FIGHT BEGUN TO SAVE FRANK

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL FOLLOWS DEATH SENTENCE

U. S. TAKES ITS FINAL STAND ON MEXICO

Lind Leaves for Home as Wilson Frames Decisive Peace Terms. Break Believed Near.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The American proposals to General Huerta, as intimated at the White House to-day, are the following:

First, a definite armistice.

Second, a free and early election in all parts of the country.

Third, General Huerta is not to be a candidate at this election.

Fourth, both factions must agree to abide by the result.

These fundamental preparations formulated by the United States will not be changed by any developments in Mexico City to-day. President Wilson has decided to make his stand on them, and while they might be modified in unessential details, their vital features must remain in any negotiations to be conducted further.

The supplementary suggestions spoken of in Secretary Tumulty's statement to-day can not affect the fundamental preparations. Envoy Lind has left Mexico City, as appears in Mexico City press dispatches to-day. The White House has no information that he has left Mexico City, and is puzzled to understand how, in view of the favorable reply sent by the President to Lind's message of last night, he could have left the Mexican Capital.

The State Department denied that Governor Lind was ordered out of Mexico, and further claimed that the Mexican situation remains unchanged.

It is understood that Governor Lind will leave Vera Cruz on board an American warship, probably the New Hampshire, within a short time. There are at present four American battleships at Vera Cruz—the New Hampshire, South Carolina, Michigan and Louisiana. One of these will be placed at Governor Lind's disposal, and the other three will remain in Mexican waters to await developments.

President Delays Message.

President Wilson to-day confirmed reports that all hope of the success of the Lind mission was not lost when he postponed reading his message to Congress until 1 o'clock to-morrow.

If the negotiations continue over a considerable period the message may not go to Congress for some time; if the American proposals are accepted it may not be read at all.

The relief just as the crisis approached was emphasized by the semi-official announcement of the American proposals made to Huerta through Envoy Lind. That the White House saw fit to indicate their terms, coupled with the facts that they were fundamental propositions and would not be changed, was regarded as extremely significant.

Reports are current here that Huerta intends to resign the presidency in favor of Travino, one of his lieutenants, but to be a candidate for the

Mrs. Godbee, Held As Double Slayer, Blocks Jail Break

MILLEN, Aug. 26.—Mrs. Sarah Perkins Godbee, in jail here charged with the murder of her former husband and his third wife, prevented an escape from the Jenkins County jail here yesterday morning.

A negro was arrested on Saturday night and lodged in the jail. On Monday morning, between 3 and 4 o'clock the negro got out of his cell and was making desperate attempts to bore his way to liberty when the accused woman gave the alarm.

Priest Arrested for Quarrel With Sister

GULFPORT, MISS., Aug. 26.—A domestic spat between his sister and himself is the explanation given by Father A. Kuhn, well-known pastor of the Catholic Church at Mississippi City, to-day of his arrest at the priest's house.

Neighbors in the vicinity of Father Kuhn's home were aroused by the screams of a woman. They telephoned Deputy Sheriff Frank Ducksworth and the county jailer, both of whom responded.

After the arrest of the priest, he was brought to Gulfport, but was shortly released, prominent citizens signing his bond. To-day Father Kuhn went to the office of the justice of the peace and made a statement regarding the case. He will be arranged for trial to-morrow.

Threaten Force in County Seat Fight

GADSDEN, Aug. 26.—At a mass meeting held at Cedar Bluff to-day resolutions were passed calling upon the people of Cherokee County to assist in an effort to have the County Seat moved from Center to that place.

Center, a little town on the Coosa River several miles from a railroad, has been the county seat since the organization of the county. Cedar Bluff is a new town on the Southern Railroad. Twenty men left this morning to visit each beat in the county asking them to sign the petitions. A spirited fight will be made and Center may resist efforts to move the courthouse by force if necessary.

Preacher-Banker for Alabama Senate Seat

COLUMBUS, Aug. 26.—Declaring that he prefers serving his own flock to being State Senator from the Eighth Alabama senatorial district, the Rev. W. J. Price, cashier of the Phonix-Girard Bank, of Girard, Ala., has announced that he will under only one circumstance submit to becoming a candidate for the State Senate.

Mr. Price is serving North Girard Methodist Church as pastor and is the cashier of one of the largest banking institutions in this section, in addition to being a successful business man in other directions.

Foster Father Wins In Fight for Child

GADSDEN, Aug. 26.—Jessie Belle Goodwin, 13 years old, is the object of contention between her foster father, J. A. Goodwin, and her sister, Mrs. Dollie West.

Mrs. West came here yesterday and took the child from Goodwin and he immediately sued out a writ of habeas corpus. The court granted the writ and ordered that the child be brought into court on August 28 and that Mrs. West show cause why she should not be returned to her foster father.

SPEER PROBE DELAYED IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—A resolution to investigate the charges against Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, was introduced in the House today by Chairman Clayton, of the Judiciary Committee.

An effort to have it considered immediately failed, on the objection of Minority Leader Mann, and the resolution went over until to-morrow.

In presenting the resolution Mr. Clayton said:

"The committee reached the unanimous conclusion that the charges were of such grave nature that further investigation was warranted. I may say that not only members of the Judiciary Committee, but other members of the House, have given this subject careful attention.

"No member of the committee has had opportunity to talk with the witnesses, and so the committee did not feel like voting to impeach Judge Speer.

Urges Fair Inquiry.

"If Judge Speer is not guilty of the wrongful conduct alleged against him, a committee of this House ought to vindicate him. If it reaches the conclusion that he should be impeached and removed, the House owes it to the people to take this course.

"Several members of the committee have expressed the hope that this judge is not guilty, but we felt it was only fair to the country to bring in this resolution."

Minority Leader Mann said he had never heard of a similar case being started in such a manner, with no one making an actual charge on the floor of the House.

"I doubt the propriety of the House, having no charges before it, authorizing a committee to proceed with an investigation," said Mr. Mann. "I have seen no charge in the papers worthy of investigation."

"Does the gentleman think I ought to give out the charges at this point?" asked Mr. Clayton.

"I think the House ought to be informed," said Mr. Mann.

Representative Bartlett, of Georgia, pointed out that some of the most important charges, those made by Colonel Huff, had been thoroughly aired.

Bartlett for Quick Action.

"Justice demands this investigation," said Mr. Bartlett. "You should be careful; you should be quick to allow a quick investigation of charges made by reputable citizens. I hope no member will be so unjust to the people of that district as to do anything to impede an investigation."

Mr. Mann persisted in his objection and the resolution went over.

The procedure taken in this case, so far as the resolution for an investigation is concerned, is the same as that in the impeachment proceedings against Judges Swayne, Hanford and Archbold.

The resolution set forth that the charges made against Judge Speer were of such a grave nature that they warranted further investigation, and provided that the Judiciary Committee be authorized to proceed with the inquiry. If the committee finds that further steps are justified, it will recommend the impeachment of Judge Speer, it is declared.

FRANK RETURNING TO HIS CELL IN TOWER AFTER JUDGE'S CHARGE

Leo M. Frank, convicted slayer of Mary Phagan, on his way back to his cell to await the verdict of the jury. He walked with a firm, springy step, and apparently was confident that he would be acquitted.

3 Negro Prisoners Refuse to Leave Jail

EUFAULA, Aug. 26.—Austin Campbell, convicted on two blind tiger charges, and George Hayes, convicted of gambling, escaped from the city jail by drilling their way through the brick wall.

The other negro prisoners refused to leave with them. All had been allowed the run of the corridor on account of the hot nights.

GEORGIAN FIRST.

ROME, Aug. 26.—The Atlanta Georgian was the first paper to bring the Frank verdict here yesterday. Hundreds of people bought The Georgian's extra and commented on its enterprise.

PRISONER MUST HANG OCT. 10, JUDGE RULES; INNOCENT, HE REPEATS

Almost before the dread verdict of "guilty" had ceased ringing in his ears, Leo M. Frank, convicted of slaying Mary Phagan, heard Tuesday the still more terrible words, "sentenced to hang by the neck until dead," before the echo of his own words, "I am innocent" had died away.

Frank will pay the penalty for the murder of Mary Phagan, which the jury Monday agreed he had committed, on October 10, unless the efforts of his two lawyers, who already have started a new fight for his life, are successful in postponing the execution or ultimately in cleanirg their client. There is little doubt that the execution will be put off, as an appeal will act as a stay.

Sentence had hardly been pronounced by Judge L. S. Roan at 10:40 o'clock Tuesday morning in the Thrower building before Attorney Reuben Arnold was on his feet to make a motion for a new trial.

Judge Roan said that he would set October 4 as the date for hearing the arguments on the motion. It is known that Solicitor Dorsey is most vigorously opposed to any movement looking toward the reopening of the case. He asserted repeatedly during the last days of the trial that the claim of the defense that Frank was not receiving a fair trial was ridiculous on its face.

Wife Waits Outside During Sentence.

While the death penalty was being imposed upon the factory superintendent, his young wife sat outside the Thrower building in an automobile. She had followed her husband in the car, waiting for him as he was taken into court between two deputies and again following him when he was conveyed back to the Tower.

Frank displayed no more emotion than he did during the progress of the long trial. He, perhaps, was a trifle paler than usual and his face a bit more haggard, but aside from this none would have known as he stepped firmly down from the Thrower building steps that he was a man on whom the death sentence had just been pronounced.

The fight for Frank's life, which may consume many months, arouses a question as to the disposal of Jim Conley. It is the general supposition that Conley's case will be held in abeyance until Frank's fate definitely is determined by a new trial or the decision of the appeal to the Supreme Court.

Newt Lee Released From Custody.

Newt Lee, material witness in the Frank trial and at one time a suspect, was released from custody Tuesday morning after spending exactly four months in jail.

A long and notable legal fight is certain over the effort to save Frank from paying the penalty fixed by the court. The case will be carried to the highest courts if Judge Roan refuses a new trial.

There was the hush of horror as the dreadful "Hanged by the neck until dead, and may God have mercy on your soul," were uttered by the judge. The signs of Franks emotion were few as ever. A few minutes later he was asserting, clearly and calmly, his entire innocence.

Frank heard his sentence with but a slight show of nervousness. He stood leaning slightly against the railing in front of the judge's bench looking straight into Judge Roan's eyes. Occasionally he moistened his lips, but otherwise he was calm. His eyes though, were bloodshot and his skin more pronouncedly white than ever before.

Frank Again Protests Innocence.

Judge Roan addressed him:

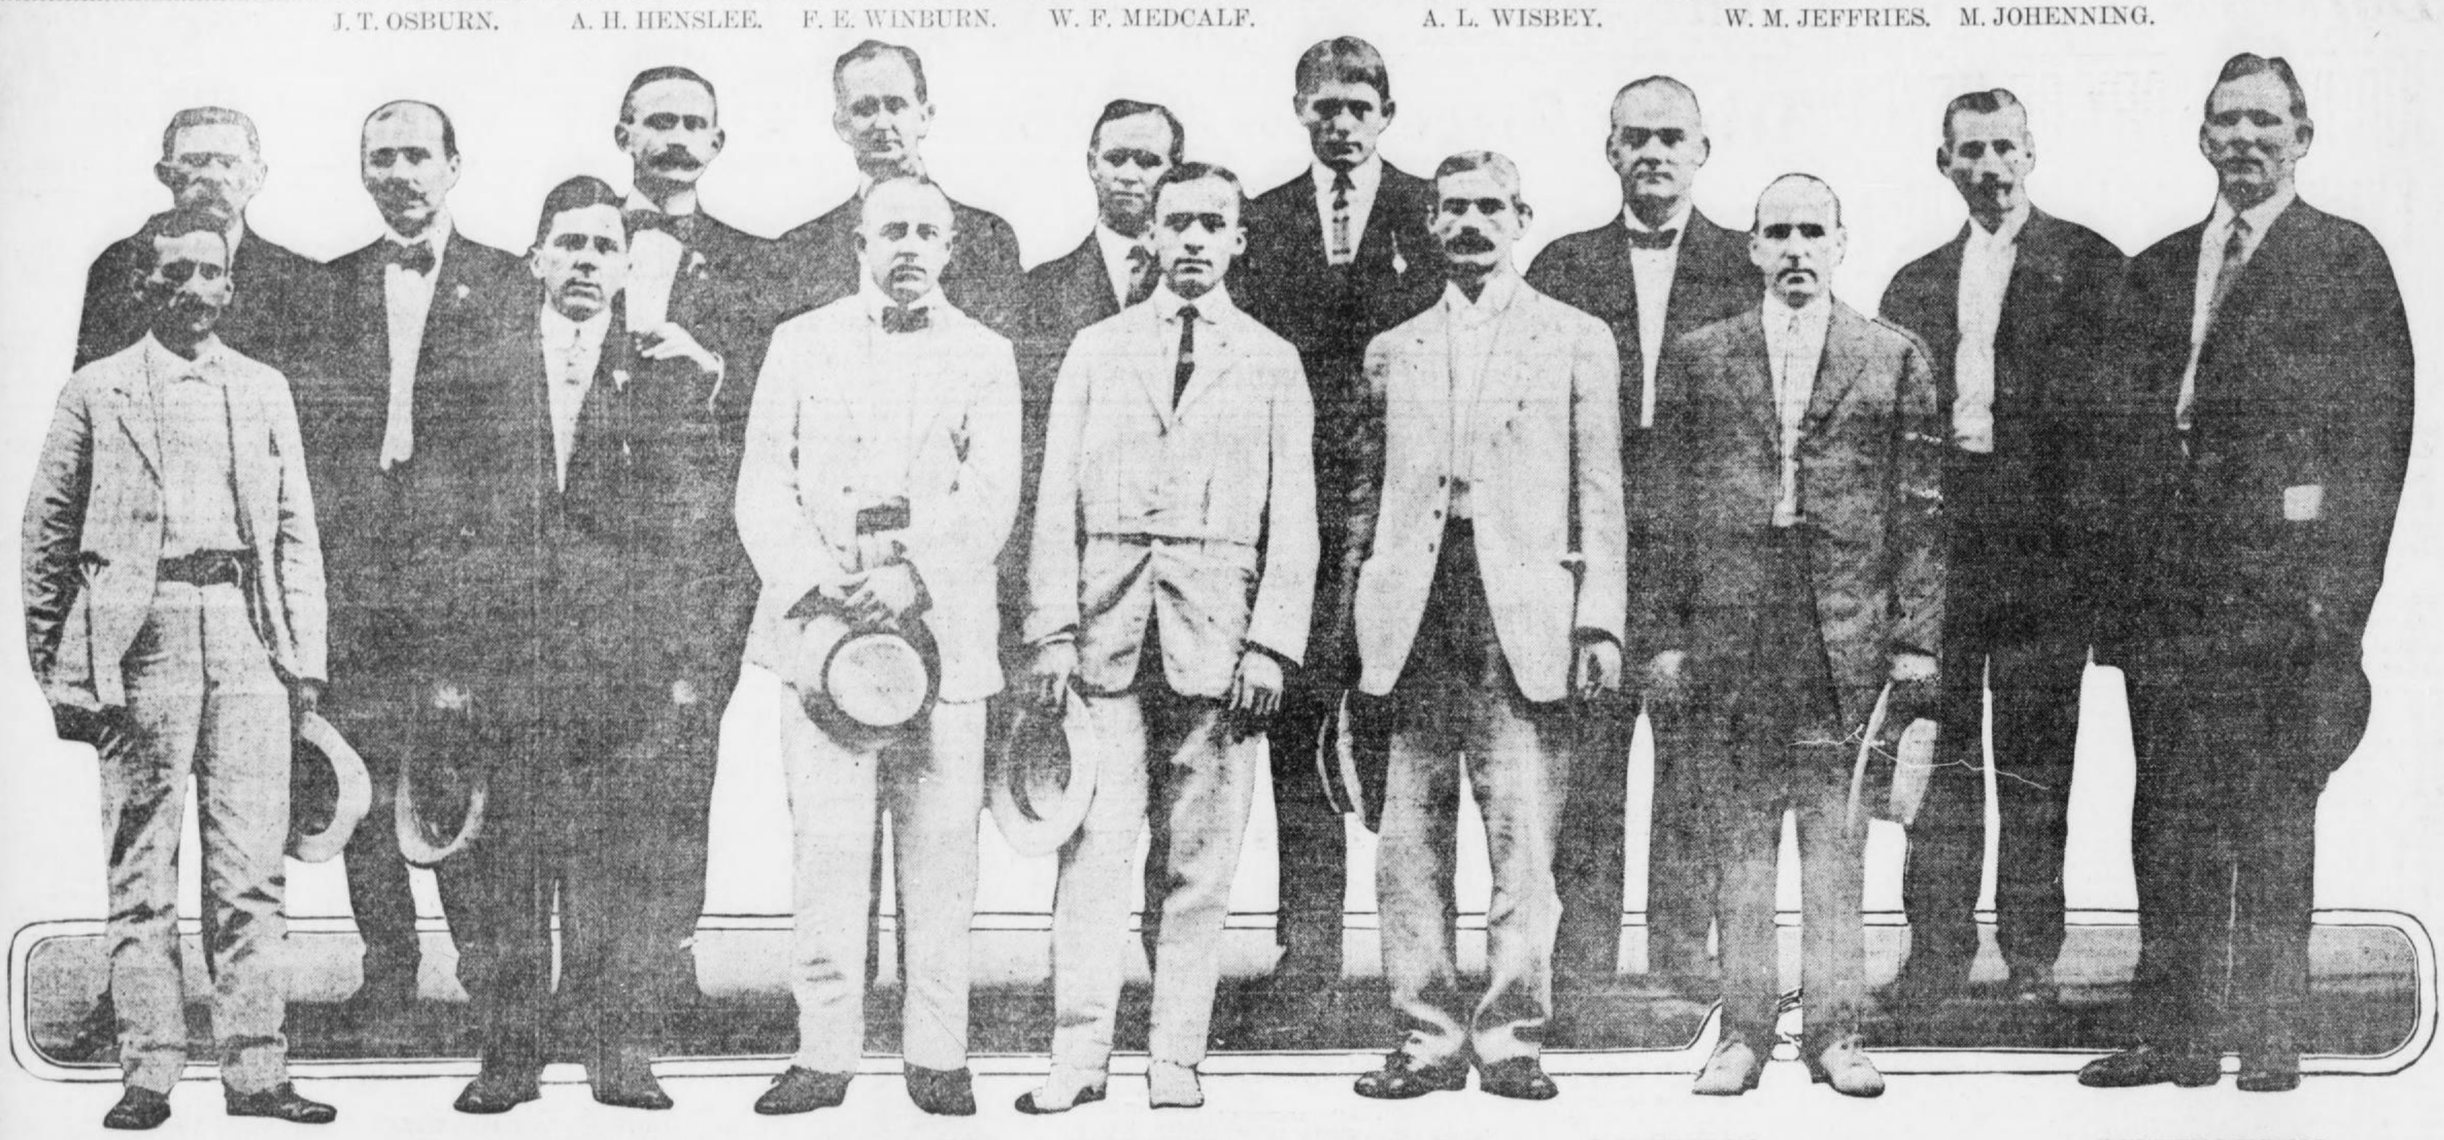

"The jury which has been trying you for the last several weeks has found you guilty. Have you anything to say why sentence should not be passed on you at this time?"

Frank leaned slightly against the railing and placed one hand behind his back before replying. Then he said in a calm, even voice:

"Your Honor, I say now as I have always said: I am innocent. Further than that, I will state that my case is in the hands of my counsel."

The prisoner's voice was so low that for a moment his hearers were not aware that he had finished and a deathly silence reigned. Then Judge Roan spoke:

"Your counsel inform me that they will move for a new trial," he said, addressing Frank, "but in the meantime, it is my sworn duty to pass sentence on you.

"I have tried to give you a fair trial. I may have erred, but I have done my duty as my conscience dictated."

Judge Roan then picked up from his desk the sheet of paper upon which his sentence was written. As he did so, through some slight misunderstanding, the crowd arose to its feet.

"Take your seats; take your seats," said Judge Roan, then read the sentence. In legal form, it was this:

"The State against Leo M. Frank; indictment for murder; Fulton County Superior Court, May Term, 1913. Verdict of guilty, July term, August 25, 1913.

"Whereupon it is considered ordered and adjudged by the court that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be taken from the bar of this court to the common jail in the County of Fulton, and that he be safely there kept until his final execution in the manner fixed by law;

"It is further adjudged by the Court that on the tenth day of October, 1913, that the defendant, Leo M. Frank, be executed by the Sheriff of Fulton County in private, witnessed only by the executing officer, a sufficient guard, the relatives of the said defendant and such clergymen and friends as he may desire;

"Such execution to take place in the common jail of Fulton County, and that said defendant on that day between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 2 o'clock p. m. be by the Sheriff of Fulton County hanged by the neck until he shall be dead, and may God have mercy on your soul.

"In open court, this 26th day of August, 1913, L. S. Roan, judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit, presiding."

When Judge Roan had finished reading the sentence, Frank sank back into a chair between his two friends, Leo Strauss and Julian Boehm. His face had grown a bit paler, but the calm stolidity which characterized his attitude throughout the grim proceeding remained.

"Your honor," he said, "we make a motion for a new trial."

"I will hear the arguments on the motion on October 4," replied Judge Roan.

Luther Rosser, Frank's chief of counsel, was heard to remark, aside, when this date was fixed: "Well, that will extend the time of execution, then."

At 10:40 o'clock Frank took his place between two deputy sheriffs and was escorted down to an automobile waiting below and whisked off to the jail. At the doorway to the Thrower building another automobile containing Mrs. Leo Frank was waiting. When Frank emerged from the building he exchanged glances with his wife, but no words were spoken.

When the machine with the prisoner moved out into the street toward the jail Mrs. Frank's automobile fell in behind and followed.

No Women Hear Sentence Passed.

But a few persons—not more than 30 in all—heard the passing of the sentence. Among them there were but two of Frank's friends, Strauss and Boehm. The other witnesses were made up of Sheriff Mangum, half a dozen deputy sheriffs, numerous court attaches and newspaper men. There were no women in the courtroom.

Frank came in before his counsel. Smilingly he nodded to those in the room. Shortly after he had taken a seat Rosser and Arnold came in and took seats close by Frank.

To Arnold, Frank leaned over and whispered:

"What shall I say?"

"That your case is in the hands of your counsel," replied the attorney.

Sheriff Mangum escorted the judge to his bench and stood during the reading of the sentence with his back to the window near the bench, facing the crowd. He did not look at Frank throughout the proceedings.

At the close of the sentence there was no demonstration of any kind. Quietly the crowd filed out behind Frank and waited until the elevator, descending from the fourth floor with the prisoner and his captors only, returned for them.

The automobile bearing Frank, with the fateful words "sentenced to hang by the neck till dead" still echoing in his ears, arrived back at the grim old Tower at 10:40 o'clock. Frank stepped out between Deputies Burdette and Owens. His face was a bit sallower, his eyes a little wider open. Otherwise he was the same astoundingly cool prisoner.

The trio walked to the jail door and Frank asked his escorts to wait a moment. A minute later another car drew up and the devoted wife of the convicted slayer alighted, Deputy Suttles at her side.

Frank's face lighted up. Mrs. Frank smiled—the tragic smile of courage and loyalty—and they were clasped in each other's arms, the young wife showering kisses on the man who had just heard his doom pronounced.

They disappeared into the gloom of the jail corridor, Mrs. Frank's arm around her husband's shoulder—a shielding, motherly embrace that touched the men who walked with averted faces at Frank's side.

A moment more and Frank was in his mother's arms at the cell screened from foreign eyes and words of hope showered upon him to drown the echo of the terrible pronouncement of a brief while back.

The young woman was dressed in black, relieved only by a white lace collar. She looked composed, but the traces of a night of weeping were in her eyes. The mother was pale and worn. Neither would talk to newspaper men.

Mob Influences Jury, He Says.

Emil Selig, the father-in-law of Frank, brought him his breakfast Tuesday morning. The convicted man, if he suffered any shock from the verdict Monday, was said to have recovered entirely from it by the morning. He was as stoical as ever and even while in the shadow of the gallows he expressed himself as just as certain that he ultimately would be exonerated of the terrible crime as he was on the first day he was suspected.

"My God! Even the jury is influenced by mob law," wer the words with which he greeted the news of the verdict Monday afternoon.

Frank was with his wife at the Tower when the intelligence came. Rabbi Marx, Dr. Rosenberg, the Frank family physician, and a number of other friends were in the office of Sheriff Mangum, Dr. Rosenberg arriving some minutes after the verdict was known at the courthouse.

"The jury has found you guilty Leo," said the physician.

Mrs. Frank screamed and broke into hysterical weeping. It was her husband who calmed her and assured her that everything would be all right in the end.

Within a few minutes he persuaded her to leave the jail in company with Rabbi Marx and Dr. Rosenberg. The traces of the tears were still on her face when she came through the corridor. With the aid of her escort she avoided the newspaper men and entered the waiting automobile.

Dr. B. Wildauer came down shortly after. "I am as innocent to-day as I was a year ago," was Frank's comment on the verdict, according to Dr. Wildauer.

The blinds of the Selig home at No. 68 East Georgia avenue, where Frank and his wife lived with her parents, were closed Tuesday morning. Neighbors said that Mr. and Mrs. Selig and their daughter had stayed with relatives overnight.

Attorney Arnold left for Bedford Springs, Pa., Tuesday afternoon for a month's rest. Mr. Arnold will return to Atlanta in time to participate in the argument for a new trial for the pencil factory superintendent, which has been set for October 4.

'I'm as Innocent as I Was A Year Ago,' Asserts Frank

Just four months after the murder of Mary Phagan, Leo M. Frank stands convicted of the slaying of the 13-year-old girl in the National Pencil factory.

No recommendation for life imprisonment was made by the jurors, this circumstance making it imperative, according to the charge by Judge L. S. Roan, that a sentence of death by hanging be passed upon him.

Neither the prisoner, his relatives, friends nor any of his counsel appeared in the courtroom when the dread verdict was rendered. The sole representative of the defendant was Stiles Hopkins, a member of the firm of Rosser, Brandon, Slaton & Phillips, who was designated to be present and waive for Attorneys Rosser and Arnold the presence of the prisoner. A motion for a new trial will be made by Rosser and Arnold.

Populace Cheers Verdict.

The jurors were quick in arriving at their ballot. The case was given into their hands at 12:49. They went immediately to lunch and returned to the courthouse at 1:35. They proceeded to the election of Fred Winburn as foreman and entered upon an informal discussion of the merits of the case. It was apparent that the jurymen were practically of one mind. They cast their ballot. At 3:21 it was known that the verdict was "guilty." At 4:36 the result was announced in the courtroom.

To avoid any sort of a demonstration, the courtroom was cleared of all spectators when it became known that the jury was ready to render its verdict. Everyone was excluded except Solicitor Dorsey, Attorney Hooper and attaches of Dorsey's office, several other members of the bar and the newspaper men.

Hardly had Foreman Winburn read the words which branded the young factory superintendent a murderer before a mighty shout went up outside the building. The great crowds surging on all sides of the courthouse seemed to have had occult knowledge of the verdict at the very instant it was given utterance.

The news spread like magic. While the cheers still were rending the air, newsboys swooped down upon the courthouse and radiated in different directions from their offices, crying the extras on the verdict.

Frank was in the Tower with his young wife when the verdict was returned.

"My God! Even the jury was influenced by mob law," was the exclamation with which the accused man met the news of the verdict of guilty.

Frank would not talk at length to the newspaper men. His wife, who had shown the strain of the last hours of the trial throughout the day, collapsed in tears. Rabbi Marx and other friends of the family were at the jail when the fateful news came. They declared that nothing had developed since the beginning of the trial to shake their belief in Frank's entire innocence.

After the concluding words of the judge's charge Monday afternoon, the jury filed from the courtroom and several score of persons took advantage of the leniency of the court deputies to crowd inside the doors.

In a haze of smoke from innumerable cigars and cigarettes and from the explosion of flash-light powder, the motley roomful of spectators waited impatiently for some sign that the jurors were ready to return to the room. Any unexplained move on the part of Sheriff Mangum or one

"What made you reject that man?"

I asked an army sergeant on recruiting service, as a broad shouldered would-be soldier was turned away.

"Bad teeth!" replied the sergeant. You would be surprised to know that from six to eight per cent. of the recruits applying for enlistment in the U. S. Army within one year were rejected because of defective teeth alone. And that thirty-five per cent. of the catarrhal cases in the U. S. Army were directly traceable to diseased oral conditions."

Perfect cleanliness of the teeth is absolutely essential to Good Health. A pleasant, sure way to perfect cleanliness is the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, and the twice a year visit to your dentist.

'WE ONLY DID OUR DUTY,' SAYS MAN WHO HELPED CONVICT FRANK

Dorsey's Plea of Great Weight---Only Wondered at Prisoner's Statement

JUROR'S STORY OF HOW EVIDENCE WAS WEIGHED AND VERDICT REACHED

The Georgian to-day reveals some of the innermost secrets of the jury which convicted Leo M. Frank of the murder of little Mary Phagan. This inside story of the greatest criminal case in the South's history is an intensely interesting revelation of the workings of men's minds. It covers three long weeks and more throughout which the evidence for and against the pencil factory superintendent was tediously unfolded, link by link.

It casts upon the various points made by the defense and the prosecution the light in which they were viewed by the twelve men who were chosen to act as the judges. It ends with the last memorable meeting of these men on the top floor of the courthouse Monday afternoon which culminated in the fateful verdict: "We the jury find the defendant guilty."

The information is given herewith as it was obtained by a reporter for this newspaper from one of the jurors late Monday night while the full weight of his grim burden still rested upon him. It is told in his own, impressive words.

"It was the only thing we could do. The evidence was against Frank from start to finish. And so we did our duty, as we had sworn to do.

Dorsey's Youth and Sincerity Won.

"It would be hard to say what, of all the trial, made the greatest impression on the jury. It was probably the Solicitor General himself. He was a marvel. His youthful appearance, coupled with his sincerity, made a wonderful hit. There wasn't a minute of the hours that he spoke that he didn't seem to mean every word that he uttered.

"Dorsey is a forceful speaker. He puts emphasis behind his words. And he drives his points clear in and clinches them on the other side. They stuck with us. They had the evidence behind them to make them stick.

"His theory of the murder was the one we accepted. It was the one the evidence upheld. That was the way Frank killed that girl.

"While the negro watched downstairs, he took the little girl back into the metal room and struck her, and then with a cord strangled her to death. Then those notes were written as the negro told us and placed beside the body.

"In Dorsey's argument there was one little sentence which seemed to imbed itself in the minds of every man on the jury, when he was speaking of the agreement between Frank and Conley that the negro should come back to the factory and burn the body. The sentence was this: 'And if the smoke from that little girl's burning body had gone curling up into the air, old Jim Conley would have hanged for another man's crime.'

Hooper's Action Had Its Effect.

"Those words went a long way toward keeping Jim Conley from hanging, probably. They drew a contrast between right and wrong which made us look again into the evidence before us. And the narrow escape which the negro had made us shudder.

"There was another thing which impressed that jury. It was Frank Hooper's sacrifice ot Dorsey. We called it that. Hooper had the chance of his lifetime there to make a wonderful speech when he opened the State's argument. We were half expecting one. His reputation was known to us. And when he ended there was some disappointment. We said he had not done his best.

"Then we saw his sacrifice. He had only made a plain statement of the State's case and left for the Solicitor General whatever fame and fortune there was to be won by the State's counsel.

"The jury heard none of the cheering for Dorsey outside the courtroom at any time. We heard the crowds in the courtroom laugh at times, and we laughed, too, but that had no effect.

"Probably the hardest job we had was to sit there and face Frank's mother and his wife with the slowly growing feeling of the defendant's guilt. Some of the jurors cried when Frank's wife broke down following his speech. It was an impressive thing to us. Yet it didn't affect the evidence.

Frank's Speech Caused Wonder.

"The trouble with Frank's speech was the same as the trouble with the entire defense. The evidence declared to us that he was guilty and no words of his could disprove that fact. Everybody felt the weight his wonderful calm and dispassionate manner carried while he was talking. Yet the marvel was that a guilty man could do it. That was all.

"The defense made a wonderful fight with the evidence they had. Mr. Arnold was admired for his skillful work by every member of the jury. We saw every point that he brought out, and yet they all lacked weight.

"Probably nothing else in the whole case was of more interest to us than Luther Rosser's cross-examination of Conley. We thought it was a master's display of human ingenuity. Yet in the jury's mind it was like a skyrocket, soaring up into the heavens to cast its fountain of brilliance about and then die out. The negro's story remained as he had told it. That had a tremendous effect in the verdict.

"Then there was that cabbage. It was astonishing the amount of knowledge displayed by the members of the jury when the technicalities of medicine were brought out. We understood it all. The specimen of cabbage taken from the little Phagan girl's stomach was passed around amongst us in the jury room and we could easily see that it had not been digested.

"That also had its effect. There were men amongst us who luckily were well up on digestion. The experts said very little that we did not understand. But I will venture to say that few of the men of that jury will ever eat cabbage again.

Full Force of Duty Strikes Home.

"It is a terrific thing to be on a jury which holds a man's life in its hands. The weight seems heaviest during the early days of the trial. You are struck with the somber faces of your fellow jurymen first; then in the mirror you see that your own face is as somber as the rest, and the full force of the duty in front of you strikes home. You realize that before you become a free man again you shall have disposed of the life of a fellow man.

"Yet, strange to say, there wasn't one among us who tried to flinch from his full share of the work. Each seemed eager from the start to do what he had sworn to do, and the determination seemed to grow as the days passed. When we left the courtroom this afternoon with the judge's charge there wasn't a doubt in the mind of anyone of us that justice would be done. I think that thought, in a great measure, was the cause for our quick decision.

"Of course, we didn't dream that the case would last as long as it did. Some of us hadn't prepared for it. It meant a loss of a great deal of money to many of the men. Yet when this was brought up along in the second week, when no end was in sight, it took only one mention of the task before us to make all else look infinitesimally small. Jurydom is a sphere where money is not known.

First Week Was Longest of All.

"The first week of the trial was longer than all the rest put together. It was a bit difficult for us to get acquainted. We were all a little bit suspicious of each other. Outside of a few comments on immaterialities, practically nothing was said about the case. We didn't care to talk about it, even to our roommates.

"Then somebody brought in a checker board and someone else a deck of cards. The social life in jury quarters blossomed out in full blast.

"It was a most welcome diversion, too. We had little enough exercise as it was and there was nothing left but to brood on the case.

"And by the middle of the second week there wasn't a more sociable and jolly set of men this side of heaven, I don't believe. There were checker matches and setback tournaments and a great rivalry for the championships. I don't believe that there was an amateur among the bunch which went into that jury who didn't come out an expert. With nothing else to do much at night one can learn a great deal about cards and checkers in three weeks.

"There was no gambling. And each Sunday we read from the Bible and sang religious songs. In fact, we held regular services every Sabbath day. It didn't matter what churches we belonged to, each was as fervent as the other. While in Rome we did as the Romans do. Seriously, though, I think that the proposition we were up against in judging of a man's life had a good deal to do with that fervor.

Same Word On Each Jury Slip.

"As for the judgment we passed, there is little to say. As weighty as the task may seem, it was simple. There was but one ballot and on the twelve slips which were handed into Foreman Winburn the single word 'guilty' was written. Yet, no one seemed surprised. There was a unanimity of feeling amongst us.

"Don't think that we had not considered the case fully. And don't think that there was a man amongst us that wanted to do what we did. Yet, day after day, the pressure grew heavier, as the case was put before us. From a slight dread it became an oppression; then a nausea and at last a sickening sense of the grim fact—that Frank was guilty and we were going to give the world that verdict.

"It was horrible—that time we spent in deliberation. Everyone knew what was going to be done, though hardly a word was spoken, until we had agreed. We were spellbound with dread. Then someone suggested a drink. That enlivened us and we began to breathe again.

"You ask what brought us to our verdict so readily? I have told you. It was the only thing that could be done, and we knew it, even as we ascended the stairs to the juryroom this afternoon. No argument was needed."

Trial a Farce, Say Attorneys

L. Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, counsel for Leo Frank, issued the following statement this morning:

"We deem it not amiss to make a short statement, as the attorneys of Leo M. Frank, to the public.

"The trial which has just occurred, and which has resulted in Mr. Frank's conviction, was a farce and not in any way a trial. In saying this, we do not make the least criticism of Judge Roan who presided. Judge Roan is one of the best men in Georgia, and is an able and conscientious judge.

"The temper of the public mind was such that it invaded the courtroom ad peryaded the streets and made itself manifest at every turn the jury made; and it was just as impossible for this jury to escape the effects of this public feeling as if they had been turned loose and had been permitted to mingle with the people.

"In doing this we are making no criticism of the jury. They were only men, and unconsciously this prejudice rendered any other verdict impossible.

"It would have required a jury of stoics, a jury of Spartans, to have withstood this situation.

"The time ought to come when this man will get a fair trial, and we profoundly believe that it will.

"The final judgment of the American people is a fair one. It is sometimes delayed in coming, but it comes.

"We entered into this case with the profound conviction of Mr. Frank's innocence. The result has not changed our opinion. Every step of the trial has intensified and fortified our profound conviction of his innocence.

"R. R. ARNOLD."

Pierce Loses Pinkerton Job By Actions in Phagan Case

As a result of the charges made by the police of unfair dealings by the Pinkerton operatives in the investigation of the Phagan case, H. B. Pierce, superintendent of the agency in Atlanta, tendered his resignation. It was promptly accepted by A. L. Corwardin, general superintendent, of New Orleans, who arrived in the city Monday.

Insubordination to the agency's rule demanding the co-operation of its operatives with the local police in criminal investigations was charged against the superintendent.

The specific charge which brought about the removal of Pierce grew out of the finding of the blood-stained stick on the first floor of the pencil factory by Pinkerton operatives. It was claimed by the police that the stick was withheld from them by Pierce, to whom it was turned in by the finders, and the butt of a buggy whip substituted. The stick itself was turned over to the defense.

"This action by Mr. Pierce was in direct opposition to the rules of the Pinkerton Agency," said Mr. Corwardin. "Our charter to operate in Atlanta carries the agreement that our men withhold nothing from the city police which they may secure in investigations of criminal cases.

"Explicit orders demanding that this agreement be carried through to the letter have been in effect in the Atlanta office since the agency was started here, and when Mr. Pierce disobeyed them, there was but one thing left to do."

While no intimation was given by General Superintendent Corwardin as to who would be Pierce's successor, it is generally reported that Harry Scott would be appointed to fill the position. The report is founded on the withdrawal of Scott's appointment to the superintendency of the Houston, Texas, office, which was made shortly before the charges against Pierce were made publi. This promotion of Scott was made as a result of his work in the Phagan case investigation, in which he was the field marshal for the Pinkertons.

Mr. Corwardin admitted that Scott would stay in Atlanta.

Took Car for Try-out And Did Not Return

CORDELE, Aug. 26.—The theft of a big touring car in broad daylight is the latest sensation in Cordele. The automobile belongs to Frank Teuber. The stranger who attempted to get away with it is not known here. He told Mr. Teuber he was going to start an automobile hack line, claiming to have had two machines already. He took the car for a try-out, which extended to Tifton, when the machine got out of order and he put it in a garage there. He has not been heard of since.

Senator's Kin Killed In Row Over Saddle

RENO, NEV., Aug. 26.—William Billings, son-in-law of former Senator Plum, of Kansas, was killed on a ranch 100 miles north of Elko, Nev., by Frank Huber. Huber was arrested.

Billings took a saddle from Huber's stable, saying it was as security for a debt.

Cordele Cotton Men Fight Tax Ordinance

CORDELE, Aug. 26.—If the threats of local cotton buyers are carried out, Cordele will practically be without a cotton market for an entire week or more.

The buyers are angered at the City Council over the passage of an ordinance making their annual license $25 and the license on transient buyers at $1 per day. On the grounds that the officials had discriminated and that the license of local and transient buyers should be the same, the local cotton men requested the Council to reconsider its action, which was refused.

CAMINETTI SEES JURY PICKED TO TRY HIM

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—F. Drew Caminetti, son of Anthony Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration, surrounded by four lawyers and comforted by his brother, Anthony Caminetti, Jr., an attorney of Sacramento, watched the preliminary steps of his trial as a white slaver before Federal Judge VanFleet to-day.

His wife and mother did not appear with Caminetti to-day. The elder Mrs. Caminetti has been ill since the conviction of Maury I. Diggs on the same charge for the elopement to Reno of Caminetti, Diggs, Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

Diggs, who will be sentenced on September 2, was not in court to-day to watch the selection of a jury from the 50 men of the regular jury panel.

It was expected by Special Prosecutor Theodore Roche and his assistant, Matt Sullivan, said that the jury would be completed by to-morrow evening.

Interest in the Caminetti case apparently exceeds that shown in the case of Diggs. A large crowd of spectators was turned away from the courtroom doors to-day. Preparations were made by the marshal's office to cope with the enormous crowds when Miss Warrington and Miss Norris take the stand.

Rides 500 Miles to Buy Col. Cody's Pet Horse as Gift to Him

DENVER, Aug. 26.—Friends of Buffalo Bill outbid each other at the auction sale of the Wild West show property, when "Isham," the famous white horse ridden by Colonel Cody at every performance for 25 years, was offered by the auctioneer.

The bidding was spirited and every man was actuated by one sentiment—presenting the faithful animal to the veteran plainsman.

Col. J. C. Bills, of Lincoln, Neb., rode 500 miles in an auto to be present. He started the bidding.

There was general rejoicing when the animal was knocked down to Colonel Bills, who declare he would present the animal to "its rightful owner, Colonel Cody."

The Kaiser Becomes A Total Abstainer

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—The Kaiser has laid his embargo on beer. His favorite drink now is lemonade, with a dash of orange juice, but does not force this beverage upon his guests. The usual wines are served.

The Kaiser, it is said, did not use any alcoholic beverage while on his Northern cruise and became convinced that being a teetotaller gives to him more energy. He believes immoderate drinking is one of the greatest factors in retarding the development of nations.

DIES AS HE PRAYS.

DANVILLE, ILL., Aug. 26.—Anton Schingel, aged 67, died in St. Joseph's Catholic Church while kneeling in prayer.

CONTESTANTS IN WANT AD RACE NAMED SOON

Well, now that Atlanta has settled back to business, what's the matter with your entering the Want Ad Contest and winning an automobile, or maybe a trip to California and back for you and your wife? Or why not enter your church, your lodge, your club; get all the members interested, form a committee, get busy and win $1,000 in gold?

Somebody's going to win these prizes. Somebody's going to be driving a five-passenger automobile this fall and bragging about how they got it. Some organization is going to have $1,000 to build an addition with or to put in the treasury, and it might as well be yours.

Lots of Them In.

Several churches, two or three secret orders and several other organizations already have entered, named their committees and begun solicitation among their friends. Quite a bunch of individual workers are in the game, too, and they range all the way from grown-ups to children about knee high. The names of contestants will be published in the near future. There are prizes for everybody, every contestant has a chance, and the contest is still just at its beginning, so there's a good opportunity for you to get in and win out.

FRANK EMOTIONLESS AS HE HEARS SENTENCE TO GALLOWS

'I Am Innocent; My Case Is in My Lawyers' Hands,' He Tells Judge Roan

I HAVE DONE MY DUTY, ASSERTS JUDGE ROAN

"I May Have Erred, but My Conscience Is Clear," He Tells Condemned Man.

of his deputies was the signal for a little flurry and the rumor that a verdict had been reached.

Frank's Presence Waived.

Several newspaper men sat on the sixth floor of the uncompleted new courthouse and calmly watched the proceedings of the jurymen on the fourth floor of the old building. The election of Winburn as foreman was noted, as well as other details incident to the deliberations. Finally it became known that a verdict had been reached. This was an hour before the jurors came downstairs. Judge Roan was sent for. An effort was made to get Solicitor Dorsey, but he could not be reached at once.

Assistant Solicitor E. A. Stephens and Frank Hooper, Dorsey's associate in the case, entered the courtroom and immediately were closeted in conference with Judge Roan. The discussion was in regard to the waiving of the prisoner's presence in the courtroom.

The two attorneys did not wish to speak definitely for the Solicitor on the matter, but neither could see any objection to this procedure if the waiving was formal" made by a representative of Rosser's firm. A little later the spectators were disappointed by the order to clear the courtroom. Dorsey entered just as this order was given. Within five minutes the jury was in the courtroom and the verdict had been returned.

Lanford Says He Is Vindicated.

Though he has been convicted of the most terrible crime in the history of the South, the friends who have stood steadfastly by Leo Frank during the four long months since Mary Phagan's body was found have not deserted him. They still persist that he is innocent and declare that time will uncover the guilty person and give the young factory superintendent his freedom.

Rabbi David Marx, one of Frank's staunchest supporters, who has been with the convicted superintendent almost constantly since he was first arrested on suspicion of being connected with the crime, was one of the most surprised men in Atlanta when the verdict was returned. He had confidently expected an acquittal, but even with the sentence of death hanging over Frank's head, the devotion with which Rabbi Marx has stood by Frank—which has been the admiration even of those who believed Frank guilty—does not falter.

Rabbi Marx Astounded.

Dr. Marx was with Frank when the latter was notified of the verdict, and he suffered almost as heavily as the convicted man.

"I am stunned and surprised," Dr. Marx said. "I can not believe it. I know Leo Frank is innocent—I know he is incapable of such a crime. My faith in him has not been shaken by the verdict of the jury. I ask that the public suspend final judgment until an appeal for a new trial is made."

Shortly after Frank had been notified of the verdict Dr. Marx left the jail for a conference with Frank's attorneys. He returned later to lend what comfort he could to the prisoner, and remained with him in his cell until a late hour.

Fair Trial, Says Lanford.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, head of the department which aided in securing the evidence that convicted Frank, has issued a statement declaring that the trial of the factory superintendent was the fairest he had ever seen.

"I have never figured in a case where the prisoner was given more privileges and liberties than Frank has received," Chief Lanford declared. "A body of twelve men in high standing in the community have found him guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan, and, in my opinion, the verdict was a just one. I think nearly everyone who is familiar with the case believes him guilty.

"It is very gratifying to the members of my department that the jury, after careful deliberation, found Frank guilty. I am not surprised at the verdict, however, nor are any of the detectives who have worked on the case.

"We have worked very hard since little Mary Phagan was murdered and have tried to get at the truth regarding the terrible crime. We have been severely condemned by a few persons, most of whom are unfamiliar with the case and with police methods of obtaining evidence, but the verdict of the jury is a complete vindication of our department. We feel that we have received the greatest reward possible—the conviction of the man responsible for the death of Mary Phagan."

The interest in the residence sections of the city was fully as great as downtown when the verdict came in Monday. Officials of the Southern Bell Telephone Company have made the statement that never in the history of the company have the city telephones been in such universal use as Monday afternoon. Three times as many calls were registered between 3 and 6 o'clock, when the excitement was at its greatest height, as have ever been registered before during an entire day. A special corps of operators was on duty at the exchanges, but they were swamped with the volume of the calls and were unable to attend to more than half of them.

"Old Newt" Lee Is Released From Tower.

Old Newt Lee, as he was referred to by both sides in the Frank trial, the negro night watchman at the National Pencil Factory, who discovered the body of Mary Phagan, was released Tuesday from the Fulton Tower just four months to a day after his fateful find.

The order for his release was signed by Judge Roan and taken to the jail by his attorneys, Graham and Chapelle. Graham left with the negro for the police station, where he got a knife and some other personal effects taken from him at the time of his arrest.

Lee was spruce and as cheerful as a darky in watermelon time as he said goodby to the Tower. He was rigged up in a new outfit and looked more prosperous than he probably ever has in his life.

"He came here in rags, but he is leaving with quite a bunch of luggage," said one of the deputies.

The negro said he had had a home home before the trabedy, but had lost it since.

"All I know is I'm going to look for work, boss," he said. "I sure got to work to live. I feel weak, just in my body, boss. I feel alright in the head, because I never did have nothing to do with that murder and now they all knows it."

Lee had been in jail since shortly after 3 o'clock April 27, when police, responding to his telephone call, found the strangled Mary Phagan in the grimy basement. For a time his indictment seemed certain, but by the time the case reached the Grand Jury the State had centered its prosecution on Frank and no action was taken against the negro. The petition freeing him was made on the formal plea of Solicitor Dorsey.

Hooper Praises Dorsey's Work.

"In all my experience I have never seen a case more thoroughly gotten up than the State's case against Leo M. Frank, as prepared by Solicitor Dorsey. It was complete throughout; there was not an angle but which was investigated to the fullest possible extent."

Thus spoke Attorney Frank Hooper while awaiting the verdict of the jury.

"Dorsey's sincerity in the prosecution and the thoroughness with which he entered into the detail of each part of his work was such as to arouse the admiration of anyone. He had the case at his finger tips; his knowledge of each phase of the case was complete. His argument was one of the most masterful I have ever heard. I do not think it could have been possible for a case to have been handled in a better manner."

RESINOL SOAP PROTECTS YOUR COMPLEXION

A complexion protected by the regular use of Resinol Soap is almost always a complexion to be proud of—free from pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, and glowing with natural health and beauty. This is because Resinol Soap is an extremely pure toilet soap, without trace of injurious alkali, and containing the soothing, healing medication which has made Resinol Ointment a standard prescription for skin troubles for the past eighteen years.

Resinol Soap is delightful to use, its odor is wholesome and refreshing, and its distinctive rich brown color is due entirely to the Resinol balsams and not to artificial coloring. For baby's delicate skin it is ideal, tending to prevent chafing, irritation and the eruptions so common in infancy. Sold by all druggists. Trial free; Dept. 8-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

FRANK AND HIS WIFE HEAR JURY'S VERDICT

Frank received the news with fortitude and appeared to be more concerned about his wife than himself.

The verdict of the jury was announced to Frank and his wife by Rabbi Marx and Dr. Rosenberg.

Atlanta Merchant Is Seriously Ill in Hospital in France

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—George E. King, of Atlanta, is seriously ill from a complication of diseases at the American Hospital at Neuilly. He arrived Wednesday from Venice, where he was ill three weeks.

His wife, three daughters and a son-in-law are with him and other relatives have been cabled for.

Mr. King is president of the King Hardware Company. He left Atlanta for Europe on May 29. His friends said Tuesday that though they understood his health was poor when he left, they had received no notice that his illness had taken a serious turn. Manager Davis, of the Hardware Company, said the firm had received no notice of Mr. King's illness.

A RUSH OF BUYERS TO SECURE PIANOS AT WESTER'S BIG SALE

The Most Sensational Happenings in the History of Piano Selling in the South — Buyers From Far and Near Are Early on the Ground to Secure the Great Bargains Offered.

NOT AN ORDINARY SPECIAL SALE

But a Positive Selling Off of Wester Music Company's Entire Stock Between 350 and 400 Pianos, Including Best Makes. A. B. Chase, Ivers & Pond, Kurtzmann, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Bros., Kranich & Bach, Bush & Gerts, Vose & Sons.

BUY NOW; SAVE FROM $100 TO $250

Many Pianos Staged to Close Out at Less Than Half Former Prices, Others at Nearly Normal Prices. Your Opportunity to Secure a Fine Piano at a Big Saving on Easy Payments. Open Evenings. 64 Peachtree and 157 Cotton Avenue.

TERMS SO EASY ALL CAN BUY

If a history of piano selling in Atlanta should ever be written, this wonderful sale of ours would be entitled to at least a chapter.

The first day of this sale was a revelation to us. We were confident that the shrewd buyers would be quick to take advantage of these great offerings in good pianos, but we were not quite prepared for the rush of buyers that came. A rush so great in fact that it amounted to almost an overflow, and many are the expressions of gratifications we hear from the different purchasers, each satisfied with his or her selection; pleased with the price and astonished at the liberal terms extended, whether it was a fine high-grade grand or a beautiful player, also in many cases an upright, new and second-hand, each was happy and satisfied.

Of course, the wise buyers realize that an opportunity like this may never occur again. You know we simply must move our entire stock in the next few days on account of making room for our fall shipments now en route, and we realize to sell so many pianos in such a short time no cost, no profit could be considered. This will be Atlanta's greatest piano bargain event in years, and we want our friends, and the friends of our friends and every one needing a piano, to get the benefit of the big reductions we are making in order to close out this stock quickly.

We want these pianos in the homes of the people rather than in the storage house, and to make sure that this will be accomplished we have marked every instrument at prices so low your good judgment will tell you to buy.

SAMPLES OF YESTERDAY'S SALE

We sold yesterday three of those fine, durable uprights that usually sell at $250, $265 and $275, two went at $112, and the other at $127. They were special bargains, and new.

FOUR BEAUTIFUL MAHOGANY UPRIGHTS

Went at $143, $167 and $188, each price varying according to style and finish of case. The former prices were $285, $300 to $350; the terms were $10 cash and $6 and $7 monthly.

Then we sold four very handsome high-grade uprights, two in mahogany, one in dark oak and the other in French walnut. The regular price of these instruments were $375, $400 to $425. They went at $196, $218 and $243, on terms of $10 to $20 cash and $7 and $8 per month.

THREE HIGH-GRADE UPRIGHTS

That have never been sold in this city for less than $450, $500 and $550, according to design of case, were closed out yesterday at $256, $287 and $327, on terms of $20 cash and $8 and $10 per month. Think of it! Is it not a grand opportunity to get that piano you have been wishing for?

THREE PLAYERS, TWO GRANDS.

WILSON DELAYS MESSAGE; LIND QUITS MEXICO

President Requested by Huerta's Aide to Postpone Address to Congress Till Wednesday.

presidency at the fall elections. He will not announce himself as a candidate, but his agents will work for him surreptitiously and thereby obtain his election ostensibly against his own will.

Bacon Sees Hope.

Another report is to the effect that Huerta now intends to accept the American proposals, knowing that the Carranza faction will refuse the armistice stipulation and also the proposal binding it to accept the result of the fall elections. He expects to pave the way for the United States to recognize him as the only government in Mexico that has met the United States on a friendly basis.

"It looks more hopeful for an agreement between this country and the Huerta administration," was the comment of Senator Bacon, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Bacon said that he had been informed by the White House that the President had received messages from Mexican Foreign Minister Gamboa and Governor Lind that a further conference would be held and that possibly some basis of an agreement might be reached.

Lind Leaves Capital To Sail for Home.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 26.—Special Envoy John Lind, sent here by President Wilson on a mission of pacification to President Huerta, left the capital at 7 o'clock this morning for Vera Cruz.

Mr. Lind probably will sail for the United States upon a warship on his arrival at Vera Cruz, unless his departure is delayed by the State Department.

President Huerta had offered Mr. and Mrs. Lind the use of his private coach to make the trip across to Vera Cruz, and Mr. Lind had accepted, but this morning the private car was not at the station. Consequently the Lind party had to travel upon an ordinary day coach, as the Vera Cruz train did not carry any Pullmans.

Charge D'Affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy, of the United States Embassy, was at the station to bid Mr. and Mrs. Lind good-bye, but there were no representatives of the Mexican Government on hand. This was regarded as significant, but not nearly so much so as the absence of the presidential private car, after it had been offered for the use of the special envoy and his wife.

Called Direct Affront.

Americans looked upon this as a direct affront. The news that President Wilson had postponed until Wednesday the delivery of his message on Mexican affairs to Congress was received with satisfaction by the Embassy. It had been expected that any utterance from President Wilson construed here as hostile to Mexico might give rise here to an anti-American demonstration.

Belief was expressed that President Huerta asked for a postponement of the delivery of the Wilson message until Mr. and Mrs. Lind are safe on board a United States warship at Vera Cruz, that there could be no possible attempt at assassination. There was a rumor current among diplomatic circles here that the United States and Mexico may sever all relations within 48 hours, unless the tone of the Wilson message is milder than it is expected to be.

Charge D'Affaires O'Shaughnessy and Foreign Minister Gamboa insist, however, that there is still a chance for both governments to get together in amity. This same belief is not generally shared.

President Huerta is said to be adamant in his determination not to accept any proposals whatsoever from the United States, unless he is recognized as the constitutional executive of the Republic. His friends declare that he will not entertain for a minute the suggestion that he resign.

It is accepted here as true that both Mr. Lind and William Bayard Hale, the special investigator sent here by Secretary of State Bryan, have forwarded "inside" information to Washington regarding the possibility of an early coup on the part of Huerta and his immediate associates in the Government oligarchy.

Floats Loan in England.

Mr. Lind was asked immediately prior to his departure whether there was a chance to patch up diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States, but to this he replied:

"I can not talk of the situation now. I can not comment even indirectly. Anything I might say might rebound."

"Mexico is not so badly off financially as the outside world thinks," said he. "This Government has just concluded arrangements to secure a loan of $20,000,000 from a group of

Harrison as Governor of the Philippines an Unfit Appointment

We have waited several days to see if any valid reason or explanation could be given for President Wilson's appointment of Francis Burton Harrison to be Governor-General of the Philippines.

No other foreign post under the government calls for higher qualities of character and capacity, executive skill and experience than that of Governor of eight million Filipinos.

What are these simple, saddle-colored souls to think and say when we offer Mr. Harrison as the American Exhibit A? Where there should be force we give them weakness. Where there should be courage we give them timidity. Where there should be intelligence we give them mediocrity. Where there should be independence we give them a hand-picked product of the Tammany machine. Where there should be a man of iniative and sagacity we give them a merest messenger boy of money.

Who and what is Mr. Harrison? Born in New York, he grew up to ask and obtain admission to the bar. More familiar with drawing rooms than courthouses, he has been eminently the sort of lawyer of whom, when they fall ill or leave town, the papers chronicle the interruption to their social engagements without saying anything about their practice.

Tammany usually sends to Congress either obedient dummies or very rich men. Mr. Harrison has been both.

A young lawyer, without many clients, but excellent cotillion qualities and fine Virginia family, he married the California heiress, Miss Crocker, who dowered him with great wealth. He became a generous campaign contributor.

Tammany loves gold and sent him to Congress. By mere lapse of time he has become second to Underwood in seniority on the Ways and Means Committee. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, the President's friend, is third. There is talk of sending Underwood to the Senate, which would make Harrison next in line for the leadership of the House. Is President Wilson sending him to the Philippines to save the House or to remove one obstacle in Mitchell Palmer's path? This would explain the appointment. It would be altogether laughable if it were not altogether lamentable.

President Wilson is supposed not to like Boss Murphy and Tammany Hall. His Philippine preference for Mr. Harrison in no wise supports this assumption. Since he took oath as a Representative, Mr. Harrison has been docile to the Murphy order—tame to the Murphy touch.

When in 1909 the House was in rebellion against the tyranny of Speaker Cannon, Boss Murphy—for a consideration—came to the rescue of that threatened despot. Boss Murphy "ordered" Mr. Harrison to desert the Democrats and run to the aid and comfort of the common enemy. Mr. Harrison ran. Thus do bosses vote their dummies in aid of the criminal Standard Oil or Sugar or Tobacco. Not poltics, but bib business, rules when criminal privilege is to be saved.

Mr. Harrison was eagerly willing. He turned traitor at a Murphy nod, and, abandoning his post as a doorkeeper in the House of the Lord, raced across to the tents of the ungodly.

Mr. Harrison's vote against Democratic principles was and is the only act to lift its head above the dead and desert level of his House career.

If one except his being barred from the White House by the particular Mr. Taft, that Cannon vote constitutes Mr. Harrison's entire Congressional record.

What powers, working through Mr. Wilson, have secured this senseless promotion of Mr. Harrison? No question in a decade has so wrung the withers of political Washington. The public wasn't clamoring for it. No Philippine interest asked it. Why, then, was so much weakness required at the head of Filipino affairs.

True, the Philippines are a sugar preserve, just as they're a favorite hunting ground of tobacco. Also, the robbers, for obvious causes, prefer the Polled Angus breed of governor. Was it a tobacco hint or a sugar hunch that has so boosted Mr. Harrison?

As against this come others who declare that the bug beneath the chip of the Harrison appointment is a bug, not of tariff, but of social hue. They whisper of blue room, red room reasons, and inform one that, having in view the gentleman's feelings, Mr. Harrison is sent to Manila only to get him out of Washington.

To put an end to this conflict of harrowing surmise, Mr. Wilson should take mankind into his confidence and give in full his Filipino reasons for the Harrison hopes within him. A White House silence at this crisis would be unfair to sugar, tobacco, the railroads, the Filipinos, Mr. Underwood, Mr. Palmer, Mr. Harrison and society—to say nothing of the public at large.

Militants Disregard Pankhurst's Truce

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Disregarding the plea of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst for a recess in the campaign of violence long waged by the Women's Social and Political Union, militant suffragettes continued their depredations to-day.

Members of the arson squad burned a $20,000 mansion at Finchley, a northern suburb of London, leaving placards about the ruins, eliminating doubt as to the identity of the perpetrators.

Kinemacolor Films.

Nature, in colors true to life, is being portrayed in the famous Kinemacolor pictures at the Grand this week. Scenes from all over the globe are shown. In addition to the Kinemacolor pictures, first run Biograph, Lubin, Vitagraph, Pathe, Selig and other first-class films are shown, the program changing every other day. There was a good crowd in attendance Monday night, and all expressed wonder at the truth to nature of the Kinemacolors. They will be shown at the Grand for an indefinite time.

Ohio Cities Granted Home Rule Right

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 26.—The city of Cleveland won a complete victory in its charter fight to-day when the Supreme Court decided that the home rule provision of the constitution gives cities the right to have non-partisan nominations and non-partisan elections.

This was an affirmation of the lower court's decision in the case. Justices Wanamaker, Johnson and Wilkins voted in the affirmative.

The decision affects all cities of the State that have adopted a new charter.

THAW SILENCED ON ADVICE OF JEROME

Prisoner Rages as Old Foe Enters Fight to Return Him to Matteawan Asylum.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 26. Upon the advice of William T. Jerome, former District Attorney of New York, who is here in a special capacity representing the State of New York, orders were issued this afternoon to H. Laforce, Governor of the St Francis jail, to hold Thaw incommunicado.

Only a few designated lawyers and alienists may see Thaw, but the newspaper reporters may send notes to him. Thaw raged at this order and made a bitter verbal attack against Jerome, who prosecuted the fugitive for the murder of Stanford White.

Mr. Jerome did not take Thaw's attack seriously, but plunged into his preparations for the part he will take in the fight which will be launched when arguments are heard to-morrow morning before Judge Globensky in Superior Court on Thaw's petition for liberty on a writ of habeas corpus.

"I am not worrying over Thaw's threat to test the constitutionality of the immigration laws and attack the United States treaty governing aliens and deportation," said Mr. Jerome. "Speed and economy are the watchwords of the Canadian courts. They deal out justice that is not impeded and tangled with technicalities and complications.

"Former Governor William Stone is a mighty poor weather prophet if he predicted that Thaw would be on Canadian soil when the new snow flies. I never heard of it snowing in August before. Thaw will be dumped over the border and seized in Vermont or New Hampshire without delay. Extradition into New York will be speedy."

Thaw's interview attacking Mr. Jerome was given under the same circumstances as that yesterday on his sanity. He insisted on writing all the questions and answers and would brook no interference from the reporter.

Society Women in Court Against Thief

ROME, Aug. 26.—So crowded was the Police Court Monday with fashionably dressed women to witness the trial of Rose Miller a negro woman, that Mayor B. C. Yancey remarked: "This is more like a 5 o'clock tea than a police court."

Rose was charged with being a kleptomanic and stealing potted plants. The police have been after the flower thief for more than a year. The evidence was insufficient to bind the woman over, but other warrants were sworn out for her.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 26.—Grief stricken because he had been discharged for drinking, Rufus Alexander, one of the oldest engineers on the Louisville and Nashville, committed suicide to-day.

Thaw, if Freed, to Visit Mr. Chaloner

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 26.—Harry Thaw was in better humor to-day. He telegraphed a reply to John Armstrong Chaloner, of Virginia, a fugitive from New York, who once was pronounced insane by the New York courts.

Thaw said he would visit Chaloner if he got his release.

Chaloner is the author of the celebrated query, "Who's looney now?" this being the question he telegraphed to his relative, Robert Chanler, after the latter lost the bulk of his fortune to his fascinating wife, Lina Cavalieri, the singer.

$5 Auto Fee Will Not Be Charged on Cars Bought This Year

Georgians who intend to purchase automobiles next Christmas need have no fear over the prospect of being compelled to pay an additional fee of $5 for the year 1913.

That was the "official" decision of Secretary of State Phil Cook, handed down "unofficially" Tuesday morning. Mr. Cook, in other words, declared emphatically he was going to use his discretion in regard to the new law that requires the payment of a $5 fee for each year in which the automobile is operated.

L. J. Cooper, Representative from Waco, has the honor of being the first applicant for one of the new licenses. He applied Monday, but was turned down on the grounds that he was just four months ahead of time.

VERY PAINFUL ECZEMA ON HANDS

So Sore Could Hardly Put Them in Water. Pimples on Arms Itched and Burned Badly. Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

Bienville, La.—"I was troubled with eczema in my hands for several years. The skin would break and look like it had been cut with a knife and my hands were so sore I could hardly bear to put them in water and could hardly use them. When I used them the blood would run out. They would heal a little and then they would get worse than ever again. They were very painful. The eczema got to breaking out on my arms in pimples which itched and burned very badly.

"I used different remedies, also used all kinds of facial creams and ——— on my hands and arms and I did not get any relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I cured my hands and eczema with Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Fannie Mostiller, Oct. 5, 1912.

Price Vindicates Accused Oil Tester

Commissioner J. D. Price, of the Georgia Department of Agriculture, returned Tuesday morning from Sandersville, Ga., where he went to investigate charges against a State oil inspector. He said he had decided to retain the inspector.

The Commissioner took a look at crops in Washington County. Cotton, he said, although three weeks late, is looking fine, with the possibilities of a big yield.

Wife Shot to Death Kissing Her Husband

EDMONDTON, ALBERTA, Aug. 26. E. W. Cox, well known here, accidentally killed his wife as he leaned forward to kiss her.

Cox was cleaning an automatic revolver when his wife came in. The husband, still clutching the revolver, put his arm around his wife's neck and the revolver was discharged.

Battles With Man He Finds With Wife

FORSYTH, Aug. 26.—Returning home unexpectedly last night, Will Ellis found John Chokas, a Greek restaurant proprietor, in the room with his wife. Procuring a pistol, he opened fire at Chokas and the latter returned the fire, but in the melee nobody was shot. Chokas was arrested and lodged in the Monroe County jail.

JONES WILL BAR POLITICS FROM POSTOFFICE

McKee's Successor Asserts Strict Business Basis Will Rule—Efficient Employees to Remain.

Declaring that there will be no politics in the postoffice when he takes charge, Boiling H. Jones, who was nominated Monday to the Atlanta postmastership by President Wilson, Tuesday indicated the principles which he will apply to the department. The appointment of Mr. Jones probably will be confirmed by the Senate early this week.

Following this confirmation the official commission of office will be forwarded to the new postmaster, who immediately will assume his duties, supplanting Hugh McKee.

Mr. Jones declared Tuesday that he would run the office on a strict business basis; that he would not displace officials who measure up to the requirements of the office where those officials are protected by civil service, and that he would see to it that politics plays no part in the department. Mr. Jones expressed great faith in the civil service and said he would adhere to it wherever he could do so.

Pending the receipt of Mr. Jones' commission Mr. McKee will retain office. Mr. McKee declared Tuesday that he would not resign until the charges against him have been withdrawn. However, when Mr. Jones arrives on the scene to take charge, he will relinquish the office to him.

Mr. Jones is a native of Virginia and one of Atlanta's most enthusiastic boosters and successful business men. At present he is vice president of the Fulton National Bank, a director of the Continental Trust Company, a director of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, a director of the Atlanta Freight Bureau and secretary and treasurer of the Atlanta Stove Works, of which his brother, Sam D. Jones, is president. He also is an active and enthusiastic member of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Barnesville Names New City Officials

BARNESVILLE, Aug. 26.—In a spirited primary election on Monday James N. Cochran won for Mayor over A. H. S. Franklin by a majority of 116. T. J. Berry, J. E. Bush and W. T. Summers won by safe majorities as Aldermen, defeating W. C. Stokes, M. S. Fitts, M. Burns and B. H. Butts.

The new officers will be installed on September 8. The hold-over Aldermen are A. L. Mills, B. F. Reeves and B. M. Turner.

T. J. Ogletree, Emmett Langford, L. C. Tyus, Pierce Hammond and Z. T. Maxwell were elected as the new City Executive Committee.

White Farmers Are Wanted in Alabama

COLUMBUS, Aug. 26.—J. O. Thompson, of Birmingham, Ala., owner of several thousand acres of farm lands in Russell and Barbour Counties, in Alabama, is making an effort to bring white farmers to the section and sell them lands upon which they will make their future homes.

The section in which the lands are located is said to be as rich as any that can be found in the South, and there already have been a large number of farmers from other States to look over the situation, and they have been delighted with the prospects.

LATEST NEWS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Under the apportionment of $50,000,000 of treasury funds for moving crops, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to-day offered Alabama $1,500,000. This amount will be divided among the cities of Birmingham and Montgomery.

Spirited away early Tuesday morning from Griffin, Ga., where feeling is running high over an attempted assault on a 12-year-old girl, William T. Thomas, aged 68 years, was brought to Atlanta late Tuesday afternoon and lodged in the county jail by Sheriff Hudson, of Spaulding County. Threats of lynching spurred the officers to make all possible haste in reaching Atlanta. According to the Sheriff, Thomas, who is a shoemaker by trade, is charged with late Monday afternoon enticing the 12-year-old daughter of Ben Johnson, his next door neighbor, over to his house. The little girl got away from the old man and told the neighbors. The parents of the little girl were away from home. Prompt work of the Sheriff and his deputies saved the old man from violence, as feeling ran high in the town as soon as the news spread. Sheriff Hudson stood guard himself Monday night and early Tuesday morning slipped out of Griffin for Atlanta with Thomas.

Sullivan, of Boston, who started from the English side to swim the English Channel, and Jabez Wolfe, who tried to cross from the French side, failed in their efforts to-day. Sullivan was in the water ten hours when he was forced to give up. Wolfe had covered 24 miles when he was picked up exhausted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Secretary of Treasury McAdoo late to-day announced the apportionment of $50,000,000 loan to banks in the West, South and Pacific coast States to facilitate the moving and marketing of crops. Georgia gets $1,700,000,000, with Atlanta, Savannah, Augusta and Macon depositories.

WOMEN MAKING LAST STAND TO SAVE BIRDS

Give All Support Possible to Restore Tariff Clause Stopping Plumage Imports.

With sentiment developing rapidly in the United States Senate in favor of restoring to the tariff bill the Underwood clause prohibiting the importation of the plumage of wild birds for commercial purposes, the women's organizations of Georgia, in common with the rest of the country, which have fostered and encouraged the movement for the "conservation of the birds," have started on the final step of their campaign.

The McLean amendment, designed to restore the bird clause, was debated in the Senate last Saturday, with little opposition developing.

Senators Simmons of the Finance Committee, announced that at the proper time the committee would ask that section 357 be recommitted to his committee, which is regarded as significant of a more friendly feeling.

Georgia Women Most Active.

Organized and started in the Northern States, the movement for the conservation of birds has spread throughout the country. In the South the brunt of the work has been borne by the women's organizations of Georgia.

Among the Georgia women who have worked hard for the restoration of the bird clause are: Miss Nina Hornady, president of the Georgia branch, Daughters of 1812; Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, president of the Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. Sheppard W. Foster, of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Wilson, of Savannah, of the Colonial Dames; Mrs. Joseph Moody, of the Altar Society of the Catholic Church; Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, of the Uncle Remus Association; Mrs. W. D. Ellis, of the Ladies' Memorial Association; Mrs. Joseph H. Morgan, of the Pioneer Women's Association; Mrs. A. P. Coles, of the Atlanta Women's Club, and Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Other organizations identified with the movement include the Butterflies and the Alcyone-Suwanee Fish and Game Club.

Urge Writing to Senate.

Miss Hornady, together with William P. Hornady, who also has been one of the leaders in the movement, has issued an announcement of the statement of Senator Simmons, and asks that individuals and organizations write to the four members of the Finance Committee, Senators Simmons, Hoke Smith, W. M. Hughes and Charles F. Johnson, urging them to meet the wishes of their constituents by deciding to withdraw the Senate amendments.

The work of the Georgia women has attracted such attention in the North that the New York organization is making a record of it.

Mrs. Bolling Jones, secretary of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, alone has written more than 300 letters, and many others have done almost as well. Most of these letters have been directed to Senators Smith and Bacon, the former receiving on an average of 150 letters a day from Georgia women impressing upon him the need of his aid in the movement.

$19,00,000 Gain in County Tax Returns

County tax returns show a gain of more than $19,000,000, according to late reports received at the office of the Comptroller General.

Out of 141 counties which have been reported 73 show gains and 68 losses. The total gains amount to $25,447,341, while the losses are $6,[illegible]4. Among the counties showing heavy gains is Fulton with a gain of $10,823,080 and Chatham with a gain of $2,669,598. Only five counties now remain to be heard from.

YAWN DISLOCATES JAW.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Joseph Russer yawned so widely that he dislocated his jaws—and the dislocation left the jaws wide open. At the hospital Russer was put under an anesthetic and his jaws shoved back into place.

EASTMAN SCHOOLS TO OPEN.

EASTMAN.—The Eastman public schools will begin the fall session on September 1. Professor H. W. Hurst, who has been superintendent for several years, will again head the schools this year.

Y. W. C. A. WORKS FOR BUILDING RESERVE

Officers of Organization Planning Campaign to Raise Money for Adequate Home.

The Young Women's Christian Association of Atlanta, which has recently undergone a complete reorganization, will shortly begin a campaign for funds to erect a modern and fully equipped building like those in Chattanooga, Birmingham, Kansas City, St. Louis and other cities.

The officers of the association state that a new building is badly needed here, to take care of the rapidly growing army of working women, who come to Atlanta without home or friends. The association daily receives letters from girls and women all over the South who are coming to Atlanta and wish to be aided in finding a home.

Miss Alice Logan Wingo, formerly dean of women at Drury College, Springfield, Mo., took charge as general secretary of the Atlanta association Monday morning. Miss Wingo has had considerable experience in the work in Missouri and Virginia, and it is expected that she will greatly build up the local association.

Rooms for boarders have been fitted up at the new association headquarters, which has been moved from the Steiner-Emery Building to No. 16 Ellis street. The old house at No. 19 West Baker street will continue to be the main rooming house, however.

Classes in industrial and educational work will soon be started at No. 16 Ellis street, and also a course in millinery and dressmaking will be inaugurated. Competent teachers have been arranged for, and the classes will begin about September 1. The association now has what is practically an employment bureau in connection with the other work, and places are secured for a number of girls and women every week.

ISLANDS GOVERNOR QUITS.

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 26.—Governor General W. Cameron Forbes, executive head of the Philippines since Novembere, 1909, to-day sent his resignation to Washington to take effect September 1. Francis B. Harrison has been nominated to succeed Forbes.

Wisconsin Senate Contest in Snarl

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 26.—The announcement of Congressman I. L. Lenroot's candidacy for the United States Senate to-day muddled the political situation in Wisconsin. Senator Isaac Stephenson was expected to announce his candidacy to succeed himself. Governor Francis E. McGovern and Lieutenant Governor Morris already have entered the field.

Members of the Republican and Progressive parties to-day saw in the candidacy of Lenroot a further break between the Congressman and Senator LaFollette. Lenroot incurred LaFollette's displeasure last fall when he refused to withdraw his support from Roosevelt.

TWO FRENCH FLYERS KILLED.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—Lieutenant Sensever and Sergeant La Fargue, of the army aviation corps, were killed today. Their machine dropped from a height of 150 feet while practice stops in midair were being made.

2 Begin Attempt To Swim Channel

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DOVER, ENG., Aug. 26.—A spectacular double attempt to swim the English Channel began almost simultaneously to-day. Henry Sullivan, of Boston, a well-known American swimmer, accompanied by his father, left Dover for the French coast, while Jabez Wolffe started from the French side.

The weather was favorable and the swimmers hoped to pass in midchannel.

Masons to Confer Degree on Big Class

Gate City Lodge No. 2, Free and Accepted Masons, will hold a communication Tuesday evening, at which time the master Mason's degree will be conferred upon a large class of candidates.

A special feature will be the lecture on the degree by the Hon. George M. Napier, past grand master of Masons of Georgia.

Nemo Corsets Are Healthful---Also Fashionable

Nemo Corsets do things, and here are some of the things they do:

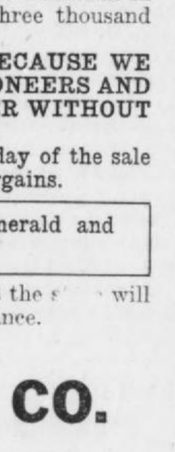

They support the abdomen.
They flatten the back.
They reduce the abdomen.
They mold the figure into fashionable lines, and last twice as long as any other corset.

The Nemo patented semi-elastic fabrics, "Lastikops Cloth" and "Lastikops Webbing"—used ONLY in Nemo Corsets—insure this.

If you have never worn a Nemo, you have never known perfect corset-comfort. We have them in all models and sizes.

WOMEN'S STYLES TO-DAY INSANE, SAYS EDISON

Inventor, on His First Vacation in Two Years, Sleeps Seven Hours First Night.

LOWELL, MASS., Aug. 26.—Thomas A. Edison, while passing through this city en route to the White Mountains on his first vacation in two years, gave out an interview in which he branded women's dress of the present day as insane.

He also condemned the modern "trot-tango" dances, scored the grafters in politics, and said the talking machine is in the final state of perfection.

He praised John Hays Hammond's plans for peace by making war impossible through wireless control of battleships and torpedoes.

Mr. Edison showed he was on a real vacation by sleeping seven hours last night.

He said:

"The modern dances such as the 'turkey trot,' 'tango,' 'bunny hug,' etc., are only a temporary state of mind, from which the sensible American public soon will recover.

"The peculiarities of dress and the weird dancing that have of late came upon the world may probably be called only a 'craze.' There seems to be periodic waves which go all over the world. They follow one another from time to time and no one can account for them.

"The people of America and other advanced countries are far too intelligent to be swept altogether off their feet by this passing phase of insanity in dresses and dancing."

'Boll Weevil Wiggle' Newest Dixie Dance

MEMPHIS, Aug. 26.—Officers of Tunica County, Miss., have issued an order prohibiting young society folk from dancing a strange waltz. The dance was originated by negro cotton pickers, and is dubbed the "Boll Weevil Wiggle."

It is a combination of the "grizzly bear," "chicken slide" and a waltz. The man takes the girl in his arms, holds her tight and glides along like skating. At the end of a long stride he bends her in front of him, lifts her to his lips and when the orchestra draws out a long chord, there is a kiss that can be heard all over the dance room.

'Castle Walk' Trot Is Newport Favorite

NEWPORT, Aug. 26.—The "Castle Walk" has not only supplanted all other lively dances but almost all other forms of amusement at Newport. It was danced continuously from 11 p. m. till 3 a. m. at Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings' affair, and was resumed the next night at Mrs. French Vanderbilt's.

Mrs. John Astor introduced a new fashion at the Jennings dance. She wore a short skirt, ten inches from the floor, which gave ease and grace to her dancing.

20,000 Affected By Rail Pass Prohibition

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—More than 20,000 persons who ride on railroad passes are to go into deep mourning because it has been discovered that the new public utilities law prevents families of railroad men from riding on free transportation in the State.

Besides this, it is declared the law prohibits officials from using other roads' passes.

Candler Is Mediator In Depot Site Row

Chairman Murphy Candler, of the State Railroad Commission, was in Union Point Monday investigating the depot controversy which developed there following the burning of the Georgia Railroad station recently.

A hot fight is being waged, it is understood, between the railroad authorities, who want to change the location of the depot, and citizens who are opposed to the move. Mr. Candler will try to bring about an amicable settlement.

Sheriff Uses Train, Horse, Feet in Chase

SELMA, Aug. 26.—After riding 82 miles on trains, riding horseback 15 miles and walking 10 miles, Sheriff H. P. Randall captured John Jackson and W. H. Thomas, white men, who escaped from jail here, both charged with felonies.

Cyrell Case, the third escape, also charged with felony, is still at large.

MOLTEN METAL BURNS 20.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, Aug. 26.—Twenty men were seriously burned, five of whom will die, when a "ladle" metal, toppled over in a steel mill car, carrying over five tons of molten here.

Masons of Dalton Hear Grand Master

DALTON, Aug. 26.—Masons from this and adjoining counties assembled here Monday afternoon and night to meet Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, grand master of the Georgia Grand Lodge, who was guest of Dalton Masons.

F. F. Baker made the address of welcome Monday afternoon, and a number of other local Masons spoke. Mr. Colding addressing the gathering. A watermelon cutting and automobile ride occupied the latter part of the afternoon, and the evening session was given over to work in the master's degree, refreshments being served at the completion of the work.

Servants Rob Home Of $1,000 in Gems

A negro man and his wife, accused of having robbed the home of J. W. Russell, a grain dealer, at No. 3 Lafayette avenue, Ansley Park, on August 17, were bound over by Recorder Pro Tem. Preston Tuesday under $2,000 bond.

The negroes, Preston and Callie Fleming, were formerly servants in the Russell household. Following the burglary, when more than $1,000 worth of jewelry was taken, Fleming and his wife were taken into custody by Detective Coker. Nearly all of the loot was found sewed up in a mattress in the negroes' house.

South China Revolt Completely Collapses

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 26.—The Southern Chinese revolution, directed by Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Dr. Wu Tingfang, has collapsed completely. Dispatches received here to-day stated that the last rebel stronghold at Nanking has fallen into the hands of President Yuan Shi Kai's Federal troops.

It is believed now that if there is any more fighting it will be of a desultory guerilla character between small roving bands of rebels and outlaws and Federal soldiers.

Child Drinks Poison Picked Up in Depot

AMERICUS, Aug. 26.—Getting possession of a bottle of morphine left carelessly in the waiting room of the Seaboard depot at Leslie, near Americus, the young son of Station Agent Williams, aged 18 months, swallowed a quantity of the drug. Despite the efforts of several physicians, the child died a few hours thereafter.

Chaingang Sentence Penalty for Flirting

ATHENS, Aug. 26.—Six months in stripes on the streets of Athens at labor is the penalty for annoying young girls who have to travel alone on the trains entering Athens, according to the Mayor in sentencing J. H. Maxey in Police Court.

He had flirted at a girl of 16 who was coming home Saturday night on the Georgia train and persisted in his unwelcome attentions after the girl's mother had met her at the train.

Slaying at a Church In Middle of Service

DOUGLASVILLE, Aug. 26.—Luther Evans shot and instantly killed Seab Longino in front of the African Church here while services were being conducted.

The Longino negro lived in Campbell County, and very little was known of him here. He had an open knife clasped in his hands, and it is supposed he was advancing on Evans, also a negro, when shot.

Evans made his escape and has not been captured.

DOVER, N. J., Aug. 26.—All the remains of Carl H. Wolff, who died here, are being sent to his parents in Germany by parcel post. His body was cremated and the ashes placed in a little tin box.

BUSINESS MEN ON LONG HIKE ON BET

Conyers Banker and Merchant Walk to Asheville in Ten Days, Winning Their Wager.

ASHEVILLE, Aug. 26.—Tramping through the mountains of North Georgia and Western North Carolina for just six hours less than ten days, E. Paul McDaniel, cashier of the Bank of Conyers, of Conyers, Ga., and Louis C. Summers, a merchant of that place, have arrived in Asheville.

Mr. McDaniel and Mr. Summers walked to Asheville following the posting of a wager with two other Conyers residents that they would not resort to the use of train or automobile.

Upon their arrival here the Georgia hikers were tendered an informal dinner by J. F. McDoogal and L. H. Pope, both of Atlanta, and other friends. While walking is fine, they will return home in a parlor car.

The trampers left Conyers on August 16 and followed the mountain highways and byways in reaching Asheville. They had no maps nor charts to guide them, trusting to good fortune and advice from residents along the route. They stopped at several Georgia and North Carolina towns, secured photographs along the line and getting testimonials from mayors and bankers to the effect that when last seen they were "footing it" and there wasn't a train or automobile in sight.

1,200 Miles in Hack.

DALTON, Aug. 26.—Having traveled 1,200 miles in a hack from Oklahoma City, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Warren, Miss Pearl Warren and Ed Warren reached here Monday afternoon. The party is en route to Asheville, N. C., their home. They left Oklahoma City June 4 and have made the long ride by easy stages, camping out at night and stopping en route for hunting and fishing trips.

Statistics Bulletin Issued by Chamber

The first issue of the Bulletin of Industrial Statistics, which will be published semi-monthly by the Chamber of Commerce, will go to press Tuesday.

The bulletin will contain a foreword, explaining the purpose of the new Industrial Bureau of the Chamber; a transcript of the "blue sky" law recently enacted by the Legislature; an article on the Manufacturers' Exposition and various statistics about Atlanta's manufacturing plants. It will be sent to all members of the Chamber of Commerce, to business men over the State who are interested in the "blue sky" law and to manufacturers all over the country.

The data for the bulletin was prepared by W. H. Leahy, who is in charge of the Industrial Bureau.

Sheriff Refuses to Whip Wife Beater

KLAMATH FALLS, ORE., Aug. 26. Sheriff Charles Low has been given the alternative of applying fifteen lashes to the back of William Pew, a convicted wife beater, or being punished by Justice E. W. Gowan for contempt of court.

The Sheriff said he would go to jail rather than carry out the sentence of the court, and if that was not enough, he would resign his office.

The World of Society

The members of the Atlanta Athletic Club will inaugurate a series of mid-week dances Wednesday evening at their Country Club at East Lake. These dances will be given in addition to the weekly dance sponsored by the club members for many seasons. An orchestra will play during the evening, and several young married couples will act as chaperons.

The news of the inauguration of these dances will be received with pleasure by the club members and their friends, and the initial dance Wednesday evening will doubtless be well attended.

Miss Hardwick Hostess.

Miss Julia Hardwick gave a card party Tuesday morning at her home in Lucile avenue for Miss Nell Bowers, of Nashville, who is visiting Mrs. J. P. Allen.

The guests were Misses Bowers, Margaret Woodfin, Rae Alexander, Mary Bowen, Julia McIntyre, Laura Ripley, Ethel Law, Mary Frances Bowden, Virginia Woodfin, Lois Wilkerson, Rowena Simpson, Sarah Nunnally, Birdie Dickey, Theodosia Andrews, Frances Stevens, Grace Stevens, Nelle Walker, Elizabeth Small, Kathleen Law, Marcella Steedman, Pauline Hill, Elizabeth Eaton and Mrs. David McConnell.

Tech Students to Give Dance.

There will be a dance Friday evening at Crystal Palace, given by Tech students.

Club Gives Scholarship.

The Atlanta Woman's Club has announced a scholarship in Miss Woodberry's School for Girls, No. 428 Peachtree street.

The scholarship is for half tuition, $50 in the high school or collegiate course, including the literary studies and modern languages, leading to a full diploma and may be renewed next year if the applicant fulfills satisfactorily its condition.

Written application must be made to Mr. A. P. Coles, president Atlanta Woman's Club, No. 565 West Peachtree street. State your age and the course desired and give testimonial of character. The application must be received by August 30.

Woman's Suffrage League.

The regular meeting of the Woman Suffrage League will be held in Carnegie Library Wednesday, August 27, at 3:30 p. m. Mrs. S. R. Cunningham will speak on "What the ballot means to women;" Mrs. Allen will speak on "What the ballot means to women in the Western States." Mrs. W. S. Yeates will talk on "The larger interest and sudden extension of suffrage in Georgia." There will be other speakers.

Evening Party.

Miss Anneta Honour will be hostess at an informal party Tuesday evening at her home on West Peachtree street for her guest, Miss Neil Honour, of Greenville, S. C.; Miss Genevieve Gresham, of Portsmouth, Va., the guest of Mrs. Russell Gresham, and Miss Lillie May Helms, of the guest of Miss Louise Gates.

The guests will include Misses Nell Honour, Genevieve Gresham, Lillie May Helms, Louise Gates, Augusta Gardien, Victoria Williams, Elizabeth Walker, Jenny Walker and Ruth Walker, Messrs. Harry Faust, Emil Faust, Charles Mac Honour, Lee Roy Jones, Clarence McMillan, Augustus Darrell Honour, Myers, Robert Woodson, Marshall Woodson, Dr. Charles P. Hodge and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gresham.

Mr. Lee Roy Jones will complimen these visitors with a matinee party at the Forsyth Saturday.

Winn-Johnson.

Miss Lillian Winn and Mr. Lorenzo Johnson were married Saturday evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Walter Brown, on West Twelfth street, the Rev. Charles Daniel officiating. Miss Kate Winn was maid of honor, Mr. Grady Johnson, of Alabama, was best man, and Miss Evelyn Winn was ring bearer.

The house was decorated with goldenglow, roses, palms and ferns. Mrs. Fred Poley sang "Because" before the ceremony.

The bride wore white callot satin, combined with lace and chiffon. Her flowers were bride roses showered with swansonia. The maid of honor wore white embroidered voile, trimmed in lace and ribbons. The ring bearer wore pink satin and lace, and carried a basket of pink roses tied with tulle.

Mrs. Camp Entertains.

Mrs. Joseph G. Camp entertained the members of her auction bridge club Tuesday morning for Mrs. J. T. Daniel, who leaves soon to reside in Columbia, S. C., and for Mrs. Frank Bethune, of Rome, formerly Miss Gladys Kirk, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Mattie Swanson assisted, and the guests were Mesdames Daniel, Bethune, Dan Sage, Paul Baker, Roy Jones, Hoyt Peck, Thomas Patton, Sadie Whitner, Josephine Mell, Misses Vie Swanson, Edna Blackman, Mary Lucy Turner, Bessie Small, Willie Asher, Emma Jordan and Mrs. Colbert.

Miss Frances Powell to Entertain.

A number of parties have been planned for Miss Irwin, to include Mrs. Walter R. T. Smith's bridge on Wednesday morning and Mrs. W. A. McCullough's bridge Thursday evening.

Theatorium Party.

Miss Theodosia Andrews gave a theatorium party Tuesday afternoon for Miss Nell Bowers, of Nashville, the guest of Mrs. J. P. Allen; Miss Irwin, of Montgomery, Mrs. William Jenkin's guest; Miss Ruth Small, of Macon, the guest of Mrs. R. H. White; Miss Sarah Garland, of Griffin; Misses Annie Will Pearce and Irene Berry, of Columbus, who are visiting Miss Frances Springer.

Find Buried Indian Pipes and House

PARIS, TENN., Aug. 26.—B. W. Merwin, representing the Peabody Museum of Harvard University, and C. W. Bishop, of Columbia University, have completed excavations of Indian mounds in this county.

A human skull in splendid state of preservation, numerous human bones and many pieces of pottery, including tobacco pipes, were found. Nearly all the pottery showed an intricate woven design of ancient pattern. Pillars of a house were found ten feet under ground.

PERSONALS

Mr. T. B. Higdon, who has been at Toxaway for two weeks, returned to Atlanta Monday afternoon.

Mrs. John Morris and Miss Mary Morris left Tuesday morning for Indian Springs.

Miss Lou T. Hook has returned from Maryland and is very ill at the home of her brother, Mr. Stephens Hook, at East Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Fleming will move into their new home in Inman Circle, Ansley Park, the last of this week.

Mr. John B. Whitman, who has been quite ill with typhoid fever at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Simmons on Peachtree street for several days, is better now.

Mrs. John Ashley Jones and Miss Mary Algood Jones will return to Atlanta Tuesday evening from Trion, where they have been visiting Mrs. Jones' mother, Mrs. Algood.

Mrs. T. T. Howard, of Washington, D. C., a former visitor to Atlanta, who has a number of friends here, is visiting Mrs. George A. Clayton at No. 361 Cherokee avenue. She also will visit Mrs. Theresa Vardeman before returning home.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Seat Sale at Lyric.

It has been decided by the management of the Lyric Theater to place the tickets on sale for Miss Emma Bunting's engagement at that house next week a day earlier than usual, on account of the heavy demand for seats. Therefore, the box office will be open for this sale on Wednesday morning instead of Thursday, as has been the custom heretofore. Some of Miss Bunting's admirers have gotten the impression that her coming engagement at the Lyric is for an indefinite period, but this is a mistake, as her stay is limited to one week only, beginning with the holiday matinee on Monday. The play to be presented is called "The Circus Girl," and was written by Sydney Grundy.

New Bill at Forsyth.

Svengalli, the mind-reading pianist and singer; Bond and Benton, in a humorous sketch; and the Meredith Sisters' act are the high lights of the offering. Svengalli's performance, in which she plays any air a person in the audience happens to request (in a whisper, of course) of her assistant, mystifies completely. Bond and Benton have an unusually clever skit which is splendidly done by a company of four. The Meredith Sisters are just renewing old acquaintances, for they have been seen several times. Their songs are new and win much applause.

Other numbers on the program are Golden, a card manipulator; Lewis and Body; the Four Regals, in a novel acrobatic turn; Joe Flynn, who tried hard to amuse, and the Pathe play.

TWO PLEAD BANKRUPTCY.

James Benjamin Chupp, a telegraph operator, filed a petition in bankruptcy Tuesday, giving his liabilities as $810.69, with no assets. H. L. Truett, who gave his occupation as a salesman, also pleaded bankruptcy.

When Time Is, Indeed, Money

Saturday at 1 o'clock, store-closing time, the prices on these huge stocks of dependable, good-taste furniture automatically revert to normal and is a thing of the past.

The "Blue Tag" Sale

For furniture buyers the shopping hours that remain of this week are weighted with savings.

And yet, as few as the remaining hours are, much can be done, because the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company furniture stocks are large, they admit of comparisons and free choice among different styles. And what is more, these stocks are made up of only that true-blue kind of furniture that is built to last from one generation to another.

The sale closes Saturday—be advised.

Now For a Quick Disposal of Some Two Hundred Waists

As startling as the prices below are, and as great as may be the expectations they will arouse, we venture that women are going to be pleasantly surprised when they see the waists these prices stand for.

But two hundred waists in such a waist store are a very small quantity and, like remnants, are not to be allowed to clutter, they must be done with, and so they will be, in a way most pleasing to those who would save.

For $2, $3 to $4 Waists

Batistes and voiles are the materials. There are too few of any one kind to explain accurately what you will find, but Cluny and Irish laces are much in evidence (yokes often show Irish lace medallions), lace collars and low flat collars variously pretty, net frills—styles stylish this season; some are a bit mussed, but at $1.00!

For $1.50 & $1.75 Waists

Women will not have to look at the price tickets to tell that these are $1.50 and $1.75 waists. They will see worth in the voiles and crepes and batistes, and they will know that such neat workmanship and dainty laces and embroideries are unusual for even $1.50 and $1.75. High neck, long sleeves, and low neck, flat collars and short sleeves.

One Woman's Story

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OBEDIENT to her husband's suggestion, Mary Fletcher tried to get a maid from the city. First of all she visited many employment agencies. At each she was received with a smile of welcome by the person in charge, but that smile was replaced by a look of incredulous surprise when, in reply to the question: "What wages do you pay?" Mary responded: "Twelve dollars."

"My dear madam!" exclaimed one such agent. "Excuse me, but you cannot get any girl, white or colored, to do general housework for that price."

"But," said Mary tentatively, "suppose I get a green and inexperienced girl, and teach her everything, and help her with the work—what wages would she come for?"

Might Advertise.

"Certainly for not less than eighteen dollars at the lowest," replied the agent. "And if you wish one to go to a lonely place in the country, you will have to pay more."

After many such fruitless efforts, Mary ceased visiting intelligence offices.

"You might advertise," her mother suggested when Mary recounted her experience to her. "I used to get good maids in that way. But, then, I paid very good wages. Your dear father always insisted, you know, on having me get the best of everything—servants included."

Mary winced at the unintentional thrust, then forgot her own discomfiture as she saw the tears in her mother's eyes.

"I know, dear," she said hastily, "and he was right for you deserved the best of everything. But you must remember, mother, that father had more money than Bert has."

"Oh, I know, I know," the widow responded quickly. "Dear child, don't fancy for a moment that I meant to criticise your husband. He has, of course, derived many of his ideas from his mother, and—pardon me, Mary—but she has not lived as we have, so she is to be excused if she has taught her son to feel that women ought to do their own work. Naturally, as Bert is a good son, he takes her tone. I do not blame him."

"Of course not," her daughter assented. In her own heart she was wondering if she, this man's wife, could say as much.

"Your husband is very kind to me," remarked Mrs. Danforth, somewhat irrelevantly. "I ought to be happy."

But was she? Mary pondered. Did she not think that perhaps her daughter was not as content as she would like her to be? Did she not suspect that Mary did not love the man to whom she was married? And, if so, could she be happy—she, the mother who had taught her child that a loveless marriage was a sin?

Her Cheerful Voice.

As if reading the unspoken thought, Mrs. Danforth took her daughter's hand tenderly in hers. "Tell me, darling," she said, wistfully, "are you satisfied? Are you worried about anything? Sometimes I almost fear that you are a little disappointed—about something."

The young wife put her arms around her mother and drew the gray head down to her shoulder.

"Little mother," she said, her voice determinedly cheerful, "what notions you do get! Why should I not be happy here in this cozy little cottage, with the best mother that ever lived, and the man I have chosen out of all the world? Dear mother," with a light laugh, "why should I have married Bert if I did not want to?"

The mother laughed, too, and there was a ring of relief in the sound.

"Of course, dear! Why, indeed? Forgive your silly old mother—but I love you so much that if you were not happy—why, I just could not stand it!"

She ended with a little sob, and the daughter held her closer.

"You believe now that I am happy, don't you, dear?" Mary asked.

"Oh, yes, I believe it now," said the widow tremulously, "and you don't know what a comfort it is to be sure of it."

With her head still on Mary's shoulder she did not look up at the sad eyes gazing out of the window, nor did she see the bitter smile that twisted the young lips. In a moment the wife's face was again placid, and she smiled on leaving her mother, making the pretext that she had "some work to do downstairs."

She did not go downstairs at once. Instead, she turned into her own room and closed the door. But she did not, as she would have done in her girlhood days, fling herself upon the bed and give way to her misery. Instead, she went to the window and looked out into the July sunshine. But she was looking into her heart, not into the summer noon.

"Good Lord!" she whispered, "what a liar I have become! A liar both in speech and life!"

She stood motionless a moment longer, then lifted her head with a gesture of decision—almost of defiance.

"But I won't look back," she muttered. "I have made my bed and must lie on it—even if it is made of thorns. At all events, mother is comfortable and cared for."

She Had Learned.

Advertisements for domestics at the price named by Herbert Fletcher and his mother proved useless. As a final resort, Mary engaged one so-called "helper" after another from the village, but each was so inefficient that this trial was abandoned. The young housewife had learned that to secure good service one must pay an adequate price for it—and that even then one might fail to obtain it.

So it came about that at last Mary Fletcher did the work of her own house, hiring a woman from the village for two days a week to "wash, iron and scrub," and even then she had to supplement her at every turn. It was taken as a matter of course that the wife should help hang out the clothes and assist with the ironing. She told her mother that she "enjoyed the novel task;" in fact, that she thought the exercise and fresh air good for her. Her husband did not protest. Why should he? His own mother had always done that kind of work.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

The two exercises pictured to-day show classic dancing steps intended to produce suppleness of limbs and waist.

These Pictures Were Especially Posed for this Page.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ONE of your great Americans sang in an exquisite little poem of "The glory that was Greece; the grandeur that was Rome." The glory and grandeur of these nations were founded not only on their art and culture and prowess as warriors, but on a basic condition that male brains and power reach a great height of perfection—on the sublimity and healthy beauty of the human body.

When laziness and high living weakened the bodies of the Greeks and Romans, decline and fall were near. But in the flower of their national health and youth the bodies of the Greeks and Latins were physically splendid, and the endowment of mental power followed physical health.

In these simple facts there lies a great lesson for us of to-day. In bodily health and strength lie the power of the individual and the health of the nation as well. I have said so often and am always glad to say again that in the beautiful classic dances that have come down to us from the ancients lies the simplest secret of bodily grace. But to-day I want to add a few principles of bodily health and care that are practiced of necessity by the professional dancer, and that the bodily beauty-seeker would do well to emulate.

Begin by training children so that their muscles will fall naturally, in motion or repose, into graceful lines. Teach them that food is very important in one way and of no consequence in another. Food must nourish the body and give it strength, but beware the pleasureful-overeating of the well-nourished, ill-proportioned gourmet.

Food and Mood.

Now, you could dance a cancan or a breakdown however you hated the world—and indigestion surely produces misanthropy—but you have to be in harmony with life to express poetry in dancing. So, since mood affects dancing and food affects mood, this little cycle will make the classical dancer careful of the dower of health that spare, sane, sensible eating produces.

For breakfast I have coffee and hot milk, for lunch fruit and one nourishing solid and my simple dinner is guiltless of sweets. Clothes I regard as covering and not as trammeling ornaments that interfere with freedom of movement or deep breathing. Perehaps if I convert a few of my readers to a love for and a belief in the graceful movements of the classic dance, I shall at the same time make converts to the healthful joys of simple living, of deep breathing and of high thinking.

To-day I will tell you about two little movements of the dance that may be done at home without music and to the slower tempo of the walk. Try them for general bodily grace and ease of motion.

The first picture shows a very simple equally pretty figure, and for suppleness of arms and legs and waist it counts as strongly as it does for lightly poised and carried head and body. Advance with the head carried high above the column of the throat and the lifted chin. Sway slightly from the waist as you swing the arms in the arc of a circle; left arm is forward slightly above the shoulder height as the weight advances forward to the right foot, and at the same time the right arm is stretched back in a straight line and lowered from shoulder to wrist until the hand is just at the line of the hip. Do this with gradually increasing tempo, until the springy walking motion has become a light dancing step. Fifteen minutes of this night and morning will give great grace and resiliency to your ordinary gait.

The second picture brings the back and shoulder muscles into play and exercises the throat. In other essentials it has the basic principles and advantages of the first exercise. Advance as before. This time the forward motion is first on the left and then on the right side of the body and thus great muscular co-ordination is assured ofr the devotee of this exis assured for the devotee of this exelbows close to the waist line and the hands relaxed in easy lines from the wrist. Sway head and arm from side to side as the body pivots slightly from the waist muscles and the feet advance in the lifted prancing step of the dance.

"More power to ye," says my neighbors of Erin's Isle, in kindly greeting. To you—my neighbors across the sea—I say it, too, "More power to you;" and may the principles of the classical dancing I have so earnestly studied and so earnestly love, bring you beauty and grace and power to live gloriously and well.

A TALE OF LOST CHERUBS

"THE Gudgeon children are lost!" panted Mrs. Sprinkle as she flung open the screen door unceremoniously and burst in upon the Liffick family, variously disposed in hammocks and sprawly chairs.

"My goodness!" cried Mrs. Liffick. "Again?"

"They're truly lost," explained Mrs. Sprinkle, excitedly. "And we want you to come and help find them. They are sending parties in every direction through the woods and they're going to telephone the life-saving crew to drag the lake——"

"Did the boat tip over?" asked Liffick, now entirely awakened, as he reached for his cap.

Mrs. Sprinkle heaved an exasperated sigh. "If they're lost," she said, succinctly, "they might possibly be drowned, mightn't they? We don't want to leave any stone unturned."

Dire Thoughts.

"Mrs. Gudgeon left Imogene and Harry playing just as nicely under the trees beside their cottage while she walked down to the pier to fish," related Mrs. Sprinkle, "and they were gone when she came back in an hour. She has called and called for them, and they are nowhere within a mile! Imogene had such beautiful eyes, too! Maybe gypsies——"

"It will break their mother's heart!" said Mrs. Liffick. "How perfectly terrible! I'm sorry I scolded Harry for breaking off all my geraniums! And the time he scalded our cat—I might have made less harsh remarks to him. Suppose they've fallen down that old quarry pit! Arthur, you go right over in that direction and see! It's only four miles!

Liffick, starting off, ran into several other men from the various cottages bound on the same errand.

"It looks serious," said Tilton with a shake of his head. "Kids like that and so venturesome! There's a dozen things that might have happened to them! I'm bound for the creek bank, where it is so marshy! There's quicksand there."

The whole summer colony was soon deserted. Everybody had gone to hunt for the Gudgeon children, whose various sins of commission were now tenderly covered by the veil of charitable anxiety. Mrs. Gudgeon alternately wept at home and darted out on spasmodic hunts. Again she would wander around the cottage making the air ring with the names of the missing ones. There was no answer.

"Harry might have grown up to be President some day!" said Mrs. Liffick mournfully. "They say these mischievous little children always turn out so well. Dear little Imogene"——

"You said she was a hateful child, mother, when she cut holes in your new embroidered waist," put in Sally Liffick, who was tagging around that she might miss none of the excitement.

"Sally, you go straight home!" commanded her mother. "Haven't you any sympathy at all? The idea?"

One by one the searchers staggered in toward dusk. Each had the same tale of disappointment and each was dusty and thirsty and hungry and despairing.

"Something per-perfectly awful must have happened to them, because every inch of the woods has been searched!" said Mrs. Sprinkle. "Poor Mrs. Gudgeon! Harry was such a brilliant child!"

"I always said Imogene would turn out a beauty, too," put in Mrs. Tilton. "It's hard!"

"There never were such darling children in the whole world!" their mother informed everybody between sobs. "Oh, where are my babies? Just to get my arms around them"—

Harry Found.

There was a shriek and a scuffle from the little cellar under the Gudgeon house and everybody rushed to see.

The Gudgeon cook was dragging Harry out from the depths of the potato bin, while Imogene was unrolling herself from a pile of old carpeting. The assembled searchers and their parents stared, voiceless.

"We wuz playing hiding from the Indians," vouchsafed Harry. "You made awful good Indians—you yelled so!"

As Gudgeon reached for Harry with an arm motion that promised a laying over his knee, while Mrs. Gudgeon did likewise with her darling daughter, the searchers melted away.

"Wow!" said Liffick as juvenile wails rent the air. "That sounds good to me! Four miles to the stone quarry and back!"

Yield to Baby.

One afternoon not long ago in the vicinity of Grant Park there might have been seen a young man industriously pushing up and down a baby carriage, intently reading a book the while.

"Henry! Henry!" called a young woman from the second story of a house opposite.

Henry heard it, but continued to push the baby carriage and to read his book.

In about an hour the cries for "Henry" were repeated.

"Well, what do you want?" he demanded, rather impatiently.

"Nothing, dear," was the irritating response, "except to inform you that you've been wheeling Harriet's doll all the afternoon. I think it's time for the baby to have a turn now."

THE TUNNEL

GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The story opens with Rives, who is in charge of the technical workings of the great tunnel from America to Germany, on one of the tunnel trains, with Baermann, an engineer, in charge of Main Station No. 4. They are traveling at the rate of 118 miles an hour. Rives is in love with Maude Allan, wife of Mackendrick Allan, whose mind first conceived the great tunnel scheme. After going about 250 miles under the Atlantic Ocean Rives gets out of the train. Suddenly the tunnel seems to burst. There is a frightful explosion. Men are flung to death and Rives is badly wounded. He staggers through the blinding smoke, realizing that about 3,000 men have probably perished. He and other survivors get to Station No. 4. Rives finds Baermann holding at bay a wild mob of frantic men who want to climb on a work train. Somebody shoots Baermann, and the train slides out. The scene is then changed to the roof of the Hotel Atlantic. The greatest financiers of the country are gathered there at a summons from C. H. Lloyd, "The Money King." John Rives addresses them, and introduces Allan. Mrs. Allan and Maude Lloyd, daughter of the financier, are also present. Allan tells the company of his project for a tunnel 3,100 miles long. The financiers agree to back him. Allan and Rives want him to take charge of the actual work. Rives accepts. Rives goes to the Park Club to meet Wittesteiner, a financier. At Columbus Circle news of the great project is being flashed on a screen. Thousands are watching it.

Now Go On With the Story.

A Waterbury

Before daylight two thousand more men arrived, and with them began the endless stream of freight. Rives began to feel like a swimmer who has been buoyed by a tide-rip. But he asked that the pace be increased, and he shut his teeth and jumped in. Twenty lieutenants worked on his immediate staff, all of them young men, but all of them chosen for the cut of their jaws and the cleanness of their records in stress and storm and strife. And Rives worked them as hard as he worked himself. He gave no instructions. There was not time for that. He told each man what was to be done in a few curt sentences and left the doing of it to him.

That third night a terrific thunderstorm broke up the heat wave. It came down in a terrific gale, and the first thunderbolt fired a freight shed where 500 cots were stacked to the roof, as there had been no time to unpack them that night. Before the fire got well under way, the wind ripped the burning roof off, and then came the deluge. When day broke, Rives found that about a third of his jerry-built houses had collapsed—and the flood of materials and men from Toms River set in as before.

It was a terrible setback, but he shook his head and went at it as if nothing had happened, and his men backed him with the easy energy and resource of men long accustomed to uneven warfare with Nature. That day Tunnel City looked like a storm-swept mining camp. Two days later it was like the temporary camp of the great army. At the end of ten days it was a city with concrete houses and streets and electric lights and sewerage—a city of 20,000 men with a postoffice, a telephone system, two railroad depots, bakeries, dairies, abattoirs, stores, saloons and a hospital.

And over everything, the discouraged and drooping trees and the few scattered clumps of bushes, the window sills and the roofs, was the thick white dust of the cement that had made the miracle possible.

Pages of this and many succeeding issues of this paper might be filled with the details of the wonders of energy and the mighty toil of those sunnimed months on the Jersey coast. And in four other spots on the face of the earth similar scenes were being enacted. But terrific as were the results, grandiose the scale, the details must needs be tiresome, for after all they were only digging a hole in the earth. In this, as in all other matters of great moment, it is well to trust to the trained and not the technical observer. Edgar Harkness, the star man of The New York Evening Journal staff, was at the works from the day the first man reached there. Looking over the files of the paper for that summer I came upon a special article he wrote describing the progress of the work.

"This place of bedlam," he wrote, in part, under date of September 11, of that year, "looks as if it were going up in smoke. To-day the cloud above it is so dense that electric discharges like heat lightning flash across it and there is always a muttering like distant thunder, while beneath its edges a deep blue horizon tells that elsewhere the sun is shining. Beneath the Tunnel City roars and shouts explodes, whistles, thunders and yells.

"From the midst of the pandemonium and settling over everything like a white sea-fog rises a monstrous white column of dust to join the black smoke canopy overhead. Meeting the heavy blackness it seems to spread and mingle with it, forming a cloud such as observed at the eruptions of volcanoes. Pressed down by the colder air above it spreads like a gigantic umbrella, and little shreds are whirled away by puffs of the seaward breeze.

"SHIP captains report that when there is a steady off-shore wind this dust forms white scum on the ocean for miles, and New Yorkers know the source of the nuisance that turns their blue serge suits gray."

Here Mr. Harkness drifts off temporarily to little things that were important for the day only, and then goes on to report the progress of the actual work.

"The place of construction, following its fixed width of twelve hundred feet, is now nearly the finishing of a straight inland cut of three miles. It is laid out in long terraces so that the construction trains can hold to easy grades until they reach the last level, which will be 600 feet below the level of the sea. Here the actual sinking of the tunnel itself will begin.

"But the day before yesterday this place was a sandy heath, half reclaimed from barrenness. Swiftly it became a gravel pit, a quarry, and at last a monster chasm that swarms seemingly with insect life. Queer little busy beings covered with white dust that dig and growl and grovel and toil, gray-faced and dusty-haired.

"Twenty thousand of them hurl themselves into this mighty ravine every day. Their drills and picks and shovels glitter like the sunlight on a lake. A whistle shrieks a warning, a column of dust rises to join the vast cloud overhead, a colossus of stone, wrenched by dynamite from its grip of earth, swerves outward and falls with a thundering roar. Another puff of dust leaps up and the insects swarm into it.

"As far as eye can reach down that long incline into the bowels of the earth these puffs that tell of terrific blasts are shooting up. Great dredges, attacking the quicksand, shriek and whine as they suck up liquid death. The chain pumps groan and rattle. Derricks and steam shovels whirr and dip. Aerial carts whizz past you on trolleys. Swarms of tiny locomotives hustle and fuss around, shrieking at each other with shrill voices.

"Sand and gravel flies back to the town where mountains of bagged cement are stacked, for there must be housing for 40,000 men before the cold weather reaches. Here another army is toiling at break-neck speed about this gigantic task.

"And all of this is but preliminary to the real work of the great project."

Then there follows a wonderful description of the workings of the great tidal basins, Allan's improvement on the designs of Schlich and Lippman, the famous German engineers, to whom we owe the harnessing of the incalculable power of the tides. Through his ingenious arrangement of reservoirs thousands of tons of water were dumped on gigantic turbines every hour of the twenty-four, and the lift and fall of the tides gave him all of this power for simply the cost of original work—less than $5,000,000.

The scene, indeed, recalled the Tower of Babel—a project so vast that its very conception seemed impious.

And this was only one of five such scenes. In Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London similar mighty panoramas of daring were being unrolled. And Allan, the genius who had provoked these upheavals, was the motive spirit of each. He was tireless and unresting. Rives and Mrs. Allan heard from him in one camp or another, and before they had finished his short dispatches—so it seemed to them—another from some other tunnel city was laid in their hands or he himself dropped off a construction train from Toms River, clear-eyed, smooth-shaven, and fresh and energetic as ever.

Rives had built a beautiful little house for the chief engineer and his wife on the seaside of the tunnel city, and Allan encouraged Mrs. Allan to spend much of her time there, even when he was in this country. Rives was the one warm personal friend he had made in his lonely life, and knowing how much pleasure Mrs. Allan found in his society, he was glad to have her as nearly contented as possible while he darted back and forth across half the Northern Hemisphere. They had one child—a little girl, Edith—and she grew to be almost a stranger to her father.

Even when Allan was in New York he saw but little of his wife and child. His business affairs usually took him a great deal to the house of the great Lloyd, where he held long conferences with the old financier or his daughter, who had the details of the tunnel at her finger ends.

A Neglected Wife.

Thus Mrs. Allan, a lonely and neglected woman, was thrown constantly with Rives, an impressionable and high-strung man, who already held for her at least a deep admiration.

"Mac is in New York—I got a wire from him late this afternoon," remarked Rives one evening as they were taking a horseback ride along one of the wide level roads that led northward from Tunnel City.

"Yes, he called me up," said the woman, with a faintly weary note in her voice. "He said that he would be busy about the real estate deal for the next day or so and would have to go to France within a few days. He called up from the Lloyds," she added, without conscious meaning.

Rives was silent for a few moments as the horses pounded along the gravel road, side by side.

"Did he say anything about running down here or——?" he stopped off short. He had tried to make the tone nonchalant, but she understood and bit her lip.

"I know what you are thinking about, Jack," she said soberly, and her voice trembled slightly. "And I wish you wouldn't—pity me."

Rives swore at himself in an undertone and tried to stammer out something light and reassuring.

"You're too old a friend," she cut in, quietly. "It would be just like you to go and talk to Mac, and that would be worse than anything else. He is doing the best he can, and I know I ought to be happy."

"Aren't you?" asked Rives.

"No, I'm not, and you know it perfectly well, my friend. I am as proud of Mac as a woman could be of a man, but I want to be married to a man, not to a—a—an institution."

Rives looked at the lightly poised body and the delicate brown head and soft eyes that shone like amber in the moonlight. And he laughed uncertainly to check the something that rushed to his lips.

"Oh, well," he said lightly and kindly, "it won't be so bad in a little while. Mac is trying to do eight men's work and everything is just starting now, but when——"

"I know," she interrupted grimly. "Everything has been just starting for months and months. I went over all this with him a few weeks ago and he told me just what you are trying to tell me. I only know that I have been under the same roof with my husband for 24 consecutive hours in six months."

"But, little girl, don't you see——"

"Oh, yes! I know I am unreasonable. I have cut out about a bale of newspaper clippings about Mac and pictures of me, and I ought to be as vain and pleased as—as—as a woman. I am proud of him. I even admit that it gratifies the woman in me to be pointed out in department stores and at the theater as the wife of Mac Allan—but that isn't all that a normal woman wants the man she loves to give her."

Rives wisely held his tongue and there was another little silence. At last he asked:

"Did you ever—have you ever let Mac know exactly how you feel about —about this?"

The woman did not reply at once.

"I went down to his office about a month ago," she said at last in a low voice. "I couldn't help it, Jack. I was so lonely and miserable. He sent out word that he was very busy, but would be out in a little while. I told the boy to tell him that I wanted to see him at once. I was mad by that time. He came out perfectly good humored, as he always is, and I told him I wanted him to come home for dinner and spend the evening with me. He said he couldn't and I—I cried, and I'm afraid I made a scene —but there was nobody there."

SHE paused, and Rives made no comment. He was looking straight over his horse's head up the moonlit road, and his face was in the shade of his broad-brimmed hat. She looked at him and put her hand on his arm.

"You don't blame me, do you, Jack?"

She felt the muscles stiffen under her hand.

"No," he replied, almost gruffly, "I don't."

She sighed. "He told me he would have more time in a few months, it would be different, and I said I didn't want to wait any longer. I told him I was going to take up nursing and go to work in the hospital here—and that's why I've done it. If I couldn't have my husband I had to have something else to occupy my mind. I can't bear to be useless, Jack."

"What did he say when you told him that?" asked Rives, quietly.

"He laughed—and told me to go ahead."

Again they rode on in silence for a brief time.

"I suppose I am foolish," she said at last, in a wistful tone, "but sometimes I wish that Mac had never succeeded in getting this tunnel plan through. He doesn't belong to me any more: he belongs to the world. I have to live in the light of his halo—and I'd rather live in the light of a fireside."

Rives abruptly pulled up his horse and turned.

"Let's go home," he said.

"I'M glad you could get up here, old man. The storm is about to break. Listen!"

Up to them from the street, where hundreds of real estate brokers were gathered, came a steady roar. Allan and Rives listened and smiled.

"You certainly did some smooth work in a publicity line," said the latter.

"It wasn't smooth," disclaimed Allan, a little resentfully, "and I didn't do it. It just did itself. You know—but maybe you haven't had time to see their stunts—but the viograph people have been among my best little advertisers, and they have paid for the privilege. They have been showing pictures with miles and miles of beautiful houses and department stores and all the trimmings of a great city along with their regular films showing the progress of the work—all labeled 'The Tunnel City of the Future' and 'Tunnel City Ten Years From To-day.'"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading an awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties."

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Io. It is a jerky sort of a name, Io, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I. O. U.

"Well, this Io is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Illa, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Io to get Illa because she has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gell belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Illa that she cannot marry Io she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when thou passest beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Io is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy beck and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Io's bride.'

"'But Io like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe Io a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe Io nothing.'

"The way the story ends, Io makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Illa until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Atlantan passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barber. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In the interval not a word was uttered not a look interchanged between the lady and the detective. But the moment Dr. Cameron returned, a sudden change took place in Mrs. Cameron, and rising, she confronted Mr. Gryce with a frank and grateful air that lent quite a new aspect to her ever-changing countenance.

"You are very kind," she declared, in a grateful tone that was in itself a shock to both her hearers. "Knowing this frightful tale; seeing as you must have done that, if true, Mildred Farley did not die after I went downstairs, but before, you have come here in confidence and without scandal to hear what I have to say about the matter and give me an opportunity to explain myself. I shall never forget this consideration, sir; and as proof of my gratitude I will at once tell you what I can about this poor unfortunate's death, hoping that you will see the matter as I did, and understand in a measure at least how I was driven by my fears to keep back my knowledge of this frightful secret, even from my mother and husband, till it was torn from me and shred by shred as you have seen. And now for the truth.

"This girl, whose death you consider such a mystery, committed suicide. She committed it in my presence, just a few minutes before I went downstairs to be married. It was a terrible shock and a great surprise to me. I had been dressing, and was thinking of anything else than tragedies or death. Nor do I think she meant to die then or there. But she was desperate. She had had a talk with her intended husband and had been disappointed in him. She did not want to see him again, and the contrast between the hopes expressed by my bridal attire and the dreariness of her own outlook maddened her, I supposed; for in a moment, as it were, she seized upon that bottle of poison and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I had got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Should I mar the happiness of the whole company by revealing what had occurred? I thought not in the moment I had to consider. So I just drew the poor girl into the alcove, and in grief and terror enough, God knows, covered her over with some dresses I had before pulled down from the closet and thrown on the floor. I had barely done this and readjusted my veil when the knock came and I had to descend.

"It was frightful, but I did not know how frightful till I came to think. Then I almost gave way to my terror and agitation, and when that scream came down from upstairs——"

She stopped. They did not wonder; at such a horrible experience, who would not shudder!

Her husband for the first time realized all she had been through and reached out his hand in sympathy, though there was yet much to be explained before he could feel reconciled to a past so full of mysteries and shadows.

"And how," asked the detective, nothing but formal respect on his part, "was the body disposed of? When next we hear of it, it was in the keeping of a Dr. Molesworth, who, as we have been informed, was not one of your wedding guests."

Mrs. Cameron did not flinch. She looked, if anything, more winning and candid than before.

"Dr. Molesworth was the man who had expected to marry her. He had gone to the hotel for that purpose and had not found her; so he came where he suspected her to be. He was not one of my guests, but that did not keep him from the house. He came in at the front door and stood in the hall, and I happened to see him and immediately knew what he was after. So I arose and went out—I was then receiving congratulations—and, accosting him without delay, told him that the person he wanted was in my room and bade him go upstairs and I would follow. For I not only saw that he was in a state of feeling that bordered on frenzy, but I also saw that if the matter was to be hushed up and the body got out of the house without disturbance, he was the man to do it; and I relied upon him and went up after him and explained what had occurred and showed him the dead body of his bride, and asked for help and got it. I don't know that I should call it help now," she added, in a low voice, "for it might have been better for me if I had called in the whole house to see that dead girl, and so escaped the days and weeks of deceit that have pressed upon me like so many mountain weights of lead."

Her husband looked as if he concurred with her, but he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce asked another question.

"You read the account of the proceedings before the Coroner, which was printed in the papers?"

She acknowledged that she had.

"You must have seen then that Dr. Molesworth testified to having found the girl on a stoop in Twenty-second street."

"Yes, sir. It was agreed between us that he should tell some such story as that. It seemed wisest to us at the time. Since she had killed herself it would not hurt her and it would relieve me from endless complication, to have it thought she had committed the deed in the street. So we thought then—with how little judgment let this moment testify."

The detective fixed his eyes upon her and opened his lips to put another question. But he evidently found it too difficult to say what was in his mind and turned it into the simple suggestion, "You must have known Dr. Molesworth well, Mrs. Cameron?"

A flush, hot and vivid, answered him from the doctor's face, but her cheek did not alter and it was with much composure she replied:

"I had learned much of his disposition from my conversations with the woman he expected to marry. As for his face, I had seen him at Mrs. Olney's, where I have been more than once. I had even had some talk with him. It was the situation which made us like friends at once."

"I understand," asserted Mr. Gryce, but his looks did not bear out his words. "Your conduct is not so inexplicable," he went on. "Women think much of appearances and are not apt to weigh the consequences of their impulsive efforts to preserve them. But a man usually halts long before he enters into a scheme that must end in perjury, and Dr. Molesworth committed perjury, Mrs. Cameron."

