HOT ALDERMANIC FIGHT ENDS

Rich Factory Men Throttle Pulpit, Says Rev. H. S. Wallace

DECLARES CHURCH IS GAGGED BY RICH

The Rev. Hugh Wallace Charges That Girls Slave in Moral and Physical Peril.

The Rev. Hugh S. Wallace, pastor of the Jones Avenue Baptist Church, Monday gave out a caustic statement criticising the church for its failure to tackle and remedy what he terms "deplorable labor conditions" in Atlanta, particularly as affecting working women and girls. His attack followed a scathing denunciation from his pulpit Sunday night, based on his own investigation.

The Rev. Mr. Wallace made the direct charge that the mouths of some preachers are "padlocked" by rich factory owners who sing and pray in church on Sunday, and then go out on Monday to oppress and rob the poor people who labor for them." If a minister sought to tell the truth about labor conditions and engage in a fight for their betterment, the rich factory owners would advise him to look for another job, said Mr. Wallace.

Here is his statement:

Declares Church Is Sleeping.

"The Church of God has so completely slept on its job that the struggling labor masses have been forced to organize to preserve their very existence. If the church had done its duty in preaching the great truths of God's Word on this burning question there would have been no need for any outside organization taking up the work. But there are reasons why the church has not taken up this fight.

"One is that in many of our 'rich' churches there sit members in the pews who come there and pray and sing on Sunday and go out on Monday morning to oppress and rob the poor people who labor for them. Such a church—with such oppressors of the poor in her membership and in her pews—could not speak out on this question.

"If the preacher dared to tell Brother A, the rich factory owner who sits in his congregation, that he is a robber, an oppressor of the poor; that he is stealing from those who work for him, then Brother A would tell the preacher that he would have to stop that kind of preaching or look for another pastorate. I say, God have mercy on the preachers in Atlanta who are letting the rich factory owners put padlocks on their mouths.

Pastor to Continue Attack.

"I propose to preach on this same question again soon, and I invite all those who are interested in this great question to come out and hear the facts that I shall present."

From statistics he had obtained, the minister showed that women and girls are compelled to toil day after day for a mere pittance, wholly inadequate to provide the necessities of life, and that, furthermore, their lives are constantly imperiled by insanitary and unsafe working surroundings. Numerous illustrations were cited to back his charges.

One of these told of a woman who labored four days on one job of making skirts and was paid 78 cents. Another woman made seven dozen garments and had to do the work all over again because the seam was a bit too wide. She received $1.50. One woman worked two days in one week and then quit because she could better herself. When she called back

SEEKWOMAN AS TRAIN ROBBER

Detectives Trail Two Men and Companion From Bessemer as A. G. S. Hold-up Suspects.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—What is conceded by railroad detectives and officers hunting the Alabama Great Southern train robbers to be the most important clew in the search for the bandits was information received here to-day that two men and a woman left Bessemer, near here, Sunday night with a heavy trunk and paid their transportation to New Orleans with new unsigned bank notes. The description of the woman tallies with that of the 18-year-old "boy" who held up Engineer Daniels last Friday morning. Inspector of Police James W. Reynolds, of New Orleans, has instructions to arrest the trio in case they reach there.

To-day the trainmen failed to identify John Gammon, Henry Poll and Robert Vaughn, the three tramps arrested at Eutaw on suspicion of being connected with the robbery. They admit that they were riding "blind baggage" on the roof of the mail car when the robbery took place, saw the bandits rob the express car [illegible] by the explosion that wrecked the express safe, and, hanging desperately to the top of the car, took the wild ride of 30 miles to a point below Tuscaloosa, a part of which time there was no one at the throttle of the engine. At Tuscaloosa they attempted to alight from their place of danger and were the ones that were fired upon by Sheriff Palmer, according to their story.

The ride continued at a terrific pace until Englewood was reached, when the engine went dead and they fled, being trailed down by bloodhounds. Their story is believed, but they are being held as material witnesses.

Rewards of $4,000 have been offered for the bandits—$3,000 by the Government and $1,000 by the railroad.

In rifling the registered mail the bandits secured $2,200 in unsigned bank notes consigned from the United State Treasury to the Bank of Meridian, Miss. Other stolen packages of currency probably totaled $5,000. The Southern Express Company claims that its loss was only $50, although the robbers abandoned $31 in cash which was left on the floor of the safe.

WOODWARD POINTS OUT 'WASTE'

Issues Summons to Polls, Asking Support in Effort to Cut Down Extravagance.

Mayor James G. Woodward issued a final call to arms to his supporters Monday, urging that they nominate W. A. Hancock, Amos Braselton and C. C. McDonald to the Aldermanic Board in the white primary Tuesday.

"I've got no ticket," he said, "but if the people will elect these men it will be an assurance that the Aldermanic Board will have a majority that will be conservative and that will work in harmony with the administration.

"I am very anxious to see them elected. With the recall we can get the others into the right line, which is to handle the people's business in a businesslike way.

"We would have saved $100,000 if the city's business had been conducted properly during the past year."

A Battle of Words.

The opposing faction is fighting just as vigorously as Mayor Woodward and the men he is supporting. Reports of a stormy word battle be- [illegible] Claude L. Ashley at a committee meeting in the City Hall the other day illustrates the intensity of the feeling on both sides. Mr. Ashley is one of Mayor Woodward's strongest supporters in Council.

"Amos Braselton will overwhelm Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward," Mayor Woodward is reported to have said.

"It will be a reflection on the Fourth Ward," Councilman Ashley is said to have replied.

"I don't see why you are for Thomson," the Mayor retorted.

What Ashley Replied.

"Mr. Mayor, Mr. Braselton hasn't lived in the Fourth Ward long enough to be called a Fourth Ward citizen," replied Councilman Ashley. "He is not even a registered voter in that ward. That's why I say his election would be a reflection on the ward."

"He'd represent the ward better than it has been represented," continued the Mayor, according to the account of the argument.

"He won't have a chance to represent it at all so far as this election is concerned."

John S. Owens is contesting the nomination of W. A. Hancock for Alderman from the Eighth Ward with a well-organized campaign, and Alderman James E. Warren, of the Third Ward, is confident he will defeat C. C. McDonald for the place he now holds.

Tuesday's Complete Ticket.

Here is the complete ticket to be voted upon Tuesday:

To be voted upon by the whole city: C. H. Kelley, for Alderman from the Second Ward; James E. Warren and C. C. McDonald, for Alderman from the Third Ward; Albert D. Thomson and Amos Braselton, for Alderman from the Fourth Ward; Jesse Armistead, for Alderman from the Seventh Ward; W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens, for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, and W. Z. Smith, for General Manager of Waterworks.

To be voted upon by wards: Charles A. Alverson and J. N. Renfroe, for Council from the First Ward; C. D. Knight, for Council from the Second Ward; Orville H. Hall and R. R. Jackson, for Council from the Third Ward; R. E. George and A. W. Farlinger, for Council from the Fourth Ward; Jesse B. Lee and Dr. W. M. Ethridge, for Council from the Fifth Ward; Jesse M. Wood, for Council from the Sixth Ward; S. L. Dallas, for Council from the Seventh Ward; Frank H. Reynolds, for Council from the Eighth Ward; Charles W. Smith, for Council from the Ninth Ward, and Claude C. Mason, for Council from the Tenth Ward.

COUNCIL CAN MAKE MASON ELIGIBLE

City Attorney Says Change in Ordinance Would Put Him in the Race for Re-election.

City Attorney James L. Mayson Monday settled the question of the power of the City Council to re-elect Carlos H. Mason, First Ward representative on the Police Commission, by explaining that the only limitation on the terms of Police Commissioners was provided in an ordinance, and that the Council could repeal the ordinance at any time it saw fit.

The published statement in a morning paper that it would take a special act of the Legislature is incorrect.

A movement has been started to amend the ordinance at an early date so as to make Mr. Mason eligible. Indications are that it will be successful, though it is expected Mayor Woodward will veto the action and it will take a two-thirds majority to override him.

If the movement is successful, it will assure the re-election of Mr. Mason next March, and that would be interpreted to mean that he would be re-elected chairman by the Commission.

Walter Trippe is making an active campaign for Mr. Mason's place.

44-Story Building in Atlanta Planned by Candler, Is Report

Plans are being drawn by architects, it was rumored Monday, for a 44-story office building for Asa G. Candler, the structure to occupy the northwest corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets, where Mr. Candler has 259 feet of frontage. Blue prints, according to the report, are being prepared by a local concern which does a great deal of skyscraper and big building work.

Mr. Candler could not be reached Monday for an expression on the report, but authorities who are more or less in touch with his building operations declared the plans were not authorized. One of them explained that it was possible that architects had gone ahead preparing tentative plans for Mr. Candler's inspection, but that no authority had been given to ceed, and in this connection he referred to plans having been drawn for a skyscraper at the southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets.

Reports of the blue prints being prepared here had it that the building would be constructed after the style of the Metropolitan Tower in New York City, with a base of about 20 stories and a tower of 24.

TARIFF BILL ACCEPTED IN SENATE

Conference Disagrees on Only One Subject, Cotton Futures Taxation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The House managers in the conference on the Underwood tariff bill to-day reported to the House the results of the conference.

A large part of the bill was accepted by the Senate as it passed the House, and such rates were not in conference. The Senate won out on 427 of its amendments, receded from 151, compromised on 97 and the conferees disagreed on one subject only, cotton futures taxation.

Agree to Hasten Measure.

Representative Underwood presented the conference report in the House immediately after the journal was read. It was ordered printed in the Record and will be considered to-morrow. The House agreed to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow to hasten final action on the report. The House adjourned at 12:18 o'clock.

The conferees reported that they had receded from the Senate amendment requiring statements of cost on merchandise contracted for as well as on that actually purchased. Importers must hereafter furnish the Treasury and the Commerce Departments with more detailed information for statistical purposes. The Senate receded from its amendments allowing a margin of 5 per cent undervaluation without penalty and limiting forfeiture to the particular articles undervalued.

The conference restored a provision authorizing the board of general appraisers to exercise both judicial and inquisitorial functions, and struck out the Senate amendment excluding hearsay evidence. Contingent fees in customs causes are prohibited.

The summary imposition of a fine for failure of importers to produce books and papers is permitted. The paragraph authorizing the President to impose countervailing duties was stricken out. The paragraph abrogating and repealing article 8 of the treaty with Cuba was agreed to.

The free importation of articles from the Philippines is limited to such as contain not more than 20 per cent of foreign material. The Senate receded from its amendment prohibiting the importation of goods manufactured principally by children under 14 years of age.

Merchant Marine Aided.

The conferees agreed to a provision giving a rebate of 5 per cent in duties on goods imported in American bottoms, with a provision that it shall not conflict with existing treaties. The paragraph permitting the manufactures of cigars in a bonded warehouse and withdrawal for consumption in the United States on payment of the duty on tobacco in its imported condition and internal revenue tax is agreed to.

The conferees agreed to the Senate amendment permitting the manufacture of alcohol by any farmer or association of farmers or fruit growers free of tax for denaturing, struck out the dumping clause and rejected the Senate amendment for a joint committee of the Senate and House to revise and rectify the customs laws.

The reductions in the present tariff duties on more than twoscore articles in everyday use are given below. The rates given are ad valorem, the specific duties of the Payne law having been reduced to an ad valorem basis.

In free listing wheat, flour, potatoes, cattle and swine, a countervailing duty is provided for the evening up of discrimination by any country against importations from the United States of the articles:

Extract Duties Restored.

Schedule A—Chemical oils and paints, alizarin, dead or creosote; oil, anthracite and anthracine oil have been restored to the free list, where they have been for many years. Cyanide of sodium and potassium have been transferred to the free list.

The House rates have been reduced on oxalic acids, crude chicle, linseed oil, chlorate of potash and perfumed and medicinal soaps.

The rates have been increased over those provided by the House on gallic acid, pyrogallic acid, tannic acid, celluloid, alizarin assistants, lithopone and white sulphide of zinc.

Extracts and decoctions of nut galls, Persian berries and sumach placed on the free list by the House have been restored to the dutiable list at a rate of three-eighths of 1 cent per pound.

The Senate receded from its amendments increasing the rates of calomel and ultra marine blue and wash blue.

Schedule B—Earth, earthenware and glassware. Roman, Portland and other hydraulic cements, limestone, rock asphalts, asphaltum and bitumen have been transferred to the free list.

Senate Recedes Again.

The House rates have been reduced on lenses, surveying instruments, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses, and increased on strips of glass for lenses and gauges, opera and field glasses.

A new classification has been made for unmanufactured mica and a rate of 4 cents per pound placed on all valued at not more than 15 cents per pound, and 25 per cent on that valued at more than 15 cents. This results in an increase over the House rate of 30 per cent on the cheap class of mica costing more than 14 cents, and a reduction of all that is valued at more than 15 cents per pound.

The Senate receded from its increased rates on stoneware and crucible and plate glass, more than three-eighths of an inch thick. The House classification for pottery, earthenware and chinaware is retained.

Schedule C, Metals and Manufactures of Metals—Iron in pigs, iron kentledge, speigeleisen, ferro-manganese, scrap iron and steel, iron in slabs, blooms, loops and other forms less finished and iron in bars and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, steel ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks and billets made by the Bessemer or similar processes and not containing alloys; engraved steel plates for printing bonds and other securities, ingots for railway wheels and antimony ores have been placed upon the free list.

Other Iron Rates Cut.

The rates on other forms of iron and steel have been reduced to compensate of the reduction in the crude forms transferred to the free list. Increases have been made over the House rates on lead-bearing ores and zinc in blocks, takes or other forms.

The Senate receded from its amendments decreasing the rates on wire ropes and increasing the rates on woven wire cloth. The House rate on steel ingots, billets and bars and other forms of steel made by the crucible, electric or cementation process, or containing alloys, has been retained. Also on steel wool, grit, shot and sand made from iron or steel.

A new classification has been made for automobiles valued at $2,000 or less, and a rate of 30 per cent fixed in lieu of the House rate of 45 per cent.

Schedule D, Woods and Manufactures of—No change in these materials have been made in the schedule. The thin wood comprising the tops and bottoms and sides of fruit boxes exported as shooks and returned filled with fruit are transferred to the free list in lieu of the House rate of 7 1-2 per cent.

The Sugar Question.

Schedule E, Sugar, Molasses and Manufacture of—The only change of importance in Schedule E is that postponing the time of the taking effect of the rate provided by the House on sugar and molasses and the abolition of the Dutch standard immediately. This will result in a reduction of rates in sugar above 16 Dutch standard, which now has a differential of 14 1-2 cents per pound on sugar testing 98 degrees and an addition of 3 1-2 cents per 100 pounds for each degree less than 98 degrees.

Schedule F, Tobacco and Manufactures of—No changes were made in this schedule.

Schedule G, Agricultural Products and Provisions—Cattle, sheep and other domestic animals, suitable for use as food, wheat and wheat products and eggs have been transferred to the free list. Reductions have been made on oats, butter, beets, frozen eggs, peas, green house stock, zante currants, chocolate and cocoa sweetened and extracts of meats from the rates provided by the House.

Spirits Unchanged.

The rates have been increased over those provided by the House on broken rice, fish packed in oil and ground spices. A rate of 20 per cent ad valorem is placed on ground spices in addition to the specific rate provided by the House on spices, ground or unground. The Senate receded from the reduced rate placed on flaxseed and its amendment placing a duty on bananas. The House classification on lemons and other citrus fruits is accepted.

Schedule H, Spirits, Wines and Other Beverages—No changes of importance are made in this schedule. The rates on ginger ale and similar beverages are slightly decreased on bottles containing not more than one-half pint each. The Senate recedes from its amendment placing an internal revenue on grape brandy used in fortifying sweet wines.

Schedule I, Cotton Manufactures—The Senate classification of cotton cloth, according to the average number of the yarns contained therein, has been accepted instead of the House provision for the highest number. This will slightly decrease the rate of some fancy weaves and novelty cloth, but on the greatest bulk of cotton cloth the rate will not be affected.

New Stocking Classification.

The rates on bleached and dyed colored yarns are increased, and on cotton yarns and cloth made of yarn from Nos 79 to 99. The rates on handkerchiefs or mufflers, not hemmed, have been reduced from 30 per cent, as provided by the House, to 25 per cent.

A new classification has been provided on stockings and half hose. The rate on those valued at not more than 70 cents per dozen is reduced 30 per cent, and on those valued at between 70 cents and $1.20 per dozen the rate is reduced to 40 per cent instead of 50 per cent, as provided for by the House. Nets and netting made on the Nottingham lace curtain machine have been increased from 45 per cent to 60 per cent.

The Senate receded from its amendment increasing the rate on bandings, beltings, bindings, etc.

Schedule J, Flax, Hemp, Jute and Manufactures of—Flax, not hackled or dressed, flax, hackled, known as "dressed line," tow or flax, hemp and tow of hemp and hackled hemp, have been transferred to the free list. The House rates on jute yarn, flax yarn and flax twine and thread have been reduced to correspond with the reduction of duty on the raw material. Other manufactures of flax have been correspondingly reduced.

Jute burlap has been placed on the free list and the rate on burlap bags reduced to 10 per cent. The Senate receded from its amendment decreasing the duty on straw matting and accepted the House classification for woven fabrics and articles made of flax, hemp or ramie with a slight reduction in the ratses of duty.

Schedule K—Wool and manufacture of. Reductions have been made from the House rates on tops and yarns made of wool or hair of Angora goats and like animals; on flannels valued at over 50 cents per pound, on plush, velvets and other pile fabrics.

BRIDE SEES CONGRESS SEAT FOR DONEHOO

Mrs. Paul Donehoo, bride in surprise wedding just announced.

Blind Coroner's Secret Wedding a Week Ago Is Just Discovered by His Friends.

Radiantly proud of a husband whose pluck has won the admiration of thousands, Mrs. Paul Donehoo, bride of a week, declared Monday that everyone—Democrats and Bull Moosers and the one or two Republicans left—might just as well accept it as a settled fact that the blind Coroner of Fulton County is going to Congress.

"Why, of course Paul will sit in the Capitol at Washington," said Mrs. Donehoo, pausing in the midst of a shower of congratulations from surprised friends.

Mrs. Donehoo said her blind husband's courtship had been somewhat on the whirlwind order.

"I met Paul just 30 days ago," she explained, "at the home of Miss Mae Karrigan, and (blushingly) I fell in love with his voice. No, you musn't put that in the paper, because I know Paul wouldn't want me to say that. It was a case of mutual attraction from the beginning, and I know we are going to be very happy."

Coroner Donehoo found it impossible to keep secret his wedding of a week ago. The news of it just naturally bubbled from the lips of the happy husband, who let the cat out of the bag two weeks before he intended to.

Mr. Donehoo's wife was Miss Alverta Benson. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Arbuckle, in Decatur, Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Park Street Methodist Church, performing the ceremony.

PASTOR ATTACKS EMPLOYERS OF GIRLS HERE

Rich Block Church From Uplifting Labor, Declares the Rev. Hugh Wallace.

on Saturday for her wage, she was informed there was nothing due her.

Many working girls, he said, take their lives in their hands when they go to work, because of the lack of fire escapes and other protection from fire.

Scores Lack of Moral Guards.

The minister also declared that moral conditions in some of the work shops are alarming, and that the moral welfare of working girls is being woefully neglected.

"In some of the shops and stores I find that girls are forced to work directly under immoral foremen and forewomen," he said. "Absolutely no safeguard is thrown about the girls. Is it any wonder, then, that some of these girls, toiling their lives out for a starvation wage, yield to the lure of the tempter?"

Mr. Wallace quoted different passages from the Bible to show that it is the duty of the church to interest itself in the betterment of these conditions.

"The church must not sit idly by and allow the working classes to be oppressed, and see the very life and character of these girls ground out in this heartless manner," he declared. "It is time the churches should unite in a great systematic warfare against these forces that are throttling labor, and come to the rescue of the downtrodden working women and girls."

Associated Charities Scored.

At the morning service the Rev. Mr. Wallace severely rapped the Atlanta Associated Charities, declaring that a great portion of money contributed by Atlantans to relieve the suffering of the poor goes to swell handsome salaries of numerous officials. He suggested the name "associated investigators" in preference to the Associated Charities.

"Persons in dire need and distress are allowed to almost starve to death while the Associated Charities busies itself in investigating them," he said.

"If I should ever get in need, I would have a horror of falling into the hands of the 'associated investigators.'

"This organization should start out and devote its energies to the great object for which it was formed."

SEABOARD WINS SUIT.

ANNISTON, Sept. 29.—The Seaboard Air Line Railroad has been given a verdict in the suit brought against the road by Mrs. Mary E. Douglass to recover $20,000 for the death of her son, J. W. Thomason, who was killed by the train near Piedmont in August of last year.

New Synagogue Is Formally Opened

Members of the new congregation, Beth Hamedrish Hgodel Sfard, which formally was dedicated Sunday in the Red Men's hall on Capitol avenue with impressive services, marked by the presentation of the "Scroll of Law" written on tanned deer hide brought directly from Jerusalem, were enthusiastic Monday concerning the future of the latest addition to Atlanta's orthodox Jewish synagogues.

The new congregation was realized through the efforts of Rabbi J. M. Levine, under whose direction the work of gathering together the members progressed. Speaking in the pure Hebraic tongue, Rabbi Levine lectured on the "Book of the Bible." A handsome Bible covering, the gift of the members, was placed on the Sacred Book by Rabbi Levine at the conclusion of his address.

Pope Pius, Ill, to Forego Audiences

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Sept. 29.—Pope Pius X was advised to-day by his physicans to cease holding audiences on account of the delicate condition of his health. It is explained that His Holiness is not suffering from any specific malady, but that he is showing signs of general weakness, which, it is feared, may prove the forerunner of a nervous collapse.

The Pontiff promised his doctors to forego many of his clerical duties.

Two More Counties Rid of Cattle Tick

Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen has announced that Oconee and Newton Counties have been pronounced free from the cattle tick and have been released from quarantine.

This makes 14 counties out of 147 in Georgia immune from the cattle tick. When eradication was begun a year ago, there were only three counties free of the pest. There are three more counties likely to be freed of the tick by April.

MEDICAL COLLEGE OPENS 59TH TERM

220 Students Enrolled—New Georgia Law Brings Men From Other States.

The effect of the new medical practice law, passed at the recent session of the Georgia Legislature, was felt in an interesting way at the opening Monday of the fifty-ninth session of the Atlanta Medical College.

Students matriculated from a number of States which have not been represented for many years. Under the old arrangement those States refused to enter into reciprocal agreement with Georgia, but since the enactment of the new law, these States will now accept the diplomas of the Atlanta college.

Up to noon 220 students had registered at the Atlanta Medical College, and the indications are that before the end of the week the number will have reached more than the 420, which has been the number estimated by the faculty. The time for matriculation closes Saturday.

The opening exercises were held Monday in the auditorium at the college, and more than 400 prospective students were present. The exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Hugh K. Walker, of the First Presbyterian Church, and short addresses were delivered by Vice President E. W. Martin, of the Board of Trustees; Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Dr. W. S. Elkin, dean of the faculty, and Dr. W. F. Westmoreland, president of the college.

Increase in Exports Shown in Past Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—At the rate of more than $1,000,000 every business day in the past fiscal year have been the exports from the United States to Latin-America, according to a statement issued by the Department of Commerce. These amounted to $321,000,000, as compared with $168,000,000.

The most rapid gains have been with Argentina and Brazil.

THOMSON RAPS BRASELTON

ALBERT D. THOMSON

Says Braselton Talking About a Business Administration and Is Not Even a Registered Voter

To The People of Atlanta:

Up to this time, as a candidate for Alderman from the Fourth Ward, I have refrained from personalities with reference to my opponent, Mr. Amos W. Braselton.

It is not now my intention to criticise him personally.

But inasmuch as he saw fit to make the remark in this morning's Constitution that my supporters are the "ring politicians" and "petty politicians," or words to that effect, I feel justified in calling the public's attention to two facts.

First—Mr. Braselton has not paid his City taxes for 1912, there being now a fi-fa against him in the City Marshal's office.

Second—His name is not on the registration list for the City Primary to be held to-morrow, September 30th. In other words, he can not even vote in the Primary in which he is a candidate.

In view of these facts, isn't it rather poor taste for him to make disparaging remarks about the citizens who are supporting my candidacy?

Isn't it rather remarkable for Mr. Braselton to appeal for votes on the platform of a business administration," when, as a citizen and a business man, his interest in the City Government is not sufficient to induce him to pay his City taxes?

Isn't it rather "nervy" for Mr. Braselton to ask for the votes of citizens who PAID for the privilege of voting when he did not think enough of that privilege to pay himself?

Mr. Braselton advocates raising the pay of policemen—which is not a bad idea.

But if other citizens refused to contribute to the support of the City Government as he has done, there wouldn't be enough money in the City Treasury to pay their present salaries, or any other expenses of the City Government.

HEARST PAPERS PLAN TO FOOT UP AMERICA'S TRADE BALANCE SHEET

Estimates of What We Pay Annually to Foreigners

NO RECORDS have ever been compiled of what America pays annually to foreigners. The Hearst papers are to try to collect first-hand data covering the whole ground. Discrepancies between current estimates are most glaring—showing the need for the concrete information which it is planned to gather.

I have received estimates from the two leading foreign exchange bankers in the country—Vice President Gardin, of the National City Bank, and Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company. I append my own guess:

	John E. Gardin	Max May	B. C. Forbes
Spent by tourists	$500,000,000	$200,000,000	$225,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad	400,000,000	100,000,000	100,000,000
Interest and dividends on securities held abroad	500,000,000	50,000,000	100,000,000
Freights to foreign steamship companies	300,000,000	150,000,000	150,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	300,000,000	150,000,000	300,000,000
Insurance and miscellaneous			25,000,000
Sent to Canada			50,000,000
Totals	$2,000,000,000	$650,000,000	$950,000,000

As an offset must be placed the rapidly increasing sums spent by foreign visitors to America and also the money brought over by immigrants.

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The United States is getting deeper into the debt of Europeans every year notwithstanding that our excess of merchandise exports over imports has totaled $8,350,000,000 during the last twenty years.

The Hearst papers propose, if given proper co-operation, to make up America's international balance sheet, a task never before attempted.

One envelope from J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Speyer & Co., or other important banking house may contain "exports" of greater value than the whole cargo of the largest trans-Atlantic liner.

Our "invisible" payments to foreigners have been computed at all sorts of figures—from $500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 annually.

No trustworthy records have ever been compiled.

The Hearst papers hope to remedy this.

How much do American tourists spend abroad every year?

Vice President Gardin, head of the National City Bank's foreign exchange department and a recognized authority, puts the amount at $500,000,000.

Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company, who handles an enormous mass of exchange and is looked upon as a wizard at the business, estimates the sum at $200,000,000.

My guess would be from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Take the item, "Interest and dividends on securities held abroad." Mr. Gardin allows the colossal amount of $500,000,000 annually, whereas Mr. May cuts this down to $50,000,000!

When experts differ so, surely there is need for enlightenment on a subject of such importance.

The Hearst papers invite every steamship company doing business with the United States to give, confidentially, the amount it collects for foreign and passenger service.

Insurance companies are being asked to compute how much Americans pay foreigners for insurance.

Express companies issue an enormous number of travelers' checks and other credits for use by Americans abroad, and a record of these, it is hoped, will be furnished.

Banks, banking firms and trust companies that do a foreign business will be requested to aid the work by supplying in strict confidence, of course, the amount sent abroad by them for various purposes germane to this investigation.

The Government issues exhaustive statistics covering our foreign trade in merchandise and bullion, but it throws no light on the huge payments made to foreign shipping companies on the amount spent by tourists, and by American residents abroad, on our annual bill for dividends and interest to oversea holders of our securities, or on the sum remitted by foreigners.

Did America not have to meet so serious a drain, she would, by her handsome balance of merchandise exports, gradually reduce her billions of indebtedness to European nations.

One thought forcibly impressed upon the mind by a consideration of our international balance-sheet is that it behooves our manufacturers to cast their coats and fight for a larger share of the world's custom so as to make us more self-supporting.

With our constant and rapid growth in population, it is not expected that our agricultural exports will expand. The general belief is that they will dwindle out of sight—a view I can not share, for once our farmers are given proper credit facilities and rise to the height of their possibilities, they will, I believe, astonish the world.

Meanwhile, the new tariff should help many lines of industry to compete more effectively in foreign markets, a step that will be necessary to compensate for the loss of domestic business that the lower tariff charges will entail.

The following table shows the total value of our merchandise imports and exports for the last twenty years, along with the annual balance in merchandise and also in gold and silver shipments. It should be noted that the United States has produced about $700,000,000 worth of silver and $1,500,000,000 worth of gold during the twenty years under review.

Bar Mails to Bible, Organization Urges

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Declaring that the Bible should be excluded from the mails on the ground that it contains obscene and immoral matter, a body of citizens has sent a petition to Postmaster General Burleson urging him to take action.

Some of the department officials to-day pointed to the fact that the denial of the mail privileges to alleged objectionable books frequently has been the means of securing a great amount of free advertising.

Thomson Attacks Braselton's Record

Replying to Mayor Woodward's statement urging the people to vote for Amos Braselton for Alderman from the Fourth Ward, Councilman Albert D. Thomson, also a candidate for the place, made this comment Monday:

"Mr. Braselton not only is not registered in the Fourth Ward, but the city holds a fi. fa. against him as a defaulter in taxes to the amount of $185. If no one else paid their taxes any better than Mr. Braselton, there would be no need for Councilmen, Aldermen or a Mayor."

Negro Is Taken by Police After Fight

J. T. Jackson, the young negro who gave Police Officers Ford and Knight a hand-to-hand fight on Decatur street Sunday night, feigned insanity in his cell at the police station Monday, according to the police.

A hand-to-hand encounter followed the attempt to arrest Jackson. Not until he was beaten almost to unconsciousness did the negro surrender.

DELAY ON FRANK HEARING SEEMS UNAVOIDABLE

Dorsey Can Not Tell if He Will Be Ready by Saturday, and Rosser Says Nothing.

Postponement of the hearing of the motion next Saturday for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, appeared certain Monday, according to information from various authoritative sources.

The probabilities of the motion being heard before Judge Roan, the trial judge, were as much in doubt as ever, despite the fact that Judge Roan has expressed a desire to see the case disposed of before he retires from the bench, as well as the desire of Solicitor General Dorsey to have Judge Roan hear the motion.

However, the unexpected may happen. Judge Hill may not relinquish his place on the Court of Appeals bench until the Frank motion has been heard, it is said, as a result of his expressed hesitancy to hear the motion for a new trial in a case with which, from a strictly legal standpoint, he is entirely unfamiliar.

A postponement is regarded as certain, in view of an informal statement made by Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey, who declared Monday he had not heard one word from the defense in regard to the submitting of papers containing contentions for a new trial.

"I am going to do all I can," said Mr. Dorsey, "to have the case ready by October 4, but this depends entirely on the length and character of the matter presented to me by the defense.

"Should the papers, for instance, contain matter attacking jurymen, which would require the summoning of witnesses perhaps from various parts of the State, then the possibilities of getting ready on schedule are slight.

"All I can say is that I simply can not tell at this time whether I can be ready by Saturday or not."

Luther Rosser, attorney for Frank, declared Monday he had nothing to say regarding the matter.

THAW LIKELY TO LOSE FIGHT ON EXTRADITION

Friend Says Governor Will Honor Requisition—Case Slated for Highest Courts.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 29.—A man very close to Governor Felker said to-day the New Hampshire Executive undoubtedly would honor the requisition of New York authorities for Harry K. Thaw, the escaped Matteawan fugitive.

Governor Felker, the informant said, after exhaustive study of all statutes and precedents having any possible bearing on the subject, would concede the contention of William Travers Jerome that the extradition papers, being in regular form, should be honored irrespective of other aspects of the case.

Both Sides Plan Appeal.

This mean that Harry Thaw's fight for liberty, which already has been fought in the courts of New York, New Hampshire and Canada, will now go to the United Sattes courts. In anticipation of possible defeat in the extradition and New Hampshire court proceedings, Harry Thaw's counsel had the foresight to sue out a writ of habeas corpus in the United States courts.

The hearing, which was delayed at the request of Thaw's counsel, now will proceed, and since both sides have expressed their intention to appeal in the event of defeat, it is almost assured that the famous case will be fought out through the highest courts in the United States.

Scene to Shift to Boston.

"Governor Felker will extradite Thaw, his decision will be a conventional one," declared a member of the Governor's Council to-day. "This must not be taken as coming officially from Governor Felker, but only as my personal opinion based on an intimate knowledge of the probabilities, an opinion which I believe will be borne out by developments within the next few days."

The informant expressed the general belief voiced about the Granite State Capitol. The effect of Governor Felker's granting extradition papers would be to throw the case into the Federal courts, transferring the scene from this city to Boston.

NEW RAILWAY AGENT.

OWENS' EIGHTH WARD MEETING DISCUSSED BY HANCOCK

A letter has been handed me signed by Mr. John S. Owens in which was enclosed a letter in circular form giving the proceedings of an Owens Meeting held in the Eighth Ward on the 12th day of last August. Permit me to say that I did not receive a notice of said meeting, although I am a taxpayer and reside in said ward. However, I was represented at the meeting. There are 900 registered voters in the Eighth Ward. In Mr. Owens' circular-letter it appears there were 56 of his friends present at his meeting, 11 of whom are not registered. A resolution prepared by someone, prior to the meeting, was introduced by Dr. Mayson, and after the virtues of Mr. Owens were extolled by General A. J. West (who is not registered) said resolutions were adopted by a viva-voce vote. The meeting lasted just eight minutes and was participated in by such friends as Mr. Owens saw fit to invite. I beg to call your attention to the following petition handed me, which was responsible for my becoming a candidate for Alderman:

"Inasmuch as our present representative from the Eighth Ward in the Aldermanic Board will not stand for re-election, and recognizing the sterling worth and ability of former Alderman W. A. Hancock, we the undersigned, earnestly request that he become a candidate for this office at the coming Municipal election: Dr. A. H. VanDyke, Alex W. Smith, Sr., Alex W. Smith, Jr., Victor Lamar Smith, R. M. Walker, W. D. Ellis, Jr., E. H. Thornton, E. C. Peters, John E. Murphy, Frank O. Foster, W. L. Cosgrove, Gerald Selby, M. D., W. E. Hawkins, Charles F. Whitner, Fair Dodd, William A. Wimbish, L. P. Stephens, W. T. Ashford, Charles Gately, C. J. Simmons, Paul Goldsmith, H. H. Cabaniss, F. E. Callaway, Macon Martin, C. R. Winship, J. O. Wynn, William J. Davis, George A. Campbell, R. L. Campbell, D. H. Dougherty, H. A. Maier, H. W. Anderson, J. V. Doll, R. P. Stahl, R. L. Spain, Harvey Johnson, D. N. McCullough."

I publish this petition that you may observe that quite a few prominent citizens of the Eighth Ward are acquainted with me and are desirous of my representing them as Alderman, notwithstanding Mr. Owens' statement to the contrary.

I was born in Atlanta, have lived here all my life, I have no apologies to offer for anything I did while representing you for five years in the General Council. I have resided in the Eighth Ward for two years and expect to live there the balance of my life. I have no schemes to further, no acreage or subdivision to improve with streets and sidewalks. I expect when nominated for Alderman, as I will be to-morrow, to earnestly endeavor to represent the whole city, as well as the Eighth Ward, this I understand, is what an Alderman who faithfully performs his duty is expected to do.

Very respectfully,

W. A. HANCOCK

YOU SHOULD VOTE

"Choose you this day whom you will serve."

---JOSHUA 24:15.

The population of Los Angeles is 319,198. It has grown by leaps and bounds.

One of that city's newspapers under date of July 6th, 1913, said:

"March, 1909, Alexander became Mayor and has held the office continuously since that date.

"Since that day the city has had clean, honest government—

"It is probable that in this period of law enforcement the population of the city has doubled.

"Never has there been such uninterrupted activity in building. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, 7,644 building permits were issued calling for construction valued at $11,187,684. In the fiscal year that ended last Monday (July, 1913), 17,568 permits were issued and the value of construction called for by them was $34,662,511.

"DECENCY IN GOVERNMENT PAYS—

"The lugubrious prophecies of the apologists and defenders of vice, who fought for the continuance of the old immoralities, for protection, for a wide open town, for toleration of debauchery because it was good for business were proved to be false prophecies.

"Never in all the history of the city has business made such strides as during these four years of law enforcement.

"Never have the banks made greater gains in strength—

"A local savings bank presented a biennial comparative statement—

"In 1909 it had resources amounting to $23,980,670. After four years of honest, clean municipal administration, of enforcement of the law, of repression of those vices for which toleration has been demanded by apologists for vice, the resources of that same bank total $46,638,811."

On the wall of the office of Mayor Alexander hung this motto:

"Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

The same Los Angeles newspaper added:

"The city should remember the beginning of the verse:—

" 'Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' "

SEATTLE HAS 237,194 INHABITANTS.

Like Los Angeles, it is another city whose name means business, growth, progress and prosperity.

Gill was elected its Mayor on the wide-open-town ticket." Soon it was rumored that the very Chief of Police had an interest in a gambling hell. One enterprising citizen started building a two-hundred-room house in the segregated district.

GILL WAS RECALLED and thrown out of office. The pimps and panderers were driven out of the city. Gill tried to come back. He was again defeated.

Seattle is still growing. Three years ago her people recognized that decency meant progress.

Filth and foul odors always mean decay and death.

Let us have none in Atlanta.

As one who loves your city and your Maker, you should vote to-morrow without fail.

Ask no candidate, "How do you stand?"

But vote for no one until you know who is supporting him. Find this out.

THEN VOTE AS YOUR CONSCIENCE BIDS YOU.

If you believe that God wishes to re-establish and maintain in Atlanta brothels which depend for their existence upon the betrayal of girls, vote for those supported by the men who have tried to hamper and hamstring your Chief of Police in doing his duty.

If you believe that God wishes to destroy an honest official and enthrone Judas, vote for the crowd that is camping on the trail of Chief Beavers.

But, if you believe that God would reward fidelity to duty; if you believe that He would have you and your children live in a city that is clean and with foundations not built upon the suffering of others, vote for those who are opposed by the men who believe in the licensed brothel and seek a Chief of Police who would be false to his oath of office.

YOUR DUTY DEMANDS THAT YOU VOTE.

To-morrow is a critical day in your city and in your life.

"Choose you whom you will serve."

ATLANTA DAY AT KNOXVILLE WILL BE BIG EVENT

Colonel Lowry Helps Appalachian Exposition Prepare for Large Delegation of Boosters.

Arrangements are being made for a large crowd of Atlantans to go to Knoxville October 7, which will be Atlanta Day at the Appalachian Exposition.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee, has just returned from Knoxville, where he made preparations for entertaining a large delegation of Atlantans. He praises the exposition highly.

"The exposition is a most wonderful one," said he. "It is attracting a large number of visitors and indications are that we will take an unusually large number of Atlantans there. The exposition shows the resources of the Appalachian range and the agricultural products of the Southern States.

"Knoxville has been looking forward to Atlanta Day at the exposition and is planning to receive us with true Knoxville hospitality. I think every member of the Chamber of Commerce should make the trip to Knoxville if possible. We have always been supported in everything we went after by Knoxville and we should show our appreciation by sending a large delegation to the exposition."

A large number of Chamber of Commerce members have already signified their intention of making the trip, and it is quite possible that a special train will be necessary to handle the crowd. In addition to the features of the exposition, the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce has planned a special celebration in honor of the Atlanta visitors.

China Buys Less U. S. Cotton by $24,304,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A decrease of $24,304,000 in the value of American cotton goods sold in China in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1913, compared with the goods sold in 1906, which led the United States to undertake an investigation, has resulted in the discovery that the Chinese are making so much of their own cloth that his nation will have to find some substitute for cotton, if it wishes to stimulate a new trade. There are many cotton mills in Japan, which used $25,000,000 worth of American cotton last year. These facts are contained in a statement issued today by the Department of Commerce.

The papers are said to be securities of 47 bona fide companies and all drawing interest. The man is in a state of coma.

Mr. Hancock's Record in the City Council

Voted Several Times Against Electing City Officials by the People

A letter has been sent to the Voters of the City by Mr. W. A. Hancock, candidate for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, in which he takes credit for many things done by the General Council during his extended service in that body.

The record of a public official is always a legitimate subject of discussion when the official offers for re-election. Therefore, we call attention to some specific votes by Mr. Hancock which are not mentioned in his letter.

The City-Executive Committee ordered a vote on the question of electing the Recorder, General Manager Waterworks, City Comptroller, City Marshal, City Electrician, City Clerk, City Building Inspector, City Warden by the people. Mr. John S. Owens was a member of this Committee and voted FOR it.

In this election the people voted over 6,000 to 900 that these officials should be elected by popular vote.

A resolution was introduced in Council to amend the Charter and carry out the decision of the people. A motion was made to lay it on the table. Mr. Hancock voted YES. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 699.) Various motions were made to strike from the list several officials named by the people. Mr. Hancock voted TO STRIKE each one proposed. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 708.) Afterwards a resolution was introduced to "Carry out the will of the people." Mr. Hancock voted "NO." (Minutes of Council No. 22, Page 15.)

Throughout the whole fight Mr. Hancock was "Johnnie on the Spot" and hand in glove with the "City Ring" to defeat the will of the people and voted in favor of all motions to delay or to defeat the expressed decision of the people in the election held on the subject. (Minutes of Council No. 22, Pages 63, 66 and 427.)

The people finally won their fight, and these officials are now elected by popular vote, but it was OVER the vote of Mr. Hancock.

Now, Mr. Voter, if Mr. Hancock, when last in Council, refused to carry out your will, as expressed at the ballot-box, can you expect him to carry out your will, if he is put back in Council, whether you hold an election on the subject or simply express it to him in person? He has shown a contempt for the people, even when they acted and voted together almost unanimously. How can he now ask the same people to re-elect him as their REPRESENTATIVE? A representative is a man who represents. He did not do it. You can not now expect him to do it. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Mr. John S. Owens has never been in politics. He is not lined up with any faction. He will put some "new blood" into our City Government. He is an active, successful business man. He is the kind of man the people are always saying they want in Council. Now is the chance to get SUCH A MAN!

CONTEST BEGINS FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS

E. E. Cox, of Camilla, First to Announce to Succeed the Late S. A. Roddenbery.

Following the funeral at Thomasville of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, of the Second Georgia District, the fight for the seat in Congress made vacant by his death began Monday.

Colonel E. E. Cox, a lawyer of Camilla, is the first to announce. He has been active in politics for a number of years, and has been mentioned as congressional timber before.

It is certain that others will enter the race in a short time. The special election for the unexpired term will be called at an early date. The election for the full term will take place next year.

W. W. Banks, Mayor of Tifton, is a strong probability, his friends urging him to enter the contest. Mr. Banks has also been active in politics for many years.

Another probability is J. L. Hand, of Pelham, ex-State Senator and a man well qualified in every particular to fill the place. He is one of the richest men in Southwest Georgia.

Roscoe Luke, Mayor of Thomasville, is being urged to enter the race, and has the matter under advisment. He is well known throughout the district. He will probably enter.

Judge J. R. Pottle, of Blakely, judge of the Court of Appeals, is another who may enter the fight. The race he won for the Court of Appeals is an indication of his popularity. He will make a strong candidate if he decides to enter.

Jesse Perry, of Camilla, secretary to Governor Slaton, is another possibility. He has shown his strength in politics for a number of years, and is very popular in the district. He was secretary to the late Congressman James M. Griggs.

H. Y. McIntosh, editor of The Albany Herald, is another strong possibility. He has been urged by his friends for a number of years to make the race for Congress from the Second District, and at one time entered the contest, but withdrew before the election.

The Second District embraces the counties of Thomas, Grady, Decatur, Colquitt, Mitchell, Baker, Miller, Early, Tift, Worth Dougherty and Calhoun.

Monument Planned For Roddenbery.

CAIRO, Sept. 29.—The executive officers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Cairo has decided to erect a monument here to the memory of Congressman Roddenbery. This place was his boyhood home.

Immediate steps will be taken to secure funds for this purpose and the matter will be presented to all the unions in the other districts, as well as other organizations and individuals.

Mr. Rodenbery's stand for prohibition was well known, not only in the Second District but in the State and Nation. The local union leaders feel that the sympathizers of the prohibition movement will rally in this cause.

Congressman Buried At Thomasville.

THOMASVILLE, Sept. 29.—More than 1,500 friends attended the funeral of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. It was the largest funeral ever conducted in Thomasville. As a token of respect for the dead statesman, no services were held in any church in the city. On account of the expressed desire of the dead Congressman, the funeral services were held at his home on Hansell street.

The Congressional delegation from Washington arrived at 9:15 o'clock, being met by a special committee appointed by Mayor Luke. After breakfast at a hotel the delegation went to the residence of their late colleague, where they remained until after the funeral services, and then accompanied the body to the cemetery.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. W. Rushin, of Boston, Ga., a friend of Mr. Roddenbery, who paid a short but touching tribute to the dead statesman. Flowers were massed around the casket and about the room. A scene that touched the hearts of those present was when the friends from the rural districts, many of whom had ridden or driven several miles to be present and take a last look at their leader, entered the room and passed in file before the casket.

When the funeral services were over the cortege, more than a mile long, moved to Laurel Hill Cemetery for interment.

Mrs. Roddenbery and two daughters leave to-day for Sylvester, where they will visit Mrs. Gardner Nottingham for a time. John and Yates Roddenbery, sons, return to Athens and Danville, Va., where they are in school.

JACKSON SCHOOLS FULL.

JACKSON, GA., Sept. 29.—A larger registration in the Jackson public schools has been made up to the present time than was ever known before. The total last week reached 365. Many are out-of-town pupils. The matter of a new school building is being agitated.

FRAUD IS LAID TO BIRMINGHAM JEWELERS

New York Diamond Merchants Throw Business of Joseph Rich & Son Into Bankruptcy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Joseph Rich, proprietor of a jewelry store in Birmingham, but a resident of this city, was charged with obtaining thousands of dollars worth of diamonds on false pretenses in a petition in bankruptcy filed against him today in the United States District Court.

Rich and his son Abraham, who acts as buyer for the Southern store, bought diamonds on credit from prominent dealers in this city, according to the petition, and instead of shipping them to Birmingham resold the stones to New York dealers at prices 25 per cent less than their real value.

Attorneys for the petitioning creditors say practically every dealer in the Maiden Lane district extended credit to the firm and a $1,000,000 failure was only averted by the accidental discovery of its illegal dealings.

Judge Charles M. Hough appointed Matthew A. Henkel receiver for the Rich firm and the latter left for Birmingham to take charge of the assets there.

Ball Players Knew Of Rich's Bargains.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—A. V. Abbott, as resident receiver, is in charge of the business of Joseph Rich, of New York, operating here under the name of the Colorado Loan Company, the business being managed by his son, Abraham Rich. The business was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy here and Abbott was placed in charge. Efforts have been made to bring about a settlement of the indebtedness, but so far the creditors have refused to accept the amount offered.

It is said that the diamonds purchased in New York were ostensibly bought for sale to baseball players of the Southern League. That the Birmingham players knew of bargains at the Colorado Loan Company is not denied, but whether or not deals were carried out is not stated. Considerable business was transacted here by the loan company and regular auctions were held.

Troops Stop Race Riot; 10 Are Dead

HARRISTON, MISS., Sept. 29.—With State troops camped in the streets, this town was quiet to-day after being stirred by the worst race riot in its history. Ten persons were dead, two of them mulatto boys, brothers, who were lynched after they had felled 28 persons.

The boys, crazed by drugs, ran amuck, shooting wildly as they ran through the negro quarter. The arrival of the militiamen prevented further bloodshed in an open clash between whites and negroes.

Postmaster Jones Inspects Substations

Postmaster Bolling H. Jones said Monday that he had finished inspecting the 32 postoffice substations located in different sections of the city.

The postmaster said he found them all in excellent condition, and complimented ex-Postmaster Hugh L. McKee on his administration, declaring that everything he had inspected since assuming the postmastership he had found eminently satisfactory.

She said she wanted to join her sweetheart, who is in the navy.

RENFROE MAKES EMPHATIC DENIAL

To the Voters of the First Ward—

During the last hours of the primary some of my opponents are charging that I am a gambler and a drunkard.

This report has, I understand, been circulated by John W. Phillips, king of blind tigers, who has just been released from the chaingang, where he served a twelve months' sentence.

I never saw this man in my life and would not know him if I saw him.

My life record is an open book. The voters have ample opportunity to investigate these charges.

I have never gambled and do not drink. I am a successful business man, interested in the advancement of my ward and the entire city.

If elected, I shall serve efficiently and actively. J. N. RENFROE.

Laughter Lured Her To Death in Darkness

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—The pretty, handsomely gowned woman whose mangled body was found on a railroad track near Wayne, Ill., was lured to her death with humorous stories and the light laugh of the man who took her into the darkness, shot her and left her body to be ground beneath the wheels of a train.

Witnesses were found who saw the pair leave a trolley car laughing over a funny story the man told. A block away, one said, the laughter ended abruptly and a single shot rang out.

Though Legally Dead Man Cashes Legacy

POTTSVILLE, PA., Sept. 29.—Dead by law, William Thomas, of Marshaltown, Iowa, came here to claim a bequest and so successfully established his identity that the court ordered that $475 left to him by John Jankins, of St. Clair, this county, in 1871, be paid.

Thomas, a war veteran, had long been buried from the world in a soldier's home.

The project includes the building of a railway from Mobile to Dauphin Island, crossing the water on a great concrete arch bridge.

Hancock Replies to John S. Owens

I notice John S. Owens has at last resorted "to slinging mud," although he agreed with me to run a clean race. My record in Council, I believe, was in every way satisfactory to the people. He published in Sunday's papers the record of my vote on the election of officials by the people which is misleading. I do not consider it necessary to go into details to explain my vote except to say that the matter of the election of certain officials by the people had been considered at different meetings of the General Council for more than two months. After the resolution had been amended as the people desired that it should be I voted for it. I expect my record in the General Council, as well as in Atlanta, will stand inspection about as well as Mr. Owens' record as a citizen. I am told on good authority that Mr. Owens is the president of the Cement Tile Co., and has a contract with the city this year and has had for the past two years for laying all the tile sidewalks. I am also told that he has succeeded in closing out all the little fellows who were competing with him, and now has the whole business to himself—a regular monopoly. I can furnish the name of the author of this information if desired. I am also informed that Mr. Owens is the same John S. Owens who was Secretary and Treasurer of the Equitable Loan and Security Co., which operated in Atlanta for several years, and was a financial loss to a good many citizens of Atlanta and other cities throughout the State, although it is said he made a fortune for himself, and yet he asks the people of Atlanta to elect him Alderman. Mr. Owens claims he does not belong to any ring; the ring who "framed up" the Charter which was overwhelmingly defeated last Tuesday, ARE FOR J. S. OWENS, and against me, to a man, yet Mr. Owens does not belong to any ring.

My only reason for writing this article is due to the fact that Mr. Owens has broken faith with me, as we had positively agreed to let the people know two gentlemen could run for office without slinging mud.

Respectfully,

W. A. HANCOCK

STATESMEN CALL AT CAPITOL, BUT MISS SLATON

Senator Bacon Acts as Guide to Congressional Delegation to Roddenbery Funeral.

Had Governor John Marshall Slaton been tipped off to the avalanche of national statesmanship to be precipitated upon the State Capitol today likely as not he wouldn't have left Atlanta for Tennessee, at least until after he had availed himself of an opportunity to welcome said avalanche to our fair city.

As it was, about the biggest bunch of national celebrities seen in the Gate City of the South in many moons called at the Capitol in the forenoon to pay its respects to the Chief Magistrate, but there was nothing doing.

The party was escorted to the Capitol by United States Senator Bacon, and, besides Mr. Bacon, was made up of the following gentlemen:

View City From Capitol.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey; Senator Thomas, of Colorado, and Representatives Lee, Hughes, Howard, Tribble, Bartlett, Walker, Edwards, Adamson and Crisp, all of Georgia, and Representatives McLaughlin, of Michigan; Hill, of Illinois, and Naguire, of Nebraska.

This distinguished party was very much disappointed at not finding the Governor in. Failing to find the Governor, however, the party was escorted to the various departments by Senator Bacon, after which all those composing it were carried to the dome and shown the city from that point of vantage.

The Congressional party was returning from the funeral of Representative Roddenbery, held in Thomasville Sunday, and was in Atlanta only about two hours. All returned to Washington on the Southern at 11:01 a. m.

Governor at Nashville.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton are attending the Week-Gray wedding in Nashville, and will not return to Atlanta until Wednesday.

Senators Smith and Bacon spent the morning with friends, while the Georgia Representatives also took advantage of the opportunity to call upon Atlanta friends. The other members of the party spent the morning at the Capital City Club.

An unusually busy man was Senator Smith. He held a long conference with Atlanta's new postmaster, Boiling H. Jones. Mr. Jones accompanied him on a hurried tour of the Federal building and to the Terminal Station. Probably half a hundred persons, each apparently with the most important personal business, were at the Terminal Station to buttonhole Senator Smith and hold private conversation with him.

Atlantans Visit Senators.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, and Senator Thomas, of Colorado, who were the other two Senators in the party, were visited at the Capital City Club by a number of prominent Atlantans during the morning hours.

The party left Thomasville Sunday night in special Pullmans, and arrived at 7 a. m. Monday. In the party were a number of secretaries to the Congressmen and other Georgians who are now located at the National Capital.

Tango Teacher Slain And Thrown on Rails

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—A warrant was taken out to-day for Everett Rexroat, son of a wealthy Macomb (Ill.) farmer, charging him with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a teacher of the tango and other dances in Chicago. She was killed and her body was thrown on the tracks of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad near Wayne, Ill., last Friday night.

While the warrant for Rexcoat was being held up the police of Wheaton admitted they were searching for a Wheaton man who disappeared Saturday.

LondonLancetAssails Bacon-Egg Breakfast

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Traditional eggs and bacon breakfast is assailed by The London Lancet, the foremost medical journal in England, which discusses the advisability of going without breakfast altogether.

"After a night's sleep," it says, "bodily strength, both nervous and muscular, is at its height, and work can be carried on without food."

A light breakfast of coffee and rolls is advised for the brainworker though for the manual laborer, the breakfastless plan is unsuitable.

No comedy of recent years has received more praise from the press of such great world centers as London, New York, Chicago and Boston than "Ready Money," which will be presented at the Atlanta to-night, Tuesday matinee and night, under the management of William A. Brady, Ltd. It will be played by a company organized with Mr. Brady's well-known care and discrimination, and an artistic scenic setting will be provided.

"Sold for Money."

"Sold for Money" is the title of the new play by Cecil Spooner, which is to be the attraction at the Lyric all this week, and which had such a successful run in the Cecil Spooner Theater in New York last year. It is a play in the same class with "Within the Law."

"CASCARETS" FINE FOR THE BOWELS

No Headache, Bad Taste, Sour Stomach or Coated Tongue by Morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too. BECKER IN DEATH CELL TRIES TO AID SULZER

Condemned Slayer Said to Have Prepared Evidence Dooming Political Existence of Many.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Sing Sing's ghastly death house to-day contributed an amazing chapter to the story of the impeachment of Governor William Sulzer, in which it appears that Lieutenant Charles Becker has prepared evidence striking at the political life if not at the personal freedom of a dozen men high in the official life of the State. This story, alleged to be backed by such proof as a shrewd and resourceful detective might produce, has been offered by Becker in return for his life.

This is the story:

At the beginning of the fight upon the Governor, emissaries were sent to Becker at Sing Sing for the purpose of getting from him any facts he might have concerning the connection between politics and crime in the city of New York. But Becker demanded that before one line of his evidence went to expectant channels, a pardon should be signed which would leave him absolutely free from any chance of punishment growing out of the murder of Herman Rosenthal in front of the Hotel Metropole on July 16, 1912.

In the meantime the power of Governor Sulzer to pardon anybody had vanished. Those men who were named in the Becker "confession" were apprised of the fact. They set to work all of the wheels under their command to prevent the production of the statement.

But its general character is known to too many men to permit the fact of its existence to escape the public. Becker has been assured, so far as anyone knows, without any authority from any person in Albany who is or may be in a position to make good the assurance, that he will be kindly treated in the event that Governor Sulzer is impeached and his story remains among the things untold.

The High Court of Impeachment to-day swung into a week that promises to see the close of the testimony for the prosecution. Attorneys for the board of managers said at the beginning of the day that they did not think it possible that their case would consume more than this week. At the outset of the day they were in doubt as to what witnesses they would call when the court resumed its session at 2 o'clock.

PROMINENT VETERAN DEAD.

CEDARTOWN, Sept. 29.—General J. O. Waddel, past commander of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans, one of Polk County's leading citizens, died to-day. The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

ROAD MOVEMENT IS SPURRED BY PATHFINDER

Texas Boosters Vote Bonds to Assure Passage of Highway Thro' Their Counties.

That the Texas good roads and highway boosters think nothing of driving 100 miles to meet the pathfinding car, was the feature of a telegram received Monday morning from E. L. Ferguson, official pathfinder for the all-Southern transcontinental trail. The tourists left San Angelo Monday morning for El Paso.

"A rousing meeting with 21 delegates from every town and county within a radius of 300 miles met us here," wired Mr. Ferguson, "and large delegations from Irion County, including county officials, presented to us a petition signed by every voter in the county, urging the routing of the highway through Irion."

"The route," Mr. Ferguson added, "was immediately accepted, and $20,000 in bonds was voted at once for good roads."

The pathfinding car will reach Fort Stockton Tuesday and Alpine or Marfa, Texas, Wednesday.

John S. Owens is a clean-cut business man. The politicians can't handle him, therefore they're fighting him.

DON'T TAKE THE WRONG MEDICINE

If Your Liver Gets Lazy You Need a Liver Tonic, Not Merely a Laxative for the Bowels.

Many people take a simple laxative when their liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at home and lose a day from your business.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tone. Dodson's Liver Tone must be all they claim for it because they guarantee it to take the place of dangerous calomel and agree to hand back the money with a smile to any person who tries Dodson's Liver Tone and is not satisfied with the relief it gives.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a harmless vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation, biliousness, sour stomach, and the other troubles that come from a torpid liver.

All druggists give it their personal guarantee and if you will ask about this guarantee you will protect yourself against imitations that are not guaranteed. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents.—Adv.

STATEMENT TO VOTERS

Charles B. Alverson, Candidate for Council From the First Ward, Issues Statement.

Many citizens of the First Ward urged me to enter the race for Councilman on the plea that they wanted an active business man to represent them in Council.

Believing it to be the duty of a good citizen to serve his ward when his fellow citizens desire it, I entered the race.

Now, a short statement is in order to advise the voters as to my position on matters affecting the ward.

In the first place, our greatest need is a new, modern, well-equipped brick building for Davis Street School. I have the assurance, from a majority of the members of the new Council, that if elected they will co-operate with me in securing this building. This shows that they are very friendly to my candidacy and will do what they can to help me improve our ward.

If this is not done I promise to be one of 100 to give $500 each to secure such a building.

I also promise that, in either event, this work shall be done with white labor, as I only employ white labor in my construction work and at my store. I started as a poor boy and know how hard it is for them to build up and I believe they should be given the preference. There are plenty of white carpenters who have families who should be given this work.

My interests both in business and in property lie in the First Ward, and I expect to give my best efforts to secure the Rhodes-Spring street viaduct. I have studied this for some time and I know its needs and how much it will help our ward.

If I fail to do this, I agree to be one of 200 citizens to give $1,000 each to secure this very important work.

I do business very near West Mitchell street and have occasion to use West Hunter, Nelson and Walker streets nearly every day, and I am going to see that these streets get the improvement they so much need.

I have always taken an active interest in public matters affecting the city and ward, but I have never seen my opponent, Mr. Renfroe, at any public meeting at any time looking toward the improvement or upbuilding of the ward before he entered this race. Very few of our people knew that he claimed to live in the First Ward. My information is that he traveled over the country for many years for the U. S. Gas Company and only severed his connection a short while back, and now comes forward and asks to represent our ward. Most of the people to whom I have talked think he should wait a while and become acquainted with us before offering for office.

I know the people, I know the ward and I know the city, and I can secure for our section all that any representative could. I will be ready at all times to confer with my fellow citizens and co-operate with them in all things for the betterment of our ward.

CHARLES B. ALVERSON.

HERO BEARS TWO WOMEN FROM FIRE PERIL

Unknown Rescuer Vanishes After Braving Smoke and Flame to Warn Boarders.

Fifteen persons, many of them women and children, were forced to flee in their night clothes early Monday morning when fire, breaking out in the residence of John W. Dean, No. 107 Piedmont avenue, practically destroyed the building.

A street car man, who was passing along Piedmont avenue, discovered the flames after they had gained considerable headway and aroused the sleeping occupants of the building, probably prevented a loss of life.

Upon seeing the roof of the house a mass of fire, the passerby burst through the front door shouting the alarm. The flames quickly ate down into the framework of the dwelling. The stranger was forced to carry two of the frightened women out of the burning building to save them.

Several fire companies responded to the alarm, Company No. 4 arriving first. Difficulty was experienced by the firemen in entering the house on account of the smoke. Entrance was finally made through a window, and in a remarkably short time the flames were subdued. The fire had gained such headway and burned so rapidly that the house was almost totally destroyed, although the firemen were on the scene in less than five minutes after the alarm was given.

After seeing that all of the occupants of the house were safe, the unknown man left hurriedly, saying he was afraid of being late at his work.

Horse Guard Owners.

The house is located at the corner of Piedmont and Edgewood avenues, and is the property of the Governor's Horse Guard. John W. Dean has operated a boarding house there for some time. It was her, that Mrs. L. R. Glenn, wife of the Atlanta contractor who eloped with Mrs. Ione Pidcock, wife of the Moultrie (Ga.) millionaire, remained while her husband was confined in the county jail after being brought back from Texas, where he was arrested with Mrs. Pidcock.

The fire apparently started in a closet on the second floor of the house, but the cause is unknown. It is a frame house, erected many years ago.

Fifteen persons were asleep in the house at the time of the fire. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sherman and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Humes, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cook, H. C. Fisher, L. N. Randolph and A. F. Bailey. Practically all of the men are railroad employees with the exception of Fisher, who is in the jewelry business.

The horse was insured for $3,000 and it is believed the damage may be held to a little more than $1,000, according to Capitain O. L. Rudisill, commander of the Governor's Horse Guard.

The cavalry company came into possession of the property fifteen years ago, purchasing it from Mrs. G. Loving. The troop used the basement as a storage room for many years and rented out the upper stories for a boarding house. The property has increased greatly in value since purchased by the troop, and an offer of $55,000 was recently refused for it.

Bull Moose Leader Defies Old Parties

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"The Bull Moose party is far from dead—in fact, it is very much alive and will be found kicking strenuously when the proper time comes."

Blackbirder's Crew Run Down at Last; Girl Pet of Pirates

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HONOLULU, Sept. 29.—The chase for the "blackbirders," a pirate crew that has been terrorizing the islands of the South Seas, has ended, according to a wireless message received here to-day from Captain Tapham, of the revenue cutter Keokuk. Every man of the pirate band was captured, Captain Tapham said, after a hard fight. The prisoners will be sent to San Francisco, where the revenue cutter's captain will recommend that every one be hanged.

Among the pirates, Captain Tapham found a beautiful young Spanish girl, Estella D'Ortez, who is adored by the pirates as their most precious treasure. She has been among the pirates for ten years, and was 5 years old when she fell into their hands.

The chief of the pirates confessed that his band sunk her father's boat and saved only the beautiful child.

President Wilson Sees Polaire Dance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—President Wilson witnessed the "Triple Alliance Review" of Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, Mlle. Polaire and Gertrude Hoffman at the Belasco Theater.

Stewart Richardson gave a number of dances which included one representing the awakening of the world at the break of dawn. In this the dancer was barefooted and clothed only in flimsy veils to represent the morning mist and as the dance progressed several of the veils were dispensed with.

Mlle. Polaire included an Apache dance in her portion of the program while Gertrude Hoffman gave her new review.

'Barbary Coast' to Defy Closing Order

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The thumbs of Chief of Police White have been turned down hard on a plan of resort owners to continue the "Barbary Coast" on a soft drink basis. Hard drinks or soft drinks, dance halls are dance halls, said the Chief to-day in an announcement that women would not be permitted in the resorts after to-morrow evening, even if liquor was not served.

Notwithstanding the announcement by the Chief, the resort owners were preparing for Tuesday night's "grape juice opening."

Garros Says He Can Fly Across Atlantic

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Roland G. Garros, who made an aeroplane flight across the Mediterranean, declares a flight across the Atlantic Ocean is possible.

