Frank—the defendant sat apparently unmoved.

Save for an occasional momentary gripping of the arms of his chair, a tightening of the lips, or a slight wrinkling of the brows, the defendant gave no sign, either of the indignation he must have felt if innocent or the apprehension he must have felt if guilty.

Apparent Stoic Under Fire.

While the State was making out its case, Frank seemed the personification of patience—or whatever it is one should call it, according to the state of his mind in respect of the defendant.

He sat there—just sat there—to some an apparent stoic, to others a—what?

Immediately the defense got well under way directly, however, the Leo Frank theretofore known to the public became another person—absolutely and entirely another person.

He seems to have realized that now, at last, has come his day to speak.

No longer must he, restrained by wise and far-seeing counsel, hold back in word of mouth or effort at defense. At last, after all the long days of waiting, of studying the charge lodged against him, of repressing his emotions and standing aloof from a critical and possibly hostile outside world, Frank is saying the necessary word to clear his good name, if it be sufficient to the undertaking.

Where once he sat unmoved and calm, he now takes a noticeably directing part in his defense. Time and again, he arises or leans over, as the case may be, and whispers words into his attorney's ears.

On several occasions his whisperings have been responded to immediately by approving nods from his counsel, and at once thereafter has followed, particularly on the direct examination, a line of questioning evidently enough set in motion by the defendant himself, and by other persons.

Seems Sure of Himself.

Frank, I think, is rather sure of himself—guilty or innocent, he is there to do battle to the bitter end, to meet his enemies in the gate, and to vanquish them, if he find himself powerful enough.

He is a very small man physically, but I think he has the courage requisite to the undertaking he has in hand. Whether it is the courage of righteousness and a sense of his innocence, or the courage of desperation and guilt, it is not, perhaps, for me to say.

It only seems that he is eager for the fight, and confident of his strength to win.

No spectator there can hope to read his heart or read his mind. Great reams of newspaper space and reportorial effort might be saved henceforth if only one might do either of those two things.

And whether all the rest of the world be against him, it appears a sure thing to say that, at least, his wife there beside him and his mother constantly in attendance upon him, believe him utterly and altogether innocent.

I suspect there is no question, moreover, that both Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold believe in the innocence of Frank.

Beyond these four and the jury and the judge, however, I doubt if Frank concerns himself extensively nowadays—unless, of course, he thinks often of that stout-hearted and unafraid bald-headed man, Simon Marks, and a band of friends who never yet have forsaken him, no matter how dark the gloom that has seemed to close around him.

Picked Up State's Gauntlet.

It may be that Frank in his defense of himself will disappoint these expectant ones. It may be that he never will come through the fire unscorched, it may be that and it may be a lot of things, but it will not be denied, when this case is over, that Frank picked up, full and free, the gauntlet the State threw at his feet.

The State's case was the State's business. Frank stood off and let it go its limit. Of course, he hardly could have kept it from going its limit—but the point is, he didn't try particularly.

The defense, however—the defense is Frank's business, strictly!

And he is right there, on the job, as he would be, I take it, had this frightful murder never been committed, and were it with him merely a question of catching up with a smashing and record-breaking order for the product of the factory over on Forsyth street, where a few weeks ago he was the universally respected superintendent.

Frank will make no half-way defense of himself—that much may be anticipated confidently, I suspect. He will meet every issue tendered—even including the attack other than the charge of murder.

How will he fare eventually? Well, that is another question—and it is not yet has been approximately answered.

Committee, declared himself ready to champion the bill to the last.

The bill provides, among other things, for a state tax assessor, in addition to county boards of tax equalizers.

The Senate passed several measures on the calendar several weeks. The first rsolution to go through was one by Senator Longino providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate and receive bids on the proposed re-leasing of the Western and Atlantic Railroad. Several amendments were lost.

Another important bill passed was that of Senator Huie, of the Thirty-fifth, making it a misdemeanor to present a check when there are not sufficient funds in the bank to pay it.

Two bills by Senator McNeill were passed—one permitting the operation of through trains and trains carrying perishables on Sunday and the other allowing insurance companies to invest 10 per cent of their surplus stock in bonds of any one institution.

The Senate agreed to reconsider the bill giving the custody of young children to the mother, which was defeated last week. Senator Stark, pleading that the adverse report of the committee be upheld, charged that the present bill was planned as the result of the Zachry case, in which Judge Hammond, of Augusta, held that he was forced to deliver the children to the father.

Upon motion of Senator McGregor the Senate ordered that 100 copies of the Governor's message, which was read Monday morning, be printed and furnished to the Senators by Monday afternoon.

Gibbons Is Certain Suffrage Will Come

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—"I am weary," said Cardinal Gibbons, when interviewed here. "I am growing old and these trips are trifle hard on me.

"Personally I do not believe in women voting," he answered in reply to a question. "The Church has not passed on the subject. I have the old-fashioned idea about woman and the home. I think women would better make good mothers than good politicians. But suffrage is certain to come to women."

DEFENSE'S FOOD EXPERT IS GRILLED BY SOLICITOR

is it?—A. It is cabbage in formaldehyde. The woman was asked not to chew it at all. It was taken out from 45 to 50 minutes after being eaten.

Q. Does it show any change?—A. None at all.

Q. Take No. 3—what is it?—A. It was taken by a woman of 21. She did not masticate it. It was in the stomach 25 minutes. There was also some tomato which she had eaten for breakfast. It was awfully hard to make her give it up, taking more than two minutes to make her vomit at all.

Q. Now, this last one?—A. That was taken to-day. It was a breakfast of bread and cabbage. It was taken out 2 1-2 hours later.

Q. Is it possible to say from a chemical or any other kind of an examination how long food has been in the stomach?—A. No man on earth could tell.

Never Hear "Omidulin."

Dr. Hancock, upon being questioned, declared that from what he had heard of the examination made of Mary Phagan, that the evidences did not indicate that an assault had been attempted.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness.

Q. You are a surgeon rather than a general practicioner, are you not?—A. For the last few years I have devoted myself exclusively to surgery.

Q. You are the surgeon for the Georgia Railway and Electric Company, are you not?—A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't it require considerable knowledge to testify with any accuracy about the effect of digestive processes on cabbage?—A. I have that.

Q. Are you familiar with the word "omidulin"?—A. I am not.

Q. Is there such a word?—A. I think so.

Mr. Arnold took the witness.

Q. It is a word that is rarely used, isn't it, Doctor?—A. I never heard it before.

Dr. Hancock was excused and Dr. Willis Westmoreland, former president of the State board of Health, and president of the Atlanta Medical College, was the next expert witness called. Dr. Westmoreland's testimony was regarded as intensely interesting, owing to the differences arising between he and Dr. Harris, over State Board matters last year. Attorney Arnold examined him.

Q. What is your business?—A. Surgeon.

Q. Where?—A. For a number of years at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Answers Usual Questions.

Q. Were you ever president of the State Board of Health?—A. Yes.

Mr. Arnold propounded the same hypothetical questions he asked Dr. Hancock about the cut on the back of Mary Phagan's head. Dr. Westmoreland replied that a physician could only surmise or guess as to whether the blow caused unconsciousness, death or what its effect might have been.

Q. Could the blow have been inflicted bfor or after death?—A. You could not tell.

Q. Would a cut of that kind bleed after death?—A. So long as the blood was liquid.

Q. Could anyone tell from which direction the blow was inflicted?—A. Absolutely not.

Arnold here asked the doctor regarding the length of time the cabbage had been in te stomach and the effect of the various digestive processes upon it. The answer was that to make a positive statement would only be the wildest guess.

Q. I will ask you if it is ethical for a physician to make an examination of parts of the body and then destroy them without bringing them into court, or without giving the other side an opportunity to make the same examination?—A. It is a violation of one of the unwritten laws of the profession.

Judge Allows Question.

Solicitor Dorsey objected to this question. Attorney Arnold addressed the court:

"Your Honor," he said, "over yonder in his little room this chemist, or alleged chemist, made analysis all alone. After he had finished he destroyed all his material on which he had worked. I want to show that such conduct was unethical, dishonest and almost unbelievable. He would try us and convict us without giving us a chance."

Dorsey: "He simply wants to impeach the ethical character of Dr. Harris by Dr. Westmoreland, and I object."

Judge Roan ruled that Mr. Arnold could bring out the rule of ethics of doctors, but that he could not comment specifically on Dr. Harris.

Solicitor Dorsey tok the witness on the cross-examination.

Q. Are you a specialist in surgery?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't do any stomach analysis work, do you?—A. I have an assistant who does the work in the laboratory. It takes a long time.

Q. Physical inverts often appear physically normal, do they not?—A. Sometimes.

Dorsey Goes Into Detail.

Mr. Dorsey propounded a hypothetical question describing the body of Mary Phagan, and asked what he thought would have caused the death.

"I would say strangulation," returned the physician.

Q. Would a blow on the eye that caused swelling have been dealt before or after death?—A. That would depend. It might have been struck after death and have produced practically the same effect.

Q. Would the wound on the back of the head bleed after death?—A. If

DR. BACHMAN IS TRIPPED BY SOLICITOR, EXAMINING DEFENSE'S MEDICAL MEN

death was caused from strangulation it might have bled more.

Solicitor Dorsey went into a detailed cross-examination as to the possibilities of assault upon the Phagan girl. The questions were all hypothetical and Dr. Westmoreland's opinion was that in such cases no unnatural violence was done. Further replies along this line were in favor of Frank.

Q. Assuming that it takes cabbage four hours to digest in the normal stomach, could you look at it and tell how long it had been there?—A. No.

Q. Doesn't the medical world agree that it takes a certain length of time to digest certain food?—A. Yes. That is the result of hundreds of experiments.

Q. Does the medical world agree that it takes four hous to digest cabbage?—A. Four or five.

Q. Who gives five hours, doctor?—A. It is generally accepted to be between four and five.

Q. Haven't they laid down the different stages of digestion?—A. Not absolutely.

Says He Put Harris on Board.

Q. Hasn't this man Hemeter laid down all the stages of digestion?—A. No. He will tell you himself that his rules are not infallible.

Q. What is the length of time before you will find free hydrochloric acid?—A. There is no way of telling.

Q. Well, what is the generally accepted theory?—A. About 30 minutes.

Q. In cabbage and wheat bread, would you expect to find it sooner or later?—A. That would depend upon the mastication.

Q. If we found 32 degrees of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, how long would you say it had been there?—A. I could not say.

Q. Have you any personal feeling toward Dr. Harris?—A. I have none, one way or the other.

Q. You were on the State Board of Health with Dr. Harris?—A. Yes, I put him there.

Q. Is he still there?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you president of the College of Physicians and Surgeons when he was given a chair there?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he do?—A. He was the pathologist.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Will you tell the jury the cause of your difficulty with Harris?—A. I preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against him. He was not removed by the board so I resigned.

Says They Had No Row.

Q. Whatever row or fuss you had has had nothing whatever to do with your testimony?—A. I never had any row with him. I preferred charges against him. The State Board of Health tried him and found him guilty. They did not see fit to remove him, so I resigned as president of the board.

Q. Which, from the standpoint of common sense, would be the most reliable, a visual and digital examination for violence, or a microscopic examination?—A. In post mortem examinations it is often the case that abrasions are overlooked.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Blood when fresh is easy to wipe off if you have water, isn't it?—A. Blood is a very penetrating stain.

Q. How many doctors are there on the State Board of Health?—A. Twelve with the secretary.

Dr. Westmoreland was then excused and Dr. John C. Olmstead was called. Attorney Arnold questioned him.

Q. How long have you been practicing and where did you graduate?—A. I have been practicing 28 years and graduated at the University of Virginia and the University of New York.

Q. Where did you practice?—A. In a new York hospital and then in Atlanta.

Attorney Arnold propounded his hypothetical question on the cut on the back of the head and received the answer that Dr. Harris' opinion was about as wild a guess as could be made.

Q. Could such a wound as I have described to you as appearing on the back of the head have been inflicted after death?—A. Yes, if it was before the blood congealed.

Can't Tell Time of Death.

Q. Could such a blow as I have described, black and swollen, have been inflicted on the eye after death?—A. It might.

Q. Look at this cabbage. After a chemical analysis and the finding of 32 degrees of acidity, could you determine with any degree of certainty how long it had been in the stomach before death?

A. No, I don't think there is any authority, certainly not in English, which assigns to the stomach any quality of accurately determining the time of death.

Q. Suppose cabbage isn't chewed like that (pointing to one of the samples which had been well masticated), might it not lodge in the stomach?—A. Yes.

Q. How long might it stay in the stomach without being further digested?—A. It might stay ten or twelve hours.

Q. To attempt to state within ten or fifteen minutes when death occurred by the condition of this cabbage—would you consider that a wild guess?—A. Too wild to be characterized.

Mr. Arnold put the usual question to obtain an opinion from the witness as to whether Mary Phagan was assaulted. The answer was that indications were that no unnatural violence was present.

Dr. Olmstead said that Dr. Harris' surmise that violence had been done the girl immediately before death was the most extraordinary surmise that he had ever heard.

Tells Time of Digestion.

Dorsey took the witness.

Q. The medical world recognizes that you can determine the degree and time it takes for the digestion of wheat bread, doesn't it?—A. Yes, after accurate experiments with is known as a test breakfast, from two to two and one-half hours.

Q. A table has been compiled showing how long it takes to digest various articles, hasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. The table states it takes four hours to digest cabbage, doesn't it?—A. The table I saw put cabbage at four and one-half hours.

Q. What kind of change would you expect on cabbage an bread within thirty minutes?—A. It would depend on the character and quality of the food.

Solicitor Dorsey held up the two phials containing the cabbage taken from the stomach of Mary Phagan and that cooked by her mother and taken from the stomach of a normal person after one hour.

Q. What sort of comparison would you make as to how long these samples had been in the stomach?—A. The experiment is a little delicate. Stomachs vary too much.

Q. What element would you have to have to properly express it?—A. I would have to know what amount was taken out and what amount was left in the stomach.

Dorsey Interpolates.

Dorsey: "Just a moment—let me interpolate this. How does it make any difference what amount was taken out? Just tell me from the circumstances I have enumerated if you would not say this specimen, the one I say had been in the stomach only 60 minutes, would have been in the stomach a shorter length of time?—A. Yes. The one with the larger pieces under those circumstances would have been in there a shorter length of time.

Q. You say you are a doctor of medicine and a general practitioner. Are you an expert?—A. I will say this, I am not an analytical chemist, but I am familiar with it and in general practice get the benefit of wide experience.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. After death, could any physician, even an expert, tell how long things had been in the stomach?—A. It would be the very wildest guess.

Dr. Ilmstead was then excused, and Joel Hunter, an expert accountant, was called. Arnold questioned him.

Q. What is your business?—A. Public accountant.

Q. How long?—Fifteen years.

Q. What position do you hold?—A. I am chairman of the State Board of Examiners.

Q. Did you examine those reports, the financial sheets?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Mr. Schiff?—A. Yes, he gave me the data.

Long Time to Make Report.

Q. What did you do?—A. In order to find what length of time it would take to make out one of those sheets I made all the calculations.

Q. Did you find any mistake?—A. Yes.

Q. What was it?—A. A trifling error in a decimal point.

Q. Did you find any other errors?—A. No.

Q. I will get you to tell how long it took to make out this report?—A. I first made the examination with the data, and then without the data. I figured 150 minutes as the quickest possible time. To do any checking at all, it would take from three to three and a half hours.

The expert witness then went into an extensive explanation of the different items on the financial sheet. Attorney Hooper took him on cross-examination.

Q. If you were making up the report as an original proposition, would the same data have been furnished to you?—A. I could not say.

Q. Well, much of this work with which you were unfamiliar and had to trace down, he had at his fingers' tips, did he not?—A. I have only figured a reasonable minimum time. I can not say what Mr. Frank had is such that it is notetaoinshrd at his fingers' tips. The statement is such that it is not subject to sub-proving. You can't prove it as you go along. If that could be done, it could be made out quicker.