She dropped her chin upon her breast and the presence of a growing dread began to show itself in her face.

"Not only that," the detective continued. "He engaged to do a fearful thing when he promised you to get a dead body out of the house alone and without discovery. Have you thought how much nerve and determination it would require? What self-sacrificing devotion it would need to lead a man not only to take the risk of such an act, but to subject himself to the horrors of it? I find it difficult to reconcile what I have seen of Dr. Molesworth with such devotion to a lady so little known to him. I would sooner think——" He paused; she looked at him breathlessly—"that he had his own reasons for keeping the matter quiet," he pointedly added.

"Perhaps he had," she simply replied. "I can not tell all that passed in his mind. I can only tell you what we did."

"And you repeat that it was through his agency this dead girl was got out of your room and house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when?"

"That I do not know. It was after I left."

"What, you went away before she was removed from the house?"

"Yes, sir. Having made up my mind to trust the whole affair to him. I only thought of escape for myself. Then it could never have been managed if I had not cleared the backstairs by having my trunk carried out. It was down those he intended to go."

"And did he?"

"I can not tell. I only know he succeeded in his undertaking. How or under what difficulties, he must himself inform you. I have never had an opportunity to ask him."

"No," she returned boldly; "not while he doubts whether I have spoken of the matter or not. He has too chivalrous ideas of duty."

"What, when his life is at stake?"

"His life!"

"He was on the point of being arrested for murder when this testimony of Celia's came in."

"I suspected it, or rather I knew that he was under the surveillance of the police, for he told us so in an interview he had with the doctor about a case of his."

"And you were going to allow him to go to prison upon a charge you knew perfectly unfounded?"

"Mr. Gryce, I was not two weeks married. I know that my husband hated deceit and I lacked the courage to acknowledge that I had become entangled in it. Then I trusted to Dr. Molesworth discovering a way out of his difficulty, and was so sure that he would I never even thought of his being in any danger of his life. It is also only fair to myself to say that, had he been brought to trial, I should have relentlessly sacrificed myself. It was my hope that he would not which kept he silent so long."

She was pleading her cause well, and yet her shadowed brow and paling lip showed she was conscious that it was a failing one, and that the doom she had so long dreaded was rushing upon her.

"I except your explanation," quoth the detective, "and it only remains at present for you to inform us where Miss Farley got the drug with which she poisoned herself."

"I can not tell you that," came in fainter tones from Mrs. Cameron's lips.

"Was it from her bag, her pocket, or the folds of her dress that she took the vial which held it?"

Genevieve miserably shook her head. Mr. Gryce looked troubled; he hesitated a little, then suggested kindly, "You saw her carry it to her lips?"

Genevieve faintly acquiesced.

"And did you see where she took it from?"

"I can not answer."

Dr. Cameron strode one step and stood beside his wife.

"Why can not you answer?" he asked gently.

"Because——" she felt for a chair and sat down. "Because you will not believe what I say."

"I will not believe what you say?"

She turned her eyes, which had been fixed upon vacancy, on his face. There was unfathomable love in them, but there was unfathomable despair also.

"I think you would," said she, "and yet it is very incredible."

"The true things are often the incredible," observed he.

She smiled, but in a hopeless sort of way, and in an altered tone, murmured:

"Very well, then, she got it out of a box."

"A box she carried?"

"No; one she found in the room."

Dr. Cameron stared; so did the detective. Genevieve sat and shivered silently.

"Yes."

"And how came prussic acid to be in your room, Mrs. Cameron?"

It was a question for which she seemingly had no reply. Though she opened her lips, no words issued from them, and she sat the image of shame and despair. The doctor, struck aghast, started impetuously forward, and would have spoken himself but that the detective forestalled him.

"You do not think I have the right to ask that question," he remarked. "Well, I withdraw it and will simply inquire what sort of box it was which held this vial, and where in the room it was kept?"

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

One Pretty Girl Finds Nature a Most Efficient Teacher

"ONCE upon a time," began Laura Hamilton, more reminiscently than her very evident youthfulness would seem to permit, "I owned a little white poodle—a cross between a Maltese and a French poodle. He had wonderful long silky hair, and we used to keep it in order by treating it with oil of cocoanut. Now, a few years ago my hair, which was very long, suddenly began to come out a bit—to thin at the ends and to show a tendency to acquaintance with an up-to-then stranger, dandruff. First I worried, then I vainly consulted a specialist or two, and then I thought of doggie."

Oil of Cocoanut.

"Sermons in stones—and beauty hints in the silken coat of a Franco-Maltese poodle," thought Miss Interviewer, who was sitting in the wings of the Winter Garden in New York talking to Miss Hamilton, and glimpsing bits of the wonderful marchings and flings and dancings going on out of wonderful New Wynburn's wonderful Capital Steps. And the three "wonderfuls" in that sentence are none too many.

"I thought of doggie," went on my pretty little brown-haired neighbor, "and I invested in 10 cents' worth of oil of cocoanut. And it is good for good hair and so kind to poor hair. Use it every other night—moisten the finger tips with it, and rub the oil well into the scalp. It won't make the hair greasy or oily looking—but it will give it a natural gloss and luster. Shampoo the hair once a week and brush it a hundred strokes every day. Part it down the middle from crown to the nape of the neck; bring the two heavy strands over the shoulders and brush each section fifty times with a long sweeping motion that swings from the scalp to the very ends of the hair. Plentiful glossy hair is sure to result."

"And then we do not take our glowing, abundant tresses and torture them with hot irons, do we?" I asked.

"We do not," replied Miss Hamilton. "We trust the natural gloss and add a little training as to graceful curves and scallops, so we may look as well as possible—and we don't beautify ourselves at the cost of our hair.

Give It a Chance.

"If you are trying to be attractive," she went on earnestly, "do not make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others. Give everything a chance. Let me see—I start by trying to keep calm and cool and well and rested. My first rule is to avoid restaurants at night. After the theater, instead of going into a restaurant, with its heavy air and heavy glare of artificial light, I motor out into the pure, clean country.

"An hour under the stars every night—an hour with the cool wind blowing on my face and the pure, clean, unused air of night blowing the cobwebs out of my brain—and I go home to restful, dreamless sleep. Then I wake up ready to start the day with about ten minutes of exercise.

"First I lie flat on my bed and stretch my arms out straight, and take a deep, lung-filling breath; then I exhale that breath, dropping my arms to my sides the while, and as I fill my lungs and chest again I raise my arms at right angles to my body again.

"Next I hop out of bed and take these two exercises by the open window. Grasp a straight chair by the rear legs, just midway betwen the base and the first rung, and learn to elevate the chair straight out and above your head, taking deep breaths while you do it. Ten times for each exercise is the correct amount. The last exercise sounds simple, but it fills out and rounds the chest and helps you maintain an erect carriage. Place the finger tips together above the head and far enough in front so you can just see them, and then inflate and empty the lungs ten times.

Your Morning Swim.

"Now take your morning swim; wash your face in clear, hot water, and without soap; dash a bit of witch hazel across your face and rinse in cold water; dress in pretty, simple clothes, and eat a simple breakfast, and you are all ready for a happy, useful day, with every part of your body in trim and ready to meet the demands of the hours to come."

And then, ever ready to meet the demands of the hour or moment, Miss Hamilton tripped across the stage to add her own glowing young personality to the glowing ensemble of "The Passing Show of 1913."

LILIAN LAUFFERTY.

Miss Laura Hamilton, from Grave to Gay.

"If you are trying to be attractive, don't make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others."

This is one of the maxims of Miss Laura Hamilton, based on her own experience.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Two boys were discussing a map of Ireland which they had been examining. Said Harry:

"But I think Dublin should be higher up than they have it here. Don't you think so?"

George replied:

"Oh, no; you must be mistaken. These maps are quite reliable. They're all done by latitude and longitude, you know."

Harry gave a doubtful assent.

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reasons to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

TELL HER WHAT YOU HAVE TOLD ME.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had been keeping company with a young girl for about four years. We were to be married last month, but about three months ago we had a little quarrel over a foolish thing I had said to her, which she took up in a wrong way. The quarrel started when I wanted to kiss her after an enjoyable evening before I left her, but she objected and I got real angry. Then I passed the remark that started the quarrel. Kindly let me know how I can regain her love, as I have suffered enough. HARRY "B."

Apologize and make your apology humble and sincere.

I can't believe that a girl would refuse to kiss her betrothed lover good-night because of a whim. You must have done more to offend her than you tell, and must make your apology fit your crime, and your conduct exemplary after she forgives you.

YOU TALK LIKE A MAN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl 21 years of age and I am 19 and have a good position and am able to take care of a wife. She loves me and I love her, so do you think I am too young to be in love, as I am thinking of making her my wife? So I would like your advice, as she is always speaking of marriage. ANXIOUS.

You are not too young to be in love, but 19 is rather young for a man to marry. You say you are in position to support her, which would indicate that you are older than your years, and are a good deal of a man after all.

But why not wait just two years? Believe me, the time will go rapidly and you will never regret it.

WRITE HIM A NOTE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 19 and have been keeping company with a young man a year older than myself for a year and three months. Just because I sent a card to his friend I think he is angry at me. I did not mean any harm. Kindly let me know what I should do to try to make up with him, as I love him dearly. J. K.

I do not like to suggest that a girl apologize when she has done no wrong, for the reason that once humble, the man tries to keep her so. But you have been sweethearts so long, and love is too precious to risk for pride's sake, so write him a little note of explanation. I hope he will be man enough to love you all the more because of this proof of your affection.

LET HER KNOW THE TRUTH.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a poor man and have been keeping company with a young lady for the last couple of months. Would it be proper for me to give her up, after accepting a diamond pin from her at Christmas time? I am willing to give the pin back as I do not care for her. P. W.

I am sorry for the girl, for such humiliation leaves a scar, but I would be more sorry for her if you married her without love in your heart.

Tell her you no longer love her, and be manly about it. And, always, till the day of your death, think and speak well of her.

I think it would be better to return the pin.

I AM AFRAID NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a Cuban lady and I am sure that my love is reciprocated. My many friends embarrass me quite a good deal by claiming that she is a negress. Do you think if I should marry her I could be happy with her? I am thinking seriously of proposing. GEORGE S.

My fear that the step would be fatal is based on your anxiety. Were your love of the right sort, it would be impossible for your friends to embarrass you, and their doubts would only strengthen your resolution to marry the girl. Think this over seriously. I want you to be happy, but you must not marry a girl only to break her heart by being ashamed of her.

CALL AT HOME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, but she does not answer my letters. How can I meet her and tell her of my love? RALPH.

Perhaps she has never received them. Call at her home and learn your fate from her own lips. It may require courage, but boldness in a lover is a trait which all girls admire.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT would appear to those who have noted the great number and variety of women's clubs that woman can have no longing that will not find a society organized for the express purpose of its gratification.

If she aspires to project her spiritual insight into the occult or to squelch that worm of the dust called Man, or to get bacon at cheaper prices, she has only to join a club, and such a desired end, if not attained, is at least set in motion.

But that every longing is not met is proven through the organization by Daysey Mayme Appleton of a society for which the heart of every woman has unconsciously yearned. And the greater the number of her friends, the greater her yearning.

Daysey Mayme had had the parlors of her home made hideous by the gifts of loving friends for years, but not until she received a water color of a yellow lamb on a cerise field with a purple shepherdess did she decide to rebel. The result of that rebellion was the recent launching of a club called The Secret Society of Breakers.

No woman need admit she belongs to such a society. Such an admission would cause the estrangement of generous friends and result in charges of lack of appreciation of their gifts.

"The members," explained Daysey Mayme, "are known to me and report to me for assignment, and our method of procedure in this:

"A woman receives a fish platter on which is painted Jonah inside the whale or some other appetizing marine scene, and the donor expects it to be placed on the plate rail of the dining room.

"The recipient appeals to me, and I deputize one of the active workers of our order to make a social call at her home. The active worker sees the platter, she is enraptured with it, she asks to hold it, she lets it fall, and it breaks into a hundred pieces.

"She is overcome with remorse, of course, which I appease by paying for her work as soon as it is reported that the plate is beyond mending.

"Our organization is only two weeks old, but in that time members have made calls on other members afflicted with generous friends, and have carelessly dropped and broken seventeen goldfish globes, nine lamps, six vases and fourteen china plaques, and have borrowed four oil paintings and eleven sofa cushions for the purpose of copying, which they have lost on the way home.

"The Secret Society of Breakers will appeal to every woman who has kind and generous friends. In future no woman need go through life with her love for an artistic home blighted by purple and blue vases against her green wall paper or pink camels worked on a yellow sofa cushion.

"All she need do will be to drop a note to me."

Eddie McGoorty, Wisconsin's star middleweight, is in Chicago working out at one of the "Windy City" gymnasiums for a busy fall campaign. McGoorty says he will not be ready to do any boxing until about September 20. It is possible that he will meet Jack Dillon or Frank Klaus for the opening show at Milwaukee.

* * *

After considerable trouble, Jim Coffroth, the fight promoter of San Francisco, has finally signed up a pair of fighters for his show on Admission Day, September 9. Bob McAllister, the former champion of the Pacific coast, and Sailor Petroskey will be the principals. They will clash in a 20-round battle. They recently fought a twenty-round draw at San Francisco.

The Dundee-Leach Cross go, scheduled to take place at Los Angeles on Labor Day, has been called off. The death of "Bull" Young has caused McCarey to cancel all Labor Day engagements.

HOW TO HEAL A STUBBORN ABSCESS

Do not cover any external sore so as to interfere with perspiration and the formation of protective scabs. Keep it clean and bandaged. If it is a stubborn case, flush your blood with S. S. S. This famous blood purifier works wonders. And you can easily give your blood a good, thorough cleansing by using S. S. S. There is no need for anyone to be despondent over the illness of blood impurities. No matter how badly they attack the system or how unsightly becomes the skin, just remember there is one ingredient in S. S. S. that so stimulates the cellular tissues throughout the body that each selects its own essential nutriment from the blood.

Do not fail to get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. You will be astonished at the results. If your abscess is of such a nature that you would like to consult a specialist, write to the Medical Dept. The Swift Specific Co., 159 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

GRIFF WANTS WILLIAMS.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 26.—Manager Griffiths is dickering to obtain Pitcher Williams, a big right hander now with the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League. The Senators' manager is understood to have offered $3,000 cash and Outfielder Kenworthy and Moran, now playing on the coast, but the property of the Washington club.

MOTORCYCLE DEMONS TO CLASH IN 24-HOUR RACE

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The 24-hour motorcycle race which will start next Sunday night at the Brighton Beach motordrome will include some of the best riders in the United States and Europe. The men will ride in teams. Owing to the fact that continuous riding has in the past proved such a strain that accidents are very likely, the management decided upon a six-hour rest for all the riders after the twelfth hour.

Jackson Wants to Join Dixie League

JACKSON, MISS., Aug. 26.—Representatives of the Jackson baseball enthusiasts will be sent to Memphis within the next few days for the purpose of opening negotiations to secure a franchise for this city in the proposed new Dixie League.

Thus far, Jackson has not been invited to join the new organization but the promoters of the game are confident that the Capital City could play ball in a Class A organization and maintain a team on a paying basis.

If the circuit as now planned is carried out, Jackson would break the jump between the larger cities, and thus save the league considerable mileage.

While the past season in the Cotton States League was not a success financially, the local promoters of the game have long since learned not to expect to make any money out of a franchise. In other words, they regard baseball as a luxury and cheerfully put up for the deficit at the end of each season.

FORMER CRACKER SETS NEW FIELDING RECORD

MEMPHIS, Aug. 26.—Shortstop Humpty McElveen, former Atlanta and Nashville infielder, now with the Knoxvill (Appalachian League) club, is believed to have established a world's record for errorless fielding. From June 21 to August 23 he took part in 42 games, during which time he did not make a single error. That Mac did not shirk the "hard ones" is evidenced by the fact that he accepted in all 250 chances.

INTERNATIONAL CUE TOURNEY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Morris D. Brown, the national Class A amateur billiard champion, has sailed to Paris, provided with credentials to the French federation, which includes all the Europeans, with the idea of interesting that association in an international series for the world's championship. It is the idea to conduct the contest as a team match, with five of the leading Frenchmen challenging a team of five American defenders, the nation scoring three victories to become the holder of the cup and to defend it annually if challenged.

QUINCY, ILL., Aug. 26.—Joseph Billings, the Quincy catcher, has been ordered to report to Cleveland.

JACK DOESCHER SOLD.

WILKESBARRE, PA., Aug. 25.—The Wilkesbarre New York State League club last night purchased the release of Pitcher Doescher from the Jersey City club of the International League.

Sports and Such

CINCINNATI IS DISSATISFIED with Joe Tinker as manager, thus maintaining its batting average of 1.000 in dissatisfaction with managers. As the poet might have said:

"Oh, city of fat-head and dub!
Oh, who would wish to run thy club?"

* * *

IT IS REPORTED THAT Jockey Wilson pulled a horse at Saratoga to accommodate a man who had made large bets with a number of personal friends. Well, every man likes to put a little joke over on his pals now and then.

* * *

HANNES KOLEHMAINEN, of the Irish-American club, has smashed the record for the three-mile run. "May the Shamrock of old ——!"

* * *

THE FACT THAT IT TAKES the entire power of the National Commission to collect a $16 bet from one ball player to another leads one to believe that there isn't much money in baseball—for the player.

* * *

A baseball star who makes a touch
Must now refund the same.
Ah, would that certain guys we know
Would break into the game!

* * *

LAJOIE HAS JUST COMPLETED his seventeenth year in the big leagues, but as we go to press Joe Birmingham, the Boy Manager, has not yet succeeded in canning him.

* * *

THERE IS SOME NATURAL indignation over the report that an umpire addressed a ball player as "a yellow cur;" but when we recall some of the remarks we have heard ball players address to umpires we incline to think the former will have to come stronger than if they want to get even.

* * *

WE ARE RELIEVED TO learn that Mr. J. P. Morgan, Jr., has won a yachting cup. He can doubtless hock it for enough to keep him in sandwiches until well into the winter.

* * *

DECADENT.

An undertaker watched the champs
Upon the motor track;
But neither spilled nor broke his neck,
Nor fetched his bean a crack.
"The sport is dead," he sadly said,
And then he moseyed back.

* * *

DECLARING THE LACK OF funds cost England the last Olympic meet, wealthy Englishmen are being asked to subscribe $500,000 for the Berlin gathering. It is now probably up to us to raise $600,000 to make the English quit.

* * *

WHY NOT CALL THEM THE Subscription Games?

* * *

THERE ISN'T ANY INCULCATING nonsense about Tom O'Rourke. He writes us to state that Palzer is the real works among the "white hopes" because Palzer, at his last fight, drew more gate money than Smith and Flynn.

Bulldog Destroys So. League Pennant

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Aug. 26.—All because of a bulldog, it is likely that no pennant will be awarded the winner in the Southern League this year.

The dog entered the headquarters where the pennant was kept and very industriously tore the pennant to shreds. The pennant is paid for by annual assessment on all the clubs.

President Kavanaugh declared to-day that he did not think the second division clubs would again contribute toward purchasing something that they had no chance to win, and as the league rules prevent a club from purchasing its own pennant, it seems quite likely that the Southern League leader will go pennantless this season.

KNOXVILLE MANAGER AFTER DIXIE LEAGUE FRANCHISE

MEMPHIS, Aug. 26.—Manager Frank Moffatt, of the Knoxville (Apalachian League) club, is desirous of obtaining a Dixie League franchise for that city. He has written to President Bacon, of the Dixie League, who resides here, asking that he Shreveport berth be turned over to the Knoxville incorporators. President Bacon insists that no change will be made in the present circuit.

WILLIAMS ISSUES DEFI TO ALL EASTERN BANTAMS

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Kid Williams, the Baltimore bantam, through his manager, to-day issued a broadcast challenge to all Eastern bantams, Frankie Burns, of Jersey City, preferred.

Frankie, a few days back, murmured something about the Kid being afraid to meet him in the ring.

COULON BATTERS JACKSON.

To Hold "Cotton States" Here

Title Tourney for East Lake

THIS is the announcement of a tennis tournament that should interest every tennis player and every tennis fan in Atlanta and every tennis player and fan in the South.

Play in the Cotton States Championships—the third annual tournament—will begin at East Lake on the clay courts of the Atlanta Athletic Club Monday, September 8, and will round out a week of the classiest tennis ever seen in this town, or in the South.

* * *

THE Cotton States tourney this year will have a number of distinctive features.

For one thing, the date will be the latest ever set for a tennis tournament in Atlanta.

That idea itself appears an excellent one. The weather conditions at that time should be superb. The Southern League baseball season will just have closed, and those tennis fanciers who also love the national pastime will not have to divide their esteem, but can turn their whole attention to the new attraction.

Carleton Y. Smith is at the head of the movement to bring the Cotton States tourney here, it having been formerly held in Montgomery, where Lee Allen Brookes, of Birmingham, won the last championship. Mr. Brookes will be here to defend his title against the winner of the tournament in singles, who is required to challenge the title holder by the terms of the tournament.

* * *

AGLANCE at the cities from which players will be entered will give a pretty fair idea of the importance of the event.

Players are expected from Nashville, Chattanooga, New Orleans, Memphis, Knoxville, Montgomery, Louisville and Birmingham, the last named being the home city of Brookes, the singles champion, and Bartlett, who, with Brookes, holds the championship in doubles.

Special provisions are being made for the entertainment of the visiting players, who will enjoy the hospitality of the Atlanta Athletic Club during their stay here—no small inducement in itself to spend a week at tennis in Atlanta.

* * *

IN the list of local men entered for the tournament are such well-known players as Nat Thornton, Bryan Grant, Ed Carter, Carleton Smith, J. K. Orr, Jr., and Carl Ramspeck. Among the younger set some brilliant contestants for honors are certain to develop in H. M. Ashe, Jr., Harry Hallman, William Matthews, Roff Sims, Jr., and others.

In all, not fewer than forty crack players will be seen in action on the famous red clay courts at East Lake, and even fifty or sixty contestants is a modest estimate, considering the interest and importance of the tournament.

THIS will be the first tennis tournament the Atlanta Athletic Club has staged this year. The Driving Club put on the Georgia State Championships and the Southern Championships went to New Orleans.

All things, therefore, point to a great big event at East Lake beginning September 8, and it is expected that society and tennis fans in Atlanta, and all over the South, will set apart that week and mark it off in favor of the Cotton States Championships.

* * *

AS to the tournament itself, the official referee will be Frank H. Reynolds, of Atlanta, and that fact assures a competent and sportsmanlike handling of the events.

All matches except finals will be two sets out of three. Finals and challenge matches will be three sets out of five. Consolation matches will be two sets out of three.

The tournament will be held under the auspices of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

Entries will be received until 6 o'clock the afternoon of Saturday, September 6. They should be addressed to Carleton Y. Smith, 608 Walton Building, Atlanta, Ga.

ROY LASATER, DALTON BOY, JOINS BILLIKENS

DALTON, GA., Aug. 26.—Roy Lasater, who has been pitching for the Crown Cotton Mill Baseball Club this year, has left to report to the Montgomery Southern League club for a try-out.

Lasater is just seventeen years of age and has had practically no experience; but he is a husky youngster, standing about six feet, has considerable smoke and is willing to learn.

HANSON NEW PHYSICAL DIRECTOR AT TULANE

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Aug. 26.—C. A. Hanson, for the past five years physical director at the University of Michigan, has been appointed physical director of Tulane University by President Sharpe.

Mr. Hanson is to report here in a few days.

GOLF SCORES NO PROOF OF SKILL, SAYS C. EVANS

By Chick Evans.

HOW misleading the scores of games frequently are! Two players may have had a four on a certain hole; the newspapers duly chronicle the fact and on the face of the returns the playing seems equal, yet the actual playing varied widely in skill.

It has been said that the great fascination of golf is its uncertainty, and surely there are a great many vital things connected with the game over which the player has no voluntary control. For instance, there is the "luck o' the draw," a most important factor in a tournament; for the two sides of the ladder are often vastly different. In addition, there are a thousand and one little things that are so irritating when acting adversely.

One of the latest novelties in hazards comes from Kansas. In a match there we are told that the ball of one of the players was swallowed by a snake and the hole was lost in consequence.

JIMMY CLABBY SIGNS TO BATTLE SAILOR GRANDE

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—Jimmy Clabby, the middleweight from Hammond, Ind., has been signed to meet Sailor Grande in a twenty-round bout at Sacramento on the night of September 1. The men will meet in the open air at the ball park. Clabby has been in training in San Francisco and is in first-class condition.

SMITH SOLD TO VOLS.

CAIRO, ILL., Aug. 26.—Red Smith, the Cairo catcher, by far the best backstop in the K. I. T. League, who was sold to Nashville, departed to-day to join that team.

TIGERS PURCHASE PLAYERS.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 26.—The Detroit team of the American League has purchased Al Platte, right fielder, and Eddie Onslow, first baseman of the Providence team. Both men reported to the Tigers to-day.

OUR FRIEND RITCHIE HAS 'CHILLED PEDALS' AGAIN

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, Aug. 26.—Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion, to-day was accused of trying to back out of his scheduled twenty-round fight in this city on September 29, with Freddie Welsh, the British champion. Ritchie and his manager have declared that if the champion would not fight unless Jim Griffin, of San Francisco, acted as referee. Griffin has emphatically announced that he did not care to be referee and would not act.

JOHN YOUNG, PUGILIST, WILL BE BURIED TO-DAY

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 26.—Inquest over the remains of John Young, the prizefighter, who died from the result of injuries received in a fight last Friday night, was held this morning at the Pierce Bros. undertaking parlors.

Following the inquest the funeral services over the unfortunate pugilist will be held during the afternoon.

Young's Death Puts California Fight Game in Very Bad

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 26.—The fight game is dead in Southern California, as a result of the death of John ("Bull") Young, who died of a fractured skull after his bout with Jess Willard. At least, pending fights here have been declared off, and Willard says he is done with the ring.

Announcement of the cancellation of all dates was made to-day by Thomas J. McCarey, promoter, and Earl Rogers, attorney for the Pacific Athletic Club, which staged the Young-Willard match.

Chief of the fights thus declared off is the Cross-Dundee Labor Day contest. The Pefky-Miller fight also will be abandoned.

The action of the club came after the death of Young had been made the theme of discourses from the pulpits of many churches in the city and after bitter attacks by the press on the game as it is conducted.

Ministers occupying the most prominent and influential pulpits in the city denounced the law that allows prize fighting in this State, and many urged their parishioners not to forget the Young incident when the next Legislature meets in 1915.

While there is yet no concrete movement afoot to abolish the sport, the Iowa State Society, at a picnic at which 20,000 persons attended, passed resolutions condemning prize fighting and advocating the abolition of the sport entirely.

WOLGAST'S HAND IS O. K.; MAY FIGHT M'FARLAND

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—Ad Wolgast, looking the picture of health, has returned to San Francisco, and will at once start training for his ten-round bout with Joe Azevedo before the Oakland Wheelmen's Club on Labor Day. The injured hand which has kept Ad from taking on any matches for some time is now in good shape, and he anticipates no further trouble from it.

Wolgast has received an offer from Milwaukee for a ten-round bout with Packey McFarland late in September, and he intimates that he will accept it. McFarland has offered to make 134 pounds at 3 o'clock for a night fight.

BRAVES RELEASE DEVLIN TO ROCHESTER BALL CLUB

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—President James Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals, has announced that Arthur Devlin, third baseman, has been released to Rochester of the International League. The Braves secured Devlin from the New York Giants. He was at one time considered the best third baseman in the National League.

SHEEHAN GOES TO DODGERS.

FON DU LAC, WIS., Aug. 26.—Jack Sheehan, infielder of the Fon Du Lac club of the W. I. League, a find of this season, has been sold to the Brooklyn club of the National League, to report on September 7, the close of the W. I. schedule.

De Palma Makes a Record Trip Around The Elgin Course

ELGIN, ILL., Aug. 26.—Auto race drivers entered in the two days' events on the Elgin road race course beginning Friday were out on the track early to-day, trying out their racers and learning the track inch by inch. Ralph DePalma, winner of last year's Elgin trophy and free-for-all purse, hung up a track record for the practice runs when he made the eight and one-half miles around the track in 7 minutes and 43 seconds.

The record was made in freshly laid oil and at the risk of wrecking the racing car and ending the driver's life. DePalma's teammates, Pullen and Wishart, tried out their Mercer cars, but did not attempt any records. Joe Dawson tried out his Marmon in slow runs. Hundreds of visitors were in Elgin to-day and the crowds at this year's races are expected to eclipse those of any previous year.

COLLIER, EX-JACKET, TO PITCH FOR GEORGIA

ATHENS, GA., Aug. 26.—It has been announced as a positive fact that H. L. Collier, the former star pitcher of Tech, will be with the Red and Black forces this year. He has written Coach Cunningham that he will enter Georgia for special work and will transfer his athletic allegiance from the Atlanta end of the university system to the Athens end—and will use his best endeavors in future to defeat his former teammates. The Red and Black fans are jubilant over the acquisition of "Col."

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Mrs. Ida J. Johnson to Build Home. Linwood Avenue Sale—Plan to Improve Spring Street.

Mrs. Ida J. Johnson has bought from the Peachtree Heights Company, through E. Rivers, a 72 by 300 foot lot on the east side of Peachtree road, 218 feet north of Mayson's avenue, for $5,760, or at the rate of $80 a front foot. The owner will start in about ten days the erection of a two-story brick veneer residence. Among owners of residences in the vicinity are D. S. Mackey, Mrs. Carie S. L'Engle, E. Anthony, Eugene Dickey and Clark McMichael, who will move into his new two-story brick veneer home this week.

Property Brings $7,700.

Mrs. Mattie Holt Norcross has bought from F. A. Pittman No. 118 Pinwood avenue, 150 feet north of North avenue, for $7,700. The lot is 52 by 200 feet.

Mile of Concrete Paving.

John D. Babbage, the well-known real estate agent, has a client in the concrete business who has a unique proposition which he will present to the City Council. His plan is to give the city a mile of concrete paving for Spring street, starting at Marietta street and proceding northward to Hunnicutt street, with the idea of demonstrating the efficiency of concrete on thoroughfares.

Mr. Babbage represents the Spring Street Improvement Association, and he says the plan is to extend this paving as far as Brookwood, to relieve Peachtree congestion. He declares that such paving in other cities has lasted twenty years without a cent for upkeep or repairs.

Realty Men to Meet.

The board of directors of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will meet Thursday on call of Harris G. White, president, to consider extending some feature of the multiple listing system and of planning for a campaign for the 1916 convention of real estate men, which Atlanta is seeking. The time and hour will be announced later.

Mr. White thinks there is great good in the system of listing property with all the members of the real estate board. This experiment has been tried for several months, but it has not been given the attention needed to make it a success.

It is the idea of Mr. White to send out notices to other cities that Atlanta wants the 1916 convention, and then rest until the campaign is started in earnest two years hence.

Busy Renovating Homes.

The homes of Hugh Richardson, at No. 400 West Peachtree street, and Mrs. Hugh T. Inman, at No. 420 West Peachtree, are undergoing renovation. Mr. Richardson is adding a sun parlor on the south side of his residence. These homes occupy an entire block of two acres and are among the handsomest in the city.

Deals in Contract Stage.

Several local realty deals of interest are in contract stage and should be announced shortly. One of these is a property close to $40,000. Smith & Ewing announce that several deals will be closed this week.

West Peachtree Work Begins.

Actual work on West Peachtree regrading and repaving started Tuesday when workmen began preparing ditches from the walls. Many loads of stone have been placed and it is the plan of the West Peachtree Improvement Club to push the work as fast as possible.

Charts for Healey Building.

Charts showing the exact allotment of space in the Healey Building are in process of preparation and should be out in a few days for the inspection of prospective tenants. Many inquiries have been received and it is believed that the building's contractus will all be signed before the structure is completed.

From Mobile the party will proceed along the Gulf Coast to New Orleans, where a monster reception will be held, and thence to Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego, Phoenix, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Leaving Montgomery Monday morning, the tourists made a bee line for Selma, one of the most prosperous of the Alabama Black Belt towns. Here a big celebration and reception, in which the Mayor and the officials of the Chamber of Commerce took a leading part, was held Monday at noon. Immediately following the reception, the party set out for Thomasville and Jackson.

A few miles south of Jackson, the Mobile good roads and highway boosters will meet the pathfinders and escort them into Mobile, where one of the biggest receptions on the entire program thus far will be tendered the visitors.

Late reports from the Gulf city indicate that the boosters there are making strenuous efforts to outclass the monster affairs which were held in Atlanta, Birmingham and Montgomery.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Mean temperatures above normal, except in the Carolinas, Georgia, northern Florida, northern and central Mississippi, northwestern Alabama and central Texas coast where it was normal or below. Greatest excess occurred over northwestern Alabama. Greatest deficiency over northern South Carolina.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 79 to 82 degrees over the eastern belt; from 78 to 84 degrees over the central and from 82 to 86 degrees over the western portion of the cotton region. The lowest mean temperature, 70 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86, at Del Rio, Texas.

The precipitation was light generally throughout the cotton region, and there were considerable areas in Texas and Oklahoma, and small areas in other States, where there was no rain during the week. More than 2 inches of precipitation occurred in a few localities, the greatest amount, 5.26 inches, being reported from Greensboro, N. C.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—There will be showers during the next thirty-six hours in the lower Lake region, the North Atlantic States and the extreme South Atlantic States.

In the Middle States, east of the Mississippi River, the weather will be generally fair. It will probably become unsettled Wednesday in the Ohio Valley.

The temperatures will rise to-night in the North and Middle Atlantic States and will fall to-night and Wednesday in the Lake region.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Fair in the interior, showers on the coast to-night or Wednesday.

Virginia and North Carolina—Fair to night; warm in extreme west portion; Wednesday fair.

South Carolina—Fair in the interior, showers on the coast to-night or Wednesday.

Florida—Showers to-night or Wednesday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair except showers in the south portion to-night or Wednesday.

Tennessee—Fair and warmer to-night; Wednesday unsettled.

Louisiana—Showers in the southeast portion to-night or Wednesday; fair in north and west.

Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

COTTON GOSSIP

"While Liverpool was disappointing to the bull forces, it had little or no effect on this market, and there was a good demand from the same sources as yesterday on and after the opening. Shorts were apparently nervous and a general buying wave followed, with very little cotton for sale. The aggressive sellers of yesterday were not among the sellers of to-day.

"There has been considerable profit-taking to-day, as it is believed by a great many that a reaction is in order."—J. M. Anderson.

* * *

Realizing sales to the extent of fully 120,000 bales by the original bulls yesterday was surprisingly absorbed by all sorts of buyers within a very narrow range of prices. Riordan was the largest seller and the exchange place house was said to have advised their friends to take profits. McFadden, Baruch, Gwathmey, Shearson and Heinz were put down as sellers. Wall Street houses, the South, Liverpool, Springs Jenks, Weld and Hicks were leading buyers. The buying was credited to shorts, to new longs and to Southern spot houses, who had sold to mills and failed to hedge, and to the world's spinners, who have become disturbed over the Texas reports. Some of the buying on the close was said to be an a bullish National Ginners' report coming out soon.

* * *

One broker's sales yesterday aggregated about 100,000 bales, and he was selling right up to the close, but this selling had little or no effect.

* * *

Weld's man wired from Austin, Texas, that condition was about 65 and Oklahoma 60 per cent.

* * *

The room looks for all private reports this week to show about the same as The Commercial-Appeal, which gave the condition 69.6 per cent, or 10 points decline from a month ago, and most traders are inclined to play on the long side.

* * *

The market is broadening out every day and it looks as if it will continue to do so.

* * *

There is a feeling among many that the market is due to reaction and there is a good deal of cotton sold on this theory, but all cotton is taken easily, most of which is taken by brokers representing spot interests.

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in Arkansas, Tennessee and Missouri:

"Arkansas—Conditions are very mixed in Arkansas. Many correspondents look for a very fair crop and several for the best in years. In these sections, rainfall has been ample; insects are not troublesome and shedding slight. Some report good chances of fruiting to the top and the plant is strong and well cultivated. Labor is generally plentiful and picking will be general by September 5. Cotton is already moving in a few localities in the cotton region. The lowest mean temperature, 70 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86, at Del Rio, Texas.

"Tennessee—Cotton is generally in good condition, fruiting well and in a good state of cultivation. Drouth, however, is beginning to cause considerable shedding, and percentage condition will probably show some loss from a month ago, when it was 88.2, but it is considerably better than last year at this time, when it was 75.4 per cent. The crop is free from insects, and, barring disaster, a good yield is expected.

"Missouri—On account of drouth, cotton has deteriorated considerably in the last month, when the percentage condition was 86.6."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas, clear and pleasant. Oklahoma—Central and east clear, rest partly cloudy to cloudy."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 26.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy in the Atlantics, rains in Atlantic coast districts, fair elsewhere; rains in Oklahoma—Central and for increasing cloudiness over the western States. District storm formation is bordering on Oklahoma, and likely to cause some precipitation and cooler weather in North Texas and Western Arkansas shortly. Generally fair in the central States, with showers in the Atlantics.

BULLISH OPINIONS CONTROL COTTON

Bulls Force Prices Into New High Ground on Western Drouth and Deterioration Reports.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day trading was not so active as yesterday and first prices were 2 points lower to 2 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday.

Sentiment was pretty evenly divided. Privately the opinion was expressed that there would probably be rain over the Oklahoma-Texas belt within 24 hours, but when the official weather map of the Government failed to show any sign of rain or prospects for any the bears became panic-stricken and bid against one another so aggressively that prices went up 13 to 21 points within a few minutes after the opening. Shorts were heavy buyers, also Liverpool, the South and the spot interests were booked as buyers. Offerings were scarce, except a few sales, which was attributed to longs taking profits.

In addition to the dry map reports from the western belt were to the effect that conditions in Oklahoma have never been worse, but most of the planting in Texas would probably yield something less than a third that was planted. Reports of deterioration in most every section of the belt was received.

The Government's weekly weather report was considered as bullish, especially over the western half of the belt, and shorts were apparently displaying considerable uneasiness, and additional buying orders generally carried prices still higher than the early high mark. August soared to 12.45, October 12.16, December 12.11 and January 12.12, establishing new high levels for the present bull movement. The aggressive sellers of yesterday were not in evidence.

Later, however, as the session wore on there was considerable talk of a reaction and the selling became rather general, which was confined mainly to profit taking. No one, however, had the courage to sell the market short in the face of the continued drouth in the Southwest and the pending Government report, which will be made public Tuesday, September 2. The majority of traders anticipate a very bullish condition, claiming that deterioration in the crop during August will exceed 10 points. This did not encourage any of the early activity, and prices shaded sharply from the early best.

The close came in the midst of general realizing and left prices at or near the previous close, bing 2 points lower for August and 1 to 5 points higher for other positions.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August 12.27, October 12.06, December 12.00, January 11.91, March 12.09.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 26.—Liverpool came in poor, but advanced rapidly in the last hour in sympathy with the further strength in our markets. Spots, 7 points higher; sales, 4,000 bales; first trades here were at a decline of 5 points, but a general wave of buying soon came on the market, which, together with the execution of stop orders, advanced prices rapidly to 12.13 for October.

The weekly weather report was expected to be bullish. Private reports continue to speak of sensational deterioration in the western States, and there is a growing expectation of a very low Bureau condition on September 2. A very bullish National Ginners' condition figure is rumored.

Bullish sentiment is in control.

STOCK GOSSIP

"The stock market will probably be quiet until after President Wilson has delivered his message to Congress on the Mexican situation. Many operators do not believe this will have any perceptible effect on prices and think that stocks are a purchase, as they refused to decline on the bad news of last week. Among the specialties would buy the traction issues on any weakness."—G. D. Potter.

"Sentiment in London is cheerful. Traders in foreign markets show but little disposition to trade in American securities pending the outcome of the Mexican situation. The text of Wilson's note to Huerta required that Huerta resign. Huerta has refused and Envoy Lind will leave Mexico to-day, his mission resulting in failure. Wilson is ready to deliver his message to Congress to-day at noon.

"Information channels favor a waiting attitude. We would look for good buying opportunities with the intention to hold for substantial profits unless unexpected events make it advisable to take smaller returns."—New York Financial Bureau.

"The postponement of the delivery of President Wilson's message to Congress until Wednesday will probably cause the present dullness to continue until then. It looks as if the Mexican situation might be settled peaceably. If this proves to be correct the stock market will probably show some improvement."—G. D. Potter.

STREET FASTENS EYE ON MEXICO

Postponement of Wilson's Message Causes Present Dullness to Continue—Small Change.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Mexican uncertainty over developments in the Mexican situation and the message to Congress caused a heavy tone to the stock market at the opening to-day and most prices were lower.

Canadian Pacific dropped 3, while New York, New Haven and Hartford lost 1⅜, going to 34⅜. This was the lowest mark New Haven has reached on the present movement and indicates persistent unloading from some quarter. Union Pacific declined ¼, while United States Steel common went to 62⅜, for a loss of ¾. After a half hour a better tone prevailed and some issues made partial recoveries.

Amalgamated Copper began unchanged and then shaded fractionally. Southern Pacific commenced with a gain of ⅛, but soon lost it. Opening unchanged, Lehigh Valley declined ⅜, American Can, American Smelting, Northern Pacific and Erie each lost ¼, American Locomotive gained ¼. Reading began unchanged at 161⅛, and then shaded.

The curb market was heavy.

Dealings in Americans in London were of a professional character and the stocks were irregular and heavy. Canadian Pacific in London eased off on account of the weak character of the report.

The news from Mexico precipitated a turn about in the market and an att

Education—the First Duty of Government

The Most Important Institutions in the Country Are the Public Schools—the Gymnasiums of Human Brains.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We wish to discuss with our readers in this and in later editions of this newspaper the great and serious question of education.

It is a question as broad as the ocean, and as deep. It is a question so vast that organized discussion of it seems hopeless.

The greatest minds of the world have devoted their powers to the intricate question of development of the human brain, and the problem has been scarcely touched.

The greatest works on education in the history of the world are undoubtedly Plato's "Republic," Spencer's "Education" and Rousseau's "Emile." The last is the greatest of all. It should be read by every father and mother and by every earnest citizen.

Other works that may be earnestly recommended are Aristotle's "Politics," Pestalozzi's "How Gertrude Teaches Her Children" and Froebel's "Education of Man."

To Rousseau undoubtedly belongs the high honor of having thought and written most powerfully, most originally and most practically on the greatest of problems. His brain is the cornerstone of the structure of intelligent educational methods.

He foreshadowed in his "Emile" Fourier's splendid principle of "attractive industry."

THE PROGRESS OF HUMANITY DEPENDS UPON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE HUMAN BRAIN THROUGH EDUCATION.

Man is far from the animal in proportion as his brain is cultivated. Even the animals themselves rank in their kingdom in proportion to their brain activity.

William T. Harris said truly: "If man had let himself alone he would have remained the monkey that he was. Not only this, but if the monkey had let himself alone he would have remained a lemur, or a bat, or a bear, or some other creature that now offers only a faint suggestion of what the ape has become."

The elephant and the ape, among our humble animal brothers, appear to have reached their limits of possibility in the way of educational development. They still remain, and always will remain, vastly inferior to their microscopic comrades—the ants and bees and other insects.

The human race has barely begun the systematic study of the problem of application, and systematic application of the truths discovered and agreed upon. In proportion to our stature and possibilities we are hideous ignoramuses compared with the ant in the garden path.

The education of children is regulated not by their brain formation and possible development, but by the wealth of their parents, the parsimony of municipalities, the baleful influences of tradition and the colossally stupid idea that thorough brain cultivation is in some way antagonistic to material success.

The greatness of a nation depends upon the average mental power of the nation's citizens, and mental power depends absolutely upon education.

The ignorant man who has succeeded through natural force and lucky opportunity is fond of asking these questions:

"What is the good of education? Of what practical use is scientific knowldege?" These men are admirably answered by Herbert Spencer, to whose work they are referred.

A collection of Englishmen ruined themselves in the sinking of mines in search of coal. They might have saved their money had they known that a certain fossil which they dug up in abundance belongs to a geological stratum below which no coal is ever found. They went on digging cheerfully and wasting their money. An acquaintance with that fossil and its meaning would have saved their cash.

Some individuals spent one hundred thousand dollars trying to save the alcoholic byproduct that distills from bread in baking. They would have saved their money had they known that only a hundredth part of the flour is changed through fermentation.

The study of biology is essential in the successful fattening of cattle.

An "entozoon" seems to the practical man a foolish, imaginary creature. But millions of sheep have been saved by the discovery that one of these fancy scientific entozoa, pressing on the brain, caused the sheep's death. When you know the entozoon you can dig him out and save the sheep's life.

"My son's going to be an artist," says one proud father. "He does not need to study a lot of scientific rubbish."

This parent does not know that the difference between a good and a bad sculptor or painter is often based on knowledge or ignorance of anatomy and mechanical principles.

Education is important to the individual because it means development of the brain, development of capacity for production and increased chances of success.

EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO THE STATE BECAUSE IT MEANS NOT ONLY COMPETENT CITIZENS, BUT MORAL CITIZENS.

The animal in us yields to the influence of education. Knowledge and brutality are enemies. They do not dwell together.

The most important institutions in this country are the public schools—the gymnasiums of human brains. The most important citizens of the nation are the teachers.

The greatest criminals are the employers of child labor, because they deny education, cut down in childhood the citizen's chance of progress and success.

Work and vote for more and better public schools.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Is Our Blood in Its Composition and Temperature the Counterpart of the Water of the Ocean, Whence, They Say, All Life Sprang?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SCIENCE boasts of its exactness, and properly so. Yet there is no speculator comparable in boldness with the man of science who is endowed at the same time with the scent for precision and the gift of imagination.

One of the most daring scientific speculations with which I am acquainted is that of a French physiologist, R. Quinton, who ventures to assert that the blood which flows in the veins of man and other animals derives its peculiar temperature (which hardly varies more than ten degrees in all the host of vertebrate, or back-boned, animals) and its peculiar composition (in which salt always plays a fixed part) from the primeval sea that enveloped the earth in those early ages when life was just beginning on our planet.

Take Out Corpuscles, He Says, and Our Blood Is Sea Water.

Man, says this bold speculator in scientific assets, is a kind of marine aquarium, filled with seawater resembling that of the ancient ocean in which his lower animal ancestors bathed millions of years ago. We call this salty fluid, from which our living cells derive their vitality, "blood," but deprive the blood of the red and white corpuscles which have developed in it, and all that is left is a "physiological salt solution," precisely like the salty water of the primeval sea, and retaining the same temperature.

In other words, the so-called vital fluid of animals is nothing but sea-water, less salty and hotter than the sea-water of to-day, but retaining the same composition and the same temperature that it had when, ages upon ages ago, the first living creatures of our world emerged from their original home, which was the ocean, and, with new bodies, henceforth sealed up, so that the fluid on which their lives depends can not escape, crawled out upon the land, and gave rise, by gradual evolution, to the higher animals of the present time.

This ancient, life-giving seawater has been handed on from generation to generation, for untold aeons of time, continuing to exist, age after age, in the veins of animals, forever the same in composition and temperature, notwithstanding the innumerable changes of form it has undergone in the ceaseless processes of generation, growth, decay, death and regeneration.

To see how this curious speculation has arisen, let us consider the fact that the first organisms inhabiting the sea (long before there was life on the land) were simple living cells of protoplasm, open in structure and bathed throughout in the warm, salty water which maintained their vitality. As the sea cooled, and became more salty through the influx of mineral substances washed down from the land, it was no longer a suitable abode for many of the progressing animal forms which had been built up by the combination of the original single cells, and these assumed the shape of closed bodies, in which the life-sustaining fluid was locked up, while its original temperature was maintained by physiological action.

Having emerged upon the land these creatures continued in the course of evolution, determined by their new surroundings, and assumed a great variety of higher forms, constantly increasing in complexity or organization, but always retaining the secret of life derived from the sea in the form of a fluid, never varying much from a temperature of about 100 degrees, nor from a composition comprising about seven or eight parts salt to a thousand parts of water.

It is a strange fact that from the poles to the equator all vertebrate animals possess blood of nearly the same temperature and the same degree of saltness, and Quinton avers that this singular uniformity is due to the retention in their bodies, sealed up with membranes, of the ancestral composition of the universal fluid that, at the beginning, nourished the life of their remote predecessors in the sea. If this be so, then our blood is simply an image of the water of the first ocean, at the time when life was developed in it. If we did not possess it we could not continue to live. In a certain sense, then, we may be said still to live bathed internally by the life-giving fluid of the primeval sea.

Looked at in another way, according to Quinton's hypothesis, the blood of vertebrate animals gives geologists a clue to the temperature and composition of the first sea waters. We know that these have changed with the progress of time, the water becoming both salter and colder, besides acquiring other ingredients which it did not possess originally.

Many Scientists Accept This Hypothesis in General.

This strange hypothesis has met with a certain degree of approval from other investigators, whose criticisms of it relate to details but do not attack its general credibility. Thus Professor A. B. Macallum thinks that the blood of the vertebrates represents the sea water at a later period than that assumed by Quinton, but still a period millions of years back of our time, while Dr. A. C. Lane suggests that the blood temperature may have been raised by physiological processes above that of the sea when the animals left it.

Debt

It Is the Ugliest Monster Outside of Crime, She Asserts; It Is a Phase of Shame.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

A MAN who has made a great financial success, somewhat suddenly, is doing much charitable and helpful work for humanity, but he is marring his own character and making trouble for himself and others in the future by one unfortunate habit.

HE NEVER PAYS A DEBT UNTIL FORCED TO DO SO AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Every one who knows the man knows that he is honest and generous. He is sure to pay all he owes and to liquidate every debt, eventually. But, meantime, he causes untold discomfort to his creditors frequently by his delays.

But There Is a Big Leak in the Lifeboat.

Often, while some man to whom he is owing a large bill is needing the money to push along his own affairs, his wealthy debtor is giving liberal sums to aid others or to help some worthy cause.

But there is a leak in the lifeboat of this man which, unless mended, will eventually either sink his craft or damage all its cargo.

No doubt the habit was first formed when he was struggling to make his way; before fortune turned her smiling face upon him. But his very struggles and needs in early life should have made him more consistent in his dealings with his fellow men after he obtained his fortune.

Debt is the ugliest monster on earth outside of crime.

Every young man or woman who is setting forth upon a self-supporting career should keep his mental guns charged and ready to fire upon the ogre the moment it presents its horrid face at the door.

If the habit of debt is once formed, it is almost as difficult to break as alcoholism or the drug habit. The longer it is indulged in the more difficult the cure.

Every parent should teach a child that debt is a phase of shame.

Children Should Be Taught Horror of Debt.

Tell your boy or girl that it is far more respectable to wear old garments and to be unable to present a smart appearance than to go about in clothes which are not paid for, or to indulge in any pleasures or privileges which have made debt a necessity.

Then train them in the way of keeping a careful cash account each day and of balancing up their books at the end of each week. Speak often and repeatedly of the honor which such habits eventually bring and of the corresponding dishonor which follows on the habit of debt.

There are children born into the world with a tendency to be borrowers and even to be thieves, because their fathers were parsimonious and niggardly with their mothers before their birth. And the children received the mental mark of their mothers' unfortunate state of mind.

One such woman longed for certain kinds of food before the birth of her child, and was told by her husband that her longings were extravagant and unreasonable. So persistent were her longings, however, and so small was the expense they entailed, that the unhappy, expectant mother purloined pennies from the pockets of her sleeping master, and when she had obtained the petty sum needed purchased the dainty she desired.

But her child was born with a mania for taking things which did not belong to her; even when she could have them by asking, or possessed money to purchase them, she preferred to steal.

Let Them Learn How to Spend Money Properly.

Men of that niggardly type often force their wives and children into the debt habit. It is astonishing to find how many men of independent means, hold tight the purse strings, and compel their wives to go empty-handed, while given unquestioned right to buy whatever they desire, so long as their purchases are presented to the husband in a bill at the end of the month. Frequently these men make no complaint at extravagance; yet make bitter protest if the wife asks for a small monthly allowance.

Children reared under such conditions have no horror of debt. They have been taught that it is the only way to obtain what they desire. Every boy or girl ought to be given a small weekly or monthly allowance, taught how to spend it wisely, and made to keep a strict account.

With such teaching should go a continual kindly, persistent education on the nobility of independence, and the dishonor of debt.

If children form such ideals before they go out into the world, there is small fear that they will ever form the habit of debt afterward.

EYES AND VOICES

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

EYES and voices of dead friends
Come to me at night and cheer me,
And they seem so very near me
Ere my sleepless vigil ends.

Eyes that once exchanged with mine
Looks of fond regard and feeling
From the earth come softly stealing,
Once again with love to shine.

Voices stilled for many years—
Ah, but I can hear them plainly!
Voices that I longed for vainly,
They have broken from their biers.

Every eye a beacon light
Just beyond the shoals of sorrow,
Pointing out the grand To-morrow,
Every voice a soft delight.

Eyes and voices of dead friends
Come when Memory is complaining,
Sweetly soothing and sustaining,
Till the reign of darkness ends.

FRANK TO LEAD OWN FIGHT FOR LIFE

WILSON'S FINAL WORD, HUERTA MUST ABDICATE

PRESIDENT FORCES MEXICO CRISIS

Washington Anxiously Awaits Effect of U. S. Ultimatum—Lind on His Way Home.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—To-day is considered in diplomatic circles the fateful day in the already strained relations between the United States and Mexico. The American people, representatives of European governments and attaches of South American republics are waiting with ill-concealed anxiety the delivery of President Woodrow Wilson's message to Congress on the Mexican situation, postponed from yesterday at the direct request of Envoy John Lind and Foreign Minister Frederico Gamboa.

Feeling prevails in Washington that President Wilson, in his message to Congress, will demand the abdication of Victoriana Huerta, who seized the reigns of government in Mexico at the time of the Madero overthrow.

The original American note delivered to Minister Gamboa by Envoy Lind demanded an armistice, an early election, the abdication of Huerta and his pledge not to be a candidate in the election. While Envoy Lind's message failed, it is not believed President Wilson will recede from his position.

Backed by Other Nations.

In view of the fact that his proposals have the backing of the civilized governments of the world, it would not be surprising if, in his message to Congress, he couched his demands in even stronger terms than those employed by Envoy Lind.

President Wilson's implacable attitude toward Huerta, coupled with his well-known desire to accomplish his objects without bloodshed, has given rise to widespread speculation as to what will follow the deliverance of his message to Congress.

Envoy Lind is at Vera Cruz, having traveled in an ordinary day coach. There he is still exchanging views with Foreign Minister Gamboa, but it is said in official circles these interchanges will not alter the situation.

William Baynard Hale, President Wilsons other private representative in Mexico, is scheduled to leave for the United States to-day.

Troops Recruited and Drilled.

Despite peace messages from Mexico and conciliatory interviews continually given out by Foreign Minister Gamboa, the fact remains that the Mexican Governors and jefe politicos have been order by Dr. Urrutia, Mexican Minister of the Interior, to organize and drill all able bodied men in the Republic and report the combined strength to the Mexican Capital.

The official reason advanced that these troops are to participate in the Mexican independence day celebration September 16 is given little credence hre.

All Japan for War, Claims Tokio Editor

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 27.—Joseph D. Halluday, editor of The Japan Advertiser, of Tokio, who has arrived here by steamer from Yokohama, declares all Japan is eager for war with the United States.

The uneducated classes would plunge into the struggle at once, first seizing the Philippines and Hawaii, but the educated classes favor waiting ten years until the Russian war debt shall have been extinguished he said.

"The feeling," Mr. Halluday added, "is that the white and yellow races must fight out their differences."

CAMINETTI HIT BY JURY RULING

Judge Forces Attorneys for Alleged Slaver to Change Tactics in Revealing Defense.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—It was seen in the questioning of prospective jurors to-day that the defense of F. Drew Caminetti will be that he did not have any criminal intent when he eloped to Reno, Nev., from Sacramento with Lola Norris, the high school girl.

Attorney Woodworth, representing Caminetti, pressed his questions on this point until Federal Judge VanFleet ordered him to adopt another line of questioning.

The women directly connected with the white slavery case against Caminetti did not attend to-day's session of the trial. None of Caminetti's relatives, except his brother, Anthony Caminetti, Jr., of Sacramento, attorney, was in the courtroom.

Judge VanFleet was anxious to have the hearing of the case ended as soon as possible, and it was expected the attorneys for both sides would hasten the work of selecting a jury so that the twelve men who will hear the evidence against the son of the Commissioner General of Immigration likely will be obtained by to-night.

John D. Plays Golf With 2 Deaf Mutes

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—John D. Rockefeller cut loose from his sedentary habits to-day and entertained at golf two young men he did not know and had seen but once before in his life.

The young men were Charles D. Russell, of La Salle, Ill., son of a Western man, and Horace W. Buell, Jr., of Chicago, delegates to the National Association of the Deaf now in session here.

"I have the greatest admiration in the world for these young men," he declared. "Their inability to hear and speak has not prevented their becoming good, intelligent men."

Boys' High Seeks Alma Mater Song

Plans for offering a cash prize for the best original words for an alma mater song for the alumni of the Boys' High School of Atlanta are complete.

The purpose of the contest is to arouse interest among the hundreds of alumni of the Boys' High School in the alumni organization. The class of 1910 has taken the lead in this, and the cash prize has been raised among its members.

Bad 'Boy' of 63 Is Forced By Father To Sign the Pledge

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The sad story of an erring son has been placed on police court records. William H. Palmer, Jr., is his name. He is a rollicking rake of 63, and his father, William H. Sr., who is 86, called on the police to check William's industry in the sowing of wild oats. Said the father to Judge Sabath:

"I think he should stop sowing wild oats. He drinks a great deal. He comes home and acts like a young colt. I find it difficult to control him. You can see for yourself that he must be hard for me to manage. He weighs 250 pounds, while I weigh only 95. He is out every night carousing, calling on women, and I can't do anything with him.

"I tell him he'll ruin his constitution if he keeps on the way he's going. He always has been a wild, headstrong boy. I want you, Judge, to help me make a man of him. He's got to sign the pledge."

"I agree with you," said the Court, addressing the father. "William is getting to be a big fellow now. It's time he learned to behave himself. I'll give him just one minute to sign the pledge."

William signed.

Willard Exonerated By Coroner's Jury

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—After several hours of deliberation over the testimony presented by witnesses of last Friday's fight at Vernon between Jess Willard and "Bull" Young, which resulted in the death of the latter, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict exonerating Willard.

Several physicians who attended Young after the fatal blow was delivered testified that the Wyoming fighter's physical condition was bad and that Young had a cigarette heart, and that he was suffering from an affection which had robbed him of stamina which he may have formerly possessed.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury will have no bearing upon the prosecution of Willard, McCarey and the others charged with manslaughter, according to a statement of Prosecutor W. J. Ford after the inquest.

Danish King Saves Actress From Sea

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—According to The Budget, King Christian of Denmark, while cruising in the royal yacht, Rita, off Jutland, rescued Cinema, the actress, from drowning.

She became exhausted and the King ordered the royal boat lowered to rescue the actress, who was taken aboard just in time.

IMMODEST DRESS SCORED BY HEFLIN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Women who shun the immodesty and impropriety of present-day fashions can be relied upon for the future strength and posterity of the nation, according to Congressman Thomas Heflin, of Alabama. Heflin expressed his opinion of diaphanous feminine drapery and the slit skirt craze as follows:

"I would paraphrase the Scripture, 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' and say, 'By their dress or lack of dress we shall know them.' The evil genius of lustful fashion through immodest dress is playing havoc with a certain class of women in this country and setting a bad example for others.

"Thank God, the good mothers have begun a crusade against this evil.

"The woman who instills in her daughter the principles of good sense and modesty and trains her up in the way that she should go has done more for her day and generation than she can ever hope to do by active participation in politics."

DORSEY UNDECIDED ON ACTION AGAINST NEGRO CONLEY AS ACCESSORY

In the desperate battle that has been started for the life of Leo M. Frank, sentenced Tuesday to hang October 10 for the slaying of Mary Phagan, the two brilliant legal generals, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, will have in active council with them the convicted man himself.

Solicitor Dorsey, asked Wednesday when he probably would ask for the indictment of Jim Conley as an accessory after the fact, said that he knew of no reason why it should not be done at once on the convening of the Grand Jury.

He added, however, that he had made no decision on the matter, and that the indictment might be asked when the Grand Jury sits this week or the indictment might be allowed to hold over for some time. The Solicitor had every confidence that the verdict of the jury in Frank's case would be upheld.

Frank told friends Wednesday that he was planning to have a large part in the conduct of the fight to obtain a reversal of the verdct of last Monday afternoon. Frank rendered his attorneys assistance during the preparation of his case for presentation at the trial which has just ended, but all of the decisions of any consequence were left to them.

The convicted man followed every move of Rosser and Arnold, as well as of Solicitor Dorsey, with an unceasing vigilance and with a thorough comprehension of the purpose involved. Friends say he feels that he is competent to have a part in the mapping out of the future campaign for his life and liberty, and expects to have a considerable voice in every plan that is proposed.

It is his life that is at stake, and he is convinced that he has obtained a sufficient knowledge of legal procedure at least to advise and suggest and, at times, direct as to what shall be done.

October 10 Jewish Sacred Day.

That he is not without tactical ability in a law court was demonstrated by his statement to the jury.

An impressive coincidence in the sentencing of Leo Frank to hang on October 10 is that this is the most deeply sacred days of all of Frank's religion—the Day of Atonement. It is the day for confession of sins. It probably is as universally observed by members of this faith as Good Friday, for example, is observed by the Roman Catholics.

The setting of this date, however, may be regarded as little more of a formality, as it is certain that Frank will not go to his death on that day. The arguments for a new trial will be heard on October 4, and if the motion is denied an immediate appeal will be made to the Supreme Court, and this will necessitate a postponement in the date set for the execution while the matter is being thrashed out in the higher courts.

While the beginning of the real battle will not take place until October 4, Frank's lawyers entered at once into a new plan of campaign for his freedom, Reuben Arnold is taking a few days' vacation, but will return to the city shortly to resume his work on the case. In the meanwhile witnesses are being examined and data obtained in reference to several of the points on which a new trial will be asked of Judge Roan.

Father of Frank Prostrated.

Rudolph M. Frank, father of the convicted man, was told Tuesday at his home in Brooklyn of the verdict that had been returned against his son. An elderly man and an invalid much of the time, Dr. Frank was prostrated by the news.

"I know Leo is innocent. He never would be capable of committing a terrible deed of that sort," the old man told Harry Lewis, the family lawyer, who spoke to the reporters. Lewis was one of the character witnesses who came to Atlanta to testify at the trial.

CAVALRY IS READY TO RUSH THAW OVER BORDER

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC, Aug. 27.—In spite of the declarations of Harry K. Thaw's lawyers that the withdrawal of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus meant that the fugitive would have to remain in jail here, the Dominion Government had all its preparations made for the removal of Thaw in the first step of his deportation long before 10 o'clock, the time originally set by Judge Globensky for arguments in Superior Court on Thaw's application for liberty on a habeas corpus writ.

Former District Attorney William T. Jerome, of New York, and counsel for the Department of Immigration, contended that Thaw would have to be produced at 10 o'clock notwithstanding the fact that the attorneys for Thaw said that they did not want a writ of habeas corpus. This gave complications to the cause, such as have never been experienced in the local courts.

While Thaw laboriously toiled in his cell writing an interview on various subjects which concerned him, representatives of the Dominion Government were stationed six members of the Canadian police about the jail to act as guards and as an escort for Thaw either when he was ordered produced in the court house or else started for the border. In addition to these six uniformed and armed officers of the law, five representatives of the Department of Immigration and four Canadian secret service men are on the ground.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the Matteawan, N. Y., asylum for the criminal insane, from which Thaw escaped, has joined the forces which are fighting to get the fugitive back into that institution. Thaw's counsel is confronted by a formidable array.

Mr. Jerome, Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy, of New York State; Samuel Jacobs, of Montreal, representing New York State; District Attorney E. A. Conger, of Dutchess County, New York (in which Matteawan is situated), and others are co-operating with the Canadian legal representatives.

When Thaw looked out from his cell and saw a party of troopers patrolling the streets, he was annoyed, but this did not interfere with his literary labors.

MRS. GODBEE, IN BOUDOIR CELL, AWAITS FATE

MILLEN, GA., Aug. 27.—In a cell transformed as if by magic into a boudoir, as dainty and complete as can be found in any home, Mrs. Sarah Perkins Godbee, charged with the murder of her divorced husband and his young bride, awaits her preliminary hearing in the Jenkins County courts Thursday as calmly and dispassionately as though she had already been assured of her freedom.

The cell itself reflects the cheerfulness and hope that fill the accused woman's mind. Despite the steel ceiling, the rough concrete floors and the iron bars, her cell is attractive and distinctly feminine. The roughness of the floors is concealed by soft rugs, the iron bars at the windows are hidden behind little white curtains that catch every flutter of the breeze; the toilet accessories, washstand and china are in blue and white, the color in which her home is furnished.

All the Comforts There.

Two white beds with fresh linen, two rockers and several straight chairs, a little blue and white table on which rests a vase constantly filled with fresh flowers, a glass pitcher of ice water, a glass stand filled with fruit, a bottle of toilet water, stacks of magazines and letters—all combine to transform the cell into a typical woman's room.

Mrs. Godbee takes as much care and pride in her personal appearance as she does in the appearance of her cell. She usually wears negligee—a dainty, pale blue kimono brocaded in pink and yellow butterflies and finished with valenciennes laces. She is rarely alone at night. Her relatives or her daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, more usually the latter, always spend the night with her. The daylight hours see streams of friends coming and going, all with words of encouragement and many with fresh dainties and conveniences for her comfort.

Mrs. Godbee's calmness and carefree attitude is the marvel of Jenkins County officials. She talks and laughs as she did before the double murder of which she is accused; she chats freely with her friends, and is always glad and willing to see visitors. Gossip of the current topics of the day falls from her lips as readily now as before the crime, and she has become an inveterate newspaper reader.

Keeps Silent on Killing.

Only on one subject does Mrs. Godbee preserve a close silence. Of the killing of Judge Godbee and the events leading up to it she will say nothing. She will give no inkling of the causes that led her to shoot her former husband and his bride, and silence is the only answer to inquiries as to her line of defense.

When the killing is brought up, Mrs. Godbee always smiles softly and changes the subject of conversation, prattling innocently of the latest happenings in Millen society or of the great world events.

The excitement created in Millen by the killing has not subsided, though it has been almost two weeks since the crime was committed. Sentiment appears to be divided, some claiming that the accused woman has suffered until she could suffer no longer; while others express the opinion that Judge Godbee was not altogether to blame for the marital troubles that brought on his death.

Fugitive Boxer Asks French Citizenship

Special Cable to The Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—Through his counsellors, Jack Johnson, the negro champion heavyweight pugilist, who fled to France from the United States after he had been convicted in the latter country of white slavery, to-day filed declarations of his intention to become a French citizen.

OBITUARY

The body of Sidney O. Gautier, who died Tuesday, was sent Wednesday to Crescent City, Fla., for funeral and interment. He was 24 years old.

The funeral of James J. Lockhart, who died late Tuesday, was held Wednesday morning from the Chruch of the Immaculate Conception. Interment was at Oakland Cemetery.

Mrs. Lucile Graham Wilholt, No. 15 East North avenue, died late Tuesday. She is survived by her husband, J. F. Wilholt, one small child, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Graham, and one brother, William Graham. The body was removed to the home of her parents, No. 354 Ponce DeLeon avenue. Funeral announcements will be made later.

Mrs. Etta E. Evans, 49 years old, No. 1 Ashland avenue, died Tuesday night. Surviving her are her husband, J. P. Evans, one daughter, Miss Otis Evans, and three sons, J. T., L. W. and D. E. Evans. Funeral announcements later.

The funeral of Mrs. Mildred Almand, who died at her home in Hapeville Tuesday, will be held at Antioch Church Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. A special car for the church will leave the residence at 2 o'clock. Interment in the church yard.

The body of B. Simms Heard, who died at a local hospital Monday night, was taken Tuesday afternoon to the home of his parents in Covington, Ga. Funeral services were held there Wednesday mornin. Mr. Simms was assistant cashier of the Macon National Bank. He was a graduate of Emory College, in the class of 1908.

Mrs. Robert N. Aiken, a well-known Atlanta woman, died at midnight Tuesday at a private sanitarium. She is survived by her husband, Robert N. Aiken, of Whiteball Terrace, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Edge, of Houston, Texas. The body was removed to the chapel of Burkert & Simmons, pending funeral arrangements.

JURY SERVICE CALLED SUPREME LOVE TEST

MRS. F. V. L. SMITH.

"If you are not sure whether you love your husband, let him serve on a jury for four weeks—then you'll know!"

Mrs. Frederick V. L. Smith, of No. 481 Cherokee avenue, said it—and sighed. But it was a happy sigh, for Mr. Smith, his face wreathed in one of those "I, John, take thee, Mary" smiles, was coming hurriedly up the sidewalk home from business fully an hour earlier than usual.

Not 24 hours before they had been reunited, after Mr. Smith had been a stranger to his own home—a stranger to every place except the Kimball House and the courtroom—for four long weeks, serving on the famous Frank jury.

"I don't think there is anything," Mrs. Smith continued, "that would cause a woman to realize how much she loved her husband as to have him be on a jury; to be a 'widow' and yet know that your husband is in the same city that you are.

"Let him pass you two or three times a day, and not be allowed to speak to him—only to look and wave a handdkerchief. Let those old deputy sheriffs stop him when he goes to say 'hello,' and caution you to be quiet when you start to ask him if he is being taken care of, if he gets enough to eat and if his clothing needs mending—why, I don't see how you can help making a vow never to speak a cross word to him.

"Little Dan Cupid may bear the burden during courtship and honeymoon, but after marriage he has a great aid in jury service. I'll just bet if a woman who fusses and nags husband would let him serve on a jury for a month or so she'd be permanently cured.

"It's a terrible thing to be a temporary widow. There must be a better word to express it than 'terrible,' but if there is I don't know it, unless I say it was simply awful. I had almost rather my husband would be dead than be on a jury. I don't think a real widow has a bit harder time than a 'temporary one.'"

Mrs. Smith, besides being one of the most beautiful of the eleven "temporary widows," is also one of the most remarkable. When her husband was caught in the jury net he was not given time to get any one to take charge of his business.

So Mrs. Smith, despite the fact that she had a baby to take care of, stepped into the berch, and during the four weeks of the trial has conducted her husband's business affairs as well as he could himself. Every morning saw her at his office in the Empire Building—and every noon and evening saw her at the doors of the courthouse waving greetings to her "dead" husband.

Wife at Last Collapses.

The strain, however, was too great, and during the last week of the trial Mrs. Smith worked solely on her "nerve." She came home Monday evening very nervous, and shortly after 8 o'clock, when she received a telephone message from her husband that he was coming home, she collapsed.

Mr. Smith, returning at 10 o'clock, after an absence of four weeks, foupd his wife unconscious and physicians bending over her. Mrs. Smith was unconscious for nearly two hours, and for more than half an hour of that time it was feared she was dead. By Tuesday afternoon, however, she had fully recovered her strength.

Food Probers for Ellis Island Named

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti has appointed Richard H. Taylor immigration inspector in field service, stationed in this city; James T. Hughes, assistant immigration inspector at Philadelphia, and P. L. Prentis, immigration inspector in charge at Chicago, to compose the board of inquiry which will at once begin an investigation of conditions at the immigration station at Ellis Island, N. Y.

It was charged immigrants were fed bad food.

Kentucky Feudist, Reported Dead, Lives

LEXINGTON, Aug. 27.—Green McIntosh, feudist, charged with the murder of Greenberry Combs in Breathitt County, and who was reported as shot to death while resisting arrest by a sheriff's posse, was not killed.

He is being hidden in the Breathitt Mountains by friends. Word of his death was telephoned from the mountains, the officers say, to cause the search to die out so he could escape from the hills.

Former Bailiff Fails In Suicide Attempt

Following the alleged loss of $500 in a business deal, James W. Hutchins, No. 296 South McDaniel street, made a desperate attempt at suicide Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. That the attempt failed was due, it is said, to the combined efforts of Hutchins' wife and sister and Call Officers Milam and Palmer.

Hutchins, who was formerly a bailiff, shot a negro while placing him under arrest about three years ago and was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder. He was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, but secured a new trial from the Court of Appeals. He is now out on bond pending his second arraignment.

Fan Roots so Loudly He Loses His Voice

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 27.—Ernest Wellman, a fan of this city, cheered so loudly over a wonderful catch made by a Grand Rapids' outfielder that he has lost his voice.

Physicians declare he so injured his vocal cords that it is hardly likely that he will be able to speak again.

BEAVERS STARTS CAMPAIGN ON AUTO NOISE

Declaring that the auto muffler cut-out ordinance is one of the most wantonly and flagrantly violated of the city statutes, Police Chief Beavers Wednesday said he intended to use every means at his command to enforce it.

The Chief has issued a special order to the entire police force instructing a rigid enforcement of the muffler law. Cases are to be made against every offender, no matter who he may be. The Chief is determined to bring relief from the nuisance, and said he is satisfied a few cases and stiff fines in Police Court will bring wonderful improvement.

In discussing the nuisance, the Chief took occasion to commend the editorial in The Georgian a few days ago relative to the necessity for a strict enforcement of this law for the protection of citizens.

"This muffler cut-out ordinance is a law, and it must be enforced as long as it remains on the statute books," said the Chief. "In my opinion it is a good law, for the noise made by the cutting out of mufflers, particularly at night, is an abomination, and for the reason that it is absolutely unnecessary to the running of a car. The cutting out of the muffler has no perceptible effect on the car—but it does have a perceptible effect on people who are trying to get a good night's sleep.

"The noise from the cars is not so bad in the day time, as the rumble of other vehicles and trolley cars serves to drown it out to a material extent. But at night, after the city has quieted down, the muffler cut-out is certainly a nerve-racking nuisance. It is worse in the summer, because of the great number of autos in the streets and the fact that people sleep with their windows open, thus receiving the full benefit of the distracting din as the speeding cars whiz past."

Considerable complaint of late has been made by citizens of different parts of the city, and these will receive with joy the news of the warfare started by Chief Beavers.

Cigarettes Blamed For Lack of Humor

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Declaring that American humor is on the wane and the reason is that nearly all of the men who try to make the nation laugh smoke cigarettes, Miss Lucy Page Gaston, superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette League, and known over the entire country for her tireless efforts against cigarettes, wrote a warning to the American Press Humorists' Association, now in session at Peoria, Ill.

Miss Gaston said that in order to save American humor she would administer free of charge her mouth wash cigarette cure to any of the newspaper funny men who would accept.

Father Who Whipped Wayward Girl Freed

MACON, Aug. 27.—One week after his mother died of pellagra and ten days after he had attempted to commit suicide, W. J. Bettis, a carpenter, was tried before the Recorder, charged by his 15-year-old daughter with cruelly beating her with a strap and threatening to cut her throat.

Bettis claimed that his daughter had become wayward and, the daughter herself admitted indiscreet conduct. The charges against the father were dismissed. The girl refused to return home. She probably will be sent to a reformatory.

Delta Special Leaves For National Karnea

Eleven members of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity left Tuesday afternoon on a special car over the Louisville and Nashville for Indianapolis to attend the Karnea, the national convention of the fraternity, which will be in session at the Severin Hotel from August 28 to August 30.

Deltas at Knoxville, Tenn., and Lexington, Ky., will join the Atlanta car. Those comprising the party were Kenyon B. Zahner, T. B. Bean and J. S. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta; D. T. Deen and Ed Jordan, Waycross; H. H. Hudson, East Point; J. M. and H. S. Cowart, Arlington; J. H. C. Claussen, E. G. Jordan and E. R. Pund.

Troops Called to Prevent Gambling

PORTER, IND., Aug. 27.—Two companies of State troops were held in readiness to-day to invade the Mineral Springs race track, where a meeting is being held, should there be further gambling there at this afternoon's races. In ordering the troops at Elkhart and South Bend to be ready to move on the race course and take possession, Governor Ralston explained that he had reports of violations of the State gambling laws.

'Farmer Bill' Zimmer Joins Benedict Ranks After Long Romance

"Farmer Bill" Zimmer gave his friends a great surprise Tuesday night when he quietly re-entered the ranks of the benedicts, and to-day Kimballville Farm is all a-flutter. Miss Mabel L. Leys, of Detroit, was the former name of Mrs. Zimmer, and the marriage was the culmination of a romance of many years standing.

A very few of his intimate friends and relatives of the bride were in the bridal party which journeyed around to the parsonage of the Trinity Methodist Church at 7 o'clock Tuesday night, where the Rev. J. B. Robins performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony a bridal supper was given at the Piedmont Hotel, Mr. Zimmer having been the first manager of this hostelry. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hazler, of Detroit; Lee Jordan, Will Zimmer, Jr., the 12-year-old son of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Chancellor, Clarendon Chancellor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, Jesse Mercer and C. R. Tucker.

SCOTT MAY NOT AGAIN DIRECT RAILROAD

Augusta Hears That Georgia General Manager's Retirement Will Be Permanent.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 27.—Whether the "temporary retirement" of General Manager T. K. Scott, of the Georgia Railroad, means that he will resume charge when he gets well, or whether it means that Mr. Scott is being permanently forced out of the position, is a matter of speculation in Augusta. Ever since the strike of the trainmen and conductors on the Georgia Railroad last fall there have been persistent rumors that there would be a change in the management of the Georgia Railroad. It has been estimated that the strike cost the road near $500,000, but whether or not that has been charged against Mr. Scott by the Louisville and Nashville officials has never been ascertained.

While the strike was in progress Messrs. Gregg and Murdock, representing the conductors and trainmen, respectively, issued a statement in which they said that they did their utmost to get a conference with Mr. Scott in his Atlanta hotel just prior to the strike to negotiate with him and try to avert the tie-up of the Georgia trains, but that he persistently refused to see them.

Mr. Scott has been general manager of the Georgia for about twenty years. He is now nearing 70 years. His friends assert positively that it is purely because of his ill health, due principally to the infirmities of age, that he has relinquished the management temporarily to J. H. Ellis, secretary of the L. & N.

Macon Merchants to Tour Georgia Towns

MACON, Aug. 27.—Macon merchants are making plans for another booster trip through south and middle Georgia in September. The trip will last for three days and the merchants will travel in a special train, making short stops at each town en route.

The route will embrace Sandersville, Tennille, Brunswick, Millen, Waycross, Fitzgerald, Thomasville, Moultrie, Cordele and other towns.

Powers Let Turkey Retain Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 27.—Announcement was made by the grand porte to-day that the European powers have agreed to allow Turkey to retain Adrianople, in spite of the threats of Bulgaria to try to take Adrianople as soon as she can collect sufficient resources to declare war.

265 CASES TO BE TRIED.

MACON.—There are 265 cases, of which 100 are for alleged violations of the State prohibition law, to betried during the September term of the City Court which convenes Monday and lasts for two weeks. Only 50 of the defendants are in jail, the others having given bond.

LABOR DAY AT MACON.

MACON.—The Labor Unions have made extensive preparations for the celebration of Labor Day on Monday at Central City Park, where an all-day picnic will be held. Athletic sports, dancing, a fiddlers' convention and baseball will be features.

COLUMBUS FAIR IN NOVEMBER.

COLUMBUS.—The Columbus Poultry Association has announced that it will put on a poultry show the week of November 17, and in addition will give a fair which will equal, if not surpass, the one held by the Georgia-Alabama Fair Association in 1912.

HELD UP IN DAYLIGHT.

MACON.—A white man giving his name as Joe Jackson reported to the police that he was held up and robbed of $118 near the business part of the city at 7 o'clock in the morning. He said his assailants wore black masks and black clothes.

FATHER SLAYS HIS SON.

TOMPKINS COVER, N. Y., Aug. 27. Newton Tomlin, aged 60, shot and killed his son Frank, aged 22, in their home in the presence of the wife and mother. The shooting followed a trivial quarrel.

MEN SPEAKERS TO URGE VOTES FOR WOMEN

Plans Completed for Open Discussion of Suffrage in Georgia Senate Chamber.

Arrangements have been completed for the open suffrage meeting in the Senate Chamber Friday night at 8 o'clock. There will be several noted speakers on the program.

The three principal speakers have been announced, though the full program has not been made public. A feature of the evening will be the address of welcome by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. A. M. Hughlett, Dr. M. C. Hardin and Attorney Leonard J. Grossman. Especial interest attaches to the appearance of Dr. M. C. Hardin, who scored heavily in the suffrage debate at Gainesville. Dr. Hardin never has been heard before an Atlanta audience on the suffrage question.

Men's leagues for the enfranchisement of Georgia women will be discussed by Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, who soon will announce plans for the organization of a Georgia Men's Equal Suffrage League.

The meeting Friday night will be the first gathering of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association since its charter was approved by Judge Pendleton.

With the success of the meeting assured, the State-wide campaign will be in full swing, with local leagues in every county in Georgia. The committee on arrangements for the open meeting is made up of the following: Mrs. Amelia Woodall, president of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association; Miss Margaret Koch, Mrs. A. C. Daniels and Miss E. Estill.

Christian Conference To Plan Vice Cures

The program for the Southern Christian Citizenship conference which will be held in the Auditorium from September 19 to 21, inclusive, is practically complete, according to announcement Wednesday. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Civic League of America and will outline remedies for various evils.

Among the various interesting topics which will be discussed at the conference will be "The Co-operation of the Family, the Church and the State," "The Moral Personality of the State," "Social Environment and Moral Progress" and "Divorce and Social Welfare."

Oldest Sneezer Is Dined by Hay-Fevers

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 27.—America's oldest sneezer—Major Richard Muckle, of Philadelphia, aged 88—was given a banquet here last night by the United States Hay Fever Association. The major has suffered from the sneezing, sniffling fever for 75 years.

PATHFINDER ROLLS INTO MOBILE AHEAD OF TIME

With approximately 500 miles of the transcontinental highway behind him, Pathfinder E. D. Ferguson Wednesday prepared for the long westward journey, from Mobile through New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego and Los Angeles to San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson arrived in Mobile late Tuesday afternoon.

Mobile's reception to the pathfinders was only one more indication of the widespread interest in the monster campaign for a transcontinental highway inaugurated in Atlanta on August 18 by Hearst's Sunday American.

The Mobileans carried out a program which they planned weeks ago. Several miles north of the city a big delegation of boosters, including many women enthusiasts in automobiles, met the pathfinders and escorted them into the city. Here a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, as well as prominent citizens and city officials, took the members of the party in hand and tendered to them a royal reception which the Mobile boosters say "surpassed the celebrations in Birmingham and Montgomery."

Immediately following the reception Mr. Ferguson began completing his plans for the resumption of the journey to New Orleans, which place he expects to reach on August 30. Like the Mobile boosters, the New Orleans "live wires" have had their plans practically complete for several weeks, according to advance reports.

Big Celebration Planned.

A monster good roads and highway celebration will be held, it is said, and a representative of The New Orleans Item, which is co-operating with The Sunday American, The Birmingham News, The Montgomery Advertiser and other leading Southern newspapers, will relieve the Montgomery representative.

The special train from The Item will accompany the party as far as Beaumont, Texas, where a representative of The Houston Post, which also is behind the movement, will join the tourists, accompanying them as far as Dallas. From Dallas Mr. Ferguson probably will be accompanied to Los Angeles by a representative of The Dallas Times-Herald. Monster receptions have been planned in each of the big cities named along the route, as well as many of the smaller ones.

According to the schedule as now planned, Mr. Ferguson will reach Biloxi, Miss., on August 28; New Orleans, August 30; LaFayette, September 3; Lake Charles, La., September 5; Orange, Texas, September 7; Beaumont, September 7, and Houston on September 8 or 9. The party should reach its destination, San Francisco, in October.

Following out the policy maintained all along the route from Atlanta to Mobile Mr. Ferguson will spread the gospel of good roads and fine highways through Louisiana, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California. Already the efforts of the pathfinder along this line have had marked results. Beginning at Douglasville, Ga., 30 miles west of Atlanta, the official starting point, and continuing through Tallapoosa, Heflin, Ala., Anniston, Ashville, Birmingham, Clanton, Montgomery and Selma, as well as other progressive smaller towns, local good roads and highway campaigns have been inaugurated following Mr. Ferguson's visit. The manifest enthusiasm with which the tourists were received all along the route has been directed into channels for the actual improvement of the roads and the development of highways.

Bad Roads Stories Disproved.

Although Mr. Ferguson has completed less than a third of the long cross-country tour, he has already demonstrated beyond a doubt that the South affords an ideal route for an open-the-year-round highway. This claim was scouted by Northern tourists who have declared repeatedly that the weather was too warm down in Georgia and Alabama and Louisiana to make such a trip in the summer time. It was to disprove this that Mr. Ferguson decided not only to make the trip in the very dead of summer, but also to take his wife and children with him. That he has already succeeded is indicated by the reports from Mrs. Ferguson, who has declared all along the route that she was delighted with the "ideal" climate.

The South's reputation for bad roads, too, has been disproved by this tour. At Anniston, Birmingham, Montgomery and Selma Mr. Ferguson declared to the boosters that he was surprised at the marvelous development of the roads.

"If the citizens along the way which I have traversed do as much for good roads during the next two years as they have done during the past two, conditions should be ideal," he said.

That these citizens are going to do this and even more has been indicated repeatedly from the time Mr. Ferguson left Atlanta until he arrived in Mobile Wednesday.

EVELYN THAW'S CAREER IS LESSON TO AMERICAN GIRLS

By DOROTHY DIX.

Does it pay to be good?

Tens of thousands of poor girls avid for pleasure, longing to ride in luxurious automobiles and feast on dainty food in gay restaurants; madly anxious for the lovely clothes that would enhance their charms as a fine frame sets off a picture, are asking themselves that question. Does it pay to be good?

They know that, like the milkmaid in the old song, their faces are their fortunes, and that beauty and youth are assets that a woman can cash in at sight. The streets of every big city are the Mount of Temptation upon which the Devil takes every poor, pretty little drudge, and shows her, spread out before her, all that the foolish, feminine heart can crave of ease and softness. And it is all hers for the taking.

He shows her both sides of the picture. He shows her Virtue hanging on to a strap in a crowded car, while Vice rolls by in a limousine. He shows her Virtue, shabby, fainting with weariness behind the counter, while Vice lolls in front of it, buying silks and satins. He shows her Virtue going to bed hungry in a dingy hall bedroom, while Vice sups at a lobster palace. He shows her Virtue clutching its thin little pay envelope, while Vice draws down its thousands, and flaunts its name in electric letters a foot high along Broadway.

No wonder that poor young girls ask, Does it pay to be good?

The Case of Evelyn Thaw.

For answer let us consider the case of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who furnishes the most cynical illustration of this subject that what we call civilization has ever seen. For no woman of our day has been so written about and discussed; no woman—not Bernhardt, nor Julia Marlowe, nor Maude Adams—has ever received such a preposterous salary as she gets for a few minutes' appearance on the stage.

Yet her sole claim to distinction is that her very garments drip with the slime of the gutter, and that she is the heroine of the most hideous and decadent story that was ever told upon the witness stand.

In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante can do as well with three lessons. There's simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing her, I wondered if she thought that it paid. I wondered if she thought that she had paid too dearly for all she had had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

Believe me, she, and women like her, KNOW whether it pays to be good.

Here the Story of Many.

The story of Evelyn Thaw is an interesting one in this connection because in its setting and in its potentialities it is the story of the chance, and the temptation, that comes to so many poor and pretty girls. It is the eternal problem of the woman who wants the good things of life, and who can get them only in one way, by buying them with her soul.

Evelyn Thaw is a type of woman that is peculiar to America and common in this country—women who come of poor and humble families, but who are born with the instincts for luxury of a princess and the bearing and presence of the great world. You see them in every little village—girls who are as chic as Parisiennes, who wear their little home-made clothes as if they came from a couturiere of the Rue de la Paix, and who are as irresistibly drawn to the bright lights of a great city as a moth is attracted to the flame.

Evelyn Nesbit was one of these. She was born on a Christmas Day, in Allegheny, a suburb of Pittsburg. Her mother was beautiful, her father a gay ne'er-do-well; and from the one parent she got her looks and the other her mercurial nature—as dangerous a combination as evil itself could bequeath a girl.

They Were Very Poor.

All her early life they were very poor, and when the father died—which he did when Evelyn was 10 or 11 years old—they were poorer still. Mrs. Nesbit tried to make a living with her needle, but barely succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door.

The little family went from Allegheny to Philadelphia, hoping for better things, but luck failed to smile on them. They were so poor that Mrs. Nesbit cut up her sheets to make underclothing for herself and Evelyn, and her bedspreads to make them dresses. Then someone who noted the girl's rare loveliness got her a position to pose for some photographs.

The migration from Philadelphia to the larger artistic world of New York followed naturally, and, armed with letters to painers here, Mrs. Nesbit came, bringing Evelyn, whose beauty was flowering day by day. But, in spite of the romances Mr. Robert Chambers writes about it, the life of an artist model is not one glad round of pleasure and profit, and the Nesbits were still very poor. They lived in one room, where they cooked and slept and Mrs. Nesbit took in such sewing as she could get. Then a newspaper reporter ran across Evelyn and wrote a big Sunday story, illustrated with many pictures of her, which he called "The Most Beautiful Artists' Model in New York."

Fate did the rest. She was engaged by a theatrical manager on the outlook for beauties for his chorus—and she had reached the dividing line, the place where she had to choose between poverty and hard work—and the gilded life—the place where she had to ask herself, as the poor, pretty girl does under such circumstances—does it pay to be good?

She decided that it did not pay, and took what she thought was the easiest way. Where it has led her all the world knows. Certainly she has had the cakes and ale of existence. First there was a millionaire who used to take her out on his yacht for week-end excursions. Then came Stanford White, and for a while, at least, it was all like a fairy tale.

She, who had not had carfare, rode in cabs and taxis everywhere. She who had not always had even bread to eat feasted at the smartest restaurants. She who had worn the shabbiest of shabby clothes had fine gowns and jewels lavished on her.

Another turn of the wheel of fortune brought Harry Thaw into her life with more money, more jewels, more trips to Europe, and finally a wedding ring. Being Pittsburg-born, the Thaws had always been the biggest people on Evelyn's horizon, and to belong to that august family, and queen it socially in the very town in which she had been poor and humble, doubtless filled the measure of her ambition. Evil had prospered with her, and vice had brought her what virtue never could.

Then her sins began to find her out, and her world, built upon a foundation of wrongdoing, commenced to crumble under her feet. Pittsburg society would not receive her, despite the Thaws' financial and social position. Women, good women, would have nothing to do with her. The scarlet letter was branded upon her too plainly for even the Thaw millions to cover it up.

Also she began to know the cruel fact that while a man, obsessed by passion and in order to get a woman, swears that he will forgive her past lapses from the straight and narrow way and forget them he really never does. When he is married to her he makes of them a whip of scorpions with which to scourge her. The torments of hell can have nothing worse than the months in which Evelyn Thaw combated the jealous suspicions of her husband and endured his reproaches.

Then followed the shooting of Stanford White and the two long-drawn-out trials, during which, to save her husband and to earn a fee, justly earned and never paid, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told a story of her life that for utter degradation has no match in all the annals of sinful humanity. She stripped from herself every vestige of decency and left herself without so much as a rag of honor to cover her.

That this story was not true does not alter her status. She held herself up before the world as shameless beyond all belief until the wonder of it was that any woman could tell such things of herself and live. And now she is coining that story into money.

Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes that she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of her fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it, and the life it has driven her to, she has coarsened and hardened.

The wonder of her at the trial was the expression of wistful, childlike innocence she wore. I asked a great alienist to interpret that to me, and he said that the reason of it was that her soul was unawakened, that she was morally dead and had never realized the import of the things she did. Hence they had not set their seal upon her as they do upon women who consciously tread the primrose path.

But that trial stripped the veil from her eyes. She came out of it knowing good and evil, and the knowledge has dimmed her beauty and taken from it the ethereal charm that was its highest note. There is nothing remarkable about her now. You may meet a thousand like her any day along Broadway.

I wonder how Evelyn Thaw, in view of her life, and all it has brought her of good and ill, would answer that question: Does it pay a girl to be good?

I think that no one could preach such a homily on the subject as this poor girl, who sold her birthright for a few silks and a rag of chiffon and good times and who knows the price she has paid.

Devoid of Talent, Evelyn Thaw Capitalizes Sins

"No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. In all her life she has done no noble or worth yact. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante could no as well in three lessons. There is simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

"Believe me, she and women like her KNOW whether it pays to be good.

"Be spre that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn o fher fellow creatures. Eevlyn Thaw has had that in full measuer, and under it and the life it has driven her to she has coarsened and hardened."

One Woman's Story

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OBEDIENT to her husband's suggestion, Mary Fletcher tried to get a maid from the city. First of all she visited many employment agencies. At each she was received with a smile of welcome by the person in charge, but that smile was replaced by a look of incredulous surprise when, in reply to the question: "What wages do you pay?" Mary responded: "Twelve dollars."

"My dear madam!" exclaimed one such agent. "Excuse me, but you cannot get any girl, white or colored, to do general housework for that price."

"But," said Mary tentatively, "suppose I get a green and inexperienced girl, and teach her everything, and help her with the work—what wages would she come for?"

Might Advertise.

"Certainly for not less than eighteen dollars at the lowest," replied the agent. "And if you wish one to go to a lonely place in the country, you will have to pay more."

After many such fruitless efforts, Mary ceased visiting intelligence offices.

"You might advertise," her mother suggested when Mary recounted her experience to her. "I used to get good maids in that way. But, then, I paid very good wages. Your dear father always insisted, you know, on having me get the best of everything—servants included."

Mary winced at the unintentional thrust, then forgot her own discomfiture as she saw the tears in her mother's eyes.

"I know, dear," she said hastily, "and he was right for you deserved the best of everything. But you must remember, mother, that father had more money than Bert has."

"Oh, I know, I know," the widow responded quickly. "Dear child, don't fancy for a moment that I meant to criticise your husband. He has, of course, derived many of his ideas from his mother, and—pardon me, Mary—but she has not lived as we have, so she is to be excused if she has taught her son to feel that women ought to do their own work. Naturally, as Bert is a good son, he takes her tone. I do not blame him."

"Of course not," her daughter assented. In her own heart she was wondering if she, this man's wife, could say as much.

"Your husband is very kind to me," remarked Mrs. Danforth, somewhat irrelevantly. "I ought to be happy."

But was she? Mary pondered. Did she not think that perhaps her daughter was not as content as she would like her to be? Did she not suspect that Mary did not love the man to whom she was married? And, if so, could she be happy—she, the mother who had taught her child that a loveless marriage was a sin?

Her Cheerful Voice.

As if reading the unspoken thought, Mrs. Danforth took her daughter's hand tenderly in hers. "Tell me, darling," she said, wistfully, "are you satisfied? Are you worried about anything? Sometimes I almost fear that you are a little disappointed—about something."

The young wife put her arms around her mother and drew the gray head down to her shoulder.

"Little mother," she said, her voice determinedly cheerful, "what notions you do get! Why should I not be happy here in this cozy little cottage, with the best mother that ever lived, and the man I have chosen out of all the world? Dear mother," with a light laugh, "why should I have married Bert if I did not want to?"

The mother laughed, too, and there was a ring of relief in the sound.

"Of course, dear! Why, indeed? Forgive your silly old mother—but I love you so much that if you were not happy—why, I just could not stand it!"

She ended with a little sob, and the daughter held her closer.

"You believe now that I am happy, don't you, dear?" Mary asked.

"Oh, yes, I believe it now," said the widow tremulously, "and you don't know what a comfort it is to be sure of it."

With her head still on Mary's shoulder she did not look up at the sad eyes gazing out of the window, nor did she see the bitter smile that twisted the young lips. In a moment the wife's face was again placid, and she smiled on leaving her mother, making the pretext that she had "some work to do downstairs."

She did not go downstairs at once. Instead, she turned into her own room and closed the door. But she did not, as she would have done in her girlhood days, fling herself upon the bed and give way to her misery. Instead, she went to the window and looked out into the July sunshine. But she was looking into her heart, not into the summer noon.

"Good Lord!" she whispered, "what a liar I have become! A liar both in speech and life!"

She stood motionless a moment longer, then lifted her head with a gesture of decision—almost of defiance.

"But I won't look back," she muttered. "I have made my bed and must lie on it—even if it is made of thorns. At all events, mother is comfortable and cared for."

She Had Learned.

Advertisements for domestics at the price named by Herbert Fletcher and his mother proved useless. As a final resort, Mary engaged one so-called "helper" after another from the village, but each was so inefficient that this trial was abandoned. The young housewife had learned that to secure good service one must pay an adequate price for it—and that even then one might fail to obtain it.

So it came about that at last Mary Fletcher did the work of her own house, hiring a woman from the village for two days a week to "wash, iron and scrub," and even then she had to supplement her at every turn. It was taken as a matter of course that the wife should help hang out the clothes and assist with the ironing. She told her mother that she "enjoyed the novel task;" in fact, that she thought the exercise and fresh air good for her. Her husband did not protest. Why should he? His own mother had always done that kind of work.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

These Pictures Were Especially Posed for this Page.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ONE of your great Americans sang in an exquisite little poem of "The glory that was Greece; the grandeur that was Rome." The glory and grandeur of these nations were founded not only on their art and culture and prowess as warriors, but on a basic condition that male brains and power reach a great height of perfection—on the sublimity and healthy beauty of the human body.

When laziness and high living weakened the bodies of the Greeks and Romans, decline and fall were near. But in the flower of their national health and youth the bodies of the Greeks and Latins were physically splendid, and the endowment of mental power followed physical health.

In these simple facts there lies a great lesson for us of to-day. In bodily health and strength lie the power of the individual and the health of the nation as well. I have said so often and am always glad to say again that in the beautiful classic dances that have come down to us from the ancients lies the simplest secret of bodily grace. But to-day I want to add a few principles of bodily health and care that are practiced of necessity by the professional dancer, and that the bodily beauty-seeker would do well to emulate.

Begin by training children so that their muscles will fall naturally, in motion or repose, into graceful lines. Teach them that food is very important in one way and of no consequence in another. Food must nourish the body and give it strength, but beware the pleasureful-overeating of the well-nourished, ill-proportioned gourmet.

Food and Mood.

Now, you could dance a cancan or a breakdown however you hated the world—and indigestion surely produces misanthropy—but you have to be in harmony with life to express poetry in dancing. So, since mood affects dancing and food affects mood, this little cycle will make the classical dancer careful of the dower of health that spare, sane, sensible eating produces.

For breakfast I have coffee and hot milk, for lunch fruit and one nourishing solid and my simple dinner is guiltless of sweets. Clothes I regard as covering and not as trammeling ornaments that interfere with freedom of movement or deep breathing. Perhaps if I convert a few of my readers to a love for and a belief in the graceful movements of the classic dance, I shall at the same time make converts to the healthful joys of simple living, of deep breathing and of high thinking.

To-day I will tell you about two little movements of the dance that may be done at home without music and to the slower tempo of the walk. Try them for general bodily grace and ease of motion.

The first picture shows a very simple equally pretty figure, and for suppleness of arms and legs and waist it counts as strongly as it does for lightly poised and carried head and body. Advance with the head carried high above the column of the throat and the lifted chin. Sway slightly from the waist as you swing the arms in the arc of a circle; left arm is forward slightly above the shoulder height as the weight advances forward to the right foot, and at the same time the right arm is stretched back in a straight line and lowered from shoulder to wrist until the hand is just at the line of the hip. Do this with gradually increasing tempo, until the springy walking motion has become a light dancing step. Fifteen minutes of this night and morning will give great grace and resiliency to your ordinary gait.

The second picture brings the back and shoulder muscles into play and exercises the throat. In other essentials it has the basic principles and advantages of the first exercise. Advance as before. This time the forward motion is first on the left and then on the right side of the body and thus great muscular co-ordination is assured of the devotee of this exercise as assured for the devotee of this exercise. Elbows close to the waist line and the hands relaxed in easy lines from the wrist. Sway head and arm from side to side as the body pivots slightly from the waist muscles and the feet advance in the fifted prancing step of the dance.

"More power to ye," says my neighborg of Erin's Isle, in kindly greeting. To you—my neighbors across the sea—I say it, too, "More power to you;" and may the principles of the classical dancing I have so earnestly studied and so earnestly love, bring you beauty and grace and power to live gloriously and well.

.:. A TALE OF LOST CHERUBS .:.

"THE Gudgeon children are lost!" panted Mrs. Sprinkle as she flung open the screen door unceremoniously and burst in upon the Liffick family, variously disposed in hammocks and sprawly chairs.

"My goodness!" cried Mrs. Liffick. "Again?"

"They're truly lost," explained Mrs. Sprinkle, excitedly. "And we want you to come and help find them. They are sending parties in every direction through the woods and they're going to telephone the life-saving crew to drag the lake——"

"Did the boat tip over?" asked Liffick, now entirely awakened, as he reached for his cap.

Mrs. Sprinkle heaved an exasperated sigh. "If they're lost," she said, succinctly, "they might possibly be drowned, mightn't they? We don't want to leave any stone unturned."

Dire Thoughts.

"Mrs. Gudgeon left Imogene and Harry playing just as nicely under the trees beside their cottage while she walked down to the pier to fish," related Mrs. Sprinkle, "and they were gone when she came back in an hour. She has called and called for them, and they are nowhere within a mile! Imogene had such beautiful eyes, too! Maybe gypsies——"

"It will break their mother's heart!" said Mrs. Liffick. "How perfectly terrible! I'm sorry I scolded Harry for breaking off all my geraniums! And the time he scalded our cat—I might have made less harsh remarks to him. Suppose they've fallen down that old quarry pit! Arthur, you go right over in that direction and see! It's only four miles!"

Liffick, starting off, ran into several other men from the various cottages bound on the same errand.

"It looks serious," said Tilton with a shake of his head. "Kids like that and so venturesome! There's a dozen things that might have happened to them! I'm bound for the creek bank, where it is go marshy! There's quicksand there."

The whole summer colony was soon deserted. Everybody had gone to hunt for the Gudgeon children, whose various sins of commission were now tenderly covered by the veil of charitable anxiety. Mrs. Gudgeon alternately wept at home and darted out on spasmodic hunts. Again she would wander around the cottage making the air ring with the names of the missing ones. There was no answer.

"Harry might have grown up to be President some day!" said Mrs. Liffick mournfully. "They say these mischievous little children always turn out so well. Dear little Imogene"——

"You said she was a hateful child, mother, when she cut holes in your new embroidered waist," put in Sally Liffick, who was tagging around that she might miss none of the excitement.

"Sally, you go straight home!" commanded her mother. "Haven't you any sympathy at all? The idea?"

One by one the searchers staggered in toward dusk. Each had the same tale of disappointment and each was dusty and thirsty and hungry and despairing.

"Something per-perfectly awful must have happened to them, because every inch of the woods has been searched!" said Mrs. Sprinkle. "Poor Mrs. Gudgeon! Harry was such a brilliant child!"

"I always said Imogene would turn out a beauty, too," put in Mrs. Tilton. "It's hard!"

"There never were such darling children in the whole world!" their mother informed everybody between sobs. "Oh, where are my babies? Just to get my arms around them"—

Harry Found.

There was a shriek and a scuffle from the little cellar under the Gudgeon house and everybody rushed to see.

The Gudgeon cook was dragging Harry out from the depths of the potato bin, while Imogene was unrolling herself from a pile of old carpeting. The assembled searchers and their parents stared, voiceless.

"We wuz playing hiding from the Indians," vouchsafed Harry. "You made awful good Indians—you yelled so!"

As Gudgeon reached for Harry with an arm motion that promised a laying over his knee, while Mrs. Gudgeon did likewise with her darling daughter, the searchers melted away.

"Wow!" said Liffick as juvenile wails rent the air. "That sounds good to me! Four miles to the stone quarry and back!"

Yield to Baby.

One afternoon not long ago in the vicinity of Grant Park there might have been seen a young man industriously pushing up and down a baby carriage, intently reading a book the while.

"Henry! Henry!" called a young woman from the second story of a house opposite.

Henry heard it, but continued to push the baby carriage and to read his book.

In about an hour the cries for "Henry" were repeated.

"Well, what do you want?" he demanded, rather impatiently.

"Nothing, dear," was the irritating response, "except to inform you that you've been wheeling Harriet's doll all the afternoon. I think it's time for the baby to have a turn now."

THE TUNNEL

GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The story opens with Rives, who is in charge of the technical workings of the great tunnel from America to Germany, on one of the tunnel trains, with Baermann, an engineer, in charge of Main Station No. 4. They are traveling at the rate of 118 miles an hour. Rives is in love with Maude Allan, wife of Mackendrick Allan, whose mind first conceived the great tunnel scheme. After going about 250 miles under the Atlantic Ocean Rives gets out of the train. Suddenly the tunnel seems to burst. There is a frightful explosion. Men are flung to death and Rives is badly wounded. He staggers through the blinding smoke, realizing that about 3,000 men have probably perished. He and other survivors get to Station No. 4. Rives finds Baermann holding at bay a wild mob of frantic men who want to climb on a work train. Somebody shoots Baermann, and the train slides out. The scene is then changed to the roof of the Hotel Atlantic. The greatest financiers of the country are gathered there at a summons from C. H. Lloyd, "The Money King." John Rives addresses them, and introduces Allan. Mrs. Allan and Maude Lloyd, daughter of the financier, are also present. Allan tells the company of his project for a tunnel 3,100 miles long. The financiers agree to back him. Allan and Rives want him to take charge of the actual work. Rives accepts. Rives goes to the Park Club to meet Wittersteiner, a financier. At Columbus Circle news of the great project is being flashed on a screen. Thousands are watching it.

Now Go On With the Story.

Before daylight two thousand more men arrived, and with them began the endless stream of freight. Rives began to feel like a swimmer who has been bucking a tide-rip. But he asked that the pace be increased, and he shut his teeth and jumped in. Twenty lieutenants worked on his immediate staff, all of them young men, but all of them chosen for the cut of their jaws and the cleanness of their records in stress and storm and strife. And Rives worked them as hard as he worked himself. He gave no instructions. There was not time for that. He told each man what was to be done in a few curt sentences and left the doing of it to him.

That third night a terrific thunderstorm broke up the heat wave. It came down in a terrific gale, and the first thunderbolt fired a freight shed where 500 cots were stacked to the roof, as there had been no time to unpack them that night. Before the fire got well under way, the wind ripped the burning roof off, and then came the deluge. When day broke, Rives found that about a third of his jerry-built houses had collapsed—and the flood of materials and men from Toms River set in as before.

It was a terrible setback, but he shook his head and went at it as if nothing had happened, and his men backed him with the easy energy and resource of men long accustomed to uneven warfare with Nature. That day Tunnel City looked like a storm-swept mining camp. Two days later it was like the temporary camp of the great army. At the end of ten days it was a city with concrete houses and streets and electric lights and sewerage—a city of 20,000 men with a postoffice, a telephone system, two railroad depots, bakeries, dairies, abattoirs, stores, saloons and a hospital.

And over everything, the discouraged and drooping trees and the few scattered clumps of bushes, the window sills and the roofs, was the thick white dust of the cement that had made the miracle possible.

Pages of this and many succeeding issues of this paper might be filled with the details of the wonders of energy and the mighty toil of those summed months on the Jersey coast. And in four other spots on the face of the earth similar scenes were being enacted. But terrific as were the results, grandiose the scale, the details must needs be tiresome, for after all they were only digging a hole in the earth. In this, as in all other matters of great moment, it is well to trust to the trained and not the technical observer. Edgar Harkness, the star man of The New York Evening Journal staff, was at the works from the day the first man reached there. Looking over the files of the paper for that summer I came upon a special article he wrote describing the progress of the work.

"This place of bedlam," he wrote, in part, under date of September 11, of that year, "looks as if it were going up in smoke. To-day the cloud above it is so dense that electric discharges like heat lightning flash across it and there is always a muttering like distant thunder, while beneath its edges a deep blue horizon tells that elsewhere the sun is shining. Beneath the Tunnel City roars and shouts explodes, whistles, thunders and yells.

"From the midst of the pandemonium and settling over everything like a white sea-fog rises a monstrous white column of dust to join the black smoke canopy overhead. Meeting the heavy blackness it seems to spread and mingle with it, forming a cloud such as observed at the eruptions of volcanoes. Pressed down by the colder air above it spreads like a gigantic umbrella, and little shreds are whirled away by puffs of the seaward breeze.

"SHIP captains report that when there is a steady off-shore wind this dust forms white scum on the ocean for miles, and New Yorkers know the source of the nuisance that turns their blue serge suits gray."

Here Mr. Harkness drifts off temporarily to little things that were important for the day only, and then goes on to report the progress of the actual work.

"The place of construction, following its fixed width of twelve hundred feet, is now nearly the finishing of a straight inland cut of three miles. It is laid out in long terraces so that the construction trains can hold to easy grades until they reach the last level, which will be 600 feet below the level of the sea. Here the actual sinking of the tunnel itself will begin.

"But the day before yesterday this place was a sandy heath, half reclaimed from barrenness. Swiftly it became a gravel pit, a quarry, and at last a monster chasm that swarms seemingly with insect life. Queer little busy beings covered with white dust that dig and growl and grovel and toil, gray-faced and dusty-haired.

"Twenty thousand of them hurl themselves into this mighty ravine every day. Their drills and picks and shovels glitter like the sunlight on a lake. A whistle shrieks a warning, a column of dust rises to join the vast cloud overhead, a colossus of stone, wrenched by dynamite from its grip of earth, swerves outward and falls with a thundering roar. Another puff of dust leaps up and the insects swarm into it.

"As far as eye can reach down that long incline into the bowels of the earth these puffs that tell of terrific blasts are shooting up. Great dredges, attacking the quicksand, shriek and whine as they suck up liquid death. The chain pumps groan and rattle. Derricks and steam shovels whirr and clip. Aerial carts whizz past you on trolleys. Swarms of tiny locomotives hustle and fuss around, shrieking at each other with shrill voices.

"Sand and gravel flies back to the town where mountains of bagged cement are stacked, for there must be housing for 40,000 men before the cold weather reaches. Here another army is toiling at break-neck speed about this gigantic task.

"And all of this is but preliminary to the real work of the great project."

Then there follows a wonderful description of the workings of the great tidal basins, Allan's improvement on the designs of Schlich and Lippman, the famous German engineers, to whom we owe the harnessing of the incalculable power of the tides. Through his ingenious arrangement of reservoirs thousands of tons of water were dumped on gigantic turbines every hour of the twenty-four, and the lift and fall of the tides gave him all of this power for simply the cost of original work—less than $5,000,000.

The scene, indeed, recalled the Tower-of Babel—a project so vast that its very conception seemed impious.

And this was only one of five such scenes. In Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London similar mighty panoramas of daring were being unrolled. And Allan, the genius who had provoked these upheavals, was the motive spirit of each. He was tireless and unresting. Rives and Mrs. Allan heard from him in one camp or another, and before they had finished his short dispatches—so it seemed to them—another from some other tunnel city was laid in their hands or he himself dropped off a construction train from Toms River, clear-eyed, smooth-shaven, and fresh and energetic as ever.

Rives had built a beautiful little house for the chief engineer and his wife on the seaside of the tunnel city, and Allan encouraged Mrs. Allan to spend much of her time there, even when he was in this country. Rives was the one warm personal friend he had made in his lonely life, and knowing how much pleasure Mrs. Allan found in his society, he was glad to have her as nearly contented as possible while he darted back and forth across half the Northern Hemisphere. They had one child—a little girl, Edith—and she grew to be almost a stranger to her father.

Even when Allan was in New York he saw but little of his wife and child. His business affairs usually took him a great deal to the house of the great Lloyd, where he held long conferences with the old financier or his daughter, who had the details of the tunnel at her finger ends.

A Neglected Wife.

Thus Mrs. Allan, a lonely and neglected woman, was thrown constantly with Rives, an impressionable and high-strung man, who already held for her at least a deep admiration.

"Mac is in New York—I got a wire from him late this afternoon," remarked Rives one evening as they were taking a horseback ride along one of the wide level roads that led northward from Tunnel City.

"'Yes, he called me up," said the woman, with a faintly weary note in her voice. "He said that he would be busy about the real estate deal for the next day or so and would have to go to France within a few days. He called up from the Lloyds," she added, without conscious meaning.

Rives was silent for a few moments as the horses pounded along the gravel road, side by side.

"Did he say anything about running down here or——?" he stopped off short. He had tried to make the tone nonchalant, but she understood and bit her lip.

"I know what you are thinking about, Jack," she said soberly, and her voice trembled slightly. "And I wish you wouldn't—pity me."

Rives swore at himself in an undertone and tried to stammer out something light and reassuring.

"You're too old a friend," she cut in, quietly. "It would be just like you to go and talk to Mac, and that would be worse than anything else. He is doing the best he can, and I know I ought to be happy."

"Aren't you?" asked Rives.

"No, I'm not, and you know it perfectly well, my friend. I am as proud of Mac as a woman could be of a man, but I want to be married to a man, not to a—a—an institution."

Rives looked at the lightly poised body and the delicate brown head and soft eyes that shone like amber in the moonlight. And he laughed uncertainly to check the something that rushed to his lips.

"Oh, well," he said lightly and kindly, "it won't be so bad in a little while. Mac is trying to do eight men's work and everything is just starting now, but when——"

"I know," she interrupted grimly. "Everything has been just starting for months and months. I went over all this with him a few weeks ago and he told me just what you are trying to tell me. I only know that I have been under the same roof with my husband for 24 consecutive hours in six months."

"But, little girl, don't you see——"

"Oh, yes! I know I am unreasonable. I have cut out about a bale of newspaper clippings about Mac and pictures of me, and I ought to be as vain and pleased as—as—as a woman. I am proud of him. I even admit that it gratifies the woman in me to be pointed out in department stores and at the theater as the wife of Mac Allan—but that isn't all that a normal woman wants the man she loves to give her."

Rives wisely held his tongue and there was another little silence. At last he asked:

"Did you ever—have you ever let Mac know exactly how you feel about—about this?"

The woman did not reply at once.

"I went down to his office about a month ago," she said at last in a low voice. "I couldn't help it, Jack. I was so lonely and miserable. He sent out word that he was very busy, but would be out in a little while. I told the boy to tell him that I wanted to see him at once. I was mad by that time. He came out perfectly good humored, as he always is, and I told him I wanted him to come home for dinner and spend the evening with me. He said he couldn't and I—I cried, and I'm afraid I made a scene—but there was nobody there."

SHE paused, and Rives made no comment. He was looking straight over his horse's head up the moonlit road, and his face was in the shade of his broad-brimmed hat. She looked at him and put her hand on his arm.

"You don't blame me, do you, Jack?"

She felt the muscles stiffen under her hand.

"No," he replied, almost gruffly, "I don't."

She sighed. "He told me he would have more time in a few months, it would be different, and I said I didn't want to wait any longer. I told him I was going to take up nursing and go to work in the hospital here—and that's why I've done it. If I couldn't have my husband I had to have something else to occupy my mind. I can't bear to be useless, Jack."

"What did he say when you told him that?" asked Rives, quietly.

"He laughed—and told me to go ahead."

Again they rode on in silence for a brief time.

"I suppose I am foolish," she said at last, in a wistful tone, "but sometimes I wish that Mac had never succeeded in getting this tunnel plan through. He doesn't belong to me any more; he belongs to the world. I have to live in the light of his halo—and I'd rather live in the light of a fireside."

Rives abruptly pulled up his horse and turned.

"Let's go home," he said.

"I'M glad you could get up here, old man. The storm is about to break. Listen!"

Up to them from the street, where hundreds of real estate brokers were gathered, came a steady roar. Allan and Rives listened and smiled.

"You certainly did some smooth work in a publicity line," said the latter.

"It wasn't smooth," disclaimed Allan, a little resentfully, "and I didn't do it. It just did itself. You know—but maybe you haven't had time to see their stunts—but the viograph people have been among my best little advertisers, and they have paid for the privilege. They have been showing pictures with miles and miles of beautiful houses and department stores and all the trimmings of a great city along with their regular films showing the progress of the work—all labeled 'The Tunnel City of the Future' and 'Tunnel City Ten Years From To-day.'"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading an awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties."

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Io. It is a jerky sort of a name, Io, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I. O. U.

"Well, this Io is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Illa, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Io to get Illa because she has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gell belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Illa that she cannot marry Io she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when thou passest beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Io is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy beck and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Io's bride.'

"'But Io like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe Io a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe Io nothing.'

"The way the story ends, Io makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Illa until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Atlantan passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barger. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In the interval not a word was uttered, not a look interchanged between the lady and the detective. But the moment Dr. Cameron returned, a sudden change took place in Mrs. Cameron, and rising, she confronted Mr. Gryce with a frank and grateful air that lent quite a new aspect to her ever-changing countenance.

"You are very kind," she declared, in a grateful tone that was in itself a shock to both her hearers. "Knowing this frightful tale; seeing as you must have done that, if true, Mildred Farley did not die after I went downstairs, but before, you have come here in confidence and without scandal to hear what I have to say about the matter and give me an opportunity to explain myself. I shall never forget this consideration, sir; and as proof of my gratitude I will at once tell you what I can about this poor unfortunate's death, hoping that you will see the matter as I did, and understand in a measure at least how I was driven by my fears to keep back my knowledge of this frightful secret, even from my mother and husband, till it was torn from me and shred by shred as you have seen. And now for the truth.

"This girl, whose death you consider such a mystery, committed suicide. She committed it in my presence, just a few minutes before I went downstairs to be married. It was a terrible shock and a great surprise to me. I had been dressing, and was thinking of anything else than tragedies or death. Nor do I think she meant to die then or there. But she was desperate. She had had a talk with her intended husband and had been disappointed in him. She did not want to see him again, and the contrast between the hopes expressed by my bridal attire and the dreariness of her own outlook maddened her, I supposed; for in a moment, as it were, she seized upon that bottle of poison and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I had got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Should I mar the happiness of the whole company by revealing what had occurred? I thought not in the moment I had to consider. So I just drew the poor girl into the alcove, and in grief and terror enough, God knows, covered her over with some dresses I had before pulled down from the closet and thrown on the floor. I had barely done this and readjusted my veil when the knock came and I had to descend.

"It was frightful, but I did not know how frightful till I came to think. Then I almost gave way to my terror and agitation, and when that scream came down from upstairs——"

She stopped. They did not wonder; at such a horrible experience, who would not shudder!

Her husband for the first time realized all she had been through and reached out his hand in sympathy, though there was yet much to be explained before he could feel reconciled to a past so full of mysteries and shadows.

"And how," asked the detective, nothing but formal respect on his part, "was the body disposed of? When next we hear of it, it was in the keeping of a Dr. Molesworth, who, as we have been informed, was not one of your wedding guests."

Mrs. Cameron did not flinch. She looked, if anything, more winning and candid than before.

"Dr. Molesworth was the man who had expected to marry her. He had gone to the hotel for that purpose and had not found her; so he came where he suspected her to be. He was not one of my guests, but that did not keep him from the house. He came in at the front door and stood in the hall, and I happened to see him and immediately knew what he was after. So I arose and went out—I was then receiving congratulations—and, accosting him without delay, told him that the person he wanted was in my room and bade him go upstairs and I would follow. For I not only saw that he was in a state of feeling that bordered on frenzy, but I also saw that if the matter was to be hushed up and the body got out of the house without disturbance, he was the man to do it; and I relied upon him and went up after him and explained what had occurred and showed him the dead body of his bride, and asked for help and got it. I don't know that I should call it help now," she added, in a low voice, "for it might have been better for me if I had called in the whole house to see that dead girl, and so escaped the days and weeks of deceit that have pressed upon me like so many mountain weights of lead."

Her husband looked as if he concurred with her, but he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce asked another question.

"You read the account of the proceedings before the Coroner, which was printed in the papers?"

She acknowledged that she had.

"You must have seen then that Dr. Molesworth testified to having found the girl on a stoop in Twenty-second street."

"Yes, sir. It was agreed between us that he should tell some such story as that. It seemed wisest to us at the time. Since she had killed herself it would not hurt her and it would relieve me from endless complication, to have it thought she had committed the deed in the street. So we thought then—with how little judgment let this moment testify."

The detective fixed his eyes upon her and opened his lips to put another question. But he evidently found it too difficult to say what was in his mind and turned it into the simple suggestion, "You must have known Dr. Molesworth well, Mrs. Cameron?"

A flush, hot and vivid, answered him from the doctor's face, but her cheek did not alter and it was with much composure she replied:

"I had learned much of his disposition from my conversations with the woman he expected to marry. As for his face, I had seen him at Mrs. Olney's, where I have been more than once. I had even had some talk with him. It was the situation which made us like friends at once."

"I understand," asserted Mr. Gryce, but his looks did not bear out his words. "Your conduct is not so inexplicable," he went on. "Women think much of appearances and are not apt to weigh the consequences of their impulsive efforts to preserve them. But a man usually halts long before he enters into a scheme that must end in perjury, and Dr. Molesworth committed perjury, Mrs. Cameron."

She dropped her chin upon her breast and the presence of a growing dread began to show itself in her face.

"Not only that," the detective continued. "He engaged to do a fearful thing when he promised you to get a dead body out of the house alone and without discovery. Have you thought how much nerve and determination it would require? What self-sacrificing devotion it would need to lead a man not only to take the risk of such an act, but to subject himself to the horrors of it? I find it difficult to reconcile what I have seen of Dr. Molesworth with such devotion to a lady so little known to him. I would sooner think——" He paused; she looked at him breathlessly—"that he had his own reasons for keeping the matter quiet," he pointedly added.

"Perhaps he had," she simply replied. "I can not tell all that passed in his mind. I can only tell you what we did."

"And you repeat that it was through his agency this dead girl was got out of your room and house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when?"

"That I do not know. It was after I left."

"What, you went away before she was removed from the house?"

"Yes, sir. Having made up my mind to trust the whole affair to him. I only thought of escape for myself. Then it could never have been managed if I had not cleared the backstairs by having my trunk carried out. It was down those he intended to go."

"And did he?"

"I can not tell. I only know he succeeded in his undertaking. How or under what difficulties, he must himself inform you. I have never had an opportunity to ask him."

"No," she returned boldly; "not while he doubts whether I have spoken of the matter or not. He has too chivalrous ideas of duty."

"What, when his life is at stake?"

"His life!"

"He was on the point of being arrested for murder when this testimony of Celia's came in."

"I suspected it, or rather I knew that he was under the surveillance of the police, for he told us so in an interview he had with the doctor about a case of his."

"And you were going to allow him to go to prison upon a charge you knew perfectly unfounded?"

"Mr. Gryce, I was not two weeks married. I know that my husband hated deceit and I lacked the courage to acknowledge that I had become entangled in it. Then I trusted to Dr. Molesworth discovering a way out of his difficulty, and was so sure that he would I never even thought of his being in any danger of his life. It is also only fair to myself to say that, had he been brought to trial, I should have relentlessly sacrificed myself. It was my hope that he would not which kept he silent so long."