His plan would be to divide the journey into three stages—from England to Iceland, from Iceland to Newfoundland, from Newfoundland to the United States.

Two of these stages would be shorter than his France to Tunis flight, and the third very little longer.

WOMAN HELD AS $30,000 THEFT IS PROBED

New York Officers Arrest Wilmington, N. C., Matron Accused of Stealing Friend's Fortune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, a leader in Wilmington (N. C.) society, was arrested at the Hotel Endicott charged with embezzling $30,000 from her lifelong friend, Mrs. Helen P. Lemassena, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Nichols, who is a tall, well-dressed woman of striking appearance, was dumfounded when placed under arrest. She requested to be allowed to remain at the hotel under guard until the matter was cleared up, but she was taken to the station house.

The arrest was made at the instigation of Mrs. Lemassena's son, John P. Lemassena, who has followed Mrs. Nichols through seven States during the past six months. He told the police that his mother had intrusted Mrs. Nichols with $30,000 to invest and that shortly after this Mrs. Nichols disappeared from Wilmington.

To Ask Requisition For Mrs. Nichols.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 29.—Solicitor Homer L. Lyon, of the Eighth Judicial District, arrived here to-day from Whiteville to prepare requisition papers in the case against Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, who has been arrested in New York for the New Hanover County authorities, charged with embezzlement.

The papers will be forwarded to Raleigh for Governor Craig's signature. Sheriff P. Cowan, of this county, will leave for New York immediately upon receipt of them.

Sheriff Cowan was notified from New York of the arrest of Mrs. Nichols, and it was indicated in the telegram that she would refuse to return to North Carolina without extradition papers. She is being held pending the necessary papers and arrival of an officer from this county.

Mrs. Nichols is an elderly woman, remarkably well preserved, of handsome appearance and charming personality. She moved in exclusive social circles in Wilmington and entertained lavishly. She was widely known and was prominent in several charitable organizations.

There are three separate indictments against the woman, in the aggregate charging the embezzlement of $15,000. Civil suit also has been started, and the complaint in this alleges embezzlement of $27,000. The money, it is alleged, was in possession of Mrs. Nichols, to be invested in stocks and bonds for Mrs. Lemassena, who had been her close friend and who had great confidence in Mrs. Nichols' ability as a financier. Certain amounts were sent to Mrs. Lemassena at stated intervals, it is said, supposed to represent interest on investments. The indictment and arrest of Mrs. Nichols has caused a big sensation here and elsewhere.

NEW CASH PRIZE OFFER IN WANT AD CONTEST

Little Effort Will Put Live Candidate in Fine Position—Lead Changes Almost Daily.

In again, out again, Finnegan.

To-day one contestant is ahead and to-morrow another, in The American and Georgian great Want Ad Voting Contest. No one knows who will win the $1,000 in gold, the touring car or any of the other handsome prizes, until the last day of the race.

One thing is certain—the prizes are going to be won. The winners will be the hardest workers. To use the homely saying, it will be the "insistent, consistent and persistent pluggers that will get there." They will reap in the Bag of Gold, and ride in the handsome touring car, and carry off the other splendid prizes.

New Cash Offer.

Are YOU an insistent, consistent and persistent plugger? Just think of that double trip to California with all your expenses paid by The Georgian from the time you start until your return! YOU GET IT FREE.

For the next few days The Georgian will give the energetic workers additional cash prizes for their extra efforts put forth in the contest. We will give the organizations $100 and $50, respectively, for the best work done before October 15.

There are three cash prizes offered to the individual candidates. To the candidate selling the largest number of coupon books before that date will be given $50 in gold; to the candidate selling second largest number of books will be given $25, and to the candidate selling third largest number of books will be given $10.

Only the business turned in to the contest office since last Monday will be counted on this offer.

If some of the candidates who seem to think their chances are small could only know the little earnest effort it would take to put them in the lead of their most dreaded rival on this offer, we are sure they would surprise themselves by the amount of work they accomplished.

Work thus done is never regretted. It would certainly humiliate you should the final vote show that you had allowed yourself to be beaten when you could easily have won a prize.

Keep your mind on your own business and don't mind the rumors of what someone else has done. The count of others will not get you anything.

The work you do to-day may win the touring car or the $1,000 in gold.

Make up your mind to at least win that $50 October 15. YOU CAN.

Look like a winner October 15 and you are likely to be a winner of the best November 15.

Very few races are won on the home stretch unless the rest of the race has been consistently run.

Advertisers are waiting for the energetic workers to supply them with the coupons with which to pay their bills. "First there, first served."

CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DuBOSE COMPANY

ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

Hundreds of Answers to the Suit Question

Choosing the suit this Fall is a very pleasant task—at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co.'s.

It is pleasant because so much has been done for you before you ever see the suits we offer.

The bare fact that here are hundreds of answers to the suit question is of little importance in itself.

But such answers!

We have been more scrupulous than you could ever be—we have not admitted a style that is doubtful.

Suits had to be right!

We did what we are now advising you to do.

We went to the makers who are closest to Paris, those who seem to have the knack of doing things a bit better than the average, of adding the touch, of watching the details that distinguish the suit you will like from the ordinary kind.

Any reason why a woman with a suit to select should deny herself the privilege of such a suit store as this?

Women's Blanket Robes

They are rich affairs this season—following the tendencies that dominate the styles.

Great swirling patterns, neat patterns. Materials full of warmth and comfort. Indian effects seem to lead.

Right now the display is very interesting. Then there are others for men—such that keep a man at home o' nights.

They were priced at

$3, $3.95, $5 to $7.50

Scotch Plaid Skirts

Their vogue is pronounced—that is the vogue for such skirts as you will see here—in New York it amounts to a rage.

They are smart—the "Scotchiest" of Scotch plaids are used, but soft toned colors, showing dark green, navy, purple and dark red in wonderfully effective combinations. The models are draped, and some are very wide in the hips, all with raised waist line.

See them! They are priced at

$6.50, $7.98, $8.75 and $11.98

Blouses That Bloomed in Paris---First

And flowers of fashion they are!
Paris has outdone herself this Fall in Blouses, too.
There is an oddity and novelty about them that no other season has brought.
It shows in
—fabrics.
—trimmings.
—colors.
—fashioning.

There are crepes that are the filmiest tissues, chiffons burdened with pattern all-over laces in curious "ranging" patterns. There are bead trimmings—an Orinetal influence—and there are laces side by side with velvets and tapestry trimmings.

There are colors that a native Bulgarian would affect—to match or to contrast with your suit.

They are fashioned—it seems Paris was in a gay mood—into boleros, vest effects, overhanging shoulders, Russian blouses—one after another.

And all with distinguishing Paris touch that marks the difference between elegance and extravagance. Atlanta women will appreciate this!

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading a story last nite which was rote by Mister Walter Scott & it toald about a grate fiter naimed the Black Knight. It toald how he was so big & gal-lant & strong & fast that nobody had much chanst aggenst him in a conflick. It sed that wen his long sword flashed in the air men was sure to fall on every hand.

I toald Pa & Ma that I wud like to be a Black Knight like that, but that there wasent any chanst to be a Black Knight anymoar.

Wen I was a littel gurl I used to dreem that wen I grew up I was going to marry a knight. Littel did I dreem what the future had in store for me, Ma sed. If I had known that I wasent going to marry a knight, I wud have married Herman Schultz. He was only a delivery boy then, Ma sed, in our littel hoam town, but he is a milyunair out in Wyoming now.

Pa jest laffed, beekaus he knew Ma dident meen it. I cud have been a knight if I wanted to, Pa sed, but the only thing is that a knight can't get a job nowadays. Imagine a knight going into a stoar on Whitehall & asking for a job knighting.

The knights in olden days was yung aristocrats Pa sed & eeven if they did lern how to swing a sword or throw a speer they dident have hard mussel & they cuddent have lasted vary long in a fite. It was the old roundheaded huskies that did the reel fiteing then, the saim as now, Pa sed. Thay fought and died, but thay fought like reel men, & jest beekaus thay dident happen to know any grate riters or poets there deeds was nevver speak of. A knight wud fite about ten minutes if he cud pick out a soft spot, Pa sed, & then he wud talk a long haired poet hoam to dinner with him & rite about Sir Lancelot holding off part of a army. Thay fought thare battles the saim way Teddy Rusevelt shot big gaim in Africa, Pa sed, with a lot of huskies all around them to help them to a place of safety when the going got hevvy. Doant tell me, Pa sed, about them fiteing knights.

A Glad Relief.

"Thank Heaven, those bills are got rid of!" said Bilkins, fervently, as he tore up a bundle of statements of accounts dated August 1.

"All paid, eh?" said Mrs. Bilkins.

"Oh, no," said Bilkins. "The duplicates dated September 1 have come in, and I don't have to keep these any longer."

Grew Longer.

A farmer who was known to be very mean bought a coat for his servant boy. When the boy had the coat fitted on, the farmer remarked: "Bill, I am afraid it is a bit too short."

"Never mind, sir," replied Bill, "it will be long enough before I get another."

A Thrilling Story of a Modern Monte Cristo

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed. "D'ye want a job?"

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"Dash my buttons, an' you're a likely sort of kid to get it, too. In you go. I'll pay the bill. Lord lumme, it'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. 'Ere, I'll bet you two bob 'e pays up."

"Done! Walk in, sir. Wot'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellently, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

The boy held out his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would ha' bin just about his age. Lord lumme, I 'ope the lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes'm. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

After crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to rehearse carefully the program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacity unlooked for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all. Of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond, and would demand its earthly pedigree.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date. The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's Mews altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: "Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants, Kimberley, Amsterdam and London."

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Is Mr. Isaacstein in?" said Philip.

"Oah, yess," grinned the other.

"Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oah, yess." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught its drift yet. The gaunt and unkempt visitor was evidently burlesquing the accent of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a few seconds. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the stamp book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here?" he said at last.

"Oah, yess. You vil be funny, eh?" The other smirked over the hidden humor of the situation and Philip understood that if he would see the great man of the firm he must adopt a more emphatic tone.

"I had better warn you that Mr. Wilson, of Messrs. Grant & Sons, Ludgate Hill, sent me here to see Mr. Isaacstein. Am I to go back to Mr. Wilson and say that the office boy refuses to admit me?"

There was a sting in the description, coming from such a speaker.

"Look ere," was the angry retort. "Go avay und blay, vil you? I'm pizzy."

Philip reached quickly through the little arch, grabbed a handful of shirt, tie and waistcoat, and dragged the big nose and thick lips violently against the wires of the grille.

"Will you do what I ask, or shall I try and pull you through?" he said, quietly.

But the boy's ready yell brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.

With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein. The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.

Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.

"What the deuce——" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.

"He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"

Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined utterance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request.

Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lend effect to Isaacstein's wit when he said:

"Is this a joke?"

All the clerks guffawed in chorus. Fortunately, Isaacstein was in a good humor. He had just purchased a pearl for 250 pounds, which he would sell to Lady Somebody for 800 pounds, to match another in an earring.

"It appears to be," said Philip, when the merriment had subsided.

For some reason the boy's gray, earnest eyes conquered the big little man's amused scrutiny.

"Now, boy, be quick. What is it?" he said testily, and every clerk bent to his task.

"I have told you, sir. I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you with regard to business of an important nature."

"You say Mr. Wilson sent you—Mr. Wilson, of Grant & Sons?"

"Yes, sir."

Isaacstein yielded to amazed curiosity.

"Step in here," he said, and led the way to his private office, surprising himself as well as his assistants by this concession.

Philip closed the door and Isaacstein turned sharply at the sound, but the boy gave him no time to frame a question.

"I want you to buy this," he said, handing over the diamond.

Cross Fire.

Isaacstein took it, and gave it one critical glance. He began to wabble again.

"Do you mean to say Mr. Wilson sent you to dispose of this stone to me?" he demanded.

"Not exactly, sir. I showed it to him and he recommended me to come to you."

Well, it mattered not. The courage of despair which nerved him the previous night came to his aid again. He would defy them all, careless of consequence.

The policeman was saying:

"It's a queer affair, sir. Did he really say he had lots more of 'em."

"Yes, yes! Do you think I am romancing? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of these stones, boy?"

Philip, with lips tensely set, was desperately cool again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting he," said the boy. "I merely wish to put my hand in my pocket. Are you afraid of me, that you hold me so fast?"

The policeman, like the rest, did not fail to notice Philip's diction. The scornful superiority of his words, the challenge of the final question, took him aback. He relaxed his grip and grinned confusedly.

Philip instantly produced his paper of diamonds and opened it widely, so that all the stones could be seen. He handed the parcel to the policeman.

"Take good care of them, constable," he said. "Judging from results, they would not be safe in that man's hands."

But Isaacstein did not hear the insult. When he saw the collection he nearly lost his senses. What had he done? Was he or the boy mad? Veins stood out on his forehead, and he wobbled so fearfully that he clutched the desk for support. A scarecrow of a boy wandering about London with thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds in his pocket wrapped up in a piece of newspaper like so many sweets. There were not any meteoric diamonds of such value in all the museums and private collections in the world. He began to perspire. Even the policeman was astounded, quite as much at being called "constable" by Philip as by the mean appearance of articles presumably of great value.

"This is a rum go. What do you make of it, Mr. Isaacstein?" he said.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. He shows a piece of his find to a jeweler and discovers he is fabulously rich, but faces the problem of selling his meteoric diamonds. London's best diamond expert becomes excited over the meteoric find.

Now Go On With the Story.

DANGER SIGNAL TO WOMEN

Is what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness and the blues. In nine cases out of ten they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, curable by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool dissolve a little saltpeter in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpeter water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table, rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterward be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

ACT INDIFFERENTLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

The heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had many girl and boy friends and they all acted nice until they all played false. Now, should I break friendship with all of them and stay home without friends?

H. H.

And grow sour, suspicious and cynical? Certainly not. Go out and make more friends, and be quite sure that none of the blame of unfaithfulness lies at your door.

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales? TERRIBLE ORDEAL SAFELY ENDED

Broken in Health, Miserable, Suffering, For a Score of Years, Lady Came Safely Through Ordeal.

Johnson's Bayou, La.—Mrs. L. P. Semar, of this town, who has been in a deplorable condition for years, now makes the following statement: "I was a great sufferer, for 20 years, with pains in my back, right side, headache and lower bowels, was very irregular, and also suffered terribly at times, with dizziness and faintness.

During this time, I tried six different doctors, but could get no relief.

I heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it. After having taken a course of this treatment, (6 bottles), according to directions, I feel no pain, am regular, am able to do all of my work and, in fact, feel like a new woman.

I can surely recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to all women suffering from female disorders."

Cardui is the ideal medicine for women. It is prepared especially for women, and contains ingredients which act directly on the weak womanly organs, thus helping to build up, in a gentle, natural way, the entire womanly constitution to a healthy condition.

The wonderful success which Cardui has attained, in its past 50 years of continuous use, is due principally to its merit. It has helped many hundreds of thousands of weak women. It will surely help you, too.

Try Cardui.

The Lover and the Walnut

Sometimes It's a Hard Nut to Crack—Where Violence Fails, and Only Soft Appeal and Cunning Will Bring Her Out of Her Shell and Into Your Arms!

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I KNOW a chap—a darling young chap—who's a winner at all things. Or he was until he ran face to face with the "Golden Girl." The girl who made his heart a house of pain—who made all other girls in the world look like the glass set in the brass ring you get in a "prize" candy box alongside of a blue diamond!

He has tact and sweetness, honesty and tenderness, and he's a "crack" at every game that takes personal bravery, mental courage, skill and patience. And just the sort to take a girl's eyes and heart with him every move he makes—if he'll only "act natural"! In this—his biggest game—he has still his courage, but his skill and tact, his sweetness and patience, have gone off and left him right in the spot on the highway where he needs them the most. He's trying to win the Golden Girl with a club!— like a cave man. He bullies her and he scolds her, and he tries to prove to her where she's "mad" not to love him, and he calls upon all the gods of a man in love to witness how cold her heart is! And the girl, while he's breaking his heart for her, is all tight in her little shell and she won't come out. He is still sane enough to have a sneaking notion that she loves him a little—to know that she isn't really such an icy little woman—and to wonder dimly why she is holding out in such fashion. So he agonizes and fumes and raves and goes after the nut with a sledge-hammer! And there isn't a sound from within, and the shell holds tight without a crack!

If he'd only remember the fairy story of the gnome who loved and wanted the pixie in the walnut. He pounded and toiled and sweat with his heavy stone sledge. And then he sat upon the nut and wept bitter tears that tasted salty where they ran close to his lips. Now wielding a sledge wasn't the only thing the gnome could do. He could play so sweetly on a tiny violin that even the shy tree frog would lean and listen. So he dried his tears and rubbed his face with his red coat sleeve and managed a smile, and tucking his music box under his chin he drew the bow across the singing strings and played. And lo! after a few sweet measures the crack of the nut grew slowly wider—it yawned wider to the blue sky, and out of it, into the happy gnome's heart, crept the timid pixie who lived therein.

There are women who answer only the call of the sledge-hammer—whose wild hearts leap to violence. But the Golden Girl isn't that kind. Remember the fairy story, boy. Swinging the sledge-hammer isn't the only thing you can do. You've forgotten your violin. Draw your bow across it the very sweetest you know how, and I promise you the shell will open of itself and your elf will fly into your heart. Raving and storming isn't the only strength you have. You've forgotten your sweetness,-your tenderness, your cunning. Lay siege with the music of these three, and I swear the Golden Girl will glow and reach to you. Under the pressure of her two white hands the shell will yawn and yield her up.

Sometimes it's a hard nut to crack—where violence fails and only soft appeal and cunning will avail!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us and she is one of those flattering kind; she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day right before me she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I don't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heartbroken. What shall I do?

SAD WIFE.

HEARTBROKEN, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered. Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say so right then and there? Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John; I'm so proud of him myself sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish?" And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind, is she? Well, I'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

He's All Right.

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pusscat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? You let him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and quick-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way, or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming? Cry when she's gone? Scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman, to be sure!

The Only Way.

Have cousin at the house—have her there morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, ask her opinion of men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send John in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him sit up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat; have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expects men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, smile and cajole and be nicer than ever cousin dared to be, and wach results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown-up boys, you know, just grown-up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

Same as Others.

"Say, if you were seated in the tube, and every seat was taken, and a lady entered, what would you do?"

"I'd pretend I was asleep."

Doing a Man's Part.

"What are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" replied the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

Fishers of Men

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WE are all fishers of men, and by "We" I mean every one of my sex.

And it is not to our discredit. The Lord implanted in every girl's heart a longing for love that is not satisfied in the love of father, mother, brother, sister or friend. It is a longing that grows with her years, showing first in her smiling overtures as a baby to some boy and never ending till it finds satisfaction in the love of a husband and child.

She may grow old and gray in spinsterhood; she may judge man's love by the unhappy experience of some sister and decry it; she may despise the dependence that comes with love and deny it, but to the end of her days, though her tongue may scoff and her ears refuse to hear, there remains at the bottom of her heart a longing for it that is never stilled. And no woman is normal until she has known it.

We are all fishers of men. To deny it is to deny the plan of Nature. The only difference is in outward manifestations of this great inward desire. Some of us stand for life looking wistfully at the water waiting for the fish to jump out at our feet, and others secure poles early, change the bait to suit the game, and fish assiduously.

We all want love. We have always been told that it is most maideniy to wait till it comes to us voluntarily. But fish so rarely jump out of the water, and the years come and go, each one taking with it some charm that should by all rules of the game have served as bait, and we find ourselves threatened with a life-time of loneliness and heart hunger.

It is fair, then, considering how much love means, and the desolation of life without it, to suggest to nice little girls, with their hearts beating fast with alternate hope and despair, how they may use a little bait modestly and effectively.

All Are Vain.

The finest man in the world is a vain, weak creature, and it is always the finest man in the world who is blindest about the opposite sex and needs a guide to reach the altar. It was never necessary to make an effort to win the admiration of a worthless man. Very often he makes love-making his business, and consequently never has a business that will support a wife and child.

A nice little girl named Mary, who wants to win a husband and confesses to this most normal and most womanly desire, writes me:

"I am a young girl of twenty-two, and meet a lot of nice young men and go out a great deal with them. I have a host of girl friends, and while in their company I can converse with ease on almost any topic, but just as soon as I am alone in a gentleman's company it seems I have nothing to talk about, which is a very awkward position. Please advise me what topics are mostly to be discussed and whether talking about business is a boring one. I must add that I am not up to the mark on books, and consequently can not talk about them."

Thank heaven you can't! There is a big score in your favor to start with, for the girl who says suddenly to a man, "Have you read Maeterlinck's 'Pelleas and Melisande?'" or, "As Byron says: 'You remember that quotation, I am sure,' etc.," and looks with a surprised superiority when he confesses he never reads more than this newspapers and the baseball scores on the billboards, is doomed to stay on the bank forever.

Business. If he is worth while, he dotes on it, and is an enthusiast on anything that pertains to it. Don't be afraid of results if you show an interest in the most vital interest he has. And a better topic, the best of all, is to engage him in conversation about himself. It is honey on his tongue and music in his ears, and if you can hang entranced on his account of his first skates, and grow breathless with delight over his favorite way of cooking fish, you have him on your line and coming slowly and surely out of the water.

One Way.

Be a good listener. The man who was won by being talked to death is too weak to be ranked as a man. Let him do the talking. Believe me, Mary dear, the best of them like appreciation of the words of wisdom that are always dropping from their lips and turn oftenest, stay longest, and think most, of the girl who listens to their most commonplace talk as if she were hearing the music of the angels.

We are all fishers of men, Mary. But remember always that it is wise to consider the good and bad points of the fish before casting in a line. Take care that your longing doesn't magnify into a whale a fish that is only a minnow.

Vice Versa.

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door. "Stop!" said the minister; "the baby's not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit, and made the audible remark: "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? But you're a-disturbin' of 'im!"

Higher Education.

Paterfamilias was lecturing his son on education. "Look here, my boy," he said. "I made my pile with only a common school education."

"I daresay, dad," replied the son; "but it takes a college education to know how to spend it."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading about a little kid that walked 14 miles to and from school every day," said the Manicure Lady. "I'll bet that kid will be a great man some day."

"I hope so," said that Head Barber. "He is entitled to something after he grows up, and a kid in the city would never walk one-tenth that far if he had to."

"I guess the days of great men is kind of past and gone away," said the Manicure Lady. "As dad was saying the other night, we have a lot of great men now, but when you look one of them over and compare him to the great men of the past he is a few stacks shy. The old gent says that we don't need any great men nowadays, because he thinks that everybody is getting dippy in the cities and taking nothing serious any more. He said he never liked to hear folks calling Theodore Roosevelt 'Teddy.'"

"I think the same as your father," said the Head Barber. "When I was a kid I wanted to be like George Washington but when I grew older and figured that the country had one father I stopped trying to be great and went barbering. The way I feel now, if I can make enough to get by and keep up my insurance I am satisfied."

"That's how Wilfred feels too," said the Manicure Lady. "He had a bug for a long time that he was going to be the Lord Byron of the century, but when he found out that nobody cared much for serious poetry he started in writing popular songs and says he would rather be a humble bard getting the sugar than a great genius looking around for somebody to indorse his note."

"Times have certainly changed," mused the Head Barber. "The world ain't got much time nowadays for anybody with old fashioned ideas. There ain't no dignity, no reverence, no old homesteads, no quilting bees or logging bees, no church sociables, no sleigh-rides. When I was a kid I would take off my cap and get red in the face if a lady spoke to me, but if a lady speaks to a strange kid now and asks him to throw away a cigarette, he will say 'Tell it to Sweeney.' I don't know what everything is coming to."

Don't Suffer With Indigestion or Stomach Trouble---Quaker Herb Extract Will Cure You

There Are Thousands of Atlanta's Best Citizens Who Have Been Cured by Quaker and Are Willing for the World to Know That It Was the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm That Did It.

The Health Teacher when here had proven to the people of Atlanta the same as he has in thousands of others, that when he came here he brought rejoicing and happiness into thousands of homes that heretofore have been misery and sorrow, not from want or poverty—no, no—but for health and strength. In some homes it was a darling baby or older child whose little life seemed to be ebbing slowly away; in many cases it was worms of some kind that a few doses of Nature's own Quaker Extract would expel, and they were made well. Some homes were sorrowful on account of a poor, weak, run-down mother, who was dragging around from day to day, at times more dead than alive—pain in the back, that tired, languid feeling, could not bear anything tight around her waist, stomach would bloat, belching, shortness of breath, dizziness, headache at times, sometimes did not care to live, and tried every treatment with no relief—but here is where the Quaker Extract shows you Quaker is in a class by itself, for it cures just these kinds of cases, and thousands of women and children are living witnesses to prove it.

The husband and father that provides for home and family the same as Mr. K. F. Horder, No. 70 Fowler street, by occupation a meat cutter at Singleton Market on Cone street, who has had catarrh of the stomach, a soreness most of the time, had like a lump in his throat that he could not get up or down, his bowels very constipated, had to take pills, pellets, salts or something all the time to make them act, should do like him. He got one bottle of Quaker Extract, used it ten days, then said: "Give me three more bottles of Quaker Extract, for it it is the best medicine in the world; the pain in my chest is gone, my stomach does not bloat, my bowels are just acting fine, and it's the only medicine I ever took that just toned and seemed to build me right up."

Mrs. E. W. Gorman, who resides at Ninth street, who was laid up three months with rheumatism in arms, shoulders, back and lower limbs so bad that she never put her foot on the floor in weeks, tried every known remedy without even relief, and two bottles of Quaker Extract and two 25c bottles of Oil of Balm have cured her. She now feels like a girl—no aches or pains—and says that Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm did more for her than $100 worth of other medicine.

Now, this is the way the Health Teacher proves what he says. Quaker Remedies cure, even where all others have failed. Hundreds of people have had their hearing restored, the sense of taste and smell all brought back; people with stiff limbs and joints have all been made well. Call at Coursey & Munn's drug store, No. 29 Marietta street, for these: Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. We repay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over. Advt.)

REAL FIGHT FOR LINE BERTHS ON GEORGIA TEAM

Tackle Malone Returns and Will Give Henderson and Turner Royal Struggle.

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—With the presence of Quarterback Paddock, Tackle Malone and End Conklin on the field this afternoon the Georgia crop of football material for 1913 is on hand, and with to-day's workout will begin the real practice of the Red and Black outfit. The past two weeks have been spent in getting what men there have been present in good physical trim. The scrimmaging will begin at once, and by the first game, which comes Saturday against Alabama Presbyterian College, the first line-up will have about been discovered.

The return of Malone gives Cunningham an extra good tackle for emergency in Turner, and it will really be a fight for the next few days as to who will draw these two positions—Malone, Henderson or Turner. Henderson is a certainty, so it seems that Malone and Turner are to fight it out unless one of them is sent to guard, which so far has been looked after by Conyers and Brown. Brown was on the freshman team last year and lacks experience, but has the weight and is fairly fast. Conyers was first substitute in the line, and easily won his letter, and thus has a big call on a regular berth this fall.

Paddock was given a royal welcome by his teammates when he came on the field Saturday afternoon for his initial workout, and there is nothing to it except that this popular player is going to be one of the greatest players in the South before the season closes. He got a late start last year and only played in three or four games, but was then prominently mentioned for all-Southern quarter. He is light, weighing hardly 150 pounds, but is gritty and a good general at running the team.

There has not been an injury so far to any candidate, except one or two "charley horses," and Cunningham is working hard to prevent the loss of any star by this cause. McWhorter has hardly been in a play yet, but has been busy looking after the entire squad. Bob is taking it rather easy this year, anyway, since his experience of last fall, when he was more than a month rounding into form, due mostly from overtraining the early part of the season.

McClellan, who was thinking of enfering college, will hardly return this year, as there is some question as to his eligibility, since he did not remain in college very long in 1911, when he played fullback on the Red and Black team.

DEAD ONES ARE DEAD ONES.

"Where are the stars of yesteryear?"
quoth I unto a fan.
"The Overalls and Mordy Browns
who heaved 'em o'er the pan?
Where is the Peerless Leader gone
and, where is Johnny Kling?
And where is Harry Steinfeldt, with his strong, unerring wing?
And where is Jimmy Sheckard gone,
and where is Reulbach now?"
The stranger turned and answered
me, with scorn upon his brow:
"I do not know and do not care where
all these gents have fled.
Perchance in some secluded spot they rest among the dead.
I do not care for ancient men who
carry famous names,
For they are only dead ones now, and
dead ones win no games."

GOLF IS SAFEST OF ALL SPORTS, WRITES EVANS

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—I met Mr. Baxter, of the Ridge Country Club, on the street the other day and was horrified to see that he had suffered a severe injury to his right eye. It was badly swollen and blackened and the eyeball itself was a brilliant red. He told me that the accident that resulted so painfully for him occurred at Ridge. Mr. Baxter, Mr. Scott, former city champion, and Mr. McCritchell were playing at the Ridge. It had rained considerably the day before and part of one of the trees had been staked off. Scott drove off and his ball struck one of the stakes and hit Mr. Baxter's eye on the rebound. It was excruciatingly painful for a few days, but we are glad to say that there is no permanent injury.

Has Been Hit Twice.

It is a peculiar coincidence that two years ago Mr. Baxter was struck on the other eye by a golf ball. Surely he has had much more than his share of injuries, because it is a well-known fact that the golfer is less liable to accident than any other sportsman.

It is true, of course, that a golf ball is of a size to really find a man's eye, and owing to the swiftness with which it travels it can do a great deal of damage, but there are few accidents of that sort on record. The most serious injuries have resulted from the explosion of certain balls when being curiously cut into, and that has been a real danger.

Of the broken bones and dislocated joints, constant attendants of football and the other more strenuous games, we know practically nothing, and differences at golf are not settled with the fists.

Perhaps the most prolific source of accident in golf is the tendency to stand too near a player. The golfer who stands raptly gazing admiringly after a fine ball wriven by a player is in a good position to be struck by the next player. I always look around me when I swing a club.

Evans Cut With Mashie.

When a small boy, and carried away by admiration of another small boy's play, I was cut above the eye with a mashie. A scar for life is the result. Four stitches were necessary to repair the injury, and it was considered lucky that the blow was above the eye. A golf club is indeed a dangerous weapon, and in a difficulty with a highwayman I should at any time prefer one to a revolver. So keep your distance, Mr. Golfer, from the man who is playing, both for your own sake and his.

I heard of a peculiar accident a short time ago. On a rainy day a club slipped from the hand of a golfer in the act of playing and struck another golfer at a parallel hole. There is also a chance of injury when a club handle breaks or the glue loosens in a wooden club and the head flies off.

But, on the whole, let us be thankful that golf is a comparatively safe game and we are not as football players are.

DENVER WINS FLAG.

DENVER, COLO., Sept. 29.—By defeating Des Moines yesterday Denver won the pennant in the Western League for the third consecutive time. Post-season series games with the winner of the American Association pennant are being negotiated for by the owners of Denver, to begin October 7.

JACKETS ARE FEELING FINE AFTER GAME

IN spite of the heat and the earliness of the season, the Tech Yellow Jackets came through the fray with the Soldiers Saturday without an injury or a strain that might prove in any way severe. The usual unpleasant soreness and stiffness of joints and ligaments, of course, was very noticeable yesterday, but a bit of good old heel-and-toe walking 'cross-country took most of the lameness away, and the squad reported fit and fine this morning.

The next game, scheduled for Saturday at Grant Field, is with the Charleston Citadel team, always a good, stiff contender, especially in the early part of the season. That team has been working out a week longer than the McPherson bunch, and will be in excellent shape for a hard battle Saturday, while there is no doubt that the rival of Clemson and the University of South Carolina will be inspired with plenty of ambition to trim the Jackets.

Tech Line Looked Good.

While most of the interest among the Saturday spectators centered in the performance of the backfield, by reason of the new men and their excellent rating, it was noted by careful students of the game that the Heisman line was showing unusual form for a green line in the opening game.

The charging was uniformly low and hard, and the heavier Soldiers could do little to upset it. There were plenty of minor defects, naturally, and a lack of that machine-like swing and dash that characterizes the seasoned forwards. But it must have been quite reassuring to Heisman to note the manner in which the line stuck to its work and kept its cleats in the ground.

Backfield Unchanged.

The backfield probably will work through the next two games with the same personnel used against the Soldiers, at least until Gene Patten's knee permits him to get back in the going.

Preas and Johnston showed a lot of stuff, and promise to develop into A-1 backs, while Homer Cook, always a hard and conscientious performer last year, more than upheld his reputation in the opening game, and McDonald showed every bit of his regular form. Fielder, shot into the game fresh, celebrated his debut with one of the longest and most spectacular runs of the day, and showed up well while he was in harness.

Battle for End Jobs.

There already is a pretty competition on among Cushman, Goree and Lucas for an end job, and it will be even keener when Thomasson returns to the squad. Johnston is pretty sure to get one of the positions, and Heisman will have plenty of speed and ambition to choose from in selecting his running mate.

The line-up in next Saturday's game will supply a fair idea of what the coach intends to make his 1913 machine, and by the following week the work will be pointing directly toward the big games of the season.

HERRICK BEATS HIGGINS.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Completely dazed from the start, Al Higgins, from Roswell, N. Mex., lost to Jack Herrick, of Kewanee, Ill., yesterday in the fourth round of a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Juarez arena.

Francis Ouimet's Own Story
Our Golfers Equal of Britons'

The youth who amazed the golf world by capturing the open championship of the United States and also defeating Vardon and Ray, the English champions, is going to furnish the readers of The Georgian with a series of interesting articles. Ouimet's story to-day gives his impressions of British golfers and also a comparison between the stars of England and this country. The stories will be both interesting and instructive.

By Francis Ouimet.

IN my article to-day I shall give my impressions of British golfers and compare the leading golf stars of England with those of the United States. There are thousands of people in this country, and even more throughout Europe, who believe that the British golfers are far superior to those in Uncle Sam's land.

Personally, I fail to agree with those who claim that American golfers are not every bit as good as our friends across the Atlantic. There is very little difference between our ten best golfers and the ten leading stars in Great Britain.

There are ten or more professionals in this country who play remarkable golf. When they are in their best form they are always unbeatable. I have closely studied the work of the leading professionals, and I firmly believe they are capable of holding their own with all comers.

The professionals, however, are not the only good golfers in the United States. The amateurs in this country are also sterling players and many of them are able to give a fine account of themselves against the best players in the world. Our amateur players are not quite as good as those in England and Scotland, but they are nevertheless good men.

Travers Perfect Golfer.

Take for example Jerome D. Travers. This man is a perfect golf wizard. He may always be relied upon to make a good showing. He is a cool, steady player, and does not let anything ruffle him.

"Chick" Evans is another great American golfer. He has won first place in many important tournaments and is sure to be ranked among the "headliners" for many more years.

John G. Anderson and Heinrich Schmidt are two other good American golfers. Schmidt opened the eyes of the British golfing world earlier in the year when he played in the British championships. It took H. H. Hilton, the best amateur golfer in Europe, to vanquish the gallant Worcester lad.

With such stars as those mentioned above competing for Old Glory in the big tournaments, I am sure that the American public will never have reason to be ashamed of the work of their players.

British Golfers High Class.

The golf displayed by the British golfers was of a very high class. They showed to very good advantage throughout the tournament, with the possible exception of the last few holes in the Saturday play-off, when Mr. Vardon made several serious mistakes at the crucial stage of the round.

They showed a great knowledge of the various shots, such as a slice, pull, pitch shot with run, and the cut shot. This latter shot is very effective, and is used mostly to keep the ball near the hole, especially on a keen green.

When played properly, it leaves little to do on the putting greens.

Their putting is fairly good on the whole, with the possible exception of Harry Vardon. He is lamentably weak in this department of the game, and shows a timidity on short putts such as I have never seen before. He hits the ball with a quick, jerky stroke, and is constantly afraid of missing the hole. It does seem too bad, because this really great golfer suffers on this shot.

With Ray it is different. A big, strapping chap, who hits the ball hard, getting terrific distances. The few times I have seen him play made me think that Ray was inclined to be off the line of play occasionally.

His play is very sound for all of that, and he might be considered a very dangerous man on the putting greens, as he putts boldly and for the back of the cup, being exceptionally accurate on his approach putting.

E. H. BARRETT WINS MATCH AT 37TH GREEN

THE closing match of the last tournament of 1913 at East Lake wound up with a most brilliant bit of golf, by which E. H. Barnett won the T. A. Hammond trophy, 1 up, on the first green of the course, sinking a 20-foot putt for a 2 on what was the thirty-seventh hole of the hardest match of the season. J. O. Smith, his opponent, just missed his own long putt for a 2, and was down for a par 3.

The match was well played throughout, and at no time was either contestant in the way of a commanding lead. It was a fitting finish for the best golfing season the Atlanta Athletic Club has ever enjoyed—and probably for the last big tournament that will be played on the present course, which now is being redesigned into what will doubtless be one of America's sportiest inland coursees.

In the second flight W. R. Tichenor defeated W. J. Tilson, 2 up and 1 to play, in a close and well-played match.

Perry Adair defeated Scott Hudson in the finals of the third flight, 2 and 1; J. B. Pollard won in the fourth flight over E. T. Winston; and the fifth flight also developed an extra hole match between E. G. Beaudry and H. H. Albert, the former winning 1 up in nineteen holes.

Ex-President's Son After Place on Team

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 29.—Princeton football players to-day heard with interest that in a few years they may have on the Tiger team Richard Cleveland, son of the late President Grover Cleveland. Young Cleveland is a student in Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., but will enter Princeton next year. He is 15 years old and weighs 160 pounds, and is striving hard to make his class team this year. He has already distinguished himself as a hockey player.

DENIES SALE TO CUBS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 29.—Ed R. Maies, president and principal owner of the Venice team, of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, denied to-day that he had sold Pitcher Kostner to President Murphy, of the Chicago club, of the National League.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Frank Baker, the Eastern lightweight, who has done some boxing around these parts, is back in our midst again. Baker is a likely looking chap and has a good record. Frank is anxious to get on with some of our local boys and says he does not fear any of them. Baker has met such boys as Benny Kaufman, Tommy Lavelle and Curley Jordan.

Jim Coffroth, the coast promoter, has decided to give Arthur Pelky a chance in his arena. Coffroth has wired Charley Miller, who is in New York, an offer to box Tommy Burns' protege next month. Pelky has already agreed to the match.

"Wildcat" Fearns strengthened his claim to the welterweight title last week when he defeated Billy Walters in a 10-round battle at Kenosha, Wis. Walters was one of the leading candidates for the title and recently held Fearns to a 15-round draw. A 20-round go between Fearns and Mike Gibbons ought to prove a banner attraction.

Gunboat Smith and Carl Morris have signed articles to meet in a 10-round go at Madison Square Garden, New York on the evening of October 9. Both men will begin active training the early part of this week.

* * *

Spider Britt, local bantamweight, left Saturday night for Knoxville, Tenn. Britt has bouts pending there with Al Smith and Kid Underwood. If Britt fights in form he should have little trouble beating both these boys.

Despite recent defeats at the hands of Charley Lee, Kid Young is still wanted by promoters. Young secured two matches last week and if he manages to win both of them he will not lack for work in the padded ring. He boxes Charlie Lee in a 4-round contest at a local theater to-morrow night and meets Mike Kelly at Athens, Ga., next month.

* * *

When Dan McKetrick sails for Paris from New York on October 4 he will take the following fighters with him: Frank Moran and Joe Jeannette, heavyweights; Tommy Gavigan and Otto Kohler, middleweights; Young Ahearn and Gene Delmont, lightweights. This is surely some collection.

* * *

A grand reception awaits Willie Ritchie when he arrives in New York. Jack Britton, Tommy Murphy and Leach Cross will be demanding fights with the champion. However, before Willie gets to the Eastern city he will probably meet a sterling boxer, Charlie White, at Milwaukee. And remember this, Mr. White has a dandy kick in his left hand that he will work overtime if he ever gets into the same ring with Ritchie.

* * *

Terry Nelson, Greek battler, writes from Chattanooga that he has started light work for his bout with Joe Sherman at Jacksonville. Nelson is also after a match with either Danny Goodman or Jimmy Murphy at Terre Haute, Ind.

KLAUS BATTLES M'GOORTY FOR 'MIDDLE' TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Back in 1908, June 4, to be exact, Milwaukee was alive with fight fans who gathered to see the bringing out of a new champion, Stanley Ketchel, who won a ten round battle from Billy Papke by a big margin. To-night in that same city another gathering of fight fans will witness Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and Eddie McGoorty go ten rounds.

The clash won't mean the bringing out of a new champion, but mighty near such a thing, for though Jack Dillon and Jimmy Clabby have a right to dispute any one claiming such honors, McGoorty and Klaus to-day hold the highest rank in the middleweight division. In short, the victor to-night, if the victory be decisive, will loom up as the man the others must beat to dispute his title.

There will be no decision at the close of ten rounds, should the battle go the full distance, for referees' decisions are barred by the laws that govern the game, but the newspaper boys will be at the ringside to tell the merits of the game.

To-night's clash carries with it international interest. Not that either of the lads hails from foreign shores, but because of their battles abroad. Both McGoorty and Klaus have fought in the far-off lands and each is known all over the world. Klaus is famed abroad for his decisive win over Georges Carpentier, the French champion, and for his victory over Billy Papke, another battle fought on foreign grounds.

Other minor bouts have been waged in France by Klaus, but these made him known to the foreign ring. His American worth has been of top-notch caliber, hence the unprejudiced scribes' reason for handing him the best in the 158-pound division.

ONLY TWO MORE MEN TO REPORT IN AUBURN CAMP

By Mike Donahue.

AUBURN, ALA., Sept. 29.—With the arrival of Pitts and Lockwood it has been possible to get some idea of what the Auburn line-up is going to look like. With the exception of Taylor, the 190-pound candidate for fullback, and Christopher, who has not yet arrived, the entire squad is on the field and working hard. There are a few minor injuries that are still keeping some of the players on the side-lines, but none of them is serious.

* * *

THERE are quite a number of candidates for the places left vacant by Lamb and Meadows. The most prominent candidates for right tackle is Conisell, who is an active and aggressive player as well as a good punter. Steed and Culpepper are two other likely candidates for this place. These players are not as heavy as tackles ought to be. For the other tackle, Essinger is the most promising. He has taken on a lot of extra weight since last year and is in much better condition. He promises to develop into a worthy successor to Meadows. Cleveland a new man, knows a good deal about tackle play, and Martin, a scrub, is playing the kind of a game that is bound to win promotion. Robinson is holding down right end in his usual style, which means that ground gaining will be somewhat scarce around his territory. He has a very competent understudy in Haisten, who is a natural defensive player and is rapidly learning the offensive side of the game. At the opposite end Wynne, a last year's scrub, is playing a game not much inferior to Robinson's. He has good weight and is strongly built.

* * *

FROM end to end this is a formidable looking aggregation, but it will take a few games to find out its real ability. With the exception of Lockwood and Thigpen none of them has taken part in a real big game. Two of the places in the backfield will be taken care of by Newell and Arnold. Newell will play left half as usual while Arnold has been shifted to quarter. He is rapidly learning the business of running a team. For the fullback position there are several good, light men—Harris, Christopher, Hart, Bedez and Sparkman. They all drive hard but have not the necessary weight to carry them through the secondary defense. Kearley has been shifted to the backfield and is trying for right-half. He is being rested at present on account of an attack of charley horse. Another very promising candidate for the position is Prendergast, a new man, who has the requisite speed and weight for a first-class halfback. If he can assimilate college football rapidly enough he will be a valuable man this year.

WOLGAST PURCHASES RANCH.

CADILLAC, MICH., Sept. 29.—Ad Wolgast closed a deal with former Mayor Fred L. Heath, of Hastings, Mich., paying Heath $17,000 for a ranch near Medford, Oreg. The former lightweight champion now owns two Oregon ranches, a Michigan farm and considerable valuable live stock.

Leaves Fall, Gridiron Sizzles, and Ouimet's Name Adorns Sport Pages

BUT IT IS NOTED THAT BASEBALL STILL HANGS ON

By O. B. Keeler.

THE leaves are falling, as they usually do in the fall. There is perceptible in the shaking air a muttering and a roaring of a thousand football fields. The crop of pigskin alibis already is blossoming. And interspersed is a heavy sprinkling of dope concerning a Young Person actually named Ouimet, and some older persons known (familiarly) as Vardon and Ray.

But hither and yon, or somewhere in that neighborhood, we still manage to collect an occasional earful concerning a Regular Game—a more regular game, maybe.

And we realize, in our more or less lucid moments, that Baseball still is in our midst, or a trifle to the northeastward.

The Big Series still is to play.

ALONG with other whispers comes the report of classy performances by Rivington Bisland and Clyde Wares, Southern League stars obtained by the St. Louis Browns. We note also that Elmer $7,000 Brown, ex-Billiken, held the Giants entirely hitless during the six innings he worked for Brooklyn recently. Which must have reminded Mr. McGraw (sadly) of a certain other Mr. Brown, who was wont to toil on occasions of large importance at the Polo Grounds in years gone by.

THERE was little doubt that Bisland would make good, especially after he was injected into the wrecked and ruined system of the hapless Browns. And the Browns don't look nearly so hopeless, by the way.

With Derrill Pratt on first base, Wares at second, Bisland at short and Austin at third, the tail-end contenders will have a very flossy inner defense to open the ball next year.

And that inner defense thing does help out.

If you don't believe it, try to recall some consistently-winning ball club that didn't have a good infield.

SPEAKING of the Browns, it crops up that there is a ball club without any record-breaking ability whatever—unless it is for Sliding Down the Cellar Door—which, nevertheless, is the most feared and respected record-buster of all ball clubs.

Last season the Browns stopped Walter Johnson's winning streak. This year they flagged Joe Boehling after he had copped eleven in a row. The Athletics had won fifteen successive games when the lowly Browns bumped them. They put over a tally on W. Johnson after he had traveled 56 2-3 scoreless innings.

And last Wednesday the Browns crippled Cal Brown and Stuffy McInnis, of the Athletics, in the same game.

The last instance is not mentioned ill-naturedly. It is merely chucked in as lagniappe, or good measure, to show that the habit of record-busting is strong upon the Browns.

Maybe it will be strong enough to extract them from the Cellar Class in 1914—what?

That would be pretty strong.

REVERTING for the moment to R. Bisland, Wallop Smith, now with Washington, comes to the front with a large number of ornate remarks concerning his ex-side-kick.

Smith is in St. Louis for the winter, mainly because he lives there. Following are Mr. Smith's remarks about Mr. Bisland, quoted in part, as there are space limitations:

"If Bisland doesn't make good with the Browns, I wouldn't give four cents for my chance to stick with the Senators—and Griffith bought me at that. And I feel pretty confident.

"Bisland is a natural ball player, if ever there was one in this world. He is one of the fastest men in the short field I ever saw, and if he has a weakness there I failed to spot it, playing a whole season on both sides of him. He goes with equal ease to either side. Picking up bounders in deep short and shooting them over to first is pie for the kid, and the only thing he likes as well is to race over back of second, scoop one in his glove, and nail the runner by a step at first. Often and often I would get over to second as fast as I could, just miss the ball, and come up just in time to see Bizzy whipping it over."

Following which, Wallie went on to praise Bisland's hitting ability, especially in the pinches, and had a few kind words to say of his speed in starting two-ply killings or performing as middleman in the double plays.

If Hedges got all of it, he ought to raise Bizzy's pay at once.

EVEN at this distance, we can see one redeeming feature in connection with the poor showing of the New York Yankees this season.

If they had done well after their spring training excursion to Bermuda, all the other clubs would have wanted to train there in 1914.

Whereupon the scent of the onion would have been abroad in the land, whether the annual Lemon Crop was a success or not.

IT doesn't look humanly possible to avoid taking sides in the world's series row much longer. We're going to look up some dope on the situation—and some more dope, maybe—and after that it may appear feasible to let the General Public in on the deal.

How far in, is another Question.

Women Take Part In Baseball Riots

CUMBERLAND, MD., Sept. 29.—The baseball game yesterday at Midland between Cumberland and Midland was marked by a series of riots, and the 2,500 spectators were in frequent mix-ups, in which women proved to be even more aggressive than men.

The first wrangle occurred in the second inning when C. Loppold, of the Cumberland team, was struck by a Midland player. In the sixth inning Manager Nelson W. Russter, of Cumberland, was hit during a dispute. In the meantime a turmoil ensued in the grandstand, where women were fighting almost constantly.

Two women fought for nearly half an hour and men were unable to separate them. They scratched each other and used handbags as weapons. Four separate fights occurred in the grandstand.

FODDER FOR FANS

The New York Yankees will have to hustle this week to get out of last place in the American League, for the Browns gained on them by defeating the Tigers yesterday. The White Sox began the farewell week by blanking the Cleveland Naps, who became more firmly lodged in third place.

* * *

Opinion over the merits and demerits of the Giants and Athletics is pretty evenly divided. Even among the experts each club has its defenders. George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, and a keen judge, picks the Giants, while Napoleon Lajoie, of the Cleveland Naps, one of the "old masters" of the game, picks the Athletics.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Naps, believes that poor pitching will cost the Athletics the world's championship and predicts that New York will take four straight games.

* * *

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, has come out against the ruling of the national commission that players eligible to compete in the world's series may not write baseball articles about the post-season games. One New York paper is already advertising expert stories of the games by Christy Mathewson.

* * *

When the National League season ends the Brooklyn Dodgers will make a tour of Pennsylvania and the South.

* * *

The Cardinals and Browns will play a seven-game series for the championship of St. Louis beginning October 6.

The Boston Red Sox are scheduled to play three consecutive double-headers with the Yankees beginning at he Polo Grounds this afternoon.

* * *

Milwaukee has won the pennant in the American Association and Denver in the Western League.

Gibbons and Kelly To Box at Kenosha

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, and "Spike" Kelly, of Chicago, signed articles last night to box ten rounds at Kenosha, Wis., on October 10. The match, according to the promoters, will be for the welterweight championship. The men agreed to weigh 145 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the fight.

RICHARDS ENTERS CORNELL.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Alva Richards, who won the high jump at the Stockholm Olympic games, has entered Cornell Agricultural College and reported to Track Coach Moakley. Richards competed for the Illinois Athletic Club in the national championships at Chicago last summer and it is understood that he has not severed his connections with the Chicago club.

Emory Opens Gridiron Season on October 13

EMORY COLLEGE, OXFORD, GA., Sept. 29.—Emory's interclass football team has selected October 13 as the date for the gridiron season to open. Two games will be played that afternoon, the first being when the seniors and juniors meet, and the second will be the sophomore-freshman battle.

The juniors are already down to hard work. This eleven won the 1912 pennant, and have returned every member of the team for work this year. Coach Shingler has not been out yet, owing to his accident when his arm was broken while attempting to crank an automobile.

DUNDEE VS. AZEVEDO.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Johnny Dundee and Joe Azevedo were matched yesterday to box twenty rounds on October 14 at the Vernon arena here. They will meet as lightweights.

YANKEE CYCLE CHAMP LOSES.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Donald McDougall, world's amateur titleholder last year, went down to defeat yesterday before the superior speed of William Bailey, England's amateur cycle champion, in straight heats in their two-thirds of a mile match at the Veldrome here.

FLICKENSTEIN REAL DEMON ON MOTORCYCLE

A THREE-CORNERED match race between Tex Richards, Morty Graves and Newman Flickenstein will be one of the big features offered at the reopening of the Motordrome Tuesday night. The trio will meet in three heats, the first being a mile, the next two miles and the third five miles.

Graves' new machine is going great guns these days; Richards' famous "23" has always been considered one of the fastest in the world, and Flickenstein, who recently joined the daredevil squad in Chattanooga, has beaten both Richards and Graves.

As a result both Tex and Morty are out for revenge Tuesday night. They admit that Flickenstein can get over 90 miles and hour out of his "boat," but that doesn't seem to worry them any.

The other big event on the card is a twenty-mile race in which all the riders will compete. There should be thrills enough for the most rabid fan in this long, furious grind.

Arthur Chappelle, the world's champion motorcycle rider, is expected to arrive here to-day, and he may start Tuesday night.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

New Plan Evolved For Church House

Members Would Have Presbyterians Guarantee $100,000—Kress Store Addition.

A new plan has been proposed for the erection of the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at a cost of $100,000 at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth streets. It has been suggested by Charles Elyea, a prominent member of the church, and would have a number of well-to-do members guarantee the project in the aggregate of $100,000.

This scheme, it is pointed out, would enable the church to keep its present Marietta street site for a while, and the members who put up the money for the new structure could be reimbursed later. Several churchmen have been heard in expressions of approval of this project. The church has made a number of efforts to proceed, but up to date no workable plan has been adopted.

Ground Broken on Whitehall.

Ground was broken Tuesday on the new three-story building to be erected on the south side of Whitehall street between Stewart avenue and Murphy avenues, for Fairbanks, Morse & Co., of Chicago, by J. R. Smith. The building will be built at a cost of $30,000 and the price for the lease was between $40,000 and $50,000.

Another story is to be added to this building if required.

Kress Store Addition.

McDaniel & Calmes, housewreckers, have begun tearing down buildings at Nos. 36, 38 and 40 South Broad street, which is the rear of the S. H. Kress store which fronts at Nos. 39 and 41 Whitehall, and a substantial addition to the property will be made. No application has yet been made for a new building, and the cost has not been announced.

The Kress property was recently conveyed to Hugh Richardson from Eugene V. Haynes and J. Carroll Payne at the price of $357,000. The frontage is 42 feet on Broad and Whitehall streets and the depth 175 feet. The annual rental is $19,000, which is .052219 per cent on the purchase price.

Disposition of Hospital Lot.

In the plan which Asa G. Candler has for enlarging the Wesley Memorial Hospital facilities there is a possibility that the new hospital will be located elsewhere than at the southeast corner of Courtland street and Auburn avenue, although the church management have not taken up this question definitely. A churchman expressed the opinion Monday that the value of the lot at semi-central prices might make it desirable that a cheaper location be sought, and the old place sold.

The lot was bought about eight years ago for $17,500, and Bishop Warren A. Candler's report of a year ago placed the value of ground and buildings at nearly $100,000. There is about an acre of ground, and improvements consist of a two-story frame building used for the hospital.

Salesman With Shelby Smith.

Eugene H. Carroll, for the past 30 years an Atlantan and 27 years in the mercantile business, has joined the Shelby Smith real estate agency at 401 Empire Building. Mr. Carroll is familiar with property values, and his friends are predicting success.

SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The newspapers throughout the State are commenting nowadays rather caustically upon the wretched and uninhabitable condition of the Governor's Mansion in Atlanta.

Not only is it generally agreed that the ramshackle old barn is altogether out of date, antiquated, and insanely situated for the purpose it serves, but besides that it actually is falling down in spots!

Long ago the plastering overhead in one of the bedrooms fell down with a dull and sickening thud, and a short time before that Governor Brown, only by nimbleness of foot and quickness of eye, succeeded in jumping from under a similar precipitation of overhead ceiling in another room.

Just when the dining room may take a tumble to itself no prophet or on of a prophet will say, although the hope is universal, of course, that when it does fall, it will not bury the Executive or Mrs. Slaton beneath the wreck!

The Executive Mansion in Atlanta is a joke—and not a pretty or fascinating joke, at that!

If a Governor were not sentenced to live in it, so to speak, few of them likely would care to do so.

To be sure, its historic and honorable associations are pleasant and inspiring things to think upon—if only one could sit in the Mansion and think upon them without being simultaneously in mortal terror that something heavy, plastery and not at all nice might fall upon him at any moment and mangle him beyond recognition!

The Executive Mansion would make a first-rate fourth-rate boarding house—maybe!

It certainly isn't much of a place for a Governor of Georgia to reside!

Anent the Mansion, The Oglethorpe Echo says:

> A fortunate absence probably kept Governor and Mrs. Slaton from being injured by falling plastering in the Governor's Mansion a few days since. It's a shame that as great a State as Georgia should not have a home in which her Chief Executive could at least reside in safety.

And there are others that say the same thing—many of them!

The death of Representative Roddenbery has brought forth numerous tentative candidates for his place in Congress.

Among them are H. M. McIntosh, of Albany; Judge Frank Park, of Sylvester; W. W. Banks, of Tifton; Roscoe Luke and Judge H. W. Hopkins, of Thomasville; W. A. Covington and W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; John P. Knight, of Nashville; John Donalson, of Bainbridge, and Jesse Perry, of Camilla.

And there likely will be more mentioned hereafter, as the game yet is young!

The recent Mayoralty election in Macon split the Legislative delegations, present and past, wide open.

Wallace Miller, one of the candidates for Mayor, is a member of the House, and he was bitterly opposed by Minter Wimberly, another member.

Senator McNeil favored and worked for Miller, while Roland Ellis, a former Senator, favored and worked for Smith. Walter Defore, a member of the last House, was with the Miller crowd, while Ben Fowler—where was Ben in that scrap, anyway?

When the Georgia Prison Commission was first made an advisory board of pardons, its recommendations generally were followed rather regularly. Once or twice, perhaps three or four times, Governor Atkinson, Governor Terrell and other Executives turned down the recommendations of the Prison Commission, sitting as a board of pardons, but not often. The rule was to accept the findings of the Commission as approximating the correct adjustment of the particular problem submitted, and to let it go at that!

It was not until "Little Joe" Brown became Governor that the recommendations of the Commission began to be looked upon as little more than suggestive and mildly advisory to the Executive. And even Governor Brown began by following the line of action mapped out by the Commission!

Nowadays, however, a recommendation from the Prison Commission is a step in the direction the petitioner desires—presuming it to be favorable—but nothing more. Governors have come to turn down Prison Commission awards as one of the easiest things they know!

Only Saturday, for instance, Governor Slaton turned down a majority recommendation for a pardon, and granted a life commutation instead. In doing that, he followed the recommendation of a minority opinion. No Governor considers any petition for clemency, nevertheless, unless it first has been thrashed out by the Commission.

There is no way of limiting a Georgia Governor's discretion in the matter of clemency—the Legislature could not make the Prison Commission's recommendations binding upon the Governor, if it desired to. In the matter of pardons, commutations, and so forth, the Governor is final, supreme, and altogether an arbitrary authority! The Constitution of the State gives him utterly untrammeled powers in that direction. And it is for this reason, of course, that most Governors are careful and discreet in granting clemency, in any event.

Governor Slaton has received 41 invitations to visit various State fairs throughout Georgia during the months of October and November.

And much as he would like to accept all of them, it will be utterly impossible, of course. He hopes, however, to accept a few—those that do not conflict with his official duties, at least. And that probably will mean as many as half a dozen.

"If I even attempted to accept all these gracious and kindly invitations, which I would like to do," said the Governor, "I could not do so unless it were possible for me to be in two or three places at one and the same time, and of course it isn't!

"I am glad to know that there are to be so many fairs in the State, however. It speaks well for Georgia, and it indicates a healthy condition of things.

"I believe in county fairs—and in State fairs, too! There never was one held, even though it may have lost money directly, that wasn't a success in the long run, for the indirect dividends paid by county and State fairs are great, I verily believe."

COTTON SELLS OFF ON PROFIT TAKING

Market Nervous All Day—Unsettled Conditions at Washington Restrict Trading.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Influenced by weakness in Liverpool cables and very favorable weather conditions over Sunday the cotton market opened barely steady to-day with first prices at a net decline of 2 to 12 points from the closing quotations of Saturday. Near positions showed the greatest strength at the outset, but October immediately dropped 6 points to 13.97 while December declined 8 points to 13.75. Other months were firmly maintained at opening quotations, there being no pressure whatever in these options.

After the call some of the prominent bulls and spot houses who had lost some of their cotton last week, through profit-taking on the belief that a reaction was in order and were hoping for a decline to buy it back, came in the market and purchased rather freely, which checked offerings considerably and later bringing about a short covering wave, resulting in prices recovering the early decline.

The market acted nervous during the late forenoon. There was a disposition on the part of the ring professionals to sell on all rallies. Commission houses also sold. The unsettled conditions at Washington in reference to the cotton tax amendment is restricting trading to such an extent that the market is easily influenced with moderate buying or selling orders. The majority of traders predicted a healthy reaction and were furnished in sufficient volume to depress October to 13.90; December 13.75, and January 13.62.

Offerings were absorbed rather freely by brokers close to the larger spot houses and spinners. The effect of this buying, however, was offset by weather indications pointing for more favorable weather conditions, coupled with more cheerful crop news.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 10 to 18 points from Saturday's final.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: October, 14.01; December, 13.83; January, 13.73; March, 13.82; May, 13.90.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: October, 13.86; December, 13.86; January, 13.90; March, 13.99; May, 14.07.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—The Washington rumor which caused the break in our market in the last minutes on Saturday proved unfounded and Liverpool advanced as much as due, spots 3 points higher, sales 7,000 bales.

This market opened 18 points higher and advanced to 13.94 for December in the early trading. The market was firm, with a bullish undertone, based on further rains in the central States, expectation of a very unfavorable weekly weather report to-morrow and a bullish Government report on Thursday; also on distant weather indications pointing to further rains in the western States the latter part of this week, with probably a cold wave the first part of the week.

Weather conditions over Sunday were better in the western half of the belt. The map shows fair weather in the western States; no rain but cloudy in the central and eastern belt, with further general rains in the central States; showers in the Atlantics. Warm weather; no frost anywhere; whereas last year damaging frost had occurred in the last week of September over most of the northern half of the belt.

Condition of Cotton Declined 3.1 Points

MEMPHIS, Sept. 29.—Replies of correspondents of The Commercial-Appeal of average date of September 25 indicate a condition of the cotton crop on that date of 65.1 vs. 68.2 per cent, last month's Government report figures. This is a loss from last month of 3.1 points. The heavy rains that have recently visited the western belt were just beginning to fall at the date of this report, so that any damage they may have done is reflected but slightly in these figures.

Rains earlier in the period covered by the report, while doing some harm to grade were of some benefit to the growing plant, especially in Oklahoma, where a slight improvement over the low condition of the previous month is noted. Cotton has opened rapidly and an unusually large percentage of the crop is open. Picking has gone forward fairly well, although interferred with to a certain extent by frequent rains.

There are a few complaints of scarcity of labor, but as a general thing there are plenty of pickers and with fair weather the crop will probably be gathered in record time, except in the Carolinas and Georgia, where much of the cotton is late and making of this crop will depend to a great extent upon the date of killing frost. This is the last report on the crop that will be published this season in this paper.

A crop estimate will be made some time in November.

Conditions by States, compared with the Government figures of August 25:

North Carolina	70 vs.	78
South Carolina	71 vs.	77
Georgia	73 vs.	76
Alabama	68 vs.	72
Mississippi	65 vs.	69
Tennessee	74 vs.	80
Arkansas	67 vs.	72
Oklahoma	47 vs.	47
Louisiana	60 vs.	63
Texas	63 vs.	64
Average	61.5 vs.	68.2

Advance in Cotton Boosts Dry Goods

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"The impetus given to the dry goods trade by the seasonable weather of the past week has added a comfortable increase to the gain in September business, as contrasted with that of the same month a year ago. There is strong demand for merchandise to take care of the fall trade.

"Owing to the continuous rise in the price of raw cotton, two well-known brands of ginghams were advanced ½c a yard during the week. A strong advance has also been made on print cloths and the wider goods, such as percales, the higher count cloths having advanced 1c a yard.

"Prices now current on wool dress goods are probably as low or lower than they will be later. Foreign manufacturers are asking advances on reorders of both cotton and wool goods.

"The fall openings that are being held by retailers throughout the country are resulting in heavy shipments of ready-to-wear apparel for women, misses and children, as pointed out by an Eastern cloak and suit trade publication.

"October deliveries of ready-to-wear apparel will be greatly interfered with, owing to an unusual number of Jewish holidays, which will limit many manufacturers to eighteen working days during the coming month. Retailers will need to make provision for their wants of the next two months at once, in order to guard against the possibility of not having merchandise on hand to take care of their trade during the best part of the selling season."

COTTON GOSSIP

Senator Simmons says: "I have no reason to think that we will caucus on the cotton futures tax in the Senate. We caucused on it twice and the vote in favor of the Smith-Lever plan, now proposed in the Senate, was very small. I have not heard that sentiment in the Senate toward that amendment has changed. When it comes from the House the Senate will probably stand by its own amendment. The result, I assume, will be that no legislation on this subject will be included in the present bill."

Washington forecast for the week: Local rains during the first half of the week over the cotton belt, although probably not much west of the Mississippi River. Generally fair weather is now indicated for the second half of the week. Temperature changes are unimportant.