Q. You have estimated, in other words, how long it would take him?—A. No, I made it out to show how quick I thought it could possibly be made out.

Q. If a man made it out in an afternoon, he would not have time to see a baseball game, would he?—A. I would hardly think so.

Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Deputy Hunting Scalp Of Juror-Ventriloquist.

Big Bob Deavors, Deputy Sheriff in charge of the Frank trial jury, marched to the courtroom Monday morning with an aching head and a grim determination to get even with Juror A. H. Henslee, whose elusive voice piloted him against a bedpost late Sunday evening.

Henslee is a ventriloquist of no mean ability, and when the jury has been locked up Sunday his talent has afforded the principal pastime. Yesterday he worked on Deavors, the deputy. He had Bob's wife calling to him from the street, the hall door and finally from the door leading into another room. It was through this last door that Deavors broke and encountered the head of a bed with the full weight of his big frame.

An impromptu piano concert Sunday afternoon by Juror F. E. Winburn, a stroll under guard late Sunday evening and the feats of ventriloquism broke the monotony of what would have been a listless day.

30,000 at Templar Conclave in Denver

DENVER, COLO., Aug. 11.—Twenty-five hundred persons arrived in Denver every 60 minutes to-day for the thirty-second triennial conclave of the Knights Templars. Thirty thousand Knights and thousands of other visitors will be in the city to-night. Between 400 and 500 special trains were scheduled to arrive in Denver before the real business of the conclave begins to-morrow.

More than $300,000 has been spent to make Denver beautiful.

STRIKE CRIPPLES MILAN.

MILAN, ITALY, Aug. 11.—Over 1,000 arrests were made here to-day in the general strike which has stagnated the city. Traffic is at a standstill. Martial law is in force and soldiers patrol all the streets.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Saturday afternoon at the Capital City Country Club seems to be the popular time for golfing and swimming. The lake reminded one of a seashore resort. All afternoon members of the club were having tea with their friends on the veranda, among them being Mr. and Mrs. John Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Haverty, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Barnes, Mr and Mrs. Frampton Ellis, Mrs Hinton Baker, of Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. John Murphey, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr., Mrs. Ben Noble, of Birmingham; Mrs. Sims Bray, Mrs. William Robinson, Mrs. Harry Harman, Misses Dorothy Harman, Josephine Mobley, Virginia Lipscomb, Julia Murphey.

Always the dinner-dances at the Piedmont Club are enjoyable affairs of the week-end. About 150 people had dinner on the beautiful terrace. Afterwards many danced. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Andrews entertained twelve friends in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. William H. Burwell. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hopkins, Jr., had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Payne. With Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hatcher were Mr. and Mrs. William Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Waste No Time in Getting to This Waist Sale

The Values Are Fine. The Styles Are Charming and Many

It's a Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company outclearing!

And the waists are as smart and stylish and fresh as the woman who is "a bit particular" about her waists could ever want, regardless of the fact that the new prices might mislead her.

There are one hundred sixty-five in all—

Cotton Crepes and Voiles, Crepe de Chines and Habutai and China Silks.

Indeed, the choosing will be fine for those who waste no time in getting to the hundred sixty-five early.

The details—

$1.95 For $3.00 and $3.50 Black China White Habutai Silk Waists.

One hundred of these.

About-to-be vacationers will snap them up quickly or we miss our guess. Of those of black China silk some have Dutch necks, with short sleeves; others high-neck and long-sleeve, little black buttons trim them. Those of white habutai silk, plain and satin striped (washable might be called shirts, plain tailored styles, with low turn-over and pointed collars.

$3.75 For $5.00 and $7.50 Waists of Plain White China Silk and Crepe de Chine.

There are one hundred of these, one as lovely as another. There are those with double frills of crepe de chine and those with embroidered batiste down fronts, having a bit of color on the low collars and the cuffs. The color is sometimes a little narrow border, again it is a matter of fancy stitching. Some are hand-embroidered. Also, you will like the way the sleeves are set in.

Half-Price

For Cotton Voile and Crepe Waists That Were $5.75 to $12.75

Sixty-five have their prices treated thus. All are elegant affairs that women will own with much satisfaction. White voiles and white crepes, with trimming—touches that originated in no other spot than Paris. Lace-trimmed waists and hand-embroidered waists with a vivid color showing in the collar and cuffs—and the collars are various—low, flat lying, pointed and high—short sleeves and long sleeves; and china and crystal buttons are frequent.

But see them all at their new prices.

LIND MOVES TO END WARFARE IN MEXICO

Washington Breathes Easier as U. S. Envoy Is Quartered Safely in Hostile Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Over the State Department cable President Wilson and John Lind, Special Envoy, are exchanging views on the complex problems of Mexican conditions and are preparing to make a striking move which will emphasize the mission of peace and mediation upon which the latter has been sent to the turbulent republic.

President Wilson having taken the logical diplomatic steps to protect his Envoy in Mexico City, and having reassured President Huerta of the nature of Lind's mission, shows optimism over the situation. He knows the slightest spark may ignite the international powder magazine in Mexico City, but is entirely confident that Huerta will not permit that spark to be ignited.

The safe arrival of Governor Lind in Mexico City, where he is under the protection of the American Embassy, has removed a weight from the minds of the Government officials, for they consider the most dangerous stage of Mr. Lind's mission has been passed.

The Navy Department to-day provided for emergencies, however, by sending an additional light draft gunboat to the Atlantic coast of Mexico. The battleship now off Vera Cruz can not enter the harbor, and their work would be hampered by a hurried summons which was sent to them.

Recognition of the belligerency of the Carranza forces, carrying with it the waiving of the neutrality laws regarding the shipment of arms, was discussed in Administration circles to-day.

There also were rumors of a rupture between President Wilson and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, over the interpretation of international law in regard to Mexico, but these rumors, together with one that Mr. Moore intends to resign, are without confirmation.

It was indicated to-day that President Wilson believes an extensive campaign of lying to compel the United States to intervene in Mexico is under way. This campaign is based on misrepresentations of the most brazen type, the President believes, and he is determined not to be influenced by it.

State Department advices from Vera Cruz to-day reported renewed rebel activiteis in the vicinity of that city. The rebels have attacked the plantation of Peter Gearing, an American missionary near Tuxpam, Vera Cruz. Mr. Gearing has reported the loss of several thousand dollars worth of stock, together with several outhouses, which were burned by the bandits.

Jones, of 'He Pays Freight' Fame, Dies

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 11.—General Edward F. Jones, veteran of the War Between the States, and author of the advertising slogan, "Jones, He Pays the Freight," died here to-day, aged 85. He was born in Utica, N. Y. For six years General Jones had been blind. After the war he became a manufacturer of scales and grew rich principally through his advertising campaigns.

General Jones served as colonel of the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment, which was the first to pass through Baltimore on its way to Washington when the war broke out.

600 Milliners Seek Fall Styles Here

Atlanta jobbers opened their displays of fall millinery Monday, and leaders in the trade estimate that 600 buyers are in the city.

The showrooms of the various wholesale houses were gay with the new fall styles for women's headgear —styles which the general public will not see for a month or so to come, when the retail milliners blossom forth.

Smaller hats and a tendency toward cloth flowers are the trend of fashion's whim, according to the experts.

Mystery in Death Of Dixie Lodge Man

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 11.—The police of Clarksdale, Miss., were not satisfied to-day with the explanation of Arthur Norquist, aged 34, prominent among Elks lodges in the South, that he had shot himself. Norquist died without saying anything about his injury.

The police of several cities were asked to search for a woman who left Clarksdale in an automobile soon after Norquist was wounded.

Aged Woman Victim Of $82,000 Swindles

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Chicago detectives to-day were searching for two women and one man accused of swindling Mrs. Sarah Barnum, of Rochester, N. Y., out of $20,000. The entire losses of Mrs. Barnum, who is 85, through trusting alleged false friends was said to be $82,000.

Warrants were issued for Frances and Kalla Waldo, sisters, and Henry Russell.

May Grant New Trial To Hawkins' Slayer

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 11.—It is said that Bartow Cantrell, one of the three persons found guilty and sentenced for the murder of Arthur Hawkins in Hall County, may be granted a new trial. He confessed to the actual killing, declaring that his older brother, James Cantrell, directed him and that he feared bodily injury if he did not do as directed.

Cantrell is only 16 years of age.

LAWYERS ARGUE EXTRADITION OF ZACHRY

Slaton Gives Hearing on Charge That Augustan Kidnaped Own Child in South Carolina.

A spectacular fight for the extradition of a citizen of Georgia began Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock when Governor Slaton called the hearing to inquire into the merits of the requisition papers of Governor Cole Blease, of South Carolina, for J. J. Zachry, of Augusta, charged with kidnaping his own child.

Shortly before the hearing began attorneys for both sides, including Attorney Rembert, of Columbia, representing South Carolina, declared themselves ready. Mr. Zachry, also present, expressed hope of being sustained in his contention that Governor Blease has no right to extradite him. He was represented by Attorneys Cohen and Phinizi, of Augusta, and West, of Thompson.

Attorney Rembert declared he had come to get Zachry and had every hope of succeeding.

"We only want one thing," said Mr. Rembert, "and that is Zachry. Should Governor Slaton honor the requisition of Governor Blease, as we think he will, we will take Zachry back to Columbia immediately for trial. While the State of South Carolina holds that Judge Gary, o fColumbia, had no right to deliver the child to Zachry until his ruling had been passed on, we also hold this does not excuse Zachry from a violation of the law. We will charge that Zachry kidnaped the child with the assistance of four constables acting under orders of the Sheriff, and that in making his escape he exceeded the speed limit in every through which he proceeded."

Mr. Rembert said the four constables and the Sheriff at Columbia have been indicted.

Steeplejack's Wife Stops a Good Show

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Steeplejack Edmond Von Kaenel lost a $100 wager to-day. He bet with a friend that he could slide head-first down a pair of ropes from the eighth floor of the Reaper Building to the ground. He trid and the ropes failed to work properly. Hundreds of startled persons in the loop district saw the man high in the air change his position and slide down the ropes feet foremost.

Von Kaenel said he would try again for the $100. Mrs. Doris Von Kaenel said he shouldn't. He didn't.

Dan Hatfield, Slayer, Begins Life Sentence

DALTON, Aug. 11.—Dan Hatfield, given a life sentence for the murder of Will Parrish, to-day began his term on the Whitfield County chaingang.

Hatfield shot and killed Will Parrish in North Dalton on the night of July 12. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty of murder, without recommendation to mercy, but the court passed the life sentence in view of the fact that all the evidence was circumstantial.

Isidor Straus Left Estate of $4,565,000

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Isidor Straus, merchant and philanthropist, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster, left an estate valued at $4,565,000.

His wife, Mrs. Ida Straus, who perished with him rather than be saved, left an estate of $325,000.

The six children of the Titanic victims are the sole heirs of the two estates.

GIRLS' HOME BILL IS LOST IN HOUSE

Point of Order Raised Against Request for Consideration Sustained by Speaker.

An unsuccessful attempt to bring up for consideration House Bill No. 1, to provide a home for wayward girls, was made in the House of Representatives Monday morning.

Representative Jones, of Cowetta County, at the request, it is understood, of advocates of the bill who were in the smoking rooms of the House at the time, made a motion that the morning session of the House be extended half an hour and that the bill be placed on the calendar for immediate action.

He withdrew his motion when objection was made by Fullbright, of Burke, and Sheppard, of Sumter.

Fullbright and Sheppard made the point of order that to extend the session meant a revision of the House rules, which could not be done unless a resolution was introduced and referred to the Rules Committee. The Speaker sustained the point, quoting a rule which read that "the Rules Committee fixes the order of the House and no matter can be taken up unless it is in the order fixed by the Rules Committee."

It is understood an effort will be made to induce the Rules Committee to place the bill on the calendar during the present session, but there is little likelihood of success. The House Appropriations Committee has recommended $30,000 for such a home, but the money will not be available until the Legislature passes a bill establishing the institution.

OLD RESIDENT DIES.

4 Atlantans on Hike Across the Smokies

Bound for a two weeks' hike through the Great Smoky Mountains, four Atlanta young men are en route to-day to Franklin, N. C., the terminus of the Tallulah Falls Railway. The hikers are Tillou H. Forbes, of the Northwestern Life Insurance Company; Elliot Cheatem, of the law firm of Batchelor & Cheatem; C. J. King, of the Associated Press, and Will Fort, of Mount Airy.

From Franklin the young men will start their tramp. They plan to walk through the mountains of North Carolina to the West Virginia line, and will return by way of Lake Toxaway and the Highlands. They will carry their own camp outfit and spend the entire time in the open air.

New Balkan League Leaves Bulgars Out

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 11.—Instead of being broken up by the second Balkan war, the Balkan league, which formerly included Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro, will probably be continued in force, with Roumania taking the place of Bulgaria. Telegrams received to-day from Belgrade, Athens and Cettinje indicated that the governments at those seats favored the project.

Owing to Bulgaria's disinclination to accept defeat at the hands of her former allies, the resumption of hostilities at a later date is accepted as a foregone conclusion.

2 TRIED AS SLAYERS AT JESUP.

JESUP.—At the next term of the Wayne Superior Court there will be two murder trials here. Two white men named Harrison and Poppell are charged with killing a negro. A negro is in jail charged with killing another negro.

DECLARES GEORGIA WOULD BAR JESUS

Pastor Holderby Scores Legislature for Not Requiring Bible Reading in Schools.

Declaring the Legislature of Georgia would vote to have Jesus Christ excluded from the State should He come again on earth, and that the City Council of Atlanta would not permit Him here because He would break up their political schemes, the Rev. Andrew R. Holderby, in his sermon at the Moore Memorial Church Sunday morning, scathingly arraigned the so-called Christian nations of the world for their rejection of Jesus Christ.

"It is quite certain," said Dr. Holderby, "that the Georgia Legislature would find no place for Christ and would try to exclude Him from the State, because they have ruled the Word of Jesus out of the public schools.

"The Atlanta City Council would appoint no committees for the entertainment of Christ. They know that His coming would break up their political rings and schemes, and they would not want Him in Atlanta.

"It is doubtful if any church in America really wants Christ to return to earth. They know that His coming would break up their card playing, their pride and their fashion and Sabbath breaking, and they had rather have these things than the Son of God."

SEQUEL TO LOVE FOR DOLL

Maternal Instinct Greatly Developed by Teaching Children to Love Their Dolls.

The little child's doll is mother to the most romantic fairy. And in the years that pass, the doll fades into the petals of a June rose, to evolve the most wondrous of all transformations.

And now comes a more serious period when the joy of real motherhood should be as tranquil as best effort can provide.

This is accomplished with a wonderful remedy known as Mother's Friend, an external application so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every cord, nerve, muscle and tendon involved.

There will be no pain, none of that nausea or mourning sickness, no sensation of distress or strain of expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, thus making the period one of restful days, of peaceful nights and a source of happiest anticipation.

The young, expectant mother must be carefully watchful lest she become absorbed in these mental distresses which lily prepare her for the most important event in her life.

Mother's Friend enables her to avoid all sensation of dread, worry or pain, and thus she is preserved in health and strength to take up the joyful task of motherhood.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle. Do not fail to use it regularly as directed. Write to-day to Bradfield Regulator Company, 125 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their most valuable little guide book for expectant mothers.

It Means Money Saved to Buy Furniture During the "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

Before we realize it we will be in the midst of our planning for the fall, and of all the refixing and refurnishing of the home that this implies. No doubt there will be some pieces of new furniture needed, it may be no more than a chair, a rocker, a table, a chiffonier or a china closet; again it may be a whole set for the dining room, bedroom or living room.

In this connection it should be a matter of some satisfaction to the women of Atlanta to realize that in the Chamberlin-Johnson - DuBose Company Furniture Store they have the South's largest and choicest stocks of home furniture to draw on —every piece of it here because we found it the best of its kind that the same money could buy.