She was pleading her cause well, and yet her shadowed brow and paling lip showed she was conscious that it was a failing one, and that the doom she had so long dreaded was rushing upon her.

"I except your explanation," quoth the detective, "and it only remains at present for you to inform us where Miss Farley got the drug with which she poisoned herself."

"I can not tell you that," came in fainter tones from Mrs. Cameron's lips.

"Was it from her bag, her pocket, or the folds of her dress that she took the vial which held it?"

Genevieve miserably shook her head.

Mr. Gryce looked troubled; he hesitated a little, then suggested kindly, "You saw her carry it to her lips?"

Genevieve faintly acquiesced.

"And did you see where she took it from?"

"I can not answer."

Dr. Cameron strode one step and stood beside his wife.

"Why can not you answer?" he asked gently.

"Because——" she felt for a chair and sat down. "Because you will not believe what I say."

"I will not believe what you say?"

She turned her eyes, which had been fixed upon vacancy, on his face. There was unfathomable love in them, but there was unfathomable despair also.

"I think you would," said she, "and yet it is very incredible."

"The true things are often the incredible," observed he.

She smiled, but in a hopeless sort of way, and in an altered tone, murmured:

"Very well, then, she got it out of a box."

"A box she carried?"

"No; one she found in the room."

Dr. Cameron stared; so did the detective. Genevieve sat and shivered silently.

"Took a vial containing prussic acid from a box she found in the room?"

"Yes."

"And how came prussic acid to be in your room, Mrs. Cameron?"

It was a question for which she seemingly had no reply. Though she opened her lips, no words issued from them, and she sat the image of shame and despair. The doctor, struck aghast, started impetuously forward, and would have spoken himself but that the detective forestalled him.

"You do not think I have the right to ask that question," he remarked. "Well, I withdraw it and will simply inquire what sort of box it was which held this vial, and where in the room it was kept?"

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

One Pretty Girl Finds Nature a Most Efficient Teacher

Miss Laura Hamilton, from Grave to Gay.

"If you are trying to be attractive, don't make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others."

This is one of the maxims of Miss Laura Hamilton, based on her own experience.

"ONCE upon a time," began Laura Hamilton, more reminiscently than her very evident youthfulness would seem to permit, "I owned a little white poodle—a cross between a Maltese and a French poodle. He had wonderful long silky hair, and we used to keep it in order by treating it with oil of cocoanut. Now, a few years ago my hair, which was very long, suddenly began to come out a bit—to thin at the ends and to show a tendency to acquaintance with an up-to-then stranger, dandruff. First I worried, then I vainly consulted a specialist or two, and then I thought of doggie."

Oil of Cocoanut.

"Sermons in stones—and beauty hints in the silken coat of a Franco-Maltese poodle," thought Miss Interviewer, who was sitting in the wings of the Winter Garden in New York talking to Miss Hamilton, and glimpsing bits of the wonderful marchings and flings and dancings going on out of wonderful New Wynburn's wonderful Capital Steps. And the three "wonderfuls" in that sentence are none too many.

"I thought of doggie," went on my pretty little brown-haired neighbor, "and I invested in 10 cents' worth of oil of cocoanut. And it is good for good hair and so kind to poor hair. Use it every other night—moisten the finger tips with it, and rub the oil well into the scalp. It won't make the hair greasy or oily looking—but it will give it a natural gloss and luster. Shampoo the hair once a week and brush it a hundred strokes every day. Part it down the middle from crown to the nape of the neck; bring the two heavy strands over the shoulders and brush each section fifty times with a long sweeping motion that swings from the scalp to the very ends of the hair. Plentiful glossy hair is sure to result."

"And then we do not take our flowing, abundant tresses and torture them with hot irons, do we?" I asked.

"We do not," replied Miss Hamilton. "We trust the natural gloss and add a little training as to graceful curves and scallops, so we may look as well as possible—and we don't beautify ourselves at the cost of our hair.

Give It a Chance.

"If you are trying to be attractive," she went on earnestly, "do not make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others. Give everything a chance. Let me see—I start by trying to keep calm and cool and well and rested. My first rule is to avoid restaurants at night. After the theater, instead of going into a restaurant, with its heavy air and heavy glare of artificial light, I motor out into the pure, clean country.

"An hour under the stars every night—an hour with the cool wind blowing on my face and the pure, clean, unused air of night blowing the cobwebs out of my brain—and I go home to restful, dreamless sleep. Then I wake up ready to start the day with about ten minutes of exercise.

"First I lie flat on my bed and stretch my arms out straight, and take a deep, lung-filling breath; then I exhale that breath, dropping my arms to my sides the while, and as I fill my lungs and chest again I raise my arms at right angles to my body again.

"Next I hop out of bed and take these two exercises by the open window. Grasp a straight chair by the rear legs, just midway betwen the base and the first rung, and learn to elevate the chair straight out and above your head, taking deep breaths while you do it. Ten times for each exercise is the correct amount. The last exercise sounds simple, but it fills out and rounds the chest and helps you maintain an erect carriage. Place the finger tips together above the head and far enough in front so you can just see them, and then inflate and empty the lungs ten times.

Your Morning Swim.

"Now take your morning swim; wash your face in clear, hot water, and without soap; dash a bit of witch hazel across your face and rinse in cold water; dress in pretty, simple clothes, and eat a simple breakfast, and you are all ready for a happy, useful day, with every part of your body in trim and ready to meet the demands of the hours to come."

And then, ever ready to meet the demands of the hour or moment, Miss Hamilton tripped across the stage to add her own glowing young personality to the glowing ensemble of "The Passing Show of 1913."

LILIAN LAUFFERTY.

Unusual.

"Queer mix-up over the Wombat estate."

"As to how?"

"Seems the heirs got more than the lawyers."

Mixed In Her Dates.

He—Do you love me, darling?

She—Yes, Jack, dear.

He—Jack! You mean Harold, don't you?

She—Of course! How absurd I am! I keep thinking to-day's Saturday.

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

TELL HER WHAT YOU HAVE TOLD ME.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had been keeping company with a young girl for about four years. We were to be married last month, but about three months ago we had a little quarrel over a foolish thing I had said to her, which she took up in a wrong way. The quarrel started when I wanted to kiss her after an enjoyable evening before I left her, but she objected and I got real angry. Then I passed the remark that started the quarrel. Kindly let me know how I can regain her love, as I have suffered enough. HARRY "B."

Apologize and make your apology humble and sincere.

I can't believe that a girl would refuse to kiss her betrothed lover good-night because of a whim. You must have done more to offend her than you tell, and must make your apology fit your crime, and your conduct exemplary after she forgives you.

YOU TALK LIKE A MAN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl 21 years of age and I am 19 and have a good position and am able to take care of a wife. She loves me and I love her, so do you think I am too young to be in love, as I am thinking of making her my wife? So I would like your advice, as she is always speaking of marriage. ANXIOUS.

You are not too young to be in love, but 19 is rather young for a man to marry. You say you are in position to support her, which would indicate that you are older than your years, and are a good deal of a man after all.

But why not wait just two years? Believe me, the time will go rapidly and you will never regret it.

WRITE HIM A NOTE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 19 and have been keeping company with a young man a year older than myself for a year and three months. Just because I sent a card to his friend I think he is angry at me. I did not mean any harm. Kindly let me know what I should do to try to make up with him, as I love him dearly. J. K.

I do not like to suggest that a girl apologize when she has done no wrong, for the reason that once humble, the man tries to keep her so. But you have been sweethearts so long, and love is too precious to risk for pride's sake, so write him a little note of explanation. I hope he will be man enough to love you all the more because of this proof of your affection.

LET HER KNOW THE TRUTH.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a poor man and have been keeping company with a young lady for the last couple of months. Would it be proper for me to give her up, after accepting a diamond pin from her at Christmas time? I am willing to give the pin back as I do not care for her. P. W.

I am sorry for the girl, for such humiliation leaves a scar, but I would be more sorry for her if you married her without love in your heart.

Tell her you no longer love her, and be manly about it. And, always, till the day of your death, think and speak well of her.

I think it would be better to return the pin.

I AM AFRAID NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a Cuban lady and I am sure that my love is reciprocated. My many friends embarrass me quite a good deal by claiming that she is a negress. Do you think if I should marry her I could be happy with her? I am thinking seriously of proposing. GEORGE S.

My fear that the step would be fatal is based on your anxiety. Were your love of the right sort, it would be impossible for your friends to embarrass you, and their doubts would only strengthen your resolution to marry the girl. Think this over seriously. I want you to be happy, but you must not marry a girl only to break her heart by being ashamed of her.

CALL AT HOME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, but she does not answer my letters. How can I meet her and tell her of my love? RALPH.

Perhaps she has never received them. Call at her home and learn your fate from her own lips. It may require courage, but boldness in a lover is a trait which all girls admire.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT would appear to those who have noted the great number and variety of women's clubs that woman can have no longing that will not find a society organized for the express purpose of its gratification.

If she aspires to project her spiritual insight into the occult or to squelch that worm of the dust called Man, or to get bacon at cheaper prices, she has only to join a club, and such a desired end, if not attained, is at least set in motion.

But that every longing is not met is proven through the organization by Daysey Mayme Appleton of a society for which the heart of every woman has unconsciously yearned. And the greater the number of her friends, the greater her yearning.

Daysey Mayme had had the parlors of her home made hideous by the gifts of loving friends for years, but not until she received a water color of a yellow lamb on a cerise field with a purple shepherdess did she decide to rebel. The result of that rebellion was the recent launching of a club called The Secret Society of Breakers.

No woman need admit she belongs to such a society. Such an admission would cause the estrangement of generous friends and result in charges of lack of appreciation of their gifts.

"The members," explained Daysey Mayme, "are known to me and report to me for assignment, and our method of procedure is this:

"A woman receives a fish platter on which is painted Jonah inside the whale or some other appetizing marine scene, and the donor expects it to be placed on the plate rail of the dining room.

"The recipient appeals to me, and I deputize one of the active workers of our order to make a social call at her home. The active worker sees the platter, she is enraptured with it, she asks to hold it, she lets it fall, and it breaks into a hundred pieces.

"She is overcome with remorse, of course, which I appease by paying for her work as soon as it is reported that the plate is beyond mending.

"Our organization is only two weeks old, but in that time members have made calls on other members afflicted with generous friends, and have carelessly dropped and broken seventeen goldfish globes, nine lamps, six vases and fourteen china plaques, and have borrowed four oil paintings and eleven sofa cushions for the purpose of copying, which they have lost on the way home.

"The Secret Society of Breakers will appeal to every woman who has kind and generous friends. In future no woman need go through life with her love for an artistic home blighted by purple and blue vases against her green wall paper or pink camels worked on a yellow sofa cushion.

"All she need do will be to drop a note to me."

THE JUDGE WAS WILLING TO HELP OUT, ANYWAY

PITCHER CAVET FATED TO LOSE HIS RIGHT EYE

TRUE baseball fans, no matter how much they want to see Atlanta beat Mobile in the approaching series here, will regret to learn that the Gulls will be minus the services of their prize southpaw, Pug Cavet. And it will be with deeper regret they learn that Pug probably has pitched his last game.

Members of the Memphis club said yesterday that Cavet's right eye, which has troubled him from childhood, had been getting steadily worse with some malady that would probably necessitate its removal in order to save the other eye and not render the lanky pitcher totally blind.

Specialists are treating Cavet, but hold out little hope of saving the eye. It would be a mechanical impossibility for a one-eyed man to play baseball successfully, owing to the extreme necessity of judging distance at all times—a feat accomplished unconsciously by the eyes themselves, using the distance between them as the base of a triangle, with the object on which they are focused as the point.

Should Cavet be forced to retire the game will lose a most promising young pitcher and one who was practically certain of making good in the Big Show.

TWO MONTREAL PLAYERS GRADUATE INTO MAJORS

BROOKLYN, Aug. 27.—President Lychtenheim, of the Montreal club of the International League, announced yesterday at Ebbets Field the sale of two prominent Montreal players. Outfielder Gilhooly goes to the New York Americans in exchange for Pitcher George McConnell and a cash consideration not stated. The Philadelphia Nationals secured Catcher Burns in exchange for Catcher Howley and two other players to be announced later.

BOXERS IN DRAW BOUT.

Come, On Cracker Fans, Let's Beat Out Birmingham

We MUST Prove That Atlanta Is the Best Baseball City in the South by Turning Out Biggest Yearly Attendance.

"Now is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of their ball club."

But the exigencies of the situation in Atlanta seem to warrant a little editing of the famous old sentence.

Over in Birmingham they are going after two things, both of which now are held and much prized in Atlanta.

One is the reputation of being the Best Baseball Town in the Southern League.

The other is the attendance record for a season's play.

ATLANTA HOLDS THE PRESENT RECORD—196,000.

And that is what makes Atlanta the best baseball town in the circuit. That is, it is one of the things. There are others too numerous to mention just now.

Anyway, Birmingham, with a club that is fighting to stay out of the second division, is near breaking the attendance record this year.

And Birmingham is a couple of jumps ahead of Atlanta, right now—and Atlanta with a ball club making a great little fight for the pennant, and almost sure to land as high as second place, anyway.

The Atlanta merchants and business men are taking up the boastful challenge from Slagville. It doesn't listen good to them, this hearing that another town is the best town in the Southern League.

And so, boys, here's a little tip:

Requests for the afternoon off, beginning to-day and lasting until the afternoon of September 6, will be given preferred attention in Atlanta business and mercantile offices—

PROVIDED—

The petitioner adds that he WANTS TO GO TO THE BALL GAME!

Try it and see.

The following, just for example, have asserted openly that they will grant afternoons off to just as many employees as they can possibly spare, from now until the end of the season—to go to the ball game!

W. E. Chapin Insurance Company, Royal Insurance Company, Georgia Railway and Power Company, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, Third National Bank, V. H. Kriegshaber & Son, and others who are adding their prestige to Atlanta's battle to retain the title of the "Best Ball Town in the Southern League."

Try it and see.

TRY IT TO-DAY.

To-day's a mighty good time, what with it being the grocers' and butchers' half holiday, and the date of the baseball track meet of the Memphis and Atlanta clubs, starting at 3 o'clock, with five events for which Atlanta merchants have offered prizes.

Sports and Such

EVERS IS HAPPY.

"I have no complaints to make,"
Said Evers in a fan,
"But the umps are out to break
And skeigh me if they can.
"The Giants' luck still blocks me;
My team is full of kinks;
And Bresnahan still knocks me,
And Murphy is a jinx!"

* * *

A BALL PLAYER HAS BEEN fined $10 for calling Umpire Bill Klem, a catfish. And yet—what should he have called him?

* * *

PRESIDENT EBBETS IS SIGNing up a few college men, but not with the idea that they will assist in the preparation of forthcoming dedication speeches. These will still be the old Ebbets brand.

* * *

MANAGER MILLER HUGGINS is going to be asked to resign because he has been finding fault with the playing of the Cardinals. We don't wonder. Hanging is too good for him.

* * *

WE ALWAYS WELCOME A touch of softer sentiment in a boxfighter. Arthur Pelky is going to do his training at Calgary, right where he killed Luther McCarty.

PELKY, BY THE WAY, retired from the ring on that occasion, but only in the Pickwickian or Buffalo Bill sense.

* * *

IF IT WERE NOT FOR THE attitude of the magnates on gambling, we would be inclined to believe that Connie Mack's daily announcement of casualties among the Athletics might be a sign that he is laying back for bets.

* * *

(World's Series, 1912.)

He, oh easy!
Here's a fly!
I'll nail it with a half a try.
There it goes—
Oh my toes!
The gang will break my nose!

* * *

YOU HAVE TO ENVY MR. Clance his optimism. After losing two games to the Browns in one day, he still thinks the Yankees are not the worst team in the league.

* * *

MR. CHANCE, THE MANAGER, and Mr. Touchard, the tennis player, each understands how the other feels. Both lay all of their troubles to foot-faults.

* * *

IT'S FUNNY THAT ball players succeed in annoying Hank O'Day. You'd think that any man who had managed the Cincinnati team would be immune.

LEACH CROSS LEAVES FOR VANCOUVER TO SEE CHAMP

Kid Jinx Gets Kick in Ribs and Crackers Win Two Games in One Day

ZOWIE! SOME HITTING!! 29 SWATS FOR 20 RUNS

By O. B. Keeler.

TRULY it has been said, it's a Long Worm that has no turning.

The Crackers turned yesterday and ripped off a couple of games, the same being all two ends of a doubleheader—something that hasn't happened in weeks and weeks. Scores, 12 to 2 and 8 to 0.

Memphis was the ripnee, of course. But that isn't the point. This being supposed to be a feature narrative, a feature must be found. You can get the news from the Box Score.

* * *

FEATURE No. 1—Winning both games of a two-ply matinee.

* * *

OF course, there was extremely airtight pitching, for one thing. But that would have won with a good deal less than a total of 29 hits and 20 runs in fifteen innings.

That might be construed into piling it on. And when it comes to prodigality, the original P. S. had nothing whatever on Bill Smith's hands, battering away at the reeling Turtles yesterday afternoon.

* * *

FOR example, there was one inning in the first game—the seventh—when six hits were arranged carefully in a row, one after another. Then an error was inserted, and two more hits added, the total productiveness being limited to five runs only by scandalous performances on the bases.

* * *

IN another round of the same encounter, four hits produced four runs, but the Turtles kicked in with three boots, which naturally aided.

Everybody on the Cracker club took at least one safe whack while the whacking was good. Long, Smith and Bisland took three apiece, and Agler, Welchonce, Nixon and Chapman were content with two each. Nixon scored three runs and made himself otherwise obnoxious to the enemy.

* * *

WALLY SMITH got the long hit of the day, a triple that rolled nearly to the score board. He duplicated the feat in the second game, but the ground was heavy, which afflicted Mr. Smith's feet, and he was out at third after a nice gooey slide.

Thompson pitched a one-hit affair in the six innings the Turtles batted in the second game, while Dec Newton discovered a lot more about the law of gravitation by watching a shower of base-hits dropping in various parts of the field.

* * *

AMONG the other legitimate headliners might be mentioned Jack Love's glove-hand stab of a line drive from Bisland's bat; Schweitzer's long running catch of Smith's fly; Agler's stab of Bisland's assist on Shanley; Nixon's great running catch of Abstein's foul fly, and Baerwald's debate with Umps Stockdale in the first inning of the first game.

Baerwald spoke with fervor, but lost the decision. Also, he was banned from the game.

* * *

ONE more feature, because it's one you don't see oftener than once in an ordinary lifetime.

In the fourth inning of the first game, Bisland hit a sharp grounder to Abstein at first. Abby came in to threaten Smith, who was on third, and Pizzy stopped right in front of him. Abstein swung at him with the ball. Pizzy ducked right to the ground, dodged under the big fellow's wing and beat it to first.

He was safe—and he hadn't run out of the line, either.

* * *

REGULAR daily feature: Mobile won.

Bearing on the death grapple: We just got back the Half-game we lost the day before, when the Gulls won while we got into a dogfall.

Prospects for first place: Chilly.

* * *

OH, yes—it rained, too.

Another one of those inhuman showers that appear to contradict the adage that the rain falls alike on the just and the unjust.

This particular rain fell mostly on the ball park. The sun was shining everywhere else, as on the celebrated occasion when Mr. Casey was at the bat. But it certainly did rain between games.

At that, most of the flood disappeared from the earth by the time Bill Smith did the dove act, and the second game got its 5 1-2 innings played in less than an hour, in spite of the sloppiness and the terrific hitting of the Crackers.

McLoughlin Retains His Tennis Title

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—The lawn tennis championship record for 1913 was practically completed on the Casino Grand court when Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, successfully defended his own title in singles and maintained the Pacific Coast supremacy by defeating R. Norris Williams, second, of Philadelphia, in the finals of the all-comers tournament, in a well-fought four-set match. The scores 6-4, 5-7, 8-6, 6-1.

As McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy, of Los Angeles, won their second championship in doubles last week and Miss Mary Browne, of Los Angeles, is still the women's title holder the ascendancy of California in the principal departments of tennis is assured for another year.

TEX RICHARDS SWEEPS CARD IN FIVE RACES

TEX RICHARDS "came back" last night at the Motordrome. He won every heat in which he started, making the biggest clean-up of the season. Number "23," Richards' famous "boat," returned from the factory yesterday morning, after a thorough overhauling, and it was just bubbling over with speed.

The races last night were exceptionally good. While the time in some of the heats was not as fast as expected, yet the finishes were all close and exceptionally exciting.

The feature event was the William L. Peel Sweepstake. Colonel Peel was scheduled to start this event, but on account of illness in his family he was unable to be on the job.

Richards won the Southern championship and the Peel Sweepstake. Luther ran second in both events, riding fine races, but his machine just didn't have the necessary speed to nose out Tex.

Here are the results:

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONSHIP.
(One-mile heats; 2 miles final; 25 points for first; 15 points for second and 5 for third.)

First Heat—Henry Lewis, first; Harry Glenn, second. Time, 44 2-5.

Second Heat—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time, 42 1-5.

Final—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 1:26.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(Three heats, 1, 2 and 3 miles, best 2 out of 3 heats.)

First Heat (1 mile)—Won by George Renel. Time, 44.

Third Heat (3 miles)—Won by Morty Graves. Time, 2:11 2-5.

W. L. PEEL SWEEPSTAKES.
(French point system; 10 for first, 6 for second, 3 for third; three heats 3, 4 and 5 miles.)

First Heat (3 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 2:08 3-5.

Second Heat (4 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 2:55.

Third Heat (5 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 3:43.

Points—Richards, 30; Luther, 18; Glenn, 6; Lewis, 3.

VARDON BREAKS RECORDS ON CLEVELAND GOLF COURSE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, English professional golfers, touring the United States, at the Mayfield club yesterday defeated Joe K. Bole, city champion of Cleevland, and Eben M. Byers, of Pittsburg, 5 up in a 36-hole match.

In feating Byers and Bole, Vardon broke the Mayfield course record, both for 18 and 36 holes. In the morning round he loweerd the 18-hole record held by Byers, from 72 to 67. In the afternoon he beat his own newly established record with 66, giving him 135 for 36 holes.

The old 36-hole record was 155. In the afternoon round Vardon's partner, Ray, bettered the former 18-hole course record, doing it in 71. John D. Rockefeller was an enthusiastic spectator.

MERCER'S FOOTBALL TEAM MUST REPORT SEPTEMBER 5

KRAZY KAT — We Don't Blame Ignatz for Hurling the Brick

TRACK MEET IS ON TO-DAY AT PONCE DE LEON

TO-DAY'S the day—Field Day, you know.

Get out to Ponce DeLeon at 3 o'clock, or a shade earlier, and kill two guineas with one dornick—see the Atlanta and Memphis players in a track meet, and hand one to that cocky Birmingham, which has an idea of being a better baseball town than Atlanta.

The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock, unless the special 100-yard dash, a challenge event between Doc Seabough and Joe Dunn, should not be finished by that time.

Anyway, Elliott Dent will pitch, and we may draw Rube Kissinger as official pest for the Turtles.

But the field sports start at 3 o'clock, and there will be at least five events: 100-yard dash, circling the bases, distance throwing, fungo hitting, and a sack race.

Another special challenge event is the 100-yard race between Jack Love and Bill Abstein, of the Turtles. Bill declined to bet on the result, saying he was ashamed to. But he has bound himself to buy Jack a hat, to cost not less than $5, if Jack can beat him.

Jack thinks that is fair enough.

Tight Golf Battles at East Lake

D. & F. Play Reaches 2d Round

MATCH play in the Davis & Freeman trophy golf tournament at East Lake began yesterday afternoon, and before play ceased for darkness the first round had been finished in all flights and several matches in the second round had been disposed of.

The feature match in the first flight was that between H. Block and R. L. Jones, won by the former, 1 up, in a close and exciting round. The second flight turned up closer matches, on the average, than the first flight, and in two instances extra holes were necessary to determine the winner. In one, O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham in 19 holes, and in the other C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole.

The lengthened holes, achieved by resetting the teeing grounds, made higher scores general, but the contestants were much pleased at the increased "sportiness" of the celebrated A. A. C. course.

Results yesterday:

First Flight.

First Round—W. R. Tichenor defeated R. J. Norris, 6 up and 5 to play; F. B. Fay defeated J. Q. Burton, 4 up and 2 to play; C. V. Rainwater defeated J. B. Pollard, 7 up and 5 to play; R. G. Blanton defeated D C. Root, 1 up; J. A. Ellen defeated H P. D. Comee by default; H. Block defeated R. L. Jones 1 up; Dowdle Brown defeated Perry Adair, 5 up and 3 to play; George Adair defeated S Hard, 4 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—J. A. Ellen defeated H. Block, 3 up and 2 to play; Dowdle Brown defeated George Adair, 6 up and 4 to play.

Second Flight.

First Round—O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham at the 19th hole; H. C. Moore defeated J. D. Eley, 3 up and 2 to play; J. C. Payne defeated E. D. Duncan, 2 up and 1 to play; J. B. Martin defeated A. A. Doonan, 1 up; C. E. Rose defeated J. W. Pearce, 4 up and 2 to play; J. D. Darling defeated H. R. Calet, 3 up and 2 to play; C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole; W. H. Glenn defeated P. A. Wright, 3 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—C. E. Rose defeated J. B. Martin, 5 up and 3 to play.

Third Flight.

First Round—C. Donaldson defeated W. F. Upshaw, 6 up and 4 to play; J. E. Mellet defeated L. M. Crichton, 4 up and 3 to play; W. P. Hazelwood defeated Scott Hudson, 5 up and 4 to play; W. E. Warren defeated T. S. Ingram, 1 up; F. B. Meador defeated Will Soul, 7 up and 5 to play; L. D. Scott defeated K. R. Cobb, 4 up and 3 to play.

Fourth Flight.

First Round—H. L. Dix defeated W. C. Spiker, 7 up and 6 to play; R. I. Gresham defeated G. N. Spring at the 20th hole; B. L. Craig defeated E. G. Beaudy, 6 up and 5 to play; G. L. Simpson defeated G. B. Allen, 1 up.

Pinch Hit by Reed, Atlanta Boy, Won For the Phillies

Milton Reed, of Atlanta, broke into the limelight in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, when he came to bat in the pinch for the Phillies against the Cardinals and settled matters in favor of his club with a smashing hit, the Phillies winning, 6 to 5.

Pinch hitters were in evidence all through the game. In the seventh inning St. Louis led, 5 to 1. In that round Millr and Byrne delivered, Paskert—formerly a Cracker player—came through in the eighth, and then Reed finished it up in the ninth.

Savannah Indians Challenge Crackers For Special Series

Word comes from the direction of Savannah that Perry Lipe's Indians, pennant winners in the Sally League, are earnestly desirous of playing a post-season series with the Crackers, following the last game of the Southern League season, September 6.

It seems the Indians, feeling pretty cocky over their own achievements of this year, and recalling the licking handed the Crackers by Chattanooga on a former occasion, when Atlanta consented to meet a smaller league club, are to be the challengers.

Manager Smith said this morning he was going to take the matter up with the directors of the local club to-day and would soon know if the series could be arranged.

Third Base Job Is a Cinch One

Art Hofman Says So, Anyway

ARTIE HOFMAN, the one-time great utility player on the old Cub machine, more lately a Pirate gardener, and still more recently a man of all work for the Vols, having performed creditably in every infield position, except shortfield, in the two months he has been with that club, thinks the third base job is the easiest on a team.

Some time ago Artie gave the last cushion the "once over" and passed it up as "nuts to crack for any ordinary ball player," to use his own expression. For giving the big laugh to third base, Artie is aware that the woods are full of ball players and sport scribes who will be howling to have him locked in the room so recently vacated by Harry Thaw. But the one-time Cub has spent considerable time cavorting around the hot corner and has his own convictions.

Here's the way Artie has it all doped out:

"This third base, instead of being the hardest position in the infield, in my opinion is the easiest. Figure how many batters ever reach first base in a game. Still less see second and by the time you get over to third, not many get that far. How many games do you read of in which it says: 'Only one man got as far as second?' Not all of them, of course, but it happens most every day, in some league.

"I guess I've seen a bunch of ball games in my time, and in lots of them the third baseman didn't get his hands on the ball but three or four times. There are mighty few 'inside hitters' in the game to-day, and where they get all this stuff about third base being the hardest position on the infield is 'by me.' What about all those ugly hops the shortstop and second baseman have to handle, to say nothing of the low and wide heaves to first—and I ought to know, because I have been in all those places myself.

"The only time a third baseman is really in trouble is when first and second are occupied, with nobody down. That's something else again, for the batter is almost certain to bunt. But if he has a smart pitcher and a clever first baseman there is a chance that all he has to do is stay on the bag and take the throw for a force play."

UNIVERSITY DROPS FOOTBALL.

LANCASTER, PA., Aug. 27.—Having been notified that Susquehanna University, of Selinsgrove, has abandoned its football schedule for the coming season, which included a game in Lancaster on September 27, with Franklin and Marshall College, the athletic authorities of the latter institution have arranged for the Pennsylvania Military College, of Chester, to fill that date.

"We'll Accomplish the Miracle of Modern Baseball," Says Rube Marquard

GIANTS BENT ON RECORD OF 4 STRAIGHT FLAGS

By Rube Marquard

IF we Giants justify our belief in ability to win a third consecutive pennant, Manager McGraw will be in a position next year to accomplish the miracle of modern diamond history—four flags in a row.

Looking back through history we find that few clubs have maintained winning consistently for more than two successive years. The Cubs, under Frank Chance, were a wonderful collection of brains and playing skill. They reeled off three straight championships and came back for a fourth after dropping behind Pittsburg in 1909. Throughout the five campaigns practically the same team had remained intact. When it broke, it split wide open, as evidenced this year.

Jimmy Collins, old Boston American, went to smithereens after two successful campaigns in 1903 and 1904. The Giants won easy races in 1904 and 1905. I have often heard McGraw say that he was never so sure of a pennant as in 1906, when injury and sickness wrecked what appeared a sure-fire third straight win. Yet, the bulwarks of the old-time Giants had crumbled from age, McGraw came out of the wreck with an aggregation of entirely new blood.

I have been told that McGraw's experience of 1906 was responsible for many of his most successful methods now employed. He determined never again to be caught without a reserve force strong enough to plug any emergency gap. He realized the importance of speed on attack. Speed and youth usually travel hand in hand.

With the possible exception of the Athletics no team of modern times has remained so well fortified against the future, at the close of three successive campaigns, as McGraw's crew. The Athletics, through sheer overconfidence, overlooked a great chance for a third straight pennant last year.

Connie Mack has a grand team of youth and ability that is likely to last for a number of campaigns to come. Still I do not believe that Connie Mack to-day boasts the strength of McGraw.

I am confident that the Giants will beat the Athletics this year, if these old rivals clash in the world's series. Outside the batteries, the teams are about as evenly matched as could be imagined.

We have far the better balanced batteries. Meyers and McLean for all-round efficiency and hitting ability will outshine Lapp and Schang. Schang, of course, is far speedier than either of New York's celebrated backstops.

Our club has all the call on pitchers, though. Bender and Plank, the great mainstays of the Athletics, have both been overworked and are not likely to have an opportunity to rest up for the season. Jack Coombs is strictly out of it, they tell me.

Mack is not likely to stake his chances on young pitchers who have been very erratic. Two overworked veterans will have to stand the attack of four or five pitchers who have shown wonderful pitching consistency throughout the season.

FODDER FOR FANS

Every team in the second division in the National League lost yesterday; New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago winning.

* * *

As a result of victories by the Pirates and Cubs both teams are still tied for third place in the National League.

* * *

The New York Yankees have bade farewell to the West this season, after dropping three out of four games to the Naps.

* * *

* * *

"Big pitchers" is now the standing order to big league scouts. The magnates have found the big men can stand more work than the little ones.

* * *

"Babe" Adams, the Pirates' twirler, not only pitched a shutout game against the Braves, but got a two-bagger as well.

* * *

Bobby Byrne, the former Pirate, got into the game for the Phillies Tuesday, playing third base. He got a run and a hit.

* * *

Linn Scroggins, a southpaw recruit, started for the White Sox, but proved easy picking for the Senators, who beat Chicago 5 to 3.

* * *

"Josh" Billings, catcher for the Quincy, Ill., team in the Three I League, has been secured by the Clevelands.

* * *

Pitcher George Davis, of the Rochester, N. Y., team in the International League, has been secured by the Braves. Davis was formerly with the New York Yankees.

* * *

MULFORD'S PUEGOT CAR OUT OF BIG RACE

ELGIN, ILL., Aug. 27.—Automobile racing fans were handed a disappointment to-day when the announcement was made that Ralph Mulford was unable to get his Puegot car ready for Saturday's race here. Mulford will drive a Mason on both days of the race meet.

The Puegot which Mulford was to drive was piloted to first place by Jules Goux at Indianapolis this year in the 500-mile international sweepstakes race.

The fastest practice lap on the 8 1-2-mile course was credited to Joe Dawson, winner of the 1912 500-mile race at Indianapolis. He sent his Marmon around the course in 7 minutes and 13 seconds. Spencer Wishart drove the distance in his Mercer five seconds slower than Dawson.

PLAYER BREAKS JAW.

LANGFORD STOPS FLYNN IN FOUR ROUNDS AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Sam Lanford scored a knockout over "Porky" Flinn in four rounds at the Atlas Athletic Association last night. Ten seconds before the bell sounded in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a twelve-round bout, a right jab to the jaw landed and Flinn went down for the count.

EDWARDS FANS FOURTEEN.

ROYSTON, GA., Aug. 27.—In the second of the series with Elberton, Royston yesterday won by a score of 7 to 0. The features of the game was the heavy hitting of the Royston team and the superb pitching of Edwards, who fanned fourteen men and gave up two hits. Elberton used three pitchers.

MORE GAMES FOR LAGRANGE.

LAGRANGE, GA., Aug. 27.—Not satisfied with a full season of regular league baseball the LaGrange fans are planning to have baseball games every week until October 1. The initial game of a five-game series to decide the town championship was played to-day, resulting in a score of 19 to 2 in favor of the Northwest club against the Southeast club.

RINGSIDE NEWS

George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will go through with their ten-round go at Terre Haute, Ind., on Labor Day. Tommy Walsh, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that George is getting in great shape for the mill. This will be the fourth meeting between the rival middleweights.

* * *

Frank Madole, the American lightweight, who is in Paris, writes that he is tired of traveling in Europe and will be home any day. Madole tells of several of his experiences. He was forced to box three men in two weeks, going twenty rounds in one, and losing by the decision route.

* * *

Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight, is back in the Missouri city from his trip to Los Angeles. Trendall left for the coast about a month ago to get a match with Leach Cross, but Matty Baldwin beat him to the big plum. Harry refused to take on any of the second-raters, so left for home.

* * *

The death of "Bull" Young has put the boxing game on the coast in a bad light. It will probably be some time before the heavyweights don the padded mitts out West again.

* * *

Sam McVey, who claims Paris as his home, has returned to that city from Australia, and the chances are that a twenty-round bout may be arranged between him and Jack Johnson. McVey is a big favorite with the Parisians and a bout between him and Johnson would draw a record house.

* * *

Young Eppy will meet Matty McCue in Racine, Wis., instead of Pittsburg on Labor Day. The match, which had been hanging fire for a week, was clinched yesterday. The two will weigh in at 122 pounds.

* * *

Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo lightweight, is after a match with Tommy Murphy. Duffy has wired Jim Coffroth asking for the Admission Day date with the Harlem boy.

LEW HARDAGE TO COACH MERCER FOOTBALL TEAM

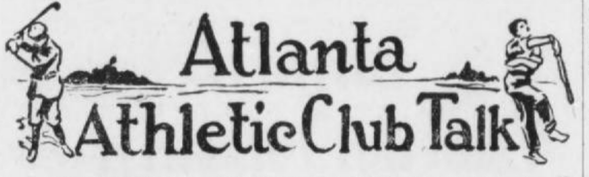

MACON, GA., Aug. 27.—Lew Hardage, former Vanderbilt football star, has signed to coach the Mercer University eleven during the coming season. Acting President Sellers makes the announcement. Hardage succeeds Dr. C. C. Stroud, who has accepted the physical directorship of Louisiana State University.

HAUSER OUT FOR THE SEASON.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Arnold Hauser, the St. Louis shortstop, feels confident he will recover the full use of his injured leg for next season, but Manager Huggins says he won't be able to play any this year.

PITCHER ROSE TO YANKEES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Manager Frank Chance announced last night the purchase of Pitcher Rose, of the Houston (Texas) League club. Rose, it was announced, would report September 10.

Walter DuBard is keen for the basketball season to start. He says that the club team will be much stronger this season than it was last fall.

* * *

"Pie" Weaver is expected back from a short vacation to-day. "Pie" is confident of earning a regular berth on the basketball team this fall.

* * *

Coach Joe Bean has just announced that the training table for the basketballers will start October 15.

* * *

The golf "bugs" still are talking about the "80" that Tick Tichenor turned in last Saturday. It was a remarkable score inasmuch as the "far-away" driving tees now are being used.

* * *

Why not a golf match this fall between the Athletic Club and the Capital City Club players? The players of the clubs should meet on the links in a tournament at least once a year.

* * *

The handball regulars are at it every day, preferably about noon. There usually is a terrific cut-throat match on among three celebrated players who shall be nameless for the present, and they are getting accustomed to a "gallery."

* * *

Another regular feature is 'Gene Kelley. 'Gene is training for a person named Smith, and he is not loafing on the job. He also is doing some wrestling, but it is not understood that he is plotting any roughhouse tactics for the prospective engagement.

* * *

'Gene is not lonely in his training. The person named Smith is to be found exploding the W. & D. pellets about the same time. Carleton's training fancies are more inclusive. He usually is to be found in a foursome, while 'Gene takes it out on some single partner.

* * *

Entrants are filing their names with the club bulletin board for the Cotton States Tennis Championships, to be played the week of September 8 on the East Lake clay courts. Club members find that a convenient method of entering. Out of town contestants are sending their names to Carleton Y. Smith, 608 Walton Building. The list is growing daily.

YOUNG SAYLOR IS OUT LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27.—Young Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, who has placed himself under the wing of Ray Bronson, is most anxious to get a crack at either Freddie Welsh or Willie Ritchie, and has offered to take the place of Welsh against the champion at Vancouver on Labor Day.

Saylor recently defeated Mickey McIntyre at Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, giving away 10 pounds in weight. He is a fine young lightweight, having met most of the stars of that class.

TO STAGE POLO TOURNEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—John B. Miller, chairman of the Pacific Coast section of the American Polo Association, plans to stage a world-wide competition during the 1915 exposition in San Francisco. He hopes to construct a magnificent turf polo field within the grounds of the exposition and invite England, India, Hawaii, Argentine Republic, Brazil and Australia, in addition to the American poloists.

Education—the First Duty of Government

The Most Important Institutions in the Country Are the Public Schools—the Gymnasiums of Human Brains.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We wish to discuss with our readers in this and in later editions of this newspaper the great and serious question of education.

It is a question as broad as the ocean, and as deep. It is a question so vast that organized discussion of it seems hopeless.

The greatest minds of the world have devoted their powers to the intricate question of development of the human brain, and the problem has been scarcely touched.

The greatest works on education in the history of the world are undoubtedly Plato's "Republic," Spencer's "Education" and Rousseau's "Emile." The last is the greatest of all. It should be read by every father and mother and by every earnest citizen.

Other works that may be earnestly recommended are Aristotle's "Politics," Pestalozzi's "How Gertrude Teaches Her Children" and Froebel's "Education of Man."

To Rousseau undoubtedly belongs the high honor of having thought and written most powerfully, most originally and most practically on the greatest of problems. His brain is the cornerstone of the structure of intelligent educational methods.

He foreshadowed in his "Emile" Fourier's splendid principle of "attractive industry."

THE PROGRESS OF HUMANITY DEPENDS UPON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE HUMAN BRAIN THROUGH EDUCATION.

Man is far from the animal in proportion as his brain is cultivated. Even the animals themselves rank in their kingdom in proportion to their brain activity.

William T. Harris said truly: "If man had let himself alone he would have remained the monkey that he was. Not only this, but if the monkey had let himself alone he would have remained a lemur, or a bat, or a bear, or some other creature that now offers only a faint suggestion of what the ape has become."

The elephant and the ape, among our humble animal brothers, appear to have reached their limits of possibility in the way of educational development. They still remain, and always will remain, vastly inferior to their microscopic comrades—the ants and bees and other insects.

The human race has barely begun the systematic study of the problem of application, and systematic application of the truths discovered and agreed upon. In proportion to our stature and possibilities we are hideous ignoramuses compared with the ant in the garden path.

The education of children is regulated not by their brain formation and possible development, but by the wealth of their parents, the parsimony of municipalities, the baleful influences of tradition and the colossally stupid idea that thorough brain cultivation is in some way antagonistic to material success.

The greatness of a nation depends upon the average mental power of the nation's citizens, and mental power depends absolutely upon education.

The ignorant man who has succeeded through natural force and lucky opportunity is fond of asking these questions:

"What is the good of education? Of what practical use is scientific knowldege?" These men are admirably answered by Herbert Spencer, to whose work they are referred.

A collection of Englishmen ruined themselves in the sinking of mines in search of coal. They might have saved their money had they known that a certain fossil which they dug up in abundance belongs to a geological stratum below which no coal is ever found. They went on digging cheerfully and wasting their money. An acquaintance with that fossil and its meaning would have saved their cash.

Some individuals spent one hundred thousand dollars trying to save the alcoholic byproduct that distills from bread in baking. They would have saved their money had they known that only a hundredth part of the flour is changed through fermentation.

The study of biology is essential in the successful fattening of cattle.

An "entozoon" seems to the practical man a foolish, imaginary creature. But millions of sheep have been saved by the discovery that one of these fancy scientific entozoa, pressing on the brain, caused the sheep's death. When you know the entozoon you can dig him out and save the sheep's life.

"My son's going to be an artist," says one proud father. "He does not need to study a lot of scientific rubbish."

This parent does not know that the difference between a good and a bad sculptor or painter is often based on knowledge or ignorance of anatomy and mechanical principles.

Education is important to the individual because it means development of the brain, development of capacity for production and increased chances of success.

EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO THE STATE BECAUSE IT MEANS NOT ONLY COMPETENT CITIZENS, BUT MORAL CITIZENS.

The animal in us yields to the influence of education. Knowledge and brutality are enemies. They do not dwell together.

The most important institutions in this country are the public schools—the gymnasiums of human brains. The most important citizens of the nation are the teachers.

The greatest criminals are the employers of child labor, because they deny education, cut down in childhood the citizen's chance of progress and success.

Work and vote for more and better public schools.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Is Our Blood in Its Composition and Temperature the Counterpart of the Water of the Ocean, Whence, They Say, All Life Sprang?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SCIENCE boasts of its exactness, and properly so. Yet there is no speculator comparable in boldness with the man of science who is endowed at the same time with the scent for precision and the gift of imagination.

One of the most daring scientific speculations with which I am acquainted is that of a French physiologist, R. Quinton, who ventures to assert that the blood which flows in the veins of man and other animals derives its peculiar temperature (which hardly varies more than ten degrees in all the host of vertebrate, or back-boned, animals) and its peculiar composition (in which salt always plays a fixed part) from the primeval sea that enveloped the earth in those early ages when life was just beginning on our planet!

Take Out Corpuscles, He Says, and Our Blood Is Sea Water.

Man, says this bold speculator in scientific assets, is a kind of marine aquarium, filled with seawater resembling that of the ancient ocean in which his lower animal ancestors bathed millions of years ago. We call this salty fluid, from which our living cells derive their vitality, "blood;" but deprive the blood of the red and white corpuscles which have developed in it, and all that is left is a "physiological salt solution," precisely like the salty water of the primeval sea, and retaining the same temperature.

In other words, the so-called vital fluid of animals is nothing but sea-water, less salty and hotter than the sea-water of to-day, but retaining the same composition and the same temperature that it had when, ages upon ages ago, the first living creatures of our world emerged from their original home, which was the ocean, and, with new bodies, henceforth sealed up, so that the fluid on which their lives depends can not escape, crawled out upon the land, and gave rise, by gradual evolution, to the higher animals of the present time.

This ancient, life-giving seawater has been handed on from generation to generation, for untold aeons of time, continuing to exist, age after age, in the veins of animals, forever the same in composition and temperature, notwithstanding the innumerable changes of form it has undergone in the ceaseless processes of generation, growth, decay, death and regeneration.

To see how this curious speculation has arisen, let us consider the fact that the first organisms inhabiting the sea (long before there was life on the land) were simple living cells of protoplasm, open in structure and bathed throughout in the warm, salty water which maintained their vitality. As the sea cooled, and became more salty through the influx of mineral substances washed down from the land, it was no longer a suitable abode for many of the progressing animal forms which had been built up by the combination of the original single cells, and these assumed the shape of closed bodies, in which the life-sustaining fluid was locked up, while its original temperature was maintained by physiological action.

Having emerged upon the land these creatures continued in the course of evolution, determined by their new surroundings, and assumed a great variety of higher forms, constantly increasing in complexity or organization, but always retaining the secret of life derived from the sea in the form of a fluid, never varying much from a temperature of about 100 degrees, nor from a composition comprising about seven or eight parts salt to a thousand parts of water.

It is a strange fact that from the poles to the equator all vertebrate animals possess blood of nearly the same temperature and the same degree of saltness, and Quinton avers that this singular uniformity is due to the retention in their bodies, sealed up with membranes, of the ancestral composition of the universal fluid that, at the beginning, nourished the life of their remote predecessors in the sea. If this be so, then our blood is simply an image of the water of the first ocean, at the time when life was developed in it. If we did not possess it we could not continue to live. In a certain sense, then, we may be said still to live bathed internally by the life-giving fluid of the primeval sea.

Looked at in another way, according to Quinton's hypothesis, the blood of vertebrate animals gives geologists a clue to the temperature and composition of the first sea waters. We know that these have changed with the progress of time, the water becoming both salter and colder, besides acquiring other ingredients which it did not possess originally.

Many Scientists Accept This Hypothesis in General.

This strange hypothesis has met with a certain degree of approval from other investigators, whose criticisms of it relate to details but do not attack its general credibility. Thus Professor A. B. Macallum thinks that the blood of the vertebrates represents the sea water at a later period than that assumed by Quinton, but still a period millions of years back of our time, while Dr. A. C. Lane suggests that the blood temperature may have been raised by physiological processes above that of the sea when the animals left it.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Debt

It Is the Ugliest Monster Outside of Crime, She Asserts; It Is a Phase of Shame.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

A MAN who has made a great financial success, somewhat suddenly, is doing much charitable and helpful work for humanity, but he is marring his own character and making trouble for himself and others in the future by one unfortunate habit.

HE NEVER PAYS A DEBT UNTIL FORCED TO DO SO AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Every one who knows the man knows that he is honest and generous. He is sure to pay all he owes and to liquidate every debt, eventually. But, meantime, he causes untold discomfort to his creditors frequently by his delays.

But There Is a Big Leak in the Life-boat.

Often, while some man to whom he is owing a large bill is needing the money to push along his own affairs, his wealthy debtor is giving liberal sums to aid others or to help some worthy cause.

But there is a leak in the life-boat of this man which, unless mended, will eventually either sink his craft or damage all its cargo.

No doubt the habit was first formed when he was struggling to make his way; before fortune turned her smiling face upon him. But his very struggles and needs in early life should have made him more consistent in his dealings with his fellow men after he obtained his fortune.

Debt is the ugliest monster on earth outside of crime.

Every young man or woman who is setting forth upon a self-supporting career should keep his mental guns charged and ready to fire upon the ogre the moment it presents its horrid face at the door.

If the habit of debt is once formed, it is almost as difficult to break as alcoholism or the drug habit. The longer it is indulged in the more difficult the cure.

Every parent should teach a child that debt is a phase of shame.

Children Should Be Taught Horror of Debt.

Tell your boy or girl that it is far more respectable to wear old garments and to be unable to present a smart appearance than to go about in clothes which are not paid for, or to indulge in any pleasures or privileges which have made debt a necessity.

Then train them in the way of keeping a careful cash account each day and of balancing up their books at the end of each week. Speak often and repeatedly of the honor which such habits eventually bring and of the corresponding dishonor which follows on the habit of debt.

There are children born into the world with a tendency to be borrowers and even to be thieves, because their fathers were parsimonious and niggardly with their mothers before their birth. And the children received the mental mark of their mothers' unfortunate state of mind.

One such woman longed for certain kinds of food before the birth of her child, and was told by her husband that her longings were extravagant and unreasonable. So persistent were her longings, however, and so small was the expense they entailed, that the unhappy, expectant mother purloined pennies from the pockets of her sleeping master, and when she had obtained the petty sum needed purchased the dainty she desired.

But her child was born with a mania for taking things which did not belong to her; even when she could have them by asking, or possessed money to purchase them, she preferred to steal.

Let Them Learn How to Spend Money Properly.

Men of that niggardly type often force their wives and children into the debt habit. It is astonishing to find how many men of independent means, hold tight the purse strings, and compel their wives to go empty-handed, while given unquestioned right to buy whatever they desire, so long as their purchases are presented to the husband in a bill at the end of the month. Frequently these men make no complaint at extravagance; yet make bitter protest if the wife asks for a small monthly allowance.

Children reared under such conditions have no horror of debt. They have been taught that it is the only way to obtain what they desire. Every boy or girl ought to be given a small weekly or monthly allowance, taught how to spend it wisely, and made to keep a strict account.

With such teaching should go a continual kindly, persistent education on the nobility of independence, and the dishonor of debt.

If children form such ideals before they go out into the world, there is small fear that they will ever form the habit of debt afterward.

EYES AND VOICES

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

EYES and voices of dead friends
Come to me at night and cheer me,
And they seem so very near me
Ere my sleepless vigil ends.

Eyes that once exchanged with mine
Looks of fond regard and feeling
From the earth come softly stealing,
Once again with love to shine.

Voices stilled for many years—
Ah, but I can hear them plainly!
Voices that I longed for vainly,
They have broken from their biers.

Every eye a beacon light
Just beyond the shoals of sorrow,
Pointing out the grand To-morrow,
Every voice a soft delight.

Eyes and voices of dead friends
Come when Memory is complaining,
Sweetly soothing and sustaining,
Till the reign of darkness ends.

Wilson Tells Congress Situation Is Critical

FRANK TO LEAD OWN FIGHT FOR LIFE

JURY SERVICE CALLED SUPREME LOVE TEST

MRS. F. V. L. SMITH.

Frank Trial 'Temporary Widow' and Husband Happily 'Reunited.'

"If you are not sure whether you love your husband, let him serve on a jury for four weeks—then you'll know!"

Mrs. Frederick V. L. Smith, of No. 481 Cherokee avenue, said it—and sighed. But it was a happy sigh, for Mr. Smith, his face wreathed in one of those "I, John, take thee, Mary" smiles, was coming hurriedly up the sidewalk home from business fully an hour earlier than usual.

Not 24 hours before they had been reunited, after Mr. Smith had been a stranger to his own home—a stranger to every place except the Kimball House and the courtroom—for four long weeks, serving on the famous Frank jury.

"I don't think there is anything," Mrs. Smith continued, "that would cause a woman to realize how much she loved her husband as to have him be on a jury; to be a 'widow' and yet know that your husband is in the same city that you are.

"Let him pass you two or three times a day, and not be allowed to speak to him—only to look and wave a handkerchief. Let those old deputy sheriffs stop him when he goes to say 'hello,' and caution you to be quiet when you start to ask him if he is being taken care of, if he gets enough to eat and if his clothing needs mending—why, I don't see how you can help making a vow never to speak a cross word to him.

"Little Dan Cupid may bear the burden during courtship and honeymoon, but after marriage he has a great aid in jury service. I'll just bet if a woman who fusses and nags her husband would let him serve on a jury for a month or so she'd be permanently cured.

"It's a terrible thing to be a temporary widow. There must be a better word to express it than 'terrible,' but if there is I don't know it, unless I say it was simply awful. I had almost rather my husband would be dead than be on a jury. I don't think a real widow has a bit harder time than a 'temporary one.'"

Mrs. Smith, besides being one of the most beautiful of the eleven "temporary widows," is also one of the most remarkable. When her husband was caught in the jury net he was not given time to get any one to take charge of his business.

So Mrs. Smith, despite the fact that she had a baby to take care of, stepped into the breach, and during the four weeks of the trial has conducted her husband's business affairs as well as he could himself. Every morning saw her at his office in the Empire Building—and every noon and evening saw her at the doors of the courthouse waving greetings to her "dead" husband.

Wife at Last Collapses.

The strain, however, was too great, and during the last week of the trial Mrs. Smith worked solely on her "nerve." She came home Monday evening very nervous, and shortly after 8 o'clock, when she received a telephone message from her husband that he was coming home, she collapsed.

Mr. Smith, returning at 1 o'clock, after an absence of four weeks, found his wife unconscious and physicians bending over her. Mrs. Smith was unconscious for nearly two hours, and for more than half an hour of that time it was feared she was dead. By Tuesday afternoon, however, she had fully recovered her strength.

WAY CLEAR TO INDICT CONLEY AT ONCE

Solicitor, However, Is Undecided Whether to Move Against the Negro This Week or Wait.

In the desperate battle that has been started for the life of Leo M. Frank, sentenced Tuesday to hang October 10 for the slaying of Mary Phagan, the two brilliant legal generals, Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, will have in active council with them the convicted man himself.

Solicitor Dorsey, asked Wednesday when he probably would ask for the indictment of Jim Conley as an accessory after the fact, said that he knew of no reason why it should not be done at once on the convening of the Grand Jury.

He added, however, that he had made no decision on the matter, and that the indictment might be asked when the Grand Jury sits this week or the indictment might be allowed to hold over for some time. The Solicitor had every confidence that the verdict of the jury in Frank's case would be upheld.

Frank told friends Wednesday that he was planning to have a large part in the conduct of the fight to obtain a reversal of the verdict of last Monday afternoon. Frank rendered his attorneys assistance during the preparation of his case for presentation at the trial which has just ended, but all of the decisions of any consequence were left to them.

The convicted man followed every move of Rosser and Arnold, as well as of Solicitor Dorsey, with an unceasing vigilance and with a thorough comprehension of the purpose involved. Friends say he feels that he is competent to have a part in the mapping out of the future campaign for his life and liberty, and expects to have a considerable voice in every plan that is proposed.

It is his life that is at stake, and he is convinced that he has obtained a sufficient knowledge of legal procedure at least to advise and suggest and, at times, direct as to what shall be done.

October 10 Jewish Sacred Day.

That he is not without tactical ability in a law court was demonstrated by his statement to the jury.

An impressive coincidence in the sentencing of Leo Frank to hang on October 10 is that this is the most deeply sacred day of al of Frank's religion—the Day of Atonement. It is the day for confession of sins. It probably is as universally observed by members of this faith as Good Friday, for example, is observed by the Roman Catholics.

The setting of this date, however, may be regarded as little more than a formality, as it is certain that Frank will not go to his death on that day. The arguments for a new trial will be heard on October 4, and if the motion is denied an immediate appeal will be made to the Supreme Court, and this will necessitate a postponement in the date set for the execution while the matter is being thrashed out in the higher courts.

While the beginning of the real battle will not take place until October 4, Frank's lawyers entered at once into a new plan of campaign for his freedom. Reuben Arnold is taking a few days' vacation, but will return to the city shortly to resume his work on the case. In the meanwhile witnesses are being examined and data obtained in reference to several of the points on which a new trial will be asked of Judge Roan.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atalnta and Georgia—Generally fair Wednesday and Thursday.

Bad 'Boy' of 63 Is Forced By Father To Sign the Pledge

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The sad story of an erring son has been placed on police court records. William H. Palmer, Jr., is his name. He is a rollicking rake of 63, and his father, William H. Sr., who is 86, called on the police to check William's industry in the sowing of wild oats. Said the father to Judge Sabath:

"I think he should stop sowing wild oats. He drinks a great deal. He comes home and acts like a young colt. I find it difficult to control him. You can see for yourself that he must be hard for me to manage. He weighs 250 pounds, while I weigh only 95. He is out every night carousing, calling on women, and I can't do anything with him.

"I tell him he'll ruin his constitution if he keeps on the way he's going. He always has been a wild, headstrong boy. I want you, Judge, to help me make a man of him. He's got to sign the pledge."

"I agree with you," said the Court, addressing the father. "William is getting to be a big fellow now. It's time he learned to behave himself. I'll give him just one minute to sign the pledge."

William signed.

Willard Exonerated By Coroner's Jury

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—After several hours of deliberation over the testimony presented by witnesses of last Friday's fight at Vernon between Jess Willard and "Bull" Young, which resulted in the death of the latter, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict exonerating Willard.

Several physicians who attended Young after the fatal blow was delivered testified that the Wyoming fighter's physical condition was bad and that Young had a cigarette heart, and that he was suffering from an affection which had robbed him of stamina which he may have formerly possessed.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury will have no bearing upon the prosecution of Willard, McCarey and the others charged with manslaughter, according to a statement of Prosecutor W. J. Ford after the inquest.

Boys' High Seeks Alma Mater Song

Plans for offering a cash prize for the best original words for an alma mater song for the alumni of the Boys' High School of Atlanta are complete.

The purpose of the contest is to arouse interest among the hundreds of alumni of the Boys' High School in the alumni organization. The class of 1910 has taken the lead in this and the cash prize has been raised among its members.

Danish King Saves Actress From Sea

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—According to The Budget, King Christian of Denmark, while cruising in the royal yacht, Rita, off Jutland, rescued Cinema, the actress, from drowning.

She became exhausted and the King ordered the royal boat lowered to rescue the actress, who was taken aboard just in time.

Honors Requisition Asked by Sulzer

HARRISBURG, PA., Aug. 27.—Governor Tener has honored requisitions for Daniel Buegeleisen, charged with forgery, and Charles Clay, with abandoning children, on request made by William Sulzer as Governor of New York.

He did this on an opinion furnished by J. E. B. Cunningham, First Deputy Attorney General.

MRS. GODBEE CARE FREE IN CELL

Slayer of Former Husband and Bride Turns Her Prison Into Dainty Boudoir.

MILLEN, GA., Aug. 27.—In a cell transformed as if by magic into a boudoir, as dainty and complete as can be found in any home, Mrs. Sarah Perkins Godbee, charged with the murder of her divorced husband and his young bride, awaits her preliminary hearing in the Jenkins County courts Thursday as calmly and dispassionately as though she had already been assured of her freedom.

The cell itself reflects the cheerfulness and hope that fill the accused woman's mind. Despite the steel ceiling, the rough concrete floors and the iron bars, her cell is attractive and distinctly feminine. The roughness of the floors is concealed by soft rugs, the iron bars at the windows are hidden behind little white curtains that catch every flutter of the breeze; the toilet accessories, washstand and china are in blue and white, the color in which her home is furnished.

All the Comforts There.

Two white beds with fresh linen, two rockers and several straight chairs, a little blue and white table on which rests a vase constantly filled with fresh flowers, a glass pitcher of ice water, a glass stand filled with fruit, a bottle of toilet water, stacks of magazines and letters—all combine to transform the cell into a typical woman's room.

Mrs. Godbee takes as much care and pride in her personal appearance as she does in the appearance of her cell. She usually wears negligee—a dainty, pale blue kimono brocaded in pink and yellow butterflies and finished with valenciennes laces. She is rarely alone at night. Her relatives or her daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, more usually the latter, always spend the night with her. The daylight hours see streams of friends coming and going, all with words of encouragement and many with fresh dainties and conveniences for her comfort.

Mrs. Godbee's calmness and carefree attitude is the marvel of Jenkins County officials. She talks and laughs as she did before the double murder of which she is accused; she chats freely with her friends, and is always glad and willing to see visitors. Gossip of the current topics of the day falls from her lips as readily now as before the crime, and she has become an inveterate newspaper reader.

Keeps Silent on Killing.

Only on one subject does Mrs. Godbee preserve a close silence. Of the killing of Judge Godbee and the events leading up to it she will say nothing. She will give no inkling of the causes that led her to shoot her former husband and his bride, and silence is the only answer to inquiries as to her line of defense.

When the killing is brought up, Mrs. Godbee always smiles softly and changes the subject of conversation, prattling innocently of the latest happenings in Millen society or of the great world events.

The excitement created in Millen by the killing has not subsided, though it has been almost two weeks since the crime was committed. Sentiment appears to be divided, some claiming that the accused woman has suffered until she could suffer no longer; while others express the opinion that Judge Godbee was not altogether to blame for the marital troubles that brought on his death.

Oldest Sneezer Is Dined by Hay-Fevers

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 27.—America's oldest sneezer—Major Richard Muckle, of Philadelphia, aged 88—was given a banquet here last night by the United States Hay Fever Association. The major has suffered from the sneezing, sniffling fever for 75 years.

Four Atlanta Boys On 15-Day Hike to New York on Bet

From Peachtree to Broadway is a long walk, but four Atlanta boys set out Wednesday to accomplish it in fifteen days, as the result of a bet of $500 made between them and George Allen, of the Central Railroad.

The boys are Lloyd Snead, 19 years old, No. 236 Cooper street; Clarence Burel, 18 years old, No. 79 West North avenue; Jack W. Lipscomb, 22 years old, No. 232 East Hunter street, and F. J. Lipscomb, 18 years old, of the same address.

The distance from Atlanta to New York afoot is more than 900 miles. The condition of the bet is that the boys walk it in fifteen days. This will necessitate them covering 60 miles per day.

Cummins Predicts Free List Change

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Progressive Republican Senators to-day forecast the acceptance by the majority of the Senate Finance Committee of a modified form of the Kenyon amendment to the tariff bill providing for the free listing of trust-made goods.

The Kenyon amendment provides that the courts shall decide whether monopolies exist. Senator Cummins to-day declared he expected the amendment to be so modified that the determination of whether competition exists shall be left to the President.

All Japan for War, Claims Tokio Editor

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 27.—Joseph D. Halluday, editor of The Japan Advertiser, of Tokio, who has arrived here by steamer from Yokohama, declares all Japan is eager for war with the United States.

The uneducated classes would plunge into the struggle at once, first seizing the Philippines and Hawaii, but the educated classes favor waiting ten years until the Russian war debt shall have been extinguished he said.

"The feeling," Mr. Halluday added, "is that the white and yellow races must fight out their differences."

News Butcher Fined For Selling Liquor

TIFTON, Aug. 27.—J. C. Dasher, news butcher on the Atlantic Coast Line between Waycross and Albany, was arrested here Tuesday afternoon by Chief of Police J. O. Thrasher, charged with keeping on hand intoxicating liquors for illegal sale.

Dasher entered a plea of guilty before Recorder J. S. Ridgdill and was fined $75 or four months in the chaingang.

Powers Let Turkey Retain Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 27.—Announcement was made by the grand porte to-day that the European powers have agreed to allow Turkey to retain Adrianople, in spite of the threats of Bulgaria to try to take Adrianople as soon as she can collect sufficient resources to declare war.

Fugitive Boxer Asks French Citizenship

Special Cable to The Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—Through his counselors Jack Johnson, the negro champion heavyweight pugilist, who fled to France from the United States after he had been convicted in the latter country of white slavery, to-day filed declarations of his intention to become a French citizen.

CHATTANOOGA MAN MISSING.

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 27.—E. W. Reed, local manager for H. G. Woolworth, disappeared August 9 and has not been heard of since. Mrs. Reed is visiting relatives in New York and has no information concerning her husband.

ALL HOPE FOR PEACE IN PRESENT REGIME IS GONE; ASKS DELAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Emphasizing the fact that the United States must remain the firm friend of the people of Mexico in their present stress and trouble, President Wilson to-day read his long awaited message on Mexican affairs to Congress.

The message was distinctly pacific in tone and contains little in the way of recommendation for future policy except the single one that this Government must urge earnestly that all Americans should leave Mexico at once and that the Unted States should assit them to get out of Mexico in every way possible.

The President counsels delay before further action is taken and says:

"Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Must Await Understanding.

"So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization to the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. The circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

President Wilson's message is unexpectedly brief and closes with the statement that several of the great Governments of the world have given the United States their generous moral support in urging on the provisional authorities at Mexico City the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. The President relates the circumstances leading up to the Lind mission and all the facts in connection with it.

The President's Message.

Gentlemen of the Congress—It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the fact concerning our present relations with the republic of Mexico. The deplorable posture of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly of what this Government has done and should seek to do in fulfillment of its obligation to Mexico herself, as a friend and neighbor, and to American citizens whose lives and vital interests are daily affected by the distressing conditions which now obtain beyond our southern border.

"Those conditions touch us very nearly. Not merely because they lie at our very doors. That, of course, makes us more vividly and more constantly conscious of them, and every instinct of neighborly interest and sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty.

"We are glad to call ourselves the friends of Mexico, and we shall, I hope, have many an occasion, in happier times, as well as in these days of trouble and confusion, to show that our friendship is genuine and disinterested, capable of sacrifice, and very generous of manifestation.

Will Prove Sincerity to Mexico.

"The peace, prosperity and contentment of Mexico mean more, much more, to us than merely an enlarged field for our commerce and enterprise. They mean an enlargement of the field of self-government and the realization of the hopes and rights of a nation with whose best aspirations, too long suppressed and disappointed, we deeply sympathize. We shall yet prove to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without first thinking how we shall serve ourselves.

"But we are not the only friends of Mexico. The whole world desires her peace and progress, and the whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be touched by the great routes of the world's trade and intercourse running free from ocean to ocean at the Isthmus. The future has much in store for Mexico, as for all the States of Central America, but the best gifts can come to her only if she be ready and free to receive them and to enjoy them honorably.

"America in particular—America, North and South and upon both continents—waits upon the development of Mexico; and that development can be sound and lasting only if it be the product of a genuine freedom, a just and ordered governments founded upon law. And so can it be peaceful and fruitful of the benefits of peace. Mexico has a great and enviable future before her, if only she choose and attain the paths of honest constitutional government."

Situation Not Promising.

"The present circumstances of the republic, I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise even the foundations of such a peace. We have waited many months, months full of peril and anxiety, for the conditions ther to improve, and they have not improved. They have grown worse, rather. The territory in some sort controlled by the provisional authorities at Mexico City as grown smaller, not larger. The prospect of the pacification of the country, even by arms, has seemed to grow more and more remote, and its pacification by the authcrities at the capitol is evidenily impossible by any other means than force.

"Difficulties more and more entangle those who claim to constitute the legitimate government of the republic. They have not made good their claim, in fact. Their successs in the field have proved only temporary. War and disorder, devastation and confusion, seem to threaten to become the settled fortune of the distracted country.

"As friends we could wait no longer for a solution which every week seems further away. It was our duty at least to volunteer our good offices—the offer to assist, if we might, in effecting some arrangement which would bring relief and peace and set up a universally acknowledged political authority there.

"Accordingly, I took the liberty of sending the Hon. John Lind, formerly Governor of Minnesota, as my personal spokesman and representative to the City of Mexico.

CRAWFORD CASE AWAITS END OF FRANK FIGHT

Postponed four weeks ago until after the close of the trial of Leo Frank, it is probable that the reopening of the famous Crawford will case, in which Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, will again be delayed until after the hearing of the arguments for a new Frank trial on October 4. Should Judge Roan decline to grant a new trial, it is probable that the Crawford case will be postponed until after an appeal is taken to the Court of Appeals, at the request of Attorneys Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, who are counsel for both Mrs. Crawford and for Frank.

Colonel J. S. James, one of the attorneys for the heirs at law in the Crawford case, stated Wednesday morning he did not expect the case to be reopened until the Frank case was definitely settled one way or the other. He will confer with Attorney Rosser Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning, and it is probable that some agreement will be reached regarding the reopening of the case. When Col. J. L. Anderson, who is serving as auditor in the will case, announced the postponement of the case several weeks ago, he stated that in resuming the hearing of the testimony he would be governed by the wishes of the attorneys.

It is known that Rosser and Mr. Arnold favor delaying the Crawford case for several weeks, if not until the final disposition of the Frank case. Colonel James met Mr. Arnold several days ago, and during a conversation about the reopening of the case, Mr. Arnold remarked that he would dislike to resume within three weeks after the closing of the Frank trial, as he desired to get a much-needed rest. Mr. Arnold left the city Tuesday night for a month's stay, and it is probable that Mr. Rosser will leave shortly also for a vacation. Colonel Anderson, the auditor, is also out of the city, but will return Saturday.

While many of the attorneys on either side have been busy with the Frank trial, the search for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, who, it is charged, was an accomplice of Mrs. Crawford in a plot to poison her husband, has continued without success. Colonel James has given a great deal of time to the apprehension of Lumb, and practically the entire East has been scoured by detectives acting under his orders. New York detectives and detectives of other Eastern cities have thrown their drag-nets out, but have found no trace whatever of the barber.

By DOROTHY DIX.

Does it pay to be good?

Tens of thousands of poor girls avid for pleasure, longing to ride in luxurious automobiles and feast on dainty food in gay restaurants; madly anxious for the lovely clothes that would enhance their charms, as a fine frame sets off a picture, are asking themselves that question. Does it pay to be good?

They know that, like the milkmaid in the old song, their faces are their fortunes, and that beauty and youth are assets that a woman can cash in at sight. The streets of every big city are the Mount of Temptation upon which the Devil takes every poor, pretty little drudge, and shows her, spread out before her, all that the foolish, feminine heart can crave of ease and softness. And it is all hers for the taking.

He shows her both sides of the picture. He shows her Virtue hanging on to a strap in a crowded car, while Vice rolls by in a limousine. He shows her Virtue, shabby, fainting with weariness behind the counter, while Vice lolls in front of it, buying silks and satins. He shows her Virtue going to bed hungry in a dingy hall bedroom, while Vice sups at a lobster palace. He shows her Virtue clutching its thin little pay envelope, while Vice draws down its thousands, and flaunts its name in electric letters a foot high along Broadway.

No wonder that poor young girls ask, Does it pay to be good?

The Case of Evelyn Thaw.

For answer let us consider the case of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who furnishes the most cynical illustration of this subject that what we call civilization has ever seen. For no woman of our day has been so written about and discussed; no woman—not Bernhardt, nor Julia Marlowe, nor Maude Adams—has ever received such a preposterous salary as she gets for a few minutes' appearance on the stage.

Yet her sole claim to distinction is that her very garments drip with the slime of the gutter, and that she is the heroine of the most hideous and decadent story that was ever told upon the witness stand.

In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante can do as well with three lessons. There's simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing her, I wondered if she thought that it paid. I wondered if she thought that she had paid too dearly for all she had had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

Believe me, she, and women like her, KNOW whether it pays to be good.

Hers the Story of Many.

The story of Evelyn Thaw is an interesting one in this connection because in its setting and in its potentialities it is the story of the chance, and the temptation, that comes to so many poor and pretty girls. It is the eternal problem of the woman who wants the good things of life, and who can get them only in one way, by buying them with her soul.

Evelyn Thaw is a type of woman that is peculiar to America and common in this country—women who come of poor and humble families, but who are born with the instincts for luxury of a princess and the bearing and presence of the great world. You see them in every little village—girls who are as chic as Parisiennes, who wear their little home-made clothes as if they came from a couturiere of the Rue de la Paix, and who are as irresistibly drawn to the bright lights of a great city as a moth is attracted to the flame.

Evelyn Nesbit was one of these. She was born on a Christmas Day, in Allegheny, a suburb of Pittsburg. Her mother was beautiful, her father a gay ne'er-do-well; and from the one parent she got her looks and the other her mercurial nature—as dangerous a combination as evil itself could bequeath a girl.

They Were Very Poor.

All her early life they were very poor, and when the father died—which he did when Evelyn was 10 or 11 years old—they were poorer still. Mrs. Nesbit tried to make a living with her needle, but barely succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door.

The little family went from Allegheny to Philadelphia, hoping for better things, but luck failed to smile on them. They were so poor that Mrs. Nesbit cut up her sheets to make underclothing for herself and Evelyn, and her bedspreads to make them dresses. Then someone who noted the girl's rare loveliness got her a position to pose for some photographs.

The migration from Philadelphia to the larger artistic world of New York followed naturally, and, armed with letters to painers here, Mrs. Nesbit came, bringing Evelyn, whose beauty was flowering day by day. But, in spite of the romances Mr. Robert Chambers writes about it, the life of an artist model is not one glad round of pleasure and profit, and the Nesbits were still very poor. They lived in one room, where they cooked and slept and Mrs. Nesbit took in such sewing as she could get. Then a newspaper reporter ran across Evelyn and wrote a big Sunday story, illustrated with many pictures of her, which he called "The Most Beautiful Artists' Model in New York."

Fate did the rest. She was engaged by a theatrical manager on the outlook for beauties for his chorus—and she had reached the dividing line, the place where she had to choose between poverty and hard work—and the gilded life—the place where she had to ask herself, as the poor, pretty girl does under such circumstances—does it pay to be good?

She decided that it did not pay, and took what she thought was the easiest way. Where it has led her all the world knows. Certainly she has had the cakes and ale of existence. First there was a millionaire who used to take her out on his yacht for week-end excursions. Then came Stanford White, and for a while, at least, it was all like a fairy tale.

She, who had not had carfare, rode in cabs and taxis everywhere. She who had not always had even bread to eat feasted at the smartest restaurants. She who had worn the shabbiest of shabby clothes had fine gowns and jewels lavished on her.

Another turn of the wheel of fortune brought Harry Thaw into her life with more money, more jewels, more trips to Europe, and finally a wedding ring. Being Pittsburg-born, the Thaws had always been the biggest people on Evelyn's horizon, and to belong to that august family, and queen it socially in the very town in which she had been poor and humble, doubtless filled the measure of her ambition. Evil had prospered with her, and vice had brought her what virtue never could.

Then her sins began to find her out, and her world, built upon a foundation of wrongdoing, commenced to crumble under her feet. Pittsburg society would not receive her, despite the Thaws' financial and social position. Women, good women, would have nothing to do with her. The scarlet letter was branded upon her too plainly for even the Thaw millions to cover it up.

Also she began to know the cruel fact that while a man, obsessed by passion and in order to get a woman, swears that he will forgive her past lapses from the straight and narrow way and forget them he really never does. When he is married to her he makes of them a whip of scorpions with which to scourge her. The torments of hell can have nothing worse than the months in which Evelyn Thaw combated the jealous suspicions of her husband and endured his reproaches.

Then followed the shooting of Stanford White and the two long-drawn-out trials, during which, to save her husband and to earn a fee, justly earned and never paid, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told a story of her life that for utter degradation has no match in all the annals of sinful humanity. She stripped from herself every vestige of decency and left herself without so much as a rag of honor to cover her.

That this story was not true does not alter her status. She held herself up before the world as shameless beyond all belief until the wonder of it was that any woman could tell such things of herself and live. And now she is coining that story into money.

Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes that she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of one's fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it, and the life it has driven her to, she has coarsened and hardened.

The wonder of her at the trial was the expression of wistful, childlike innocence she wore. I asked a great alienist to interpret that to me, and he said that the reason of it was that her soul was unawakened, that she was morally dead and had never realized the import of the things she did. Hence they had not set their seal upon her as they do upon women who consciously tread the primrose path.

But that trial stripped the veil from her eyes. She came out of it knowing good and evil, and the knowledge has dimmed her beauty and taken from it the ethereal charm that was its highest note. There is nothing remarkable about her now. You may meet a thousand like her any day along Broadway.

I wonder how Evelyn Thaw, in view of her life, and all it has brought her of good and ill, would answer that question: Does it pay a girl to be good?

I think that no one could preach such a homily on the subject as this poor girl, who sold her birthright for a few silks and a rag of chiffon and good times, and who knows the price she has paid.

Devoid of Talent, Evelyn Thaw Capitalizes Sins

"No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante could do as well in three lessons. There is simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

"But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing at her, I wondered if she thought it paid. I wondered if she thought she had paid too dearly for all she had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

"Believe me, she and women like her KNOW whether it pays to be good.

"Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of her fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it and the life it has driven her to she has coarsened and hardened."

PATHFINDER ROLLS INTO MOBILE AHEAD OF TIME; GREAT WELCOME GIVEN

With approximately 500 miles of the transcontinental highway behind him, Pathfinder E. L. Ferguson Wednesday prepared for the long westward journey from Mobile through New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego and Los Angeles to San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson arrived in Mobile late Tuesday afternoon.

Mobile's reception to the pathfinders was only one more indication of the widespread interest in the monster campaign for a transcontinental highway inaugurated in Atlanta on August 18 by Hearst's Sunday American.

The Mobileans carried out a program which they planned weeks ago. Several miles north of the city a big delegation of boosters, including many women enthusiasts in automobiles, met the pathfinders and escorted them into the city. Here a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, as well as prominent citizens and city officials, took the members of the party in hand and tendered to them a royal reception which the Mobile boosters say "surpassed the celebrations in Birmingham and Montgomery."

Immediately following the reception Mr. Ferguson began completing his plans for the resumption of the journey to New Orleans, which place he expects to reach on August 30. Like the Mobile boosters, the New Orleans "live wires" have had their plans practically complete for several weeks, according to advance reports.

Big Celebration Planned.

A monster good roads and highway celebration will be held, it is said, and a representative of The New Orleans Item, which is co-operating with The Sunday American, The Birmingham News, The Montgomery Advertiser and other leading Southern newspapers, will relieve the Montgomery representative.

The special man from The Item will accompany the party as far as Beaumont, Texas, where a representative of The Houston Post, which also is behind the movement, will join the tourists, accompanying them as far as Dallas. From Dallas Mr. Ferguson probably will be accompanied to Los Angeles by a representative of The Dallas Times-Herald. Monster receptions have been planned in each of the big cities named along the route, as well as many of the smaller ones.

According to the schedule as now planned, Mr. Ferguson will reach Biloxi, Miss., on August 28; New Orleans, August 30; LaFayette, September 3; Lake Charles, La., September 5; Orange, Texas, September 7; Beaumont, September 7, and Houston on September 8 or 9. The party should reach its destination, San Francisco, in October.

Following out the policy maintained all along the route from Atlanta to Mobile Mr. Ferguson will spread the gospel of good roads and fine highways through Louisiana, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California. Already the efforts of the pathfinder along this line have had marked results. Beginning at Douglasville, Ga., 30 miles west of Atlanta, the official starting point, and continuing through Tallapoosa, Heflin, Ala., Anniston, Ashville, Birmingham, Clanton, Montgomery and Selma, as well as other progressive smaller towns, local good roads and highway campaigns have been inaugurated following Mr. Ferguson's visit. The manifest enthusiasm with which the tourists were received all along the route has been directed into channels for the actual improvement of the roads and the development of highways.

Bad Roads Stories Disproved.

Although Mr. Ferguson has completed less than a third of the long cross-country tour, he has already demonstrated beyond a doubt that the South affords an ideal route for an open-the-year-round highway. This claim was scouted by Northern tourists, who have declared repeatedly that the weather was too warm down in Georgia and Alabama and Louisiana to make such a trip in the summer time. It was to disprove this that Mr. Ferguson decided not only to make the trip in the very dead of summer, but also to take his wife and children with him. That he has already succeeded is indicated by the reports from Mrs. Ferguson, who has declared all along the route that she was delighted with the "ideal" climate.

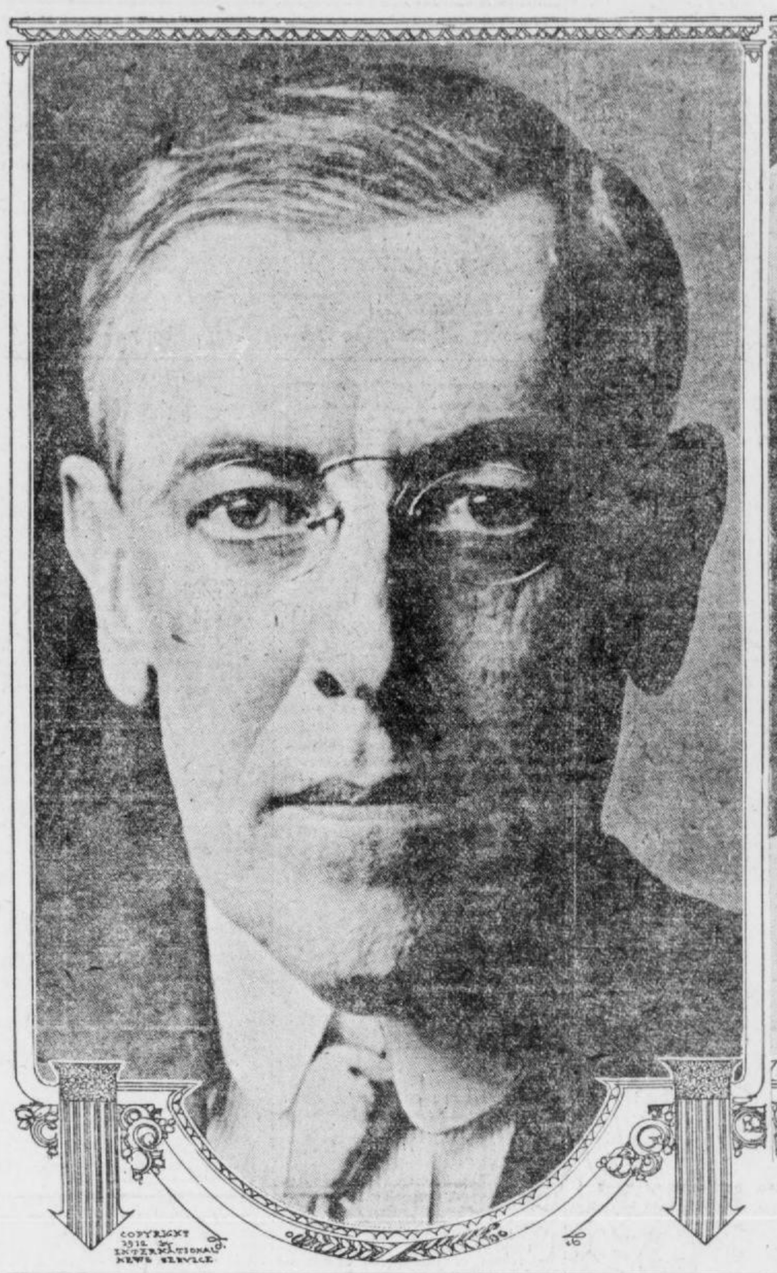

The South's reputation for bad roads, too, has been disproved by this tour. At Anniston, Birmingham, Montgomery and Selma Mr. Ferguson declared to the boosters that he was surprised at the marvelous development of the roads.

"If the citizens along the way which I have traversed do as much for good roads during the next two years as they have done during the past two, conditions should be ideal," he said.

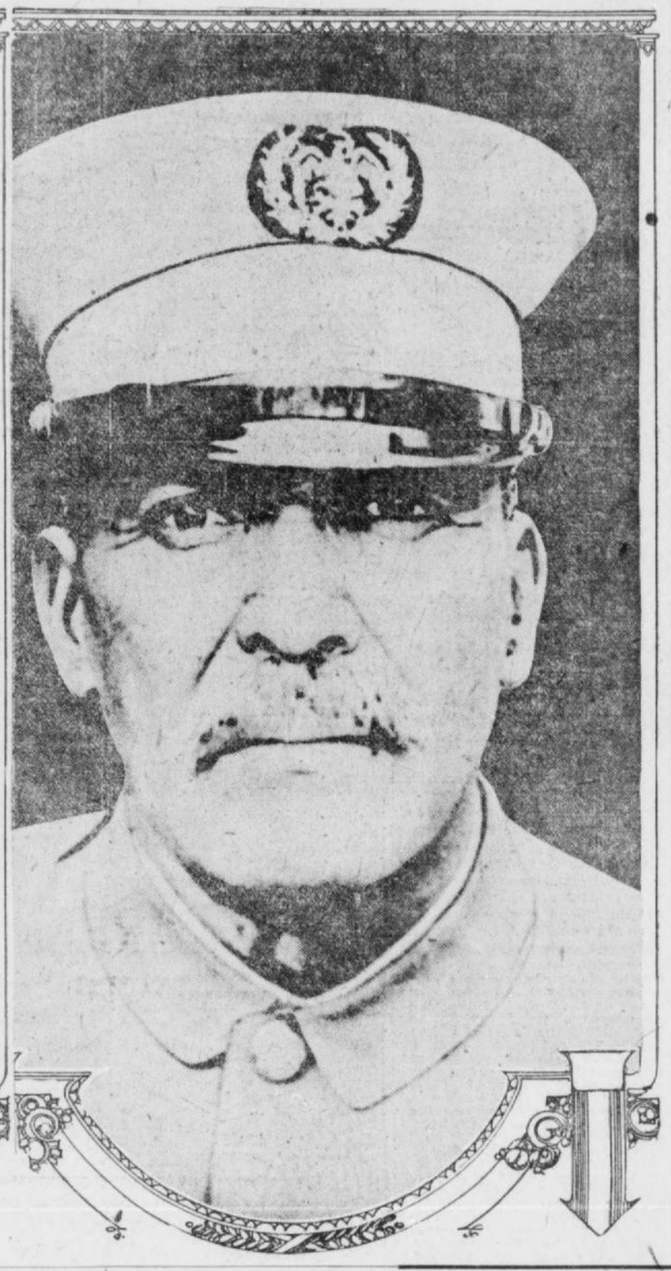

That these citizens are going to do this and even more has been indicated repeatedly from the time Mr. Ferguson left Atlanta until he arrived in Mobile Wednesday.

IMMODEST DRESS SCORED BY HEFLIN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Women who shun the immodesty and impropriety of present-day fashions can be relied upon for the future strength and posterity of the nation, according to Congressman Thomas Heflin, of Alabama. Heflin expressed his opinion of diaphanous feminine drapery and the slit skirt craze as follows:

"I would paraphrase the Scripture, 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' and say, 'By their dress or lack of dress we shall know them.' The evil genius of lustful fashion through immodest dress is playing havoc with a certain class of women in this country and setting a bad example for others.

"Thank God, the good mothers have begun a crusade against this evil.

"The woman who instills in her daughter the principles of good sense and modesty and trains her up in the way that she should go has done more for her day and generation than she can ever hope to do by active participation in politics."

4-CORNERED RACE LIKELY IN MACON

MACON, Aug. 27.—Julian Urquhart, former Recorder of Macon, is being urged by his friends to enter the race for Mayor, and he has the matter under consideration and will make a final decision in a short time. It is generally understood, however, that he will run.

Mr. Urquhart is an attorney and well qualified to fill the position of Mayor. He is familiar with municipal affairs, and his record as Recorder will be used in the campaign. He will make the race independently without an aldermanic ticket.

Record Registration.

MACON, Aug. 27.—The registration in Macon and Bibb County this year promises to break all past records. The total registration at present is 2,675, and it is believed this number will be doubled. The largest registration on record was in 1912, when 3,770 voters qualified in the county.

Three elections with more than 40 candidates in the field is the cause of the increased interest in the registration, and it is believed that before the books for the special registration for the municipal primary at least 4,500 citizens will have qualified to vote.

For Chief of Police.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Harry Griggs, manager of the Elberta Hotel, has been announced by his friends as a candidate to succeed Walter B. Chapman, the present Chief of Police.

Chief Chapman's term will expire December 17, and his successor will be elected by the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Griggs' candidacy will only be announced in the event Bridges Smith, administration candidate for Mayor, is elected at the coming municipal election.

Miller Has Mascot.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Wallace Miller, candidate for Mayor on the young men's ticket, has a mascot—a baby daughter, who was born yesterday.

Work Begun on New Wholesale Section

An important spreading of Atlanta's business section was marked Tuesday by the beginning of work on a new wholesale section just west of the Terminal station. The work begun is the building of spur tracks by the Southern Railway. Erection of buildings will follow immediately.

A large section of West Side property was bought for this development. The spur tracks will leave the main line at the Peters street viaduct, and extend to Mangum and Haynes streets. There will be room for two long blocks of warehouses.

LABOR DAY AT MACON.

MACON.—The Labor Unions have made extensive preparations for the celebration of Labor Day on Monday at Central City Park, where an all-day picnic will be held. Athletic sports, dancing, a fiddlers' convention and baseball will be features.

J. Y. SMITH HITS PLOT CHARGE OF WOODWARD

Chairman of Committee Declares Mayor Easily Could Have Had Primary Deferred.

Mayor Woodward's charges that the setting of September 30 as the date of holding Atlanta's Democratic primary was the result of a well-laid plot has brought a strong denial from Chairman John Y. Smith, of the city Democratic executive committee.

There is absolutely no ground for the charge, according to Mr. Smith. Also he is of the opinion that six weeks is sufficient length of time for the men running for the offices of councilman and alderman to make their campaign.

"A charge that the date of September 30 was set as the result of a conspiracy is without foundation," said Mr. Smith. "The meeting of the committee was attended by practically every member, while there had been no meeting or caucus of any kind prior to the meeting.

"It has been the custom for persons other than members to attend its meetings and to address them. Had the Mayor desired to have a later date set he could easily have appeared before the committee and have been accorded the courtesy of giving his views. I doubt if there would have been much trouble in having had the date set beyond September 30.

"There was considerably more than a quorum of the committee membership present when the matter of setting the date was taken up. There was practically no discussion of it and a resolution by Committeeman T. O. Poole naming September 30 was unanimously adopted.

"I can not agree with Mayor Woodward that the time is too short for the candidates for alderman and councilman to make their campaigns. When a candidate has to stretch his campaign beyond a period of six weeks it works a hardship on him, while the people undoubtedly get tired of too much politics."

OFFICIAL IS VINDICATED.

'Farmer Bill' Zimmer Joins Benedict Ranks After Long Romance

"Farmer Bill" Zimmer gave his friends a great surprise Tuesday night when he quietly re-entered the ranks of the benedicts, and to-day Kimballville Farm is all a-flutter. Miss Mabel L. Leys, of Detroit, was the former name of Mrs. Zimmer, and the marriage was the culmination of a romance of many years standing.

A very few of his intimate friends and relatives of the bride were in the bridal party which journeyed around to the parsonage of the Trinity Methodist Church at 7 o'clock Tuesday night, where the Rev. J. B. Robins performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony a bridal supper was given at the Piedmont Hotel, Mr. Zimmer having been the first manager of this hostelry. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hazler, of Detroit; Lee Jordan, Will Zimmer, Jr., the 12-year-old son of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Chancellor, Clarendon Chancellor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, Jesse Mercer and C. R. Tucker.

Macon Man Missing; Shortage in Accounts

MACON, Aug. 27.—J. Turner Shepherd, for three years bookkeeper for the Joseph N. Neel Company, clothiers, and one of the best known young men of Macon, has disappeared, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts of approximately $3,600.

Shepherd is married and has two children.

265 CASES TO BE TRIED.

MACON.—There are 265 cases, of which 100 are for alleged violations of the State prohibition law, to betried during the September term of the City Court which convenes Monday and lasts for two weeks. Only 50 of the defendants are in jail, the others having given bond.

TO DEDICATE CHURCH.

COLUMBUS.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, on Sunday, September 14, will dedicate St. Luke Methodist Church, preaching both morning and evening. The church, one of the handsomest in the city, cost about $50,000.

COLUMBUS FAIR IN NOVEMBER.

COLUMBUS.—The Columbus Poultry Association has announced that it will put on a poultry show the week of November 17, and in addition will give a fair which will equal, if not surpass, the one held by the Georgia-Alabama Fair Association in 1912.

THAW IS CHEERED BY THRONG IN COURTROOM

SHERBROOKE, QUE., Aug. 27.—The habeas corpus proceedings in the Thaw case were abruptly stopped after they began before Judge Globensky in the Superior Court at 10 o'clock, and adjournment was taken until 3 p. m.

The judge said he wanted more time to consult the authorities on Thaw's move to withdraw his application for a habeas corpus writ.

There was a tremendous demonstration in the courtroom in Thaw's favor when Counsellor Samuel Jacobs, on behalf of the Canadian Government and the State of New York, began his opening arguments opposing the withdrawal of Thaw's petition.

"Let Him Go," Cry Spectators.

The like demonstration had been made earlier while Thaw was being taken from the jail to the courthouse. Men and women followed the automobile and blocked the streets which it traveled. "They can't get you, Harry," cried some. Women joined enthusiastically in the demonstration. Thaw was delighted beyond measure.

The court attaches had difficulty in keeping order. Thaw sat at the lawyers' table while his attorneys, in reply to Jacobs, pleaded that under the civil code of the Dominion they had a perfect right to withdraw their application for a habeas corpus writ.

Women in Demonstration.

Judge Globensky finally halted the proceedings, announcing he would take the case under advisement until 2 o'clock in order to consult the authorities.

When this announcement was made one spectator cried out: "Good, good. Let us have fair play, and three cheers for Harry Thaw."

There were about 200 women present, and all joined in the demonstration. With his face beaming, Thaw arose, placed his hand over his heart and bowed.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the Matteawan, N. Y., asylum for the criminal insane, from which Thaw escaped, has joined the forces which are fighting to get the fugitive back into that institution. Thaw's counsel is confronted by a formidable array.

John D. Plays Golf With 2 Deaf Mutes

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—John D. Rockefeller cut loose from his sedentary habits to-day and entertained at golf two young men he did not know and had seen but once before in his life.

The young men were Charles D. Russell, of La Salle, Ill., son of a Western man, and Horace W. Buell, Jr., of Chicago, delegates to the National Association of the Deaf now in session here.

"I have the greatest admiration in the world for these young men," he declared. "Their inability to hear and speak has not prevented their becoming good, intelligent men."

Kentucky Feudist, Reported Dead, Lives

LEXINGTON, Aug. 27.—Green McIntosh, feudist, charged with the murder of Greenberry Combs in Breathitt County, and who was reported as shot to death while resisting arrest by a sheriff's posse, was not killed.

He is being hidden in the Breathitt Mountains by friends. Word of his death was telephoned from the mountains, the officers say, to cause the search to die out so he could escape from the hills.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of Mother's Friend at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

CAMINETTI HIT BY JURY RULING

Judge Forces Attorneys for Alleged Slaver to Change Tactics in Revealing Defense.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—It was seen in the questioning of prospective jurors to-day that the defense of F. Drew Caminetti will be that he did not have any criminal intent when he eloped to Reno, Nev., from Sacramento with Lola Norris, the high school girl.

Attorney Woodworth, representing Caminetti, pressed his questions on this point until Federal Judge VanFleet ordered him to adopt another line of questioning.

The women directly connected with the white slavery case against Caminetti did not attend to-day's session of the trial. None of Caminetti's relatives, except his brother, Anthony Caminetti, Jr., of Sacramento, attorney, was in the courtroom.

Judge VanFleet was anxious to have the hearing of the case ended as soon as possible, and it was expected the attorneys for both sides would hasten the work of selecting a jury so that the twelve men who will hear the evidence against the son of the Commissioner General of Immigration likely will be obtained by to-night.

One Woman's Story

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OBEDIENT to her husband's suggestion, Mary Fletcher tried to get a maid from the city. First of all she visited many employment agencies. At each she was received with a smile of welcome by the person in charge, but that smile was replaced by a look of incredulous surprise when, in reply to the question: "What wages do you pay?" Mary responded: "Twelve dollars."

"My dear madam!" exclaimed one such agent. "Excuse me, but you cannot get any girl, white or colored, to do general housework for that price."

"But," said Mary tentatively, "suppose I get a green and inexperienced girl, and teach her everything, and help her with the work—what wages would she come for?"

Might Advertise.

"Certainly for not less than eighteen dollars at the lowest," replied the agent. "And if you wish one to go to a lonely place in the country, you will have to pay more."

After many such fruitless efforts, Mary ceased visiting intelligence offices.

"You might advertise," her mother suggested when Mary recounted her experience to her. "I used to get good maids in that way. But, then, I paid very good wages. Your dear father always insisted, you know, on having me get the best of everything—servants included."

Mary winced at the unintentional thrust, then forgot her own discomfiture as she saw the tears in her mother's eyes.

"I know, dear," she said hastily, "and he was right for you deserved the best of everything. But you must remember, mother, that father had more money than Bert has."

"Oh, I know, I know," the widow responded quickly. "Dear child, don't fancy for a moment that I meant to criticise your husband. He has, of course, derived many of his ideas from his mother, and—pardon me, Mary—but she has not lived as we have, so she is to be excused if she has taught her son to feel that women ought to do their own work. Naturally, as Bert is a good son, he takes her tone. I do not blame him."

"Of course not," her daughter assented. In her own heart she was wondering if she, this man's wife, could say as much.

"Your husband is very kind to me," remarked Mrs. Danforth, somewhat irrelevantly. "I ought to be happy."

But was she? Mary pondered. Did she not think that perhaps her daughter was not as content as she would like her to be? Did she not suspect that Mary did not love the man to whom she was married? And, if so, could she be happy—she, the mother who had taught her child that a loveless marriage was a sin?

Her Cheerful Voice.

As if reading the unspoken thought, Mrs. Danforth took her daughter's hand tenderly in hers. "Tell me, darling," she said, wistfully, "are you satisfied? Are you worried about anything? Sometimes I almost fear that you are a little disappointed—about something."

The young wife put her arms around her mother and drew the gray head down to her shoulder.

"Little mother," she said, her voice determinedly cheerful, "what notions you do get! Why should I not be happy here in this cozy little cottage, with the best mother that ever lived, and the man I have chosen out of all the world? Dear mother," with a light laugh, "why should I have married Bert if I did not want to?"

The mother laughed, too, and there was a ring of relief in the sound.

"Of course, dear! Why, indeed? Forgive your silly old mother—but I love you so much that if you were not happy—why, I just could not stand it!"

She ended with a little sob, and the daughter held her closer.

"You believe now that I am happy, don't you, dear?" Mary asked.

"Oh, yes, I believe it now," said the widow tremulously, "and you don't know what a comfort it is to be sure of it."

With her head still on Mary's shoulder she did not look up at the sad eyes gazing out of the window, nor did she see the bitter smile that twisted the young lips. In a moment the wife's face was again placid, and she smiled on leaving her mother, making the pretext that she had "some work to do downstairs."

She did not go downstairs at once. Instead, she turned into her own room and closed the door. But she did not, as she would have done in her girlhood days, fling herself upon the bed and give way to her misery. Instead, she went to the window and looked out into the July sunshine. But she was looking into her heart, not into the summer noon.

"Good Lord!" she whispered, "what a liar I have become! A liar both in speech and life!"

She stood motionless a moment longer, then lifted her head with a gesture of decision—almost of defiance.

"But I won't look back," she muttered. "I have made my bed and must lie on it—even if it is made of thorns. At all events, mother is comfortable and cared for."

She Had Learned.

Advertisements for domestics at the price named by Herbert Fletcher and his mother proved useless. As a final resort, Mary engaged one so-called "helper" after another from the village, but each was so inefficient that this trial was abandoned. The young housewife had learned that to secure good service one must pay an adequate price for it—and that even then one might fail to obtain it.

So it came about that at last Mary Fletcher did the work of her own house, hiring a woman from the village for two days a week to "wash, iron and scrub," and even then she had to supplement her at every turn. It was taken as a matter of course that the wife should help hang out the clothes and assist with the ironing. She told her mother that she "enjoyed the novel task;" in fact, that she thought the exercise and fresh air good for her. Her husband did not protest. Why should he? His own mother had always done that kind of work.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

These Pictures Were Especially Posed for this Page.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ONE of your great Americans sang in an exquisite little poem of "The glory that was Greece; the grandeur that was Rome." The glory and grandeur of these nations were founded not only on their art and culture and prowess as warriors, but on a basic condition that male brains and power reach a great height of perfection—on the sublimity and healthy beauty of the human body.

When laziness and high living weakened the bodies of the Greeks and Romans, decline and fall were near. But in the flower of their national health and youth the bodies of the Greeks and Latins were physically splendid, and the endowment of mental power followed physical health.

In these simple facts there lies a great lesson for us of to-day. In bodily health and strength lie the power of the individual and the health of the nation as well. I have said so often and am always glad to say again that in the beautiful classic dances that have come down to us from the ancients lies the simplest secret of bodily grace. But to-day I want to add a few principles of bodily health and care that are practiced of necessity by the professional dancer, and that the bodily beauty-seeker would do well to emulate.

Begin by training children so that their muscles will fall naturally, in motion or repose, into graceful lines. Teach them that food is very important in one way and of no consequence in another. Food must nourish the body and give it strength, but beware the pleasureful-overeating of the well-nourished, ill-proportioned gourmet.

Food and Mood.

Now, you could dance a cancan or a breakdown however you hated the world—and indigestion surely produces misanthropy—but you have to be in harmony with life to express poetry in dancing. So, since mood affects dancing and food affects mood, this little cycle will make the classical dancer careful of the dower of health that spare, sane, sensible eating produces.

For breakfast I have coffee and hot milk, for lunch fruit and one nourishing solid and my simple dinner is guiltless of sweets. Clothes I regard as covering and not as trammeling ornaments that interfere with freedom of movement or deep breathing. Perehaps if I convert a few of my readers to a love for and a belief in the graceful movements of the classic dance, I shall at the same time make converts to the healthful joys of simple living, of deep breathing and of high thinking.

To-day I will tell you about two little movements of the dance that may be done at home without music and to the slower tempo of the walk. Try them for general bodily grace and ease of motion.

The first picture shows a very simple equally pretty figure, and for suppleness of arms and legs and waist it counts as strongly as it does for lightly poised and carried head and body. Advance with the head carried high above the column of the throat and the lifted chin. Sway slightly from the waist as you swing the arms in the arc of a circle; left arm is forward slightly above the shoulder height as the weight advances forward to the right foot, and at the same time the right arm is stretched back in a straight line and lowered from shoulder to wrist until the hand is just at the line of the hip. Do this with gradually increasing tempo, until the springy walking motion has become a light dancing step. Fifteen minutes of this night and morning will give great grace and resiliency to your ordinary gait.

The second picture brings the back and shoulder muscles into play and exercises the throat. In other essentials it has the basic principles and advantages of the first exercise. Advance as before. This time the forward motion is first on the left and then on the right side of the body and thus great muscular co-ordination is assured ofr the devotee of this exis assured for the devotee of this exelbows close to the waist line and the hands relaxed in easy lines from the wrist. Sway head and arm from side to side as the body pivots slightly from the waist muscles and the feet advance in the lifted prancing step of the dance.

"More power to ye," says my neighbors of Erin's Isle, in kindly greeting. To you—my neighbors across the sea—I say it, too, "More power to you;" and may the principles of the classical dancing I have so earnestly studied and so earnestly love, bring you beauty and grace and power to live gloriously and well.

.:. A TALE OF LOST CHERUBS .:.

"THE Gudgeon children are lost!" panted Mrs. Sprinkle as she flung open the screen door unceremoniously and burst in upon the Liffick family, variously disposed in hammocks and sprawly chairs.

"My goodness!" cried Mrs. Liffick. "Again?"

"They're truly lost," explained Mrs. Sprinkle, excitedly. "And we want you to come and help find them. They are sending parties in every direction through the woods and they're going to telephone the life-saving crew to drag the lake——"

"Did the boat tip over?" asked Liffick, now entirely awakened, as he reached for his cap.

Mrs. Sprinkle heaved an exasperated sigh. "If they're lost," she said, succinctly, "they might possibly be drowned, mightn't they? We don't want to leave any stone unturned."

Dire Thoughts.

"Mrs. Gudgeon left Imogene and Harry playing just as nicely under the trees beside their cottage while she walked down to the pier to fish," related Mrs. Sprinkle, "and they were gone when she came back in an hour. She has called and called for them, and they are nowhere within a mile! Imogene had such beautiful eyes, too! Maybe gypsies——"

"It will break their mother's heart!" said Mrs. Liffick. "How perfectly terrible! I'm sorry I scolded Harry for breaking off all my geraniums! And the time he scalded our cat—I might have made less harsh remarks to him. Suppose they've fallen down that old quarry pit! Arthur, you go right over in that direction and see! It's only four miles!"

Liffick, starting off, ran into several other men from the various cottages bound on the same errand.

"It looks serious," said Tilton with a shake of his head. "Kids like that and so venturesome! There's a dozen things that might have happened to them! I'm bound for the creek bank, where it is so marshy! There's quicksand there."

The whole summer colony was soon deserted. Everybody had gone to hunt for the Gudgeon children, whose various sins of commission were now tenderly covered by the veil of charitable anxiety. Mrs. Gudgeon alternately wept at home and darted out on spasmodic hunts. Again she would wander around the cottage making the air ring with the names of the missing ones. There was no answer.

"Harry might have grown up to be President some day!" said Mrs. Liffick mournfully. "They say these mischievous little children always turn out so well. Dear little Imogene"——

"You said she was a hateful child, mother, when she cut holes in your new embroidered waist," put in Sally Liffick, who was tagging around that she might miss none of the excitement.

"Sally, you go straight home!" commanded her mother. "Haven't you any sympathy at all? The idea?"

One by one the searchers staggered in toward dusk. Each had the same tale of disappointment and each was dusty and thirsty and hungry and despairing.

"Something per-perfectly awful must have happened to them, because every inch of the woods has been searched!" said Mrs. Sprinkle. "Poor Mrs. Gudgeon! Harry was such a brilliant child!"

"I always said Imogene would turn out a beauty, too," put in Mrs. Tilton. "It's hard!"

"There never were such darling children in the whole world!" their mother informed everybody between sobs. "Oh, where are my babies? Just to get my arms around them"—

Harry Found.

There was a shriek and a scuffle from the little cellar under the Gudgeon house and everybody rushed to see.

The Gudgeon cook was dragging Harry out from the depths of the potato bin, while Imogene was unrolling herself from a pile of old carpeting. The assembled searchers and their parents stared, voiceless.

"We wuz playing hiding from the Indians," vouchsafed Harry. "You made awful good Indians—you yelled so!"

As Gudgeon reached for Harry with an arm motion that promised a laying over his knee, while Mrs. Gudgeon did likewise with her darling daughter, the searchers melted away.

"Wow!" said Liffick as juvenile wails rent the air. "That sounds good to me! Four miles to the stone quarry and back!"

Yield to Baby.

One afternoon not long ago in the vicinity of Grant Park there might have been seen a young man industriously pushing up and down a baby carriage. Intently reading a book the while.

"Henry! Henry!" called a young woman from the second story of a house opposite.

Henry heard it, but continued to push the baby carriage and to read his book.

In about an hour the cries for "Henry!" were repeated.

"Well, what do you want?" he demanded, rather impatiently.

"Nothing, dear," was the irritating response, "except to inform you that you've been wheeling Harriet's doll all the afternoon. I think it's time for the baby to have a turn now."

THE TUNNEL

GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The story opens with Rives, who is in charge of the technical workings of the great tunnel from America to Germany, on one of the tunnel trains, with Baermann, an engineer, in charge of Main Station No. 4. They are traveling at the rate of 118 miles an hour. Rives is in love with Maude Allan, wife of Mackendrick Allan, whose mind first conceived the great tunnel scheme. After going about 250 miles under the Atlantic Ocean Rives gets out of the train. Suddenly the tunnel seems to burst. There is a frightful explosion. Men are flung to death and Rives is badly wounded. He staggers through the blinding smoke, realizing that about 3,000 men have probably perished. He and other survivors get to Station No. 4. Rives finds Baermann holding at bay a wild mob of frantic men who want to climb on a work train. Somebody shoots Baermann, and the train slides out. The scene is then changed to the roof of the Hotel Atlantic. The greatest financiers of the country are gathered there at a summons from C. H. Lloyd, "The Money King." John Rives addresses them, and introduces Allan. Mrs. Allan and Maude Lloyd, daughter of the financier, are also present. Allan tells the company of his project for a tunnel 3,100 miles long. The financiers agree to back him. Allan and Rives want him to take charge of the actual work. Rives accepts. Rives goes to the Park Club to meet Wittersteiner, a financier. At Columbus Circle news of the great project is being flashed on a screen. Thousands are watching it.

Now Go On With the Story.

(From the German of Bernhard Kellermann—German version. Copyrighted, 1913, by S. Fischer Verlag, Berlin. English translation and remptation by

(Copyrighted, 1913, by International News Service.)

Before daylight two thousand more men arrived, and with them began the endless stream of freight. Rives began to feel like a swimmer who has been bucking a tide-rip. But he asked that the pace be increased, and he shut his teeth and jumped in. Twenty lieutenants worked on his immediate staff, all of them young men, but all of them chosen for the cut of their jaws and the cleanness of their records in stress and storm and strife. And Rives worked them as hard as he worked himself. He gave no instructions. There was not time for that. He told each man what was to be done in a few curt sentences and left the doing of it to him.

That third night a terrific thunderstorm broke up the heat wave. It came down in a terrific gale, and the first thunderbolt fired a freight shed where 500 cots were stacked to the roof, as there had been no time to unpack them that night. Before the fire got well under way, the wind ripped the burning roof off, and then came the deluge. When day broke, Rives found that about a third of his jerry-built houses had collapsed—and the flood of materials and men from Toms River set in as before.

It was a terrible setback, but he shook his head and went at it as if nothing had happened, and his men backed him with the easy energy and resource of men long accustomed to uneven warfare with Nature. That day Tunnel City looked like a storm-swept mining camp. Two days later it was like the temporary camp of the great army. At the end of ten days it was a city with concrete houses and streets and electric lights and sewerage—a city of 20,000 men with a postoffice, a telephone system, two railroad depots, bakeries, dairies, abattoirs, stores, saloons and a hospital.

And over everything, the discouraged and drooping trees and the few scattered clumps of bushes, the window sills and the roofs, was the thick white dust of the cement that had made the miracle possible.

Pages of this and many succeeding issues of this paper might be filled with the details of the wonders of energy and the mighty toil of those summed months on the Jersey coast. And in four other spots on the face of the earth similar scenes were being enacted. But terrific as were the results, grandiose the scale, the details must needs be tiresome, for after all they were only digging a hole in the earth. In this, as in all other matters of great moment, it is well to trust to the trained and not the technical observer. Edgar Harkness, the star man of The New York Evening Journal staff, was at the works from the day the first man reached there. Looking over the files of the paper for that summer I came upon a special article he wrote describing the progress of the work.

"This place of bedlam," he wrote, in part, under date of September 11, of that year, "looks as if it were going up in smoke. To-day the cloud above it is so dense that electric discharges like heat lightning flash across it and there is always a muttering like distant thunder, while beneath its edges a deep blue horizon tells that elsewhere the sun is shining. Beneath the Tunnel City roars and shouts explodes, whistles, thunders and yells.

"From the midst of the pandemonium and settling over everything like a white sea-fog rises a monstrous white column of dust to join the black smoke canopy overhead. Meeting the heavy blackness it seems to spread and mingle with it, forming a cloud such as observed at the eruptions of volcanoes. Pressed down by the colder air above it spreads like a gigantic umbrella, and little shreds are whirled away by puffs of the seaward breeze.

"SHIP captains report that when there is a steady off-shore wind this dust forms white scum on the ocean for miles, and New Yorkers know the source of the nuisance that turns their blue serge suits gray."

Here Mr. Harkness drifts off temporarily to little things that were important for the day only, and then goes on to report the progress of the actual work.

"The place of construction, following its fixed width of twelve hundred feet, is now nearly the finishing of a straight inland cut of three miles. It is laid out in long terraces so that the construction trains can hold to easy grades until they reach the last level, which will be 600 feet below the level of the sea. Here the actual sinking of the tunnel itself will begin.

"But the day before yesterday this place was a sandy heath, half reclaimed from barrenness. Swiftly it became a gravel pit, a quarry, and at last a monster chasm that swarms seemingly with insect life. Queer little busy beings covered with white dust that dig and growl and grovel and toil, gray-faced and dusty-haired.

"Twenty thousand of them hurl themselves into this mighty ravine every day. Their drills and picks and shovels glitter like the sunlight on a lake. A whistle shrieks a warning, a column of dust rises to join the vast cloud overhead, a colossus of stone, wrenched by dynamite from its grip of earth, swerves outward and falls with a thundering roar. Another puff of dust leaps up and the insects swarm into it.

"As far as eye can reach down that long incline into the bowels of the earth these puffs that tell of terrific blasts are shooting up. Great dredges, attacking the quicksand, shriek and whine as they suck up liquid death. The chain pumps groan and rattle. Derricks and steam shovels whirr and dip. Aerial carts whizz past you on trolleys. Swarms of tiny locomotives hustle and fuss around, shrieking at each other with shrill voices.

"Sand and gravel flies back to the town where mountains of bagged cement are stacked, for there must be housing for 40,000 men before the cold weather reaches. Here another army is toiling at break-neck speed about this gigantic task.

"And all of this is but preliminary to the real work of the great project."

Then there follows a wonderful description of the workings of the great tidal basins, Allan's improvement on the designs of Schlich and Lippman, the famous German engineers, to whom we owe the harnessing of the incalculable power of the tides. Through his ingenious arrangement of reservoirs thousands of tons of water were dumped on gigantic turbines every hour of the twenty-four, and the lift and fall of the tides gave him all of this power for simply the cost of original work—less than $5,000,000.

The scene, indeed, recalled the Tower of Babel—a project so vast that its very conception seemed impious.

And this was only one of five such scenes. In Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London similar mighty panoramas of daring were being unrolled. And Allan, the genius who had provoked these upheavals, was the motive spirit of each. He was tireless and unresting. Rives and Mrs. Allan heard from him in one camp or another, and before they had finished his short dispatches—so it seemed to them—another from some other tunnel city was laid in their hands or he himself dropped off a construction train from Toms River, clear-eyed, smooth-shaven, and fresh and energetic as ever.

Rives had built a beautiful little house for the chief engineer and his wife on the seaside of the tunnel city, and Allan encouraged Mrs. Allan to spend much of her time there, even when he was in this country. Rives was the one warm personal friend he had made in his lonely life, and knowing how much pleasure Mrs. Allan found in his society, he was glad to have her as nearly contented as possible while he darted back and forth across half the Northern Hemisphere. They had one child—a little girl, Edith—and she grew to be almost a stranger to her father.

Even when Allan was in New York he saw but little of his wife and child. His business affairs usually took him a great deal to the house of the great Lloyd, where he held long conferences with the old financier or his daughter, who had the details of the tunnel at her finger ends.

A Neglected Wife.

Thus Mrs. Allan, a lonely and neglected woman, was thrown constantly with Rives, an impressionable and high-strung man, who already held for her at least a deep admiration.

"Mac is in New York—I got a wire from him late this afternoon," remarked Rives one evening as they were taking a horseback ride along one of the wide level roads that led northward from Tunnel City.

"Yes, he called me up," said the woman, with a faintly weary note in her voice. "He said that he would be busy about the real estate deal for the next day or so and would have to go to France within a few days. He called up from the Lloyds," she added, without conscious meaning.

Rives was silent for a few moments as the horses pounded along the gravel road, side by side.

"Did he say anything about running down here or——?" he stopped off short. He had tried to make the tone nonchalant, but she understood and bit her lip.

"I know what you are thinking about, Jack," she said soberly, and her voice trembled slightly. "And I wish you wouldn't—pity me."

Rives swore at himself in an undertone and tried to stammer out something light and reassuring.

"You're too old a friend," she cut in, quietly. "It would be just like you to go and talk to Mac, and that would be worse than anything else. He is doing the best he can, and I know I ought to be happy."

"Aren't you?" asked Rives.

"No, I'm not, and you know it perfectly well, my friend. I am as proud of Mac as a woman could be of a man, but I want to be married to a man, not to a—a—an institution."

Rives looked at the lightly poised body and the delicate brown head and soft eyes that shone like amber in the moonlight. And he laughed uncertainly to check the something that rushed to his lips.

"Oh, well," he said lightly and kindly, "it won't be so bad in a little while. Mac is trying to do eight men's work and everything is just starting now, but when——"

"I know," she interrupted grimly. "Everything has been just starting for months and months. I went over all this with him a few weeks ago and he told me just what you are trying to tell me. I only know that I have been under the same roof with my husband for 24 consecutive hours in six months."

"But, little girl, don't you see——"

"Oh, yes! I know I am unreasonable. I have cut out about a bale of newspaper clippings about Mac and pictures of me, and I ought to be as vain and pleased as—as—as a woman. I am proud of him. I even admit that it gratifies the woman in me to be pointed out in department stores and at the theater as the wife of Mac Allan—but that isn't all that a normal woman wants the man she loves to give her."

Rives wisely held his tongue and there was another little silence. At last he asked:

"Did you ever—have you ever let Mac know exactly how you feel about—about this?"

The woman did not reply at once.

"I went down to his office about a month ago," she said at last in a low voice. "I couldn't help it, Jack. I was so lonely and miserable. He sent out word that he was very busy, but would be out in a little while. I told the boy to tell him that I wanted to see him at once. I was mad by that time. He came out perfectly good humored, as he always is, and I told him I wanted him to come home for dinner and spend the evening with me. He said he couldn't and I—I cried, and I'm afraid I made a scene—but there was nobody there."

SHE paused, and Rives made no comment. He was looking straight over his horse's head up the moonlit road, and his face was in the shade of his broad-brimmed hat. She looked at him and put her hand on his arm.

"You don't blame me, do you, Jack?"

She felt the muscles stiffen under her hand.

"No," he replied, almost gruffly, "I don't."

She sighed. "He told me he would have more time in a few months, it would be different, and I said I didn't want to wait any longer. I told him I was going to take up nursing and go to work in the hospital here—and that's why I've done it. If I couldn't have my husband I had to have something else to occupy my mind. I can't bear to be useless, Jack."

"What did he say when you told him that?" asked Rives, quietly.

'He laughed—and told me to go ahead."

Again they rode on in silence for a brief time.

"I suppose I am foolish," she said at last, in a wistful tone, "but sometimes I wish that Mac had never succeeded in getting this tunnel plan through. He doesn't belong to me any more; he belongs to the world. I have to live in the light of his halo—and I'd rather live in the light of a fireside."

Rives abruptly pulled up his horse and turned.

"Let's go home," he said.

"I'M glad you could get up here, old man. The storm is about to break. Listen!"

Up to them from the street, where hundreds of real estate brokers were gathered, came a steady roar. Allan and Rives listened and smiled.

"You certainly did some smooth work in a publicity line," said the latter.

"It wasn't smooth," disclaimed Allan, a little resentfully, "and I didn't do it. It just did itself. You know—but maybe you haven't had time to see their stunts—but the viograph people have been among my best little advertisers, and they have paid for the privilege. They have been showing pictures with miles and miles of beautiful houses and department stores and all the trimmings of a great city along with their regular films showing the progress of the work—all labeled 'The Tunnel City of the Future' and 'Tunnel City Ten Years From To-day.'"

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading an awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties."

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Io. It is a jerky sort of a name, Io, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I. O. U.

"Well, this Io is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Illa, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Io to get Illa because she has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gell belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Illa that she cannot marry Io she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when thou passest beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Io is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy beck and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Io's bride.'

"'But Io like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe Io a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe Io nothing.'

"The way the story ends, Io makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Illa until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Atlantan passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barger. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT

In the interval not a word was uttered not a look interchanged between the lady and the detective. But the moment Dr. Cameron returned, a sudden change took place in Mrs. Cameron, and rising, she confronted Mr. Gryce with a frank and grateful air that lent quite a new aspect to her ever-changing countenance.

"You are very kind," she declared, in a grateful tone that was in itself a shock to both her hearers. "Knowing this frightful tale; seeing as you must have done that, if true, Mildred Farley did not die after I went downstairs, but before, you have come here in confidence and without scandal to hear what I have to say about the matter and give me an opportunity to explain myself. I shall never forget this consideration, sir; and as proof of my gratitude I will at once tell you what I can about this poor unfortunate's death, hoping that you will see the matter as I did, and understand in a measure at least how I was driven by my fears to keep back my knowledge of this frightful secret, even from my mother and husband, till it was torn from me and shred by shred as you have seen. And now for the truth.

"This girl, whose death you consider such a mystery, committed suicide. She committed it in my presence, just a few minutes before I went downstairs to be married. It was a terrible shock and a great surprise to me. I had been dressing, and was thinking of anything else than tragedies or death. Nor do I think she meant to die then or there. But she was desperate. She had had a talk with her intended husband and had been disappointed in him. She did not want to see him again, and the contrast between the hopes expressed by my bridal attire and the dreariness of her own outlook maddened her, I supposed; for in a moment, as it were, she seized upon that bottle of poison and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I had got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Should I mar the happiness of the whole company by revealing what had occurred? I thought not in the moment I had to consider. So I just drew the poor girl into the alcove, and in grief and terror enough, God knows, covered her over with some dresses I had before pulled down from the closet and thrown on the floor. I had barely done this and readjusted my veil when the knock came and I had to descend.

"It was frightful, but I did not know how frightful till I came to think. Then I almost gave way to my terror and agitation, and when that scream came down from upstairs——"

She stopped. They did not wonder; at such a horrible experience, who would not shudder!

Her husband for the first time realized all she had been through and reached out his hand in sympathy, though there was yet much to be explained before he could feel reconciled to a past so full of mysteries and shadows.

"And how," asked the detective, nothing but formal respect on his part, "was the body disposed of? When next we hear of it, it was in the keeping of a Dr. Molesworth, who, as we have been informed, was not one of your wedding guests."

Mrs. Cameron did not flinch. She looked, if anything, more winning and candid than before.

"Dr. Molesworth was the man who had expected to marry her. He had gone to the hotel for that purpose and had not found her; so he came where he suspected her to be. He was not one of my guests, but that did not keep him from the house. He came in at the front door and stood in the hall, and I happened to see him and immediately knew what he was after. So I arose and went out—I was then receiving congratulations—and, accosting him without delay, told him that the person he wanted was in my room and bade him go upstairs and I would follow. For I not only saw that he was in a state of feeling that bordered on frenzy, but I also saw that if the matter was to be hushed up and the body got out of the house without disturbance, he was the man to do it; and I relied upon him and went up after him and explained what had occurred and showed him the dead body of his bride, and asked for help and got it. I don't know that I should call it help now," she added, in a low voice, "for it might have been better for me if I had called in the whole house to see that dead girl, and so escaped the days and weeks of deceit that have pressed upon me like so many mountain weights of lead."

Her husband looked as if he concurred with her, but he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce asked another question.

"You read the account of the proceedings before the Coroner, which was printed in the papers?"

She acknowledged that she had.

"You must have seen then that Dr. Molesworth testified to having found the girl on a stoop in Twenty-second street."

"Yes, sir. It was agreed between us that he should tell some such story as that. It seemed wisest to us at the time. Since she had killed herself it would not hurt her and it would relieve me from endless complication, to have it thought she had committed the deed in the street. So we thought then—with how little judgment let this moment testify."

The detective fixed his eyes upon her and opened his lips to put another question. But he evidently found it too difficult to say what was in his mind and turned it into the simple suggestion, "You must have known Dr. Molesworth well, Mrs. Cameron?"

A flush, hot and vivid, answered him from the doctor's face, but her cheek did not alter and it was with much composure she replied:

"I had learned much of his disposition from my conversations with the woman he expected to marry. As for his face, I had seen him at Mrs. Olney's, where I have been more than once. I had even had some talk with him. It was the situation which made us like friends at once."

"I understand," asserted Mr. Gryce, but his looks did not bear out his words, "Your conduct is not so inexplicable," he went on. "Women think much of appearances and are not apt to weigh the consequences of their impulsive efforts to preserve them. But a man usually halts long before he enters into a scheme that must end in perjury, and Dr. Molesworth committed perjury, Mrs. Cameron."