One and seven-tenths inches rainfall at Birmingham, Ala., last night; rained all night; same at Huntsville, Ala., and still raining; raining since 6:30 at Decatur, Ala.; rained all night and still raining at Sheffield, Ala.; Anniston, Ala., drizzling rainfall last night, .93 of an inch; at Meridian, Miss., rained yesterday and now threatening; Charlotte raining; Augusta, Anderson, S. C., Greenville, Fayetteville, N. C., cloudy; Charleston, clear; Athens, Ga., cloudy, good rains.

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crop in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee:

"Arkansas—Considerable damage is reported from rotting and sprouting in the bolls, but some correspondents do not consider this very material. Excessive rains have also delayed picking, but the amount gathered is about the same as last year, when it was 9 per cent picked. The grade has also been lowered, and the prospects of a top crop are very poor, which was cut short by the drouth in August. Percentage condition is considerably below last month and even lower than a year ago, when it was 71.

"Louisiana—Excessive rain and boll weevils have been the cause of serious deterioration, and percentage condition will probably be considerably below a year ago, when it was 69.1 per cent. Bolls are rotting and sprouting. The top crop prospects are poor. Picking is about the same as a year ago, when it was 34 per cent gathered.

"Tennessee—August drouth cut the crop greatly and recent rains have caused further damage, especially to grade. It is doubtful if percentage condition will equal a year ago at this time, when it was 70.2. Picking is well advanced, being about 12 per cent gathered as against 4 per cent a year ago. Top crop prospects are poor, though a late frost would add to the yield."

GENERAL SELLING DEPRESSES STOCKS

Market Continues in Trading Position—Sentiment More Bearish Than Quotations Justify.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although there were a few exceptions. California Petroleum preferred advanced 1 point and Union Pacific, after opening at 161⅞ for a gain of ¼, went to 162.

There was no news of a bullish character, whereas there were reports of financial interests, which gave ammunition to the bear group. News of the early filing of a Government suit against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, the continued withholding of definite information about the alleged Union Pacific melon, and the possibility of the Pennsylvania Railroad dumping a large quantity of hard coal and railroad stock on the market, all of which contributed to uneasiness.

Among the other declines were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; American Beet Sugar, ½; American Can, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; Atchison, ¼; Canadian Pacific, 1¼; Chino Copper, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¼; Pennsylvania, ¼; People's Gas, ¼; Pittsburg Coal, ¼; Southern Pacific ¼, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Reading, Pressed Steel Car, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern preferred and California Petroleum common advanced fractionally within the first 45 minutes.

The curb was quiet.

Americans in London were irregular above New York parity. There was profit taking in Canadian Pacific in London. Grank Trunk in London was steady.

Shortly after the opening, pressure appeared in nearly all of the active issues, and during the rest of the forenoon a vigorous, heavy tone prevailed. Steel common sold at a decline of ¾ to 61⅛. Copper was off 1 point. Union Pacific was the weakest, declining 1¾. Other railroads were a trifle stronger. Missouri Pacific advanced ¾. Southern Pacific was off a fraction and Canadian Pacific lost ⅞. Other issues were slightly lower. Call money loaned at 2¾.

Business was quiet in the last hour and practically all price movements were confined to declines.

Bartlett, Frazier Company says:

"Wheat—Market looks low enough at the moment.

"Corn—The unsettled weather conditions over the belt should cause a steadier feeling.

"Oats—As in corn, liquidation has been quite drastic, but the market still looks bullish, owing to continued heavy stocks in sight."

St. Louis wires: "Complaints of corn molding in the shock are increasing from all over this State, and this weather will increase such reports, as corn was cut too early in order to save the fodder, and now fodder and corn stand a good show of being ruined."

B. W. Snow wires from Winnipeg: "Northwest Canadian wheat crop is only a little larger than last year, say about 190,000,000 bushels of the finest quality ever known. Farmers are hard up and the country banks are forcing them to sell in order to liquidate debts. Harvest is early and the weather has been perfect for thrashing."

Why Is Thaw Made a Hero in New Hampshire---as He Was in Canada?

The Answer Is Simple: People Do Not Like White Slavers and Vile Debauches of the Stanford White Type. And They Do Not Like the Friends of Stanford White That Are Now Hounding Thaw.

(Copyright, 1913.)

A newspaper filled with sympathy for the late Stanford White asks the following question:

"Is Thaw a hero in New Hampshire as he was in Canada because he is notorious, or because he is rich, or because there is genuine popular sympathy for him, or is his popularity due to the fact that he and his money are making a joke of law and justice?"

Here is the answer:

Thaw is made a hero in New Hampshire, he is applauded by good citizens, not so much because of his own qualities, Heaven knows, as BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WANT TO SEE JUSTICE DONE TO HIM AT LAST.

The citizens of the country know that he has been kept in the insane asylum—although he is not insane—through the efforts of the friends of Stanford White, who was about the vilest product of degradation that could possibly be conceived.

The people know that Thaw was declared insane by a jury for the simple reason that the jury would not condemn him for having killed such a creature as Stanford White. And the newspaper that we quote probably knows that also.

The people know that Thaw, now, at least, is not insane. They know that so far from being helped by his millions—or rather by the millions of his mother—the money actually hinders him. If he were an ordinary citizen, without wealth, and if Stanford White, the vile white slaver, had fewer powerful friends, THAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FREE LONG AGO.

The people like fair play in New Hampshire, in New York, and in every State in the Union.

That is why in every State, if the matter were left to a public vote, Thaw would be set free.

This newspaper considers the case AS IT STANDS TO-DAY.

Thaw was declared insane by a jury that would not vote to execute him for having killed Stanford White.

The law says that a man who commits a crime and is declared insane shall be kept locked up unless his sanity returns. As soon as he is sane he is to be set free.

Only the friends of Stanford White, a few newspapers that sympathize with White, and some specialists, especially paid, declare that Thaw is insane.

He is at least as sane as 75 per cent of the population. And he is not only sane, but has shown remarkable intelligence in his determined efforts to obtain freedom, in his dealings with tricky lawyers, and in his answers to judicial questions.

Inasmuch as Thaw is, or was, detained by New York State as an insane man, and inasmuch as his conduct during his incarceration and since he fled from the asylum would clearly indicate that he is sane, justice demands that he be set free—as the law provides.

Justice does NOT demand that he be returned to life imprisonment TO OBLIGE THE FRIENDS, JOURNALISTIC AND OTHERWISE, OF THE DEGRADED BRUTE WHOM HE KILLED.

Fortunately, Thaw is in the hands of a Federal judge. He is not at the mercy of any court especially chosen to send him back to the insane asylum. He is not at the mercy of the distinguished legal gentlemen who make a special point of hounding him—for excellent pay, no doubt.

He will have his day in court, and will probably not be sent back to life imprisonment in an insane asylum for having killed Stanford White, whose death certainly saved from shame, degradation and horror many helpless girls.

No civilized human being would plead the unwritten law, or put the right of an individual taking justice into his own hands above the law.

And any sane man who commits a murder for whatever reason should be punished for murder. Yet, if ever there was a killing that was justified, it was the killing of Stanford White, AND HIS MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS KNOW THAT THAT IS SO.

They know that his pastime was the pursuit and the destruction of unfortunate women. They know that he spent his money and his time in the committing of crime compared with which murder committed in anger is as nothing.

It is not a good, healthy or wise thing to have a man who has committed murder, such as Thaw, lionized, applauded and made much of. But the fault is with the degenerate associates and admirers of Stanford White who viciously pursue Thaw and create public sympathy for him.

And the fault is with the machinery of justice that in one or two instances at least has seemed afraid to deal justly with Thaw.

Far better let the man go in a proper and orderly manner, taking with him the sympathy and the thanks of those who best understood the character and the crimes of Stanford White.

Lock him up again in Matteawan, and you will not settle the question or dispose of it.

The people in New Hampshire, as in Canada, make a hero of Thaw because they do not like Stanford White, and because they do not like the idea that the associates, friends and defenders of that vile degenerate have influence enough to deprive a man of his liberty when the law says that being sane he should be set free.

Dr. Parkhurst Writes on Immortality

Many Hope Death Is End of All, but Deep Thinkers Believe This Is Only the Beginning of a Future and Better Life.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

HOWEVER occupied people may be with the affairs of this life, there are few, if any, who do not sometimes throw their thoughts forward toward a possible life to come. It is safe to say that there is more of this forecasting of another world than has outward expression given to it.

A few are hoping that there is nothing more for them after death, being more than satisfied with what they have had already. Some simply brood over the possibilities of immortality wonderingly. The most, by far the most, are trusting that the few years we pass here are nothing more than the beginning of life, its vestibule, feeling that conditions, as they exist now require something additional in order to their explanations and justification.

It is probable that there is less general belief in immortality than there was fifty years ago. When a boy, as I remember it, a man who expressed doubt, in the doctrine was regarded as queer, as a mental and moral defective. Nothing, so far as appears, has in the meantime been discovered to invalidate the doctrine, and the change that has transpired in men's opinions is considerably due to the attitude of the scientists.

Scientists Have Failed to Prove We Are Immortal.

The scientists have not discovered that we are NOT immortal, but have simply failed to discover that we ARE immortal; and there is no reason why they should not have failed, for the mind, the immortal part of us, if there be any immortal part, is not a matter that scientists have any concern with, or any special qualification or equipment for investigating.

A man who knows one thing with considerable thoroughness is liable to imagine that large value therefore attaches to his opinion upon other matters, however distinct they may be from the particular subject upon which he is specially informed.

That states the precise condition of mind of certain investigators who have accomplished distinguished results in their study of matter, and who therefore consider that they are authorities upon questions of mind, spirit and immortality. Which is as unreasoning as for a mathematical genius to claim that because he is an adept in questions of quantity his opinion should therefore carry in problems of art.

What has just been said is stated, only in different words, by one of the most distinguished scientists of our generation, Sir Oliver Lodge, a man of such eminence as to have been elected to the presidency of the Br sh Association, a body which may be defined as the organized scientific intelligence of the British Empire.

Sir Oliver, whose accomplishments in physics and chemistry have won for him such preferment, is sufficiently broad in his appreciations to realize that however far he may have carried his chemical researches, he has not thereby been brought across the frontier of the territory of mind and consciousness; that the principles and methods applicable to the study of matter do not apply to questions of soul and religion, so that the negative attitude which a scientist, as such, may occupy as toward soul, God and immortality has no bearing pro or contra upon the question of the existence of the soul, of God and of immortality.

All of this the president of the British Association has recently stated frankly and developed in detail in his presidential address delivered before that body.

Address Is Practically a Rebuke to His Colleagues.

The address is practically a rebuke to some of his colleagues for failing to realize that mind is not matter, and that so essential is the difference between them that the pursuit of scientific methods of inquiry will not carry them into the region of mind, and that for them to deny the existence of a world above matter, because they have been able to achieve so much in the world that is within matter without discovering in it a soul or a God, is a bare presumption and the exercise of intellectual arrogance.

Such a deliverance from so great an authority is a serious matter, and I wish the readers of this newspaper would give earnest attention to the contents of this article, for it has been written with a view to rebuking and correcting the careless and thoughtless thinking, of which there is so much, even among intelligent people, and that, too, in regard to questions that are of the utmost moment.

It would not be fair to the truth nor to Sir Oliver Lodge to close this article without adding that while he has not arrived at his convictions, regarding things which eye hath not seen, by the pursuit of scientific methods, he is nevertheless, and on other grounds, a firm believer in the great invisible world and in the God who is enthroned in it, as is evidenced by the two subjoined quotations from his superb address:

"It is my function to remind you and myself that our studies do not exhaust the universe, and that if we dogmatize in a negative direction, and say that we can reduce everything to physics and chemistry, we gibbet ourselves as ludicrously narrow pedants, and are falling far short of the richness and fullness of our human birthright.

"How far preferable is the reverent attitude of the Eastern poet:

" 'The world with eyes bent upon Thy feet stands in awe with all its silent stars.'

"We are deaf and blind, therefore, to the imminent grandeur around us unless we have insight enough to appreciate the whole, and to recognize in the woven fabric of existence, flowing steadily from the loom in an infinite progress toward perfection, the ever-growing garment of a transcendent God."

Writes on

Misfortunes

Are You Not Better for Them? If Not, You Have Failed to Learn Life's Lesson in Self-Development.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

YOU who complain bitterly of your troubles and sorrows turn your gaze inward for a time and see what these experiences have done for you.

Are you not stronger in soul, braver in mind, and more self-reliant because of your misfortunes?

Have you not a deeper understanding of human nature, and a larger sympathy for your fellowmen through having known trouble?

If you ask yourself these questions, and if you answer in the negative then rest assured more trouble will be sent you.

Sorrows Will Come Until You Learn Sympathy and Compassion.

Just as the scholar who has not learned his lessons at school is given the same lessons over and over again, so will you be given sorrow after sorrow and trouble after trouble, until you learn the great lesson of sympathy and compassion.

First of all in thinking of your misfortunes, remember you have brought them on yourself. Not in this life, perhaps, but in former lives. We have all lived many lives; and by our thoughts and deeds and desires we have fashioned our bodies and our circumstances.

If in other lives you were wasteful and selfish and improvident and idle, you come into this life poor and without friends or influence.

It is simply your life lesson of self-development given you again to learn. Industry, self-control, economy, are the next lessons.

By patient persistence you will learn them all; and then independence and usefulness and happiness will be yours.

If you did not appreciate love and affection in your last incarnation you will be deprived of these blessings for a time in this life; but if you give freely, even though you do not receive, and if you develop every loving impulse, and ask for no return, and if you refuse to think of your misfortunes, and persist in thinking of your great privilege in being allowed to do for others, then love and affection shall come to you eventually.

Remember the words of the great Master, Christ:

"I came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Of all His sayings, this is one of the greatest and one least quoted by His followers.

How Few of Us Minister as We Might to Others.

We all seem to feel resentment that we are not ministered unto continually.

And how few of us minister as we might to others.

THREE FRIENDS.

Of all the blessings which my life has known,
I value most, and most praise God for three—
Want, Loneliness and Pain, those comrades true,
Who masqueraded in the garb of foes
For many a year, and filled my heart with dread.
Yet fickle joys, like false, pretentious friends,
Have proved less worthy than this trio. First,
Want taught me labor, led me up the steep
And toilsome paths to hills of pure delight,
Trod only by the feet that know fatigue,
And yet press on until the heights appear.
Then Loneliness and hunger of the heart
Sent me upreaching to the realms of space,
'Till all the silences grew eloquent,
And all their loving forces hailed me friend.
Last, Pain taught prayer; placed in my hand the staff
Of close communion with the over-soul,
That I might lean upon it to the end,
And find myself made strong for any strife.
And then these three who had pursued my steps
Like stern, relentless foes, year after year,
Unmasked, and turned their faces full on me,
And lo! they were divinely beautiful,
For through them shone the lustrous eyes of Love.

:-: The Wail of the Freaks :-:

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

An expression of opinion given after learning that Secretary of State Bryan was going out for two weeks with a tent show, the news being furnished by the press agent.

THE Armless Wonder gnashed his teeth and clenched his feet in rage.
"I'm through with art for good," he yelled, "I'm gonna quit the stage!
I used to headline every bill, and have my name of nights
Spelt out above the theater in big electric lights.
The Yodling Goat, the Thinking Pig, the Juggling Japanee,
And even the Eight-Legged Cow all stood aside for me.
But look at this here note I got—it makes me fairly ill—
'This week the Old Doc's Talking Act will lead you on the bill!'"

"NOW ain't that just the fiercest stuff?" the Fair Circassian cried.
"When I was told my date was killed I nearly like to died.
I've been the hit in every show from Coney to Fort Lee;
Not even the Three-Headed Man had anything on me.
But that is always just the way: You think you're goin' strong,
And spend your money free an' then some new freak comes along.
I never seen the Old Doc work, but he has put me wise
To one best bet in this perfesh: 'It pays to advertise.'"

"I'SPOSE," said the Contortionist, with a despairing sob,
"It's all because the President has gave this guy a job.
Them Socialists has got it right; it's unfair competition
For us poor freaks to play against a Cabinet position.
But still this Doc has got some act. Of course, it has its faults,
But he's a wonder when it comes to throwing somersaults.
And on the stage he's worked on most, when he has got in trouble,
And has to get out good and quick, he always does 'em double."

"CUT out the knocks," the Fat Man said; "choke off the hammer songs,
An' let a guy that's got the goods butt in where he belongs.
When tryin' to be President he couldn't land his stall,
But in this circus-midway game he's got it on us all.
I've seen him give three shows a day an' turn up fresh and bright
To sit in with the treasurer and count the house at night.
If Kipling still was on his job I'll bet the ink he'd fling
In writin' out a song like this that you mutts ought to sing:

"Oh, the Doc! Doc! Doc!
He has chased us off the block,
But we got to give it to him, so let's put our jools in hock;
All he does is stands and hollers,
But he gathers in the dollars.
He's a wiser guy than we are, is the Doc."

44-Story Building in Atlanta Planned by Candler, Is Report

Plans are being drawn by architects, it was rumored Monday, for a 44-story office building for Asa G. Candler, the structure to occupy the northwest corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets, where Mr. Candler has 259 feet of frontage. Blue prints, according to the report, are being prepared by a local concern which does a great deal of skyscraper and big building work.

Mr. Candler could not be reached Monday for an expression on the report, but authorities who are more or less in touch with his building operations declared the plans were not authorized. One of them explained that it was possible that architects had gone ahead preparing tentative plans for Mr. Candler's inspection, but that no authority had been given to proceed, and in this connection he referred to plans having been drawn for a skyscraper at the southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets.

Reports of the blue prints being prepared here had it that the building would be constructed after the style of the Metropolitan Tower in New York City, with a base of about 20 stories and a tower of 24.

TARIFF BILL ACCEPTED IN SENATE

Conference Disagrees on Only One Subject, Cotton Futures Taxation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The House managers in the conference on the Underwood tariff bill to-day reported to the House the results of the conference.

A large part of the bill was accepted by the Senate as it passed the House, and such rates were not in conference. The Senate won out on 427 of its amendments, receded from 151, compromised on 97 and the conferees disagreed on one subject only, cotton futures taxation.

Agree to Hasten Measure.

Representative Underwood presented the conference report in the House immediately after the journal was read. It was ordered printed in the Record and will be considered to-morrow. The House agreed to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow to hasten final action on the report. The House adjourned at 12:18 o'clock.

The conferees reported that they had receded from the Senate amendment requiring statements of cost on merchandise contracted for as well as on that actually purchased. Importers must hereafter furnish the Treasury and the Commerce Departments with more detailed information for statistical purposes. The Senate receded from its amendments allowing a margin of 5 per cent undervaluation without penalty and limiting forfeiture to the particular articles undervalued.

The conference restored a provision authorizing the board of general appraisers to exercise both judicial and inquisitorial functions, and struck out the Senate amendment excluding hearsay evidence. Contingent fees in customs causes are prohibited.

The summary imposition of a fine for failure of importers to produce books and papers is permitted. The paragraph authorizing the President to impose countervailing duties was stricken out. The paragraph abrogating and repealing article 8 of the treaty with Cuba was agreed to.

First Terrapin Egg Hatched in Atlanta

For the first time a terrapin, probably the most prized of delicacies, was hatched in Atlanta Monday. The egg was brought here by A. M. Barbee, of the Isle of Hope, near Savannah, who is returning from a trip to New York, and is now at the Georgian Terrace.

Mr. Barbee is the owner of a terrapin farm on the Atlantic coast. He was one of the first to build up the terrapin trade there. Terrapin at present are being sold at $80 per dozen, with the price on the ascendant. The Georgian Terrace baby has been presented to Manager Keene by Mr. Barbee.

WOODWARD POINTS OUT 'WASTE'

Issues Summons to Polls, Asking Support in Effort to Cut Down Extravagance.

Mayor James G. Woodward issued a final call to arms to his supporters Monday, urging that they nominate W. A. Hancock, Amos Braselton and C. C. McDonald to the Aldermanic Board in the white primary Tuesday.

"I've got no ticket," he said, "but if the people will elect these men it will be an assurance that the Aldermanic Board will have a majority that will be conservative and that will work in harmony with the administration.

"I am very anxious to see them elected. With the recall we can get the others into the right line, which is to handle the people's business in a businesslike way.

"We would have saved $100,000 if the city's business had been conducted properly during the past year."

A Battle of Words.

The opposing faction is fighting just as vigorously as Mayor Woodward and the men he is supporting. Reports of a stormy word battle between the Mayor and Councilman Claude L. Ashley at a committee meeting in the City Hall the other day illustrates the intensity of the feeling on both sides. Mr. Ashley is one of Mayor Woodward's strongest supporters in Council.

"Amos Braselton will overwhelm Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward," Mayor Woodward is reported to have said.

"It will be a reflection on the Fourth Ward," Councilman Ashley is said to have replied.

"I don't see why you are for Thomson," the Mayor retorted.

What Ashley Replied.

"Mr. Mayor, Mr. Braselton hasn't lived in the Fourth Ward long enough to be called a Fourth Ward citizen," replied Councilman Ashley. "He is not even a registered voter in that ward. That's why I say his election would be a reflection on the ward."

"He'd represent the ward better than it has been represented," continued the Mayor, according to the account of the argument.

"He won't have a chance to represent it at all so far as this election is concerned."

John S. Owens is contesting the nomination of W. A. Hancock for Alderman from the Eighth Ward with a well-organized campaign, and Alderman James E. Warren, of the Third Ward, is confident he will defeat C. C. McDonald for the place he now holds.

Tuesday's Complete Ticket.

Here is the complete ticket to be voted upon Tuesday:

To be voted upon by the whole city: C. H. Kelley, for Alderman from the Second Ward; James E. Warren and C. C. McDonald, for Alderman from the Third Ward; Albert D. Thomson and Amos Braselton, for Alderman from the Fourth Ward; Jesse Armistead, for Alderman from the Seventh Ward; W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens, for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, and W. Z. Smith, for General Manager of Waterworks.

To be voted upon by wards: Charles A. Alverson and J. N. Renfroe, for Council from the First Ward; C. D. Knight, for Council from the Second Ward; Orville H. Hall and R. R. Jackson, for Council from the Third Ward; R. E. George and A. W. Farlinger, for Council from the Fourth Ward; Jesse B. Lee and Dr. W. M. Ethridge, for Council from the Fifth Ward; Jesse M. Wood, for Council from the Sixth Ward; S. L. Dallas, for Council from the Seventh Ward; Frank H. Reynolds, for Council from the Eighth Ward; Charles W. Smith, for Council from the Ninth Ward, and Claude C. Mason, for Council from the Tenth Ward.

Connally, to arrange, if possible, for the Yale Glee Club to visit Atlanta during the Christmas holidays.

SEEK WOMAN AS TRAIN ROBBER

Detectives Trail Two Men and Companion From Bessemer as A. G. S. Hold-up Suspects.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—What is conceded by railroad detectives and officers hunting the Alabama Great Southern train robbers to be the most important clew in the search for the bandits was information received here to-day that two men and a woman left Bessemer, near here, Sunday night with a heavy trunk and paid their transportation to New Orleans with new unsigned bank notes. The description of the woman tallies with that of the 18-year-old "boy" who held up Engineer Daniels last Friday morning. Inspector of Police James W. Reynolds, of New Orleans, has instructions to arrest the trio in case they reach there.

To-day the trainmen failed to identify John Gammon, Henry Poll and Robert Vaughn, the three tramps arrested at Eutaw on suspicion of being connected with the robbery. They admit that they were riding "blind baggage" on the roof of the mail car when the robbery took place, saw the bandits rob the express car, were shocked by the explosion that wrecked the express safe, and, hanging desperately to the top of the car, took the wild ride of 30 miles to a point below Tuscaloosa, a part of which time there was no one at the throttle of the engine. At Tuscaloosa they attempted to alight from their place of danger and were the ones that were fired upon by Sheriff Palmer, according to their story.

The ride continued at a terrific pace until Englewood was reached, when the engine went dead and they fled, being trailed down by bloodhounds. Their story is believed, but they are being held as material witnesses.

Rewards of $4,000 have been offered for the bandits—$3,000 by the Government and $1,000 by the railroad.

In rifling the registered mail the bandits secured $2,200 in unsigned bank notes consigned from the United State Treasury to the Bank of Meridian, Miss. Other stolen packages of currency probably totaled $5,000. The Southern Express Company claims that its loss was only $50, although the robbers abandoned $31 in cash which was left on the floor of the safe.

DECLARES CHURCH IS GAGGED BY RICH

The Rev. Hugh Wallace Charges That Girls Slave in Moral and Physical Peril.

The Rev. Hugh S. Wallace, pastor of the Jones Avenue Baptist Church, Monday gave out a caustic statement criticising the church for its failure to tackle and remedy what he terms "deplorable labor conditions" in Atlanta, particularly as affecting working women and girls. His attack followed a scathing denunciation from his pulpit Sunday night, based on his own investigation.

The Rev. Mr. Wallace made the direct charge that the mouths of some preachers are "padlocked by rich factory owners who sing and pray in church on Sunday, and then go out on Monday to oppress and rob the poor people who labor for them." If a minister sought to tell the truth about labor conditions and engage in a fight for their betterment, the rich factory owners would advise him to look for another job, said Mr. Wallace.

Here is his statement:

Declares Church Is Sleeping.

"The Church of God has so completely slept on its job that the struggling labor masses have been forced to organize to preserve their very existence. If the church had done its duty in preaching the great truths of God's Word on this burning question there would have been no need for any outside organization taking up the work. But there are reasons why the church has not taken up this fight.

"One is that in many of our 'rich' churches there sit members in the pews who come there and pray and sing on Sunday and go out on Monday morning to oppress and rob the poor people who labor for them. Such a church—with such oppressors of the poor in her membership and in her pews—could not speak out on this question.

"If the preacher dared to tell Brother A, the rich factory owner who sits in his congregation, that he is a robber, an oppresser of the poor; that he is stealing from those who work for him, then Brother A would tell the preacher that he would have to stop that kind of preaching or look for another pastorate. I say, God have mercy on the preachers in Atlanta who are letting the rich factory owners put padlocks on their mouths.

Pastor to Continue Attack.

"I propose to preach on this same question again soon, and I invite all those who are interested in this great question to come out and hear the facts that I shall present."

From statistics he had obtained, the minister showed that women and girls are compelled to toil day after day for a mere pittance, wholly inadequate to provide the necessities of life, and that, furthermore, their lives are constantly imperiled by insanitary and unsafe working surroundings. Numerous illustrations were cited to back his charges.

One of these told of a woman who labored four days on one job of making skirts and was paid 78 cents. Another woman made seven dozen garments and had to do the work all over again because the seam was a bit too wide. She received $1.50. One woman worked two days in one week and then quit because she could better herself. When she called back

City Attorney Says Change in Ordinance Would Put Him in the Race for Re-election.

City Attorney James L. Mayson Monday settled the question of the power of the City Council to re-elect Carlos H. Mason, First Ward representative on the Police Commission, by explaining that the only limitation on the terms of Police Commissioners was provided in an ordinance, and that the Council could repeal the ordinance at any time it saw fit.

The published statement in a morning paper that it would take a special act of the Legislature is incorrect.

A movement has been started to amend the ordinance at an early date so as to make Mr. Mason eligible. Indications are that it will be successful, though it is expected Mayor Woodward will veto the action and it will take a two-thirds majority to override him.

If the movement is successful, it will assure the re-election of Mr. Mason next March, and that would be interpreted to mean that he would be re-elected chairman by the Commission.

Walter Trippe is making an active campaign for Mr. Mason's place.

Extract Duties Restored.

Schedule A—Chemical oils and paints, alizarin, dead or creosote; oil, anthracite and anthracine oil have been restored to the free list, where they have been for many years. Cyanide of sodium and potassium have been transferred to the free list.

The House rates have been reduced on oxalic acids, crude chicle, linseed oil, chlorate of potash and perfumed and medicinal soaps.

The rates have been increased over those provided by the House on gallic acid, pyrogallic acid, tannic acid, celluloid, alizarin assistants, lithopone and white sulphide of zinc.

Extracts and decoctions of nut galls, Persian berries and sumach placed on the free list by the House have been restored to the dutiable list at a rate of three-eighths of 1 cent per pound.

The Senate receded from its amendments increasing the rates of calomel and ultra marine blue and wash blue.

Schedule B—Earth, earthenware and glassware. Roman, Portland and other hydraulic cements, limestone, rock asphalts, asphaltum and bitumen have been transferred to the free list.

Senate Recedes Again.

The House rates have been reduced on lenses, surveying instruments, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses, and increased on strips of glass for lenses and gauges, opera and field glasses.

A new classification has been made for unmanufactured mica and a rate of 4 cents per pound placed on all valued at not more than 15 cents per pound, and 25 per cent on that valued at more than 15 cents. This results in an increase over the House rate of 30 per cent on the cheap class of mica costing more than 14 cents, and a reduction of all that is valued at more than 15 cents per pound.

The Senate receded from its increased rates on stoneware and crucible and plate glass, more than three-eighths of an inch thick. The House classification for pottery, earthenware and chinaware is retained.

Schedule C, Metals and Manufactures of Metals—Iron in pigs, iron kentledge, speigeleisen, ferro-manganese, scrap iron and steel, iron in slabs, blooms, loops and other forms less finished and iron in bars and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, steel ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks and billets made by the Bessemer or similar processes and not containing alloys; engraved steel plates for printing bonds and other securities, ingots for railway wheels and antimony ores have been placed upon the free list.

Other Iron Rates Cut.

The rates on other forms of iron and steel have been reduced to compensate of the reduction in the crude forms transferred to the free list. Increases have been made over the House rates on lead-bearing ores and zinc in blocks, takes or other forms.

The Senate receded from its amendments decreasing the rates on wire ropes and increasing the rates on woven wire cloth. The House rate on steel ingots, billets and bars and other forms of steel made by the crucible, electric or cementation process, or containing alloys, has been retained. Also on steel wool, grit, shot and sand made from iron or steel.

A new classification has been made for automobiles valued at $2,000 or less, and a rate of 30 per cent fixed in lieu of the House rate of 45 per cent.

Schedule D, Woods and Manufactures of—No change in these materials have been made in the schedule. The thin wood comprising the tops and bottoms and sides of fruit boxes exported as shooks and returned filled with fruit are transferred to the free list in lieu of the House rate of 7 1-2 per cent.

The Sugar Question.

Schedule E, Sugar, Molasses and Manufacture of—The only change of importance in Schedule E is that postponing the time of the taking effect of the rate provided by the House on sugar and molasses and the abolition of the Dutch standard immediately. This will result in a reduction of rates in sugar above 16 Dutch standard, which now has a differential of 14 1-2 cents per pound on sugar testing 98 degrees, and an addition of 3 1-2 cents per 100 pounds for each degree less than 98 degrees.

Schedule F, Tobacco and Manufactures of—No changes were made in this schedule.

Schedule G, Agricultural Products and Provisions—Cattle, sheep and other domestic animals, suitable for use as food, wheat and wheat products and eggs have been transferred to the free list. Reductions have been made on oats, butter, beets, frozen eggs, peas, green house stock, zante currants, chocolate and cocoa sweetened and extracts of meats from the rates provided by the House.

Spirits Unchanged.

The rates have been increased over those provided by the House on broken rice, fish packed in oil and ground spices. A rate of 20 per cent ad valorem is placed on ground spices in addition to the specific rate provided by the House on spices, ground or unground. The Senate receded from the reduced rate placed on flaxseed and its amendment placing a duty on bananas. The House classification on lemons and other citrus fruits is accepted.

Schedule H, Spirits, Wines and Other Beverages—No changes of importance are made in this schedule. The rates on ginger ale and similar beverages are slightly decreased on bottles containing not more than one-half pint each. The Senate recedes from its amendment placing an internal revenue on grape brandy used in fortifying sweet wines.

Schedule I, Cotton Manufactures—The Senate classification of cotton cloth, according to the average number of the yarns contained therein, has been accepted instead of the House provision for the highest number. This will slightly decrease the rate of some fancy weaves and novelty cloth, but on the greatest bulk of cotton cloth the rate will not be affected.

New Stocking Classification.

The rates on bleached and dyed colored yarns are increased, and on cotton yarns and cloth made of yarn from Nos 79 to 99. The rates on handkerchiefs or mufflers, not hemmed, have been reduced from 30 per cent, as provided by the House, to 25 per cent.

A new classification has been provided on stockings and half hose. The rate on those valued at not more than 70 cents per dozen is reduced 30 per cent, and on those valued at between 70 cents and $1.20 per dozen the rate is reduced to 40 per cent instead of 50 per cent, as provided for by the House. BRIDE SEES CONGRESS SEAT FOR DONEHOO

Mrs. Paul Donehoo, bride in surprise wedding just announced.

Blind Coroner's Secret Wedding a Week Ago Is Just Discovered by His Friends.

Radiantly proud of a husband whose pluck has won the admiration of thousands, Mrs. Paul Donehoo, bride of a week, declared Monday that everyone—Democrats and Bull Moosers and the one or two Republicans left—might just as well accept it as a settled fact that the blind Coroner of Fulton County is going to Congress.

"Why, of course Paul will sit in the Capitol at Washington," said Mrs. Donehoo, pausing in the midst of a shower of congratulations from surprised friends.

Mrs. Donehoo said her blind husband's courtship had been somewhat on the whirlwind order.

"I met Paul just 50 days ago," she explained, "at the home of Miss Mae Karrigan, and (blushingly) I fell in love with his voice. No, you mustn't put that in the paper, because I know Paul wouldn't want me to say that. It was a case of mutual attraction from the beginning, and I know we are going to be very happy."

Coroner Donehoo found it impossible to keep secret his wedding of a week ago. The news of it just naturally bubbled from the lips of the happy husband, who let the cat out of the bag two weeks before he intended to.

Mr. Donehoo's wife was Miss Alverta Benson. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Arbuckle, in Decatur. Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Park Street Methodist Church, performing the ceremony.

PASTOR ATTACKS EMPLOYERS OF GIRLS HERE

Rich Block Church From Uplifting Labor, Declares the Rev. Hugh Wallace.

on Saturday for her wage, she was informed there was nothing due her.

Many working girls, he said, take their lives in their hands when they go to work, because of the lack of fire escapes and other protection from fire.

Scores Lack of Moral Guards.

The minister also declared that moral conditions in some of the work shops are alarming, and that the moral welfare of working girls is being woefully neglected.

"In some of the shops and stores I find that girls are forced to work directly under immoral foremen and forewomen," he said. "Absolutely no safeguard is thrown about the girls. Is it any wonder, then, that some of these girls, toiling their lives out for a starvation wage, yield to the lure of the tempter?"

Mr. Wallace quoted different passages from the Bible to show that it is the duty of the church to interest itself in the betterment of these conditions.

"The church must not sit idly by and allow the working classes to be oppressed, and see the very life and character of these girls ground out in this heartless manner," he declared. "It is time the churches should unite in a great systematic warfare against these forces that are throttling labor, and come to the rescue of the down-trodden working women and girls."

Associated Charities Scored.

At the morning service the Rev. Mr. Wallace severely rapped the Atlanta Associated Charities, declaring that a great portion of money contributed by Atlantans to relieve the suffering of the poor goes to swell handsome salaries of numerous officials. He suggested the name "associated investigators" in preference to the Associated Charities.

"Persons in dire need and distress are allowed to almost starve to death while the Associated Charities busies itself in investigating them," he said.

"If I should ever get in need, I would have a horror of falling into the hands of the 'associated investigators.'

"This organization should start out and devote its energies to the great object for which it was formed."

SEABOARD WINS SUIT.

ANNISTON, Sept. 29.—The Seaboard Air Line Railroad has been given a verdict in the suit brought against the road by Mrs. Mary E. Douglass to recover $20,000 for the death of her son, J. W. Thomason, who was killed by the train near Piedmont in August of last year.

New Synagogue Is Formally Opened

Members of the new congregation, Beth Hamedrish Hgodel Sfard, which formally was dedicated Sunday in the Red Men's hall on Capitol avenue with impressive services, marked by the presentation of the "Scroll of Law" written on tanned deer hide brought directly from Jerusalem, were enthusiastic Monday concerning the future of the latest addition to Atlanta's orthodox Jewish synagogues.

The new congregation was realized through the efforts of Rabbi J. M. Levine, under whose direction the work of gathering together the members progressed. Speaking in the pure Hebraic tongue, Rabbi Levine lectured on the "Book of the Bible." A handsome Bible covering, the gift of the members, was placed on the Sacred Book by Rabbi Levine at the conclusion of his address.

Pope Pius, Ill, to Forego Audiences

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Sept. 29.—Pope Pius X was advised to-day by his physicans to cease holding audiences on account of the delicate condition of his health. It is explained that His Holiness is not suffering from any specific malady, but that he is showing signs of general weakness, which, it is feared, may prove the forerunner of a nervous collapse.

The Pontiff promised his doctors to forego many of his clerical duties.

Two More Counties Rid of Cattle Tick

Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen has announced that Oconee and Newton Counties have been pronounced free from the cattle tick and have been released from quarantine.

This makes 14 counties out of 147 in Georgia immune from the cattle tick. When eradication was begun a year ago, there were only three counties free of the pest. There are three more counties likely to be freed of the tick by April.

MEDICAL COLLEGE OPENS 59TH TERM

220 Students Enrolled—New Georgia Law Brings Men From Other States.

The effect of the new medical practice law, passed at the recent session of the Georgia Legislature, was felt in an interesting way at the opening Monday of the fifty-ninth session of the Atlanta Medical College.

Students matriculated from a number of States which have not been represented for many years. Under the old arrangement those States refused to enter into reciprocal agreement with Georgia, but since the enactment of the new law, these States will now accept the diplomas of the Atlanta college.

Up to noon 220 students had registered at the Atlanta Medical College, and the indications are that before the end of the week the number will have reached more than the 420, which has been the number estimated by the faculty. The time for matriculation closes Saturday.

The opening exercises were held Monday in the auditorium at the college, and more than 400 prospective students were present. The exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Hugh K. Walker, of the First Presbyterian Church, and short addresses were delivered by Vice President E. W. Martin, of the Board of Trustees; Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Dr. W. S. Elkin, dean of the faculty, and Dr. W. F. Westmoreland, president of the college.

Cleared by Victim; Is Held by the Law

MIAMI, Sept. 29.—Charles Murray is dead as the result of a knife wound inflicted at Detroit, this county. Gus Oleson is under arrest, charged with murder, despite an ante mortem statement by Murray that Oleson did not commit the deed.

Mystery in Burning Of Industrial School

The St. Paul's Parish and Industrial School, No. 241 Auburn avenue, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday afternoon, entailing a loss of about $2,500.

The institution has been supported by the board of missions of the Episcopal Church and by popular subscriptions.

German-Americans Meeting in Mobile

MOBILE, Sept. 29.—The State convention of the National German-American Alliance began to-day, with President W. M. Richard, of Cullman, presiding.

Between 80 and 90 delegates from various parts of Alabama were present at the opening session. The principal addresses were delivered in German by the Rev. Father Adam Heibel, of Elberta, Ala., and by Adam Seiben in English. Music by the Froshina, the German singing society of the State, was a big feature.

Hooper Alexander Is Confirmed by Senate

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The nomination of Hooper Alexander, of Atlanta, to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia was confirmed by the Senate to-day.

The following nominations also were confirmed: Robert E. Mansfield, to be Consul at Vancouver, B. C.; Roger Culver Treadwell, to be Consul at Bristol, Eng.; Byron R. Newton, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in place of Sherman Allen.

500 Slain in Mexican Battle, Say Refugees

EAGLE PASS, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Refugees pouring into Eagle Pass today from Sabinas and other towns from 75 to 100 miles south of here reported that fighting had been in progress between Mexican Federals and rebels for the last three days.

The rebels, they said, were fleeing toward the Texas border. More than 500 were killed on both sides, the refugees said, and several towns were sacked and burned by the retreating rebels.

Increase in Exports Shown in Past Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—At the rate of more than $1,000,000 every business day in the past fiscal year have been the exports from the United States to Latin-America, according to a statement issued by the Department of Commerce. These amounted to $321,000,000, as compared with $108,000,000.

The most rapid gains have been with Argentina and Brazil.

THOMSON RAPS BRASELTON

Says Braselton Talking About a Business Administration and Is Not Even a Registered Voter

ALBERT D. THOMSON

To The People of Atlanta:

Up to this time, as a candidate for Alderman from the Fourth Ward, I have refrained from personalities with reference to my opponent, Mr. Amos W. Braselton.

It is not now my intention to criticise him personally.

But inasmuch as he saw fit to make the remark in this morning's Constitution that my supporters are the "ring politicians" and "petty politicians," or words to that effect, I feel justified in calling the public's attention to two facts.

First—Mr. Braselton has not paid his City taxes for 1912, there being now a fi-fa against him in the City Marshal's office.

Second—His name is not on the registration list for the City Primary to be held to-morrow, September 30th. In other words, he can not even vote in the Primary in which he is a candidate.

In view of these facts, isn't it rather poor taste for him to make disparaging remarks about the citizens who are supporting my candidacy?

Isn't it rather remarkable for Mr. Braselton to appeal for votes on the platform of a business administration," when, as a citizen and a business man, his interest in the City Government is not sufficient to induce him to pay his City taxes?

Isn't it rather "nervy" for Mr. Braselton to ask for the votes of citizens who PAID for the privilege of voting when he did not think enough of that privilege to pay himself?

Mr. Braselton advocates raising the pay of policemen—which is not a bad idea.

But if other citizens refused to contribute to the support of the City Government as he has done, there wouldn't be enough money in the City Treasury to pay their present salaries, or any other expenses of the City Government.

HEARST PAPERS PLAN TO FOOT UP AMERICA'S TRADE BALANCE SHEET

Estimates of What We Pay Annually to Foreigners

NO RECORDS have ever been compiled of what America pays annually to foreigners. The Hearst papers are to try to collect first-hand data covering the whole ground. Discrepancies between current estimates are most glaring—showing the need for the concrete information which it is planned to gather.

I have received estimates from the two leading foreign exchange bankers in the country—Vice President Gardin, of the National City Bank, and Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company. I append my own guess:

	John E. Gardin	Max May	B. C. Forbes
Spent by tourists	$500,000,000	$200,000,000	$225,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad.	400,000,000	100,000,000	100,000,000
Interest and dividends on securities held abroad	500,000,000	50,000,000	100,000,000
Freights to foreign steamship companies	300,000,000	150,000,000	150,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	300,000,000	150,000,000	300,000,000
Insurance and miscellaneous	.....	.....	25,000,000
Sent to Canada	.....	.....	50,000,000
Totals	$2,000,000,000	$650,000,000	$950,000,000

As an offset must be placed the rapidly increasing sums spent by foreign visitors to America and also the money brought over by immigrants.

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The United States is getting deeper into the debt of Europeans every year notwithstanding that our excess of merchandise exports over imports has totaled $8,350,000,000 during the last twenty years.

The Hearst papers propose, if given proper co-operation, to make up America's international balance sheet, a task never before attempted.

One envelope from J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Speyer & Co., or other important banking house may contain "exports" of greater value than the whole cargo of the largest trans-Atlantic liner.

Our "invisible" payments to foreigners have been computed at all sorts of figures—from $500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 annually.

No trustworthy records have ever been compiled.

The Hearst papers hope to remedy this.

How much do American tourists spend abroad every year?

Vice President Gardin, head of the National City Bank's foreign exchange department and a recognized authority, puts the amount at $500,000,000.

Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company, who handles an enormous mass of exchange and is looked upon as a wizard at the business, estimates the sum at $200,000,000.

My guess would be from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Take the item, "Interest and dividends on securities held abroad." Mr. Gardin allows the colossal amount of $500,000,000 annually, whereas Mr. May cuts this down to $50,000,000!

When experts differ so, surely there is need for enlightenment on a subject of such importance.

The Hearst papers invite every steamship company doing business with the United States to give, confidentially, the amount it collects for foreign and passenger service.

Insurance companies are being asked to compute how much Americans pay foreigners for insurance.

Express companies issue an enormous number of travelers' checks and other credits for use by Americans abroad, and a record of these, it is hoped, will be furnished.

Banks, banking firms and trust companies that do a foreign business will be requested to aid the work by supplying in strict confidence, of course, the amount sent abroad by them for various purposes germane to this investigation.

The Government issues exhaustive statistics covering our foreign trade in merchandise and bullion, but it throws no light on the huge payments made to foreign shipping companies on the amount spent by tourists, and by American residents abroad, on our annual bill for dividends and interest to oversea holders of our securities, or on the sum remitted by foreigners.

Did America not have to meet so serious a drain, she would, by her handsome balance of merchandise exports, gradually reduce her billions of indebtedness to European nations.

One thought forcibly impressed upon the mind by a consideration of our international balance-sheet is that it behooves our manufacturers to cast their coats and fight for a larger share of the world's custom so as to make us more self-supporting.

With our constant and rapid growth in population, it is not expected that our agricultural exports will expand. The general belief is that they will dwindle out of sight—a view I can not share, for once our farmers are given proper credit facilities and rise to the height of their possibilities, they will, I believe, astonish the world.

Meanwhile, the new tariff should help many lines of industry to compete more effectively in foreign markets, a step that will be necessary to compensate for the loss of domestic business that the lower tariff charges will entail.

The following table shows the total value of our merchandise imports and exports for the last twenty years, along with the annual balance in merchandise and also in gold and silver shipments. It should be noted that the United States has produced about $700,000,000 worth of silver and $1,500,000,000 worth of gold during the twenty years under review.

Bar Mails to Bible, Organization Urges

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Declaring that the Bible should be excluded from the mails on the ground that it contains obscene and immoral matter, a body of citizens has sent a petition to Postmaster General Burleson urging him to take action.

Some of the department officials to-day pointed to the fact that the denial of the mail privileges to alleged objectionable books frequently has been the means of securing a great amount of free advertising.

Methodist Sunday School Heads Meet

Crowds greeted the opening of the Atlanta District Methodist Sunday School Institute in Trinity Church Monday afternoon. Leading Methodist Sunday school workers were present. Nearly every Methodist pastor in Atlanta attended.

The program opened at 3 o'clock with an address on "The Sunday School Idea" by W. P. Lovejoy, presiding elder and chairman of the institute. Thomas K. Glenn, assistant superintendent of the Wesley Memorial Sunday School, spoke on "The Opportunity of the Sunday School."

George M. Napier, president of the North Georgia Conference Sunday School Board, delivered an address on "Connectional Sunday School Work." The Rev. Olin King, pastor of the Walker Street Church, spoke on "What Can the Quarterly Conference Do as a Board of Managers?" and Mrs. W. A. Albright concluded the afternoon program with a talk on "Special Days in the Sunday School."

Thomson Attacks Braselton's Record

Replying to Mayor Woodward's statement urging the people to vote for Amos Braselton for Alderman from the Fourth Ward, Councilman Albert D. Thomson, also a candidate for the place, made this comment Monday:

"Mr. Braselton not only is not registered in the Fourth Ward, but the city holds a fi. fa. against him as a defaulter in taxes to the amount of $185. If no one else paid their taxes any better than Mr. Braselton, there would be no need for Councilmen, Aldermen or a Mayor."

Piedmont Hotel to Have 'French Night'

Decorated after the historic Gardens of Fontainebleau at the time of Louis XIV, the Piedmont Hotel cafe Monday night will be the scene of a novel entertainment when the hotel presents its "French Night."

The occasion will be for the benefit of the after-theater crowds. Miss Claire Garner, recently brought to Atlanta by the hotel management from Hammerstein's, New York, will sing French songs, accompanied by the lady orchestra.

Negro Is Taken by Police After Fight

J. T. Jackson, the young negro who gave Police Officers Ford and Knight a hand-to-hand fight on Decatur street Sunday night, feigned insanity in his cell at the police station Monday, according to the police.

A hand-to-hand encounter followed the attempt to arrest Jackson. Not until he was beaten almost to unconsciousness did the negro surrender.

DELAY ON FRANK HEARING SEEMS UNAVOIDABLE

Dorsey Can Not Tell if He Will Be Ready by Saturday, and Rosser Says Nothing.

Postponement of the hearing of the motion next Saturday for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, appeared certain Monday, according to information from various authoritative sources.

The probabilities of the motion being heard before Judge Roan, the trial judge, were as much in doubt as ever, despite the fact that Judge Roan has expressed a desire to see the case disposed of before he retires from the bench, as well as the desire of Solicitor General Dorsey to have Judge Roan hear the motion.

However, the unexpected may happen. Judge Hill may not relinquish his place on the Court of Appeals bench until the Frank motion has been heard, it is said, as a result of his expressed hesitancy to hear the motion for a new trial in a case with which, from a strictly legal standpoint, he is entirely unfamiliar.

A postponement is regarded as certain, in view of an informal statement made by Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey, who declared Monday he had not heard one word from the defense in regard to the submitting of papers containing contentions for a new trial.

"I am going to do all I can," said Mr. Dorsey, "to have the case ready by October 4, but this depends entirely on the length and character of the matter presented to me by the defense.

"Should the papers, for instance, contain matter attacking jurymen, which would require the summoning of witnesses perhaps from various parts of the State, then the possibilities of getting ready on schedule are slight.

"All I can say is that I simply can not tell at this time whether I can be ready by Saturday or not."

Luther Rosser, attorney for Frank, declared Monday he had nothing to say regarding the matter.

THAW LIKELY TO LOSE FIGHT ON EXTRADITION

Friend Says Governor Will Honor Requisition—Case Slated for Highest Courts.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 29.—A man very close to Governor Felker said to-day the New Hampshire Executive undoubtedly would honor the requisition of New York authorities for Harry K. Thaw, the escaped Matteawan fugitive.

Governor Felker, the informant said, after exhaustive study of all statutes and precedents having any possible bearing on the subject, would concede the contention of William Travers Jerome that the extradition papers, being in regular form, should be honored irrespective of other aspects of the case.

Both Sides Plan Appeal.

This mean that Harry Thaw's fight for liberty, which already has been fought in the courts of New York, New Hampshire and Canada, will now go to the United Sattes courts. In anticipation of possible defeat in the extradition and New Hampshire court proceedings, Harry Thaw's counsel had the foresight to sue out a writ of habeas corpus in the United States courts.

The hearing, which was delayed at the request of Thaw's counsel, now will proceed, and since both sides have expressed their intention to appeal in the event of defeat, it is almost assured that the famous case will be fought out through the highest courts in the United States.

Scene to Shift to Boston.

"Governor Felker will extradite Thaw, his decision will be a conventional one," declared a member of the Governor's Council to-day. "This must not be taken as coming officially from Governor Felker, but only as my personal opinion based on an intimate knowledge of the probabilities, an opinion which I believe will be borne out by developments within the next few days."

The informant expressed the general belief voiced about the Granite State Capitol. The effect of Governor Felker's granting extradition papers would be to throw the case into the Federal courts, transferring the scene from this city to Boston.

OWENS' EIGHTH WARD MEETING DISCUSSED BY HANCOCK

A letter has been handed me signed by Mr. John S. Owens in which was enclosed a letter in circular form giving the proceedings of an Owens Meeting held in the Eighth Ward on the 12th day of last August. Permit me to say that I did not receive a notice of said meeting, although I am a taxpayer and reside in said ward. However, I was represented at the meeting. There are 900 registered voters in the Eighth Ward. In Mr. Owens' circular-letter it appears there were 56 of his friends present at his meeting, 11 of whom are not registered. A resolution prepared by someone, prior to the meeting, was introduced by Dr. Mayson, and after the virtues of Mr. Owens were extolled by General A. J. West (who is not registered) said resolutions were adopted by a viva-voce vote. The meeting lasted just eight minutes and was participated in by such friends as Mr. Owens saw fit to invite. I beg to call your attention to the following petition handed me, which was responsible for my becoming a candidate for Alderman:

"Inasmuch as our present representative from the Eighth Ward in the Aldermanic Board will not stand for re-election, and recognizing the sterling worth and ability of former Alderman W. A. Hancock, we the undersigned, earnestly request that he become a candidate for this office at the coming Municipal election: Dr. A. H. VanDyke, Alex W. Smith, Sr., Alex W. Smith, Jr., Victor Lamar Smith, R. M. Walker, W. D. Ellis, Jr., E. H. Thornton, E. C. Peters, John E. Murphy, Frank O. Foster, W. L. Cosgrove, Gerald Selby, M. D., W. E. Hawkins, Charles F. Whitner, Fair Dodd, William A. Wimbish, L. P. Stephens, W. T. Ashford, Charles Gately, C. J. Simmons, Paul Goldsmith, H. H. Cabaniss, F. E. Callaway, Macon Martin, C. R. Winship, J. O. Wynn, William J. Davis, George A. Campbell, R. L. Campbell, D. H. Dougherty, H. A. Maier, H. W. Anderson, J. V. Doll, R. P. Stahl, R. L. Spain, Harvey Johnson, D. N. McCullough."

I publish this petition that you may observe that quite a few prominent citizens of the Eighth Ward are acquainted with me and are desirous of my representing them as Alderman, notwithstanding Mr. Owens' statement to the contrary.

I was born in Atlanta, have lived here all my life, I have no apologies to offer for anything I did while representing you for five years in the General Council. I have resided in the Eighth Ward for two years and expect to live there the balance of my life. I have no schemes to further, no acreage or subdivision to improve with streets and sidewalks. I expect when nominated for Alderman, as I will be to-morrow, to earnestly endeavor to represent the whole city, as well as the Eighth Ward, this I understand, is what an Alderman who faithfully performs his duty is expected to do.

Very respectfully,

W. A. HANCOCK

YOU SHOULD VOTE

"Choose you this day whom you will serve."

---JOSHUA 24:15.

The population of Los Angeles is 319,198. It has grown by leaps and bounds.

One of that city's newspapers under date of July 6th, 1913, said:

"March, 1909, Alexander became Mayor and has held the office continuously since that date.

"Since that day the city has had clean, honest government—

"It is probable that in this period of law enforcement the population of the city has doubled.

"Never has there been such uninterrupted activity in building. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, 7,644 building permits were issued calling for construction valued at $11,187,684. In the fiscal year that ended last Monday (July, 1913), 17,568 permits were issued and the value of construction called for by them was $34,662,511.

"DECENCY IN GOVERNMENT PAYS—

"The lugubrious prophecies of the apologists and defenders of vice, who fought for the continuance of the old immoralities, for protection, for a wide open town, for toleration of debauchery because it was good for business were proved to be false prophecies.

"Never in all the history of the city has business made such strides as during these four years of law enforcement.

"Never have the banks made greater gains in strength—

"A local savings bank presented a biennial comparative statement—

"In 1909 it had resources amounting to $23,980,670. After four years of honest, clean municipal administration, of enforcement of the law, of repression of those vices for which toleration has been demanded by apologists for vice, the resources of that same bank total $46,638,811."

On the wall of the office of Mayor Alexander hung this motto:

"Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

The same Los Angeles newspaper added:

"The city should remember the beginning of the verse:—

" 'Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' "

SEATTLE HAS 237,194 INHABITANTS.

Like Los Angeles, it is another city whose name means business, growth, progress and prosperity.

Gill was elected its Mayor on the wide-open-town ticket." Soon it was rumored that the very Chief of Police had an interest in a gambling hell. One enterprising citizen started building a two-hundred-room house in the segregated district.

GILL WAS RECALLED and thrown out of office. The pimps and panderers were driven out of the city. Gill tried to come back. He was again defeated.

Seattle is still growing. Three years ago her people recognized that decency meant progress.

Filth and foul odors always mean decay and death.

Let us have none in Atlanta.

As one who loves your city and your Maker, you should vote to-morrow without fail.

Ask no candidate, "How do you stand?"

But vote for no one until you know who is supporting him. Find this out.

THEN VOTE AS YOUR CONSCIENCE BIDS YOU.

If you believe that God wishes to re-establish and maintain in Atlanta brothels which depend for their existence upon the betrayal of girls, vote for those supported by the men who have tried to hamper and hamstring your Chief of Police in doing his duty.

If you believe that God wishes to destroy an honest official and enthrone Judas, vote for the crowd that is camping on the trail of Chief Beavers.

But, if you believe that God would reward fidelity to duty; if you believe that He would have you and your children live in a city that is clean and with foundations not built upon the suffering of others, vote for those who are opposed by the men who believe in the licensed brothel and seek a Chief of Police who would be false to his oath of office.

YOUR DUTY DEMANDS THAT YOU VOTE.

To-morrow is a critical day in your city and in your life.

"Choose you whom you will serve."

ATLANTA DAY AT KNOXVILLE WILL BE BIG EVENT

Colonel Lowry Helps Appalachian Exposition Prepare for Large Delegation of Boosters.

Arrangements are being made for a large crowd of Atlantans to go to Knoxville October 7, which will be Atlanta Day at the Appalachian Exposition.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee, has just returned from Knoxville, where he made preparations for entertaining a large delegation of Atlantans. He praises the exposition highly.

"The exposition is a most wonderful one," said he. "It is attracting a large number of visitors and indications are that we will take an unusually large number of Atlantans there. The exposition shows the resources of the Appalachian range and the agricultural products of the Southern States.

"Knoxville has been looking forward to Atlanta Day at the exposition and is planning to receive us with true Knoxville hospitality. I think every member of the Chamber of Commerce should make the trip to Knoxville if possible. We have always been supported in everything we went after by Knoxville and we should show our appreciation by sending a large delegation to the exposition."

A large number of Chamber of Commerce members have already signified their intention of making the trip, and it is quite possible that a special train will be necessary to handle the crowd. In addition to the features of the exposition, the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce has planned a special celebration in honor of the Atlanta visitors.

China Buys Less U. S. Cotton by $24,304,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A decrease of $24,304,000 in the value of American cotton goods sold in China in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1913, compared with the goods sold in 1906, which led the United States to undertake an investigation, has resulted in the discovery that the Chinese are making so much of their own cloth that his nation will have to find some substitute for cotton, if it wishes to stimulate a new trade. There are many cotton mills in Japan, which used $25,000,000 worth of American cotton last year. These facts are contained in a statement issued today by the Department of Commerce.

Cyclist Hurts Self To Save Little Girl

WAYCROSS, Sept. 29.—Rather than take the risk of running down little Alice Jones on Plant avenue to-day, Osborn Watson, secretary to Mayor Harry Reed, drove his automobile into a pile of paving material and was painfully injured.

The girl was in the middle of the street and was apparently so badly frightened that she could not move. The motorcycle was not damaged.

CONTEST BEGINS FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS

E. E. Cox, of Camilla, First to Announce to Succeed the Late S. A. Roddenbery.

Following the funeral at Thomasville of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, of the Second Georgia District, the fight for the seat in Congress made vacant by his death began Monday.

Colonel E. E. Cox, a lawyer of Camilla, is the first to announce. He has been active in politics for a number of years, and has been mentioned as congressional timber before.

It is certain that others will enter the race in a short time. The special election for the unexpired term will be called at an early date. The election for the full term will take place next year.

W. W. Banks, Mayor of Tifton, is a strong probability, his friends urging him to enter the contest. Mr. Banks has also been active in politics for many years.

Another probability is J. L. Hand, of Pelham, ex-State Senator and a man well qualified in every particular to fill the place. He is one of the richest men in Southwest Georgia.

Roscoe Luke, Mayor of Thomasville, is being urged to enter the race, and has the matter under advisment. He is well known throughout the district. He will probably enter.

Judge J. R. Pottle, of Blakely, judge of the Court of Appeals, is another who may enter the fight. The race he won for the Court of Appeals is an indication of his popularity. He will make a strong candidate if he decides to enter.

Jesse Perry, of Camilla, secretary to Governor Slaton, is another possibility. He has shown his strength in politics for a number of years, and is very popular in the district. He was secretary to the late Congressman James M. Griggs.

H. Y. McIntosh, editor of The Albany Herald, is another strong possibility. He has been urged by his friends for a number of years to make the race for Congress from the Second District, and at one time entered the contest, but withdrew before the election.

The Second District embraces the counties of Thomas, Grady, Decatur, Colquitt, Mitchell, Baker, Miller, Early, Tift, Worth, Dougherty and Calhoun.

Monument Planned For Roddenbery.

CAIRO, Sept. 29.—The executive officers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Cairo has decided to erect a monument here to the memory of Congressman Roddenbery. This place was his boyhood home.

Immediate steps will be taken to secure funds for this purpose and the matter will be presented to all the unions in the other districts, as well as other organizations and individuals.

Mr. Rodenbery's stand for prohibition was well known, not only in the Second District but in the State and Nation. The local union leaders feel that the sympathizers of the prohibition movement will rally in this cause.

Congressman Buried At Thomasville.

THOMASVILLE, Sept. 29.—More than 1,500 friends attended the funeral of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. It was the largest funeral ever conducted in Thomasville. As a token of respect for the dead statesman, no services were held in any church in the city. On account of the expressed desire of the dead Congressman, the funeral services were held at his home on Hansell street.

The Congressional delegation from Washington arrived at 9:15 o'clock, being met by a special committee appointed by Mayor Luke. After breakfast at a hotel the delegation went to the residence of their late colleague, where they remained until after the funeral services, and then accompanied the body to the cemetery.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. W. Rushin, of Boston, Ga., a friend of Mr. Roddenbery, who paid a short but touching tribute to the dead statesman. Flowers were massed around the casket and about the room. A scene that touched the hearts of those present was when the friends from the rural districts, many of whom had ridden or driven several miles to be present and take a last look at their leader, entered the room and passed in file before the casket.

When the funeral services were over the cortege, more than a mile long, moved to Laurel Hill Cemetery for interment.

Mrs. Roddenbery and two daughters leave to-day for Sylvester, where they will visit Mrs. Gardner Nottingham for a time. John and Yates Roddenbery, sons, return to Athens and Danville, Va., where they are in school.

FRAUD IS LAID TO BIRMINGHAM JEWELERS

New York Diamond Merchants Throw Business of Joseph Rich & Son Into Bankruptcy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Joseph Rich, proprietor of a jewelry store in Birmingham, but a resident of this city, was charged with obtaining thousands of dollars worth of diamonds on false pretenses in a petition in bankruptcy filed against him today in the United States District Court.

Rich and his son Abraham, who acts as buyer for the Southern store, bought diamonds on credit from prominent dealers in this city, according to the petition, and instead of shipping them to Birmingham resold the stones to New York dealers at prices 25 per cent less than their real value.

Attorneys for the petitioning creditors say practically every dealer in the Maiden Lane district extended credit to the firm and a $1,000,000 failure was only averted by the accidental discovery of its illegal dealings.

Judge Charles M. Hough appointed Matthew A. Henkel receiver for the Rich firm and the latter left for Birmingham to take charge of the assets there.

Ball Players Knew Of Rich's Bargains.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—A. V. Abbott, as resident receiver, is in charge of the business of Joseph Rich, of New York, operating here under the name of the Colorado Loan Company, the business being managed by his son, Abraham Rich. The business was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy here and Abbott was placed in charge. Efforts have been made to bring about a settlement of the indebtedness, but so far the creditors have refused to accept the amount offered.

It is said that the diamonds purchased in New York were ostensibly bought for sale to baseball players of the Southern League. That the Birmingham players knew of bargains at the Colorado Loan Company is not denied, but whether or not deals were carried out is not stated. Considerable business was transacted here by the loan company and regular auctions were held.

HARRISTON, MISS., Sept. 29.—With State troops camped in the streets, this town was quiet to-day after being stirred by the worst race riot in its history. Ten persons were dead, two of them mulatto boys, brothers, who were lynched after they had felled 28 persons.

The boys, crazed by drugs, ran amuck, shooting wildly as they ran through the negro quarter. The arrival of the militiamen prevented further bloodshed in an open clash between whites and negroes.

RENFROE MAKES EMPHATIC DENIAL

To the Voters of the First Ward—

During the last hours of the primary some of my opponents are charging that I am a gambler and a drunkard.

This report has, I understand, been circulated by John W. Phillips, king of blind tigers, who has just been released from the chaingang, where he served a twelve months' sentence.

I never saw this man in my life and would not know him if I saw him.

My life record is an open book. The voters have ample opportunity to investigate these charges.

I have never gambled and do not drink. I am a successful business man, interested in the advancement of my ward and the entire city.

If elected, I shall serve efficiently and actively. J. N. RENFROE.

Laughter Lured Her To Death in Darkness

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—The pretty, handsomely gowned woman whose mangled body was found on a railroad track near Wayne, Ill., was lured to her death with humorous stories and the light laugh of the man who took her into the darkness, shot her and left her body to be ground beneath the wheels of a train.

Witnesses were found who saw the pair leave a trolley car laughing over a funny story the man told. A block away, one said, the laughter ended abruptly and a single shot rang out.