And right now, practically every piece of it at greatly reduced price.

Just remember this when you start furniture buying, and do yourself, your home, your good taste, your pocketbook the justice of seeing these vast fine stocks.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call-down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of Princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all Princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A King's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a King can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A King can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a King."

No King Madder.

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No King could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money, anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a King, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people thinks he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and he would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to indorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George. It ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to indorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine, and this is the copy of it:

"'I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me,
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver,
And I, who have friends on every hand,
Their love all gold I would not kill for.'

People Made Happier.

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that there wasn't no real rhyme for 'silver,' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, them sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was here, and he will be talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good King. I am afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a human being.

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish somebody would indorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

IOLA, KANS.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kans.

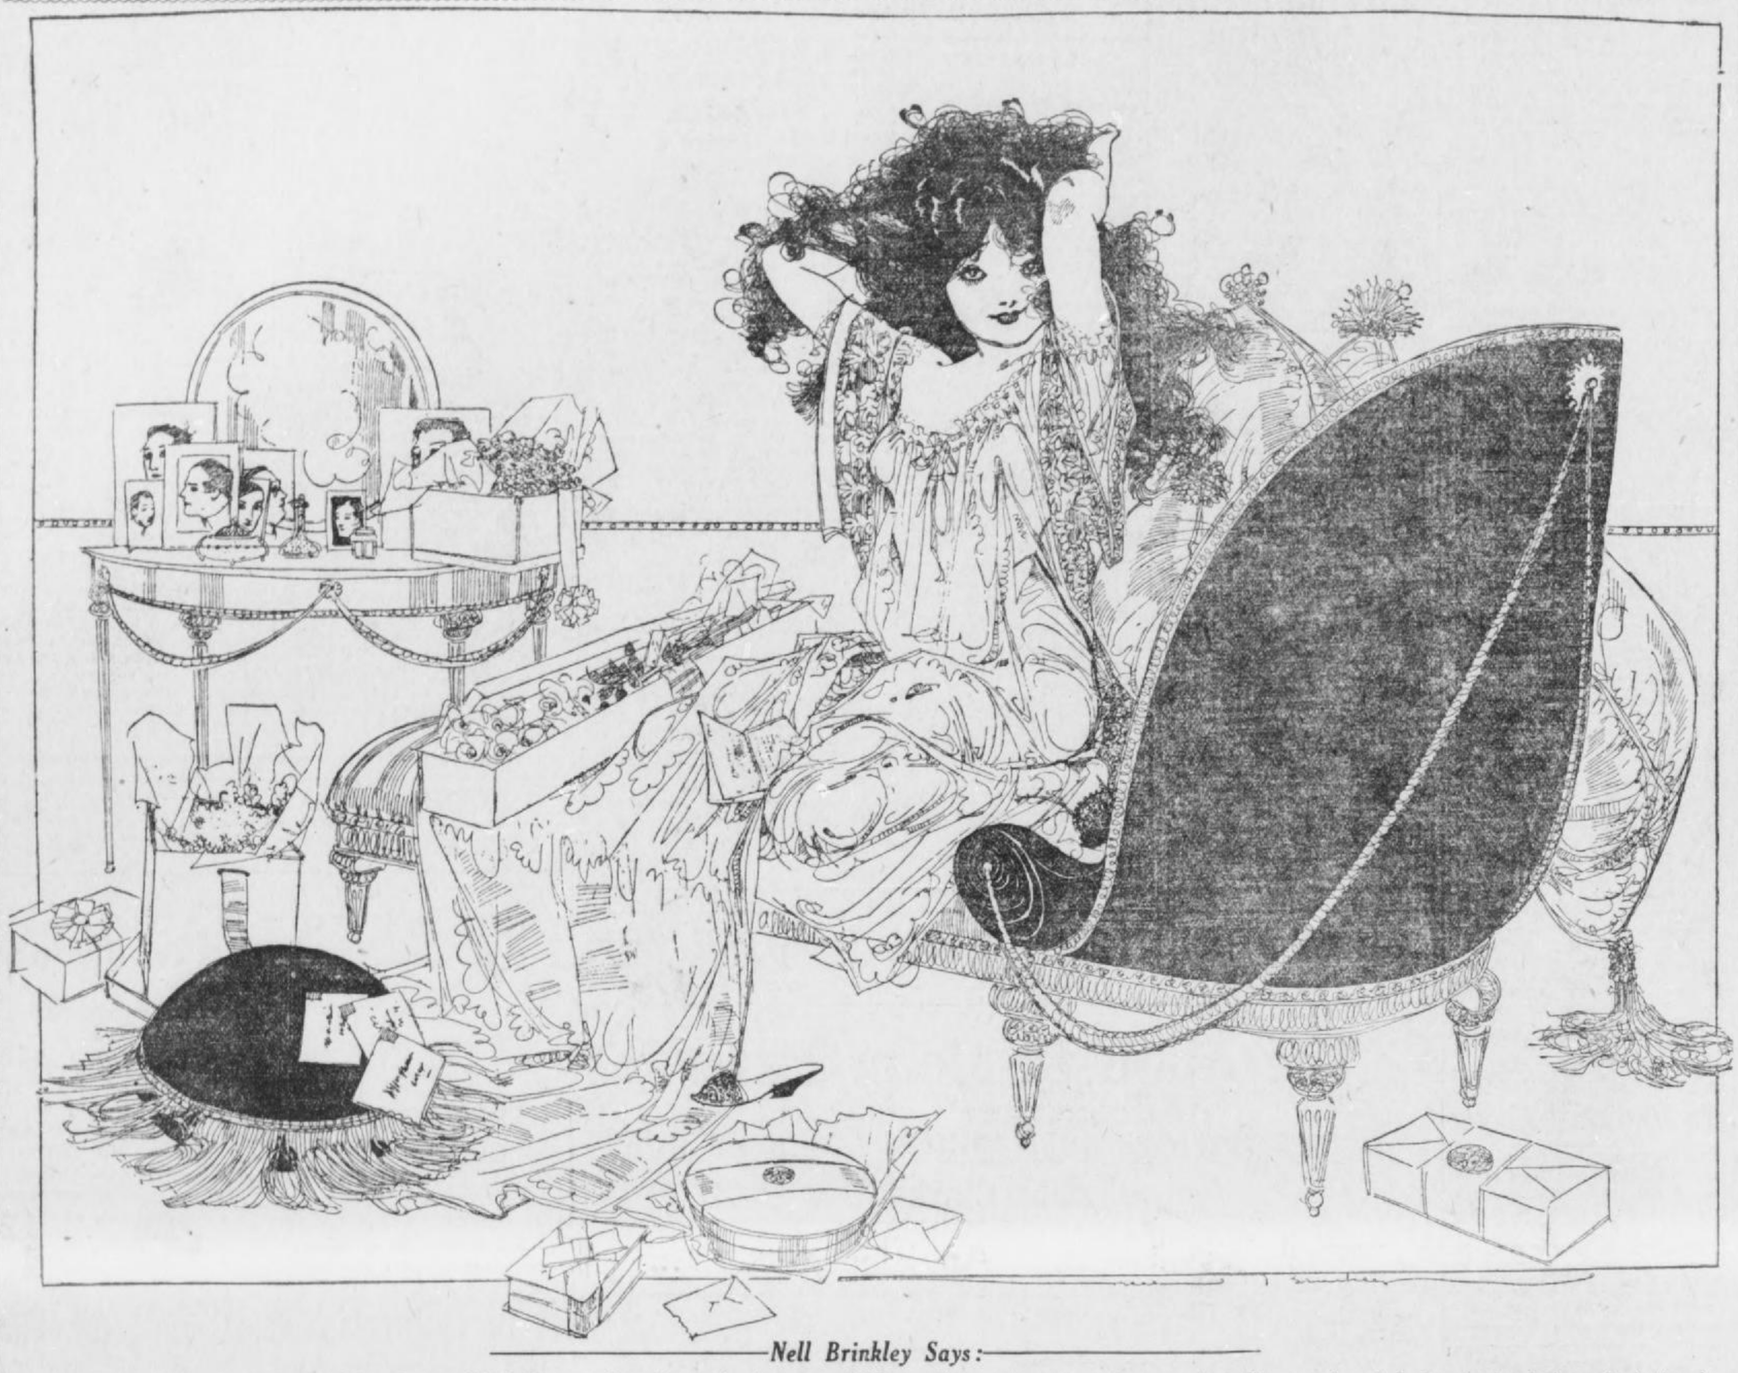

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"I Should Worry"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says:

"MY beaux are many! Back of the clutter of little bottles and ivory things, vials of orange scent from Arabia and Poudre de Riz from Paris, their pictures stand, worshipping every time I look at my pretty eyes in the glass. When I first stir under my silk-and-down coverlet I can hear the rustle of paper and I know that means my morning consignment of love-letters, so I turn over, bury my nose in the curve of my arm and dream a little longer! After my chocolate I gather my letters, my candy, gold-labelled and ribbon bound, my flowers in their tall and long boxes, and I rip them all open and revel. I solemnly absorb the praise in the missives. I tuck away bits of nectar-filled chocolates in my cheeks. I put my face down in the gloomy, dewy coolness of the fragrant flower nests. And then I shake out my hair, yawn a bit and smile, 'I should WORRY!'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE great need of every home, according to the princess in it, is some means whereby the earning capacity of father could be doubled.

Daysey Mayme Appleton is a princess, and, like all princesses, she lets her subjects do the worrying. If things cost more, then father should earn more, and after carefully dusting a place on the carpet where her mother could have her daily fit on returning from market and finding further advances in prices, she felt that she had done her full duty.

All her life she had had to curl one hair to make it do the work of two, and the experience had made her an economist.

She felt the other day that she owed herself some great joy, and realized that the securing of it must not prove a drain on her pocket.

So she put on her split skirt without a curtain underneath, proving that she applied economic principles in the smallest detail of her attire, and left the house.

Her destination was away down-town, and it was plain from the exterior of the little one-story building she entered that her errand was neither for ribbons nor chocolates.

Passing into an anteroom, she was detained for five minutes till an attendant gave word that she would be received. Dark red curtains hung between the doors connecting the rooms, and at the sound of a silvery-tinkling bell Daysey Mayme parted the curtains and entered.

Twenty minutes later she emerged, her cheeks pink with excitement, and her eyes glowing with happiness.

"There is nothing in this talk of the high cost of everything!" she said, exultingly, at dinner that night. "I went downtown this afternoon and bought three lovers, two husbands, five beautiful children, a journey across the water, another across the land, two dark complected friends, four rivals, one enemy, who will try to injure me, but who will be vanquished, and a noble millionaire, who will die soon and leave me his vast estates—all for Ten Cents!"

She had her fortune told!

The Last Hope.

Scene: Far out at sea; stateroom on board a huge transatlantic liner which is being tossed about like a cork in a tremendous sea.

The Bootlace King, a famous Yankee multi-millionaire (clinging desperately to the sides of his bunk): "Steward! Steward!"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand this ship has watertight compartments?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then tell the captain I must have one immediately. I don't care what it costs!"

Observant.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" replied little Jennie.

A MODERN LOVE SONG.

TO you, whoever you are,
Wherever you may be,
I send this message—near or far—
I'm the not-impossible she.

I wish you'd make an effort,
Oh, Mister Affinity,
And not just sit a-waiting
For the not-impossible me.

I'm sure I've given you a chance,
Whoever you may be,
To realize this simple fact,
I'm the wholly possible she.

"Who knows, and knows he knows,
is wise. Cleave thou to him,
And nevermore forsake him.
Who knows and knows not that he knows—he sleeps;
Go thou to him and wake him.

"Who knoweth not and knows he knoweth not is a child,
Go thou to him and teach him.
Who knows not and knows not that he knoweth not is a fool.
No light shall ever reach him."

"A man must stand erect and not be held erect by circumstance.

"Everything is only for a day, with that which remembers and that which is remembered.

"The present is the only thing of which a man can be deprived.

"Everything which is in any way beautiful is beautiful in itself—and neither worse nor better is a thing made by being praised."

Oh, the world has its gloom, and 'tis gloom to spare;
'Twill make you weary and sad;
But there's plenty of gleam, as is only fair,
To make you cheery and glad.

Now the world may seem dark as the shrouding night,
All clad in a pall of black.
But somewhere 'tis day—so just walk toward the light,
And the shadows will fall at your back.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I see; I see; and you have failed also to follow the trail of the doctor's wanderings?"

"He left none; the only man who can tell us anything about his movements at that time persists in denying all knowledge of them."

"Is there a Mr. Monroe, of Seventy-second street?"

"Yes, and he did receive a prescription that night by the hand of Dr. Molesworth's colored driver. But it was not as important a one as the doctor would make out. He would not have suffered if he had not received it till the next day."

"Then you wish the inquest to be held immediately?"

"As soon as your convenience will permit."

"Well, well, we will have the inquest." Then, as Mr. Gryce rose to go, "How about that spot of paint, Gryce? No clew in that, either?"

Mr. Gryce sat down again. "There ought to be," he acknowledged. "There is a mark on the lining of the phaeton, but it is very slight, while that on her dress is very distinct, showing that the paint came off from her dress upon the phaeton. She had consequently been leaning against a freshly painted surface somewhere, and as the paint was of a peculiar shade, I thought I should be able to trace it. But"—he shook his head—"like all the rest it proved a blind trail."

He was going for the second time when the Coroner stopped him.

"Have you thought that if Dr. Molesworth's story is true and he lifted the dying girl from a stoop into his phaeton he would naturally have a smudge of paint on his sleeve?"

"Don't humiliate me! It is there!"

The Inquest.

The next day the inquest was held, and the proceedings were voluminously published. Witnesses from all quarters were examined and the matter was relentlessly sifted. But no more was elicited from the various parties on oath than they had been willing to volunteer at the solicitations of the detective; nor, though the utmost discretion was displayed in the examination of the doctor, could his testimony be shaken or his assertions disproved.

Some of his answers merit recording. To the question as to when and where he became engaged to Miss Farley, he replied, with great dignity, but with no apparent reserve:

"Miss Farley never said she would marry me until the morning of the day she died. Then I received a letter from her saying that she would marry me that day at the C—— Hotel. I had received manifestations of affection from her before, but never any promise."

"You had professed attachment for her, then, some time previous to this event?"

"I first offered myself to her beside her mother's deathbed."

There was feeling in his voice and there was reserve, and the result upon the minds of those present was something like awe. No one blamed the Coroner for the respect with which he next inquired whether the letter received from Miss Farley was still in Dr. Molesworth's possession.

"It is not," was the reply. "I invariably destroyed every line I received from her. It is a custom of mine to preserve no letters."

"Then you were but following out your usual habit when you burned the note which Miss Farley left behind her at the hotel?"

"If I may say so, yes."

"You have no objection to telling us what the note contained."

"None whatever if I could. But it was a string of unmeaning phrases of which only one sentence was clear."

"And that was?"

"'I want my friends about me; it isn't respectable.' Yet she was the one who proposed the marriage," volunteered the doctor, "and at the interview we had in the afternoon no demur was made by her, either as regarded the wedding itself or the manner in which I proposed to have it conducted."

"Will you give us the details of that interview?"

"As nearly as I can, sir. It was such a one as you would expect from a delicate-minded woman who had taken a very important step and was not quite sure how it would be received by her lover. At first she seemed only anxious to learn how I felt about the matter, and when I could not truthfully say she had chosen a very auspicious time for our nuptials she burst into tears and then became so feverish and incoherent I saw she was not well, and at once began to comfort her. She thereupon grew calmer and listened with attention while I told her of the arrangements which had suggested themselves to me, not making, as I have said, any objection to them either then or at any time before I left."

"And what was the manner of your parting?"