She dropped her chin upon her breast and the presence of a growing dread began to show itself in her face.

"Not only that," the detective continued. "He engaged to do a fearful thing when he promised you to get a dead body out of the house alone and without discovery. Have you thought how much nerve and determination it would require? What self-sacrificing devotion it would need to lead a man not only to take the risk of such an act, but to subject himself to the horrors of it? I find it difficult to reconcile what I have seen of Dr. Molesworth with such devotion to a lady so little known to him. I would sooner think——" He paused; she looked at him breathlessly—"that he had his own reasons for keeping the matter quiet," he pointedly added.

"Perhaps he had," she simply replied. "I can not tell all that passed in his mind. I can only tell you what we did."

"And you repeat that it was through his agency this dead girl was got out of your room and house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when?"

"That I do not know. It was after I left."

"What, you went away before she was removed from the house?"

"Yes, sir. Having made up my mind to trust the whole affair to him. I only thought of escape for myself. Then it could never have been managed if I had not cleared the backstairs by having my trunk carried out. It was down those he intended to go."

"And did he?"

"I can not tell. I only know he succeeded in his undertaking. How or under what difficulties, he must himself inform you. I have never had an opportunity to ask him."

"No," she returned boldly; "not while he doubts whether I have spoken of the matter or not. He has too chivalrous ideas of duty."

"What, when his life is at stake?"

"His life!"

"He was on the point of being arrested for murder when this testimony of Celia's came in."

"I suspected it, or rather I knew that he was under the surveillance of the police, for he told us so in an interview he had with the doctor about a case of his."

"And you were going to allow him to go to prison upon a charge you knew perfectly unfounded?"

"Mr. Gryce, I was not two weeks married. I know that my husband hated deceit and I lacked the courage to acknowledge that I had become entangled in it. Then I trusted to Dr. Molesworth discovering a way out of his difficulty, and was so sure that he would I never even thought of his being in any danger of his life. It is also only fair to myself to say that, had he been brought to trial, I should have relentlessly sacrificed myself. It was my hope that he would not which kept he silent so long."

She was pleading her cause well, and yet her shadowed brow and paling lip showed she was conscious that it was a failing one, and that the doom she had so long dreaded was rushing upon her.

"I except your explanation," quoth the detective, "and it only remains at present for you to inform us where Miss Farley got the drug with which she poisoned herself."

"I can not tell you that," came in fainter tones from Mrs. Cameron's lips.

"Was it from her bag, her pocket, or the folds of her dress that she took the vial which held it?"

Genevieve miserably shook her head. Mr. Gryce looked troubled; he hesitated a little, then suggested kindly, "You saw her carry it to her lips?"

Genevieve faintly acquiesced.

"And did you see where she took it from?"

"I can not answer."

Dr. Cameron strode one step and stood beside his wife.

"Why can not you answer?" he asked gently.

"Because——" she felt for a chair and sat down. "Because you will not believe what I say."

"I will not believe what you say?"

She turned her eyes, which had been fixed upon vacancy, on his face. There was unfathomable love in them, but there was unfathomable despair also.

"I think you would," said she, "and yet it is very incredible."

"The true things are often the incredible," observed he.

She smiled, but in a hopeless sort of way, and in an altered tone, murmured:

"Very well, then, she got it out of a box."

"A box she carried?"

"No; one she found in the room."

Dr. Cameron stared; so did the detective. Genevieve sat and shivered silently.

"Took a vial containing prussic acid from a box she found in the room?"

"Yes."

"And how came prussic acid to be in your room, Mrs. Cameron?"

It was a question for which she seemingly had no reply. Though she opened her lips, no words issued from them, and she sat the image of shame and despair. The doctor, struck aghast, started impetuously forward, and would have spoken himself but that the detective forestalled him.

"You do not think I have the right to ask that question," he remarked. "Well, I withdraw it and will simply inquire what sort of box it was which held this vial, and where in the room it was kept?"

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

One Pretty Girl Finds Nature a Most Efficient Teacher

"ONCE upon a time," began Laura Hamilton, more reminiscently than her very evident youthfulness would seem to permit, "I owned a little white poodle—a cross between a Maltese and a French poodle. He had wonderful long silky hair, and we used to keep it in order by treating it with oil of cocoanut. Now, a few years ago my hair, which was very long, suddenly began to come out a bit—to thin at the ends and to show a tendency to acquaintance with an up-to-then stranger, dandruff. First I worried, then I vainly consulted a specialist or two, and then I thought of doggie."

Oil of Cocoanut.

"Sermons in stones—and beauty hints in the silken coat of a Franco-Maltese poodle," thought Miss Interviewer, who was sitting in the wings of the Winter Garden in New York talking to Miss Hamilton, and glimpsing bits of the wonderful marchings and flings and dancings going on out of wonderful New Wynburn's wonderful Capital Steps. And the three "wonderfuls" in that sentence are none too many.

"I thought of doggie," went on my pretty little brown-haired neighbor, "and I invested in 10 cents' worth of oil of cocoanut. And it is good for good hair and so kind to poor hair. Use it every other night—moisten the finger tips with it, and rub the oil well into the scalp. It won't make the hair greasy or oily looking—but it will give it a natural gloss and luster. Shampoo the hair once a week and brush it a hundred strokes every day. Part it down the middle from crown to the nape of the neck; bring the two heavy strands over the shoulders and brush each section fifty times with a long sweeping motion that swings from the scalp to the very ends of the hair. Plentiful glossy hair is sure to result."

"And then we do not take our glowing, abundant tresses and torture them with hot irons, do we?" I asked.

"We do not," replied Miss Hamilton. "We trust the natural gloss and add a little training as to graceful curves and scallops, so we may look as well as possible—and we don't beautify ourselves at the cost of our hair.

Give It a Chance.

"If you are trying to be attractive," she went on earnestly, "do not make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others. Give everything a chance. Let me see—I start by trying to keep calm and cool and well and rested. My first rule is to avoid restaurants at night. After the theater, instead of going into a restaurant, with its heavy air and heavy glare of artificial light, I motor out into the pure, clean country.

"An hour under the stars every night—an hour with the cool wind blowing on my face and the pure, clean, unused air of night blowing the cobwebs out of my brain—and I go home to restful, dreamless sleep. Then I wake up ready to start the day with about ten minutes of exercise.

"First I lie flat on my bed and stretch my arms out straight, and take a deep, lung-filling breath; then I exhale that breath, dropping my arms to my sides the while, and as I fill my lungs and chest again I raise my arms at right angles to my body again.

"Next I hop out of bed and take these two exercises by the open window. Grasp a straight chair by the rear legs, just midway betwen the base and the first rung, and learn to elevate the chair straight out and above your head, taking deep breaths while you do it. Ten times for each exercise is the correct amount. The last exercise sounds simple, but it fills out and rounds the chest and helps you maintain an erect carriage. Place the finger tips together above the head and far enough in front so you can just see them, and then inflate and empty the lungs ten times.

Your Morning Swim.

"Now take your morning swim; wash your face in clear, hot water, and without soap; dash a bit of witch hazel across your face and rinse in cold water; dress in pretty, simple clothes, and eat a simple breakfast, and you are all ready for a happy, useful day, with every part of your body in trim and ready to meet the demands of the hours to come."

And then, ever ready to meet the demands of the hour or moment, Miss Hamilton tripped across the stage to add her own glowing young personality to the glowing ensemble of "The Passing Show of 1913."

LILIAN LAUFFERTY.

Miss Laura Hamilton, from Grave to Gay.

"If you are trying to be attractive, don't make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others."

This is one of the maxims of Miss Laura Hamilton, based on her own experience.

Unusual.

"Queer mix-up over the Wombat estate."

"As to how?"

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reasons to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

TELL HER WHAT YOU HAVE TOLD ME.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had been keeping company with a young girl for about four years. We were to be married last month, but about three months ago we had a little quarrel over a foolish thing I had said to her, which she took up in a wrong way. The quarrel started when I wanted to kiss her after an enjoyable evening before I left her, but she objected and I got real angry. Then I passed the remark that started the quarrel. Kindly let me know how I can regain her love, as I have suffered enough. HARRY "B."

Apologize and make your apology humble and sincere.

I can't believe that a girl would refuse to kiss her betrothed lover good-night because of a whim. You must have done more to offend her than you tell, and must make your apology fit your crime and your conduct exemplary after she forgives you.

YOU TALK LIKE A MAN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl 21 years of age and I am 19 and have a good position and am able to take care of a wife. She loves me and I love her, so do you think I am too young to be in love, as I am thinking of making her my wife? So I would like your advice, as she is always speaking of marriage. ANXIOUS.

You are not too young to be in love, but 19 is rather young for a man to marry. You say you are in position to support her, which would indicate that you are older than your years, and are a good deal of a man after all.

But why not wait just two years? Believe me, the time will go rapidly and you will never regret it.

WRITE HIM A NOTE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 19 and have been keeping company with a young man a year older than myself for a year and three months. Just because I sent a card to his friend I think he is angry at me. I did not mean any harm. Kindly let me know what I should do to try to make up with him, as I love him dearly. J. K.

I do not like to suggest that a girl apologize when she has done no wrong, for the reason that once humble, the man tries to keep her so. But you have been sweethearts so long, and love is too precious to risk for pride's sake, so write him a little note of explanation. I hope he will be man enough to love you all the more because of this proof of your affection.

LET HER KNOW THE TRUTH.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a poor man and have been keeping company with a young lady for the last couple of months. Would it be proper for me to give her up, after accepting a diamond pin from her at Christmas time? I am willing to give the pin back as I do not care for her. P. W.

I am sorry for the girl, for such humiliation leaves a scar, but I would be more sorry for her if you married her without love in your heart.

Tell her you no longer love her, and be manly about it. And, always, till the day of your death, think and speak well of her.

I think it would be better to return the pin.

I AM AFRAID NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a Cuban lady and I am sure that my love is reciprocated. My many friends embarrass me quite a good deal by claiming that she is a negress. Do you think if I should marry her I could be happy with her? I am thinking seriously of proposing. GEORGE S.

My fear that the step would be fatal is based on your anxiety. Were your love of the right sort, it would be impossible for your friends to embarrass you, and their doubts would only strengthen your resolution to marry the girl. Think this over seriously. I want you to be happy, but you must not marry a girl only to break her heart by being ashamed of her.

CALL AT HOME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, but she does not answer my letters. How can I meet her and tell her of my love? RALPH.

Perhaps she has never received them. Call at her home and learn your fate from her own lips. It may require courage, but boldness in a lover is a trait which all girls admire.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT would appear to those who have noted the great number and variety of women's clubs that woman can have no longing that will not find a society organized for the express purpose of its gratification.

If she aspires to project her spiritual insight into the occult or to squelch that worm of the dust called Man, or to get bacon at cheaper prices, she has only to join a club, and such a desired end, if not attained, is at least set in motion.

But that every longing is not met is proven through the organization by Daysey Mayme Appleton of a society for which the heart of every woman has unconsciously yearned. And the greater the number of her friends, the greater her yearning.

Daysey Mayme had had the parlors of her home made hideous by the gifts of loving friends for years, but not until she received a water color of a yellow lamb on a cerise field with a purple shepherdess did she decide to rebel. The result of that rebellion was the recent launching of a club called The Secret Society of Breakers.

No woman need admit she belongs to such a society. Such an admission would cause the estrangement of generous friends and result in charges of lack of appreciation of their gifts.

"The members," explained Daysey Mayme, "are known to me and report to me for assignment and our method of procedure in this:

"A woman receives a fish platter on which is painted Jonah inside the whale or some other appetizing marine scene, and the donor expects it to be placed on the plate rail of the dining room.

"The recipient appeals to me, and I deputize one of the active workers of our order to make a social call at her home. The active worker sees the platter, she is enraptured with it, she asks to hold it, she lets it fall, and it breaks into a hundred pieces.

"She is overcome with remorse, of course, which I appease by paying for her work as soon as it is reported that the plate is beyond mending.

"Our organization is only two weeks old, but in that time members have made calls on other members afflicted with generous friends, and have carelessly dropped and broken seventeen goldfish globes, nine lamps, six vases and fourteen china plaques, and have borrowed four oil paintings and eleven sofa cushions for the purpose of copying, which they have lost on the way home.

"The Secret Society of Breakers will appeal to every woman who has kind and generous friends. In future no woman need go through life with her love for an artistic home blighted by purple and blue vases against her green wall paper or pink camels worked on a yellow sofa cushion.

"All she need do will be to drop a note to me."

THE JUDGE WAS WILLING TO HELP OUT, ANYWAY

PITCHER CAVET FATED TO LOSE HIS RIGHT EYE

TRUE baseball fans, no matter how much they want to see Atlanta beat Mobile in the approaching series here, will regret to learn that the Gulls will be minus the services of their prize southpaw, Pug Cavet. And it will be with deeper regret they learn that Pug probably has pitched his last game.

Members of the Memphis club said yesterday that Cavet's right eye, which has troubled him from childhood, had been getting steadily worse with some malady that would probably necessitate its removal in order to save the other eye and not render the lanky pitcher totally blind.

Specialists are treating Cavet, but hold out little hope of saving the eye. It would be a mechanical impossibility for a one-eyed man to play baseball successfully, owing to the extreme necessity of judging distance at all times—a feat accomplished unconsciously by the eyes themselves, using the distance between them as the base of a triangle, with the object on which they are focused as the point.

Should Cavet be forced to retire the game will lose a most promising young pitcher and one who was practically certain of making good in the Big Show.

TWO MONTREAL PLAYERS GRADUATE INTO MAJORS

BROOKLYN, Aug. 27.—President Lychtenheim, of the Montreal club of the International League, announced yesterday at Ebbets Field the sale of two prominent Montreal players. Outfielder Gilhesly goes to the New York Americans in exchange for Pitcher George McConnell and a cash consideration not stated. The Philadelphia Nationals secured Catcher Burns in exchange for Catcher Howley and two other players to be announced later.

BOXERS IN DRAW BOUT.

Come On, Cracker Fans, Let's Beat Out Birmingham

We MUST Prove That Atlanta Is the Best Baseball City in the South by Turning Out Biggest Yearly Attendance.

"Now is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of their ball club."

But the exigencies of the situation in Atlanta seem to warrant a little editing of the famous old sentence.

Over in Birmingham they are going after two things, both of which now are held and much prized in Atlanta.

One is the reputation of being the Best Baseball Town in the Southern League.

The other is the attendance record for a season's play.

ATLANTA HOLDS THE PRESENT RECORD—196,000.

And that is what makes Atlanta the best baseball town in the circuit. That is, it is one of the things. There are others too numerous to mention just now.

Anyway, Birmingham, with a club that is fighting to stay out of the second division, is near breaking the attendance record this year.

And Birmingham is a couple of jumps ahead of Atlanta, right now—and Atlanta with a ball club making a great little fight for the pennant, and almost sure to land as high as second place, anyway.

The Atlanta merchants and business men are taking up the boastful challenge from Slagville. It doesn't listen good to them, this hearing that another town is the best town in the Southern League.

And so, boys, here's a little tip:

Requests for the afternoon off, beginning to-day and lasting until the afternoon of September 6, will be given preferred attention in Atlanta business and mercantile offices—

PROVIDED—

The petitioner adds that he WANTS TO GO TO THE BALL GAME!

Try it and see.

The following, just for example, have asserted openly that they will grant afternoons off to just as many employees as they can possibly spare, from now until the end of the season—to go to the ball game!

W. E. Chapin Insurance Company, Royal Insurance Company, Georgia Railway and Power Company, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, Third National Bank, V. H. Kreigshaber & Son, and others who are adding their prestige to Atlanta's battle to retain the title of the "Best Ball Town in the Southern League."

Try it and see.

TRY IT TO-DAY.

To-day's a mighty good time, what with it being the grocers' and butchers' half holiday, and the date of the baseball track meet of the Memphis and Atlanta clubs, starting at 3 o'clock, with five events for which Atlanta merchants have offered prizes.

Sports and Such

EVERS IS HAPPY.

"I have no complaints to make,"
Said Evers to a fan,
"But the umps are out to break
And slough me if they can.
"The Giants' luck still blocks me;
My team is full of kinks;
And Bresnahan still knocks me,
And Murphy is a jinx!"

* * *

A BALL PLAYER HAS BEEN fined $10 for calling Umpire Bill Klem, a catfish. And yet—what should he have called him?

* * *

PRESIDENT EBBETS IS SIGNing up a few college men, but not with the idea that they will assist in the preparation of forthcoming dedication speeches. These will still be the old Ebbets brand.

* * *

MANAGER MILLER HUGGINS is going to be asked to resign because he has been finding fault with the playing of the Cardinals. We don't wonder. Hanging is too good for him.

* * *

* * *

PELKY, BY THE WAY, retired from the ring on that occasion, but only in the Pickwickian or Buffalo Bill sense.

* * *

IF IT WERE NOT FOR THE attitude of the magnates on gambling, we would be inclined to believe that Connie Mack's daily announcement of casualties among the Athletics might be a sign that he is laying back for bets.

* * *

MR. SNODGRASS.

(World's Series, 1912.)

Me, oh my!
Here's a fly!
I'll nail it with a half a try.
There it goes—
On my toes!
The gang will break my nose!

* * *

YOU HAVE TO ENVY MR. Chance his optimism. After losing two games to the Browns in one day, he still thinks the Yankees are not the worst team in the league.

* * *

MR. CHANCE, THE MANAGER, and Mr. Touchard, the tennis player, each understands how the other feels. Both lay all of their troubles to foot-faults.

* * *

IT'S FUNNY THAT ball players succeed in annoying Hank O'Day. You'd think that any man who had managed the Cincinnati team would be immune.

Kid Jinx Gets Kick in Ribs and Crackers Win Two Games in One Day

ZOWIE! SOME HITTING!! 29 SWATS FOR 20 RUNS

By O. B. Keeler.

TRULY it has been said, It's a Long Worm that has no turning.

The Crackers turned yesterday and ripped off a couple of games, the same being all two ends of a doubleheader—something that hasn't happened in weeks and weeks. Scores, 12 to 2 and 8 to 0.

Memphis was the rippee, of course. But that isn't the point. This being supposed to be a feature narrative, a feature must be found. You can get the news from the Box Score.

* * *

FEATURE No. 1—Winning both games of a two-ply matinee.

Feature No. 2—The method of winning same.

* * *

OF course, there was extremely airtight pitching, for one thing. But that would have won with a good deal less than a total of 29 hits and 20 runs in fifteen innings.

That might be construed into piling it on. And when it comes to prodigality, the original P. S. had nothing whatever on Bill Smith's hands, battering away at the reeling Turtles yesterday afternoon.

* * *

FOR example, there was one inning in the first game—the seventh—when six hits were arranged carefully in a row, one after another. Then an error was inserted, and two more hits added, the total productiveness being limited to five runs only by scandalous performances on the bases.

* * *

IN another round of the same encounter, four hits produced four runs, but the Turtles kicked in with three boots, which naturally aided.

Everybody on the Cracker club took at least one safe whack while the whacking was good. Long, Smith and Bisland took three apiece, and Agler Welchonce, Nixon and Chapman were content with two each. Nixon scored three runs and made himself otherwise obnoxious to the enemy.

* * *

WALLY SMITH got the long hit of the day, a triple that rolled nearly to the score board. He duplicated the feat in the second game, but the ground was heavy, which afflicted Mr. Smith's feet, and he was out at third after a nice gooey slide.

Thompson pitched a one-hit affair in the six innings the Turtles batted in the second game, while Doc Newton discovered a lot more about the law of gravitation by watching a shower of base-hits dropping in various parts of the field.

* * *

AMONG the other legitimate headliners might be mentioned Jack Love's glove-hand stab of a line drive from Bisland's bat; Schweitzer's long running catch of Smith's fly; Agler's stab of Bisland's assist on Shanley; Nixon's great running catch of Abstein's foul fly, and Baerwald's debate with Umps Stockdale in the first inning of the first game.

Baerwald spoke with fervor, but lost the decision. Also, he was canned from the game.

* * *

ONE more feature, because it's one you don't see oftener than once in an ordinary lifetime.

In the fourth inning of the first game, Bisland hit a sharp grounder to Abstein at first. Abby came in to threaten Smith, who was on third, and Bizzy stopped right in front of him. Abstein swung at him with the ball, Bizzy ducked right to the ground, dodged under the big fellow's wing and beat it to first.

He was safe—and he hadn't run out of the line, either.

* * *

REGULAR daily feature: Mobile won.

Bearing on the death grapple: We just got back the half-game we lost the day before, when the Gulls won while we got into a dogfall.

Prospects for first place: Chilly.

* * *

OH, yes—it rained, too.

Another one of those inhuman showers that appear to contradict the adage that the rain falls alike on the just and the unjust.

This particular rain fell mostly on the ball park. The sun was shining everywhere else, as on the celebrated occasion when Mr. Casey was at the bat. But it certainly did rain between games.

At that, most of the flood disappeared from the earth by the time Bill Smith did the dove act, and the second game got its 5 1-2 innings played in less than an hour, in spite of the sloppiness and the terrific hitting of the Crackers.

McLoughlin Retains His Tennis Title

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—The lawn tennis championship record for 1913 was practically completed on the Casino Grand court when Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, successfully defended his own title in singles and maintained the Pacific Coast supremacy by defeating R. Norris Williams, second, of Philadelphia, in the finals of the all-comers tournament, in a well-fought four-set match. The scores 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

As McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy, of Los Angeles, won their second championship in doubles last week and Miss Mary Browne, of Los Angeles, is still the women's title holder, the ascendancy of California in the principal departments of tennis is assured for another year.

TEX RICHARDS SWEEPS CARD IN FINE RACES

TEX RICHARDS "came back" last night at the Motordrome. He won every heat in which he started, making the biggest clean-up of the season. Number "23," Richards' famous "boat," returned from the factory yesterday morning, after a thorough overhauling, and it was just bubbling over with speed.

The races last night were exceptionally good. While the time in some of the heats was not as fast as expected, yet the finishes were all close and exceptionally exciting.

The feature event was the William L. Peel Sweepstakes. Colonel Peel was scheduled to start this event, but on account of illness in his family he was unable to be on the job.

Richards won the Southern championship and the Peel Sweepstakes, Luther ran second in both events, riding fine races, but his machine just didn't have the necessary speed to nose out Tex.

Here are the results:

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONSHIP.

(One-mile heats: 2 miles final; 25 points for first; 15 points for second and 5 for third.)

First Heat—Henry Lewis, first; Harry Glenn, second. Time, 44 2-5.

Second Heat—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time, 42 1-5.

Final—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 1:26.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.

(Three heats, 1, 2 and 3 miles, best 2 out of 3 heats.)

First Heat (1 mile)—Won by Georges Renel. Time, 44.

Third Heat (3 miles)—Won by Morty Graves. Time, 2:11 2-5.

W. L. PEEL SWEEPSTAKES.

(French point system; 10 for first, 6 for second, 3 for third; three heats 3, 4 and 5 miles.)

First Heat (3 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 2:08 3-5.

Second Heat (4 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 2:55.

Third Heat (5 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 3:43.

Points—Richards, 30; Luther, 18; Glenn, 6; Lewis, 3.

VARDON BREAKS RECORDS ON CLEVELAND GOLF COURSE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, English professional golfers, touring the United States, at the Mayfield club yesterday defeated Joe K. Bole, city champion of Cleveland, and Eben M. Byers, of Pittsburg, 5 up in a 36-hole match.

In defeating Byers and Bole, Vardon broke the Mayfield course record, both for 18 and 36 holes. In the morning round he lowered the 18-hole record held by Byers, from 72 to 67. In the afternoon he beat his own newly established record with 66, giving him 135 for 36 holes.

The old 36-hole record was 155. In the afternoon round Vardon's partner, Ray, bettered the former 18-hole course record, doing it in 71. John D. Rockefeller was an enthusiastic spectator.

MERCER'S FOOTBALL TEAM MUST REPORT SEPTEMBER 5

MACON, Aug. 27.—Candidates for Mercer's football team will be required to report for training September 5, according to an official announcement sent out by Professor J. F. Sellers, acting president, this morning. Coach Lewie Hardage will report next Monday morning.

KRAZY KAT — We Don't Blame Ignatz for Hurling the Brick

TO-DAY'S the day—Field Day, you know.

Get out to Ponce DeLeon at 3 o'clock, or a shade earlier, and kill two guineas with one dornick—see the Atlanta and Memphis players in a track meet, and hand one to that cocky Birmingham, which has an idea of being a better baseball town than Atlanta.

The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock, unless the special 100-yard dash, a challenge event between Doc Seabough and Joe Dunn, should not be finished by that time.

Anyway, Elliott Dent will pitch, and we may draw Rube Kissinger as official pest for the Turtles.

But the field sports start at 3 o'clock, and there will be at least five events: 100-yard dash, circling the bases, distance throwing, fungo hitting, and a sack race.

Another special challenge event is the 100-yard race between Jack Love and Bill Abstein, of the Turtles. Bill declined to bet on the result, saying he was ashamed to. But he has bound himself to buy Jack a hat, to cost not less than $5, if Jack can beat him.

Jack thinks that is fair enough.

Tight Golf Battles at East Lake

D. & F. Play Reaches 2d Round

MATCH play in the Davis & Freeman trophy golf tournament at East Lake began yesterday afternoon, and before play ceased for darkness the first round had been finished in all flights and several matches in the second round had been disposed of.

The feature match in the first flight was that between H. Block and R. L. Jones, won by the former, 1 up, in a close and exciting round. The second flight turned up closer matches, on the average, than the first flight, and in two instances extra holes were necessary to determine the winner. In one, O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham in 19 holes, and in the other C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole.

The lengthened holes, achieved by resetting the teeing grounds, made higher scores general, but the contestants were much pleased at the increased "sportiness" of the celebrated A. A. C. course.

Results yesterday:

First Flight.

First Round—W. R. Tichenor defeated R. J. Norris, 6 up and 5 to play; F. B. Fay defeated J. Q. Burton, 4 up and 2 to play; C. V. Rainwater defeated J. B. Pollard, 7 up and 5 to play; R. G. Blanton defeated D C. Root, 1 up; J. A. Ellen defeated H P. D. Comee by default; H. Block defeated R. L. Jones 1 up; Dowdle Brown defeated Perry Adair, 5 up and 3 to play; George Adair defeated S. Hard, 4 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—J. A. Ellen defeated H. Block, 3 up and 2 to play; Dowdle Brown defeated George Adair, 6 up and 4 to play.

Second Flight.

First Round—O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham at the 19th hole; H. C. Moore defeated J. D. Eley, 3 up and 2 to play; J. C. Payne defeated E. D. Duncan, 2 up and 1 to play; J. B. Martin defeated A. A. Doonan, 1 up; C. E. Rose defeated J. W. Pearce, 4 up and 2 to play; J. D. Darling defeated H. R. Calet, 3 up and 2 to play; C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole; W. H. Glenn defeated P. A. Wright, 3 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—C. E. Rose defeated J. B. Martin, 5 up and 3 to play.

Third Flight.

First Round—C. Donaldson defeated W. F. Upshaw, 6 up and 4 to play; J. E. Mellet defeated L. M. Crichton, 4 up and 3 to play; W. P. Hazelwood defeated Scott Hudson, 5 up and 4 to play; W. E. Warren defeated T. S. Ingram, 1 up; F. B. Meador defeated Will Soul, 7 up and 5 to play; L. D. Scott defeated K. R. Cobb, 4 up and 3 to play.

Fourth Flight.

First Round—H. L. Dix defeated W. C. Spiker, 7 up and 6 to play; R. I. Gresham defeated G. N. Spring at the 20th hole; B. L. Craig defeated E. G. Beaudy, 6 up and 5 to play; G. L. Simpson defeated G. B. Allen, 1 up.

Pinch Hit by Reed, Atlanta Boy, Won For the Phillies

Milton Reed, of Atlanta, broke into the limelight in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, when he came to bat in the pinch for the Phillies against the Cardinals and settled matters in favor of his club with a smashing hit, the Phillies winning, 6 to 5.

Pinch hitters were in evidence all through the game. In the seventh inning St. Louis led, 5 to 1. In that round Miller and Byrne delivered, Paskert—formerly a Cracker player—came through in the eighth, and then Reed finished it up in the ninth.

SENATORS SIGN McCABE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—William McCabe, one of the fastest semi-professional players in Chicago, has been signed by the Washington Americans. McCabe is at home at second, third and shortstop. He is 20 years old.

Savannah Indians Challenge Crackers For Special Series

Word comes from the direction of Savannah that Perry Lipe's Indians, pennant winners in the Sally League, are earnestly desirous of playing a post-season series with the Crackers, following the last game of the Southern League season, September 6.

It seems the Indians, feeling pretty cocky over their own achievements of this year, and recalling the licking handed the Crackers by Chattanooga on a former occasion, when Atlanta consented to meet a smaller league club, are to be the challengers.

Manager Smith said this morning he was going to take the matter up with the directors of the local club to-day and would soon know if the series could be arranged.

Third Base Job Is a Cinch One

Art Hofman Says So, Anyway

ARTIE HOFMAN, the one-time great utility player on the old Cub machine, more lately a Pirate gardener, and still more recently a man of all work for the Vols, having performed creditably in every infield position, except shortfield, in the two months he has been with that club, thinks the third base job is the easiest on a team.

Some time ago Artie gave the last cushion the "once over" and passed it up as "nuts to crack for any ordinary ball player," to use his own expression. For giving the big laugh to third base, Artie is aware that the woods are full of ball players and sport scribes who will be howling to have him locked in the room so recently vacated by Harry Thaw. But the one-time Cub has spent considerable time cavorting around the hot corner and has his own convictions.

Here's the way Artie has it all doped out:

"This third base, instead of being the hardest position in the infield, in my opinion is the easiest. Figure how many batters ever reach first base in a game. Still less see second and by the time you get over to third, not many get that far. How many games do you read of in which it says: 'Only one man got as far as second?' Not all of them, of course, but it happens most every day, in some league.

"I guess I've seen a bunch of ball games in my time, and in lots of them the third baseman didn't get his hands on the ball but three or four times. There are mighty few 'inside hitters' in the game to-day, and where they get all this stuff about third base being the hardest position on the infield is 'by me.' What about all those ugly hops the shortstop and second baseman have to handle, to say nothing of the low and wide heaves to first—and I ought to know, because I have been in all those places myself.

"The only time a third baseman is really in trouble is when first and second are occupied, with nobody down. That's something else again, for the batter is almost certain to bunt. But if he has a smart pitcher and a clever first baseman there is a chance that all he has to do is stay on the bag and take the throw for a force play."

UNIVERSITY DROPS FOOTBALL.

LANCASTER, PA., Aug. 27.—Having been notified that Susquehanna University, of Selinsgrove, has abandoned its football schedule for the coming season, which included a game in Lancaster on September 27, with Franklin and Marshall College, the athletic authorities of the latter institution have arranged for the Pennsylvania Military College, of Chester, to fill that date.

"We'll Accomplish the Miracle of Modern Baseball," Says Rube Marquard

By Rube Marquard

I F we Giants justify our belief in ability to win a third consecutive pennant, Manager McGraw will be in a position next year to accomplish the miracle of modern diamond history—four flags in a row.

Looking back through history we find that few clubs have maintained winning consistently for more than two successive years. The Cubs, uncer Frank Chance, were a wonderful collection of brains and playing skill. They reeled off three straight championships and came back for a fourth after dropping behind Pittsburg in 1909. Throughout the five campaigns practically the same team had remained intact. When it broke, it split wide open, as evidenced this year.

Jimmy Collins, old Boston American, went to smithereens after two successful campaigns in 1903 and 1904. The Giants won easy races in 1904 and 1905. I have often heard McGraw say that he was never so sure of a pennant as in 1906, when injury and sickness wrecked what appeared a sure-fire third straight win. Yet, the bulwarks of the old-time Giants had crumbled from age. McGraw came out of the wreck with an aggregation of entirely new blood.

I have been told that McGraw's experience of 1906 was responsible for many of his most successful methods now employed. He determined never again to be caught without a reserve force strong enough to plug any emergency gap. He realized the importance of speed on attack. Speed and youth usually travel hand in hand.

With the possible exception of the Athletics no team of modern times has remained so well fortified against the future, at the close of three successive campaigns, as McGraw's crew. The Athletics, through sheer overconfidence, overlooked a great chance for a third straight pennant last year.

Connie Mack has a grand team of youth and ability that is likely to last for a number of campaigns to come. Still I do not believe that Connie Mack to-day boasts the strength of McGraw.

I am confident that the Giants will beat the Athletics this year, if these old rivals clash in the world's series. Outside the batteries, the teams are about as evenly matched as could be imagined.

We have far the better balanced batteries, Meyers and McLean for all-round efficiency and hitting ability will outshine Lapp and Schang. Schang, of course, is far speedier than either of New York's celebrated backstops.

Our club has all the call on pitchers, though. Bender and Plank, the great mainstays of the Athletics, have both been overworked, and are not likely to have an opportunity to rest up for the season. Jack Coombs is strictly out of it, they tell me.

Mack is not likely to stake his chances on young pitchers who have been very erratic. Two overworked veterans will have to stand the attack of four or five pitchers who have shown wonderful pitching consistency throughout the season.

FODDER FOR FANS

Every team in the second division in the National League lost yesterday, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago winning.

* * *

As a result of victories by the Pirates and Cubs both teams are still tied for third place in the National League.

* * *

The New York Yankees have bade farewell to the West this season, after dropping three out of four games to the Naps.

* * *

* * *

"Big pitchers" is now the standing order to big league scouts. The magnates have found the big men can stand more work than the little ones.

* * *

"Babe" Adams, the Pirates' twirler, not only pitched a shutout game against the Braves, but got a two-bagger as well.

* * *

Bobby Byrne, the former Pirate, got into the game for the Phillies Tuesday, playing third base. He got a run and a hit.

* * *

Linn Scroggins, a southpaw recruit, started for the White Sox, but proved easy picking for the Senators, who beat Chicago 5 to 3.

* * *

"Josh" Billings, catcher for the Quincy, Ill., team in the Three I League, has been secured by the Clevelands.

* * *

Pitcher George Davis, of the Rochester, N. Y., team in the International League, has been secured by the Braves. Davis was formerly with the New York Yankees.

Triples by Archer and Saier beat the Dodgers.

MULFORD'S PUEGOT CAR OUT OF BIG RACE

ELGIN, ILL., Aug. 27.—Automobile racing fans were handed a disappointment to-day when the announcement was made that Ralph Mulford was unable to get his Puegot car ready for Saturday's race here. Mulford will drive a Mason on both days of the race meet.

The Puegot which Mulford was to drive was piloted to first place by Jules Goux at Indianapolis this year in the 500-mile international sweepstakes race.

The fastest practice lap on the 8 1-2-mile course was credited to Joe Dawson, winner of the 1912 500-mile race at Indianapolis. He sent his Marmon around the course in 7 minutes and 13 seconds. Spencer Wishart drove the distance in his Mercer five seconds slower than Dawson.

PLAYER BREAKS JAW.

EVANSVILLE, IND., Aug. 27.—Punch Knoll, of the Evansville Central League, broke his jaw yesterday afternoon during the game played here with Fort Wayne.

LANGFORD STOPS FLINN IN FOUR ROUNDS AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Sam Langford scored a knockout over "Porky" Flinn in four rounds at the Atlas Athletic Association last night. Ten seconds before the bell sounded in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a twelve-round bout, a right jab to the jaw landed and Flinn went down for the count.

It was Langford's first bout since his return from Australia. He received a surprise in the first round when Flinn with a smashing left sent him to the mat.

EDWARDS FANS FOURTEEN.

ROYSTON, GA., Aug. 27.—In the second of the series with Elberton, Royston yesterday won by a score of 7 to 0. The features of the game was the heavy hitting of the Royston team and the superb pitching of Edwards, who fanned fourteen men and gave up two hits. Elberton used three pitchers.

MORE GAMES FOR LAGRANGE.

LAGRANGE, GA., Aug. 27.—Not satisfied with a full season of regular league baseball the LaGrange fans are planning to have baseball games every week until October 1. The initial game of a five-game series to decide the town championship was played to-day, resulting in a score of 19 to 2 in favor of the Northwest club against the Southeast club.

RINGSIDE NEWS

George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will go through with their ten-round go at Terre Haute, Ind., on Labor Day. Tommy Walsh, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that George is getting in great shape for the mill. This will be the fourth meeting between the rival middleweights.

* * *

Frank Madole, the American lightweight, who is in Paris, writes that he is tired of traveling in Europe and will be home any day. Madole tells of several of his experiences. He was forced to box three men in two weeks, going twenty rounds in one, and losing by the decision route.

* * *

Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight, is back in the Missouri city from his trip to Los Angeles. Trendall left for the coast about a month ago to get a match with Leach Cross, but Matty Baldwin beat him to the big plum. Harry refused to take on any of the second-raters, so left for home.

* * *

The death of "Bull" Young has put the boxing game on the coast in a bad light. It will probably be some time before the heavyweights don the padded mitts out West again.

* * *

Sam McVey, who claims Paris as his home, has returned to that city from Australia, and the chances are that a twenty-round bout may be arranged between him and Jack Johnson. McVey is a big favorite with the Parisians and a bout between him and Johnson would draw a record house.

* * *

Young Eppy will meet Matty McCue in Racine, Wis., instead of Pittsburg on Labor Day. The match, which had been hanging fire for a week, was clinched yesterday. The two will weigh in at 122 pounds.

* * *

Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo lightweight, is after a match with Tommy Murphy. Duffy has wired Jim Coffroth asking for the Admission Day date with the Harlem boy.

LEW HARDAGE TO COACH MERCER FOOTBALL TEAM

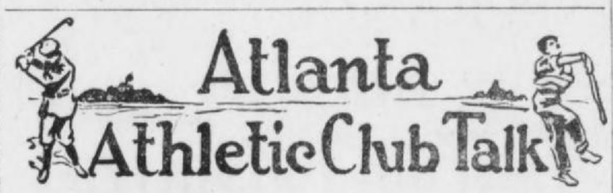

MACON, GA., Aug. 27.—Lew Hardage, former Vanderbilt football star, has signed to coach the Mercer University eleven during the coming season. Acting President Sellers makes the announcement. Hardage succeeds Dr. C. C. Stroud, who has accepted the physical directorship of Louisiana State University.

HAUSER OUT FOR THE SEASON.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Arnold Hauser, the St. Louis shortstop, feels confident he will recover the full use of his injured leg for next season, but Manager Huggins says he won't be able to play any this year.

PITCHER ROSE TO YANKEES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Manager Frank Chance announced last night the purchase of Pitcher Rose, of the Houston (Texas) League club. Rose, it was announced, would report September 10.

Walter DuBard is keen for the basketball season to start. He says that the club team will be much stronger this season than it was last fall.

* * *

"Pie" Weaver is expected back from a short vacation to-day. "Pie" is confident of earning a regular berth on the basketball team this fall.

* * *

Coach Joe Bean has just announced that the training table for the basketballers will start October 15.

* * *

The golf "bugs" still are talking about the "80" that Tick Tichenor turned in last Saturday. It was a remarkable score inasmuch as the "far-away" driving tees now are being used.

* * *

Why not a golf match this fall between the Athletic Club and the Capital City Club players? The players of the clubs should meet on the links in a tournament at least once a year.

* * *

The handball regulars are at it every day, preferably about noon. There usually is a terrific cut-throat match on among three celebrated players who shall be nameless for the present, and they are getting accustomed to a "gallery."

* * *

Another regular feature is 'Gene Kelley. 'Gene is training for a person named Smith, and he is not loafing on the job. He also is doing some wrestling, but it is not understood that he is plotting any roughhouse tactics for the prospective engagement.

* * *

'Gene is not lonely in his training. The person named Smith is to be found exploding the W. & D. pellets about the same time. Carleton's training fancies are more inclusive. He usually is to be found in a foursome, while 'Gene takes it out on some single partner.

* * *

Entrants are filing their names with the club bulletin board for the Cotton States Tennis Championships, to be played the week of September 8 on the East Lake clay courts. Club members find that a convenient method of entering. Out of town contestants are sending their names to Carleton Y. Smith, 608 Walton Building. The list is growing daily.

YOUNG SAYLOR IS OUT LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27.—Young Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, who has placed himself under the wing of Ray Bronson, is most anxious to get a crack at either Freddie Welsh or Willie Ritchie, and has offered to take the place of Welsh against the champion at Vancouver on Labor Day.

Saylor recently defeated Mickey McIntyre at Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, giving away 10 pounds in weight. He is a fine young lightweight, having met most of the stars of that class.

TO STAGE POLO TOURNEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—John B. Miller, chairman of the Pacific Coast section of the American Polo Association, plans to stage a world-wide competition during the 1915 exposition in San Francisco. He hopes to construct a magnificent turf polo field within the grounds of the exposition and invite England, India, Hawaii, Argentine Republic, Brazil and Australia, in addition to the American poloists.

BEAVERS STARTS CAMPAIGN ON AUTO NOISE

Police Instructed to Arrest All Motorists Who Violate City's Muffler Ordinance.

Declaring that the auto muffler cut-out ordinance is one of the most wantonly and flagrantly violated of the city statutes, Police Chief Beavers Wednesday said he intended to use every means at his command to enforce it.

The Chief has issued a special order to the entire police force instructing a rigid enforcement of the muffler law. Cases are to be made against every offender, no matter who he may be. The Chief is determined to bring relief from the nuisance, and said he is satisfied a few cases and stiff fines in Police Court will bring wonderful improvement.

In discussing the nuisance, the Chief took occasion to commend the editorial in The Georgian a few days ago relative to the necessity for a strict enforcement of this law for the protection of citizens.

"This muffler cut-out ordinance is a law, and it must be enforced as long as it remains on the statute books," said the Chief. "In my opinion it is a good law, for the noise made by the cutting out of mufflers, particularly at night, is an abomination, and for the reason that it is absolutely unnecessary to the running of a car. The cutting out of the muffler has no perceptible effect on the car—but it does have a perceptible effect on people who are trying to get a good night's sleep.

"The noise from the cars is not so bad in the day time, as the rumble of other vehicles and trolley cars serves to drown it out to a material extent. But at night, after the city has quieted down, the muffler cut-out is certainly a nerve-racking nuisance. It is worse in the summer, because of the great number of autos in the streets and the fact that people sleep with their windows open, thus receiving the full benefit of the distracting din as the speeding cars whiz past."

Considerable complaint of late has been made by citizens of different parts of the city, and these will receive with joy the news of the warfare started by Chief Beavers.

Troops Called to Prevent Gambling

PORTER, IND., Aug. 27.—Two companies of State troops were held in readiness to-day to invade the Mineral Springs race track, where a meeting is being held, should there be further gambling there at this afternoon's races. In ordering the troops at Elkhart and South Bend to be ready to move on the race course and take possession, Governor Ralston explained that he had reports of violations of the State gambling laws.

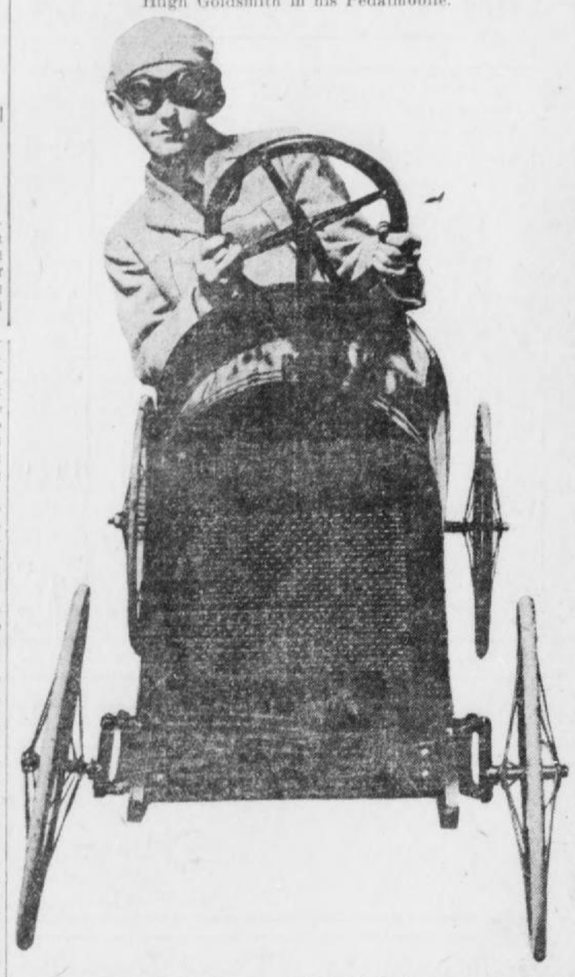

Fan Roots So Loudly He Loses His Voice

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 27.—Ernest Wellman, a fan of this city, cheered so loudly over a wonderful catch made by a Grand Rapids outfielder that he has lost his voice.

Physicians declare he so injured his vocal cords that it is hardly likely that he will be able to speak again.

PEDALMOBILE RACES ATTRACT YOUNGSTERS

Hugh Goldsmith in his Pedalmobile.

13-Year-Old Boy Wins First Georgian Car in Less Than Three Days.

Hundreds of Georgian boys and girls are hustling in subscriptions to Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian in their efforts to win a pedalmobile and participate in the pedalmobile races which will take place soon.

Little 13-year old Hugh Goldsmith is already the happy possessor of the first car, which he won in less than three days' time. Hugh says he won his car by getting up early in the morning and hustling and has named his car "Flatt" after the car owned by the great smiling Hughie Hughes, who won fame in the Vanderbilt Cup race and also in the 500-mile races. Hugh Goldsmith expects to win the same fame in The Georgian pedalmobile races.

Applications are now being received from all sections of the South and supplies will be mailed the applicants in turn. In the meantime, future contenders are urged to get promises together and it will be an easy matter to round them all up when the blanks are received. Subscriptions can be taken in the towns where the paper is delivered by carrier and the subscriber may pay the agent at the end of each week, but mail subscriptions must be paid in advance.

Boys and girls who have not entered the pedalmobile club should start to-day. Fill out the application blank, bring or mail it to The Georgian office, 20 East Alabama street, and the pedalmobile man will give you full details as to how you can win one of thees handsome little cars.

MEN SPEAKERS TO URGE VOTES FOR WOMEN

Plans Completed for Open Discussion of Suffrage in Georgia Senate Chamber.

Arrangements have been completed for the open suffrage meeting in the Senate Chamber Friday night at 8 o'clock. There will be several noted speakers on the program.

The three principal speakers have been announced, though the full program has not been made public. A feature of the evening will be the address of welcome by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. A. M. Hughlett, Dr. M. C. Hardin and Attorney Leonard J. Grossman. Especial interest attaches to the appearance of Dr. M. C. Hardin, who scored heavily in the suffrage debate at Gainesville. Dr. Hardin never has been heard before an Atlanta audience on the suffrage question.

Men's leagues for the enfranchisement of Georgia women will be discussed by Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, who soon will announce plans for the organization of a Georgia Men's Equal Suffrage League.

The meeting Friday night will be the first gathering of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association since its charter was approved by Judge Pendleton.

With the success of the meeting assured, the State-wide campaign will be in full swing, with local leagues in every county in Georgia. The committee on arrangements for the open meeting is made up of the following: Mrs. Amelia Woodall, president of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association; Miss Margaret Koch, Mrs. A. C. Daniels and Miss E. Estill.

Christian Conference To Plan Vice Cures

The program for the Southern Christian Citizenship conference which will be held in the Auditorium from September 19 to 21, inclusive, is practically complete, according to announcement Wednesday. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Civic League of America and will outline remedies for various evils.

Among the various interesting topics which will be discussed at the conference will be "The Co-operation of the Family, the Church and the State," "The Moral Personality of the State," "Social Environment and Moral Progress" and "Divorce and Social Welfare."

SCOTT MAY NOT AGAIN DIRECT RAILROAD

Augusta Hears That Georgia General Manager's Retirement Will Be Permanent.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 27.—Whether the "temporary retirement" of General Manager T. K. Scott, of the Georgia Railroad, means that he will resume charge when he gets well, or whether it means that Mr. Scott is being permanently forced out of the position, is a matter of speculation in Augusta. Ever since the strike of the trainmen and conductors on the Georgia Railroad last fall there have been persistent rumors that there would be a change in the management of the Georgia Railroad. It has been estimated that the strike cost the road near $500,000, but whether or not that has been charged against Mr. Scott by the Louisville and Nashville officials has never been ascertained.

While the strike was in progress Messrs. Gregg and Murdock, representing the conductors and trainmen, respectively, issued a statement in which they said that they did their utmost to get a conference with Mr. Scott in his Atlanta hotel just prior to the strike to negotiate with him and try to avert the tie-up of the Georgia trains, but that he persistently refused to see them.

Mr. Scott has been general manager of the Georgia for about twenty years. He is now nearing 70 years. His friends assert positively that it is purely because of his ill health, due principally to the infirmities of age, that he has relinquished the management temporarily to J. H. Ellis, secretary of the L. & N.

Cigarettes Blamed For Lack of Humor

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Declaring that American humor is on the wane and the reason is that nearly all of the men who try to make the nation laugh smoke cigarettes, Miss Lucy Page Gaston, superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette League, and known over the entire country for her tireless efforts against cigarettes, wrote a warning to the American Press Humorists' Association, now in session at Peoria, Ill.

Miss Gaston said that in order to save American humor she would administer free of charge her mouth wash cigarette cure to any of the newspaper funny men who would accept.

Father Who Whipped Wayward Girl Freed

MACON, Aug. 27.—One week after his mother died of pellagra and ten days after he had attempted to commit suicide, W. J. Bettis, a carpenter, was tried before the Recorder, charged by his 15-year-old daughter with cruelly beating her with a strap and threatening to cut her throat.

Bettis claimed that his daughter had become wayward and the daughter herself admitted indiscreet conduct. The charges against the father were dismissed. The girl refused to return home. She probably will be sent to a reformatory.

Food Probers for Ellis Island Named

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti has appointed Richard H. Taylor immigration inspector in field service, stationed in this city; James T. Hughes, assistant immigration inspector at Philadelphia, and P. L. Prentis, immigration inspector in charge at Chicago, to compose the board of inquiry which will at once begin an investigation of conditions at the immigration station at Ellis Island, N. Y.

It was charged immigrants were fed bad food.

Former Bailiff Fails In Suicide Attempt

Following the alleged loss of $500 in a business deal, James W. Hutchins, No. 396 South McDaniel street, made a desperate attempt at suicide Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. That the attempt failed was due, it is said, to the combined efforts of Hutchins' wife and sister and Call Officers Milam and Palmer.

Hutchins, who was formerly a bailiff, shot a negro while placing him under arrest about three years ago and was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder. He was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, but secured a new trial from the Court of Appeals. He is now out on bond pending his second arraignment.

Delta Special Leaves For National Karnea

Eleven members of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity left Tuesday afternoon on a special car over the Louisville and Nashville for Indianapolis to attend the Karnea, the national convention of the fraternity, which will be in session at the Severin Hotel from August 28 to August 30.

Deltas at Knoxville, Tenn., and Lexington, Ky., will join the Atlanta car. Those comprising the party were Kenyon B. Zahner, T. B. Bean and J. S. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta; D. T. Deen and Ed Jordan, Waycross; H. H. Hudson, East Point; J. M. and H. S. Cowart, Arlington; J. H. C. Claussen, E. G. Jordan and E. R. Pund.

If there has ever been confusion in your mind concerning the qualities of a worthy Six, your questions will be fully answered after you have driven this "SIX".

And even if you are aware what some good sixes can do, you will enjoy a greater glow of satisfaction when you drive this car.

As you sit behind the alluringly smooth and responsive motor, no one will need to tell you why you like it. You will know perfectly well.

The instant and full answer to your call for increased speed or power, the sure and perfect response to your control, the quietness, the absence of vibration, the sheer thorough-bred ability of this "SIX" to do all its work without strain or perceptible effort—these things will prove a never-ending delight.

It is as hard adequately to describe this "SIX" as it is always difficult to describe any new and more perfect instrument.

BUT—the Studebaker "SIX" will win you, as sure as ever you sit behind the wheel.

Buy It Because It's a Studebaker

Studebaker "Six" Engineering

The design of a fine six-cylinder car, especially in the motor, calls for exceptional skill and wide experience.

Efficiency at all speeds and the absence of vibration, which are the unique advantages of a worthy Six, can only be attained by the most scientific engineering.

To attain perfect results we use experimental laboratories of large size and full equipment, where every idea built into the Studebaker "SIX" has been proved correct beyond the possibility of error.

We work by knowledge, not by theory.

Every ton of steel we buy is first made according to Studebaker formulas and later rigorously tested to be sure it is up to standard.

Throughout the manufacture, which is carried on entirely in our plants, from forty huge power hammers which forge out over 250 parts for every Studebaker "SIX", to the last operation, accurate to the one-thousandth of an inch, the "SIX" is built with a scrupulous regard for fine work and the best materials.

Studebaker Standards of Luxury

From the beautifully balanced chassis to the deep upholstery and complete equipment, the "SIX" shows careful attention to appearance and comfort.

It is, of course, electrically lighted and started.

The auxiliary seats, making ample room for six-passengers, are exceedingly comfortable and yet may readily be folded to one side.

The painting is lustrous, requiring twenty-four operations, including many days of drying and aging, before it is finished.

We use Studebaker-Jiffy storm curtains, the most ingenious improvement ever made in automobile curtains.

The Studebaker "SIX" is a car of complete comfort and strikingly handsome appearance.

Poultry, Plants and Seeds.

H. G. HASTINGS & CO., SEEDS, BULBS AND POULTRY SUPPLIES. BOTH PHONES 2568. IF YOU LIVE ON THE NORTH SIDE OR SOUTH SIDE, LET US HAVE YOUR ORDER BEFORE 9 O'CLOCK; OR, IF YOU ARE IN INMAN PARK OR WEST END, GIVE YOUR ORDER BEFORE 2 O'CLOCK, AND THEY WILL BE DELIVERED THE SAME DAY WE RECEIVE THEM. PLEASE BEAR THIS IN MIND, AND I WILL INSURE YOU PROMPT SERVICE.

WE HAVE gotten in our first importation of Bulbs, and they are the largest and best we have had for years. We import all of our Bulbs from France and Holland, and they come from the best growers. It is time now to plant Paper White Narcissus, White Roman Hyacinths and Freesias. If you plant Bulbs get your stock from Hastings and you know you are getting the best.

THE BEST AUTHORITIES on poultry raising claim that hens should be fed very little corn during the molt, and that which is the very best feed during the molting season. It is usually pretty hard to get good, sound wheat at a reasonable price. We have bought four hundred bushels of extra fine stock, and as long as it lasts we will sell it at $1.50 per bushel. You had better get a bag of this.

IF YOU LOVE CANARY BIRDS it will pay you to come to our store and see the beautiful lot of songsters we have. They certainly are little beauties and going at $2.50 each. Guaranteed singers.

ATLANTAN HELD ON CHARGE OF BIGAMY

W. F. Lee Arrested at Hattiesburg, Miss., With Bride, Said To Be Third Wife.

MOBILE, Aug. 27.—W. F. Lee, a young attorney who claims Atlanta as his home and who came to Mobile last Thursday from Milton, Fla., with pretty 19-year-old Dovie Smith and married her, to-day is under arrest in Hattiesburg, Miss., whence he had gone with his bride. He is accused of bigamy. When Miss Smith married Lee she had known him three months.

Chief of Police Frank W. Crenshaw received a warrant Tuesday for the arrest of Lee and a letter from Judge H. B. Daniels, of Swainsboro, Ga., giving the record of the man whose arrest was sought. Judge Daniels stated that Lee had married into one of the best families of Bullock County and that his wife later received a divorce, but no decree was issued to Lee. Judge Daniels also stated that Lee had gone to Knoxville, Tenn., where he had married a young school teacher.

from Mobile to Hattiesburg and re-

Chief Crenshaw traced the couple quested Lee's arrest. The chief then notified the girl's brother, who wired that he would send transportation for her from Hattiesburg to Pensacola, where he resides.

Lee was arrested here Thursday afternoon upon the request of Miss Smith's brother, but was later freed when the brother and mother reluctantly consented by long distance telephone to the marriage. Late in the evening Lee secured a marriage license and the couple wer married by the Rev. O. C. McGehee, of the St. Francis Street Methodist Church.

The Smith girl says she will not desert Lee. She says she believes him when he says he was properly divorced from his Georgia wife.

OBITUARY

The body of Sidney O. Gautier, who died Tuesday, was sent Wednesday to Crescent City, Fla., for funeral and interment. He was 24 years old.

The funeral of James J. Lockhart, who died late Tuesday, was held Wednesday morning from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Interment was at Oakland Cemetery.

Mrs. Lucile Graham Wilholt, No. 15 East North avenue, died late Tuesday. She is survived by her husband, J. F. Wilholt, one small child, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Graham, and one brother, William Graham. The body was removed to the home of her parents, No. 354 Ponce DeLeon avenue. Funeral announcements will be made later.

Mrs. Etta E. Evans, 49 years old, No. 1 Ashland avenue, died Tuesday night. Surviving her are her husband, J. P. Evans, one daughter, Miss Otis Evans, and three sons, J. T., L. W. and D. E. Evans. Funeral announcements later.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "London is busy with the fortnightly settlement. There is but little interest taken in American stocks at the present time. London is threatened by a strike of 200,000 men in the building trades. The statement of the Bank of Germany was favorable, and general improvement is shown in the monetary conditions in other parts of Europe.

"Information channels favor a trading position. We would look for fair buying opportunities with the intention to hold for substantial profits, unless adverse occurrences warrant the acceptance of smaller returns."

COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—In response to a sharp rise in August at New Orleans that position in New York Cotton Exchange at the opening was 20 points higher, with other positions at a net advance of 4 to 8 points from Tuesday's final. Sentiment was extremely against the market. A good many reports were in circulation, showing deterioration in some parts of the eastern belt; also in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The market, however, lost ground immediately after the opening and prices shaded some 4 to 8 points from the opening.

August failed to maintain the initial gain and dropped 18 points without stopping.

The selling was probably based on a condition report by a prominent local spot interest, placing conditions at 73.9 per cent, against The Commercial-Appeal's estimate of 69.6 per cent. The bearish influence of this and indicated showers in the Western belt was offset by the bullish condition figures of the national ginners' report of 69.3 per cent, being 3 point under the lowest percentage given the crop this season. The ring who played for a reaction yesterday looked short and ran to cover, followed by aggressive buying from strong sources and there was very little for sale. Prices continued to advance, and after the call the entire list had established new high levels for the present upward movement, being 14 to 16 points better than the previous close. August was apparently dormant.

COTTON GOSSIP

Theodore H. Price says: "It now seems altogether probable that cotton will be carried much higher than the facts warrant, and they certainly justify at least 12 cents for new crop deliveries in New York."

* * *

Weld makes the condition of the crop 73.9 per cent, which is considered rather bearish, considering the low percentage of 69.6, given the crop by The Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

* * *

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—Conditions have been generally favorable and cotton shows improvement of a month ago when it was 79.5. Beneficial rains have produced a large plant and well fruited, but much depends upon a late killing frost, since the season is about two weeks late. Drouth in some sections has caused shedding, but aside from this there is very little complaint. Picking will be general about September 10. Too much rain in some sections has caused a large weed at the expense of fruit, but many correspondents look for a yield beyond the average.

"South Carolina—Continued dry weather in many sections has caused the cotton to shed. The plant generally is strong and well fruited, and with timely rains and a late frost a large crop is expected. It is only the late planted cotton that is suffering for rain. There are no complaints of insect damage and the crop is in a good state of cultivation. Percentage condition shows some improvement over a month ago when it was 76.6.

"Georgia—Cotton has about maintained its condition as compared with a month ago when it was 79.5. This is between 5 and 6 points better than a year ago at this time. The crop is spotted, owing to late planting, which has suffered considerably from drouth. Many localities report a perfect season, with plant of average size, healthy and heavily fruited. There is a marked absence of damage by insects, but young cotton has suffered from shedding. Picking has already commenced and will be quite general by September 1. Labor is ample and the only requisites for a big crop are more rain and a late killing frost."

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows increasing cloudiness, and more general rains in the western States and Arkansas within three days, increasing prospects of showery weather also in the central belt.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Last year, before the crop began to move in volume, the rings discounted a moderate yield and a large requirement. Speculative apathy throughout the season was the result. This year the same program has been initiated. Basic conditions, however, are different.

"Last year a great deal of forward business was done early in the season, and the presence of many long hedges proved a bulwark of contract market strength. This year spinners have not been buying ahead in the usual volume and the demand for long hedges has been limited. When speculators began to lift the market under the influence of crop damage reports from the west, hedge sellers in the west supplied the contracts required.

"Thus on the face of the returns the hedge interest is short this year, whereas, at this time last year it was long. Another fact the talent should not overlook is that this year's cotton market starts out after two years of remarkable mill trade activity. But the basic law of commodity market is against it."

LAGRANGE'S FIRST BALE SELLS FOR 12 1-2 CENTS

LA GRANGE, Aug. 27.—The first bale of the crop of 1913 cotton was brought in from the plantation of J. B. Bass, a few miles south of town.

The bale, which weighed 504 pounds and classed as good middling, was bought by the aLGrange Cotton Company for 12½c, and consigned to Denison's mill here, where it will be manufactured into goods at once.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The grain markets were all stronger and fractionally higher this morning on improved buying and rather light offerings. There were gains of ⅛ in wheat, ⅛ to ½c in corn and ⅛ to ¼c in oats. The wheat was stronger on an oversold condition, corn was helped by the continued dry weather in the Southwest, and oats were helped by corn.

Provisions were steady to a shade higher.

STOCKS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A new low mark on its present movement was reached to-day by New York, New Haven and Hartford when it sold down to 32 at the opening of the stock market. This was a decline of 2 points. The list was irregular, but the tone was heavy on account of possible decided developments in the Mexican situation within the next 24 hours.

Among the losses were: American Can, ¼; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Pennsylvania, ⅛; New York Central, ⅛; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, ⅛; and Canadian Pacific, ⅜. The gains included: United States Steel common, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅛; Reading, ⅜; Chino Copper, ¼; Baltimore and Ohio, ⅜; and American Locomotive, ⅛.

The curb was quiet.

No Wood
No Hoops
No Hard Work

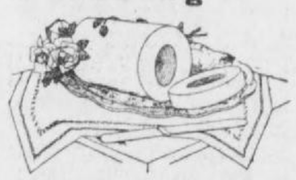

$1.95 POSTPAID 15 DAYS' TRIAL 2-QUART SIZE $1.95

PACK IT THAT'S ALL

For the ICE-KIST all you have to do is to pour in the cream, sherbet or whatever refreshment it may be, and pack in the ice as in the ordinary freezer. Then the work is ended. There is no working a dasher, no turning a handle or crank, no straining your arms and back, no opening the freezer to "see" if it is freezing, no extra packing in of ice. All you do after packing is to open the freezer and serve the refreshment. It saves work, time, trouble and—you.

Perfect Freezing

The Ice-Kist has no dasher or crank because it has two freezing surfaces. The old-fashioned freezer had only one freezing surface—that is why a crank and dasher were necessary. The Ice-Kist has a metal freezing tube that extends directly through the cream to the bottom. This gives the two freezing surfaces. The cold penetrates from the center and from the outside, too. The cream is frozen with a smoothness that will delight you.

Special 15-Day Offer

We want you to know the joy of having an Ice-Kist Crankless Freezer in your home. We will send it post-paid upon the return of the coupon together with $1.95—our introductory price. If, after trying the ICE-KIST for 15 days, you are not delighted with it, return it and we will return the $1.95. Don't let the coupon get lost. Send it NOW.

Education—the First Duty of Government

The Most Important Institutions in the Country Are the Public Schools—the Gymnasiums of Human Brains.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We wish to discuss with our readers in this and in later editions of this newspaper the great and serious question of education.

It is a question as broad as the ocean, and as deep. It is a question so vast that organized discussion of it seems hopeless.

The greatest minds of the world have devoted their powers to the intricate question of development of the human brain, and the problem has been scarcely touched.

The greatest works on education in the history of the world are undoubtedly Plato's "Republic," Spencer's "Education" and Rousseau's "Emile." The last is the greatest of all. It should be read by every father and mother and by every earnest citizen.

Other works that may be earnestly recommended are Aristotle's "Politics," Pestalozzi's "How Gertrude Teaches Her Children" and Froebel's "Education of Man."

To Rousseau undoubtedly belongs the high honor of having thought and written most powerfully, most originally and most practically on the greatest of problems. His brain is the cornerstone of the structure of intelligent educational methods.

He foreshadowed in his "Emile" Fourier's splendid principle of "attractive industry."

THE PROGRESS OF HUMANITY DEPENDS UPON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE HUMAN BRAIN THROUGH EDUCATION.

Man is far from the animal in proportion as his brain is cultivated. Even the animals themselves rank in their kingdom in proportion to their brain activity.

William T. Harris said truly: "If man had let himself alone he would have remained the monkey that he was. Not only this, but if the monkey had let himself alone he would have remained a lemur, or a bat, or a bear, or some other creature that now offers only a faint suggestion of what the ape has become."

The elephant and the ape, among our humble animal brothers, appear to have reached their limits of possibility in the way of educational development. They still remain, and always will remain, vastly inferior to their microscopic comrades—the ants and bees and other insects.

The human race has barely begun the systematic study of the problem of application, and systematic application of the truths discovered and agreed upon. In proportion to our stature and possibilities we are hideous ignoramuses compared with the ant in the garden path.

The education of children is regulated not by their brain formation and possible development, but by the wealth of their parents, the parsimony of municipalities, the baleful influences of tradition and the colossally stupid idea that thorough brain cultivation is in some way antagonistic to material success.

The greatness of a nation depends upon the average mental power of the nation's citizens, and mental power depends absolutely upon education.

The ignorant man who has succeeded through natural force and lucky opportunity is fond of asking these questions:

"What is the good of education? Of what practical use is scientific knowledge?" These men are admirably answered by Herbert Spencer, to whose work they are referred.

A collection of Englishmen ruined themselves in the sinking of mines in search of coal. They might have saved their money had they known that a certain fossil which they dug up in abundance belongs to a geological stratum below which no coal is ever found. They went on digging cheerfully and wasting their money. An acquaintance with that fossil and its meaning would have saved their cash.

Some individuals spent one hundred thousand dollars trying to save the alcoholic byproduct that distills from bread in baking. They would have saved their money had they known that only a hundredth part of the flour is changed through fermentation.

The study of biology is essential in the successful fattening of cattle.

An "entozoon" seems to the practical man a foolish, imaginary creature. But millions of sheep have been saved by the discovery that one of these fancy scientific entozoa, pressing on the brain, caused the sheep's death. When you know the entozoon you can dig him out and save the sheep's life.

"My son's going to be an artist," says one proud father. "He does not need to study a lot of scientific rubbish."

This parent does not know that the difference between a good and a bad sculptor or painter is often based on knowledge or ignorance of anatomy and mechanical principles.

Education is important to the individual because it means development of the brain, development of capacity for production and increased chances of success.

EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO THE STATE BECAUSE IT MEANS NOT ONLY COMPETENT CITIZENS, BUT MORAL CITIZENS.

The animal in us yields to the influence of education. Knowledge and brutality are enemies. They do not dwell together.

The most important institutions in this country are the public schools—the gymnasiums of human brains. The most important citizens of the nation are the teachers.

The greatest criminals are the employers of child labor, because they deny education, cut down in childhood the citizen's chance of progress and success.

Work and vote for more and better public schools.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Is Our Blood in Its Composition and Temperature the Counterpart of the Water of the Ocean, Whence, They Say, All Life Sprang?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SCIENCE boasts of its exactness, and properly so. Yet there is no speculator comparable in boldness with the man of science who is endowed at the same time with the scent for precision and the gift of imagination.

One of the most daring scientific speculations with which I am acquainted is that of a French physiologist, R. Quinton, who ventures to assert that the blood which flows in the veins of man and other animals derives its peculiar temperature (which hardly varies more than ten degrees in all the host of vertebrate, or back-boned, animals) and its peculiar composition (in which salt always plays a fixed part) from the primeval sea that enveloped the earth in those early ages when life was just beginning on our planet!

Take Out Corpuscles, He Says, and Our Blood Is Sea Water.

Man, says this bold speculator in scientific assets, is a kind of marine aquarium, filled with seawater resembling that of the ancient ocean in which his lower animal ancestors bathed millions of years ago. We call this salty fluid, from which our living cells derive their vitality, "blood;" but deprive the blood of the red and white corpuscles which have developed in it, and all that is left is a "physiological salt solution," precisely like the salty water of the primeval sea, and retaining the same temperature.

In other words, the so-called vital fluid of animals is nothing but sea-water, less salty and hotter than the sea-water of to-day, but retaining the same composition and the same temperature that it had when, ages upon ages ago, the first living creatures of our world emerged from their original home, which was the ocean, and, with new bodies, henceforth sealed up, so that the fluid on which their lives depends can not escape, crawled out upon the land, and gave rise, by gradual evolution, to the higher animals of the present time.

This ancient, life-giving seawater has been handed on from generation to generation, for untold aeons of time, continuing to exist, age after age, in the veins of animals, forever the same in composition and temperature, notwithstanding the innumerable changes of form it has undergone in the ceaseless processes of generation, growth, decay, death and regeneration.

To see how this curious speculation has arisen, let us consider the fact that the first organisms inhabiting the sea (long before there was life on the land) were simple living cells of protoplasm, open in structure and bathed throughout in the warm, salty water which maintained their vitality. As the sea cooled, and became more salty through the influx of mineral substances washed down from the land, it was no longer a suitable abode for many of the progressing animal forms which had been built up by the combination of the original single cells, and these assumed the shape of closed bodies, in which the life-sustaining fluid was locked up, while its original temperature was maintained by physiological action.

Having emerged upon the land these creatures continued in the course of evolution, determined by their new surroundings, and assumed a great variety of higher forms, constantly increasing in complexity or organization, but always retaining the secret of life derived from the sea in the form of a fluid, never varying much from a temperature of about 100 degrees, nor from a composition comprising about seven or eight parts salt to a thousand parts of water.

It is a strange fact that from the poles to the equator all vertebrate animals possess blood of nearly the same temperature and the same degree of saltness, and Quinton avers that this singular uniformity is due to the retention in their bodies, sealed up with membranes, of the ancestral composition of the universal fluid that, at the beginning, nourished the life of their remote predecessors in the sea. If this be so, then our blood is simply an image of the water of the first ocean, at the time when life was developed in it. If we did not possess it we could not continue to live. In a certain sense, then, we may be said still to live bathed internally by the life-giving fluid of the primeval sea.

Looked at in another way, according to Quinton's hypothesis, the blood of vertebrate animals gives geologists a clue to the temperature and composition of the first sea waters. We know that these have changed with the progress of time, the water becoming both salter and colder, besides acquiring other ingredients which it did not possess originally.

Many Scientists Accept This Hypothesis in General.

This strange hypothesis has met with a certain degree of approval from other investigators, whose criticisms of it relate to details but do not attack its general credibility. Thus Professor A. B. Macallum thinks that the blood of the vertebrates represents the sea water at a later period than that assumed by Quinton, but still a period millions of years back of our time, while Dr. A. C. Lane suggests that the blood temperature may have been raised by physiological processes above that of the sea when the animals left it.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Debt

It Is the Ugliest Monster Outside of Crime, She Asserts; It Is a Phase of Shame.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

A MAN who has made a great financial success, somewhat suddenly, is doing much charitable and helpful work for humanity, but he is marring his own character and making trouble for himself and others in the future by one unfortunate habit.

HE NEVER PAYS A DEBT UNTIL FORCED TO DO SO AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Every one who knows the man knows that he is honest and generous. He is sure to pay all he owes and to liquidate every debt, eventually. But, meantime, he causes untold discomfort to his creditors frequently by his delays.

But There Is a Big Leak in the Lifeboat.

Often, while some man to whom he is owing a large bill is needing the money to push along his own affairs, his wealthy debtor is giving liberal sums to aid others or to help some worthy cause.

But there is a leak in the lifeboat of this man which, unless mended, will eventually either sink his craft or damage all its cargo.

No doubt the habit was first formed when he was struggling to make his way; before fortune turned her smiling face upon him. But his very struggles and needs in early life should have made him more consistent in his dealings with his fellow men after he obtained his fortune.

Debt is the ugliest monster on earth outside of crime.

Every young man or woman who is setting forth upon a self-supporting career should keep his mental guns charged and ready to fire upon the ogre the moment it presents its horrid face at the door.

If the habit of debt is once formed, it is almost as difficult to break as alcoholism or the drug habit. The longer it is indulged in the more difficult the cure.

Every parent should teach a child that debt is a phase of shame.

Children Should Be Taught Horror of Debt.

Tell your boy or girl that it is far more respectable to wear old garments and to be unable to present a smart appearance than to go about in clothes which are not paid for, or to indulge in any pleasures or privileges which have made debt a necessity.

Then train them in the way of keeping a careful cash account each day and of balancing up their books at the end of each week. Speak often and repeatedly of the honor which such habits eventually bring and of the corresponding dishonor which follows on the habit of debt.

There are children born into the world with a tendency to be borrowers and even to be thieves, because their fathers were parsimonious and niggardly with their mothers before their birth. And the children received the mental mark of their mothers' unfortunate state of mind.

One such woman longed for certain kinds of food before the birth of her child, and was told by her husband that her longings were extravagant and unreasonable. So persistent were her longings, however, and so small was the expense they entailed, that the unhappy, expectant mother purloined pennies from the pockets of her sleeping master, and when she had obtained the petty sum needed purchased the dainty she desired.

But her child was born with a mania for taking things which did not belong to her; even when she could have them by asking, or possessed money to purchase them, she preferred to steal.

Let Them Learn How to Spend Money Properly.

Men of that niggardly type often force their wives and children into the debt habit. It is astonishing to find how many men of independent means, hold tight the purse strings, and compel their wives to go empty-handed, while given unquestioned right to buy whatever they desire, so long as their purchases are presented to the husband in a bill at the end of the month. Frequently these men make no complaint at extravagance; yet make bitter protest if the wife asks for a small monthly allowance.

Children reared under such conditions have no horror of debt. They have been taught that it is the only way to obtain what they desire. Every boy or girl ought to be given a small weekly or monthly allowance, taught how to spend it wisely, and made to keep a strict account.

With such teaching should go a continual kindly, persistent education on the nobility of independence, and the dishonor of debt.

If children form such ideals before they go out into the world, there is small fear that they will ever form the habit of debt afterward.

EYES AND VOICES

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

EYES and voices of dead friends
Come to me at night and cheer me,
And they seem so very near me
Ere my sleepless vigil ends.

Eyes that once exchanged with mine
Looks of fond regard and feeling
From the earth come softly stealing,
Once again with love to shine.

Voices stilled for many years—
Ah, but I can hear them plainly!
Voices that I longed for vainly,
They have broken from their biers.

Every eye a beacon light
Just beyond the shoals of sorrow,
Pointing out the grand To-morrow,
Every voice a soft delight.

Eyes and voices of dead friends
Come when Memory is complaining,
Sweetly soothing and sustaining,
Till the reign of darkness ends.

AMERICANS MUST LEAVE MEXICO---WILSON

"We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once and should assist them to get away in every way possible. Not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interests, but because it is imperative that they should not take any unnecessary risks if it is physically possible for them to leave the country." :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-:

Frank Attacks Solicitor Dorsey's Arraignment

DORSEY'S SPEECH CALLED UNFAIR

Prisoner Prepares Statement to Combat What He Terms Distotion of Facts.

"Dorsey's speech was as full of holes as a sieve! If I could have had just one hour to reply to his eight-hour address I am confident I could have shown the jury that I was an innocent man and that the Solicitor was misrepresenting the facts in order to obtain a conviction."

This was a statement made by Leo M. Frank to friends who visited him in the jail Wednesday.

"Dorsey twisted and contorted the real circumstances of the case until they were unrecognizable," he continued. "He altered everything that was said and everything that was done until it seemed to point to my guilt. If I could have spoken only briefly after he finished his eight-hour speech I could have shown, I am sure, that he departed from the facts of the case wherever it suited him.

"I am preparing a statement in reply to his argument to the jury which I propose to make public, if my lawyers think it advisable. In it I will point out exactly how the Solicitor warped the testimony and the facts to suit his own convenience. I know that these misstatements of his had their influence with the jury and that is why I am rebelling against the unfairness of the situation."

Frank Still Optimistic.

Frank, according to his friends, was as optimistic as ever Wednesday in regard to the ultimate outcome of his case, but was somewhat downcast over the wave of sentiment against him. He said he could not understand how people could be so certain of his guilt when the testimony was circumstantial in the extreme, except for that of Conley, who was an admitted liar and perjurer.

Rabbi Marx, Emil Selig, Prince Myers, Sig Montag, Milton Kline and Herbert Schiff were among Frank's visitors Wednesday. Mr. Selig, Frank's father-in-law, remained at the Tower from 8:45 until about 11:30.

Schiff brought with him a stenographer from the pencil factory and Frank dictated a number of letters and also some matter in connection with his own case. The former superintendent is compiling in compact form all of the important testimony at the trial so that he more readily may refer to it when he comes to make his reply to Dorsey.

He sent for his diary and for a quantity of paper while Schiff was with him and the two worked together for more than an hour.

An indictment of Jim Conley, charging him with being accessory after the fact in the murder of Mary Phagan will be asked of the first session of the next Gr[illegible]ry, according to the present [illegible] Solicitor General Dorsey.

The new Grand Jury will meet the first week in September, and probably will have the request of the Solicitor for the indictment of Conley

Bad 'Boy' of 63 Is Forced By Father To Sign the Pledge

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The sad story of an erring son has been placed on police court records. William H. Palmer, Jr., is his name. He is a rollicking rake of 63, and his father, William H. Sr., who is 86, called on the police to check William's industry in the sowing of wild oats. Said the father to Judge Sabath:

"I think he should stop sowing wild oats. He drinks a great deal. He comes home and acts like a young colt. I find it difficult to control him. You can see for yourself that he must be hard for me to manage. He weighs 250 pounds, while I weigh only 95. He is out every night carousing, calling on women, and I can't do anything with him.

"I tell him he'll ruin his constitution if he keeps on the way he's going. He always has been a wild, headstrong boy. I want you, Judge, to help me make a man of him. He's got to sign the pledge."

"I agree with you," said the Court, addressing the father. "William is getting to be a big fellow now. It's time he learned to behave himself. I'll give him just one minute to sign the pledge."

Lion on Operating Table at Grady to Have Broken Leg Set

A 3-month-old lion cub is the most unique patient ever treated at the Grady Hospital. It was placed on the operating table for a broken foreleg. Surgeons at Grady set the bones and placed the leg in a plaster cast. The treatment accorded the animal was as carefully given as though it had been a human.

The cub was born at Grant Park. The manner in which it was injured is not known, but it is believed that the bone had not sufficiently hardened to uphold the weight of the animal's body.

When Keeper Bbyd discovered the injury, he bound the leg in splints. The cub tore these off repeatedly, and now the plaster cast has been substituted.

Weevil in Georgia Year Ahead of Time

EUFAULA, Aug. 27.—The first appearance of the boll weevil in Georgia has been reported by Walter Green and F. M. Gay, Quitman County farmers, who have big plantations across the Chattahoochee River from this city. The weevil has been found in different spots and is spreading fast.

Green and Gay are sending specimens to both the Georgia and Alabama Entomological Departments. The weevil was not expected here until next year.

Powers Let Turkey Retain Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 27.—Announcement was made by the grand porte to-day that the European powers have agreed to allow Turkey to retain Adrianople, in spite of the threats of Bulgaria to try to take Adrianople as soon as she can collect sufficient resources to declare war.

Builders Losing $25 A Day on Crematory

The new crematory has not been accepted yet by the city and a forfeit of $25 a day is being assessed against the contractors, according to Mayor Woodward.

"It is true they notified the city August 15 that the plant was completed, but it has not been completed," said he Mayor "and when it comes to a settlement they will find the forfeit of $25 a day charged up against them. The plant is supposed to have three units—they have but one in operation, and it really isn't operating."

SPEER PROBE ORDERED ON 20 COUNTS

House Votes for Judiciary Committee to Investigate Record of Georgia Judge.

By HUGH MILLER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—After Chairman Clayton, of the Judiciary Committee, had made public a synopsis of the charges against United States Judge Emory Speer, of the Southern District of Georgia, the House to-day passed the resolution he had introduced yesterday, authorizing the Judiciary Committee to proceed with an investigation to determine whether impeachment proceedings should or should not be instituted against the judge.

The resolution was passed just a few minutes before President Wilson appeared before the joint session to read his message on Mexico. Just as soon as the House convened Chairman Clayton asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution and it was at once taken up at the point it was left off yesterday.

Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, Republican, made a short speech pointing out principally that Judge Speer had written to the Judiciary Committee that he was innocent of the charges and demanding that an investigation be made. The galleries were rapidly filling with visitors who wanted to see and hear President Wilson, and the noise and confusion were so great that few could hear Mr. Nelson. When he concluded he received scattering applause.

Clayton Reads Charges.

Chairman Clayton then arose.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "in view of the publicity given these charges and the further fact that a request amounting to a demand has been made by members of this House for information, I shall now proceed to read a synopsis of the charges made against Judge Speer, which have been under consideration by the Judiciary Committee."

Chairman Clayton proceeded to read the charges.

"In addition," he said, "we have many affidavits and photographs of documents. Altogether the record is very bulky. I hold it in my hand now, that the members of the House may see it."

Chairman Clayton held up a large package, containing apparently hundreds of pages of record.

"The committee has decided that beyond the statement already given to the House nothing further shall be disclosed in the case until the investigation is taken up," he said.

Involves Son-in-Law.

The twenty charges read by Chairman Clayton were as follows:

"Violation of section 67 of the judicial code, in allowing his son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, to be appointed to and employed in offices and duties in his court.

"Violation of the bankruptcy act in allowing compensation in excess of the provisions of that act to a trustee, who was his personal friend.

"Violation of the laws in drawing juries.

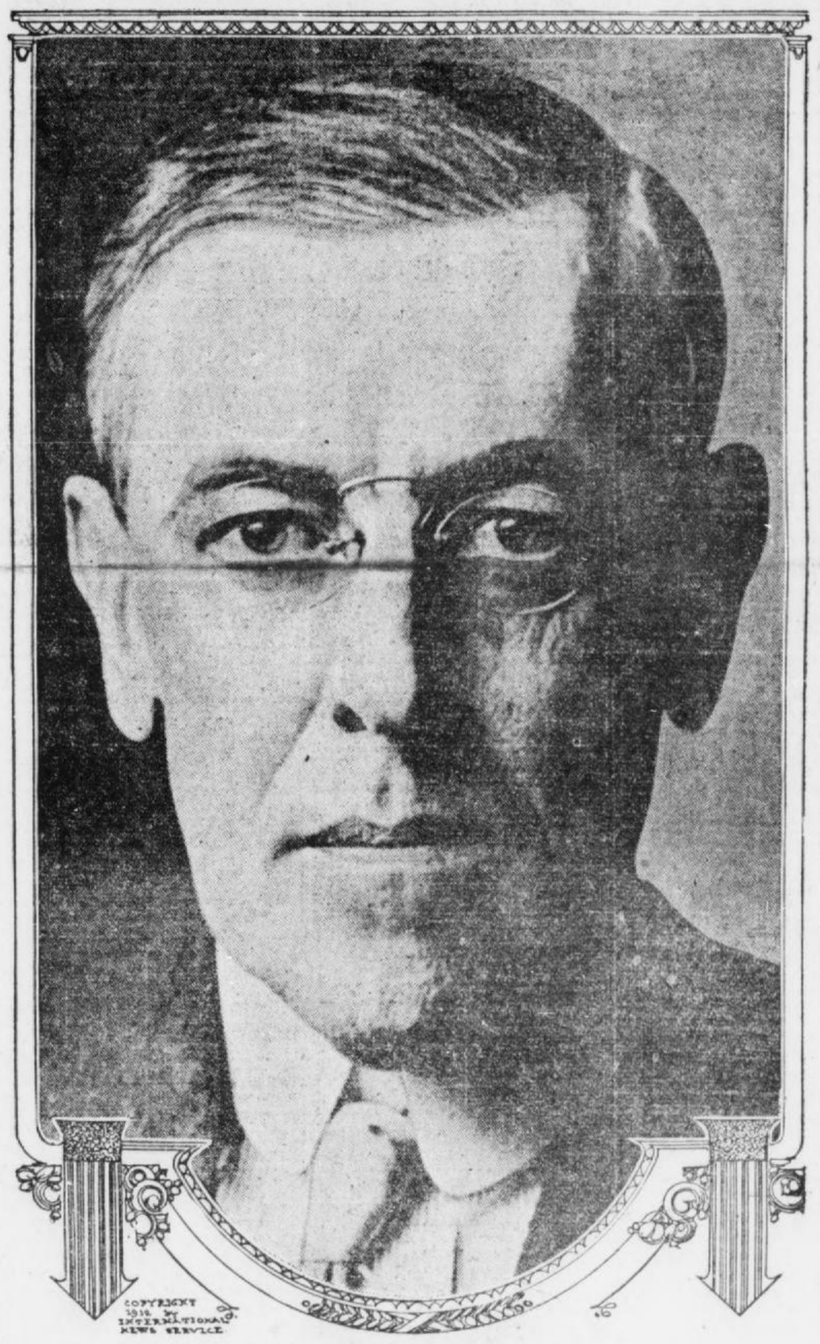

"Violation of a mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Oppressive and corrupt use of his official position in deciding cases unjustly in favor of his son-in-law.

"Unlawful and corrupt conduct

ASKS PATIENCE WITH MEXICO

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

SITUATION CRITICAL, SAYS PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE; FORBEARANCE IS URGED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Emphasizing the fact that the United States must remain the firm friend of the people of Mexico in their present stress and trouble, President Wilson to-day read his long awaited message on Mexican affairs to Congress.

The message was distinctly pacific in tone and contains little in the way of recommendation for future policy except the single one that this Government must urge earnestly that all Americans should leave Mexico at once and that the United States should assist them to get out of Mexico in every way possible.

The President counsels delay before further action is taken and says:

"Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly cooperative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

"So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization to the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. The circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

President Wilson's message is unexpectedly brief and closes with the statement that several of the great Governments of the world have given the United States their generous moral support in urging on the provisional authorities at Mexico City the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit i nwhich they were made. The President relates the circumstances leading up to the Lind mission and all the facts in connection with it.

The message follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress—It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the fact concerning our present relations with the republic of Mexico. The deplorable posture of affairs in Mexico I need ble posture of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly of what this Government has done and should seek to do in fulfillment of its obligation to Mexico herself, as a friend and neighbor, and to American citizens whose lives and vital interests are daily affected by the distressing conditions which now obtain beyond our southern border.

"Those conditions touch us very nearly. Not merely because they lie at our very doors. That, of course, makes us more vividly and more constantly conscious of them, and every instinct of neighborly interest and sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty.

"We are glad to call ourselves the friends of Mexico, and we shall, I hope, have many an occasion, in happier times, as well as in these days of trouble and confusion, to show that our friendship is genuine and disinterested, capable of sacrifice, and very generous of manifestation.

"The peace, prosperity and contentment of Mexico mean more, much more, to us than merely an enlarged field for our commerce and enterprise. They mean an enlargement of the field of self-government and the realization of the hopes and rights of a nation with whose best aspirations, too long suppressed and disappointed, we deeply sympathize. We shall yet prove to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without first thinking how we shall serve ourselves.

"But we are not the only friends of Mexico. The whole world desires her peace and progress, and the, whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be touched by the great routes of the world's trade and intercourse running free from ocean to ocean at the Isthmus. The future has much in store for Mexico, as for all the States of Central America, but the best gifts can come to her only if she be ready and free to receive them and to enjoy them honorably.

"America in particular—America, North and South and upon both continents—waits upon the development of Mexico; and that development can be sound and lasting only if it be the product of a genuine freedom, a just and ordered governments founded up-

Wilson's Conditions For Mexican Peace

(a) An immediate cessation of fighting throughout Mexico, a definite armistice solemnly entere dinto and scrupulously observed.

(b) Security given for an early and free election, in which all will agree to take part.

(c) The consent of General Huerta to bid himself not to be a candidate for election as President of the Republic at this election; and

(d) The agreement of all parties to abide by the results of the elections and co-operation in the most loyal way in organizing and supporting the new administration.

CAMINETTI HIT BY JURY RULING

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—It was seen in the questioning of prospective jurors to-day that the defense of F. Drew Caminetti will be that he did not have any criminal intent when he eloped to Reno, Nev., from Sacramento with Lola Norris, the high school girl.

Attorney Woodworth, representing Caminetti, pressed his questions on this point until Federal Judge VanFleet ordered him to adopt another line of questioning.

The women directly connected with the white slavery case against Caminetti did not attend to-day's session of the trial. None of Caminetti's relatives, except his brother, Anthony Caminetti, Jr., of Sacramento, attorney, was in the courtroom.

Judge VanFleet was anxious to have the hearing of the case ended as soon as possible, and it was expected the attorneys for both sides would hasten the work of selecting a jury so that the twelve men who will hear the evidence against the son of the Commissioner General of Immigration likely will be obtained by tonight.

All Japan for War, Claims Tokio Editor

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 27.—Joseph D. Halliday, editor of The Japan Advertiser, of Tokio, who has arrived here by steamer from Yokohama, declares all Japan is eager for war with the United States.

The uneducated classes would plunge into the struggle at once, first seizing the Philippines and Hawaii, but the educated classes favor waiting ten years until the Russian war debt shall have been extinguished he said.

"The feeling," Mr. Halliday added, "is that the white and yellow races must fight out their differences."

Fugitive Boxer Asks French Citizenship

Special Cable to The Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—Through his counselors Jack Johnson, the negro champion heavyweight pugilist, who fled to France from the United States after he had been convicted in the latter country of white slavery, to-day filed declarations of his intention to become a French citizen.

JAIL SLAYER HERE TO ESCAPE MOB

Apparently unmindful of the fate of his companion, Virgil Swanson, a negro who was lynched Monday night near Greenville, Wallace Brewster, also a negro, is in the Tower for safekeeping. He is held on the charge of killing L. C. Marchman, of Meriwether County, last Wednesday. He makes no denial.

He was captured Tuesday morning by J. M. Wingo, a farmer in the northern part of Heard County. The negro had walked 50 miles from the scene of his crime and applied to a negro farmhand on the Wingo farm for lodging. Mr. Wingo recognized him and took him in charge. Sheriff J. B. Jerrell, of Meriwether County, went to Heard County on instructions of Judge Freeman, of the Coweta Circuit, and took the negro.

FORBEARANCE WITH MEXICO URGED BY PRESIDENT WILSON IN MESSAGE

Armistice Impossible, Huerta Elected Head of Mexico Legally, Gamboa Says

In his reply to the American proposals Senor Gamboa, the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, urges the following points:

That President Wilson's imputation that no progress is being made toward the restoration of peace in Mexico is not true.

That the fact that the Mexican Government enjoys the recognition of nearly all the great nations of the world is proof that it is a true and honorable administration.

That the proposal of an armistice is impossible because nations do not propose armistices with bandits. To grant an armistice would be to recognize the belligerency of the rebels.

That the request that General Huerta should not be a candidate for the presidency is "strange and unwarranted."

That the election of General Huerta was legal.

That the American proposals are "humiliating and unusual."

That Mexico's Ambassador should be received in Washington and that the United States should send a new Ambassador to Mexico.

on law. And so can it be peaceful and fruitful of the benefits of peace. Mexico has a great and enviable future before her, if only she choose and attain the paths of honest constitutional government."

Situation Not Promising.

"The present circumstances of the republic, I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise even the foundations of such a peace. We have waited many months, months full of peril and anxiety, for the conditions there to improve and they have not improved. They have grown worse, rather. The territory in some sort controlled by the provisional authorities at Mexico City as grown smaller, not larger. The prospect of the pacification of the country, even by arms, has seemed to grow more and more remote, and its pacification by the authorities at the Capitol is evidently impossible by any other means than force.

"Difficulties more and more entangle those who claim to constitute the legitimate government of the republic. They have not made good their claim, in fact. Their successes in the field have proved only temporary. War and disorder, devastation and confusion, seem to threaten to become the settled fortune of the distracted country.

"As friends we could wait no longer for a solution which every week seems further away. It was our duty at least to volunteer our good offices—the offer to assist, if we might, in effecting some arrangement which would bring relief and peace and set up a universally acknowledged political authority there.

"Accordingly, I took the liberty of sending the Hon. John Lind, formerly Governor of Minnesota, as my personal spokesman and representative to the City of Mexico with the following instruction:

Instructions to Lind.

"Press very earnestly upon the attention of those who are now exercising authority or wielding influence in Mexico the following consideration and advice:

"The Government of the United States does not feel at liberty any longer to stand inactively by while it becomes daily more and more evident that no real progress is being made toward the establishment of a government at the City of Mexico which the country will obey and respect.

"The Government of the United States does not stand in the same case with the other great Governments of the world in respect to what is happening or what is likely to happen in Mexico. We offer our good offices, not only because of our genuine desire to play the part of a friend, but also because we are expected by the powers of the world to act as Mexico's nearest friend.

"We wish to act in these circumstances in the spirit of the most earnest and disinterested friendship. It is our purpose in whatever we do or propose in this perplexing and distressing situation not only to pay the most scrupulous regard to the sovereignty and independence of Mexico—that we take as a matter of course, to which we are bound by obligation of right and honor—but also to give every possible evidence that we act in the interest in Mexico alone, and not in the interest of any person or body of persons who may have personal or property claims in Mexico which they may feel that they have the right to press. We are seeking to counsel Mexico for her own good and in the interest of her own peace and not for any other purpose whatever. The Government of the United States would be itself discredited if it had any selfish or ulterior purpose in transactions where the peace, happiness and prosperity of a whole people are involved. It is acting as its friendship for Mexico, not as any selfish interest dictates.

Only Settlement Wanted.

"The political situation in Mexico is incompatible with the fulfillment of international obligations on the part of Mexico, with the civilized development of Mexico herself and with the maintenance of tolerable political and economic conditions in Central America. It is no common occasion, therefore, that the United States offers her counsel and assistance. All America cries out for settlement.

"A satisfactory settlement seems to be conditioned on:

"(a) An immediate cessation of fighting throughout Mexico, a definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed.

"(b) Security given for an early and free election in which all will agree to take part.

"(c) The consent of General Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as President of the republic at this election; and

"(d) The agreement of all parties to abide by the results of the elections and co-operation in the most loyal way in organizing and supporting the new administration.

"The Government of the United States will be glad to play any part in this settlement or in its carrying out which is honorable and consistent with international right. It pledges itself to recognize and in any way proper to assist the administration chosen and set up in Mexico in the way and on the conditions suggested.

No Reason to Reject Offer.

"Taking all the existing conditions into consideration, the Government of the United States can conceive of no reasons sufficient to justify those who are now attempting to shape the policy of exercising the authority of Mexico in declining the offices of friendship thus offered. Can Mexico give the civilized world a satisfactory reason for rejecting our good offices?

"If Mexico can suggest any better way in which to show our friendship, serve the people of Mexico and meet our international obligations, we are more than willing to consider the suggestion.

"Mr. Lind executed his delicate and difficult mission with singular tact, firmness, and made clear to the authorities at the City of Mexico not only the purpose of his visit, but also the spirit in which it had been undertaken. But the proposals he submitted were rejected in a note the full text of which I take the liberty of laying before you.

"I am led to believe that they were rejected partly because the authorities at Mexico City had been grossly misinformed and misled upon two points. They did not realize the spirit of the American people in this matter, their earnest friendliness and yet sober determination that some just solution be found for the Mexican difficulties, and they did not believe that the present Administration spoke through Mr. Lind for the American people.

Must Wait for Awakening.

"The effect of this unfortunate misunderstanding on their part is to leave them singularly isolated and without friends who can effectually aid them. So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization of the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. For the circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at the City of Mexico will presently be revealed.

"Meanwhile, what is it our duty to do? Clearly everything that we do must be rooted in patience and done with calm and disinterested deliberation. Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. We can afford to exercise the self-restraint of a really great nation which realizes its own strength and scorns to misuse it. It was our duty to offer our active assistance. It is now our duty to show what true neutrality will do to enable the people of Mexico to set their affairs in order again and wait for a further opportunity to offer our friendly counsels.

"The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Urges Americans to Leave.

"While we wait, the contest of the rival forces undoubtedly will for a little while be sharper than ever, just because it will be plain that an end must be made of the existing situation, and that very promptly; and with the increased activity of the contending factions will come, it is to be feared, increased danger to the non-combatant in Mexico, as well as to those actually in the field of battle. The position of outsiders is always particularly trying and full of hazard where there is civil strife and a whole country is upset.

We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once, and should assist them to get away in every way possible. Not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interests, but because it is imperative that they should not take any unnecessary risks if it is physically possible for them to leave the country. We should let everyone who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who can not get away and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding.

"For the rest, I deem it my duty to exercise the authority conferred upon me by the law of March 14, 1912, to see to it that neither side to the struggle now going on in Mexico receives any assistance from this side of the border.

Must Not Take Sides.

"I shall follow the best practice of nations in the matter of neutrality by forbidding the exportation of arms or munitions of war of any kind from the United States to any part of the republic of Mexico—a policy suggested by several interesting precedents and certainly dictated by many manifest considerations of practical expediency. We can not in the circumstances be partisans of either party to the contest that now distracts Mexico, or constitute ourselves the virtual umpire between them.

"I am happy to say that several of the great governments of the world have given this Government their generous moral support in urging upon the provisional authorities at the City of Mexico the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. We have not acted in this matter under the ordinary principles of international obligations. All the world expects us in such circumstances to act in fact as Mexico's nearest friend and intimate adviser. This is our moral relation toward her. There is now here any serious question that we have the moral right in the case or that we are acting in the interest of a fair settlement and of good government, not for the promotion of some selfish interest of our own.

"If further motive were necessary than our own good will toward a sister republic and our own deep con-

GAMBOA'S REPLY, REFUSING U. S. PEACE OFFER

Neither National Dignity Nor Situation Permits Interference, He Says in Effect.

The following is the reply of Senor Gamboa to the proposals of the American Government conveyed through Hon. John Lind, as transmitted to Congress to-day by the President:

"Mexico, August 16, 1913.

"Sir—On the 6th instant, pursuant to telegraph instructions from his Government, the charge d'affaires ad interim of the United States of America verbally informed Mr. Manuel Garza Aldape, then in charge of the Department of Foreign Affairs, of your expected arrival in this republic with the mission of peace. As, fortunately neither then nor to-day there existed a state of war between the United States of America and the United Mexican States, my Government was much surprised to learn that your mission near us should be referred to as one of peace. This brought forth the essential condition which my Government ventured to demand in its unnumbered note of the 6th instant addressed to the aforesaid charge d'affaires—'that if you do not see fit to properly establish your official character your sojourn could not be pleasing to us according to the meaning which diplomatic usages gives to this word.

"The Government of Mexico has paid due attention to the advice and considerations expressed by the Government of the United States on account of three principal reasons:

"First, because Mexico entertains the highest respect for the personality of his excellency Woodrow Wilson.

"Second, because certain European and American Governments, with which Mexico cultivates the closest relation of international amity, having made use of their good offices to the end that Mexico should accord you a hearing, inasmuch as you were the bearer of a private mission from the President of the United States, and,

"Third, because Mexico was anxious to demonstrate in every way the justice of its cause.

Calls Imputation Untrue.

"The imputation contained in the first paragraph of your instructions that no progress has been made toward establishing in the Capital of Mexico a Government that may enjoy respect and obedience of the Mexican people is unfounded.

"My Government greatly appreciates the good offices tendered to it by the Government of the United States of America in the present circumstances; it recognizes that it was inspired by the noble desire to act as a friend as well as by the wishes of all the other Governments which expect the United States to act as Mexico's nearest friends. But if such good offices are to be of the character of those now tendered to us we should have to decline them in the most categorical and definite manner.

"Inasmuch as the Government of the United States is willing to act in the most disinterested friendship, it will be difficult for it to find a more propitious opportunity than the following:

"If it should only watch that no material and monetary assistance is given to rebels who found refuge, conspire and provide themselves with arms and food on the other side of the border; if it should demand from its minor and local authorities the strictest observance of the neutrality laws. I assure you that the complete pacification of this republic would be accomplished within a relatively short time.

"His excellency Mr. Wilson is laboring under a serious delusion when he declares that the present situation of Mexico is incompatible with the compliance of her international obligations, with the developments of its civilization and with the required maintenance of certain political and economical conditions tolerable in Central America. We are punctually meeting all of our credits; we are still maintaining diplomatic missions cordially accepted in almost all the countries of the world, and we continue to be invited to all kinds of international congresses and conferences. In one thing I do agree with you, and it is that the whole of America is clamoring for a prompt solution of our disturbances.

Can Not Consider Conditions.

"Consequently Mexico can not for one moment take into consideration the four conditions which his excellency Mr. Wilson has been pleased to propose. For these reasons an immediate suspension of the struggle in Mexico is not possible, as to do this it would be necessary that there should be some one capable of proceeding to the many bandits who are crauding toward the south and committing the most outrageous depredations; and I know of no country in the world, the United States included, which may have ever dared to enter into an agreement, or to propose an armistice to individuals who can be found all over the world beyond the pale of the divine and human laws. Bandits are not admitted to armistice.

"1. That our Ambassador be received in Washington.

"2. That the United States of America send us a new Ambassador without previous conditions.

"And all this threatening and distressing situation will have reached a happy conclusion; mention will not be made of the causes which might carry us, if the tension persists, to no one knows what incalculable extremities for two peoples who have the unavoidable obligation to continue friends, provided, of course, that it is based upon mutual respect, which is indispensable between two sovereign entities wholly equal before law and justice.

"F. GAMBOA,
"Secretary for Foreign Affairs for the Republic."

JURY SERVICE CALLED SUPREME LOVE TEST

MRS. F. V. L. SMITH.

Frank Trial 'Temporary Widow and Husband Happily 'Reunited.'

"If you are not sure whether you love your husband, let him serve on a jury for four weeks—then you'll know!"

Mrs. Frederick V. L. Smith, of No. 481 Cherokee avenue, said it—and sighed. But it was a happy sigh, for Mr. Smith, his face wreathed in one of those "I, John, take thee, Mary" smiles, was coming hurriedly up the sidewalk home from business fully an hour earlier than usual.

Not 24 hours before they had been reunited, after Mr. Smith had been a stranger to his own home—a stranger to every place except the Kimball House and the courtroom—for four long weeks, serving on the famous Frank jury.

"I don't think there is anything," Mrs. Smith continued, "that would cause a woman to realize how much she loved her husband as to have him be on a jury; to be a 'widow' and yet know that your husband is in the same city that you are.

"Let him pass you two or three times a day, and not be allowed to speak to him—only to look and wave a handkerchief. Let those old deputy sheriffs stop him when he goes to say 'hello,' and caution you to be quiet when you start to ask him if he is being taken care of, if he gets enough to eat and if his clothing needs mending—why, I don't see how you can help making a vow never to speak a cross word to him.

"Little Dan Cupid may bear the burden during courtship and honeymoon, but after marriage he has a great aid in jury service. I'll just bet if a woman who fusses and nags her husband would let him serve on a jury for a month or so she'd be permanently cured.

"It's a terrible thing to be a temporary widow. There must be a better word to express it than 'terrible,' but if there is I don't know it, unless I say it was simply awful. I had almost rather my husband would be dead than be on a jury. I don't think a real widow has a bit harder time than a 'temporary one.'"

Mrs. Smith, besides being one of the most beautiful of the eleven "temporary widows," is also one of the most remarkable. When her husband was caught in the jury net he was not given time to get any one to take charge of his business.

So Mrs. Smith, despite the fact that she had a baby to take care of, stepped into the breach, and during the four weeks of the trial has conducted her husband's business affairs as well as he could himself. Every morning saw her at his office in the Empire Building—and every noon and evening saw her at the doors of the courthouse waving greetings to her "dead" husband.

Wife at Last Collapses.

The strain, however, was too great, and during the last week of the trial Mrs. Smith worked solely on her "nerve." She came home Monday evening very nervous, and shortly after 8 o'clock, when she received a telephone message from her husband that he was coming home, she collapsed.

Mr. Smith, returning at 11 o'clock, after an absence of four weeks, found his wife unconscious and physicians bending over her. Mrs. Smith was unconscious for nearly two hours, and for more than half an hour of that time it was feared she was dead. By Tuesday afternoon, however, she had fully recovered her strength.

60,000 INCREASE IN SCHOOL AGE POPULATION

Georgia Census Shows Growth in Five Years That Appropriation Can Not Care For.

With an increase of more than 60,000 in school population during the last five years, the various counties of Georgia face a cut in the school appropriation fund of $2,500,000.

The regular five-year school census figures, compiled by the State Department of Education, were made public Wednesday morning.

According to the report there are 60,732 more children of school age in Georgia now than in 1908. As the school appropriation fund is parcelled out among the various counties this increase will mean a decrease in the appropriation made to each county.

The total school population, according to the report, is 796,203, as compared with 735,471 in 1908.

The report shows further that the number of illiterates decreased from 84,430 in 1908 to 72,840 in 1913. The grand total of infirm school children, however, increased from 1,009 in 1908 to 1,323 in 1913.

The number of children over 10 years of age who never attended a public school totalled 10,500, as compared with 10,533 in 1908. The number who never attended any school totalled only 9,871 in 1913, as compared with 11,198 in 1908.

The total cost of taking the census was $29,033.21, as compared with $25,760.84 in 1908.

CRAWFORD CASE AWAITS END OF FRANK FIGHT

Postponed four weeks ago until after the close of the trial of Leo Frank, it is probable that the reopening of the famous Crawford will case, in which Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, will again be delayed until after the hearing of the arguments for a new Frank trial on October 4. Should Judge Roan decline to grant a new trial, it is probable that the Crawford case will be postponed until after an appeal is taken to the Court of Appeals, at the request of Attorneys Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, who are counsel for both Mrs. Crawford and for Frank.

Colonel J. S. James, one of the attorneys for the heirs at law in the Crawford case, stated Wednesday morning he did not expect the case to be reopened until the Frank case was definitely settled one way or the other. He will confer with Attorney Rosser Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning, and it is probable that some agreement will be reached regarding the reopening of the case. When Col. J. L. Anderson, who is serving as auditor in the will case, announced the postponement of the case several weeks ago, he stated that in resuming the hearing of the testimony he would be governed by the wishes of the attorneys.

It is known that Rosser and Mr. Arnold favor delaying the Crawford case for several weeks, if not until the final disposition of the Frank case. Colonel James met Mr. Arnold several days ago, and during a conversation about the reopening of the case, Mr. Arnold remarked that he would dislike to resume within three weeks after the closing of the Frank trial, as he desired to get a much-needed rest. Mr. Arnold left the city Tuesday night for a month's stay, and it is probable that Mr. Rosser will leave shortly also for a vacation. Colonel Anderson, the auditor, is also out of the city, but will return Saturday.

While many of the attorneys on either side have been busy with the Frank trial, the search for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, who, it is charged, was an accomplice of Mrs. Crawford in a plot to poison her husband, has continued without success. Colonel James has given a great deal of time to the apprehension of Lumb, and practically the entire East has been scoured by detectives acting under his orders. New York detectives and detectives of other Eastern cities, have thrown their drag-nets out, but have found no trace whatever of the barber.

By DOROTHY DIX.

Does it pay to be good?

Tens of thousands of poor girls avid for pleasure, longing to ride in luxurious automobiles and feast on dainty food in gay restaurants; madly anxious for the lovely clothes that would enhance their charms, as a fine frame sets off a picture, are asking themselves that question. Does it pay to be good?

They know that, like the milkmaid in the old song, their faces are their fortunes, and that beauty and youth are assets that a woman can cash in at sight. The streets of every big city are the Mount of Temptation upon which the Devil takes every poor, pretty little drudge, and shows her, spread out before her, all that the foolish, feminine heart can crave of ease and softness. And it is all hers for the taking.

He shows her both sides of the picture. He shows her Virtue hanging on to a strap in a crowded car, while Vice rolls by in a limousine. He shows her Virtue, shabby, fainting with weariness behind the counter, while Vice lolls in front of it, buying silks and satins. He shows her Virtue going to bed hungry in a dingy hall bedroom, while Vice sups at a lobster palace. He shows her Virtue clutching its thin little pay envelope, while Vice draws down its thousands, and flaunts its name in electric letters a foot high along Broadway.

No wonder that poor young girls ask, Does it pay to be good?

The Case of Evelyn Thaw.

For answer let us consider the case of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who furnishes the most cynical illustration of this subject that what we call civilization has ever seen. For no woman of our day has been so written about and discussed; no woman—not Bernhardt, nor Julia Marlowe, nor Maude Adams—has ever received such a preposterous salary as she gets for a few minutes' appearance on the stage.

Yet her sole claim to distinction is that her very garments drip with the slime of the gutter, and that she is the heroine of the most hideous and decadent story that was ever told upon the witness stand.

In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante can do as well with three lessons. There's simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing her, I wondered if she thought that it paid. I wondered if she thought that she had paid too dearly for all she had had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

Believe me, she, and women like her, KNOW whether it pays to be good.

Hers the Story of Many.

The story of Evelyn Thaw is an interesting one in this connection because in its setting and in its potentialities it is the story of the chance, and the temptation, that comes to so many poor and pretty girls. It is the eternal problem of the woman who wants the good things of life, and who can get them only in one way, by buying them with her soul.

Evelyn Thaw is a type of woman that is peculiar to America and common in this country—women who come of poor and humble families, but who are born with the instincts for luxury of a princess and the bearing and presence of the great world. You see them in every little village—girls who are as chic as Parisiennes, who wear their little home-made clothes as if they came from a couturiere of the Rue de la Paix, and who are as irresistibly drawn to the bright lights of a great city as a moth is attracted to the flame.

Evelyn Nesbit was one of these. She was born on a Chrisimas Day, in Allegheny, a suburb of Pittsburg. Her mother was beautiful, her father a gay ne'er-do-well; and from the one parent she got her looks and the other her mercurial nature—as dangerous a combination as evil itself could bequeath a girl.

They Were Very Poor.

All her early life they were very poor, and when the father died—which he did when Evelyn was 10 or 11 years old—they were poorer still. Mrs. Nesbit tried to make a living with her needle, but barely succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door.

The little family went from Allegheny to Philadelphia, hoping for better things, but luck failed to smile on them. They were so poor that Mrs. Nesbit cut up her sheets to make underclothing for herself and Evelyn, and her bedspreads to make them dresses. Then someone who noted the girl's rare loveliness got her a position to pose for some photographs.

The migration from Philadelphia to the larger artistic world of New York followed naturally, and, armed with letters to painers here, Mrs. Nesbit came, bringing Evelyn, whose beauty was flowering day by day. But, in spite of the romances Mr. Robert Chambers writes about it, the life of an artist model is not one glad round of pleasure and profit, and the Nesbits were still very poor. They lived in one room, where they cooked and slept and Mrs. Nesbit took in such sewing as she could get. Then a newspaper reporter ran across Evelyn and wrote a big Sunday story, illustrated with many pictures of her, which he called "The Most Beautiful Artists' Model in New York."

Fate did the rest. She was engaged by a theatrical manager on the outlook for beauties for his chorus—and she had reached the dividing line, the place where she had to choose between poverty and hard work—and the gilded life—the place where she had to ask herself, as the poor, pretty girl does under such circumstances—does it pay to be good?

She decided that it did not pay, and took what she thought was the easiest way. Where it has led her all the world knows. Certainly she has had the cakes and ale of existence. First there was a millionaire who used to take her out on his yacht for weekend excursions. Then came Stanford White, and for a while, at least, it was all like a fairy tale.

She, who had not had carfare, rode in cabs and taxis everywhere. She who had not always had even bread to eat feasted at the smartest restaurants. She who had worn the shabbiest of shabby clothes had fine gowns and jewels lavished on her.

Another turn of the wheel of fortune brought Harry Thaw into her life with more money, more jewels, more trips to Europe, and finally a wedding ring. Being Pittsburg-born, the Thaws had always been the biggest people on Evelyn's horizon, and to belong to that august family, and queen it socially in the very town in which she had been poor and humble, doubtless filled the measure of her ambition. Evil had prospered with her, and vice had brought her what virtue never could.

Then her sins began to find her out, and her world, built upon a foundation of wrongdoing, commenced to crumble under her feet. Pittsburg society would not receive her, despite the Thaws' financial and social position. Women, good women, would have nothing to do with her. The scarlet letter was branded upon her too plainly for even the Thaw millions to cover it up.

Also she began to know the cruel fact that while a man, obsessed by passion and in order to get a woman, swears that he will forgive her past lapses from the straight and narrow way and forget them he really never does. When he is married to her he makes of them a whip of scorpions with which to scourge her. The torments of hell can have nothing worse than the months in which Evelyn Thaw combated the jealous suspicions of her husband and endured his reproaches.

Then followed the shooting of Stanford White and the two long-drawn-out trials, during which, to save her husband and to earn a fee, justly earned and never paid, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told a story of her life that for utter degradation has no match in all the annals of sinful humanity. She stripped from herself every vestige of decency and left herself without so much as a rag of honor to cover her.

That this story was not true does not alter her status. She held herself up before the world as shameless beyond all belief until the wonder of it was that any woman could tell such things of herself and live. And now she is coining that story into money.

Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes that she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of one's fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it, and the life it has driven her to, she has coarsened and hardened.

The wonder of her at the trial was the expression of wistful, childlike innocence she wore. I asked a great alienist to interpret that to me, and he said that the reason of it was that her soul was unawakened, that she was morally dead and had never realized the import of the things she did. Hence they had not set their seal upon her as they do upon women who consciously tread the primrose path.

But that trial stripped the veil from her eyes. She came out of it knowing good and evil, and the knowledge has dimmed her beauty and taken from it the ethereal charm that was its highest note. There is nothing remarkable about her now. You may meet a thousand like her any day along Broadway.

I wonder how Evelyn Thaw, in view of her life, and all it has brought her of good and ill, would answer that question: Does it pay a girl to be good?

I think that no one could preach such a homily on the subject as this poor girl, who sold her birthright for a few silks and a rag of chiffon and good times, and who knows the price she has paid.

Devoid of Talent, Evelyn Thaw Capitalizes Sins

"No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolsh little dance that any debutante could do as well in three lessons. There is simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

BUTTERFLY IDEA RULES IN NEW FASHIONS

Full Blouses to Imitate Wings. X-Ray Skirts to Continue Popular, but With Flounces

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The butterfly idea dominates the coming styles. Having forsworn the use of legs, women will cultivate wings. A survey of the leading dressmaking establishments indicates the following autumnal metamorphosis:

Hats will be small and round, like the butterfly's head. Blouses and jackets will be extremely full and loose at the back and shoulders, suggesting wings. The jackets will be long, with a belt, but not drawn in at the waist.

Skirts will be plaited, the plaits opening wide at the knees, but narrowing again at the ankles, in imitation of the butterfly's abdomen. Most of the skirts will be flounced to the knees, while some will be so full at the back as to give almost a bustle effect.

Some gowns will be ornamental at the back with large butterflies or bows of silk set just below the waist.

Evening gowns will be lower than ever. They will be open to the waist behind, out very wide and loose over the shoulders.

Diaphonouses over pink tights will continue popular, but flounces will insure opacity as far as the knees. The color of suits will be less bright.

Kentucky Feudist, Reported Dead, Lives

LEXINGTON, Aug. 27.—Green McIntosh, feudist, charged with the murder of Greenberry Combs in Breathitt County, and who was reported as shot to death while resisting arrest by a sheriff's posse, was not killed.

He is being hidden in the Breathitt Mountains by friends. Word of his death was telephoned from the mountains, the officers say, to cause the search to die out so he could escape from the hills.

265 CASES TO BE TRIED.

MACON.—There are 265 cases, of which 100 are for alleged violations of the State prohibition law, to betried during the September term of the City Court which convenes Monday and lasts for two weeks. Only 50 of the defendants are in jail, the others having given bond.

HELD UP IN DAYLIGHT.

MACON.—A white man giving his name as Joe Jackson reported to the police that he was held up and robbed of $119 near the business part of the city at 7 o'clock in the morning. He said his assailants wore black masks and black clothes.

Macon Merchants to Tour Georgia Towns

MACON, Aug. 27.—Macon merchants are making plans for another booster trip through south and middle Georgia in September. The trip will last for three days and the merchants will travel in a special train, making short stops at each town en route.

The route will embrace Sandersville, Tennille, Brunswick, Millen, Waycross, Fitzgerald, Thomasville, Moultrie, Cordele and other towns.

PATHFINDER ROLLS INTO MOBILE AHEAD OF TIME; GREAT WELCOME GIVEN

With approximately 500 miles of the transcontinental highway behind him, Pathfinder E. L. Ferguson Wednesday prepared for the long westward journey from Mobile through New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego and Los Angeles to San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson arrived in Mobile late Tuesday afternoon.

Mobile's reception to the pathfinders was only one more indication of the widespread interest in the monster campaign for a transcontinental highway inaugurated in Atlanta on August 18 by Hearst's Sunday American.

The Mobileans carried out a program which they planned weeks ago. Several miles north of the city a big delegation of boosters, including many women enthusiasts in automobiles, met the pathfinders and escorted them into the city. Here a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, as well as prominent citizens and city officials, took the members of the party in hand and tendered to them a royal reception which the Mobile boosters say "surpassed the celebrations in Birmingham and Montgomery."

Immediately following the reception Mr. Ferguson began completing his plans for the resumption of the journey to New Orleans, which place he expects to reach on August 30. Like the Mobile boosters, the New Orleans "live wires" have had their plans practically complete for several weeks, according to advance reports.

Big Celebration Planned.

A monster good roads and highway celebration will be held, it is said, and a representative of The New Orleans Item, which is co-operating with The Sunday American, The Birmingham News, The Montgomery Advertiser and other leading Southern newspapers, will relieve the Montgomery representative.

The special man from The Item will accompany the party as far as Beaumont, Texas, where a representative of The Houston Post, which also is behind the movement, will join the tourists, accompanying them as far as Dallas. From Dallas Mr. Ferguson probably will be accompanied to Los Angeles by a representative of The Dallas Times-Herald. Monster receptions have been planned in each of the big cities named along the route, as well as many of the smaller ones.

According to the schedule as now planned, Mr. Ferguson will reach Biloxi, Miss., on August 28; New Orleans, August 30; LaFayette, September 3; Lake Charles, La., September 5; Orange, Texas, September 7; Beaumont, September 7, and Houston on September 8 or 9. The party should reach its destination, San Francisco, in October.

Following out the policy maintained all along the route from Atlanta to Mobile Mr. Ferguson will spread the gospel of good roads and fine highways through Louisiana, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California. Already the efforts of the pathfinder along this line have had marked results. Beginning at Douglasville, Ga., 30 miles west of Atlanta, the official starting point, and continuing through Tallapoosa, Heflin, Ala., Anniston, Ashville, Birmingham, Clanton, Montgomery and Selma, as well as other progressive smaller towns, local good roads and highway campaigns have been inaugurated following Mr. Ferguson's visit. The manifest enthusiasm with which the tourists were received all along the route has been directed into channels for the actual improvement of the roads and the development of highways.

Bad Roads Stories Disproved.

Although Mr. Ferguson has completed less than a third of the long cross-country tour, he has already demonstrated beyond a doubt that the South affords an ideal route for an open-the-year-round highway. This claim was scouted by Northern tourists, who have declared repeatedly that the weather was too warm down in Georgia and Alabama and Louisiana to make such a trip in the summer time. It was to disprove this that Mr. Ferguson decided not only to make the trip in the very dead of summer, but also to take his wife and children with him. That he has already succeeded is indicated by the reports from Mrs. Ferguson, who has declared all along the route that she was delighted with the "ideal" climate.

The South's reputation for bad roads, too, has been disproved by this tour. At Anniston, Birmingham, Montgomery and Selma Mr. Ferguson declared to the boosters that he was surprised at the marvelous development of the roads.

"If the citizens along the way which I have traversed do as much for good roads during the next two years as they have done during the past two, conditions should be ideal," he said.

That these citizens are going to do this and even more has been indicated repeatedly from the time Mr. Ferguson left Atlanta until he arrived in Mobile Wednesday.

His Eye Wasn't Strong Enough

J. Y. SMITH HITS PLOT CHARGE OF WOODWARD

Chairman of Committee Declares Mayor Easily Could Have Had Primary Deferred.

Mayor Woodward's charges that the setting of September 30 as the date of holding Atlanta's Democratic primary was the result of a well-laid plot has brought a strong denial from Chairman John Y. Smith, of the city Democratic executive committee.

There is absolutely no ground for the charge, according to Mr. Smith. Also he is of the opinion that six weeks is sufficient length of time for the men running for the offices of councilman and alderman to make their campaign.

"A charge that the date of September 30 was set as the result of a conspiracy is without foundation," said Mr. Smith. "The meeting of the committee was attended by practically every member, while there had been no meeting or caucus of any kind prior to the meeting.

"It has been the custom for persons other than members to attend its meetings and to address them. Had the Mayor desired to have a later date set he could easily have appeared before the committee and have been accorded the courtesy of giving his views. I doubt if there would have been much trouble in having had the date set beyond September 30.

"There was considerably more than a quorum of the committee membership present when the matter of setting the date was taken up. There was practically no discussion of it and a resolution by Committeeman T. O. Poole naming September 30 was unanimously adopted.

"I can not agree with Mayor Woodward that the time is too short for the candidates for alderman and councilman to make their campaigns. When a candidate has to stretch his campaign beyond a period of six weeks it works a hardship on him, while the people undoubtedly get tired of too much politics."

September 12 Closing Day.

At a meeting held at noon Wednesday the sub-committee of the City Executive Committee set September 12 as the last day in which candidates in the primary of September 30 may pay their fee with the Treasurer and qualify. The assessments for the various offices were also fixed.

Owing to the smaller number of offices to be contested for and the consequent smaller number of candidates, the assessments are slightly higher than those of last year.

The total amount which it is estimated will be derived from the assessment is $1,320. Should any portion be left over it will be pro rated among the candidates. In the event of a run-off between any candidates the amount left over will be applied to the expense of the second election. An effort was made to require candidates in the event of a run-off to bear the entire expense of the second election, but was defeated.

Candidates must qualify by noon of September 12, paying their assessment to either Paul Toland or J. O. Cochran. The money will be handled by the treasurer of the committee, who will make a bond of $1,500.

The individual assessments are: General manager of waterworks, $150; Alderman, full term, $95; Alderman, unexpired term, $50; Councilman, $70.

Four Atlanta Boys On 15-Day Hike to New York on Bet

From Peachtree to Broadway is a long walk, but four Atlanta boys set out Wednesday to accomplish it in fifteen days, as the result of a bet of $500 made between them and George Allen, of the Central Railroad.

The boys are Lloyd Snead, 19 years old, No. 236 Cooper street; Clarence Burel, 18 years old, No. 79 West North avenue; Jack W. Lipscomb, 22 years old, No. 232 East Hunter street, and F. J. Lipscomb, 18 years old, of the same address.