Hancock Replies to John S. Owens

I notice John S. Owens has at last resorted "to slinging mud," although he agreed with me to run a clean race. My record in Council, I believe, was in every way satisfactory to the people. He published in Sunday's papers the record of my vote on the election of officials by the people which is misleading. I do not consider it necessary to go into details to explain my vote except to say that the matter of the election of certain officials by the people had been considered at different meetings of the General Council for more than two months. After the resolution had been amended as the people desired that it should be I voted for it. I expect my record in the General Council, as well as in Atlanta, will stand inspection about as well as Mr. Owens' record as a citizen. I am told on good authority that Mr. Owens is the president of the Cement Tile Co., and has a contract with the city this year and has had for the past two years for laying all the tile sidewalks. I am also told that he has succeeded in closing out all the little fellows who were competing with him, and now has the whole business to himself—a regular monopoly. I can furnish the name of the author of this information if desired. I am also informed that Mr. Owens is the same John S. Owens who was Secretary and Treasurer of the Equitable Loan and Security Co., which operated in Atlanta for several years, and was a financial loss to a good many citizens of Atlanta and other cities throughout the State, although it is said he made a fortune for himself, and yet he asks the people of Atlanta to elect him Alderman. Mr. Owens claims he does not belong to any ring; the ring who "framed up" the Charter which was overwhelmingly defeated last Tuesday, ARE FOR J. S. OWENS, and against me, to a man, yet Mr. Owens does not belong to any ring.

My only reason for writing this article is due to the fact that Mr. Owens has broken faith with me, as we had positively agreed to let the people know two gentlemen could run for office without slinging mud.

Respectfully,

W. A. HANCOCK

Mr. Hancock's Record in the City Council

Voted Several Times Against Electing City Officials by the People

A letter has been sent to the Voters of the City by Mr. W. A. Hancock, candidate for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, in which he takes credit for many things done by the General Council during his extended service in that body.

The record of a public official is always a legitimate subject of discussion when the official offers for re-election. Therefore, we call attention to some specific votes by Mr. Hancock which are not mentioned in his letter.

The City Executive Committee ordered a vote on the question of electing the Recorder, General Manager Waterworks, City Comptroller, City Marshal, City Electrician, City Clerk, City Building Inspector, City Warden by the people. Mr. John S. Owens was a member of this Committee and voted FOR it.

In this election the people voted over 6,000 to 900 that these officials should be elected by popular vote.

A resolution was introduced in Council to amend the Charter and carry out the decision of the people. A motion was made to lay it on the table. Mr. Hancock voted YES. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 699.) Various motions were made to strike from the list several officials named by the people. Mr. Hancock voted TO STRIKE each one proposed. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 708.) Afterwards a resolution was introduced to "Carry out the will of the people." Mr. Hancock voted "NO." (Minutes of Council No. 22, Page 15.)

Throughout the whole fight Mr. Hancock was "Johnnie on the Spot" and hand in glove with the "City Ring" to defeat the will of the people and voted in favor of all motions to delay or to defeat the expressed decision of the people in the election held on the subject. (Minutes of Council No. 22, Pages 63, 66 and 427.)

The people finally won their fight, and these officials are now elected by popular vote, but it was OVER the vote of Mr. Hancock.

Now, Mr. Voter, if Mr. Hancock, when last in Council, refused to carry out your will, as expressed at the ballot-box, can you expect him to carry out your will, if he is put back in Council, whether you hold an election on the subject or simply express it to him in person? He has shown a contempt for the people, even when they acted and voted together almost unanimously. How can he now ask the same people to re-elect him as their REPRESENTATIVE? A representative is a man who represents. He did not do it. You can not now expect him to do it. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Mr. John S. Owens has never been in politics. He is not lined up with any faction. He will put some "new blood" into our City Government. He is an active, successful business man. He is the kind of man the people are always saying they want in Council. Now is the chance to get SUCH A MAN!

STATESMEN CALL AT CAPITOL, BUT MISS SLATON

Senator Bacon Acts as Guide to Congressional Delegation to Roddenbery Funeral.

Had Governor John Marshall Slaton been tipped off to the avalanche of national statesmanship to be precipitated upon the State Capitol today likely as not he wouldn't have left Atlanta for Tennessee, at least until after he had availed himself of an opportunity to welcome said avalanche to our fair city.

As it was, about the biggest bunch of national celebrities seen in the Gate City of the South in many moons called at the Capitol in the forenoon to pay its respects to the Chief Magistrate, but there was nothing doing.

The party was escorted to the Capitol by United States Senator Bacon, and, besides Mr. Bacon, was made up of the following gentlemen:

View City From Capitol.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey; Senator Thomas, of Colorado, and Representatives Lee, Hughes, Howard, Tribble, Bartlett, Walker, Edwards, Adamson and Crisp, all of Georgia, and Representatives McLaughlin, of Michigan; Hill, of Illinois, and Naguire, of Nebraska.

This distinguished party was very much disappointed at not finding the Governor in. Failing to find the Governor, however, the party was escorted to the various departments by Senator Bacon, after which all those composing it were carried to the dome and shown the city from that point of vantage.

The Congressional party was returning from the funeral of Representative Roddenbery, held in Thomasville Sunday, and was in Atlanta only about two hours. All returned to Washington on the Southern at 11:01 a. m.

Governor at Nashville.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton are attending the Week-Gray wedding in Nashville, and will not return to Atlanta until Wednesday.

Senators Smith and Bacon spent the morning with friends, while the Georgia Representatives also took advantage of the opportunity to call upon Atlanta friends. The other members of the party spent the morning at the Capital City Club.

An unusually busy man was Senator Smith. He held a long conference with Atlanta's new postmaster, Boiling H. Jones. Mr. Jones accompanied him on a hurried tour of the Federal building and to the Terminal Station. Probably half a hundred persons, each apparently with the most important personal business, were at the Terminal Station to buttonhole Senator Smith and hold private conversation with him.

Atlantans Visit Senators.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, and Senator Thomas, of Colorado, who were the other two Senators in the party, were visited at the Capital City Club by a number of prominent Atlantans during the morning hours.

The party left Thomasville Sunday night in special Pullmans, and arrived at 7 a. m. Monday. In the party were a number of secretaries to the Congressmen and othe. Georgians who are now located at the National Capital.

She was killed and her body was thrown on the tracks of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad near Wayne, Ill., last Friday night.

While the warrant for Rexcoat was being held up the police of Wheaton admitted they were searching for a Wheaton man who disappeared Saturday.

A light breakfast of coffee and rolls is advised for the brainworker though for the manual laborer, the breakfastless plan is unsuitable.

BECKER IN DEATH CELL TRIES TO AID SULZER

Condemned Slayer Said to Have Prepared Evidence Dooming Political Existence of Many.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Sing Sing's ghastly death house to-day contributed an amazing chapter to the story of the impeachment of Governor William Sulzer, in which it appears that Lieutenant Charles Becker has prepared evidence striking at the political life if not at the personal freedom of a dozen men high in the official life of the State. This story, alleged to be backed by such proof as a shrewd and resourceful detective might produce, has been offered by Becker in return for his life.

This is the story:

At the beginning of the fight upon the Governor, emissaries were sent to Becker at Sing Sing for the purpose of getting from him any facts he might have concerning the connection between politics and crime in the city of New York. But Becker demanded that before one line of his evidence went to expectant channels, a pardon should be signed which would leave him absolutely free from any chance of punishment growing out of the murder of Herman Rosenthal in front of the Hotel Metropole on July 16, 1912.

In the meantime the power of Governor Sulzer to pardon anybody had vanished. Those men who were named in the Becker "confession" were apprised of the fact. They set to work all of the wheels under their command to prevent the production of the statement.

But its general character is known to too many men to permit the fact of its existence to escape the public. Becker has been assured, so far as anyone knows, without any authority from any person in Albany who is or may be in a position to make good the assurance, that he will be kindly treated in the event that Governor Sulzer is impeached and his story remains among the things untold.

The High Court of Impeachment to-day swung into a week that promises to see the close of the testimony for the prosecution. Attorneys for the board of managers said at the beginning of the day that they did not think it possible that their case would consume more than this week. At the outset of the day they were in doubt as to what witnesses they would call when the court resumed its session at 2 o'clock.

ROAD MOVEMENT IS SPURRED BY PATHFINDER

Texas Boosters Vote Bonds to Assure Passage of Highway Thro' Their Counties.

That the Texas good roads and highway boosters think nothing of driving 100 miles to meet the pathfinding car was the feature of a telegram received Monday morning from E. L. Ferguson, official pathfinder for the all-Southern transcontinental trail. The tourists left San Angelo Monday morning for El Paso.

"A rousing meeting with 21 delegates from every town and county, within a radius of 300 miles met us here," wired Mr. Ferguson, "and large delegations from Irion County, including county officials, presented to us a petition signed by every voter in the county, urging the routing of the highway through Irion."

"The route," Mr. Ferguson added, "was immediately accepted, and $20,000 in bonds was voted at once for good roads."

The pathfinding car will reach Fort Stockton Tuesday and Alpine or Marfa, Texas, Wednesday.

DON'T TAKE THE WRONG MEDICINE

If Your Liver Gets Lazy You Need a Liver Tonic, Not Merely a Laxative for the Bowels.

Many people take a simple laxative when their liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at home and lose a day from your business.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tone. Dodson's Liver Tone must be all they claim for it because they guarantee it to take the place of dangerous calomel and agree to hand back the money with a smile to any person who tries Dodson's Liver Tone and is not satisfied with the relief it gives.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a harmless vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation, biliousness, sour stomach, and the other troubles that come from a torpid liver.

All druggists give it their personal guarantee and if you will ask about this guarantee you will protect yourself against imitations that are not guaranteed. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents.—Adv.

The Ring don't want anyone it can't control—it is therefore fighting John S. Owens.

STATEMENT TO VOTERS

Charles B. Alverson, Candidate for Council From the First Ward, Issues Statement.

Many citizens of the First Ward urged me to enter the race for Councilman on the plea that they wanted an active business man to represent them in Council.

Believing it to be the duty of a good citizen to serve his ward when his fellow citizens desire it, I entered the race.

Now, a short statement is in order to advise the voters as to my position on matters affecting the ward.

In the first place, our greatest need is a new, modern, well-equipped brick building for Davis Street School. I have the assurance, from a majority of the members of the new Council, that if elected they will co-operate with me in securing this building. This shows that they are very friendly to my candidacy and will do what they can to help me improve our ward.

If this is not done I promise to be one of 100 to give $500 each to secure such a building.

I also promise that, in either event, this work shall be done with white labor, as I only employ white labor in my construction work and at my store. I started as a poor boy and know how hard it is for them to build up and I believe they should be given the preference. There are plenty of white carpenters who have families who should be given this work.

My interests both in business and in property lie in the First Ward, and I expect to give my best efforts to secure the Rhodes-Spring street viaduct. I have studied this for some time and I know its needs and how much it will help our ward.

If I fail to do this, I agree to be one of 200 citizens to give $1,000 each to secure this very important work.

I do business very near West Mitchell street and have occasion to use West Hunter, Nelson and Walker streets nearly every day, and I am going to see that these streets get the improvement they so much need.

I have always taken an active interest in public matters affecting the city and ward, but I have never seen my opponent, Mr. Renfroe, at any public meeting at any time looking toward the improvement or upbuilding of the ward before he entered this race. Very few of our people knew that he claimed to live in the First Ward. My information is that he traveled over the country for many years for the U. S. Gas Company and only severed his connection a short while back, and now comes forward and asks to represent our ward. Most of the people to whom I have talked think he should wait a while and become acquainted with us before offering for office.

I know the people, I know the ward and I know the city, and I can secure for our section all that any representative could. I will be ready at all times to confer with my fellow citizens and co-operate with them in all things for the betterment of our ward.

CHARLES B. ALVERSON.

HERO BEARS TWO WOMEN FROM FIRE PERIL

Unknown Rescuer Vanishes After Braving Smoke and Flame to Warn Boarders.

Fifteen persons, many of them women and children, were forced to flee in their night clothes early Monday morning when fire, breaking out in the residence of John W. Dean, No. 107 Piedmont avenue, practically destroyed the building.

A street car man, who was passing along Piedmont avenue, discovered the flames after they had gained considerable headway and aroused the sleeping occupants of the building, probably prevented a loss of life.

Upon seeing the roof of the house a mass of fire, the passerby burst through the front door shouting the alarm. The flames quickly ate down into the framework of the dwelling. The stranger was forced to carry two of the frightened women out of the burning building to save them.

Several fire companies responded to the alarm, Company No. 4 arriving first. Difficulty was experienced by the firemen in entering the house on account of the smoke. Entrance was finally made through a window, and in a remarkably short time the flames were subdued. The fire had gained such headway and burned so rapidly that the house was almost totally destroyed, although the firemen were on the scene in less than five minutes after the alarm was given.

After seeing that all of the occupants of the house were safe, the unknown man left hurriedly, saying he was afraid of being late at his work.

Horse Guard Owners.

The house is located at the corner of Piedmont and Edgewood avenues, and is the property of the Governor's Horse Guard. John W. Dean has operated a boarding house there for some time. It was her that Mrs. L. R. Glenn, wife of the Atlanta contractor who eloped with Mrs. Iona Pidcock, wife of the Moultrie (Ga.) millionaire, remained while her husband was confined in the county jail after being brought back from Texas, where he was arrested with Mrs. Pidcock.

The fire apparently started in a closet on the second floor of the house, but the cause is unknown. It is a frame house, erected many years ago.

Fifteen persons were asleep in the house at the time of the fire. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sherman and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Humes, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cook, H. C. Fisher, L. N. Randolph and A. F. Bailey. Practically all of the men are railroad employees with the exception of Fisher, who is in the jewelry business.

The horse was insured for $3,000 and it is believed the damage may be held to a little more than $1,000, according to Capitain O. L. Rudisill, commander of the Governor's Horse Guard.

The cavalry company came into possession of the property fifteen years ago, purchasing it from Mrs. G. Loving. The troop used the basement as a storage room for many years and rented out the upper stories for a boarding house. The property has increased greatly in value since purchased by the troop, and an offer of $55,000 was recently refused for it.

Edison Says People Eat Too Much Beef

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Thomas A. Edison believes the currency measure should be supervised by capable bankers and there should be four centers—at New York, Chicago, the South and Far West.

He said he would take no more vacations without work, as "vacationites" had caused his illness, and he would see that it did not happen again.

He declared Americans were eating twice too much beef for their own good.

Bull Moose Leader Defies Old Parties

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"The Bull Moose party is far from dead—in fact, it is very much alive and will be found kicking strenuously when the proper time comes."

Fresh from a conference of the Progressive party leaders in New York, Representative Hinebaugh, of Illinois, breathed this defiance to Republicans and Democrats. According to Hinebaugh's estimate the Progressives will poll at least two and a half million votes.

Blackbirder's Crew Run Down at Last; Girl Pet of Pirates

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HONOLULU, Sept. 29.—The chase for the "blackbirders," a pirate crew that has been terrorizing the islands of the South Seas, has ended, according to a wireless message received here to-day from Captain Tapham, of the revenue cutter Keokuk. Every man of the pirate band was captured, Captain Tapham said, after a hard fight. The prisoners will be sent to San Francisco, where the revenue cutter's captain will recommend that every one be hanged.

Among the pirates, Captain Tapham found a beautiful young Spanish girl, Estella D'Ortez, who is adored by the pirates as their most precious treasure. She has been among the pirates for ten years, and was 5 years old when she fell into their hands.

The chief of the pirates confessed that his band sunk her father's boat and saved only the beautiful child.

President Wilson Sees Polaire Dance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—President Wilson witnessed the "Triple Alliance Review" of Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, Mlle. Polaire and Gertrude Hoffman at the Belasco Theater.

Stewart Richardson gave a number of dances which included one representing the awakening of the world at the break of dawn. In this the dancer was barefooted and clothed only in flimsy veils to represent the morning mist and as the dance progressed several of the veils were dispensed with.

Mlle. Polaire included an Apache dance in her portion of the program while Gertrude Hoffman gave her new review.

'Barbary Coast' to Defy Closing Order

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The thumbs of Chief of Police White have been turned down hard on a plan of resort owners to continue the "Barbary Coast" on a soft drink basis. Hard drinks or soft drinks, dance halls are dance halls, said the Chief to-day in an announcement that women would not be permitted in the resorts after to-morrow evening, even if liquor was not served.

Notwithstanding the announcement by the Chief, the resort owners were preparing for Tuesday night's "grape juice opening."

Garros Says He Can Fly Across Atlantic

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Roland G. Garros, who made an aeroplane flight across the Mediterranean, declares a flight across the Atlantic Ocean is possible.

His plan would be to divide the journey into three stages—from England to Iceland, from Iceland to Newfoundland, from Newfoundland to the United States.

Two of these stages would be shorter than his France to Tunis flight, and the third very little longer.

Princess Olga to Wed German Noble

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

WOMAN HELD AS $30,000 THEFT IS PROBED

New York Officers Arrest Wilmington, N. C., Matron Accused of Stealing Friend's Fortune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, a leader in Wilmington (N. C.) society, was arrested at the Hotel Endicott charged with embezzling $30,000 from her lifelong friend, Mrs. Helen P. Lemassena, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Nichols, who is a tall, well-dressed woman of striking appearance, was dumfounded when placed under arrest. She requested to be allowed to remain at the hotel under guard until the matter was cleared up, but she was taken to the station house.

The arrest was made at the instigation of Mrs. Lemassena's son, John P. Lemassena, who has followed Mrs. Nichols through seven States during the past six months. He told the police that his mother had intrusted Mrs. Nichols with $30,000 to invest and that shortly after this Mrs. Nichols disappeared from Wilmington.

To Ask Requisition For Mrs. Nichols.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 29.—Solicitor Homer L. Lyon, of the Eighth Judicial District, arrived here to-day from Whiteville to prepare requisition papers in the case against Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, who has been arrested in New York for the New Hanover County authorities, charged with embezzlement.

The papers will be forwarded to Raleigh for Governor Craig's signature. Sheriff P. Cowan, of this county, will leave for New York immediately upon receipt of them.

Sheriff Cowan was notified from New York of the arrest of Mrs. Nichols, and it was indicated in the telegram that she would refuse to return to North Carolina without extradition papers. She is being held pending the necessary papers and arrival of an officer from this county.

Mrs. Nichols is an elderly woman, remarkably well preserved, of handsome appearance and charming personality. She moved in exclusive social circles in Wilmington and entertained lavishly. She was widely known and was prominent in several charitable organizations.

There are three separate indictments against the woman, in the aggregate charging the embezzlement of $15,000. Civil suit also has been started, and the complaint in this alleges embezzlement of $27,000. The money, it is alleged, was in possession of Mrs. Nichols, to be invested in stocks and bonds for Mrs. Lemassena, who had been her close friend and who had great confidence in Mrs. Nichols' ability as a financier. Certain amounts were sent to Mrs. Lemassena at stated intervals, it is said, supposed to represent interest on investments. The indictment and arrest of Mrs. Nichols has caused a big sensation here and elsewhere.

Plan Injunction to Forestall Road Tax

CALHOUN, Sept. 29.—Citizens of Gordon County who oppose the special tax levied by the road commissioners for building Gordon County's part of the proposed Johnson-Sherman highway from Chattanooga have employed Attorneys Hutchens & Eubanks, of Rome, to enjoin the county from collecting the special tax.

This tax is $6.50 per $1,000.

NEW CASH PRIZE OFFER IN WANT AD CONTEST

Little Effort Will Put Live Candidate in Fine Position—Lead Changes Almost Daily.

In again, out again, Finnegan.

To-day one contestant is ahead and to-morrow another, in The American and Georgian great Want Ad Voting Contest. No one knows who will win the $1,000 in gold, the touring car or any of the other handsome prizes, until the last day of the race.

One thing is certain—the prizes are going to be won. The winners will be the hardest workers. To use the homely saying, it will be the "insistent, consistent and persistent pluggers that will get there." They will reap in the Bag of Gold, and ride in the handsome touring car, and carry off the other splendid prizes.

New Cash Offer.

Are YOU an insistent, consistent and persistent plugger? Just think of that double trip to California with all your expenses paid by The Georgian from the time you start until your return! YOU GET IT FREE.

For the next few days The Georgian will give the energetic workers additional cash prizes for their extra efforts put forth in the contest. We will give the organizations $100 and $50, respectively, for the best work done before October 15.

There are three cash prizes offered to the individual candidates. To the candidate selling the largest number of coupon books before that date will be given $50 in gold; to the candidate selling second largest number of books will be given $25, and to the candidate selling third largest number of books will be given $10.

Only the business turned in to the contest office since last Monday will be counted on this offer.

If some of the candidates who seem to think their chances are small could only know the little earnest effort it would take to put them in the lead of their most dreaded rival on this offer, we are sure they would surprise themselves by the amount of work they accomplished.

Work thus done is never regretted. It would certainly humiliate you should the final vote show that you had allowed yourself to be beaten when you could easily have won a prize.

Keep your mind on your own business and don't mind the rumors of what someone else has done. The count of others will not get you anything.

The work you do to-day may win the touring car or the $1,000 in gold.

Make up your mind to at least win that $50 October 15. YOU CAN.

Look like a winner October 15 and you are likely to be a winner of the best November 15.

Very few races are won on the home stretch unless the rest of the race has been consistently run.

Advertisers are waiting for the energetic workers to supply them with the coupons with which to pay their bills. "First there, first served."

BATESVILLE, ARK., Sept. 29.—Mrs. Asa Pelley, missing her 2-year-old child, found the infant drowned in a rain water kettle after a four-hour search.

CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DuBOSE COMPANY

ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

Hundreds of Answers to the Suit Question

Choosing the suit this Fall is a very pleasant task—at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co.'s.

It is pleasant because so much has been done for you before you ever see the suits we offer.

The bare fact that here are hundreds of answers to the suit question is of little importance in itself.

But such answers!

We have been more scrupulous than you could ever be—we have not admitted a style that is doubtful.

Suits had to be right!

We did what we are now advising you to do.

We went to the makers who are closest to Paris, those who seem to have the knack of doing things a bit better than the average, of adding the touch, of watching the details that distinguish the suit you will like from the ordinary kind.

Any reason why a woman with a suit to select should deny herself the privilege of such a suit store as this?

Women's Blanket Robes

They are rich affairs this season—following the tendencies that dominate the styles.

Great swirling patterns, neat patterns. Materials full of warmth and comfort. Indian effects seem to lead.

Right now the display is very interesting. Then there are others for men—such that keep a man at home o' nights.

They were priced at

$3, $3.95, $5 to $7.50

Scotch Plaid Skirts

Their vogue is pronounced—that is the vogue for such skirts as you will see here—in New York it amounts to a rage.

They are smart—the "Scotchiest" of Scotch plaids are used, but soft toned colors, showing dark green, navy, purple and dark red in wonderfully effective combinations. The models are draped, and some are very wide in the hips, all with raised waist line.

See them! They are priced at

$6.50, $7.98, $8.75 and $11.98

Blouses That Bloomed in Paris---First

And flowers of fashion they are!
Paris has outdone herself this Fall in Blouses, too.
There is an oddity and novelty about them that no other season has brought.
It shows in
—fabrics.
—trimmings.
—colors.
—fashioning.

There are crepes that are the filmiest tissues, chiffons burdened with pattern all-over laces in curious "ranging" patterns. There are bead trimmings—an Orinetal influence—and there are laces side by side with velvets and tapestry trimmings.

There are colors that a native Bulgarian would affect—to match or to contrast with your suit.

They are fashioned—it seems Paris was in a gay mood—into boleros, vest effects, overhanging shoulders, Russian blouses—one after another.

And all with distinguishing Paris touch that marks the difference between elegance and extravagance. Atlanta women will appreciate this!

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading a story last nite which was rote by Mister Walter Scott & it toald about a grate fiter naimed the Black Knight. It toald how he was so big & gal-lant & strong & fast that nobody had much chanst aggenst him in a conflick. It sed that wen his long sword flashed in the air men was sure to fall on every hand.

I toald Pa & Ma that I wud like to be a Black Knight like that, but that there wasent any chanst to be a Black Knight anymoar.

Wen I was a littel gurl I used to dreem that wen I grew up I was going to marry a knight. Littel did I dreem what the future had in store for me, Ma sed. If I had known that I wasent going to marry a knight, I wud have married Herman Schultz. He was only a delivery boy then, Ma sed, in our littel hoam town, but he is a milyunair cut in Wyoming now.

Pa jest laffed, beekaus he knew Ma dident meen it. I cud have been a knight if I wanted to, Pa sed, but the only thing is that a knight can't get a job nowadays. Imagine a knight going into a stoar on Whitehall & asking for a job knighting.

The knights in olden days was yung aristocrats Pa sed & eeven if they did lern how to swing a sword or throw a speer they dident have hard mussel & they cuddent have lasted vary long in a fite. It was the old roundheaded huskies that did the real fiteing then, the saim as now, Pa sed. They fought and died, but thay fought like reel men, & jest beekaus thay dident happen to know any grate riters or poets there deeds was nevver speak of. A knight wud fite about ten minutes if he cud pick out a soft spot, Pa sed, & then he wud talk a long haired post hoam to dinner with him & rite about Sir Lancelot holding off part of a army. Thay fought thare battles the saim way Teddy Rusevelt shot big gaim in Africa, Pa sed, with a lot of huskies all around them to help them to a place of safety when the going got hevvy. Doant tell me, Pa sed, about them fiteing knights.

A Glad Relief.

"Thank Heaven, those bills are got rid of!" said Bilkins, fervently, as he tore up a bundle of statements of accounts dated August 1.

"All paid, eh?" said Mrs. Bilkins.

"Oh, no," said Bilkins. "The duplicates dated September 1 have come in, and I don't have to keep these any longer."

Grew Longer.

A farmer who was known to be very mean bought a coat for his servant boy. When the boy had the coat fitted on, the farmer remarked: "Bill, I am afraid it is a bit too short."

"Never mind, sir," replied Bill, "it will be long enough before I get another."

A Thrilling Story of a Modern Monte Cristo

(Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed. "D'ye want a job?"

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"Dash my buttons, an' you're a likely sort of kid to get it, too. In you go. I'll pay the bill. Lord lumme, it'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. 'Ere, I'll bet you two bob 'e pays up."

"Done! Walk in, sir. Wot'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellently, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

The boy held out his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would ha' bin just about his age. Lord lumme, I 'ope the lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes'm. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

After crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to rehearse carefully the program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacity unlooked for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all. Of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond, and would demand its earthly pedigree.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date. The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's Mews altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: "Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants, Kimberley, Amsterdam and London."

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Is Mr. Isaacstein in?" said Philip.

"Oah, yess," grinned the other.

"Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oah, yess." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught its drift yet. The gaunt and unkempt visitor was evidently burlesquing the accent of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a few seconds. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the stamp book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here?" he said at last.

"Oah, yess. You vil be funny, eh?" The other smirked over the bidden humor of the situation, and Philip understood that if he would see the great man of the firm he must adopt a more emphatic tone.

"I had better warn you that Mr. Wilson, of Messrs. Grant & Sons, Ludgate Hill, sent me here to see Mr. Isaacstein. Am I to go back to Mr. Wilson and say that the office boy refuses to admit me?"

There was a sting in the description, coming from such a speaker.

"Look ere," was the angry retort. "Go avay ung blay, vil you? I'm pizzy."

Philip reached quickly through the little arch, grabbed a handful of shirt, tie and waistcoat, and dragged the big nose and thick lips violently against the wires of the grille.

"Will you do what I ask, or shall I try and pull you through?" he said, quietly.

But the boy's ready yell brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.

With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein. The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.

Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.

"What the deuce——" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.

"He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"

Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined utterance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request.

Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lend effect to Isaacstein's wit when he said:

"Is this a joke?"

All the clerks guffawed in chorus. Fortunately, Isaacstein was in a good humor. He had just purchased a pearl for 250 pounds, which he would sell to Lady Somebody for 800 pounds, to match another in an earring.

"It appears to be," said Philip, when the merriment had subsided.

For some reason the boy's gray, earnest eyes conquered the big little man's amused scrutiny.

"Now, boy, be quick. What is it?" he said testily, and every clerk bent to his task.

"I have told you, sir, I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you with regard to business of an important nature."

"You say Mr. Wilson sent you—Mr. Wilson, of Grant & Sons?"

"Yes, sir."

Isaacstein yielded to amazed curiosity.

"Step in here," he said, and led the way to his private office, surprising himself as well as his assistants by this concession.

Philip closed the door and Isaacstein turned sharply at the sound, but the boy gave him no time to frame a question.

"I want you to buy this," he said, handing over the diamond.

Cross Fire.

Isaacstein took it, and gave it one critical glance. He began to wabble again.

"Do you mean to say Mr. Wilson sent you to dispose of this stone to me?" he demanded.

"Not exactly, sir. I showed it to him and he recommended me to come to you."

Well, it mattered not. The courage of despair which nerved him the previous night came to his aid again. He would defy them all, careless of consequence.

The policeman was saying:

"It's a queer affair, sir. Did he really say he had lots more of 'em."

"Yes, yes! Do you think I am romancing? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of these stones, boy?"

Philip, with lips tensely set, was desperately cool again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting he," said the boy. "I merely wish to put my hand in my pocket. Are you afraid of me, that you hold me so fast?"

The policeman, like the rest, did not fail to notice Philip's diction. The scornful superiority of his words, the challenge of the final question, took him aback. He relaxed his grip and grinned confusedly.

Philip instantly produced his paper of diamonds and opened it widely, so that all the stones could be seen. He handed the parcel to the policeman.

"Take good care of them, constable," he said. "Judging from results, they would not be safe in that man's hands."

But Isaacstein did not hear the insult. When he saw the collection he nearly lost his senses. What had he done? Was he or the boy mad? Veins stood out on his forehead, and he wobbled so fearfully that he clutched the desk for support. A scarecrow of a boy wandering about London with thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds in his pocket, wrapped up in a piece of newspaper like so many sweets. There were not any meteoric diamonds of such value in all the museums and private collections in the world. He began to perspire. Even the policeman was astounded, quite as much at being called "constable" by Philip as by the mean appearance of articles presumably of great value.

"This is a rum go. What do you make of it, Mr. Isaacstein?" he said.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. He shows a piece of his find to a jeweler and discovers he is fabulously rich, but faces the problem of selling his meteoric diamonds. London's best diamond expert becomes excited over the meteoric find.

Now Go On With the Story.

DANGER SIGNAL TO WOMEN

Is what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness and the blues. In nine cases out of ten they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, curable by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool dissolve a little saltpeter in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpeter water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table, rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterward be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

"Bedfast—For Two Years"

MRS. GEORGE EWELL writes:—I know your medicine helped me wonderfully. I was so weak and nervous I could not sleep. Had a very poor appetite. Had such an aching between my shoulders and such dreadful headaches. My tongue would be heavily coated every morning and would get so dry. I am 45 years old. Have been having "change of life." I doctored a great deal but your medicines helped me more than all the doctors. I took six bottles of "Favorite Prescription" and three of "Golden Medical Discovery." I can now sleep good at night. My tongue is not coated and your medicines have removed many of my symptoms. I know if I had taken six bottles more I would have been cured. I was about bedfast for two years, now I do all my work and attend to my garden and chickens. I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicines too highly.

ACT INDIFFERENTLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

X. Y.

The heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had many girl and boy friends and they all acted nice until they all played false. Now, should I break friendship with all of them and stay home without friends? H. H.

And grow sour, suspicious and cynical? Certainly not. Go out and make more friends, and be quite sure that none of the blame of unfaithfulness lies at your door.

Do You Know---

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales? By way of showing their admiration of the Budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Prime Minister, this girl's parents are said to have named her Budgetta Georgiana Asquitha.

TERRIBLE ORDEAL SAFELY ENDED

Broken in Health, Miserable, Sufering, For a Score of Years, Lady Came Safely Through Ordeal.

Johnson's Bayou, La.—Mrs. L. P. Sema, of this town, who has been in a deporable condition for years, now make the following statement: "I was a great sufferer, for 20 years, with pains in my back, right side, headache and lower bowels, was very irregular, and also suffered terribly at times, with dizziness and faintness.

During this time, I tried six different doctors, but could get no relief.

I heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it. After having taken a course of this treatment, (6 bottles), according to directions, I feel no pain, am regular, am able to do all of my work and, in fact, feel like a new woman.

I can surely recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to all women suffering from female disorders."

Cardui is the ideal medicine for women. It is prepared especially for women, and contains ingredients which act directly on the weak womanly organs, thus helping to build up, in a gentle, natural way, the entire womanly constitution to a healthy condition.

The wonderful success which Cardui has attained, in its past 50 years of continuous use, is due principally to its merit. It has helped many hundreds of thousands of weak women. It will surely help you, too.

Try Cardui.

The Lover and the Walnut

Sometimes It's a Hard Nut to Crack—Where Violence Fails, and Only Soft Appeal and Cunning Will Bring Her Out of Her Shell and Into Your Arms!

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I KNOW a chap—a darling young chap—who's a winner at all things. Or he was until he ran face to face with the "Golden Girl." The girl who made his heart a house of pain—who made all other girls in the world look like the glass set in the brass ring you get in a "prise" candy box alongside of a blue diamond!

He has tact and sweetness, honesty and tenderness, and he's a "crack" at every game that takes personal bravery, mental courage, skill and patience. And just the sort to take a girl's eyes and heart with him every move he makes—if he'll only "act natural"! In this—his biggest game—he has still his courage, but his skill and tact, his sweetness and patience, have gone off and left him right in the spot on the highway where he needs them the most. He's trying to win the Golden Girl with a club!— like a cave man. He bullies her and he scolds her, and he tries to prove to her where she's "mad" not to love him, and he calls upon all the gods of a man in love to witness how cold her heart is! And the girl, while he's breaking his heart for her, is all tight in her little shell and she won't come out. He is still sane enough to have a sneaking notion that she loves him a little—to know that she isn't really such an icy little woman—and to wonder dimly why she is holding out in such fashion. So he agonizes and fumes and raves and goes after the nut with a sledge-hammer! And there isn't a sound from within, and the shell holds tight without a crack!

If he'd only remember the fairy story of the gnome who loved and wanted the pixie in the walnut. He pounded and toiled and sweat with his heavy stone sledge. And then he sat upon the nut and wept bitter tears that tasted salty where they ran close to his lips. Now wielding a sledge wasn't the only thing the gnome could do. He could play so sweetly on a tiny violin that even the shy tree frog would lean and listen. So he dried his tears and rubbed his face with his red coat sleeve and managed a smile, and tucking his music box under his chin he drew the bow across the singing strings and played. And lo! after a few sweet measures the crack of the nut grew slowly wider—it yawned wider to the blue sky, and out of it, into the happy gnome's heart, crept the timid pixie who lived therein.

There are women who answer only the call of the sledge-hammer—whose wild hearts leap to violence. But the Golden Girl isn't that kind. Remember the fairy story, boy. Swinging the sledge-hammer isn't the only thing you can do. You've forgotten your violin. Draw your bow across it the very sweetest you know how, and I promise you the shell will open of itself and your elf will fly into your heart. Raving and storming isn't the only strength you have. You've forgotten your sweetness, your tenderness, your cunning. Lay siege with the music of these three, and I swear the Golden Girl will glow and reach to you. Under the pressure of her two white hands the shell will yawn and yield her up.

Sometimes it's a hard nut to crack—where violence fails and only soft appeal and cunning will avail! NELL BRINKLEY.

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us and she is one of those flattering kind; she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day right before me she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I don't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heartbroken. What shall I do? SAD WIFE.

HEARTBROKEN, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered.

Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say so right then and there? Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John; I'm so proud of him myself sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish?" And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind, is she? Well, I'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

He's All Right.

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pussycat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? You let him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and quick-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way, or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming? Cry when she's gone? Scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman, to be sure!

The Only Way.

Have cousin at the house—have her there morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, ask her opinion of men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send John in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him sit up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat; have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expects men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, smile and cajole and be nicer than ever cousin dared to be, and wach results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown-up boys, you know, just grown-up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

Same as Others.

"Say, if you were seated in the tube, and every seat was taken, and a lady entered, what would you do?"

"I'd pretend I was asleep."

Doing a Man's Part.

"What are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" replied the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

.:. Fishers of Men .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WE are all fishers of men, and by "We" I mean every one of my sex.

And it is not to our discredit. The Lord implanted in every girl's heart a longing for love that is not satisfied in the love of father, mother, brother, sister or friend. It is a longing that grows with her years, showing first in her smiling overtures as a baby to some boy and never ending till it finds satisfaction in the love of a husband and child.

She may grow old and gray in spinsterhood; she may judge man's love by the unhappy experience of some sister and decry it; she may despise the dependence that comes with love and deny it, but to the end of her days, though her tongue may scoff and her ears refuse to hear, there remains at the bottom of her heart a longing for it that is never stilled. And no woman is normal until she has known it.

We are all fishers of men. To deny it is to deny the plan of Nature. The only difference is in outward manifestations of this great inward desire. Some of us stand for life looking wistfully at the water waiting for the fish to jump out at our feet, and others secure poles early, change the bait to suit the game, and fish assiduously.

We all want love. We have always been told that it is most maidenly to wait till it comes to us voluntarily. But fish so rarely jump out of the water, and the years come and go, each one taking with it some charm that should by all rules of the game have served as bait, and we find ourselves threatened with a life-time of loneliness and heart hunger.

It is fair, then, considering how much love means, and the desolation of life without it, to suggest to nice little girls, with their hearts beating fast with alternate hope and despair, how they may use a little bait modestly and effectively.

All Are Vain.

The finest man in the world is a vain, weak creature, and it is always the finest man in the world who is blindest about the opposite sex and needs a guide to reach the altar. It was never necessary to make an effort to win the admiration of a worthless man. Very often he makes love-making his business, and consequently never has a business that will support a wife and child.

A nice little girl named Mary, who wants to win a husband and confesses to this most normal and most womanly desire, writes me:

"I am a young girl of twenty-two, and meet a lot of nice young men and go out a great deal with them. I have a host of girl friends, and while in their company I can converse with ease on almost any topic, but just as soon as I am alone in a gentleman's company it seems I have nothing to talk about, which is a very awkward position. Please advise me what topics are mostly to be discussed and whether talking about business is a boring one. I must add that I am not up to the mark on books, and consequently can not talk about them."

Thank heaven you can't! There is a big score in your favor to start with, for the girl who says pedantly to a man, "Have you read Maeterlinck's 'Pelleas and Melisande?'" or, "As Byron says: 'You remember that quotation, I am sure,' etc.," and looks with a surprised superiority when he confesses he never reads more than this newspapers and the baseball scores on the billboards, is doomed to stay on the bank forever.

Business. If he is worth while, he dotes on it, and is an enthusiast on anything that pertains to it. Don't be afraid of results if you show an interest in the most vital interest he has. And a better topic, the best of all, is to engage him in conversation about himself. It is honey on his tongue and music in his ears, and if you can hang entranced on his account of his first skates, and grow breathless with delight over his favorite way of cooking fish, you have him on your line and coming slowly and surely out of the water.

One Way.

Be a good listener. The man who was won by being talked to death is too weak to be ranked as a man. Let him do the talking. Believe me, Mary dear, the best of them like appreciation of the words of wisdom that are always dropping from their lips and turn oftenest, stay longest, and think most, of the girl who listens to their most commonplace talk as if she were hearing the music of the angels.

We are all fishers of men, Mary. But remember always that it is wise to consider the good and bad points of the fish before casting in a line. Take care that your longing doesn't magnify into a whale a fish that is only a minnow.

Vice Versa.

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door. "Stop!" said the minister; "the baby's not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit, and made the audible remark: "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? But you're a-disturbin' of 'im!"

Higher Education.

Paterfamilias was lecturing his son on education. "Look here, my boy," he said. "I made my pile with only a common school education."

"I daresay, dad," replied the son; "but it takes a college education to know how to spend it."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading about a little kid that walked 14 miles to and from school every day," said the Manicure Lady. "I'll bet that kid will be a great man some day."

"I hope so," said that Head Barber. "He is entitled to something after he grows up, and a kid in the city would never walk one-tenth that far if he had to."

"I guess the days of great men is kind of past and gone away," said the Manicure Lady. "As dad was saying the other night, we have a lot of great men now, but when you look one of them over and compare him to the great men of the past he is a few stacks shy. The old gent says that we don't need any great men nowadays, because he thinks that everybody is getting dippy in the cities and taking nothing serious any more. He said he never liked to hear folks calling Theodore Roosevelt 'Teddy.'"

"I think the same as your father," said the Head Barber. "When I was a kid I wanted to be like George Washington but when I grew older and figured that the country had one father I stopped trying to be great and went barbering. The way I feel now, if I can make enough to get by and keep up my insurance I am satisfied."

"That's how Wilfred feels too," said the Manicure Lady. "He had a bug for a long time that he was going to be the Lord Byron of the century, but when he found out that nobody cared much for serious poetry he started in writing popular songs and says he would rather be a humble bard getting the sugar than a great genius looking around for somebody to indorse his note."

"Times have certainly changed," mused the Head Barber. "The world ain't got much time nowadays for anybody with old fashioned ideas. There ain't no dignity, no reverence, no old homesteads, no quilting bees or logging bees, no church sociables, no sleighrides. When I was a kid I would take off my cap and get red in the face if a lady spoke to me, but if a lady speaks to a strange kid now and asks him to throw away a cigarette, he will say 'Tell it to Sweeney.' I don't know what everything is coming to."

Capable.

"Is she musical?"

"Yes; she has a natural voice, a sharp tongue and a flat nose."

Don't Suffer With Indigestion or Stomach Trouble---Quaker Herb Extract Will Cure You

There Are Thousands of Atlanta's Best Citizens Who Have Been Cured by Quaker and Are Willing for the World to Know That It Was the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm That Did It.

The Health Teacher when here had proven to the people of Atlanta the same as he has in thousands of others, that when he came here he brought rejoicing and happiness into thousands of homes that heretofore have been misery and sorrow, not from want or poverty—no, no—but for health and strength. In some homes it was a darling baby or older child whose little life seemed to be ebbing slowly away; in many cases it was worms of some kind that a few doses of Nature's own Quaker Extract would expel, and they were made well. Some homes were sorrowful on account of a poor, weak, run-down mother, who was dragging around from day to day, at times more dead than alive—pain in the back, that tired, languid feeling, could not bear anything tight around her waist, stomach would bloat, belching, shortness of breath, dizziness, headache at times, sometimes did not care to live, and tried every treatment with no relief—but here is where the Quaker Extract shows you Quaker is in a class by itself, for it cures just these kinds of cases, and thousands of women and children are living witnesses to prove it.

The husband and father that provides for home and family the same as Mr. K. F. Horder, No. 70 Fowler street, by occupation a meat cutter at Singleton Market on Cone street, who has had catarrh of the stomach, a soreness most of the time, had like a lump in his throat that he could not get up or down, his bowels very constipated, had to take pills, pellets, salts or something all the time to make them act, should do like him. He got one bottle of Quaker Extract, used it ten days, then said: "Give me three more bottles of Quaker Extract, for it it is the best medicine in the world; the pain in my chest is gone, my stomach does not bloat, my bowels are just acting fine, and it's the only medicine I ever took that just toned and seemed to build me right up."

Mrs. E. W. Gorman, who resides at Ninth street, who was laid up three months with rheumatism in arms, shoulders, back and lower limbs so bad that she never put her foot on the floor in weeks, tried every known remedy without even relief, and two bottles of Quaker Extract and two 25c bottles of Oil of Balm have cured her. She now feels like a girl—no aches or pains—and says that Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm did more for her than $100 worth of other medicine.

Now, this is the way the Health Teacher proves what he says. Quaker Remedies cure, even where all others have failed. Hundreds of people have had their hearing restored, the sense of taste and smell all brought back; people with stiff limbs and joints have all been made well. Call at Coursey & Munn's drug store, No. 29 Marietta street, for these: Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. We repay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over. Advt.)

REAL FIGHT FOR LINE BERTHS ON GEORGIA TEAM

Tackle Malone Returns and Will Give Henderson and Turner Royal Struggle.

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—With the presence of Quarterback Paddock, Tackle Malone and End Conklin on the field this afternoon the Georgia crop of football material for 1913 is on hand, and with to-day's workout will begin the real practice of the Red and Black outfit. The past two weeks have been spent in getting what men there have been present in good physical trim. The scrimmaging will begin at once, and by the first game, which comes Saturday against Alabama Preshyterian College, the first line-up will have about been discovered.

The return of Malone gives Cunningham an extra good tackle for emergency in Turner, and it will really be a fight for the next few days as to who will draw these two positions—Malone, Henderson or Turner. Henderson is a certainty, so it seems that Malone and Turner are to fight it out unless one of them is sent to guard, which so far has been looked after by Conyers and Brown. Brown was on the freshman team last year and lacks experience, but has the weight and is fairly fast. Conyers was first substitute in the line, and easily won his letter, and thus has a big call on a regular berth this fall.

Paddock was given a royal welcome by his teammates when he came on the field Saturday afternoon for his initial workout, and there is nothing to it except that this popular player is going to be one of the greatest players in the South before the season closes. He got a late start last year and only played in three or four games, but was then prominently mentioned for all-Southern quarter. He is light, weighing hardly 150 pounds, but is gritty and a good general at running the team.

There has not been an injury so far to any candidate, except one or two "charley horses," and Cunningham is working hard to prevent the loss of any star by this cause. McWhorter has hardly been in a play yet, but has been busy looking after the entire squad. Bob is taking it rather easy this year, anyway, since his experience of last fall, when he was more than a month rounding into form, due mostly from overtraining the early part of the season.

McClellan, who was thinking of entering college, will hardly return this year, as there is some question as to his eligibility, since he did not remain in college very long in 1911, when he played fullback on the Red and Black team.

DEAD ONES ARE DEAD ONES.

"Where are the stars of yesteryear?"
quoth I unto a fan.
"The Overalls and Mordy Browns
who heaved 'em o'er the pan?
Where is the Peerless Leader gone
and where is Johnny Kling?
And where is Harry Steinfeldt, with
his strong, unerring wing?
And where is Jimmy Sheckard gone,
and where is Reulbach now?"
The stranger turned and answered
me, with scorn upon his brow:
"I do not know and do not care where all these geats have fled.
Perchance in some secluded spot they
rest among the dead.
I do not care for ancient men who
carry famous names,
For they are only dead ones now, and
dead ones win no games."

GOLF IS SAFEST OF ALL SPORTS, WRITES EVANS

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—I met Mr. Baxter, of the Ridge Country Club, on the street the other day and was horrified to see that he had suffered a severe injury to his right eye. It was badly swollen and blackened and the eyeball itself was a brilliant red. He told me that the accident that resulted so painfully for him occurred at Ridge. Mr. Baxter, Mr. Scott, former city champion, and Mr. McCritchell were playing at the Ridge. It had rained considerably the day before and part of one of the tees had been staked off. Scott drove off and his ball struck one of the stakes and hit Mr. Baxter's eye on the rebound. It was excruciatingly painful for a few days, but we are glad to say that there is no permanent injury.

Has Been Hit Twice.

It is a peculiar coincidence that two years ago Mr. Baxter was struck on the other eye by a golf ball. Surely he has had much more than his share of injuries, because it is a well-known fact that the golfer is less liable to accident than any other sportsman.

It is true, of course, that a golf ball is of a size to really find a man's eye, and owing to the swiftness with which it travels it can do a great deal of damage, but there are few accidents of that sort on record. The most serious injuries have resulted from the explosion of certain balls when being curiously cut into, and that has been a real danger.

Of the broken bones and dislocated joints, constant attendants of football and the other more strenuous games, we know practically nothing, and differences at golf are not settled with the fists.

Perhaps the most prolific source of accident in golf is the tendency to stand too near a player. The golfer who stands raptly gazing admiringly after a fine ball wriven by a player is in a good position to be struck by the next player. I always look around me when I swing a club.

Evans Cut With Mashie.

When a small boy, and carried away by admiration of another small boy's play, I was cut above the eye with a mashie. A scar for life is the result. Four stitches were necessary to repair the injury, and it was considered lucky that the blow was above the eye. A golf club is indeed a dangerous weapon, and in a difficulty with a highwayman I should at any time prefer one to a revolver. So keep your distance, Mr. Golfer, from the man who is playing, both for your own sake and his.

I heard of a peculiar accident a short time ago. On a rainy day a club slipped from the hand of a golfer in the act of playing and struck another golfer at a parallel hole. There is also a chance of injury when a club handle breaks or the glue loosens in a wooden club and the head flies off.

But, on the whole, let us be thankful that golf is a comparatively safe game and we are not as football players are.

DENVER WINS FLAG.

DENVER, COLO., Sept. —By defeating Des Moines yesterday Denver won the pennant in the Western League for the third consecutive time. Post-season series games with the winner of the American Association pennant are being negotiated for by the owners of Denver, to begin October 7.

JACKETS ARE FEELING FINE AFTER GAME

IN spite of the heat and the earliness of the season, the Tech Yellow Jackets came through the fray with the Soldiers Saturday without an injury or a strain that might prove in any way severe. The usual unpleasant soreness and stiffness of joints and ligaments, of course, was very noticeable yesterday, but a bit of good old heel-and-toe walking 'cross country took most of the lameness away, and the squad reported fit and fine this morning.

The next game, scheduled for Saturday at Grant Field, is with the Charleston Citadel team, always a good, stiff contender, especially in the early part of the season. That team has been working out a week longer than the McPherson bunch, and will be in excellent shape for a hard battle Saturday, while there is no doubt that the rival of Clemson and the University of South Carolina will be inspired with plenty of ambition to trim the Jackets.

Tech Line Looked Good.

While most of the interest among the Saturday spectators centered in the performance of the backfield, by reason of the new men and their excellent rating, it was noted by careful students of the game that the Heisman line was showing unusual form for a green line in the opening game.

The charging was uniformly low and hard, and the heavier Soldiers could do little to upset it. There were plenty of minor defects, naturally, and a lack of that machine-like swing and dash that characterizes the seasoned forwards. But it must have been quite reassuring to Heisman to note the manner in which the line stuck to its work and kept its cleats in the ground.

Backfield Unchanged.

The backfield probably will work through the next two games with the same personnel used against the Soldiers, at least until Gene Patten's knee permits him to get back in the going.

Preas and Johnston showed a lot of stuff, and promise to develop into A-1 backs, while Homer Cook, always a hard and conscientious performer last year, more than upheld his reputation in the opening game, and McDonald showed every bit of his regular form. Fielder, shot into the game fresh, celebrated his debut with one of the longest and most spectacular runs of the day, and showed up well while he was in harness.

Battle for End Jobs.

There already is a pretty competition on among Cushman, Goree and Lucas for an end job, and it will be even keener when Thomasson returns to the squad. Johnston is pretty sure to get one of the positions, and Heisman will have plenty of speed and ambition to choose from in selecting his running mate.

The line-up in next Saturday's game will supply a fair idea of what the coach intends to make his 1913 machine, and by the following week the work will be pointing directly toward the big games of the season.

HERRICK BEATS HIGGINS.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Completely dazed from the start, Al Higgins, from Roswell, N. Mex., lost to Jack Herrick, of Kewanee, Ill., yesterday in the fourth round of a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Juarez arena.

Francis Ouimet's Own Story

Our Golfers Equal of Britons'

The youth who amazed the golf world by capturing the open championship of the United States and also defeating Vardon and Ray, the English champions, is going to furnish the readers of The Georgian with a series of interesting articles. Ouimet's story to-day gives his impressions of British golfers and also a comparison between the stars of England and this country. The stories will be both interesting and instructive.

By Francis Ouimet.

IN my article to-day I shall give my impressions of British golfers and compare the leading golf stars of England with those of the United States. There are thousands of people in this country, and even more throughout Europe, who believe that the British golfers are far superior to those in Uncle Sam's land.

Personally, I fail to agree with those who claim that American golfers are not every bit as good as our friends across the Atlantic. There is very little difference between our ten best golfers and the ten leading stars in Great Britain.

There are ten or more professionals in this country who play remarkable golf. When they are in their best form they are always unbeatable. I have closely studied the work of the leading professionals, and I firmly believe they are capable of holding their own with all comers.

The professionals, however, are not the only good golfers in the United States. The amateurs in this country are also sterling players and many of them are able to give a fine account of themselves against the best players in the world. Our amateur players are not quite as good as those in England and Scotland, but they are nevertheless good men.

Travers Perfect Golfer.

Take for example Jerome D. Travers. This man is a perfect golf wizard. He may always be relied upon to make a good showing. He is a cool, steady player, and does not let anything ruffle him.

"Chick" Evans is another great American golfer. He has won first place in many important tournaments and is sure to be ranked among the "headliners" for many more years.

John G. Anderson and Heinrich Schmidt are two other good American golfers. Schmidt opened the eyes of the British golfing world earlier in the year when he played in the British championships. It took H. H. Hilton, the best amateur golfer in Europe, to vanquish the gallant Worcester lad.

With such stars as those mentioned above competing for Old Glory in the big tournaments, I am sure that the American public will never have reason to be ashamed of the work of their players.

British Golfers High Class.

The golf displayed by the British golfers was of a very high class. They showed to very good advantage throughout the tournament, with the possible exception of the last few holes in the Saturday play-off, when Mr. Vardon made several serious mistakes at the crucial stage of the round.

They showed a great knowledge of the various shots, such as a slice, pull, pitch shot with run, and the cut shot. This latter shot is very effective, and is used mostly to keep the ball near the hole, especially on a keen green.

When played properly, it leaves little to do on the putting greens.

Their putting is fairly good on the whole, with the possible exception of Harry Vardon. He is lamentably weak in this department of the game, and shows a timidity on short putts such as I have never seen before. He hits the ball with a quick, jerky stroke, and is constantly afraid of missing the hole. It does seem too bad, because this really great golfer suffers on this shot.

With Ray it is different. A big, strapping chap, who hits the ball hard, getting terrific distances. The few times I have seen him play made me think that Ray was inclined to be off the line of play occasionally.

His play is very sound for all of that, and he might be considered a very dangerous man on the putting greens, as he putts boldly and for the back of the cup, being exceptionally accurate on his approach putting.

E. H. BARRETT WINS MATCH AT 37TH GREEN

THE closing match of the last tournament of 1913 at East Lake wound up with a most brilliant bit of golf, by which E. H. Barnett won the T. A. Hammond trophy, 1 up, on the first green of the course, sinking a 20-foot putt for a 2 on what was the thirty-seventh hole of the hardest match of the season. J. O. Smith, his opponent, just missed his own long putt for a 2, and was down for a par 3.

The match was well played throughout, and at no time was either contestant in the way of a commanding lead. It was a fitting finish for the best golfing season the Atlanta Athletic Club has ever enjoyed—and probably for the last big tournament that will be played on the present course, which now is being redesigned into what will doubtless be one of America's sportiest inland courses.

In the second flight W. R. Tichenor defeated W. J. Tilson, 2 up and 1 to play, in a close and well-played match.

Perry Adair defeated Scott Hudson in the finals of the third flight, 2 and 1; J. B. Pollard won in the fourth flight over E. T. Winston; and the fifth flight also developed an extra hole match between E. G. Beaudry and H. H. Albert, the former winning 1 up in nineteen holes.

Ex-President's Son After Place on Team

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 29.—Princeton football players to-day heard with interest that in a few years they may have on the Tiger team Richard Cleveland, son of the late President Grover Cleveland. Young Cleveland is a student in Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., but will enter Princeton next year. He is 15 years old and weighs 160 pounds, and is striving hard to make his class team this year. He has already distinguished himself as a hockey player.

DENIES SALE TO CUBS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 29.—Ed R. Maies, president and principal owner of the Venice team, of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, denied to-day that he had sold Pitcher Kostner to President Murphy, of the Chicago club, of the National League.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Frank Baker, the Eastern lightweight, who has done some boxing around these parts, is back in our midst again. Baker is a likely looking chap and has a good record. Frank is anxious to get on with some of our local boys and says he does not fear any of them. Baker has met such boys as Benny Kaufman, Tommy Lavelle and Curley Jordan.

* * *

Jim Coffroth, the coast promoter, has decided to give Arthur Pelky a chance in his arena. Coffroth has wired Charley Miller, who is in New York, an offer to box Tommy Burns' protege next month. Pelky has already agreed to the match.

* * *

"Wildcat" Fearns strengthened his claim to the welterweight title last week when he defeated Billy Walters in a 10-round battle at Kenosha, Wis. Walters was one of the leading candidates for the title and recently held Fearns to a 15-round draw. A 20-round go between Fearns and Mike Gibbons ought to prove a banner attraction.

Gunboat Smith and Carl Morris have signed articles to meet in a 10-round go at Madison Square Garden, New York on the evening of October 9. Both men will begin active training the early part of this week.

* * *

Spider Britt, local bantamweight, left Saturday night for Knoxville, Tenn. Britt has bouts pending there with Al Smith and Kid Underwood. If Britt fights in form he should have little trouble beating both these boys.

* * *

Despite recent defeats at the hands of Charley Lee, Kid Young is still wanted by promoters. Young secured two matches last week and if he manages to win both of them he will not lack for work in the padded ring. He boxes Charlie Lee in a 4-round contest at a local theater to-morrow night and meets Mike Kelly at Athens, Ga., next month.

* * *

When Dan McKetrick sails for Paris from New York on October 4 he will take the following fighters with him: Frank Moran and Joe Jeannette, heavyweights; Tommy Gavigan and Otto Kohler, middleweights; Young Ahearn and Gene Delmont, lightweights. This is surely some collection.

* * *

A grand reception awaits Willie Ritchie when he arrives in New York. Jack Britton, Tommy Murphy and Leach Cross will be demanding fights with the champion. However, before Willie gets to the Eastern city he will probably meet a sterling boxer, Charlie White, at Milwaukee. And remember this, Mr. White has a dandy kick in his left hand that he will work overtime if he ever gets into the same ring with Ritchie.

* * *

Terry Nelson, Greek battler, writes from Chattanooga that he has started light work for his bout with Joe Sherman at Jacksonville. Nelson is also after a match with either Danny Goodman or Jimmy Murphy at Terre Haute, Ind.

KLAUS BATTLES M'GOORTY FOR 'MIDDLE' TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Back in 1908, June 4, to be exact, Milwaukee was alive with fight fans, who gathered to see the bringing out of a new champion, Stanley Ketchel who won a ten round battle from Billy Papke by a big margin. To-night in that same city another gathering of fight fans will witness Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and Eddie McGoorty go ten rounds.

The clash won't mean the bringing out of a new champion, but mighty near such a thing, for though Jack Dillon and Jimmy Clabby have a right to dispute any one claiming such honors, McGoorty and Klaus to-day hold the highest rank in the middleweight division. In short, the victor to-night, if the victory be decisive, will loom up as the man the others must beat to dispute his title.

There will be no decision at the close of ten rounds, should the battle go the full distance, for referees decisions are barred by the laws that govern the game, but the newspaper boys will be at the ringside to tell the merits of the game.

To-night's clash carries with it international interest. Not that either of the lads hails from foreign shores, but because of their battles abroad. Both McGoorty and Klaus have fought in the far-off lands and each is known all over the world. Klaus is famed abroad for his decisive win over Georges Carpentier, the French champion, and for his victory over Billy Papke, another battle fought on foreign grounds.

Other minor bouts have been waged in France by Klaus, but these made him known to the foreign ring. His American worth has been of the top-notch caliber, hence the unprejudiced scribes' reason for handing him the best in the 158-pound division.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

ONLY TWO MORE MEN TO REPORT IN AUBURN CAMP

By Mike Donahue.

AUBURN, ALA., Sept. 29.—With the arrival of Pitts and Lockwood it has been possible to get some idea of what the Auburn line-up is going to look like. With the exception of Taylor, the 190-pound candidate for fullback, and Christopher, who has not yet arrived, the entire squad is on the field and working hard. There are a few minor injuries that are still keeping some of the players on the side-lines, but none of them is serious.

* * *

THERE are quite a number of candidates for the places left vacant by Lamb and Meadows. The most prominent candidates for right tackle is Conisell, who is an active and aggressive player as well as a good punter. Steed and Culpepper are two other likely candidates for this place. These players are not as heavy as tackles ought to be. For the other tackle, Essinger is the most promising. He has taken on a lot of extra weight since last year and is in much better condition. He promises to develop into a worthy successor to Meadows. Cleveland a new man, knows a good deal about tackle play, and Martin, a scrub, is playing the kind of a game that is bound to win promotion. Robinson is holding down right end in his usual style, which means that ground gaining will be somewhat scarce around his territory. He has a very competent understudy in Haisten, who is a natural defensive player and is rapidly learning the offensive side of the game. At the opposite end Wynne, a last year's scrub, is playing a game not much inferior to Robinson's. He has good weight and is strongly built.

* * *

FROM end to end this is a formidable looking aggregation, but it will take a few games to find out its real ability. With the exception of Lockwood and Thigpen none of them has taken part in a real big game. Two of the places in the backfield will be taken care of by Newell and Arnold. Newell will play left half as usual while Arnold has been shifted to quarter. He is rapidly learning the business of running a team. For the fullback position there are several good, light men—Harris, Christopher, Hart, Bedez and Sparkman. They all drive hard but have not the necessary weight to carry them through the secondary defense. Kearley has been shifted to the backfield and is trying for right-half. He is being rested at present on account of an attack of charley horse. Another very promising candidate for the position is Prendergast, a new man, who has the requisite speed and weight for a first-class halfback. If he can assimilate college football rapidly enough he will be a valuable man this year.

WOLGAST PURCHASES RANCH.

CADILLAC, MICH., Sept. 29.—Ad Wolgast closed a deal with former Mayor Fred L. Heath, of Hastings, Mich., paying Heath $17,000 for a ranch near Medford, Oreg. The former lightweight champion now owns two Oregon ranches, a Michigan farm and considerable valuable live stock.

Leaves Fall, Gridiron Sizzles, and Ouimet's Name Adorns Sport Pages

BUT IT IS NOTED THAT BASEBALL STILL HANGS ON

By O. B. Keeler.

THE leaves are falling, as they usually do in the fall. There is perceptible in the shaking air a muttering and a roaring of a thousand football fields. The crop of pigskin alibis already is blossoming. And interspersed is a heavy sprinkling of dope concerning a Young Person actually named Ouimet, and some older persons known (familiarly) as Vardon and Ray.

But hither and yon, or somewhere in that neighborhood, we still manage to collect an occasional earful concerning a Regular Game—a more regular game, maybe.

And we realize, in our more or less lucid moments, that Baseball still is in our midst, or a trifle to the northeastward.

The Big Series still is to play.

ALONG with other whispers comes the report of classy performances by Rivington Bisland and Clyde Wares, Southern League stars obtained by the St. Louis Browns. We note also that Elmer $7,000 Brown, ex-Billiken, held the Giants entirely hitless during the six innings he worked for Brooklyn recently. Which must have reminded Mr. McGraw (sadly) of a certain other Mr. Brown, who was wont to toil on occasions of large importance at the Polo Grounds in years gone by.

* * *

THERE was little doubt that Bisland would make good, especially after he was injected into the wrecked and ruined system of the hapless Browns. And the Browns don't look nearly so hopeless, by the way.

With Derrill Pratt on first base, Wares at second, Bisland at short and Austin at third, the tail-end contenders will have a very flossy inner defense to open the ball next year.

And that inner defense thing does help out.

If you don't believe it, try to recall some consistently-winning ball club that didn't have a good infield.

SPEAKING of the Browns, it crops up that there is a ball club without any record-breaking ability whatever—unless it is for Sliding Down the Cellar Door—which, nevertheless, is the most feared and respected record-buster of all ball clubs.

Last season the Browns stopped Walter Johnson's winning streak. This year they flagged Joe Boehling after he had copped eleven in a row. The Athletics had won fifteen successive games when the lowly Browns bumped them. They put over a tally on W. Johnson after he had traveled 56 2-3 scoreless innings.

And last Wednesday the Browns crippled Cal Brown and Stuffy McInnis, of the Athletics, in the same game.

The last instance is not mentioned ill-naturedly. It is merely chucked in as lagniappe, or good measure, to show that the habit of record-busting is strong upon the Browns.

Maybe it will be strong enough to extract them from the Cellar Class in 1914—what?

That would be pretty strong.

REVERTING for the moment to R. Bisland, Wallop Smith, now with Washington, comes to the front with a large number of ornate remarks concerning his ex-side-kick.

Smith is in St. Louis for the winter, mainly because he lives there. Following are Mr. Smith's remarks about Mr. Bisland, quoted in part, as there are space limitations:

"If Bisland doesn't make good with the Browns, I wouldn't give four cents for my chance to stick with the Senators—and Griffith bought me at that. And I feel pretty confident.

"Bisland is a natural ball player. If ever there was one in this world. He is one of the fastest men in the short field I ever saw, and if he has a weakness there I failed to spot it, playing a whole season on both sides of him. He goes with equal ease to either side. Picking up bounders in deep short and shooting them over to first is pie for the kid, and the only thing he likes as well is to race over back of second, scoop one in his glove, and nail the runner by a step at first. Often and often I would get over to second as fast as I could, just miss the ball, and come up just in time to see Bizzy whipping it over."