"It was affectionate on my part, but I am free to say there was some constraint on hers. With all my efforts to the contrary I had wounded her susceptibilities, sharpened as they were by incipient illness, and she was too much of a woman not to show it. But I never expected more than a little unpleasantness and was as much shocked as anybody when I returned and found her gone."

"One more question in this connection, Dr. Molesworth. The clerk testifies that the hour you set for your wedding was nine, yet you came back with the clergyman as early as a quarter after eight. How was that?

"I was anxious, sir. The more I thought of it the more I was convinced that Miss Farley was on the point of a serious illness. I went early on her account.

All Satisfactory.

This was all very satisfactory, too satisfactory for Mr. Gryce. Telegraphing by a gesture to the Coroner that he had a suggestion to make, he sent him a line or two written on the back of a reporters' notebook, which upon reading the Coroner remarked to the witness:

"You were alone with Miss Farley in room 153 of the C—— Hotel when this interview occurred of which you speak."

"Most certainly, sir."

"A room containing an alcove shut off by curtains?"

"I believe there were curtains there, but I did not look to see what they shut off."

"How then do you know that you two were alone?"

It was but a lightning's flash, that look of irrepressible shock and dismay which crossed Dr. Molesworth's face at this intimation. But the Coroner saw it as Mr. Gryce had seen it on a former important occasion, and he felt as the detective had felt then, that it outweighed all the witness' words and his most plausible explanations.

"I took it for granted we were," he was saying the next moment in his most even tones. "If you have a witness to the contrary, let her be produced; she may assist me in remembering just what did pass between Miss Farley and myself."

It was a bold stroke and it succeeded. They had no witness and he soon saw it, and the color which had slightly left his lips came back and his bearing became almost disdainful.

The Coroner, who was still following Mr. Gryce's suggestions, regarded him with unabated respect.

"You say her," he smiled. "Why not him?"

"Because no man would stoop to listen."

"Dr. Molesworth, during your acquaintance with Miss Farley have you ever had reason to suppose she was receiving addresses from any other gentleman than yourself?"

It was an unexpected attack and the doctor paused a moment before replying. Then he answered distinctly:

"No."

This closed the proceedings of the day and Dr. Molesworth's testimony. Clear, precise, and plausible had been all his replies, and had it not been for a nameless something, hard to describe, he would have gained credit from the officers who conducted his examination, as well as from the public who listened to it.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

This takes in exercises that develop the shoulders into rounded grace, and also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

The chief exercise concerns a shoulder shrugging movement that is easy to learn and produces wonderful results in bust development.

PHOTOS © by WHITE STUDIOS

Figure Two (on bottom)—This exercise develops graceful control of the whole body. This is a more difficult exercise than any so far described by Lady Richardson, but is well worth persisting in. Both exercises are fully described in the accompanying article.

These pictures were especially posed for this paper.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

In ancient times, dancing stood for two things—an expression of divine worship and an effervescence of human joy. Dancing has come down through all the ages, and it seems to me that what it stood for has persisted and come down to us to-day, too.

I never can say in enough ways, or with sufficient emphasis, this one doctrine that I hold all important: The human body was given to us by our Maker in all health and youth and innocence—and the beauty that is the result of these component parts. It is our sacred duty to respect, and to keep beautiful and well this temple of our sacred soul.

Now, since dancing makes the body supple, pliable, fine and fit, is not this proper exercising of the body He gave us a beautiful form of worship of its Maker?

We were meant to be happy, I think. Most of our troubles are either mental attitude entirely, or if real ills befall us our minds can magnify or minimize, just as we choose to have them do. So, if joy wells from our spirits and expresses itself in graceful posture and movement; if a spirit of happiness and thanksgiving expresses itself in rhythmical movement, we are only completing the circle of all the ages—and in its expression of human joy dancing gives thanks for existence even while it benefits physical existence with wondrous efficacy.

To-day I am giving you two exercises which I incorporate in my dancing and which I have copied directly from two fascinating little Greek bronzes. The one is called "The Praying Boy," and the other is a "Dancing Maiden." One is a very simple movement, yet it brings about wonderful co-ordination of muscles, and has a wonderful value in arm development from shoulders to fingertips. The other, which is a difficult and complicated step, is well worth a careful study, for it will give flexibility of waist and back, grace of arm, arched insteps and a lithe, swaying carriage. Quite a bit for one exercise, is it not? Now let me go into detail and prove my assertions.

Sway from foot to foot, changing the weight to the forward foot. When you have mastered ease in this part of the movement, combine it with the arm exercise—shrug the shoulders as high as possible, at the same time raising the arms from the elbows with down drooping wrists and well-separated fingers.

When the forearms are completely raised at the elbow raise the wrist and gradually diminish the uplift of the shoulders. Practice this again and again, swaying from foot to foot the while; then walk forward, practicing the arm exercises as you move. The shoulder shrugging will develop the shoulders in rounded grace, and will also stretch the waist muscles taut and firm.

Figure 2—Walk forward on tiptoes, bending the weight gradually backward as you move. When you have learned to keep your poise while doing this exercise, try it with the flexed body a-sway from side to side, and then finally add the arm movement, which should be done in opposition to the leg movement—that is, when the weight is advancing to the forward right foot, bend the body to the right, with the arm in a perfect curve drawn from waist line to elbow, and from elbow to wrist the forearm in a second curve circling the head. While the left foot is held back the right arm is forward in a graceful horizontal curve. With the line of the torso stretched back, walk slowly forward, swaying from side to side, and circling the arms as you sway.

These exercises are well worth faithful practice, and from them it is possible to develop graceful control of the human body—two consummations devoutly to be wished.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 19, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to meet, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

An introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister. Isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning," next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

WAIT FOR LOVE.

Dead Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, and am friendly with a man considerably older than I. I do not love him, but he has a good business and I know if I married him I would be comfortable. He has asked me to become his wife. Is it wrong to marry him and not love him?

I am in a position where I can not meet many young men. My family are in reduced circumstances, and if I do not marry I will have to work hard and be lonely all my life. A READER.

If everything else were in his favor, and you did not love him, you must not marry him.

Love is all there is worth while, and the loneliness of spinsterhood is better than marriage without it.

Wait, and there is always the hope love will come to you. Marry this man, and you condemn yourself to a life without it.

.:. One Woman's Story .:.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVIII.

A MONTH went by before another line came from Craig. Day after day Mary watched for a letter, hope deferred making her heart sick. Yet she did not doubt him. Something was wrong, she told herself. Some family trouble was taking his thought, or he was too busy to write. She was sure he had not forgotten her. At last she could bear the uncertainty no longer and wrote him a brief note asking if he was well. In a few days she received as brief a reply. He was well, but rushed with work. Matters had come up to take all his time and endeavor. Much was at stake, and until he had something definite to tell her, she must not expect to hear from him.

When she read this letter a change came over the girl's hopeful spirit. It was not that she thought the man she loved had stopped caring for her, but she felt that he did not know her well enough to be willing to confide to her this new trouble, whatever it was. She would follow his lead and keep silence too. When he was ready to hear from her he would communicate with her. Meanwhile, all she could do was to keep on loving him and believing in his devotion. He could not be false to her, of that she was certain. Did he not love her he would tell her so. Had they not promised each other to be honest in this matter?

"Promise to tell me if your heart fails you or if your love toward me wavers, darling," he had entreated. "And I will do the same with you. Only"—with a tender smile—"my ceasing to love you better than life itself would be impossible."

She had said she would be truthful with him always, as he had assured her he would be with her. And as he had not told her he did not love her she knew that his heart was still hers. But she wondered now if his hope to come for her soon had been destroyed. Or—and her heart beat fast as this thought occurred to her—was he planning to come soon and surprise her, and was he silent lest she might guess his purpose?

Still she worked on in the dingy office. To all her mother's questions she replied that "Gordon was all right—only busy." Does such faith and patience seem strange? Some girls are capable of these.

Yet, with all her affection and confidence, pride or an inborn reticence kept her from asking any questions of Craig. For modesty and pride are not incompatible with love and trust.

As the weeks passed, Mary Danforth saw Bert Fletcher often at the office, and, while he occasionally repelled her by his blunt manner and lack of delicate feeling, she found his friendship and interest in her agreeable. He brought a great bunch of daffodils to her one day in early April, and her eyes filled with tears at the gift. She had not received any gifts of flowers since she went to work, right after her father's death, and that was almost two years ago. It would be two years in June since she had parted from Gordon! A lump came into her throat and she bent her flushed face over the yellow blossoms.

But Fletcher had seen the change in her look, and laid a large hand on her shoulder. The pair were alone in the outer office.

"See here," he said awkwardly, his voice trembling with feeling, "you're a brave girl all right, and I used to think I was sorry for you, for Pearson told me when I first met you that you weren't used to this kind of work. But now the feeling I have for you isn't sorriness any more. I love you, girl! I say, I didn't mean to displease you!"

For she had shrunk from him and, started to her feet, her face pale and her lips quivering. But her anger died away as she looked into his startled eyes. Hhow should he know that his declaration sounded like an insult to her? Was not her own heart too sad and heavy for her to treat this man's evident affection with anger or cruelty? She forced herself to speak gently.

"I am sorry, Mr. Fletcher," she said. "I did not think that you had any thought of me except to be kind to me. You must never say again to me what you just said. I can not listen to it."

But her gentleness made the man consider her more attractive than ever, and her refusal of his devotion increased her desirability.

"I know you don't think I'm good enough for you," he said impulsively, "and I ain't—I mean, I am not."

Even at this moment the girl noticed the grammatical slip and knew that this man's correct speech was the result of continued vigilance on his part. Yet she pitied him too much to snub him. She rejoiced inwardly when the office door opened to admit some one wishing to see Mr. Pearson. As she rose to announce the caller to her employer, Fletcher spoke low and hurriedly.

"I don't want to annoy you," he said, "but may I come to see you at your home some evening? Then if you don't wish to see me any more I will not bother you again."

It was a fortnight before she saw him again. It happened to be on the anniversary of her first meeting with Gordon Craig that Fletcher came into the office, ostensibly for a moment's chat with Mr. Pearson. The girl's mind had been full of Craig and of his silence. Surely he must remember this date as he had remembered it last year! Surely she would get a letter from him this evening.

And upon her musings broke this other man, burly, blunt, awkward, yet with a coarse type of good looks that would have won some women's admiration. He stood beside her desk.

"Miss Danforth," he said abruptly, "may I come to see you to-night?"

The girl thus taken off her guard replied "Yes."

"But," she mused later, "if I get my letter from Gordon to-night (such a letter as he will write if he has remembered this date beforehand in time to write a letter for this day), I shall not see that man if he calls."

With which determination she turned her face homeward.

.:. An Elopement .:.

"WHAT are you thinking of, Yvonne?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, Auntie, dear."

Aunt Lucie smiles knowingly. She pushes her spectacles up on her forehead, takes her snuff box and taps its golden lid, as she says:

"Oh, nonsense, Yvonne! When a person says 'nothing in particular' it generally means something very important."

"But I assure you, auntie——"

"That is all very well, Yvonne, but just look at me."

Yvonne slowly raised her head.

"That is as plain as day, you have some secret sorrow which you don't want to tell me about; your eyes are full of tears."

"Oh, Auntie, dear!"

Yvonne threw her arms around the old lady's neck, buried her face at her bosom and burst into tears.

"Then you are quite sure your father will never permit you to marry Charles," said Auntie Lucie, when Yvonne had grown a little more calm.

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Then I think I had better take a hand in this matter," said Auntie Lucie determinedly. "Because my brother has a quarrel with Delords, it is not necessary for him to ruin his daughter's happiness for life and make two young people act like Romeo and Juliet. He is a most sympathetic young fellow."

"Yes—isn't he, Auntie?"

"He is a lawyer with a growing practice and it is the most natural thing in the world that he should want a wife. Does he love you?"

"Yes, Auntie, dear."

"Well, then you shall have him. Wipe away your tears, darling. Your name will be the Mme. Charles Delord as sure as I am your Aunt Lucie."

Yvonne smiled through her tears and kissed the old lady heartily.

Aunt Lucie had always been romantically inclined, and life had done everything to develop this tendency. Her husband had eloped with her, causing a great scandal, but Aunt Lucie's conscience did not trouble her and she was very fond of talking about her old love affair. Heavily veiled she had stolen out of the garden one dark evening and had entered a carriage in which her lover was waiting for her. As fast as the horses could gallop they sped through the sleeping country to a small inn where she had slept alone in a room while he stood guard outside her door. The following day her parents had given their consent and then there was a wedding.

Since that day Aunt Lucie had lived in perfect happiness until her husband died, many years later. She still lived in the same old house, and she was just the same as when she was 20, and hated all modern inventions, telephones and automobiles in particular, and she missed the old stagecoaches which the railroads had done away with.

She was interested only in love affairs, and often said, with a sigh, "Love has become out of fashion. The young people nowadays don't know how to love as we did in my time."

Now, however, she decided to make Yvonne happy. She went to her brother and tried to persuade him to give in, but in vain.

Then she sent for Charles and had a long talk with him.

"Listen to me, darling," she said to Yvonne the next day. "I have tried everything, in vain. There is only one way now—you must elope as I did."

"But, Auntie——"

"But, but—nonsense. Do you love him or not? Do you want to marry him?"

"You know I do, Auntie."

* * * * *

It is a beautiful, calm evening without moonlight. At the garden gate two conspirators are waiting. Aunt Lucie feels 50 years younger, her heart is beating violently against her silk shawl, the same one she wore when she eloped and which she now wraps around Yvonne's shoulders. She is listening at the slightest noise from the road. Soon he will come, the tall, handsome lover, wrapped in an elegant black mantle, his face pale with emotion and his lips trembling under the dark mustache. The horses will snort and prance and the bells will tingle while he helps his beloved into the carriage.

A vehicle stops. It is he! He knocks twice at the gate. Aunt Lucie opens and steps back horrified. Is that the romantic lover who stands there in the glare of the searchlights of the big touring car, big and shapeless in his leather coat with enormous goggles and a flat cap? And the chariot of love! An automobile!

"No, no," groans Aunt Lucie, "you get too far away in those awful monsters, you never know if you come back again."

And she slams the gate in his face, but Yvonne quickly opens it again and jumps into the car, which disappears with a dreadful roar, while Aunt Lucie sinks down on a bench and sighs in a tone of despair:

"Oh, mercy me, what have young people come to nowadays?"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

"Give me the money."

CHAPTER XXIV.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her aunt was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her relative's out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun hand. Her aunt was asleep and Jennie tiptoed to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her aunt was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her aunt must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her aunt get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder. In the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back—" Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly installment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28. —HAL COFFMAN.

Up-to-Date Jokes

An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket and pointing to the head engraved on it said:

"My great-great-grandfather was made a lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."

"What a coincidence?" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."

A birthday gift was given to a wife by her husband and three children. The youngest, a little ten-year-old, was appointed to make the speech of presentation. She did it after much preparation for the occasion, and this was the form it took:

"Dear mamma, this gift is presented to you by your three children and your one husband."

Mrs. Subbub—I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird.

Sarah (the new "general")—I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him birdseed for breakfast food.

Gabe—Why do they say that the ghost walks on pay day?

Steve—Because that's the day our spirits rise.

$30,000 "HOSS" TRADE IS ON AT SARATOGA TRACK

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Mose Goldblatt has purchased the crack three-year-old, Prince Eugene, from Jimmy Rowe, for $10,000. It is more than likely that the Western trainer will also secure Iron Mask and Night Stick from Rowe.

Goldblatt is manager and trainer for Jeff Livingston, while Rowe occupies the same position for Harry Payne Whitney.

The deal is by far the most important racing transaction of years, and when it is finally consummated will involve close to $30,000. Iron Mask is easily the champion sprinter of America, while Prince Eugene is ranked a good second to August Belmont's three-year-old Rockview.