The distance from Atlanta to New York afoot is more than 900 miles. The condition of the bet is that the boys walk it in fifteen days. This will necessitate them covering 60 miles per day.

John D. Plays Golf With 2 Deaf Mutes

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—John D. Rockefeller cut loose from his sedentary habits to-day and entertained at golf two young men he did not know and had seen but once before in his life.

The young men were Charles D. Russell, of La Salle, Ill., son of a Western man, and Horace W. Buell, Jr., of Chicago, delegates to the National Association of the Deaf now in session here.

"I have the greatest admiration in the world for these young men," he declared. "Their inability to hear and speak has not prevented their becoming good, intelligent men."

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Big Kinemacolor Feature.

"The Scarlet Letter" will be the feature for Kinemacolor exhibition at the Grand to-day and Thursday. This is a wonderful motion picture in natural color. In addition to the Kinemacolor offering, which is exclusive, and can not be seen in any other picture theater but the Grand, there are first run pictures of the highest quality exhibited every day.

Meredith Sisters Please.

Prettier gowns than those exhibited by the Meredith Sisters at the Forsyth this week would be hard to create. There are half a dozen and each one is original and beautiful.

All in all the bill is a good entertainment. Fred Bond with Miss Fremont Benton and two assistants present a comely playlet that is a vaudeville classic. The story wins laughter and curtain calls, and is about as popular as anything on the bill. Svengali presents a real novelty—a genuinely wonderful puzzle.

Bijou Policy a Hit.

That the new policy of the Bijou which was inaugurated Monday night is meeting with popular favor has been demonstrated at every performance so far. Better pleased and larger audiences have seldom gathered within the four walls of the Bijou. The Jewel Kelly Company is presenting as its opening bill "Her Fatal Shadow," a remarkably strong comedy drama, intense in its heart interest, dramatic in its situations and sensational in its climaxes. The company as a whole is an unusually clever one and includes many favorites who are receiving real ovations at every performance. Jewel Kelly, Eddie Black, Marie Claire, Grace Webber, Clare Summers, Rose Morris, have all played in Atlanta before and count their friends by the hundreds.

TO DEDICATE CHURCH.

COLUMBUS.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, on Sunday, September 14, will dedicate St. Luke Methodist Church, preaching both morning and evening. The church, one of the handsomest in the city, cost about $50,000.

ARMY OFFICER FOR RIVERSIDE CADETS

Georgia Military School Gets Special Detail From U. S. War Department.

Following recommendation by Major B. F. Hardaway, of the Seventeenth United States Infantry, cadets at the Riverside Military Academy, at Gainesville, Ga., will be placed under command of a United States army officer when its term opens September 11.

This information was received from Washington Wednesday. The name of the officer who will take charge will be announced soon.

This detail will carry in addition a complete equipment of modern rifles, dress and service accouterments as used by the United States army, and also artillery and cavalry equipment for dismounted service. The uniforms of Riverside cadets are identical with those used at West Point.

The promptness with which the recommendation of Major Hardaway was approved by the War Department is gratifying to the friends and patrons of Riverside, in view of the fact that the usual inspection for such detail is made only in April. But owing to the splendid showing made in the preliminary application, a special detail was obtained.

Major Hardaway was pleased with the location of Riverside, with its campus of 2,000 acres on the banks of the Chattahoochee River, two miles out of Gainesville, because of the many natural advantages offered by it for target practice, maneuvering, skirmish drills, bridge building, pontoon work and other military arts.

The physical property at Riverside, with its well-ventilated barracks, mess halls and schoolrooms, did much to obtain this speedy detail.

President Sandy Beaver, who was in the city Wednesday, announced the faculty has been strengthened and enlarged and the school will open with the largest attendance of its history.

ATLANTAN HELD ON CHARGE OF BIGAMY

W. F. Lee Arrested at Hattiesburg, Miss., With Bride, Said To Be Third Wife.

MOBILE, Aug. 27.—W. F. Lee, a young attorney who claims Atlanta as his home and who came to Mobile last Thursday from Milton, Fla., with pretty 19-year-old Dovie Smith and married her, to-day is under arrest in Hattiesburg, Miss., whence he had gone with his bride. He is accused of bigamy. When Miss Smith married Lee she had known him three months.

Chief of Police Frank W. Crenshaw received a warrant Tuesday for the arrest of Lee and a letter from Judge H. B. Daniels, of Swainsboro, Ga., giving the record of the man whose arrest was sought. Judge Daniels stated that Lee had married into one of the best families of Bullock County and that his wife later received a divorce, but no decree was issued to Lee. Judge Daniels also stated that Lee had gone to Knoxville, Tenn., where he had married a young school teacher.

Chief Crenshaw traced the couple from Mobile to Hattiesburg and requested Lee's arrest. The chief then notified the girl's brother, who wired that he would send transportation for her from Hattiesburg to Pensacola, where he resides.

Lee was arrested here Thursday afternoon upon the request of Miss Smith's brother, but was later freed when the brother and mother reluctantly consented by long distance telephone to the marriage. Late in the evening Lee secured a marriage license and the couple wer married by the Rev. O. C. McGehee, of the St. Francis Street Methodist Church.

The Smith girl says she will not desert Lee. She says she believes him when he says he was properly divorced from his Georgia wife.

COLUMBUS FAIR IN NOVEMBER.

COLUMBUS.—The Columbus Poultry Association has announced that it will put on a poultry show the week of November 17, and in addition will give a fair which will equal, if not surpass, the one held by the Georgia-Alabama Fair Association in 1912.

'Farmer Bill' Zimmer Joins Benedict Ranks After Long Romance

"Farmer Bill" Zimmer gave his friends a great surprise Tuesday night when he quietly re-entered the ranks of the benedicts, and to-day Kimballville Farm is all a-flutter. Miss Mabel L. Leys, of Detroit, was the former name of Mrs. Zimmer, and the marriage was the culmination of a romance of many years standing.

A very few of his intimate friends and relatives of the bride were in the bridal party which journeyed around to the parsonage of the Trinity Methodist Church at 7 o'clock Tuesday night, where the Rev. J. B. Robins performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony a bridal supper was given at the Piedmont Hotel, Mr. Zimmer having been the first manager of this hostelry. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hazler, of Detroit; Lee Jordan, Will Zimmer, Jr., the 12-year-old son of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Chancellor, Clarendon Chancellor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, Jesse Mercer and C. R. Tucker.

Willard Exonerated By Coroner's Jury

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—After several hours of deliberation over the testimony presented by witnesses of last Friday's fight at Vernon between Jess Willard and "Bull" Young, which resulted in the death of the latter, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict exonerating Willard.

Several physicians who attended Young after the fatal blow was delivered testified that the Wyoming fighter's physical condition was bad and that Young had a cigarette heart, and that he was suffering from an affection which had robbed him of stamina which he may have formerly possessed.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury will have no bearing upon the prosecution of Willard, McCarey and the others charged with manslaughter, according to a statement of Prosecutor W. J. Ford after the inquest.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 128 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

Boys' High Seeks Alma Mater Song

Plans for offering a cash prize for the best original words for an alma mater song for the alumni of the Boys' High School of Atlanta are complete.

The purpose of the contest is to arouse interest among the hundreds of alumni of the Boys' High School in the alumni organization. The class of 1910 has taken the lead in this, and the cash prize has been raised among its members.

Among the speakers at the 1910 class banquet recently were Dean Paden, president; E. H. Orr, Jr., James Manry, Joseph Yampolsky and James Mangum.

Danish King Saves Actress From Sea

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—According to The Budget, King Christian of Denmark, while cruising in the royal yacht, Rita, off Jutland, rescued Cinema, the actress, from drowning.

Cinema, a Copenhagen actress, jumped overboard from a boat to escape fighting boatmen.

She became exhausted and the King ordered the royal boat lowered to rescue the actress, who was taken aboard just in time.

Honors Requisition Asked by Sulzer

HARRISBURG, PA., Aug. 27.—Governor Tener has honored requisitions for Daniel Buegeleisen, charged with forgery, and Charles Clay, with abandoning children, on request made by William Sulzer as Governor of New York.

He did this on an opinion furnished by J. E. B. Cunningham, First Deputy Attorney General.

MADE INSANE BY THAW CASE.

CORRY, PA., Aug. 27.—Too intense interest in the Thaw escape drove Freeman Lylarger insane, and he is now confined in an asylum. Lylarger, who resided in Kerrtown, was greatly concerned over Thaw and could not take his mind off the subject.

POSTOFFICE IMPROVED.

COLUMBUS.—Improvements at the local postoffice costing $7,000 have been completed. Changes were made in the registry and money order departments, and additional space was given the parcel post department.

Slit Skirt 'Kneelet' Is 'Anklet' Higher Up

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 27.—The "kneelet" has made its appearance upon the Boardwalk, circling the limbs of two young women who acknowledged they came from Pittsburg. The "kneelet" is worn with the slit skirt and is the twin to the anklet, with the exception that it was worn just above the knee instead of around the ankle.

Also the slit in the skirt extends much higher to show the "kneelet."

FRANK, IN CELL, PREPARES STATEMENT ATTACKING DORSEY'S ARRAIGNMENT

as the first business for its disposal. The maximum sentence for this offense is three years, but it is thought that Conley, as a self-confessed accessory and a State's witness, will get off more lightly than the maximum.

Frank told friends Wednesday that he was planning to have a large part in the conduct of the fight to obtain a reversal of the verdict of last Monday afternoon. Frank rendered his attorneys assistance during the preparation of his case for presentation at the trial which has just ended, but all of the decisions of any consequence were left to them.

The convicted man followed every move of Rosser and Arnold, as well as of Solicitor Dorsey, with an unceasing vigilance and with a thorough comprehension of the purpose involved. Friends say he feels that he is competent to have a part in the mapping out of the future campaign for his life and liberty, and expects to have a considerable voice in every plan that is proposed.

It is his life that is at stake, and he is convinced that he has obtained a sufficient knowledge of legal procedure at least to advise and suggest and, at times, direct as to what shall be done.

Rosser Lays Battle Plan.

Rosser Wednesday began active preparation for the appeal for a new trial for Frank. In summing up the evidence for the argument of the case before Judge Roan on October 4, Solicitor Dorsey will work in conjunction with Mr. Rosser.

Mr. Rosser emphasized the colossal task before him as he sat in his office in the Grant Building by pointing to the mass of evidence taken by the court stenographer. It embraces 4,500 typewritten pages, far and away the record for criminal cases in Georgia. This must be condensed to a workable basis—some 200 pages—according to Mr. Rosser. It is supposed to be just enough to make the points clear on which the arguments for a new trial will be based. But attorneys representing both sides must agree on the evidence submitted. And therefore to save time Solicitor Dorsey will collaborate with Mr. Rosser.

If Judge Roan refuses a new trial, Attorney Rosser declared the case immediately would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Thus the sentence of Frank to be hanged between 10 and 2 o'clock on October 10 will be stayed. It probably will be after the first of the new year before the Supreme Court will be able to take up the case, and Frank automatically will get a respite.

Mr. Rosser's statements and acts refuted the reports that he had suffered greatly from the long strain of the trial.

Away from the color and excitement of the courtroom scenes he is proceeding on his work with the methodical energy he would proceed on a civil case.

Referring to Mr. Arnold's trip to Bedford Springs, Pa., and the report that he himself had suffered a loss of 25 pounds in weight, Mr. Rosser said:

"I don't need a vacation, so I have gone back to work. I weigh exactly the same as I did the day I went into the case. I haven't got time to worry about my physical well-being.

"I would greatly enjoy a good rest. But Mr. Arnold or myself has got to prepare this case for a new trial. He is gone and I've got to do it. So you see I am at it."

Mr. Arnold will return in good time to take part in the appeal for a new trial.

October 10 Jewish Sacred Day.

That he is not without tactical ability in a law court was demonstrated by his statement to the jury.

An impressive coincidence in the sentencing of Leo Frank to hang on October 10 is that this is the most deeply sacred day of al of Frank's religion—the Day of Atonement. It is the day for confession of sins. It probably is as universally observed by members of this faith as Good Friday, for example, is observed by the Roman Catholics.

The setting of this date, however, may be regarded as little more than a formality, as it is certain that Frank will not go to his death on that day. The arguments for a new trial will be heard on October 4, and if the motion is denied an immediate appeal will be made to the Supreme Court, and this will necessitate a postponement in the date set for the execution while the matter is being thrashed out in the higher courts.

While the beginning of the real battle will not take place until October 4, Frank's lawyers entered at once into a new plan of campaign for his freedom. Reuben Arnold is taking a few days' vacation, but will return to the city shortly to resume his work on the case. In the meanwhile witnesses are being examined and data obtained in reference to several of the points on which a new trial will be asked of Judge Roan.

Conley Says He Told Truth.

Frank arose at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning and walked about his limited quarters for half an hour, and then sat down to read the papers. He was reading when his father-in-law, Emil Selig, and Sig Montag came with his breakfast. He was reported to be as cheerful as at any time during the months he was awaiting for his trial.

Jim Conley had for his breakfast the usual jail fare. "I told the truth, boss," he remarked to J. L. Poindexter, one of the deputies.

"A lie will wash away, and you can't keep it, but the truth, it will stay by you," was his sage observation as he continued to comment on his case.

Rudolph M. Frank, father of the convicted man, was told Tuesday at his home in Brooklyn of the verdict that had been returned against his son. An elderly man and an invalid much of the time, Dr. Frank was prostrated by the news.

"I know Leo is innocent. He never would be capable of committing a terrible deed of that sort," the old man told Harry Lewis, the family lawyer, who spoke to the reporters. Lewis was one of the character witnesses who came to Atlanta to testify at the trial.

In making their motion for a new trial Tuesday, Frank's lawyers set forth statutory grounds, and later will file an amended motion. The first motion represents that the verdict of guilty was contrary to the evidence, contrary to law and contrary to the weight of the law, and that the court, after overruling a motion of the defense, allowed certain testimony which was relative to other crimes than the one specified in the bill of indictment.

This last reference is in regard to Jim Conley's testimony, in which the negro told of the alleged conduct of Frank with women in his office.

Frank's Fight Likely To Extend Over Months.

That the Leo Frank case can not reach the State Supreme Court, where it seems destined to go, before the third Monday in December, was the opinion expressed Wednesday morning by a court official who has figured out all the "possibilities."

Should the famous case reach the Supreme Court even at this early date it probably would be several weeks before a decision could be rendered, as a mass of testimony would have to be considered by the court.

According to this official, should Frank's attorneys be overruled by Judge Roan on October 4 in their request for a new trial, they may then file a bill of exceptions any time within the following twenty days. At the time of the filing of the bill of exceptions, which in this case probably will be immediately after the decision of Judge Roan and before October 10, the date of the hanging, the judge "shall," according to the law, order a supersedeas, which stays the execution.

After the bill of exceptions has been filed and the supersedeas ordered, the attorneys for the defense will have ten days in which to present the matter to the attorneys for the State. Following the notification to the State the defense then has fifteen days to file it with the Clerk of the Superior Court, who then has ten days to forward the record to the Clerk of the Supreme Court.

Should the defense take full advantage of the time granted in each case there is a possibility that the case will not reach the Supreme Court until January, or perhaps February.

MIAMI, Aug. 27.—Members of Charles Faudel's family narrowly escaped death when four cartridges lying on a table by a kerosene lamp were discharged by the exploxing lamp.

Bullets whizzed close to them as they endeavored to smother the flames which treatened the destruction of the home.

Young Inventor Dies On Visit in Atlanta

Francisco B. Marriott, 25 years old, died at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning at the residence of his sister, Mrs. J. Cheston King, West End. He had been in Atlanta on a visit.

Mr. Marriott had been granted patents on mining apparatus which has proved successful. He was well known in Atlanta.

Surviving him are his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Marriott, of Homewood, Ala.; two brothers, T. C. Marriott, of Homewood, and H. R. Marriott, of Atlanta, and his sister, Mrs. J. C. King. The body will be taken to Homewood Wednesday night for funeral and interment.

OBITUARY

The body of Sidney O. Gautier, who died Tuesday, was sent Wednesday to Crescent City, Fla., for funeral and interment. He was 24 years old.

The funeral of James J. Lockhart, who died late Tuesday, was held Wednesday morning from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Interment was at Oakland Cemetery.

Mrs. Lucile Graham Wilhoit, No. 15 East North avenue, died late Tuesday. She is survived by her husband, J. F. Wilhoit, one small child, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Graham, and one brother, William Graham. The body was removed to the home of her parents, No. 354 Ponce DeLeon avenue. Funeral announcements will be made later.

Mrs. Etta E. Evans, 49 years old, No. 1 Ashland avenue, died Tuesday night. Surviving her are her husband, J. P. Evans, one daughter, Miss Otis Evans, and three sons, J. T., L. W. and D. E. Evans. Funeral announcements later.

The funeral of Mrs. Mildred Almand, who died at her home in Hapeville Tuesday, will be held at Antioch Church Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. A special car for the church will leave the residence at 2 o'clock. Interment in the church yard.

The body of B. Simms Heard, who died at a local hospital Monday night, was taken Tuesday afternoon to the home of his parents in Covington, Ga. Funeral services were held there Wednesday morning. Mr. Heard was assistant cashier of the Macon National Bank. He was a graduate of Emory College, in the class of 1908.

Mrs. Robert N. Aiken, a well-known Atlanta woman, died at midnight Tuesday at a private sanitarium. She is survived by her husband, Robert N. Aiken, of Whitehall Terrace, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Edge, of Houston, Texas. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. Thursday from the Berkert & Simons chapel.

J. D. Palmer, of Miami, Flda., died early Wednesday morning at a hospital. The body was removed to the chapel of Patterson & Son. Funeral announcements will be made upon the arrival of relatives from Miami.

THAW IS CHEERED BY THRONG IN COURTROOM

Women Join in Demonstration and Fugitive Bows His Appreciation for Their Sympathy.

SHERBROOKE, QUE., Aug. 27.—The habeas corpus proceedings in the Thaw case were abruptly stopped after they began before Judge Globensky in the Superior Court at 10 o'clock, and adjournment was taken until 3 p. m.

The judge said he wanted more time to consult the authorities on Thaw's move to withdraw his application for a habeas corpus writ.

There was a tremendous demonstration in the courtroom in Thaw's favor when Counsellor Samuel Jacobs, on behalf of the Canadian Government and the State of New York, began his opening arguments opposing the withdrawal of Thaw's petition.

"Let Him Go," Cry Spectators.

The like demonstration had been made earlier while Thaw was being taken from the jail to the courthouse. Men and women followed the automobile and blocked the streets which it traveled. "They can't get you, Harry," cried some. Women joined enthusiastically in the demonstration. Thaw was delighted beyond measure.

The court attaches had difficulty in keeping order. Thaw sat at the lawyers' table while his attorneys, in reply to Jacobs, pleaded that under the civil code of the Dominion they had a perfect right to withdraw their application for a habeas corpus writ.

Women in Demonstration.

Judge Globensky finally halted the proceedings, announcing he would take the case under advisement until 3 o'clock in order to consult the authorities.

When this announcement was made one spectator cried out: "Good, good. Let us have fair play, and three cheers for Harry Thaw."

There were about 200 women present, and all joined in the demonstration. With his face beaming, Thaw arose, placed his hand over his heart and bowed.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the Matteawan, N. Y., asylum for the criminal insane, from which Thaw escaped, has joined the forces which are fighting to get the fugitive back into that institution. Thaw's counsel is confronted by a formidable array.

Mr. Jerome, Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy, of New York State; Samuel Jacobs, of Montreal, representing New York State; District Attorney E. A. Conger, of Dutchess County, New York (in which Matteawan is situated), and others are co-operating with the Canadian legal representatives.

Gov. Craig Takes Up Charlotte Lynching

ASHEVILLE, Aug. 27.—Intimating that officials might habe to answer for the lynching of Joe McNeely, a negro, at Charlotte, Governor Locke Craig in Asheville to-day issued a statement declaring he would vigorously co-operate in the detection and punishment of the lynchers. The Governor declares there was not the slightest excuse for the mob, as the negro was in custody. Proceedings against the Sheriff are possible.

Governor Craig is keeping in close touch with the situation at Charlotte by long-distance telephone, add any further move for violence will probably bring out the State militia.

Lumber Man Held on Charge of Swindling

Benjamin F. Mitchell, who declared he was president of the Mitchell Lumber Company, with offices in the Temple Court Building, was arrested Wednesday on a warrant issued by M. A. Litsey, of Roberta, Ga., charging swindling.

According to Litsey, Mitchell ordered a carload of lumber from him in Roberta, then sold it in Atlanta for less than he had agreed to pay for it. Detectives were unable to locate the office address which Mitchell gave. He will be taken to Roberta for trial.

Park Manager's Power To Be Cut

Another step in the differences between the Park Commission and General Manager Dan Carey will be taken at the next meeting of the commission when a new set of by-laws materially curbing the authority of the general manager will be adopted. The new rules practically put the entire operation of the department under the direct control of the commission.

The proposed adoption of the rules is regarded as another step in the effort of members of the board to force the resignation of Carey, but this he states he will not do.

"It is nothing more nor less than an effort to make me resign, but even the adoption of the new rules and making my position practically nothing but a little clerkship, will not have the effect of making me resign," said Carey.

"Briefly, the new rules place the operation of the department back under the same method prevailing until three years ago, when the present rules were adopted. A touch of the pathetic is included in one rule which would prevent anyone connected with the park department from drinking even small glass of beer at a barbecue or anywhere else, this rule saying that an employee or officer shall not drink anything calculated to produce intoxication.

"I suppose the commission meant to hit at drunkenness in this rule, which has always been enforced by me, but if it is rigidly enforced under this interpretation it would result in the loss of a few good men. For instance, we have a splendid florist who happens to be a German and who is quite fond of his beer, but who never gets drunk. He probably would quit his job before he would his beer."

Cummins Predicts Free List Change

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Progressive Republican Senators to-day forecast the acceptance by the majority of the Senate Finance Committee of a modified form of the Kenyon amendment to the tariff bill providing for the free listing of trust-made goods.

The Kenyon amendment provides that the courts shall decide whether monopolies exist. Senator Cummins to-day declared he expected the amendment to be so modified that the determination of whether competition exists shall be left to the President.

Camilla Depot Case Heard; Decision Soon

The Camilla Railroad depot hearing took place before State Railroad Commissioner Murphy Candler Wednesday morning. The issue was taken under consideration for decision by the State Commission. Both sides were heard.

The controversy relates to the construction of a new depot at Camilla following the burning of the old one recently. The citizens, it is understood, want a $25,000 structure, while the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad is not willing to spend that much.

News Butcher Fined For Selling Liquor

TIFTON, Aug. 27.—J. C. Dasher, news butcher on the Atlantic Coast Line between Waycross and Albany, was arrested here Tuesday afternoon by Chief of Police J. O. Thrasher, charged with keeping on hand intoxicating liquors for illegal sale.

Dasher entered a plea of guilty before Recorder J. S. Ridgdill and was fined $75 or four months in the chaingang.

U. S. Museum Agent Views State Exhibit

James Henry Rice, Jr., of the United States National Museum at Washington and formerly State Game and Fish Commissioner of South Carolina, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday morning to confer with Commissioner Mercer on local matters relating to the national department. The conference was held in the Piedmont Hotel.

Mr. Rice visitd the State Capitol early Wednesday morning, where he made an inspection of the State collection and the work of the department.

CRITICAL STAGE OF AFFAIRS IN MEXICO

President Wilson Warns That All Americans Should Leave Country.

cern to see peace and order prevail in Central America, this consent of mankind to what we are attempting, this attitude of the great nations of the world toward what we may attempt in dealing with this distressed people at our doors, should make us feel the more solemnly bound to go to the utmost lengths of patience and forbearance in this painful and anxious business. The steady pressure of moral force will before many days break the barriers of pride and prejudice down, and we shall triumph as Mexico's friend sooner than we could triumph as her enemy—and how much more handsomely, with how much higher and finer satisfaction of conscience and of honor!"

Ling To Return to U. S. Immediately.

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, Aug. 27.—It is now likely that Special Envoy John Lind will immediately return to the United States on the battleship Michigan. It was suggested that he await the Morro Castle, which will sail to-morrow, but fears were expressed that developments needing his attention might arise during the five days which it takes the Morro Castle to get to New York.

Hope that Mr. Lind would reopen negotiations with President Huerta is practically abandoned in all circles.

Gamboa Hints at Return.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27.—Foreign Minister Gamboa intimated to-day that Special Envoy Lind may return here from Vera Cruz and reopen negotiations with the Mexican Government as a result of the note sent by President Huerta to Lind. Mr. Gamboa maintains the optimism which has marked him since the break with the United States.

On the other hand, there is an ominous complexion on the action of War Minister Blanquet. The War Minister to-day sent circulars to Governors of all of the States ordering them to parade all the able-bodied men in their dominions on September 16 a national holiday. The object of this is evidently to show the United States the war strength of Mexico and arouse patriotism.

Girls Clear $223 on Patch of Tomatoes

RALEIGH, Aug. 27.—How two Mecklenburg County girls cleared $223 on one-fifth of an acre by raising and selling tomatoes was told this afternoon by Miss Margaret Brown, aged 15 years, to 1,500 farmers and more than 300 housewives here in annual convention. Miss Brown said she donned overalls and tended her crop.

Mrs. Julian Heath, of New York city, organizer of the Housewives League of America, urged the women to trade direct with the producer rather than give the middleman his profit.

The convention will end to-morrow.

Wealthy Pensacola Man Alleged Slaver

PENSACOLA, Aug. 27.—Ben C. Heinberg, wealthy and once a Pensacola merchant, charged with violating the Mann white slave act in transporting 15-year-old Nellie Ward from Pensacola to Birmingham for immoral purposes, will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Jerry J. Sullivan, Jr., Thursday afternoon.

The public will not be permitted to attend, only newspaper men and court officials being admitted. Witnesses have been summoned from Pensacola and Birmingham.

Benton Declines to Seek Clayton's Seat

COLUMBUS, Aug. 27.—Asserting that he told the voters of Russell County, Ala., that if they would reelect him as probate judge of that county, in the last campaign, that he would serve his entire term of six years, Judge H. T. Benton, of Russell County, has refused to allow his name to go before the voters of the Trird Congressional District as a candidate to succeed Henry D. Clayton, in the event the latter is seated as United States Senator to succeed the late Senator Johnson.

Arraign Durham Boys In White Slave Case

DURHAM, Aug. 27.—The trial of Beeman Smith and Henry Goss, prominent white youths of this city, charged with violating the white slave act began this afternoon. Most interest is centered in the case, owing to the prominence of the girl, Hallie Draughan, and also the boys.

The defense is preparing a strong fight.

Sumter Dispensary Contest Unsettled

SUMTER, Aug. 27.—After a legal fight all of yesterday and to-day, the question of whether or not Sumter County would re-establish the dispensary after it had been suspended for years is still undecided, the board of canvassers being unwilling to declare the result, which was a majority of two in favor of prohibition.

During the session of the board intense interest was shown. At several points the prohibitionists were given a taste of the steam roller by a partisan dispensary board.

4,000,000 Shingles Destroyed by Fire

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 27.—A shingle mill at Espanola and 4,000,000 cypress shingles, 20 miles south, were completely destroyed to-day by fire of an unknown cause. The mill was owned by P. L. Southerland, of Jacksonville, and was leased by Zack Spinks, of Espanola. It was one of the largest in the State. The lass is estimated at $70,000. The fire destroyed telegraph communication South, but wires have been replaced.

YOUR DOLLARS DOUBLE AT WESTER MUSIC COMPANY'S GREAT CLEARANCE SALE

The Money Saving Possibilities Are Almost Unlimited Here. This Is Particularly True as to the Better Grades of Instruments Now Being Sold at $125 and $250 Below Regular Prices.

THE TERMS OF PAYMENT WILL PLEASE YOU

In Fact, We Are Not Particular About Terms, Anything Reasonable Will Be Satisfactory. Why Not Select That Piano or Player, Upright or Grand, To-day? Store Open Until 9:30 P. M.

A piano bought at Wester's at this time is an investment, not only in musical enjoyment, but a practical investment in a financial sense.

At the prices we have marked these pianos you are practically doubling your money, for at no other time or place can you ever approach this class of goods.

Our reasons for doing this are plain and simple.

In order to clean house, as it were, to dispose of all old styles and makes, sample pianos and styles dropped from our new 1914 catalog, we have cut the prices on each and every instrument; marked them down so far, in fact, that a mere glance at the make and price asked leaves no room for doubt in the minds of the buyers.

Some of these pianos are cut down to the actual cost to us; others are reduced in price so low that it means an actual sacrifice on cost. On many of these pianos the saving is from $125 to $250. Then, the terms are made pleasing in every way. Think of a fine A. B. Chase, Ivers & Pond, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Bush & Gerts, Kranich & Bach, Kohler & Campbell, Keller & Dunham, Hoffman, Strohber and others. These good makes are all new and the latest styles, but they are included in this sale.

LOOK AT THIS LIST.

Here we include a large number of new and discontinued styles, sample pianos, shop worn and some are used, taken in exchange on grands and players. German American, Kimball, Vose & Sons, Hallett & Davis, Steinway, Conover, Sterling, Bush & Gerts, Davis & Sons, Packard, Kohler, Cooper and others, prices ranging on any of these good uprights from $65 up, according to the grade of the piano. Other uprights, best grades, any finish desired, worth $375, $400 to $450, can be had in this sale at $218, $236, $243 and $258, on easy terms, and still others for $127, $148, $176, $187, etc., that have been cut down from $275, $300, $325 and $350. A fine walnut upright, slightly shop worn, high grade, regular price $350, to close out at $168.

Two sample $400 uprights, oak and mahogany, these same makes, high grade, will be closed out at $196 each, on easy terms if desired, at the end of the sale. There are many fine bargains here for Thursday. You will be sure to find a piano to please you. Open evenings.

BEAVERS STARTS CAMPAIGN ON AUTO NOISE

Police Instructed to Arrest All Motorists Who Violate City's Muffler Ordinance.

Declaring that the auto muffler cut-out ordinance is one of the most wantonly and flagrantly violated of the city statutes, Police Chief Beavers Wednesday said he intended to use every means at his command to enforce it.

The Chief has issued a special order to the entire police force instructing a rigid enforcement of the muffler law. Cases are to be made against every offender, no matter who he may be. The Chief is determined to bring relief from the nuisance, and said he is satisfied a few cases and stiff fines in Police Court will bring wonderful improvement.

In discussing the nuisance, the Chief took occasion to commend the editorial in The Georgian a few days ago relative to the necessity for a strict enforcement of this law for the protection of citizens.

"This muffler cut-out ordinance is a law, and it must be enforced as long as it remains on the statute books," said the Chief. "In my opinion it is a good law, for the noise made by the cutting out of mufflers, particularly at night, is an abomination, and for the reason that it is absolutely unnecessary to the running of a car. The cutting out of the muffler has no perceptible effect on the car—but it does have a perceptible effect on people who are trying to get a good night's sleep.

"The noise from the cars is not so bad in the day time, as the rumble of other vehicles and trolley cars serves to drown it out to a material extent. But at night, after the city has quieted down, the muffler cut-out is certainly a nerve-racking nuisance. It is worse in the summer, because of the great number of autos in the streets and the fact that people sleep with their windows open, thus receiving the full benefit of the distracting din as the speeding cars whiz past."

Considerable complaint of late has been made by citizens of different parts of the city, and these will receive with joy the news of the warfare started by Chief Beavers.

Troops Called to Prevent Gambling

PORTER, IND., Aug. 27.—Two companies of State troops were held in readiness to-day to invade the Mineral Springs race track, where a meeting is being held, should there be further gambling there at this afternoon's races. In ordering the troops at Elkhart and South Bend to be ready to move on the race course and take possession, Governor Ralston explained that he had reports of violations of the State gambling laws.

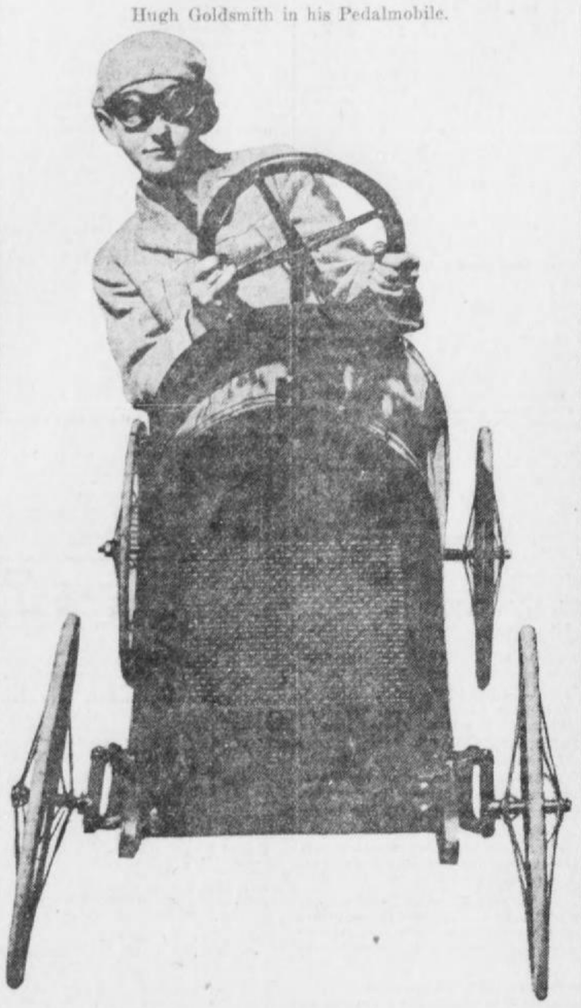

Fan Roots So Loudly He Loses His Voice

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 27.—Ernest Wellman, a fan of this city, cheered so loudly over a wonderful catch made by a Grand Rapids outfielder that he has lost his voice.

Physicians declare he so injured his vocal cords that it is hardly likely that he will be able to speak again.

PEDALMOBILE RACES ATTRACT YOUNGSTERS

Hugh Goldsmith in his Pedalmobile.

13-Year-Old Boy Wins First Georgian Car in Less Than Three Days.

Hundreds of Georgian boys and girls are hustling in subscriptions to Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian in their efforts to win a pedalmobile and participate in the pedalmobile races which will take place soon.

Little 13-year old Hugh Goldsmith is already the happy possessor of the first car, which he won in less than three days' time. Hugh says he won his car by getting up early in the morning and hustling and has named his car "Flatt" after the car owned by the great, smiling Hughie Hughes, who won fame in the Vanderbilt Cup race and also in the 500-mile races. Hugh Goldsmith expects to win the same fame in The Georgian pedalmobile races.

Applications are now being received from all sections of the South and supplies will be mailed the applicants in turn. In the meantime, future contenders are urged to get promises together and it will be an easy matter to round them all up when the blanks are received. Subscriptions can be taken in the towns where the paper is delivered by carrier and the subscriber may pay the agent at the end of each week, but mail subscriptions must be paid in advance.

Boys and girls who have not entered the pedalmobile club should start to-day. Fill out the application blank, bring or mail it to The Georgian office, 20 East Alabama street, and the pedalmobile man will give you full details as to how you can win one of thees handsome little cars.

MEN SPEAKERS TO URGE VOTES FOR WOMEN

Plans Completed for Open Discussion of Suffrage in Georgia Senate Chamber.

Arrangements have been completed for the open suffrage meeting in the Senate Chamber Friday night at 8 o'clock. There will be several noted speakers on the program.

The three principal speakers have been announced, though the full program has not been made public. A feature of the evening will be the address of welcome by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. A. M. Hughlett, Dr. M. C. Hardin and Attorney Leonard J. Grossman. Especial interest attaches to the appearance of Dr. M. C. Hardin, who scored heavily in the suffrage debate at Gainesville. Dr. Hardin never has been heard before an Atlanta audience on the suffrage question.

Men's leagues for the enfranchisement of Georgia women will be discussed by Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, who soon will announce plans for the organization of a Georgia Men's Equal Suffrage League.

The meeting Friday night will be the first gathering of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association since its charter was approved by Judge Pendleton.

With the success of the meeting assured, the State-wide campaign will be in full swing, with local leagues in every county in Georgia. The committee on arrangements for the open meeting is made up of the following: Mrs. Amelia Woodall, president of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association; Miss Margaret Koch, Mrs. A. C. Daniels and Miss E. Estill.

Christian Conference To Plan Vice Cures

The program for the Southern Christian Citizenship conference which will be held in the Auditorium from September 19 to 21, inclusive, is practically complete, according to announcement Wednesday. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Civic League of America and will outline remedies for various evils.

Among the various interesting topics which will be discussed at the conference will be "The Co-operation of the Family, the Church and the State," "The Moral Personality of the State," "Social Environment and Moral Progress" and "Divorce and Social Welfare."

SCOTT MAY NOT AGAIN DIRECT RAILROAD

Augusta Hears That Georgia General Manager's Retirement Will Be Permanent.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 27.—Whether the "temporary retirement" of General Manager T. K. Scott, of the Georgia Railroad, means that he will resume charge when he gets well, or whether it means that Mr. Scott is being permanently forced out of the position, is a matter of speculation in Augusta. Ever since the strike of the trainmen and conductors on the Georgia Railroad last fall there have been persistent rumors that there would be a change in the management of the Georgia Railroad. It has been estimated that the strike cost the road near $500,000, but whether or not that has been charged against Mr. Scott by the Louisville and Nashville officials has never been ascertained.

While the strike was in progress Messrs. Gregg and Murdock, representing the conductors and trainmen, respectively, issued a statement in which they said that they did their utmost to get a conference with Mr. Scott in his Atlanta hotel just prior to the strike to negotiate with him and try to avert the tie-up of the Georgia trains, but that he persistently refused to see them.

Mr. Scott has been general manager of the Georgia for about twenty years. He is now nearing 70 years. His friends assert positively that it is purely because of his ill health, due principally to the infirmities of age, that he has relinquished the management temporarily to J. H. Ellis, secretary of the L. & N.

Cigarettes Blamed For Lack of Humor

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Declaring that American humor is on the wane and the reason is that nearly all of the men who try to make the nation laugh smoke cigarettes, Miss Lucy Page Gaston, superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette League, and known over the entire country for her tireless efforts against cigarettes, wrote a warning to the American Press Humorists' Association, now in session at Peoria, Ill.

Miss Gaston said that in order to save American humor she would administer free of charge her mouth wash cigarette cure to any of the newspaper funny men who would accept.

Father Who Whipped Wayward Girl Freed

MACON, Aug. 27.—One week after his mother died of pellagra and ten days after he had attempted to commit suicide, W. J. Bettis, a carpenter, was tried before the Recorder, charged by his 15-year-old daughter with cruelly beating her with a strap and threatening to cut her throat.

Bettis claimed that his daughter had become wayward and the daughter herself admitted indiscreet conduct. The charges against the father were dismissed. The girl refused to return home. She probably will be sent to a reformatory.

Food Probers for Ellis Island Named

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti has appointed Richard H. Taylor immigration inspector in field service, stationed in this city; James T. Hughes, assistant immigration inspector at Philadelphia, and P. L. Prentis, immigration inspector in charge at Chicago, to compose the board of inquiry which will at once begin an investigation of conditions at the immigration station at Ellis Island, N. Y.

It was charged immigrants were fed bad food.

Former Bailiff Fails In Suicide Attempt

Following the alleged loss of $500 in a business deal, James W. Hutchins, No. 296 South McDaniel street, made a desperate attempt at suicide Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. That the attempt failed was due, it is said, to the combined efforts of Hutchins' wife and sister and Call Officers Milam and Palmer.

Hutchins, who was formerly a bailiff, shot a negro while placing him under arrest about three years ago and was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder. He was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, but secured a new trial from the Court of Appeals. He is now out on bond pending his second arraignment.

Delta Special Leaves For National Karnea

Eleven members of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity left Tuesday afternoon on a special car over the Louisville and Nashville for Indianapolis to attend the Karnea, the national convention of the fraternity, which will be in session at the Severin Hotel from August 28 to August 30.

Deltas at Knoxville, Tenn., and Lexington, Ky., will join the Atlanta car. Those comprising the party were Kenyon B. Zanner, T. B. Bean and J. S. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta; D. T. Deen and Ed Jordan, Waycross; H. H. Hudson, East Point; J. M. and H. S. Cowart, Arlington; J. H. C. Claussen, E. G. Jordan and E. R. Pund.

Studebaker

The "SIX" $1550

When You Get Acquainted With This "SIX" You Will Surely Want One

A drive in the Studebaker "SIX" will charm and convince you.

If there has ever been confusion in your mind concerning the qualities of a worthy Six, your questions will be fully answered after you have driven this "SIX".

And even if you are aware what some good sixes can do, you will enjoy a greater glow of satisfaction when you drive this car.

As you sit behind the alluringly smooth and responsive motor, no one will need to tell you why you like it. You will know perfectly well.

The instant and full answer to your call for increased speed or power, the sure and perfect response to your control, the quietness, the absence of vibration, the sheer thorough-bred ability of this "SIX" to do all its work without strain or perceptible effort—these things will prove a never-ending delight.

It is as hard adequately to describe this "SIX" as it is always difficult to describe any new and more perfect instrument.

BUT—the Studebaker "SIX" will win you, as sure as ever you sit behind the wheel.

Buy It Because It's a Studebaker

Studebaker "Six" Engineering

The design of a fine six-cylinder car, especially in the motor, calls for exceptional skill and wide experience.

Efficiency at all speeds and the absence of vibration, which are the unique advantages of a worthy Six, can only be attained by the most scientific engineering.

To attain perfect results we use experimental laboratories of large size and full equipment, where every idea built into the Studebaker "SIX" has been proved correct beyond the possibility of error.

We work by knowledge, not by theory.

Every ton of steel we buy is first made according to Studebaker formulas and later rigorously tested to be sure it is up to standard.

Throughout the manufacture, which is carried on entirely in our plants, from forty huge power hammers which forge out over 250 parts for every Studebaker "SIX", to the last operation, accurate to the one-thousandth of an inch, the "SIX" is built with a scrupulous regard for fine work and the best materials.

Studebaker Standards of Luxury

From the beautifully balanced chassis to the deep upholstery and complete equipment, the "SIX" shows careful attention to appearance and comfort.

It is, of course, electrically lighted and started.

The auxiliary seats, making ample room for six-passengers, are exceedingly comfortable and yet may readily be folded to one side.

The painting is lustrous, requiring twenty-four operations, including many days of drying and aging, before it is finished.

We use Studebaker-Jiffy storm curtains, the most ingenious improvement ever made in automobile curtains.

The Studebaker "SIX" is a car of complete comfort and strikingly handsome appearance.

MRS. GODBEE, IN BOUDOIR CELL, AWAITS FATE

Slayer of Former Husband and His Bride Gives Homelike Touch to Prison.

MILLEN, GA., Aug. 27.—In a cell transformed as if by magic into a boudoir, as dainty and complete as can be found in any home, Mrs. Sarah Perkins Godbee, charged with the murder of her divorced husband and his young bride, awaits her preliminary hearing in the Jenkins County courts Thursday as calmly and dispassionately as though she had already been assured of her freedom.

The cell itself reflects the cheerfulness and hope that fill the accused woman's mind. Despite the steel ceiling, the rough concrete floors and the iron bars, her cell is attractive and distinctly feminine. The roughness of the floors is concealed by soft rugs, the iron bars at the windows are hidden behind little white curtains that catch every flutter of the breeze; the toilet accessories, washstand and china are in blue and white, the color in which her home is furnished.

All the Comforts There.

Two white beds with fresh linen, two rockers and several straight chairs, a little blue and white table on which rests a vase constantly filled with fresh flowers, a glass pitcher of ice water, a glass stand filled with fruit, a bottle of toilet water, stacks of magazines and letters—all combine to transform the cell into a typical woman's room.

Mrs. Godbee takes as much care and pride in her personal appearance as she does in the appearance of her cell. She usually wears negligee—a dainty, pale blue kimono brocaded in pink and yellow butterflies and finished with valenciennes laces. She is rarely alone at night. Her relatives or her daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, more usually the latter, always spend the night with her. The daylight hours see streams of friends coming and going, all with words of encouragement and many with fresh dainties and conveniences for her comfort.

Mrs. Godbee's calmness and carefree attitude is the marvel of Jenkins County officials. She talks and laughs as she did before the double murder of which she is accused; she chats freely with her friends, and is always glad and willing to see visitors. Gossip of the current topics of the day falls from her lips as readily now as before the crime, and she has become an inveterate newspaper reader.

Keeps Silent on Killing.

Only on one subject does Mrs. Godbee preserve a close silence. Of the killing of Judge Godbee and the events leading up to it she will say nothing. She will give no inkling of the causes that led her to shoot her former husband and his bride, and silence is the only answer to inquiries as to her line of defense.

When the killing is brought up, Mrs. Godbee always smiles softly and changes the subject of conversation, prattling innocently of the latest happenings in Millen society or of the great world events.

The excitement created in Millen by the killing has not subsided, though it has been almost two weeks since the crime was committed. Sentiment appears to be divided, some claiming that the accused woman has suffered until she could suffer no longer; while others express the opinion that Judge Godbee was not altogether to blame for the marital troubles that brought on his death.

Editor Spat On by Judge He Attacked

NORFOLK, VA., Aug. 27.—Friends of Charles R. Kelley, editor of The Norfolk News and nephew of Bishop Kelley, of Savannah, who was assaulted and spat on yesterday afternoon by Judge Lawless, of the Norfolk County Court, because of newspaper attacks made on the jurist, are to-day urging him to prefer charges of assault against Judge Lawless.

Odd Light Designs To Feature Exhibits

Unique designs in electric and gas lighting are to feature the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition, according to members of the exhibit committee. The Georgia Railway and Power Company has arranged for a large space, and will make a special display of light and power. The Atlanta Gaslight Company will have some novel lighting features. The Massengale Bulletin System will have a display of electric signs.

Committee members continue soliciting subscriptions for space, and many new manufacturers have signed. Others are on the verge of signing, and it is expected that every foot of space in the exhibit will be sold by Saturday.

Girl in X-Ray Gown Mystery at Navy Ball

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—All the men in the naval set, women, too, are eager to learn the name of the young woman who went to the dance on the battleship Idaho in a very lacey skirt and no petticoat. The lace in the skirt was of open and generous design, allowing more than casual glimpses of shapely, nether limbs.

The woman is a pronounced brunette, seemingly of Spanish origin. Her favorite dance is the tango, judging by the abandon and skill with which she executed it.

Spanish Importers Want Atlanta Branch

The Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce received a letter Wednesday from Valencia, Spain, from a large exporting and importing firm, wanting information about Atlanta dealers in peanuts, almonds, saffron, garlic, onions, etc. The letter states that the peanut trade is rapidly increasing in Spain and there is a probability of the Valencia firm establishing a branch here.

The bureau daily receives letters from all over the country asking about plant sites, transportation facilities, trackage, etc., in Atlanta. All available information is given the inquirers.

Smallest Painting On Grain of Corn

CAMDEN, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Samuel T. Schultz, of Camden, N. J., whose scenic and mural painting studio is at Wilmington, Del., has, despite a lifetime spent in painting subjects in heroic size, the unique distinction of having made the smallest landscape painting in the world.

It is on a grain of corn, and the painter has just recovered it after having lost possession of the picture for more than forty years, in which it has traveled from art center to art center through Europe, attracting wide attention as the tiniest paining on earth.

Daniels Boys Play At Being U. S. Tars

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Clad in United States seamen uniforms, gift of sailors on the Mayflower, the younger sons of Secretary Daniels have "invented" a new game which has taken juvenile Washington by storm.

The boys have rigged up wigwag towers on the grounds of Single Oak, the Daniels country place. Here the "home flag" is kept, and when communication with their friends stationed at other towers nearby is desired they wigwag the flag and signal to their heart's content. They have arranged a code.

Gives Wife All His Land to End Nagging

LOGANSPORT, IND., Aug. 27.—Farmer Marvin Brown owned 75 acres of land. His wife nagged him so that he declared life with her was unbearable. He made her a proposition that for every day she would not nag him he would give her an acre of land.

The next 75 days were days of perfect peace and domestic calm. On the seventy-sixth day Mrs. Brown resumed her nagging.

All those circumstances were alleged in a divorce suit filed here by Farmer Brown.

4-CORNERED RACE LIKELY IN MACON

Julian Urquhart, Former Recorder, Expected to Announce Candidacy for Mayor.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Julian Urquhart, former Recorder of Macon, is being urged by his friends to enter the race for Mayor, and he has the matter under consideration and will make a final decision in a short time. It is generally understood, however, that he will run.

Mr. Urqurhart is an attorney and well qualified to fill the position of Mayor. He is familiar with municipal affairs, and his record as Recorder will be used in the campaign. He will make the race independently without an aldermanic ticket.

The other announced candidates are Bridges Smith, A. L. Dasher, Sr., and Wallace Miller.

Record Registration.

MACON, Aug. 27.—The registration in Macon and Bibb County this year promises to break all past records. The total registration at present is 2,675, and it is believed this number will be doubled. The largest registration on record was in 1912, when 3,770 voters qualified in the county.

Three elections with more than 40 candidates in the field is the cause of the increased interest in the registration, and it is believed that before the books for the special registration for the municipal primary at least 4,500 citizens will have qualified to vote.

For Chief of Police.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Harry Griggs, manager of the Elberta Hotel, has been announced by his friends as a candidate to succeed Walter B. Chapman, the present Chief of Police.

Chief Chapman's term will expire December 17, and his successor will be elected by the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Griggs' candidacy will only be announced in the event Bridges Smith, administration candidate for Mayor, is elected at the coming municipal election.

Miller Has Mascot.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Wallace Miller, candidate for Mayor on the young men's ticket, has a mascot—a baby daughter, who was born yesterday.

Trentini's Au Revoir Kisses Start a Riot

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—There was a near-riot on the French Line pier soon after La Lorraine docked. Customs and immigration officials rushed to a point near the gangway, where a large crowd had gathered.

In the center was Mlle. Emma Trentini bidding an osculatory adieu to all her fellow first cabin passengers. Just at this moment one of the passengers asked whether she was going to marry Caruso.

"Caruso!" she exclaimed. "Bah!" and then hurried from the pier, plainly showing disgust.

ARRESTED AS EMBEZZLER.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 27.—Charles W. Mitchell, bookkeeper for the Charleston Mining and Manufacturing Company at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., has been caught at Los Angeles on a warrant charging embezzlement of $6,000 of the company's money.

ADMIT BANKRUPTCY.

The International Tape Company, an Atlanta corporation, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Wednesday. Robert Sharpe, a tailor at No 125 North Pryor street, also filed a voluntary petition.

BAND AND ORGAN CONCERT BENEFIT

Splendid Program Arranged for Fifth Regiment Musicians and Charles Sheldon.

A brass band and organ concert will be given at the Auditorium Thursday evening, under the joint auspices of the Fifth Regiment Band, National Guard of Georgia, and the Atlanta Music Festival Association.

The proceeds of the concert will be for the benefit of the band and association. The association will use its part in helping pay for the free Sunday concerts which have become a permanent feature of Atlanta's musical life. The program will be as follows:

March, Grand Entry.....Barber
Overture, Tancredit.....G. Rossini
Descriptive, A Hunting Scene
.....P. Bucalossi
Selection, The Sunny South...Lampe
Organ Selection.....Sheldon
Overture, Rosamonde (Organ accompaniment).....Schubert
Medley-Overture, Remick's Hits, 1913.....Lampe
Grand Fantasia, 'Home, Sweet Home, the World Over."

The band leader will be Chief Musician C. E. Barber, of the Fifth Regiment, and the organist will be Charles Sheldon.

Owing to the keen popular interest in the concert, particularly among friends of the Fifth Regiment, it has been decided to make the prices of admision 25 cents and 10 cents.

Women to Wear Less Clothing, More Gems

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—More jewelry and fewer clothes is the advice given to-day to women who wish to keep apace or a few paces ahead of fashion by the jewelers of the country, assembled here for the eighth annual convention of the National Retail Jewelers' Association.

"Jewelry is more necessary than dress," said President T. L. Coombs, of Omaha. "Women wore jewels before they wore many clothes; they are coming back to those styles."

Oldest Sneezer Is Dined by Hay-Fevers

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 27.—America's oldest sneezer—Major Richard Muckle, of Philadelphia, aged 88—was given a banquet here last night by the United States Hay Fever Association. The major has suffered from the sneezing, sniffling fever for 75 years.

Macon Man Missing; Shortage in Accounts

MACON, Aug. 27.—J. Turner Shepherd, for three years bookkeeper for the Joseph N. Neel Company, clothiers, and one of the best known young men of Macon, has disappeared, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts of approximately $3,600.

Shepherd is married and has two children.

Elephant Attacks Autoists; 4 Hurt

AURORA, IND., Aug. 27.—Imagining he heard the battle challenge of the jungle in the blasts of an auto horn, Rajah, a bull elephant, broke from a circus parade here to-day and attacked the machine.

Four wealthy farmers were injured and the big red touring car was wrecked.

The World of Society

Miss Louise Broyles, who, with Miss Isabel Robinson, sails next week to enter the Yeatman School near Paris, was the honor guest at two farewell parties Wednesday. Mrs. George Brine entertained at a luncheon at the Piedmont Club, which was followed by an informal tea tendered Miss Broyles by Miss Margaret McCarty.

The luncheon table, placed on the ballroom porch, suggested Miss Broyles' approaching ocean voyage. A large boat, formed of pink rosebuds and pink and white snapdragons, formed the centerpiece, with vases of Killarney roses at either end of the table. The place cards were hand painted with miniature sailboats, and Miss Broyles' place was marked by a beautifully bound book to contain an account of her voyage.

Mrs. Brine wore embroidered voile with a hat of white lace, adorned with pink roses. Miss Broyles wore white point d'esprit, with sash and girdle of apple green, the toilet completed by a big black hat.

Invited to meet her were Mrs. J. D. McVarty, Mrs. Arnold Broyles, Mrs. Thomas Philip Hinman, Misses Katherine DuBose, Helen McCarty, Margaret McCarty, Mary Burr Lake, Dorothy Arkwright, Virginia Lipscomb, Margaret Northen and Dorothy High.

Miss McCarty's guests included eight or ten young girls, who were also entertained at the Piedmont Club. Tea was served from a table decorated with summer flowers. Miss McCarty wore cream colored point d'esprit, with coat of blue taffeta and a hat of old rose adorned with blue ribbons.

On Friday, Miss Dorothy Arkwright will entertain a small group of friends at luncheon at the Piedmont Club in honor of Miss Broyles, who leaves Atlanta Saturday.

Vesper Club Dance.

One of the interesting events of Friday evening will be the dance given by the Vesper Club at its rooms in West End in honor of several girl visitors to the city. The following couples will act as chaperons for the evening:

Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Evin McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. George Ansley, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooke.

Thomas-Wells.

The marriage of Miss Adeline Thomas, the only daughter of Mrs. Alice Muse Thomas, and Mr. James Leech Wells takes place Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother on Peachtree Place. On account of the recent death of the bridegroom's father the guests are limited to the immediate family and a few very close friends.

Spear-Bell Wedding.

Miss Laura May Spear and Mr. Clarence Bell were married Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Spear, in Hyde Park, Cincinnati.

The wedding was witnessed only by members of the two families.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bell left for the mountains of North Carolina, where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Spruce street, Inman Park.

Mr. Bell is the son of Judge and Mrs. George Bell. He is a member of the law firm of Bell & Ellis. Mrs. Bell made many friends here on her visit to Miss Jennie Sue Bell last spring.

In Compliment to Miss Irwin.

Mrs. Walter Smith gave a bridge party Wednesday morning for Miss Irma Irwin, of Montgomery, the guest of Mrs. William Jenkins. The card tables were on the porch, where yellow flowers and ferns were used as a decoration.

Invited to meet Miss Irwin were Misses Alma Downing, Marguerite Harper, Fannie Simpson, Louise Mell, Alice May Massengale, Leble Ewing, Mrs. William Jenkins, Mrs. Clarke Fraser, Mrs. Frank Winecoff, Mrs. Sam Eidison, Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and Mrs. J. H. Sutten.

In the afternoon Mrs. William Jenkins gave the first of a series of bridge parties for her guest, Miss Irwin. Golden-glow and black-eyed daisies decorated the house.

Her guests included Misses Edwina Harper, Isabelle Simpson, Nell Bowers, of Nashville, the guest of Mrs. J. P. Allen; Lucile Bean, Theodosia Andrews, Ruth Small, of Macon, the guest of Mrs. A. E. White; Lydia Nash, Marion Fielder, Laura Ripley, Ethel Law, Sarah Burr, Julia Hardwick, Mrs. Dan McIntyre, Jr., Mrs. Claude Weller and Mrs W. A. McCullough.

Ice Cream Festival.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Trainmen will give an ice cream festival in the Concrete Building Thursday afternoon from 5 to 10 o'clock.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The Atlanta Francis Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold its regular session Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Sunday school room of Trinity Church. Superintendents of departments are especially urged to be present.

Dancing Party.

Miss Helen Atkisson entertained at a dancing party Monday evening at her home in Ansley Park. The guests were Misses Lyndall Haddon, Lalla Bright Cannon, Louise Cooper, Estelle Lindsey, Elizabeth Clayton, Gladys Sands, Dorothy Davis, Katherine Darby, Minnie Cook, M. A. Lindsey, Irene Hollis, Mabel Atkisson, Messrs. Harrold Keene, Nat Spence, Milton McGovern, Forrest Carroll, Marshall Walker, Harrold Greenlea, Edwin Wilder, Williams, Sewell, Philip Bayley, Simpson, Donald Dudley and Tommie Atkisson.

For Miss Parke.

Miss Helen Parke, of Washington, who has been visiting Mrs. H. C. Shover, on Highland view, was the honor guest of several informal parties Thursday a number of the school set were given a picnic at Tallulah Falls. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Shover chaperoned the party and Misses Elise and Martha Shover acted as hostesses.

Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunt tendered Miss Parke a dinner at their home on Myrtle street. Covers were laid for nine.

Saturday afternoon the Misses Shover entertained at an al fresco party for Miss Parke. Twelve guests were present and games were played during the afternoon, for which attractive prizes were given. Miss Parke returned home on Tuesday.

Miss Darby Entertains Club.

Miss Katherine Darby entertained the members of her dancing club, the Inter Se Club, Tuesday evening at her home in Ansley Park. Guests were Misses Chauncey McClain, Helen Atkisson, Marie Kitchens, Margaret Bramlett, Claire Booth, Louise Couper, Elizabeth Ramey, Lois Carroll, Mary Anderson, Martha Darby, Messrs. Ernest Allen, Mercer Lee, Joe Heard, Jr., Alvin Lovinggood, Clarence Trotti, Herbert Kelly, Gordon Freeman, Forrest Carroll, Archie Freeman, Philip Almand, L. Stroble, Mat Spence, Luther Randall, Herbert Snyder, Pope Franklin, Dr. Nat Wheeler.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Ham announce the birth of a son at their home in West End.

Mrs. Edgar Barrett has returned to her home, No. 135 Peeples street, after an operation for appendicitis at the Piedmont Sanitarium.

Miss Emma Kate Amorous is ill at the St. Joseph's Infirmary with tonsilitis. She probably will return home Saturday.

Miss Ethel Tutweiler and Miss May Harralson are at the Alley House in Sauté, where they will remain until the first week in September.

Miss Lillian Williamson has returned from Houston, Texas, where she spent the summer with Mrs. Ralph B. Everett, formerly Miss Emma Benjamin, of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Willingham have returned from Blue Ridge. Misses Anita Estes and Claire Kantrowitz, of New York, who accompanied them, are their guests.

Mrs. Lelia Stowe Beach and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Beach, have returned to the city after a delightful visit to Sauté, in Nacoochee Valley, where they were guests of the Misses Glenn.

Miss Jamie Arnold gave a matinee party at the Forsyth Wednesday afternoon for Miss Frances Springer's guests, Miss Annie Will Pearce and Miss Irene Berry, of Columbus, and Miss Sarah Garland, of Griffin.

Miss Elizabeth Hines will return home Thursday from Anderson, Ind., where she has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, for some time. Mrs. Wright was Miss Ruth Hoffman, of Chicago, and Miss Hines was one of her bridesmaids in June.

Misses Katherine DuBose and Faith Johnson, who have spent the last week in Macon with Miss Elizabeth Baker, will return home Wednesday night. Miss DuBose will leave Saturday with Mrs. Arnold Broyles for New York, remaining with Misses Louise Broyles and Isabel Robinson until their departure for Paris, where they will enter school.

Around-Britain Flyer Falls in 1,048th Mile

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, Aug. 27.—With 1,048 miles of his 1,800-mile flight around Great Britain behind him, Aviator H. G. Hawker met with a mishap ten miles from this city to-day. One of the wings of his hydro-aeroplane broke and Hawker feared he would not be able to reach Southampton in time to get the $25,000 prize.

Hawker was injured in the fall of his machine.

W. R. POPE DIES AT MONTICELLO

MONTICELLO.—W. R. Pope died at his home here to-day, after a three-days illness. Early Sunday morning he was stricken with paralysis. He was manager of the Planters' Warehouse and was about 57 years of age. The funeral will take place Thursday.

IMMODEST DRESS SCORED BY HEFLIN

Congressman Looks to Women Who Combat Extreme Styles for Nation's Strength.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Women who shun the immodesty and impropriety of present-day fashions can be relied upon for the future strength and posterity of the nation, according to Congressman Thomas Heflin, of Alabama. Heflin expressed his opinion of diaphanous feminine drapery and the slit skirt craze as follows:

"I would paraphrase the Scripture, 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' and say, 'By their dress or lack of dress we shall know them.' The evil genius of lustful fashion through immodest dress is playing havoc with a certain class of women in this country and setting a bad example for others.

"Thank God, the good mothers have begun a crusade against this evil.

"The woman who instills in her daughter the principles of good sense and modesty and trains her up in the way that she should go has done more for her day and generation than she can ever hope to do by active participation in politics."

Work Begun on New Wholesale Section

An important spreading of Atlanta's business section was marked Tuesday by the beginning of work on a new wholesale section just west of the Terminal station. The work begun is the building of spur tracks by the Southern Railway. Erection of buildings will follow immediately.

A large section of West Side property was bought for this development. The spur tracks will leave the main line at the Peters street viaduct, and extend to Mangum and Haynes streets. There will be room for two long blocks of warehouses.

LABOR DAY AT MACON.

MACON.—The Labor Unions have made extensive preparations for the celebration of Labor Day on Monday at Central City Park, where an all-day picnic will be held. Athletic sports, dancing, a fiddlers' convention and baseball will be features.

One Woman's Story

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OBEDIENT to her husband's suggestion, Mary Fletcher tried to get a maid from the city. First of all she visited many employment agencies. At each she was received with a smile of welcome by the person in charge, but that smile was replaced by a look of incredulous surprise when, in reply to the question: "What wages do you pay?" Mary responded: "Twelve dollars."

"My dear madam!" exclaimed one such agent. "Excuse me, but you cannot get any girl, white or colored, to do general housework for that price."

"But," said Mary tentatively, "suppose I get a green and inexperienced girl, and teach her everything, and help her with the work—what wages would she come for?"

Might Advertise.

"Certainly for not less than eighteen dollars at the lowest," replied the agent. "And if you wish one to go to a lonely place in the country, you will have to pay more."

After many such fruitless efforts, Mary ceased visiting intelligence offices.

"You might advertise," her mother suggested when Mary recounted her experience to her. "I used to get good maids in that way. But, then, I paid very good wages. Your dear father always insisted, you know, on having me get the best of everything—servants included."

Mary winced at the unintentional thrust, then forgot her own discomfiture as she saw the tears in her mother's eyes.

"I know, dear," she said hastily, "and he was right for you deserved the best of everything. But you must remember, mother, that father had more money than Bert has."

"Oh, I know, I know," the widow responded quickly. "Dear child, don't fancy for a moment that I meant to criticise your husband. He has, of course, derived many of his ideas from his mother, and—pardon me, Mary—but she has not lived as we have, so she is to be excused if she has taught her son to feel that women ought to do their own work. Naturally, as Bert is a good son, he takes her tone. I do not blame him."

"Of course not," her daughter assented. In her own heart she was wondering if she, this man's wife, could say as much.

"Your husband is very kind to me," remarked Mrs Danforth, somewhat irrelevantly. "I ought to be happy."

But was she? Mary pondered. Did she not think that perhaps her daughter was not as content as she would like her to be? Did she not suspect that Mary did not love the man to whom she was married? And, if so, could she be happy—she, the mother who had taught her child that a loveless marriage was a sin?

Her Cheerful Voice.

As if reading the unspoken thought, Mrs. Danforth took her daughter's hand tenderly in hers. "Tell me, darling," she said, wistfully, "are you satisfied? Are you worried about anything? Sometimes I almost fear that you are a little disappointed—about something."

The young wife put her arms around her mother and drew the gray head down to her shoulder.

"Little mother," she said, her voice determinedly cheerful, "what notions you do get! Why should I not be happy here in this cozy little cottage, with the best mother that ever lived, and the man I have chosen out of all the world? Dear mother," with a light laugh, "why should I have married Bert if I did not want to?"

The mother laughed, too, and there was a ring of relief in the sound.

"Of course, dear! Why, indeed? Forgive your silly old mother—but I love you so much that if you were not happy—why, I just could not stand it!"

She ended with a little sob, and the daughter held her closer.

"You believe now that I am happy, don't you, dear?" Mary asked.

"Oh, yes, I believe it now," said the widow tremulously, "and you don't know what a comfort it is to be sure of it."

With her head still on Mary's shoulder she did not look up at the sad eyes gazing out of the window, nor did she see the bitter smile that twisted the young lips. In a moment the wife's face was again placid, and she smiled on leaving her mother, making the pretext that she had "some work to do downstairs."

She did not go downstairs at once. Instead, she turned into her own room and closed the door. But she did not, as she would have done in her girlhood days, fling herself upon the bed and give way to her misery. Instead, she went to the window and looked out into the July sunshine. But she was looking into her heart, not into the summer noon.

"Good Lord!" she whispered, "what a liar I have become! A liar both in speech and life!"

She stood motionless a moment longer, then lifted her head with a gesture of decision—almost of defiance.

"But I won't look back," she muttered. "I have made my bed and must lie on it—even if it is made of thorns. At all events, mother is comfortable and cared for."

She Had Learned.

Advertisements for domestics at the price named by Herbert Fletcher and his mother proved useless. As a final resort, Mary engaged one so-called "helper" after another from the village, but each was so inefficient that this trial was abandoned. The young housewife had learned that to secure good service one must pay an adequate price for it—and that even then one might fail to obtain it.

So it came about that at last Mary Fletcher did the work of her own house, hiring a woman from the village for two days a week to "wash, iron and scrub," and even then she had to supplement her at every turn. It was taken as a matter of course that the wife should help hang out the clothes and assist with the ironing. She told her mother that she "enjoyed the novel task;" in fact, that she thought the exercise and fresh air good for her. Her husband did not protest. Why should he? His own mother had always done that kind of work.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

The two exercises pictured to-day show classic dancing steps intended to produce suppleness of limbs and waist.

These Pictures Were Especially Posed for this Page.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.
(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ONE of your great Americans sang in an exquisite little poem of "The glory that was Greece; the grandeur that was Rome." The glory and grandeur of these nations were founded not only on their art and culture and prowess as warriors, but on a basic condition that made brains and power reach a great height of perfection—on the sublimity and healthy beauty of the human body.

When laziness and high living weakened the bodies of the Greeks and Romans, decline and fall were near. But in the flower of their national health and youth the bodies of the Greeks and Latins were physically splendid, and the endowment of mental power followed physical health.

In these simple facts there lies a great lesson for us of to-day. In bodily health and strength lie the power of the individual and the health of the nation as well. I have said so often and am always glad to say again that in the beautiful classic dances that have come down to us from the ancients lies the simplest secret of bodily grace. But to-day I want to add a few principles of bodily health and care that are practiced of necessity by the professional dancer, and that the bodily beauty-seeker would do well to emulate.

Begin by training children so that their muscles will fall naturally, in motion or repose, into graceful lines. Teach them that food is very important in one way and of no consequence in another. Food must nourish the body and give it strength, but beware the pleasureful-overeating of the well-nourished, ill-proportioned gourmet.

Food and Mood.

Now, you could dance a cancan or a breakdown however you hated the world—and indigestion surely produces misanthropy—but you have to be in harmony with life to express poetry in dancing. So, since mood affects dancing and food affects mood, this little cycle will make the classical dancer careful of the dower of health that spare, sane, sensible eating produces.

For breakfast I have coffee and hot milk, for lunch fruit and one nourishing solid and my simple dinner is guiltless of sweets. Clothes I regard as covering and not as trammelling ornaments that interfere with freedom of movement or deep breathing. Perhaps if I convert a few of my readers to a love for and a belief in the graceful movements of the classic dance, I shall at the same time make converts to the healthful joys of simple living, of deep breathing and of high thinking.

To-day I will tell you about two little movements of the dance that may be done at home without music and to the slower tempo of the walk. Try them for general bodily grace and ease of motion.

The first picture shows a very simple equally pretty figure, and for suppleness of arms and legs and waist it counts as strongly as it does for lightly poised and carried head and body. Advance with the head carried high above the column of the throat and the lifted chin. Sway slightly from the waist as you swing the arms in the arc of a circle; left arm is forward slightly above the shoulder height as the weight advances forward to the right foot, and at the same time the right arm is stretched back in a straight line and lowered from shoulder to wrist until the hand is just at the line of the hip. Do this with gradually increasing tempo, until the springy walking motion has become a light dancing step. Fifteen minutes of this night and morning will give great grace and resiliency to your ordinary gait.

The second picture brings the back and shoulder muscles into play and exercises the throat. In other essentials it has the basic principles and advantages of the first exercise. Advance as before. This time the forward motion is first on the left and then on the right side of the body and thus great muscular co-ordination is assured of the devotee of this exis assured for the devotee of this exelbows close to the waist line and the hands relaxed in easy lines from the wrist. Sway head and arm from side to side as the body pivots slightly from the waist muscles and the feet advance in the lifted prancing step of the dance.

"More power to ye," says my neighbors of Erin's Isle, in kindly greeting. To you—my neighbors across the sea—I say it, too, "More power to you;" and may the principles of the classical dancing I have so earnestly studied and so earnestly love, bring you beauty and grace and power to live gloriously and well.

A TALE OF LOST CHERUBS

"THE Gudgeon children are lost!" panted Mrs. Sprinkle as she flung open the screen door unceremoniously and burst in upon the Liffick family, variously disposed in hammocks and sprawly chairs.

"Wh-where?" demanded Liffick intelligently as he awoke from a peaceful dream.

"My goodness!" cried Mrs. Liffick. "Again?"

"They're truly lost," explained Mrs. Sprinkle, excitedly. "And we want you to come and help find them. They are sending parties in every direction through the woods and they're going to telephone the life-saving crew to drag the lake——"

"Did the boat tip over?" asked Liffick, now entirely awakened, as he reached for his cap.

Mrs. Sprinkle heaved an exasperated sigh. "If they're lost," she said, succinctly, "they might possibly be drowned, mightn't they? We don't want to leave any stone unturned."

Dire Thoughts.

"Mrs. Gudgeon left Imogene and Harry playing just as nicely under the trees beside their cottage while she walked down to the pier to fish," related Mrs. Sprinkle, "and they were gone when she came back in an hour. She has called and called for them, and they are nowhere within a mile! Imogene had such beautiful eyes, too! Maybe gypsies——"

"It will break their mother's heart!" said Mrs. Liffick. "How perfectly terrible! I'm sorry I scolded Harry for breaking off all my geraniums! And the time he scalded our cat—I might have made less hateful remarks to him. Suppose they've fallen down that old quarry pit! Arthur, you go right over in that direction and see! It's only four miles!"

Liffick, starting off, ran into several other men from the various cottages bound on the same errand.

"It looks serious," said Tilton with a shake of his head. "Kids like that and so venturesome! There's a dozen things that might have happened to them! I'm bound for the creek bank, where it is so marshy! There's quicksand there."

The whole summer colony was soon deserted. Everybody had gone to hunt for the Gudgeon children, whose various sins of commission were now tenderly covered by the veil of charitable anxiety. Mrs. Gudgeon alternately wept at home and darted out on spasmodic hunts. Again she would wander around the cottage making the air ring with the names of the missing ones. There was no answer.

"Harry might have grown up to be President some day!" said Mrs. Liffick mournfully. "They say these mischievous little children always turn out so well. Dear little Imogene"——

"You said she was a hateful child, mother, when she cut holes in your new embroidered waist," put in Sally Liffick, who was tagging around that she might miss none of the excitement.

"Sally, you go straight home!" commanded her mother. "Haven't you any sympathy at all? The idea?"

One by one the searchers staggered in toward dusk. Each had the same tale of disappointment and each was dusty and thirsty and hungry and despairing.

"Something per-perfectly awful must have happened to them, because every inch of the woods has been searched!" said Mrs. Sprinkle. "Poor Mrs. Gudgeon! Harry was such a brilliant child!"

"I always said Imogene would turn out a beauty, too," put in Mrs. Tilton. "It's hard!"

"There never were such darling children in the whole world!" their mother informed everybody between sobs. "Oh, where are my babies? Just to get my arms around them"—

Harry Found.

There was a shriek and a scuffle from the little cellar under the Gudgeon house and everybody rushed to see.

The Gudgeon cook was dragging Harry out from the depths of the potato bin, while Imogene was unrolling herself from a pile of old carpeting. The assembled searchers and their parents stared, voiceless.

"We wuz playing hiding from the Indians," vouchsafed Harry. "You made awful good Indians—you yelled so!"

As Gudgeon reached for Harry with an arm motion that promised a laying over his knee, while Mrs. Gudgeon did likewise with her darling daughter, the searchers melted away.

"Wow!" said Liffick as juvenile wails rent the air. "That sounds good to me! Four miles to the stone quarry and back!"

Yield to Baby.

One afternoon not long ago in the vicinity of Grant Park there might have been seen a young man industriously pushing up and down a baby carriage, intently reading a book the while.

"Henry! Henry!" called a young woman from the second story of a house opposite.

Henry heard it, but continued to push the baby carriage and to read his book.

In about an hour the cries for "Henry" were repeated.

"Well, what do you want?" he demanded, rather impatiently.

"Nothing, dear," was the irritating response, "except to inform you that you've been wheeling Harriet's doll all the afternoon. I think it's time for the baby to have a turn now."

THE TUNNEL
GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The story opens with Rives, who is in charge of the technical workings of the great tunnel from America to Germany, on one of the tunnel trains, with Baermann, an engineer, in charge of Main Station No. 4. They are traveling at the rate of 118 miles an hour. Rives is in love with Maude Allan, wife of Mackendrick Allan, whose mind first conceived the great tunnel scheme. After going about 250 miles under the Atlantic Ocean Rives gets out of the train. Suddenly the tunnel seems to burst. There is a frightful explosion. Men are flung to death and Rives is badly wounded. He staggers through the blinding smoke, realizing that about 3,000 men have probably perished. He and other survivors get to Station No. 4. Rives finds Baermann holding at bay a wild mob of frantic men, who want to climb on a work train. Somebody shoots Baermann, and the train slides out. The scene is then changed to the roof of the Hotel Atlantic. The greatest financiers of the country are gathered there at a summons from C. H. Lloyd, "The Money King." John Rives addresses them, and introduces Allan. Mrs. Allan and Maude Lloyd, daughter of the financier, are also present. Allan tells the company of his project for a tunnel 3,100 miles long. The financiers agree to back him. Allan and Rives want him to take charge of the actual work. Rives accepts. Rives goes to the Park Club to meet Wittersteiner, a financier. At Columbus Circle news of the great project is being flashed on a screen. Thousands are watching it.

Now Go On With the Story.

Before daylight two thousand more men arrived, and with them began the endless stream of freight. Rives began to feel like a swimmer who has been bucking a tide-rip. But he asked that the pace be increased, and he shut his teeth and jumped in. Twenty lieutenants worked on his immediate staff, all of them young men, but all of them chosen for the cut of their jaws and the cleanness of their records in stress and storm and strife. And Rives worked them as hard as he worked himself. He gave no instructions. There was not time for that. He told each man what was to be done in a few curt sentences and left the doing of it to him.

That third night a terrific thunderstorm broke up the heat wave. It came down in a terrific gale, and the first thunderbolt fired a freight shed where 500 cots were stacked to the roof, as there had been no time to unpack them that night. Before the fire got well under way, the wind ripped the burning roof off, and then came the deluge. When day broke, Rives found that about a third of his jerry-built houses had collapsed—and the flood of materials and men from Toms River set in as before.

It was a terrible setback, but he shook his head and went at it as if nothing had happened, and his men backed him with the easy energy and resource of men long accustomed to uneven warfare with Nature. That day Tunnel City looked like a storm-swept mining camp. Two days later it was like the temporary camp of the great army. At the end of ten days it was a city with concrete houses and streets and electric lights and sewerage—a city of 20,000 men with a postoffice, a telephone system, two railroad depots, bakeries, dairies, abattoirs, stores, saloons and a hospital.

And over everything, the discouraged and drooping trees and the few scattered clumps of bushes, the window sills and the roofs, was the thick white dust of the cement that had made the miracle possible.

Pages of this and many succeeding issues of this paper might be filled with the details of the wonders of energy and the mighty toil of those summed months on the Jersey coast. And in four other spots on the face of the earth similar scenes were being enacted. But terrific as were the results, grandiose the scale, the details must needs be tiresome, for after all they were only digging a hole in the earth. In this, as in all other matters of great moment, it is well to trust to the trained and not the technical observer. Edgar Harkness, the star man of The New York Evening Journal staff, was at the works from the day the first man reached there. Looking over the files of the paper for that summer I came upon a special article he wrote describing the progress of the work.

You can gather some idea of the tremendous undertaking from his picturesque but vigorous English:

"This place of bedlam," he wrote, in part, under date of September 11, of that year, "looks as if it were going up in smoke. To-day the cloud above it is so dense that electric discharges like heat lightning flash across it and there is always a muttering like distant thunder, while beneath its edges a deep blue horizon tells that elsewhere the sun is shining. Beneath the Tunnel City roars and shouts explodes, whistles, thunders and yells.

"From the midst of the pandemonium and settling over everything like a white sea-fog rises a monstrous white column of dust to join the black smoke canopy overhead. Meeting the heavy blackness it seems to spread and mingle with it, forming a cloud such as observed at the eruptions of volcanoes. Pressed down by the colder air above it spreads like a gigantic umbrella, and little shreds are whirled away by puffs of the seaward breeze.

"SHIP captains report that when there is a steady off-shore wind this dust forms white scum on the ocean for miles, and New Yorkers know the source of the nuisance that turns their blue serge suits gray."

Here Mr. Harkness drifts off temporarily to little things that were important for the day only, and then goes on to report the progress of the actual work.

"The place of construction, following its fixed width of twelve hundred feet, is now nearly the finishing of a straight inland cut of three miles. It is laid out in long terraces so that the construction trains can hold to easy grades until they reach the last level, which will be 600 feet below the level of the sea. Here the actual sinking of the tunnel itself will begin.

"But the day before yesterday this place was a sandy heath, half reclaimed from barrenness. Swiftly it became a gravel pit, a quarry, and at last a monster chasm that swarms seemingly with insect life. Queer little busy beings covered with white dust that dig and growl and grovel and toil, gray-faced and dusty-haired.

"Twenty thousand of them hurl themselves into this mighty ravine every day. Their drills and picks and shovels glitter like the sunlight on a lake. A whistle shrieks a warning, a column of dust rises to join the vast cloud overhead, a colossus of stone, wrenched by dynamite from its grip of earth, swerves outward and falls with a thundering roar. Another puff of dust leaps up and the insects swarm into it.

"As far as eye can reach down that long incline into the bowels of the earth these puffs that tell of terrific blasts are shooting up. Great dredges, attacking the quicksand, shriek and whine as they suck up liquid death. The chain pumps groan and rattle. Derricks and steam shovels whirr and dip. Aerial carts whizz past you on trolleys. Swarms of tiny locomotives hustle and fuss around, shrieking at each other with shrill voices.

"Sand and gravel flies back to the town where mountains of bagged cement are stacked, for there must be housing for 40,000 men before the cold weather reaches. Here another army is toiling at break-neck speed about this gigantic task.

"And all of this is but preliminary to the real work of the great project."

Then there follows a wonderful description of the workings of the great tidal basins, Allan's improvement on the designs of Schlich and Lippman, the famous German engineers, to whom we owe the harnessing of the incalculable power of the tides. Through his ingenious arrangement of reservoirs thousands of tons of water were dumped on gigantic turbines every hour of the twenty-four, and the lift and fall of the tides gave him all of this power for simply the cost of original work—less than $5,000,000.

The scene, indeed, recalled the Tower of Babel—a project so vast that its very conception seemed impious.

And this was only one of five such scenes. In Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London similar mighty panoramas of daring were being unrolled. And Allan, the genius who had provoked these upheavals, was the motive spirit of each. He was tireless and unresting. Rives and Mrs. Allan heard from him in one camp or another, and before they had finished his short dispatches—so it seemed to them—another from some other tunnel city was laid in their hands or he himself dropped off a construction train from Toms River, clear-eyed, smooth-shaven, and fresh and energetic as ever.

Rives had built a beautiful little house for the chief engineer and his wife on the seaside of the tunnel city, and Allan encouraged Mrs. Allan to spend much of her time there, even when he was in this country. Rives was the one warm personal friend he had made in his lonely life, and knowing how much pleasure Mrs. Allan found in his society, he was glad to have her as nearly contented as possible while he darted back and forth across half the Northern Hemisphere. They had one child—a little girl, Edith—and she grew to be almost a stranger to her father.

Even when Allan was in New York he saw but little of his wife and child. His business affairs usually took him a great deal to the house of the great Lloyd, where he held long conferences with the old financier or his daughter; who had the details of the tunnel at her finger ends.

A Neglected Wife.

Thus Mrs. Allan, a lonely and neglected woman, was thrown constantly with Rives, an impressionable and high-strung man, who already held for her at least a deep admiration.

"Mac is in New York—I got a wire from him late this afternoon," remarked Rives one evening as they were taking a horseback ride along one of the wide level roads that led northward from Tunnel City.

"Yes, he called me up," said the woman, with a faintly weary note in her voice. "He said that he would be busy about the real estate deal for the next day or so and would have to go to France within a few days. He called up from the Lloyds," she added, without conscious meaning.

Rives was silent for a few moments as the horses pounded along the gravel road, side by side.

"Did he say anything about running down here or——?" he stopped off short. He had tried to make the tone nonchalant, but she understood and bit her lip.

"I know what you are thinking about, Jack," she said soberly, and her voice trembled slightly. "And I wish you wouldn't—pity me."

Rives swore at himself in an undertone and tried to stammer out something light and reassuring.

"You're too old a friend," she cut in, quietly. "It would be just like you to go and talk to Mac, and that would be worse than anything else. He is doing the best he can, and I know I ought to be happy."

"Aren't you?" asked Rives.

"No, I'm not, and you know it perfectly well, my friend. I am as proud of Mac as a woman could be of a man, but I want to be married to a man, not to a—a—an institution."

Rives looked at the lightly poised body and the delicate brown head and soft eyes that shone like amber in the moonlight. And he laughed uncertainly to check the something that rushed to his lips.

"Oh, well," he said lightly and kindly, "it won't be so bad in a little while. Mac is trying to do eight men's work and everything is just starting now, but when——"

"I know," she interrupted grimly. "Everything has been just starting for months and months. I went over all this with him a few weeks ago and he told me just what you are trying to tell me. I only know that I have been under the same roof with my husband for 24 consecutive hours in six months."

"But, little girl, don't you see——"

"Oh, yes! I know I am unreasonable. I have cut out about a bale of newspaper clippings about Mac and pictures of me, and I ought to be as vain and pleased as—as—as a woman. I am proud of him. I even admit that it gratifies the woman in me to be pointed out in department stores and at the theater as the wife of Mac Allan—but that isn't all that a normal woman wants the man she loves to give her."

Rives wisely held his tongue and there was another little silence. At last he asked:

"Did you ever—have you ever let Mac know exactly how you feel about—about this?"

The woman did not reply at once.

"I went down to his office about a month ago," she said at last in a low voice. "I couldn't help it, Jack. I was so lonely and miserable. He sent out word that he was very busy, but would be out in a little while. I told the boy to tell him that I wanted to see him at once. I was mad by that time. He came out perfectly good humored, as he always is, and I told him I wanted him to come home for dinner and spend the evening with me. He said he couldn't and I—I cried, and I'm afraid I made a scene—but there was nobody there."

SHE paused, and Rives made no comment. He was looking straight over his horse's head up the moonlit road, and his face was in the shade of his broad-brimmed hat. She looked at him and put her hand on his arm.

"You don't blame me, do you, Jack?"

She felt the muscles stiffen under her hand.

"No," he replied, almost gruffly, "I don't."

She sighed. "He told me he would have more time in a few months, it would be different, and I said I didn't want to wait any longer. I told him I was going to take up nursing and go to work in the hospital here—and that's why I've done it. If I couldn't have my husband I had to have something else to occupy my mind. I can't bear to be useless, Jack."

"What did he say when you told him that?" asked Rives, quietly.

"He laughed—and told me to go ahead."

Again they rode on in silence for a brief time.

"I suppose I am foolish," she said at last, in a wistful tone, "but sometimes I wish that Mac had never succeeded in getting this tunnel plan through. He doesn't belong to me any more; he belongs to the world. I have to live in the light of his halo—and I'd rather live in the light of a fireside."

Rives abruptly pulled up his horse and turned.

"Let's go home," he said.

"I'M glad you could get up here, old man. The storm is about to break. Listen!"

Up to them from the street, where hundreds of real estate brokers were gathered, came a steady roar. Allan and Rives listened and smiled.

"You certainly did some smooth work in a publicity line," said the latter.

"It wasn't smooth," disclaimed Allan, a little resentfully, "and I didn't do it. It just did itself. You know—but maybe you haven't had time to see their stunts—but the viograph people have been among my best little advertisers, and they have paid for the privilege. They have been showing pictures with miles and miles of beautiful houses and department stores and all the trimmings of a great city along with their regular films showing the progress of the work—all labeled 'The Tunnel City of the Future' and 'Tunnel City Ten Years From To-day.'"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading an awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties."

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Io. It is a jerky sort of a name, Io, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I. O. U.

"Well, this Io is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Illa, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Io to get Illa because she has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gell belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Illa that she cannot marry Io she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when thou passest beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Io is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy back and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Io's bride.'

"'But Io like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe Io a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe Io nothing.'

"The way the story ends, Io makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Illa until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Atlantan passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barber. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In the interval not a word was uttered not a look interchanged between the lady and the detective. But the moment Dr. Cameron returned, a sudden change took place in Mrs. Cameron, and rising, she confronted Mr. Gryce with a frank and grateful air that lent quite a new aspect to her ever-changing countenance.

"You are very kind," she declared, in a grateful tone that was in itself a shock to both her hearers. "Knowing this frightful tale; seeing as you must have done that, if true, Mildred Farley did not die after I went downstairs, but before, you have come here in confidence and without scandal to hear what I have to say about the matter and give me an opportunity to explain myself. I shall never forget this consideration, sir; and as proof of my gratitude I will at once tell you what I can about this poor unfortunate's death, hoping that you will see the matter as I did, and understand in a measure at least how I was driven by my fears to keep back my knowledge of this frightful secret, even from my mother and husband, till it was torn from me and shred by shred as you have seen. And now for the truth.

"This girl, whose death you consider such a mystery, committed suicide. She committed it in my presence, just a few minutes before I went downstairs to be married. It was a terrible shock and a great surprise to me. I had been dressing, and was thinking of anything else than tragedies or death. Nor do I think she meant to die then or there. But she was desperate. She had had a talk with her intended husband and had been disappointed in him. She did not want to see him again, and the contrast between the hopes expressed by my bridal attire and the dreariness of her own outlook maddened her, I supposed; for in a moment, as it were, she seized upon that bottle of poison and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I had got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Should I mar the happiness of the whole company by revealing what had occurred? I thought not in the moment I had to consider. So I just drew the poor girl into the alcove, and in grief and terror enough, God knows, covered her over with some dresses I had before pulled down from the closet and thrown on the floor. I had barely done this and readjusted my veil when the knock came and I had to descend.

"It was frightful, but I did not know how frightful till I came to think. Then I almost gave way to my terror and agitation, and when that scream came down from upstairs——"

She stopped. They did not wonder; at such a horrible experience, who would not shudder!

Her husband for the first time realized all she had been through and reached out his hand in sympathy, though there was yet much to be explained before he could feel reconciled to a past so full of mysteries and shadows.

"And how," asked the detective, nothing but formal respect on his part, "was the body disposed of? When next we hear of it, it was in the keeping of a Dr. Molesworth, who, as we have been informed, was not one of your wedding guests."

Mrs. Cameron did not flinch. She looked, if anything, more winning and candid than before.

"Dr. Molesworth was the man who had expected to marry her. He had gone to the hotel for that purpose and had not found her; so he came where he suspected her to be. He was not one of my guests, but that did not keep him from the house. He came in at the front door and stood in the hall, and I happened to see him and immediately knew what he was after. So I arose and went out—I was then receiving congratulations—and, accosting him without delay, told him that the person he wanted was in my room and bade him go upstairs and I would follow. For I not only saw that he was in a state of feeling that bordered on frenzy, but I also saw that if the matter was to be hushed up and the body got out of the house without disturbance, he was the man to do it; and I relied upon him and went up after him and explained what had occurred and showed him the dead body of his bride, and asked for help and got it. I don't know that I should call it help now," she added, in a low voice, "for it might have been better for me if I had called in the whole house to see that dead girl, and so escaped the days and weeks of deceit that have pressed upon me like so many mountain weights of lead."

Her husband looked as if he concurred with her, but he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce asked another question.

"You read the account of the proceedings before the Coroner, which was printed in the papers?"

She acknowledged that she had.

"You must have seen then that Dr. Molesworth testified to having found the girl on a stoop in Twenty-second street."

"Yes, sir. It was agreed between us that he should tell some such story as that. It seemed wisest to us at the time. Since she had killed herself it would not hurt her and it would relieve me from endless complication, to have it thought she had committed the deed in the street. So we thought then—with how little judgment let this moment testify."

The detective fixed his eyes upon her and opened his lips to put another question. But he evidently found it too difficult to say what was in his mind, and turned it into the simple suggestion, "You must have known Dr. Molesworth well, Mrs. Cameron?"

A flush, hot and vivid, answered him from the doctor's face, but her cheek did not alter and it was with much composure she replied:

"I had learned much of his disposition from my conversations with the woman he expected to marry. As for his face, I had seen him at Mrs. Olney's, where I have been more than once. I had even had some talk with him. It was the situation which made us like friends at once."

"I understand," asserted Mr. Gryce, but his looks did not bear out his words. "Your conduct is not so inexplicable," he went on. "Women think much of appearances and are not apt to weigh the consequences of their impulsive efforts to preserve them. But a man usually halts long before he enters into a scheme that must end in perjury, and Dr. Molesworth committed perjury, Mrs. Cameron."

She dropped her chin upon her breast and the presence of a growing dread began to show itself in her face.

"Not only that," the detective continued. "He engaged to do a fearful thing when he promised you to get a dead body out of the house alone and without discovery. Have you thought how much nerve and determination it would require? What self-sacrificing devotion it would need to lead a man not only to take the risk of such an act, but to subject himself to the horrors of it? I find it difficult to reconcile what I have seen of Dr. Molesworth with such devotion to a lady so little known to him. I would sooner think——" He paused; she looked at him breathlessly—"that he had his own reasons for keeping the matter quiet," he pointedly added.

"Perhaps he had," she simply replied. "I can not tell all that passed in his mind. I can only tell you what we did."

"And you repeat that it was through his agency this dead girl was got out of your room and house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when?"

"That I do not know. It was after I left."

"What, you went away before she was removed from the house?"

"Yes, sir. Having made up my mind to trust the whole affair to him. I only thought of escape for myself. Then it could never have been managed if I had not cleared the backstairs by having my trunk carried out. It was down those he intended to go."

"And did he?"

"I can not tell. I only know he succeeded in his undertaking. How or under what difficulties, he must himself inform you. I have never had an opportunity to ask him."

"No," she returned boldly; "not while he doubts whether I have spoken of the matter or not. He has too chivalrous ideas of duty."

"What, when his life is at stake?"

"His life!"

"He was on the point of being arrested for murder when this testimony of Celia's came in."

"I suspected it, or rather I knew that he was under the surveillance of the police, for he told us so in an interview he had with the doctor about a case of his."

"And you were going to allow him to go to prison upon a charge you knew perfectly unfounded?"

"Mr. Gryce, I was not two weeks married. I know that my husband hated deceit and I lacked the courage to acknowledge that I had become entangled in it. Then I trusted to Dr. Molesworth discovering a way out of his difficulty, and was so sure that he would I never even thought of his being in any danger of his life. It is also only fair to myself to say that, had he been brought to trial, I should have relentlessly sacrificed myself. It was my hope that he would not which kept he silent so long."

She was pleading her cause well, and yet her shadowed brow and paling lip showed she was conscious that it was a failing one, and that the doom she had so long dreaded was rushing upon her.

"I except your explanation," quoth the detective, "and it only remains at present for you to inform us where Miss Farley got the drug with which she poisoned herself."

"I can not tell you that," came in fainter tones from Mrs. Cameron's lips.

"Was it from her bag, her pocket, or the folds of her dress that she took the vial which held it?"

Genevieve miserably shook her head.

Mr. Gryce looked troubled; he hesitated a little, then suggested kindly, "You saw her carry it to her lips?"

Genevieve faintly acquiesced.

"And did you see where she took it from?"

"I can not answer."

Dr. Cameron strode one step and stood beside his wife.

"Why can not you answer?" he asked gently.

"Because——" she felt for a chair and sat down. "Because you will not believe what I say."

"I will not believe what you say?"

She turned her eyes, which had been fixed upon vacancy, on his face. There was unfathomable love in them, but there was unfathomable despair also.

"I think you would," said she, "and yet it is very incredible."

"The true things are often the incredible," observed he.

She smiled, but in a hopeless sort of way, and in an altered tone, murmured:

"Very well, then, she got it out of a box."

"A box she carried?"

"No; one she found in the room."

Dr. Cameron stared; so did the detective. Genevieve sat and shivered silently.

"Took a vial containing prussic acid from a box she found in the room?"

"Yes."

"And how came prussic acid to be in your room, Mrs. Cameron?"

It was a question for which she seemingly had no reply. Though she opened her lips, no words issued from them, and she sat the image of shame and despair. The doctor, struck aghast, started impetuously forward, and would have spoken himself but that the detective forestalled him.

"You do not think I have the right to ask that question," he remarked. "Well, I withdraw it and will simply inquire what sort of box it was which held this vial, and where in the room it was kept?"

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

One Pretty Girl Finds Nature a Most Efficient Teacher

"ONCE upon a time," began Laura Hamilton, more reminiscently than her very evident youthfulness would seem to permit, "I owned a little white poodle—a cross between a Maltese and a French poodle. He had wonderful long silky hair, and we used to keep it in order by treating it with oil of cocoanut. Now, a few years ago my hair, which was very long, suddenly began to come out a bit—to thin at the ends and to show a tendency to acquaintance with an up-to-then stranger, dandruff. First I worried, then I vainly consulted a specialist or two, and then I thought of doggie."

Oil of Cocoanut.

"Sermons in stones—and beauty hints in the silken coat of a Franco-Maltese poodle," thought Miss Interviewer, who was sitting in the wings of the Winter Garden in New York talking to Miss Hamilton, and glimpsing bits of the wonderful marchings and flings and dancings going on out of wonderful New Wynburn's wonderful Capital Steps. And the three "wonderfuls" in that sentence are none too many.

"I thought of doggie," went on my pretty little brown-haired neighbor, "and I invested in 10 cents' worth of oil of cocoanut. And it is good for good hair and so kind to poor hair. Use it every other night—moisten the finger tips with it, and rub the oil well into the scalp. It won't make the hair greasy or oily looking—but it will give it a natural gloss and luster. Shampoo the hair once a week and brush it a hundred strokes every day. Part it down the middle from crown to the nape of the neck; bring the two heavy strands over the shoulders and brush each section fifty times with a long sweeping motion that swings from the scalp to the very ends of the hair. Plentiful glossy hair is sure to result."

"And then we do not take our glowing, abundant tresses and torture them with hot irons, do we?" I asked.

"We do not," replied Miss Hamilton. "We trust the natural gloss and add a little training as to graceful curves and scallops, so we may look as well as possible—and we don't beautify ourselves at the cost of our hair.

Give It a Chance.

"If you are trying to be attractive," she went on earnestly, "do not make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others. Give everything a chance. Let me see—I start by trying to keep calm and cool and well and rested. My first rule is to avoid restaurants at night. After the theater, instead of going into a restaurant, with its heavy air, and heavy glare of artificial light, I motor out into the pure, clean country.

"An hour under the stars every night—an hour with the cool wind blowing on my face and the pure, clean, unused air of night blowing the cobwebs out of my brain—and I go home to restful, dreamless sleep. Then I wake up ready to start the day with about ten minutes of exercise.

"First I lie flat on my bed and stretch my arms out straight, and take a deep, lung-filling breath; then I exhale that breath, dropping my arms to my sides the while, and as I fill my lungs and chest again I raise my arms at right angles to my body again.

"Next I hop out of bed and take these two exercises by the open side of your body in trim and ready to meet the demands of the hours to come."

And then, ever ready to meet the demands of the hour or moment, Miss Hamilton tripped across the stage to add her own glowing young personality to the glowing ensemble of "The Passing Show of 1913."

LILIAN LAUFFERTY.

Your Morning Swim.

"Now take your morning swim; wash your face in clear, hot water, and without soap; dash a bit of witch hazel across your face and rinse in cold water; dress in pretty, simple clothes, and eat a simple breakfast, and you are all ready for a happy, useful day, with every part of your body in trim and ready to meet the demands of the hours to come."

And then, ever ready to meet the demands of the hour or moment, Miss Hamilton tripped across the stage to add her own glowing young personality to the glowing ensemble of "The Passing Show of 1913."

LILIAN LAUFFERTY.

Miss Laura Hamilton, from Grave to Gay.

"If you are trying to be attractive, don't make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others."

This is one of the maxims of Miss Laura Hamilton, based on her own experience.

Do You Know---

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reasons to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

TELL HER WHAT YOU HAVE TOLD ME.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had been keeping company with a young girl for about four years. We were to be married last month, but about three months ago we had a little quarrel over a foolish thing I had said to her, which she took up in a wrong way. The quarrel started when I wanted to kiss her after an enjoyable evening before I left her, but she objected and I got real angry. Then I passed the remark that started the quarrel. Kindly let me know how I can regain her love, as I have suffered enough. HARRY "B."

Apologize and make your apology humble and sincere.

I can't believe that a girl would refuse to kiss her betrothed lover good-night because of a whim. You must have done more to offend her than you tell, and must make your apology fit your crime, and your conduct exemplary after she forgives you.

YOU TALK LIKE A MAN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl 21 years of age and I am 19 and have a good position and am able to take care of a wife. She loves me and I love her, so do you think I am too young to be in love, as I am thinking of making her my wife? So I would like your advice, as she is always speaking of marriage. ANXIOUS.

You are not too young to be in love, but 19 is rather young for a man to marry. You say you are in position to support her, which would indicate that you are older than your years, and are a good deal of a man after all.

But why not wait just two years? Believe me, the time will go rapidly and you will never regret it.

WRITE HIM A NOTE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 19 and have been keeping company with a young man a year older than myself for a year and three months. Just because I sent a card to his friend I think he is angry at me. I did not mean any harm. Kindly let me know what I should do to try to make up with him, as I love him dearly. J. K.

I do not like to suggest that a girl apologize when she has done no wrong, for the reason that once humble, the man tries to keep her so. But you have been sweethearts so long, and love is too precious to risk for pride's sake, so write him a little note of explanation. I hope he will be man enough to love you all the more because of this proof of your affection.

LET HER KNOW THE TRUTH.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a poor man and have been keeping company with a young lady for the last couple of months. Would it be proper for me to give her up, after accepting a diamond pin from her at Christmas time? I am willing to give the pin back as I do not care for her. P. W.

I am sorry for the girl, for such humiliation leaves a scar, but I would be more sorry for her if you married her without love in your heart.

Tell her you no longer love her, and be manly about it. And, always, till the day of your death, think and speak well of her.

I think it would be better to return the pin.

I AM AFRAID NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a Cuban lady and I am sure that my love is reciprocated. My many friends embarrass me quite a good deal by claiming that she is a negress. Do you think if I should marry her I could be happy with her? I am thinking seriously of proposing. GEORGE S.

My fear that the step would be fatal is based on your anxiety. Were your love of the right sort, it would be impossible for your friends to embarrass you, and their doubts would only strengthen your resolution to marry the girl. Think this over seriously. I want you to be happy, but you must not marry a girl only to break her heart by being ashamed of her.

CALL AT HOME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, but she does not answer my letters. How can I meet her and tell her of my love? RALPH.

Perhaps she has never received them. Call at her home and learn your fate from her own lips. It may require courage, but boldness in a lover is a trait which all girls admire.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT would appear to those who have noted the great number and variety of women's clubs that woman can have no longing that will not find a society organized for the express purpose of its gratification.

If she aspires to project her spiritual insight into the occult or to squelch that worm of the dust called Man, or to get bacon at cheaper prices, she has only to join a club, and such a desired end, if not attained, is at least set in motion.

But that every longing is not met is proven through the organization by Daysey Mayme Appleton of a society for which the heart of every woman has unconsciously yearned. And the greater the number of her friends, the greater her yearning.

Daysey Mayme had had the parlors of her home made hideous by the gifts of loving friends for years, but not until she received a water color of a yellow lamb on a cerise field with a purple shepherdess did she decide to rebel. The result of that rebellion was the recent launching of a club called The Secret Society of Breakers.

No woman need admit she belongs to such a society. Such an admission would cause the estrangement of generous friends and result in charges of lack of appreciation of their gifts.

"The members," explained Daysey Mayme, "are known to me and report to me for assignment, and our method of procedure in this:

"A woman receives a fish platter on which is painted Jonah inside the whale or some other appetizing marine scene, and the donor expects it to be placed on the plate rail of the dining room.

"The recipient appeals to me, and I deputize one of the active workers of our order to make a social call at her home. The active worker sees the platter, she is enraptured with it, she asks to hold it, she lets it fall, and it breaks into a hundred pieces.

"She is overcome with remorse, of course, which I appease by paying for her work as soon as it is reported that the plate is beyond mending.

"Our organization is only two weeks old, but in that time members have made calls on other members afflicted with generous friends, and have carelessly dropped and broken seventeen goldfish globes, nine lamps, six vases and fourteen china plaques, and have borrowed four oil paintings and eleven sofa cushions for the purpose of copying, which they have lost on the way home.

"The Secret Society of Breakers will appeal to every woman who has kind and generous friends. In future no woman need go through life with her love for an artistic home blighted by purple and blue vases against her green wall paper or pink camels worked on a yellow sofa cushion.

"All she need do will be to drop a note to me."

THE JUDGE WAS WILLING TO HELP OUT, ANYWAY

PITCHER CAVET FATED TO LOSE HIS RIGHT EYE

TRUE baseball fans, no matter how much they want to see Atlanta beat Mobile in the approaching series here, will regret to learn that the Gulls will be minus the services of their prize southpaw, Pug Cavet. And it will be with deeper regret they learn that Pug probably has pitched his last game.

Members of the Memphis club said yesterday that Cavet's right eye, which has troubled him from childhood, had been getting steadily worse with some malady that would probably necessitate its removal in order to save the other eye and not render the lanky pitcher totally blind.

Specialists are treating Cavet, but hold out little hope of saving the eye. It would be a mechanical impossibility for a one-eyed man to play baseball successfully, owing to the extreme necessity of judging distance at all times—a feat accomplished unconsciously by the eyes themselves, using the distance between them as the base of a triangle, with the object on which they are focused as the point.

Should Cavet be forced to retire the game will lose a most promising young pitcher and one who was practically certain of making good in the Big Show.

Come On, Cracker Fans, Let's Beat Out Birmingham

We MUST Prove That Atlanta Is the Best Baseball City in the South by Turning Out Biggest Yearly Attendance.

"Now is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of their ball club."

You remember the old racing "speed sentence," the first one everybody learns to pick out on a typewriter?

Well, it says "party" and omits the reference to baseball fans.

But the exigencies of the situation in Atlanta seem to warrant a little editing of the famous old sentence.

Over in Birmingham they are going after two things, both of which now are held and much prized in Atlanta.

One is the reputation of being the Best Baseball Town in the Southern League.

The other is the attendance record for a season's play.

ATLANTA HOLDS THE PRESENT RECORD—196,000.

And that is what makes Atlanta the best baseball town in the circuit. That is, it is one of the things. There are others too numerous to mention just now.

Anyway, Birmingham, with a club that is fighting to stay out of the second division, is near breaking the attendance record this year.

And Birmingham is a couple of jumps ahead of Atlanta, right now—and Atlanta with a ball club making a great little fight for the pennant, and almost sure to land as high as second place, anyway.

The Atlanta merchants and business men are taking up the boastful challenge from Slagville. It doesn't listen good to them, this hearing that another town is the best town in the Southern League.

And so, boys, here's a little tip:

Requests for the afternoon off, beginning to-day and lasting until the afternoon of September 6, will be given preferred attention in Atlanta business and mercantile offices—

PROVIDED—

The petitioner adds that he WANTS TO GO TO THE BALL GAME!

Try it and see.

The following, just for example, have asserted openly that they will grant afternoons off to just as many employees as they can possibly spare, from now until the end of the season—to go to the ball game!

W. E. Chapin Insurance Company, Royal Insurance Company, Georgia Railway and Power Company, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, Third National Bank, V. H. Kreigshaber & Son, and others who are adding their prestige to Atlanta's battle to retain the title of the "Best Ball Town in the Southern League."

Try it and see.

TRY IT TO-DAY.

To-day's a mighty good time, what with it being the grocers' and butchers' half holiday, and the date of the baseball track meet of the Memphis and Atlanta clubs, starting at 3 o'clock, with five events for which Atlanta merchants have offered prizes.

Sports and Such

EVERS IS HAPPY.

"I have no complaints to make,"
Said Evers to a fan,
"But the umps are out to break
And slough me if they can.
"The Giants' luck still blocks me;
My team is full of kinks;
And Bresnahan still knocks me,
And Murphy is a jinx!"

* * *

A BALL PLAYER HAS BEEN fined $10 for calling Umpire Bill Klem a catfish. And yet—what should he have called him?

* * *

PRESIDENT EBBETS IS SIGNing up a few college men, but not with the idea that they will assist in the preparation of forthcoming dedication speeches. These will still be the old Ebbets brand.

* * *

MANAGER MILLER HUGGINS is going to be asked to resign because he has been finding fault with the playing of the Cardinals. We don't wonder. Hanging is too good for him.

* * *

* * *

PELKY, BY THE WAY, retired from the ring on that occasion, but only in the Pickwicklan or Buffalo Bill sense.

* * *

IF IT WERE NOT FOR THE attitude of the magnates on gambling, we would be inclined to believe that Connie Mack's daily announcement of casualties among the Athletics might be a sign that he is laying back for bets.

* * *

MR. SNODGRASS.

(World's Series, 1912.)

Me, oh my!
Here's a fly!
I'll nail it with a half a try.
There it goes—
On my toes!
The gang will break my nose!

* * *

YOU HAVE TO ENVY MR. Chance his optimism. After losing two games to the Browns in one day, he still thinks the Yankees are not the worst team in the league.

* * *

MR. CHANCE, THE MANAGER, and Mr. Touchard, the tennis player, each understands how the other feels. Both lay all of their troubles to foot-faults.

* * *

IT'S FUNNY THAT ball players succeed in annoying Hank O'Day. You'd think that any man who had managed the Cincinnati team would be immune.

LEACH CROSS LEAVES FOR VANCOUVER TO SEE CHAMP

Kid Jinx Gets Kick in Ribs and Crackers Win Two Games in One Day

ZOWIE! SOME HITTING!! 29 SWATS FOR 20 RUNS

By O. B. Keeler.

TRULY it has been said, It's a Long Worm that has no turning.

The Crackers turned yesterday and ripped off a couple of games, the same being all two ends of a doubleheader—something that hasn't happened in weeks and weeks. Scores, 12 to 2 and 8 to 0.

Memphis was the rippee, of course. But that isn't the point. This being supposed to be a feature narrative, a feature must be found. You can get the news from the Box Score.

Well, here are a brace of features, the second of which can be subdivided ad lib.

* * *

FEATURE No. 1—Winning both games of a two-ply matinee.

Feature No. 2—The method of winning same.

* * *

OF course, there was extremely airtight pitching, for one thing. But that would have won with a good deal less than a total of 29 hits and 20 runs in fifteen innings.

That might be construed into piling it on. And when it comes to prodigality, the original P. S. had nothing whatever on Bill Smith's hands, battering away at the reeling Turtles yesterday afternoon.

* * *

FOR example, there was one inning in the first game—the seventh—when six hits were arranged carefully in a row, one after another. Then an error was inserted, and two more hits added, the total productiveness being limited to five runs only by scandalous performances on the bases.

* * *

IN another round of the same encounter, four hits produced four runs, but the Turtles kicked in with three boots, which naturally aided.

Everybody on the Cracker club took at least one safe whack while the whacking was good. Long, Smith and Bisland took three apiece, and Agler Welchonce, Nixon and Chapman were content with two each. Nixon scored three runs and made himself otherwise obnoxious to the enemy.

* * *

WALLY SMITH got the long hit of the day, a triple that rolled nearly to the score board. He duplicated the feat in the second game, but the ground was heavy, which afflicted Mr. Smith's feet, and he was out at third after a nice gooey slide.

Thompson pitched a one-hit affair in the six innings the Turtles batted in the second game, while Doc Newton discovered a lot more about the law of gravitation by watching a shower of base-hits dropping in various parts of the field.

* * *

AMONG the other legitimate headliners might be mentioned Jack Love's glove-hand stab of a line drive from Bisland's bat; Schweitzer's long running catch of Smith's fly; Agler's stab of Bisland's assist on Shanley; Nixon's great running catch of Abstein's foul fly, and Baerwald's debate with Umps Stockdale in the first inning of the first game.

Baerwald spoke with fervor, but lost the decision. Also, he was canned from the game.

* * *

ONE more feature, because it's one you don't see oftener than once in an ordinary lifetime.

In the fourth inning of the first game, Bisland hit a sharp grounder to Abstein at first. Abby came in to threaten Smith, who was on third, and Bizzy stopped right in front of him. Abstein swung at him with the ball, Bizzy ducked right to the ground, dodged under the big fellow's wing and beat it to first.

He was safe—and he hadn't run out of the line, either.

* * *

REGULAR daily feature: Mobile won.

Bearing on the death grapple: We just got back the half-game we lost the day before, when the Gulls won while we got into a dogfall.

Prospects for first place: Chilly.

* * *

OH, yes—it rained, too.

Another one of those inhuman showers that appear to contradict the adage that the rain falls alike on the just and the unjust.

This particular rain fell mostly on the ball park. The sun was shining everywhere else, as on the celebrated occasion when Mr. Casey was at the bat. But it certainly did rain between games.

At that, most of the flood disappeared from the earth by the time Bill Smith did the dove act, and the second game got its 5 1-2 innings played in less than an hour, in spite of the sloppiness and the terrific hitting of the Crackers.

McLoughlin Retains His Tennis Title

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—The lawn tennis championship record for 1913 was practically completed on the Casino Grand court when Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, successfully defended his own title in singles and maintained the Pacific Coast supremacy by defeating R. Norris Williams, second, of Philadelphia, in the finals of the all-comers tournament, in a well-fought four-set match. The scores 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

As McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy, of Los Angeles, won their second championship in doubles last week and Miss Mary Browne, of Los Angeles, is still the women's title holder, the ascendancy of California in the principal departments of tennis is assured for another year.

JIM GRIFFIN TO REFEREE RITCHIE-WELSH TITLE GO

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 27.—Negotiations for the Freddie Welsh-Willie Ritchie battle for the world's lightweight championship were officially closed here. Jim Griffin, of San Francisco, will referee.

TEX RICHARDS SWEEPS CARD IN FINE RACES

TEX RICHARDS "came back" last night at the Motordrome. He won every heat in which he started, making the biggest clean-up of the season. Number "23," Richards' famous "boat," returned from the factory yesterday morning, after a thorough overhauling, and if was just bubbling over with speed.

The races last night were exceptionally good. While the time in some of the heats was not as fast as expected, yet the finishes were all close and exceptionally exciting.

The feature event was the William L. Peel Sweepstakes. Colonel Peel was scheduled to start this event, but on account of illness in his family he was unable to be on the job.

Richards won the Southern championship and the Peel Sweepstakes. Luther ran second in both events, riding fine races, but his machine just didn't have the necessary speed to nose out Tex.

Morty Graves won the last two heats of his special match race against Georges Renel, after the latter had captured the opening heat.

Here are the results:

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONSHIP.
(One-mile heats; 2 miles final; 25 points for first; 15 points for second and 5 for third.)

First Heat—Henry Lewis, first; Harry Glenn, second. Time, 44 2-5.

Second Heat—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time, 42 1-5.

Final—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 1:26.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(Three heats, 1, 2 and 3 miles, best 2 out of 3 heats.)

First Heat (1 mile)—Won by Georges Renel. Time, 44.

Second Heat (4 miles)—Won by Morty Graves. Time, 1:25.

Third Heat (3 miles)—Won by Morty Graves. Time, 2:11 2-5.

W. L. PEEL SWEEPSTAKES.
(French point system; 10 for first, 6 for second, 3 for third; three heats, 3, 4 and 5 miles.)

First Heat (3 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 2:08 3-5.

Second Heat (4 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 2:55.

Third Heat (5 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 3:43.

Points—Richards, 30; Luther, 18; Glenn, 6; Lewis, 3.

VARDON BREAKS RECORDS ON CLEVELAND GOLF COURSE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, English professional golfers, touring the United States, at the Mayfield club yesterday defeated Joe K. Bole, city champion of Cleveland, and Eben M. Byers, of Pittsburg, 5 up in a 36-hole match.

In defeating Byers and Bole, Vardon broke the Mayfield course record, both for 18 and 36 holes. In the morning round he lowered the 18-hole record held by Byers, from 72 to 67. In the afternoon he beat his own newly established record with 66, giving him 135 for 36 holes.

The old 36-hole record was 155. In the afternoon round Vardon's partner, Ray, bettered the former 18-hole course record, doing it in 71. John D. Rockefeller was an enthusiastic spectator.

MERCER'S FOOTBALL TEAM MUST REPORT SEPTEMBER 5

MACON, Aug. 27.—Candidates for Mercer's football team will be required to report for training September 5, according to an official announcement sent out by Professor J. F. Sellers, acting president, this morning. Coach Lewie Hardage will report next Monday morning.

KRAZY KAT — We Don't Blame Ignatz for Hurling the Brick

TRACK MEET IS ON TO-DAY AT PONCE DE LEON

TO-DAY'S the day—Field Day, you know.

Get out to Ponce DeLeon at 3 o'clock, or a shade earlier, and kill two guineas with one dornick—see the Atlanta and Memphis players in a track meet, and hand one to that cocky Birmingham, which has an idea of being a better baseball town than Atlanta.

The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock, unless the special 100-yard dash, a challenge event between Doc Seabough and Joe Dunn, should not be finished by that time.

Anyway, Elliott Dent will pitch, and we may draw Rube Kissinger as official pest for the Turtles.

But the field sports start at 3 o'clock, and there will be at least five events: 100-yard dash, circling the bases, distance throwing, fungo hitting, and a sack race.

Another special challenge event is the 100-yard race between Jack Love and Bill Abstein, of the Turtles. Bill declined to bet on the result, saying he was ashamed to. But he has bound himself to buy Jack a hat, to cost not less than $5, if Jack can beat him.

Jack thinks that is fair enough.

Tight Golf Battles at East Lake

D. & F. Play Reaches 2d Round

MATCH play in the Davis & Freeman trophy golf tournament at East Lake began yesterday afternoon, and before play ceased for darkness the first round had been finished in all flights and several matches in the second round had been disposed of.

The feature match in the first flight was that between H. Block and R. L. Jones, won by the former, 1 up, in a close and exciting round. The second flight turned up closer matches, on the average, than the first flight, and in two instances extra holes were necessary to determine the winner. In one, O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham in 19 holes, and in the other C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole.

The lengthened holes, achieved by resetting the teeing grounds, made higher scores general, but the contestants were much pleased at the increased "sportiness" of the celebrated A. A. C. course.

Results yesterday:

First Flight.

First Round—W. R. Tichenor defeated R. J. Norris, 6 up and 5 to play; F. B. Fay defeated J. Q. Burton, 4 up and 2 to play; C. V. Rainwater defeated J. B. Pollard, 7 up and 5 to play; R. G. Blanton defeated D. C. Root, 1 up; J. A. Ellen defeated H. P. D. Comee by default; H. Block defeated R. L. Jones, 1 up; Dowdle Brown defeated Perry Adair, 5 up and 3 to play; George Adair defeated S. Hard, 4 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—J. A. Ellen defeated H. Block, 3 up and 2 to play; Dowdle Brown defeated George Adair, 6 up and 4 to play.

Second Flight.

First Round—O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham at the 19th hole; H. C. Moore defeated J. D. Eley, 3 up and 2 to play; J. C. Payne defeated E. D. Duncan, 2 up and 1 to play; J. B. Martin defeated A. A. Doonan, 1 up; C. E. Rose defeated J. W. Pearce, 4 up and 2 to play; J. D. Darling defeated H. R. Calet, 3 up and 2 to play; C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole; W. H. Glenn defeated P. A. Wright, 3 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—C. E. Rose defeated J. B. Martin, 5 up and 3 to play.

Third Flight.

First Round—C. Donaldson defeated W. F. Upshaw, 6 up and 4 to play; J. E. Mellet defeated L. M. Crichton, 4 up and 3 to play; W. P. Hazelwood defeated Scott Hudson, 5 up and 4 to play; W. E. Warren defeated T. S. Ingram, 1 up; F. B. Meador defeated Will Soul, 7 up and 5 to play; L. D. Scott defeated K. R. Cobb, 4 up and 3 to play.

Fourth Flight.

First Round—H. L. Dix defeated W. C. Spiker, 7 up and 6 to play; R. I. Gresham defeated G. N. Spring at the 20th hole; B. L. Craig defeated E. G. Beaudy, 6 up and 5 to play; G. L. Simpson defeated G. B. Allen, 1 up.

Pinch Hit by Reed, Atlanta Boy, Won For the Phillies

Milton Reed, of Atlanta, broke into the limelight in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, when he came to bat in the pinch for the Phillies against the Cardinals and settled matters in favor of his club with a smashing hit, the Phillies winning, 6 to 5.

Pinch hitters were in evidence all through the game. In the seventh inning St. Louis led, 5 to 1. In that round Miller and Byrne delivered, Paskert—formerly a Cracker player—came through in the eighth, and then Reed finished it up in the ninth.

Savannah Indians Challenge Crackers For Special Series

Word comes from the direction of Savannah that Perry Lipe's Indians, pennant winners in the Sally League, are earnestly desirous of playing a post-season series with the Crackers, following the last game of the Southern League season, September 6.

It seems the Indians, feeling pretty cocky over their own achievements of this year, and recalling the licking handed the Crackers by Chattanooga on a former occasion, when Atlanta consented to meet a smaller league club, are to be the challengers.

Manager Smith said this morning he was going to take the matter up with the directors of the local club to-day and would soon know if the series could be arranged.

Third Base Job Is a Cinch One

Art Hofman Says So, Anyway

ARTIE HOFMAN, the one-time great utility player on the old Cub machine, more lately a Pirate gardener, and still more recently a man of all work for the Vols, having performed creditably in every infield position, except shortfield, in the two months he has been with that club, thinks the third base job is the easiest on a team.

Some time ago Artie gave the last cushion the "once over" and passed it up as "nuts to crack for any ordinary ball player," to use his own expression. For giving the big laugh to third base, Artie is aware that the woods are full of ball players and sport scribes who will be howling to have him locked in the room so recently vacated by Harry Thaw. But the one-time Cub has spent considerable time cavorting around the hot corner and has his own convictions.

Here's the way Artie has it all doped out:

"This third base, instead of being the hardest position in the infield, in my opinion is the easiest. Figure how many batters ever reach first base in a game. Still less see second and by the time you get over to third, not many get that far. How many games do you read of in which it says: 'Only one man got as far as second?' Not all of them, of course, but it happens most every day, in some league.

"I guess I've seen a bunch of ball games in my time, and in lots of them the third baseman didn't get his hands on the ball but three or four times. There are mighty few 'inside hitters' in the game to-day, and where they get all this stuff about third base being the hardest position on the infield is 'by me.' What about all those ugly hops the shortstop and second baseman have to handle, to say nothing of the low and wide heaves to first—and I ought to know, because I have been in all those places myself.

"The only time a third baseman is really in trouble is when first and second are occupied, with nobody down. That's something else again, for the batter is almost certain to bunt. But if he has a smart pitcher and a clever first baseman there is a chance that all he has to do is stay on the bag and take the throw for a force play."

UNIVERSITY DROPS FOOTBALL.

LANCASTER, PA., Aug. 27.—Having been notified that Susquehanna University, of Selinsgrove, has abandoned its football schedule for the coming season, which included a game in Lancaster on September 27, with Franklin and Marshall College, the athletic authorities of the latter institution have arranged for the Pennsylvania Military College, of Chester, to fill that date.

"We'll Accomplish the Miracle of Modern Baseball," Says Rube Marquard

GIANTS BENT ON RECORD OF 4 STRAIGHT FLAGS

By Rube Marquard

IF we Giants justify our belief in ability to win a third consecutive pennant, Manager McGraw will be in a position next year to accomplish the miracle of modern diamond history—four flags in a row.

Looking back through history we find that few clubs have maintained winning consistently for more than two successive years. The Cubs, uncer Frank Chance, were a wonderful collection of brains and playing skill. They reeled off three straight championships and came back for a fourth after dropping behind Pittsburg in 1909. Throughout the five campaigns practically the same team had remained intact. When it broke, it split wide open, as evidenced this year.

Jimmy Collins, old Boston American, went to smithereens after two successful campaigns in 1903 and 1904. The Giants won easy races in 1904 and 1905. I have often heard McGraw say that he was never so sure of a pennant as in 1906, when injury and sickness wrecked what appeared a sure-fire third straight win. Yet, the bulwarks of the old-time Giants had crumbled from age. McGraw came out of the wreck with an aggregation of entirely new blood.

I have been told that McGraw's experience of 1906 was responsible for many of his most successful methods now employed. He determined never again to be caught without a reserve force strong enough to plug any emergency gap. He realized the importance of speed on attack. Speed and youth usually travel hand in hand.

With the possible exception of the Athletics no team of modern times has remained so well fortified against the future, at the close of three successive campaigns as McGraw's crew. The Athletics, through sheer overconfidence, overlooked a great chance for a third straight pennant last year.