Following which, Wallie went on to praise Bisland's hitting ability, especially in the pinches, and had a few kind words to say of his speed in starting two-ply killings or performing as middleman in the double plays.

If Hedges got all of it, he ought to raise Bizzy's pay at once.

EVEN at this distance, we can see one redeeming feature in connection with the poor showing of the New York Yankees this season.

If they had done well after their spring training excursion to Bermuda, all the other clubs would have wanted to train there in 1914.

Whereupon the scent of the onion would have been abroad in the land, whether the annual Lemon Crop was a success or not.

* * *

IT doesn't look humanly possible to avoid taking sides in the world's series row much longer. We're going to look up some dope on the situation—and some more dope, maybe—and after that it may appear feasible to let the General Public in on the deal.

How far in, is another question.

Women Take Part In Baseball Riots

CUMBERLAND, MD., Sept. 29.—The baseball game yesterday at Midland between Cumberland and Midland was marked by a series of riots, and the 2,500 spectators were in frequent mix-ups, in which women proved to be even more aggressive than men.

The first wrangle occurred in the second inning when C. Loppold, of the Cumberland team, was struck by a Midland player. In the sixth inning Manager Nelson W. Russter, of Cumberland, was hit during a dispute. In the meantime a turmoil ensued in the grandstand, where women were fighting almost constantly.

Two women fought for nearly half an hour and men were unable to separate them. They scratched each other and used handbags as weapons. Four separate fights occurred in the grandstand.

FODDER FOR FANS

The New York Yankees will have to hustle this week to get out of last place in the American League for the Browns gained on them by defeating the Tigers yesterday. The White Sox began the farewell week by blanking the Ceveland Naps, who became more firmly lodged in third place.

* * *

Opinion over the merits and demerits of the Giants and Athletics is pretty evenly divided. Even among the experts each club has its defenders. George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, and a keen judge, picks the Giants, while Napoleon Lajoie, of the Cleveland Naps, one of the "old masters" of the game, picks the Athletics.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Naps, believes that poor pitching will cost the Athletics the world's championship and predicts that New York will take four straight games.

* * *

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, has come out against the ruling of the national commission that players eligible to compete in the world's series may not write baseball articles about the post-season games. One New York paper is already advertising expert stories of the games by Christy Mathewson.

* * *

When the National League season ends the Brooklyn Dodgers will make a tour of Pennsylvania and the South.

* * *

The Cardinals and Browns will play a seven-game series for the championship of St. Louis beginnig October 6.

The Boston Red Sox are scheduled to play three consecutive double-headers with the Yankees beginning at he Polo Grounds this afternoon.

* * *

Milwaukee has won the pennant in the American Association and Denver in the Western League.

Gibbons and Kelly To Box at Kenosha

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, and "Spike" Kelly, of Chicago, signed articles last night to box ten rounds at Kenosha, Wis., on October 10. The match, according to the promoters, will be for the welterweight championship. The men agreed to weigh 145 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the fight.

RICHARDS ENTERS CORNELL.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Alva Richards, who won the high jump at the Stockholm Olympic games, has entered Cornell Agricultural College and reported to Track Coach Moakley. Richards competed for the Illinois Athletic Club in the national championships at Chicago last summer and it is understood that he has not severed his connections with the Chicago club.

Emory Opens Gridiron Season on October 13

EMORY COLLEGE, OXFORD, GA., Sept. 29.—Emory's interclass football team has selected October 13 as the date for the gridiron season to open. Two games will be played that afternoon, the first being when the seniors and juniors meet, and the second will be the sophomore-freshman battle.

The juniors are already down to hard work. This eleven won the 1912 pennant, and have returned every member of the team for work this year. Coach Shingler has not been out yet, owing to his accident when his arm was broken while attempting to crank an automobile.

DUNDEE VS. AZEVEDO.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Johnny Dundee and Joe Azevedo were matched yesterday to box twenty rounds on October 14 at the Vernoh arena here. They will meet as lightweights.

YANKEE CYCLE CHAMP LOSES.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Donald McDougall, world's amateur title-tolder last year, went down to defeat yesterday before the superior speed of William Bailey, England's amateur cycle champion, in straight heats in their two-thirds of a mile match at the Veldrome here.

FLICKENSTEIN REAL DEMON ON MOTORCYCLE

A THREE-CORNERED match race between Tex Richards, Morty Graves and Newman Flickenstein will be one of the big features offered at the reopening of the Motordrome Tuesday night. The trio will meet in three heats, the first being a mile, the next two miles and the third five miles.

Graves' new machine is going great guns these days; Richards' famous "23" has always been considered one of the fastest in the world, and Flickenstein, who recently joined the daredevil squad in Chattanooga, has beaten both Richards and Graves.

As a result both Tex and Morty are out for revenge Tuesday night. They admit that Flickenstein can get over 90 miles and hour out of his "boat," but that doesn't seem to worry them any.

The other big event on the card is a twenty-mile race in which all the riders will compete. There should be thrills enough for the most rabid fan in this long, furious grind.

Arthur Chappelle, the world's champion motorcycle rider, is expected to arrive here to-day, and he may start Tuesday night.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

New Plan Evolved For Church House

Members Would Have Presbyterians Guarantee $100,000—Kress Store Addition.

A new plan has been proposed for the erection of the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at a cost of $100,000 at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth streets. It has been suggested by Charles Elyea, a prominent member of the church, and would have a number of well-to-do members guarantee the project in the aggregate of $100,000.

This scheme, it is pointed out, would enable the church to keep its present Marietta street site for a while, and the members who put up the money for the new structure could be reimbursed later. Several churchmen have been heard in expressions of approval of this project. The church has made a number of efforts to proceed, but up to date no workable plan has been adopted.

Ground Broken on Whitehall.

Ground was broken Tuesday on the new three-story building to be erected on the south side of Whitehall street between Stewart avenue and Murphy avenues, for Fairbanks, Morse & Co., of Chicago, by J. R. Smith. The building will be built at a cost of $30,000 and the price for the lease was between $40,000 and $50,-000.

Another story is to be added to this building if required.

Kress Store Addition.

McDaniel & Calmes, housewreckers, have begun tearing down buildings at Nos. 36, 38 and 40 South Broad street, which is the rear of the S. H. Kress store which fronts at Nos. 39 and 41 Whitehall, and a substantial addition to the property will be made. No application has yet been made for a new building, and the cost has not been announced.

The Kress property was recently conveyed to Hugh Richardson from Eugene V. Haynes and J. Carroll Payne at the price of $357,000. The frontage is 42 feet on Broad and Whitehall streets and the depth 175 feet. The annual rental is $19,000, which is .052219 per cent on the purchase price.

Disposition of Hospital Lot.

In the plan which Asa G. Candler has for enlarging the Wesley Memorial Hospital facilities there is a possibility that the new hospital will be located elsewhere than at the southeast corner of Courtland street and Auburn avenue, although the church management have not taken up this question definitely. A churchman expressed the opinion Monday that the value of the lot at semi-central prices might make it desirable that a cheaper location be sought, and the old place sold.

The lot was bought about eight years ago for $17,500, and Bishop Warren A. Candler's report of a year ago placed the value of ground and buildings at nearly $100,000. There is about an acre of ground, and improvements consist of a two-story frame building used for the hospital.

SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The newspapers throughout the State are commenting nowadays rather caustically upon the wretched and uninhabitable condition of the Governor's Mansion in Atlanta.

Not only is it generally agreed that the ramshackle old barn is altogether out of date, antiquated, and insanely situated for the purpose it serves, but besides that it actually is falling down in spots!

Long ago the plastering overhead in one of the bedrooms fell down with a dull and sickening thud, and a short time before that Governor Brown, only by nimbleness of foot and quickness of eye, succeeded in jumping from under a similar precipitation of overhead ceiling in another room.

Just when the dining room may take a tumble to itself no prophet or son of a prophet will say, although the hope is universal, of course, that when it does fall, it will not bury the Executive or Mrs. Slaton beneath the wreck!

The Executive Mansion in Atlanta is a joke—and not a pretty or fascinating joke, at that!

If a Governor were not sentenced to live in it, so to speak, few of them likely would care to do so.

To be sure, its historic and honorable associations are pleasant and inspiring things to think upon—if only one could sit in the Mansion and think upon them without being simultaneously in mortal terror that something heavy, plastery and not at all nice might fall upon him at any moment and mangle him beyond recognition!

The Executive Mansion would make a first-rate fourth-rate boarding house—maybe!

It certainly isn't much of a place for a Governor of Georgia to reside!

Anent the Mansion, The Oglethorpe Echo says:

> A fortunate absence probably kept Governor and Mrs. Slaton from being injured by falling plastering in the Governor's Mansion a few days since. It's a shame that as great a State as Georgia should not have a home in which her Chief Executive could at least reside in safety.

And there are others that say the same thing—many of them!

The death of Representative Roddenbery has brought forth numerous tentative candidates for his place in Congress.

Among them are H. M. McIntosh, of Albany; Judge Frank Park, of Sylvester; W. W. Banks, of Tifton; Roscoe Luke and Judge H. W. Hopkins, of Thomasville; W. A. Covington and W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; John P. Knight, of Nashville; John Donalson, of Bainbridge, and Jesse Perry, of Camilla.

And there likely will be more mentioned hereafter, as the game yet is young!

The recent Mayoralty election in Macon split the Legislative delegations, present and past, wide open.

Wallace Miller, one of the candidates for Mayor, is a member of the House, and he was bitterly opposed by Minter Wimberly, another member.

Senator McNeil favored and worked for Miller, while Roland Ellis, a former Senator, favored and worked for Smith. Walter Defore, a member of the last House, was with the Miller crowd, while Ben Fowler—where was Ben in that scrap, anyway?

When the Georgia Prison Commission was first made an advisory board of pardons, its recommendations generally were followed rather regularly. Once or twice, perhaps three or four times, Governor Atkinson, Governor Terrell and other Executives turned down the recommendations of the Prison Commission, sitting as a board of pardons, but not often. The rule was to accept the findings of the Commission as approximating the correct adjustment of the particular problem submitted, and to let it go at that!

It was not until "Little Joe" Brown became Governor that the recommendations of the Commission began to be looked upon as little more than suggestive and mildly advisory to the Executive. And even Governor Brown began by following the line of action mapped out by the Commission!

Nowadays, however, a recommendation from the Prison Commission is a step in the direction the petitioner desires—presuming it to be favorable—but nothing more. Governors have come to turn down Prison Commission awards as one of the easiest things they know!

Only Saturday, for instance, Governor Slaton turned down a majority recommendation for a pardon, and granted a life commutation instead. In doing that, he followed the recommendation of a minority opinion. No Governor considers any petition for clemency, nevertheless, unless it first has been thrashed out by the Commission.

There is no way of limiting a Georgia Governor's discretion in the matter of clemency—the Legislature could not make the Prison Commission's recommendations binding upon the Governor, if it desired to. In the matter of pardons, commutations, and so forth, the Governor is final, supreme, and altogether an arbitrary authority! The Constitution of the State gives him utterly untrammeled powers in that direction. And it is for this reason, of course, that most Governors are careful and discreet in granting clemency, in any event.

Governor Slaton has received 41 invitations to visit various State fairs throughout Georgia during the months of October and November.

And much as he would like to accept all of them, it will be utterly impossible, of course. He hopes, however, to accept a few—those that do not conflict with his official duties, at least. And that probably will mean as many as half a dozen.

"If I even attempted to accept all these gracious and kindly invitations, which I would like to do," said the Governor, "I could not do so unless it were possible for me to be in two or three places at one and the same time, and of course it isn't!

"I am glad to know that there are to be so many fairs in the State, however. It speaks well for Georgia, and it indicates a healthy condition of things.

"I believe in county fairs—and in State fairs, too! There never was one held, even though it may have lost money directly, that wasn't a success in the long run, for the indirect dividends paid by county and state fairs are great, I verily believe."

COTTON SELLS OFF ON PROFIT TAKING

Market Nervous All Day—Unsettled Conditions at Washington Restrict Trading.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Influenced by weakness in Liverpool cables and very favorable weather conditions over Sunday the cotton market opened barely steady to-day with first prices at a net decline of 2 to 12 points from the closing quotations of Saturday. Near positions showed the greatest strength at the outset, but October immediately dropped 6 points to 13.97 while December declined 8 points to 13.75. Other months were firmly maintained at opening quotations, there being no pressure whatever in these options.

After the call some of the prominent bulls and spot houses who had lost some of their cotton last week, through profit-taking on the belief that a reaction was in order and were hoping for a decline to buy it back, came in the market and purchased rather freely, which checked offerings considerably and later bringing about a short covering wave, resulting in prices recovering the early decline.

The market acted nervous during the late forenoon. There was a disposition on the part of the ring professionals to sell on all rallies. Commission houses also sold. The unsettled conditions at Washington in reference to the cotton tax amendment is restricting trading to such an extent that the market is easily influenced with moderate buying or selling orders. The majority of traders predicted a healthy reaction and were furnished in sufficient volume to depress October to 13.90; December 13.75, and January 13.62.

Offerings were absorbed rather freely by brokers close to the larger spot houses and spinners. The effect of this buying, however, was offset by weather indications pointing for more favorable weather conditions, coupled with more cheerful crop news.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 10 to 18 points from Saturday's final.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—The Washington rumor which caused the break in our market in the last minutes on Saturday proved unfounded and Liverpool advanced as much as due, spots 3 points higher, sales 7,000 bales.

This market opened 18 points higher and advanced to 13.94 for Decmber in the early trading. The market was firm, with a bullish undertone, based on further rains in the central States, expectation of a very unfavorable weekly weather report to-morrow and a bullish Government report on Thursday; also on distant weather indications pointing to further rains in the western States the latter part of this week, with probably a cold wave the first part of the week.

Weather conditions over Sunday were better in the western half of the belt. The map shows fair weather in the western States; no rain but cloudy in the central and eastern belt, with further general rains in the central States; showers in the Atlantics. Warm weather; no frost anywhere; whereas last year damaging frost had occurred in the last week of September over most of the northern half of the belt.

Condition of Cotton Declined 3.1 Points

MEMPHIS, Sept. 29.—Replies of correspondents of The Commercial-Appeal of average date of September 25 indicate a condition of the cotton crop on that date of 65.1 vs. 68.2 per cent, last month's Government report figures. This is a loss from last month of 3.1 points. The heavy rains that have recently visited the western belt were just beginning to fall at the date of this report, so that any damage they may have done is reflected but slightly in these figures.

Rains earlier in the period covered by the report, while doing some harm to grade were of some benefit to the growing plant, especially in Oklahoma, where a slight improvement over the low condition of the previous month is noted. Cotton has opened rapidly and an unusually large percentage of the crop is open. Picking has gone forward fairly well, although interferred with to a certain extent by frequent rains.

There are a few complaints of scarcity of labor, but as a general thing there are plenty of pickers and with fair weather the crop will probably be gathered in record time, except in the Carolinas and Georgia, where much of the cotton is late and making of this crop will depend to a great extent upon the date of killing frost. This is the last report on the crop that will be published this season in this paper.

A crop estimate will be made some time in November.

Conditions by States, compared with the Government figures of August 25:

North Carolina	70	vs. 78
South Carolina	71	vs. 77
Georgia	73	vs. 76
Alabama	68	vs. 72
Mississippi	65	vs. 69
Tennessee	74	vs. 80
Arkansas	67	vs. 72
Oklahoma	47	vs. 47
Louisiana	60	vs. 63
Texas	63	vs. 64

Advance in Cotton Boosts Dry Goods

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"The impetus given to the dry goods trade by the seasonable weather of the past week has added a comfortable increase to the gain in September business, as contrasted with that of the same month a year ago. There is strong demand for merchandise to take care of the fall trade.

"Owing to the continuous rise in the price of raw cotton, two well-known brands of ginghams were advanced ½c a yard during the week. A strong advance has also been made on print cloths and the wider goods, such as percales, the higher count cloths having advanced 1c a yard.

"Prices now current on wool dress goods are probably as low or lower than they will be later. Foreign manufacturers are asking advances on reorders of both cotton and wool goods.

"The fall openings that are being held by retailers throughout the country are resulting in heavy shipments of ready-to-wear apparel for women, misses and children, as pointed out by an Eastern cloak and suit trade publication.

"October deliveries of ready-to-wear apparel will be greatly interfered with, owing to an unusual number of Jewish holidays, which will limit many manufacturers to eighteen working days during the coming month. Retailers will need to make provision for their wants of the next two months at once, in order to guard against the possibility of not having merchandise on hand to take care of their trade during the best part of the selling season."

COTTON GOSSIP

Senator Simmons says: "I have no reason to think that we will caucus on the cotton futures tax in the Senate. We caucused on it twice and the vote in favor of the Smith-Lever plan, now proposed in the Senate, was very small. I have not heard that sentiment in the Senate toward that amendment has changed. When it comes from the House the Senate will probably stand by its own amendment. The result, I assume, will be that no legislation on this subject will be included in the present bill."

Washington forecast for the week: Local rains during the first half of the week over the cotton belt, although probably not much west of the Mississippi River. Generally fair weather is now indicated for the second half of the week. Temperature changes are unimportant.

One and seven-tenths inches rainfall at Birmingham, Ala., last night; rained all night; same at Huntsville, Ala., and still raining; raining since 6:30 at Decatur, Ala.; rained all night and still raining at Sheffield, Ala.; Anniston, Ala., drizzling rainfall last night, .93 of an inch; at Meridian, Miss., rained yesterday and now threatening; Charlotte raining; Augusta, Anderson, S. C., Greenville, Fayetteville, N. C., cloudy; Charleston, clear; Athens, Ga., cloudy, good rains.

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crop in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee:

"Arkansas—Considerable damage is reported from rotting and sprouting in the bolls, but some correspondents do not consider this very material. Excessive rains have also delayed picking, but the amount gathered is about the same as last year, when it was 9 per cent picked. The grade has also been lowered, and the prospects of a top crop are very poor, which was cut short by the drouth in August. Percentage condition is considerably below last month and even lower than a year ago, when it was 71.

"Louisiana—Excessive rain and boll weevils have been the cause of serious deterioration, and percentage condition will probably be considerably below a year ago, when it was 69.1 per cent. Bolls are rotting and sprouting. The top crop prospects are poor. Picking is about the same as a year ago, when it was 34 per cent gathered.

"Tennessee—August drouth cut the crop greatly and recent rains have caused further damage, especially to grade. It is doubtful if percentage condition will equal a year ago at this time, when it was 70.2. Picking is well advanced, being about 12 per cent gathered as against 4 per cent a year ago. Top crop prospects are poor, though a late frost would add to the yield."

GENERAL SELLING DEPRESSES STOCKS

Market Continues in Trading Position—Sentiment More Bearish Than Quotations Justify.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although there were a few exceptions. California Petroleum preferred advanced 1 point and Union Pacific, after opening at 161⅞ for a gain of ¼, went to 162.

There was no news of a bullish character, whereas there were reports of financial interests, which gave ammunition to the bear group. News of the early filing of a Government suit against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, the continued withholding of definite information about the alleged Union Pacific melon, and the possibility of the Pennsylvania Railroad dumping a large quantity of hard coal and railroad stock on the market, all of which contributed to uneasiness.

Among the other declines were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; American Beet Sugar, ½; American Can, ⅛; American Smelting, ⅝; Atchison, ¼; Canadian Pacific, 1¼; Chino Copper, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ⅛; Pennsylvania, ¼; People's Gas, ¼; Pittsburg Coal, ⅛; Southern Pacific ¼, and United States Steel common, ½.

Reading, Pressed Steel Car, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern preferred and California Petroleum common advanced fractionally within the first 45 minutes.

The curb was quiet.

Americans in London were irregular above New York parity. There was profit taking in Canadian Pacific in London. Grank Trunk in London was steady.

Shortly after the opening, pressure appeared in nearly all of the active issues, and during the rest of the forenoon a vigorous, heavy tone prevailed. Steel common sold at a decline of ¾ to 61⅛. Copper was off 1 point. Union Pacific was the weakest, declining 1¾. Other railroads were a trifle stronger. Missouri Pacific advanced ¾. Southern Pacific was off a fraction and Canadian Pacific lost ⅞. Other issues were slightly lower. Call money loaned at 2¾.

Business was quiet in the last hour and practically all price movements were confined to declines.

Oats were ⅜ to ½ better, but the best prices were not held.

Hogs were 5c higher at the yards, and the market in the pit was a shade better.

GRAIN NOTES

Bartlett, Frazier Company says:

"Wheat—Market looks low enough at the moment.

"Corn—The unsettled weather conditions over the belt should cause a steadier feeling.

"Oats—As in corn, liquidation has been quite drastic, but the market still looks bullish, owing to continued heavy stocks in sight."

St. Louis wires: "Complaints of corn molding in the shock are increasing from all over this State, and this weather will increase such reports, as corn was cut too early in order to save the fodder, and now fodder and corn stand a good show of being ruined."

B. W. Snow wires from Winnipeg: "Northwest Canadian wheat crop is only a little larger than last year, say about 190,000,000 bushels of the finest quality ever known. Farmers are hard up and the country banks are forcing them to sell in order to liquidate debts. Harvest is early and the weather has been perfect for thrashing."

Why Is Thaw Made a Hero in New Hampshire---as He Was in Canada?

The Answer Is Simple: People Do Not Like White Slavers and Vile Debauches of the Stanford White Type. And They Do Not Like the Friends of Stanford White That Are Now Hounding Thaw.

(Copyright, 1913.)

A newspaper filled with sympathy for the late Stanford White asks the following question:

"Is Thaw a hero in New Hampshire as he was in Canada because he is notorious, or because he is rich, or because there is genuine popular sympathy for him, or is his popularity due to the fact that he and his money are making a joke of law and justice?"

Here is the answer:

Thaw is made a hero in New Hampshire, he is applauded by good citizens, not so much because of his own qualities, Heaven knows, as BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WANT TO SEE JUSTICE DONE TO HIM AT LAST.

The citizens of the country know that he has been kept in the insane asylum—although he is not insane—through the efforts of the friends of Stanford White, who was about the vilest product of degradation that could possibly be conceived.

The people know that Thaw was declared insane by a jury for the simple reason that the jury would not condemn him for having killed such a creature as Stanford White. And the newspaper that we quote probably knows that also.

The people know that Thaw, now, at least, is not insane. They know that so far from being helped by his millions—or rather by the millions of his mother—the money actually hinders him. If he were an ordinary citizen, without wealth, and if Stanford White, the vile white slaver, had fewer powerful friends, THAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FREE LONG AGO.

The people like fair play in New Hampshire, in New York, and in every State in the Union.

That is why in every State, if the matter were left to a public vote, Thaw would be set free.

This newspaper considers the case AS IT STANDS TO-DAY.

Thaw was declared insane by a jury that would not vote to execute him for having killed Stanford White.

The law says that a man who commits a crime and is declared insane shall be kept locked up unless his sanity returns. As soon as he is sane he is to be set free.

Only the friends of Stanford White, a few newspapers that sympathize with White, and some specialists, especially paid, declare that Thaw is insane.

He is at least as sane as 75 per cent of the population. And he is not only sane, but has shown remarkable intelligence in his determined efforts to obtain freedom, in his dealings with tricky lawyers, and in his answers to judicial questions.

Inasmuch as Thaw is, or was, detained by New York State as an insane man, and inasmuch as his conduct during his incarceration and since he fled from the asylum would clearly indicate that he is sane, justice demands that he be set free—as the law provides.

Justice does NOT demand that he be returned to life imprisonment TO OBLIGE THE FRIENDS, JOURNALISTIC AND OTHERWISE, OF THE DEGRADED BRUTE WHOM HE KILLED.

Fortunately, Thaw is in the hands of a Federal judge. He is not at the mercy of any court especially chosen to send him back to the insane asylum. He is not at the mercy of the distinguished legal gentlemen who make a special point of hounding him—for excellent pay, no doubt.

He will have his day in court, and will probably not be sent back to life imprisonment in an insane asylum for having killed Stanford White, whose death certainly saved from shame, degradation and horror many helpless girls.

No civilized human being would plead the unwritten law, or put the right of an individual taking justice into his own hands above the law.

And any sane man who commits a murder for whatever reason should be punished for murder. Yet, if ever there was a killing that was justified, it was the killing of Stanford White, AND HIS MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS KNOW THAT THAT IS SO.

They know that his pastime was the pursuit and the destruction of unfortunate women. They know that he spent his money and his time in the committing of crime compared with which murder committed in anger is as nothing.

It is not a good, healthy or wise thing to have a man who has committed murder, such as Thaw, lionized, applauded and made much of. But the fault is with the degenerate associates and admirers of Stanford White who viciously pursue Thaw and create public sympathy for him.

And the fault is with the machinery of justice that in one or two instances at least has seemed afraid to deal justly with Thaw.

Far better let the man go in a proper and orderly manner, taking with him the sympathy and the thanks of those who best understood the character and the crimes of Stanford White.

Lock him up again in Matteawan, and you will not settle the question or dispose of it.

The people in New Hampshire, as in Canada, make a hero of Thaw because they do not like Stanford White, and because they do not like the idea that the associates, friends and defenders of that vile degenerate have influence enough to deprive a man of his liberty when the law says that being sane he should be set free.

Dr. Parkhurst Writes on Immortality

Many Hope Death Is End of All, but Deep Thinkers Believe This Is Only the Beginning of a Future and Better Life.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

HOWEVER occupied people may be with the affairs of this life, there are few, if any, who do not sometimes throw their thoughts forward toward a possible life to come. It is safe to say that there is more of this forecasting of another world than has outward expression given to it.

A few are hoping that there is nothing more for them after death, being more than satisfied with what they have had already. Some simply brood over the possibilities of immortality wonderingly. The most, by far the most, are trusting that the few years we pass here are nothing more than the beginning of life, its vestibule, feeling that conditions, as they exist now require something additional in order to their explanations and justification.

It is probable that there is less general belief in immortality than there was fifty years ago. When a boy, as I remember it, a man who expressed doubt in the doctrine was regarded as queer, as a mental and moral defective. Nothing, so far as appears, has in the meantime been discovered to invalidate the doctrine, and the change that has transpired in men's opinions is considerably due to the attitude of the scientists.

Scientists Have Failed to Prove We Are Immortal.

The scientists have not discovered that we are NOT immortal, but have simply failed to discover that we ARE immortal; and there is no reason why they should not have failed, for the mind, the immortal part of us, if there be any immortal part, is not a matter that scientists have any concern with, or any special qualification or equipment for investigating.

A man who knows one thing with considerable thoroughness is liable to imagine that large value therefore attaches to his opinion upon other matters, however distinct they may be from the particular subject upon which he is specially informed.

That states the precise condition of mind of certain investigators who have accomplished distinguished results in their study of matter, and who therefore consider that they are authorities upon questions of mind, spirit and immortality. Which is as unreasoning as for a mathematical genius to claim that because he is an adept in questions of quantity his opinion should therefore carry in problems of art.

What has just been said is stated, only in different words, by one of the most distinguished scientists of our generation, Sir Oliver Lodge, a man of such eminence as to have been elected to the presidency of the British Association, a body which may be defined as the organized scientific intelligence of the British Empire.

Sir Oliver, whose accomplishments in physics and chemistry have won for him such preferment, is sufficiently broad in his appreciations to realize that however far he may have carried his chemical researches, he has not thereby been brought across the frontier of the territory of mind and consciousness; that the principles and methods applicable to the study of matter do not apply to questions of soul and religion, so that the negative attitude which a scientist, as such, may occupy as toward soul, God and immortality has no bearing pro or contra upon the question of the existence of the soul, of God and of immortality.

All of this the president of the British Association has recently stated frankly and developed in detail in his presidential address delivered before that body.

Address Is Practically a Rebuke to His Colleagues.

The address is practically a rebuke to some of his colleagues for failing to realize that mind is not matter, and that so essential is the difference between them that the pursuit of scientific methods of inquiry will not carry them into the region of mind, and that for them to deny the existence of a world above matter, because they have been able to achieve so much in the world that is within matter without discovering in it a soul or a God, is a bare presumption and the exercise of intellectual arrogance.

Such a deliverance from so great an authority is a serious matter, and I wish the readers of this newspaper would give earnest attention to the contents of this article, for it has been written with a view to rebuking and correcting the careless and thoughtless thinking, of which there is so much, even among intelligent people, and that, too, in regard to questions that are of the utmost moment.

It would not be fair to the truth nor to Sir Oliver Lodge to close this article without adding that while he has not arrived at his convictions, regarding things which eye hath not seen, by the pursuit of scientific methods, he is nevertheless, and on other grounds, a firm believer in the great invisible world and in the God who is enthroned in it, as is evidenced by the two subjoined quotations from his superb address:

"It is my function to remind you and myself that our studies do not exhaust the universe, and that if we dogmatize in a negative direction, and say that we can reduce everything to physics and chemistry, we gibbet ourselves as ludicrously narrow pedants, and are falling far short of the richness and fullness of our human birthright.

"How far preferable is the reverent attitude of the Eastern poet:

" 'The world with eyes bent upon
Thy feet stands in awe with all its silent stars.'

"We are deaf and blind, therefore, to the imminent grandeur around us unless we have insight enough to appreciate the whole, and to recognize in the woven fabric of existence, flowing steadily from the loom in an infinite progress toward perfection, the ever-growing garment of a transcendent God."

Misfortunes

Are You Not Better for Them? If Not, You Have Failed to Learn Life's Lesson in Self-Development.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

YOU who complain bitterly of your troubles and sorrows turn your gaze inward for a time and see what these experiences have done for you.

Are you not stronger in soul, braver in mind, and more self-reliant because of your misfortunes?

Have you not a deeper understanding of human nature, and a larger sympathy for your fellowmen through having known trouble?

If you ask yourself these questions, and if you answer in the negative then rest assured more trouble will be sent you.

Sorrows Will Come Until You Learn Sympathy and Compassion.

Just as the scholar who has not learned his lessons at school is given the same lessons over and over again, so will you be given sorrow after sorrow and trouble after trouble, until you learn the great lesson of sympathy and compassion.

First of all in thinking of your misfortunes, remember you have brought them on yourself. Not in this life, perhaps, but in former lives. We have all lived many lives; and by our thoughts and deeds and desires we have fashioned our bodies and our circumstances.

If in other lives you were wasteful and selfish and improvident and idle, you come into this life poor and without friends or influence.

It is simply your life lesson of self-development given you again to learn. Industry, self-control, economy, are the next lessons.

By patient persistence you will learn them all; and then independence and usefulness and happiness will be yours.

If you did not appreciate love and affection in your last incarnation you will be deprived of these blessings for a time in this life; but if you give freely, even though you do not receive, and if you develop every loving impulse, and ask for no return, and if you refuse to think of your misfortunes, and persist in thinking of your great privilege in being allowed to do for others, then love and affection shall come to you eventually.

Remember the words of the great Master, Christ:

"I came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Of all His sayings, this is one of the greatest and one least quoted by His followers.

How Few of Us Minister as We Might to Others.

We all seem to feel resentment that we are not ministered unto continually.

And how few of us minister as we might to others.

THREE FRIENDS.

Of all the blessings which my life has known,
I value most, and most praise God for three—
Want, Loneliness and Pain, those comrades true,
Who masqueraded in the garb of foes
For many a year, and filled my heart with dread.
Yet fickle joys, like false, pretentious friends,
Have proved less worthy than this trio. First,
Want taught me labor, led me up the steep
And toilsome paths to hills of pure delight,
Trod only by the feet that know fatigue,
And yet press on until the heights appear.
Then Loneliness and hunger of the heart
Sent me upreaching to the realms of space,
'Till all the silences grew eloquent,
And all their loving forces hailed me friend.
Last, Pain taught prayer; placed in my hand the staff
Of close communion with the over-soul,
That I might lean upon it to the end,
And find myself made strong for any strife.
And then these three who had pursued my steps
Like stern, relentless foes, year after year,
Unmasked, and turned their faces full on me,
And lo! they were divinely beautiful,
For through them shone the lustrous eyes of Love.

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

An expression of opinion given after learning that Secretary of State Bryan was going out for two weeks with a tent show, the news being furnished by the press agent.

THE Armless Wonder gnashed his teeth and clenched his feet in rage.
"I'm through with art for good," he yelled, "I'm gonna quit the stage!
I used to headline every bill, and have my name of nights
Spelt out above the theater in big electric lights.
The Yodling Goat, the Thinking Pig, the Juggling Japanee,
And even the Eight-Legged Cow all stood aside for me.
But look at this here note I got—it makes me fairly ill—
'This week the Old Doc's Talking Act will lead you on the bill!'"

"NOW ain't that just the fiercest stuff?" the Fair Circassian cried.
"When I was told my date was killed I nearly like to died.
I've been the hit in every show from Coney to Fort Lee;
Not even the Three-Headed Man had anything on me.
But that is always just the way: You think you're goin' strong,
And spend your money free an' then some new freak comes along.
I never seen the Old Doc work, but he has put me wise
To one best bet in this perfesh: 'It pays to advertise.'"

"I'SPOSE," said the Contortionist, with a despairing sob,
"It's all because the President has gave this guy a job.
Them Socialists has got it right; it's unfair competition
For us poor freaks to play against a Cabinet position.
But still this Doc has got some act. Of course, it has its faults,
But he's a wonder when it comes to throwing somersaults.
And on the stage he's worked on most, when he has got in trouble,
And has to get out good and quick, he always does 'em double."

"CUT out the knocks," the Fat Man said; "choke off the hammer songs.
An' let a guy that's got the goods butt in where he belongs.
When tryin' to be President he couldn't land his stall,
But in this circus-midway game he's got it on us all.
I've seen him give three shows a day an' turn up fresh and bright
To sit in with the treasurer and count the house at night.
If Kipling still was on his job I'll bet the ink he'd fling
In writin' out a song like this that you mutts ought to sing:

"Oh, the Doc! Doc! Doc!
He has chased us off the block,
But we got to give it to him, so let's put our jools in hock;
All he does is stands and hollers,
But he gathers in the dollars.
He's a wiser guy than we are, is the Doc."

HUNT WOMAN AS TRAIN ROBBER

NEW CLEW IN SEARCH FOR BANDITS

Detectives Trail Two Men and Companion From Bessemer as A. G. S. Hold-up Suspects.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—What is conceded by railroad detectives and officers hunting the Alabama Great Southern train robbers to be the most important clew in the search for the bandits was information received here to-day that two men and a woman left Bessemer, near here, Sunday night with a heavy trunk and paid their transportation to New Orleans with new unsigned bank notes. The description of the woman tallies with that of the 18-year-old "boy" who held up Engineer Daniels last Friday morning. Inspector of Police James W. Reynolds, of New Orleans, has instructions to arrest the trio in case they reach there.

To-day the trainmen failed to identify John Gammon, Henry Poll and Robert Vaughn, the three tramps arrested at Eutaw on suspicion of being connected with the robbery. They admit that they were riding "blind baggage" on the roof of the mail car when the robbery took place, saw the bandits rob the express car, were shocked by the explosion that wrecked the express safe, and, hanging desperately to the top of the car, took the wild ride of 30 miles to a point below Tuscaloosa, a part of which time there was no one at the throttle of the engine. At Tuscaloosa they attempted to alight from their place of danger and were the ones that were fired upon by Sheriff Palmer, according to their story.

The ride continued at a terrific pace until Englewood was reached, when the engine went dead and they fled, being trailed down by bloodhounds. Their story is believed, but they are being held as material witnesses.

Rewards of $4,000 have been offered for the bandits—$3,000 by the Government and $1,000 by the railroad.

In rifling the registered mail the bandits secured $2,200 in unsigned bank notes consigned from the United State Treasury to the Bank of Meridian, Miss. Other stolen packages of currency probably totaled $5,000. The Southern Express Company claims that its loss was only $50, although the robbers abandoned $31 in cash which was left on the floor of the safe.

Manuel's Bride Is Said to Have Tried To Commit Suicide

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—Mystery surrounding the illness of Princess Victoria of Hohenzollern, the three weeks' bride of former King Manuel of Portugal, was deepened to-day by a telegram from Munich in which it was rumored that she had tried to end her life. This was closely followed by another message containing an emphatic denial. The Princess is still under the care of physicians at Munich.

It was first reported that she was ill of influenza; then came a report that an operation of serious character was necessary; next it was reported foes of Manuel had poisoned his beautiful young bride. Finally came the rumor of attempted suicide.

The report of a disagreement between the former King and his bride, which had been denied by Manuel, were strengthened this afternoon by messages saying that Princess Victoria is being removed to her father's estate at Sigmaringen, while Manuel will soon return to London for the winter.

Warrants Out for A., B. & A. Receivers

WAYCROSS., Sept. 29.—Warrants charging violation of the slot machine license law were sworn out to-day by County Tax Collector K. T. Strickland against H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb, of Atlanta, receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, Sheriff Pittman having instructions to serve or have them served without delay.

Mr. Strickland wants the road to pay a license on individual drinking cup machines placed in passenger coaches. A penny a cup is the charge. He claims that the road's officials have ignored his communications on the subject.

First Terrapin Egg Hatched in Atlanta

For the first time a terrapin, probably the most prized of delicacies, was hatched in Atlanta Monday. The egg was brought here by A. M. Barbee, of the Isle of Hope, near Savannah, who is returning from a trip to New York, and is now at the Georgian Terrace.

Mr. Barbee is the owner of a terrapin farm on the Atlantic coast. He was one of the first to build up the terrapin trade there. Terrapin at present are being sold at $80 per dozen, with the price on the ascendant. The Georgian Terrace baby has been presented to Manager Keene by Mr. Barbee.

C. A. Wickersham in Gas and Oil Company

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—The Lake Front Oil and Gas Company has been incorporated in Birmingham with $30,000 capitalization to drill for gas and oil in Caddo Parrish, Louisiana.

Among the incorporators is C. A. Wickersham, of Atlanta, president of the Atlanta and West Point and general manager of the Georgia Railroad.

Little, Back From Europe, Lauds Golf

Just returned from a month's stay in France, John D. Little said Monday the best recreation he found was the noble Scotch game of golf.

Mr. and Mrs. Little and Dan W. Rountree came home on the same boat. Mr. Little said he and Mrs. Little spent their time in Paris and motoring through France, but that he found a good portion of every day could best be devoted to golf.

Heavy Trial Docket in Criminal Court

Preparations for the reconvening next Monday of the Criminal Court of Atlanta, presided over by Judge Calhoun, were begun Monday morning by Assistant Solicitor Ed Hill.

When court adjourned Friday 200 misdemeanor cases were still untried. Mr. Hill said Monday that scores of new cases were being added daily to the list.

WOODWARD POINTS OUT 'WASTE'

Issues Summons to Polls, Asking Support in Effort to Cut Down Extravagance.

Mayor James G. Woodward issued a final call to arms to his supporters Monday, urging that they nominate W. A. Hancock, Amos Braselton and C. C. McDonald to the Aldermanic Board in the white primary Tuesday.

"I've got no ticket," he said, "but if the people will elect these men it will be an assurance that the Aldermanic Board will have a majority that will be conservative and that will work in harmony with the administration.

"I am very anxious to see them elected. With the recall we can get the others into the right line, which is to handle the people's business in a businesslike way.

"We would have saved $100,000 if the city's business had been conducted properly during the past year."

A Battle of Words.

The opposing faction is fighting just as vigorously as Mayor Woodward and the men he is supporting. Reports of a stormy word battle between the Mayor and Councilman Claude L. Ashley at a committee meeting in the City Hall the other day illustrates the intensity of the feeling on both sides. Mr. Ashley is one of Mayor Woodward's strongest supporters in Council.

"Amos Braselton will overwhelm Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward," Mayor Woodward is reported to have said.

"It will be a reflection on the Fourth Ward," Councilman Ashley is said to have replied.

"I don't see why you are for Thomson," the Mayor retorted.

What Ashley Replied.

"Mr. Mayor, Mr. Braselton hasn't lived in the Fourth Ward long enough to be called a Fourth Ward citizen," replied Councilman Ashley. "He is not even a registered voter in that ward. That's why I say his election would be a reflection on the ward."

"He'd represent the ward better than it has been represented," continued the Mayor, according to the account of the argument.

"He won't have a chance to represent it at all so far as this election is concerned."

John S. Owens is contesting the nomination of W. A. Hancock for Alderman from the Eighth Ward with a well-organized campaign, and Alderman James E. Warren, of the Third Ward, is confident he will defeat C. C. McDonald for the place he now holds.

Tuesday's Complete Ticket.

Here is the complete ticket to be voted upon Tuesday:

To be voted upon by the whole city: C. H. Kelley, for Alderman from the Second Ward; James E. Warren and C. C. McDonald, for Alderman from the Third Ward; Albert D. Thomson and Amos Braselton, for Alderman from the Fourth Ward; Jesse Armistead, for Alderman from the Seventh Ward; W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens, for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, and W. Z. Smith, for General Manager of Waterworks.

To be voted upon by wards:

Charles A. Alverson and J. N. Renfroe, for Council from the First Ward; C. D. Knight, for Council from the Second Ward; Orville H. Hall and R. R. Jackson, for Council from the Third Ward; R. E. George and A. W. Farlinger, for Council from the Fourth Ward; Jesse B. Lee and Dr. W. M. Ethridge, for Council from the Fifth Ward; Jesse M. Wood, for Council from the Sixth Ward; S. L. Dallas, for Council from the Seventh Ward; Frank H. Reynolds, for Council from the Eighth Ward; Charles W. Smith, for Council from the Ninth Ward, and Claude C. Mason, for Council from the Tenth Ward.

44-Story Building in Atlanta Planned by Candler, Is Report

Plans are being drawn by architects, it was rumored Monday, for a 44-story office building for Asa G. Candler, the structure to occupy the northwest corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets, where Mr. Candler has 259 feet of frontage. Blue prints, according to the report, are being prepared by a local concern which does a great deal of skyscraper and big building work.

Mr. Candler could not be reached Monday for an expression on the report, but authorities who are more or less in touch with his building operations declared the plans were not authorized. One of them explained that it was possible that architects had gone ahead preparing tentative plans for Mr. Candler's inspection, but that no authority had been given to proceed, and in this connection he referred to plans having been drawn for a skyscraper at the southeast corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets.

Reports of the blue prints being prepared here had it that the building would be constructed after the style of the Metropolitan Tower in New York City, with a base of about 20 stories and a tower of 24.

Record Increase in Japan Cotton Trade

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Because of the rapidly increasing trade between the United States and Japan, a shortage of trans-Pacific vessels is expected by Y. Nagashuma, manager of the Mitaui company, of this city, who has just returned from the Orient.

"Japan will become the greatest purchaser of cotton and other raw material in the world," said Nagashuma to-day. "Last year 370,000 bales were shipped there and this year the shipments will reach 400,000 bales."

North Side Burglars Loot Two Residences

Detectives Monday are seeking burglars who robbed two homes on the North Side, stealing jewels and other articles.

At the home of Mrs. Ida Dills, No. 93 Juniper street, burglars made a wholesale haul. Among the stolen loot were jewels, a clock, several skirts, a coat suit and six waists.

Miss Florence Smith, of No. 209 Peachtree circle, lost a beautiful old-fashioned gold chain and a vanity box.

Woman Asks Chief to Enforce Sunday Law

Complaint against Greek merchants who keep open their stores on Sunday and do a regular week day business was made to Chief Beavers Monday by Mrs. S. Falcovitz, of No. 160 Mills street, herself proprietor of a store.

Mrs. Falcovitz declared that a great injustice was being done other merchants who obeyed the Sunday laws.

Chief Beavers has given instructions to the police to make cases whenever a Sunday law violation is found.

Panic Follows as Big Steamer Grounds

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The steamer Mohawk, of the Manhattan Navigation Company, bound from New York to Albany with 300 passengers on board, went aground six miles north of here to-day. Charles S. Kelly, of New York, was thrown from his berth and sustained internal injuries which may prove fatal.

A panic followed the accident and in the excitement another passenger donned a life belt and leaped overboard. He was rescued with difficulty.

DECLARES CHURCH IS GAGGED BY RICH

The Rev. Hugh Wallace Charges That Girls Slave in Moral and Physical Peril.

The Rev. Hugh S. Wallace, pastor of the Jones Avenue Baptist Church, Monday gave out a caustic statement criticising the church for its failure to tackle and remedy what he terms "deplorable labor conditions" in Atlanta, particularly as affecting working women and girls. His attack followed a scathing denunciation from his pulpit Sunday night, based on his own investigation.

The Rev. Mr. Wallace made the direct charge that the mouths of some preachers are "padlocked by rich factory owners who sing and pray in church on Sunday, and then go out on Monday to oppress and rob the poor people who labor for them." If a minister sought to tell the truth about labor conditions and engage in a fight for their betterment, the rich factory owners would advise him to look for another job, said Mr. Wallace.

Here is his statement:

Declares Church Is Sleeping.

"The Church of God has so completely slept on its job that the struggling labor masses have been forced to organize to preserve their very existence. If the church had done its duty in preaching the great truths of God's Word on this burning question there would have been no need for any outside organization taking up the work. But there are reasons why the church has not taken up this fight.

"One is that in many of our 'rich' churches there sit members in the pews who come there and pray and sing on Sunday and go out on Monday morning to oppress and rob the poor people who labor for them. Such a church—with such oppressors of the poor in her membership and in her pews—could not speak out on this question.

"If the preacher dared to tell Brother A, the rich factory owner who sits in his congregation, that he is a robber, an oppressor of the poor; that he is stealing from those who work for him, then Brother A would tell the preacher that he would have to stop that kind of preaching or look for another pastorate. I say, God have mercy on the preachers in Atlanta who are letting the rich factory owners put padlocks on their mouths.

Pastor to Continue Attack.

"I propose to preach on this same question again soon, and I invite all those who are interested in this great question to come out and hear the facts that I shall present."

From statistics he had obtained, the minister showed that women and girls are compelled to toil day after day for a mere pittance, wholly inadequate to provide the necessities of life, and that, furthermore, their lives are constantly imperiled by insanitary and unsafe working surroundings. Numerous illustrations were cited to back his charges.

One of these told of a woman who labored four days on one job of mak-

COUNCIL CAN MAKE MASON ELIGIBLE

City Attorney Says Change in Ordinance Would Put Him in the Race for Re-election.

City Attorney James L. Mayson Monday settled the question of the power of the City Council to re-elect Carlos H. Mason, First Ward representative on the Police Commission, by explaining that the only limitation on the terms of Police Commissioners was provided in an ordinance, and that the Council could repeal the ordinance at any time it saw fit.

The published statement in a morning paper that it would take a special act of the Legislature is incorrect.

A movement has been started to amend the ordinance at an early date so as to make Mr. Mason eligible. Indications are that it will be successful, though it is expected Mayor Woodward will veto the action and it will take a two-thirds majority to override him.

If the movement is successful, it will assure the re-election of Mr. Mason next March, and that would be interpreted to mean that he would be re-elected chairman by the Commission.

Walter Trippe is making an active campaign for Mr. Mason's place.

Ask for Charter to Dispense Raoul Fund

Petition for charter for the disposition of the W. G. Raoul Foundation Fund, which will be used for charitable purposes, was filed with the clerk of the Superior Court Monday morning.

The petitioners are Mrs. F. G. Hodgson, John K. Ottley, R. J. Guinn and T. K. Glenn.

Blind Coroner's Secret Wedding a Week Ago Is Just Discovered by His Friends.

Radiantly proud of a husband whose pluck has won the admiration of thousands, Mrs. Paul Donehoo, bride of a week, declared Monday that everyone—Democrats and Bull Moosers and the one or two Republicans left—might just as well accept it as a settled fact that the blind Coroner of Fulton County is going to Congress.

"Why, of course Paul will sit in the Capitol at Washington," said Mrs. Donehoo, pausing in the midst of a shower of congratulations from surprised friends.

Mrs. Donehoo said her blind husband's courtship had been somewhat on the whirlwind order.

"I met Paul just 50 days ago," she explained, "at the home of Miss Mae Karrigan, and (blushingly) I fell in love with his voice. No, you mustn't put that in the paper, because I know Paul wouldn't want me to say that. It was a case of mutual attraction from the beginning, and I know we are going to be very happy."

Coroner Donehoo found it impossible to keep secret his wedding of a week ago. The news of it just naturally bubbled from the lips of the happy husband, who let the cat out of the bag two weeks before he intended to.

Mr. Donehoo's wife was Miss Alverta Benson. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Arbuckle, in Decatur, Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Park Street Methodist Church, performing the ceremony.

SENATE DISAGRESS ONLY ON COTTON FUTURES TAX IN TARIFF CONFERENCE

rock asphalts, asphaltum and bitumen have been transferred to the free list.

Senate Recedes Again.

The House rates have been reduced on lenses, surveying instruments, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses, and increased on strips of glass for lenses and gauges, opera and field glasses.

A new classification has been made for unmanufactured mica and a rate of 4 cents per pound placed on all valued at not more than 15 cents per pound, and 25 per cent on that valued at more than 15 cents. This results in an increase over the House rate of 30 per cent on the cheap class of mica costing more than 14 cents, and a reduction of all that is valued at more than 15 cents per pound.

The Senate receded from its increased rates on stoneware and crucible and plate glass, more than three-eighths of an inch thick. The House classification for pottery, earthenware and chinaware is retained.

Schedule C, Metals and Manufactures of Metals—Iron in pigs, iron kentledge, speigeleisen, ferro-manganese, scrap iron and steel, iron in slabs, blooms, loops and other forms less finished and iron in bars and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, steel ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks and billets made by the Bessemer or similar processes and not containing alloys; engraved steel plates for printing bonds and other securities, ingots for railway wheels and antimony ores have been placed upon the free list.

Other Iron Rates Cut.

The rates on other forms of iron and steel have been reduced to compensate of the reduction in the crude forms transferred to the free list. Increases have been made over the House rates on lead-bearing ores and zinc in blocks, takes or other forms.

The Senate receded from its amendments decreasing the rates on wire ropes and increasing the rates on woven wire cloth. The House rate on steel ingots, billets and bars and other forms of steel made by the crucible, electric or cementation process, or containing alloys, has been retained. Also on steel wool, grit, shot and sand made from iron or steel.

A new classification has been made for automobiles valued at $2,000 or less, and a rate of 30 per cent fixed in lieu of the House rate of 45 per cent.

Schedule D, Woods and Manufactures of—No change in these materials have been made in the schedule. The thin wood comprising the tops and bottoms and sides of fruit boxes exported as shooks and returned filled with fruit are transferred to the free list in lieu of the House rate of 7 1-2 per cent.

The Sugar Question.

Schedule E, Sugar, Molasses and Manufacture of—The only change of importance in Schedule E is that postponing the time of the taking effect of the rate provided by the House on sugar and molasses and the abolition of the Dutch standard immediately. This will result in a reduction of rates in sugar above 16 Dutch standard, which now has a differential of 14 1-2 cents per pound on sugar testing 98 degrees, and an addition of 3 1-2 cents per 100 pounds for each degree less than 98 degrees.

Schedule F, Tobacco and Manufactures of—No changes were made in this schedule.

Schedule G, Agricultural Products and Provisions—Cattle, sheep and other domestic animals, suitable for use as food, wheat and wheat products and eggs have been transferred to the free list. Reductions have been made on oats, butter, beets, frozen eggs, peas, green house stock, zante currants, chocolate and cocoa sweetened and extracts of meats from the rates provided by the House.

Spirits Unchanged.

The rates have been increased over those provided by the House on broken rice, fish packed in oil and ground spices. A rate of 20 per cent ad valorem is placed on ground spices in addition to the specific rate provided by the House on spices, ground or unground. The Senate receded from the reduced rate placed on flaxseed and its amendment placing a duty on bananas. The House classification on lemons and other citrus fruits is accepted.

Schedule H, Spirits, Wines and Other Beverages—No changes of importance are made in this schedule. The rates on ginger ale and similar beverages are slightly decreased on bottles containing not more than one-half pint each. The Senate recedes from its amendment placing an internal revenue on grape brandy used in fortifying sweet wines.

Schedule I, Cotton Manufactures—The Senate classification of cotton cloth, according to the average number of the yarns contained therein, has been accepted instead of the House provision for the highest number. This will slightly decrease the rate of some fancy weaves and novelty cloth, but on the greatest bulk of cotton cloth the rate will not be affected.

New Stocking Classification.

The rates on bleached and dyed colored yarns are increased, and on cotton yarns and cloth made of yarn from Nos 79 to 99. The rates on handkerchiefs or mufflers, not hemmed, have been reduced from 30 per cent, as provided by the House, to 25 per cent.

A new classification has been provided on stockings and half hose. The rate on those valued at not more than 70 cents per dozen is reduced 30 per cent, and on those valued at between 70 cents and $1.20 per dozen the rate is reduced to 40 per cent instead of 50 per cent, as provided for by the House. Nets and netting made on the Nottingham lace curtain machine have been increased from 45 per cent to 60 per cent.

The Senate receded from its amendment increasing the rate on bandings, beltings, bindings, etc.

Schedule J, Flax, Hemp, Jute and Manufactures of—Flax, not hackled or dressed, flax, hackled, known as "dressed line," tow or flax, hemp and tow of hemp and hackled hemp, have been transferred to the free list. The House rates on jute yarn, flax yarn and flax twine and thread have been reduced to correspond with the reduction of duty on the raw material. Other manufactures of flax have been correspondingly reduced.

Jute burlap has been placed on the free list and the rate on burlap bags reduced to 10 per cent. The Senate receded from its amendment decreasing the duty on straw matting and accepted the House classification for woven fabrics and articles made of flax, hemp or ramie with a slight reduction in the ratses of duty.

Schedule K—Wool and manufacture of. Reductions have been made from the House rates on tops and yarns made of wool or hair of Angora goats and like animals; on flannels valued at over 50 cents per pound, on plush, velvets and other pile fabrics.

The Ring don't want anyone it can't control—it is therefore fighting John S. Owens.

CHILD-REARING COST DOUBLED IN 10 YEARS

Head of Decatur Orphans' Home Gives Figures and Explains Situation.

The cost of rearing children in Atlanta has increased 100 per cent in the last ten years, according to the Rev. J. M. Hawkins, superintendent of the Decatur Orphans' Home. Mr. Hawkins based his statement on a comparison of the average cost of the support of the children in the home ten years ago, as shown by the records of the institution, with the present cost.

"Ten years ago," said Mr. Hawkins, "five dollars a month, or $60 a year, was adequate to support one of 'my' children; to-day it requires just twice that much, $120.

"These figures include all expenses incident to the support of the child —food, clothing and education—and incidentally many of our larger girls and boys are in college, their expenses being paid by the home.

Better Standard of Living.

"This enormous increase is due not only to the increased cost of all the necessities of life, but also to the increased standard of living. To-day we regard as indispensable many conveniences, such as water, sewerage, electric lights, telephones, and so forth, which ten years ago we did without."

Mr. Hawkins said also that it costs more to bring up and educate a girl than it does to rear a boy, and that it pays better dividends. A greater percentage of the girls "turn out well" than of the boys, although the number of boys who are successful is by no means small.

There are at present 230 children in the home from all parts of Georgia, the institution having taken care of over 2,000 children in the last ten years.

In the figures given, Mr. Hawkins includes the pro rata cost of providing a home for the children, and keeping up the institution, which should properly be charged against the child if the actual cost of shelter is considered.

Many of the children in the home are "adopted" by Sunday school classes, remaining in the home and being supported by contributions of the class, and in every case the amount necessary for the support of the child reaches $120.

These figures show that the cost of rearing children in Atlanta has increased just twice as fast as in New York, although even now the cost in Atlanta is some 36 per cent less than in New York, and 15 per cent lower than in Chicago.

Solomon Lowenstein, superintendent of the Hebrew Orphans' Home in New York City, says it costs about $190 a year apiece to raise his children, fully 50 per cent higher than the cost ten years ago. Mr. Lowenstein has 1,200 children in his institution.

One Chicago authority sets the annual cost at $140 a child, and asserts that he finds the increase has been 40 per cent in the last year.

The Chicago Nursery and Half Orphan Asylum has been in operation since 1860. Its records show that from 1874 to 1883 the annual cost of rearing a child in the institution was $70.98. From 1884 to 1893 the cost had grown to $88.60. From 1894 to 1903 the figures swelled to $101.45.

PASTOR ATTACKS EMPLOYERS OF GIRLS HERE

ing skirts and was paid 78 cents. Another woman made seven dozen garments and had to do the work all over again because the seam was a bit too wide. She received $1.50. One woman worked two days in one week and then quit because she could better herself. When she called back on Saturday for her wage, she was informed there was nothing due her.

Many working girls, he said, take their lives in their hands when they go to work, because of the lack of fire escapes and other protection from fire.

Scores Lack of Moral Guards.

The minister also declared that moral conditions in some of the work shops are alarming, and that the moral welfare of working girls is being woefully neglected.

"In some of the shops and stores I find that girls are forced to work directly under immoral foremen and forewomen," he said. "Absolutely no safeguard is thrown about the girls. Is it any wonder, then, that some of these girls, toiling their lives out for a starvation wage, yield to the lure of the tempter?"

Mr. Wallace quoted different passages from the Bible to show that it is the duty of the church to interest itself in the betterment of these conditions.

"The church must not sit idly by and allow the working classes to be oppressed, and see the very life and character of these girls ground out in this heartless manner," he declared. "It is time the churches should unite in a great systematic warfare against these forces that are throttling labor, and come to the rescue of the downtrodden working women and girls."

Associated Charities Scored.

At the morning service the Rev. Mr. Wallace severely rapped the Atlanta Associated Charities, declaring that a great portion of money contributed by Atlantans to relieve the suffering of the poor goes to swell handsome salaries of numerous officials. He suggested the name "associated investigators" in preference to the Associated Charities.

"Persons in dire need and distress are allowed to almost starve to death while the Associated Charities busies itself in investigating them," he said.

"If I should ever get in need, I would have a horror of falling into the hands of the 'associated investigators.'

"This organization should start out and devote its energies to the great object for which it was formed."

New Synagogue Is Formally Opened

Members of the new congregation, Beth Hamedrish Hgodel Sfard, which formally was dedicated Sunday in the Red Men's hall on Capitol avenue with impressive services, marked by the presentation of the "Scroll of Law" written on tanned deer hide brought directly from Jerusalem, were enthusiastic Monday concerning the future of the latest addition to Atlanta's orthodox Jewish synagogues.

The new congregation was realized through the efforts of Rabbi J. M. Levine, under whose direction the work of gathering together the members progressed. Speaking in the pure Hebraic tongue, Rabbi Levine lectured on the "Book of the Bible." A handsome Bible covering, the gift of the members, was placed on the Sacred Book by Rabbi Levine at the conclusion of his address.

Pope Pius, Ill, to Forego Audiences

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Sept. 29.—Pope Pius X was advised to-day by his physicans to cease holding audiences on account of the delicate condition of his health. It is explained that His Holiness is not suffering from any specific malady, but that he is showing signs of general weakness, which, it is feared, may prove the forerunner of a nervous collapse.

The Pontiff promised his doctors to forego many of his clerical duties.

Two More Counties Rid of Cattle Tick

Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen has announced that Oconee and Newton Counties have been pronounced free from the cattle tick and have been released from quarantine.

This makes 14 counties out of 147 in Georgia immune from the cattle tick. When eradication was begun a year ago, there were only three counties free of the pest. There are three more counties likely to be freed of the tick by April.

IRISH WAR CLOUD STIRS BRITISH LEADERS

Conference of Government Heads On in Effort to Unite Home Rulers and Ulsterites.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

GLASGOW, Sept. 29.—A historic conference of far-reaching political effect began to-day among members of the British Government at Brodick Castle, on the Isle of Arran, in the Firth of Clyde.

Those present were Percy Illingsworth, owner of the castle and chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons; Premier Asquith and David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer. First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill is expected to join the party to-night.

The question under discussion is home rule for Ireland and the attitude of Ulster province, which threatens to reject home rule if it is granted and set up an independent government.

How civil war can be averted in Ireland over home rule is the biggest question now confronting the Government.

The suggestion seriously considered is the appointment of a royal commission, some of the members to be chosen by Parliament and others by King George, to arbitrate the difference between the north and south of Ireland.

The Protestants in the north refuse to accept home rule, which has been brought about through the activities of the British Nationalists, the great majority of whom are Catholics. Thus the religious question permeates the heart of the differences.

The Ulster Presbyterians declare a Dublin parliament would be a Catholic government, and they refuse to be ruled by such. On the other hand, the Catholics in Ulster will rebel against a Protestant government in that district.

The central Government is trying to reach a common ground upon which both sides can be united.

Mystery in Burning Of Industrial School

The St. Paul's Parish and Industrial School, No. 241 Auburn avenue, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday afternoon, entailing a loss of about $2,500.

German-Americans Meeting in Mobile

MOBILE, Sept. 29.—The State convention of the National German-American Alliance began to-day, with President W. M. Richard, of Cullman, presiding.

Between 80 and 90 delegates from various parts of Alabama were present at the opening session. The principal addresses were delivered in German by the Rev. Father Adam Heibel, of Elberta, Ala., and by Adam Seiben in English. Music by the Froshina, the German singing society of the State, was a big feature.

Hooper Alexander Is Confirmed by Senate

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The nomination of Hooper Alexander, of Atlanta, to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia was confirmed by the Senate to-day.

The following nominations also were confirmed: Robert E. Mansfield, to be Consul at Vancouver, B. C.; Roger Culver Treadwell, to be Consul at Bristol, Eng.; Byron R. Newton, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in place of Sherman Allen.

500 Slain in Mexican Battle, Say Refugees

EAGLE PASS, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Refugees pouring into Eagle Pass today from Sabinas and other towns from 75 to 100 miles south of here reported that fighting had been in progress between Mexican Federals and rebels for the last three days.

The rebels, they said, were fleeing toward the Texas border. More than 500 were killed on both sides, the refugees said, and several towns were sacked and burned by the retreating rebels.

Increase in Exports Shown in Past Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—At the rate of more than $1,000,000 every business day in the past fiscal year have been the exports from the United States to Latin-America, according to a statement issued by the Department of Commerce. These amounted to $321,000,000, as compared with $108,000,000.

The most rapid gains have been with Argentina and Brazil.

THOMSON RAPS BRASELTON

ALBERT D. THOMSON

Says Braselton Talking About a Business Administration and Is Not Even a Registered Voter

To The People of Atlanta:

Up to this time, as a candidate for Alderman from the Fourth Ward, I have refrained from personalities with reference to my opponent, Mr. Amos W. Braselton.

It is not now my intention to criticise him personally.

But inasmuch as he saw fit to make the remark in this morning's Constitution that my supporters are the "ring politicians" and "petty politicians," or words to that effect, I feel justified in calling the public's attention to two facts.

First—Mr. Braselton has not paid his City taxes for 1912, there being now a fi-fa against him in the City Marshal's office.

Second—His name is not on the registration list for the City Primary to be held to-morrow, September 30th. In other words, he can not even vote in the Primary in which he is a candidate.

In view of these facts, isn't it rather poor taste for him to make disparaging remarks about the citizens who are supporting my candidacy?

Isn't it rather remarkable for Mr. Braselton to appeal for votes on the platform of a business administration," when, as a citizen and a business man, his interest in the City Government is not sufficient to induce him to pay his City taxes?

Isn't it rather "nervy" for Mr. Braselton to ask for the votes of citizens who PAID for the privilege of voting when he did not think enough of that privilege to pay himself?

Mr. Braselton advocates raising the pay of policemen—which is not a bad idea.

But if other citizens refused to contribute to the support of the City Government as he has done, there wouldn't be enough money in the City Treasury to pay their present salaries, or any other expenses of the City Government.

HEARST PAPERS PLAN TO FOOT UP AMERICA'S TRADE BALANCE SHEET

Estimates of What We Pay Annually to Foreigners

NO RECORDS have ever been compiled of what America pays annually to foreigners. The Hearst papers are to try to collect first-hand data covering the whole ground. Discrepancies between current estimates are most glaring—showing the need for the concrete information which it is planned to gather.

I have received estimates from the two leading foreign exchange bankers in the country—Vice President Gardin, of the National City Bank, and Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company. I append my own guess:

	John E. Gardin	Max May	B. C. Forbes
Spent by tourists	$500,000,000	$200,000,000	$225,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad	400,000,000	100,000,000	100,000,000
Interest and dividends on securities held abroad	500,000,000	50,000,000	100,000,000
Freights to foreign steamship companies	300,000,000	150,000,000	150,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	300,000,000	150,000,000	300,000,000
Insurance and miscellaneous	.....	.....	25,000,000
Sent to Canada	.....	.....	50,000,000
Totals	$2,000,000,000	$650,000,000	$950,000,000

As an offset must be placed the rapidly increasing sums spent by foreign visitors to America and also the money brought over by immigrants.