KRAMER BEATS CLARKE IN TWO STRAIGHT HEATS

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 11.—A one-mile match race between Frank Kramer, the world's champion cyclist, and Jack Clarke, the Australian "rocket," was won easily by Kramer in two straight heats.

MANCHESTER FEARS RIVALS ON FINAL DAYS

Admirers of Jordan, Holliday and Murphy Expected to Rush in Their Votes.

WEDNESDAY noon the Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian's contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League will be at an end. The player having the most votes at that time will be given a handsome loving cup to be donated by this paper.

At the present writing it looks very much as if Dick Manchester, the Americus catcher, will lead his rivals to the post. His admirers refuse to lay down on him, and are fighting with might and main, despite stiff opposition.

Otto Jordan, Goat Holliday and Pat Murphy are causing Manchester lots of trouble. Dick fears that these players have many "holdout voters" who will come to his rescue to-day or to-morrow. On the other hand, Manchester's admirers have been rushing in their votes daily in an effort to keep their diamond star on top.

Jordan Is Second.

Otto Jordan continues to hold second place, with Holliday third and Pat Murphy fourth. All these players are closely bunched, and still have a chance to overtake Manchester, if their followers will only get out and hustle.

A surprise was sprung around sporting circles yesterday when a rumor gave rise to the fact that all Thomasville fans are to give all their aid to Pat Murphy and bring him home a winner on the final day. Up to date they have been dividing their woes between Duley, Murphy and Champlin, but it is said that an agreement has been reached and all voters from now on will help Murphy.

Thomasville Fans Loyal.

Thomasville fans have been giving their players more support than any city in the league. All three players from the Thomasville team are near the top and have put up a wonderful battle since the race started. Murphy and Champlin still have a good chance to come home a winner.

Rush in Coupons.

The coupon is in to-day's issue. The final days are at hand. Coupon clippers had better make the best of these few hours if they hope to win the big prize. Get busy now and clip the coupon in to-day's paper. Get your friends to help you. When you have a batch of them, mail them to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

The sacks were filled,
The crowd was thrilled,
And clamored for a hit,
When up walked Zim
With features grim,
His warclub in his mitt.

One ball went by
Too wide and high,
And then he took a strike.
And after that
He dropped his bat
And beat it down the pike.

The crowd was wild,
But Zim he smiled
And hustled to the train,
And as he beat
It down the street
He hastened to explain.

"My salary
Is small," said he,
"And I am growing poor,
So I must stray
Like William J.
Upon a lecture tour."

Considering the question, "What is the White Sox?" one might answer "Ed Walsh."

The case of Mr. Walsh is another argument in favor of the conservation of natural resources.

While Walsh is visiting Bonesetter Reese it would not be a bad idea to have the said Bonesetter make an investigation under Ping Bodie's hat.

Walsh says he can make good as an outfielder if his arm refuses to come back. This shows that he has been watching the Sox outfield.

Birmingham denies the report that he intends to get rid of Napoleon Lajoie. It is also rumored that McGraw will not sell Christy Mathewson.

The report that water baseball is a success is welcomed with great eclat by baseball magnates. They will now be able to glean a little breakfast money by staging games when it rains.

If the Japs ever attack California we fear that they will not be able to fire a shot without bringing down a tennis champion.

Considering the question pro, con and otherwise, why should any one hanker for John Evers' job?

One of our cartoonists kicks in with a lifelike picture of Larry Devereaux, the well-known polo player. We are now palpitating to see portraits of Fox hall Whitney and Harry P. Waterbury.

While our football scribes have already begun their nefarious work, they will not be satisfied until September 15.

Up to that time it is against the rules for a scribe to sprain, fracture or otherwise injure any part of a player's anatomy.

THE CALL OF THE FALL.

Beneath the spreading chestnut tree
The smith is on a strike,
And as he packs his carpet bag
And beats it down the pike
He says: "My alma mater calls
And I must up and hike.

"My alma mater calls," he says,
"And I must hike away
And buckle on my football togs
And mingle in the fray,
And I will not be back again
Till next Thanksgiving Day."

A CONTRIBUTION.

The verses printed below were written on our typewriter during our absence by a certain highbrow, Richard Henry Little by name. Mr. Little having laid the said verses on our escritoire, we presume that he fain would have them appear in print. To show that we are willing to lose our job to accommodate a friend we bust in with the following:

TEN-MILE RACE MAIN EVENT AT TRACK TUESDAY

A SWELL-BALANCED card of motor races is scheduled at Jack Prince's saucer Tuesday night. Although the longest race is only ten miles, the way the card is arranged it looks as though there ought to be more exciting sport than there has ever been.

The long races have proved to be a bit unsatisfactory. The riders have been unfortunate in having trouble with their machines in the long grinds.

The Forrest Adair Sweepstakes is the main attraction on the bill. This event will be run in three trial heats and a final. The first heat will bring together Glenn Lockner and Richards; second heat, Luther, Lewis and Renel; third heat, Graves, Swartz and McNell. The first and second men in each heat and the third man in the fastest heat will qualify. This will make seven men in the final.

The Southern Merchants' Purse will be another feature. Special reservations have been made for the visiting conventionists and it is expected that all 4,000 of the visitors will be on hand.

Glenn and Lockner will run off their match race. Last Friday night the riders split even, each winning a heat, while another was declared a tie. Glenn has a new machine for Tuesday night and he is confident he will win.

Graves, Swartz and McNell are going to meet in a three-cornered affair. There will be three heats. The first, one mile; the second, two miles, and the third, three miles.

Whitney Toughest Trial Horse
Fuzzy Tells of First Fight Here

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

FRANK WHITNEY to-day is considered the most monumental stumbling block in the path of aspirants to the lightweight championship. Less than two years ago he was unknown to the followers of the fistic game, and the high reputation he has now was made right here in Atlanta.

This is another of those "I knew him stories," but the incident is so fresh in the memory of the ring enthusiasts of Atlanta that it would take a man of more daring than I possess to try to fake the story of Whitney's first Southern appearance.

IT was in the days of Harry Staten's old club on the Viaduct. Staten had been wisely trying to develop an Atlanta favorite. Old Jerry Murphy, a veteran, had been beating all the aspiring boys here, until one night he was matched against a young fellow named Jackie Clark. I refereed the match.

Clark was one of those little Eddie Hanlon boys, with a pink and white complexion and an awful right-hand wallop. He had no knowledge of the ring game in comparison with Murphy, who was as skilful a 10-round boxer as has ever been seen here, but he had the dash and daring that made friends.

When he boxed Murphy, Jerry hit him, it seemed to me, a dozen times to his one, but every punch that Clark landed had its sting. When the ten rounds were over I had to hold up Murphy's glove, and when I did, I was called everything in the dictionary and some things that Noah Webster never heard of by the Clark enthusiasts around the ring. Clark himself admitted to me he was out pointed.

But Clark left the ring the hero of the occasion, and Staten saw his possibilities as an Atlanta favorite.

He matched him the next week with a fellow who recommended himself—he had no one else to recommend him—as a tough customer. His name was Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

• • •

THE night of the battle came. The preliminaries were staged. Clark was being rubbed down in his dressing room, but Whitney hadn't arrived. His train was reported late.

Staten asked me to delay proceedings until the last possible moment. I stalled, made speeches, asked for rosin, examined gloves and did every thing else that could kill time, until finally Staten gave me the signal that Whitney was in the hall.

Whitney had dressed for the battle on the train. He had his hands bandaged and all he had to do was to slip out of his trousers and shirt to be in ring togs.

He evidently didn't like the lay of the land. When he crawled through the ropes he asked his only second, Christ Ketchel, to see that no one did anything to his orange water. Whitney had come here absolutely friendless. To-day, he is probably the most popular fighter who ever appeared before an Atlanta audience.

There were voluminous shouts for Clark when he was introduced. There was not a whisper for Whitney when his name was called.

Clark was in vivid red tights, smiling, popular, confident.

Whitney wore pale green trunks. He was troubled and anxious.

Clark started lashing with that great right hand. He wanted but one blow, but his every lead was blocked or countered. Whitney appeared stiff from his ride. Not until the later rounds did he warm up and then his margin was so small that I held up both gloves.

Frank turned to me. "Thank you," he said, "I didn't expect a fair deal from the referee. I think I had a shade, but a draw decision is all right."

He met Murphy the next week and met him at his own game. He outboxed him clearly and won without a question of a doubt.

• • •

GROVER HAYES, then in the heyday of his prosperity, was brought to Atlanta soon afterward. His opponent sidestepped him and Whitney was substituted at the last moment. It was then that Whitney showed Atlanta his worth. He did everything to Hayes that a boxer can do to another except knock him out. Hayes was discouraged by the scrap and has never been formidable since, but Whitney has been formidable to this day, and he will be formidable when he meets Charley White Wednesday.

McBride May Manage Red Sox Next Season

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 11.—George McBride, shortstop on the Washington team, is slated for the berth formerly held by Jake Stahl, now being held by Carrigan. Advices from members of the McBride family are to the effect that this season is likely to be his last with the Washingtons, and that he is to be manager of the Boston Red Sox.

Reports from Boston state that a deal is on by which McBride will be sent to Boston in exchange for Tris Speaker, Carrigan and an outfielder. In return for these three, Washington is to give McBride, Ainsmith and Milan. On every visit to Boston, McBride stays at McAleer's house.

CUBS CALL IN WHEZLER.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 11.—Wheeler, of the Terre Haute club, has been ordered by the Cubs to report to the Indianapolis club, of the American Association. This was a great surprise to the fans who did not know that the Cubs owned him. Wheeler leads the Central League in batting with .342.

WHITE STOPS AT MOUNTAIN TOWN TO FINISH WORK

Gilbraith Springs, Tenn, Aug. 11, 1913.
W. S. Farnsworth, Sporting Editor Georgian, Atlanta, Ga.:

Stopped off here Sunday morning. Afraid of heat in Atlanta. Will stay here until to-night. Arrive Atlanta Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. Grand place for White to finish training. Charley in best of condition and am confident he will stop Whitney.

NATE LEWIS.

THE foregoing telegram was received this morning from Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White.

Said telegram shows that White verily fears Whitney or he wouldn't go to all this out-of-the-way stuff to get into tip-top condition.

As soon as the match was made White ran up to Muskegon, Mich., to start work. Last Thursday he landed back in Chicago and worked out in Lewis' gymnasium for two days with Chicago's cleverest boxers.

And Saturday he started for Atlanta. En route, he figured he could add a little to his condition by stopping off at Gilbraith Springs. He feared the heat here. If he had not taken Whitney as a tough proposition he would have rushed right on here.

In the meantime, Whitney is working like a Trojan. He is already down to weight and devoting most of his time to boxing and skipping the rope. He is figuring on a rushing fight and wants to be fast and have his wind in excellent condition.

The other boys who are to battle at the Auditorium-Armory on next Wednesday night are also working faithfully. Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon are to meet in a 15-rounder, while Kid Young and Charley Lee are slated to travel the same distance in another mill.

The advance sale of tickets has been exceptionally heavy. The ducats are on sale at Shepherd's Segar Store, Pryor and Edgewood, and at The Rex.

Clark Griffith May Take Harry Holland

Major Frank E. Callaway, president of the Crackers, is back from Washington, where he has been conferring with Clark Griffith as to the treaty existing between the Atlanta club and the Senators.

"It looks now as if Griffith may decide to take Harry Holland and Slim Love as the two players our deal entitles him to," Mr. Callaway said this morning. "At first, the Old Fox seemed to have decided on Wally Smith and Love. Then he began considering Holland very closely."

Tommy Long is going to stay with the Crackers. That much is pretty certain. Somebody will have to go to make room for John Voss, the new pitcher who joins the club in Birmingham today. Major Callaway is of the opinion it will be Clark.

Local Expert Believes Englishmen Will Win U. S. Open Title

TICHENOR SIZES UP CHAMPIONSHIP PLAYERS

By Tick Tichenor.

NOW that the foreign team has set sail for the shores of America to contest in the open championship of the United States the question naturally arises—what are the chances of one of them winning this event?

To be perfectly frank in this matter, it appears that they have a most excellent chance of winning this event. They expect to win it. Varden is quoted as saying just before he sailed, "I have played Americans before and I do not think them very strong." This shows their attitude, and why shouldn't they be confident of winning?

In the first place, any man who has won the British open must be a golfer of exceptional ability, and on this team are three men who have won this honor. Harry Vardon has come home in front in this event five times. Arnaud Massey, who, though a Frenchman, learned his golf in Scotland when a boy, fought his way to first place in 1908 in this tournament when it was played in a gale, which Vardon says was the most terrific he has ever encountered in his many years of golf. Edward Ray acquired his first win of the open last year, and this year was only two strokes behind J. H. Taylor, the winner.

In addition to these three celebrites there may be a couple of French professionals to make the trip, but even if they come, it does not appear they are to be considered dangerous as Vardon, Ray and Massey are the ones the Americans have to beat.

In looking over the list of our professionals it appears that it is going to be some job for any of them to get home in front of the Vardon-Ray-Massey combination.

In the first place, the showing of the American team, which visited England and France this summer, was a great disappointment. Of the six men sent to the British open, only two of them, J. J. McDermott and Tom McNamara, qualified; and in the matches in France the Frenchmen made a clean sweep.

MDERMOTT, the present open champion of the United States, is the chief hope of the Americans. Rising from the caddy ranks he first sprang into prominence by working himself into a triple tie with Alex and McDonald Smith in his initial appearance in the championship three years ago. In the play-off of this tie he lost to both of them, but he established the fact that he had the nerve and was not frightened by the reputation of his opponents.

For the last two years he has won the championship and this year finished fifth in the British open in a field of 270 players. He is a player who has the greatest confidence in himself, and his statement upon his return from England, a few weeks ago, that he expected to go back again next year and take a crack at the championship shows that he has the ambition to urge him to keep working at his game.

ALEX SMITH, who has three times won the championship of this country, and who was captain of the American team which went to England and France, has either gone back or could not hit his stride at Hoylake. His failure to qualify hurt him deeply, and if there is any way for him to regain his form and be the same old Alex at Brookline in September you may be sure that he will leave nothing undone to get on the top of his game.

Those who saw him in England say that he was about four strokes off and, although he was on the water-wagon and taking the best care of himself, that he couldn't get going in his old style. When he is going good there is no golfer anywhere whom it is more pleasure to watch. There is a magnetism about him which few men in any walk of life can equal. If he loses there is no alibi stuff for him. He always takes his medicine like a man.

It is to be hoped that old Alex can hit his old-time stride once again. And if he does, there is no more brilliant golfer anywhere.

IT is doubtful if Gilbert Nichols, who is considered by many as the most finished golfer in America, will be a serious contender this year. Nichols has only recently recovered from an attack of typhoid fever, which prevented him going with the American team to England and France, and it is not believed that he will be able to get on his game by September. Nichols has usually has one bad round in every championship tournament, which kills his chance of winning. If he could control his temper he would undoubtedly have won at some time instead of throwing his chance away each year. If he could just get it into his head that he must control his temper if he wants to control the ball, he would have, when on his game, a fine chance of winning any tournament.

Then there are Fred McLeod, Tom McNamara, Mike Brady, Alex Campbell, George Sargeant and a number of others who have a chance, if they get going good. And then, too, there is McDonald Smith, a younger brother of Alex, who has been steadily improving. He has the tournament nerve and disposition and, to put it in Alex's own words, "He is grand golfer. He's the best of all the Smiths," which is some compliment, to say the least of it.

THE man who wins a championship is the man who can get going and keep going good for the four rounds. The question of who will be the winner is just the question of who will get going and keep it up.

The chance of keeping the title on this side of the Atlantic comes from the large number of entries we will have, some one of whom may get going and keep it up for the four rounds of the tournament.