Connie Mack has a grand team of youth and ability that is likely to last for a number of campaigns to come. Still I do not believe that Connie Mack to-day boasts the strength of McGraw.

I am confident that the Giants will beat the Athletics this year, if these old rivals clash in the world's series. Outside the batteries, the teams are about as evenly matched as could be imagined.

We have far the better balanced batteries, Meyers and McLean for all-round efficiency and hitting ability will outshine Lapp and Schang. Schang, of course, is far speedier than either of New York's celebrated backstops.

Our club has all the call on pitchers, though. Bender and Plank, the great mainstays of the Athletics, have both been overworked, and are not likely to have an opportunity to rest up for the season. Jack Coombs is strictly out of it, they tell me.

Mack is not likely to stake his chances on young pitchers who have been very erratic. Two overworked veterans will have to stand the attack of four or five pitchers who have shown wonderful pitching consistency throughout the season.

FODDER FOR FANS

Every team in the second division in the National League lost yesterday, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago winning.

* * *

As a result of victories by the Pirates and Cubs both teams are still tied for third place in the National League.

* * *

The New York Yankees have bade farewell to the West this season, after dropping three out of four games to the Naps.

* * *

* * *

"Big pitchers" is now the standing order to big league scouts. The magnates have found the big men can stand more work than the little ones.

* * *

"Babe" Adams, the Pirates' twirler, not only pitched a shutout game against the Braves, but got a two-bagger as well.

* * *

Bobby Byrne, the former Pirate, got into the game for the Phillies Tuesday, playing third base. He got a run and a hit.

* * *

Linn Scroggins, a southpaw recruit, started for the White Sox, but proved easy picking for the Senators, who beat Chicago 5 to 3.

* * *

"Josh" Billings, catcher for the Quincy, Ill., team in the Three I League, has been secured by the Clevelands.

* * *

Pitcher George Davis, of the Rochester, N. Y., team in the International League, has been secured by the Braves. Davis was formerly with the New York Yankees.

* * *

Triples by Archer and Saier beat the Dodgers.

MULFORD'S PUEGOT CAR OUT OF BIG RACE

ELGIN, ILL., Aug. 27.—Automobile racing fans were handed a disappointment to-day when the announcement was made that Ralph Mulford was unable to get his Puegot car ready for Saturday's race here. Mulford will drive a Mason on both days of the race meet.

The Puegot which Mulford was to drive was piloted to first place by Jules Goux at Indianapolis this year in the 500-mile international sweepstakes race.

The fastest practice lap on the 8 1-2-mile course was credited to Joe Dawson, winner of the 1912 500-mile race at Indianapolis. He sent his Marmon around the course in 7 minutes and 13 seconds. Spencer Wishart drove the distance in his Mercer five seconds slower than Dawson.

PLAYER BREAKS JAW.

EVANSVILLE, IND., Aug. 27.—Punch Knoll, of the Evansville Central League, broke his jaw yesterday afternoon during the game played here with Fort Wayne.

LANGFORD STOPS FLINN IN FOUR ROUNDS AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Sam Langford scored a knockout over "Porky" Flinn in four rounds at the Atlas Athletic Association last night. Ten seconds before the bell sounded in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a twelve-round bout, a right jab to the jaw landed and Flinn went down for the count.

It was Langford's first bout since his return from Australia. He received a surprise in the first round when Flinn with a smashing left sent him to the mat.

EDWARDS FANS FOURTEEN.

ROYSTON, GA., Aug. 27.—In the second of the series with Elberton, Royston yesterday won by a score of 7 to 0. The features of the game was the heavy hitting of the Royston team and the superb pitching of Edwards, who fanned fourteen men and gave up two hits. Elberton used three pitchers.

MORE GAMES FOR LAGRANGE.

LAGRANGE, GA., Aug. 27.—Not satisfied with a full season of regular league baseball the LaGrange fans are planning to have baseball games every week until October 1. The initial game of a five-game series to decide the town championship was played to-day, resulting in a score of 19 to 2 in favor of the Northwest club against the Southeast club.

RINGSIDE NEWS

George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will go through with their ten-round go at Terre Haute, Ind., on Labor Day. Tommy Walsh, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that George is getting in great shape for the mill. This will be the fourth meeting between the rival middleweights.

* * *

Frank Madole, the American lightweight, who is in Paris, writes that he is tired of traveling in Europe and will be home any day. Madole tells of several of his experiences. He was forced to box three men in two weeks, going twenty rounds in one, and losing by the decision route.

* * *

Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight, is back in the Missouri city from his trip to Los Angeles. Trendall left for the coast about a month ago to get a match with Leach Cross, but Matty Baldwin beat him to the big plum. Harry refused to take on any of the second-raters, so left for home.

* * *

The death of "Bull" Young has put the boxing game on the coast in a bad light. It will probably be some time before the heavyweights don the padded mitts out West again.

* * *

Sam McVey, who claims Paris as his home, has returned to that city from Australia, and the chances are that a twenty-round bout may be arranged between him and Jack Johnson. McVey is a big favorite with the Parisians and a bout between him and Johnson would draw a record house.

* * *

Young Eppy will meet Matty McCue in Racine, Wis., instead of Pittsburg on Labor Day. The match, which had been hanging fire for a week, was clinched yesterday. The two will weigh in at 122 pounds.

* * *

Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo lightweight, is after a match with Tommy Murphy. Duffy has wired Jim Coffroth asking for the Admission Day date with the Harlem boy.

LEW HARDAGE TO COACH MERCER FOOTBALL TEAM

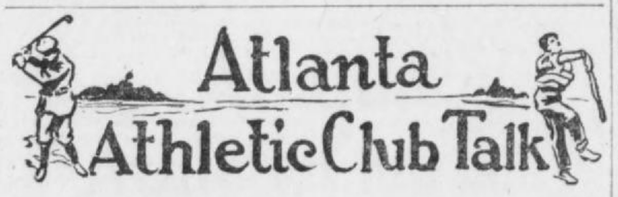

MACON, GA., Aug. 27.—Lew Hardage, former Vanderbilt football star, has signed to coach the Mercer University eleven during the coming season. Acting President Sellers makes the announcement. Hardage succeeds Dr. C. C. Stroud, who has accepted the physical directorship of Louisiana State University.

HAUSER OUT FOR THE SEASON.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Arnold Hauser, the St. Louis shortstop, feels confident he will recover the full use of his injured leg for next season, but Manager Huggins says he won't be able to play any this year.

PITCHER ROSE TO YANKEES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Manager Frank Chance announced last night the purchase of Pitcher Rose, of the Houston (Texas) League club. Rose, it was announced, would report September 10.

Walter DuBard is keen for the basketball season to start. He says that the club team will be much stronger this season than it was last fall.

* * *

"Pie" Weaver is expected back from a short vacation to-day. "Pie" is confident of earning a regular berth on the basketball team this fall.

* * *

Coach Joe Bean has just announced that the training table for the basketballers will start October 15.

* * *

The golf "bugs" still are talking about the "80" that Tick Tichenor turned in last Saturday. It was a remarkable score inasmuch as the "far-away" driving tees now are being used.

* * *

Why not a golf match this fall between the Athletic Club and the Capital City Club players? The players of the clubs should meet on the links in a tournament at least once a year.

* * *

The handball regulars are at it every day, preferably about noon. There usually is a terrific cut-throat match on among three celebrated players who shall be nameless for the present, and they are getting accustomed to a "gallery."

* * *

Another regular feature is 'Gene Kelley. 'Gene is training for a person named Smith, and he is not loafing on the job. He also is doing some wrestling, but it is not understood that he is plotting any rough-house tactics for the prospective engagement.

* * *

'Gene is not lonely in his training. The person named Smith is to be found exploding the W. & D. pellets about the same time. Carleton's training fancies are more inclusive. He usually is to be found in a foursome, while 'Gene takes it out on some single partner.

* * *

Entrants are filling their names with the club bulletin board for the Cotton States Tennis Championships, to be played the week of September 8 on the East Lake clay courts. Club members find that a convenient method of entering. Out of town contestants are sending their names to Carleton Y. Smith, 608 Walton Building. The list is growing daily.

YOUNG SAYLOR IS OUT LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27.—Young Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, who has placed himself under the wing of Ray Bronson, is most anxious to get a crack at either Freddie Welsh or Willie Ritchie, and has offered to take the place of Welsh against the champion at Vancouver on Labor Day.

Saylor recently defeated Mickey McIntyre at Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, giving away 10 pounds in weight. He is a fine young lightweight, having met most of the stars of that class.

TO STAGE POLO TOURNEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—John B. Miller, chairman of the Pacific Coast section of the American Polo Association, plans to stage a world-wide competition during the 1915 exposition in San Francisco. He hopes to construct a magnificent turf polo field within the grounds of the exposition and invite England, India, Hawaii, Argentine Republic, Brazil and Australia, in addition to the American poloists.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Wide Range Shown In Realty Trades

Great Volume of Deeds on Record. Grant Gets Apartment House. Some Unique Transactions.

An unusually large number of warranty and loan deeds and bonds for title went to record Tuesday, showing good business in the various lines of real estate activity. There were eighteen warranty deeds, nine bonds, eleven loan deeds, and a number of interesting cancellations. Transactions show much activity in residence property and the smaller sized propositions, which most realty men consider as steady as this time last year, if not a bit better.

Real estate dealers are waiting anxiously for the money of the Federal Treasury Department to arrive in Atlanta. The prospect for big crops is also welcomed in realty circles.

Apartment House Listed.

The Livingston, three-story apartment house being erected at the southwest corner of North avenue and Willow street by James Livingston Wright and Sam E. Smith, has been placed with Albert S. Adams, of the B. M. Grant Real Estate and Renting Agency, for renting. This structure contains 32 apartments of three and four rooms, with such modern conveniences as vacuum cleaners, mechanical refrigeration, dumb waiters, etc. The site is the old Calhoun place.

Well-Known Men in Trade.

General Clifford L. Anderson has sold to the Atlanta Banking and Savings Company an undivided one-half interest in the southeast corner of Boulevard and Cottingham avenue for a consideration not made public. General Anderson bought his half interest for $5 cash and gave a $2,000 note due March 30, 1911, at 8 per cent. He bought from P. H. Mell.

Loan Deed Given.

The Berry School, of Rome, has been in another Atlanta transaction. It has taken from John W. Hamer a loan deed for $5,000 on the south side of Auburn avenue, 162 feet west of Piedmont avenue. The paper carries with it the perpetual right to a 6 by 130 foot alley for light and air purposes.

Marble for Office Building.

The Realty Trust Building (also known as the Forsyth Building) will soon have handsome marble slabs on the pillars in the first floor entrance. Workmen were busy Wednesday morning making way for the improvements.

Mortgage Transactions.

A mortgage for $18,000 on the Tabernacle Infirmary and Training School for Nurses to Sydney B. Erlanger, of New York, has been canceled and a mortgage for the same amount given to the Georgia Savings Bank and Trust Company. The property is on Luckie street, 55 feet east of Bartow street, 74 by 130 feet.

AUGUST SHORTS BADLY SQUEEZED

Bears Hesitate on Coming Holiday, Bureau and Bullish News. Sales Light—Bulls Alive.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—In response to a sharp rise in August at New Orleans that position in New York Cotton Exchange at the opening was 20 points higher, with other positions at a net advance of 4 to 8 points from Tuesday's final. Sentiment was extremely against the market. A good many reports were in circulation, showing deterioration in some parts of the eastern belt; also in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The market, however, lost ground immediately after the opening and prices shaded some 4 to 8 points from the opening.

August failed to maintain the initial gain and dropped 18 points without stopping.

The selling was probably based on a condition report by a prominent local spot interest, placing conditions at 73.3 per cent, against The Commercial-Appeal's estimate of 69.6 per cent. The bearish influence of this and indicated showers in the Western belt was offset by the bullish condition figures of the national ginners' report of 69.3 per cent, being .3 point under the lowest percentage given the crop this season. The ring who played for a reaction yesterday looked short and ran to cover, followed by aggressive buying from strong sources and there was very little for sale. Prices continued to advance, and after the call the entire list had established new high levels for the present upward movement, being 14 to 16 points better than the previous close. August was apparently dormant.

The market during the late forenoon was irregular and nervous with good support in evidence in the soft spots by brokers usually representing trade interests. The volume of business was much smaller and hesitancy in the selling was shown on the part of bears because of the approaching holidays, followed on Tuesday by the Bureau report. Private condition reports were bullish, all showing 10 to 11 points deterioration for the month.

The Texas detail weather showed continued high temperatures and brought in a number of orders on the buying side. The market will doubtless be nervous for the balance of the week and the disposition will probably be to even up over the holidays.

The situation in the Southwest becomes worse daily.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—Liverpool came in about 4 points lower than due on futures, but rallied in the last hour on the strength of our markets. Spots 8 points higher, sales 5,000 bales. Cables continue to report small business. A very unfavorable report in Texas and Oklahoma is expected by The Journal of Commerce Thursday, which together with the anticipation of a very bullish condition forecast by the National Ginners, prompted fresh and vigorous buying in our markets this morning, causing an advance to 12.08 for October early in the session.

Struggling August shorts endeavoring to buy back their commitments pushed this position out of line with general values and over 1 cent above spot values. The map shows increasing cloudiness in the Western States. Fair in the Central Belt; cloudy with good rains in the Coast districts and the Atlantics; some light showers in Northwest Texas.

Indications are very favorable to cloudy weather and more general rains over Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas in the next three days and unsettled showery weather coming on the General States with continued showery weather in the Atlantics.

The market lost the early advance when the government predictions suggested a change in the weather west, but rallied again later on the strength in New York where general buying from outsiders is reported. Bullish sentiment continues to control the market.

COTTON GOSSIP

The best buying to-day seemed to come from strong sources. The ring played for a reaction yesterday and looked as if they were short this morning and ran to cover. Wilson and Shearson were sealding sellers. Shearson sold Mitchell 7,000 bales of December at 12.05 and then Mitchell turned around and bid for ten thousand more. Norden purchased 5,000 December, while Wilson sold at the outset and kept it up until the closing "gong" sounded.

* * *

Theodore H. Price says: "It now seems altogether probable that cotton will be carried much higher than the facts warrant, and they certainly justify at least 12 cents for new crop deliveries in New York."

* * *

Weld makes the condition of the crop 73.9 per cent, which is considered rather bearish, considering the low percentage of 69.6 given the crop by The Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

* * *

* * *

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—Conditions have been generally favorable and cotton shows improvement of a month ago when it was 79.3. Beneficial rains have produced a large plant and well fruited, but much depends upon a late killing frost, since the season is about two weeks late. Drouth in some sections has caused shedding, but aside from this there is very little complaint. Picking will be general about September 10. Too much rain in some sections has caused a large weed at the expense of fruit, but many correspondents look for a yield beyond the average.

"South Carolina—Continued dry weather in many sections has caused the cotton to shed. The plant generally is strong and well fruited, and with timely rains and a late frost a large crop is expected. It is only the late planted cotton that is suffering for rain. There are no complaints of insect damage and the crop is in a good state of cultivation. Percentage condition shows some improvement over a month ago when it was 76.6.

"Georgia—Cotton has about maintained its condition as compared with a month ago when it was 79.5. This is between 5 and 6 points better than a year ago at this time. The crop is spotted, owing to late planting, which has suffered considerably from drouth. Many localities report a perfect season, with plant of average size, healthy and heavily fruited. There is a marked absence of damage by insects, but young cotton has suffered from shedding. Picking has already commenced and will be quite general by September 1. Labor is ample and the only requisites for a big crop are more rain and a late killing frost."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows increasing cloudiness, and more general rains in the western States and Arkansas within three days, increasing prospects of showery weather also in the central belt.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Last year, before the crop began to move in volume, the rings discounted a moderate yield and a large requirement. Speculative apathy throughout the season was the result. This year the same program has been initiated. Basic conditions, however, are different.

"Last year a great deal of forward business was done early in the season, and the presence of many long hedges proved a bulwark of contract market strength. This year spinners have not been buying ahead in the usual volume and the demand for long hedges has been limited. When speculators began to lift the market under the influence of crop damage reports from the west, hedge sellers in the west supplied the contracts required.

"Thus on the face of the returns the hedge interest is short this year, whereas, at this time last year it was long. Another fact the talent should not overlook is that this year's cotton market starts out after two years of remarkable mill trade activity. But the basic law of commodity market is against it."

* * *

Washington advises that the weekly weather report next week will be issued on Wednesday instead of Tuesday, owing to the publication of the bureau report on September 2 on the condition of the cotton crop as of August 25.

* * *

Clement, Curtis & Co., of Chicago, make cotton condition, 69.4 per cent, against 80.7 last month.

* * *

Forth Worth paper says: "In spite of lack of rain, special agent production says Tarrant County will make a quarter bale to the acre, and with rain in next ten days, many farms will make a half bale to the acre.—Kofler.

CATERPILLARS RUINING COTTON IN DOUGHERTY

ALBANY, Aug. 27.—J. W. Pinson, one of the best-known farmers in Southwest Georgia, who operates a large farm in the Eastern part of Dougherty County, reports finding caterpillars in his cotton.

Mr. Pinson stated that his cotton had deteriorated so much that it would not pay him to fight the pest. The deterioration was caused by the excessive July rains, he said.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The weather will be unsettled in the North Atlantic States and showers will occur during to-night or Thursday in New England. In the Lake region, the Ohio Valley and the Middle and Southern States east of the Mississippi River, the weather will be fair during the next 36 hours.

The temperature will fall to-night in New England and New York State and will rise slowly to-night and Thursday in the upper Lake region. Temperatures will continue moderately high in the Middle Atlantic States and slightly below the seasonable average in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States.

Forecast.

Forecast till 8 p. m. Thursday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

Virginia and North Carolina—Fair to-night and Thursday.

South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi—General fair to-night and Thursday.

Florida—Fair except showers in Northwest portion to-night or Thursday.

Tennessee—Fair to-night and Thursday.

Louisiana and East Texas—Fair in interior; scattered showers on coast to-night or Thursday.

West Texas—Fair to-night and Thursday.

PRICE-CURRENT GRAIN REPORT.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 27.—The drouthy condition in the Southwest have persisted rains thus far being too light to do any good to corn and cotton. Extension of damage has continued. Weather has been excellent in the region of Great Lakes and adjacent States and insures the corn crop.

Weather has been favorable in the Northwest for harvesting, and much of the wheat and oat crop have been gathered in North Dakota and North Minnesota. The total wheat crop in the States of Minnesota, South and North Dakota will probably fall 100,000,000 bushels under last year. This country will probably harvest a total crop of 740,000,000 bushels of wheat in round figures. This suggests a larger export capacity than previous seasons, but there are many holes to fill up in the last year plus the amount of wheat consumed on the farm on account of the failure of corn and partial failure of oats in Kansas, Nebraska and Southern Illinois.

STREET APPROVES WILSON MESSAGE

Dullness Continues, but Bad News Seems To Be Ignored by the Prevailing High Prices.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A new low mark on its present movement was reached to-day by New York, New Haven and Hartford when it sold down to 92 at the opening of the stock market. This was a decline of 2 points. The list was irregular, but the tone was heavy on account of possible decided developments in the Mexican situation within the next 24 hours.

Among the losses were: American Can, ¾; Southern Pacific, ¾; Pennsylvania, ⅛; New York Central, ⅛; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, ½; and Canadian Pacific, ⅜. The gains included: United States Steel common, ⅛; Union Pacific, ¼; Reading, ⅜; Chino Copper, ¼; Baltimore and Ohio, ⅜; and American Locomotive, ⅛.

The curb was quiet.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "London is busy with the fortnightly settlement. There is but little interest taken in American stocks at the present time. London is threatened by a strike of 200,000 men in the building trades. The statement of the Bank of Germany was favorable, and general improvement is shown in the monetary conditions in other parts of Europe.

"Information channels favor a trading position. We would look for fair buying opportunities with the intention to hold for substantial profits, unless adverse occurrences warrant the acceptance of smaller returns."

President Wilson's message on the Mexican situation was a very sensible document and met with the approval of the financial interests. All bad news seems to be discounted by the prevailing prices of securities.—G. D. Potter Company.

LAGRANGE'S FIRST BALE SELLS FOR 12 1-2 CENTS

LA GRANGE, Aug. 27.—The first bale of the crop of 1913 cotton was brought in from the plantation of J. B. Bass, a few miles south of town.

The bale, which weighed 504 pounds and classed as good middling, was bought by the aLGrange Cotton Company for 12½c, and consigned to Denson's mill here, where it will be manufactured into goods at once.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: Unless immediate relief is offered the drouth-stricken sections of the Southwest a higher level of values will doubtless ensue.

Miller & Co.: We expect active market with big possibilities to the quick trader.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We would buy on further declines.

FREER OFFERINGS PUT GRAIN DOWN

Good Rains Where Needed Check Early Advance—Market Active, but Has Narrow Range

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The grain markets were all stronger and fractionally higher this morning on improved buying and rather light offerings. There were gains of ⅛ in wheat, ¼ to ½c in corn and ⅛ to ¼c in oats. The wheat was stronger on an oversold condition, corn was helped by the continued dry weather in the Southwest, and oats were helped by corn.

Provisions were steady to a shade higher.

Grain Notes

Houston, Fible & Co., Kansas City, say: "Hundred degree temperatures prevailing over the Southwest again with no rain. Corn here is beyond injury—it is dead. Presume that hot, dry weather will curtail some corn in Iowa and Illinois. Pastures all that remain here to be damaged. Without rain within the near future there will be no fall pasture and the feeding demand will be that much more. Corn is being shipped to Kansas now and retailed to farmers at 85c a bushel."

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: "Wheat—Don't look for much change in prices, although local sentiment is rather bearish.

"Corn—Map shows no rain and high temperatures prevailed again yesterday in the Southwest. We continue to feel friendly to the market advising purchases on all fair setbacks.

"Oats—The course of prices will depend largely on whether the pressure from the increase in offerings from the country is to continue or not."

Education—the First Duty of Government

The Most Important Institutions in the Country Are the Public Schools—the Gymnasiums of Human Brains.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We wish to discuss with our readers in this and in later editions of this newspaper the great and serious question of education.

It is a question as broad as the ocean, and as deep. It is a question so vast that organized discussion of it seems hopeless.

The greatest minds of the world have devoted their powers to the intricate question of development of the human brain, and the problem has been scarcely touched.

The greatest works on education in the history of the world are undoubtedly Plato's "Republic," Spencer's "Education" and Rousseau's "Emile." The last is the greatest of all. It should be read by every father and mother and by every earnest citizen.

Other works that may be earnestly recommended are Aristotle's "Politics," Pestalozzi's "How Gertrude Teaches Her Children" and Froebel's "Education of Man."

To Rousseau undoubtedly belongs the high honor of having thought and written most powerfully, most originally and most practically on the greatest of problems. His brain is the cornerstone of the structure of intelligent educational methods.

He foreshadowed in his "Emile" Fourier's splendid principle of "attractive industry."

THE PROGRESS OF HUMANITY DEPENDS UPON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE HUMAN BRAIN THROUGH EDUCATION.

The intricate processes of thinking separate mankind from other members of the animal creation.

Man is far from the animal in proportion as his brain is cultivated. Even the animals themselves rank in their kingdom in proportion to their brain activity.

William T. Harris said truly: "If man had let himself alone he would have remained the monkey that he was. Not only this, but if the monkey had let himself alone he would have remained a lemur, or a bat, or a bear, or some other creature that now offers only a faint suggestion of what the ape has become."

The elephant and the ape, among our humble animal brothers, appear to have reached their limits of possibility in the way of educational development. They still remain, and always will remain, vastly inferior to their microscopic comrades—the ants and bees and other insects.

The human race has barely begun the systematic study of the problem of application, and systematic application of the truths discovered and agreed upon. In proportion to our stature and possibilities we are hideous ignoramuses compared with the ant in the garden path.

The education of children is regulated not by their brain formation and possible development, but by the wealth of their parents, the parsimony of municipalities, the baleful influences of tradition and the colossally stupid idea that thorough brain cultivation is in some way antagonistic to material success.

The greatness of a nation depends upon the average mental power of the nation's citizens, and mental power depends absolutely upon education.

The ignorant man who has succeeded through natural force and lucky opportunity is fond of asking these questions:

"What is the good of education? Of what practical use is scientific knowledge?" These men are admirably answered by Herbert Spencer, to whose work they are referred.

A collection of Englishmen ruined themselves in the sinking of mines in search of coal. They might have saved their money had they known that a certain fossil which they dug up in abundance belongs to a geological stratum below which no coal is ever found. They went on digging cheerfully and wasting their money. An acquaintance with that fossil and its meaning would have saved their cash.

Some individuals spent one hundred thousand dollars trying to save the alcoholic byproduct that distills from bread in baking. They would have saved their money had they known that only a hundredth part of the flour is changed through fermentation.

The study of biology is essential in the successful fattening of cattle.

An "entozoon" seems to the practical man a foolish, imaginary creature. But millions of sheep have been saved by the discovery that one of these fancy scientific entozoa, pressing on the brain, caused the sheep's death. When you know the entozoon you can dig him out and save the sheep's life.

"My son's going to be an artist," says one proud father. "He does not need to study a lot of scientific rubbish."

This parent does not know that the difference between a good and a bad sculptor or painter is often based on knowledge or ignorance of anatomy and mechanical principles.

Education is important to the individual because it means development of the brain, development of capacity for production and increased chances of success.

EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO THE STATE BECAUSE IT MEANS NOT ONLY COMPETENT CITIZENS, BUT MORAL CITIZENS.

The animal in us yields to the influence of education. Knowledge and brutality are enemies. They do not dwell together.

The most important institutions in this country are the public schools—the gymnasiums of human brains. The most important citizens of the nation are the teachers.

The greatest criminals are the employers of child labor, because they deny education, cut down in childhood the citizen's chance of progress and success.

We [illegible] for more and better public schools.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Is Our Blood in Its Composition and Temperature the Counterpart of the Water of the Ocean, Whence, They Say, All Life Sprang?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SCIENCE boasts of its exactness, and properly so. Yet there is no speculator comparable in boldness with the man of science who is endowed at the same time with the scent for precision and the gift of imagination.

One of the most daring scientific speculations with which I am acquainted is that of a French physiologist, R. Quinton, who ventures to assert that the blood which flows in the veins of man and other animals derives its peculiar temperature (which hardly varies more than ten degrees in all the host of vertebrate, or back-boned, animals) and its peculiar composition (in which salt always plays a fixed part) from the primeval sea that enveloped the earth in those early ages when life was just beginning on our planet!

Take Out Corpuscles, He Says, and Our Blood Is Sea Water.

Man, says this bold speculator in scientific assets, is a kind of marine aquarium, filled with seawater resembling that of the ancient ocean in which his lower animal ancestors bathed millions of years ago. We call this salty fluid, from which our living cells derive their vitality, "blood;" but deprive the blood of the red and white corpuscles which have developed in it, and all that is left is a "physiological salt solution," precisely like the salty water of the primeval sea, and retaining the same temperature.

In other words, the so-called vital fluid of animals is nothing but sea-water, less salty and hotter than the sea-water of to-day, but retaining the same composition and the same temperature that it had when, ages upon ages ago, the first living creatures of our world emerged from their original home, which was the ocean, and, with new bodies, henceforth sealed up, so that the fluid on which their lives depends can not escape, crawled out upon the land, and gave rise, by gradual evolution, to the higher animals of the present time.

This ancient, life-giving seawater has been handed on from generation to generation, for untold aeons of time, continuing to exist, age after age, in the veins of animals, forever the same in composition and temperature, notwithstanding the innumerable changes of form it has undergone in the ceaseless processes of generation, growth, decay, death and regeneration.

To see how this curious speculation has arisen, let us consider the fact that the first organisms inhabiting the sea (long before there was life on the land) were simple living cells of protoplasm, open in structure and bathed throughout in the warm, salty water which maintained their vitality. As the sea cooled, and became more salty through the influx of mineral substances washed down from the land, it was no longer a suitable abode for many of the progressing animal forms which had been built up by the combination of the original single cells, and these assumed the shape of closed bodies, in which the life-sustaining fluid was locked up, while its original temperature was maintained by physiological action.

Having emerged upon the land these creatures continued in the course of evolution, determined by their new surroundings, and assumed a great variety of higher forms, constantly increasing in complexity or organization, but always retaining the secret of life derived from the sea in the form of a fluid, never varying much from a temperature of about 100 degrees, nor from a composition comprising about seven or eight parts salt to a thousand parts of water.

It is a strange fact that from the poles to the equator all vertebrate animals possess blood of nearly the same temperature and the same degree of saltness, and Quinton avers that this singular uniformity is due to the retention in their bodies, sealed up with membranes, of the ancestral composition of the universal fluid that, at the beginning, nourished the life of their remote predecessors in the sea. If this be so, then our blood is simply an image of the water of the first ocean, at the time when life was developed in it. If we did not possess it we could not continue to live. In a certain sense, then, we may be said still to live bathed internally by the life-giving fluid of the primeval sea.

Looked at in another way, according to Quinton's hypothesis, the blood of vertebrate animals gives geologists a clue to the temperature and composition of the first sea waters. We know that these have changed with the progress of time, the water becoming both salter and colder, besides acquiring other ingredients which it did not possess originally.

Many Scientists Accept This Hypothesis in General.

This strange hypothesis has met with a certain degree of approval from other investigators, whose criticisms of it relate to details but do not attack its general credibility. Thus Professor A. B. Macallum thinks that the blood of the vertebrates represents the sea water at a later period than that assumed by Quinton, but still a period millions of years back of our time, while Dr. A. C. Lane suggests that the blood temperature may have been raised by physiological processes above that of the sea when the animals left it.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Debt

It Is the Ugliest Monster Outside of Crime, She Asserts; It Is a Phase of Shame.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

A MAN who has made a great financial success, somewhat suddenly, is doing much charitable and helpful work for humanity, but he is marring his own character and making trouble for himself and others in the future by one unfortunate habit.

HE NEVER PAYS A DEBT UNTIL FORCED TO DO SO AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Every one who knows the man knows that he is honest and generous. He is sure to pay all he owes and to liquidate every debt, eventually. But, meantime, he causes untold discomfort to his creditors frequently by his delays.

But There Is a Big Leak in the Lifeboat.

Often, while some man to whom he is owing a large bill is needing the money to push along his own affairs, his wealthy debtor is giving liberal sums to aid others or to help some worthy cause.

But there is a leak in the lifeboat of this man which, unless mended, will eventually either sink his craft or damage all its cargo.

No doubt the habit was first formed when he was struggling to make his way; before fortune turned her smiling face upon him. But his very struggles and needs in early life should have made him more consistent in his dealings with his fellow men after he obtained his fortune.

Debt is the ugliest monster on earth outside of crime.

Every young man or woman who is setting forth upon a self-supporting career should keep his mental guns charged and ready to fire upon the ogre the moment it presents its horrid face at the door.

If the habit of debt is once formed, it is almost as difficult to break as alcoholism or the drug habit. The longer it is indulged in the more difficult the cure.

Every parent should teach a child that debt is a phase of shame.

Children Should Be Taught Horror of Debt.

Tell your boy or girl that it is far more respectable to wear old garments and to be unable to present a smart appearance than to go about in clothes which are not paid for, or to indulge in any pleasures or privileges which have made debt a necessity.

Then train them in the way of keeping a careful cash account each day and of balancing up their books at the end of each week. Speak often and repeatedly of the honor which such habits eventually bring and of the corresponding dishonor which follows on the habit of debt.

There are children born into the world with a tendency to be borrowers and even to be thieves, because their fathers were parsimonious and niggardly with their mothers before their birth. And the children received the mental mark of their mothers' unfortunate state of mind.

One such woman longed for certain kinds of food before the birth of her child, and was told by her husband that her longings were extravagant and unreasonable. So persistent were her longings, however, and so small was the expense they entailed, that the unhappy, expectant mother purloined pennies from the pockets of her sleeping master, and when she had obtained the petty sum needed purchased the dainty she desired.

But her child was born with a mania for taking things which did not belong to her; even when she could have them by asking, or possessed money to purchase them, she preferred to steal.

Let Them Learn How to Spend Money Properly.

Men of that niggardly type often force their wives and children into the debt habit. It is astonishing to find how many men of independent means, hold tight the purse strings, and compel their wives to go empty-handed, while given unquestioned right to buy whatever they desire, so long as their purchases are presented to the husband in a bill at the end of the month. Frequently these men make no complaint at extravagance; yet make bitter protest if the wife asks for a small monthly allowance.

Children reared under such conditions have no horror of debt. They have been taught that it is the only way to obtain what they desire. Every boy or girl ought to be given a small weekly or monthly allowance, taught how to spend it wisely, and made to keep a strict account.

With such teaching should go a continual kindly, persistent education on the nobility of independence, and the dishonor of debt.

If children form such ideals before they go out into the world, there is small fear that they will ever form the habit of debt afterward.

EYES AND VOICES

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

EYES and voices of dead friends
Come to me at night and cheer me,
And they seem so very near me
Ere my sleepless vigil ends.

Eyes that once exchanged with mine
Looks of fond regard and feeling
From the earth come softly stealing,
Once again with love to shine.

Voices stilled for many years—
Ah, but I can hear them plainly!
Voices that I longed for vainly,
They have broken from their biers.

Every eye a beacon light
Just beyond the shoals of sorrow,
Pointing out the grand To-morrow,
Every voice a soft delight.

Eyes and voices of dead friends
Come when Memory is complaining,
Sweetly soothing and sustaining,
Till the reign of darkness ends.

WILSON WARNS AMERICANS TO FLEE MEXICO

Dorsey's Speech Ridiculed by Frank

URGES U. S. PATIENCE DURING CRISIS

Should Let Situation Work Itself Out, President Says in Message to Congress.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Emphasizing the fact that the United States must remain the firm friend of the people of Mexico in their present stress and trouble, President Wilson to-day read his long awaited message on Mexican affairs to Congress.

The message was distinctly pacific in tone and contains little in the way of recommendation for future policy except the single one that this Government must urge earnestly that all Americans should leave Mexico at once and that the United States should assist them to get out of Mexico in every way possible.

The President counsels delay before further action is taken and says:

"Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Must Await Understanding.

"So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization to the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. The circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

President Wilson's message is unexpectedly brief and closes with the statement that several of the great Governments of the world have given the United States their generous moral support in urging on the provisional authorities at Mexico City the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. The President relates the circumstances leading up to the Lind mission and all the facts in connection with it.

His recommendations are less drastic and less conclusive than was expected.

The President's Message.

The message follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress—It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the fact concerning our present relations with the republic of Mexico. The deplorable posture of affairs in Mexico I need ble posture of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly of what this Government has done and should seek to do in fulfillment of its obligation to Mexico herself, as a friend and neighbor, and to American citizens whose lives and vital interests are daily affected by the distressing conditions which now obtain beyond our southern border.

"Those conditions touch us very nearly. Not merely because they lie at our very doors. That, of course, makes us more vividly and more constantly conscious of them, and every

He made the circuit of 8 miles in 6:44, averaging 74.5 miles per hour. Wishart was practicing for the road races ehre Friday and Saturday. The former record was 6:53, made by Teddy Tetzlaff last year.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., Aug 37.—William, a horse from La Fayette, Ind., holding the world's record of 2:05 on mile track, won at Peoria last week, this afternoon took the world's record on a half mile track in 2:09 flat. William is under 3-year-old pacer.

Lion on Operating Table at Grady to Have Broken Leg Set

A 3-month-old lion cub is the most unique patient ever treated at the Grady Hospital. It was placed on the operating table for a broken foreleg. Surgeons at Grady set the bones and placed the leg in a plaster cast. The treatment accorded the animal was as carefully given as though it had been a human.

The cub was born at Grant Park. The manner in which it was injured is not known, but it is believed that the bone had not sufficiently hardened to uphold the weight of the animal's body.

When Keeper Boyd discovered the injury, he bound the leg in splints. The cub tore these off repeatedly, and now the plaster cast has been substituted.

REGRETS HE COULDN'T REPLY

Prisoner Prepares Statement to Combat What He Terms Distotion of Facts.

"Dorsey's speech was as full of holes as a sieve! If I could have had just one hour to reply to his eight-hour address I am confident I could have shown the jury that I was an innocent man and that the Solicitor was misrepresenting the facts in order to obtain a conviction."

This was a statement made by Leo M. Frank to friends who visited him in the jail Wednesday.

"Dorsey twisted and contorted the real circumstances of the case until they were unrecognizable," he continued. "He altered everything that was said and everything that was done until it seemed to point to my guilt. If I could have spoken only briefly after he finished his eight-hour speech I could have shown, I am sure, that he departed from the facts of the case wherever it suited him.

"I am preparing a statement in reply to his argument to the jury which I propose to make public, if my lawyers think it advisable. In it I will point out exactly how the Solicitor warped the testimony and the facts to suit his own convenience. I know that these misstatements of his had their influence with the jury and that is why I am rebelling against the unfairness of the situation."

Frank Still Optimistic.

Frank, according to his friends, was as optimistic as ever Wednesday in regard to the ultimate outcome of his case, but was somewhat downcast over the wave of sentiment against him. He said he could not understand how people could be so certain of his guilt when the testimony was circumstantial in the extreme, except for that of Conley, who was an admitted liar and perjurer.

Rabbi Marx, Emil Selig, Prince Myers, Sig Montag, Milton Kline and Herbert Schiff were among Frank's visitors Wednesday. Mr. Selig, Frank's father-in-law, remained at the Tower from 8:45 until about 11:30.

Schiff brought with him a stenographer from the pencil factory and Frank dictated a number of letters and also some matter in connection with his own case. The former superintendent is compiling in compact form all of the important testimony at the trial so that he more readily may refer to it when he comes to make his reply to Dorsey.

He sent for his diary and for a quantity of paper while Schiff was with him and the two worked together for more than an hour.

An indictment of Jim Conley, charging him with being accessory after the fact in the murder of Mary Phagan will be asked at the first session of the next Grand Jury, according to the present plans of Solicitor General Dorsey.

The new Grand Jury will meet the first week in September, and probably will have the request of the Solicitor for the indictment of Conley as the first business for its disposal. The maximum sentence for this offense is three years, but it is thought that Conley, as a self-confessed accessory and a State's witness, will get off more lightly than the maximum.

Frank told friends Wednesday that he was planning to have a large part in the conduct of the fight to obtain a reversal of the verdict of last Monday afternoon. Frank rendered his attorneys assistance during the preparation of his case for presentation at

SPEER PROBE ORDERED ON 20 COUNTS

House Votes for Judiciary Committee to Investigate Record of Georgia Judge.

By HUGH MILLER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—After Chairman Clayton, of the Judiciary Committee, had made public a synopsis of the charges against United States Judge Emory Speer, of the Southern District of Georgia, the House to-day passed the resolution he had introduced yesterday, authorizing the Judiciary Committee to proceed with an investigation to determine whether impeachment proceedings should or should not be instituted against the judge.

The resolution was passed just a few minutes before President Wilson appeared before the joint session to read his message on Mexico. Just as soon as the House convened Chairman Clayton asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution and it was at once taken up at the point it was left off yesterday.

Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, Republican, made a short speech pointing out principally that Judge Speer had written to the Judiciary Committee that he was innocent of the charges and demanding that an investigation be made. The galleries were rapidly filling with visitors who wanted to see and hear President Wilson, and the noise and confusion were so great that few could hear Mr. Nelson. When he concluded he received scattering applause.

Clayton Reads Charges.

Chairman Clayton then arose.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "in view of the publicity given these charges and the further fact that a request amounting to a demand has been made by members of this House for information, I shall now proceed to read a synopsis of the charges made against Judge Speer, which have been under consideration by the Judiciary Committee."

Chairman Clayton proceeded to read the charges.

"In addition," he said, "we have many affidavits and photographs of documents. Altogether the record is very bulky. I hold it in my hand now, that the members of the House may see it."

Chairman Clayton held up a large package, containing apparently hundreds of pages of record.

"The committee has decided that beyond the statement already given to the House nothing further shall be disclosed in the case until the investigation is taken up," he said.

Involves Son-in-Law.

The twenty charges read by Chairman Clayton were as follows:

"Violation of section 67 of the judicial code, in allowing his son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, to be appointed to and employed in offices and duties in his court.

"Violation of the bankruptcy act in allowing compensation in excess of the provisions of that act to a trustee, who was his personal friend.

"Violation of the laws in drawing juries.

"Violation of a mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Oppressive and corrupt use of his official position in deciding cases unjustly in favor of his son-in-law.

"Unlawful and corrupt conduct in presiding in cases wherein his son-in-law had a contingent fee.

"Corrupt and unwarranted abuse of his official authority in

TURTLES GET FOUR RUNS IN FIFTH

Dent Leaves Slab on Account of Sickness, and Conzelman Is Hit Hard.

PONCE DELEON BALL PARK, Aug. 27.—The Crackers and Turtles clashed in the fourth game of their series here this afternoon. Dent and Dunn were selected to do the battery work for Smith's crew while Harrell was on the slab for Memphis, with Snell on the receiving end.

Smith men scored three runs in the first inning. Wallie Smith sent two home with a timely triple.

Dent was forced to leave the slab in the fifth inning on account of sickness and Conzelman, who replaced him, was hit hard. The Turtles pounded out four runs in this inning.

FIRST INNING.

Love singled to center. Merritt flied to Welchonce. Love was caught off first and put out, Dent to Agler to Bisland to Agler to Smith to Agler to Smith. Baerwald lofted a high fly to Nixon. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Agler singled over Shanley's head. Long doubled to right and Agler went to third. Welchonce was set down on strikes. Smith tripled to right, scoring Agler and Long. Bisland singled to center and Smith tallied. Holland grounded to Abstein, who threw wild to second base trying to force Bisland and the latter took third, while Holland went to second. Nixon grounded to Harrell and Bisland was out at the plate. On an attempted double steal Holland was out at the plate, Snell to Love to Snell. FOUR HITS; THREE RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Ward was a whiff victim. Schweitzer also fanned. Abstein was thrown out by Smith. NO HITS; NO RUNS.

Dunn out, Love to Abstein. Dent fanned. Agler strolled on four wide heaves. Long raised to Baerwald. NO HITS; NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Holland and Agler turned back Shanley. Snell popped a foul that Dunn was under. Harrell singled to right. Love struck out. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Welchonce grounded out, Shanley to Abstein. Smith lifted to Baerwald. Bisland sent a single to center. Holland forced Bisland at second, Love to Shanley. ONE HIT; NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Merritt died over the Bisland-Agler route. Baerwald died, Holland to Agler. Holland making a sweet stop of a puzzling grasser. Ward struck out. NO HITS; NO RUNS.

Nixon out, Love to Abstein. Dunn fanned. Dent anchored safely on first when Abstein dropped Shanley's perfect throw. Agler died, Harrell to Abstein. NO HITS; NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Schweitzer scorched a single to right. 107; Question MarkETAOINetaoin, .10 [illegible] was taken out of the box at this stage and Conzelman took up the pitching burden. Dent was sick. Abstein walked. Shanley doubled to left and Schweitzer scored, while Abstein went to third. Long came in fast and made a swell spear of Snell's good-looking welt. Harrell walked, filling the bases. Love grounded to Agler, who threw to Dunn to catch Abstein, but Joe dropped the ball and Abstein and Shanley both scored. Harrell went to second on Dunn's foozle. Merrit singled to right and Harrell scored. Merritt went to second and Love to third on the throw in. Love replaced Conzelman here. Baerwald grounded to Bisland and Jack Love was forced at the plate, Dunn holding the ball this time. Ward flied to Nixon. THREE HITS; FOUR RUNS.

Long grounded to Ward, who made a crazy chuck, and Tommy kept right on to second. Welchonce singled to center, scoring Long, thereby evening the tally. This was Long's one hundredth run, breaking the Southern League record of 99. Smith sent Welchonce to second with a sacrifice bunt that Abstein handled all alone. Bisland singled to center and Welchonce was nailed at the plate, Merritt to Snell. Bisland moved up to second on the play. Holland grounded to Shanley and Bisland was put out in the chase, Shanley to Ward to Love. TWO HITS; ONE RUN.

SIXTH INNING.

Welchonce injured his ankle in sliding home in the last inning and was forced to retire from the game. Manush took his place. Schweitzer grounded to Holland and was safe at first when Holland made a poor throw. Abstein fanned. Shanley singled to center, Schweitzer went to second. Snell flied to Manush. Harrell grounded to Agler. ONE HIT; NO RUNS.

Nixon was easy for Abstein on a slow roller. Dunn flied to Baerwald. Love fanned. NO HITS; NO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Jack Love singled to center. Merritt bunted to Holland and Love forced at second, Bisland getting the putout. Merritt was out on his attempted pilfer trip, Dunn to Bisland. Baerwald was easy for Bisland and Agler. ONE HIT; NO RUNS.

Agler beat out a bunt to Shanley for a hit, and Joe kept right on to second when Abstein dropped a good, but late throw from Shanley. Long hit a home run to deep left field, scoring Agler ahead of him. Manush fanned. Smith fouled to Ward. Bisland made his fourth successive hit with a single to center. Holland popped to Schweitzer. THREE HITS, TWO RUNS.

FORBEARANCE WITH MEXICO URGED BY PRESIDENT WILSON IN MESSAGE

Armistice Impossible, Huerta Elected Head of Mexico Legally, Gamboa Says

In his reply to the American proposals Senor Gamboa, the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, urges the following points:

That President Wilson's imputation that no progress is being made toward the restoration of peace in Mexico is not true.

That the fact that the Mexican Government enjoys the recognition of nearly all the great nations of the world is proof that it is a true and honorable administration.

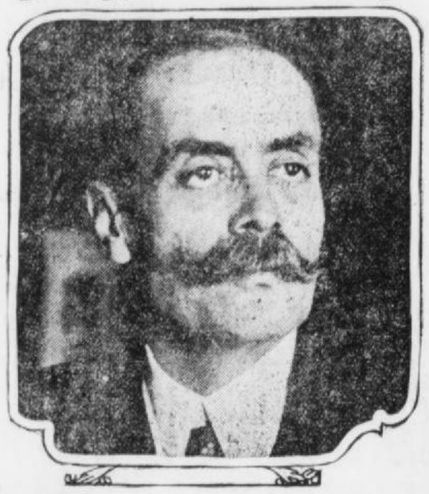

That the proposal of an armistice is impossible because nations do not propose armistices with bandits. To grant an armistice would be to recognize the belligerency of the rebels.

That the request that General Huerta should not be a candidate for the presidency is "strange and unwarranted."

That the election of General Huerta was legal.

That the American proposals are "humiliating and unusual."

That Mexico's Ambassador should be received in Washington and that the United States should send a new Ambassador to Mexico.

Senor Gamboa, Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs.

instinct of neighborly interest and sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty.

"We are glad to call ourselves the friends of Mexico, and we shall, I hope, have many an occasion, in happier times, as well as in these days of trouble and confusion, to show that our friendship is genuine and disinterested, capable of sacrifice, and very generous of manifestation.

"The peace, prosperity and contentment of Mexico mean more, much more, to us than merely an enlarged field for our commerce and enterprise. They mean an enlargement of the field of self-government and the realization of the hopes and rights of a nation with whose best aspirations, too long suppressed and disappointed, we deeply sympathize. We shall yet prove to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without first thinking how we shall serve ourselves.

"But we are not the only friends of Mexico. The whole world desires her peace and progress, and the whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be touched by the great routes of the world's trade and intercourse running free from ocean to ocean at the Isthmus. The future has much in store for Mexico, as for all the States of Central America, but the best gifts can come to her only if she be ready and free to receive them and to enjoy them honorably.

"America in particular—America, North and South and upon both continents—waits upon the development of Mexico; and that development can be sound and lasting only if it be the product of a genuine freedom, a just and ordered governments founded upon law. And so can it be peaceful and fruitful of the benefits of peace. Mexico has a great and enviable future before her, if only she choose and attain the paths of honest constitutional government."

Situation Not Promising.

"The present circumstances of the republic, I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise even the foundations of such a peace. We have waited many months, months full of peril and anxiety, for the conditions there to improve and they have not improved. They have grown worse, rather. The territory in some sort controlled by the provisional authorities at Mexico City as grown smaller, not larger. The prospect of the pacification of the country, even by arms, has seemed to grow more and more remote, and its pacification by the authorities at the Capitol is evidently impossible by any other means than force.

"Difficulties more and more entangle those who claim to constitute the legitimate government of the republic. They have not made good their claim, in fact. Their successes in the field have proved only temporary. War and disorder, devastation and confusion, seem to threaten to become the settled fortune of the distracted country.

"As friends we could wait no longer for a solution which every week seems further away. It was our duty at least to volunteer our good offices—the offer to assist, if we might, in effecting some arrangement which would bring relief and peace and set up a universally acknowledged political authority there.

"Accordingly, I took the liberty of sending the Hon. John Lind, formerly Governor of Minnesota, as my personal spokesman and representative to the City of Mexico with the following instruction:

Instructions to Lind.

"Press very earnestly upon the attention of those who are now exercising authority or wielding influence in Mexico the following consideration and advice:

"The Government of the United States does not feel at liberty any longer to stand inactively by while it becomes daily more and more evident that no real progress is being made toward the establishment of a government at the City of Mexico which the country will obey and respect.

"The Government of the United States does not stand in the same case with the other great Governments of the world in respect to what is happening or what is likely to happen in Mexico. We offer our good offices, not only because of our genuine desire to play the part of a friend, but also because we are expected by the powers of the world to act as Mexico's nearest friend.

"We wish to act in these circumstances in the spirit of the most earnest and disinterested friendship. It is our purpose in whatever we do or propose in this perplexing and distressing situation not only to pay the most scrupulous regard to the sovereignty and independence of Mexico—that we take as a matter of course, to which we are bound by obligation of right and honor—but also to give every possible evidence that we act in the interest in Mexico alone, and not in the interest of any person or body of persons who may have personal or property claims in Mexico which they may feel that they have the right to press. We are seeking to counsel Mexico for her own good and in the interest of her own peace and not for any other purpose whatever. The Government of the United States would be itself discredited if it had any selfish or ulterior purpose in transactions where the peace, happiness and prosperity of a whole people are involved. It is acting as its friendship for Mexico, not as any selfish interest dictates.

Only Settlement Wanted.

"The political situation in Mexico is incompatible with the fulfillment of international obligations on the part of Mexico, with the civilized development of Mexico herself and with the maintenance of tolerable political and economic conditions in Central America. It is no common occasion, therefore, that the United States offers her counsel and assistance. All America cries out for settlement.

"A satisfactory settlement seems to be conditioned on:

"(a) An immediate cessation of fighting throughout Mexico, a definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed.

"(b) Security given for an early and free election in which all will agree to take part.

"(c) The consent of General Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as President of the republic at this election; and

"(d) The agreement of all parties to abide by the results of the elections and co-operation in the most loyal way in organizing and supporting the new administration.

"The Government of the United States will be glad to play any part in this settlement or in its carrying out which is honorable and consistent with international right. It pledges itself to recognize and in any way proper to assist the administration chosen and set up in Mexico in the way and on the conditions suggested.

"Taking all the existing conditions into consideration, the Government of the United States can conceive of no reasons sufficient to justify those who are now attempting to shape the policy of exercising the authority of Mexico in declining the offices of friendship thus offered. Can Mexico give the civilized world a satisfactory reason for rejecting our good offices?

"If Mexico can suggest any better way in which to show our friendship, serve the people of Mexico and meet our international obligations, we are more than willing to consider the suggestion.

"Mr. Lind executed his delicate and difficult mission with singular tact, firmness, and made clear to the authorities at the City of Mexico not only the purpose of his visit, but also the spirit in which it had been undertaken. But the proposals he submitted were rejected in a note the full text of which I take the liberty of laying before you.

"I am led to believe that they were rejected partly because the authorities at Mexico City had been grossly misinformed and misled upon two points. They did not realize the spirit of the American people in this matter, their earnest friendliness and yet sober determination that some just solution be found for the Mexican difficulties, and they did not believe that the present Administration spoke through Mr. Lind for the American people.

Must Wait for Awakening.

"The effect of this unfortunate misunderstanding on their part is to leave them singularly isolated and without friends who can effectually aid them. So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization of the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. For the circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at the City of Mexico will presently be revealed.

"Meanwhile, what is it our duty to do? Clearly everything that we do must be rooted in patience and done with calm and disinterested deliberation. Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. We can afford to exercise the self-restraint of a really great nation which realizes its own strength and scorns to misuse it. It was our duty to offer our active assistance. It is now our duty to show what true neutrality will do to enable the people of Mexico to set their affairs in order again and wait for a further opportunity to offer our friendly counsels.

"The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Urges Americans to Leave.

"While we wait, the contest of the rival forces undoubtedly will for a little while be sharper than ever, just because it will be plain that an end must be made of the existing situation, and that very promptly; and with the increased activity of the contending factions will come, it is to be feared, increased danger to the non-combatant in Mexico, as well as to those actually in the field of battle. The position of outsiders is always particularly trying and full of hazard where there is civil strife and a whole country is upset.

We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once, and should assist them to get away in every way possible. Not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interests, but because it is imperative that they should not take any unnecessary risks if it is physically possible for them to leave the country. We should let everyone who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who can not get away and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding.

"For the rest, I deem it my duty to exercise the authority conferred upon me by the law of March 14, 1912, to see to it that neither side to the struggle now going on in Mexico receives any assistance from this side of the border.

"I shall follow the best practice of nations in the matter of neutrality by

GAMBOA'S REPLY, REFUSING U. S. PEACE OFFER

Neither National Dignity Nor Situation Permits Interference, He Says in Effect.

The following is the reply of Senor Gamboa to the proposals of the American Government conveyed through Hon. John Lind, as transmitted to Congress to-day by the President:

"Mexico, August 16, 1913.

"Sir—On the 6th instant, pursuant to telegraph instructions from his Government, the charge d'affaires ad interim of the United States of America verbally informed Mr. Manuel Garza Aldape, then in charge of the Department of Foreign Affairs, of your expected arrival in this republic with the mission of peace. As, fortunately neither then nor to-day there existed a state of war between the United States of America and the United Mexican States, my Government was much surprised to learn that your mission near us should be referred to as one of peace. This brought forth the essential condition which my Government ventured to demand in its unnumbered note of the 6th instant addressed to the aforesaid charge d'affaires—'that if you do not see fit to properly establish your official character' your sojourn could not be pleasing to us according to the meaning which diplomatic usages gives to this word.

"The Government of Mexico has paid due attention to the advice and considerations expressed by the Government of the United States on account of three principal reasons:

"First, because Mexico entertains the highest respect for the personality of his excellency Woodrow Wilson.

"Second, because certain European and American Governments, with which Mexico cultivates the closest relation of international amity, having made use of their good offices to the end that Mexico should accord you a hearing, inasmuch as you were the bearer of a private mission from the President of the United States, and,

"Third, because Mexico was anxious to demonstrate in every way the justice of its cause.

Calls Imputation Untrue.

"The imputation contained in the first paragraph of your instructions that no progress has been made toward establishing in the Capital of Mexico a Government that may enjoy respect and obedience of the Mexican people is unfounded.

"My Government greatly appreciates the good offices tendered to it by the Government of the United States of America in the present circumstances; it recognizes that it was inspired by the noble desire to act as a friend as well as by the wishes of all the other Governments which expect the United States to act as Mexico's nearest friends. But if such good offices are to be of the character of those now tendered to us we should have to decline them in the most categorical and definite manner.

"Inasmuch as the Government of the United States is willing to act in the most disinterested friendship, it will be difficult for it to find a more propitious opportunity than the following:

"If it should only watch that no material and monetary assistance is given to rebels who found refuge, conspire and provide themselves with arms and food on the other side of the border; if it should demand from its minor and local authorities the strictest observance of the neutrality laws, I assure you that the complete pacification of this republic would be accomplished within a relatively short time.

"His excellency Mr. Wilson is laboring under a serious delusion when he declares that the present situation of Mexico is incompatible with the compliance of her international obligations, with the developments of its civilization and with the required maintenance of certain political and economical conditions tolerable in Central America. We are punctually meeting all of our credits; we are still maintaining diplomatic missions cordially accepted in almost all the countries of the world, and we continue to be invited to all kinds of international congresses and conferences. In one thing I do agree with you, and it is that the whole of America is clamoring for a prompt solution of our disturbances.

Can Not Consider Conditions.

"Consequently Mexico can not for one moment take into consideration the four conditions which his excellency Mr. Wilson has been pleased to propose. For these reasons an immediate suspension of the struggle in Mexico is not possible, as to do this it would be necessary that there should be some one capable of proposing to the many bandits who are marauding toward the south and committing the most outrageous depredations; and I know of no country in the world, the United States included, which may have ever dared to enter into an agreement, or to propose an armistice to individuals who can be found all over the world beyond the pale of the divine and human laws. Bandits are not admitted to armistice.

"1. That our Ambassador be received in Washington.

"2. That the United States of America send us a new Ambassador without previous conditions.

"And all this threatening and distressing situation will have reached a happy conclusion; mention will not be made of the causes which might carry us, if the tension persists, to no one knows what incalculable extremities for two peoples who have the unavoidable obligation to continue friends, provided, of course, that it is based upon mutual respect, which is indispensable between two sovereign entities wholly equal before law and justice.

"Secretary for Foreign Affairs for the Republic."

JURY SERVICE CALLED SUPREME LOVE TEST

MRS. F. V. L. SMITH.

Frank Trial 'Temporary Widow and Husband Happily 'Reunited.'

"If you are not sure whether you love your husband, let him serve on a jury for four weeks—then you'll know!"

Mrs. Frederick V. L. Smith, of No. 481 Cherokee avenue, said it—and sighed. But it was a happy sigh, for Mr. Smith, his face wreathed in one of those "I, John, take thee, Mary" smiles, was coming hurriedly up the sidewalk home from business fully an hour earlier than usual.

Not 24 hours before they had been reunited, after Mr. Smith had been a stranger to his own home—a stranger to every place except the Kimball House and the courtroom—for four long weeks, serving on the famous Frank jury.

"I don't think there is anything," Mrs. Smith continued, "that would cause a woman to realize how much she loved her husband as to have him be on a jury; to be a 'widow' and yet know that your husband is in the same city that you are.

"Let him pass you two or three times a day, and not be allowed to speak to him—only to look and wave a handkerchief. Let those old deputy sheriffs stop him when he goes to say 'hello,' and caution you to be quiet when you start to ask him if he is being taken care of, if he gets enough to eat and if his clothing needs mending—why, I don't see how you can help making a vow never to speak a cross word to him.

"Little Dan Cupid may bear the burden during courtship and honeymoon, but after marriage he has a great aid in jury service. I'll just bet if a woman who fusses and nags her husband would let him serve on a jury for a month or so she'd be permanently cured.

"It's a terrible thing to be a temporary widow. There must be a better word to express it than 'terrible,' but if there is I don't know it, unless I say it was simply awful. I had almost rather my husband would be dead than be on a jury. I don't think a real widow has a bit harder time than a 'temporary one.'"

Mrs. Smith, besides being one of the most beautiful of the eleven "temporary widows," is also one of the most remarkable. When her husband was caught in the jury net he was not given time to get any one to take charge of his business.

So Mrs. Smith, despite the fact that she had a baby to take care of, stepped into the breach, and during the four weeks of the trial has conducted her husband's business affairs as well as he could himself. Every morning saw her at his office in the Empire Building—and every noon and evening saw her at the doors of the courthouse waving greetings to her "dead" husband.

Wife at Last Collapses.

The strain, however, was too great, and during the last week of the trial Mrs. Smith worked solely on her "nerve." She came home Monday evening very nervous, and shortly after 8 o'clock, when she received a telephone message from her husband that he was coming home, she collapsed.

Mr. Smith, returning at 1 o'clock, after an absence of four weeks, found his wife unconscious and physicians bending over her. Mrs. Smith was unconscious for nearly two hours, and for more than half an hour of that time it was feared she was dead. By Tuesday afternoon, however, she had fully recovered her strength.

60,000 INCREASE IN SCHOOL AGE POPULATION

Georgia Census Shows Growth in Five Years That Appropriation Can Not Care For.

With an increase of more than 60,000 in school population during the last five years, the various counties of Georgia face a cut in the school appropriation fund of $2,500,000.

The regular five-year school census figures, compiled by the State Department of Education, were made public Wednesday morning.

According to the report there are 60,732 more children of school age in Georgia now than in 1908. As the school appropriation fund is parcelled out among the various counties this increase will mean a decrease in the appropriation made to each county.

The total school population, according to the report, is 796,203, as compared with 735,471 in 1908.

The report shows further that the number of illiterates decreased from 84,430 in 1908 to 72,840 in 1913. The grand total of infirm school children, however, increased from 1,009 in 1908 to 1,323 in 1913.

The number of children over 10 years of age who never attended a public school totalled 10,500, as compared with 10,533 in 1908. The number who never attended any school totalled only 9,871 in 1913, as compared with 11,198 in 1908.

The total cost of taking the census was $29,033.21, as compared with $25,760.84 in 1908.

CRAWFORD CASE AWAITS END OF FRANK FIGHT

Lawyers Want Rest Before Defending Woman Accused of Poisoning Rich Husband.

Postponed four weeks ago until after the close of the trial of Leo Frank, it is probable that the reopening of the famous Crawford will case, in which Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, will again be delayed until after the hearing of the arguments for a new Frank trial on October 4. Should Judge Roan decline to grant a new trial, it is probable that the Crawford case will be postponed until after an appeal is taken to the Court of Appeals, at the request of Attorneys Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, who are counsel for both Mrs. Crawford and for Frank.

Colonel J. S. James, one of the attorneys for the heirs at law in the Crawford case, stated Wednesday morning he did not expect the case to be reopened until the Frank case was definitely settled one way or the other. He will confer with Attorney Rosser Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning, and it is probable that some agreement will be reached regarding the reopening of the case. When Col. J. L. Anderson, who is serving as auditor in the will case, announced the postponement of the case several weeks ago, he stated that in resuming the hearing of the testimony he would be governed by the wishes of the attorneys.

It is known that Rosser and Mr. Arnold favor delaying the Crawford case for several weeks, if not until the final disposition of the Frank case. Colonel James met Mr. Arnold several days ago, and during a conversation about the reopening of the case, Mr. Arnold remarked that he would dislike to resume within three weeks after the closing of the Frank trial, as he desired to get a much-needed rest. Mr. Arnold left the city Tuesday night for a month's stay, and it is probable that Mr. Rosser will leave shortly also for a vacation. Colonel Anderson, the auditor, is also out of the city, but will return Saturday.

While many of the attorneys on either side have been busy with the Frank trial, the search for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, who, it is charged, was an accomplice of Mrs. Crawford in a plot to poison her husband, has continued without success. Colonel James has given a great deal of time to the apprehension of Lumb, and practically the entire East has been scoured by detectives acting under his orders. New York detectives and detectives of other Eastern cities, have thrown their drag-nets out, but have found no trace whatever of the barber.

By DOROTHY DIX.

Does it pay to be good?

Tens of thousands of poor girls avid for pleasure, longing to ride in luxurious automobiles and feast on dainty food in gay restaurants; madly anxious for the lovely clothes that would enhance their charms, as a fine frame sets off a picture, are asking themselves that question. Does it pay to be good?

They know that, like the milkmaid in the old song, their faces are their fortunes, and that beauty and youth are assets that a woman can cash in at sight. The streets of every big city are the Mount of Temptation upon which the Devil takes every poor, pretty little drudge, and shows her, spread out before her, all that the foolish, feminine heart can crave of ease and softness. And it is all hers for the taking.

He shows her both sides of the picture. He shows her Virtue hanging on to a strap in a crowded car, while Vice rolls by in a limousine. He shows her Virtue, shabby, fainting with weariness behind the counter, while Vice lolls in front of it, buying silks and satins. He shows her Virtue going to bed hungry in a dingy hall bedroom, while Vice sups at a lobster palace. He shows her Virtue clutching its thin little pay envelope, while Vice draws down its thousands, and flaunts its name in electric letters a foot high along Broadway.

No wonder that poor young girls ask, Does it pay to be good?

The Case of Evelyn Thaw.

For answer let us consider the case of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who furnishes the most cynical illustration of this subject that we call civilization has ever seen. For no woman of our day has been so written about and discussed; no woman—not Bernhardt, nor Julia Marlowe, nor Maude Adams—has ever received such a preposterous salary as she gets for a few minutes' appearance on the stage.

Yet her sole claim to distinction is that her very garments drip with the slime of the gutter, and that she is the heroine of the most hideous and decadent story that was ever told upon the witness stand.

In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante can do as well with three lessons. There's simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing her, I wondered if she thought that it paid. I wondered if she thought that she had paid too dearly for all she had had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

Believe me, she and women like her, KNOW whether it pays to be good.

Hers the Story of Many.

The story of Evelyn Thaw is an interesting one in this connection because in its setting and in its potentialities it is the story of the chance, and the temptation, that comes to so many poor and pretty girls. It is the eternal problem of the woman who wants the good things of life, and who can get them only in one way, by buying them with her soul.

Evelyn Thaw is a type of woman that is peculiar to America and common in this country—women who come of poor and humble families, but who are born with the instincts for luxury of a princess and the bearing and presence of the great world. You see them in every little village—girls who are as chic as Parisiennes, who wear their little home-made clothes as if they came from a couturiere of the Rue de la Paix, and who are as irresistibly drawn to the bright lights of a great city as a moth is attracted to the flame.

Evelyn Nesbit was one of these. She was born on a Christmas Day, in Allegheny, a suburb of Pittsburg. Her mother was beautiful, her father a gay ne'er-do-well; and from the one parent she got her looks and the other her mercurial nature—as dangerous a combination as evil itself could bequeath a girl.

They Were Very Poor.

All her early life they were very poor, and when the father died—which he did when Evelyn was 10 or 11 years old—they were poorer still. Mrs. Nesbit tried to make a living with her needle, but barely succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door.

The little family went from Allegheny to Philadelphia, hoping for better things, but luck failed to smile on them. They were so poor that Mrs. Nesbit cut up her sheets to make underclothing for herself and Evelyn, and her bedspreads to make them dresses. Then someone who noted the girl's rare loveliness got her a position to pose for some photographs.

The migration from Philadelphia to the larger artistic world of New York followed naturally, and, armed with letters to painers here, Mrs. Nesbit came, bringing Evelyn, whose beauty was flowering day by day. But, in spite of the romances Mr. Robert Chambers writes about it, the life of an artist model is not one glad round of pleasure and profit, and the Nesbits were still very poor. They lived in one room, where they cooked and slept and Mrs. Nesbit took in such sewing as she could get. Then a newspaper reporter ran across Evelyn and wrote a big Sunday story, illustrated with many pictures of her, which he called "The Most Beautiful Artists' Model in New York."

Fate did the rest. She was engaged by a theatrical manager on the outlook for beauties for his chorus—and she had reached the dividing line, the place where she had to choose between poverty and hard work—and the gilded life—the place where she had to ask herself, as the poor, pretty girl does under such circumstances—does it pay to be good?

She decided that it did not pay, and took what she thought was the easiest way. Where it has led her all the world knows. Certainly she has had the cakes and ale of existence. First there was a millionaire who used to take her out on his yacht for week-end excursions. Then came Stanford White, and for a while, at least, it was all like a fairy tale.

She, who had not had carfare, rode in cabs and taxis everywhere. She who had not always had even bread to eat feasted at the smartest restaurants. She who had worn the shabbiest of shabby clothes had fine gowns and jewels lavished on her.

Another turn of the wheel of fortune brought Harry Thaw into her life with more money, more jewels, more trips to Europe, and finally a wedding ring. Being Pittsburg-born, the Thaws had always been the biggest people on Evelyn's horizon, and to belong to that august family, and queen it socially in the very town in which she had been poor and humble, doubtless filled the measure of her ambition. Evil had prospered with her, and vice had brought her what virtue never could.

Then her sins began to find her out, and her world, built upon a foundation of wrongdoing, commenced to crumble under her feet. Pittsburg society would not receive her, despite the Thaws' financial and social position. Women, good women, would have nothing to do with her. The scarlet letter was branded upon her too plainly for even the Thaw millions to cover it up.

Also she began to know the cruel fact that while a man, obsessed by passion and in order to get a woman, swears that he will forgive her past lapses from the straight and narrow way and forget them he really never does. When he is married to her he makes of them a whip of scorpions with which to scourge her. The torments of hell can have nothing worse than the months in which Evelyn Thaw combated the jealous suspicions of her husband and endured his reproaches.

Then followed the shooting of Stanford White and the two long-drawn-out trials, during which, to save her husband and to earn a fee, justly earned and never paid, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told a story of her life that for utter degradation has no match in all the annals of sinful humanity. She stripped from herself every vestige of decency and left herself without so much as a rag of honor to cover her.

That this story was not true does not alter her status. She held herself up before the world as shameless beyond all belief until the wonder of it was that any woman could tell such things of herself and live. And now she is coining that story into money.

Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes that she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of one's fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it, and the life it has driven her to, she has coarsened and hardened.

The wonder of her at the trial was the expression of wistful, childlike innocence she wore. I asked a great alienist to interpret that to me, and he said that the reason of it was that her soul was unawakened, that she was morally dead and had never realized the import of the things she did. Hence they had not set their seal upon her as they do upon women who consciously tread the primrose path.

But that trial stripped the veil from her eyes. She came out of it knowing good and evil, and the knowledge has dimmed her beauty and taken from it the ethereal charm that was its highest note. There is nothing remarkable about her now. You may meet a thousand like her any day along Broadway.

I wonder how Evelyn Thaw, in view of her life, and all it has brought her of good and ill, would answer that question: Does it pay a girl to be good?

I think that no one could preach such a homily on the subject as this poor girl, who sold her birthright for a few silks and a rag of chiffon and good times, and who knows the price she has paid.

Devoid of Talent, Evelyn Thaw Capitalizes Sins

"No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante could do as well in three lessons. There is simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

"But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing at her, I wondered if she thought it paid. I wondered if she thought she had paid too dearly for all she had had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

"Believe me, she and women like her KNOW whether it pays to be good.

"Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of her fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it and the life it has driven her to she has coarsened and hardened."

BUTTERFLY IDEA RULES IN NEW FASHIONS

Full Blouses to Imitate Wings. X-Ray Skirts to Continue Popular, but With Flounces

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The butterfly idea dominates the coming styles. Having forsworn the use of legs, women will cultivate wings. A survey of the leading dressmaking establishments indicates the following autumnal metamorphosis:

Hats will be small and round, like the butterfly's head. Blouses and jackets will be extremely full and loose at the back and shoulders, suggesting wings. The jackets will be long, with a belt, but not drawn in at the waist.

Skirts will be plaited, the plaits opening wide at the knees, but narrowing again at the ankles, in imitation of the butterfly's abdomen. Most of the skirts will be flounced to the knees, while some will be so full at the back as to give almost a bustle effect.

Some gowns will be ornamental at the back with large butterflies or bows of silk set just below the waist.

Evening gowns will be lower than ever. They will be open to the waist behind, but very wide and loose over the shoulders.

Diaphonouses over pink tights will continue popular, but flounces will insure opacity as far as the knees. The color of suits will be less bright.

Kentucky Feudist, Reported Dead, Lives

LEXINGTON, Aug. 27.—Green McIntosh, feudist, charged with the murder of Greenberry Combs in Breathitt County, and who was reported as shot to death while resisting arrest by a sheriff's posse, was not killed.

He is being hidden in the Breathitt Mountains by friends. Word of his death was telephoned from the mountains, the officers say, to cause the search to die out so he could escape from the hills.

265 CASES TO BE TRIED.

MACON.—There are 265 cases, of which 100 are for alleged violations of the State prohibition law, to betried during the September term of the City Court which convenes Monday and lasts for two weeks. Only 50 of the defendants are in jail, the others having given bond.

HELD UP IN DAYLIGHT.

MACON.—A white man giving his name as Joe Jackson reported to the police that he was held up and robbed of $119 near the business part of the city at 7 o'clock in the morning. He said his assailants wore black masks and black clothes.

Macon Merchants to Tour Georgia Towns

MACON, Aug. 27.—Macon merchants are making plans for another booster trip through south and middle Georgia in September. The trip will last for three days and the merchants will travel in a special train, making short stops at each town en route.

The route will embrace Sandersville, Tennille, Brunswick, Millen, Waycross, Fitzgerald, Thomasville, Moultrie, Cordele and other towns.

PATHFINDER ROLLS INTO MOBILE AHEAD OF TIME; GREAT WELCOME GIVEN

With approximately 500 miles of the transcontinental highway behind him, Pathfinder E. L. Ferguson Wednesday prepared for the long westward journey from Mobile through New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego and Los Angeles to San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson arrived in Mobile late Tuesday afternoon.

Mobile's reception to the pathfinders was only one more indication of the widespread interest in the monster campaign for a transcontinental highway inaugurated in Atlanta on August 18 by Hearst's Sunday American.

The Mobileans carried out a program which they planned weeks ago. Several miles north of the city a big delegation of boosters, including many women enthusiasts in automobiles, met the pathfinders and escorted them into the city. Here a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, as well as prominent citizens and city officials, took the members of the party in hand and tendered to them a royal reception which the Mobile boosters say "surpassed the celebrations in Birmingham and Montgomery."

Immediately following the reception Mr. Ferguson began completing his plans for the resumption of the journey to New Orleans, which place he expects to reach on August 30. Like the Mobile boosters, the New Orleans "live wires" have had their plans practically complete for several weeks, according to advance reports.

Big Celebration Planned.

A monster good roads and highway celebration will be held, it is said, and a representative of The New Orleans Item, which is co-operating with The Sunday American, The Birmingham News, The Montgomery Advertiser and other leading Southern newspapers, will relieve the Montgomery representative.

The special man from The Item will accompany the party as far as Beaumont, Texas, where a representative of The Houston Post, which also is behind the movement, will join the tourists, accompanying them as far as Dallas. From Dallas Mr. Ferguson probably will be accompanied to Los Angeles by a representative of The Dallas Times-Herald. Monster receptions have been planned in each of the big cities named along the route, as well as many of the smaller ones.

According to the schedule as now planned, Mr. Ferguson will reach Biloxi, Miss., on August 28; New Orleans, August 30; LaFayette, September 3; Lake Charles, La., September 5; Orange, Texas, September 7; Beaumont, September 7, and Houston on September 8 or 9. The party should reach its destination, San Francisco, in October.

Following out the policy maintained all along the route from Atlanta to Mobile Mr. Ferguson will spread the gospel of good roads and fine highways through Louisiana, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California. Already the efforts of the pathfinder along this line have had marked results. Beginning at Douglasville, Ga., 30 miles west of Atlanta, the official starting point, and continuing through Tallapoosa, Heflin, Ala., Anniston, Ashville, Birmingham, Clanton, Montgomery and Selma, as well as other progressive smaller towns, local good roads and highway campaigns have been inaugurated following Mr. Ferguson's visit. The manifest enthusiasm with which the tourists were received all along the route has been directed into channels for the actual improvement of the roads and the development of highways.

Bad Roads Stories Disproved.

Although Mr. Ferguson has completed less than a third of the long cross-country tour, he has already demonstrated beyond a doubt that the South affords an ideal route for an open-the-year-round highway. This claim was scouted by Northern tourists, who have declared repeatedly that the weather was too warm down in Georgia and Alabama and Louisiana to make such a trip in the summer time. It was to disprove this that Mr. Ferguson decided not only to make the trip in the very dead of summer, but also to take his wife and children with him. That he has already succeeded is indicated by the reports from Mrs. Ferguson, who has declared all along the route that she was delighted with the "ideal" climate.

The South's reputation for bad roads, too, has been disproved by this tour. At Anniston, Birmingham, Montgomery and Selma Mr. Ferguson declared to the boosters that he was surprised at the marvelous development of the roads.

"If the citizens along the way which I have traversed do as much for good roads during the next two years as they have done during the past two, conditions should be ideal," he said.

That these citizens are going to do this and even more has been indicated repeatedly from the time Mr. Ferguson left Atlanta until he arrived in Mobile Wednesday.

Willard Exonerated By Coroner's Jury

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—After several hours of deliberation over the testimony presented by witnesses of last Friday's fight at Vernon between Jess Willard and "Bull" Young, which resulted in the death of the latter, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict exonerating Willard.

Several physicians who attended Young after the fatal blow was delivered testified that the Wyoming fighter's physical condition was bad and that Young had a cigarette heart, and that he was suffering from an affection which had robbed him of stamina which he may have formerly possessed.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury will have no bearing upon the prosecution of Willard, McCarey and the others charged with manslaughter, according to a statement of Prosecutor W. J. Ford after the inquest.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

Boys' High Seeks Alma Mater Song

Plans for offering a cash prize for the best original words for an alma mater song for the alumni of the Boys' High School of Atlanta are complete.

The purpose of the contest is to arouse interest among the hundreds of alumni of the Boys' High School in the alumni organization. The class of 1910 has taken the lead in this and the cash prize has been raised among its members.

Among the speakers at the 1910 class banquet recently were Dean Paden, president; E. H. Orr, Jr., James Manry, Joseph Yampolsky and James Mangum.

Danish King Saves Actress From Sea

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—According to The Budget, King Christian of Denmark, while cruising in the royal yacht, Rita, off Jutland, rescued Cinema, the actress, from drowning.

Cinema, a Copenhagen actress, jumped overboard from a boat to escape fighting boatmen.

She became exhausted and the King ordered the royal boat lowered to rescue the actress, who was taken aboard just in time.

Honors Requisition Asked by Sulzer

HARRISBURG, PA., Aug. 27.—Governor Tener has honored requisitions for Daniel Buegeleisen, charged with forgery, and Charles Clay, with abandoning children, on request made by William Sulzer as Governor of New York.

He did this on an opinion furnished by J. E. B. Cunningham, First Deputy Attorney General.

MADE INSANE BY THAW CASE.

CORRY, PA., Aug. 27.—Too intense interest in the Thaw escape drove Freeman Lylarger insane, and he is now confined in an asylum. Lylarger, who resided in Kerrtown, was greatly concerned over Thaw and could not take his mind off the subject.

POSTOFFICE IMPROVED.

COLUMBUS.—Improvements at the local postoffice costing $7,000 have been completed. Changes were made in the registry and money order departments, and additional space was given the parcel post department.

J. Y. SMITH HITS PLOT CHARGE OF WOODWARD

Chairman of Committee Declares Mayor Easily Could Have Had Primary Deferred.

Mayor Woodward's charges that the setting of September 30 as the date of holding Atlanta's Democratic primary was the result of a well-laid plot has brought a strong denial from Chairman John Y. Smith, of the city Democratic executive committee.

There is absolutely no ground for the charge, according to Mr. Smith. Also he is of the opinion that six weeks is sufficient length of time for the men running for the offices of councilman and alderman to make their campaign.

"A charge that the date of September 30 was set as the result of a conspiracy is without foundation," said Mr. Smith. "The meeting of the committee was attended by practically every member, while there had been no meeting or caucus of any kind prior to the meeting.

"It has been the custom for persons other than members to attend its meetings and to address them. Had the Mayor desired to have a later date set he could easily have appeared before the committee and have been accorded the courtesy of giving his views. I doubt if there would have been much trouble in having had the date set beyond September 30.

"There was considerably more than a quorum of the committee membership present when the matter of setting the date was taken up. There was practically no discussion of it and a resolution by Committeeman T. O. Poole naming September 30 was unanimously adopted.

"I can not agree with Mayor Woodward that the time is too short for the candidates for alderman and councilman to make their campaigns. When a candidate has to stretch his campaign beyond a period of six weeks it works a hardship on him, while the people undoubtedly get tired of too much politics."

September 12 Closing Day.

At a meeting held at noon Wednesday the sub-committee of the City Executive Committee set September 12 as the last day in which candidates in the primary of September 30 may pay their fee with the Treasurer and qualify. The assessments for the various offices were also fixed.

Owing to the smaller number of offices to be contested for and the consequent smaller number of candidates, the assessments are slightly higher than those of last year.

The total amount which it is estimated will be derived from the assessment is $1,320. Should any portion be left over it will be pro rated among the candidates. In the event of a run-off between any candidates the amount left over will be applied to the expense of the second election. An effort was made to require candidates in the event of a run-off to bear the entire expense of the second election, but was defeated.

Candidates must qualify by noon of September 12, paying their assessment to either Paul Toland or J. O. Cochran. The money will be handled by the treasurer of the committee, who will make a bond of $1,500.

The individual assessments are: General manager of waterworks, $150; Alderman, full term, $95; Alderman, unexpired term, $50; Councilman, $70.

Four Atlanta Boys On 15-Day Hike to New York on Bet

From Peachtree to Broadway is a long walk, but four Atlanta boys set out Wednesday to accomplish it in fifteen days, as the result of a bet of $500 made between them and George Allen, of the Central Railroad.

The boys are Lloyd Snead, 19 years old, No. 236 Cooper street; Clarence Burel, 18 years old, No. 79 West North avenue; Jack W. Lipscomb, 22 years old, No. 232 East Hunter street, and F. J. Lipscomb, 18 years old, of the same address.

The distance from Atlanta to New York afoot is more than 900 miles. The condition of the bet is that the boys walk it in fifteen days. This will necessitate them covering 60 miles per day.

John D. Plays Golf With 2 Deaf Mutes

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—John D. Rockefeller cut loose from his sedentary habits to-day and entertained at golf two young men he did not know and had seen but once before in his life.

The young men were Charles D. Russell, of La Salle, Ill., son of a Western man, and Horace W. Buell, Jr., of Chicago, delegates to the National Association of the Deaf now in session here.

"I have the greatest admiration in the world for these young men," he declared. "Their inability to hear and speak has not prevented their becoming good, intelligent men."

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Big Kinemacolor Feature.

"The Scarlet Letter" will be the feature for Kinemacolor exhibition at the Grand to-day and Thursday. This is a wonderful motion picture in natural color. In addition to the Kinemacolor offering, which is exclusive, and can not be seen in any other picture theater but the Grand, there are first run pictures of the highest quality exhibited every day.

Meredith Sisters Please.

Prettier gowns than those exhibited by the Meredith Sisters at the Forsyth this week would be hard to create. There are half a dozen and each one is original and beautiful.

All in all the bill is a good entertainment. Fred Bond with Miss Fremont Benton and two assistants present a comely playlet that is a vaudeville classic. The story wins laughter and curtain calls, and is about as popular as anything on the bill. Svengali presents a real novelty—a genuinely wonderful puzzle.

Bijou Policy a Hit.

That the new policy of the Bijou which was inaugurated Monday night is meeting with popular favor has been demonstrated at every performance so far. Better pleased and larger audiences have seldom gathered within the four walls of the Bijou. The Jewel Kelly Company is presenting as its opening bill "Her Fatal Shadow," a remarkably strong comedy drama, intense in its heart interest, dramatic in its situations and sensational in its climaxes. The company as a whole is an unusually clever one and includes many favorites who are receiving real ovations at every performance. Jewel Kelly, Eddie Black, Marie Claire, Grace Webber, Clare Summers, Rose Morris, have all played in Atlanta before and count their friends by the hundreds.

TO DEDICATE CHURCH.

COLUMBUS.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, on Sunday, September 14, will dedicate St. Luke Methodist Church, preaching both morning and evening. The church, one of the handsomest in the city, cost about $50,000.

ARMY OFFICER FOR RIVERSIDE CADETS

Georgia Military School Gets Special Detail From U. S. War Department.

Following recommendation by Major B. F. Hardaway, of the Seventeenth United States Infantry, cadets at the Riverside Military Academy, at Gainesville, Ga., will be placed under command of a United States army officer when its term opens September 11.

This information was received from Washington Wednesday. The name of the officer who will take charge will be announced soon.

This detail will carry in addition a complete equipment of modern rifles, dress and service accouterments as used by the United States army, and also artillery and cavalry equipment for dismounted service. The uniforms of Riverside cadets are identical with those used at West Point.

The promptness with which the recommendation of Major Hardaway was approved by the War Department is gratifying to the friends and patrons of Riverside, in view of the fact that the usual inspection for such detail is made only in April. But owing to the splendid showing made in the preliminary application, a special detail was obtained.

Major Hardaway was pleased with the location of Riverside, with its campus of 2,000 acres on the banks of the Chattahoochee River, two miles out of Gainesville, because of the many natural advantages offered by it for target practice, maneuvering, skirmish drills, bridge building, pontoon work and other military arts.

The physical property at Riverside, with its well-ventilated barracks, mess halls and schoolrooms, did much to obtain this speedy detail.

President Sandy Beaver, who was in the city Wednesday, announced the faculty has been strengthened and enlarged and the school will open with the largest attendance of its history.

FATHER SLAYS HIS SON.

TOMPKINS COVER, N. Y., Aug. 27. Newton Tomlin, aged 60, shot and killed his son Frank, aged 22, in their home in the presence of the wife and mother. The shooting followed a trivial quarrel.

ATLANTAN HELD ON CHARGE OF BIGAMY

W. F. Lee Arrested at Hattiesburg, Miss., With Bride, Said To Be Third Wife.

MOBILE, Aug. 27.—W. F. Lee, a young attorney who claims Atlanta as his home and who came to Mobile last Thursday from Milton, Fla., with pretty 19-year-old Dovie Smith and married her, to-day is under arrest in Hattiesburg, Miss., whence he had gone with his bride. He is accused of bigamy. When Miss Smith married Lee she had known him three months.

Chief of Police Frank W. Crenshaw received a warrant Tuesday for the arrest of Lee and a letter from Judge H. B. Daniels, of Swainsboro, Ga., giving the record of the man whose arrest was sought. Judge Daniels stated that Lee had married into one of the best families of Bullock County and that his wife later received a divorce, but no decree was issued to Lee. Judge Daniels also stated that Lee had gone to Knoxville, Tenn., where he had married a young school teacher.

Chief Crenshaw traced the couple from Mobile to Hattiesburg and requested Lee's arrest. The chief then notified the girl's brother, who wired that he would send transportation for her from Hattiesburg to Pensacola, where he resides.

Lee was arrested here Thursday afternoon upon the request of Miss Smith's brother, but was later freed when the brother and mother reluctantly consented by long distance telephone to the marriage. Late in the evening Lee secured a marriage license and the couple wer married by the Rev. O. C. McGehee, of the St. Francis Street Methodist Church.

The Smith girl says she will not desert Lee. She says she believes him when he says he was properly divorced from his Georgia wife.

COLUMBUS FAIR IN NOVEMBER.

COLUMBUS.—The Columbus Poultry Association has announced that it will put on a poultry show the week of November 17, and in addition will give a fair which will equal, if not surpass, the one held by the Georgia-Alabama Fair Association in 1912.

'Farmer Bill' Zimmer Joins Benedict Ranks After Long Romance

"Farmer Bill" Zimmer gave his friends a great surprise Tuesday night when he quietly re-entered the ranks of the benedicts, and to-day Kimballville Farm is all a-flutter. Miss Mabel L. Leys, of Detroit, was the former name of Mrs. Zimmer, and the marriage was the culmination of a romance of many years standing.

A very few of his intimate friends and relatives of the bride were in the bridal party which journeyed around to the parsonage of the Trinity Methodist Church at 7 o'clock Tuesday night, where the Rev. J. B. Robins performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony a bridal supper was given at the Piedmont Hotel, Mr. Zimmer having been the first manager of this hostelry. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hazler, of Detroit; Lee Jordan, Will Zimmer, Jr., the 12-year-old son of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Chancellor, Clarendon Chancellor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, Jesse Mercer and C. R. Tucker.

FRANK, IN CELL, PREPARES STATEMENT ATTACKING DORSEY'S ARRAIGNMENT

the trial which has just ended, but all of the decisions of any consequence were left to them.

The convicted man followed every move of Rosser and Arnold, as well as of Solicitor Dorsey, with an unceasing vigilance and with a thorough comprehension of the purpose involved. Friends say he feels that he is competent to have a part in the mapping out of the future campaign for his life and liberty, and expects to have a considerable voice in every plan that is proposed.

It is his life that is at stake, and he is convinced that he has obtained a sufficient knowledge of legal procedure at least to advise and suggest and, at times, direct as to what shall be done.

Rosser Lays Battle Plan.

Rosser Wednesday began active preparation for the appeal for a new trial for Frank. In summing up the evidence for the argument of the case before Judge Roan on October 4, Solicitor Dorsey will work in conjunction with Mr. Rosser.

Mr. Rosser emphasized the colossal task before him as he sat in his office in the Grant Building by pointing to the mass of evidence taken by the court stenographer. It embraces 4,500 typewritten pages, far and away the record for criminal cases in Georgia. This must be condensed to a workable basis—some 200 pages—according to Mr. Rosser. It is supposed to be just enough to make the points clear on which the arguments for a new trial will be based. But attorneys representing both sides must agree on the evidence submitted. And therefore to save time Solicitor Dorsey will collaborate with Mr. Rosser.

If Judge Roan refuses a new trial, Attorney Rosser declared the case immediately would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Thus the sentence of Frank to be hanged between 10 and 2 o'clock on October 10 will be stayed. It probably will be after the first of the new year before the Supreme Court will be able to take up the case, and Frank automatically will get a respite.

Mr. Rosser's statements and acts refuted the reports that he had suffered greatly from the long strain of the trial.

Away from the color and excitement of the courtroom scenes he is proceeding on his work with the methodical energy he would proceed on a civil case

Referring to Mr. Arnold's trip to Bedford Springs, Pa., and the report that he himself had suffered a loss of 25 pounds in weight, Mr. Rosser said:

"I don't need a vacation, so I have gone back to work. I weigh exactly the same as I did the day I went into the case. I haven't got time to worry about my physical well-being. I would greatly enjoy a good rest. But Mr. Arnold or myself has got to prepare this case for a new trial. He is gone and I've got to do it. So you see I am at it."

Mr. Arnold will return in good time to take part in the appeal for a new trial.

October 10 Jewish Sacred Day.

That he is not without tactical ability in a law court was demonstrated by his statement to the jury.

An impressive coincidence in the sentencing of Leo Frank to hang on October 10 is that this is the most deeply sacred day of al of Frank's religion—the Day of Atonement. It is the day for confession of sins. It probably is as universally observed by members of this faith as Good Friday, for example, is observed by the Roman Catholics.

The setting of this date, however, may be regarded as little more than a formality, as it is certain that Frank will not go to his death on that day. The arguments for a new trial will be heard on October 4, and if the motion is denied an immediate appeal will be made to the Supreme Court, and this will necessitate a postponement in the date set for the execution while the matter is being thrashed out in the higher courts.

While the beginning of the real battle will not take place until October 4, Frank's lawyers entered at once into a new plan of campaign for his freedom. Reuben Arnold is taking a few days' vacation, but will return to the city shortly to resume his work on the case. In the meanwhile witnesses are being examined and data obtained in reference to several of the points on which a new trial will be asked of Judge Roan.

Conley Says He Told Truth.

Frank arose at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning and walked about his limited quarters for half an hour, and then sat down to read the papers. He was reading when his father-in-law, Emil Selig, and Sig Montag came with his breakfast. He was reported to be as cheerful as at any time during the months he was awaiting for his trial.

Jim Conley had for his breakfast the usual jail fare. "I told the truth, boss," he remarked to J. L. Poindexter, one of the deputies.

"A lie will wash away, and you can't keep it, but the truth, it will stay by you," was his sage observation as he continued to comment on his case.

Rudolph M. Frank, father of the convicted man, was told Tuesday at his home in Brooklyn of the verdict that had been returned against his son. An elderly man and an invalid much of the time, Dr. Frank was prostrated by the news.

"I know Leo is innocent. He never would be capable of committing a terrible deed of that sort," the old man told Harry Lewis, the family lawyer, who spoke to the reporters. Lewis was one of the character witnesses who came to Atlanta to testify at the trial.

In making their motion for a new trial Tuesday, Frank's lawyers set forth statutory grounds, and later will file an amended motion. The first motion represents that the verdict of guilty was contrary to the evidence, contrary to law and contrary to the weight of the law, and that the court, after overruling a motion of the defense, allowed certain testimony which was relative to other crimes than the one specified in the bill of indictment.

This last reference is in regard to Jim Conley's testimony, in which the negro told of the alleged conduct of Frank with women in his office.

Frank's Fight Likely To Extend Over Months.

That the Leo Frank case can not reach the State Supreme Court, where it seems destined to go, before the third Monday in December, was the opinion expressed Wednesday morning by a court official who has figured out all the "possibilities."

Should the famous case reach the Supreme Court even at this early date it probably would be several weeks before a decision could be rendered, as a mass of testimony would have to be considered by the court.

According to this official, should Frank's attorneys be overruled by Judge Roan on October 4 in their request for a new trial, they may then file a bill of exceptions any time within the following twenty days. At the time of the filing of the bill of exceptions, which in this case probably will be immediately after the decision of Judge Roan and before October 10, the date of the hanging, the judge "shall," according to the law, order a supersedeas, which stays the execution.

After the bill of exceptions has been filed and the supersedeas ordered, the attorneys for the defense will have ten days in which to present the matter to the attorneys for the State. Following the notification to the State the defense then has fifteen days to file it with the Clerk of the Superior Court, who then has ten days to forward the record to the Clerk of the Supreme Court.

Should the defense take full advantage of the time granted in each case there is a possibility that the case will no reach the Supreme Court until January, or perhaps February.

THAW IS CHEERED BY THRONG IN COURTROOM

Women Join in Demonstration and Fugitive Bows His Appreciation for Their Sympathy.

SHERBROOKE, QUE., Aug. 27.—The habeas corpus proceedings in the Thaw case were abruptly stopped after they began before Judge Globensky in the Superior Court at 10 o'clock, and adjournment was taken until 3 p. m.

The judge said he wanted more time to consult the authorities on Thaw's move to withdraw his application for a habeas corpus writ.

There was a tremendous demonstration in the courtroom in Thaw's favor when Counsellor Samuel Jacobs, on behalf of the Canadian Government and the State of New York, began his opening arguments opposing the withdrawal of Thaw's petition.

"Let Him Go," Cry Spectators.

The like demonstration had been made earlier while Thaw was being taken from the jail to the courthouse. Men and women followed the automobile and blocked the streets which it traveled. "They can't get you, Harry," cried some. Women joined enthusiastically in the demonstration. Thaw was delighted beyond measure.

The court attaches had difficulty in keeping order. Thaw sat at the lawyers' table while his attorneys, in reply to Jacobs, pleaded that under the civil code of the Dominion they had a perfect right to withdraw their application for a habeas corpus writ.

Women in Demonstration.

Judge Globensky finally halted the proceedings, announcing he would take the case under advisement until 2 o'clock in order to consult the authorities.

When this announcement was made one spectator cried out: "Good, good. Let us have fair play, and three cheers for Harry Thaw."

There were about 200 women present, and all joined in the demonstration. With his face beaming, Thaw arose, placed his hand over his heart and bowed.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the Matteawan, N. Y., asylum for the criminal insane, from which Thaw escaped, has joined the forces which are fighting to get the fugitive back into that institution. Thaw's counsel is confronted by a formidable array.

Mr. Jerome, Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy, of New York State; Samuel Jacobs, of Montreal, representing New York State; District Attorney E. A. Conger, of Dutchess County, New York (in which Matteawan is situated), and others are co-operating with the Canadian legal representatives.

Park Manager's Power To Be Cut

Another step in the differences between the Park Commission and General Manager Dan Carey will be taken at the next meeting of the commission when a new set of by-laws materially curbing the authority of the general manager will be adopted. The new rules practically put the entire operation of the department under the direct control of the commission.

The proposed adoption of the rules is regarded as another step in the effort of members of the board to force the resignation of Carey, but this he states he will not do.

"It is nothing more nor less than an effort to make me resign, but even the adoption of the new rules and making my position practically nothing but a little clerkship, will not have the effect of making me resign," said Carey.

"Briefly, the new rules place the operation of the department back under the same method prevailing until three years ago, when the present rules were adopted. A touch of the pathetic is included in one rule which would prevent anyone connected with the park department from drinking even small glass of beer at a barbecue or anywhere else, this rule saying that an employee or officer shall not drink anything calculated to produce intoxication.

"I suppose the commission meant to hit at drunkenness in this rule, which has always been enforced by me, but if it is rigidly enforced under this interpretation it would result in the loss of a few good men. For instance, we have a splendid florist who happens to be a German and who is quite fond of his beer, but who never gets drunk. He probably would quit his job before he would his beer."

Cummins Predicts Free List Change

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Progressive Republican Senators to-day forecast the acceptance by the majority of the Senate Finance Committee of a modified form of the Kenyon amendment to the tariff bill providing for the free listing of trust-made goods.

The Kenyon amendment provides that the courts shall decide whether monopolies exist. Senator Cummins to-day declared he expected the amendment to be so modified that the determination of whether competition exists shall be left to the President.

Camilla Depot Case Heard; Decision Soon

The Camilla Railroad depot hearing took place before State Railroad Commissioner Murphy Candler Wednesday morning. The issue was taken under consideration for decision by the State Commission. Both sides were heard.

The controversy relates to the construction of a new depot at Camilla following the burning of the old one recently. The citizens, it is understood, want a $25,000 structure, while the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad is not willing to spend that much.

News Butcher Fined For Selling Liquor

TIFTON, Aug. 27.—J. C. Dasher, news butcher on the Atlantic Coast Line between Waycross and Albany, was arrested here Tuesday afternoon by Chief of Police J. O. Thrasher, charged with keeping on hand intoxicating liquors for illegal sale.

Dasher entered a plea of guilty before Recorder J. S. Ridgdill and was fined $75 or four months in the chaingang.

CRITICAL STAGE OF AFFAIRS IN MEXICO

President Wilson Warns That All Americans Should Leave Country.

forbidding the exportation of arms or munitions of war of any kind from the United States to any part of the republic of Mexico—a policy suggested by several interesting precedents and certainly dictated by many manifest considerations of practical expediency. We can not in the circumstances be partisans of either party to the contest that now distracts Mexico, or constitute ourselves the virtual umpire between them.

"I am happy to say that several of the great governments of the world have given this Government their generous moral support in urging upon the provisional authorities at the City of Mexico the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. We have not acted in this matter under the ordinary principles of international obligations. All the world expects us in such circumstances to act in fact as Mexico's nearest friend and intimate adviser. This is our moral relation toward her. There is nowhere any serious question that we have the moral right in the case or that we are acting in the interest of a fair settlement and of good government, not for the promotion of some selfish interest of our own.

"If further motive were necessary than our own good will toward a sister republic and our own deep concern to see peace and order prevail in Central America, this consent of mankind to what we are attempting, this attitude of the great nations of the world toward what we may attempt in dealing with this distressed people at our doors, should make us feel the more solemnly bound to go to the utmost lengths of patience and forbearance in this painful and anxious business. The steady pressure of moral force will before many days break the barriers of pride and prejudice down, and we shall triumph as Mexico's friend sooner than we could triumph as her enemy—and how much more handsomely, with how much higher and finer satisfaction of conscience and of honor!"

Ling To Return to U. S. Immediately.

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, Aug. 27.—It is now likely that Special Envoy John Lind will immediately return to the United States on the battleship Michigan. It was suggested that he await the Morro Castle, which will sail to-morrow, but fears were expressed that developments needing his attention might arise during the five days which it takes the Morro Castle to get to New York.

Hope that Mr. Lind would reopen negotiations with President Huerta is practically abandoned in all circles.

Gamboa Hints at Return.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27.—Foreign Minister Gamboa intimated to-day that Special Envoy Lind may return here from Vera Cruz and reopen negotiations with the Mexican Government as a result of the note sent by President Huerta to Lind. Mr. Gamboa maintains the optimism which has marked him since the break with the United States.

On the other hand, there is an ominous complexion on the action of War Minister Blanquet. The War Minister to-day sent circulars to Governors of all of the States ordering them to parade all the able-bodied men in their dominions on September 16 a national holiday. The object of this is evidently to show the United States the war strength of Mexico and arouse patriotism.

Wealthy Pensacola Man Alleged Slaver

PENSACOLA, Aug. 27.—Ben C. Heinberg, wealthy and once a Pensacola merchant, charged with violating the Mann white slave act in transporting 15-year-old Nellie Ward from Pensacola to Birmingham for immoral purposes, will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Jerry J. Sullivan, Jr., Thursday afternoon.

The public will not be permitted to attend, only newspaper men and court officials being admitted. Witnesses have been summoned from Pensacola and Birmingham.

Benton Declines to Seek Clayton's Seat

COLUMBUS, Aug. 27.—Asserting that he told the voters of Russell County, Ala., that if they would re-elect him as probate judge of that county, in the last campaign, that he would serve his entire term of six years, Judge H. T. Benton, of Russell County, has refused to allow his name to go before the voters of the Third Congressional District as a candidate to succeed Henry D. Clayton, in the event the latter is seated as United States Senator to succeed the late Senator Johnson.

Arraign Durham Boys In White Slave Case

DURHAM, Aug. 27.—The trial of Beeman Smith and Henry Goss, prominent white youths of this city, charged with violating the white slave act began this afternoon. Much interest is centered in the case, owing to the prominence of the girl, Hallie Draughan, and also the boys.

The defense is preparing a strong fight.

Sumter Dispensary Contest Unsettled

SUMTER, Aug. 27.—After a legal fight all of yesterday and to-day, the question of whether or not Sumter County would re-establish the dispensary after it had been suspended for years is still undecided, the board of canvassers being unwilling to declare the result, which was a majority of two in favor of prohibition.

During the session of the board intense interest was shown. At several points the prohibitionists were given a taste of the steam roller by a partisan dispensary board.

4,000,000 Shingles Destroyed by Fire

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 27.—A shingle mill at Espanola and 4,000,000 cypress shingles, 20 miles south, were completely destroyed to-day by fire of an unknown cause. The mill was owned by P. L. Southerland, of Jacksonville, and was leased by Zack Spinks, of Espanola. It was one of the largest in the State. The loss is estimated at $70,000. The fire destroyed telegraph communication South, but wires have been replaced.

Girls Clear $223 on Patch of Tomatoes

RALEIGH, Aug. 27.—How two Mecklenburg County girls cleared $223 on one-fifth of an acre by raising and selling tomatoes was told this afternoon by Miss Margaret Brown, aged 15 years, to 1,500 farmers and more than 300 housewives here in annual convention. Miss Brown said she donned overalls and tended her crop.

Mrs. Julian Heath, of New York city, organizer of the Housewives League of America, urged the women to trade direct with the producer rather than give the middleman his profit.

The convention will end to-morrow.

Bullets Whiz When Oil Lamp Explodes

MIAMI, Aug. 27.—Members of Charles Faudel's family narrowly escaped death when four cartridges lying on a table by a kerosene lamp were discharged by the exploxing lamp.

Bullets whizzed close to them as they endeavored to smother the flames which treatened the destruction of the home.

Young Inventor Dies On Visit in Atlanta

Francisco B. Marriott, 25 years old, died at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning at the residence of his sister, Mrs. J. Cheston King, West End. He had been in Atlanta on a visit.

Mr. Marriott had been granted patents on mining apparatus which has proved successful. He was well known in Atlanta.

Surviving him are his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Marriott, of Homewood, Ala.; two brothers, T. C. Marriott, of Homewood, and H. R. Marriott, of Atlanta, and his sister, Mrs. J. C. King. The body will be taken to Homewood Wednesday night for funeral and interment.

Gov. Craig Takes Up Charlotte Lynching

ASHEVILLE, Aug. 27.—Intimating that officials might habe to answer for the lynching of Joe McNeely, a negro, at Charlotte, Governor Locke Craig in Asheville to-day issued a statement declaring he would vigorously co-operate in the detection and punishment of the lynchers. The Governor declares there was not the slightest excuse for the mob, as the negro was in custody. Proceedings against the Sheriff are possible.

Governor Craig is keeping in close touch with the situation at Charlotte by long-distance telephone, add any further move for violence will probably bring out the State militia.

Lumber Man Held on Charge of Swindling

Benjamin F. Mitchell, who declared he was president of the Mitchell Lumber Company, with offices in the Temple Court Building, was arrested Wednesday on a warrant issued by M. A. Litsey, of Roberta, Ga., charging swindling.

According to Litsey, Mitchell ordered a carload of lumber from him in Roberta, then sold it in Atlanta for less than he had agreed to pay for it. Detectives were unable to locate the office address which Mitchell gave. He will be taken to Roberta for trial.

U. S. Museum Agent Views State Exhibit

James Henry Rice, Jr., of the United States National Museum at Washington and formerly State Game and Fish Commissioner of South Carolina, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday morning to confer with Commissioner Mercer on local matters relating to the national department. The conference was held in the Piedmont Hotel.

Mr. Rice visited the State Capitol early Wednesday morning, where he made an inspection of the State collection and the work of the department.

YOUR DOLLARS DOUBLE AT WESTER MUSIC COMPANY'S GREAT CLEARANCE SALE

The Money Saving Possibilities Are Almost Unlimited Here. This Is Particularly True as to the Better Grades of Instruments Now Being Sold at $125 and $250 Below Regular Prices.

THE TERMS OF PAYMENT WILL PLEASE YOU

In Fact, We Are Not Particular About Terms, Anything Reasonable Will Be Satisfactory. Why Not Select That Piano or Player, Upright or Grand, To-day? Store Open Until 9:30 P. M.

A piano bought at Wester's at this time is an investment, not only in musical enjoyment, but a practical investment in a financial sense.

At the prices we have marked these pianos you are practically doubling your money, for at no other time or place can you ever approach this class of goods.

Our reasons for doing this are plain and simple.

In order to clean house, as it were, to dispose of all old styles and makes, sample pianos and styles dropped from our new 1914 catalog, we have cut the prices on each and every instrument; marked them down so far, in fact, that a mere glance at the make and price asked leaves no room for doubt in the minds of the buyers.

Some of these pianos are cut down to the actual cost to us; others are reduced in price so low that it means an actual sacrifice on cost. On many of these pianos the saving is from $125 to $250. Then, the terms are made pleasing in every way. Think of a fine A. B. Chase, Ivers & Pond, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Bush & Gerts, Kranich & Bach, Kohler & Campbell, Keller & Dunham, Hoffman, Strohber and others. These good makes are all new and the latest styles, but they are included in this sale.

LOOK AT THIS LIST.

Here we include a large number of new and discontinued styles, sample pianos, shop worn and some are used, taken in exchange on grands and players. German American, Kimball, Vose & Sons, Hallett & Davis, Steinway, Conover, Sterling, Bush & Gerts, Davis & Sons, Packard, Kohler, Cooper and others, prices ranging on any of these good uprights from $65 up, according to the grade of the piano. Other uprights, best grades, any finish desired, worth $375, $400 to $450, can be had in this sale at $218, $226, $243 and $258, on easy terms, and still others for $127, $148, $176, $187, etc., that have been cut down from $275, $300, $325 and $350. A fine walnut upright, slightly shop worn, high grade, regular price $350, to close out at $168.

Two sample $400 uprights, oak and mahogany, these same makes, high grade, will be closed out at $196 each, on easy terms if desired, at the end of the sale. There are many fine bargains here for Thursday. You will be sure to find a piano to please you. Open evenings.

BEAVERS STARTS CAMPAIGN ON AUTO NOISE

Police Instructed to Arrest All Motorists Who Violate City's Muffler Ordinance.

Declaring that the auto muffler cut-out ordinance is one of the most wantonly and flagrantly violated of the city statutes, Police Chief Beavers Wednesday said he intended to use every means at his command to enforce it.

The Chief has issued a special order to the entire police force instructing a rigid enforcement of the muffler law. Cases are to be made against every offender, no matter who he may be. The Chief is determined to bring relief from the nuisance, and said he is satisfied a few cases and stiff fines in Police Court will bring wonderful improvement.

In discussing the nuisance, the Chief took occasion to commend the editorial in The Georgian a few days ago relative to the necessity for a strict enforcement of this law for the protection of citizens.

"This muffler cut-out ordinance is a law, and it must be enforced as long as it remains on the statute books," said the Chief. "In my opinion it is a good law, for the noise made by the cutting out of mufflers, particularly at night, is an abomination, and for the reason that it is absolutely unnecessary to the running of a car. The cutting out of the muffler has no perceptible effect on the car—but it does have a perceptible effect on people who are trying to get a good night's sleep.

"The noise from the cars is not so bad in the day time, as the rumble of other vehicles and trolley cars serves to drown it out to a material extent. But at night, after the city has quieted down, the muffler cut-out is certainly a nerve-racking nuisance. It is worse in the summer, because of the great number of autos in the streets and the fact that people sleep with their windows open, thus receiving the full benefit of the distracting din as the speeding cars whiz past."

Considerable complaint of late has been made by citizens of different parts of the city, and these will receive with joy the news of the warfare started by Chief Beavers.

Troops Called to Prevent Gambling

PORTER, IND., Aug. 27.—Two companies of State troops were held in readiness to-day to invade the Mineral Springs race track, where a meeting is being held, should there be further gambling there at this afternoon's races. In ordering the troops at Elkhart and South Bend to be ready to move on the race course and take possession, Governor Ralston explained that he had reports of violations of the State gambling laws.

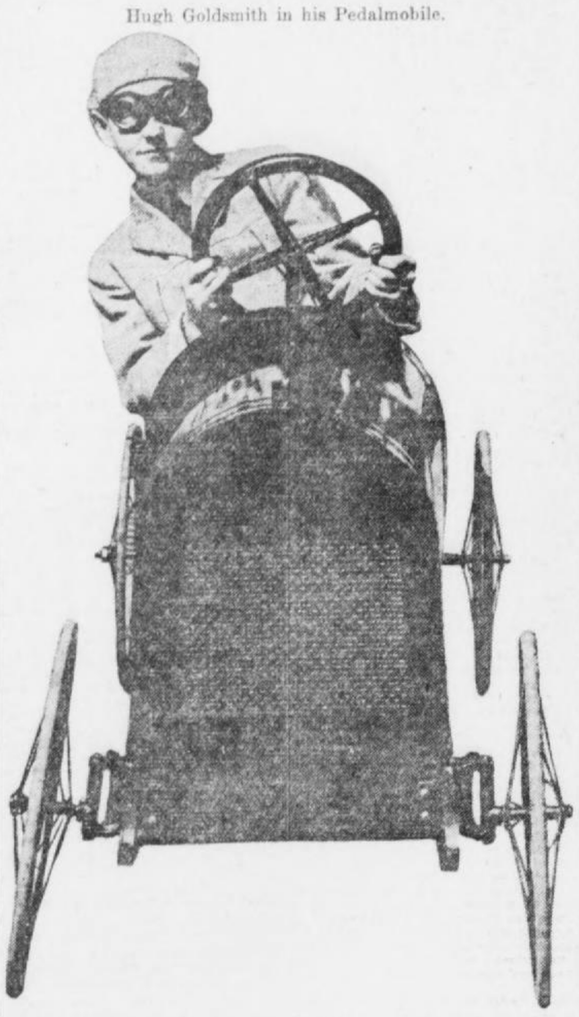

Fan Roots So Loudly He Loses His Voice

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 27.—Ernest Wellman, a fan of this city, cheered so loudly over a wonderful catch made by a Grand Rapids outfielder that he has lost his voice.

Physicians declare he so injured his vocal cords that it is hardly likely that he will be able to speak again.

PEDALMOBILE RACES ATTRACT YOUNGSTERS

Hugh Goldsmith in his Pedalmobile.

13-Year-Old Boy Wins First Georgian Car in Less Than Three Days.

Hundreds of Georgian boys and girls are hustling in subscriptions to Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian in their efforts to win a pedalmobile and participate in the pedalmobile races which will take place soon.

Little 13-year old Hugh Goldsmith is already the happy possessor of the first car, which he won in less than three days' time. Hugh says he won his car by getting up early in the morning and hustling and has named his car "Flatt" after the car owned by the great, smiling Hughie Hughes, who won fame in the Vanderbilt Cup race and also in the 500-mile races. Hugh Goldsmith expects to win the same fame in The Georgian pedalmobile races.

Applications are now being received from all sections of the South and supplies will be mailed the applicants in turn. In the meantime, future contenders are urged to get promises together and it will be an easy matter to round them all up when the blanks are received. Subscriptions can be taken in the towns where the paper is delivered by carrier and the subscriber may pay the agent at the end of each week, but mail subscriptions must be paid in advance.

Boys and girls who have not entered the pedalmobile club should start to-day. Fill out the application blank, bring or mail it to The Georgian office, 20 East Alabama street, and the pedalmobile man will give you full details as to how you can win one of thees handsome little cars.

APPLICATION BLANK

MEN SPEAKERS TO URGE VOTES FOR WOMEN

Plans Completed for Open Discussion of Suffrage in Georgia Senate Chamber.

Arrangements have been completed for the open suffrage meeting in the Senate Chamber Friday night at 8 o'clock. There will be several noted speakers on the program.

The three principal speakers have been announced, though the full program has not been made public. A feature of the evening will be the address of welcome by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. A. M. Hughlett, Dr. M. C. Hardin and Attorney Leonard J. Grossman. Especial interest attaches to the appearance of Dr. M. C. Hardin, who scored heavily in the suffrage debate at Gainesville. Dr. Hardin never has been heard before an Atlanta audience on the suffrage question.

Men's leagues for the enfranchisement of Georgia women will be discussed by Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, who soon will announce plans for the organization of a Georgia Men's Equal Suffrage League.

The meeting Friday night will be the first gathering of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association since its charter was approved by Judge Pendleton.

With the success of the meeting assured, the State-wide campaign will be in full swing, with local leagues in every county in Georgia. The committee on arrangements for the open meeting is made up of the following: Mrs. Amelia Woodall, president of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association; Miss Margaret Koch, Mrs. A. C. Daniels and Miss E. Estill.

Christian Conference To Plan Vice Cures

The program for the Southern Christian Citizenship conference which will be held in the Auditorium from September 19 to 21, inclusive, is practically complete, according to announcement Wednesday. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Civic League of America and will outline remedies for various evils.

Among the various interesting topics which will be discussed at the conference will be "The Co-operation of the Family, the Church and the State," "The Moral Personality of the State," "Social Environment and Moral Progress" and "Divorce and Social Welfare."

SCOTT MAY NOT AGAIN DIRECT RAILROAD

Augusta Hears That Georgia General Manager's Retirement Will Be Permanent.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 27.—Whether the "temporary retirement" of General Manager T. K. Scott, of the Georgia Railroad, means that he will resume charge when he gets well, or whether it means that Mr. Scott is being permanently forced out of the position, is a matter of speculation in Augusta. Ever since the strike of the trainmen and conductors on the Georgia Railroad last fall there have been persistent rumors that there would be a change in the management of the Georgia Railroad. It has been estimated that the strike cost the road near $500,000, but whether or not that has been charged against Mr. Scott by the Louisville and Nashville officials has never been ascertained.

While the strike was in progress Messrs. Gregg and Murdock, representing the conductors and trainmen, respectively, issued a statement in which they said that they did their utmost to get a conference with Mr. Scott in his Atlanta hotel just prior to the strike to negotiate with him and try to avert the tie-up of the Georgia trains, but that he persistently refused to see them.

Mr. Scott has been general manager of the Georgia for about twenty years. He is now nearing 70 years. His friends assert positively that it is purely because of his ill health, due principally to the infirmities of age, that he has relinquished the management temporarily to J. H. Ellis, secretary of the L. & N.

Cigarettes Blamed For Lack of Humor

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Declaring that American humor is on the wane and the reason is that nearly all of the men who try to make the nation laugh smoke cigarettes, Miss Lucy Page Gaston, superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette League, and known over the entire country for her tireless efforts against cigarettes, wrote a warning to the American Press Humorists' Association, now in session at Peoria, Ill.

Miss Gaston said that in order to save American humor she would administer free of charge her mouth wash cigarette cure to any of the newspaper funny men who would accept.

Father Who Whipped Wayward Girl Freed

MACON, Aug. 27.—One week after his mother died of pellagra and ten days after he had attempted to commit suicide, W. J. Bettis, a carpenter, was tried before the Recorder, charged by his 15-year-old daughter with cruelly beating her with a strap and threatening to cut her throat.

Bettis claimed that his daughter had become wayward and the daughter herself admitted indiscreet conduct. The charges against the father were dismissed. The girl refused to return home. She probably will be sent to a reformatory.

Food Probers for Ellis Island Named

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti has appointed Richard H. Taylor immigration inspector in field service, stationed in this city; James T. Hughes, assistant immigration inspector at Philadelphia, and P. L. Prentis, immigration inspector in charge at Chicago, to compose the board of inquiry which will at once begin an investigation of conditions at the immigration station at Ellis Island, N. Y.

It was charged immigrants were fed bad food.

Former Bailiff Fails In Suicide Attempt

Following the alleged loss of $500 in a business deal, James W. Hutchins, No. 296 South McDaniel street, made a desperate attempt at suicide Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. That the attempt failed was due, it is said, to the combined efforts of Hutchins' wife and sister and Call Officers Milam and Palmer.

Hutchins, who was formerly a bailiff, shot a negro while placing him under arrest about three years ago and was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder. He was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, but secured a new trial from the Court of Appeals. He is now out on bond pending his second arraignment.

Delta Special Leaves For National Karnea

Eleven members of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity left Tuesday afternoon on a special car over the Louisville and Nashville for Indianapolis to attend the Karnea, the national convention of the fraternity, which will be in session at the Severin Hotel from August 28 to August 30.

Deltas at Knoxville, Tenn., and Lexington, Ky., will join the Atlanta car. Those comprising the party were Kenyon B. Zahner, T. B. Bean and J. S. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta; D. T. Deen and Ed Jordan, Waycross; H. H. Hudson, East Point; J. M. and H. S. Cowart, Arlington; J. H. C. Claussen, E. G. Jordan and E. R. Pugh.

Studebaker

The "SIX" $1550

When You Get Acquainted With This "SIX" You Will Surely Want One

A drive in the Studebaker "SIX" will charm and convince you.

If there has ever been confusion in your mind concerning the qualities of a worthy Six, your questions will be fully answered after you have driven this "SIX".

And even if you are aware what some good sixes can do, you will enjoy a greater glow of satisfaction when you drive this car.

As you sit behind the alluringly smooth and responsive motor, no one will need to tell you why you like it. You will know perfectly well.

The instant and full answer to your call for increased speed or power, the sure and perfect response to your control, the quietness, the absence of vibration, the sheer thorough-bred ability of this "SIX" to do all its work without strain or perceptible effort—these things will prove a never-ending delight.

It is as hard adequately to describe this "SIX" as it is always difficult to describe any new and more perfect instrument.

BUT—the Studebaker "SIX" will win you, as sure as ever you sit behind the wheel.

Buy It Because It's a Studebaker

Studebaker "Six" Engineering

The design of a fine six-cylinder car, especially in the motor, calls for exceptional skill and wide experience.

Efficiency at all speeds and the absence of vibration, which are the unique advantages of a worthy Six, can only be attained by the most scientific engineering.

To attain perfect results we use experimental laboratories of large size and full equipment, where every idea built into the Studebaker "SIX" has been proved correct beyond the possibility of error.

We work by knowledge, not by theory.

Every ton of steel we buy is first made according to Studebaker formulas and later rigorously tested to be sure it is up to standard.

Throughout the manufacture, which is carried on entirely in our plants, from forty huge power hammers which forge out over 250 parts for every Studebaker "SIX", to the last operation, accurate to the one-thousandth of an inch, the "SIX" is built with a scrupulous regard for fine work and the best materials.

Studebaker Standards of Luxury

From the beautifully balanced chassis to the deep upholstery and complete equipment, the "SIX" shows careful attention to appearance and comfort.

It is, of course, electrically lighted and started.

The auxiliary seats, making ample room for six-passengers, are exceedingly comfortable and yet may readily be folded to one side.

The painting is lustrous, requiring twenty-four operations, including many days of drying and aging, before it is finished.

We use Studebaker-Jiffy storm curtains, the most ingenious improvement ever made in automobile curtains.

The Studebaker "SIX" is a car of complete comfort and strikingly handsome appearance.

MRS. GODBEE, IN BOUDOIR CELL, AWAITS FATE

Slayer of Former Husband and His Bride Gives Homelike Touch to Prison.

MILLEN, GA., Aug. 27.—In a cell transformed as if by magic into a boudoir, as dainty and complete as can be found in any home, Mrs. Sarah Perkins Godbee, charged with the murder of her divorced husband and his young bride, awaits her preliminary hearing in the Jenkins County courts Thursday as calmly and dispassionately as though she had already been assured of her freedom.

The cell itself reflects the cheerfulness and hope that fill the accused woman's mind. Despite the steel ceiling, the rough concrete floors and the iron bars, her cell is attractive and distinctly feminine. The roughness of the floors is concealed by soft rugs, the iron bars at the windows are hidden behind little white curtains that catch every flutter of the breeze; the toilet accessories, washstand and china are in blue and white, the color in which her home is furnished.

All the Comforts There.

Two white beds with fresh linen, two rockers and several straight chairs, a little blue and white table on which rests a vase constantly filled with fresh flowers, a glass pitcher of ice water, a glass stand filled with fruit, a bottle of toilet water, stacks of magazines and letters—all combine to transform the cell into a typical woman's room.

Mrs. Godbee takes as much care and pride in her personal appearance as she does in the appearance of her cell. She usually wears negligee—a dainty, pale blue kimono brocaded in pink and yellow butterflies and finished with valenciennes laces. She is rarely alone at night. Her relatives or her daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, more usually the latter, always spend the night with her. The daylight hours see streams of friends coming and going, all with words of encouragement and many with fresh dainties and conveniences for her comfort.

Mrs. Godbee's calmness and carefree attitude is the marvel of Jenkins County officials. She talks and laughs as she did before the double murder of which she is accused; she chats freely with her friends, and is always glad and willing to see visitors. Gossip of the current topics of the day falls from her lips as readily now as before the crime, and she has become an inveterate newspaper reader.

Keeps Silent on Killing.

Only on one subject does Mrs. Godbee preserve a close silence. Of the killing of Judge Godbee and the events leading up to it she will say nothing. She will give no inkling of the causes that led her to shoot her former husband and his bride, and silence is the only answer to inquiries as to her line of defense.

When the killing is brought up, Mrs. Godbee always smiles softly and changes the subject of conversation, prattling innocently of the latest happenings in Millen society or of the great world events.

The excitement created in Millen by the killing has not subsided, though it has been almost two weeks since the crime was committed. Sentiment appears to be divided, some claiming that the accused woman has suffered until she could suffer no longer; while others express the opinion that Judge Godbee was not altogether to blame for the marital troubles that brought on his death.

Editor Spat On by Judge He Attacked

NORFOLK, VA., Aug. 27.—Friends of Charles R. Kelley, editor of The Norfolk News and nephew of Bishop Kelley, of Savannah, who was assaulted and spat on yesterday afternoon by Judge Lawless, of the Norfolk County Court, because of newspaper attacks made on the jurist, are to-day urging him to prefer charges of assault against Judge Lawless.

Odd Light Designs To Feature Exhibits

Unique designs in electric and gas lighting are to feature the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition, according to members of the exhibit committee. The Georgia Railway and Power Company has arranged for a large space, and will make a special display of light and power. The Atlanta Gaslight Company will have some novel lighting features. The Massengale Bulletin System will have a display of electric signs.

Committee members continue soliciting subscriptions for space, and many new manufacturers have signed. Others are on the verge of signing, and it is expected that every foot of space in the exhibit will be sold by Saturday.