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The United States is getting deeper into the debt of Europeans every year notwithstanding that our excess of merchandise exports over imports has totaled $8,350,000,000 during the last twenty years.

The Hearst papers propose, if given proper co-operation, to make up America's international balance sheet, a task never before attempted.

One envelope from J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Speyer & Co., or other important banking house may contain "exports" of greater value than the whole cargo of the largest trans-Atlantic liner.

Our "invisible" payments to foreigners have been computed at all sorts of figures—from $500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 annually.

No trustworthy records have ever been compiled.

The Hearst papers hope to remedy this.

How much do American tourists spend abroad every year?

Vice President Gardin, head of the National City Bank's foreign exchange department and a recognized authority, puts the amount at $500,000,000.

Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company, who handles an enormous mass of exchange and is looked upon as a wizard at the business, estimates the sum at $200,000,000.

My guess would be from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Take the item, "Interest and dividends on securities held abroad." Mr. Gardin allows the colossal amount of $500,000,000 annually, whereas Mr. May cuts this down to $50,000,000!

When experts differ so, surely there is need for enlightenment on a subject of such importance.

The Hearst papers invite every steamship company doing business with the United States to give, confidentially, the amount it collects for foreign and passenger service.

Insurance companies are being asked to compute how much Americans pay foreigners for insurance.

Express companies issue an enormous number of travelers' checks and other credits for use by Americans abroad, and a record of these, it is hoped, will be furnished.

Banks, banking firms and trust companies that do a foreign business will be requested to aid the work by supplying in strict confidence, of course, the amount sent abroad by them for various purposes germane to this investigation.

The Government issues exhaustive statistics covering our foreign trade in merchandise and bullion, but it throws no light on the huge payments made to foreign shipping companies on the amount spent by tourists, and by American residents abroad, on our annual bill for dividends and interest to oversea holders of our securities, or on the sum remitted by foreigners.

Did America not have to meet so serious a drain, she would, by her handsome balance of merchandise exports, gradually reduce her billions of indebtedness to European nations.

One thought forcibly impressed upon the mind by a consideration of our international balance-sheet is that it behooves our manufacturers to cast their coats and fight for a larger share of the world's custom so as to make us more self-supporting.

With our constant and rapid growth in population, it is not expected that our agricultural exports will expand. The general belief is that they will dwindle out of sight—a view I can not share, for once our farmers are given proper credit facilities and rise to the height of their possibilities, they will, I believe, astonish the world.

Meanwhile, the new tariff should help many lines of industry to compete more effectively in foreign markets, a step that will be necessary to compensate for the loss of domestic business that the lower tariff charges will entail.

The following table shows the total value of our merchandise imports and exports for the last twenty years, along with the annual balance in merchandise and also in gold and silver shipments. It should be noted that the United States has produced about $700,000,000 worth of silver and $1,500,000,000 worth of gold during the twenty years under review.

Bar Mails to Bible, Organization Urges

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Declaring that the Bible should be excluded from the mails on the ground that it contains obscene and immoral matter, a body of citizens has sent a petition to Postmaster General Burleson urging him to take action.

Some of the department officials to-day pointed to the fact that the denial of the mail privileges to alleged objectionable books frequently has been the means of securing a great amount of free advertising.

Methodist Sunday. School Heads Meet

Crowds greeted the opening of the Atlanta District Methodist Sunday School Institute in Trinity Church Monday afternoon. Leading Methodist Sunday school workers were present. Nearly every Methodist pastor in Atlanta attended.

The program opened at 3 o'clock with an address on "The Sunday School Idea" by W. P. Lovejoy, presiding elder and chairman of the institute. Thomas K. Glenn, assistant superintendent of the Wesley Memorial Sunday School, spoke on "The Opportunity of the Sunday School."

George M. Napier, president of the North Georgia Conference Sunday School Board, delivered an address on "Connectional Sunday School Work." The Rev. Olin King, pastor of the Walker Street Church, spoke on "What Can the Quarterly Conference Do as a Board of Managers?" and Mrs. W. A. Albright concluded the afternoon program with a talk on "Special Days in the Sunday School."

Thomson Attacks Braselton's Record

Replying to Mayor Woodward's statement urging the people to vote for Amos Braselton for Alderman from the Fourth Ward, Councilman Albert D. Thomson, also a candidate for the place, made this comment Monday:

"Mr. Braselton not only is not registered in the Fourth Ward, but the city holds a fi. fa. against him as a defaulter in taxes to the amount of $185. If no one else paid their taxes any better than Mr. Braselton, there would be no need for Councilmen, Aldermen or a Mayor."

Piedmont Hotel to Have 'French Night'

Decorated after the historic Gardens of Fontainebleau at the time of Louis XIV, the Piedmont Hotel cafe Monday night will be the scene of a novel entertainment when the hotel presents its "French Night."

The occasion will be for the benefit of the after-theater crowds. Miss Claire Garner, recently brought to Atlanta by the hotel management from Hammerstein's, New York, will sing French songs, accompanied by the lady orchestra.

Negro Is Taken by Police After Fight

J. T. Jackson, the young negro who gave Police Officers Ford and Knight a hand-to-hand fight on Decatur street Sunday night, feigned insanity in his cell at the police station Monday, according to the police.

A hand-to-hand encounter followed the attempt to arrest Jackson. Not until he was beaten almost to unconsciousness did the negro surrender.

DELAY ON FRANK HEARING SEEMS UNAVOIDABLE

Dorsey Can Not Tell if He Will Be Ready by Saturday, and Rosser Says Nothing.

Postponement of the hearing of the motion next Saturday for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, appeared certain Monday, according to information from various authoritative sources.

The probabilities of the motion being heard before Judge Roan, the trial judge, were as much in doubt as ever, despite the fact that Judge Roan has expressed a desire to see the case disposed of before he retires from the bench, as well as the desire of Solicitor General Dorsey to have Judge Roan hear the motion.

However, the unexpected may happen. Judge Hill may not relinquish his place on the Court of Appeals bench until the Frank motion has been heard, it is said, as a result of his expressed hesitancy to hear the motion for a new trial in a case with which, from a strictly legal standpoint, he is entirely unfamiliar.

A postponement is regarded as certain, in view of an informal statement made by Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey, who declared Monday he had not heard one word from the defense in regard to the submitting of papers containing contentions for a new trial.

"I am going to do all I can," said Mr. Dorsey, "to have the case ready by October 4, but this depends entirely on the length and character of the matter presented to me by the defense.

"Should the papers, for instance, contain matter attacking jurymen, which would require the summoning of witnesses perhaps from various parts of the State, then the possibilities of getting ready on schedule are slight.

"All I can say is that I simply can not tell at this time whether I can be ready by Saturday or not."

Luther Rosser, attorney for Frank, declared Monday he had nothing to say regarding the matter.

THAW LIKELY TO LOSE FIGHT ON EXTRADITION

Friend Says Governor Will Honor Requisition—Case Slated for Highest Courts.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 29.—A man very close to Governor Felker said to-day the New Hampshire Executive undoubtedly would honor the requisition of New York authorities for Harry K. Thaw, the escaped Matteawan fugitive.

Governor Felker, the informant said, after exhaustive study of all statutes and precedents having any possible bearing on the subject, would concede the contention of William Travers Jerome that the extradition papers, being in regular form, should be honored irrespective of other aspects of the case.

Both Sides Plan Appeal.

This mean that Harry Thaw's fight for liberty, which already has been fought in the courts of New York, New Hampshire and Canada, will now go to the United Sattes courts. In anticipation of possible defeat in the extradition and New Hampshire court proceedings, Harry Thaw's counsel had the foresight to sue out a writ of habeas corpus in the United States courts.

The hearing, which was delayed at the request of Thaw's counsel, now will proceed, and since both sides have expressed their intention to appeal in the event of defeat, it is almost assured that the famous case will be fought out through the highest courts in the United States.

Scene to Shift to Boston.

"Governor Felker will extradite Thaw, his decision will be a conventional one," declared a member of the Governor's Council to-day. "This must not be taken as coming officially from Governor Felker, but only as my personal opinion based on an intimate knowledge of the probabilities, an opinion which I believe will be borne out by developments within the next few days."

The informant expressed the general belief voiced about the Granite State Capitol. The effect of Governor Felker's granting extradition papers would be to throw the case into the Federal courts, transferring the scene from this city to Boston.

OWENS' EIGHTH WARD MEETING DISCUSSED BY HANCOCK

A letter has been handed me signed by Mr. John S. Owens in which was enclosed a letter in circular form giving the proceedings of an Owens Meeting held in the Eighth Ward on the 12th day of last August. Permit me to say that I did not receive a notice of said meeting, although I am a taxpayer and reside in said ward. However, I was represented at the meeting. There are 900 registered voters in the Eighth Ward. In Mr. Owens' circular-letter it appears there were 56 of his friends present at his meeting, 11 of whom are not registered. A resolution prepared by someone, prior to the meeting, was introduced by Dr. Mayson, and after the virtues of Mr. Owens were extolled by General A. J. West (who is not registered) said resolutions were adopted by a viva-voce vote. The meeting lasted just eight minutes and was participated in by such friends as Mr. Owens saw fit to invite. I beg to call your attention to the following petition handed me, which was responsible for my becoming a candidate for Alderman:

"Inasmuch as our present representative from the Eighth Ward in the Aldermanic Board will not stand for re-election, and recognizing the sterling worth and ability of former Alderman W. A. Hancock, we the undersigned, earnestly request that he become a candidate for this office at the coming Municipal election: Dr. A. H. VanDyke, Alex W. Smith, Sr., Alex W. Smith, Jr., Victor Lamar Smith, R. M. Walker, W. D. Ellis, Jr., E. H. Thornton, E. C. Peters, John E. Murphy, Frank O. Foster, W. L. Cosgrove, Gerald Selby, M. D., W. E. Hawkins, Charles F. Whitner, Fair Dodd, William A. Wimbish, L. P. Stephens, W. T. Ashford, Charles Gately, C. J. Simmons, Paul Goldsmith, H. H. Cabaniss, F. E. Callaway, Macon Martin, C. R. Winship, J. O. Wynn, William J. Davis, George A. Campbell, R. L. Campbell, D. H. Dougherty, H. A. Maier, H. W. Anderson, J. V. Doll, R. P. Stahl, R. L. Spain, Harvey Johnson, D. N. McCullough."

I publish this petition that you may observe that quite a few prominent citizens of the Eighth Ward are acquainted with me and are desirous of my representing them as Alderman, notwithstanding Mr. Owens' statement to the contrary.

I was born in Atlanta, have lived here all my life, I have no apologies to offer for anything I did while representing you for five years in the General Council. I have resided in the Eighth Ward for two years and expect to live there the balance of my life. I have no schemes to further, no acreage or subdivision to improve with streets and sidewalks. I expect when nominated for Alderman, as I will be to-morrow, to earnestly endeavor to represent the whole city, as well as the Eighth Ward, this I understand, is what an Alderman who faithfully performs his duty is expected to do.

Very respectfully,

W. A. HANCOCK

YOU SHOULD VOTE

"Choose you this day whom you will serve."

---JOSHUA 24:15.

The population of Los Angeles is 319,198. It has grown by leaps and bounds.

One of that city's newspapers under date of July 6th, 1913, said:

"March, 1909, Alexander became Mayor and has held the office continuously since that date.

"Since that day the city has had clean, honest government—

"It is probable that in this period of law enforcement the population of the city has doubled.

"Never has there been such uninterrupted activity in building. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, 7,644 building permits were issued calling for construction valued at $11,187,684. In the fiscal year that ended last Monday (July, 1913), 17,568 permits were issued and the value of construction called for by them was $34,662,511.

"DECENCY IN GOVERNMENT PAYS—

"The lugubrious prophecies of the apologists and defenders of vice, who fought for the continuance of the old immoralities, for protection, for a wide open town, for toleration of debauchery because it was good for business were proved to be false prophecies.

"Never in all the history of the city has business made such strides as during these four years of law enforcement.

"Never have the banks made greater gains in strength—

"A local savings bank presented a biennial comparative statement—

"In 1909 it had resources amounting to $23,980,670. After four years of honest, clean municipal administration, of enforcement of the law, of repression of those vices for which toleration has been demanded by apologists for vice, the resources of that same bank total $46,638,811."

On the wall of the office of Mayor Alexander hung this motto:

"Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

The same Los Angeles newspaper added:

"The city should remember the beginning of the verse:—

"'Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.'"

SEATTLE HAS 237,194 INHABITANTS.

Like Los Angeles, it is another city whose name means business, growth, progress and prosperity.

Gill was elected its Mayor on the wide-open-town ticket." Soon it was rumored that the very Chief of Police had an interest in a gambling hell. One enterprising citizen started building a two-hundred-room house in the segregated district.

GILL WAS RECALLED and thrown out of office. The pimps and panderers were driven out of the city. Gill tried to come back. He was again defeated.

Seattle is still growing. Three years ago her people recognized that decency meant progress.

Filth and foul odors always mean decay and death.

Let us have none in Atlanta.

As one who loves your city and your Maker, you should vote to-morrow without fail.

Ask no candidate, "How do you stand?"

But vote for no one until you know who is supporting him. Find this out.

THEN VOTE AS YOUR CONSCIENCE BIDS YOU.

If you believe that God wishes to re-establish and maintain in Atlanta brothels which depend for their existence upon the betrayal of girls, vote for those supported by the men who have tried to hamper and hamstring your Chief of Police in doing his duty.

If you believe that God wishes to destroy an honest official and enthrone Judas, vote for the crowd that is camping on the trail of Chief Beavers.

But, if you believe that God would reward fidelity to duty; if you believe that He would have you and your children live in a city that is clean and with foundations not built upon the suffering of others, vote for those who are opposed by the men who believe in the licensed brothel and seek a Chief of Police who would be false to his oath of office.

YOUR DUTY DEMANDS THAT YOU VOTE.

To-morrow is a critical day in your city and in your life.

"Choose you whom you will serve."

ATLANTA DAY AT KNOXVILLE WILL BE BIG EVENT

Colonel Lowry Helps Appalachian Exposition Prepare for Large Delegation of Boosters.

Arrangements are being made for a large crowd of Atlantans to go to Knoxville October 7, which will be Atlanta Day at the Appalachian Exposition.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee, has just returned from Knoxville, where he made preparations for entertaining a large delegation of Atlantans. He praises the exposition highly.

"The exposition is a most wonderful one," said he. "It is attracting a large number of visitors and indications are that we will take an unusually large number of Atlantans there. The exposition shows the resources of the Appalachian range and the agricultural products of the Southern States.

"Knoxville has been looking forward to Atlanta Day at the exposition and is planning to receive us with true Knoxville hospitality. I think every member of the Chamber of Commerce should make the trip to Knoxville if possible. We have always been supported in everything we went after by Knoxville and we should show our appreciation by sending a large delegation to the exposition."

A large number of Chamber of Commerce members have already signified their intention of making the trip, and it is quite possible that a special train will be necessary to handle the crowd. In addition to the features of the exposition, the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce has planned a special celebration in honor of the Atlanta visitors.

China Buys Less U. S. Cotton by $24,304,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A decrease of $24,304,000 in the value of American cotton goods sold in China in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1913, compared with the goods sold in 1906, which led the United States to undertake an investigation, has resulted in the discovery that the Chinese are making so much of their own cloth that his nation will have to find some substitute for cotton, if it wishes to stimulate a new trade. There are many cotton mills in Japan, which used $25,000,000 worth of American cotton last year. These facts are contained in a statement issued today by the Department of Commerce.

Cyclist Hurts Self To Save Little Girl

WAYCROSS, Sept. 29.—Rather than take the risk of running down little Alice Jones on Plant avenue to-day, Osborn Watson, secretary to Mayor Harry Reed, drove his automobile into a pile of paving material and was painfully injured.

The girl was in the middle of the street and was apparently so badly frightened that she could not move. The motorcycle was not damaged.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Edward McDonald, a plainly dressed, middle-aged man, was found ill in a cheap lodging house here last night, with 5 cents in his purse, but with $1,270,000 in negotiable bonds and securities sewed in an inside pocket.

The papers are said to be securities of 47 bona fide companies and all drawing interest. The man is in a state of coma.

Mrs. Marshall Opposes Extremes in Styles

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"Unless women correct their present form of dress they can not sensibly ask for the ballot," said Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President. "I think the styles are being carried to the extreme and the women appear to have lost their sense of propriety."

CONTEST BEGINS FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS

E. E. Cox, of Camilla, First to Announce to Succeed the Late S. A. Roddenbery.

Following the funeral at Thomasville of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, of the Second Georgia District, the fight for the seat in Congress made vacant by his death began Monday.

Colonel E. E. Cox, a lawyer of Camilla, is the first to announce. He has been active in politics for a number of years, and has been mentioned as congressional timber before.

It is certain that others will enter the race in a short time. The special election for the unexpired term will be called at an early date. The election for the full term will take place next year.

W. W. Banks, Mayor of Tifton, is a strong probability, his friends urging him to enter the contest. Mr. Banks has also been active in politics for many years.

Another probablity is J. L. Hand, of Pelham, ex-State Senator and a man well qualified in every particular to fill the place. He is one of the richest men in Southwest Georgia.

Roscoe Luke, Mayor of Thomasville, is being urged to enter the race, and has the matter under advisment. He is well known throughout the district. He will probably enter.

Judge J. R. Pottle, of Blakely, judge of the Court of Appeals, is another who may enter the fight. The race he won for the Court of Appeals is an indication of his popularity. He will make a strong candidate if he decides to enter.

Jesse Perry, of Camilla, secretary to Governor Slaton, is another possibility. He has shown his strength in politics for a number of years, and is very popular in the district. He was secretary to the late Congressman James M. Griggs.

H. Y. McIntosh, editor of The Albany Herald, is another strong possibility. He has been urged by his friends for a number of years to make the race for Congress from the Second District, and at one time entered the contest, but withdrew before the election.

The Second District embraces the counties of Thomas, Grady, Decatur, Colquitt, Mitchell, Baker, Miller, Early, Tift, Worth, Dougherty and Calhoun.

Monument Planned For Roddenbery.

CAIRO, Sept. 29.—The executive officers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Cairo has decided to erect a monument here to the memory of Congressman Roddenbery. This place was his boyhood home.

Immediate steps will be taken to secure funds for this purpose and the matter will be presented to all the unions in the other districts, as well as other organizations and individuals.

Mr. Rodenbery's stand for prohibition was well known, not only in the Second District but in the State and Nation. The local union leaders feel that the sympathizers of the prohibition movement will rally in this cause.

Congressman Buried At Thomasville.

THOMASVILLE, Sept. 29.—More than 1,500 friends attended the funeral of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. It was the largest funeral ever conducted in Thomasville. As a token of respect for the dead statesman, no services were held in any church in the city. On account of the expressed desire of the dead Congressman, the funeral services were held at his home on Hansell street.

The Congressional delegation from Washington arrived at 9:15 o'clock, being met by a special committee appointed by Mayor Luke. After breakfast at a hotel the delegation went to the residence of their late colleague, where they remained until after the funeral services, and then accompanied the body to the cemetery.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. W. Rushin, of Boston, Ga., a friend of Mr. Roddenbery, who paid a short but touching tribute to the dead statesman. Flowers were massed around the casket and about the room. A scene that touched the hearts of those present was when the friends from the rural districts, many of whom had ridden or driven several miles to be present and take a last look at their leader, entered the room and passed in file before the casket.

When the funeral services were over the cortege, more than a mile long, moved to Laurel Hill Cemetery for interment.

Mrs. Roddenbery and two daughters leave to-day for Sylvester, where they will visit Mrs. Gardner Nottingham for a time. John and Yates Roddenbery, sons, return to Athens and Danville, Va., where they are in school.

JACKSON, GA., Sept. 29.—A larger registration in the Jackson public schools has been made up to the present time than was ever known before. The total last week reached 365. Many are out-of-town pupils. The matter of a new school building is being agitated.

FRAUD IS LAID TO BIRMINGHAM JEWELERS

New York Diamond Merchants Throw Business of Joseph Rich & Son Into Bankruptcy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Joseph Rich, proprietor of a jewelry store in Birmingham, but a resident of this city, was charged with obtaining thousands of dollars worth of diamonds on false pretenses in a petition in bankruptcy filed against him today in the United States District Court.

Rich and his son Abraham, who acts as buyer for the Southern store, bought diamonds on credit from prominent dealers in this city, according to the petition, and instead of shipping them to Birmingham resold the stones to New York dealers at prices 25 per cent less than their real value.

Attorneys for the petitioning creditors say practically every dealer in the Malden Lane district extended credit to the firm and a $1,000,000 failure was only averted by the accidental discovery of its illegal dealings.

Judge Charles M. Hough appointed Matthew A. Henkel receiver for the Rich firm and the latter left for Birmingham to take charge of the assets there.

Ball Players Knew Of Rich's Bargains.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—A. V. Abbott, as resident receiver, is in charge of the business of Joseph Rich, of New York, operating here under the name of the Colorado Loan Company, the business being managed by his son, Abraham Rich. The business was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy here and Abbott was placed in charge. Efforts have been made to bring about a settlement of the indebtedness, but so far the creditors have refused to accept the amount offered.

It is said that the diamonds purchased in New York were ostensibly bought for sale to baseball players of the Southern League. That the Birmingham players knew of bargains at the Colorado Loan Company is not denied, but whether or not deals were carried out is not stated. Considerable business was transacted here by the loan company and regular auctions were held.

Troops Stop Race Riot; 10 Are Dead

HARRISTON, MISS., Sept. 29.—With State troops camped in the streets, this town was quiet to-day after being stirred by the worst race riot in its history. Ten persons were dead, two of them mulatto boys, brothers, who were lynched after they had felled 28 persons.

The boys, crazed by drugs, ran amuck, shooting wildly as they ran through the negro quarter. The arrival of the militiamen prevented further bloodshed in an open clash between whites and negroes.

Postmaster Jones Inspects Substations

RENFROE MAKES EMPHATIC DENIAL

To the Voters of the First Ward—

During the last hours of the primary some of my opponents are charging that I am a gambler and a drunkard.

This report has, I understand, been circulated by John W. Phillips, king of blind tigers, who has just been released from the chaingang, where he served a twelve months' sentence.

I never saw this man in my life and would not know him if I saw him.

My life record is an open book. The voters have ample opportunity to investigate these charges.

I have never gambled and do not drink. I am a successful business man, interested in the advancement of my ward and the entire city.

If elected, I shall serve efficiently and actively. J. N. RENFROE.

Laughter Lured Her To Death in Darkness

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—The pretty, handsomely gowned woman whose mangled body was found on a railroad track near Wayne, Ill., was lured to her death with humorous stories and the light laugh of the man who took her into the darkness, shot her and left her body to be ground beneath the wheels of a train.

Witnesses were found who saw the pair leave a trolley car laughing over a funny story the man told. A block away, one said, the laughter ended abruptly and a single shot rang out.

POTTSVILLE, PA., Sept. 29.—Dead by law, William Thomas, of Marshaltown, Iowa, came here to claim a bequest and so successfully established his identity that the court ordered that $475 left to him by John Jankins, of St. Clair, this county, in 1871, be paid.

Thomas, a war veteran, had long been buried from the world in a soldier's home.

Big Steel Plant For Dauphin Island

MOBILE, Sept. 29.—That several million dollars has recently been invested in and near Mobile by the United States Steel Corporation and that many more millions will be spent is the report here.

The report says that the Dauphin Island project, which has been long rumored, is to become a reality, and that mammoth iron and steel mills, blast furnaces, converters and subsidiary mills necessary to turn out the finished iron and steel products will soon be erected there.

The project includes the building of a railway from Mobile to Dauphin Island, crossing the water on a great concrete arch bridge.

Greeks Involved in Fighting in Albania

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

This message stated that a combined force of Albanians and Turks attacked the Greek position at Kavaia and that fighting is going on there at present.

Hancock Replies to John S. Owens

I notice John S. Owens has at last resorted "to slinging mud," although he agreed with me to run a clean race. My record in Council, I believe, was in every way satisfactory to the people. He published in Sunday's papers the record of my vote on the election of officials by the people which is misleading. I do not consider it necessary to go into details to explain my vote except to say that the matter of the election of certain officials by the people had been considered at different meetings of the General Council for more than two months. After the resolution had been amended as the people desired that it should be I voted for it. I expect my record in the General Council, as well as in Atlanta, will stand inspection about as well as Mr. Owens' record as a citizen. I am told on good authority that Mr. Owens is the president of the Cement Tile Co., and has a contract with the city this year and has had for the past two years for laying all the tile sidewalks. I am also told that he has succeeded in closing out all the little fellows who were competing with him, and now has the whole business to himself—a regular monopoly. I can furnish the name of the author of this information if desired. I am also informed that Mr. Owens is the same John S. Owens who was Secretary and Treasurer of the Equitable Loan and Security Co., which operated in Atlanta for several years, and was a financial loss to a good many citizens of Atlanta and other cities throughout the State, although it is said he made a fortune for himself, and yet he asks the people of Atlanta to elect him Alderman. Mr. Owens claims he does not belong to any ring; the ring who "framed up" the Charter which was overwhelmingly defeated last Tuesday, ARE FOR J. S. OWENS, and against me, to a man, yet Mr. Owens does not belong to any ring.

My only reason for writing this article is due to the fact that Mr. Owens has broken faith with me, as we had positively agreed to let the people know two gentlemen could run for office without slinging mud.

Respectfully,

W. A. HANCOCK

Mr. Hancock's Record in the City Council

Voted Several Times Against Electing City Officials by the People

A letter has been sent to the Voters of the City by Mr. W. A. Hancock, candidate for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, in which he takes credit for many things done by the General Council during his extended service in that body.

The record of a public official is always a legitimate subject of discussion when the official offers for re-election. Therefore, we call attention to some specific votes by Mr. Hancock which are not mentioned in his letter.

The City Executive Committee ordered a vote on the question of electing the Recorder, General Manager Waterworks, City Comptroller, City Marshal, City Electrician, City Clerk, City Building Inspector, City Warden by the people. Mr. John S. Owens was a member of this Committee and voted FOR it.

In this election the people voted over 6,000 to 900 that these officials should be elected by popular vote.

A resolution was introduced in Council to amend the Charter and carry out the decision of the people. A motion was made to lay it on the table. Mr. Hancock voted YES. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 699.) Various motions were made to strike from the list several officials named by the people. Mr. Hancock voted TO STRIKE each one proposed. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 708.) Afterwards a resolution was introduced to "Carry out the will of the people." Mr. Hancock voted "NO." (Minutes of Council No. 22, Page 15.)

Throughout the whole fight Mr. Hancock was "Johnnie on the Spot" and hand in glove with the "City Ring" to defeat the will of the people and voted in favor of all motions to delay or to defeat the expressed decision of the people in the election held on the subject. (Minutes of Council No. 22, Pages 63, 66 and 427.)

The people finally won their fight, and these officials are now elected by popular vote, but it was OVER the vote of Mr. Hancock.

Now, Mr. Voter, if Mr. Hancock, when last in Council, refused to carry out your will, as expressed at the ballot-box, can you expect him to carry out your will, if he is put back in Council, whether you hold an election on the subject or simply express it to him in person? He has shown a contempt for the people, even when they acted and voted together almost unanimously. How can he now ask the same people to re-elect him as their REPRESENTATIVE? A representative is a man who represents. He did not do it. You can not now expect him to do it. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Mr. John S. Owens has never been in politics. He is not lined up with any faction. He will put some "new blood" into our City Government. He is an active, successful business man. He is the kind of man the people are always saying they want in Council. Now is the chance to get SUCH A MAN!

STATESMEN CALL AT CAPITOL, BUT MISS SLATON

Senator Bacon Acts as Guide to Congressional Delegation to Roddenbery Funeral.

Had Governor John Marshall Slaton been tipped off to the avalanche of national statesmanship to be precipitated upon the State Capitol today likely as not he wouldn't have left Atlanta for Tennessee, at least until after he had availed himself of an opportunity to welcome said avalanche to our fair city.

As it was, about the biggest bunch of national celebrities seen in the Gate City of the South in many moons called at the Capitol in the forenoon to pay its respects to the Chief Magistrate, but there was nothing doing.

The party was escorted to the Capitol by United States Senator Bacon, and, besides Mr. Bacon, was made up of the following gentlemen:

View City From Capitol.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey; Senator Thomas, of Colorado, and Representatives Lee, Hughes, Howard, Tribble, Bartlett, Walker, Edwards, Adamson and Crisp, all of Georgia, and Representatives McLaughlin, of Michigan; Hill, of Illinois, and Naguire, of Nebraska.

This distinguished party was very much disappointed at not finding the Governor in. Failing to find the Governor, however, the party was escorted to the various departments by Senator Bacon, after which all those composing it were carried to the dome and shown the city from that point of vantage.

The Congressional party was returning from the funeral of Representative Roddenbery, held in Thomasville Sunday, and was in Atlanta only about two hours. All returned to Washington on the Southern at 11:01 a. m.

Governor at Nashville.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton are attending the Week-Gray wedding in Nashville, and will not return to Atlanta until Wednesday.

Senators Smith and Bacon spent the morning with friends, while the Georgia Representatives also took advantage of the opportunity to call upon Atlanta friends. The other members of the party spent the morning at the Capital City Club.

An unusually busy man was Senator Smith. He held a long conference with Atlanta's new postmaster, Bolling H. Jones. Mr. Jones accompanied him on a hurried tour of the Federal building and .o the Terminal Station. Probably half a hundred persons, each apparently with the most important personal business, were at the Terminal Station to buttonhole Senator Smith and hold private conversation with him.

Atlantans Visit Senators.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, and Senator Thomas, of Colorado, who were the other two Senators in the party, were visited at the Capital City Club by a number of prominent Atlantans during the morning hours.

The party left Thomasville Sunday night in special Pullmans, and arrived at 7 a. m. Monday. In the party were a number of secretaries to the Congressmen and othe Georgians who are now located at the National Capital.

Tango Teacher Slain And Thrown on Rails

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—A warrant was taken out to-day for Everett Rexroat, son of a wealthy Macomb (Ill.) farmer, charging him with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a teacher of the tango and other dances in Chicago. She was killed and her body was thrown on the tracks of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad near Wayne, Ill., last Friday night.

While the warrant for Rexcoat was being held up the police of Wheaton admitted they were searching for a Wheaton man who disappeared Saturday.

LondonLancetAssails Bacon-Egg Breakfast

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Traditional eggs and bacon breakfast is assailed by The London Lancet, the foremost medical journal in England, which discusses the advisability of going without breakfast altogether.

"After a night's sleep," it says, "bodily strength, both nervous and muscular, is at its height, and work can be carried on without food."

A light breakfast of coffee and rolls is advised for the brainworker though for the manual laborer, the breakfastless plan is unsuitable.

President Alfred Fountain has invited the public to be present. The enrollment of the institution is reported unusually large this year.

"CASCARETS" FINE FOR THE BOWELS

No Headache, Bad Taste, Sour Stomach or Coated Tongue by Morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too. BECKER IN DEATH CELL TRIES TO AID SULZER

Condemned Slayer Said to Have Prepared Evidence Dooming Political Existence of Many.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Sing Sing's ghastly death house to-day contributed an amazing chapter to the story of the impeachment of Governor William Sulzer, in which it appears that Lieutenant Charles Becker has prepared evidence striking at the political life if not at the personal freedom of a dozen men high in the official life of the State. This story, alleged to be backed by such proof as a shrewd and resourceful detective might produce, has been offered by Becker in return for his life.

This is the story:

At the beginning of the fight upon the Governor, emissaries were sent to Becker at Sing Sing for the purpose of getting from him any facts he might have concerning the connection between politics and crime in the city of New York. But Becker demanded that before one line of his evidence went to expectant channels, a pardon should be signed which would leave him absolutely free from any chance of punishment growing out of the murder of Herman Rosenthal in front of the Hotel Metropole on July 16, 1912.

In the meantime the power of Governor Sulzer to pardon anybody had vanished. Those men who were named in the Becker "confession" were apprised of the fact. They set to work all of the wheels under their command to prevent the production of the statement.

But its general character is known to too many men to permit the fact of its existence to escape the public. Becker has been assured, so far as anyone knows, without any authority from any person in Albany who is or may be in a position to make good the assurance, that he will be kindly treated in the event that Governor Sulzer is impeached and his story remains among the things untold.

The High Court of Impeachment to-day swung into a week that promises to see the close of the testimony for the prosecution. Attorneys for the board of managers said at the beginning of the day that they did not think it possible that their case would consume more than this week. At the outset of the day they were in doubt as to what witnesses they would call when the court resumed its session at 2 o'clock.

PROMINENT VETERAN DEAD.

CEDARTOWN, Sept. 29.—General J. O. Waddel, past commander of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans, one of Polk County's leading citizens, died to-day. The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

ROAD MOVEMENT IS SPURRED BY PATHFINDER

Texas Boosters Vote Bonds to Assure Passage of Highway Thro' Their Counties.

That the Texas good roads and highway boosters think nothing of driving 100 miles to meet the pathfinding car, was the feature of a telegram received Monday morning from E. L. Ferguson, official pathfinder for the all-Southern transcontinental trail. The tourists left San Angelo Monday morning for El Paso.

"A rousing meeting with 21 delegates from every town and county within a radius of 300 miles met us here," wired Mr. Ferguson, "and large delegations from Irion County, including county officials, presented to us a petition signed by every voter in the county, urging the routing of the highway through Irion."

"The route," Mr. Ferguson added, "was immediately accepted, and $20,000 in bonds was voted at once for good roads."

The pathfinding car will reach Fort Stockton Tuesday and Alpine or Marfa, Texas, Wednesday.

John S. Owens is a clean-cut business man. The politicians can't handle him, therefore they're fighting him.

DON'T TAKE THE WRONG MEDICINE

If Your Liver Gets Lazy You Need a Liver Tonic, Not Merely a Laxative for the Bowels.

Many people take a simple laxative when their liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at home and lose a day from your business.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tone. Dodson's Liver Tone must be all they claim for it because they guarantee it to take the place of dangerous calomel and agree to hand back the money with a smile to any person who tries Dodson's Liver Tone and is not satisfied with the relief it gives.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a harmless vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation, biliousness, sour stomach, and the other troubles that come from a torpid liver.

All druggists give it their personal guarantee and if you will ask about this guarantee you will protect yourself against imitations that are not guaranteed. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents.—Adv.

STATEMENT TO VOTERS

Charles B. Alverson, Candidate for Council From the First Ward, Issues Statement.

CHARLES B. ALVERSON, Candidate for Council from First Ward.

Ward. My information is that he traveled over the country for many years for the U. S. Gas Company and only severed his connection a short while back, and now comes forward and asks to represent our ward. Most of the people to whom I have talked think he should wait a while and be-

Many citizens of the First Ward urged me to enter the race for Councilman on the plea that they wanted an active business man to represent them in Council.

Believing it to be the duty of a good citizen to serve his ward when his fellow citizens desire it, I entered the race.

Now, a short statement is in order to advise the voters as to my position on matters affecting the ward.

In the first place, our greatest need is a new, modern, well-equipped brick building for Davis Street School. I have the assurance, from a majority of the members of the new Council, that if elected they will co-operate with me in securing this building. This shows that they are very friendly to my candidacy and will do what they can to help me improve our ward.

If this is not done I promise to be one of 100 to give $500 each to secure such a building.

I also promise that, in either event, this work shall be done with white labor, as I only employ white labor in my construction work and at my store. I started as a poor boy and know how hard it is for them to build up and I believe they should be given the preference. There are plenty of white carpenters who have families who should be given this work.

My interests both in business and in property lie in the First Ward, and I expect to give my best efforts to secure the Rhodes-Spring street viaduct. I have studied this for some time and I know its needs and how much it will help our ward.

If I fail to do this, I agree to be one of 200 citizens to give $1,000 each to secure this very important work.

I do business very near West Mitchell street and have occasion to use West Hunter, Nelson and Walker streets nearly every day, and I am going to see that these streets get the improvement they so much need.

I have always taken an active interest in public matters affecting the city and ward, but I have never seen my opponent, Mr. Renfroe, at any public meeting at any time looking toward the improvement or upbuilding of the ward before he entered this race. Very few of our people knew that he claimed to live in the First come acquainted with us before offering for office.

I know the people, I know the ward and I know the city, and I can secure for our section all that any representative could. I will be ready at all times to confer with my fellow citizens and co-operate with them in all things for the betterment of our ward.

CHARLES B. ALVERSON.

HERO BEARS TWO WOMEN FROM FIRE PERIL

Unknown Rescuer Vanishes After Braving Smoke and Flame to Warn Boarders.

Fifteen persons, many of them women and children, were forced to flee in their night clothes early Monday morning when fire, breaking out in the residence of John W. Dean, No. 107 Piedmont avenue, practically destroyed the building.

A street car man, who was passing along Piedmont avenue, discovered the flames after they had gained considerable headway and aroused the sleeping occupants of the building, probably prevented a loss of life.

Upon seeing the roof of the house a mass of fire, the passerby burst through the front door shouting the alarm. The flames quickly ate down into the framework of the dwelling. The stranger was forced to carry two of the frightened women out of the burning building to save them.

Several fire companies responded to the alarm, Company No. 4 arriving first. Difficulty was experienced by the firemen in entering the house on account of the smoke. Entrance was finally made through a window, and in a remarkably short time the flames were subdued. The fire had gained such headway and burned so rapidly that the house was almost totally destroyed, although the firemen were on the scene in less than five minutes after the alarm was given.

After seeing that all of the occupants of the house were safe, the unknown man left hurriedly, saying he was afraid of being late at his work.

Horse Guard Owners.

The house is located at the corner of Piedmont and Edgewood avenues, and is the property of the Governor's Horse Guard. John W. Dean has operated a boarding house there for some time. It was her that Mrs. L. R. Glenn, wife of the Atlanta contractor who eloped with Mrs. Ione Pidcock, wife of the Moultrie (Ga.) millionaire, remained while her husband was confined in the county jail after being brought back from Texas, where he was arrested with Mrs. Pidcock.

The fire apparently started in a closet on the second floor of the house, but the cause is unknown. It is a frame house, erected many years ago.

Fifteen persons were asleep in the house at the time of the fire. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sherman and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Humes, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cook, H. C. Fisher, L. N. Randolph and A. F. Bafley. Practically all of the men are railroad employees with the exception of Fisher, who is in the jewelry business.

The horse was insured for $3,000 and it is believed the damage may be held to a little more than $1,000, according to Capitain O. L. Rudisill, commander of the Governor's Horse Guard.

The cavalry company came into possession of the property fifteen years ago, purchasing it from Mrs. G. Loving. The troop used the basement as a storage room for many years and rented out the upper stories for a boarding house. The property has increased greatly in value since purchased by the troop, and an offer of $55,000 was recently refused for it.

HONOLULU, Sept. 29.—The chase for the "blackbirders," a pirate crew that has been terrorizing the islands of the South Seas, has ended, according to a wireless message received here to-day from Captain Tapham, of the revenue cutter Keokuk. Every man of the pirate band was captured, Captain Tapham said, after a hard fight. The prisoners will be sent to San Francisco, where the revenue cutter's captain will recommend that every one be hanged.

Among the pirates, Captain Tapham found a beautiful young Spanish girl, Estella D'Ortez, who is adored by the pirates as their most precious treasure. She has been among the pirates for ten years, and was 5 years old when she fell into their hands.

The chief of the pirates confessed that his band sunk her father's boat and saved only the beautiful child.

WOMAN HELD AS $30,000 THEFT IS PROBED

New York Officers Arrest Wilmington, N. C., Matron Accused of Stealing Friend's Fortune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, a leader in Wilmington (N. C.) society, was arrested at the Hotel Endicott charged with embezzling $30,000 from her lifelong friend, Mrs. Helen P. Lemassena, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Nichols, who is a tall, well-dressed woman of striking appearance, was dumfounded when placed under arrest. She requested to be allowed to remain at the hotel under guard until the matter was cleared up, but she was taken to the station house.

The arrest was made at the instigation of Mrs. Lemassena's son, John P. Lemassena, who has followed Mrs. Nichols through seven States during the past six months. He told the police that his mother had intrusted Mrs. Nichols with $30,000 to invest and that shortly after this Mrs. Nichols disappeared from Wilmington.

To Ask Requisition For Mrs. Nichols.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 29.—Solicitor Homer L. Lyon, of the Eighth Judicial District, arrived here to-day from Whiteville, to prepare requisition papers in the case against Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, who has been arrested in New York for the New Hanover County authorities, charged with embezzlement.

The papers will be forwarded to Raleigh for Governor Craig's signature. Sheriff P. Cowan, of this county, will leave for New York immediately upon receipt of them.

Sheriff Cowan was notified from New York of the arrest of Mrs. Nichols, and it was indicated in the telegram that she would refuse to return to North Carolina without extradition papers. She is being held pending the necessary papers and arrival of an officer from this county.

Mrs. Nichols is an elderly woman, remarkably well preserved, of handsome appearance and charming personality. She moved in exclusive social circles in Wilmington and entertained lavishly. She was widely known and was prominent in several charitable organizations.

There are three separate indictments against the woman, in the aggregate charging the embezzlement of $15,000. Civil suit also has been started, and the complaint in this alleges embezzlement of $27,000. The money, it is alleged, was in possession of Mrs. Nichols, to be invested in stocks and bonds for Mrs. Lemassena, who had been her close friend and who had great confidence in Mrs. Nichols' ability as a financier. Certain amounts were sent to Mrs. Lemassena at stated intervals, it is said, supposed to represent interest on investments. The indictment and arrest of Mrs. Nichols has caused a big sensation here and elsewhere.

NEW CASH PRIZE OFFER IN WANT AD CONTEST

Little Effort Will Put Live Candidate in Fine Position—Lead Changes Almost Daily.

In again, out again, Finnegan.

To-day one contestant is ahead and to-morrow another, in The American and Georgian great Want Ad Voting Contest. No one knows who will win the $1,000 in gold, the touring car or any of the other handsome prizes, until the last day of the race.

One thing is certain—the prizes are going to be won. The winners will be the hardest workers. To use the homely saying, it will be the "insistent, consistent and persistent pluggers that will get there." They will reap in the Bag of Gold, and ride in the handsome touring car, and carry off the other splendid prizes.

New Cash Offer.

Are YOU an insistent, consistent and persistent plugger? Just think of that double trip to California with all your expenses paid by The Georgian from the time you start until your return! YOU GET IT FREE.

For the next few days The Georgian will give the energetic workers additional cash prizes for their extra efforts put forth in the contest. We will give the organizations $100 and $50, respectively, for the best work done before October 15.

There are three cash prizes offered to the individual candidates. To the candidate selling the largest number of coupon books before that date will be given $50 in gold; to the candidate selling second largest number of books will be given $25, and to the candidate selling third largest number of books will be given $10.

Only the business turned in to the contest office since last Monday will be counted on this offer.

If some of the candidates who seem to think their chances are small could only know the little earnest effort it would take to put them in the lead of their most dreaded rival on this offer, we are sure they would surprise themselves by the amount of work they accomplished.

Work thus done is never regretted. It would certainly humiliate you should the final vote show that you had allowed yourself to be beaten when you could easily have won a prize.

Keep your mind on your own business and don't mind the rumors of what someone else has done. The count of others will not get you anything.

The work you do to-day may win the touring car or the $1,000 in gold.

Make up your mind to at least win that $50 October 15. YOU CAN.

Look like a winner October 15 and you are likely to be a winner of the best November 15.

Very few races are won on the home stretch unless the rest of the race has been consistently run.

Advertisers are waiting for the energetic workers to supply them with the coupons with which to pay their bills. "First there, first served."

BIG ATTENDANCE AT BIBLE SCHOOLS

Preparations for the big "rally day" on October 12, when several of the largest Sunday schools will hold monster booster meetings, have lent great impetus to the membership campaigns which are now in progress. Hundreds of Answers to the Suit Question

Choosing the suit this Fall is a very pleasant task—at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co.'s.

It is pleasant because so much has been done for you before you ever see the suits we offer.

The bare fact that here are hundreds of answers to the suit question is of little importance in itself.

But such answers!

We have been more scrupulous than you could ever be—we have not admitted a style that is doubtful.

Suits had to be right!

We did what we are now advising you to do.

We went to the makers who are closest to Paris, those who seem to have the knack of doing things a bit better than the average, of adding the touch, of watching the details that distinguish the suit you will like from the ordinary kind.

Any reason why a woman with a suit to select should deny herself the privilege of such a suit store as this?

Women's Blanket Robes

They are rich affairs this season—following the tendencies that dominate the styles.

Great swirling patterns, neat patterns. Materials full of warmth and comfort. Indian effects seem to lead.

Right now the display is very interesting. Then there are others for men—such that keep a man at home o' nights.

They were priced at

$3, $3.95, $5 to $7.50

Scotch Plaid Skirts

Their vogue is pronounced—that is the vogue for such skirts as you will see here—in New York it amounts to a rage.

They are smart—the "Scotchiest" of Scotch plaids are used, but soft toned colors, showing dark green, navy, purple and dark red in wonderfully effective combinations. The models are draped, and some are very wide in the hips, all with raised waist line.

See them! They are priced at

$6.50, $7.98, $8.75 and $11.98

Blouses That Bloomed in Paris---First

And flowers of fashion they are!

Paris has outdone herself this Fall in Blouses, too.

There is an oddity and novelty about them that no other season has brought.

It shows in

—fabrics.
—trimmings.
—colors.
—fashioning.

There are crepes that are the filmiest tissues, chiffons burdened with pattern all-over laces in curious "ranging" patterns. There are bead trimmings—an Orinetal influence—and there are laces side by side with velvets and tapestry trimmings.

There are colors that a native Bulgarian would affect—to match or to contrast with your suit.

They are fashioned—it seems Paris was in a gay mood—into boleros, vest effects, overhanging shoulders, Russian blouses—one after another.

And all with distinguishing Paris touch that marks the difference between elegance and extravagance. Atlanta women will appreciate this!

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I WAS reading a story last nite which was rote by Mister Walter Scott & it toald about a grate fiter naimed the Black Knight. It toald how he was so big & gal-lant & strong & fast that nobody had much chanst aggenst him in a conflick. It sed that wen his long sword flashed in the air men was sure to fall on every hand.

I toald Pa & Ma that I wud like to be a Black Knight like that, but that there wasent any chanst to be a Black Knight anymoar.

Wen I was a littel gurl I used to dreem that wen I grew up I was going to marry a knight. Littel did I dreem what the future had in store for me, Ma sed. If I had known that I wasent going to marry a knight, I wud have married Herman Schultz. He was only a delivery boy then, Ma sed, in our littel hoam town, but he is a millyunair out in Wyoming now.

Pa jest laffed, beekaus he knew Ma dident meen it. I cud have been a knight if I wanted to, Pa sed, but the only thing is that a knight can't get a job nowadays. Imagine a knight going into a stoar on Whitehall & asking for a job knighting.

The knights in olden days was yung aristocrats Pa sed & eeven if they did lern how to swing a sword or throw a speer they dident have hard mussel & they cuddent have lasted vary long in a fite. It was the old roundheaded huskies that did the reel fiteing then, the saim as now, Pa sed. Thay fought and died, but thay fought like reel men, & jest beekaus thay dident happen to know any grate riters or poets there deeds was nevver speak of. A knight wud fite about ten minutes if he cud pick out a soft spot, Pa sed, & then he wud talk a long haired poet hoam to dinner with him & rite about Sir Lancelot holding off part of a army. Thay fought thare battles the saim way Teddy Rusevelt shot big gaim in Africa, Pa sed, with a lot of huskies all around them to help them to a place of safety when the going got hevvy. Doant tell me, Pa sed, about them fiteing knights.

A Glad Relief.

"Thank Heaven, those bills are got rid of!" said Bilkins, fervently, as he tore up a bundle of statements of accounts dated August 1.

"All paid, eh?" said Mrs. Bilkins.

"Oh, no," said Bilkins. "The duplicates dated September 1 have come in, and I don't have to keep these any longer."

Grew Longer.

A farmer who was known to be very mean bought a coat for his servant boy. When the boy had the coat fitted on, the farmer remarked: "Bill, I am afraid it is a bit too short."

"Never mind, sir," replied Bill, "it will be long enough before I get another."

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

A Thrilling Story of a Modern Monte Cristo

By LOUIS TRACY

(Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed. "D'ye want a job?"

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"Dash my buttons, an' you're a likely sort of kid to get it, too. In you go. I'll pay the bill. Lord lumme, it'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. 'Ere, I'll bet you two bob 'e pays up."

"Done! Walk in, sir. Wot'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellently, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

The boy held out his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would ha' bin just about his age. Lord lumme, I 'ope the lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes'm. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

After crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to rehearse carefully the program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacity unlooked for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all. Of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond, and would demand its earthly pedigree.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date. The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's Mews altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: "Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants. Kimberley, Amsterdam and London."

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Is Mr. Isaacstein in?" said Philip.

"Oah, yess," grinned the other.

"Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oah, yess." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught its drift yet. The gaunt and unkempt visitor was evidently burlesquing the accent of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a few seconds. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the stamp book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here?" he said at last.

"Oah, yess. You vil be funny eh?" The other smirked over the hidden humor of the situation and Philip understood that if he would see the great man of the firm he must adopt a more emphatic tone.

"I had better warn you that Mr. Wilson, of Messrs. Grant & Sons, Ludgate Hill, sent me here to see Mr. Isaacstein. Am I to go back to Mr. Wilson and say that the office boy refuses to admit me?"

There was a sting in the description, coming from such a speaker.

"Look ere," was the angry retort. "Go avay und blay, vil you? I'm pizzy."

Philip reached quickly through the little arch, grabbed a handful of shirt, tie and waistcoat, and dragged the big nose and thick lips violently against the wires of the grille.

"Will you do what I ask, or shall I try and pull you through?" he said, quietly.

But the boy's ready yell brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.

With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein. The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.

Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.

"What the deuce——" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.

"He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"

Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined utterance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request. Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lend effect to Isaacstein's wit when he said:

"Is this a joke?"

All the clerks guffawed in chorus. Fortunately, Isaacstein was in a good humor. He had just purchased a pearl for 250 pounds, which he would sell to Lady Somebody for 800 pounds, to match another in an earring.

"It appears to be," said Philip, when the merriment had subsided.

For some reason the boy's gray, earnest eyes conquered the big little man's amused scrutiny.

"Now, boy, be quick. What is it?" he said testily, and every clerk bent to his task.

"I have told you, sir. I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you with regard to business of an important nature."

"You say Mr. Wilson sent you—Mr. Wilson, of Grant & Sons?"

"Yes, sir."

Isaacstein yielded to amazed curiosity.

"Step in here," he said, and led the way to his private office, surprising himself as well as his assistants by this concession.

Philip closed the door and Isaacstein turned sharply at the sound, but the boy gave him no time to frame a question.

"I want you to buy this," he said, handing over the diamond.

Cross Fire.

Isaacstein took it, and gave it one critical glance. He began to wabble again.

"Do you mean to say Mr. Wilson sent you to dispose of this stone to me?" he demanded.

"Not exactly, sir. I showed it to him and he recommended me to come to you."

Well, it mattered not. The courage of despair which nerved him the previous night came to his aid again. He would defy them all, careless of consequence.

The policeman was saying:

"It's a queer affair, sir. Did he really say he had lots more of 'em."

"Yes, yes! Do you think I am romancing? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of these stones, boy?"

Philip, with lips tensely set, was desperately cool again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting he," said the boy. "I merely wish to put my hand in my pocket. Are you afraid of me, that you hold me so fast?"

The policeman, like the rest, did not fail to notice Philip's diction. The scornful superiority of his words, the challenge of the final question, took him aback. He relaxed his grip and grinned confusedly.

Philip instantly produced his paper of diamonds and opened it widely, so that all the stones could be seen. He handed the parcel to the policeman.

"Take good care of them, constable," he said. "Judging from results, they would not be safe in that man's hands."

But Isaacstein did not hear the insult. When he saw the collection he nearly lost his senses. What had he done? Was he or the boy mad? Veins stood out on his forehead, and he wobbled so fearfully that he clutched the desk for support. A scarecrow of a boy wandering about London with thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds in his pocket, wrapped up in a piece of newspaper like so many sweets. There were not any meteoric diamonds of such value in all the museums and private collections in the world. He began to perspire. Even the policeman was astounded, quite as much at being called "constable" by Philip as by the mean appearance of articles presumably of great value.

"This is a rum go. What do you make of it, Mr. Isaacstein?" he said.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. He shows a piece of his find to a jeweler and discovers he is fabulously rich, but faces the problem of selling his meteoric diamonds. London's best diamond expert becomes excited over the meteoric find.

Now Go On With the Story.

DANGER SIGNAL TO WOMEN

Is what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness and the blues. In nine cases out of ten they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, curable by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool dissolve a little saltpeter in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpeter water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table, rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterward be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

"Bedfast—For Two Years"

MRS. GEORGE EWELL writes:—I know your medicine helped me wonderfully. I was so weak and nervous I could not sleep. Had a verry poor appetite. Had such an aching between my shoulders and such dreadful headaches. My tongue would be heavily coated every morning and would get so dry. I am 45 years old. Have been having "change of life." I doctored a great deal but your medicines helped me more than all the doctors. I took six bottles of "Favorite Prescription" and three of "Golden Medical Discovery." I can now sleep good at night. My tongue is not coated and your medicines have removed many of my symptoms. I know if I had taken six bottles more I would have been cured. I was about bedfast for two years, now I do all my work and attend to my garden and chickens. I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicines too highly.

ACT INDIFFERENTLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

X. Y.

The heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had many girl and boy friends and they all acted nice until they all played false. Now, should I break friendship with all of them and stay home without friends?

H. H.

And grow sour, suspicious and cynical? Certainly not. Go out and make more friends, and be quite sure that none of the blame of unfaithfulness lies at your door.

Broken in Health, Miserable, Suffering, For a Score of Years, Lady Came Safely Through Ordeal.

Johnson's Bayou, La.—Mrs. L. P. Semar, of this town, who has been in a deplorable condition for years, now makes the following statement: "I was a great sufferer, for 20 years, with pains in my back, right side, headache and lower bowels, was very irregular, and also suffered terribly at times, with dizziness and faintness.

During this time, I tried six different doctors, but could get no relief.

I heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it. After having taken a course of this treatment, (6 bottles), according to directions, I feel no pain, am regular, am able to do all of my work and, in fact, feel like a new woman.

I can surely recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to all women suffering from female disorders."

Cardui is the ideal medicine for women. It is prepared especially for women, and contains ingredients which act directly on the weak womanly organs, thus helping to build up, in a gentle, natural way, the entire womanly constitution to a healthy condition.

The wonderful success which Cardui has attained, in its past 50 years of continuous use, is due principally to its merit. It has helped many hundreds of thousands of weak women. It will surely help you, too.

Try Cardui.

The Lover and the Walnut

Sometimes It's a Hard Nut to Crack—Where Violence Fails, and Only Soft Appeal and Cunning Will Bring Her Out of Her Shell and Into Your Arms!

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I KNOW a chap—a darling young chap—who's a winner at all things. Or he was until he ran face to face with the "Golden Girl." The girl who made his heart a house of pain—who made all other girls in the world look like the glass set in the brass ring you get in a "prize" candy box alongside of a blue diamond!

He has tact and sweetness, honesty and tenderness, and he's a "crack" at every game that takes personal bravery, mental courage, skill and patience. And just the sort to take a girl's eyes and heart with him every move he makes—if he'll only "act natural"! In this—his biggest game—he has still his courage, but his skill and tact, his sweetness and patience, have gone off and left him right in the spot on the highway where he needs them the most. He's trying to win the Golden Girl with a club!— like a cave man. He bullies her and he scolds her, and he tries to prove to her where she's "mad" not to love him, and he calls upon all the gods of a man in love to witness how cold her heart is! And the girl, while he's breaking his heart for her, is all tight in her little shell and she won't come out. He is still sane enough to have a sneaking notion that she loves him a little—to know that she isn't really such an icy little woman—and to wonder dimly why she is holding out in such fashion. So he agonizes and fumes and raves and goes after the nut with a sledge-hammer! And there isn't a sound from within, and the shell holds tight without a crack!

If he'd only remember the fairy story of the gnome who loved and wanted the pixie in the walnut. He pounded and toiled and sweat with his heavy stone sledge. And then he sat upon the nut and wept bitter tears that tasted salty where they ran close to his lips. Now wielding a sledge wasn't the only thing the gnome could do. He could play so sweetly on a tiny violin that even the shy tree frog would lean and listen. So he dried his tears and rubbed his face with his red coat sleeve and managed a smile, and tucking his music box under his chin he drew the bow across the singing strings and played. And lo! after a few sweet measures the crack of the nut grew slowly wider—it yawned wider to the blue sky, and out of it, into the happy gnome's heart, crept the timid pixie who lived therein.

There are women who answer only the call of the sledge-hammer—whose wild hearts leap to violence. But the Golden Girl isn't that kind. Remember the fairy story, boy. Swinging the sledge-hammer isn't the only thing you can do. You've forgotten your violin. Draw your bow across it the very sweetest you know how, and I promise you the shell will open of itself and your elf will fly into your heart. Raving and storming isn't the only strength you have. You've forgotten your sweetness, your tenderness, your cunning. Lay siege with the music of these three, and I swear the Golden Girl will glow and reach to you. Under the pressure of her two white hands the shell will yawn and yield her up.

Sometimes it's a hard nut to crack—where violence fails and only soft appeal and cunning will avail!

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us and she is one of those flattering kind; she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day right before me she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I don't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heartbroken. What shall I do?

SAD WIFE.

HEARTBROKEN, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered. Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say so right then and there? Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John; I'm so proud of him myself sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish"? And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind, is she? Well, I'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

He's All Right.

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pusscat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? You let him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and quick-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way, or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming? Cry when she's gone? Scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman, to be sure!

The Only Way.

Have cousin at the house—have her there morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, ask her opinion of men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send John in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him sit up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat; have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expects men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, smile and cajole and be nicer than ever cousin dared to be, and wach results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown-up boys, you know. Just grown-up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

Same as Others.

"Say, if you were seated in the tube, and every seat was taken, and a lady entered, what would you do?"

"I'd pretend I was asleep."

Doing a Man's Part.

"What are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" replied the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

.:. Fishers of Men .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WE are all fishers of men, and by "We" I mean every one of my sex.

And it is not to our discredit. The Lord implanted in every girl's heart a longing for love that is not satisfied in the love of father, mother, brother, sister or friend. It is a longing that grows with her years, showing first in her smiling overtures as a baby to some boy and never ending till it finds satisfaction in the love of a husband and child.

She may grow old and gray in spinsterhood; she may judge man's love by the unhappy experience of some sister and decry it; she may despise the dependence that comes with love and deny it, but to the end of her days, though her tongue may scoff and her ears refuse to hear, there remains at the bottom of her heart a longing for it that is never stilled. And no woman is normal until she has known it.

We are all fishers of men. To deny it is to deny the plan of Nature. The only difference is in outward manifestations of this great inward desire. Some of us stand for life looking wistfully at the water waiting for the fish to jump out at our feet, and others secure poles early, change the bait to suit the game, and fish assiduously.

We all want love. We have always been told that it is most maidenly to wait till it comes to us voluntarily. But fish so rarely jump out of the water, and the years come and go, each one taking with it some charm that should by all rules of the game have served as bait, and we find ourselves threatened with a life-time of loneliness and heart hunger.

It is fair, then, considering how much love means, and the desolation of life without it, to suggest to nice little girls, with their hearts beating fast with alternate hope and despair, how they may use a little bait modestly and effectively.

All Are Vain.

The finest man in the world is a vain, weak creature, and it is always the finest man in the world who is blindest about the opposite sex and needs a guide to reach the altar. It was never necessary to make an effort to win the admiration of a worthless man. Very often he makes love-making his business, and consequently never has a business that will support a wife and child.

A nice little girl named Mary, who wants to win a husband and confesses to this most normal and most womanly desire, writes me:

"I am a young girl of twenty-two, and meet a lot of nice young men and go out a great deal with them. I have a host of girl friends, and while in their company I can converse with ease on almost any topic, but just as soon as I am alone in a gentleman's company it seems I have nothing to talk about, which is a very awkward position. Please advise me what topics are mostly to be discussed and whether talking about business is a boring one. I must add that I am not up to the mark on books, and consequently can not talk about them."

Thank heaven you can't! There is a big score in your favor to start with, for the girl who says pedantly to a man, "Have you read Maeterlinck's 'Pelleas and Melisande?'" or, "As Byron says: 'You remember that quotation, I am sure,' etc.," and looks with a surprised superiority when he confesses he never reads more than this newspapers and the baseball scores on the billboards, is doomed to stay on the bank forever.

Business. If he is worth while, he dotes on it, and is an enthusiast on anything that pertains to it. Don't be afraid of results if you show an interest in the most vital interest he has. And a better topic, the best of all, is to engage him in conversation about himself. It is honey on his tongue and music in his ears, and if you can hang entranced on his account of his first skates, and grow breathless with delight over his favorite way of cooking fish, you have him on your line and coming slowly and surely out of the water.

One Way.

Be a good listener. The man who was won by being talked to death is too weak to be ranked as a man. Let him do the talking. Believe me, Mary dear, the best of them like appreciation of the words of wisdom that are always dropping from their lips and turn oftenest, stay longest, and think most, of the girl who listens to their most commonplace talk as if she were hearing the music of the angels.

We are all fishers of men, Mary. But remember always that it is wise to consider the good and bad points of the fish before casting in a line. Take care that your longing doesn't magnify into a whale a fish that is only a minnow.

Vice Versa.

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door. "Stop!" said the minister; "the baby's not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit, and made the audible remark: "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? But you're a-disturbin' of 'im!"

Higher Education.

Paterfamilias was lecturing his son on education. "Look here, my boy," he said. "I made my pile with only a common school education."

"I daresay, dad," replied the son; "but it takes a college education to know how to spend it."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading about a little kid that walked 14 miles to and from school every day," said the Manicure Lady. "I'll bet that kid will be a great man some day."

"I hope so," said that Head Barber. "He is entitled to something after he grows up, and a kid in the city would never walk one-tenth that far if he had to."

"I guess the days of great men is kind of past and gone away," said the Manicure Lady. "As dad was saying the other night, we have a lot of great men now, but when you look one of them over and compare him to the great men of the past he is a few stacks shy. The old gent says that we don't need any great men nowadays, because he thinks that everybody is getting dippy in the cities and taking nothing serious any more. He said he never liked to hear folks calling Theodore Roosevelt 'Teddy.'"

"I think the same as your father," said the Head Barber. "When I was a kid I wanted to be like George Washington but when I grew older and figured that the country had one father I stopped trying to be great and went barbering. The way I feel now, if I can make enough to get by and keep up my insurance I am satisfied."

"That's how Wilfred feels too," said the Manicure Lady. "He had a bug for a long time that he was going to be the Lord Byron of the century, but when he found out that nobody cared much for serious poetry he started in writing popular songs and says he would rather be a humble bard getting the sugar than a great genius looking around for somebody to indorse his note."

"Times have certainly changed," mused the Head Barber. "The world ain't got much time nowadays for anybody with old fashioned ideas. There ain't no dignity, no reverence, no old homesteads, no quilting bees or logging bees, no church sociables, no sleigh-rides. When I was a kid I would take off my cap and get red in the face if a lady spoke to me, but if a lady speaks to a strange kid now and asks him to throw away a cigarette, he will say 'Tell it to Sweeney.' I don't know what everything is coming to."

Capable.

"Is she musical?"

"Yes; she has a natural voice, a sharp tongue and a flat nose."

Don't Suffer With Indigestion or Stomach Trouble---Quaker Herb Extract Will Cure You

There Are Thousands of Atlanta's Best Citizens Who Have Been Cured by Quaker and Are Willing for the World to Know That It Was the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm That Did It.

The Health Teacher when here had proven to the people of Atlanta the same as he has in thousands of others, that when he came here he brought rejoicing and happiness into thousands of homes that heretofore have been misery and sorrow, not from want or poverty—no, no—but for health and strength. In some homes it was a darling baby or older child whose little life seemed to be ebbing slowly away; in many cases it was worms of some kind that a few doses of Nature's own Quaker Extract would expel, and they were made well. Some homes were sorrowful on account of a poor, weak, run-down mother, who was dragging around from day to day, at times more dead than alive—pain in the back, that tired, languid feeling, could not bear anything tight around her waist, stomach would bloat, belching, shortness of breath, dizziness, headache at times, sometimes did not care to live, and tried every treatment with no relief—but here is where the Quaker Extract shows you Quaker is in a class by itself, for it cures just these kinds of cases, and thousands of women and children are living witnesses to prove it.