J. H. Taylor just did squeeze into the last place in the qualifying round of the British open and this was accomplished by holing a 30-foot putt, yet, after such a close shave of being out of the tournament altogether, he got going and won. This just goes to show that in a medal play tournament you can never tell what's going to happen.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Eastern fans are now lauding Gunboat Smith as the heavyweight champion of the world. Smith's knock-out victory over Jim Flynn in five rounds last week has put a big feather in his cap. Jim Buckley, manager of the Gunboat party, says he will not take his protege to the coast for a scrap with Arthur Pelky.

• • •

Tom Jones has not lost hope of dragging Willie Ritchie into the ring with Ad Wolgast again. Jones says he has Tom McCarey's word that the coast promoters will stage this bout in either October or November, providing Ritchie succeeds in defeating Freddie Welsh on September 1.

• • •

Dillon was handed a surprise package Saturday night when George Ashe, an unknown boxer, held the Indianapolis star to a draw in 12 rounds. The bout was held in Winnipeg, Man., and Dillon was a 3 to 1 favorite before the scrap.

• • •

Indications point to a banner house at the White - Whitney engagement Wednesday night. Lou Castro, matchmaker, says that tickets are going fast. He expects a larger crowd to be present than the gathering that attended the Nelson-Whitney affair.

• • •

Tommy Murphy, the New York lightweight, claims Willie Ritchie turned down a big offer from Jim Coffroth to meet him on Labor Day. Tommy expects Welsh to be easy picking for the champion.

• • •

Los Angeles fans are showing much interest in the Jack White-Johnny Dundee 20-round go to-morrow night. These boys are fighting for a chance to meet Ad Wolgast on Labor Day and a tough scrap should be the result.

• • •

Bob McAllister, the Western heavyweight, managed to hold Sailor Petroskey to a 20-round draw at Frisco the other day. This was McAllister's first attempt to go over the long route.

Three challenges have already been received by Lou Castro from boxers who are anxious to meet the winner of the White-Whitney battle. Jack Britton, Joe Mandot and Jimmy Duffy are after the chance to display their wares here.

Charley Lee is getting in great shape for his 10-round scrap with Kid Young. Reports from Lee's camp state that the tall boxer is going better than ever in his life.

• • •

Spider Britt has a few words to say regarding the various boys of his weight in the city. Spider says he has a standing side bet of $100 to any boy here who will meet him at 116 pounds. This goes for Kid Young and Charley Lee.

• • •

Leach Cross is one boxer who believes in keeping busy. Cross' bout on Labor Day with Joe Rivers will be his third fight on the coast since July 4. Matty Baldwin and Bud Anderson were the Easterner's other opponents.

• • •

Young Ross, who fights under the monicker of the "Siberian Wildcat," is after a bout with "Cyclone" Levy. The bout may be staged in private Friday night.

TECH SUMMER SCHOOL LEAGUE IN FULL BLAST

THE regular Tech baseball season ended when the school closed in June, but the 300 students at the summer school have kept their enthusiasm alive by the organization of a summer school league. There are three teams in the league, the Cubs, captained by "Mac" McLin; the Pirates, with "Ollie" Atridge as their chieftain, and the Giants, guided by Ed Montague.

Each team is composed of members of all classes, and each one has its partisans, among whom feeling is very high. Two games a week are scheduled, on Wednesdays and Fridays, but double-headers have been played for the past week, in order to catch up with the games rained out.

The batteries are the strong points on each team. On the pitching staff of the Giants are Hope and Parker, with Fife, catcher; Spence and Hathon twirl for the Cubs, with Merriam receiving their hot ones, and the star pitchers for the Pirates are Hancock and Hurlbut, with Atridge behind the bat, Ralph Malone, the star outfielder of the varsity, umpires the games.

The summer school varsity, which will enter the City League, will be picked to-day.

CHURCH AND LODGE FOLK WANT THAT $1,000 PRIZE; A CHANCE FOR EVERYBODY

Georgian's Want Ad Contest Offers Great Opportunity for Organizations and Individuals to Win Gold, Automobile, Tour to California or Any of Splendid Prizes Offered by This Paper.

At half a dozen Atlanta churches Sunday morning a group of members gathered after the sermon to discuss eagerly a plan to earn $1,000 for the church fund. There's not a church anywhere, you know, that doesn't need a new Sunday school room or an addition to the parsonage, a bit of repairs to the building or a newly brightened interior. And here was the opportunity to get what was needed without drawing on the treasury.

"Did you see the offer in The Sunday American and The Georgian?" was the question everywhere. "Well, why can't our church go after that $1,000? Or, if we only get second prize, there's $500 worth of furniture, enough for fitting up the pastor's study or his parlor. Let's go in and win."

Everybody Interested.

Lodges and charitable organizations, chapters of women's clubs, all kinds of bodies of Atlanta men and women are showing interest in the organization prize offer made by the Want Ad Man. It was announced Sunday that a prize of $1,000 in gold would be given the organization leading in the Want Ad Contest, with $500 worth of furniture as second prize. Before the week is over there will be a number of entries, with members of the churches and lodges working among their friends.

The contest is simple. There is no gamble, no guesswork. Members of organizations or individuals will see their friends, secure want ads for Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian, get ten votes for every cent taken in for want ads, and the leader at the finish will win the grand prize. The whole city is an open field, and there is a splendid opportunity among business firms which use classified advertising in large volume.

Individual Prizes.

But organizations are not the only contestants, by any means. Individual men and women, boys and girls, are offered splendid prizes for want ad votes. The leader in any class, whether grown-up or child, man or woman, will be awarded a five-passenger touring car, the first grand prize, while the second best will win a double tour to California—every expense paid for two persons on a trip from Atlanta to the Pacific Coast and return.

And besides the organization prizes and these two grand prizes there are individual trophies for the five leaders in four classes, arranged to give everybody a chance. The first prize for men is a twin-cylinder motorcycle. The first prize for women is a player piano. The boys' first prize is a motorcycle, the girls' a piano. But everybody, boy or girl or grown-up, has a chance at the two grand prizes.

Enter Without Delay.

But it will not do to put off entering. Early starters have the best opportunity to win, of course. The contest is open and this week will see it well under way. Contestants and those who consider entering should see the Want Ad Man this afternoon or to-morrow. Churches or other organizations should appoint their committees and send the chairmen to see the Want Ad Man without delay.

The Want Ad Man has secured the fourth floor of the new Foote & Davies Building for Contest Headquarters, and is in his office from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays he will remain in his office until 8 o'clock at night to receive contestants, talk over details, give every assistance and start new entries out on the road to success. He desires to see those contestants who already have entered as well as prospective contestants.

Individual Prizes for Which Entries Will Strive

INDIVIDUAL PRIZES.

To the individual in any class leading the list of contestants will be awarded the first grand prize, a five-passenger touring car, fully equipped.

To the individual in any class returning the second largest number of votes will be awarded a double tour to California and return, first-class transportation for two persons.

Besides the two organization prizes and the two grand prizes, there will be awards for leaders among the men, the women, the boys and the girls. These will be:

MEN'S PRIZES.

First—One twin-cylinder motorcycle.
Second—One single-cylinder motorcycle.
Third—Diamond ring.
Fourth—Gold watch and fob.
Fifth—Gold watch.

WOMEN'S PRIZES.

First—Player piano.
Second—Piano.
Third—Diamond ring.
Fourth—Gold watch and neck chain.
Fifth—Diamond lavaliere.

BOYS' PRIZES.

First—Motorcycle.
Second—Business college scholarship.
Third—Gold watch and chain.
Fourth—Bicycle.
Fifth—Gold watch.

GIRLS' PRIZES.

First—Piano.
Second—Business college scholarship.
Third—Gold watch and neck chain.
Fourth—Bicycle.
Fifth—Diamond lavalliere.

Mrs. Susie J. Krouse Dies While on Visit

The body of Mrs. Susie J. Krouse, who died Saturday night in Birmingham while on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Thomas L. Woodruff, will arrive in Atlanta on the Birmingham Special at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Krouse was a daughter of Judge John Appleby, of Fayetteville, Ala. She was greatly interested in charitable work, and was for a number of years secretary of the Home for the Friendless.

Surviving her are her husband, Harry Krouse, one of Atlanta's best known real estate dealers; one son, J. A. Krouse, of Atlanta; one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Woodruff, of Birmingham, and two sisters, Mrs. Jessie McGee, of Rome, and Mrs. Ashfort, of Gainesville.

Interment will be at Oakland Cemetery, directly after the body reaches Atlanta.

OBITUARY

The body of Scott Baker, who died Sunday morning, was sent to his home at West Point, Ga., for funeral and interment. He was thirty-nine years old, and is survived by his wife.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Lou Steiglitz, No. 138 Jett street, who died Sunday morning, will be held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the English Avenue Methodist Church. The Rev. W. W. Brinsfield, assisted by the Rev. A. L. Fleury, will officiate. Mrs. Steiglitz was thirty-eight years old, and is survived by one son, John P. Steiglitz, and her mother, Mrs. L. J. Sloan, both of Atlanta. Interment at Westview Cemetery.

The funeral of Paul J. Fleming, Jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Fleming, who died at the residence, No. 325 St. Charles avenue, at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, was held from the home Monday morning, the Rev. T. E. Converse officiating. Interment at Westview.

Mrs. Mary Annie Boggs, thirty-one years old, Howell Mill and Collier roads, died early Sunday morning. Surviving her are her husband, B. H. Boggs; four children and one sister, Mrs. A. E. Petty. The funeral was held from the home Monday morning, the Rev. C. N. Peek officiating. Interment at Casey's Cemetery.

The body of Mrs. Eliza J. Mathews, who died at a local sanitarium Sunday night, was sent Monday morning to Washington, Ga., for interment in the family burying ground. She was sixty-two years old, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. H. H. Herndon, of Brunswick, Ga., and Mrs. C. R. Herndon, of Atlanta.

The funeral of Mrs. Sallie Gibbs, who died Saturday, will be held from her late residence at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment in Atlanta Cemetery. She was eighteen years old, and is survived by her husband, T. D. Gibbs.

Grace Upton, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeffie Upton, died Sunday. The funeral announcement will be made later.

Oscar M. Perkens, thirty-five years old, died Sunday night. The body will be sent to Carter Springs, Ga., for funeral and interment.

BUTTON BEAUTY RACE WILL END ON TUESDAY

Miss Ruth Poole, Last Entrant in Contest.

Name of Girl Whose Likeness Will Adorn Booster Badge To Be Announced Wednesday.

Atlanta's prettiest girl at last is to be named. The intense rivalry that has stirred Atlanta for the past several weeks soon is to be calmed. The Booster Button Beauty Contest closes Tuesday, and Wednesday the winner will be announced.

Of course, rivalry will continue among beautiful women, but seldom has it reached the high degree of this contest. For days and days it was uncertain who would win. Many votes would put one girl ahead one day and the next day another would stand at the top. But the votes for one young girl were more constant than the others, and unless a miracle happens, she will have a good lead when the contest closes Tuesday, and be the one announced Wednesday.

The close of this contest will mark the beginning of the actual organization of the "500,000 club" that is to boost Atlanta's population to 500,000 by 1920. Her picture, without her name, will adorn the lapel buttons of this organization, with this slogan:

"Watch Atlanta—She'll get you yet, 500,000 by 1920."

One of the last pretty nominees is Miss Ruth Poole, of No. 381 Jackson street. With her parents, she recently moved to Atlanta from Covington. Miss Poole is well known socially over the State.

"TIGERS" FINED $1,000.

DUBLIN.—Bob Nobles and R. T. Manning, white men, were each fined $1,000 or twelve months on the chaingang in Superior Court for selling whisky. Judge J. B. Hicks, of the City Court of Dublin, will preside over the court this week for Judge Hawkins in some disqualified cases.

CHURCH TO BUILD ANNEX.

MADISON.—The Madison Baptist Church has begun construction of a $15,000 Sunday school annex to accommodate 500 pupils.

Argentine Sends U. S. 9,000,000 Lbs. of Beef

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The first blow in the battle of South American cattle raisers to war on the American cattle industry was struck here with the receipt of 9,000 pounds of Argentine beef.

The beeves were sent here to familiarize American packers with the Argentine product in anticipation of the passage of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill, when the American market will be flooded with South American cattle.

The consignment will sell for a cent a pound less than American beef. Under the new tariff measure a difference of four cents a pound is predicted.

Abolish City Courts In Butts County

JACKSON, Aug. 11.—No legislation affecting Butts County has been followed with any greater interest than the bills to abolish the City Courts of Flovilla and Jackson. From the time the Grand Jury recommended that these courts be abolished there has been a fight made by the friends of the courts. Both of these local measures have now passed the House and Senate and are up to Governor Slaton.

Butts is the only county in Georgia with two city courts.

TO OPEN NEW ROAD.

JONESBORO.—The Clayton County Commissioners have ordered a public road opened at the Fayette County line, intersecting with the College Park road and the road running from near Colonel Weaver's residence. The road will be 25 feet wide.

Young Macon Men Start Miller Boom

MACON, Aug. 11.—A movement is under way to run Representative Wallace Miller for Mayor of Macon on a "Young Men's Ticket."

Several caucuses were held last week by a number of leading citizens who are dissatisfied with the administration and who are opposed to Bridges Smith for Mayor. They considered Senator W. D. McNeill, Joe Hill Hall and Mr. Miller, finally uniting on the latter as the most desirable candidate at this time. The proposition has already been communicated to Mr. Miller and a definite answer is expected from him the latter part of the week.

Diver in Death Battle Kills Giant Devil Fish

SEATTLE, Aug. 11.—Walter McRay, a driver, had a 45-minute fight with a devil fish 85 feet below the surface of the water.

McRay every now and then telephoned the progress of the fight. When he finally gave the signal and was hoisted up the tentacles of the dead fish were around him. He had stabbed it eleven times before he was able to strike it in a vital place.

The body of the fish measured nine feet in circumference.

Given Up to Die at 29, He's Hale at 101

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 11.—William T. Osborne, of this city, just celebrated his 101st birthday. When Osborne was 29 four doctors told him he was a hopeless consumptive and would not live six months. The four doctors are dead.

The centenarian never smoked or drank and is enjoying perfect health.

Turner To Be Tried For Life in Butts

JACKSON, Aug. 11.—On the charge of being an accomplice in the murder of Jesse Singley at Indian Springs two years ago, Alonzo Turner will be tried in Butts Superior Court next week. Bill Turner, his father, was executed for this murder in 1911, and his brother is now serving a life sentence for complicity in it.

REFUSED TO INDICT NEGRO.

DUBLIN.—The Grand Jury refused to indict Raymond Blash, the negro jailed here a few days ago on the charge of perjury in the Lynn murder case, and returned "no bill" after investigating the case and examining a great many witnesses.

DIXIE MERCHANTS GREET 'PRODIGAL'

Man Who Tried Twenty Years to Like North Back from Gary, Ind. 600 More Delegates Here.

Six hundred more delegates to the Southern Merchants' convention registered Monday at the Piedmont Hotel. And among them was a visitor from Gary, Ind.

Because, after twenty years spent trying to learn to like the North, his family still prefers the South, M. Ruhstadt sold out his business in Gary and started on a trip to seek a location in the South for a drygoods store.

He has visited Chattanooga, now is in Atlanta, and will stop at Jacksonville and Palm Beach before making up his mind.

He received a cordial welcome at the merchants' convention headquarters, and was escorted to the Chamber of Commerce, where an effort was made to interest him in Atlanta's advantages.

The Forsyth Theater has been engaged for Monday night for the delegates. Wednesday there will be a barbecue, and for Friday a large block of seats has been engaged for the Atlanta-Chattanooga baseball game.

Tick Cure Adds $8 To Value of 'Critter'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The increase in the value of cattle of $8 a head as a result of the Bureau of Animal Industry's efforts to ward off the cattle tick is reported to-day by the Department of Agriculture. The fight against the tick in 21 counties has resulted in an increase in value of $2,148,839. This work was done at a cost of only $100,000.

The cattle tick has attacked Southern cattle principally and has brought about a shortage of 30 per cent.