Girl in X-Ray Gown Mystery at Navy Ball

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—All the men in the naval set, women, too, are eager to learn the name of the young woman who went to the dance on the battleship Idaho in a very lacey skirt and no petticoat. The lace in the skirt was of open and generous design, allowing more than casual glimpses of shapely, nether limbs.

The woman is a pronounced brunette, seemingly of Spanish origin. Her favorite dance is the tango, judging by the abandon and skill with which she executed it.

Spanish Importers Want Atlanta Branch

The Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce received a letter Wednesday from Valencia, Spain, from a large exporting and importing firm, wanting information about Atlanta dealers in peanuts, almonds, saffron, garlic, onions, etc. The letter states that the peanut trade is rapidly increasing in Spain and there is a probability of the Valencia firm establishing a branch here.

The bureau daily receives letters from all over the country asking about plant sites, transportation facilities, trackage, etc., in Atlanta. All available information is given the inquirers.

Smallest Painting On Grain of Corn

CAMDEN, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Samuel T. Schultz, of Camden, N. J., whose scenic and mural painting studio is at Wilmington, Del., has, despite a lifetime spent in painting subjects in heroic size, the unique distinction of having made the smallest landscape painting in the world.

It is on a grain of corn, and the painter has just recovered it after having lost possession of the picture for more than forty years, in which it has traveled from art center to art center through Europe, attracting wide attention as the tiniest paining on earth.

Daniels Boys Play At Being U. S. Tars

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Clad in United States seamen uniforms, gift of sailors on the Mayflower, the younger sons of Secretary Daniels have "invented" a new game which has taken juvenile Washington by storm.

The boys have rigged up wigwag towers on the grounds of Single Oak, the Daniels country place. Here the "home flag" is kept, and when communication with their friends stationed at other towers nearby is desired they wigwag the flag and signal to their heart's content. They have arranged a code.

Gives Wife All His Land to End Nagging

LOGANSPORT, IND., Aug. 27.—Farmer Marvin Brown owned 75 acres of land. His wife nagged him so that he declared life with her was unbearable. He made her a proposition that for every day she would not nag him he would give her an acre of land.

The next 75 days were days of perfect peace and domestic calm. On the seventy-sixth day Mrs. Brown resumed her nagging.

All those circumstances were alleged in a divorce suit filed here by Farmer Brown.

4-CORNERED RACE LIKELY IN MACON

Julian Urquhart, Former Recorder, Expected to Announce Candidacy for Mayor.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Julian Urquhart, former Recorder of Macon, is being urged by his friends to enter the race for Mayor, and he has the matter under consideration and will make a final decision in a short time. It is generally understood, however, that he will run.

Mr. Urquhart is an attorney and well qualified to fill the position of Mayor. He is familiar with municipal affairs, and his record as Recorder will be used in the campaign. He will make the race independently without an aldermanic ticket.

The other announced candidates are Bridges Smith, A. L. Dasher, Sr., and Wallace Miller.

Record Registration.

MACON, Aug. 27.—The registration in Macon and Bibb County this year promises to break all past records. The total registration at present is 2,675, and it is believed this number will be doubled. The largest registration on record was in 1912, when 3,770 voters qualified in the county.

Three elections with more than 40 candidates in the field is the cause of the increased interest in the registration, and it is believed that before the books for the special registration for the municipal primary at least 4,500 citizens will have qualified to vote.

For Chief of Police.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Harry Griggs, manager of the Elberta Hotel, has been announced by his friends as a candidate to succeed Walter B. Chapman, the present Chief of Police.

Chief Chapman's term will expire December 17, and his successor will be elected by the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Griggs' candidacy will only be announced in the event Bridges Smith, administration candidate for Mayor, is elected at the coming municipal election.

Miller Has Mascot.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Wallace Miller, candidate for Mayor on the young men's ticket, has a mascot—a baby daughter, who was born yesterday.

Trentini's Au Revoir Kisses Start a Riot

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—There was a near-riot on the French Line pier soon after La Lorraine docked. Customs and immigration officials rushed to a point near the gangway, where a large crowd had gathered.

In the center was Mlle. Emma Trentini bidding an osculatory ideau to all her fellow first cabin passengers. Just at this moment one of the passengers asked whether she was going to marry Caruso.

"Caruso!" she exclaimed. "Bah!" and then hurried from the pier, plainly showing disgust.

ARRESTED AS EMBEZZLER.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 27.—Charles W. Mitchell, bookkeeper for the Charleston Mining and Manufacturing Company at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., has been caught at Los Angeles on a warrant charging embezzlement of $6,000 of the company's money.

ADMIT BANKRUPTCY.

The International Tape Company, an Atlanta corporation, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Wednesday. Robert Sharpe, a tailor at No 125 North Pryor street, also filed a voluntary petition.

BAND AND ORGAN CONCERT BENEFIT

Splendid Program Arranged for Fifth Regiment Musicians and Charles Sheldon.

A brass band and organ concert will be given at the Auditorium Thursday evening, under the joint auspices of the Fifth Regiment Band, National Guard of Georgia, and the Atlanta Music Festival Association.

The proceeds of the concert will be for the benefit of the band and association. The association will use its part in helping pay for the free Sunday concerts which have become a permanent feature of Atlanta's musical life. The program will be as follows:

March, Grand Entry.....Barber
Overture, Tancredit.....G. Rossini
Descriptive, A Hunting Scene
P. Bucalossi
Selection, The Sunny South...Lampe
Organ Selection.....Sheldon
Overture, Rossmonde (Organ accompaniment) .....Schubert
Medley-Overture, Remick's Hits, 1913 .....Lampe
Grand Fantasia, 'Home, Sweet Home, the World Over."

The band leader will be Chief Musician C. E. Barber, of the Fifth Regiment, and the organist will be Charles Sheldon.

Owing to the keen popular interest in the concert, particularly among friends of the Fifth Regiment, it has been decided to make the prices of admission 25 cents and 10 cents.

Women to Wear Less Clothing, More Gems

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—More jewelry and fewer clothes is the advice given to-day to women who wish to keep apace or a few paces ahead of fashion by the jewelers of the country, assembled here for the eighth annual convention of the National Retail Jewelers' Association.

"Jewelry is more necessary than dress," said President T. L. Coombs, of Omaha. "Women wore jewels before they wore many clothes; they are coming back to those styles."

Oldest Sneezer Is Dined by Hay-Fevers

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 27.—America's oldest sneezer—Major Richard Muckle, of Philadelphia, aged 88—was given a banquet here last night by the United States Hay Fever Association. The major has suffered from the sneezing, sniffling fever for 75 years.

Macon Man Missing; Shortage in Accounts

MACON, Aug. 27.—J. Turner Shepherd, for three years bookkeeper for the Joseph N. Neel Company, clothiers, and one of the best known young men of Macon, has disappeared, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts of approximately $3,600.

Shepherd is married and has two children.

Elephant Attacks Autoists; 4 Hurt

AURORA, IND., Aug. 27.—Imagining he heard the battle challenge of the jungle in the blasts of an auto horn, Rajah, a bull elephant, broke from a circus parade here to-day and attacked the machine.

Four wealthy farmers were injured and the big red touring car was wrecked.

The World of Society

Miss Louise Broyles, who, with Miss Isabel Robinson, sails next week to enter the Yeatman School near Paris, was the honor guest at two farewell parties Wednesday. Mrs. George Brine entertained at a luncheon at the Piedmont Club, which was followed by an informal tea tendered Miss Broyles by Miss Margaret McCarty.

The luncheon table, placed on the ballroom porch, suggested Miss Broyles' approaching ocean voyage. A large boat, formed of pink rosebuds and pink and white snapdragons, formed the centerpiece, with vases of Killarney roses at either end of the table. The place cards were hand painted with miniature sailboats, and Miss Broyles' place was marked by a beautifully bound book to contain an account of her voyage.

Mrs. Brine wore embroidered voile with a hat of white lace, adorned with pink roses. Miss Broyles wore white point d'esprit, with sash and girdle of apple green, the toilet completed by a big black hat.

Invited to meet her were Mrs. J. D. McVarty, Mrs. Arnold Broyles, Mrs. Thomas Philip Hinman, Misses Katherine DuBose, Helen McCarty, Margaret McCarty, Mary Burr Lake, Dorothy Arkwright, Virginia Lipscomb, Margaret Northen and Dorothy High.

Miss McCarty's guests included eight or ten young girls, who were also entertained at the Piedmont Club. Tea was served from a table decorated with summer flowers. Miss McCarty wore cream colored point d'esprit, with coat of blue taffeta and a hat of old rose adorned with blue ribbons.

On Friday, Miss Dorothy Arkwright will entertain a small group of friends at luncheon at the Piedmont Club in honor of Miss Broyles, who leaves Atlanta Saturday.

Vesper Club Dance.

One of the interesting events of Friday evening will be the dance given by the Vesper Club at its rooms in West End in honor of several girl visitors to the city. The following couples will act as chaperons for the evening:

Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Evin McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. George Ansley, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooke.

Thomas-Wells.

The marriage of Miss Adeline Thomas, the only daughter of Mrs. Alice Muse Thomas, and Mr. James Leech Wells takes place Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother on Peachtree Place. On account of the recent death of the bridegroom's father the guests are limited to the immediate family and a few very close friends.

Spear-Bell Wedding.

Miss Laura May Spear and Mr. Clarence Bell were married Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Spear, in Hyde Park, Cincinnati.

The wedding was witnessed only by members of the two families.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bell left for the mountains of North Carolina, where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Spruce street, Inman Park.

Mr. Bell is the son of Judge and Mrs. George Bell. He is a member of the law firm of Bell & Ellis. Mrs. Bell made many friends here on her visit to Miss Jennie Sue Bell last spring.

In Compliment to Miss Irwin.

Mrs. Walter Smith gave a bridge party Wednesday morning for Miss Irma Irwin, of Montgomery, the guest of Mrs. William Jenkins. The card tables were on the porch, where yellow flowers and ferns were used as a decoration.

Invited to meet Miss Irwin were Misses Alma Downing, Marguerite Harper, Fannie Simpson, Louise Mell, Alice May Massengale, Lebie Ewing, Mrs. William Jenkins, Mrs. Clarke Fraser, Mrs. Frank Winecoff, Mrs. Sam Eidison, Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and Mrs. J. H. Sutten.

In the afternoon Mrs. William Jenkins gave the first of a series of bridge parties for her guest, Miss Irwin. Golden-glow and black-eyed daisies decorated the house.

Her guests included Misses Edwina Harper, Isabelle Simpson, Nell Bowers, of Nashville, the guest of Mrs. J. P. Allen; Lucile Bean, Theodosia Andrews, Ruth Small, of Macon, the guest of Mrs. A. E. White; Lydia Nash, Marion Fielder, Laura Ripley, Ethel Law, Sarah Burr, Julia Hardwick, Mrs. Dan McIntyre, Jr., Mrs. Claude Weller and Mrs. W. A. McCullough.

Ice Cream Festival.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Trainmen will give an ice cream festival in the Concrete Building Thursday afternoon from 5 to 10 o'clock.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The Atlanta Francis Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold its regular session Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Sunday school room of Trinity Church. Superintendents of departments are especially urged to be present.

Dancing Party.

Miss Helen Atkisson entertained at a dancing party Monday evening at her home in Ansley Park. The guests were Misses Lyndall Haddon, Laila Bright Cannon, Louise Cooper, Estelle Lindsey, Elizabeth Clayton, Gladys Sands, Dorothy Davis, Katherine Darby, Minnie Cook, M. A. Lindsey, Irene Hollis, Mabel Atkisson, Messrs. Harrold Keene, Nat Spence, Milton McGovern, Forrest Carroll, Marshall Walker, Harrold Greenlea, Edwin Wilder, Williams, Sewell, Philip Bayley, Simpson, Donald Dudley and Tommie Atkisson.

For Miss Parke.

Miss Helen Parke, of Washington, who has been visiting Mrs. H. C. Shover, on Highland view, was the honor guest of several informal parties. Thursday a number of the school set were given a picnic at Tallulah Falls. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Shover chaperoned the party and Misses Elise and Martha Shover acted as hostesses.

Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunt tendered Miss Parke a dinner at their home on Myrtle street. Covers were laid for nine.

Saturday afternoon the Misses Shover entertained at an al fresco party for Miss Parke. Twelve guests were present and games were played during the afternoon, for which attractive prizes were given. Miss Parke returned home on Tuesday.

Miss Darby Entertains Club.

Miss Katherine Darby entertained the members of her dancing club, the Inter Se Club, Tuesday evening at her home in Ansley Park. Guests were Misses Chauncey McClain, Helen Atkisson, Marie Kitchens, Margaret Bramlett, Claire Booth, Louise Couper, Elizabeth Ramey, Lois Carroll, Mary Anderson, Martha Darby, Messrs. Ernest Allen, Mercer Lee, Joe Heard, Jr., Alvin Lovinggood, Clarence Trotti, Herbert Kelly, Gordon Freeman, Forrest Carroll, Archie Freeman, Philip Almand, L. Stroble, Mat Spence, Luther Randall, Herbert Snyder, Pope Franklin, Dr. Nat Wheeler.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Willingham have returned from Blue Ridge. Misses Anita Estes and Claire Kantrowitz, of New York, who accompanied them, are their guests.

Mrs. Leila Stowe Beach and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Beach, have returned to the city, after a delightful visit to Saute, in Nacoochee Valley, where they were guests of the Misses Glenn.

Miss Jamie Arnold gave a matinee party at the Forsyth Wednesday afternoon for Miss Frances Springer's guests, Miss Annie Will Pearce and Miss Irene Berry, of Columbus, and Miss Sarah Garland, of Griffin.

Miss Elizabeth Hines will return home Thursday from Anderson, Ind., where she has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, for some time. Mrs. Wright was Miss Ruth Hoffman, of Chicago, and Miss Hines was one of her bridesmaids in June.

Misses Katherine DuBose and Faith Johnson, who have spent the last week in Macon with Miss Elizabeth Baker, will return home Wednesday night. Miss DuBose will leave Saturday with Mrs. Arnold Broyles for New York, remaining with Misses Louise Broyles and Isabel Robinson until their departure for Paris, where they will enter school.

Around-Britain Flyer Falls in 1,048th Mile

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, Aug. 27.—With 1,048 miles of his 1,800-mile flight around Great Britain behind him, Aviator H. G. Hawker met with a mishap ten miles from this city to-day. One of the wings of his hydro-aeroplane broke and Hawker feared he would not be able to reach Southampton in time to get the $25,000 prize.

Hawker was injured in the fall of his machine.

IMMODEST DRESS SCORED BY HEFLIN

Congressman Looks to Women Who Combat Extreme Styles for Nation's Strength.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Women who shun the immodesty and impropriety of present-day fashions can be relied upon for the future strength and posterity of the nation, according to Congressman Thomas Heflin, of Alabama. Heflin expressed his opinion of diaphanous feminine drapery and the slit skirt craze as follows:

"I would paraphrase the Scripture, 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' and say, 'By their dress or lack of dress we shall know them.' The evil genius of lustful fashion through immodest dress is playing havoc with a certain class of women in this country and setting a bad example for others.

"Thank God, the good mothers have begun a crusade against this evil.

"The woman who instills in her daughter the principles of good sense and modesty and trains her up in the way that she should go has done more for her day and generation than she can ever hope to do by active participation in politics."

Work Begun on New Wholesale Section

An important spreading of Atlanta's business section was marked Tuesday by the beginning of work on a new wholesale section just west of the Terminal station. The work begun is the building of spur tracks by the Southern Railway. Erection of buildings will follow immediately.

A large section of West Side property was bought for this development. The spur tracks will leave the main line at the Peters street viaduct, and extend to Mangum and Haynes streets. There will be room for two long blocks of warehouses.

One Woman's Story

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OBEDIENT to her husband's suggestion, Mary Fletcher tried to get a maid from the city. First of all she visited many employment agencies. At each she was received with a smile of welcome by the person in charge, but that smile was replaced by a look of incredulous surprise when, in reply to the question: "What wages do you pay?" Mary responded: "Twelve dollars."

"My dear madam!" exclaimed one such agent. "Excuse me, but you cannot get any girl, white or colored, to do general housework for that price."

"But," said Mary tentatively, "suppose I get a green and inexperienced girl, and teach her everything, and help her with the work—what wages would she come for?"

Might Advertise.

"Certainly for not less than eighteen dollars at the lowest," replied the agent. "And if you wish one to go to a lonely place in the country, you will have to pay more."

After many such fruitless efforts, Mary ceased visiting intelligence offices.

"You might advertise," her mother suggested when Mary recounted her experience to her. "I used to get good maids in that way. But, then, I paid very good wages. Your dear father always insisted, you know, on having me get the best of everything—servants included."

Mary winced at the unintentional thrust, then forgot her own discomfiture as she saw the tears in her mother's eyes.

"I know, dear," she said hastily, "and he was right for you deserved the best of everything. But you must remember, mother, that father had more money than Bert has."

"Oh, I know, I know," the widow responded quickly. "Dear child, don't fancy for a moment that I meant to criticise your husband. He has, of course, derived many of his ideas from his mother, and—pardon me, Mary—but she has not lived as we have, so she is to be excused if she has taught her son to feel that women ought to do their own work. Naturally, as Bert is a good son, he takes her tone. I do not blame him."

"Of course not," her daughter assented. In her own heart she was wondering if she, this man's wife, could say as much.

"Your husband is very kind to me," remarked Mrs. Danforth, somewhat irrelevantly. "I ought to be happy."

But was she? Mary pondered. Did she not think that perhaps her daughter was not as content as she would like her to be? Did she not suspect that Mary did not love the man to whom she was married? And, if so, could she be happy—she, the mother who had taught her child that a loveless marriage was a sin?

Her Cheerful Voice.

As if reading the unspoken thought, Mrs. Danforth took her daughter's hand tenderly in hers. "Tell me, darling," she said, wistfully, "are you satisfied? Are you worried about anything? Sometimes I almost fear that you are a little disappointed—about something."

The young wife put her arms around her mother and drew the gray head down to her shoulder.

"Little mother," she said, her voice determinedly cheerful, "what notions you do get! Why should I not be happy here in this cozy little cottage, with the best mother that ever lived, and the man I have chosen out of all the world? Dear mother," with a light laugh, "why should I have married Bert if I did not want to?"

The mother laughed, too, and there was a ring of relief in the sound.

"Of course, dear! Why, indeed? Forgive your silly old mother—but I love you so much that if you were not happy—why, I just could not stand it!"

She ended with a little sob, and the daughter held her closer.

"You believe now that I am happy, don't you, dear?" Mary asked.

"Oh, yes, I believe it now," said the widow tremulously, "and you don't know what a comfort it is to be sure of it."

With her head still on Mary's shoulder she did not look up at the sad eyes gazing out of the window, nor did she see the bitter smile that twisted the young lips. In a moment the wife's face was again placid, and she smiled on leaving her mother, making the pretext that she had "some work to do downstairs."

She did not go downstairs at once. Instead, she turned into her own room and closed the door. But she did not, as she would have done in her girlhood days, fling herself upon the bed and give way to her misery. Instead, she went to the window and looked out into the July sunshine. But she was looking into her heart, not into the summer noon.

"Good Lord!" she whispered, "what a liar I have become! A liar both in speech and life!"

She stood motionless a moment longer, then lifted her head with a gesture of decision—almost of defiance.

"But I won't look back," she muttered. "I have made my bed and must lie on it—even if it is made of thorns. At all events, mother is comfortable and cared for."

She Had Learned.

Advertisements for domestics at the price named by Herbert Fletcher and his mother proved useless. As a final resort, Mary engaged one so-called "helper" after another from the village, but each was so inefficient that this trial was abandoned. The young housewife had learned that to secure good service one must pay an adequate price for it—and that even then one might fail to obtain it.

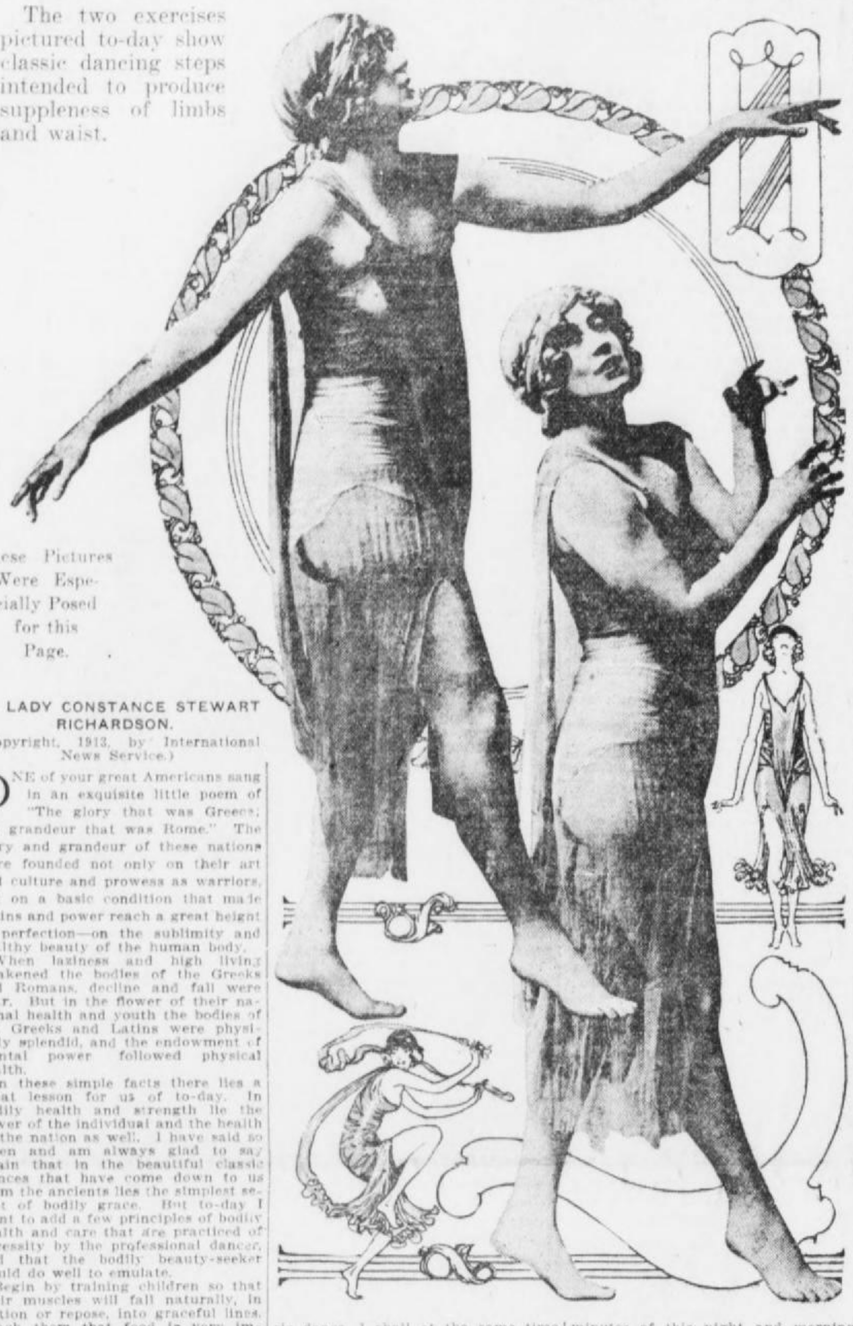

So it came about that at last Mary Fletcher did the work of her own house, hiring a woman from the village for two days a week to "wash, iron and scrub," and even then she had to supplement her at every turn. It was taken as a matter of course that the wife should help hang out the clothes and assist with the ironing. She told her mother that she "enjoyed the novel task;" in fact, that she thought the exercise and fresh air good for her. Her husband did not protest. Why should he? His own mother had always done that kind of work.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

The two exercises pictured to-day show classic dancing steps intended to produce suppleness of limbs and waist.

These Pictures Were Especially Posed for this Page.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ONE of your great Americans sang in an exquisite little poem of "The glory that was Greece; the grandeur that was Rome." The glory and grandeur of these nations were founded not only on their art and culture and prowess as warriors, but on a basic condition that made brains and power reach a great height of perfection—on the sublimity and healthy beauty of the human body.

When laziness and high living weakened the bodies of the Greeks and Romans, decline and fall were near. But in the flower of their national health and youth the bodies of the Greeks and Latins were physically splendid, and the endowment of mental power followed physical health.

In these simple facts there lies a great lesson for us of to-day. In bodily health and strength lie the power of the individual and the health of the nation as well. I have said so often and am always glad to say again that in the beautiful classic dances that have come down to us from the ancients lies the simplest secret of bodily grace. But to-day I want to add a few principles of bodily health and care that are practiced of necessity by the professional dancer, and that the bodily beauty-seeker would do well to emulate.

Begin by training children so that their muscles will fall naturally, in motion or repose, into graceful lines. Teach them that food is very important in one way and of no consequence in another. Food must nourish the body and give it strength, but beware the pleasureful-overeating of the well-nourished, ill-proportioned gourmet.

Food and Mood.

Now, you could dance a cancan or a breakdown however you hated the world—and indigestion surely produces misanthropy—but you have to be in harmony with life to express poetry in dancing. So, since mood affects dancing and food affects mood, this little cycle will make the classical dancer careful of the dower of health that spare, sane, sensible eating produces.

For breakfast I have coffee and hot milk, for lunch fruit and one nourishing solid and my simple dinner is guiltless of sweets. Clothes I regard as covering and not as trammeling ornaments that interfere with freedom of movement or deep breathing. Perchaps if I convert a few of my readers to a love for and a belief in the graceful movements of the classic dance, I shall at the same time make converts to the healthful joys of simple living, of deep breathing and of high thinking.

To-day I will tell you about two little movements of the dance that may be done at home without music and to the slower tempo of the walk. Try them for general bodily grace and ease of motion.

The first picture shows a very simple equally pretty figure, and for suppleness of arms and legs and waist it counts as strongly as it does for lightly poised and carried head and body. Advance with the head carried high above the column of the throat and the lifted chin. Sway slightly from the waist as you swing the arms in the arc of a circle; left arm is forward slightly above the shoulder height as the weight advances forward to the right foot, and at the same time the right arm is stretched back in a straight line and lowered from shoulder to wrist until the hand is just at the line of the hip. Do this with gradually increasing tempo, until the springy walking motion has become a light dancing step. Fifteen minutes of this night and morning will give great grace and resiliency to your ordinary gait.

The second picture brings the back and shoulder muscles into play and exercises the throat. In other essentials it has the basic principles and advantages of the first exercise. Advance as before. This time the forward motion is first on the left and then on the right side of the body and thus great muscular co-ordination is assured ofr the devotee of this exis assured for the devotee of this exelbows close to the waist line and the hands relaxed in easy lines from the wrist. Sway head and arm from side to side as the body pivots slightly from the waist muscles and the feet advance in the lifted prancing step of the dance.

"More power to ye," says my neighbors of Erin's Isle, in kindly greeting. To you—my neighbors across the sea—I say it, too, "More power to you;" and may the principles of the classical dancing I have so earnestly studied and so earnestly love, bring you beauty and grace and power to live gloriously and well.

A TALE OF LOST CHERUBS

"THE Gudgeon children are lost!" panted Mrs. Sprinkle as she flung open the screen door unceremoniously and burst in upon the Liffick family, variously disposed in hammocks and sprawly chairs.

"Wh-where?" demanded Liffick intelligently as he awoke from a peaceful dream.

"My goodness!" cried Mrs. Liffick. "Again?"

"They're truly lost," explained Mrs. Sprinkle, excitedly. "And we want you to come and help find them. They are sending parties in every direction through the woods and they're going to telephone the life-saving crew to drag the lake——"

"Did the boat tip over?" asked Liffick, now entirely awakened, as he reached for his cap.

Mrs. Sprinkle heaved an exasperated sigh. "If they're lost," she said, succinctly, "they might possibly be drowned, mightn't they? We don't want to leave any stone unturned."

Dire Thoughts.

"Mrs. Gudgeon left Imogene and Harry playing just as nicely under the trees beside their cottage while she walked down to the pier to fish," related Mrs. Sprinkle, "and they were gone when she came back in an hour. She has called and called for them, and they are nowhere within a mile! Imogene had such beautiful eyes, too! Maybe gypsies——"

"It will break their mother's heart!" said Mrs. Liffick. "How perfectly terrible! I'm sorry I scolded Harry for breaking off all my geraniums! And the time he scalded our cat—I might have made less harsh remarks to him. Suppose they've fallen down that old quarry pit! Arthur, you go right over in that direction and see! It's only four miles!"

Liffick, starting off, ran into several other men from the various cottages bound on the same errand.

"It looks serious," said Tilton with a shake of his head. "Kids like that and so venturesome! There's a dozen things that might have happened to them! I'm bound for the creek bank, where it is so marshy! There's quicksand there."

The whole summer colony was soon deserted. Everybody had gone to hunt for the Gudgeon children, whose various sins of commission were now tenderly covered by the veil of charitable anxiety. Mrs. Gudgeon alternately wept at home and darted out on spasmodic hunts. Again she would wander around the cottage making the air rnig with the names of the missing ones. There was no answer.

"Harry might have grown up to be President some day!" said Mrs. Liffick mournfully. "They say these mischievous little children always turn out so well. Dear little Imogene——"

"You said she was a hateful child, mother, when she cut holes in your new embroidered waist," put in Sally Liffick, who was tagging around that she might miss none of the excitement.

"Sally, you go straight home!" commanded her mother. "Haven't you any sympathy at all? The idea!"

One by one the searchers staggered in toward dusk. Each had the same tale of disappointment and each was dusty and thirsty and hungry and despairing.

"Something per-perfectly awful must have happened to them, because every inch of the woods has been searched!" said Mrs. Sprinkle. "Poor Mrs. Gudgeon! Harry was such a brilliant child!"

"I always said Imogene would turn out a beauty, too," put in Mrs. Tilton. "It's hard!"

"There never were such darling children in the whole world!" their mother informed everybody between sobs. "Oh, where are my babies? Just to get my arms around them"—

Harry Found.

There was a shriek and a scuffle from the little cellar under the Gudgeon house and everybody rushed to see.

The Gudgeon cook was dragging Harry out from the depths of the potato bin, while Imogene was unrolling herself from a pile of old carpeting. The assembled searchers and their parents stared, voiceless.

"We wuz playing hiding from the Indians," vouchsafed Harry. "You made awful good Indians—you yelled so!"

As Gudgeon reached for Harry with an arm motion that promised a laying over his knee, while Mrs. Gudgeon did likewise with her darling daughter, the searchers melted away.

"Wow!" said Liffick as juvenile wails rent the air. "That sounds good to me! Four miles to the stone quarry and back!"

Yield to Baby.

One afternoon not long ago in the vicinity of Grant Park there might have been seen a young man industriously pushing up and down a baby carriage, intently reading a book the while.

"Henry! Henry!" called a young woman from the second story of a house opposite.

Henry heard it, but continued to push the baby carriage and to read his book.

In about an hour the cries for "Henry" were repeated.

"Well, what do you want?" he demanded, rather impatiently.

"Nothing, dear," was the irritating response, "except to inform you that you've been wheeling Harriet's doll all the afternoon. I think it's time for the baby to have a turn now."

THE TUNNEL

GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The story opens with Rives, who is in charge of the technical workings of the great tunnel from America to Germany, on one of the tunnel trains, with Baermann, an engineer, in charge of Main Station No. 4. They are traveling at the rate of 118 miles an hour. Rives is in love with Maude Allan, wife of Mackendrick Allan, whose mind first conceived the great tunnel scheme. After going about 250 miles under the Atlantic Ocean Rives gets out of the train. Suddenly the tunnel seems to burst. There is a frightful explosion. Men are flung to death and Rives is badly wounded. He staggers through the blinding smoke, realizing that about 3,000 men have probably perished. He and ohter survivors get to Station No. 4. Rives finds Baermann holding at bay a wild mob of frantic men who want to climb on a work train. Somebody shoots Baermann, and the train slides out. The scene is then changed to the roof of the Hotel Atlantic. The greatest financiers of the country are gathered there at a summons from C. H. Lloyd, "The Money King." John Rives addresses them, and introduces Allan. Mrs. Allan and Maude Lloyd, daughter of the financier, are also present. Allan tells the company of his project for a tunnel 3,100 miles long. The financiers agree to back him. Allan and Rives want him to take charge of the actual work. Rives accepts. Rives goes to the Park Club to meet Wittersteiner, a financier. At Columbus Circle news of the great project is being flashed on a screen. Thousands are watching it.

Now Go On With the Story.

(From the German of Bernhard Kellermann—German version. Copyrighted, 1913, by S. Fischer Verlag, Berlin. English translation and compilation by

A Waterbury

(Copyrighted, 1913, by International News Service.)

Before daylight two thousand more men arrived, and with them began the endless stream of freight. Rives began to feel like a swimmer who has been bucking a tide-rip. But he asked that the pace be increased, and he shut his teeth and jumped in. Twenty lieutenants worked on his immediate staff, all of them young men, but all of them chosen for the cut of their jaws and the cleanness of their records in stress and storm and strife. And Rives worked them as hard as he worked himself. He gave no instructions. There was not time for that. He told each man what was to be done in a few curt sentences and left the doing of it to him.

That third night a terrific thunderstorm broke up the heat wave. It came down in a terrific gale, and the first thunderbolt fired a freight shed where 500 cots were stacked to the roof, as there had been no time to unpack them that night. Before the fire got well under way, the wind ripped the burning roof off, and then came the deluge. When day broke, Rives found that about a third of his jerry-built houses had collapsed—and the flood of materials and men from Toms River set in as before.

It was a terrible setback, but he shook his head and went at it as if nothing had happened, and his men backed him with the easy energy and resource of men long accustomed to uneven warfare with Nature. That day Tunnel City looked like a storm-swept mining camp. Two days later it was like the temporary camp of the great army. At the end of ten days it was a city with concrete houses and streets and electric lights and sewerage—a city of 20,000 men with a postoffice, a telephone system, two railroad depots, bakeries, dairies, abattoirs, stores, saloons and a hospital.

And over everything, the discouraged and drooping trees and the few scattered clumps of bushes, the window sills and the roofs, was the thick white dust of the cement that had made the miracle possible.

Pages of this and many succeeding issues of this paper might be filled with the details of the wonders of energy and the mighty toil of those summed months on the Jersey coast. And in four other spots on the face of the earth similar scenes were being enacted. But terrific as were the results, grandiose the scale, the details must needs be tiresome, for after all they were only digging a hole in the earth. In this, as in all other matters of great moment, it is well to trust to the trained and not the technical observer. Edgar Harkness, the star man of The New York Evening Journal staff, was at the works from the day the first man reached there. Looking over the files of the paper for that summer I came upon a special article he wrote describing the progress of the work.

You can gather some idea of the tremendous undertaking from his picturesque but vigorous English:

"This place of bedlam," he wrote, in part, under date of September 11, of that year, "looks as if it were going up in smoke. To-day the cloud above it is so dense that electric discharges like heat lightning flash across it and there is always a muttering like distant thunder, while beneath its edges a deep blue horizon tells that elsewhere the sun is shining. Beneath the Tunnel City roars and shouts explodes, whistles, thunders and yells.

"From the midst of the pandemonium and settling over everything like a white sea-fog rises a monstrous white column of dust to join the black smoke canopy overhead. Meeting the heavy blackness it seems to spread and mingle with it, forming a cloud such as observed at the eruptions of volcanoes. Pressed down by the colder air above it spreads like a gigantic umbrella, and little shreds are whirled away by puffs of the seaward breeze.

"SHIP captains report that when there is a steady off-shore wind this dust forms white scum on the ocean for miles, and New Yorkers know the source of the nuisance that turns their blue serge suits gray."

Here Mr. Harkness drifts off temporarily to little things that were important for the day only, and then goes on to report the progress of the actual work.

"The place of construction, following its fixed width of twelve hundred feet, is now nearly the finishing of a straight inland cut of three miles. It is laid out in long terraces so that the construction trains can hold to easy grades until they reach the last level, which will be 600 feet below the level of the sea. Here the actual sinking of the tunnel itself will begin.

"But the day before yesterday this place was a sandy heath, half reclaimed from barrenness. Swiftly it became a gravel pit, a quarry, and at last a monster chasm that swarms seemingly with insect life. Queer little busy beings covered with white dust that dig and growl and grovel and toil, gray-faced and dusty-haired.

"Twenty thousand of them hurl themselves into this mighty ravine every day. Their drills and picks and shovels glitter like the sunlight on a lake. A whistle shrieks a warning, a column of dust rises to join the vast cloud overhead, a colossus of stone, wrenched by dynamite from its grip of earth, swerves outward and falls with a thundering roar. Another puff of dust leaps up and the insects swarm into it.

"As far as eye can reach down that long incline into the bowels of the earth these puffs that tell of terrific blasts are shooting up. Great dredges, attacking the quicksand, shriek and whine as they suck up liquid death. The chain pumps groan and rattle. Derricks and steam shovels whirr and dip. Aerial carts whizz past you on trolleys. Swarms of tiny locomotives hustle and fuss around, shrieking at each other with shrill voices.

"Sand and gravel flies back to the town where mountains of bagged cement are stacked, for there must be housing for 40,000 men before the cold weather reaches. Here another army is toiling at break-neck speed about this gigantic task.

"And all of this is but preliminary to the real work of the great project."

Then there follows a wonderful description of the workings of the great tidal basins, Allan's improvement on the designs of Schlich and Lippman, the famous German engineers, to whom we owe the harnessing of the incalculable power of the tides. Through his ingenious arrangement of reservoirs thousands of tons of water were dumped on gigantic turbines every hour of the twenty-four, and the lift and fall of the tides gave him all of this power for simply the cost of original work—less than $5,000,000.

The scene, indeed, recalled the Tower of Babel—a project so vast that its very conception seemed impious.

And this was only one of five such scenes. In Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London similar mighty panoramas of daring were being unrolled. And Allan, the genius who had provoked these upheavals, was the motive spirit of each. He was tireless and unresting. Rives and Mrs. Allan heard from him in one camp or another, and before they had finished his short dispatches—so it seemed to them—another from some other tunnel city was laid in their hands or he himself dropped off a construction train from Toms River, clear-eyed, smooth-shaven, and fresh and energetic as ever.

Rives had built a beautiful little house for the chief engineer and his wife on the seaside of the tunnel city, and Allan encouraged Mrs. Allan to spend much of her time there, even when he was in this country. Rives was the one warm personal friend he had made in his lonely life, and knowing how much pleasure Mrs. Allan found in his society, he was glad to have her as nearly contented as possible while he darted back and forth across half the Northern Hemisphere. They had one child—a little girl, Edith—and she grew to be almost a stranger to her father.

Even when Allan was in New York he saw but little of his wife and child. His business affairs usually took him a great deal to the house of the great Lloyd, where he held long conferences with the old financier or his daughter, who had the details of the tunnel at her finger ends.

A Neglected Wife.

Thus Mrs. Allan, a lonely and neglected woman, was thrown constantly with Rives, an impressionable and high-strung man, who already held for her at least a deep admiration.

"Mac is in New York—I got a wire from him late this afternoon," remarked Rives one evening as they were taking a horseback ride along one of the wide level roads that led northward from Tunnel City.

"Yes, he called me up," said the woman, with a faintly weary note in her voice. "He said that he would be busy about the real estate deal for the next day or so and would have to go to France within a few days. He called up from the Lloyds," she added, without conscious meaning.

Rives was silent for a few moments as the horses pounded along the gravel road, side by side.

"Did he say anything about running down here or——?" he stopped off short. He had tried to make the tone nonchalant, but she understood and bit her lip.

"I know what you are thinking about, Jack," she said soberly, and her voice trembled slightly. "And I wish you wouldn't—pity me."

Rives swore at himself in an undertone and tried to stammer out something light and reassuring.

"You're too old a friend," she cut in, quietly. "It would be just like you to go and talk to Mac, and that would be worse than anything else. He is doing the best he can, and I know I ought to be happy."

"Aren't you?" asked Rives.

"No, I'm not, and you know it perfectly well, my friend. I am as proud of Mac as a woman could be of a man, but I want to be married to a man, not to a—a—an institution."

Rives looked at the lightly poised body and the delicate brown head and soft eyes that shone like amber in the moonlight. And he laughed uncertainly to check the something that rushed to his lips.

"Oh, well," he said lightly and kindly, "it won't be so bad in a little while. Mac is trying to do eight men's work and everything is just starting now, but when——"

"I know," she interrupted grimly. "Everything has been just starting for months and months. I went over all this with him a few weeks ago and he told me just what you are trying to tell me. I only know that I have been under the same roof with my husband for 24 consecutive hours in six months."

"But, little girl, don't you see——"

"Oh, yes! I know I am unreasonable. I have cut out about a bale of newspaper clippings about Mac and pictures of me, and I ought to be as vain and pleased as—as a woman. I am proud of him. I even admit that it gratifies the woman in me to be pointed out in department stores and at the theater as the wife of Mac Allan—but that isn't all that a normal woman wants the man she loves to give her."

Rives wisely held his tongue and there was another little silence. At last he asked:

"Did you ever—have you ever let Mac know exactly how you feel about—about this?"

The woman did not reply at once.

"I went down to his office about a month ago," she said at last in a low voice. "I couldn't help it, Jack. I was so lonely and miserable. He sent out word that he was very busy, but would be out in a little while. I told the boy to tell him that I wanted to see him at once. I was mad by that time. He came out perfectly good humored, as he always is, and I told him I wanted him to come home for dinner and spend the evening with me. He said he couldn't and I—I cried, and I'm afraid I made a scene—but there was nobody there."

SHE paused, and Rives made no comment. He was looking straight over his horse's head up the moonlit road, and his face was in the shade of his broad-brimmed hat. She looked at him and put her hand on his arm.

"You don't blame me, do you, Jack?"

She felt the muscles stiffen under her hand.

"No," he replied, almost gruffly, "I don't."

She sighed. "He told me he would have more time in a few months, it would be different, and I said I didn't want to wait any longer. I told him I was going to take up nursing and go to work in the hospital here—and that's why I've done it. If I couldn't have my husband I had to have something else to occupy my mind. I can't bear to be useless, Jack."

"What did he say when you told him that?" asked Rives, quietly.

"He laughed—and told me to go ahead."

Again they rode on in silence for a brief time.

"I suppose I am foolish," she said at last, in a wistful tone, "but sometimes I wish that Mac had never succeeded in getting this tunnel plan through. He doesn't belong to me any more; he belongs to the world. I have to live in the light of his halo—and I'd rather live in the light of a fireside."

Rives abruptly pulled up his horse and turned.

"Let's go home," he said.

"I'M glad you could get up here, old man. The storm is about to break. Listen!"

Up to them from the street, where hundreds of real estate brokers were gathered, came a steady roar. Allan and Rives listened and smiled.

"You certainly did some smooth work in a publicity line," said the latter.

"It wasn't smooth," disclaimed Allan, a little resentfully, "and I didn't do it. It just did itself. You know—but maybe you haven't had time to see their stunts—but the viograph people have been among my best little advertisers, and they have paid for the privilege. They have been showing pictures with miles and miles of beautiful houses and department stores and all the trimmings of a great city along with their regular films showing the progress of the work—all labeled 'The Tunnel City of the Future' and 'Tunnel City Ten Years From To-day.'"

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading an awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties."

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Io. It is a jerky sort of a name, Io, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I. O. U.

"Well, this Io is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Ilia, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Io to get Ilia because she has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gelt belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Ilia that she cannot marry Io she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when thou passest beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Io is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy beck and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Io's bride.'

"'But Io like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe Io a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe Io nothing.'

"The way the story ends, Io makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Ilia until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Atlantan passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barger. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

Solicitor's Plea Called Unfair By Frank

REGRETS HE COULDN'T REPLY

Prisoner Prepares Statement to Combat What He Terms Distotion of Facts.

"Dorsey's speech was as full of holes as a sieve! If I could have had just one hour to reply to his eight-hour address I am confident I could have shown the jury that I was an innocent man and that the Solicitor was misrepresenting the facts in order to obtain a conviction."

This was a statement made by Leo M. Frank to friends who visited him in the jail Wednesday.

"Dorsey twisted and contorted the real circumstances of the case until they were unrecognizable," he continued. "He altered everything that was said and everything that was done until it seemed to point to my guilt. If I could have spoken only briefly after he finished his eight-hour speech I could have shown, I am sure, that he departed from the facts of the case whenever it suited him.

"I am preparing a statement in reply to his argument to the jury which I propose to make public, if my lawyers think it advisable. In it I will point out exactly how the Solicitor warped the testimony and the facts to suit his own convenience. I know that these misstatements of his had their influence with the jury and that is why I am rebelling against the unfairness of the situation."

Frank Still Optimistic.

Frank, according to his friends, was as optimistic as ever Wednesday in regard to the ultimate outcome of his case, but was somewhat downcast over the wave of sentiment against him. He said he could not understand how people could be so certain of his guilt when the testimony was circumstantial in the extreme, except for that of Conley, who was an admitted liar and perjurer.

Rabbi Marx, Emil Selig, Prince Myers, Sig Montag, Milton Kline and Herbert Schiff were among Frank's visitors Wednesday. Mr. Selig, Frank's father-in-law, remained at the Tower from 8:45 until about 11:30.

Schiff brought with him a stenographer from the pencil factory and Frank dictated a number of letters and also some matter in connection with his own case. The former superintendent is compiling in compact form all of the important testimony at the trial so that he more readily may refer to it when he comes to make his reply to Dorsey.

He sent for his diary and for a quantity of paper while Schiff was with him and the two worked together for more than an hour.

An indictment of Jim Conley, charging him with being accessory after the fact in the murder of Mary Phagan will be asked at the first session of the next Grand Jury, according to the present plans of Solicitor General Dorsey.

The new Grand Jury will meet the first week in September, and probably will have the request of the Solicitor for the indictment of Conley as the first business for its disposal. The maximum sentence for this offense is three years, but it is thought that Conley, as a self-confessed accessory and a State's witness, will get off more lightly than the maximum.

Frank told friends Wednesday that he was planning to have a large part in the conduct of the fight to obtain a reversal of the verdict of last Monday afternoon. Frank rendered his attorneys assistance during the preparation of his case for presentation at

Bad 'Boy' of 63 Is Forced By Father To Sign the Pledge

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The sad story of an erring son has been placed on police court records. William H. Palmer, Jr., is his name. He is a rollicking rake of 63, and his father, William H. Sr., who is 86, called on the police to check William's industry in the sowing of wild oats. Said the father to Judge Sabath:

"I think he should stop sowing wild oats. He drinks a great deal. He comes home and acts like a young colt. I find it difficult to control him. You can see for yourself that he must be hard for me to manage. He weighs 250 pounds, while I weigh only 95. He is out every night carousing, calling on women, and I can't do anything with him.

"I tell him he'll ruin his constitution if he keeps on the way he's going. He always has been a wild, headstrong boy. I want you, Judge, to help me make a man of him. He's got to sign the pledge."

"I agree with you," said the Court, addressing the father. "William is getting to be a big fellow now. It's time he learned to behave himself. I'll give him just one minute to sign the pledge."

Weevil in Georgia Year Ahead of Time

EUFAULA, Aug. 27.—The first appearance of the boll weevil in Georgia has been reported by Walter Green and F. M. Gay, Quitman County farmers, who have big plantations across the Chattahoochee River from this city. The weevil has been found in different spots and is spreading fast.

Green and Gay are sending specimens to both the Georgia and Alabama Entomological Departments. The weevil was not expected here until next year.

SPEER PROBE ORDERED ON 20 COUNTS

House Votes for Judiciary Committee to Investigate Record of Georgia Judge.

By HUGH MILLER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—After Chairman Clayton, of the Judiciary Committee, had made public a synopsis of the charges against United States Judge Emory Speer, of the Southern District of Georgia, the House to-day passed the resolution he had introduced yesterday, authorizing the Judiciary Committee to proceed with an investigation to determine whether impeachment proceedings should or should not be instituted against the judge.

The resolution was passed just a few minutes before President Wilson appeared before the joint session to read his message on Mexico. Just as soon as the House convened Chairman Clayton asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution and it was at once taken up at the point it was left off yesterday.

Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, Republican, made a short speech pointing out principally that Judge Speer had written to the Judiciary Committee that he was innocent of the charges and demanding that an investigation be made. The galleries were rapidly filling with visitors who wanted to see and hear President Wilson, and the noise and confusion were so great that few could hear Mr. Nelson. When he concluded he received scattering applause.

Clayton Reads Charges.

Chairman Clayton then arose.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "in view of the publicity given these charges and the further fact that a request amounting to a demand has been made by members of this House for information, I shall now proceed to read a synopsis of the charges made against Judge Speer, which have been under consideration by the Judiciary Committee."

Chairman Clayton proceeded to read the charges.

"In addition," he said, "we have many affidavits and photographs of documents. Altogether the record is very bulky. I hold it in my hand now, that the members of the House may see it."

Chairman Clayton held up a large package, containing apparently hundreds of pages of record.

"The committee has decided that beyond the statement already given to the House nothing further shall be disclosed in the case until the investigation is taken up," he said.

Involves Son-in-Law.

The twenty charges read by Chairman Clayton were as follows:

"Violation of section 67 of the judicial code, in allowing his son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, to be appointed to and employed in offices and duties in his court.

"Violation of the bankruptcy act in allowing compensation in excess of the provisions of that act to a trustee, who was his personal friend.

"Violation of the laws in drawing juries.

"Violation of a mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Oppressive and corrupt use of his official position in deciding cases unjustly in favor of his son-in-law.

"Unlawful and corrupt conduct in presiding in cases wherein his son-in-law had a contingent fee.

"Corrupt and unwarranted abuse of his official authority in

3 RUNS FOR CRACKERS IN FIRST

Dent and Harrell on Slab in Fourth Game of Series; Smith Hits Triple.

SCORE BY INNINGS.

Memphis	000
Atlanta	300

PONCE DELEON BALL PARK, Aug. 27.—The Crackers and Turtles clashed in the fourth game of their series here this afternoon. Dent and Dunn were selected to do the battery work for Smith's crew, while Harrell was on the slab for Memphis, with Snell on the receiving end.

Smith men scored three runs in the first inning. Wallie Smith sent two home with a timely triple.

FIRST INNING.

Love singled to center. Merritt flied to Welchonce. Love was caught off first and put out. Dent to Agler to Bisland to Agler to Smith to Agler to Smith. Baerwald lofted a high fly to Nixon. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Agler singled over Shanley's head. Long doubled to right and Agler went to third. Welchonce was set down on strikes. Smith tripled to right, scoring Agler and Long. Bisland singled to center and Smith tallied. Holland grounded to Abstein, who threw wild to second base trying to force Bisland and the latter took third, while Holland went to second. Nixon grounded to Harrell and Bisland was out at the plate. On an attempted double steal Holland was out at the plate, Snell to Love to Snell. FOUR HITS; THREE RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Ward was a whiff victim. Schweitzer also fanned. Abstein was thrown out by Smith. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Dunn out, Love to Abstein. Dent fanned. Agler strolled on four wide heaves. Long raised to Baerwald. NO HITS; NO RUNS.

Lion on Operating Table at Grady to Have Broken Leg Set

A 3-month-old lion cub is the most unique patient ever treated at the Grady Hospital. It was placed on the operating table for a broken foreleg. Surgeons at Grady set the bones and placed the leg in a plaster cast. The treatment accorded the animal was as carefully given as though it had been a human.

The cub was born at Grant Park. The manner in which it was injured is not known, but it is believed that the bone had not sufficiently hardened to uphold the weight of the animal's body.

When Keeper Boyd discovered the injury, he bound the leg in splints. The cub tore these off repeatedly, and now the plaster cast has been substituted.

All Japan for War, Claims Tokio Editor

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 27.—Joseph D. Halliday, editor of The Japan Advertiser of Tokio, who has arrived here by steamer from Yokohama, declares all Japan is eager for war with the United States.

The uneducated classes would plunge into the struggle at once, first seizing the Philippines and Hawaii, but the educated classes favor waiting ten years until the Russian war debt shall have been extinguished he said.

"The feeling," Mr. Halliday added, "is that the white and yellow races must fight out their differences."

JAIL SLAYER HERE TO ESCAPE MOB

Negro Who Killed Farmer in Meriwether Tells of Crime. Companion Was Lynched.

Apparently unmindful of the fate of his companion, Virgil Swanson, a negro who was lynched Monday night near Greenville, Wallace Brewster, also a negro, is in the Tower for safekeeping. He is held on the charge of killing L. C. Marchman, of Meriwether County, last Wednesday. He makes no denial.

He was captured Tuesday morning by J. M. Wingo, a farmer in the northern part of Heard County. The negro had walked 50 miles from the scene of his crime and applied to a negro farmhand on the Wingo farm for lodging. Mr. Wingo recognized him and took him in charge. Sheriff J. B. Jerrell, of Meriwether County, went to Heard County on instructions of Judge Freeman, of the Coweta Circuit, and took the negro.

URGES U. S. PATIENCE DURING CRISIS

Should Let Situation Work Itself Out, President Says in Message to Congress.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Emphasizing the fact that the United States must remain the firm friend of the people of Mexico in their present stress and trouble, President Wilson to-day read his long awaited message on Mexican affairs to Congress.

The message was distinctly pacific in tone and contains little in the way of recommendation for future policy except the single one that this Government must urge earnestly that all Americans should leave Mexico at once and that the United States should assist them to get out of Mexico in every way possible.

The President counsels delay before further action is taken and says:

"Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Must Await Understanding.

"So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization to the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. The circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

President Wilson's message is unexpectedly brief and closes with the statement that several of the great Governments of the world have given the United States their generous moral support in urging on the provisional authorities at Mexico City the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. The President relates the circumstances leading up to the Lind mission and all the facts in connection with it.

His recommendations are less drastic and less conclusive than was expected.

The President's Message.

The messag follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress—It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the fact concerning our present relations with the republic of Mexico. The deplorable posture of affairs in Mexico I need ble posture of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly of what this Government has done and should seek to do in fulfillment of its obligation to Mexico herself, as a friend and neighbor, and to American citizens whose lives and vital interests are daily affected by the distressing conditions which now obtain beyond our southern border.

"Those conditions touch us very nearly. Not merely because they lie at our very doors. That, of course, makes us more vividly and more constantly conscious of them, and every

CAMINETTI HIT BY JURY RULING

Judge Forces Attorneys for Alleged Slaver to Change Tactics in Revealing Defense.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—It was seen in the questioning of prospective jurors to-day that the defense of F. Drew Caminetti will be that he did not have any criminal intent when he eloped to Reno, Nev., from Sacramento with Lola Norris, the high school girl.

Attorney Woodworth, representing Caminetti, pressed his questions on this point until Federal Judge VanFleet ordered him to adopt another line of questioning.

The women directly connected with the white slavery case against Caminetti did not attend to-day's session of the trial. None of Caminetti's relatives, except his brother, Anthony Caminetti, Jr., of Sacramento, attorney, was in the courtroom.

Judge VanFleet was anxious to have the hearing of the case ended as soon as possible, and it was expected the attorneys for both sides would hasten the work of selecting a jury so that the twelve men who will hear the evidence against the son of the Commissioner General of Immigration likely will be obtained by to-night.

Builders Losing $25 A Day on Crematory

The new crematory has not been accepted yet by the city and a forfeit of $25 a day is being assessed against the contractors, according to Mayor Woodward.

"It is true they notified the city August 15 that the plant was completed, but it has not been completed," said the Mayor, "and when it comes to a settlement they will find the forfeit of $25 a day charged up against them. The plant is supposed to have three units—they have but one in operation, and it really isn't operating."

FORBEARANCE WITH MEXICO URGED BY PRESIDENT WILSON IN MESSAGE

Armistice Impossible, Huerta Elected Head of Mexico Legally, Gamboa Says

In his reply to the American proposals Senor Gamboa, the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, urges the following points:

That President Wilson's imputation that no progress is being made toward the restoration of peace in Mexico is not true.

That the fact that the Mexican Government enjoys the recognition of nearly all the great nations of the world is proof that it is a true and honorable administration.

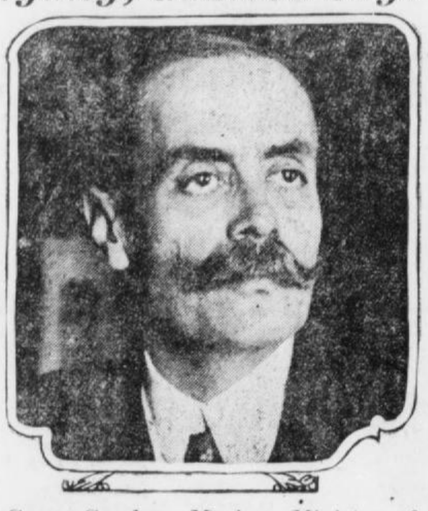

That the proposal of an armistice is impossible because nations do not propose armistices with bandits. To grant an armistice would be to recognize the beiligerency of the rebels.

That the request that General Huerta should not be a candidate for the presidency is "strange and unwarranted."

That the election of General Huerta was legal.

That the American proposals are "humiliating and unusual."

That Mexico's Ambassador should be received in Washington and that the United States should send a new Ambassador to Mexico.

Senor Gamboa, Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs.

instinct of neighborly interest and sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty.

"We are glad to call ourselves the friends of Mexico, and we shall, I hope, have many an occasion, in happier times, as well as in these days of trouble and confusion, to show that our friendship is genuine and disinterested, capable of sacrifice, and very generous of manifestation.

"The peace, prosperity and contentment of Mexico mean more, much more, to us than merely an enlarged field for our commerce and enterprise. They mean an enlargement of the field of self-government and the realization of the hopes and rights of a nation with whose best aspirations, too long suppressed and disappointed, we deeply sympathize. We shall yet prove to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without first thinking how we shall serve ourselves.

"But we are not the only friends of Mexico. The whole world desires her peace and progress, and the whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be touched by the great routes of the world's trade and intercourse running free from ocean to ocean at the Isthmus. The future has much in store for Mexico, as for all the States of Central America, but the best gifts can come to her only if she be ready and free to receive them and to enjoy them honorably.

"America in particular—America, North and South and upon both continents—waits upon the development of Mexico; and that development can be sound and lasting only if it be the product of a genuine freedom, a just and ordered governments founded upon law. And so can it be peaceful and fruitful of the benefits of peace. Mexico has a great and enviable future before her, if only she choose and attain the paths of honest constitutional government."

Situation Not Promising.

"The present circumstances of the republic, I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise even the foundations of such a peace. We have waited many months, months full of peril and anxiety, for the conditions there to improve and they have not improved. They have grown worse, rather. The territory in some sort controlled by the provisional authorities at Mexico City as grown smaller, not larger. The prospect of the pacification of the country, even by arms, has seemed to grow more and more remote, and its pacification by the authorities at the Capitol is evidently impossible by any other means than force.

"Difficulties more and more entangle those who claim to constitute the legitimate government of the republic. They have not made good their claim, in fact. Their successes in the field have proved only temporary. War and disorder, devastation and confusion, seem to threaten to become the settled fortune of the distracted country.

"As friends we could wait no longer for a solution which every week seems further away. It was our duty at least to volunteer our good offices—the offer to assist, if we might, in effecting some arrangement which would bring relief and peace and set up a universally acknowledged political authority there.

"Accordingly, I took the liberty of sending the Hon. John Lind, formerly Governor of Minnesota, as my personal spokesman and representative to the City of Mexico with the following instruction:

Instructions to Lind.

"Press very earnestly upon the attention of those who are now exercising authority or wielding influence in Mexico the following consideration and advice:

"The Government of the United States does not feel at liberty any longer to stand inactively by while it becomes daily more and more evident that no real progress is being made toward the establishment of a government at the City of Mexico which the country will obey and respect.

"The Government of the United States does not stand in the same case with the other great Governments of the world in respect to what is happening or what is likely to happen in Mexico. We offer our good offices, not only because of our genuine desire to play the part of a friend, but also because we are expected by the powers of the world to act as Mexico's nearest friend.

"We wish to act in these circumstances in the spirit of the most earnest and disinterested friendship. It is our purpose in whatever we do or propose in this perplexing and distressing situation not only to pay the most scrupulous regard to the sovereignty and independence of Mexico—that we take as a matter of course, to which we are bound by obligation of right and honor—but also to give every possible evidence that we act in the interest in Mexico alone, and not in the interest of any person or body of persons who may have personal or property claims in Mexico which they may feel that they have the right to press. We are seeking to counsel Mexico for her own good and in the interest of her own peace and not for any other purpose whatever. The Government of the United States would be itself discredited if it had any selfish or ulterior purpose in transactions where the peace, happiness and prosperity of a whole people are involved. It is acting as its friendship for Mexico, not as any selfish interest dictates.

Only Settlement Wanted.

"The political situation in Mexico is incompatible with the fulfillment of international obligations on the part of Mexico, with the civilized development of Mexico herself and with the maintenance of tolerable political and economic conditions in Central America. It is no common occasion, therefore, that the United States offers her counsel and assistance. All America cries out for settlement.

"A satisfactory settlement seems to be conditioned on:

"(a) An immediate cessation of fighting throughout Mexico, a definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed.

"(b) Security given for an early and free election in which all will agree to take part.

"(c) The consent of General Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as President of the republic at this election; and

"(d) The agreement of all parties to abide by the results of the elections and co-operation in the most loyal way in organizing and supporting the new administration.

"The Government of the United States will be glad to play any part in this settlement or in its carrying out which is honorable and consistent with international right. It pledges itself to recognize and in any way proper to assist the administration chosen and set up in Mexico in the way and on the conditions suggested.

"Taking all the existing conditions into consideration, the Government of the United States can conceive of no reasons sufficient to justify those who are now attempting to shape the policy of exercising the authority of Mexico in declining the offices of friendship thus offered. Can Mexico give the civilized world a satisfactory reason for rejecting our good offices?

"If Mexico can suggest any better way in which to show our friendship, serve the people of Mexico and meet our international obligations, we are more than willing to consider the suggestion.

"Mr. Lind executed his delicate and difficult mission with singular tact, firmness, and made clear to the authorities at the City of Mexico not only the purpose of his visit, but also the spirit in which it had been undertaken. But the proposals he submitted were rejected in a note the full text of which I take the liberty of laying before you.

"I am led to believe that they were rejected partly because the authorities at Mexico City had been grossly misinformed and misled upon two points. They did not realize the spirit of the American people in this matter, their earnest friendliness and yet sober determination that some just solution be found for the Mexican difficulties, and they did not believe that the present Administration spoke through Mr. Lind for the American people.

Must Wait for Awakening.

"The effect of this unfortunate misunderstanding on their part is to leave them singularly isolated and without friends who can effectually aid them. So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization of the actual facts. We can not thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little while will be necessary. For the circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs. The actual situation of the authorities at the City of Mexico will presently be revealed.

"Meanwhile, what is it our duty to do? Clearly everything that we do must be rooted in patience and done with calm and disinterested deliberation. Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. We can afford to exercise the self-restraint of a really great nation which realizes its own strength and scorns to misuse it. It was our duty to offer our active assistance. It is now our duty to show what true neutrality will do to enable the people of Mexico to set their affairs in order again and wait for a further opportunity to offer our friendly counsels.

"The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

Urges Americans to Leave.

"While we wait, the contest of the rival forces undoubtedly will for a little while be sharper than ever, just because it will be plain that an end must be made of the existing situation, and that very promptly; and with the increased activity of the contending factions will come, it is to be feared, increased danger to the non-combatant in Mexico, as well as to those actually in the field of battle. The position of outsiders is always particularly trying and full of hazard where there is civil strife and a whole country is upset.

We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once, and should assist them to get away in every way possible. Not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interests, but because it is imperative that they should not take any unnecessary risks if it is physically possible for them to leave the country. We should let everyone who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who can not get away and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding.

"For the rest, I deem it my duty to exercise the authority conferred upon me by the law of March 14, 1912, to see to it that neither side in the struggle now going on in Mexico receives any assistance from this side of the border.

"I shall follow the best practice of nations in the matter of neutrality by

GAMBOA'S REPLY, REFUSING U. S. PEACE OFFER

Neither National Dignity Nor Situation Permits Interference, He Says in Effect.

The following is the reply of Senor Gamboa to the proposals of the American Government conveyed through Hon. John Lind, as transmitted to Congress to-day by the President:

"Mexico, August 16, 1913.

"Sir—On the 6th instant, pursuant to telegraph instructions from his Government, the charge d'affaires ad interim of the United States of America verbally informed Mr. Manuel Garza Aldape, then in charge of the Department of Foreign Affairs, of your expected arrival in this republic with the mission of peace. As, fortunately neither then nor to-day there existed a state of war between the United States of America and the United Mexican States, my Government was much surprised to learn that your mission near us should be referred to as one of peace. This brought forth the essential condition which my Government ventured to demand in its unnumbered note of the 6th instant addressed to the aforesaid charge d'affaires—that if you do not see fit to properly establish your official character your sojourn could not be pleasing to us according to the meaning which diplomatic usages gives to this word.

"The Government of Mexico has paid due attention to the advice and considerations expressed by the Government of the United States on account of three principal reasons:

"First, because Mexico entertains the highest respect for the personality of his excellency Woodrow Wilson.

"Second, because certain European and American Governments, with which Mexico cultivates the closest relation of international amity, having made use of their good offices to the end that Mexico should accord you a hearing, inasmuch as you were the bearer of a private mission from the President of the United States, and,

"Third, because Mexico was anxious to demonstrate in every way the justice of its cause.

Calls Imputation Untrue.

"The imputation contained in the first paragraph of your instructions that no progress has been made toward establishing in the Capital of Mexico a Government that may enjoy respect and obedience of the Mexican people is unfounded.

"My Government greatly appreciates the good offices tendered to it by the Government of the United States of America in the present circumstances; it recognizes that it was inspired by the noble desire to act as a friend as well as by the wishes of all the other Governments which expect the United States to act as Mexico's nearest friends. But if such good offices are to be of the character of those now tendered to us we should have to decline them in the most categorical and definite manner.

"Inasmuch as the Government of the United States is willing to act in the most disinterested friendship, it will be difficult for it to find a more propitious opportunity than the following:

"If it should only watch that no material and monetary assistance is given to rebels who found refuge, conspire and provide themselves with arms and food on the other side of the border; if it should demand from its minor and local authorities the strictest observance of the neutrality laws, I assure you that the complete pacification of this republic would be accomplished within a relatively short time.

"His excellency Mr. Wilson is laboring under a serious delusion when he declares that the present situation of Mexico is incompatible with the compliance of her international obligations, with the developments of its civilization and with the required maintenance of certain political and economical conditions tolerable in Central America. We are punctually meeting all of our credits; we are still maintaining diplomatic missions cordially accepted in almost all the countries of the world, and we continue to be invited to all kinds of international congresses and conferences. In one thing I do agree with you, and it is that the whole of America is clamoring for a prompt solution of our disturbances.

Can Not Consider Conditions.

"Consequently Mexico can not for one moment take into consideration the four conditions which his excellency Mr. Wilson has been pleased to propose. For these reasons an immediate suspension of the struggle in Mexico is not possible, as to do this it would be necessary that there should be some one capable of proposing to the many bandits who are marauding toward the south and committing the most outrageous depredations; and I know of no country in the world, the United States included, which may have ever dared to enter into an agreement, or to propose an armistice to individuals who can be found all over the world beyond the pale of the divine and human laws. Bandits are not admitted to armistice.

"1. That our Ambassador be received in Washington.

"2. That the United States of America send us a new Ambassador without previous conditions.

"And all this threatening and distressing situation will have reached a happy conclusion; mention will not be made of the causes which might carry us, if the tension persists, to no one knows what incalculable extremities for two peoples who have the unavoidable obligation to continue friends, provided, of course, that it is based upon mutual respect, which is indispensable between two sovereign entities wholly equal before law and justice.

"F. GAMBOA,
"Secretary for Foreign Affairs for the Republic."

JURY SERVICE CALLED SUPREME LOVE TEST

MRS. F. V. L. SMITH.

Frank Trial 'Temporary Widow and Husband Happily 'Reunited.'

"If you are not sure whether you love your husband, let him serve on a jury for four weeks—then you'll know!"

Mrs. Frederick V. L. Smith, of No. 481 Cherokee avenue, said it—and sighed. But it was a happy sigh, for Mr. Smith, his face wreathed in one of those "I, John, take thee, Mary" smiles, was coming hurriedly up the sidewalk home from business fully an hour earlier than usual.

Not 24 hours before they had been reunited, after Mr. Smith had been a stranger to his own home—a stranger to every place except the Kimball House and the courtroom—for four long weeks, serving on the famous Frank jury.

"I don't think there is anything," Mrs. Smith continued, "that would cause a woman to realize how much she loved her husband as to have him be on a jury; to be a 'widow' and yet know that your husband is in the same city that you are.

"Let him pass you two or three times a day, and not be allowed to speak to him—only to look and wave a handkerchief. Let those old deputy sheriffs stop him when he goes to say 'hello,' and caution you to be quiet when you start to ask him if he is being taken care of, if he gets enough to eat and if his clothing needs mending—why, I don't see how you can help making a vow never to speak a cross word to him.

"Little Dan Cupid may bear the burden during courtship and honeymoon, but after marriage he has a great aid in jury service. I'll just bet if a woman who fusses and nags her husband would let him serve on a jury for a month or so she'd be permanently cured.

"It's a terrible thing to be a temporary widow. There must be a better word to express it than 'terrible,' but if there is I don't know it, unless I say it was simply awful. I had almost rather my husband would be dead than be on a jury. I don't think a real widow has a bit harder time than a 'temporary one.'"

Mrs. Smith, besides being one of the most beautiful of the eleven "temporary widows," is also one of the most remarkable. When her husband was caught in the jury net he was not given time to get any one to take charge of his business.

So Mrs. Smith, despite the fact that she had a baby to take care of, stepped into the breach, and during the four weeks of the trial has conducted her husband's business affairs as well as he could himself. Every morning saw her at his office in the Empire Building—and every noon and evening saw her at the doors of the courthouse waving greetings to her "dead" husband.

Wife at Last Collapses.

The strain, however, was too great, and during the last week of the trial Mrs. Smith worked solely on her "nerve." She came home Monday evening very nervous, and shortly after 8 o'clock, when she received a telephone message from her husband that he was coming home, she collapsed.

Mr. Smith, returning at 1 o'clock, after an absence of four weeks, found his wife unconscious and physicians bending over her. Mrs. Smith was unconscious for nearly two hours, and for more than half an hour of that time it was feared she was dead. By Tuesday afternoon, however, she had fully recovered her strength.

60,000 INCREASE IN SCHOOL AGE POPULATION

Georgia Census Shows Growth in Five Years That Appropriation Can Not Care For.

With an increase of more than 60,000 in school population during the last five years, the various counties of Georgia face a cut in the school appropriation fund of $2,500,000.

The regular five-year school census figures, compiled by the State Department of Education, were made public Wednesday morning.

According to the report there are 60,732 more children of school age in Georgia now than in 1908. As the school appropriation fund is parcelled out among the various counties this increase will mean a decrease in the appropriation made to each county.

The total school population, according to the report, is 796,203, as compared with 735,471 in 1908.

The report shows further that the number of illiterates decreased from 84,430 in 1908 to 72,840 in 1913. The grand total of infirm school children, however, increased from 1,009 in 1908 to 1,323 in 1913.

The number of children over 10 years of age who never attended a public school totalled 10,500, as compared with 10,533 in 1908. The number who never attended any school totalled only 9,871 in 1913, as compared with 11,198 in 1908.

The total cost of taking the census was $29,033.21, as compared with $25,760.84 in 1908.

CRAWFORD CASE AWAITS END OF FRANK FIGHT

Lawyers Want Rest Before Defending Woman Accused of Poisoning Rich Husband.

Postponed four weeks ago until after the close of the trial of Leo Frank, it is probable that the reopening of the famous Crawford will case, in which Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, will again be delayed until after the hearing of the arguments for a new Frank trial on October 4. Should Judge Roan decline to grant a new trial, it is probable that the Crawford case will be postponed until after an appeal is taken to the Court of Appeals, at the request of Attorneys Reuben Arnold and Luther Rosser, who are counsel for both Mrs. Crawford and for Frank.

Colonel J. S. James, one of the attorneys for the heirs at law in the Crawford case, stated Wednesday morning he did not expect the case to be reopened until the Frank case was definitely settled one way or the other. He will confer with Attorney Rosser Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning, and it is probable that some agreement will be reached regarding the reopening of the case. When Col. J. L. Anderson, who is serving as auditor in the will case, announced the postponement of the case several weeks ago, he stated that in resuming the hearing of the testimony he would be governed by the wishes of the attorneys.

It is known that Rosser and Mr. Arnold favor delaying the Crawford case for several weeks, if not until the final disposition of the Frank case. Colonel James met Mr. Arnold several days ago, and during a conversation about the reopening of the case, Mr. Arnold remarked that he would dislike to resume within three weeks after the closing of the Frank trial, as he desired to get a much-needed rest. Mr. Arnold left the city Tuesday night for a month's stay, and it is probable that Mr. Rosser will leave shortly also for a vacation. Colonel Anderson, the auditor, is also out of the city, but will return Saturday.

While many of the attorneys on either side have been busy with the Frank trial, the search for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, who, it is charged, was an accomplice of Mrs. Crawford in a plot to poison her husband, has continued without success. Colonel James has given a great deal of time to the apprehension of Lumb, and practically the entire East has been scoured by detectives acting under his orders. New York detectives and detectives of other Eastern cities, have thrown their drag-nets out, but have found no trace whatever of the barber.

By DOROTHY DIX.

Does it pay to be good?

Tens of thousands of poor girls avid for pleasure, longing to ride in luxurious automobiles and feast on dainty food in gay restaurants; madly anxious for the lovely clothes that would enhance their charms, as a fine frame sets off a picture, are asking themselves that question. Does it pay to be good?

They know that, like the milkmaid in the old song, their faces are their fortunes, and that beauty and youth are assets that a woman can cash in at sight. The streets of every big city are the Mount of Temptation upon which the Devil takes every poor, pretty little drudge, and shows her, spread out before her, all that the foolish, feminine heart can crave of ease and softness. And it is all hers for the taking.

He shows her both sides of the picture. He shows her Virtue hanging on to a strap in a crowded car, while Vice rolls by in a limousine. He shows her Virtue, shabby, fainting with weariness behind the counter, while Vice lolls in front of it, buying silks and satins. He shows her Virtue going to bed hungry in a dingy hall bedroom, while Vice sups at a lobster palace. He shows her Virtue clutching its thin little pay envelope, while Vice draws down its thousands, and flaunts its name in electric letters a foot high along Broadway.

No wonder that poor young girls ask, Does it pay to be good?

The Case of Evelyn Thaw.

For answer let us consider the case of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who furnishes the most cynical illustration of this subject that we call civilization has ever seen. For no woman of our day has been so written about and discussed; no woman—not Bernhardt, nor Julia Marlowe, nor Maude Adams—has ever received such a preposterous salary as she gets for a few minutes' appearance on the stage.

Yet her sole claim to distinction is that her very garments drip with the slime of the gutter, and that she is the heroine of the most hideous and decadent story that was ever told upon the witness stand.

In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante can do as well with three lessons. There's simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing her, I wondered if she thought that it paid. I wondered if she thought that she had paid too dearly for all she had had ...and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

Believe me, she, and women like her, KNOW whether it pays to be good.

Hers the Story of Many.

The story of Evelyn Thaw is an interesting one in this connection because in its setting and in its potentialities it is the story of the chance, and the temptation, that comes to so many poor and pretty girls. It is the eternal problem of the woman who wants the good things of life, and who can get them only in one way, by buying them with her soul.

Evelyn Thaw is a type of woman that is peculiar to America and common in this country—women who come of poor and humble families, but who are born with the instincts for luxury of a princess and the bearing and presence of the great world. You see them in every little village—girls who are as chic as Parisiennes, who wear their little home-made clothes as if they came from a couturiere of the Rue de la Paix, and who are as irresistibly drawn to the bright lights of a great city as a moth is attracted to the flame.

Evelyn Nesbit was one of these. She was born on a Christmas Day, in Allegheny, a suburb of Pittsburg. Her mother was beautiful, her father a gay ne'er-do-well; and from the one parent she got her looks and the other her mercurial nature—as dangerous a combination as evil itself could bequeath a girl.

They Were Very Poor.

All her early life they were very poor, and when the father died—which he did when Evelyn was 10 or 11 years old—they were poorer still. Mrs. Nesbit tried to make a living with her needle, but barely succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door.

The little family went from Allegheny to Philadelphia, hoping for better things, but luck failed to smile on them. They were so poor that Mrs. Nesbit cut up her sheets to make underclothing for herself and Evelyn, and her bedspreads to make them dresses. Then someone who noted the girl's rare loveliness got her a position to pose for some photographs.

The migration from Philadelphia to the larger artistic world of New York followed naturally, and, armed with letters to painers here, Mrs. Nesbit came, bringing Evelyn, whose beauty was flowering day by day. But, in spite of the romances Mr. Robert Chambers writes about it, the life of an artist model is not one glad round of pleasure and profit, and the Nesbits were still very poor. They lived in one room, where they cooked and slept and Mrs. Nesbit took in such sewing as she could get. Then a newspaper reporter ran across Evelyn and wrote a big Sunday story, illustrated with many pictures of her, which he called "The Most Beautiful Artists' Model in New York."

Fate did the rest. She was engaged by a theatrical manager on the outlook for beauties for his chorus—and she had reached the dividing line, the place where she had to choose between poverty and hard work—and the gilded life—the place where she had to ask herself, as the poor, pretty girl does under such circumstances—does it pay to be good?

She decided that it did not pay, and took what she thought was the easiest way. Where it has led her all the world knows. Certainly she has had the cakes and ale of existence. First there was a millionaire who used to take her out on his yacht for week-end excursions. Then came Stanford White, and for a while, at least, it was all like a fairy tale.

She, who had not had carfare, rode in cabs and taxis everywhere. She who had not always had even bread to eat feasted at the smartest restaurants. She who had worn the shabbiest of shabby clothes had fine gowns and jewels lavished on her.

Another turn of the wheel of fortune brought Harry Thaw into her life with more money, more jewels, more trips to Europe, and finally a wedding ring. Being Pittsburg-born, the Thaws had always been the biggest people on Evelyn's horizon, and to belong to that august family, and queen it socially in the very town in which she had been poor and humble, doubtless filled the measure of her ambition. Evil had prospered with her, and vice had brought her what virtue never could.

Then her sins began to find her out, and her world, built upon a foundation of wrongdoing, commenced to crumble under her feet. Pittsburg society would not receive her, despite the Thaws' financial and social position. Women, good women, would have nothing to do with her. The scarlet letter was branded upon her too plainly for even the Thaw millions to cover it up.

Also she began to know the cruel fact that while a man, obsessed by passion and in order to get a woman, swears that he will forgive her past lapses from the straight and narrow way and forget them he really never does. When he is married to her he makes of them a whip of scorpions with which to scourge her. The torments of hell can have nothing worse than the months in which Evelyn Thaw combated the jealous suspicions of her husband and endured his reproaches.

Then followed the shooting of Stanford White and the two long-drawn-out trials, during which, to save her husband and to earn a fee, justly earned and never paid, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told a story of her life that for utter degradation has no match in all the annals of sinful humanity. She stripped from herself every vestige of decency and left herself without so much as a rag of honor to cover her.

That this story was not true does not alter her status. She held herself up before the world as shameless beyond all belief until the wonder of it was that any woman could tell such things of herself and live. And now she is coining that story into money.

Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes that she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of one's fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it, and the life it has driven her to, she has coarsened and hardened.

The wonder of her at the trial was the expression of wistful, childlike innocence she wore. I asked a great alienist to interpret that to me, and he said that the reason of it was that her soul was unawakened, that she was morally dead and had never realized the import of the things she did. Hence they had not set their seal upon her as they do upon women who consciously tread the primrose path.

But that trial stripped the veil from her eyes. She came out of it knowing good and evil, and the knowledge has dimmed her beauty and taken from it the ethereal charm that was its highest note. There is nothing remarkable about her now. You may meet a thousand like her any day along Broadway.

I wonder how Evelyn Thaw, in view of her life, and all it has brought her of good and ill, would answer that question: Does it pay a girl to be good?

I think that no one could preach such a homily on the subject as this poor girl, who sold her birthright for a few silks and a rag of chiffon and good times, and who knows the price she has paid.

Devoid of Talent, Evelyn Thaw Capitalizes Sins

"No other woman has ever capitalized her sins at such a figure as Mrs. Thaw has done. In all her life she has done no noble or worthy act. From her very childhood she has passed from scandal to scandal. Her once great beauty is gone. She has no talent. Yet thousands of people pay nightly to see her do a foolish little dance that any debutante could do as well in three lessons. There is simply nothing to her but the dark aura of her past.

"But after her little dance, when she waved her hands to the audience, whose eyes had been as hard and cold as daggers stabbing at her, I wondered if she thought it paid. I wondered if she thought she had paid too dearly for all she had had and all she was getting, when she knew that every woman in the house would draw her skirts away from her, and every man would rather see his own daughter dead in her coffin than to be winning such a success in such a way.

"Believe me, she and women like her KNOW whether it pays to be good.

"Be sure that she has paid for all the loaves and fishes she has gotten. Evil collects its debt inexorably. No one, least of all a woman, is so thick-skinned as to be impervious to the scorn of her fellow creatures. Evelyn Thaw has had that in full measure, and under it and the life it has driven her to she has coarsened and hardened."

BUTTERFLY IDEA RULES IN NEW FASHIONS

Full Blouses to Imitate Wings. X-Ray Skirts to Continue Popular, but With Flounces

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The butterfly idea dominates the coming styles. Having forsworn the use of legs, women will cultivate wings. A survey of the leading dressmaking establishments indicates the following autumnal metamorphosis:

Hats will be small and round, like the butterfly's head. Blouses and jackets will be extremely full and loose at the back and shoulders, suggesting wings. The jackets will be long, with a belt, but not drawn in at the waist.

Skirts will be plaited, the plaits opening wide at the knees, but narrowing again at the ankles, in imitation of the butterfly's abdomen. Most of the skirts will be flounced to the knees, while some will be so full at the back as to give almost a bustle effect.

Some gowns will be ornamental at the back with large butterflies or bows of silk set just below the waist.

Evening gowns will be lower than ever. They will be open to the waist behind, but very wide and loose over the shoulders.

Diaphonouses over pink tights will continue popular, but flounces will insure opacity as far as the knees. The color of suits will be less bright.

Kentucky Feudist, Reported Dead, Lives

LEXINGTON, Aug. 27.—Green McIntosh, feudist, charged with the murder of Greenberry Combs in Breathitt County, and who was reported as shot to death while resisting arrest by a sheriff's posse, was not killed.

He is being hidden in the Breathitt Mountains by friends. Word of his death was telephoned from the mountains, the officers say, to cause the search to die out so he could escape from the hills.

265 CASES TO BE TRIED.

MACON.—There are 265 cases, of which 100 are for alleged violations of the State prohibition law, to betried during the September term of the City Court which convenes Monday and lasts for two weeks. Only 50 of the defendants are in jail, the others having given bond.

HELD UP IN DAYLIGHT.

MACON.—A white man giving his name as Joe Jackson reported to the police that he was held up and robbed of $119 near the business part of the city at 7 o'clock in the morning. He said his assailants wore black masks and black clothes.

Macon Merchants to Tour Georgia Towns

MACON, Aug. 27.—Macon merchants are making plans for another booster trip through south and middle Georgia in September. The trip will last for three days and the merchants will travel in a special train, making short stops at each town en route.

The route will embrace Sandersville, Tennille, Brunswick, Millen, Waycross, Fitzgerald, Thomasville, Moultrie, Cordele and other towns.

PATHFINDER ROLLS INTO MOBILE AHEAD OF TIME; GREAT WELCOME GIVEN

With approximately 500 miles of the transcontinental highway behind him, Pathfinder E. L. Ferguson Wednesday prepared for the long westward journey from Mobile through New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, El Paso, San Diego and Los Angeles to San Francisco. Mr. Ferguson arrived in Mobile late Tuesday afternoon.

Mobile's reception to the pathfinders was only one more indication of the widespread interest in the monster campaign for a transcontinental highway inaugurated in Atlanta on August 18 by Hearst's Sunday American.

The Mobileans carried out a program which they planned weeks ago. Several miles north of the city a big delegation of boosters, including many women enthusiasts in automobiles, met the pathfinders and escorted them into the city. Here a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, as well as prominent citizens and city officials, took the members of the party in hand and tendered to them a royal reception which the Mobile boosters say "surpassed the celebrations in Birmingham and Montgomery."

Immediately following the reception Mr. Ferguson began completing his plans for the resumption of the journey to New Orleans, which place he expects to reach on August 30. Like the Mobile boosters, the New Orleans "live wires" have had their plans practically complete for several weeks, according to advance reports.

Big Celebration Planned.

A monster good roads and highway celebration will be held, it is said, and a representative of The New Orleans Item, which is co-operating with The Sunday American, The Birmingham News, The Montgomery Advertiser and other leading Southern newspapers, will relieve the Montgomery representative.

The special man from The Item will accompany the party as far as Beaumont, Texas, where a representative of The Houston Post, which also is behind the movement, will join the tourists, accompanying them as far as Dallas. From Dallas Mr. Ferguson probably will be accompanied to Los Angeles by a representative of The Dallas Times-Herald. Monster receptions have been planned in each of the big cities named along the route, as well as many of the smaller ones.

According to the schedule as now planned, Mr. Ferguson will reach Biloxi, Miss., on August 28; New Orleans, August 30; LaFayette, September 2; Lake Charles, La., September 5; Orange, Texas, September 7; Beaumont, September 7, and Houston on September 8 or 9. The party should reach its destination, San Francisco, in October.

Following out the policy maintained all along the route from Atlanta to Mobile Mr. Ferguson will spread the gospel of good roads and fine highways through Louisiana, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Southern California. Already the efforts of the pathfinder along this line have had marked results. Beginning at Douglasville, Ga., 30 miles west of Atlanta, the official starting point, and continuing through Tallapoosa, Heflin, Ala., Anniston, Ashville, Birmingham, Clanton, Montgomery and Selma, as well as other progressive smaller towns, local good roads and highway campaigns have been inaugurated following Mr. Ferguson's visit. The manifest enthusiasm with which the tourists were received all along the route has been directed into channels for the actual improvement of the roads and the development of highways.

Bad Roads Stories Disproved.

Although Mr. Ferguson has completed less than a third of the long cross-country tour, he has already demonstrated beyond a doubt that the South affords an ideal route for an open-the-year-round highway. This claim was scouted by Northern tourists, who have declared repeatedly that the weather was too warm down in Georgia and Alabama and Louisiana to make such a trip in the summer time. It was to disprove this that Mr. Ferguson decided not only to make the trip in the very dead of summer, but also to take his wife and children with him. That he has already succeeded is indicated by the reports from Mrs. Ferguson, who has declared all along the route that she was delighted with the "ideal" climate.

The South's reputation for bad roads, too, has been disproved by this tour. At Anniston, Birmingham, Montgomery and Selma Mr. Ferguson declared to the boosters that he was surprised at the marvelous development of the roads.

"If the citizens along the way which I have traversed do as much for good roads during the next two years as they have done during the past two, conditions should be ideal," he said.

That these citizens are going to do this and even more has been indicated repeatedly from the time Mr. Ferguson left Atlanta until he arrived in Mobile Wednesday.

His Eye Wasn't Strong Enough

J. Y. SMITH HITS PLOT CHARGE OF WOODWARD

Chairman of Committee Declares Mayor Easily Could Have Had Primary Deferred.

Mayor Woodward's charges that the setting of September 30 as the date of holding Atlanta's Democratic primary was the result of a well-laid plot has brought a strong denial from Chairman John Y. Smith, of the city Democratic executive committee.

There is absolutely no ground for the charge, according to Mr. Smith. Also he is of the opinion that six weeks is sufficient length of time for the men running for the offices of councilman and alderman to make their campaign.

"A charge that the date of September 30 was set as the result of a conspiracy is without foundation," said Mr. Smith. "The meeting of the committee was attended by practically every member, while there had been no meeting or caucus of any kind prior to the meeting.

"It has been the custom for persons other than members to attend its meetings and to address them. Had the Mayor desired to have a later date set he could easily have appeared before the committee and have been accorded the courtesy of giving his views. I doubt if there would have been much trouble in having had the date set beyond September 30.

"There was considerably more than a quorum of the committee membership present when the matter of setting the date was taken up. There was practically no discussion of it and a resolution by Committeeman T. O. Poole naming September 30 was unanimously adopted.

"I can not agree with Mayor Woodward that the time is too short for the candidates for alderman and councilman to make their campaigns. When a candidate has to stretch his campaign beyond a period of six weeks it works a hardship on him, while the people undoubtedly get tired of too much politics."

September 12 Closing Day.

At a meeting held at noon Wednesday the sub-committee of the City Executive Committee set September 12 as the last day in which candidates in the primary of September 30 may pay their fee with the Treasurer and qualify. The assessments for the various offices were also fixed.

Owing to the smaller number of offices to be contested for and the consequent smaller number of candidates, the assessments are slightly higher than those of last year.

The total amount which it is estimated will be derived from the assessment is $1,330. Should any portion be left over it will be pro rated among the candidates. In the event of a run-off between any candidates the amount left over will be applied to the expense of the second election. An effort was made to require candidates in the event of a run-off to bear the entire expense of the second election, but was defeated.

Candidates must qualify by noon of September 12, paying their assessment to either Paul Toland or J. O. Cochran. The money will be handled by the treasurer of the committee, who will make a bond of $1,500.

The individual assessments are: General manager of waterworks, $150; Alderman, full term, $95; Alderman, unexpired term, $50; Councilman, $70.

Four Atlanta Boys On 15-Day Hike to New York on Bet

From Peachtree to Broadway is a long walk, but four Atlanta boys set out Wednesday to accomplish it in fifteen days, as the result of a bet of $500 made between them and George Allen, of the Central Railroad.

The boys are Lloyd Snead, 19 years old, No. 236 Cooper street; Clarence Burel, 18 years old, No. 79 West North avenue; Jack W. Lipscomb, 22 years old, No. 232 East Hunter street, and F. J. Lipscomb, 18 years old, of the same address.

The distance from Atlanta to New York afoot is more than 900 miles. The condition of the bet is that the boys walk it in fifteen days. This will necessitate them covering 60 miles per day.

John D. Plays Golf With 2 Deaf Mutes

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—John D. Rockefeller cut loose from his sedentary habits to-day and entertained at golf two young men he did not know and had seen but once before in his life.

The young men were Charles D. Russell, of La Salle, Ill., son of a Western man, and Horace W. Buell, Jr., of Chicago, delegates to the National Association of the Deaf now in session here.

"I have the greatest admiration in the world for these young men," he declared. "Their inability to hear and speak has not prevented their becoming good, intelligent men."

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Big Kinemacolor Feature.

"The Scarlet Letter" will be the feature for Kinemacolor exhibition at the Grand to-day and Thursday. This is a wonderful motion picture in natural color, in addition to the Kinemacolor offering, which is exclusive, and can not be seen in any other picture theater but the Grand, there are first run pictures of the highest quality exhibited every day.

Meredith Sisters Please.

Prettier gowns than those exhibited by the Meredith Sisters at the Forsyth this week would be hard to create. There are half a dozen and each one is original and beautiful.

All in all the bill is a good entertainment. Fred Bond with Miss Fremont Benton and two assistants present a comely playlet that is a vaudeville classic. The story wins laughter and curtain calls, and is about as popular as anything on the bill. Svengali presents a real novelty—a genuinely wonderful puzzle.

Bijou Policy a Hit.

That the new policy of the Bijou which was inaugurated Monday night is meeting with popular favor has been demonstrated at every performance so far. Better pleased and larger audiences have seldom gathered within the four walls of the Bijou. The Jewel Kelly Company is presenting as its opening bill "Her Fatal Shadow," a remarkably strong comedy drama, intense in its heart interest, dramatic in its situations and sensational in its climaxes. The company as a whole is an unusually clever one and includes many favorites who are receiving real ovations at every performance. Jewel Kelly Eddie Black, Marie Claire, Grace Webber, Clare Summers, Rose Morris, have all played in Atlanta before and count their friends by the hundreds.

TO DEDICATE CHURCH.

COLUMBUS.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, on Sunday, September 14, will dedicate St. Luke Methodist Church, preaching both morning and evening. The church, one of the handsomest in the city, cost about $50,000.

ARMY OFFICER FOR RIVERSIDE CADETS

Georgia Military School Gets Special Detail From U. S. War Department.

Following recommendation by Major B. F. Hardaway, of the Seventeenth United States Infantry, cadets at the Riverside Military Academy, at Gainesville, Ga., will be placed under command of a United States army officer when its term opens September 11.

This information was received from Washington Wednesday. The name of the officer who will take charge will be announced soon.

This detail will carry in addition a complete equipment of modern rifles, dress and service accouterments as used by the United States army, and also artillery and cavalry equipment for dismounted service. The uniforms of Riverside cadets are identical with those used at West Point.

The promptness with which the recommendation of Major Hardaway was approved by the War Department is gratifying to the friends and patrons of Riverside, in view of the fact that the usual inspection for such detail is made only in April. But owing to the splendid showing made in the preliminary application, a special detail was obtained.

Major Hardaway was pleased with the location of Riverside, with its campus of 2,000 acres on the banks of the Chattahoochee River, two miles out of Gainesville, because of the many natural advantages offered by it for target practice, maneuvering, skirmish drills, bridge building, pontoon work and other military arts.

The physical property at Riverside, with its well-ventilated barracks, mess halls and schoolrooms, did much to obtain this speedy detail.

President Sandy Beaver, who was in the city Wednesday, announced the faculty has been strengthened and enlarged and the school will open with the largest attendance of its history.

ATLANTAN HELD ON CHARGE OF BIGAMY

W. F. Lee Arrested at Hattiesburg, Miss., With Bride, Said To Be Third Wife.

MOBILE, Aug. 27.—W. F. Lee, a young attorney who claims Atlanta as his home and who came to Mobile last Thursday from Milton, Fla., with pretty 19-year-old Dovie Smith and married her, to-day is under arrest in Hattiesburg, Miss., whence he had gone with his bride. He is accused of bigamy. When Miss Smith married Lee she had known him three months.

Chief of Police Frank W. Crenshaw received a warrant Tuesday for the arrest of Lee and a letter from Judge H. B. Daniels, of Swainsboro, Ga., giving the record of the man whose arrest was sought. Judge Daniels stated that Lee had married into one of the best families of Bullock County and that his wife later received a divorce, but no decree was issued to Lee. Judge Daniels also stated that Lee had gone to Knoxville, Tenn., where he had married a young school teacher.

Chief Crenshaw traced the couple from Mobile to Hattiesburg and requested Lee's arrest. The chief then notified the girl's brother, who wired that he would send transportation for her from Hattiesburg to Pensacola, where he resides.

Lee was arrested here Thursday afternoon upon the request of Miss Smith's brother, but was later freed when the brother and mother reluctantly consented by long distance telephone to the marriage. Late in the evening Lee secured a marriage license and the couple wer married by the Rev. O. C. McGehee, of the St. Francis Street Methodist Church.

The Smith girl says she will not desert Lee. She says she believes him when he says he was properly divorced from his Georgia wife.

COLUMBUS FAIR IN NOVEMBER.

COLUMBUS.—The Columbus Poultry Association has announced that it will put on a poultry show the week of November 17, and in addition will give a fair which will equal, if not surpass, the one held by the Georgia-Alabama Fair Association in 1912.

'Farmer Bill' Zimmer Joins Benedict Ranks After Long Romance

"Farmer Bill" Zimmer gave his friends a great surprise Tuesday night when he quietly re-entered the ranks of the benedicts, and to-day Kimballville Farm is all a-flutter. Miss Mabel L. Leys, of Detroit, was the former name of Mrs. Zimmer, and the marriage was the culmination of a romance of many years standing.

A very few of his intimate friends and relatives of the bride were in the bridal party which journeyed around to the parsonage of the Trinity Methodist Church at 7 o'clock Tuesday night, where the Rev. J. B. Robins performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony a bridal supper was given at the Piedmont Hotel, Mr. Zimmer having been the first manager of this hostelry. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hazler, of Detroit; Lee Jordan, Will Zimmer, Jr., the 12-year-old son of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Chancellor, Clarendon Chancellor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, Jesse Mercer and C. R. Tucker.

Willard Exonerated By Coroner's Jury

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—After several hours of deliberation over the testimony presented by witnesses of last Friday's fight at Vernon between Jess Willard and "Bull" Young, which resulted in the death of the latter, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict exonerating Willard.

Several physicians who attended Young after the fatal blow was delivered testified that the Wyoming fighter's physical condition was bad and that Young had a cigarette heart, and that he was suffering from an affection which had robbed him of stamina which he may have formerly possessed.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury will have no bearing upon the prosecution of Willard, McCarey and the others charged with manslaughter, according to a statement of Prosecutor W. J. Ford after the inquest.

Boys' High Seeks Alma Mater Song

Plans for offering a cash prize for the best original words for an alma mater song for the alumni of the Boys' High School of Atlanta are complete.

The purpose of the contest is to arouse interest among the hundreds of alumni of the Boys' High School in the alumni organization. The class of 1910 has taken the lead in this, and the cash prize has been raised among its members.

Among the speakers at the 1910 class banquet recently were Dean Paden, president; E. H. Orr, Jr., James Manry, Joseph Yampolsky and James Mangum.

Danish King Saves Actress From Sea

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—According to The Budget, King Christian of Denmark, while cruising in the royal yacht, Rita, off Jutland, rescued Cinema, the actress, from drowning.

Cinema, a Copenhagen actress, jumped overboard from a boat to escape fighting boatmen.

She became exhausted and the King ordered the royal boat lowered to rescue the actress, who was taken aboard just in time.

Honors Requisition Asked by Sulzer

HARRISBURG, PA., Aug. 27.—Governor Tener has honored requisitions for Daniel Buegeleisen, charged with forgery, and Charles Clay, with abandoning children, on request made by William Sulzer as Governor of New York.

He did this on an opinion furnished by J. E. B. Cunningham, First Deputy Attorney General.

MADE INSANE BY THAW CASE.

CORRY, PA., Aug. 27.—Too intense interest in the Thaw escape drove Freeman Lylarger insane, and he is now confined in an asylum. Lylarger, who resided in Kerrtown, was greatly concerned over Thaw and could not take his mind off the subject.

POSTOFFICE IMPROVED.

COLUMBUS.—Improvements at the local postoffice costing $7,000 have been completed. Changes were made in the registry and money order departments, and additional space was given the parcel post department.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

THE BEST Want Ad days in The Atlanta Georgian are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. On Sunday read them in Hearst's Sunday American. Try them all. The results will surprise you.

FRANK, IN CELL, PREPARES STATEMENT ATTACKING DORSEY'S ARRAIGNMENT

the trial which has just ended, but all of the decisions of any consequence were left to them.

The convicted man followed every move of Rosser and Arnold, as well as of Solicitor Dorsey, with an unceasing vigilance and with a thorough comprehension of the purpose involved. Friends say he feels that he is competent to have a part in the mapping out of the future campaign for his life and liberty, and expects to have a considerable voice in every plan that is proposed.

It is his life that is at stake, and he is convinced that he has obtained a sufficient knowledge of legal procedure at least to advise and suggest and, at times, direct as to what shall be done.

Rosser Lays Battle Plan.

Rosser Wednesday began active preparation for the appeal for a new trial for Frank. In summing up the evidence for the argument of the case before Judge Roan on October 4, Solicitor Dorsey will work in conjunction with Mr. Rosser.

Mr. Rosser emphasized the colossal task before him as he sat in his office in the Grant Building by pointing to the mass of evidence taken by the court stenographer. It embraces 4,500 typewritten pages, far and away the record for criminal cases in Georgia. This must be condensed to a workable basis—some 200 pages—according to Mr. Rosser. It is supposed to be just enough to make the points clear on which the arguments for a new trial will be based. But attorneys representing both sides must agree on the evidence submitted. And therefore to save time Solicitor Dorsey will collaborate with Mr. Rosser.

If Judge Roan refuses a new trial, Attorney Rosser declared the case immediately would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Thus the sentence of Frank to be hanged between 10 and 2 o'clock on October 10 will be stayed. It probably will be after the first of the new year before the Supreme Court will be able to take up the case, and Frank automatically will get a respite.

Mr. Rosser's statements and acts refuted the reports that he had suffered greatly from the long strain of the trial.

Away from the color and excitement of the courtroom scenes he is proceeding on his work with the methodical energy he would proceed on a civil case.

Referring to Mr. Arnold's trip to Bedford Springs, Pa., and the report that he himself had suffered a loss of 25 pounds in weight, Mr. Rosser said:

"I don't need a vacation, so I have gone back to work. I weigh exactly the same as I did the day I went into the case. I haven't got time to worry about my physical well-being. I would greatly enjoy a good rest. But Mr. Arnold or myself has got to prepare this case for a new trial. He is gone and I've got to do it. So you see I am at it."

Mr. Arnold will return in good time to take part in the appeal for a new trial.

October 10 Jewish Sacred Day.

That he is not without tactical ability in a law court was demonstrated by his statement to the jury.

An impressive coincidence in the sentencing of Leo Frank to hang on October 10 is that this is the most deeply sacred day of al of Frank's religion—the Day of Atonement. It is the day for confession of sins. It probably is as universally observed by members of this faith as Good Friday, for example, is observed by the Roman Catholics.

The setting of this date, however, may be regarded as little more than a formality, as it is certain that Frank will not go to his death on that day. The arguments for a new trial will be heard on October 4, and if the motion is denied an immediate appeal will be made to the Supreme Court, and this will necessitate a postponement in the date set for the execution while the matter is being thrashed out in the higher courts.

While the beginning of the real battle will not take place until October 4, Frank's lawyers entered at once into a new plan of campaign for his freedom. Reuben Arnold is taking a few days' vacation, but will return to the city shortly to resume his work on the case. In the meanwhile witnesses are being examined and data obtained in reference to several of the points on which a new trial will be asked of Judge Roan.

Conley Says He Told Truth.

Frank arose at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning and walked about his limited quarters for half an hour, and then sat down to read the papers. He was reading when his father-in-law, Emil Selig, and Sig Montag came with his breakfast. He was reported to be as cheerful as at any time during the months he was awaiting for his trial.

Jim Conley had for his breakfast the usual jail fare. "I told the truth, boss," he remarked to J. L. Poindexter, one of the deputies.

"A lie will wash away, and you can't keep it, but the truth, it will stay by you," was his sage observation as he continued to comment on his case.

Rudolph M. Frank, father of the convicted man, was told Tuesday at his home in Brooklyn of the verdict that had been returned against his son. An elderly man and an invalid much of the time, Dr. Frank was prostrated by the news.

"I know Leo is innocent. He never would be capable of committing a terrible deed of that sort," the old man told Harry Lewis, the family lawyer, who spoke to the reporters. Lewis was one of the character witnesses who came to Atlanta to testify at the trial.

In making their motion for a new trial Tuesday, Frank's lawyers set forth statutory grounds, and later will file an amended motion. The first motion represents that the verdict of guilty was contrary to the evidence, contrary to law and contrary to the weight of the law, and that the court, after overruling a motion of the defense, allowed certain testimony which was relative to other crimes than the one specified in the bill of indictment.

This last reference is in regard to Jim Conley's testimony, in which the negro told of the alleged conduct of Frank with women in his office.

Frank's Fight Likely To Extend Over Months.

That the Leo Frank case can not reach the State Supreme Court, where it seems destined to go, before the third Monday in December, was the opinion expressed Wednesday morning by a court official who has figured out all the "possibilities."

Should the famous case reach the Supreme Court even at this early date it probably would be several weeks before a decision could be rendered, as a mass of testimony would have to be considered by the court.

According to this official, should Frank's attorneys be overruled by Judge Roan on October 4 in their request for a new trial, they may then file a bill of exceptions any time within the following twenty days. At the time of the filing of the bill of exceptions, which in this case probably will be immediately after the decision of Judge Roan and before October 10, the date of the hanging, the judge "shall," according to the law, order a supersedeas, which stays the execution.

After the bill of exceptions has been filed and the supersedeas ordered, the attorneys for the defense will have ten days in which to present the matter to the attorneys for the State. Following the notification to the State the defense then has fifteen days to file it with the Clerk of the Superior Court, who then has ten days to forward the record to the Clerk of the Supreme Court.

Should the defense take full advantage of the time granted in each case there is a possibility that the case will not reach the Supreme Court until January, or perhaps February.

Girls Clear $223 on Patch of Tomatoes

RALEIGH, Aug. 27.—How two Mecklenburg County girls cleared $223 on one-fifth of an acre by raising and selling tomatoes was told this afternoon by Miss Margaret Brown, aged 15 years, to 1,500 farmers and more than 300 housewives here in annual convention. Miss Brown said she donned overalls and tended her crop.

Mrs. Julian Heath, of New York city, organizer of the Housewives League of America, urged the women to trade direct with the producer rather than give the middleman his profit.

The convention will end to-morrow.

Bullets Whiz When Oil Lamp Explodes

MIAMI, Aug. 27.—Members of Charles Faudel's family narrowly escaped death when four cartridges lying on a table by a kerosene lamp were discharged by the exploding lamp.

Bullets whizzed close to them as they endeavored to smother the flames which treatened the destruction of the home.

Young Inventor Dies On Visit in Atlanta

Francisco B. Marriott, 25 years old, died at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning at the residence of his sister, Mrs. J. Cheston King, West End. He had been in Atlanta on a visit.

Mr. Marriott had been granted patents on mining apparatus which has proved successful. He was well known in Atlanta.

Surviving him are his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Marriott, of Homewood, Ala.; two brothers, T. C. Marriott, of Homewood, and R. R. Marriott, of Atlanta, and his sister, Mrs. J. C. King. The body will be taken to Homewood Wednesday night for funeral and interment.

OBITUARY

The body of Sidney O. Gautier, who died Tuesday, was sent Wednesday to Crescent City, Fla., for funeral and interment. He was 24 years old.

The funeral of James J. Lockhart, who died late Tuesday, was held Wednesday morning from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Interment was at Oakland Cemetery.

Mrs. Lucile Graham Wilhoit, No. 15 East North avenue, died late Tuesday. She is survived by her husband, J. F. Wilhoit, one small child, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Graham, and one brother, William Graham. The body was removed to the home of her parents, No. 354 Ponce DeLeon avenue. Funeral announcements will be made later.

Mrs. Etta E. Evans, 49 years old, No. 1 Ashland avenue, died Tuesday night. Surviving her are her husband, J. P. Evans, one daughter, Miss Otis Evans, and three sons, J. T., L. W. and D. E. Evans. Funeral announcements later.

The funeral of Mrs. Mildred Almand, who died at her home in Hapeville Tuesday, will be held at Antioch Church Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. A special car for the church will leave the residence at 2 o'clock. Interment in the church yard.

The body of B. Simms Heard, who died at a local hospital Monday night, was taken Tuesday afternoon to the home of his parents in Covington, Ga. Funeral services were held there Wednesday morning. Mr. Heard was assistant cashier of the Macon National Bank. He was a graduate of Emory College, in the class of 1908.

Mrs. Robert N. Aiken, a well-known Atlanta woman, died at midnight Tuesday at a private sanitarium. She is survived by her husband, Robert N. Aiken, of Whitehall Terrace, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Edge, of Houston, Texas. The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. Thursday from the Berkert & Simons chapel.

J. D. Palmer, of Miami, Fla., died early Wednesday morning at a hospital. The body was removed to the chapel of Patterson & Son. Funeral announcements will be made upon the arrival of relatives from Miami.

THAW IS CHEERED BY THRONG IN COURTROOM

Women Join in Demonstration and Fugitive Bows His Appreciation for Their Sympathy.

SHERBROOKE, QUE., Aug. 27.—The habeas corpus proceedings in the Thaw case were abruptly stopped after they began before Judge Globensky in the Superior Court at 10 o'clock, and adjournment was taken until 3 p. m.

The judge said he wanted more time to consult the authorities on Thaw's move to withdraw his application for a habeas corpus writ.

There was a tremendous demonstration in the courtroom in Thaw's favor when Counsellor Samuel Jacobs, on behalf of the Canadian Government and the State of New York, began his opening arguments opposing the withdrawal of Thaw's petition.

"Let Him Go," Cry Spectators.

The like demonstration had been made earlier while Thaw was being taken from the jail to the courthouse. Men and women followed the automobile and blocked the streets which it traveled. "They can't get you, Harry," cried some. Women joined enthusiastically in the demonstration. Thaw was delighted beyond measure.

The court attaches had difficulty in keeping order. Thaw sat at the lawyers' table while his attorneys, in reply to Jacobs, pleaded that under the civil code of the Dominion they had a perfect right to withdraw their application for a habeas corpus writ.

Women in Demonstration.

Judge Globensky finally halted the proceedings, announcing he would take the case under advisement until 3 o'clock in order to consult the authorities.

When this announcement was made one spectator cried out: "Good, good. Let us have fair play, and three cheers for Harry Thaw."

There were about 200 women present, and all joined in the demonstration. With his face beaming, Thaw arose, placed his hand over his heart and bowed.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kleb, superintendent of the Matteawan, N. Y., asylum for the criminal insane, from which Thaw escaped, has joined the forces which are fighting to get the fugitive back into that institution. Thaw's counsel is confronted by a formidable array.

Mr. Jerome, Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy, of New York State; Samuel Jacobs, of Montreal, representing New York State; District Attorney E. A. Conger, of Dutchess County, New York (in which Matteawan is situated), and others are co-operating with the Canadian legal representatives.

Gov. Craig Takes Up Charlotte Lynching

ASHEVILLE, Aug. 27.—Intimating that officials might habe to answer for the lynching of Joe McNeely, a negro, at Charlotte, Governor Locke Craig in Asheville to-day issued a statement declaring he would vigorously co-operate in the detection and punishment of the lynchers. The Governor declares there was not the slightest excuse for the mob, as the negro was in custody. Proceedings against the Sheriff are possible.

Governor Craig is keeping in close touch with the situation at Charlotte by long-distance telephone, add any further move for violence will probably bring out the State militia.

Lumber Man Held on Charge of Swindling

Benjamin F. Mitchell, who declared he was president of the Mitchell Lumber Company, with offices in the Temple Court Building, was arrested Wednesday on a warrant issued by M. A. Litsey, of Roberta, Ga., charging swindling.

According to Litsey, Mitchell ordered a carload of lumber from him in Roberta, then sold it in Atlanta for less than he had agreed to pay for it. Detectives were unable to locate the office address which Mitchell gave. He will be taken to Roberta for trial.

Park Manager's Power To Be Cut

Another step in the differences between the Park Commission and General Manager Dan Carey will be taken at the next meeting of the commission when a new set of by-laws materially curbing the authority of the general manager will be adopted. The new rules practically put the entire operation of the department under the direct control of the commission.

The proposed adoption of the rules is regarded as another step in the effort of members of the board to force the resignation of Carey, but this he states he will not do.

"It is nothing more nor less than an effort to make me resign, but even the adoption of the new rules and making my position practically nothing but a little clerkship, will not have the effect of making me resign," said Carey.

"Briefly, the new rules place the operation of the department back under the same method prevailing until three years ago, when the present rules were adopted. A touch of the pathetic is included in one rule which would prevent anyone connected with the park department from drinking even small glass of beer at a barbecue or anywhere else, this rule saying that an employee or officer shall not drink anything calculated to produce intoxication.

"I suppose the commission meant to hit at drunkenness in this rule, which has always been enforced by me, but if it is rigidly enforced under this interpretation it would result in the loss of a few good men. For instance, we have a splendid florist who happens to be a German and who is quite fond of his beer, but who never gets drunk. He probably would quit his job before he would his beer."

Cummins Predicts Free List Change

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Progressive Republican Senators to-day forecast the acceptance by the majority of the Senate Finance Committee of a modified form of the Kenyon amendment to the tariff bill providing for the free listing of trust-made goods.

The Kenyon amendment provides that the courts shall decide whether monopolies exist. Senator Cummins to-day declared he expected the amendment to be so modified that the determination of whether competition exists shall be left to the President.

Camilla Depot Case Heard; Decision Soon

The Camilla Railroad depot hearing took place before State Railroad Commissioner Murphy Candler Wednesday morning. The issue was taken under consideration for decision by the State Commission. Both sides were heard.

The controversy relates to the construction of a new depot at Camilla following the burning of the old one recently. The citizens, it is understood, want a $25,000 structure, while the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad is not willing to spend that much.

News Butcher Fined For Selling Liquor

TIFTON, Aug. 27.—J. C. Dasher, news butcher on the Atlantic Coast Line between Waycross and Albany, was arrested here Tuesday afternoon by Chief of Police J. O. Thrasher, charged with keeping on hand intoxicating liquors for illegal sale.

Dasher entered a plea of guilty before Recorder J. S. Ridgdill and was fined $75 or four months in the chaingang.

U. S. Museum Agent Views State Exhibit

James Henry Rice, Jr., of the United States National Museum at Washington and formerly State Game and Fish Commissioner of South Carolina, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday morning to confer with Commissioner Mercer on local matters relating to the national department. The conference was held in the Piedmont Hotel.

Mr. Rice visited the State Capitol early Wednesday morning, where he made an inspection of the State collection and the work of the department.

CRITICAL STAGE OF AFFAIRS IN MEXICO

President Wilson Warns That All Americans Should Leave Country.

forbidding the exportation of arms or munitions of war of any kind from the United States to any part of the republic of Mexico—a policy suggested by several interesting precedents and certainly dictated by many manifest considerations of practical expediency. We can not in the circumstances be partisans of either party to the contest that now distracts Mexico, or constitute ourselves the virtual umpire between them.

"I am happy to say that several of the great governments of the world have given this Government their generous moral support in urging upon the provisional authorities at the City of Mexico the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. We have not acted in this matter under the ordinary principles of international obligations. All the world expects us in such circumstances to act in fact as Mexico's nearest friend and intimate adviser. This is our moral relation toward her. There is nowhere any serious question that we have the moral right in the case or that we are acting in the interest of a fair settlement and of good government, not for the promotion of some selfish interest of our own.

"If further motive were necessary than our own good will toward a sister republic and our own deep concern to see peace and order prevail in Central America, this consent of mankind to what we are attempting, this attitude of the great nations of the world toward what we may attempt in dealing with this distressed people at our doors, should make us feel the more solemnly bound to go to the utmost lengths of patience and forbearance in this painful and anxious business. The steady pressure of moral force will before many days break the barriers of pride and prejudice down, and we shall triumph as Mexico's friend sooner than we could triumph as her enemy—and how much more handsomely, with how much higher and finer satisfaction of conscience and of honor!"

Ling To Return to U. S. Immediately.

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, Aug. 27.—It is now likely that Special Envoy John Lind will immediately return to the United States on the battleship Michigan. It was suggested that he await the Morro Castle, which will sail to-morrow, but fears were expressed that developments needing his attention might arise during the five days which it takes the Morro Castle to get to New York.

Hope that Mr. Lind would reopen negotiations with President Huerta is practically abandoned in all circles.

Gamboa Hints at Return.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27.—Foreign Minister Gamboa intimated to-day that Special Envoy Lind may return here from Vera Cruz and reopen negotiations with the Mexican Government as a result of the note sent by President Huerta to Lind. Mr. Gamboa maintains the optimism which has marked him since the break with the United States.

On the other hand, there is an ominous complexion on the action of War Minister Blanquet. The War Minister to-day sent circulars to Governors of all of the States ordering them to parade all the able-bodied men in their dominions on September 16 a national holiday. The object of this is evidently to show the United States the war strength of Mexico and arouse patriotism.

Wealthy Pensacola Man Alleged Slaver

PENSACOLA, Aug. 27.—Ben C. Heinberg, wealthy and once a Pensacola merchant, charged with violating the Mann white slave act in transporting 15-year-old Nellie Ward from Pensacola to Birmingham for immoral purposes, will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Jerry J. Sullivan, Jr., Thursday afternoon.

The public will not be permitted to attend, only newspaper men and court officials being admitted. Witnesses have been summoned from Pensacola and Birmingham.

Benton Declines to Seek Clayton's Seat

COLUMBUS, Aug. 27.—Asserting that he told the voters of Russell County, Ala., that if they would re-elect him as probate judge of that county, in the last campaign, that he would serve his entire term of six years, Judge H. T. Benton, of Russell County, has refused to allow his name to go before the voters of the Third Congressional District as a candidate to succeed Henry D. Clayton, in the event the latter is seated as United States Senator to succeed the late Senator Johnson.

Arraign Durham Boys In White Slave Case

DURHAM, Aug. 27.—The trial of Beeman Smith and Henry Goss, prominent white youths of this city, charged with violating the white slave act began this afternoon. Much interest is centered in the case, owing to the prominence of the girl, Hallie Draughan, and also the boys.

The defense is preparing a strong fight.

Sumter Dispensary Contest Unsettled

SUMTER, Aug. 27.—After a legal fight all of yesterday and to-day, the question of whether or not Sumter County would re-establish the dispensary after it had been suspended for years is still undecided, the board of canvassers being unwilling to declare the result, which was a majority of two in favor of prohibition.

During the session of the board intense interest was shown. At several points the prohibitionists were given a taste of the steam roller by a partisan dispensary board.

4,000,000 Shingles Destroyed by Fire

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 27.—A shingle mill at Espanola and 4,000,000 cypress shingles, 30 miles south, were completely destroyed to-day by fire of an unknown cause. The mill was owned by P. L. Southerland, of Jacksonville, and was leased by Zack Spinks, of Espanola. It was one of the largest in the State. The loss is estimated at $70,000. The fire destroyed telegraph communication South, but wires have been replaced.

In Fact, We Are Not Particular About Terms, Anything Reasonable Will Be Satisfactory. Why Not Select That Piano or Player, Upright or Grand, To-day? Store Open Until 9:30 P. M.

A piano bought at Wester's at this time is an investment, not only in musical enjoyment, but a practical investment in a financial sense.

At the prices we have marked these pianos you are practically doubling your money, for at no other time or place can you ever approach this class of goods.

Our reasons for doing this are plain and simple.

In order to clean house, as it were, to dispose of all old styles and makes, sample pianos and styles dropped from our new 1914 catalog, we have cut the prices on each and every instrument; marked them down so far, in fact, that a mere glance at the make and price asked leaves no room for doubt in the minds of the buyers.

Some of these pianos are cut down to the actual cost to us; others are reduced in price so low that it means an actual sacrifice on cost. On many of these pianos the saving is from $125 to $250. Then, the terms are made pleasing in every way. Think of a fine A. B. Chase, Ivers & Pond, Chickering & Sons, Knabe Brothers, Bush & Gerts, Kranich & Bach, Kohler & Campbell, Keller & Dunham, Hoffman, Strohber and others. These good makes are all new and the latest styles, but they are included in this sale.

LOOK AT THIS LIST.

Here we include a large number of new and discontinued styles, sample pianos, shop worn and some are used, taken in exchange on grands and players. German American, Kimball, Vose & Sons, Hallett & Davis, Steinway, Conover, Sterling, Bush & Gerts, Davis & Sons, Packard, Kohler, Cooper and others, prices ranging on any of these good uprights from $65 up, according to the grade of the piano. Other uprights, best grades, any finish desired, worth $375, $400 to $450, can be had in this sale at $218, $236, $243 and $258, on easy terms, and still others for $127, $148, $176, $187, etc., that have been cut down from $275, $300, $325 and $350. A fine walnut upright, slightly shop worn, high grade, regular price $350, to close out at $168.

Two sample $400 uprights, oak and mahogany, these same makes, high grade, will be closed out at $196 each, on easy terms if desired, at the end of the sale. There are many fine bargains here for Thursday. You will be sure to find a piano to please you. Open evenings.

BEAVERS STARTS CAMPAIGN ON AUTO NOISE

Police Instructed to Arrest All Motorists Who Violate City's Muffler Ordinance.

Declaring that the auto muffler cut-out ordinance is one of the most wantonly and flagrantly violated of the city statutes, Police Chief Beavers Wednesday said he intended to use every means at his command to enforce it.

The Chief has issued a special order to the entire police force instructing a rigid enforcement of the muffler law. Cases are to be made against every offender, no matter who he may be. The Chief is determined to bring relief from the nuisance, and said he is satisfied a few cases and stiff fines in Police Court will bring wonderful improvement.

In discussing the nuisance, the Chief took occasion to commend the editorial in The Georgian a few days ago relative to the necessity for a strict enforcement of this law for the protection of citizens.

"This muffler cut-out ordinance is a law, and it must be enforced as long as it remains on the statute books," said the Chief. "In my opinion it is a good law, for the noise made by the cutting out of mufflers, particularly at night, is an abomination, and for the reason that it is absolutely unnecessary to the running of a car. The cutting out of the muffler has no perceptible effect on the car—but it does have a perceptible effect on people who are trying to get a good night's sleep.

"The noise from the cars is not so bad in the day time, as the rumble of other vehicles and trolley cars serves to drown it out to a materjal extent. But at night, after the city has quieted down, the muffler cut-out is certainly a nerve-racking nuisance. It is worse in the summer, because of the great number of autos in the streets and the fact that people sleep with their windows open, thus receiving the full benefit of the distracting din as the speeding cars whiz past."

Considerable complaint of late has been made by citizens of different parts of the city, and these will receive with joy the news of the warfare started by Chief Beavers.

Troops Called to Prevent Gambling

PORTER, IND., Aug. 27.—Two companies of State troops were held in readiness to-day to invade the Mineral Springs race track, where a meeting is being held, should there be further gambling there at this afternoon's races. In ordering the troops at Elkhart and South Bend to be ready to move on the race course and take possession, Governor Ralston explained that he had reports of violations of the State gambling laws.

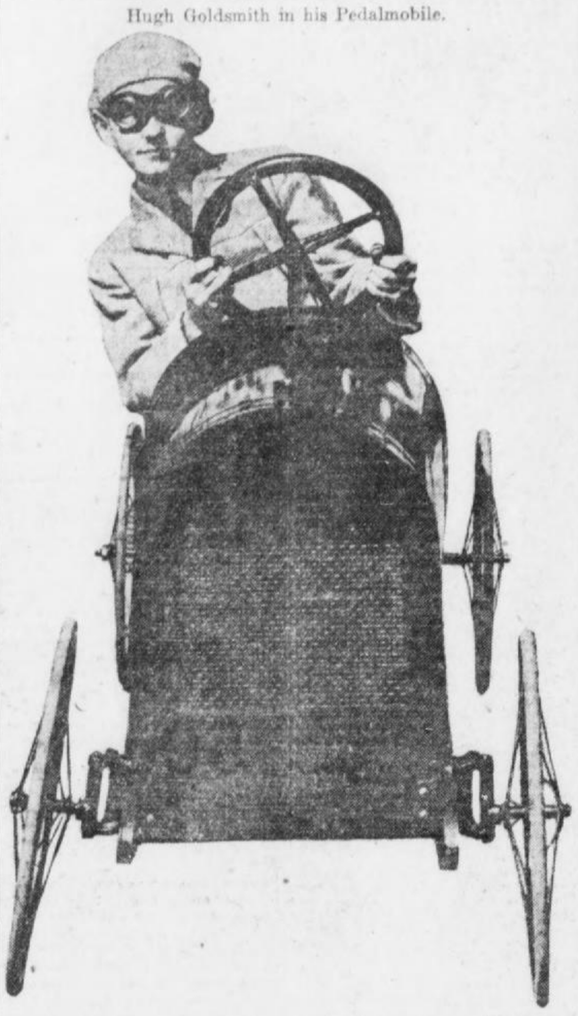

Fan Roots So Loudly He Loses His Voice

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 27.—Ernest Wellman, a fan of this city, cheered so loudly over a wonderful catch made by a Grand Rapids outfielder that he has lost his voice.