The husband and father that provides for home and family the same as Mr. K. F. Horder, No. 70 Fowler street, by occupation a meat cutter at Singleton Market on Cone street, who has had catarrh of the stomach, a soreness most of the time, had like a lump in his throat that he could not get up or down, his bowels very constipated, had to take pills, pellets, salts or something all the time to make them act, should do like him. He got one bottle of Quaker Extract, used it ten days, then said: "Give me three more bottles of Quaker Extract, for it it is the best medicine in the world; the pain in my chest is gone, my stomach does not bloat, my bowels are just acting fine, and it's the only medicine I ever took that just toned and seemed to build me right up."

Mrs. E. W. Gorman, who resides at Ninth street, who was laid up three months with rheumatism in arms, shoulders, back and lower limbs so bad that she never put her foot on the floor in weeks, tried every known remedy without even relief, and two bottles of Quaker Extract and two 25c bottles of Oil of Balm have cured her. She now feels like a girl—no aches or pains—and says that Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm did more for her than $100 worth of other medicine.

Now, this is the way the Health Teacher proves what he says. Quaker Remedies cure, even where all others have failed. Hundreds of people have had their hearing restored, the sense of taste and smell all brought back; people with stiff limbs and joints have all been made well. Call at Coursey & Munn's drug store, No. 29 Marietta street, for these: Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. We repay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over.

REAL FIGHT FOR LINE BERTHS ON GEORGIA TEAM

Tackle Malone Returns and Will Give Henderson and Turner Royal Struggle.

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—With the presence of Quarterback Paddock, Tackle Malone and End Conklin on the field this afternoon the Georgia crop of football material for 1913 is on hand, and with to-day's workout will begin the real practice of the Red and Black outfit. The past two weeks have been spent in getting what men there have been present in good physical trim. The scrimmaging will begin at once, and by the first game, which comes Saturday against Alabama Presbyterian College, the first line-up will have about been discovered.

The return of Malone gives Cunningham an extra good tackle for emergency in Turner, and it will really be a fight for the next few days as to who will draw these two positions—Malone, Henderson or Turner. Henderson is a certainty, so it seems that Malone and Turner are to fight it out unless one of them is sent to guard, which so far has been looked after by Conyers and Brown. Brown was on the freshman team last year and lacks experience, but has the weight and is fairly fast. Conyers was first substitute in the line, and easily won his letter, and thus has a big call on a regular berth this fall.

Paddock was given a royal welcome by his teammates when he came on the field Saturday afternoon for his initial workout, and there is nothing to it except that this popular player is going to be one of the greatest players in the South before the season closes. He got a late start last year and only played in three or four games, but was then prominently mentioned for all-Southern quarter. He is light, weighing hardly 150 pounds, but is gritty and a good general at running the team.

There has not been an injury so far to any candidate, except one or two "charley horses," and Cunningham is working hard to prevent the loss of any star by this cause. McWhorter has hardly been in a play yet, but has been busy looking after the entire squad. Bob is taking it rather easy this year, anyway, since his experience of last fall, when he was more than a month rounding into form, due mostly from overtraining the early part of the season.

McClellan, who was thinking of entering college, will hardly return this year, as there is some question as to his eligibility, since he did not remain in college very long in 1911, when he played fullback on the Red and Black team.

DEAD ONES ARE DEAD ONES.

"Where are the stars of yesteryear?"
quoth I unto a fan.
"The Overalls and Mordy Browns
who heaved 'em o'er the pan?
Where is the Peerless Leader gone
and where is Johnny Kling?
And where is Harry Steinfeldt, with
his strong, unerring wing?
And where is Jimmy Sheckard gone,
and where is Reulbach now?"
The stranger turned and answered
me, with scorn upon his brow:
"I do not know and do not care where
all these gents have fled.
Perchance in some secluded spot they
rest among the dead.
I do not care for ancient men who
carry famous names,
For they are only dead ones now, and
dead ones win no games."

GOLF IS SAFEST OF ALL SPORTS, WRITES EVANS

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—I met Mr. Baxter, of the Ridge Country Club, on the street the other day and was horrified to see that he had suffered a severe injury to his right eye. It was badly swollen and blackened and the eyeball itself was a brilliant red. He told me that the accident that resulted so painfully for him occurred at Ridge. Mr. Baxter, Mr. Scott, former city champion, and Mr. McCritchell were playing at the Ridge. It had rained considerably the day before and part of one of the tees had been staked off. Scott drove off and his ball struck one of the stakes and hit Mr. Baxter's eye on the rebound. It was excruciatingly painful for a few days, but we are glad to say that there is no permanent injury.

Has Been Hit Twice.

It is a peculiar coincidence that two years ago Mr. Baxter was struck on the other eye by a golf ball. Surely he has had much more than his share of injuries, because it is a well-known fact that the golfer is less liable to accident than any other sportsman.

It is true, of course, that a golf ball is of a size to really find a man's eye, and owing to the swiftness with which it travels it can do a great deal of damage, but there are few accidents of that sort on record. The most serious injuries have resulted from the explosion of certain balls when being curiously cut into, and that has been a real danger.

Of the broken bones and dislocated joints, constant attendants of football and the other more strenuous games, we know practically nothing, and differences at golf are not settled with the fists.

Perhaps the most prolific source of accident in golf is the tendency to stand too near a player. The golfer who stands raptly gazing admiringly after a fine ball wriven by a player is in a good position to be struck by the next player. I always look around me when I swing a club.

Evans Cut With Mashie.

When a small boy, and carried away by admiration of another small boy's play, I was cut above the eye with a mashie. A scar for life is the result. Four stitches were necessary to repair the injury, and it was considered lucky that the blow was above the eye. A golf club is indeed a dangerous weapon, and in a difficulty with a highwayman I should at any time prefer one to a revolver. So keep your distance, Mr. Golfer, from the man who is playing, both for your own sake and his.

I heard of a peculiar accident a short time ago. On a rainy day a club slipped from the hand of a golfer in the act of playing and struck another golfer at a parallel hole. There is also a chance of injury when a club handle breaks or the glue loosens in a wooden club and the head flies off.

But, on the whole, let us be thankful that golf is a comparatively safe game and we are not as football players are.

DENVER WINS FLAG.

DENVER, COLO., Sept. 29.—By defeating Des Moines yesterday Denver won the pennant in the Western League for the third consecutive time. Post-season series games with the winner of the American Association pennant are being negotiated for by the owners of Denver, to begin October 7.

JACKETS ARE FEELING FINE AFTER GAME

IN spite of the heat and the earliness of the season, the Tech Yellow Jackets came through the fray with the Soldiers Saturday without an injury or a strain that might prove in any way severe. The usual unpleasant soreness and stiffness of joints and ligaments, of course, was very noticeable yesterday, but a bit of good old heel-and-toe walking 'cross country took most of the lameness away, and the squad reported fit and fine this morning.

The next game, scheduled for Saturday at Grant Field, is with the Charleston Citadel team, always a good, stiff contender, especially in the early part of the season. That team has been working out a week longer than the McPherson bunch, and will be in excellent shape for a hard battle Saturday, while there is no doubt that the rival of Clemson and the University of South Carolina will be inspired with plenty of ambition to trim the Jackets.

Tech Line Looked Good.

While most of the interest among the Saturday spectators centered in the performance of the backfield, by reason of the new men and their excellent rating, it was noted by careful students of the game that the Heisman line was showing unusual form for a green line in the opening game.

The charging was uniformly low and hard, and the heavier Soldiers could do little to upset it. There were plenty of minor defects, naturally, and a lack of that machine-like swing and dash that characterizes the seasoned forwards. But it must have been quite reassuring to Heisman to note the manner in which the line stuck to its work and kept its cleats in the ground.

Backfield Unchanged.

The backfield probably will work through the next two games with the same personnel used against the Soldiers, at least until Gene Patten's knee permits him to get back in the going.

Preas and Johnston showed a lot of stuff, and promise to develop into A-1 backs, while Homer Cook, always a hard and conscientious performer last year, more than upheld his reputation in the opening game, and McDonald showed every bit of his regular form. Fielder, shot into the game fresh, celebrated his debut with one of the longest and most spectacular runs of the day, and showed up well while he was in harness.

Battle for End Jobs.

There already is a pretty competition on among Cushman, Goree and Lucas for an end job, and it will be even keener when Thomasson returns to the squad. Johnston is pretty sure to get one of the positions, and Heisman will have plenty of speed and ambition to choose from in selecting his running mate.

The line-up in next Saturday's game will supply a fair idea of what the coach intends to make his 1913 machine, and by the following week the work will be pointing directly toward the big games of the season.

HERRICK BEATS HIGGINS.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Completely dazed from the start, Al Higgins, from Roswell, N. Mex., lost to Jack Herrick, of Kewanee, Ill., yesterday in the fourth round of a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Juarez arena.

Francis Ouimet's Own Story

Our Golfers Equal of Britons'

The youth who amazed the golf world by capturing the open championship of the United States and also defeating Vardon and Ray, the English champions, is going to furnish the readers of The Georgian with a series of interesting articles. Ouimet's story to-day gives his impressions of British golfers and also a comparison between the stars of England and this country. The stories will be both interesting and instructive.

By Francis Ouimet.

IN my article to-day I shall give my impressions of British golfers and compare the leading golf stars of England with those of the United States. There are thousands of people in this country, and even more throughout Europe, who believe that the British golfers are far superior to those in Uncle Sam's land.

Personally, I fail to agree with those who claim that American golfers are not every bit as good as our friends across the Atlantic. There is very little difference between our ten best golfers and the ten leading stars in Great Britain.

There are ten or more professionals in this country who play remarkable golf. When they are in their best form they are always unbeatable. I have closely studied the work of the leading professionals, and I firmly believe they are capable of holding their own with all comers.

The professionals, however, are not the only good golfers in the United States. The amateurs in this country are also sterling players and many of them are able to give a fine account of themselves against the best players in the world. Our amateur players are not quite as good as those in England and Scotland, but they are nevertheless good men.

Travers Perfect Golfer.

Take for example Jerome D. Travers. This man is a perfect golf wizard. He may always be relied upon to make a good showing. He is a cool, steady player, and does not let anything ruffle him.

"Chick" Evans is another great American golfer. He has won first place in many important tournaments and is sure to be ranked among the "headliners" for many more years.

John G. Anderson and Heinrich Schmidt are two other good American golfers. Schmidt opened the eyes of the British golfing world earlier in the year when he played in the British championships. It took H. H. Hilton, the best amateur golfer in Europe, to vanquish the gallant Worcester lad.

With such stars as those mentioned above competing for Old Glory in the big tournaments, I am sure that the American public will never have reason to be ashamed of the work of their players.

British Golfers High Class.

The golf displayed by the British golfers was of a very high class. They showed to very good advantage throughout the tournament, with the possible exception of the last few holes in the Saturday play-off, when Mr. Vardon made several serious mistakes at the crucial stage of the round.

They showed a great knowledge of the various shots, such as a slice, pull, pitch shot with run, and the cut shot. This latter shot is very effective, and is used mostly to keep the ball near the hole, especially on a keen green.

When played properly, it leaves little to do on the putting greens.

Their putting is fairly good on the whole, with the possible exception of Harry Vardon. He is lamentably weak in this department of the game, and shows a timidity on short putts such as I have never seen before. He hits the ball with a quick, jerky stroke, and is constantly afraid of missing the hole. It does seem too bad, because this really great golfer suffers on this shot.

With Ray it is different. A big, strapping chap, who hits the ball hard, getting terrific distances. The few times I have seen him play made me think that Ray was inclined to be off the line of play occasionally.

His play is very sound for all of that, and he might be considered a very dangerous man on the putting greens, as he putts boldly and for the back of the cup, being exceptionally accurate on his approach putting.

E. H. BARRETT WINS MATCH AT 37TH GREEN

THE closing match of the last tournament of 1913 at East Lake wound up with a most brilliant bit of golf, by which E. H. Barnett won the T. A. Hammond trophy, 1 up, on the first green of the course, sinking a 20-foot putt for a 2 on what was the thirty-seventh hole of the hardest match of the season. J. O. Smith, his opponent, just missed his own long putt for a 2, and was down for a par 3.

The match was well played throughout, and at no time was either contestant in the way of a commanding lead. It was a fitting finish for the best golfing season the Atlanta Athletic Club has ever enjoyed—and probably for the last big tournament that will be played on the present course, which now is being redesigned into what will doubtless be one of America's sportiest inland courses.

In the second flight W. R. Tichenor defeated W. J. Tilson, 2 up and 1 to play, in a close and well-played match.

Perry Adair defeated Scott Hudson in the finals of the third flight, 2 and 1; J. B. Pollard won in the fourth flight over E. T. Winston; and the fifth flight also developed an extra hole match between E. G. Beaudry and H. H. Albert, the former winning 1 up in nineteen holes.

Ex-President's Son After Place on Team

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 29.—Princeton football players to-day heard with interest that in a few years they may have on the Tiger team Richard Cleveland, son of the late President Grover Cleveland. Young Cleveland is a student in Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., but will enter Princeton next year. He is 15 years old and weighs 160 pounds, and is striving hard to make his class team this year. He has already distinguished himself as a hockey player.

DENIES SALE TO CUBS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 29.—Ed R. Maier, president and principal owner of the Venice team, of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, denied to-day that he had sold Pitcher Fostner to President Murphy, of the Chicago club, of the National League.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Frank Baker, the Eastern lightweight, who has done some boxing around these parts, is back in our midst again. Baker is a likely looking chap and has a good record. Frank is anxious to get on with some of our local boys and says he does not fear any of them. Baker has met such boys as Benny Kaufman, Tommy Lavelle and Curley Jordan.

• • •

Jim Coffroth, the coast promoter, has decided to give Arthur Pelky a chance in his arena. Coffroth has wired Charley Miller, who is in New York, an offer to box Tommy Burns' protege next month. Pelky has already agreed to the match.

• • •

"Wildcat" Fearns strengthened his claim to the welterweight title last week when he defeated Billy Walters in a 10-round battle at Kenosha, Wis. Walters was one of the leading candidates for the title and recently held Fearns to a 15-round draw. A 20-round go between Fearns and Mike Gibbons ought to prove a banner attraction.

• • •

Gunboat Smith and Carl Morris have signed articles to meet in a 10-round go at Madison Square Garden, New York on the evening of October 9. Both men will begin active training the early part of this week.

• • •

Spider Britt, local bantamweight, left Saturday night for Knoxville, Tenn. Britt has bouts pending there with Al Smith and Kid Underwood. If Britt fights in form he should have little trouble beating both these boys.

• • •

Despite recent defeats at the hands of Charley Lee, Kid Young is still wanted by promoters. Young secured two matches last week and if he manages to win both of them he will not lack for work in the padded ring. He boxes Charlie Lee in a 4-round contest at a local theater to-morrow night and meets Mike Kelly at Athens, Ga., next month.

• • •

When Dan McKetrick sails for Paris from New York on October 4 he will take the following fighters with him: Frank Moran and Joe Jeannette, heavyweights; Tommy Gavigan and Otto Kohler, middleweights; Young Ahearn and Gene Delmont, lightweights. This is surely some collection.

• • •

A grand reception awaits Willie Ritchie when he arrives in New York. Jack Britton, Tommy Murphy and Leach Cross will be demanding fights with the champion. However, before Willie gets to the Eastern city he will probably meet a sterling boxer, Charlie White, at Milwaukee. And remember this, Mr. White has a dandy kick in his left hand that he will work overtime if he ever gets into the same ring with Ritchie.

• • •

Terry Nelson, Greek battler, writes from Chattanooga that he has started light work for his bout with Joe Sherman at Jacksonville. Nelson is also after a match with either Danny Goodman or Jimmy Murphy at Terre Haute, Ind.

KLAUS BATTLES M'GOORTY FOR 'MIDDLE' TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Back in 1908, June 4, to be exact, Milwaukee was alive with fight fans who gathered to see the bringing out of a new champion, Stanley Ketchel, who won a ten round battle from Billy Papke by a big margin. To-night in that same city another gathering of fight fans will witness Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and Eddie McGoorty go ten rounds.

The clash won't mean the bringing out of a new champion, but mighty near such a thing, for though Jack Dillon and Jimmy Clabby have a right to dispute any one claiming such honors, McGoorty and Klaus to-day hold the highest rank in the middleweight division. In short, the victor to-night, if the victory be decisive, will loom up as the man the others must beat to dispute his title.

There will be no decision at the close of ten rounds, should the battle go the full distance, for referees' decisions are barred by the laws that govern the game, but the newspaper boys will be at the ringside to tell the merits of the game.

To-night's clash carries with it international interest. Not that either of the lads hails from foreign shores, but because of their battles abroad. Both McGoorty and Klaus have fought in the far-off lands and each is known all over the world. Klaus is famed abroad for his decisive win over Georges Carpentier, the French champion, and for his victory over Billy Papke, another battle fought on foreign grounds.

Other minor bouts have been waged in France by Klaus, but these made him known to the foreign ring. His American worth has been of top-notch caliber, hence the unprejudiced scribes' reason for handing him the best in the 158-pound division.

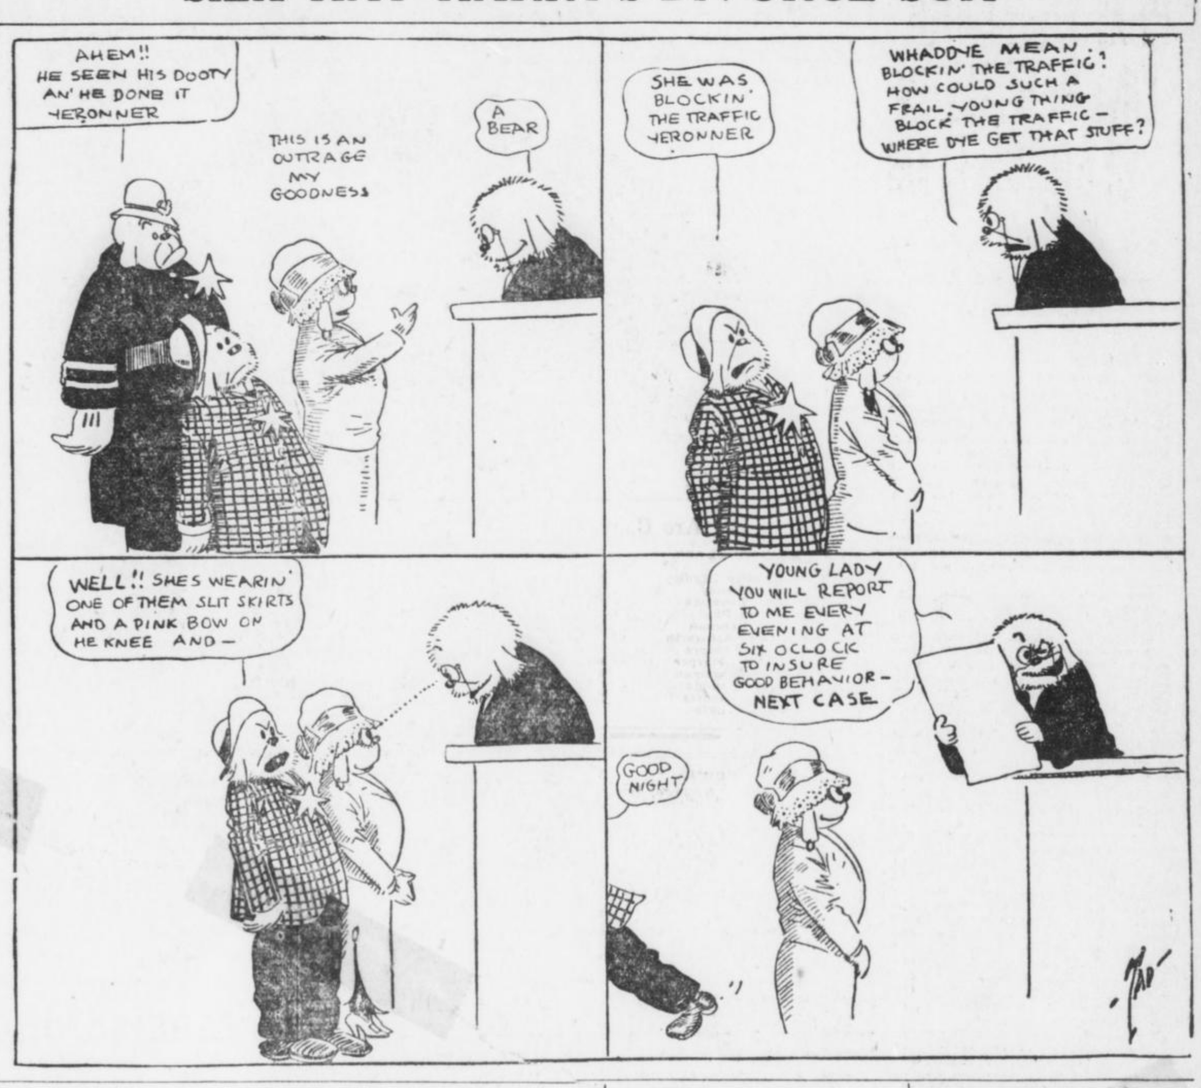
SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT



ONLY TWO MORE MEN TO REPORT IN AUBURN CAMP

By Mike Donahue.

AUBURN, ALA., Sept. 29.—With the arrival of Pitts and Lockwood it has been possible to get some idea of what the Auburn line-up is going to look like. With the exception of Taylor, the 190-pound candidate for fullback, and Christopher, who has not yet arrived, the entire squad is on the field and working hard. There are a few minor injuries that are still keeping some of the players on the side-lines, but none of them is serious.

* * *

THERE are quite a number of candidates for the places left vacant by Lamb and Meadows. The most prominent candidates for right tackle is Conisell, who is an active and aggressive player as well as a good punter. Steed and Culpepper are two other likely candidates for this place. These players are not as heavy as tackles ought to be. For the other tackle, Essinger is the most promising. He has taken on a lot of extra weight since last year and is in much better condition. He promises to develop into a worthy successor to Meadows. Cleveland a new man, knows a good deal about tackle play, and Martin, a scrub, is playing the kind of a game that is bound to win promotion. Robinson is holding down right end in his usual style, which means that ground gaining will be somewhat scarce around his territory. He has a very competent understudy in Halsten, who is a natural defensive player and is rapidly learning the offensive side of the game. At the opposite end Wynne, a last year's scrub, is playing a game not much inferior to Robinson's. He has good weight and is strongly built.

* * *

FROM end to end this is a formidable looking aggregation, but it will take a few games to find out its real ability. With the exception of Lockwood and Thigpen none of them has taken part in a real big game. Two of the places in the backfield will be taken care of by Newell and Arnold. Newell will play left half as usual while Arnold has been shifted to quarter. He is rapidly learning the business of running a team. For the fullback position there are several good, light men—Harris, Christopher, Hart, Bedez and Sparkman. They all drive hard but have not the necessary weight to carry them through the secondary defense. Kearley has been shifted to the backfield and is trying for right-half. He is being rested at present on account of an attack of charley horse. Another very promising candidate for the position is Prendergast, a new man, who has the requisite speed and weight for a first-class halfback. If he can assimilate college football rapidly enough he will be a valuable man this year.

WOLGAST PURCHASES RANCH.

CADILLAC, MICH., Sept. 29.—Ad Wolgast closed a deal with former Mayor Fred L. Heath, of Hastings, Mich., paying Heath $17,000 for a ranch near Medford, Oreg. The former lightweight champion now owns two Oregon ranches, a Michigan farm and considerable valuable live stock.

FOOTBALL

Gridiron Gossip

No revolutionary changes in gridiron practice were ordered this week in consequence of the games Satruday. The outcome of the contests had been confidently predicted and there were no surprises. Cornell, although catching a tartar in Colgate, promises to be a bigger factor in the Eastern football situation this season than for a long time. Pennsylvania apparently has a much stronger team than last year, while Yale, Harvard and Princeton all showed much promise.

* * *

Tom Shelvin, former Yale star, has joined the Blue coaching staff at New Haven. Signal practice was ordered for to-day at Yale, but there will be some secret sessions later in the week.

* * *

Every member of the Carlisle eleven was in excellent condition to-day, not a redskin having been injured in the game with West Virginia Saturday.

Kicking and catching punts will keep the Harvard backfield men busy this week. Hardwick and Willets, two of the Crimson's most dependable backs, are expected to patch up their difficulties with the faculty this week so they can get into the game.

* * *

In preparation for the Fordham game Saturday, Princeton will be sent through some stiff sessions of practice this week. The bulk of attention will be given to kicking. Captain Hobey Baker, who was slightly hurt Saturday, is improving after his rest over Sunday.

* * *

A movement is on foot to abolish secret practice. Captain Ketcham, of Yale, wrote to the captains of the Princeton and Harvard elevens offering to do away with secret practice, but the plan fell through.

Two "big nine" football elevens were well started in the battle for place in the conference, and the other seven today began more snappy work, spurred by the knowledge that Minnesota and Indiana will both be contenders for first place. Indiana piled up a score of 48 to 3 in the game with DePauw Saturday and Minnesota made 14 while the strong South Dakota eleven went scoreless. It was generally admitted that the Minnesota men did not extend themselves against South Dakota.

* * *

Coach Zuppke, of Illinois, to-day ordered his players to discard the broad stripe of orange on their stockings and to wear plain blue. The glaring stripe was too good a mark for tacklers.

White Sox to Train On Coast Next Year

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—The Chicago American League team will train in California next season. President Comiskey made the announcement yesterday. Because of the world's tour of the Chicago team and the New York Nationals there has been some doubt as to the local club's training plans.

Only a part of the Sox will make the world's tour. The rest of the team will assemble on the Pacific Coast late in February. The players who make the world's tour will join them a fortnight later.

Alabama Works Hard For Georgia Game

ANNISTON, Sept. 1.—"Red" Moore, the Washington and Lee star who is coaching the Alabama Presbyterian College football squad, is rapidly rounding his men into form for the initial clash with Georgia on October 4.

"Blondy" Archibald, Stevenson, Green and others of last year's squad are showing their old-time form and there is said to be some good material among the new students who have arrived.

Leaves Fall, Gridiron Sizzles, and Ouimet's Name Adorns Sport Pages

BUT IT IS NOTED THAT BASEBALL STILL HANGS ON

By O. B. Keeler.

THE leaves are falling, as they usually do in the fall. There is perceptible in the shaking air a muttering and a roaring of a thousand football fields. The crop of pigskin alibis already is blossoming. And interspersed is a heavy sprinkling of dope concerning a Young Person actually named Ouimet, and some older persons known (familiarly) as Vardon and Ray.

But hither and yon, or somewhere in that neighborhood, we still manage to collect an occasional earful concerning a Regular Game—a more regular game, maybe.

And we realize, in our more or less lucid moments, that Baseball still is in our midst, or a trifle to the northeastward.

The Big Series still is to play.

ALONG with other whispers comes the report of classy performances by Rivington Bisland and Clyde Wares, Southern League stars obtained by the St. Louis Browns. We note also that Elmer $7,000 Brown, ex-Billiken, held the Giants entirely hitless during the six innings he worked for Brooklyn recently. Which must have reminded Mr. McGraw (sadly) of a certain other Mr. Brown, who was wont to toll on occasions of large importance at the Polo Grounds in years gone by.

* * *

THERE was little doubt that Bisland would make good, especially after he was injected into the wrecked and ruined system of the hapless Browns. And the Browns don't look nearly so hopeless, by the way.

With Derrill Pratt on first base, Wares at second, Bisland at short and Austin at third, the tail-end contenders will have a very flossy inner defense to open the ball next year.

And that inner defense thing does help out.

If you don't believe it, try to recall some consistently-winning ball club that didn't have a good infield.

SPEAKING of the Browns, it crops up that there is a ball club without any record-breaking ability whatever—unless it is for Sliding Down the Cellar Door—which, nevertheless, is the most feared and respected record-buster of all ball clubs.

Last season the Browns stopped Walter Johnson's winning streak. This year they flagged Joe Boehling after he had copped eleven in a row. The Athletics had won fifteen successive games when the lowly Browns bumped them. They put over a tally on W. Johnson after he had traveled 56 2-3 scoreless innings.

And last Wednesday the Browns crippled Cal Brown and Stuffy McInnis, of the Athletics, in the same game.

The last instance is not mentioned ill-naturedly. It is merely chucked in as lagniappe, or good measure, to show that the habit of record-busting is strong upon the Browns.

Maybe it will be strong enough to extract them from the Cellar Class in 1914—what?

That would be pretty strong.

REVERTING for the moment to R. Bisland, Wallop Smith, now with Washington, comes to the front with a large number of ornate remarks concerning his ex-side-kick.

Smith is in St. Louis for the winter, mainly because he lives there. Following are Mr. Smith's remarks about Mr. Bisland, quoted in part, as there are space limitations:

"If Bisland doesn't make good with the Browns, I wouldn't give four cents for my chance to stick with the Senators—and Griffith bought me at that. And I feel pretty confident.

"Bisland is a natural ball player, if ever there was one in this world. He is one of the fastest men in the short field I ever saw, and if he has a weakness there I failed to spot it, playing a whole season on both sides of him. He goes with equal ease to either side. Picking up bounders in deep short and shooting them over to first is pie for the kid, and the only thing he likes as well is to race over back of second, scoop one in his glove, and nail the runner by a step at first. Often and often I would get over to second as fast as I could, just miss the ball, and come up just in time to see Bizzy whipping it over."

Following which, Wallie went on to praise Bisland's hitting ability, especially in the pinches, and had a few kind words to say of his speed in starting two-ply killings or performing as middleman in the double plays.

If Hedges got all of it, he ought to raise Bizzy's pay at once.

* * *

EVEN at this distance, we can see one redeeming feature in connection with the poor showing of the New York Yankees this season.

If they had done well after their spring training excursion to Bermuda, all the other clubs would have wanted to train there in 1914.

Whereupon the scent of the onion would have been abroad in the land, whether the annual Lemon Crop was a success or not.

* * *

IT doesn't look humanly possible to avoid taking sides in the world's series row much longer. We're going to look up some dope on the situation—and some more dope, maybe—and after that it may appear feasible to let the General Public in on the deal.

How far in, is another Question.

Women Take Part In Baseball Riots

CUMBERLAND, MD., Sept. 29.—The baseball game yesterday at Midland between Cumberland and Midland was marked by a series of riots, and the 2,500 spectators were in frequent mix-ups, in which women proved to be even more aggressive than men.

The first wrangle occurred in the second inning when C. Loppold, of the Cumberland team, was struck by a Midland player. In the sixth inning Manager Nelson W. Russter, of Cumberland, was hit during a dispute. In the meantime a turmoil ensued in the grandstand, where women were fighting almost constantly.

Two women fought for nearly half an hour and men were unable to separate them. They scratched each other and used handbags as weapons. Four separate fights occurred in the grandstand.

Women Golfers Clash For Canadian Title

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—Play in the Canadian golf championship tournament for women began on the course of the Royal Montreal Golf Club here this morning. Miss Mabel Harrison, Miss Muriel Dodd and Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, champion women golfers of Great Britain, are prominent contenders for the Canadian title. After leaving Montreal, the three British women will go to Wilmington, Del., and endeavor to lift the American championship in the match to be played the week after next.

FODDER FOR FANS

The New York Yankees will have to hustle this week to get out of last place in the American League, for the Browns gained on them by defeating the Tigers yesterday. The White Sox began the farewell week by blanking the Ceveland Naps, who became more firmly lodged in third place.

* * *

Opinion over the merits and demerits of the Giants and Athletics is pretty evenly divided. Even among the experts each club has its defenders. George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, and a keen judge, picks the Giants, while Napoleon Lajoie, of the Cleveland Naps, one of the "old masters" of the game, picks the Athletics.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Naps, believes that poor pitching will cost the Athletics the world's championship and predicts that New York will take four straight games.

* * *

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, has come out against the ruling of the national commission that players eligible to compete in the world's series may not write baseball articles about the post-season games. One New York paper is already advertising expert stories of the games by Christy Mathewson.

* * *

When the National League season ends the Brooklyn Dodgers will make a tour of Pennsylvania and the South.

* * *

The Cardinals and Browns will play a seven-game series for the championship of St. Louis beginnig October 6.

* * *

The Boston Red Sox are scheduled to play three consecutive double-headers with the Yankees beginning at he Polo Grounds this afternoon.

* * *

Milwaukee has won the pennant in the American Association and Denver in the Western League.

Gibbons and Kelly To Box at Kenosha

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, and "Spike" Kelly, of Chicago, signed articles last night to box ten rounds at Kenosha, Wis., on October 10. The match, according to the promoters, will be for the welterweight championship. The men agreed to weigh 145 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the fight.

RICHARDS ENTERS CORNELL.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Alva Richards, who won the high jump at the Stockholm Olympic games, has entered Cornell Agricultural College and reported to Track Coach Moakley. Richards competed for the Illinois Athletic Club in the national championships at Chicago last summer and it is understood that he has not severed his connections with the Chicago club.

Emory Opens Gridiron Season on October 13

EMORY COLLEGE, OXFORD, GA., Sept. 29.—Emory's interclass football team has selected October 13 as the date for the gridiron season to open. Two games will be played that afternoon, the first being when the seniors and juniors meet, and the second will be the sophomore-freshman battle.

The juniors are already down to hard work. This eleven won the 1912 pennant, and have returned every member of the team for work this year. Coach Shingler has not been out yet, owing to his accident when his arm was broken while attempting to crank an automobile.

DUNDEE VS. AZEVEDO.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Johnny Dundee and Joe Azevedo were matched yesterday to box twenty rounds on October 14 at the Vernon arena here. They will meet as lightweights.

YANKEE CYCLE CHAMP LOSES.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Donald McDougall, world's amateur title-holder last year, went down to defeat yesterday before the superior speed of William Bailey, England's amateur cycle champion, in straight heats in their two-thirds of a mile match at the Veldrome here.

FLICKENSTEIN REAL DEMON ON MOTORCYCLE

A THREE-CORNERED match race between Tex Richards, Morty Graves and Newman Flickenstein will be one of the big features offered at the reopening of the Motordrome Tuesday night. The trio will meet in three heats, the first being a mile, the next two miles and the third five miles.

Graves' new machine is going great guns these days; Richards' famous "23" has always been considered one of the fastest in the world, and Flickenstein, who recently joined the daredevil squad in Chattanooga, has beaten both Richards and Graves.

As a result both Tex and Morty are out for revenge Tuesday night. They admit that Flickenstein can get over 90 miles and hour out of his "boat," but that doesn't seem to worry them any.

The other big event on the card is a twenty-mile race in which all the riders will compete. There should be thrills enough for the most rabid fan in this long, furious grind.

Arthur Chappelle, the world's champion motorcycle rider, is expected to arrive here to-day, and he may start Tuesday night.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

New Plan Evolved For Church House

Members Would Have Presbyterians Guarantee $100,000—Kress Store Addition.

A new plan has been proposed for the erection of the new First Presbyterian Church and manse at a cost of $100,000 at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth streets. It has been suggested by Charles Elyea, a prominent member of the church, and would have a number of well-to-do members guarantee the project in the aggregate of $100,000.

This scheme, it is pointed out, would enable the church to keep its present Marietta street site for a while, and the members who put up the money for the new structure could be reimbursed later. Several churchmen have been heard in expressions of approval of this project. The church has made a number of efforts to proceed, but up to date no workable plan has been adopted.

Ground Broken on Whitehall.

Ground was broken Tuesday on the new three-story building to be erected on the south side of Whitehall street between Stewart avenue and Murphy avenues, for Fairbanks, Morse & Co., of Chicago, by J. R. Smith. The building will be built at a cost of $30,000 and the price for the lease was between $40,000 and $50,000.

Another story is to be added to this building if required.

Kress Store Addition.

McDaniel & Calmes, housewreckers, have begun tearing down buildings at Nos. 36, 38 and 40 South Broad street, which is the rear of the S. H. Kress store which fronts at Nos. 39 and 41 Whitehall, and a substantial addition to the property will be made. No application has yet been made for a new building, and the cost has not been announced.

The Kress property was recently conveyed to Hugh Richardson from Eugene V. Haynes and J. Carroll Payne at the price of $357,000. The frontage is 42 feet on Broad and Whitehall streets and the depth 175 feet. The annual rental is $19,000, which is .052219 per cent on the purchase price.

Disposition of Hospital Lot.

In the plan which Asa G. Candler has for enlarging the Wesley Memorial Hospital facilities there is a possibility that the new hospital will be located elsewhere than at the southeast corner of Courtland street and Auburn avenue, although the church management have not taken up this question definitely. A churchman expressed the opinion Monday that the value of the lot at semi-central prices might make it desirable that a cheaper location be sought, and the old place sold.

The lot was bought about eight years ago for $17,500, and Bishop Warren A. Candler's report of a year ago placed the value of ground and buildings at nearly $100,000. There is about an acre of ground, and improvements consist of a two-story frame building used for the hospital.

Salesman With Shelby Smith.

Eugene H. Carroll, for the past 30 years an Atlantan and 27 years in the mercantile business, has joined the Shelby Smith real estate agency at 401 Empire Building. Mr. Carroll is familiar with property values, and his friends are predicting success.

SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The newspapers throughout the State are commenting nowadays rather caustically upon the wretched and uninhabitable condition of the Governor's Mansion in Atlanta.

Not only is it generally agreed that the ramshackle old barn is altogether out of date, antiquated, and insanely situated for the purpose it serves, but besides that it actually is falling down in spots!

Long ago the plastering overhead in one of the bedrooms fell down with a dull and sickening thud, and a short time before that Governor Brown, only by nimbleness of foot and quickness of eye, succeeded in jumping from under a similar precipitation of overhead ceiling in another room.

Just when the dining room may take a tumble to itself no prophet or son of a prophet will say, although the hope is universal, of course, that when it does fall, it will not bury the Executive or Mrs. Slaton beneath the wreck!

The Executive Mansion in Atlanta is a joke—and not a pretty or fascinating joke, at that!

If a Governor were not sentenced to live in it, so to speak, few of them likely would care to do so.

To be sure, its historic and honorable associations are pleasant and inspiring things to think upon—if only one could sit in the Mansion and think upon them without being simultaneously in mortal terror that something heavy, plastery and not at all nice might fall upon him at any moment and mangle him beyond recognition!

The Executive Mansion would make a first-rate fourth-rate boarding house—maybe!

It certainly isn't much of a place for a Governor of Georgia to reside!

Anent the Mansion, The Oglethorpe Echo says:

> A fortunate absence probably kept Governor and Mrs. Slaton from being injured by falling plastering in the Governor's Mansion a few days since. It's a shame that as great a State as Georgia should not have a home in which her Chief Executive could at least reside in safety.

And there are others that say the same thing—many of them!

The death of Representative Roddenbery has brought forth numerous tentative candidates for his place in Congress.

Among them are H. M. McIntosh, of Albany; Judge Frank Park, of Sylvester; W. W. Banks, of Tifton; Roscoe Luke and Judge H. W. Hopkins, of Thomasville; W. A. Covington and W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; John P. Knight, of Nashville; John Donalson, of Bainbridge, and Jesse Perry, of Camilla.

And there likely will be more mentioned hereafter, as the game yet is young!

The recent Mayoralty election in Macon split the Legislative delegations, present and past, wide open.

Wallace Miller, one of the candidates for Mayor, is a member of the House, and he was bitterly opposed by Minter Wimberly, another member.

Senator McNeil favored and worked for Miller, while Roland Ellis, a former Senator, favored and worked for Smith. Walter Defore, a member of the last House, was with the Miller crowd, while Ben Fowler—where was Ben in that scrap, anyway?

When the Georgia Prison Commission was first made an advisory board of pardons, its recommendations generally were followed rather regularly. Once or twice, perhaps three or four times, Governor Atkinson, Governor Terrell and other Executives turned down the recommendations of the Prison Commission, sitting as a board of pardons, but not often. The rule was to accept the findings of the Commission as approximating the correct adjustment of the particular problem submitted, and to let it go at that!

It was not until "Little Joe" Brown became Governor that the recommendations of the Commission began to be looked upon as little more than suggestive and mildly advisory to the Executive. And even Governor Brown began by following the line of action mapped out by the Commission!

Nowadays, however, a recommendation from the Prison Commission is a step in the direction the petitioner desires—presuming it to be favorable—but nothing more. Governors have come to turn down Prison Commission awards as one of the easiest things they know!

Only Saturday, for instance, Governor Slaton turned down a majority recommendation for a pardon, and granted a life commutation instead. In doing that, he followed the recommendation of a minority opinion. No Governor considers any petition for clemency, nevertheless, unless it first has been thrashed out by the Commission.

There is no way of limiting a Georgia Governor's discretion in the matter of clemency—the Legislature could not make the Prison Commission's recommendations binding upon the Governor, if it desired to. In the matter of pardons, commutations, and so forth, the Governor is final, supreme, and altogether an arbitrary authority! The Constitution of the State gives him utterly untrammeled powers in that direction. And it is for this reason, of course, that most Governors are careful and discreet in granting clemency, in any event.

Governor Slaton has received 41 invitations to visit various State fairs throughout Georgia during the months of October and November.

And much as he would like to accept all of them, it will be utterly impossible, of course. He hopes, however, to accept a few—those that do not conflict with his official duties, at least. And that probably will mean as many as half a dozen.

"If I even attempted to accept all these gracious and kindly invitations, which I would like to do," said the Governor, "I could not do so unless it were possible for me to be in two or three places at one and the same time, and of course it isn't!

"I am glad to know that there are to be so many fairs in the State, however. It speaks well for Georgia, and it indicates a healthy condition of things.

"I believe in county fairs—and in State fairs, too! There never was one held, even though it may have lost money directly, that wasn't a success in the long run, for the indirect dividends paid by county and state fairs are great, I verily believe."

COTTON SELLS OFF ON PROFIT TAKING

Market Nervous All Day—Unsettled Conditions at Washington Restrict Trading.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Influenced by weakness in Liverpool cables and very favorable weather conditions over Sunday the cotton market opened barely steady to-day with first prices at a net decline of 2 to 12 points from the closing quotations of Saturday. Near positions showed the greatest strength at the outset, but October immediately dropped 6 points to 13.97, while December declined 8 points to 13.75. Other months were firmly maintained at opening quotations, there being no pressure whatever in these options.

After the call some of the prominent bulls and spot houses who had lost some of their cotton last week, through profit-taking on the belief that a reaction was in order and were hoping for a decline to buy it back, came in the market and purchased rather freely, which checked offerings considerably and later bringing about a short covering wave, resulting in prices recovering the early decline.

The market acted nervous during the late forenoon. There was a disposition on the part of the ring professionals to sell on all rallies. Commission houses also sold. The unsettled conditions at Washington in reference to the cotton tax amendment is restricting trading to such an extent that the market is easily influenced with moderate buying or selling orders. The majority of traders predicted a healthy reaction and were furnished in sufficient volume to depress October to 13.90; December 13.75, and January 13.62.

Offerings were absorbed rather freely by brokers close to the larger spot houses and spinners. The effect of this buying, however, was offset by weather indications pointing for more favorable weather conditions, coupled with more cheerful crop news.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 10 to 18 points from Saturday's final.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: October, 14.01; December, 13.83; January, 13.73; March, 13.82; May, 13.90.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: October, 13.86; December, 13.86; January, 13.90; March, 13.99; May, 14.07.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—The Washington rumor which caused the break in our market in the last minutes on Saturday proved unfounded and Liverpool advanced as much as due, spots 3 points higher, sales 7,000 bales.

This market opened 18 points higher and advanced to 13.94 for December in the early trading. The market was firm, with a bullish undertone, based on further rains in the central States, expectation of a very unfavorable weekly weather report to-morrow and a bullish Government report on Thursday; also on distant weather indications pointing to further rains in the western States the latter part of this week, with probably a cold wave the first part of the week.

Weather conditions over Sunday were better in the western half of the belt. The map shows fair weather in the western States; no rain but cloudy in the central and eastern belt, with further general rains in the central States; showers in the Atlantics. Warm weather; no frost anywhere; whereas last year damaging frost had occurred in the last week of September over most of the northern half of the belt.

Condition of Cotton Declined 3.1 Points

MEMPHIS, Sept. 29.—Replies of correspondents of The Commercial-Appeal of average date of September 25 indicate a condition of the cotton crop on that date of 65.1 vs. 68.2 per cent, last month's Government report figures. This is a loss from last month of 3.1 points. The heavy rains that have recently visited the western belt were just beginning to fall at the date of this report, so that any damage they may have done is reflected but slightly in these figures.

Rains earlier in the period covered by the report, while doing some harm to grade were of some benefit to the growing plant, especially in Oklahoma, where a slight improvement over the low condition of the previous month is noted. Cotton has opened rapidly and an unusually large percentage of the crop is open. Picking has gone forward fairly well, although interferred with to a certain extent by frequent rains.

There are a few complaints of scarcity of labor, but as a general thing there are plenty of pickers and with fair weather the crop will probably be gathered in record time, except in the Carolinas and Georgia, where much of the cotton is late and making of this crop will depend to a great extent upon the date of killing frost. This is the last report on the crop that will be published this season in this paper.

A crop estimate will be made some time in November.

Conditions by States, compared with the Government figures of August 25:

North Carolina	70	vs.	78
South Carolina	71	vs.	77
Georgia	73	vs.	76
Alabama	68	vs.	72

Advance in Cotton Boosts Dry Goods

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"The impetus given to the dry goods trade by the seasonable weather of the past week has added a comfortable increase to the gain in September business, as contrasted with that of the same month a year ago. There is strong demand for merchandise to take care of the fall trade.

"Owing to the continuous rise in the price of raw cotton, two well-known brands of ginghams were advanced ½c a yard during the week. A strong advance has also been made on print cloths and the wider goods, such as percales, the higher count cloths having advanced 1c a yard.

"Prices now current on wool dress goods are probably as low or lower than they will be later. Foreign manufacturers are asking advances on re-orders of both cotton and wool goods.

"The fall openings that are being held by retailers throughout the country are resulting in heavy shipments of ready-to-wear apparel for women, misses and children, as pointed out by an Eastern cloak and suit trade publication.

"October deliveries of ready-to-wear apparel will be greatly interfered with, owing to an unusual number of Jewish holidays, which will limit many manufacturers to eighteen working days during the coming month. Retailers will need to make provision for their wants of the next two months at once, in order to guard against the possibility of not having merchandise on hand to take care of their trade during the best part of the selling season."

COTTON GOSSIP

Senator Simmons says: "I have no reason to think that we will caucus on the cotton futures tax in the Senate. We caucused on it twice and the vote in favor of the Smith-Lever plan, now proposed in the Senate, was very small. I have not heard that sentiment in the Senate toward that amendment has changed. When it comes from the House the Senate will probably stand by its own amendment. The result, I assume, will be that no legislation on this subject will be included in the present bill."

• • •

Washington forecast for the week: Local rains during the first half of the week over the cotton belt, although probably not much west of the Mississippi River. Generally fair weather is now indicated for the second half of the week. Temperature changes are unimportant.

• • •

One and seven-tenths inches rainfall at Birmingham, Ala., last night; rained all night; same at Huntsville, Ala., and still raining; raining since 6:30 at Decatur, Ala.; rained all night and still raining at Sheffield, Ala.; Anniston, Ala., drizzling rainfall last night, .93 of an inch; at Meridian, Miss., rained yesterday and now threatening; Charlotte raining; Augusta, Anderson, S. C., Greenville, Fayetteville, N. C., cloudy; Charleston, clear; Athens, Ga., cloudy, good rains.

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crop in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee:

"Arkansas—Considerable damage is reported from rotting and sprouting in the bolls, but some correspondents do not consider this very material. Excessive rains have also delayed picking, but the amount gathered is about the same as last year, when it was 9 per cent picked. The grade has also been lowered, and the prospects of a top crop are very poor, which was cut short by the drouth in August. Percentage condition is considerably below last month and even lower than a year ago, when it was 71.

"Louisiana—Excessive rain and boll weevils have been the cause of serious deterioration, and percentage condition will probably be considerably below a year ago, when it was 69.1 per cent. Bolls are rotting and sprouting. The top crop prospects are poor. Picking is about the same as a year ago, when it was 34 per cent gathered.

"Tennessee—August drouth cut the crop greatly and recent rains have caused further damage, especially to grade. It is doubtful if percentage condition will equal a year ago at this time, when it was 70.2. Picking is well advanced, being about 12 per cent gathered as against 4 per cent a year ago. Top crop prospects are poor, though a late frost would add to the yield."

GENERAL SELLING DEPRESSES STOCKS

Market Continues in Trading Position—Sentiment More Bearish Than Quotations Justify.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although there were a few exceptions. California Petroleum preferred advanced 1 point and Union Pacific, after opening at 161⅞ for a gain of ¼, went to 162.

There was no news of a bullish character, whereas there were reports of financial interests, which gave ammunition to the bear group. News of the early filing of a Government suit against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, the continued withholding of definite information about the alleged Union Pacific melon, and the possibility of the Pennsylvania Railroad dumping a large quantity of hard coal and railroad stock on the market, all of which contributed to uneasiness.

Among the other declines were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; American Beet Sugar, ½; American Can, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; Atchison, ¼; Canadian Pacific, 1¼; Chino Copper, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¼; Pennsylvania, ⅛; People's Gas, ¼; Pittsburg Coal, ⅛; Southern Pacific ¼, and United States Steel common, ½.

Reading, Pressed Steel Car, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern preferred and California Petroleum common advanced fractionally within the first 45 minutes.

The curb was quiet.

Americans in London were irregular above New York parity. There was profit taking in Canadian Pacific in London. Grank Trunk in London was steady.

Shortly after the opening, pressure appeared in nearly all of the active issues, and during the rest of the forenoon a vigorous, heavy tone prevailed. Steel common sold at a decline of ¾ to 61⅛. Copper was off 1 point. Union Pacific was the weakest, declining 1¾. Other railroads were a trifle stronger. Missouri Pacific advanced ¾. Southern Pacific was off a fraction and Canadian Pacific lost ⅞. Other issues were slightly lower. Call money loaned at 2¾.

Business was quiet in the last hour and practically all price movements were confined to declines.

"Wheat—Market looks low enough at the moment.

"Corn—The unsettled weather conditions over the belt should cause a steadier feeling.

"Oats—As in corn, liquidation has been quite drastic, but the market still looks bullish, owing to continued heavy stocks in sight."

St. Louis wires: "Complaints of corn molding in the shock are increasing from all over this State, and this weather will increase such reports, as corn was cut too early in order to save the fodder, and now fodder and corn stand a good show of being ruined."

• • •

B. W. Snow wires from Winnipeg: "Northwest Canadian wheat crop is only a little larger than last year, say about 190,000,000 bushels of the finest quality ever known. Farmers are hard up and the country banks are forcing them to sell in order to liquidate debts. Harvest is early and the weather has been perfect for thrashing."

Why Is Thaw Made a Hero in New Hampshire---as He Was in Canada?

The Answer Is Simple: People Do Not Like White Slavers and Vile Debauches of the Stanford White Type. And They Do Not Like the Friends of Stanford White That Are Now Hounding Thaw.

(Copyright, 1913.)

A newspaper filled with sympathy for the late Stanford White asks the following question:

"Is Thaw a hero in New Hampshire as he was in Canada because he is notorious, or because he is rich, or because there is genuine popular sympathy for him, or is his popularity due to the fact that he and his money are making a joke of law and justice?"

Here is the answer:

Thaw is made a hero in New Hampshire, he is applauded by good citizens, not so much because of his own qualities, Heaven knows, as BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WANT TO SEE JUSTICE DONE TO HIM AT LAST.

The citizens of the country know that he has been kept in the insane asylum—although he is not insane—through the efforts of the friends of Stanford White, who was about the vilest product of degradation that could possibly be conceived.

The people know that Thaw was declared insane by a jury for the simple reason that the jury would not condemn him for having killed such a creature as Stanford White. And the newspaper that we quote probably knows that also.

The people know that Thaw, now, at least, is not insane. They know that so far from being helped by his millions—or rather by the millions of his mother—the money actually hinders him. If he were an ordinary citizen, without wealth, and if Stanford White, the vile white slaver, had fewer powerful friends, THAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FREE LONG AGO.

The people like fair play in New Hampshire, in New York, and in every State in the Union.

That is why in every State, if the matter were left to a public vote, Thaw would be set free.

This newspaper considers the case AS IT STANDS TO-DAY.

Thaw was declared insane by a jury that would not vote to execute him for having killed Stanford White.

The law says that a man who commits a crime and is declared insane shall be kept locked up unless his sanity returns. As soon as he is sane he is to be set free.

Only the friends of Stanford White, a few newspapers that sympathize with White, and some specialists, especially paid, declare that Thaw is insane.

He is at least as sane as 75 per cent of the population. And he is not only sane, but has shown remarkable intelligence in his determined efforts to obtain freedom, in his dealings with tricky lawyers, and in his answers to judicial questions.

Inasmuch as Thaw is, or was, detained by New York State as an insane man, and inasmuch as his conduct during his incarceration and since he fled from the asylum would clearly indicate that he is sane, justice demands that he be set free—as the law provides.

Justice does NOT demand that he be returned to life imprisonment TO OBLIGE THE FRIENDS, JOURNALISTIC AND OTHERWISE, OF THE DEGRADED BRUTE WHOM HE KILLED.

Fortunately, Thaw is in the hands of a Federal judge. He is not at the mercy of any court especially chosen to send him back to the insane asylum. He is not at the mercy of the distinguished legal gentlemen who make a special point of hounding him—for excellent pay, no doubt.

He will have his day in court, and will probably not be sent back to life imprisonment in an insane asylum for having killed Stanford White, whose death certainly saved from shame, degradation and horror many helpless girls.

No civilized human being would plead the unwritten law, or put the right of an individual taking justice into his own hands above the law.

And any sane man who commits a murder for whatever reason should be punished for murder. Yet, if ever there was a killing that was justified, it was the killing of Stanford White, AND HIS MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS KNOW THAT THAT IS SO.

They know that his pastime was the pursuit and the destruction of unfortunate women. They know that he spent his money and his time in the committing of crime compared with which murder committed in anger is as nothing.

It is not a good, healthy or wise thing to have a man who has committed murder, such as Thaw, lionized, applauded and made much of. But the fault is with the degenerate associates and admirers of Stanford White who viciously pursue Thaw and create public sympathy for him.

And the fault is with the machinery of justice that in one or two instances at least has seemed afraid to deal justly with Thaw.

Far better let the man go in a proper and orderly manner, taking with him the sympathy and the thanks of those who best understood the character and the crimes of Stanford White.

Lock him up again in Matteawan, and you will not settle the question or dispose of it.

The people in New Hampshire, as in Canada, make a hero of Thaw because they do not like Stanford White, and because they do not like the idea that the associates, friends and defenders of that vile degenerate have influence enough to deprive a man of his liberty when the law says that being sane he should be set free.

Dr. Parkhurst Writes on Immortality

Many Hope Death Is End of All, but Deep Thinkers Believe This Is Only the Beginning of a Future and Better Life.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

HOWEVER occupied people may be with the affairs of this life, there are few, if any, who do not sometimes throw their thoughts forward toward a possible life to come. It is safe to say that there is more of this forecasting of another world than has outward expression given to it.

A few are hoping that there is nothing more for them after death, being more than satisfied with what they have had already. Some simply brood over the possibilities of immortality wonderingly. The most, by far the most, are trusting that the few years we pass here are nothing more than the beginning of life, its vestibule, feeling that conditions, as they exist now require something additional in order to their explanations and justification.

It is probable that there is less general belief in immortality than there was fifty years ago. When a boy, as I remember it, a man who expressed doubt in the doctrine was regarded as queer, as a mental and moral defective. Nothing, so far as appears, has in the meantime been discovered to invalidate the doctrine, and the change that has transpired in men's opinions is considerably due to the attitude of the scientists.

Scientists Have Failed to Prove We Are Immortal.

The scientists have not discovered that we are NOT immortal, but have simply failed to discover that we ARE immortal; and there is no reason why they should not have failed, for the mind, the immortal part of us, if there be any immortal part, is not a matter that scientists have any concern with, or any special qualification or equipment for investigating.

A man who knows one thing with considerable thoroughness is liable to imagine that large value therefore attaches to his opinion upon other matters, however distinct they may be from the particular subject upon which he is specially informed.

That states the precise condition of mind of certain investigators who have accomplished distinguished results in their study of matter, and who therefore consider that they are authorities upon questions of mind, spirit and immortality. Which is as unreasoning as for a mathematical genius to claim that because he is an adept in questions of quantity his opinion should therefore carry in problems of art.

What has just been said is stated, only in different words, by one of the most distinguished scientists of our generation, Sir Oliver Lodge, a man of such eminence as to have been elected to the presidency of the British Association, a body which may be defined as the organized scientific intelligence of the British Empire.

Sir Oliver, whose accomplishments in physics and chemistry have won for him such preferment, is sufficiently broad in his appreciations to realize that however far he may have carried his chemical researches, he has not thereby been brought across the frontier of the territory of mind and consciousness; that the principles and methods applicable to the study of matter do not apply to questions of soul and religion, so that the negative attitude which a scientist, as such, may occupy as toward soul, God and immortality has no bearing pro or contra upon the question of the existence of the soul, of God and of immortality.

All of this the president of the British Association has recently stated frankly and developed in detail in his presidential address delivered before that body.

Address Is Practically a Rebuke to His Colleagues.

The address is practically a rebuke to some of his colleagues for failing to realize that mind is not matter, and that so essential is the difference between them that the pursuit of scientific methods of inquiry will not carry them into the region of mind, and that for them to deny the existence of a world above matter, because they have been able to achieve so much in the world that is within matter without discovering in it a soul or a God, is a bare presumption and the exercise of intellectual arrogance.

Such a deliverance from so great an authority is a serious matter, and I wish the readers of this newspaper would give earnest attention to the contents of this article, for it has been written with a view to rebuking and correcting the careless and thoughtless thinking, of which there is so much, even among intelligent people, and that, too, in regard to questions that are of the utmost moment.

It would not be fair to the truth nor to Sir Oliver Lodge to close this article without adding that while he has not arrived at his convictions, regarding things which eye hath not seen, by the pursuit of scientific methods, he is nevertheless, and on other grounds, a firm believer in the great invisible world and in the God who is enthroned in it, as is evidenced by the two subjoined quotations from his superb address:

"It is my function to remind you and myself that our studies do not exhaust the universe, and that if we dogmatize in a negative direction, and say that we can reduce everything to physics and chemistry, we gibbet ourselves as ludicrously narrow pedants, and are falling far short of the richness and fullness of our human birthright.

"How far preferable is the reverent attitude of the Eastern poet:

"'The world with eyes bent upon Thy feet stands in awe with all its silent stars.'

"We are deaf and blind, therefore, to the imminent grandeur around us unless we have insight enough to appreciate the whole, and to recognize in the woven fabric of existence, flowing steadily from the loom in an infinite progress toward perfection, the ever-growing garment of a transcendent God."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Misfortunes

Are You Not Better for Them? If Not, You Have Failed to Learn Life's Lesson in Self-Development.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

YOU who complain bitterly of your troubles and sorrows turn your gaze inward for a time and see what these experiences have done for you.

Are you not stronger in soul, braver in mind, and more self-reliant because of your misfortunes?

Have you not a deeper understanding of human nature, and a larger sympathy for your fellowmen through having known trouble?

If you ask yourself these questions, and if you answer in the negative then rest assured more trouble will be sent you.

Sorrows Will Come Until You Learn Sympathy and Compassion.

Just as the scholar who has not learned his lessons at school is given the same lessons over and over again, so will you be given sorrow after sorrow and trouble after trouble, until you learn the great lesson of sympathy and compassion.

First of all in thinking of your misfortunes, remember you have brought them on yourself. Not in this life, perhaps, but in former lives. We have all lived many lives; and by our thoughts and deeds and desires we have fashioned our bodies and our circumstances.

If in other lives you were wasteful and selfish and improvident and idle, you come into this life poor and without friends or influence.

It is simply your life lesson of self-development given you again to learn. Industry, self-control, economy, are the next lessons.

By patient persistence you will learn them all; and then independence and usefulness and happiness will be yours.

If you did not appreciate love and affection in your last incarnation you will be deprived of these blessings for a time in this life; but if you give freely, even though you do not receive, and if you develop every loving impulse, and ask for no return, and if you refuse to think of your misfortunes, and persist in thinking of your great privilege in being allowed to do for others, then love and affection shall come to you eventually.

Remember the words of the great Master, Christ:

"I came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Of all His sayings, this is one of the greatest and one least quoted by His followers.

How Few of Us Minister as We Might to Others.

We all seem to feel resentment that we are not ministered unto continually.

And how few of us minister as we might to others.

THREE FRIENDS.

Of all the blessings which my life
has known,
I value most, and most praise God for three—
Want, Loneliness and Pain, those comrades true,
Who masqueraded in the garb of foes
For many a year, and filled my heart with dread.
Yet fickle joys, like false, pretentious friends,
Have proved less worthy than this trio. First,
Want taught me labor, led me up
the steep
And toilsome paths to hills of pure delight,
Trod only by the feet that know
fatigue,
And yet press on until the heights appear.
Then Loneliness and hunger of the heart
Sent me upreaching to the realms of space,
'Till all the silences grew eloquent,
And all their loving forces hailed me friend.
Last, Pain taught prayer; placed in my hand the staff
Of close communion with the over-soul,
That I might lean upon it to the end,
And find myself made strong for any strife.
And then these three who had pursued my steps
Like stern, relentless foes, year after year,
Unmasked, and turned their faces
full on me,
And lo! they were divinely beautiful,
For through them shone the lustrous eyes of Love.

:-: The Wail of the Freaks :-:

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

An expression of opinion given after learning that Secretary of State Bryan was going out for two weeks with a tent show, the news being furnished by the press agent.

THE Armless Wonder gnashed his teeth and clenched his feet in rage.
"I'm through with art for good," he yelled, "I'm gonna quit the stage!
I used to headline every bill, and have my name of nights
Spelt out above the theater in big electric lights.
The Yodling Goat, the Thinking Pig, the Juggling Japanee,
And even the Eight-Legged Cow all stood aside for me.
But look at this here note I got—it makes me fairly ill—
'This week the Old Doc's Talking Act will lead you on the bill!'"

"NOW ain't that just the fiercest stuff?" the Fair Circassian cried.
"When I was told my date was killed I nearly like to died.
I've been the hit in every show from Coney to Fort Lee;
Not even the Three-Headed Man had anything on me.
But that is always just the way: You think you're goin' strong,
And spend your money free an' then some new freak comes along.
I never seen the Old Doc work, but he has put me wise
To one best bet in this perfesh: 'It pays to advertise.'"

"I'SPOSE," said the Contortionist, with a despairing sob,
"It's all because the President has gave this guy a job.
Them Socialists has got it right; it's unfair competition
For us poor freaks to play against a Cabinet position.
But still this Doc has got some act. Of course, it has its faults,
But he's a wonder when it comes to throwing somersaults.
And on the stage he's worked on most, when he has got in trouble,
And has to get out good and quick, he always does 'em double."

"CUT out the knocks," the Fat Man said; "choke off the hammer songs,
An' let a guy that's got the goods butt in where he belongs.
When tryin' to be President he couldn't land his stall,
But in this circus-midway game he's got it on us all.
I've seen him give three shows a day an' turn up fresh and bright
To sit in with the treasurer and count the house at night.
If Kipling still was on his job I'll bet the ink he'd fling
In writin' out a song like this that you mutts ought to sing:

"Oh, the Doc! Doc! Doc!
He has chased us off the block,
But we got to give it to him, so let's put our jools in hock;
All he does is stands and hollers,
But he gathers in the dollars.
He's a wiser guy than we are, is the Doc."

THAW TO LOSE EXTRADITION BATTLE

Mayor Attacks Waste in Aldermanic Campaign

SAVES WOMEN ASLEEP IN FIRE

WOODWARD FIGHTS TO WIN CITY BOARD

Issues Summons to Polls, Asking Support in Effort to Cut Down Extravagance.

Mayor James G. Woodward issued a final call to arms to his supporters Monday, urging that they nominate W. A. Hancock, Amos Braselton and C. C. McDonald to the Aldermanic Board in the white primary Tuesday.

"I've got no ticket," he said, "but if the people will elect these men it will be an assurance that the Aldermanic Board will have a majority that will be conservative and that will work in harmony with the administration.

"I am very anxious to see them elected. With the recall we can get the others into the right line, which is to handle the people's business in a businesslike way.

"We would have saved $100,000 if the city's business had been conducted properly during the past year."

A Battle of Words.

The opposing faction is fighting just as vigorously as Mayor Woodward and the men he is supporting. Reports of a stormy word battle between the Mayor and Councilman Claude L. Ashley at a committee meeting in the City Hall the other day illustrates the intensity of the feeling on both sides. Mr. Ashley is one of Mayor Woodward's strongest supporters in Council.