Big Crowds Attend Holiness Meeting

JACKSON, Aug. 11.—The first Sunday of the ten-day session of the Indian Springs Holiness Camp Meeting saw one of the largest crowds that has ever attended on this occasion. It is estimated that from 500 to 800 automobiles were in line during the day. By private conveyances and by rail hundreds of others came.

Next Sunday, the closing day, an even larger number of people is expected.

Opens Bank Account For Waitress as Tip

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—Lee Moser, a banker, has invented a novel tipping system. He was so pleased with the services of a young woman who waited on him in his favorite lunchroom that he opened a bank account in her name.

He never affronts her with a tip, but when he considers her service especially good a deposit goes to the credit of the waitress.

Refuses Freedom to Go to Wife's Funeral

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 11.—William Record, who killed Joseph Gilbert, an aged citizen, who had continued to employ him many years after drinking habits caused seperation from his family, refused to leave jail to attend the funeral of his wife.

His grown son visited him in jail. Record said he had not seen his wife for five years and did not believe he cared to go to her funeral.

Dancer Slapped by Pavlova Quits Her

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Novikoff, formerly Pavlova's cavalier, explaining the incident Thursday night when Pavlova slapped his face in view of the audience at the Palace Theater, said:

"A few days ago I told Pavlova of the possibility of my being unable to go with her to America owing to the doctor's advice to take a long rest. Apparently this prospect annoyed her."

According to Novikoff, he has decided to go to Russia and never dance with Pavlova again.

Sir Thomas to Have Exhibit at Canal Fair

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Sir Thomas Lipton, famous merchant and yachtsman, is urging the British Government to reconsider its refusal to participate in the Panama Exposition at San Francisco.

Sir Thomas declared to-day that he personally would have an exhibit at the fair and would attend it in person.

SOLD CIGARETTES ON SUNDAY.

DUBLIN.—The Grad Jury has returned true bills against two newsbutchers on the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad, charging that they sold cigarettes and soft drinks on Sunday in Laurens County. One of them, Jack Whatley, was arrested while the train was standing at the depot. He gave bond.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

All Delegates Back From Big Convention

Claim That Tampa and Atlanta Will Contest for 1916 Meet—County Work Is Completed.

Charles P. Glover, Harris G. White and Fitzhugh Knox have returned from the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges at Winnipeg, with glowing accounts of their trip and confident predictions of success for Atlanta in the fight for the 1916 convention.

"Memphis presented an invitation to the delegates," declared Mr. Glover, "but I think the fight is going to be between Atlanta and Tampa. The Florida city has put in a claim, and many of the delegates will probably take kindly to the idea of going to Florida in the winter, but I think that notwithstanding this Atlanta will win.

"All of the delegates had heard a great deal about Atlanta and those who haven't been here declared that they were anxious to come. They crowded around us to hear us talk about the Gate City, and already we have assurances of splendid support.

"Atlanta can get the convention and its 1,000 delegates if she wants it. That is, we are a little bit skeptical about financing the meeting. Winnipeg spent $20,000 in entertainment, and Pittsburg will spend $10,000. In order to raise enough money, we must get this matter properly before our civic bodies. Every interest must help. It is a big thing and well worth going after."

Mr. Glover made the distinct hit of the convention," declared Mr. White. "His speeches at Regina and on the convention floor were very favorably received. He is plenty big enough for the presidency of the association, and I expect him to be elected in due time.

"The Canadians have us beat here in Atlanta when it comes to boosting their products and their soil. I have never seen anything like it. We can take lessons from them, and I think the Atlanta delegation did get some pointers that will be of use in the future.

"Atlanta realty values are not too high by any means. Why, in towns of 30,000 people in Canada they are pricing residence property at $200 to $500 a foot, anticipating in the case of the $500 a foot property that it will soon be counted semi-central."

Mr. Glover also declared that Atlanta, outside the narrow zone around Five Points, is not too high in price.

Finishing Marietta Street.

Work was completed by the county convicts Monday on Marietta street repaving and resurfacing from the center of the city to the Chattahoochee river, this job having been started some months ago. Smooth paving is now encountered the entire length of the thoroughfare in Fulton County, and the street is one of the best in this section.

Shelby Smith, chairman of the County Commissioners, declared that work would be started at once resurfacing and oiling the Howell Mill road from the Seaboard railroad to the Southern bridge, and that Brady street would be resurfaced from Marietta street to Tenth, and extended from Tenth to the Howell Mill road through the stockyards. This latter improvement is made to pave the way for the Howell Mill road car line which has been assured by the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

Listing of Building.

The Potts automobile building at the southwest corner of Peachtree and Linden streets has been listed with the Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency for leasing. This is a two-story concrete structure intended for automobile purposes, and is one of the handsomest on "automobile row."

Better Money Conditions.

J. H. Ewing, member of the real estate firm of Smith & Ewing, returned Sunday night from New York and Washington. Mr. Ewing reports general good feeling over the offer of Treasury money to help move Southern and Western crops, and says the general impression in the East is that this money will help the South more than the West. He declared that in a month or 60 days financial conditions in Atlanta would return to normal, and that there would be plenty of money for all purposes.

To Build $14,000 Home.

J. M. B. Hoxsey has made application at Building Inspector Hays' office for a permit to build a $14,000 two-story brick veneer dwelling on Piedmont avenue, 270 feet north of West Fourteenth street. The architect is P. Thornton Marye.

Peachtree Homes for Sale.

Two Peachtree homes have been put on the market, big signs in the front yards announcing the fact. The first is the property of John H. James, at No. 314 Peachtree, a two-story frame house on a 54 by 160 foot lot. This is on the west side of the street between Baker and Ivy streets. Frontage in this neighborhood is about $1,500 a front foot.

The second is for sale by Jonathan B. Frost, at No. 528 Peachtree, on the same side of the street, between Linden street and North avenue, likewise a two-story frame dwelling. Inside lots in this neighborhood are about $1,000 to $1,100 a front foot.

Elevator Service Extension.

People who have watched the evolution of buildings in Atlanta have noted with a good deal of interest the gradual increase in elevator facilities in the skyscrapers. From the single elevator in the old days has sprung the sextuple system of the present day.

Skyscraper officials figure that one elevator per three floors is about the right proportion. Office buildings with eighteen stories have six, and the structures of the future with 24 will have eight. The Healey Building will contain six elevators, part of which will be express and part local cars, as usual.

Planning Apartment for Currier St.

Currier street is to have a handsome new apartment house. The plans are not out yet, but Mrs. Flora Sfedley has picked out the lot and will soon take up the matter of the building with her architect. The lot is at No. 45 Currier street, between Courtland street and Piedmont avenue, and was bought from Chapman & Gibson through the Roff Sims Real Estate Agency for $10,500.

The Sims agency made small sales in the first week of August aggregating approximately $20,000, including the above, and the others consist of the sale of renting property on West Fair street, near Ashby street, bought from Andrew Chappell for Ben Wilkes, for $1,650; No. 187 Pulliam street, A. Y. Coles to Benjamin Franklin, $3,250, and a house and four lots in East Point, E. A. Nealy to L. R. Warren, $4,250.

COTTON OFF FROM EARLY HIGH POINT

Early Dry Map Causes Advance, but Promise of Rain Promotes Active Selling.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—As the expected rains over Texas and Oklahoma failed to materialize Sunday and Liverpool cables were better than had been expected, the cotton market opened steady to-day with the entire list at a net advance of 8 to 12 points from Saturday's final.

The upward trend of prices was due entirely to the weather.

Official weather records showed that splendid rains fell over Sunday in Arkansas, and a few showers prevailed over the southern half of Texas. This, coupled with a rather bearish circular of Habersham King on the week's development of the crop, which stated that while temperatures were above normal and precipitation being below an unfavorable combination, conditions which preceded render it temporarily a favorable combination as to 85 per cent of the belt, leaving it injurious as to the dry portion of Texas and Oklahoma, and contributing the remaining 15 per cent, which is the only section now suffering for rain, resulted in an active selling movement generally, and prices shaded sharply, dropping 4 to 9 points from the initial level.

Local weather expert's predictions for rain in the next few days and the Government's forecast for showers in Arkansas and unsettled weather in Oklahoma, caused the market to sell off. Later the noon weather posted showing temperatures in the western belt for yesterday in many places ranging from 100 to 106, in Oklahoma principally, caused buying and a few points' rally followed.

Texas was not so warm, but had little or no rain, only 2 points showing rainfall, which was 1-100 of an inch and 2-100 of an inch. With continued dry weather for the next few days, the temper of the ring indicates that a good rally would follow.

On the other hand, the bearish element is just waiting for signs of rain to sell on. It is believed that the weekly weather report to-morrow will be bullish, and the crowd seems to be waiting its publication before taking any definite stand. Turner's report, issued this morning, was bearish on conditions, with the exception of Oklahoma, where the temperatures have ranged too high.

The course of the market for the next few days depends entirely on the weather, which must be watched closely.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing irregularity, being 9 points higher to 5 points lower than the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 11.—Rain developments over the western States are a little slow, only light showers falling in scattered localities, but it is cloudy everywhere, and it looks now as if precipitation were only a question of a few days. Good rains fell over Sunday in Arkansas and North Louisiana, and scattered showers in the rest of the belt.

Liverpool came in about 3 points better than due on futures and quoted spots 5 points lower; sales 7,000 bales. This market opened 5 points higher, but eased off when official reports of good big general rains in Arkansas over Sunday and predicted unsettled weather for Oklahoma. It is a waiting market, with an unsatisfactory undertone.

To-morrow's weekly weather report is expected unfavorable for the western States, and there is some demand by scalpers on this account.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The indications are that the weather will be generally fair through the districts east of the Mississippi River during the next 36 hours, except in Florida and the Lake region, where local showers will occur Tuesday.

Temperatures will rise slowly to-night in the upper Lake region and on Tuesday in the Lake region and the Ohio Valley. The weather will be cool in the North and Middle Atlantic States.

Forecast.

Forecast till 8 p. m. Tuesday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Tuesday.

Virginia and North Carolina—Fair to-night; cooler in east portions; Tuesday fair.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Tuesday.

Florida—Occasional showers to-night or Tuesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair, except showers in extreme south portions to-night or Tuesday.

Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Tuesday.

Louisiana—Fair in north and west; showers in southeast portion to-night or Tuesday.

Texas—Fair to-night and Tuesday.

STOCKS ARE DULL BUT HOLD FIRM

Upward Trend Due to Improved Foreign Situation—Union Pacific-Steel Attractive.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Texas Company was again bullishly prominent at the opening of the stock market to-day, advancing 2 1-4 points to 116 1-4. The copper group was about the weakest, although Mexican Petroleum lost 1 point. Canadian Pacific advanced 1 point on foreign buying, due evidently to the belief that peace has at last been restored in the Balkans, with the resultant quietus on war talk in Europe.

Among the losses were Amalgamated Copper, 1-2; Steel common, 3-8; American Can 1-4; Chino Copper, 5-8; Erie, 3-8; Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 1-4; Republic Iron and Steel, 1-4; Reading, 1-8; Union Pacific, 1-2.

Union Pacific recovered its loss and made a slight gain. At the end of half an hour a firm tone prevailed. Atchison advanced 1-4, while Wabash, Missouri Pacific and Norfolk and Western gained fractionally.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were dull and moved in a narrow range pending Mexican developments. In Wall Street no perturbation was felt over a possible break between Mexico and the United States.

In the late forenoon, the tone continued firm, and many of the leading railroads and industrials made fractional gains over the initial figures. Steel common was in brisk demand, moving up ⅝ to 62, while similar gains were noted in American Can common, Reading, Erie Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Canadian Pacific.

Immediately after the announcement of the terms of the subscription to Southern Pacific certificates, Southern Pacific declined 1⅛ to 91¾, its high price in the early trading. The stock was back to 92¼ in the next few minutes, however, and there was indication of banking accumulation. The rest of the list displayed a strong tone.

Union Pacific was heavy in the last hour, selling under 91 1-2 for a net loss of about a point. The list had an irregular appearance, but the tone was firm. Erie passed 29 on an upward movement for a fractional gain over the midday level. Reading was steady. Canadian Pacific and Amalgamated Copper were bi-her. Steel moved slightly and showed little change. New York, New Haven and Hartford continued under par.

Grain Notes

Washington predicts cooler weather throughout the grain belt this week.

* * *

Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma saw no relief Saturday from the extreme hot wave from which for more than a week residents of those three states have suffered. Temperatures above 100 were recorded at every point reporting. In some places there were indications of rains and cooler weather. No rain, however, fell during the day. The highest temperature reported in Kansas was 110 degrees.

* * *

Heavy rains through the northern central States and the Lake region brought relief from the intense heat to-day. The rain did not extend far enough south, however, to benefit the corn belt of Southern Illinois, Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. Rainfall: Omaha, 11; Nebraska had good rains Saturday in the North Platte territory; Fremont, 60; Genoa, 2.33; North Bend, 1.00; Bassett, 2.00; Elk Creek, 1.50; Chicago, partly cloudy, 68 degrees, about 1 inch rain Sunday; Kansas City, partly cloudy, sprinkling, 75, showers last night; Terre Haute, sprinkling, 73; Springfield, partly cloudy, 75, no rain; St. Louis, clear, 85, no rain; Omaha, clear, 84, fair, rains Saturday and Sunday.

Bartlett & Frazier Co. says: "Wheat—We are inclined to look for rather a dull market as outside trade is light.

"Corn—Since Saturday there have been fair rains in Iowa, Nebraska and north Illinois, but so far no reports of rain have reached us from Kansas or the Southwest. We look for a nervous market and there will doubtless be more or less scattered liquidation this morning.

"Oats—Cash demand is quiet, but offerings of the new crop are moderate."

"Think wheat and corn is a purchase," remarked a close observer. Corn probably will ease off a little, but September corn will sell higher.—Chapman.

* * *

"Do not see much in wheat just yet," says Rycroft, "but would scalp on long side. Think December corn should be bought on any further break."

* * *

"Think wheat and corn is a purchase just now," remarked Chapman, of Bartlett, Frazier Co., to-day. Corn, however, may ease off a little, but September corn will sell much higher."

* * *

We understand there is a cable here reporting three days of frost in Argentina. The wheat crop in Northern Argentina is now only a few inches high, while in the Southern fields much is yet to seed. Under these conditions we take no stock in any theory of frost damage to growing wheat.—Rycroft.

COTTON GOSSIP

Sentiment more bearish than ever.

Spot people broke the market Saturday by unloading heavily. Springs sold Hubbard and the local crowd sold. Soon afterwards Cone came in and sold 10,000 October, December and January, starting for 11.05 for December, and this was the signal for Hicks, Jr., Schiff and the ring generally to sell. Stop orders were reached at 10.85 for January, and that month had a fainting spell and dropped to 10.81. The decline was stopped by week-end short covering and a certain amount of trade buying around 11c for October.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 11.—The weather map shows cloudy over entire belt, except fair in Tennessee, North Carolina, good rains in Arkansas and North Louisiana. Light showers in Southeast and Northwest Texas. Indications are for unsettled and showery weather over entire belt. Rain developments in west, but a little slow, but indications are good for precipitation in Texas and Oklahoma in the near future. Rains over Saturday: Amarillo, .16; Galveston, raining; Palestine, Jacksonville, Fla., .02; Little Rock, raining, .64; Memphis, .24; Houston, .01; Macon, .48; Monroe, La., 1.46.

Nice rains fell over Sunday in Arkansas, North Louisiana, but little so far in western States. However, temperatures range lower; nice rains. Washington predicts showers and cooler generally toward end of week.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Weather reports received by the Times-Democrat Sunday night from the sections of Texas and Oklahoma where drouth is affecting the cotton crop, the prospects were that no rain fell Sunday and none seemed to be impending immediately.