Physicians declare he so injured his vocal cords that it is hardly likely that he will be able to speak again.

PEDALMOBILE RACES ATTRACT YOUNGSTERS

Hugh Goldsmith in his Pedalmobile.

13-Year-Old Boy Wins First Georgian Car in Less Than Three Days.

Hundreds of Georgian boys and girls are hustling in subscriptions to Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian in their efforts to win a pedalmobile and participate in the pedalmobile races which will take place soon.

Little 13-year old Hugh Goldsmith is already the happy possessor of the first car, which he won in less than three days' time. Hugh says he won his car by getting up early in the morning and hustling and has named his car "Flatt" after the car owned by the great, smiling Hughie Hughes, who won fame in the Vanderbilt Cup race and also in the 500-mile races.

Hugh Goldsmith expects to win the same fame in The Georgian pedalmobile races.

Applications are now being received from all sections of the South and supplies will be mailed the applicants in turn. In the meantime, future contenders are urged to get promises together and it will be an easy matter to round them all up when the blanks are received. Subscriptions can be taken in the towns where the paper is delivered by carrier and the subscriber may pay the agent at the end of each week, but mail subscriptions must be paid in advance.

Boys and girls who have not entered the pedalmobile club should start to-day. Fill out the application blank, bring or mail it to The Georgian office, 20 East Alabama street, and the pedalmobile man will give you full details as to how you can win one of thees handsome little cars.

MEN SPEAKERS TO URGE VOTES FOR WOMEN

Plans Completed for Open Discussion of Suffrage in Georgia Senate Chamber.

Arrangements have been completed for the open suffrage meeting in the Senate Chamber Friday night at 8 o'clock. There will be several noted speakers on the program.

The three principal speakers have been announced, though the full program has not been made public. A feature of the evening will be the address of welcome by Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, auxiliary to the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. A. M. Hughlett, Dr. M. C. Hardin and Attorney Leonard J. Grossman. Especial interest attaches to the appearance of Dr. M. C. Hardin, who scored heavily in the suffrage debate at Gainesville. Dr. Hardin never has been heard before an Atlanta audience on the suffrage question.

Men's leagues for the enfranchisement of Georgia women will be discussed by Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, who soon will announce plans for the organization of a Georgia Men's Equal Suffrage League.

The meeting Friday night will be the first gathering of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association since its charter was approved by Judge Pendleton.

With the success of the meeting assured, the State-wide campaign will be in full swing, with local leagues in every county in Georgia. The committee on arrangements for the open meeting is made up of the following: Mrs. Amelia Woodall, president of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association; Miss Margaret Koch, Mrs. A. C. Daniels and Miss E. Estill.

Christian Conference To Plan Vice Cures

The program for the Southern Christian Citizenship conference which will be held in the Auditorium from September 19 to 21, inclusive, is practically complete, according to announcement Wednesday. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Civic League of America and will outline remedies for various evils.

Among the various interesting topics which will be discussed at the conference will be "The Co-operation of the Family, the Church and the State," "The Moral Personality of the State," "Social Environment and Moral Progress" and "Divorce and Social Welfare."

SCOTT MAY NOT AGAIN DIRECT RAILROAD

Augusta Hears That Georgia General Manager's Retirement Will Be Permanent.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 27.—Whether the "temporary retirement" of General Manager T. K. Scott, of the Georgia Railroad, means that he will resume charge when he gets well, or whether it means that Mr. Scott is being permanently forced out of the position, is a matter of speculation in Augusta. Ever since the strike of the trainmen and conductors on the Georgia Railroad last fall there have been persistent rumors that there would be a change in the management of the Georgia Railroad. It has been estimated that the strike cost the road near $500,000, but whether or not that has been charged against Mr. Scott by the Louisville and Nashville officials has never been ascertained.

While the strike was in progress Messrs. Gregg and Murdock, representing the conductors and trainmen, respectively, issued a statement in which they said that they did their utmost to get a conference with Mr. Scott in his Atlanta hotel just prior to the strike to negotiate with him and try to avert the tie-up of the Georgia trains, but that he persistently refused to see them.

Mr. Scott has been general manager of the Georgia for about twenty years. He is now nearing 70 years. His friends assert positively that it is purely because of his ill health, due principally to the infirmities of age, that he has relinquished the management temporarily to J. H. Ellis, secretary of the L. & N.

Cigarettes Blamed For Lack of Humor

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Declaring that American humor is on the wane and the reason is that nearly all of the men who try to make the nation laugh smoke cigarettes, Miss Lucy Page Gaston, superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette League, and known over the entire country for her tireless efforts against cigarettes, wrote a warning to the American Press Humorists' Association, now in session at Peoria, Ill.

Miss Gaston said that in order to save American humor she would administer free of charge her mouth wash cigarette cure to any of the newspaper funny men who would accept.

Father Who Whipped Wayward Girl Freed

MACON, Aug. 27.—One week after his mother died of pellagra and ten days after he had attempted to commit suicide, W. J. Bettis, a carpenter, was tried before the Recorder, charged by his 15-year-old daughter with cruelly beating her with a strap and threatening to cut her throat.

Bettis claimed that his daughter had become wayward and the daughter herself admitted indiscreet conduct. The charges against the father were dismissed. The girl refused to return home. She probably will be sent to a reformatory.

Food Probers for Ellis Island Named

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti has appointed Richard H. Taylor immigration inspector in field service, stationed in this city; James T. Hughes, assistant immigration inspector at Philadelphia, and P. L. Prentis, immigration inspector in charge at Chicago, to compose the board of inquiry which will at once begin an investigation of conditions at the immigration station at Ellis Island, N. Y.

It was charged immigrants were fed bad food.

Former Bailiff Fails In Suicide Attempt

Following the alleged loss of $500 in a business deal, James W. Hutchins, No. 296 South McDaniel street, made a desperate attempt at suicide Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. That the attempt failed was due, it is said, to the combined efforts of Hutchins' wife and sister and Call Officers Milam and Palmer.

Hutchins, who was formerly a bailiff, shot a negro while placing him under arrest about three years ago and was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder. He was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, but secured a new trial from the Court of Appeals. He is now out on bond pending his second arraignment.

Delta Special Leaves For National Karnea

Eleven members of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity left Tuesday afternoon on a special car over the Louisville and Nashville for Indianapolis to attend the Karnea, the national convention of the fraternity, which will be in session at the Severin Hotel from August 28 to August 30.

Deltas at Knoxville, Tenn., and Lexington, Ky., will join the Atlanta car. Those comprising the party were Kenyon B. Zahner, T. B. Bean and J. S. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta; D. T. Deen and Ed Jordan, Waycross; H. H. Hudson, East Point; J. M. and H. S. Cowart, Arlington; J. H. C. Claussen, E. G. Jordan and E. R. Pund.

Studebaker

The "SIX" $1550

When You Get Acquainted With This "SIX" You Will Surely Want One

A drive in the Studebaker "SIX" will charm and convince you.

If there has ever been confusion in your mind concerning the qualities of a worthy Six, your questions will be fully answered after you have driven this "SIX".

And even if you are aware what some good sixes can do, you will enjoy a greater glow of satisfaction when you drive this car.

As you sit behind the alluringly smooth and responsive motor, no one will need to tell you why you like it. You will know perfectly well.

The instant and full answer to your call for increased speed or power, the sure and perfect response to your control, the quietness, the absence of vibration, the sheer thorough-bred ability of this "SIX" to do all its work without strain or perceptible effort—these things will prove a never-ending delight.

It is as hard adequately to describe this "SIX" as it is always difficult to describe any new and more perfect instrument.

BUT—the Studebaker "SIX" will win you, as sure as ever you sit behind the wheel.

Buy It Because It's a Studebaker

Studebaker "Six" Engineering

The design of a fine six-cylinder car, especially in the motor, calls for exceptional skill and wide experience.

Efficiency at all speeds and the absence of vibration, which are the unique advantages of a worthy Six, can only be attained by the most scientific engineering.

To attain perfect results we use experimental laboratories of large size and full equipment, where every idea built into the Studebaker "SIX" has been proved correct beyond the possibility of error.

We work by knowledge, not by theory.

Every ton of steel we buy is first made according to Studebaker formulas and later rigorously tested to be sure it is up to standard.

Throughout the manufacture, which is carried on entirely in our plants, from forty huge power hammers which forge out over 250 parts for every Studebaker "SIX", to the last operation, accurate to the one-thousandth of an inch, the "SIX" is built with a scrupulous regard for fine work and the best materials.

Studebaker Standards of Luxury

From the beautifully balanced chassis to the deep upholstery and complete equipment, the "SIX" shows careful attention to appearance and comfort.

It is, of course, electrically lighted and started.

The auxiliary seats, making ample room for six-passengers, are exceedingly comfortable and yet may readily be folded to one side.

The painting is lustrous, requiring twenty-four operations, including many days of drying and aging, before it is finished.

We use Studebaker-Jiffy storm curtains, the most ingenious improvement ever made in automobile curtains.

The Studebaker "SIX" is a car of complete comfort and strikingly handsome appearance.

MRS. GODBEE, IN BOUDOIR CELL, AWAITS FATE

Slayer of Former Husband and His Bride Gives Homelike Touch to Prison.

MILLEN, GA., Aug. 27.—In a cell transformed as if by magic into a boudoir, as dainty and complete as can be found in any home, Mrs. Sarah Perkins Godbee, charged with the murder of her divorced husband and his young bride, awaits her preliminary hearing in the Jenkins County courts Thursday as calmly and dispassionately as though she had already been assured of her freedom.

The cell itself reflects the cheerfulness and hope that fill the accused woman's mind. Despite the steel ceiling, the rough concrete floors and the iron bars, her cell is attractive and distinctly feminine. The roughness of the floors is concealed by soft rugs, the iron bars at the windows are hidden behind little white curtains that catch every flutter of the breeze; the toilet accessories, washstand and china are in blue and white, the color in which her home is furnished.

All the Comforts There.

Two white beds with fresh linen, two rockers and several straight chairs, a little blue and white table on which rests a vase constantly filled with fresh flowers, a glass pitcher of ice water, a glass stand filled with fruit, a bottle of toilet water, stacks of magazines and letters—all combine to transform the cell into a typical woman's room.

Mrs. Godbee takes as much care and pride in her personal appearance as she does in the appearance of her cell. She usually wears negligee—a dainty, pale blue kimono brocaded in pink and yellow butterflies and finished with valenciennes laces. She is rarely alone at night. Her relatives or her daughter, Miss Sarah Godbee, more usually the latter, always spend the night with her. The daylight hours see streams of friends coming and going, all with words of encouragement and many with fresh dainties and conveniences for her comfort.

Mrs. Godbee's calmness and carefree attitude is the marvel of Jenkins County officials. She talks and laughs as she did, before the double murder of which she is accused; she chats freely with her friends, and is always glad and willing to see visitors. Gossip of the current topics of the day falls from her lips as readily now as before the crime, and she has become an inveterate newspaper reader.

Keeps Silent on Killing.

Only on one subject does Mrs. Godbee preserve a close silence. Of the killing of Judge Godbee and the events leading up to it she will say nothing. She will give no inkling of the causes that led her to shoot her former husband and his bride, and silence is the only answer to inquiries as to her line of defense.

When the killing is brought up, Mrs. Godbee always smiles softly and changes the subject of conversation, prattling innocently of the latest happenings in Millen society or of the great world events.

The excitement created in Millen by the killing has not subsided, though it has been almost two weeks since the crime was committed. Sentiment appears to be divided, some claiming that the accused woman has suffered until she could suffer no longer; while others express the opinion that Judge Godbee was not altogether to blame for the marital troubles that brought on his death.

Editor Spat On by Judge He Attacked

NORFOLK, VA., Aug. 27.—Friends of Charles R. Kelley, editor of The Norfolk News and nephew of Bishop Kelley, of Savannah, who was assaulted and spat on yesterday afternoon by Judge Lawless, of the Norfolk County Court, because of newspaper attacks made on the jurist, are to-day urging him to prefer charges of assault against Judge Lawless.

Odd Light Designs To Feature Exhibits

Unique designs in electric and gas lighting are to feature the Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition, according to members of the exhibit committee. The Georgia Railway and Power Company has arranged for a large space, and will make a special display of light and power. The Atlanta Gaslight Company will have some novel lighting features. The Massengale Bulletin System will have a display of electric signs.

Committee members continue soliciting subscriptions for space, and many new manufacturers have signed. Others are on the verge of signing, and it is expected that every foot of space in the exhibit will be sold by Saturday.

Girl in X-Ray Gown Mystery at Navy Ball

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—All the men in the naval set, women, too, are eager to learn the name of the young woman who went to the dance on the battleship Idaho in a very lacey skirt and no petticoat. The lace in the skirt was of open and generous design, allowing more than casual glimpses of shapely, nether limbs.

The woman is a pronounced brunette, seemingly of Spanish origin. Her favorite dance is the tango, judging by the abandon and skill with which she executed it.

Spanish Importers Want Atlanta Branch

The Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce received a letter Wednesday from Valencia, Spain, from a large exporting and importing firm, wanting information about Atlanta dealers in peanuts, almonds, saffron, garlic, onions, etc. The letter states that the peanut trade is rapidly increasing in Spain and there is a probability of the Valencia firm establishing a branch here.

The bureau daily receives letters from all over the country asking about plant sites, transportation facilities, trackage, etc., in Atlanta. All available information is given the inquirers.

Smallest Painting On Grain of Corn

CAMDEN, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Samuel T. Schultz, of Camden, N. J., whose scenic and mural painting studio is at Wilmington, Del., has, despite a lifetime spent in painting subjects in heroic size, the unique distinction of having made the smallest landscape painting in the world.

It is on a grain of corn, and the painter has just recovered it after having lost possession of the picture for more than forty years, in which it has traveled from art center to art center through Europe, attracting wide attention as the tiniest paining on earth.

Daniels Boys Play At Being U. S. Tars

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Clad in United States seamen uniforms, gift of sailors on the Mayflower, the younger sons of Secretary Daniels have "invented" a new game which has taken juvenile Washington by storm.

The boys have rigged up wigwag towers on the grounds of Single Oak, the Daniels country place. Here the "home flag" is kept, and when communication with their friends stationed at other towers nearby is desired they wigwag the flag and signal to their heart's content. They have arranged a code.

Gives Wife All His Land to End Nagging

LOGANSPORT, IND., Aug. 27.—Farmer Marvin Brown owned 75 acres of land. His wife nagged him so that he declared life with her was unbearable. He made her a proposition that for every day she would not nag him he would give her an acre of land.

The next 75 days were days of perfect peace and domestic calm. On the seventy-sixth day Mrs. Brown resumed her nagging.

All those circumstances were alleged in a divorce suit filed here by Farmer Brown.

4-CORNERED RACE LIKELY IN MACON

Julian Urquhart, Former Recorder, Expected to Announce Candidacy for Mayor.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Julian Urquhart, former Recorder of Macon, is being urged by his friends to enter the race for Mayor, and he has the matter under consideration and will make a final decision in a short time. It is generally understood, however, that he will run.

Mr. Urquhart is an attorney and well qualified to fill the position of Mayor. He is familiar with municipal affairs, and his record as Recorder will be used in the campaign. He will make the race independently without an aldermanic ticket.

The other announced candidates are Bridges Smith, A. L. Dasher, Sr., and Wallace Miller.

Record Registration.

MACON, Aug. 27.—The registration in Macon and Bibb County this year promises to break all past records. The total registration at present is 2,675, and it is believed this number will be doubled. The largest registration on record was in 1912, when 3,770 voters qualified in the county.

Three elections with more than 40 candidates in the field is the cause of the increased interest in the registration, and it is believed that before the books for the special registration for the municipal primary at least 4,500 citizens will have qualified to vote.

For Chief of Police.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Harry Griggs, manager of the Elberta Hotel, has been announced by his friends as a candidate to succeed Walter B. Chapman, the present Chief of Police.

Chief Chapman's term will expire December 17, and his successor will be elected by the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Griggs' candidacy will only be announced in the event Bridges Smith, administration candidate for Mayor, is elected at the coming municipal election.

Miller Has Mascot.

MACON, Aug. 27.—Wallace Miller, candidate for Mayor on the young men's ticket, has a mascot—a baby daughter, who was born yesterday.

Trentini's Au Revoir Kisses Start a Riot

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—There was a near-riot on the French Line pier soon after La Lorraine docked. Customs and immigration officials rushed to a point near the gangway, where a large crowd had gathered.

In the center was Mlle. Emma Trentini bidding an osculatory ideau to all her fellow first cabin passengers. Just at this moment one of the passengers asked whether she was going to marry Caruso.

"Caruso!" she exclaimed. "Bah!" and then hurried from the pier, plainly showing disgust.

ARRESTED AS EMBEZZLER.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 27.—Charles W. Mitchell, bookkeeper for the Charleston Mining and Manufacturing Company at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., has been caught at Los Angeles on a warrant charging embezzlement of $6,000 of the company's money.

ADMIT BANKRUPTCY.

The International Tape Company, an Atlanta corporation, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Wednesday. Robert Sharpe, a tailor at No 125 North Pryor street, also filed a voluntary petition.

BAND AND ORGAN CONCERT BENEFIT

Splendid Program Arranged for Fifth Regiment Musicians and Charles Sheldon.

A brass band and organ concert will be given at the Auditorium Thursday evening, under the joint auspices of the Fifth Regiment Band, National Guard of Georgia, and the Atlanta Music Festival Association.

The proceeds of the concert will be for the benefit of the band and association. The association will use its part in helping pay for the free Sunday concerts which have become a permanent feature of Atlanta's musical life. The program will be as follows:

March, Grand Entry.....Barber
Overture, Tancredit.....G. Rossini
Descriptive, A Hunting Scene
P. Bucalossi
Selection, The Sunny South...Lampe
Organ Selection.....Sheldon
Overture, Rosamonde (Organ accompaniment) .....Schubert
Medley-Overture, Remick's Hits, 1913 .....Lampe
Grand Fantasia, "Home, Sweet Home, the World Over."

The band leader will be Chief Musician C. E. Barber, of the Fifth Regiment, and the organist will be Charles Sheldon.

Owing to the keen popular interest in the concert, particularly among friends of the Fifth Regiment, it has been decided to make the prices of admision 25 cents and 10 cents.

Women to Wear Less Clothing, More Gems

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—More jewelry and fewer clothes is the advice given to-day to women who wish to keep apace or a few paces ahead of fashion by the jewelers of the country, assembled here for the eighth annual convention of the National Retail Jewelers' Association.

"Jewelry is more necessary than dress," said President T. L. Coombs, of Omaha. "Women wore jewels before they wore many clothes; they are coming back to those styles."

Oldest Sneezer Is Dined by Hay-Fevers

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 27.—America's oldest sneezer—Major Richard Muckle, of Philadelphia, aged 88—was given a banquet here last night by the United States Hay Fever Association. The major has suffered from the sneezing, sniffling fever for 75 years.

Macon Man Missing; Shortage in Accounts

MACON, Aug. 27.—J. Turner Shepherd, for three years bookkeeper for the Joseph N. Neel Company, clothiers, and one of the best known young men of Macon, has disappeared, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts of approximately $3,600.

Shepherd is married and has two children.

Elephant Attacks Autoists; 4 Hurt

AURORA, IND., Aug. 27.—Imagining he heard the battle challenge of the jungle in the blasts of an auto horn, Rajah, a bull elephant, broke from a circus parade here to-day and attacked the machine.

Four wealthy farmers were injured and the big red touring car was wrecked.

The World of Society

Miss Louise Broyles, who, with Miss Isabel Robinson, sails next week to enter the Yeatman School near Paris, was the honor guest at two farewell parties Wednesday. Mrs. George Brine entertained at a luncheon at the Piedmont Club, which was followed by an informal tea tendered Miss Broyles by Miss Margaret McCarty.

The luncheon table, placed on the ballroom porch, suggested Miss Broyles' approaching ocean voyage. A large boat, formed of pink rosebuds and pink and white snapdragons, formed the centerpiece, with vases of Killarney roses at either end of the table. The place cards were hand painted with miniature sailboats, and Miss Broyles' place was marked by a beautifully bound book to contain an acount of her voyage.

Mrs. Brine wore embroidered voile with a hat of white lace, adorned with pink roses. Miss Broyles wore white point d'esprit, with sash and girdle of apple green, the toilet completed by a big black hat.

Invited to meet her were Mrs. J. D. McVarty, Mrs. Arnold Broyles, Mrs. Thomas Philip Hinman, Misses Katherine DuBose, Helen McCarty, Margaret McCarty, Mary Burr Lake, Dorothy Arkwright, Virginia Lipscomb, Margaret Northen and Dorothy High.

Miss McCarty's guests included eight or ten young girls, who were also entertained at the Piedmont Club. Tea was served from a table decorated with summer flowers. Miss McCarty wore cream colored point d'esprit, with coat of blue taffeta and a hat of old rose adorned with blue ribbons.

On Friday, Miss Dorothy Arkwright will entertain a small group of friends at luncheon at the Piedmont Club in honor of Miss Broyles, who leaves Atlanta Saturday.

Vesper Club Dance.

One of the interesting events of Friday evening will be the dance given by the Vesper Club at its rooms in West End in honor of several girl visitors to the city. The following couples will act as chaperons for the evening:

Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Evin McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. George Ansley, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooke.

Thomas-Wells.

The marriage of Miss Adeline Thomas, the only daughter of Mrs. Alice Muse Thomas, and Mr. James Leech Wells takes place Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother on Peachtree Place. On account of the recent death of the bridegroom's father the guests are limited to the immediate family and a few very close friends.

Spear-Bell Wedding.

Miss Laura May Spear and Mr. Clarence Bell were married Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Spear, in Hyde Park, Cincinnati.

The wedding was witnessed only by members of the two families.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bell left for the mountains of North Carolina, where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Spruce street, Inman Park.

Mr. Bell is the son of Judge and Mrs. George Bell. He is a member of the law firm of Bell & Ellis. Mrs. Bell made many friends here on her visit to Miss Jennie Sue Bell last spring.

In Compliment to Miss Irwin.

Mrs. Walter Smith gave a bridge party Wednesday morning for Miss Irma Irwin, of Montgomery, the guest of Mrs. William Jenkins. The card tables were on the porch, where yellow flowers and ferns were used as a decoration.

Invited to meet Miss Irwin were Misses Alma Downing, Marguerite Harper, Fannie Simpson, Louise Mell, Alice May Massengale, Lebie Ewing, Mrs. William Jenkins, Mrs. Clarke Fraser, Mrs. Frank Winecoff, Mrs. Sam Eidlson, Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and Mrs. J. H. Sutten.

In the afternoon Mrs. William Jenkins gave the first of a series of bridge parties for her guest, Miss Irwin. Golden-glow and black-eyed daisies decorated the house.

Her guests included Misses Edwina Harper, Isabelle Simpson, Nell Bowers, of Nashville, the guest of Mrs. J. P. Allen; Lucile Bean, Theodosia Andrews, Ruth Small, of Macon, the guest of Mrs. A. E. White; Lydia Nash, Marion Fielder, Laura Ripley, Ethel Law, Sarah Burr, Julia Hardwick, Mrs. Dan McIntyre, Jr., Mrs. Claude Weller and Mrs. W. A. McCullough.

Ice Cream Festival.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Trainmen will give an ice cream festival in the Concrete Building Thursday afternoon from 5 to 10 o'clock.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The Atlanta Francis Willard Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold its regular session Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Sunday school room of Trinity Church. Superintendents of departments are especially urged to be present.

Dancing Party.

Miss Helen Atkisson entertained at a dancing party Monday evening at her home in Ansley Park. The guests were Misses Lyndall Haddon, Lalla Bright Cannon, Louise Cooper, Estelle Lindsay, Elizabeth Clayton, Gladys Sands, Dorothy Davis, Katherine Darby, Minnie Cook, M. A. Lindsey, Irene Hollis, Mabel Atkisson, Messrs. Harrold Keene, Nat Spence, Milton McGovern, Forrest Carroll, Marshall Walker, Harrold Greenlee, Edwin Wilder, Williams, Sewell, Philip Bayley, Simpson, Donald Dudley and Tommie Atkisson.

For Miss Parke.

Miss Helen Parke, of Washington, who has been visiting Mrs. H. C. Shover, on Highland view, was the honor guest of several informal parties. Thursday a number of the school set were given a picnic at Tallulah Falls. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Shover chaperoned the party and Misses Elise and Martha Shover acted as hostesses.

Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunt tendered Miss Parke a dinner at their home on Myrtle street. Covers were laid for nine.

Saturday afternoon the Misses Shover entertained at an al fresco party for Miss Parke. Twelve guests were present and games were played during the afternoon, for which attractive prizes were given. Miss Parke returned home on Tuesday.

Miss Darby Entertains Club.

Miss Katherine Darby entertained the members of her dancing club, the Inter Se Club, Tuesday evening at her home in Ansley Park. Guests were Misses Chauncey McClain, Helen Atkisson, Marie Kitchens, Margaret Bramlett, Claire Booth, Louise Couper, Elizabeth Ramey, Lois Carroll, Mary Anderson, Martha Darby, Messrs. Ernest Allen, Mercer Lee, Joe Heard, Jr., Alvin Lovingood, Clarence Trotti, Herbert Kelly, Gordon Freeman, Forrest Carroll, Archie Freeman, Philip Almand, L. Stroble, Mat Spence, Luther Randall, Herbert Snyder, Pope Franklin, Dr. Nat Wheeler.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Ham announce the birth of a son at their home in West End.

Mrs. Edgar Barrett has returned to her home, No. 135 Peeples street, after an operation for appendicitis at the Piedmont Sanitarium.

Miss Emma Kate Amorous is ill at the St. Joseph's Infirmary with tonsilitis. She probably will return home Saturday.

Miss Ethel Tutweiler and Miss May Harralson are at the Alley House in Saute, where they will remain until the first week in September.

Miss Lillian Williamson has returned from Houston, Texas, where she spent the summer with Mrs. Ralph B. Everett, formerly Miss Emma Benjamin, of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Willingham have returned from Blue Ridge. Misses Anita Estes and Claire Kantrowitz, of New York, who accompanied them, are their guests.

Mrs. Lelia Stowe Beach and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Beach, have returned to the city, after a delightful visit to Saute, in Nacoochee Valley, where they were guests of the Misses Glenn.

Miss Jamie Arnold gave a matinee party at the Forsyth Wednesday afternoon for Miss Frances Springer's guests, Miss Annie Will Pearce and Miss Irene Berry, of Columbus, and Miss Sarah Garland, of Griffin.

Miss Elizabeth Hines will return home Thursday from Anderson, Ind., where she has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, for some time. Mrs. Wright was Miss Ruth Hoffman, of Chicago, and Miss Hines was one of her bridesmaids in June.

Misses Katherine DuBose and Faith Johnson, who have spent the last week in Macon with Miss Elizabeth Baker, will return home Wednesday night. Miss DuBose will leave Saturday with Mrs. Arnold Broyles for New York, remaining with Misses Louise Broyles and Isabel Robinson until their departure for Paris, where they will enter school.

Around-Britain Flyer Falls in 1,048th Mile

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, Aug. 27.—With 1,048 miles of his 1,800-mile flight around Great Britain behind him, Aviator H. G. Hawker met with a mishap ten miles from this city to-day. One of the wings of his hydro-aeroplane broke and Hawker feared he would not be able to reach Southampton in time to get the $25,000 prize.

Hawker was injured in the fall of his machine.

W. R. POPE DIES AT MONTICELLO

MONTICELLO.—W. R. Pope died at his home here to-day, after a three-days illness. Early Sunday morning he was stricken with paralysis. He was manager of the Planters' Warehouse and was about 57 years of age. The funeral will take place Thursday.

IMMODEST DRESS SCORED BY HEFLIN

Congressman Looks to Women Who Combat Extreme Styles for Nation's Strength.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Women who shun the immodesty and impropriety of present-day fashions can be relied upon for the future strength and posterity of the nation, according to Congressman Thomas Heflin, of Alabama. Heflin expressed his opinion of diaphanous feminine drapery and the slit skirt craze as follows:

"I would paraphrase the Scripture, 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' and say, 'By their dress or lack of dress we shall know them.' The evil genius of lustful fashion through immodest dress is playing havoc with a certain class of women in this country and setting a bad example for others.

"Thank God, the good mothers have begun a crusade against this evil.

"The woman who instills in her daughter the principles of good sense and modesty and trains her up in the way that she should go has done more for her day and generation than she can ever hope to do by active participation in politics."

Work Begun on New Wholesale Section

An important spreading of Atlanta's business section was marked Tuesday by the beginning of work on a new wholesale section just west of the Terminal station. The work begun is the building of spur tracks by the Southern Railway. Erection of buildings will follow immediately.

A large section of West Side property was bought for this development. The spur tracks will leave the main line at the Peters street viaduct, and extend to Mangum and Haynes streets. There will be room for two long blocks of warehouses.

LABOR DAY AT MACON.

MACON.—The Labor Unions have made extensive preparations for the celebration of Labor Day on Monday at Central City Park, where an all-day picnic will be held. Athletic sports, dancing, a fiddlers' convention and baseball will be features.

One Woman's Story

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OBEDIENT to her husband's suggestion, Mary Fletcher tried to get a maid from the city. First of all she visited many employment agencies. At each she was received with a smile of welcome by the person in charge, but that smile was replaced by a look of incredulous surprise when, in reply to the question: "What wages do you pay?" Mary responded: "Twelve dollars."

"My dear madam!" exclaimed one such agent. "Excuse me, but you cannot get any girl, white or colored, to do general housework for that price."

"But," said Mary tentatively, "suppose I get a green and inexperienced girl, and teach her everything, and help her with the work—what wages would she come for?"

Might Advertise.

"Certainly for not less than eighteen dollars at the lowest," replied the agent. "And if you wish one to go to a lonely place in the country, you will have to pay more."

After many such fruitless efforts, Mary ceased visiting intelligence offices.

"You might advertise," her mother suggested when Mary recounted her experience to her. "I used to get good maids in that way. But, then, I paid very good wages. Your dear father always insisted, you know, on having me get the best of everything—servants included."

Mary winced at the unintentional thrust, then forgot her own discomfiture as she saw the tears in her mother's eyes.

"I know, dear," she said hastily, "and he was right for you deserved the best of everything. But you must remember, mother, that father had more money than Bert has."

"Oh, I know, I know," the widow responded quickly. "Dear child, don't fancy for a moment that I meant to criticise your husband. He has, of course, derived many of his ideas from his mother, and—pardon me, Mary—but she has not lived as we have, so she is to be excused if she has taught her son to feel that women ought to do their own work. Naturally, as Bert is a good son, he takes her tone. I do not blame him."

"Of course not," her daughter assented. In her own heart she was wondering if she, this man's wife, could say as much.

"Your husband is very kind to me," remarked Mrs. Danforth, somewhat irrelevantly, "I ought to be happy."

But was she? Mary pondered. Did she not think that perhaps her daughter was not as content as she would like her to be? Did she not suspect that Mary did not love the man to whom she was married? And, if so, could she be happy—she, the mother who had taught her child that a loveless marriage was a sin?

Her Cheerful Voice.

As if reading the unspoken thought, Mrs. Danforth took her daughter's hand tenderly in hers. "Tell me, darling," she said, wistfully, "are you satisfied? Are you worried about anything? Sometimes I almost fear that you are a little disappointed—about something."

The young wife put her arms around her mother and drew the gray head down to her shoulder.

"Little mother," she said, her voice determinedly cheerful, "what notions you do get! Why should I not be happy here in this cozy little cottage, with the best mother that ever lived, and the man I have chosen out of all the world? Dear mother," with a light laugh, "why should I have married Bert if I did not want to?"

The mother laughed, too, and there was a ring of relief in the sound.

"Of course, dear! Why, indeed? Forgive your silly old mother—but I love you so much that if you were not happy—why, I just could not stand it!"

She ended with a little sob, and the daughter held her closer.

"You believe now that I am happy, don't you, dear?" Mary asked.

"Oh, yes, I believe it now," said the widow tremulously, "and you don't know what a comfort it is to be sure of it."

With her head still on Mary's shoulder she did not look up at the sad eyes gazing out of the window, nor did she see the bitter smile that twisted the young lips. In a moment the wife's face was again placid, and she smiled on leaving her mother, making the pretext that she had "some work to do downstairs."

She did not go downstairs at once. Instead, she turned into her own room and closed the door. But she did not, as she would have done in her girlhood days, fling herself upon the bed and give way to her misery. Instead, she went to the window and looked out into the July sunshine. But she was looking into her heart, not into the summer noon.

"Good Lord!" she whispered, "what a liar I have become! A liar both in speech and life!"

She stood motionless a moment longer, then lifted her head with a gesture of decision—almost of defiance.

"But I won't look back," she muttered. "I have made my bed and must lie on it—even if it is made of thorns. At all events, mother is comfortable and cared for."

She Had Learned.

Advertisements for domestics at the price named by Herbert Fletcher and his mother proved useless. As a final resort, Mary engaged one so-called "helper" after another from the village, but each was so inefficient that this trial was abandoned. The young housewife had learned that to secure good service one must pay an adequate price for it—and that even then one might fail to obtain it.

So it came about that at last Mary Fletcher did the work of her own house, hiring a woman from the village for two days a week to "wash, iron and scrub," and even then she had to supplement her at every turn. It was taken as a matter of course that the wife should help hang out the clothes and assist with the ironing. She told her mother that she "enjoyed the novel task;" in fact, that she thought the exercise and fresh air good for her. Her husband did not protest. Why should he? His own mother had always done that kind of work.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing

The two exercises pictured to-day show classic dancing steps intended to produce suppleness of limbs and waist.

These Pictures Were Especially Posed for this Page.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

(Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

ONE of your great Americans sang in an exquisite little poem of "The glory that was Greece; the grandeur that was Rome." The glory and grandeur of these nations were founded not only on their art and culture and prowess as warriors, but on a basic condition that made brains and power reach a great height of perfection—on the sublimity and healthy beauty of the human body.

When laziness and high living weakened the bodies of the Greeks and Romans, decline and fall were near. But in the flower of their national health and youth the bodies of the Greeks and Latins were physically splendid, and the endowment of mental power followed physical health.

In these simple facts there lies a great lesson for us of to-day. In bodily health and strength lie the power of the individual and the health of the nation as well. I have said so often and am always glad to say again that in the beautiful classic dances that have come down to us from the ancients lies the simplest secret of bodily grace. But to-day I want to add a few principles of bodily health and care that are practiced of necessity by the professional dancer, and that the bodily beauty-seeker would do well to emulate.

Begin by training children so that their muscles will fall naturally, in motion or repose, into graceful lines. Teach them that food is very important in one way and of no consequence in another. Food must nourish the body and give it strength, but beware the pleasureful overeating of the well-nourished, ill-proportioned gourmet.

Food and Mood.

Now, you could dance a cancan or a breakdown however you hated the world—and indigestion surely produces misanthropy—but you have to be in harmony with life to express poetry in dancing. So, since mood affects dancing and food affects mood, this little cycle will make the classical dancer careful of the dower of health that spare, sane, sensible eating produces.

For breakfast I have coffee and hot milk, for lunch fruit and one nourishing solid and my simple dinner is guiltless of sweets. Clothes I regard as covering and not as trammeling ornaments that interfere with freedom of movement or deep breathing. Perhaps if I convert a few of my readers to a love for and a belief in the graceful movements of the classic dance, I shall at the same time make converts to the healthful joys of simple living, of deep breathing and of high thinking.

To-day I will tell you about two little movements of the dance that may be done at home without music and to the slower tempo of the walk. Try them for general bodily grace and ease of motion.

The first picture shows a very simple equally pretty figure, and for suppleness of arms and legs and waist it counts as strongly as it does for lightly poised and carried head and body. Advance with the head carried high above the column of the throat and the lifted chin. Sway slightly from the waist as you swing the arms in the arc of a circle; left arm is forward slightly above the shoulder height as the weight advances forward to the right foot, and at the same time the right arm is stretched back in a straight line and lowered from shoulder to wrist until the hand is just at the line of the hip. Do this with gradually increasing tempo, until the springy walking motion has become a light dancing step. Fifteen minutes of this night and morning will give great grace and resiliency to your ordinary gait.

The second picture brings the back and shoulder muscles into play and exercises the throat. In other essentials it has the basic principles and advantages of the first exercise. Advance as before. This time the forward motion is first on the left and then on the right side of the body and thus great muscular co-ordination is assured ofr the devotee of this exis assured for the devotee of this exelbows close to the waist line and the hands relaxed in easy lines from the wrist. Sway head and arm from side to side as the body pivots slightly from the waist muscles and the feet advance in the lifted prancing step of the dance.

"More power to ye," says my neighbors of Erin's Isle, in kindly greeting. To you—my neighbors across the sea—I say it, too, "More power to you;" and may the principles of the classical dancing I have so earnestly studied and so earnestly love, bring you beauty and grace and power to live gloriously and well.

A TALE OF LOST CHERUBS

"THE Gudgeon children are lost!" panted Mrs. Sprinkle as she flung open the screen door unceremoniously and burst in upon the Liffick family, variously disposed in hammocks and sprawly chairs.

"Wh-where?" demanded Liffick intelligently as he awoke from a peaceful dream.

"My goodness!" cried Mrs. Liffick. "Again?"

"They're truly lost," explained Mrs. Sprinkle, excitedly. "And we want you to come and help find them. They are sending parties in every direction through the woods and they're going to telephone the life-saving crew to drag the lake——"

"Did the boat tip over?" asked Liffick, now entirely awakened, as he reached for his cap.

Mrs. Sprinkle heaved an exasperated sigh. "If they're lost," she said, succinctly, "they might possibly be drowned, mightn't they? We don't want to leave any stone unturned."

Dire Thoughts.

"Mrs. Gudgeon left Imogene and Harry playing just as nicely under the trees beside their cottage while she walked down to the pier to fish," related Mrs. Sprinkle, "and they were gone when she came back in an hour. She has called and called for them, and they are nowhere within a mile! Imogene had such beautiful eyes, too! Maybe gypsies——"

"It will break their mother's heart!" said Mrs. Liffick. "How perfectly terrible! I'm sorry I scolded Harry for breaking off all my geraniums! And the time he scalded our cat—I might have made less harsh remarks to him. Suppose they've fallen down that old quarry pit! Arthur, you go right over in that direction and see! It's only four miles!"

Liffick, starting off, ran into several other men from the various cottages bound on the same errand.

"It looks serious," said Tilton with a shake of his head. "Kids like that and so venturesome! There's a dozen things that might have happened to them! I'm bound for the creek bank, where it is so marshy! There's quicksand there!"

The whole summer colony was soon deserted. Everybody had gone to hunt for the Gudgeon children, whose various sins of commission were now tenderly covered by the veil of charitable anxiety. Mrs. Gudgeon alternately wept at home and darted out on spasmodic hunts. Again she would wander around the cottage making the air ring with the names of the missing ones. There was no answer.

"Harry might have grown up to be President some day!" said Mrs. Liffick mournfully. "They say these mischievous little children always turn out so well. Dear little Imogene!——"

"You said she was a hateful child, mother, when she cut holes in your new embroidered waist," put in Sally Liffick, who was tagging around that she might miss none of the excitement.

"Sally, you go straight home!" commanded her mother. "Haven't you any sympathy at all? The idea!"

One by one the searchers staggered in toward dusk. Each had the same tale of disappointment and each was dusty and thirsty and hungry and despairing.

"Something perfectly awful must have happened to them, because every inch of the woods has been searched!" said Mrs. Sprinkle. "Poor Mrs. Gudgeon! Harry was such a brilliant child!"

"I always said Imogene would turn out a beauty, too," put in Mrs. Tilton. "It's hard!"

"There never were such darling children in the whole world!" their mother informed everybody between sobs. "Oh, where are my babies? Just to get my arms around them"—

Harry Found.

There was a shriek and a scuffle from the little cellar under the Gudgeon house and everybody rushed to see.

The Gudgeon cook was dragging Harry out from the depths of the potato bin, while Imogene was unrolling herself from a pile of old carpeting. The assembled searchers and their parents stared, voiceless.

"We wuz playing hiding from the Indians," vouchsafed Harry. "You made awful good Indians—you yelled so!"

As Gudgeon reached for Harry with an arm motion that promised a laying over his knee, while Mrs. Gudgeon did likewise with her darling daughter, the searchers melted away.

"Wow!" said Liffick as juvenile wails rent the air. "That sounds good to me! Four miles to the stone quarry and back!"

Yield to Baby.

One afternoon not long ago in the vicinity of Grant Park there might have been seen a young man industriously pushing up and down a baby carriage, intently reading a book the while.

"Henry! Henry!" called a young woman from the second story of a house opposite.

Henry heard it, but continued to push the baby carriage and to read his book.

In about an hour the cries for "Henry" were repeated.

"Well, what do you want?" he demanded, rather impatiently.

"Nothing, dear," was the irritating response, "except to inform you that you've been wheeling Harriet's doll all the afternoon. I think it's time for the baby to have a turn now."

THE TUNNEL
GREATEST STORY OF ITS KIND SINCE JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The story opens with Rives, who is in charge of the technical workings of the great tunnel from America to Germany, of one of the tunnel trains, with Baermann, an engineer, in charge of Main Station No. 4. They are travelling at the rate of 118 miles an hour. Rives is in love with Maude Allan, wife of Mackendrick Allan, whose mind first conceived the great tunnel scheme. After going about 250 miles under the Atlantic Ocean Rives gets out of the train. Suddenly the tunnel seems to burst. There is a frightful explosion. Men are flung to death and Rives is badly wounded. He staggers through the blinding smoke, realizing that about 3,000 men have probably perished. He and other survivors get to Station No. 4. Rives finds Baermann holding at bay a wild mob of frantic men who want to climb on a work train. Somebody shoots Baermann, and the train slides out. The scene is then changed to the roof of the Hotel Atlantic. The greatest financiers of the country are gathered there at a summons from C. H. Lloyd, "The Money King." John Rives addresses them, and introduces Allan. Mrs. Allan and Maude Lloyd, daughter of the financier, are also present. Allan tells the company of his project for a tunnel 3,100 miles long. The financiers agree to back him. Allan and Rives want him to take charge of the actual work. Rives accepts. Rives goes to the Park Club to meet Wilterstelner, a financier. At Columbus Circle news of the great project is being flashed on a screen. Thousands are watching it.

Now Go On With the Story.

Before daylight two thousand more men arrived, and with them began the endless stream of freight. Rives began to feel like a swimmer who has been bucking a tide-rip. But he asked that the pace be increased, and he shut his teeth and jumped in. Twenty lieutenants worked on his immediate staff, all of them young men, but all of them chosen for the cut of their jaws and the cleanness of their records in stress and storm and strife. And Rives worked them as hard as he worked himself. He gave no instructions. There was not time for that. He told each man what was to be done in a few curt sentences and left the doing of it to him.

That third night a terrific thunderstorm broke up the heat wave. It came down in a terrific gale, and the first thunderbolt fired a freight shed where 500 cots were stacked to the roof, as there had been no time to unpack them that night. Before the fire got well under way, the wind ripped the burning roof off, and then came the deluge. When day broke, Rives found that about a third of his jerry-built houses had collapsed—and the flood of materials and men from Toms River set in as before.

It was a terrible setback, but he shook his head and went at it as if nothing had happened, and his men backed him with the easy energy and resource of men long accustomed to uneven warfare with Nature. That day Tunnel City looked like a storm-swept mining camp. Two days later it was like the temporary camp of the great army. At the end of ten days it was a city with concrete houses and streets and electric lights and sewerage—a city of 20,000 men with a postoffice, a telephone system, two railroad depots, bakeries, dairies, abattoirs, stores, saloons and a hospital.

And over everything, the discouraged and drooping trees and the few scattered clumps of bushes, the window sills and the roofs, was the thick white dust of the cement that had made the miracle possible.

Pages of this and many succeeding issues of this paper might be filled with the details of the wonders of energy and the mighty toil of those summed months on the Jersey coast. And in four other spots on the face of the earth similar scenes were being enacted. But terrific as were the results, grandiose the scale, the details must needs be tiresome, for after all they were only digging a hole in the earth. In this, as in all other matters of great moment, it is well to trust to the trained and not the technical observer. Edgar Harkness, the star man of The New York Evening Journal staff, was at the works from the day the first man reached there. Looking over the files of the paper for that summer I came upon a special article he wrote describing the progress of the work.

You can gather some idea of the tremendous undertaking from his picturesque but vigorous English:

"This place of bedlam," he wrote, in part, under date of September 11, of that year, "looks as if it were going up in smoke. To-day the cloud above it is so dense that electric discharges like heat lightning flash across it and there is always a muttering like distant thunder, while beneath its edges a deep blue horizon tells that elsewhere the sun is shining. Beneath the Tunnel City roars and shouts explodes, whistles, thunders and yells.

"From the midst of the pandemonium and settling over everything like a white sea-fog rises a monstrous white column of dust to join the black smoke canopy overhead. Meeting the heavy blackness it seems to spread and mingle with it, forming a cloud such as observed at the eruptions of volcanoes. Pressed down by the colder air above it spreads like a gigantic umbrella, and little shreds are whirled away by puffs of the seaward breeze.

"SHIP captains report that when there is a steady off-shore wind this dust forms white scum on the ocean for miles, and New Yorkers know the source of the nuisance that turns their blue serge suits gray."

Here Mr. Harkness drifts off temporarily to little things that were important for the day only, and then goes on to report the progress of the actual work.

"The place of construction, following its fixed width of twelve hundred feet, is now nearly the finishing of a straight inland cut of three miles. It is laid out in long terraces so that the construction trains can hold to easy grades until they reach the last level, which will be 600 feet below the level of the sea. Here the actual sinking of the tunnel itself will begin.

"But the day before yesterday this place was a sandy heath, half reclaimed from barrenness. Swiftly it became a gravel pit, a quarry, and at last a monster chasm that swarms seemingly with insect life. Queer little busy beings covered with white dust that dig and growl and grovel and toil, gray-faced and dusty-haired.

"Twenty thousand of them hurl themselves into this mighty ravine every day. Their drills and picks and shovels glitter like the sunlight on a lake. A whistle shrieks a warning, a column of dust rises to join the vast cloud overhead, a colossus of stone, wrenched by dynamite from its grip of earth, swerves outward and falls with a thundering roar. Another puff of dust leaps up and the insects swarm into it.

"As far as eye can reach down that long incline into the bowels of the earth these puffs that tell of terrific blasts are shooting up. Great dredges, attacking the quicksand, shriek and whine as they suck up liquid death. The chain pumps groan and rattle. Derricks and steam shovels whirr and dip. Aerial carts whizz past you on trolleys. Swarms of tiny locomotives hustle and fuss around, shrieking at each other with shrill voices.

"Sand and gravel flies back to the town where mountains of bagged cement are stacked, for there must be housing for 40,000 men before the cold weather reaches. Here another army is toiling at break-neck speed about this gigantic task.

"And all of this is but preliminary to the real work of the great project."

Then there follows a wonderful description of the workings of the great tidal basins, Allan's improvement on the designs of Schlich and Lippman, the famous German engineers, to whom we owe the harnessing of the incalculable power of the tides. Through his ingenious arrangement of reservoirs thousands of tons of water were dumped on gigantic turbines every hour of the twenty-four, and the lift and fall of the tides gave him all of this power for simply the cost of original work—less than $5,000,000.

The scene, indeed, recalled the Tower of Babel—a project so vast that its very conception seemed impious.

And this was only one of five such scenes. In Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London similar mighty panoramas of daring were being unrolled. And Allan, the genius who had provoked these upheavals, was the motive spirit of each. He was tireless and unresting. Rives and Mrs. Allan heard from him in one camp or another, and before they had finished his short dispatches—so it seemed to them—another from some other tunnel city was laid in their hands or he himself dropped off a construction train from Toms River, clear-eyed, smooth-shaven, and fresh and energetic as ever.

Rives had built a beautiful little house for the chief engineer and his wife on the seaside of the tunnel city, and Allan encouraged Mrs. Allan to spend much of her time there, even when he was in this country. Rives was the one warm personal friend he had made in his lonely life, and knowing how much pleasure Mrs. Allan found in his society, he was glad to have her as nearly contented as possible while he darted back and forth across half the Northern Hemisphere. They had one child—a little girl, Edith—and she grew to be almost a stranger to her father.

Even when Allan was in New York he saw but little of his wife and child. His business affairs usually took him a great deal to the house of the great Lloyd, where he held long conferences with the old financier or his daughter, who had the details of the tunnel at her finger ends.

A Neglected Wife.

Thus Mrs. Allan, a lonely and neglected woman, was thrown constantly with Rives, an impressionable and high-strung man, who already held for her at least a deep admiration.

"Mac is in New York—I got a wire from him late this afternoon," remarked Rives one evening as they were taking a horseback ride along one of the wide level roads that led northward from Tunnel City.

"Yes, he called me up," said the woman, with a faintly weary note in her voice. "He said that he would be busy about the real estate deal for the next day or so and would have to go to France within a few days. He called up from the Lloyds," she added, without conscious meaning.

Rives was silent for a few moments as the horses pounded along the gravel road, side by side.

"Did he say anything about running down here or——?" he stopped off short. He had tried to make the tone nonchalant, but she understood and bit her lip.

"I know what you are thinking about, Jack," she said soberly, and her voice trembled slightly. "And I wish you wouldn't—pity me."

Rives swore at himself in an undertone and tried to stammer out something light and reassuring.

"You're too old a friend," she cut in, quietly. "It would be just like you to go and talk to Mac, and that would be worse than anything else. He is doing the best he can, and I know I ought to be happy."

"Aren't you?" asked Rives.

"No, I'm not, and you know it perfectly well, my friend. I am as proud of Mac as a woman could be of a man, but I want to be married to a man, not to a—a—an institution."

Rives looked at the lightly poised body and the delicate brown head and soft eyes that shone like amber in the moonlight. And he laughed uncertainly to check the something that rushed to his lips.

"Oh, well," he said lightly and kindly, "it won't be so bad in a little while. Mac is trying to do eight men's work and everything is just starting now, but when——"

"I know," she interrupted grimly. "Everything has been just starting for months and months. I went over all this with him a few weeks ago and he told me just what you are trying to tell me. I only know that I have been under the same roof with my husband for 24 consecutive hours in six months."

"But, little girl, don't you see——"

"Oh, yes! I know I am unreasonable. I have cut out about a bale of newspaper clippings about Mac and pictures of me, and I ought to be as vain and pleased as—as—as a woman. I am proud of him. I even admit that it gratifies the woman in me to be pointed out in department stores and at the theater as the wife of Mac Allan—but that isn't all that a normal woman wants the man she loves to give her."

Rives wisely held his tongue and there was another little silence. At last he asked:

"Did you ever—have you ever let Mac know exactly how you feel about—about this?"

The woman did not reply at once.

"I went down to his office about a month ago," she said at last in a low voice. "I couldn't help it, Jack. I was so lonely and miserable. He sent out word that he was very busy, but would be out in a little while. I told the boy to tell him that I wanted to see him at once. I was mad by that time. He came out perfectly good humored, as he always is, and I told him I wanted him to come home for dinner and spend the evening with me. He said he couldn't and I—I cried, and I'm afraid I made a scene—but there was nobody there."

SHE paused, and Rives made no comment. He was looking straight over his horse's head up the moonlit road, and his face was in the shade of his broad-brimmed hat. She looked at him and put her hand on his arm.

"You don't blame me, do you, Jack?"

She felt the muscles stiffen under her hand.

"No," he replied, almost gruffly, "I don't."

She sighed. "He told me he would have more time in a few months. It would be different, and I said I didn't want to wait any longer. I told him I was going to take up nursing and go to work in the hospital here—and that's why I've done it. If I couldn't have my husband I had to have something else to occupy my mind. I can't bear to be useless, Jack."

"What did he say when you told him that?" asked Rives, quietly.

'He laughed—and told me to go ahead."

Again they rode on in silence for a brief time.

"I suppose I am foolish," she said at last, in a wistful tone, "but sometimes I wish that Mac had never succeeded in getting this tunnel plan through. He doesn't belong to me any more; he belongs to the world. I have to live in the light of his halo—and I'd rather live in the light of a fireside."

Rives abruptly pulled up his horse and turned.

"Let's go home," he said.

"I'M glad you could get up here, old man. The storm is about to break. Listen!"

Up to them from the street, where hundreds of real estate brokers were gathered, came a steady roar. Allan and Rives listened and smiled.

"You certainly did some smooth work in a publicity line," said the latter.

"It wasn't smooth," disclaimed Allan, a little resentfully, "and I didn't do it. It just did itself. You know—but maybe you haven't had time to see their stunts—but the viograph people have been among my best little advertisers, and they have paid for the privilege. They have been showing pictures with miles and miles of beautiful houses and department stores and all the trimmings of a great city along with their regular films showing the progress of the work—all labeled 'The Tunnel City of the Future' and 'Tunnel City Ten Years From To-day.'"

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading an awful interesting short story last night," said the Manicure Lady. "It was about them Aztecs, that used to have splendid palaces and everything fixed up in big league style down in Mexico. The story said that was many centuries ago, long before there was even any Irish came to this country, and it said they was a splendid race, the men all tall and fair and handsome and the women regular cuties. The hero of the story must have been about eight feet tall, because it said that he loomed head and shoulders above the tallest warriors of their army, and they wasn't none of them shorties."

"I never seen any very tall Mexicans," said the Head Barber. "That Mexican porter we had here wasn't any taller than Frank Daniels, and he wasn't fair, either."

"Oh, but these people was long before the Mexicans we see nowadays," said the Manicure Lady. "They was a superior race of people, like us, only bigger and I guess brainier. They used to worship the sun, and I think that showed they was a fine race, because anybody that worships the sun ain't worshiping no minor league idol.

"I always thought if I had to worship anything except my family and my future husband I would worship the sun. The sun is so big and nice and warm. But I must tell you the story. The name of the hero was Io. It is a jerky sort of a name, Io, but all you have to do to remember it is to think of Iowa or an I. O. U.

"Well, this Io is in love with the niece of a Aztec priest. Her name is Illa, which you can remember by thinking of Illinois. That's how I keep the two names so plain. The priest is a crusty old piece of work, and he doesn't want Io to get Illa because she has a lot of gold and precious stones which he has his eyes on. He says that the gell belongs to the sun and that he is the sun's agent, which the sun doesn't deny.

"There is some beautiful lines in the story. When the priest tells Illa that she cannot marry Io she says to him:

"'Know this, oh priest of the sun! Before you there were many priests, and when thou passest beyond the purple horizon there will be many more priests to worship that orb of fire and beauty upon which we now fix our puny mortal gaze. My Io is my all, so handsome and so strong. No man like him in all this country dwells. When in the morn he kneels before the shrine, still is he taller than the puny warriors at thy beck and call. It is written upon the waves that roll eternally, written with the rays of the sun itself, that I be Io's bride.'

"'But Io like not,' the priest answers. 'I owe Io a lot of money, and he presses me sore. Tell him to cancel that debt, and his bride you shall be upon the day when I owe Io nothing.'

"The way the story ends, Io makes the sacrifice, and he lives happily with Illa until they both croak. Gee, George, I wish I had been living then. It was all so romantic and different then. Imagine the average young Atlantan passing up a lot of money to get the girl he loves. Not a chance! He is too busy finding out if his bride's father is there with the fat bankroll. They didn't think of money in them days, George."

"That young guy that just went out doesn't think much of money, either," said the Head Barger. "He didn't think to give me a tip."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In the interval not a word was uttered not a look interchanged between the lady and the detective. But the moment Dr. Cameron returned, a sudden change took place in Mrs. Cameron, and rising, she confronted Mr. Gryce with a frank and grateful air that lent quite a new aspect to her ever-changing countenance.

"You are very kind," she declared, in a grateful tone that was in itself a shock to both her hearers. "Knowing this frightful tale; seeing as you must have done that, if true, Mildred Farley did not die after I went downstairs, but before, you have come here in confidence and without scandal to hear what I have to say about the matter and give me an opportunity to explain myself. I shall never forget this consideration, sir; and as proof of my gratitude I will at once tell you what I can about this poor unfortunate's death, hoping that you will see the matter as I did, and understand in a measure at least how I was driven by my fears to keep back my knowledge of this frightful secret, even from my mother and husband, till it was torn from me and shred by shred as you have seen. And now for the truth.

"This girl, whose death you consider such a mystery, committed suicide. She committed it in my presence, just a few minutes before I went downstairs to be married. It was a terrible shock and a great surprise to me. I had been dressing, and was thinking of anything else than tragedies or death. Nor do I think she meant to die then or there. But she was desperate. She had had a talk with her intended husband and had been disappointed in him. She did not want to see him again, and the contrast between the hopes expressed by my bridal attire and the dreariness of her own outlook maddened her, I supposed; for in a moment, as it were, she seized upon that bottle of poison and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I had got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Should I mar the happiness of the whole company by revealing what had occurred? I thought not in the moment I had to consider. So I just drew the poor girl into the alcove, and in grief and terror enough, God knows, covered her over with some dresses I had before pulled down from the closet and thrown on the floor. I had barely done this and readjusted my veil when the knock came and I had to descend.

"It was frightful, but I did not know how frightful till I came to think. Then I almost gave way to my terror and agitation, and when that scream came down from upstairs——"

She stopped. They did not wonder; at such a horrible experience, who would not shudder!

Her husband for the first time realized all she had been through and reached out his hand in sympathy, though there was yet much to be explained before he could feel reconciled to a past so full of mysteries and shadows.

"And how," asked the detective, nothing but formal respect on his part, "was the body disposed of? When next we hear of it, it was in the keeping of a Dr. Molesworth, who, as we have been informed, was not one of your wedding guests."

Mrs. Cameron did not flinch. She looked, if anything, more winning and candid than before.

"Dr. Molesworth was the man who had expected to marry her. He had gone to the hotel for that purpose and had not found her; so he came where he suspected her to be. He was not one of my guests, but that did not keep him from the house. He came in at the front door and stood in the hall, and I happened to see him and immediately knew what he was after. So I arose and went out—I was then receiving congratulations—and, accosting him without delay, told him that the person he wanted was in my room and bade him go upstairs and I would follow. For I not only saw that he was in a state of feeling that bordered on frenzy, but I also saw that if the matter was to be hushed up and the body got out of the house without disturbance, he was the man to do it; and I relied upon him and went up after him and explained what had occurred and showed him the dead body of his bride, and asked for help and got it. I don't know that I should call it help now," she added, in a low voice, "for it might have been better for me if I had called in the whole house to see that dead girl, and so escaped the days and weeks of deceit that have pressed upon me like so many mountain weights of lead."

Her husband looked as if he concurred with her, but he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce asked another question.

"You read the account of the proceedings before the Coroner, which was printed in the papers?"

She acknowledged that she had.

"You must have seen then that Dr. Molesworth testified to having found the girl on a stoop in Twenty-second street."

"Yes, sir. It was agreed between us that he should tell some such story as that. It seemed wisest to us at the time. Since she had killed herself it would not hurt her and it would relieve me from endless complication, to have it thought she had committed the deed in the street. So we thought then—with how little judgment let this moment testify."

The detective fixed his eyes upon her and opened his lips to put another question. But he evidently found it too difficult to say what was in his mind and turned it into the simple suggestion, "You must have known Dr. Molesworth well, Mrs. Cameron?"

A flush, hot and vivid, answered him from the doctor's face, but her cheek did not alter and it was with much composure she replied:

"I had learned much of his disposition from my conversations with the woman he expected to marry. As for his face, I had seen him at Mrs. Olney's, where I have been more than once. I had even had some talk with him. It was the situation which made us like friends at once."

"I understand," asserted Mr. Gryce, but his looks did not bear out his words. "Your conduct is not so inexplicable," he went on. "Women think much of appearances and are not apt to weigh the consequences of their impulsive efforts to preserve them. But a man usually halts long before he enters into a scheme that must end in perjury, and Dr. Molesworth committed perjury, Mrs. Cameron."

She dropped her chin upon her breast and the presence of a growing dread began to show itself in her face.

"Not only that," the detective continued. "He engaged to do a fearful thing when he promised you to get a dead body out of the house alone and without discovery. Have you thought how much nerve and determination it would require? What self-sacrificing devotion it would need to lead a man not only to take the risk of such an act, but to subject himself to the horrors of it? I find it difficult to reconcile what I have seen of Dr. Molesworth with such devotion to a lady so little known to him. I would sooner think——" He paused; she looked at him breathlessly—"that he had his own reasons for keeping the matter quiet," he pointedly added.

"Perhaps he had," she simply replied. "I can not tell all that passed in his mind. I can only tell you what we did."

"And you repeat that it was through his agency this dead girl was got out of your room and house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when?"

"That I do not know. It was after I left."

"What, you went away before she was removed from the house?"

"Yes, sir. Having made up my mind to trust the whole affair to him. I only thought of escape for myself. Then it could never have been managed if I had not cleared the backstairs by having my trunk carried out. It was down those he intended to go."

"And did he?"

"I can not tell. I only know he succeeded in his undertaking. How or under what difficulties, he must himself inform you. I have never had an opportunity to ask him."

"No," she returned boldly; "not while he doubts whether I have spoken of the matter or not. He has too chivalrous ideas of duty."

"What, when his life is at stake?"

"His life!"

"He was on the point of being arrested for murder when this testimony of Celia's came in."

"I suspected it, or rather I knew that he was under the surveillance of the police, for he told us so in an interview he had with the doctor about a case of his."

"And you were going to allow him to go to prison upon a charge you knew perfectly unfounded?"

"Mr. Gryce, I was not two weeks married. I know that my husband hated deceit and I lacked the courage to acknowledge that I had become entangled in it. Then I trusted to Dr. Molesworth discovering a way out of his difficulty, and was so sure that he would I never even thought of his being in any danger of his life. It is also only fair to myself to say that, had he been brought to trial, I should have relentlessly sacrificed myself. It was my hope that he would not which kept he silent so long."

She was pleading her cause well, and yet her shadowed brow and paling lip showed she was conscious that it was a failing one, and that the doom she had so long dreaded was rushing upon her.

"I except your explanation," quoth the detective, "and it only remains at present for you to inform us where Miss Farley got the drug with which she poisoned herself."

"I can not tell you that," came in fainter tones from Mrs. Cameron's lips.

"Was it from her bag, her pocket, or the folds of her dress that she took the vial which held it?"

Genevieve miserably shook her head.

Mr. Gryce looked troubled; he hesitated a little, then suggested kindly, "You saw her carry it to her lips?"

Genevieve faintly acquiesced.

"And did you see where she took it from?"

"I can not answer."

Dr. Cameron strode one step and stood beside his wife.

"Why can not you answer?" he asked gently.

"Because——" she felt for a chair and sat down. "Because you will not believe what I say."

"I will not believe what you say?"

She turned her eyes, which had been fixed upon vacancy, on his face. There was unfathomable love in them, but there was unfathomable despair also.

"I think you would," said she, "and yet it is very incredible."

"The true things are often the incredible," observed he.

She smiled, but in a hopeless sort of way, and in an altered tone, murmured:

"Very well, then, she got it out of a box."

"A box she carried?"

"No; one she found in the room."

Dr. Cameron stared; so did the detective. Genevieve sat and shivered silently.

"Took a vial containing prussic acid from a box she found in the room?"

"Yes."

"And how came prussic acid to be in your room, Mrs. Cameron?"

It was a question for which she seemingly had no reply. Though she opened her lips, no words issued from them, and she sat the image of shame and despair. The doctor, struck aghast, started impetuously forward, and would have spoken himself but that the detective forestalled him.

"You do not think I have the right to ask that question," he remarked. "Well, I withdraw it and will simply inquire what sort of box it was which held this vial, and where in the room it was kept?"

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

One Pretty Girl Finds Nature a Most Efficient Teacher

"ONCE upon a time," began Laura Hamilton, more reminiscently than her very evident youthfulness would seem to permit, "I owned a little white poodle—a cross between a Maltese and a French poodle. He had wonderful long silky hair, and we used to keep it in order by treating it with oil of cocoanut. Now, a few years ago my hair, which was very long, suddenly began to come out a bit—to thin at the ends and to show a tendency to acquaintance with an up-to-then stranger, dandruff. First I worried, then I vainly consulted a specialist or two, and then I thought of doggie."

Oil of Cocoanut.

"Sermons in stones—and beauty hints in the silken coat of a Franco-Maltese poodle," thought Miss Interviewer, who was sitting in the wings of the Winter Garden in New York talking to Miss Hamilton, and glimpsing bits of the wonderful marchings and flings and dancings going on out of wonderful New Wynburn's wonderful Capital Steps. And the three "wonderfuls" in that sentence are none too many.

"I thought of doggie," went on my pretty little brown-haired neighbor, "and I invested in 10 cents' worth of oil of cocoanut. And it is good for good hair and so kind to poor hair. Use it every other night—moisten the finger tips with it, and rub the oil well into the scalp. It won't make the hair greasy or oily looking—but it will give it a natural gloss and luster. Shampoo the hair once a week and brush it a hundred strokes every day. Part it down the middle from crown to the nape of the neck; bring the two heavy strands over the shoulders and brush each section fifty times with a long sweeping motion that swings from the scalp to the very ends of the hair. Plentiful glossy hair is sure to result."

"And then we do not take our glowing, abundant tresses and torture them with hot irons, do we?" I asked.

"We do not," replied Miss Hamilton. "We trust the natural gloss and add a little training as to graceful curves and scallops, so we may look as well as possible—and we don't beautify ourselves at the cost of our hair.

Give It a Chance.

"If you are trying to be attractive," she went on earnestly, "do not make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others. Give everything a chance. Let me see—I start by trying to keep calm and cool and well and rested. My first rule is to avoid restaurants at night. After the theater, instead of going into a restaurant, with its heavy air and heavy glare of artificial light, I motor out into the pure, clean country.

"An hour under the stars every night—an hour with the cool wind blowing on my face and the pure, clean, unused air of night blowing the cobwebs out of my brain—and I go home to restful, dreamless sleep. Then I wake up ready to start the day with about ten minutes of exercise.

"First I lie flat on my bed and stretch my arms out straight, and take a deep, lung-filling breath; then I exhale that breath, dropping my arms to my sides the while, and as I fill my lungs and chest again I raise my arms at right angles to my body again.

"Next I hop out of bed and take these two exercises by the open window. Grasp a straight chair by the rear legs, just midway betwen the base and the first rung, and learn to elevate the chair straight out and above your head, taking deep breaths while you do it. Ten times for each exercise is the correct amount. The last exercise sounds simple, but it fills out and rounds the chest and helps you maintain an erect carriage. Place the finger tips together above the head and far enough in front so you can just see them, and then inflate and empty the lungs ten times.

Your Morning Swim.

"Now take your morning swim; wash your face in clear, hot water, and without soap; dash a bit of witch hazel across your face and rinse in cold water; dress in pretty, simple clothes, and eat a simple breakfast, and you are all ready for a happy, useful day, with every part of your body in trim and ready to meet the demands of the hours to come."

And then, ever ready to meet the demands of the hour or moment, Miss Hamilton tripped across the stage to add her own glowing young personality to the glowing ensemble of "The Passing Show of 1913."

LILIAN LAUFFERTY.

"If you are trying to be attractive, don't make one part of the general scheme play Cinderella to the others."

This is one of the maxims of Miss Laura Hamilton, based on her own experience.

"As to how?"

"Seems the heirs got more than the lawyers."

Harry gave a doubtful assent.

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reasons to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

TELL HER WHAT YOU HAVE TOLD ME.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had been keeping company with a young girl for about four years. We were to be married last month, but about three months ago we had a little quarrel over a foolish thing I had said to her, which she took up in a wrong way. The quarrel started when I wanted to kiss her after an enjoyable evening before I left her, but she objected and I got real angry. Then I passed the remark that started the quarrel. Kindly let me know how I can regain her love, as I have suffered enough. HARRY "B."

Apologize and make your apology humble and sincere.

I can't believe that a girl would refuse to kiss her betrothed lover good-night because of a whim. You must have done more to offend her than you tell, and must make your apology fit your crime, and your conduct exemplary after she forgives you.

YOU TALK LIKE A MAN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl 21 years of age and I am 19 and have a good position and am able to take care of a wife. She loves me and I love her, so do you think I am too young to be in love, as I am thinking of making her my wife? So I would like your advice, as she is always speaking of marriage. ANXIOUS.

You are not too young to be in love, but 19 is rather young for a man to marry. You say you are in position to support her, which would indicate that you are older than your years, and are a good deal of a man after all.

But why not wait just two years? Believe me, the time will go rapidly and you will never regret it.

WRITE HIM A NOTE.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 19 and have been keeping company with a young man a year older than myself for a year and three months. Just because I sent a card to his friend I think he is angry at me. I did not mean any harm. Kindly let me know what I should do to try to make up with him, as I love him dearly. J. K.

I do not like to suggest that a girl apologize when she has done no wrong, for the reason that once humble, the man tries to keep her so. But you have been sweethearts so long, and love is too precious to risk for pride's sake, so write him a little note of explanation. I hope he will be man enough to love you all the more because of this proof of your affection.

LET HER KNOW THE TRUTH.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a poor man and have been keeping company with a young lady for the last couple of months. Would it be proper for me to give her up, after accepting a diamond pin from her at Christmas time? I am willing to give the pin back as I do not care for her. P. W.

I am sorry for the girl, for such humiliation leaves a scar, but I would be more sorry for her if you married her without love in your heart.

Tell her you no longer love her, and be manly about it. And, always, till the day of your death, think and speak well of her.

I think it would be better to return the pin.

I AM AFRAID NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a Cuban lady and I am sure that my love is reciprocated. My many friends embarrass me quite a good deal by claiming that she is a negress. Do you think if I should marry her I could be happy with her? I am thinking seriously of proposing. GEORGE S.

My fear that the step would be fatal is based on your anxiety. Were your love of the right sort, it would be impossible for your friends to embarrass you, and their doubts would only strengthen your resolution to marry the girl. Think this over seriously. I want you to be happy, but you must not marry a girl only to break her heart by being ashamed of her.

CALL AT HOME.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young lady, but she does not answer my letters. How can I meet her and tell her of my love? RALPH.

Perhaps she has never received them. Call at her home and learn your fate from her own lips. It may require courage, but boldness in a lover is a trait which all girls admire.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT would appear to those who have noted the great number and variety of women's clubs that woman can have no longing that will not find a society organized for the express purpose of its gratification.

If she aspires to project her spiritual insight into the occult or to squelch that worm of the dust called Man, or to get bacon at cheaper prices, she has only to join a club, and such a desired end, if not attained, is at least set in motion.

But that every longing is not met is proven through the organization by Daysey Mayme Appleton of a society for which the heart of every woman has unconsciously yearned. And the greater the number of her friends, the greater her yearning.

Daysey Mayme had had the parlors of her home made hideous by the gifts of loving friends for years, but not until she received a water color of a yellow lamb on a cerise field with a purple shepherdess did she decide to rebel. The result of that rebellion was the recent launching of a club called The Secret Society of Breakers.

No woman need admit she belongs to such a society. Such an admission would cause the estrangement of generous friends and result in charges of lack of appreciation of their gifts.

"The members," explained Daysey Mayme, "are known to me and report to me for assignment, and our method of procedure is this:

"A woman receives a fish platter on which is painted Jonah inside the whale or some other appetizing marine scene and the donor expects it to be placed on the plate rail of the dining room.

"The recipient appeals to me, and I deputize one of the active workers of our order to make a social call at her home. The active worker sees the platter, she is enraptured with it, she asks to hold it, she lets it fall, and it breaks into a hundred pieces.

"She is overcome with remorse, of course, which I appease by paying for her work as soon as it is reported that the plate is beyond mending.

"Our organization is only two weeks old, but in that time members have made calls on other members afflicted with generous friends, and have carelessly dropped and broken seventeen goldfish globes, nine lamps, six vases and fourteen china plaques, and have borrowed four oil paintings and eleven sofa cushions for the purpose of copying, which they have lost on the way home.

"The Secret Society of Breakers will appeal to every woman who has kind and generous friends. In future no woman need go through life with her love for an artistic home blighted by purple and blue vases against her green wall paper or pink camels worked on a yellow sofa cushion.

"All she need do will be to drop a note to me."

THE JUDGE WAS WILLING TO HELP OUT, ANYWAY

PITCHER CAVET FATED TO LOSE HIS RIGHT EYE

TRUE baseball fans, no matter how much they want to see Atlanta beat Mobile in the approaching series here, will regret to learn that the Gulls will be minus the services of their prize southpaw, Pug Cavet. And it will be with deeper regret they learn that Pug probably has pitched his last game.

Members of the Memphis club said yesterday that Cavet's right eye, which has troubled him from childhood, had been getting steadily worse with some malady that would probably necessitate its removal in order to save the other eye and not render the lanky pitcher totally blind.

Specialists are treating Cavet, but hold out little hope of saving the eye. It would be a mechanical impossibility for a one-eyed man to play baseball successfully, owing to the extreme necessity of judging distance at all times—a feat accomplished unconsciously by the eyes themselves, using the distance between them as the base of a triangle, with the object on which they are focused as the point.

Should Cavet be forced to retire the game will lose a most promising young pitcher and one who was practically certain of making good in the Big Show.

Come On, Cracker Fans, Let's Beat Out Birmingham

We MUST Prove That Atlanta Is the Best Baseball City in the South by Turning Out Biggest Yearly Attendance.

"Now is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of their ball club."

You remember the old racing "speed sentence," the first one everybody learns to pick out on a typewriter?

Well, it says "party" and omits the reference to baseball fans.

But the exigencies of the situation in Atlanta seem to warrant a little editing of the famous old sentence.

Over in Birmingham they are going after two things, both of which now are held and much prized in Atlanta.

One is the reputation of being the Best Baseball Town in the Southern League.

The other is the attendance record for a season's play.

ATLANTA HOLDS THE PRESENT RECORD—196,000.

And that is what makes Atlanta the best baseball town in the circuit. That is, it is one of the things. There are others too numerous to mention just now.

Anyway, Birmingham, with a club that is fighting to stay out of the second division, is near breaking the attendance record this year.

And Birmingham is a couple of jumps ahead of Atlanta, right now—and Atlanta with a ball club making a great little fight for the pennant, and almost sure to land as high as second place, anyway.

The Atlanta merchants and business men are taking up the boastful challenge from Slagville. It doesn't listen good to them, this hearing that another town is the best town in the Southern League.

And so, boys, here's a little tip:

Requests for the afternoon off, beginning to-day and lasting until the afternoon of September 6, will be given preferred attention in Atlanta business and mercantile offices—

PROVIDED—

The petitioner adds that he WANTS TO GO TO THE BALL GAME!

Try it and see.

The following, just for example, have asserted openly that they will grant afternoons off to just as many employees as they can possibly spare, from now until the end of the season—to go to the ball game!

W. E. Chapin Insurance Company, Royal Insurance Company, Georgia Railway and Power Company, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, Third National Bank, V. H. Kreigshaber & Son, and others who are adding their prestige to Atlanta's battle to retain the title of the "Best Ball Town in the Southern League."

Try it and see.

TRY IT TO-DAY.

To-day's a mighty good time, what with it being the grocers' and butchers' half holiday, and the date of the baseball track meet of the Memphis and Atlanta clubs, starting at 3 o'clock, with five events for which Atlanta merchants have offered prizes.

Sports and Such

EVERS IS HAPPY.

"I have no complaints to make,"
Said Evers to a fan,
"But the umps are out to break
And slough me if they can.
"The Giants' luck still blocks me;
My team is full of kinks;
And Bresnahan still knocks me,
And Murphy is a jinx!"

* * *

A BALL PLAYER HAS BEEN fined $10 for calling Umpire Bill Klem, a catfish. And yet—what should he have called him?

* * *

PRESIDENT EBBETS IS SIGNing up a few college men, but not with the idea that they will assist in the preparation of forthcoming dedication speeches. These will still be the old Ebbets brand.

* * *

MANAGER MILLER HUGGINS is going to be asked to resign because he has been finding fault with the playing of the Cardinals. We don't wonder. Hanging is too good for him.

* * *

* * *

PELKY, BY THE WAY, retired from the ring on that occasion, but only in the Pickwickian or Buffalo Bill sense.

* * *

IF IT WERE NOT FOR THE attitude of the magnates on gambling, we would be inclined to believe that Connie Mack's daily announcement of casualties among the Athletics might be a sign that he is laying back for bets.

* * *

MR. SNODGRASS.

(World's Series, 1912.)
Me, oh my!
Here's a fly!
I'll nail it with a half a try.
There it goes—
On my toes!
The gang will break my nose!

* * *

YOU HAVE TO ENVY MR. Chance his optimism. After losing two games to the Browns in one day, he still thinks the Yankees are not the worst team in the league.

* * *

MR. CHANCE, THE MANAGER, and Mr. Touchard, the tennis player, each understands how the other feels. Both lay all of their troubles to foot-faults.

* * *

IT'S FUNNY THAT ball players succeed in annoying Hank O'Day. You'd think that any man who had managed the Cincinnati team would be immune.

Kid Jinx Gets Kick in Ribs and Crackers Win Two Games in One Day

ZOWIE! SOME HITTING!! 29 SWATS FOR 20 RUNS

By O. B. Keeler.

TRULY it has been said, It's a Long Worm that has no turning.

The Crackers turned yesterday and ripped off a couple of games, the same being all two ends of a doubleheader—something that hasn't happened in weeks and weeks. Scores, 12 to 2 and 8 to 0.

Memphis was the rippee, of course. But that isn't the point. This being supposed to be a feature narrative, a feature must be found. You can get the news from the Box Score.

* * *

FEATURE No. 1—Winning both games of a two-ply matinee.

Feature No. 2—The method of winning same.

* * *

OF course, there was extremely airtight pitching, for one thing. But that would have won with a good deal less than a total of 29 hits and 20 runs in fifteen innings.

That might be construed into piling it on. And when it comes to prodigality, the original P. S. had nothing whatever on Bill Smith's hands, battering away at the reeling Turtles yesterday afternoon.

* * *

FOR example, there was one inning in the first game—the seventh—when six hits were arranged carefully in a row, one after another. Then an error was inserted, and two more hits added, the total productiveness being limited to five runs only by scandalous performances on the bases.

* * *

IN another round of the same encounter, four hits produced four runs, but the Turtles kicked in with three boots, which naturally aided.

Everybody on the Cracker club took at least one safe whack while the whacking was good. Long, Smith and Bisland took three apiece, and Agler Welchonce, Nixon and Chapman were content with two each. Nixon scored three runs and made himself otherwise obnoxious to the enemy.

* * *

WALLY SMITH got the long hit of the day, a triple that rolled nearly to the score board. He duplicated the feat in the second game, but the ground was heavy, which afflicted Mr. Smith's feet, and he was out at third after a nice gooey slide.

Thompson pitched a one-hit affair in the six innings the Turtles batted in the second game, while Doc Newton discovered a lot more about the law of gravitation by watching a shower of base-hits dropping in various parts of the field.

* * *

AMONG the other legitimate headliners might be mentioned Jack Love's glove-hand stab of a line drive from Bisland's bat; Schweitzer's long running catch of Smith's fly; Agler's stab of Bisland's assist on Shanley; Nixon's great running catch of Abstein's foul fly, and Baerwald's debate with Umps Stockdale in the first inning of the first game.

Baerwald spoke with fervor, but lost the decision. Also, he was canned from the game.

* * *

ONE more feature, because it's one you don't see oftener than once in an ordinary lifetime.

In the fourth inning of the first game, Bisland hit a sharp grounder to Abstein at first. Abby came in to threaten Smith, who was on third, and Bizzy stopped right in front of him. Abstein swung at him with the ball, Bizzy ducked right to the ground, dodged under the big fellow's wing and beat it to first.

He was safe—and he hadn't run out of the line, either.

* * *

REGULAR daily feature: Mobile won.

Bearing on the death grapple: We just got back the half-game we lost the day before, when the Gulls won while we got into a dogfall.

Prospects for first place: Chilly.

* * *

OH, yes—it rained, too.

Another one of those inhuman showers that appear to contradict the adage that the rain falls alike on the just and the unjust.

This particular rain fell mostly on the ball park. The sun was shining everywhere else, as on the celebrated occasion when Mr. Casey was at the bat. But it certainly did rain between games.

At that, most of the flood disappeared from the earth by the time Bill Smith did the dove act, and the second game got its 5 1-2 innings played in less than an hour, in spite of the sloppiness and the terrific hitting of the Crackers.

McLoughlin Retains His Tennis Title

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—The lawn tennis championship record for 1913 was practically completed on the Casino Grand court when Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, successfully defended his own title in singles and maintained the Pacific Coast supremacy by defeating R. Norris Williams, second, of Philadelphia, in the finals of the all-comers tournament, in a well-fought four-set match. The scores 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

As McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy, of Los Angeles, won their second championship in doubles last week and Miss Mary Browne, of Los Angeles, is still the women's title holder, the ascendancy of California in the principal departments of tennis is assured for another year.

TEX RICHARDS SWEEPS CARD IN FINE RACES

TEX RICHARDS "came back" last night at the Motordrome. He won every heat in which he started, making the biggest clean-up of the season. Number "23," Richards' famous "boat," returned from the factory yesterday morning, after a thorough overhauling, and it was just bubbling over with speed.

The races last night were exceptionally good. While the time in some of the heats was not as fast as expected, yet the finishes were all close and exceptionally exciting.

The feature event was the William L. Peel Sweepstakes. Colonel Peel was scheduled to start this event, but on account of illness in his family he was unable to be on the job.

Richards won the Southern championship and the Peel Sweepstakes. Luther ran second in both events, riding fine races, but his machine just didn't have the necessary speed to nose out Tex.

Here are the results:

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONSHIP.
(One-mile heats; 2 miles final; 25 points for first; 15 points for second and 5 for third.)

First Heat—Henry Lewis, first; Harry Glenn, second. Time, 44 2-5.

Second Heat—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second. Time, 42 1-5.

Final—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 1:26.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(Three heats, 1, 2 and 3 miles, best 2 out of 3 heats.)

First Heat (1 mile)—Won by Georges Renel. Time, 44.

Second Heat (4 miles)—Won by Morty Graves. Time, 1:25.

Third Heat (3 miles)—Won by Morty Graves. Time, 2:11 2-5.

W. L. PEEL SWEEPSTAKES.
(French point system; 10 for first, 6 for second, 3 for third; three heats, 3, 4 and 5 miles.)

First Heat (3 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 2:08 3-5.

Second Heat (4 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Henry Lewis, third. Time, 2:55.

Third Heat (5 miles)—Wilmer Richards, first; Freddie Luther, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 3:43.

Points—Richards, 30; Luther, 18; Glenn, 6; Lewis, 3.

VARDON BREAKS RECORDS ON CLEVELAND GOLF COURSE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 27.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, English professional golfers, touring the United States, at the Mayfield club yesterday defeated Joe K. Bole, city champion of Cleveland, and Eben M. Byers, of Pittsburg, 5 up in a 36-hole match.

In defeating Byers and Bole, Vardon broke the Mayfield course record, both for 18 and 36 holes. In the morning round he lowered the 18-hole record held by Byers, from 72 to 67. In the afternoon he beat his own newly established record with 66, giving him 135 for 36 holes.

The old 36-hole record was 155. In the afternoon round Vardon's partner, Ray, bettered the former 18-hole course record, doing it in 71. John D. Rockefeller was an enthusiastic spectator.

MERCER'S FOOTBALL TEAM MUST REPORT SEPTEMBER 5

KRAZY KAT — We Don't Blame Ignatz for Hurling the Brick

TRACK MEET IS ON TO-DAY AT PONCE DE LEON

TO-DAY'S the day—Field Day, you know.

Get out to Ponce DeLeon at 3 o'clock, or a shade earlier, and kill two guineas with one dornick—see the Atlanta and Memphis players in a track meet, and hand one to that cocky Birmingham, which has an idea of being a better baseball town than Atlanta.

The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock, unless the special 100-yard dash, a challenge event between Doc Seabough and Joe Dunn, should not be finished by that time.

Anyway, Elliott Dent will pitch, and we may draw Rube Kissinger as official pest for the Turtles.

But the field sports start at 3 o'clock, and there will be at least five events: 100-yard dash, circling the bases, distance throwing, fungo hitting, and a sack race.

Another special challenge event is the 100-yard race between Jack Love and Bill Abstein, of the Turtles. Bill declined to bet on the result, saying he was ashamed to. But he has bound himself to buy Jack a hat, to cost not less than $5, if Jack can beat him.

Jack thinks that is fair enough.

Tight Golf Battles at East Lake

D. & F. Play Reaches 2d Round

MATCH play in the Davis & Freeman trophy golf tournament at East Lake began yesterday afternoon, and before play ceased for darkness the first round had been finished in all flights and several matches in the second round had been disposed of.

The feature match in the first flight was that between H. Block and R. L. Jones, won by the former, 1 up, in a close and exciting round. The second flight turned up closer matches, on the average, than the first flight, and in two instances extra holes were necessary to determine the winner. In one, O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham in 19 holes, and in the other C. J. Haiditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole.

The lengthened holes, achieved by resetting the teeing grounds, made higher scores general, but the contestants were much pleased at the increased "sportiness" of the celebrated A. A. C. course.

Results yesterday:

First Flight.

First Round—W. R. Tichenor defeated R. J. Norris, 6 up and 5 to play; F. B. Fay defeated J. Q. Burton, 4 up and 2 to play; C. V. Rainwater defeated J. B. Pollard, 7 up and 5 to play; R. G. Blanton defeated D. C. Root, 1 up; J. A. Ellen defeated H. P. D. Comee by default; H. Block defeated R. L. Jones 1 up; Dowdle Brown defeated Perry Adair, 5 up and 3 to play; George Adair defeated S. Hard, 4 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—J. A. Ellen defeated H. Block, 3 up and 2 to play; Dowdle Brown defeated George Adair, 6 up and 4 to play.

Second Flight.

First Round—O. B. Osbourne defeated William Markham at the 19th hole; H. C. Moore defeated J. D. Eley, 3 up and 2 to play; J. C. Payne defeated E. D. Duncan, 2 up and 1 to play; J. B. Martin defeated A. A. Doonan, 1 up; C. E. Rose defeated J. W. Pearce, 4 up and 2 to play; J. D. Darling defeated H. R. Calet, 3 up and 2 to play; C. J. Halditch defeated C. M. Sciple at the 21st hole; W. H. Glenn defeated P. A. Wright, 3 up and 2 to play.

Second Round—C. E. Rose defeated J. B. Martin, 5 up and 3 to play.

Third Flight.

First Round—C. Donaldson defeated W. F. Upshaw, 6 up and 4 to play; J. E. Mellet defeated L. M. Crichton, 4 up and 3 to play; W. P. Hazelwood defeated Scott Hudson, 5 up and 4 to play; W. E. Warren defeated T. S. Ingram, 1 up; F. B. Meador defeated Will Soul, 7 up and 5 to play; L. D. Scott defeated K. R. Cobb, 4 up and 3 to play.

Fourth Flight.

First Round—H. L. Dix defeated W. C. Spiker, 7 up and 6 to play; R. I. Gresham defeated G. N. Spring at the 20th hole; B. L. Craig defeated E. G. Beaudy, 6 up and 5 to play; G. L. Simpson defeated G. B. Allen, 1 up.

Pinch Hit by Reed, Atlanta Boy, Won For the Phillies

Milton Reed, of Atlanta, broke into the limelight in Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, when he came to bat in the pinch for the Phillies against the Cardinals and settled matters in favor of his club with a smashing hit, the Phillies winning, 6 to 5.

Pinch hitters were in evidence all through the game. In the seventh inning St. Louis led, 5 to 1. In that round Miller and Byrne delivered, Paskert—formerly a Cracker player—came through in the eighth, and then Reed finished it up in the ninth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—William McCabe, one of the fastest semi-professional players in Chicago, has been signed by the Washington Americans. McCabe is at home at second, third and shortstop. He is 20 years old.

Savannah Indians Challenge Crackers For Special Series

Word comes from the direction of Savannah that Perry Lipe's Indians, pennant winners in the Sally League, are earnestly desirous of playing a post-season series with the Crackers, following the last game of the Southern League season, September 6.

It seems the Indians, feeling pretty cocky over their own achievements of this year, and recalling the licking handed the Crackers by Chattanooga on a former occasion, when Atlanta consented to meet a smaller league club, are to be the challengers.

Manager Smith said this morning he was going to take the matter up with the directors of the local club to-day and would soon know if the series could be arranged.

Third Base Job Is a Cinch One

Art Hofman Says So, Anyway

ARTIE HOFMAN, the one-time great utility player on the old Cub machine, more lately a Pirate gardener, and still more recently a man of all work for the Vols, having performed creditably in every infield position, except shortfield, in the two months he has been with that club, thinks the third base job is the easiest on a team.

Some time ago Artie gave the last cushion the "once over" and passed it up as "nuts to crack for any ordinary ball player," to use his own expression. For giving the big laugh to third base, Artie is aware that the woods are full of ball players and sport scribes who will be howling to have him locked in the room so recently vacated by Harry Thaw. But the one-time Cub has spent considerable time cavorting around the hot corner and has his own convictions.

Here's the way Artie has it all doped out:

"This third base, instead of being the hardest position in the infield, in my opinion is the easiest. Figure how many batters ever reach first base in a game. Still less see second and by the time you get over to third, not many get that far. How many games do you read of in which it says: 'Only one man got as far as second?' Not all of them, of course, but it happens most every day, in some league.

"I guess I've seen a bunch of ball games in my time, and in lots of them the third baseman didn't get his hands on the ball but three or four times. There are mighty few 'inside hitters' in the game to-day, and where they get all this stuff about third base being the hardest position on the infield is 'by me.' What about all those ugly hops the shortstop and second baseman have to handle, to say nothing of the low and wide heaves to first—and I ought to know, because I have been in all those places myself.

"The only time a third baseman is really in trouble is when first and second are occupied, with nobody down. That's something else again, for the batter is almost certain to bunt. But if he has a smart pitcher and a clever first baseman there is a chance that all he has to do is stay on the bag and take the throw for a force play."

UNIVERSITY DROPS FOOTBALL.

LANCASTER, PA., Aug. 27.—Having been notified that Susquehanna University, of Selinsgrove, has abandoned its football schedule for the coming season, which included a game in Lancaster on September 27, with Franklin and Marshall College, the athletic authorities of the latter institution have arranged for the Pennsylvania Military College, of Chester, to fill that date.

"We'll Accomplish the Miracle of Modern Baseball," Says Rube Marquard

GIANTS BENT ON RECORD OF 4 STRAIGHT FLAGS

By Rube Marquard

IF we Giants justify our belief in ability to win a third consecutive pennant, Manager McGraw will be in a position next year to accomplish the miracle of modern diamond history—four flags in a row.

Looking back through history we find that few clubs have maintained winning consistently for more than two successive years. The Cubs, uncer Frank Chance, were a wonderful collection of brains and playing skill. They reeled off three straight championships and came back for a fourth after dropping behind Pittsburg in 1909. Throughout the five campaigns practically the same team had remained intact. When it broke, it split wide open, as evidenced this year.

Jimmy Collins, old Boston American, went to smithereens after two successful campaigns in 1903 and 1904. The Giants won easy races in 1904 and 1905. I have often heard McGraw say that he was never so sure of a pennant as in 1906, when injury and sickness wrecked what appeared a sure-fire third straight win. Yet, the bulwarks of the old-time Giants had crumbled from age. McGraw came out of the wreck with an aggregation of entirely new blood.

I have been told that McGraw's experience of 1906 was responsible for many of his most successful methods now employed. He determined never again to be caught without a reserve force strong enough to plug any emergency gap. He realized the importance of speed on attack. Speed and youth usually travel hand in hand.

With the possible exception of the Athletics no team of modern times has remained so well fortified against the future, at the close of three successive campaigns as McGraw's crew. The Athletics, through sheer overconfidence, overlooked a great chance for a third straight pennant last year.

Connie Mack has a grand team of youth and ability that is likely to last for a number of campaigns to come. Still I do not believe that Connie Mack to-day boasts the strength of McGraw.

I am confident that the Giants will beat the Athletics this year, if these old rivals clash in the world's series. Outside the batteries, the teams are about as evenly matched as could be imagined.

We have far the better balanced batteries. Meyers and McLean for all-round efficiency and hitting ability will outshine Lapp and Schang. Schang, of course, is far speedier than either of New York's celebrated backstops.

Our club has all the call on pitchers, though. Bender and Plank, the great mainstays of the Athletics, have both been overworked, and are not likely to have an opportunity to rest up for the season. Jack Coombs is strictly out of it, they tell me.

Mack is not likely to stake his chances on young pitchers who have been very erratic. Two overworked veterans will have to stand the attack of four or five pitchers who have shown wonderful pitching consistency throughout the season.

FODDER FOR FANS

Every team in the second division in the National League lost yesterday, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago winning.

* * *

As a result of victories by the Pirates and Cubs both teams are still tied for third place in the National League.

* * *

The New York Yankees have bade farewell to the West this season, after dropping three out of four games to the Naps.

* * *

* * *

"Big pitchers" is now the standing order to big league scouts. The magnates have found the big men can stand more work than the little ones.

* * *

"Babe" Adams, the Pirates' twirler, not only pitched a shutout game against the Braves, but got a two-bagger as well.

* * *

Bobby Byrne, the former Pirate, got into the game for the Phillies Tuesday, playing third base. He got a run and a hit.

* * *

Linn Scroggins, a southpaw recruit, started for the White Sox, but proved easy picking for the Senators, who beat Chicago 5 to 3.

* * *

"Josh" Billings, catcher for the Quincy, Ill., team in the Three I League, has been secured by the Clevelands.

* * *

Pitcher George Davis, of the Rochester, N. Y., team in the International League, has been secured by the Braves. Davis was formerly with the New York Yankees.

* * *

Triples by Archer and Saier beat the Dodgers.

MULFORD'S PUEGOT CAR OUT OF BIG RACE

ELGIN, ILL., Aug. 27.—Automobile racing fans were handed a disappointment to-day when the announcement was made that Ralph Mulford was unable to get his Puegot car ready for Saturday's race here. Mulford will drive a Mason on both days of the race meet.

The Puegot which Mulford was to drive was piloted to first place by Jules Goux at Indianapolis this year in the 500-mile international sweepstakes race.

The fastest practice lap on the 8 1-2-mile course was credited to Joe Dawson, winner of the 1912 500-mile race at Indianapolis. He sent his Marmon around the course in 7 minutes and 13 seconds. Spencer Wishart drove the distance in his Mercer five seconds slower than Dawson.

PLAYER BREAKS JAW.

EVANSVILLE, IND., Aug. 27.—Punch Knoll, of the Evansville Central League, broke his jaw yesterday afternoon during the game played here with Fort Wayne.

LANGFORD STOPS FLINN IN FOUR ROUNDS AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Sam Langford scored a knockout over "Porky" Flinn in four rounds at the Atlas Athletic Association last night. Ten seconds before the bell sounded in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a twelve-round bout, a right jab to the jaw landed and Flinn went down for the count.

It was Langford's first bout since his return from Australia. He received a surprise in the first round when Flinn with a smashing left sent him to the mat.

EDWARDS FANS FOURTEEN.

ROYSTON, GA., Aug. 27.—In the second of the series with Elberton, Royston yesterday won by a score of 7 to 0. The features of the game was the heavy hitting of the Royston team and the superb pitching of Edwards, who mowed fourteen men and gave up two hits. Elberton used three pitchers.

MORE GAMES FOR LAGRANGE.

LAGRANGE, GA., Aug. 27.—Not satisfied with a full season of regular league baseball the LaGrange fans are planning to have baseball games every week until October 1. The initial game of a five-game series to decide the town championship was played to-day, resulting in a score of 13 to 2 in favor of the Northwest club against the Southeast club.

RINGSIDE NEWS

George "Knockout" Brown and Jack Dillon will go through with their ten-round go at Terre Haute, Ind., on Labor Day. Tommy Walsh, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that George is getting in great shape for the mill. This will be the fourth meeting between the rival middleweights.

* * *

Frank Madoia, the American lightweight, who is in Paris, writes that he is tired of traveling in Europe and will be home any day. Maddie tells of several of his experiences. He was forced to box three men in two weeks, going twenty rounds in one, and losing by the decision route.

* * *

Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight, is back in the Missouri city from his trip to Los Angeles. Trendall left for the coast about a month ago to get a match with Leach Cross, but Matty Baldwin beat him to the big plum. Harry refused to take on any of the second-raters, so left for home.

* * *

The death of "Bull" Young has put the boxing game on the coast in a bad light. It will probably be some time before the heavyweights don the padded mitts out West again.

* * *

Sam McVey, who claims Paris as his home, has returned to that city from Australia, and the chances are that a twenty-round bout may be arranged between him and Jack Johnson. McVey is a big favorite with the Parisians and a bout between him and Johnson would draw a record house.

* * *

Young Eppy will meet Matty McCue in Racine, Wis., instead of Pittsburg on Labor Day. The match, which had been hanging fire for a week, was clinched yesterday. The two will weigh in at 122 pounds.

* * *

Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo lightweight, is after a match with Tommy Murphy. Duffy has wired Jim Coffroth asking for the Admission Day date with the Harlem boy.

LEW HARDAGE TO COACH MERCER FOOTBALL TEAM

MACON, GA., Aug. 27.—Lew Hardage, former Vanderbilt football star, has signed to coach the Mercer University eleven during the coming season. Acting President Sellers makes the announcement. Hardage succeeds Dr. C. C. Stroud, who has accepted the physical directorship of Louisiana State University.

HAUSER OUT FOR THE SEASON.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Arnold Hauser, the St. Louis shortstop, feels confident he will recover the full use of his injured leg for next season, but Manager Huggins says he won't be able to play any this year.

PITCHER ROSE TO YANKEES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Manager Frank Chance announced last night the purchase of Pitcher Rose, of the Houston (Texas) League club. Rose, it was announced, would report September 10.

Atlanta Athletic Club Talk

Walter DuBard is keen for the basketball season to start. He says that the club team will be much stronger this season than it was last fall.

* * *

"Pie" Weaver is expected back from a short vacation to-day. "Pie" is confident of earning a regular berth on the basketball team this fall.

* * *

Coach Joe Bean has just announced that the training table for the basketballers will start October 15.

* * *

The golf "bugs" still are talking about the "80" that Tick Tichenor turned in last Saturday. It was a remarkable score inasmuch as the "far-away" driving tees now are being used.

* * *

Why not a golf match this fall between the Athletic Club and the Capital City Club players? The players of the clubs should meet on the links in a tournament at least once a year.

* * *

The handball regulars are at it every day, preferably about noon. There usually is a terrific cut-throat match on among three celebrated players who shall be nameless for the present, and they are getting accustomed to a "gallery."

* * *

Another regular feature is 'Gene Kelley. 'Gene is training for a person named Smith, and he is not loafing on the job. He also is doing some wrestling, but it is not understood that he is plotting any roughhouse tactics for the prospective engagement.

* * *

'Gene is not lonely in his training. The person named Smith is to be found exploding the W. & D. pellets about the same time. Carleton's training fancies are more inclusive. He usually is to be found in a foursome, while 'Gene takes it out on some single partner.

* * *

Entrants are filing their names with the club bulletin board for the Cotton States Tennis Championships, to be played the week of September 8 on the East Lake clay courts. Club members find that a convenient method of entering. Out of town contestants are sending their names to Carleton Y. Smith, 608 Walton Building. The list is growing daily.

YOUNG SAYLOR IS OUT LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27.—Young Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, who has placed himself under the wing of Ray Bronson, is most anxious to get a crack at either Freddie Welsh or Willie Ritchie, and has offered to take the place of Welsh against the champion at Vancouver on Labor Day.

Saylor recently defeated Mickey McIntyre at Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, giving away 10 pounds in weight. He is a fine young lightweight, having met most of the stars of that class.

TO STAGE POLO TOURNEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—John B. Miller, chairman of the Pacific Coast section of the American Polo Association, plans to stage a world-wide competition during the 1915 exposition in San Francisco. He hopes to construct a magnificent turf polo field within the grounds of the exposition and invite England, India, Hawaii, Argentine Republic, Brazil and Australia, in addition to the American polo ists.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Wide Range Shown In Realty Trades

Great Volume of Deeds on Record. Grant Gets Apartment House. Some Unique Transactions.

An unusually large number of warranty and loan deeds and bonds for title went to record Tuesday, showing good business in the various lines of real estate activity. There were eighteen warranty deeds, nine bonds, eleven loan deeds, and a number of interesting cancellations. Transactions show much activity in residence property and the smaller sized propositions, which most realty men consider as steady as this time last year, if not a bit better.

Real estate dealers are waiting anxiously for the money of the Federal Treasury Department to arrive in Atlanta. The prospect for big crops is also welcomed in realty circles.

Apartment House Listed.

The Livingston, three-story apartment house being erected at the southwest corner of North avenue and Willow street by James Livingston Wright and Sam E. Smith, has been placed with Albert S. Adams, of the B. M. Grant Real Estate and Renting Agency, for renting. This structure contains 32 apartments of three and four rooms, with such modern conveniences as vacuum cleaners, mechanical refrigeration, dumb waiters, etc. The site is the old Calhoun place.

Well-Known Men in Trade.

General Clifford L. Anderson has sold to the Atlanta Banking and Savings Company an undivided one-half interest in the southeast corner of Boulevard and Cottingham avenue for a consideration not made public. General Anderson bought his half interest for $5 cash and gave a $2,000 note due March 30, 1911, at 8 per cent. He bought from P. H. Mell.

Loan Deed Given.

The Berry School, of Rome, has been in another Atlanta transaction. It has taken from John W. Hamer a loan deed for $5,000 on the south side of Auburn avenue, 162 feet west of Piedmont avenue. The paper carries with it the perpetual right to a 6 by 130 foot alley for light and air purposes.

Marble for Office Building.

The Realty Trust Building (also known as the Forsyth Building) will soon have handsome marble slabs on the pillars in the first floor entrance. Workmen were busy Wednesday morning making way for the improvements.

Mortgage Transactions.

A mortgage for $18,000 on the Tabernacle Infirmary and Training School for Nurses to Sydney B. Erlanger, of New York, has been canceled and a mortgage for the same amount given to the Georgia Savings Bank and Trust Company. The property is on Luckie street, 55 feet east of Bartow street, 74 by 130 feet.

LAGRANGE'S FIRST BALE SELLS FOR 12 1-2 CENTS

LA GRANGE, Aug. 27.—The first bale of the crop of 1913 cotton was brought in from the plantation of J. B. Bass, a few miles south of town.

The bale, which weighed 504 pounds and classed as good middling, was bought by the aLGrange Cotton Company for 12½c, and consigned to Denison's mill here, where it will be manufactured into goods at once.

AUGUST SHORTS BADLY SQUEEZED

Bears Hesitate on Coming Holiday, Bureau and Bullish News. Sales Light—Bulls Alive.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—In response to a sharp rise in August at New Orleans that position in New York Cotton Exchange at the opening was 20 points higher, with other positions at a net advance of 4 to 8 points from Tuesday's final. Sentiment was extremely against the market. A good many reports were in circulation, showing deterioration in some parts of the eastern belt; also in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The market, however, lost ground immediately after the opening and prices shaded some 4 to 8 points from the opening.

August failed to maintain the initial gain and dropped 18 points without stopping.

The selling was probably based on a condition report by a prominent local spot interest, placing conditions at 73.8 per cent, against The Commercial-Appeal's estimate of 69.6 per cent. The bearish influence of this and indicated showers in the Western belt was offset by the bullish condition figures of the national ginners' report of 69.5 per cent, being 5 points under the lowest percentage given the crop this season. The ring who played for a reaction yesterday looked short and ran to cover, followed by aggressive buying from strong sources and there was very little for sale. Prices continued to advance, and after the call the entire list had established new high levels for the present upward movement, being 14 to 16 points better than the previous close. August was apparently dormant.

The market during the late forenoon was irregular and nervous with good support in evidence in the soft spots by brokers usually representing trade interests. The volume of business was much smaller and hesitancy in the selling was shown on the part of bears because of the approaching holidays, followed on Tuesday by the Bureau report. Private condition reports were bullish, all showing 10 to 11 points deterioration for the month.

The Texas detail weather showed continued high temperatures and brought in a number of orders on the buying side. The market will doubtless be nervous for the balance of the week and the disposition will probably be to even up over the holidays.

The situation in the Southwest becomes worse daily.

At the close the market was firm with prices at a net advance of 16 to 22 points from the final quotations of Tuesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—Liverpool came in about 4 points lower than due on futures, but rallied in the last hour on the strength of our markets. Spots 3 points higher, sales 5,000 bales. Cables continue to report small business. A very unfavorable report in Texas and Oklahoma is expected by The Journal of Commerce Thursday, which together with the anticipation of a very bullish condition forecast by the National Ginners, prompted fresh and vigorous buying in our markets this morning, causing an advance to 12.08 for October early in the session.

Struggling August shorts endeavoring to buy back their commitments pushed this position out of line with general values and over 1 cent above spot values. The map shows increasing cloudiness in the Western States. Fair in the Central Belt; cloudy with good rains in the Coast districts and the Atlantics; some light showers in Northwest Texas.

Indications are very favorable to cloudy weather and more general rains over Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas in the next three days and unsettled showery weather coming on the General States with continued showery weather in the Atlantics.

The market lost the early advance when the government predictions suggested a change in the weather west, but rallied again later on the strength in New York where general buying from outsiders is reported. Bullish sentiment continues to control the market.

COTTON GOSSIP

The best buying to-day seemed to come from strong sources. The ring played for a reaction yesterday and looked as if they were short this morning and ran to cover. Wilson and Shearson were sealding sellers. Shearson sold Mitchell 7,000 bales of December at 12.05 and then Mitchell turned around and bid for ten thousand more. Norden purchased 5,000 December, while Wilson sold at the outset and kept it up until the closing "gong" sounded.

* * *

Theodore H. Price says: "It now seems altogether probable that cotton will be carried much higher than the facts warrant, and they certainly justify at least 12 cents for new crop deliveries in New York."

* * *

Weld makes the condition of the cron 73.9 per cent, which is considered rather bearish, considering the low percentage of 69.6, given the crop by The Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

* * *

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows increasing cloudiness, and more general rains in the western States and Arkansas within three days, increasing prospects of showery weather also in the central belt.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Last year, before the crop began to move in volume, the rings discounted a moderate yield and a large requirement. Speculative apathy throughout the season was the result. This year the same program has been initiated. Basic conditions, however, are different.

"Last year a great deal of forward business was done early in the season, and the presence of many long hedges proved a bulwark of contract market strength. This year spinners have not been buying ahead in the usual volume and the demand for long hedges has been limited. When speculators began to lift the market under the influence of crop damage reports from the west, hedge sellers in the west supplied the contracts required.

"Thus on the face of the returns the hedge interest is short this year, whereas, at this time last year it was long. Another fact the talent should not overlook is that this year's cotton market starts out after two years of remarkable mill trade activity. But the basic law of commodity market is against it."

* * *

Washington advises that the weekly weather report next week will be issued on Wednesday instead of Tuesday, owing to the publication of the bureau report on September 2 on the condition of the cotton crop as of August 25.

* * *

Clement, Curtis & Co., of Chicago, make cotton condition, 69.4 per cent, against 80.7 last month.

* * *

Forth Worth paper says: "In spite of lack of rain, special agent production says Tarrant County will make a quarter bale to the acre, and with rain in next ten days, many farms will make a half pale to the acre.—Kofler.

CATERPILLARS RUINING COTTON IN DOUGHERTY

ALBANY, Aug. 27.—J. W. Pinson, one of the best-known farmers in Southwest Georgia, who operates a large farm in the Eastern part of Dougherty County, reports finding caterpillers in his cotton.

Mr. Pinson stated that his cotton had deteriorated so much that it would not pay him to fight the pest. The deterioration was caused by the excessive July rains, he said.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—The weather will be unsettled in the North Atlantic States and showers will occur during to-night or Thursday in New England. In the Lake region, the Ohio Valley and the Middle and Southern States east of the Mississippi River, the weather will be fair during the next 36 hours.

The temperature will fall to-night in New England and New York State and will rise slowly to-night and Thursday in the upper Lake region. Temperatures will continue moderately high in the Middle Atlantic States and slightly below the seasonable average in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States.

Forecast.

Forecast till 8 p. m. Thursday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Thursday.

Virginia and North Carolina—Fair to-night and Thursday.

South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi—General fair to-night and Thursday.

Florida—Fair except showers in Northwest portion to-night or Thursday.

Tennessee—Fair to-night and Thursday.

Louisiana and East Texas—Fair in interior; scattered showers on coast to-night or Thursday.

West Texas—Fair to-night and Thursday.

PRICE-CURRENT GRAIN REPORT.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 27.—The drouthy condition in the Southwest have persisted rains thus far being too light to do any good to corn and cotton. Extension of damage has continued. Weather has been excellent in the region of Great Lakes and adjacent States and insures the corn crop.

Weather has been favorable in the Northwest for harvesting, and much of the wheat and oat crop have been gathered in North Dakota and North Minnesota. The total wheat crop in the States of Minnesota, South and North Dakota will probably fall 100,000,000 bushels under last year. This country will probably harvest a total crop of 740,000,000 bushels of wheat in round figures. This suggests a larger export capacity than previous seasons, but there are many holes to fill up in the last year plus the amount of wheat consumed on the farm on account of the failure of corn and partial failure of oats in Kansas, Nebraska and Southern Illinois.

NEWS OF MEXICO MARKET FACTOR

Prices Irregular, Business Dull and Tone Uncertain Early in Day; Heavy Later.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Information regarding the Mexican situation was a factor in the market again to-day. Prices were more irregular, with an extreme dullness and a rather uncertain tone. Steel, Union Pacific and Reading showed small net fractional gains and Amalgamated Copper worked up to 74. New York Central recovered its early loss of ⅜. New Haven gained ⅛. The market was entirely of a professional account. Money loaned at 2¾.

President Wilson's note on the relations between the United States and Mexico caused a heavy tone in the last hour. American Can fell ¾ from the midday level, while Union Pacific lost a clean point from the noon quotation. Reading sold around 160½ for the loss of over 1 point on the day. Steel ranged 'round 63⅛. Southern Pacific suffered little in price, but New York Central dropped through 97 for a loss of ⅛ from noon. Canadian Pacific sold at 219¼, whereas it had sold at 219½ at midday.

The market closed dull. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

Houston, Fible & Co., Kansas City, say: "Hundred degree temperatures prevailing over the Southwest again with no rain. Corn here is beyond injury—it is dead. Presume that hot, dry weather will curtail some corn in Iowa and Illinois. Pastures all that remain here to be damaged. Without rain within the near future there will be no fall pasture and the feeding demand will be that much more. Corn is being shipped to Kansas now and retailed to farmers at 85c a bushel."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: "Wheat—Don't look for much change in prices, although local sentiment is rather bearish.

"Corn—Map shows no rain and high temperatures prevailed again yesterday in the Southwest. We continue to feel friendly to the market advising purchases on all fair setbacks.

"Oats—The course of prices will depend largely on whether the pressure from the increase in offerings from the country is to continue or not."

Education—the First Duty of Government

The Most Important Institutions in the Country Are the Public Schools—the Gymnasiums of Human Brains.

(Copyright, 1913.)

We wish to discuss with our readers in this and in later editions of this newspaper the great and serious question of education.

It is a question as broad as the ocean, and as deep. It is a question so vast that organized discussion of it seems hopeless.

The greatest minds of the world have devoted their powers to the intricate question of development of the human brain, and the problem has been scarcely touched.

The greatest works on education in the history of the world are undoubtedly Plato's "Republic," Spencer's "Education" and Rousseau's "Emile." The last is the greatest of all. It should be read by every father and mother and by every earnest citizen.

Other works that may be earnestly recommended are Aristotle's "Politics," Pestalozzi's "How Gertrude Teaches Her Children" and Froebel's "Education of Man."

To Rousseau undoubtedly belongs the high honor of having thought and written most powerfully, most originally and most practically on the greatest of problems. His brain is the cornerstone of the structure of intelligent educational methods.

He foreshadowed in his "Emile" Fourier's splendid principle of "attractive industry."

THE PROGRESS OF HUMANITY DEPENDS UPON THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE HUMAN BRAIN THROUGH EDUCATION.

The intricate processes of thinking separate mankind from other members of the animal creation.

Man is far from the animal in proportion as his brain is cultivated. Even the animals themselves rank in their kingdom in proportion to their brain activity.

William T. Harris said truly: "If man had let himself alone he would have remained the monkey that he was. Not only this, but if the monkey had let himself alone he would have remained a lemur, or a bat, or a bear, or some other creature that now offers only a faint suggestion of what the ape has become."

The elephant and the ape, among our humble animal brothers, appear to have reached their limits of possibility in the way of educational development. They still remain, and always will remain, vastly inferior to their microscopic comrades—the ants and bees and other insects.

The human race has barely begun the systematic study of the problem of application, and systematic application of the truths discovered and agreed upon. In proportion to our stature and possibilities we are hideous ignoramuses compared with the ant in the garden path.

The education of children is regulated not by their brain formation and possible development, but by the wealth of their parents, the parsimony of municipalities, the baleful influences of tradition and the colossally stupid idea that thorough brain cultivation is in some way antagonistic to material success.

The greatness of a nation depends upon the average mental power of the nation's citizens, and mental power depends absolutely upon education.

The ignorant man who has succeeded through natural force and lucky opportunity is fond of asking these questions:

"What is the good of education? Of what practical use is scientific knowldege?" These men are admirably answered by Herbert Spencer, to whose work they are referred.

A collection of Englishmen ruined themselves in the sinking of mines in search of coal. They might have saved their money had they known that a certain fossil which they dug up in abundance belongs to a geological stratum below which no coal is ever found. They went on digging cheerfully and wasting their money. An acquaintance with that fossil and its meaning would have saved their cash.

Some individuals spent one hundred thousand dollars trying to save the alcoholic byproduct that distills from bread in baking. They would have saved their money had they known that only a hundredth part of the flour is changed through fermentation.

The study of biology is essential in the successful fattening of cattle.

An "entozoon" seems to the practical man a foolish, imaginary creature. But millions of sheep have been saved by the discovery that one of these fancy scientific entozoa; pressing on the brain, caused the sheep's death. When you know the entozoon you can dig him out and save the sheep's life.

"My son's going to be an artist," says one proud father. "He does not need to study a lot of scientific rubbish."

This parent does not know that the difference between a good and a bad sculptor or painter is often based on knowledge or ignorance of anatomy and mechanical principles.

Education is important to the individual because it means development of the brain, development of capacity for production and increased chances of success.

EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO THE STATE BECAUSE IT MEANS NOT ONLY COMPETENT CITIZENS, BUT MORAL CITIZENS.

The animal in us yields to the influence of education. Knowledge and brutality are enemies. They do not dwell together.

The most important institutions in this country are the public schools—the gymnasiums of human brains. The most important citizens of the nation are the teachers.

The greatest criminals are the employers of child labor, because they deny education, cut down in childhood the citizen's chance of progress and success.

Work and vote for more and better public schools.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Is Our Blood in Its Composition and Temperature the Counterpart of the Water of the Ocean, Whence, They Say, All Life Sprang?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SCIENCE boasts of its exactness, and properly so. Yet there is no speculator comparable in boldness with the man of science who is endowed at the same time with the scent for precision and the gift of imagination.

One of the most daring scientific speculations with which I am acquainted is that of a French physiologist, R. Quinton, who ventures to assert that the blood which flows in the veins of man and other animals derives its peculiar temperature (which hardly varies more than ten degrees in all the host of vertebrate, or back-boned, animals) and its peculiar composition (in which salt always plays a fixed part) from the primeval sea that enveloped the earth in those early ages when life was just beginning on our planet!

Take Out Corpuscles, He Says, and Our Blood Is Sea Water.

Man, says this bold speculator in scientific assets, is a kind of marine aquarium, filled with seawater resembling that of the ancient ocean in which his lower animal ancestors bathed millions of years ago. We call this salty fluid, from which our living cells derive their vitality, "blood;" but deprive the blood of the red and white corpuscles which have developed in it, and all that is left is a "physiological salt solution," precisely like the salty water of the primeval sea, and retaining the same temperature.

In other words, the so-called vital fluid of animals is nothing but sea-water, less salty and hotter than the sea-water of to-day, but retaining the same composition and the same temperature that it had when, ages upon ages ago, the first living creatures of our world emerged from their original home, which was the ocean, and, with new bodies, henceforth sealed up, so that the fluid on which their lives depends can not escape, crawled out upon the land, and gave rise, by gradual evolution, to the higher animals of the present time.

This ancient, life-giving seawater has been handed on from generation to generation, for untold aeons of time, continuing to exist, age after age, in the veins of animals, forever the same in composition and temperature, notwithstanding the innumerable changes of form it has undergone in the ceaseless processes of generation, growth, decay, death and regeneration.

To see how this curious speculation has arisen, let us consider the fact that the first organisms inhabiting the sea (long before there was life on the land) were simple living cells of protoplasm, open in structure and bathed throughout in the warm, salty water which maintained their vitality. As the sea cooled, and became more salty through the influx of mineral substances washed down from the land, it was no longer a suitable abode for many of the progressing animal forms which had been built up by the combination of the original single cells, and these assumed the shape of closed bodies, in which the life-sustaining fluid was locked up, while its original temperature was maintained by physiological action.

Having emerged upon the land these creatures continued in the course of evolution, determined by their new surroundings, and assumed a great variety of higher forms, constantly increasing in complexity or organization, but always retaining the secret of life derived from the sea in the form of a fluid, never varying much from a temperature of about 100 degrees, nor from a composition comprising about seven or eight parts salt to a thousand parts of water.

It is a strange fact that from the poles to the equator all vertebrate animals possess blood of nearly the same temperature and the same degree of saltness, and Quinton avers that this singular uniformity is due to the retention in their bodies, sealed up with membranes, of the ancestral composition of the universal fluid that, at the beginning, nourished the life of their remote predecessors in the sea. If this be so, then our blood is simply an image of the water of the first ocean, at the time when life was developed in it. If we did not possess it we could not continue to live. In a certain sense, then, we may be said still to live bathed internally by the life-giving fluid of the primeval sea.

Looked at in another way, according to Quinton's hypothesis, the blood of vertebrate animals gives geologists a clue to the temperature and composition of the first sea waters. We know that these have changed with the progress of time, the water becoming both salter and colder, besides acquiring other ingredients which it did not possess originally.

Many Scientists Accept This Hypothesis in General.

This strange hypothesis has met with a certain degree of approval from other investigators, whose criticisms of it relate to details but do not attack its general credibility. Thus Professor A. B. Macallum thinks that the blood of the vertebrates represents the sea water at a later period than that assumed by Quinton, but still a period millions of years back of our time, while Dr. A. C. Lane suggests that the blood temperature may have been raised by physiological processes above that of the sea when the animals left it.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Debt

It Is the Ugliest Monster Outside of Crime, She Asserts; It Is a Phase of Shame.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

A MAN who has made a great financial success, somewhat suddenly, is doing much charitable and helpful work for humanity, but he is marring his own character and making trouble for himself and others in the future by one unfortunate habit.

HE NEVER PAYS A DEBT UNTIL FORCED TO DO SO AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Every one who knows the man knows that he is honest and generous. He is sure to pay all he owes and to liquidate every debt, eventually. But, meantime, he causes untold discomfort to his creditors frequently by his delays.

But There Is a Big Leak in the Lifeboat.

Often, while some man to whom he is owing a large bill is needing the money to push along his own affairs, his wealthy debtor is giving liberal sums to aid others or to help some worthy cause.

But there is a leak in the lifeboat of this man which, unless mended, will eventually either sink his craft or damage all its cargo.

No doubt the habit was first formed when he was struggling to make his way; before fortune turned her smiling face upon him. But his very struggles and needs in early life should have made him more consistent in his dealings with his fellow men after he obtained his fortune.

Debt is the ugliest monster on earth outside of crime.

Every young man or woman who is setting forth upon a self-supporting career should keep his mental guns charged and ready to fire upon the ogre the moment it presents its horrid face at the door.

If the habit of debt is once formed, it is almost as difficult to break as alcoholism or the drug habit. The longer it is indulged in the more difficult the cure.

Every parent should teach a child that debt is a phase of shame.

Children Should Be Taught Horror of Debt.

Tell your boy or girl that it is far more respectable to wear old garments and to be unable to present a smart appearance than to go about in clothes which are not paid for, or to indulge in any pleasures or privileges which have made debt a necessity.

Then train them in the way of keeping a careful cash account each day and of balancing up their books at the end of each week. Speak often and repeatedly of the honor which such habits eventually bring and of the corresponding dishonor which follows on the habit of debt.

There are children born into the world with a tendency to be borrowers and even to be thieves, because their fathers were parsimonious and niggardly with their mothers before their birth. And the children received the mental mark of their mothers' unfortunate state of mind.

One such woman longed for certain kinds of food before the birth of her child, and was told by her husband that her longings were extravagant and unreasonable. So persistent were her longings, however, and so small was the expense they entailed, that the unhappy, expectant mother purloined pennies from the pockets of her sleeping master, and when she had obtained the petty sum needed purchased the dainty she desired.

But her child was born with a mania for taking things which did not belong to her; even when she could have them by asking, or possessed money to purchase them, she preferred to steal.

Let Them Learn How to Spend Money Properly.

Men of that niggardly type often force their wives and children into the debt habit. It is astonishing to find how many men of independent means, hold tight the purse strings, and compel their wives to go empty-handed, while given unquestioned right to buy whatever they desire, so long as their purchases are presented to the husband in a bill at the end of the month. Frequently these men make no complaint at extravagance; yet make bitter protest if the wife asks for a small monthly allowance.

Children reared under such conditions have no horror of debt. They have been taught that it is the only way to obtain what they desire. Every boy or girl ought to be given a small weekly or monthly allowance, taught how to spend it wisely, and made to keep a strict account.

With such teaching should go a continual kindly, persistent education on the nobility of independence, and the dishonor of debt.

If children form such ideals before they go out into the world there is small fear that they will ever form the habit of debt afterward.

EYES AND VOICES

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

EYES and voices of dead friends
Come to me at night and cheer me,
And they seem so very near me
Ere my sleepless vigil ends.

Eyes that once exchanged with mine
Looks of fond regard and feeling
From the earth come softly stealing,
Once again with love to shine.

Voices stilled for many years—
Ah, but I can hear them plainly!
Voices that I longed for vainly,
They have broken from their biers.

Every eye a beacon light
Just beyond the shoals of sorrow,
Pointing out the grand To-morrow,
Every voice a soft delight.

Eyes and voices of dead friends
Come when Memory is complaining,
Sweetly soothing and sustaining,
Till the reign of darkness ends.