"High temperatures, all unofficial, prevailed in the belt. Dallas reported the weather clear, with a maximum temperature for the day of 94; San Antonio, clear, 95; Gainesville, clear, 100; Texarkana, partly cloudy, 91; Paris, clear, 100; Denison, clear, 98; Temple, clear, 97; Oklahoma City, clear, 98; Ardmore, clear, 97; Durant, clear, 98; Honey Grove, clear, 94.

"The Government Weather Bureau, in its weekly forecast from Washington, predicted continued high temperatures until Wednesday, with indications for a drop in the mercury, and well distributed rains during the latter part of the week."

DRY GOODS BUSINESS STILL AT HIGH LEVEL

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Marshall Field & Co. in a weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

As judged by the shipments of merchandise for fall and for immediate use, the dry goods business of the week compares favorably with that of the same period a year ago.

Poor Old England, Her Feelings Are Hurt.

For a Big Country, With Big Men, She Does Some Small Things.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We shall soon have a big Panama Exposition in California. More than twenty-five of the world's nations have accepted the invitation to show at that Exposition what they are doing and what they have accomplished since the last great Exposition.

But England, our respected stepmother across the water, sends word that she will keep her little dolls and toys at home and will NOT exhibit.

Her feelings are hurt, if you please, because we would not arbitrate with Great Britain the question of her right to use IN HER OWN WAY the Panama Canal, which we built WITH OUR OWN MONEY.

We didn't ask Great Britain to arbitrate with us regulations concerning the Manchester Canal, which she built.

We don't ask her to arbitrate her right to keep a lot of guns perched on the rock of Gibraltar, thus controlling the Mediterranean shores. We ought to question that right, by the way, and some day probably we'll do away with it. But we are very nice about it just NOW.

Poor old England, it seems as though we were always destined to hurt her feelings. We had to give her a thrashing in 1776.

In 1812 she had to have another.

Now, Britannia's classical nose is out of joint because the United States has been so unreasonable as to decide that the United States' SHIPS can go through a canal built with United States' MONEY on terms different from the terms accorded to the ships of England and all the rest of the world.

Well, dear old Lady Albion, stay HOME with your toys and your exhibits if you must. We should like to have had you come over, with your cocoa and your Manchester hardware, your automobiles, your exquisitely funny so-called English accent and all the rest of it.

But we always have an English exhibit in America, without any special contribution to the Exposition in California.

If we wanted to be hard-hearted and cruel (which Providence forbid!) we could set apart a little spot for England at the Exposition ANYHOW, and have a nice little English exhibit of our own, including:

The polo cup that England, with the pick of her whole army of India and the British Islands, can't seem to get—although only a few score of American boys play polo regularly and supply our ponies.

And we might have the yachting cup, that England, so-called ruler of the waves, has been obliged to leave over here for a considerable period.

We could have quite a string of cups representing the various "English sports," in which England always is second, when she isn't third, fourth, fifth or worse.

We don't want to be cruel, however. We shan't have any English exhibition, since England doesn't want it.

The whole country, the entire United States, is as much of an English exhibition as we want.

Here we show what a country does when England no longer controls it.

Here we show by contrast with countries that England rules what it means to escape from English rule and to GOVERN YOURSELF.

In California, and on every inch of soil from New England to California, there is an exhibition of the results obtained by the descendants of the men that knew enough to get rid of England's rule a good many years ago.

But, poor old stepmother, let us not speak unkindly of her.

Her feelings are hurt. Let us rather wipe her tears, and while telling her firmly that she can not be permitted to boss the Panama Canal or other things American, and reminding her gently that 1776 was some time ago, let us be as kind to her as we know how.

There is no fun being an Anglo-Saxon old lady, a little stiff in the joints, and to see the young folks among nations going ahead and leaving you.

.:. Adam Smith .:.

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, almost simultaneously with the Declaration of Independence, was published Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a work that was to do for political economy what the great Declaration was to do for political liberty.

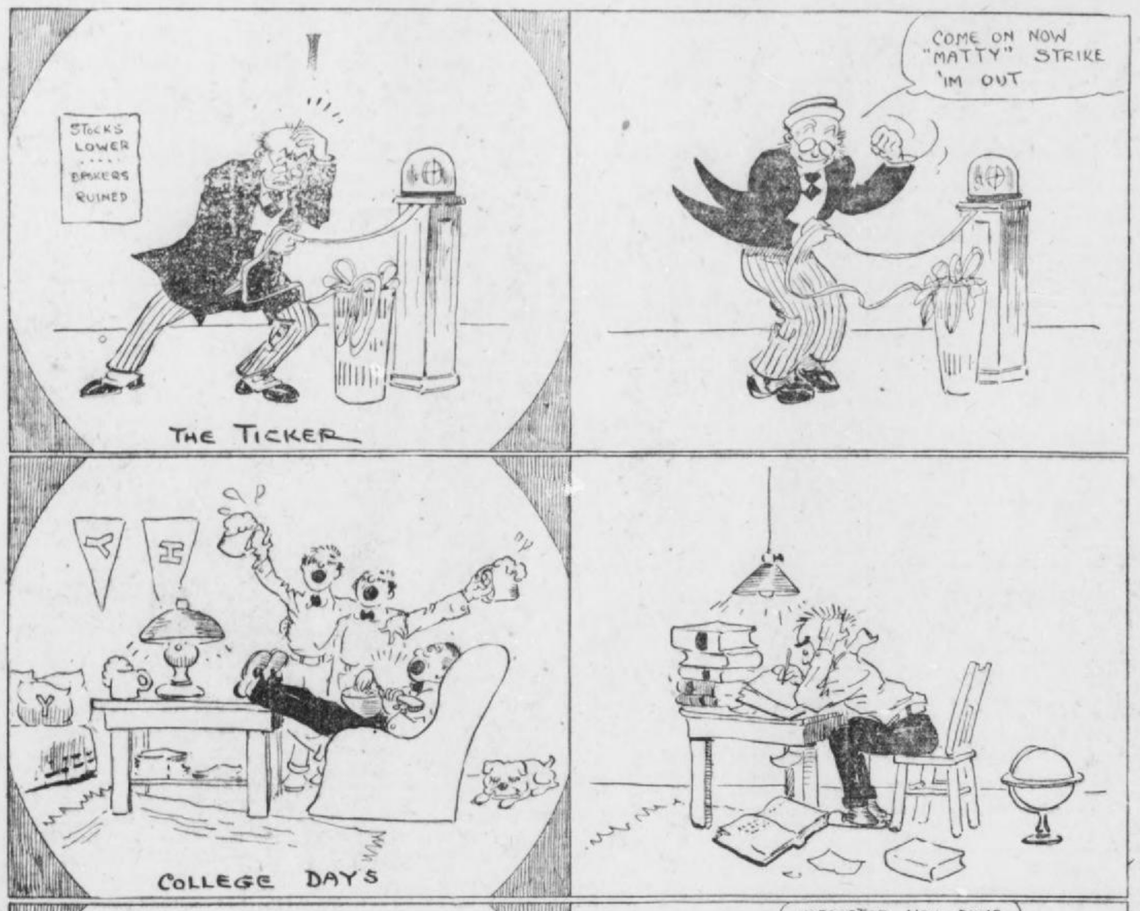

Of this celebrated work Buckle wrote: "Adam Smith's 'Wealth of Nations,' looking at its ultimate results, is probably the most important book ever written, and it is certainly the most valuable contibution ever made by a single man toward establishing the principles in which government should be based. This solitary Scotchman has, by the publication of a single work, done more for the happiness of man than has been effected by the united ability of all the statesmen and legislators of whom history has preserved an account."

The doctrines of Smith soon found their way into the House of Commons, and from there worked their way out among the people. Gradually the great truths forged ahead, and slowly, but surely, the revolution in political economy was assured.

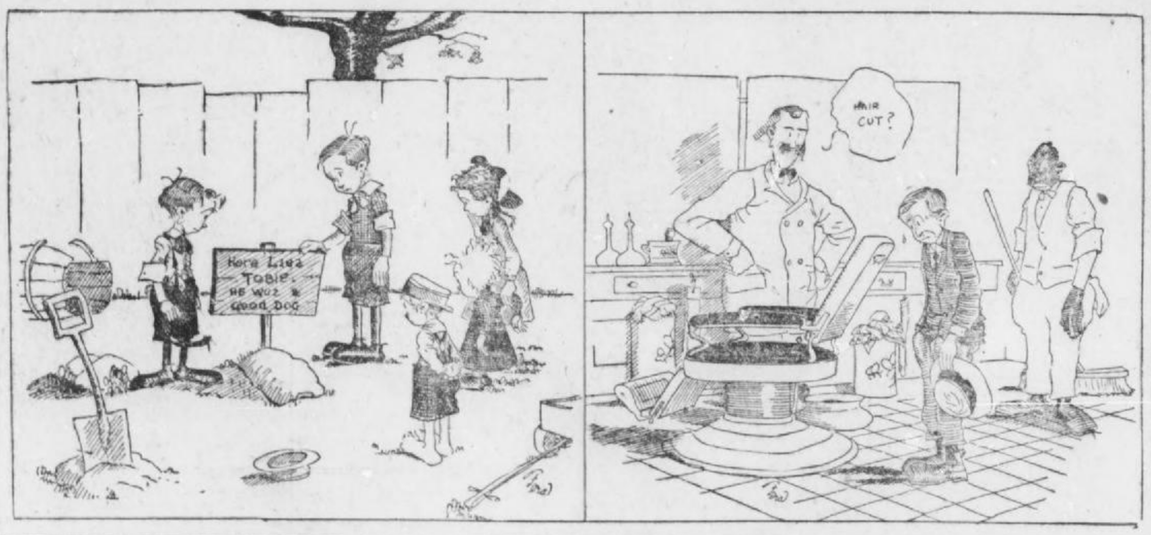

As soon as it was seen that gold and silver are not wealth, but merely the representatives of wealth; that wealth itself consists in the value which skill and labor can add to the raw material; that in the absence of monopoly the benefits of trade must be reciprocal; that these benefits arise simply from the faculty with which a nation exports those commodities it can produce the most cheaply, and imports those which it can produce only at great expense, but which the other, from the bounty of nature or superior skill in production, can afford to supply at a lower rate, the great problem was solved.

When a great thinker arises who happens also to have a living realization of that universal justice which holds for all men, he is sure to be listened to in the long run. He makes no noise, his voice is not heard in the din of the street, but in the solitude and the silence he formulates the ideas that are to govern the ages. Such a thinker was Adam Smith, the author of the "Wealth of Nations."

THE WELL-BORN

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

So many people—people—in the world;
So few great souls, love ordered, well begun,
In answer to the fertile mother need!
So few who seem
The image of the Maker's mortal dream;
So many born of mere propinquity—
Of lustful habit, or of accident.
Their mothers felt
No mighty, all-compelling wish to see
Their bosoms garden-places
Abloom with flower faces;
No tidal wave swept o'er them with its flood;
No thrill of flesh or heart; no leap of blood;
No glowing fire, flaming to white desire
For mating and for motherhood,
Yet they bore children.
God! how mankind misuses Thy command
To populate the earth
How low is brought high birth!
How low the woman: when, inert as spawn
Left on the sands to fertilize,
She is the means through which the race goes on!
Not so the first intent.
Birth, as the Supreme Mind conceived it, meant
The clear imperious call of mate to mate
And the clear answer. Only thus and then
Are fine, well-ordered, and potential lives
Brought into being. Not by church or state
Can birth be made legitimate,
Unless
Love in its fulness bless.
Creation so ordains its lofty laws
That man, while greater in all other things,
Is lesser in the generative cause.
The father may be merely man, the male;
Yet more than female must the mother be.
The woman who would fashion
Souls, for the use of earth and angels meet,
Must entertain a high and holy passion.
Not rank, or wealth, or influence of kings
Can give a soul its dower.
Of majesty and power.
Great love to that great hour.

Parental Authority

There Is a Limit to It, She Declares. Grown Children, She Says, Should Have Right to Decide for Themselves.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HOW far does parental authority go?

To what extent should a grown-up man or woman sacrifice his or her liberty of action, and possibly his or her success in life in order to gratify the whim or prejudice of an old father and mother?

I have a letter from a young woman who puts this question in a very pertinent fashion. My correspondent writes that her parents are well-to-do, even rich, country people, and that she prepared herself to be a milliner, and is an expert hat trimmer, capable of earning a good salary. Her father and mother refuse, however, to let her go and take a position in a shop where she could make the money to gratify her desires for good clothes and innocent pleasures, and they also refuse to provide her with the money for these luxuries. They give her nothing but her board in return for the work she does about the farm, and she has to make the money for the few clothes that she has by taking in ill-paid sewing and trimming hats for the neighboring farmers' wives.

This young woman wants to know if she would not be justified in asserting her own independence and going away from home and accepting one of the many offers she has had to make her living in the way that is most congenial to her and best paid.

There Is a Limit to the Authority of Parents.

Inasmuch as she says that she is twenty-seven years old and has arrived at years of discretion, if she is ever going to get there, I should say that she has a perfect right to follow her own judgment and inclination, and as long as she does only those things that are true and honorable and of good report to live her own life in her own way.

There is a limit to the authority of parents, and while the sacred obligation to honor your father and your mother never ceases, there is no reason why the prospects of the young should be blighted by a blind yielding to the tyranny of the old just because they happen to stand in a certain relationship.

When their children are very young parents assume the attitude of oracles to them. They are wiser than the babe, more capable of deciding its little problems than it is, and the trouble is that this engenders in most fathers and mothers a conceit that makes them believe to the end of time that they still are wiser than their children and perfectly capable still of settling every question that comes up in their offsprings' lives.

Nothing in the world is further from the truth than this. Nature plays strange pranks in families, and many a dull, commonplace man and woman begets children that are brilliant, mercurial, restless, full of strange talent, and no more like their progenitors than champagne is like dishwater.

How are such parents able to decide anything for such children? How are such parents to know what is best for such children? What folly for such children to be bound down by the narrowness and prejudice of such parents, their ambitions thwarted, their careers ruined because a stupid father and mother will not consent to a gifted son or daughter doing something which they never wanted to do!

Yet we all know men whose lives have been ruined because when they desired to be doctors or lawyers their fathers forced them behind grocery counters. We have known girls that God himself made actors, or singers, or artists, whose genius was lost to the world because their provincial parents thought that a woman's "sphere" was in the kitchen.

The Parents of To-day Are Unfitted to Direct Children.

We have all known miserable men and women whose parents had separated them from the women and men they loved and married them to somebody they didn't love because the father and mother were so certain that they knew the kind of a husband or a wife that Mary and John needed better than Mary and John knew themselves.

The truth is that there have been so many changes in the conditions of life and the point of view in the last twenty years that the parent of to-day is absolutely unfitted to decide the problems of life for the young man and woman of to-day. This is particularly the case with women, because the whole economic and social position of woman has been revolutionized since mother was a girl. Things that were considered bad form then are good form now. Sentiments that were daring then are commonplace conventions now. An amount of education that made a girl a blue stocking then renders one only moderately well informed now.

Mother will not consent to her gifted daughter going on the stage, where she could make name and fortune, because in mother's narrow prejudice the stage and immorality are synonymous terms, when the modern view is that morality is a matter of morals and not of environment. Mother doesn't think that her daughter should go into business because when she was young the working woman was looked down upon, when now it is just as much a matter of course for a woman who needs money to work as it is for a man.

Men and Women Have the Right to Decide for Themselves.

Mother thinks that her daughters should marry to please her, instead of gratifying their individual tastes in husbands, and she forgets that it is the daughters who are going to have to live with the men, not she.

All of this makes it utterly impossible for parents to judge for their children, and it is not right that the old should lay restrictions upon the young. Therefore, it seems to me that, after a girl or boy comes to man's and woman's estate, they have a right to decide things for themselves.

Whatever mistakes are made, they must pay for them, and they should at least have the privilege of trying to do the things they want to do.

Age does not always bring wisdom. It just as often augments and confirms stupidity and pigheadedness.