"Amos Braselton will overwhelm Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward," Mayor Woodward is reported to have said.

"It will be a reflection on the Fourth Ward," Councilman Ashley is said to have replied.

"I don't see why you are for Thomson," the Mayor retorted.

What Ashley Replied.

"Mr. Mayor, Mr. Braselton hasn't lived in the Fourth Ward long enough to be called a Fourth Ward citizen," replied Councilman Ashley. "He is not even a registered voter in that ward. That's why I say his election would be a reflection on the ward."

"He'd represent the ward better than it has been represented," continued the Mayor, according to the account of the argument.

"He won't have a chance to represent it at all so far as this election is concerned."

John S. Owens is contesting the nomination of W. A. Hancock for Alderman from the Eighth Ward with a well-organized campaign, and Alderman James E. Warren, of the Third Ward, is confident he will defeat C. C. McDonald for the place he now holds.

Tuesday's Complete Ticket.

Here is the complete ticket to be voted upon Tuesday:

To be voted upon by the whole city:

C. H. Kelley, for Alderman from the Second Ward; James E. Warren and C. C. McDonald, for Alderman from the Third Ward; Albert D. Thomson and Amos Braselton, for Alderman from the Fourth Ward; Jesse Armistead, for Alderman from the Seventh Ward; W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens, for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, and W. Z. Smith, for General Manager of Waterworks.

To be voted upon by wards:

Charles A. Alverson and J. N. Renfroe, for Council from the First Ward; C. D. Knight, for Council from the Second Ward; Orville H. Hall and R. R. Jackson, for Council from the Third Ward; R. E. George and A. W. Farlinger, for Council from the Fourth Ward; Jesse B. Lee and Dr. W. M. Ethridge, for Council from the Fifth Ward; Jesse M. Wood, for Council from the Sixth Ward; S. L. Dallas, for Council from the Seventh Ward; Frank H. Reynolds, for Council from the Eighth Ward; Charles W. Smith, for Council from the Ninth Ward, and Claude C. Mason, for Council from the Tenth Ward.

Panic Follows as Big Steamer Grounds

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The steamer Mohawk, of the Manhattan Navigation Company, bound from New York to Albany with 300 passengers on board, went aground six miles north of here to-day. Charles S. Kelly, of New York, was thrown from his berth and sustained internal injuries which may prove fatal.

A panic followed the accident and in the excitement another passenger donned a life belt and leaped overboard. He was rescued with difficulty.

Agriculture Class At Athens Slumps

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—The registration at the university is about 25 students less than at the same time last year. Nearly the entire shortage is in the one-year agricultural class.

Heretofore but few units and no farming experience was necessary to gain entrance to this department and its roll was swelled considerable, but now either the required units must be shown or a certain amount of farm experience. This is keeping the registration down.

The Pontiff promised his doctors to forego many of his clerical duties.

FIGHT BEGINS FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS

E. E. Cox, of Camilla, First to Announce to Succeed the Late S. A. Roddenbery.

Following the funeral at Thomasville of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, of the Second Georgia District, the fight for the seat in Congress made vacant by his death began Monday.

Colonel E. E. Cox, a lawyer of Camilla, is the first to announce. He has been active in politics for a number of years, and has been mentioned as congressional timber before.

It is certain that others will enter the race in a short time. The special election for the unexpired term will be called at an early date. The election for the full term will take place next year.

W. W. Banks, Mayor of Tifton, is a strong probability, his friends urging him to enter the contest. Mr. Banks has also been active in politics for many years.

Another probability is J. L. Hand, of Pelham, ex-State Senator and a man well qualified in every particular to fill the place. He is one of the richest men in Southwest Georgia.

Roscoe Luke, Mayor of Thomasville, is being urged to enter the race, and has the matter under advisment. He is well known throughout the district. He will probably enter.

Judge J. R. Pottle, of Blakely, judge of the Court of Appeals, is another who may enter the fight. The race he won for the Court of Appeals is an indication of his popularity. He will make a strong candidate if he decides to enter.

Jesse Perry, of Camilla, secretary to Governor Slaton, is another possibility. He has shown his strength in politics for a number of years, and is very popular in the district. He was secretary to the late Congressman James M. Griggs.

H. Y. McIntosh, editor of The Albany Herald, is another strong possibility. He has been urged by his friends for a number of years to make the race for Congress from the Second District, and at one time entered the contest, but withdrew before the election.

The Second District embraces the counties of Thomas, Grady, Decatur, Colquitt, Mitchell, Baker, Miller, Early, Tift, Worth, Dougherty and Calhoun.

Read Evelyn Thaw's Amazing Life Story

Because of the widened interest in the fight of Harry K. Thaw to escape recommitment to the insane asylum at Matteawan, his wife Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has become a figure of international prominence.

Her life story is an amazing document. Doubtless no more enthralling personal narrative has ever been written.

The opening chapters of this story are reprinted in this issue of the Georgian.

The story will be continued in next Sunday's American.

HERO BEARS TWO FROM BLAZING HOUSE

Unknown Rescuer Vanishes After Braving Smoke and Flame to Warn Boarders.

Fifteen persons, many of them women and children, were forced to flee in their night clothes early Monday morning when fire, breaking out in the residence of John W. Dean, No. 107 Piedmont avenue, practically destroyed the building.

A street car man, who was passing along Piedmont avenue, discovered the flames after they had gained considerable headway and aroused the sleeping occupants of the building, probably prevented a loss of life.

Upon seeing the roof of the house a mass of fire, the passerby burst through the front door shouting the alarm. The flames quickly ate down into the framework of the dwelling. The stranger was forced to carry two of the frightened women out of the burning building to save them.

Several fire companies responded to the alarm, Company No. 4 arriving first. Difficulty was experienced by the firemen in entering the house on account of the smoke. Entrance was finally made through a window, and in a remarkably short time the flames were subdued. The fire had gained such headway and burned so rapidly that the house was almost totally destroyed, although the firemen were on the sceen in less than five minutes after the alarm was given.

After seeing that all of the occupants of the house were safe, the unknown man left hurriedly, saying he was afraid of being late at his work.

Horse Guard Owners.

The house is located at the corner of Piedmont and Edgewood avenues, and is the property of the Governor's Horse Guard. John W. Dean has operated a boarding house there for some time. It was her that Mrs. L. R. Glenn, wife of the Atlanta contractor who eloped with Mrs. Lora Pidcock, wife of the Moultrie (Ga.) millionaire, remained while her husband was confined in the county jail after being brought back from Texas, where he was arrested with Mrs. Pidcock.

The fire apparently started in a closet on the second floor of the house, but the cause is unknown. It is a frame house, erected many years ago.

Fifteen persons were asleep in the house at the time of the fire. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sherman and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Humes, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cook, H. C. Fisher, L. N. Randolph and A. F. Bailey. Practically all of the men are railroad employees with the exception of Fisher, who is in the jewelry business.

The horse was insured for $3,000 and it is believed the damage may be held to a little more than $1,000, according to Capitain O. L. Rudisill, commander of the Governor's Horse Guard.

The cavalry company came into possession of the property fifteen years ago, purchasing it from Mrs. G. Loving. The troop used the basement as a storage room for many years and rented out the upper stories for a boarding house. The property has increased greatly in value since purchased by the troop, and an offer of $55,000 was recently refused for it.

MANUEL'S BRIDE SAID TO HAVE TRIED SUICIDE

Princess Augusta Victoria of Hohenzollern, ex-King Manuel's bride, who is seriously ill.

Manuel and bride at their wedding three weeks ago.

Rumor Denied, Although She Is Under Physicians' Care—Poison Plot Also Suspected.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—Mystery surrounding the illness of Princess Victoria of Hohenzollern, the three weeks' bride of former King Manuel of Portugal, was deepened to-day by a telegram from Munich in which it was rumored that she had tried to end her life. This was closely followed by another message containing an emphatic denial. The Princess is still under the care of physicians at Munich.

It was first reported that she was ill of influenza, then came a report that an operation of serious character was necessary; next it was reported foes of Manuel had poisoned his beautiful young bride. Finally came the rumor of attempted suicide.

FRAUD IS LAID TO BIRMINGHAM JEWELERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Joseph Rich, proprietor of a jewelry store in Birmingham, but a resident of this city, was charged with obtaining thousands of dollars worth of diamonds on false pretenses in a petition in bankruptcy filed against him today in the United States District Court.

Rich and his son Abraham, who acts as buyer for the Southern store, bought diamonds on credit from prominent dealers in this city, according to the petition, and instead of shipping them to Birmingham resold the stones to New York dealers at prices 25 per cent less than their real value.

Attorneys for the petitioning creditors say practically every dealer in the Maiden Lane district extended the credit to the firm and a $1,000,000 failure was only averted by the accidental discovery of its illegal dealings.

Judge Charles M. Hough appointed Matthew A. Henkel receiver for the Rich firm and the latter left for Birmingham to take charge of the assets there.

Ball Players Knew Of Rich's Bargains.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 29.—A. V. Abbott, as resident receiver, is in charge of the business of Joseph Rich, of New York, operating here under the name of the Colorado Loan Company, the business being managed by his son, Abraham Rich. The business was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy here and Abbott was placed in charge. Efforts have been made to bring about a settlement of the indebtedness, but so far the creditors have refused to accept the amount offered.

It is said that the diamonds purchased in New York were ostensibly bought for sale to baseball players of the Southern League. That the Birmingham players knew of bargains at the Colorado Loan Company is not denied, but whether or not deals were carried out is not stated. Considerable business was transacted here by the loan company and regular auctions were held.

FELKER TO SEND RICH FUGITIVE TO N. Y.

Friend Says Governor Will Honor Requisition—Case Slated for Highest Courts.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 29.—A man very close to Governor Felker said to-day the New Hampshire Executive undoubtedly would honor the requisition of New York authorities for Harry K. Thaw, the escaped Matteawan fugitive.

Governor Felker, the informant said, after exhaustive study of all statutes and precedents having any possible bearing on the subject, would concede the contention of William Travers Jerome that the extradition papers, being in regular form, should be honored irrespective of other aspects of the case.

Both Sides Plan Appeal.

This mean that Harry Thaw's fight for liberty, which already has been fought in the courst of New York, New Hampshire and Canada, will now go to the United Sattes courts. In anticipation of possible defeat in the extradition and New Hampshire court proceedings, Harry Thaw's counsel had the foresight to sue out a writ of habeas corpus in the United States courts.

The hearing, which was delayed at the request of Thaw's counsel, now will proceed, and since both sides have expressed their intention to appeal in the event of defeat, it is almost assured that the famous case will be fought out through the highest courts in the United States.

HEARST PAPERS PLAN TO FOOT UP AMERICA'S TRADE BALANCE SHEET

Estimates of What We Pay Annually to Foreigners

NO RECORDS have ever been compiled of what America pays annually to foreigners. The Hearst papers are to try to collect first-hand data covering the whole ground. Discrepancies between current estimates are most glaring—showing the need for the concrete information which it is planned to gather.

I have received estimates from the two leading foreign exchange bankers in the country—Vice President Gardin, of the National City Bank, and Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company. I append my own guess:

	John E. Gardin	Max May	B. C. Forbes
Spent by tourists	$500,000,000	$200,000,000	$225,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad	400,000,000	100,000,000	100,000,000
Interest and dividends on securities held abroad	500,000,000	50,000,000	100,000,000
Freights to foreign steamship companies	300,000,000	150,000,000	150,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	300,000,000	150,000,000	300,000,000
Insurance and miscellaneous			25,000,000
Sent to Canada			50,000,000
Totals	$2,000,000,000	$650,000,000	$950,000,000

As an offset must be placed the rapidly increasing sums spent by foreign visitors to America and also the money brought over by immigrants.

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The United States is getting deeper into the debt of Europeans every year notwithstanding that our excess of merchandise exports over imports has totaled $8,350,000,000 during the last twenty years.

The Hearst papers propose, if given proper co-operation, to make up America's international balance sheet, a task never before attempted.

One envelope from J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Speyer & Co., or other important banking house may contain "exports" of greater value than the whole cargo of the largest trans-Atlantic liner.

Our "invisible" payments to foreigners have been computed at all sorts of figures—from $500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 annually.

No trustworthy records have ever been compiled.

The Hearst papers hope to remedy this.

How much do American tourists spend abroad every year?

Vice President Gardin, head of the National City Bank's foreign exchange department and a recognized authority, puts the amount at $500,000,000.

Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company, who handles an enormous mass of exchange and is looked upon as a wizard at the business, estimates the sum at $200,000,000.

My guess would be from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Take the item, "Interest and dividends on securities held abroad." Mr. Gardin allows the colossal amount of $500,000,000 annually, whereas Mr. May cuts this down to $50,000,000!

When experts differ so, surely there is need for enlightenment on a subject of such importance.

The Hearst papers invite every steamship company doing business with the United States to give, confidentially, the amount it collects for foreign and passenger service.

Insurance companies are being asked to compute how much Americans pay foreigners for insurance.

Express companies issue an enormous number of travelers' checks and other credits for use by Americans abroad, and a record of these, it is hoped, will be furnished.

Banks, banking firms and trust companies that do a foreign business will be requested to aid the work by supplying in strict confidence, of course, the amount sent abroad by them for various purposes germane to this investigation.

The Government issues exhaustive statistics covering our foreign trade in merchandise and bullion, but it throws no light on the huge payments made to foreign shipping companies on the amount spent by tourists, and by American residents abroad, on our annual bill for dividends and interest to oversea holders of our securities, or on the sum remitted by foreigners.

Did America not have to meet so serious a drain, she would, by her handsome balance of merchandise exports, gradually reduce her billions of indebtedness to European nations.

One thought forcibly impressed upon the mind by a consideration of our international balance-sheet is that it behooves our manufacturers to cast their coats and fight for a larger share of the world's custom so as to make us more self-supporting.

With our constant and rapid growth in population, it is not expected that our agricultural exports will expand. The general belief is that they will dwindle out of sight—a view I can not share, for once our farmers are given proper credit facilities and rise to the height of their possibilities, they will, I believe, astonish the world.

Meanwhile, the new tariff should help many lines of industry to compete more effectively in foreign markets, a step that will be necessary to compensate for the loss of domestic business that the lower tariff charges will entail.

The following table shows the total value of our merchandise imports and exports for the last twenty years, along with the annual balance in merchandise and also in gold and silver shipments. It should be noted that the United States has produced about $700,000,000 worth of silver and $1,500,000,000 worth of gold during the twenty years under review.

China Buys Less U. S. Cotton by $24,304,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A decrease of $24,304,000 in the value of American cotton goods sold in China in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1913, compared with the goods sold in 1906, which led the United States to undertake an investigation, has resulted in the discovery that the Chinese are making so much of their own cloth that his nation will have to find some substitute for cotton, if it wishes to stimulate a new trade. There are many cotton mills in Japan, which used $25,000,000 worth of American cotton last year. These facts are contained in a statement issued today by the Department of Commerce.

Nation. The local union leaders feel that the sympathizers of the prohibition movement will rally in this cause.

Congressman Buried At Thomasville.

THOMASVILLE, Sept. 29.—More than 1,500 friends attended the funeral of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. It was the largest funeral ever conducted in Thomasville. As a token of respect for the dead statesman, no services were held in any church in the city. On account of the expressed desire of the dead Congressman, the funeral services were held at his home on Hansell street.

The Congressional delegation from Washington arrived at 9:15 o'clock, being met by a special committee appointed by Mayor Luke. After breakfast at a hotel the delegation went to the residence of their late colleague, where they remained until after the funeral services, and then accompanied the body to the cemetery.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. W. Rushin, of Boston, Ga., a friend of Mr. Roddenbery, who paid a short but touching tribute to the dead statesman. Flowers were massed around the casket and about the room. A scene that touched the hearts of those present was when the friends from the rural districts, many of whom had ridden or driven several miles to be present and take a last look at their leader, entered the room and passed in file before the casket.

When the funeral services were over the cortege, more than a mile long, moved to Laurel Hill Cemetery for interment.

Mrs. Roddenbery and two daughters leave to-day for Sylvester, where they will visit Mrs. Gardner Nottingham for a time. John and Yates Roddenbery, sons, return to Athens and Danville, Va., where they are in school.

If you happened to be a light opera singer who every now and then had to go down to the shops and drop some $20,000 or so for gowns and hats and shoes and things, and your allimony of $6,000 a year began to arrive irregularly, what would you do?

Go after the allimony, says Mrs. Albert Gallatin Wheeler, who is precisely in the condition stated in the first paragraph.

Mrs. Wheeler, who is known on the stage as Claudia Carlstedt, is the wife of the son of the man who helped Charles T. Yerkes build the tu'penny tube in London. Wheeler is a millionaire in his own right, and after he and the actress married things went as they sometimes do with millionaires and actresses who wed—that is to say things didn't go well, and they separated.

Sails for Allmony.

Mrs. Wheeler, according to dispatches from London, where she is at the present time, has just run into one of those times when it becomes necessary to furbish up her wardrobe and the furbishing has cost her the accustomed $20,000. So she is a little short of pin money, and to-day she determined to come back to New York to hunt up her husband and ask him to pay some of the allimony which, she declares, he has not been as prompt with as he might be.

In fact, Mrs. Wheeler says she needs more than $6,000 a year. Indeed, she says she once received more than that sum and believes she should receive it again, as well as the difference between what she once received and the $6,000 for as long as she has not been receiving that difference—back allimony, as it is called.

Mrs. Wheeler, merely as the sweet singer Claudia Carlstedt, met Mr. Wheeler in 1898, and it was the old tale of the millionaire and the star. The marriage took place not long after the meeting, and there was abundant happiness for several years.

But Mrs. Wheeler had a hankering still for the life behind the footlights, and this constituted a bone of contention between her and her husband.

Returns to Stage.

Mrs. Wheeler insisted upon a return to stage life, and then the couple parted. But Mrs. Wheeler was not quite through with her erstwhile husband, for she appealed to the courts for maintenance. She asked for $20,000 a year, but the courts awarded her half that sum. Perforce content, she wended her way to London, but when the suit was about to be heard the allmony was reduced to $6,000.

Mr. Wheeler cogitated and the result of his cogitations was the settlement of a sum of money presumably large enough to satisfy Mrs. Wheeler. Mrs. Wheeler says that it was presumably large enough of a settlement for her if it were regularly paid, for she says her husband is several months behind in his payments.

The House rates have been reduced on oxalic acids, crude, chickle, linseed oil, chlorate of potash and perfumed and medicinal soaps.

The ratses have been increased over those provided by the House on gallic acid, pyrogallic acid, tannic acid, celluloid, alizarin assistants, lithopone and white sulphide of zinc.

Extracts and decoctions of nut galls, Persian berries and Sumach placed on the free list by the House have been restored to the dutiable list at a rate of three-eighths of 1 cent per pound.

The Senate receded from its amendments increasing the rates of calomel and ultra marine blue and wash blue.

The House rates have been reduced on lenses, surveying instruments, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses, and increased on strips of glass for lenses and gauges, opera and field glasses.

A new classification has been made for unmanufactured mica and a rate of 4 cents per pound placed on all valued at not more than 15 cents per pound, and 25 per cent on that valued at more than 15 cents. This results in an increase over the House rate of 30 per cent on the cheap class of mica costing more than 14 cents and a reduction of all that is valued at more than 15 cents per pound.

The Senate receded from its increased rates on stoneware and crucible and plate glass, more than three-eighths of an inch thick. The House classification for pottery, earthenware and chinaware is retained.

Schedule C, Metals and Manufactures of Metals—Iron in pigs, iron kentledge, spiegeleisen, ferro-manganese, scrap iron and steel, iron in slabs, blooms, loops and other forms less finished and iron in bars and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, steel ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks and billets made by the Bessemer or similar processes and not containing alloys; engraved steel plates for printing bonds and other securities, ingots for railway wheels and antimony ores have been placed upon the free list.

The Senate receded from its amendments decreasing the rates on wire ropes and increasing the rates on woven wire cloth. The House rate on steel ingots, billets and bars and other forms of steel made by the crucible, electric or comentation process or containing alloys, has been retained. Also on steel wool, grit, shot and sand made from iron or steel.

A new classification has been made for automobiles valued at $2,000 or less, and a rate of 30 per cent fixed in lieu of the House rate of 45 per cent.

Schedule D, woods and manufactures of. No change in these materials have been made in the schedule. The thin wood comprising the tops and bottoms and sides of fruit boxes exported as shooks and returned filled with fruit are transferred to the free list in lieu of the House rate of 7 1-2 per cent.

The Sugar Question.

Schedule E, sugar, molasses and manufactures of. The only change of importance in Schedule E is that postponing the time of the taking effect of the rate provided by the House on sugar and molasses and the abolition of the Dutch standard immediately. This will result in a reduction of rates in sugar above 16 Dutch standard, which now has a differential of 14 1-2 cents per pound on sugar testing 98 degrees, and an addition of 3 1-2 cents per 100 pounds for each degree less than 98 degrees.

Schedule F, Tobacco and Manufactures Of—No changes were made in this schedule.

Schedule G, Agricultural Products and Provisions—Cattle, sheep and other domestic animals, suitable for use as food, wheat and wheat products and eggs have been transferred to the free list. France Is Favorite In Flying Contest

RHEIMS, FRANCE, Sept. 29.—So positive were the followers of flying that France would win the international aviation trophy on Betheny Field this afternoon that it was impossible to wager any money on the three French entrants except at prohibitive odds.

The three French contestants in the big race were Pierre Jules Vedrines, M. Prevost and M. Gilbert. Each of the machines used by the Frenchmen was 160 horsepower in strength with the wings reinforced against the concussions of the motor.

CORONER DONEHOO WEDDED SECRETLY

Bridegroom No Longer Able to Conceal Fact of Marriage to Miss Alverta Benson.

Coroner Paul Donehoo has found it impossible to keep secret his wedding of a week ago. The news of it just naturally bubbled from the lips of the happy husband, who let the cat out of the bag two weeks before he intended to.

Mr. Donehoo's wife was Miss Alverta Benson. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Arbuckle, in Decatur, Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Park Street Methodist Church, performing the ceremony.

That all Atlanta will be interested in the wedding of its noted blind Coroner goes without saying. A man of unusual personality, Coroner Donehoo has made friends by the thousands. Probably no man is better acquainted with the topography of Fulton County than Mr. Donehoo, who would never think of asking all to go to any part of it.

The bride has resided in Atlanta two years, coming from Gamber, Md., though her original home is in East Berlin, Pa. The romance began shortly after she came to Atlanta, when Mr. Donehoo met her in the office of Dr. Clarence Johnson, the noted specialist, with whom Miss Benson was connected as office nurse.

They wanted to keep the news of their wedding secret for two weeks longer, but the Coroner was quite so happy he could not contain it. Mr. and Mrs. Donehoo are at home at No. 62 Oak street.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Ex-President Taft has successfully urged Secretary McAdoo to give New Haven, Conn., his adopted home, a marble postoffice.

When told he appeared in splendid health, the former President laughed, and said:

NEW CASH PRIZE OFFER IN WANT AD CONTEST

Little Effort Will Put Live Candidate in Fine Position—Lead Changes Almost Daily.

In again, out again, Finnegan.

To-day one contestant is ahead and to-morrow another, in The American and Georgian great Want Ad Voting Contest. No one knows who will win the $1,000 in gold, the touring car or any of the other handsome prizes, until the last day of the race.

One thing is certain—the prizes are going to be won. The winners will be the hardest workers. To use the homely saying, it will be the "insistent, consistent and persistent pluggers that will get there." They will reap in the Bag of Gold, and ride in the handsome touring car, and carry off the other splendid prizes.

New Cash Offer.

Are YOU an insistent, consistent and persistent plugger? Just think of that double trip to California with all your expenses paid by The Georgian from the time you start until your return! YOU GET IT FREE.

For the next few days The Georgian will give the energetic workers additional cash prizes for their extra efforts put forth in the contest. We will give the organizations $100 and $50, respectively, for the best work done before October 15.

There are three cash prizes offered to the individual candidates. To the candidate selling the largest number of coupon books before that date will be given $50 in gold; to the candidate selling second largest number of books will be given $25, and to the candidate selling third largest number of books will be given $10.

Only the business turned in to the contest office since last Monday will be counted on this offer.

Contest Ginger.

If some of the candidates who seem to think their chances are small could only know the little earnest effort it would take to put them in the lead of their most dreaded rival on this offer, we are sure they would surprise themselves by the amount of work they accomplished.

Work thus done is never regretted. It would certainly humiliate you should the final vote show that you had allowed yourself to be beaten when you could easily have won a prize.

Keep your mind on your own business and don't mind the rumors of what someone else has done. The count of others will not get you anything.

The work you do to-day may win the touring car or the $1,000 in gold.

Make up your mind to at least win that $50 October 15. YOU CAN.

Look like a winner October 15 and you are likely to be a winner of the best November 15.

Very few races are won on the home stretch unless the rest of the race has been consistently run.

Advertisers are waiting for the energetic workers to supply them with the coupons with which to pay their bills. "First there, first served."

Mrs. Marshall Opposes Extremes in Styles

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"Unless women correct their present form of dress they can not sensibly ask for the ballot," said Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President. "I think the styles are being carried to the extreme and the women appear to have lost their sense of propriety."

DON'T TAKE THE WRONG MEDICINE

If Your Liver Gets Lazy You Need a Liver Tonic, Not Merely a Laxative for the Bowels.

Many people take a simple laxative when their liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at home and lose a day from your business.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tone. Dodson's Liver Tone must be all they claim for it because they guarantee it to take the place of dangerous calomel and agree to hand back the money with a smile to any person who tries Dodson's Liver Tone and is not satisfied with the relief it gives.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a harmless vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation, biliousness, sour stomach, and the other troubles that come from a torpid liver.

All druggists give it their personal guarantee and if you will ask about this guarantee you will protect yourself against imitations that are not guaranteed. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents.—Adv.

OPEN-TOWN MEN DENOUNCED BY PREACHERS

Dr. Holderby Would Depose "Rotten" Officeholders—McConnell Says Atlanta Will Stay Clean.

Arraignment of the "open-town crowd" which would put in effect a more "liberal" interpretation of the law was indulged in Sunday by Atlanta ministers in celebration of the anniversary of the "cleaning up" of the city.

With few exceptions the pastors touched on local civic conditions, on the recent charter election, and, in one case, the election of Mayor Woodward more than ten months ago. In every instance the present conditions brought about through Chief Beavers and the Men and Religion Forward Movement were extolled.

Lincoln McConnell, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, declared the people of Atlanta, three-fourths of whom are good, would never allow a return to the old conditions. The only big mistake Atlanta ever had made and the only one she perhaps ever would make, he declared, was the election a little over ten months ago (which was about the time James Woodward became Mayor).

Dividing the "Crowd."

Dr. McConnell divided the "crowd" which wants to return to old conditions in three classes, as follows: The poor woman, for whom, he said, he had only pity; the men who want an easy access to sin, and the "dirty, lowdown devils" who make rents under vice conditions. For these, he declared, he had the utmost contempt.

"There is no danger of Atlanta ever turning back to old conditions," declared Dr. McConnell, "for three-fourths of Atlanta's people are good. The present agitation is but the howling of the noisy crowd who want to live off of the profits of vice. They are as the mangy coyotes who appear to be wolves in the night. There is no danger."

In line with Dr. McConnell's remarks, Dr. Caleb Ridley, speaking at the Central Baptist Church, declared Satan certainly would despise Chief Beavers; make fun of the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement; swear that John Eagan was interested in questionable houses, and that Marion Jackson was Mary Ann. The devil, he declared also, would certainly favor Atlanta's near-beer business and would fight every suggestion to outlaw it.

Going further than either Dr. Ridley or Dr. McConnell, Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of the Moore Memorial Presbyterian Church, declared himself in favor of the "recall of the whole gang of officeholders."

"Never," declared Dr. Holderby, "has there been more political corruption and moral rottenness among the godless and 'open-town' crowd than there now is in Atlanta, and one serious cause for it is that the church in Atlanta is not right with God. The church as well as politics needs cleaning up, and when the church gets a cleaning up, and right with God, there will be no trouble in cleaning up the city."

Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in the course of a sermon on the topic, "Separated for Service," at the Central Presbyterian Church, prophesied that the present day would go down in history as the missionary century of all ages. The problem of the world, he said, is not commercial nor political, but the building of character.

Other ministers who spoke to large audiences Sunday night were the Rev. Fred A. Line, who was installed as pastor of the First Universalist Church Sunday morning, and the Rev. Robert Ivey, who became the pastor of the Georgia Avenue Presbyterian Church Sunday.

Randolph Churchill, LL.D., of the famous Churchill family of England, spoke Sunday night at the Big Bethel negro church. Our greatest problem, the speaker declared, is to bring into this life the love of God which will solve any problem.

Mr. Churchill is visiting the South to write his impressions for The London Daily News and The London Guardian. He will sail for England in November.

Edison Says People Eat Too Much Beef

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Thomas A. Edison believes the currency measure should be supervised by capable bankers and there should be four centers—at New York, Chicago, the South and Far West.

He said he would take no more vacations without work, as "vacationites" had caused his illness, and he would see that it did not happen again.

He declared Americans were eating twice too much beef for their own good.

Tango Teacher Slain And Thrown on Rails

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—A warrant was taken out to-day for Everett Rexroat, son of a wealthy Macomb (Ill.) farmer, charging him with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a teacher of the tango and other dances in Chicago. She was killed and her body was thrown on the tracks of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad near Wayne, Ill., last Friday night.

While the warrant for Rexroat was being held up the police of Wheaton admitted they were searching for a Wheaton man who disappeared Saturday.

U. S. Saves Money by Doing Its Own Work

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Secretary of the Navy announces a large saving in the expense of the new battleship No. 39 had been made by giving the work of constructing bronze bolts for that ship to the New York Navy Yard instead of the Steel Trust.

It amounts to about $300 a ton.

Blackbirder's Crew Run Down at Last; Girl Pet of Pirates

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HONOLULU, Sept. 29.—The chase for the "blackbirders," a pirate crew that has been terrorizing the islands of the South Seas, has ended, according to a wireless message received here to-day from Captain Tapham, of the revenue cutter Keokuk. Every man of the pirate band was captured, Captain Tapham said, after a hard fight. The prisoners will be sent to San Francisco, where the revenue cutter's captain will recommend that every one be hanged.

Among the pirates, Captain Tapham found a beautiful young Spanish girl, Estella D'Ortez, who is adored by the pirates as their most precious treasure. She has been among the pirates for ten years, and was 5 years old when she fell into their hands.

The chief of the pirates confessed that his band sunk her father's boat and saved only the beautiful child.

Garros Says He Can Fly Across Atlantic

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Roland G. Garros, who made an aeroplane flight across the Mediterranean, declares a flight across the Atlantic Ocean is possible.

His plan would be to divide the journey into three stages—from England to Iceland, from Iceland to Newfoundland, from Newfoundland to the United States.

Two of these stages would be shorter than his France to Tunis flight, and the third very little longer.

CHILD-REARING COST DOUBLED IN 10 YEARS

Left to right, Carrie Cantrell, Mary Lee Jones and Eloris Cowan, orphans' home tots. The sizes of these children represent the jumps in the cost of rearing youngsters in last ten years.

Head of Decatur Orphans' Home Gives Figures and Explains Situation.

The cost of rearing children in Atlanta has increased 100 per cent in the last ten years, according to the Rev. J. M. Hawkins, superintendent of the Decatur Orphans' Home. Mr. Hawkins based his statement on a comparison of the average cost of the support of the children in the home ten years ago, as shown by the records of the institution, with the present cost.

"Ten years ago," said Mr. Hawkins, "five dollars a month, or $60 a year, was adequate to support one of 'my' children; to-day it requires just twice that much, $120.

"These figures include all expenses incident to the support of the child—food, clothing and education—and incidentally many of our larger girls and boys are in college, their expenses being paid by the home.

Better Standard of Living.

"This enormous increase is due not only to the increased cost of all the necessities of life, but also to the increased standard of living. To-day we regard as indispensable many conveniences, such as water, sewerage, electric lights, telephones, and so forth, which ten years ago we did without."

Mr. Hawkins said also that it costs more to bring up and educate a girl than it does to rear a boy, and that it pays better dividends. A greater percentage of the girls "turn out well" than of the boys, although the number of boys who are successful is by no means small.

There are at present 230 children in the home from all parts of Georgia, the institution having taken care of over 2,000 children in the last ten years.

Many Supported by Classes.

In the figures given, Mr. Hawkins includes the pro rata cost of providing a home for the children, and keeping up the institution, which should properly be charged against the child if the actual cost of shelter is considered.

Many of the children in the home are "adopted" by Sunday school classes, remaining in the home and being supported by contributions of the class, and in every case the amount necessary for the support of the child reaches $120.

These figures show that the cost of rearing children in Atlanta has increased just twice as fast as in New York, although even now the cost in Atlanta is some 36 per cent less than in New York, and 15 per cent lower than in Chicago.

Cost in Other Cities.

Solomon Lowenstein, superintendent of the Hebrew Orphans' Home in New York City, says it costs about $150 a year apiece to raise his children, fully 50 per cent higher than the cost ten years ago. Mr. Lowenstein has 1,200 children in his institution.

One Chicago authority sets the annual cost at $140 a child, and asserts that he finds the increase has been 40 per cent in the last year.

The Chicago Nursery and Half Orphan Asylum has been in operation since 1860. Its records show that from 1874 to 1883 the annual cost of rearing a child in the institution was $70.98. From 1884 to 1893 the cost had grown to $88.60. From 1894 to 1903 the figures swelled to $101.45.

Bull Moose Leader Defies Old Parties

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"The Bull Moose party is far from dead—in fact, it is very much alive and will be found kicking strenuously when the proper time comes."

Fresh from a conference of the Progressive party leaders in New York, Representative Hinebaugh, of Illinois, breathed this defiance to Republicans and Democrats. According to Hinebaugh's estimate the Progressives will poll at least two and a half million votes.

WOMAN HELD AS $30,000 THEFT IS PROBED

New York Officers Arrest Wilmington, N. C., Matron Accused of Stealing Friend's Fortune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Elizabeth Van Nichols, a leader in Wilmington (N. C.) society, was arrested at the Hotel Endicott charged with embezzling $30,000 from her lifelong friend, Mrs. Helen P. Lemassena, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Nichols, who is a tall, well-dressed woman of striking appearance, was dumfounded when placed under arrest. She requested to be allowed to remain at the hotel under guard until the matter was cleared up, but she was taken to the station house.

The arrest was made at the instigation of Mrs. Lemassena's son, John P. Lemassena, who has followed Mrs. Nichols through seven States during the past six months. He told the police that his mother had intrusted Mrs. Nichols with $30,000 to invest and that shortly after this Mrs. Nichols disappeared from Wilmington.

Sheriff Cowan was notified from New York of the arrest of Mrs. Nichols, and it was indicated in the telegram that she would refuse to return to North Carolina without extradition papers. She is being held pending the necessary papers and arrival of an officer from this county.

Mrs. Nichols is an elderly woman, remarkably well preserved, of handsome appearance and charming personality. She moved in exclusive social circles in Wilmington and entertained lavishly. She was widely known and was prominent in several charitable organizations.

There are three separate indictments against the woman, in the aggregate charging the embezzlement of $15,000. Civil suit also has been started, and the complaint in this alleges embezzlement of $27,000. The money, it is alleged, was in possession of Mrs. Nichols, to be invested in stocks and bonds for Mrs. Lemassena, who had been her close friend and who had great confidence in Mrs. Nichols' ability as a financier. Certain amounts were sent to Mrs. Lemassena at stated intervals, it is said, supposed to represent interest on investments. The indictment and arrest of Mrs. Nichols has caused a big sensation here and elsewhere.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Traditional eggs and bacon breakfast is assailed by The London Lancet, the foremost medical journal in England, which discusses the advisability of going without breakfast altogether.

"After a night's sleep," it says, "bodily strength, both nervous and muscular, is at its height, and work can be carried on without food."

A light breakfast of coffee and rolls is advised for the brainworker though for the manual laborer, the breakfastless plan is unsuitable.

Stewart Richardson gave a number of dances which included one representing the awakening of the world at the break of dawn. In this the dancer was barefooted and clothed only in flimsy veils to represent the morning mist and as the dance progressed several of the veils were dispensed with.

Mlle. Polaire included an Apache dance in her portion of the program while Gertrude Hoffman gave her new review.

BECKER IN DEATH CELL TRIES TO AID SULZER

Condemned Slayer Said to Have Prepared Evidence Dooming Political Existence of Many.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Sing Sing's ghastly death house to-day contributed an amazing chapter to the story of the impeachment of Governor William Sulzer, in which it appears that Lieutenant Charles Becker has prepared evidence striking at the political life if not at the personal freedom of a dozen men high in the official life of the State. This story, alleged to be backed by such proof as a shrewd and resourceful detective might produce, has been offered by Becker in return for his life.

This is the story:

At the beginning of the fight upon the Governor, emissaries were sent to Becker at Sing Sing for the purpose of getting from him any facts he might have concerning the connection between politics and crime in the city of New York. But Becker demanded that before one line of his evidence went to expectant channels, a pardon should be signed which would leave him absolutely free from any chance of punishment growing out of the murder of Herman Rosenthal in front of the Hotel Metropole on July 16, 1912.

In the meantime the power of Governor Sulzer to pardon anybody had vanished. Those men who were named in the Becker "confession" were apprised of the fact. They set to work all of the wheels under their command to prevent the production of the statement.

But its general character is known to too many men to permit the fact of its existence to escape the public. Becker has been assured, so far as anyone knows, without any authority from any person in Albany who is or may be in a position to make good the assurance, that he will be kindly treated in the event that Governor Sulzer is impeached and his story remains among the things untold.

The High Court of Impeachment to-day swung into a week that promises to see the close of the testimony for the prosecution. Attorneys for the board of managers said at the beginning of the day that they did not think it possible that their case would consume more than this week. At the outset of the day they were in doubt as to what witnesses they would call when the court resumed its session at 2 o'clock.

She took part in a family reunion held in her honor, ate a turkey dinner, scolded her 68-year-old son for smoking and not going to bed at 9 o'clock, and sang a solo.

IRISH WAR CLOUD STIRS BRITISH LEADERS

Conference of Government Heads On in Effort to Unite Home Rulers and Ulsterites.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

GLASGOW, Sept. 29.—A historic conference of far-reaching political effect began to-day among members of the British Government at Brodick Castle, on the Isle of Arran, in the Firth of Clyde.

Those present were Percy Illingsworth, owner of the castle and chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons; Premier Asquith and David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer. First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill is expected to join the party to-night.

The question under discussion is home rule for Ireland and the attitude of Ulster province, which threatens to reject home rule if it is granted and set up an independent government.

How civil war can be averted in Ireland over home rule is the biggest question now confronting the Government.

The suggestion seriously considered is the appointment of a royal commission, some of the members to be chosen by Parliament and others by King George, to arbitrate the difference between the north and south of Ireland.

The Protestants in the north refuse to accept home rule, which has been brought about through the activities of the British Nationalists, the great majority of whom are Catholics. Thus the religious question permeates the heart of the differences.

The Ulster Presbyterians declare a Dublin parliament would be a Catholic government, and they refuse to be ruled by such. On the other hand, the Catholics in Ulster will rebel against a Protestant government in that district.

The central Government is trying to reach a common ground upon which both sides can be united.

The count and Miss Schweizer were married January 16, 1902.

ATLANTA DAY AT KNOXVILLE WILL BE BIG EVENT

Colonel Lowry Helps Appalachian Exposition Prepare for Large Delegation of Boosters.

Arrangements are being made for a large crowd of Atlantans to go to Knoxville October 7, which will be Atlanta Day at the Appalachian Exposition.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee, has just returned from Knoxville, where he made preparations for entertaining a large delegation of Atlantans. He praises the exposition highly.

"The exposition is a most wonderful one," said he. "It is attracting a large number of visitors and indications are that we will take an unusually large number of Atlantans there. The exposition shows the resources of the Appalachian range and the agricultural products of the Southern States.

"Knoxville has been looking forward to Atlanta Day at the exposition and is planning to receive us with true Knoxville hospitality. I think every member of the Chamber of Commerce should make the trip to Knoxville if possible. We have always been supported in everything we went after by Knoxville and we should show our appreciation by sending a large delegation to the exposition."

A large number of Chamber of Commerce members have already signified their intention of making the trip, and it is quite possible that a special train will be necessary to handle the crowd. In addition to the features of the exposition, the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce has planned a special celebration in honor of the Atlanta visitors.

TROOPS STOP RACE RIOT; 10 ARE DEAD

Mississippi Sheriff and Two Other White Men Slain—Negroes Run Amuck.

HARRISTON, MISS., Sept. 29.—With State troops camped in the streets, this town was quiet to-day after being stirred by the worst race riot in its history. Ten persons were dead, two of them mulatto boys, brothers, who were lynched after they had felled 28 persons.

The boys, crazed by drugs, ran amuck, shooting wildly as they ran through the negro quarter. The arrival of the militiamen prevented further bloodshed in an open clash between whites and negroes.

The list of dead included Sheriff G. R. Hammett, of Jefferson County; Frank Kienstly, former constable, and Claude Freeman.

Among the seriously wounded by bullets during the time the negroes were running wild and the chase for them were former Sheriff Orrin Gillis, E. B. Appleby, a railroad conductor, and William Kienstly, son of the former constable who was killed.

Business was resumed to-day, and the presence of the soldiers was the only indication that there had been any unusual occurrences. No further trouble was feared.

The most rapid gains have been with Argentina and Brazil.

Gen. Edward Moale, Civil War Hero, Dies

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Brigadier General Edward Moale, aged 73, died of pneumonia at the Hotel Stewart, where he has been since his retirement from the army. He was one of the leading military men of the United States.

It was his unique distinction to have been one of two men who heard the first gun of the Civil War fired at Fort Sumter and the last one fired at Appomattox.

NEGRO IS SHOT BY POLICE IN FIGHT

Empties Revolver at Officers Before Capture—Clubbed Into Submission After Falling.

J. T. Jackson, the young negro who gave Police Officers Ford and Knight a hand-to-hand fight on Decatur street Sunday night, feigned insanity in his cell at the police station Monday, according to the police.

Seldom have the Atlanta police encountered a more daring and vicious criminal than Jackson when they began pursuit of him in response to a woman's screams. They were within half a block of Decatur street and Piedmont avenue when sounds of distress reached them.

They caught glimpses of a fleeing shadow and swiftly followed it, the chase leading down under the Washington street viaduct. There, from behind a pillar of the big bridge, the negro opened fire with a revolver on the officers. Officer Ford returned the shots. His pistol chambers empty, the fugitive fled again, but was overtaken.

A hand-to-hand encounter followed. Not until he was beaten almost to unconsciousness did the negro surrender.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The newspapers throughout the State are commenting nowadays rather caustically upon the wretched and uninhabitable condition of the Governor's Mansion in Atlanta.

Not only is it generally agreed that the ramshackle old barn is altogether out of date, antiquated, and insanely situated for the purpose it serves, but besides that it actually is falling down in spots!

Long ago the plastering overhead in one of the bedrooms fell down with a dull and sickening thud, and a short time before that Governor Brown, only by nimbleness of foot and quickness of eye, succeeded in jumping from under a similar precipitation of overhead ceiling in another room.

Just when the dining room may take a tumble to itself no prophet or son of a prophet will say, although the hope is universal, of course, that when it does fall, it will not bury the Executive or Mrs. Slaton beneath the wreck!

The Executive Mansion in Atlanta is a joke—and not a pretty or fascinating joke, at that!

If a Governor were not sentenced to live in it, so to speak, few of them likely would care to do so.

To be sure, its historic and honorable associations are pleasant and inspiring things to think upon—if only one could sit in the Mansion and think upon them without being simultaneously in mortal terror that something heavy, plastery and not at all nice might fall upon him at any moment and mangle him beyond recognition!

The Executive Mansion would make a first-rate fourth-rate boarding house—maybe!

It certainly isn't much of a place for a Governor of Georgia to reside!

Anent the Mansion, The Oglethorpe Echo says:

> A fortunate absence probably kept Governor and Mrs. Slaton from being injured by falling plastering in the Governor's Mansion a few days since. It's a shame that as great a State as Georgia should not have a home in which her Chief Executive could at least reside in safety.
>
> And there are others that say the same thing—many of them!

The death of Representative Roddenbery has brought forth numerous tentative candidates for his place in Congress.

Among them are H. M. McIntosh, of Albany; Judge Frank Park, of Sylvester; W. W. Banks, of Tifton; Roscoe Luke and Judge H. W. Hopkins, of Thomasville; W. A. Covington and W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; John P. Knight, of Nashville; John Donalson, of Bainbridge, and Jesse Perry, of Camilla.

And there likely will be more mentioned hereafter, as the game yet is young!

The recent Mayoralty election in Macon split the Legislative delegations, present and past, wide open.

Wallace Miller, one of the candidates for Mayor, is a member of the House, and he was bitterly opposed by Minter Wimberly, another member.

Senator McNeil favored and worked for Miller, while Roland Ellis, a former Senator, favored and worked for Smith. Walter Defore, a member of the last House, was with the Miller crowd, while Ben Fowler—where was Ben in that scrap, anyway?

When the Georgia Prison Commission was first made an advisory board of pardons, its recommendations generally were followed rather regularly. Once or twice, perhaps three or four times, Governor Atkinson, Governor Terrell and other Executives turned down the recommendations of the Prison Commission, sitting as a board of pardons, but not often. The rule was to accept the findings of the Commission as approximating the correct adjustment of the particular problem submitted, and to let it go at that!

It was not until "Little Joe" Brown became Governor that the recommendations of the Commission began to be looked upon as little more than suggestive and mildly advisory to the Executive. And even Governor Brown began by following the line of action mapped out by the Commission!

Nowadays, however, a recommendation from the Prison Commission is a step in the direction the petitioner desires—presuming it to be favorable—but nothing more. Governors have come to turn down Prison Commission awards as one of the easiest things they know!

Only Saturday, for instance, Governor Slaton turned down a majority recommendation for a pardon, and granted a life commutation instead. In doing that, he followed the recommendation of a minority opinion. No Governor considers any petition for clemency, nevertheless, unless it first has been thrashed out by the Commission.

There is no way of limiting a Georgia Governor's discretion in the matter of clemency—the Legislature could not make the Prison Commission's recommendations binding upon the Governor, if it desired to. In the matter of pardons, commutations, and so forth, the Governor is final, supreme, and altogether an arbitrary authority! The Constitution of the State gives him utterly untrammeled powers in that direction. And it is for this reason, of course, that most Governors are careful and discreet in granting clemency, in any event.

Governor Slaton has received 41 invitations to visit various State fairs throughout Georgia during the months of October and November.

And much as he would like to accept all of them, it will be utterly impossible, of course. He hopes, however, to accept a few—those that do not conflict with his official duties, at least. And that probably will mean as many as half a dozen.

"If I even attempted to accept all these gracious and kindly invitations, which I would like to do," said the Governor, "I could not do so unless it were possible for me to be in two or three places at one and the same time, and of course it isn't!

"I am glad to know that there are to be so many fairs in the State, however. It speaks well for Georgia, and it indicates a healthy condition of things.

"I believe in county fairs—and in State fairs, too! There never was one held, even though it may have lost money directly, that wasn't a success in the long run, for the indirect dividends paid by county and State fairs are great, I verily believe."

PATHFINDER SPURS ROADS MOVEMENT

Texas Boosters Vote Bonds to Assure Passage of Highway Thro' Their Counties.

That the Texas good roads and highway boosters think nothing of driving 100 miles to meet the pathfinding car, was the feature of a telegram received Monday morning from E. L. Ferguson, official pathfinder for the all-Southern transcontinental trail. The tourists left San Angelo Monday morning for El Paso.

"A rousing meeting with 21 delegates from every town and county within a radius of 300 miles met us here," wired Mr. Ferguson, "and large delegations from Irion County, including county officials, presented to us a petition signed by every voter in the county, urging the routing of the highway through Irion."

"The route," Mr. Ferguson added, "was immediately accepted, and $20,000 in bonds was voted at once for good roads."

The pathfinding car will reach Fort Stockton Tuesday and Alpine or Marfa, Texas, Wednesday.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Influenced by weakness in Liverpool cables and very favorable weather conditions over Sunday the cotton market opened barely steady to-day with first prices at a net decline of 2 to 12 points from the closing quotations of Saturday. Near positions showed the greatest strength at the outset, but October immediately dropped 6 points to 13.97, while December declined 8 points to 13.75. Other months were firmly maintained at opening quotations, there being no pressure whatever in these options.

After the call some of the prominent bulls and spot houses who had lost some of their cotton last week, through profit-taking on the belief that a reaction was in order and were hoping for a decline to buy it back, came in the market and purchased rather freely, which checked offerings considerably and later bringing about a short covering wave, resulting in prices recovering the early decline.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: October, 14.01; December, 13.83; January, 13.73; March, 13.82; May, 13.90.

COTTON GOSSIP

Senator Simmons says: "I have no reason to think that we will caucus on the cotton futures tax in the Senate. We caucused on it twice and the vote in favor of the Smith-Lever plan, now proposed in the Senate, was very small. I have not heard that sentiment in the Senate toward that amendment has changed. When it comes from the House the Senate will probably stand by its own amendment. The result, I assume, will be that no legislation on this subject will be included in the present bill."

* * *

Jackson, Miss., wires: "Prospects for any kind of cotton crop in Mississippi have dwindled during the past two or three weeks very materially. This is due largely to rains, which have been general all over this part of the State. Until the middle of September the farmers hereabouts were of the opinion they were going to make good cotton crops, believing they had the weevil headed off, but they were mistaken, as the weevil was waiting for them. The damage to this pest will cut the crop considerably."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Partly cloudy to clear, average temperatures 60. Oklahoma—North and west clear, south and east cloudy; heavy fog; temperature 60."

* * *

Washington forecast for the week: Local rains during the first half of the week over the cotton belt, although probably not much west of the Mississippi River. Generally fair weather is now indicated for the second half of the week. Temperature changes are unimportant.

* * *

One and seven-tenths inches rainfall at Birmingham, Ala., last night; rained all night; same at Huntsville, Ala., and still raining; raining since 6:30 at Decatur, Ala.; rained all night and still raining at Sheffield, Ala.; Anniston, Ala., drizzling rainfall last night, .93 of an inch; at Meridian, Miss., rained yesterday and now threatening; Charlotte raining; Augusta, Anderson, S. C.; Greenville, Fayetteville, N. C., cloudy; Charleston, clear; Athens, Ga., cloudy, good rains.

The New York Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crop in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee:

"Arkansas—Considerable damage is reported from rotting and sprouting in the bolls, but some correspondents do not consider this very material. Excessive rains have also delayed picking, but the amount gathered is about the same as last year, when it was 9 per cent picked. The grade has also been lowered, and the prospects of a top crop are very poor, which was cut short by the drouth in August. Percentage condition is considerably below last month and even lower than a year ago, when it was 71.

"Louisiana—Excessive rain and boll weevils have been the cause of serious deterioration, and percentage condition will probably be considerably below a year ago, when it was 69.1 per cent. Bolls are rotting and sprouting. The top crop prospects are poor. Picking is about the same as a year ago, when it was 34 per cent gathered.

"Tennessee—August drouth cut the crop greatly and recent rains have caused further damage, especially to grade. It is doubtful if percentage condition will equal a year ago at this time, when it was 70.2. Picking is well advanced, being about 12 per cent gathered as against 4 per cent a year ago. Top crop prospects are poor, though a late frost would add to the yield."

Condition of Cotton Declined 3.1 Points

MEMPHIS, Sept. 29.—Replies of correspondents of The Commercial-Appeal of average date of September 25 indicate a condition of the cotton crop on that date of 65.1 vs. 68.2 per cent, last month's Government report figures. This is a loss from last month of 3.1 points. The heavy rains that have recently visited the western belt were just beginning to fall at the date of this report, so that any damage they may have done is reflected but slightly in these figures.

Rains earlier in the period covered by the report, while doing some harm to grade wer of some benefit to the growing plant, especially in Oklahoma, where a slight improvement over the low condition of the previous month is noted. Cotton has opened rapidly and an unusually large percentage of the crop is open. Picking has gone forward fairly well, although interferred with to a certain extent by frequent rains.

There are a few complaints of scarcity of labor, but as a general thing there are plenty of pickers and with fair weather the crop will probably be gathered in record time, except in the Carolinas and Georgia, where much of the cotton is late and making of this crop will depend to a great extent upon the date of killing frost. This is the last report on the crop that will be published this season in this paper.

A crop estimate will be made some time in November.

Conditions by States, compared with the Government figures of August 25:

North Carolina	70 vs. 78
South Carolina	71 vs. 77
Georgia	73 vs. 76
Alabama	68 vs. 72
Mississippi	65 vs. 69
Tennessee	74 vs. 80
Arkansas	67 vs. 72
Oklahoma	47 vs. 47
Louisiana	60 vs. 63
Texas	63 vs. 64
Average	61.5 vs. 68.2

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—In sympathy with the weakness in wheat at Liverpool local prices were ⅛ to ¼c off at the opening to-day. There were increased offerings in the pit. Northwestern cars were considerably larger than a year ago. Argentine crop conditions were better.

Corn was ⅛ to ¼ better on unsettled weather conditions and the likelihood of smaller receipts. There was no selling pressure at Chicago or abroad.

Oats were ⅜ to ½ better, but the best prices were not held.

Hogs were 5c higher at the yards, and the market in the pit was a shade better.

GRAIN NOTES

Bartlett, Frazier Company says:

at the momnt. eSHRDLU HRDUL

"Wheat—Market looks low enough at the moment.

"Corn—The unsettled weather conditions over the belt should cause a steadier feeling.

"Oats—As in corn, liquidation has been quite drastic, but the market still looks bullish, owing to continued heavy stocks in sight."

St. Louis wires: "Complaints of corn molding in the shock are increasing from all over this State, and this weather will increase such reports, as corn was cut too early in order to save the fodder, and now fodder and corn stand a good show of being ruined."

* * *

Missouri crop report: "Condition of corn, 52 per cent, in September, 41 per cent; October, last year, 86 per cent. Crop, 133,000,000, or 110,000,000 less than last year's final Government estimate; quality 62, with much complaint of corn and fodder spoiling in the shock; about 92 per cent of the crop is safe from frost. Wheat acreage is probably 92 per cent of last year, and 42 per cent will be sown by October 1."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Miller & Co.: We are bullish.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Continued bad weather and bullish crop news would seem necessary to prevent substantial recessions.

STOCKS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although there were a few exceptions. California Petroleum preferred advanced 1 point and Union Pacific, after opening at 161⅛ for a gain of ¼, went to 162.

There was no news of a bullish character, whereas there were reports of financial interests, which gave ammunition to the bear group. News of the early filing of a Government suit against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, the continued withholding of definite information about the alleged Union Pacific melon, and the possibility of the Pennsylvania Railroad dumping a large quantity of hard coal and railroad stock on the market, all of which contributed to uneasiness.

Among the other declines were: Amalgamated Copper, ¼; American Beet Sugar, ½; American Can, ⅛; American Smelting, ⅝; Atchison, ¼; Canadian Pacific, 1¼; Chino Copper, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ⅛; Pennsylvania, ⅛; People's Gas, ¼; Pittsburg Coal, ⅛; Southern Pacific ¼, and United States Steel common, ½.

Reading, Pressed Steel Car, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern preferred and California Petroleum common advanced fractionally within the first 45 minutes.

The curb was quiet.

Americans in London were irregular above New York parity. There was profit taking in Canadian Pacific in London. Grank Trunk in Longon was steady.

Introductory Remarks by Evelyn Thaw

IF there are women or men in the world who do not believe that their lives would make an entrancing story they are either very humble or very clever.

"Commonplace" is a word which is expunged from the lexicon of those who write about themselves. In our arrogance—let me include myself—we imagine that our lives are so far removed from the run of lives, in respect of interest and character, as to be apart.

And we are right, even the most humdrum of us. Who can read Flaubert's "Simple Soul" without realizing this fact? There is no life that is not a fascinating study—always providing that its limner can "carry it across the footlights." The less humdrum the life has been the less skill does the autobiographer require, and it is because my own life has been out of the ordinary that I dare essay the task of putting in plain words a rough and, I fear, an amateur chronicle.

I have many friends in the newspaper world, both in America and England; unemotional men, whose friendship I value, not so much because they have been able, at times, to turn the sharp edge of criticism from my unhappy self, but because in many of them I have found a saner judgment, a larger humanity and broader views than in any other class of men I have met. And this has been an astounding thing for me. For your newspaper man, on the surface, is a man of ice; a man pitiless in his analysis, and remorseless in his search of facts. Stories which would appal and shock the average person leave him unmoved. He will go right away from a millionaire's luxurious dinner party to the morgue; cover a horse show and an electrocution in one day; interview princes and criminals in rotation, and give no indication that he is impressed by either experience.

Yet, for all his seeming callousness, when loosed upon a "story," the newspaper man is very human in his sympathies, and I have to pay a grateful tribute to some of the journalists of America for the help and encouragement they gave me in the darkest hour of my need.

It follows that among my friends of the press I have found many who are willing and anxious to assist me in preparing such a book as this, but, although with such assistance, the value of the book, as a literary production, might well be materially enhanced, I have preferred to wait the time when I might be able to write, with my own hand and for my own pleasure, the story as I wish to tell it.

I am satisfied that there will be critics who will demur at the necessity of writing the book at all. They will say, "Why rake up the past—a past which can not be of interest to anybody save the actors, who are fairly unimportant people?" My own view, strengthened by a continuous study of other lives, is that there are no unimportant people in the world. The right to write is almost as incontestable as the right to live, and there will be something in the exaggerated tragedy of the existence which was mine—a lesson for somebody or other.

I hate the cant of the writer who professes to write only for the uplifting of the race; who prepares moral nastiness that the vague "they" shall be benefited, and I disassociate myself from the suggestion that this is a book with an object—yet, as I say, there will be a lesson in this, as in every other autobiography. It would be a colorless life, indeed, which did not contain this lesson.

Here, then, is the life of Evelyn Thaw—a life without an apology; without even vain regret.

Chapter I.--My Early Poverty; as Artist's Model; as Chorus Girl

Written by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

HOWEVER anxious one may be to record one's childhood, that period of life is the most elusive.

I lived at Tarentum, on the Allegheny River, just outside Pittsburg. My father was a lawyer. "Win" Nesbit was respected from one end of the country to the other, and had a reputation which extended beyond the line of local celebrity. A charming, genial man, I have only the most tender memories of him, for he died when I was 10, and that is an age when a child begins to form the most roseate impressions of those she has marked down for hero worship.

My childhood was the happiest time of my life. That is the impression I have now. I know that I was a tomboy, very keen on prize fights (of all things in the world), and delighted in promoting combats in secluded spots between children who were very beautiful to me, but who, in the eyes of my outraged parents, were the most impossible playmates.

My mother is one of the sweetest women I have ever met. Artistic to her finger tips, her home has ever been a harmonious and beautiful thing.

I have said she was a beautiful character. She was one of those women who had her home ordered artistically and charmingly. Whether she understood me or my nature I do not know. I doubt very much whether any mother is ever entirely in sympathy with her daughter's aspirations. It has been my experience that the son has invariably been the mother's first care, just as the daughter is invariably the father's.

My Tribute to My Mother, The Best of Women.

I have a brother with whose characteristics I do not doubt my mother is much better acquainted than with mine. I do not suggest for one moment that there was any violent lack of sympathy between her and myself, nor do I say that had she understood me how ter my life would have run on different lines. And, if I express the opinion that my brother was the first consideration, I do not do so in an irritated or an aggrieved frame of mind. I believe that is how nature orders things, and I am quite content to accept such order without complaint, realizing that, had my father lived, my brother would probably have enjoyed the same experience in relation to myself.

I have the fullest admiration for my mother's character. She is altogether a wonderful woman. She is one of those sweet characters who could not plant a dry stick in the earth but it would blossom; who can make the prettiest things; is eminently efficient in all her household duties; the most perfect and dainty of housewives; the most trusting and believing of creatures.

But she did not understand me. To-day I am probably the greatest enigma that the world offers her. I am outside and beyond the range of her understanding. She is one of those women who are always willing to believe the best, and quite ready to fear the worst.

I can not take a convenient and lazy course and put all the blame of the friction, which at various periods undoubtedly existed, upon my ancestry. My mother and I were temperamentally different. I made matters more impossible because I was young, headstrong and willful; filled with the sublime assurance of youth, and opposed by one whose nature was so sweet and so simple that I could without any effort circumvent her most convincing argument.

I was, as I have said, born in Tarentum, in Pennsylvania, on the Allegheny River. There is a Tarento in Italy, a corruption of the ancient Tarentum, but the town namers of the United States were ever purists. When I was eight years old we moved across the river to Allegheny, and we were there two years.

The Poverty That Followed Fast Upon Father's Death.

It was while we were there that my father died. I have only the dimmest recollection of the period that followed. I realized then, with a vague sense of childish discomfort, that it was a period of trouble for my mother.

I do not know exactly in what position my father left her, but my recollection is that my mother had to pay frequent visits to court on account of my father's affairs.

At first, as far as I remember, we seemed to be in some prosperity, but afterward there was a great deal of worry. Whatever money my mother had was gone, and it was necessary for us to rent a few rooms in the house to outsiders.

That seemed a fairly easy method of keeping the wolf from the door, but, somehow, it never worked smoothly. Mother was always worried about the rent she had to pay, and still more worried about the rent she did not always get. And there were times when we felt the pinch very acutely; moments, indeed, when we did not get enough to eat.

The next move, I remember, was to my grandmother's. We went and lived with her. I think at that time we had no money whatever, and my earliest recollections of Pittsburg are almost as painful as my later recollections.

Poverty is very impatient and fretful. People who are poor find their salvation in action, and, since the woman's sphere is a limited one, and scope for initiative necessarily small, mother again rented a house, at No. 5 South Highland avenue, Pittsburg, and let out most of the rooms to other people.

I remember that my mother, my little brother and myself had to sleep in one room. There was no place for any of us elsewhere. Yet, despite all these discomforts, and all the sacrifices we made, the new house and the new arrangement did not pay any better than had our house in Allegheny.

In theory it showed excellent profits, but in practice there was the difficulty of collecting the rents, and I just remember that after a little while we had more trouble, and that the end of it was the furniture had to be sold.

It was then that a very good friend of mother's came to our rescue, and paid the man to whom we owed rent. Mother had made up her mind that she would leave Pittsburg and go to Philadelphia. She was very artistic, and she hoped to get a position as a designer. We were sent to an aunt, and afterward to a family which my mother had known in Pittsburg.

It is curious what shape memory takes of events which are of such paramount importance, and which are destined to play so great a part in one's career.

I remember that rail journey, which my brother and I took alone. How we were put in charge of the conductor, and the trouble we had with the family cat, which I insisted upon taking with me to our new home. Every conductor that came aboard wanted to put poor pussy off. It was a weepy journey for me. Finally we got to Philadelphia, and mother and another lady met us at the depot.

I was between thirteen and fourteen at the time; just old enough to take an intelligent interest in my parent's affairs. I do not remember exactly what idea I had as to our future when I went to Philadelphia. It probably was that my mother had already secured an appointment, but I found that she was living in one room in a small boarding house, and that the position of designer, the securing of which was to retrieve the family fortune, had not yet materialized.

Clever as she was in the making and planning of clothes, the people who employed designers wanted one who had practical experience on the commercial side of the business. They wanted somebody who had been Paris, who had studied and had at their finger tips the latest mode, and poor mother, with all the best intentions in the world, could not lay claim to so large and varied an experience.

The Problem of the Girl Alone With an Artist.

What little money we had began to go again. My brother was sent back to a convenient

Y LIFE--By Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

aunt living outside Pittsburg and we moved to a place in Arch street.

In a sense, this was the most momentous of our moves, from my point of view. The boarding house in Arch street marked the beginning of my independent career. Until now I had been a follower—a being whose life was directed by the whim or the circumstances of another.

Hitherto I and the rest of the world had revolved about my mother. She was in my eyes the central attraction around which animated creation gyrated. Arch street represented the period of transition; the stage during which the center of attraction slowly but surely shifted.

It was there I met a Mrs. Darach, who was an artist. She was attracted by my face, and asked me if I would sit as a model for her. The idea attracted me. It seemed to me at that time to be a wonderful thing that anybody would want to paint a picture of me. It was really a wonderful joke and I was as proud as though I myself combined all the genius of Michael Angelo and Rosa Bonheur.

I learned in that time the supreme value of patience. Enthusiasm for being painted died with an aching neck, with the yearning desires to get right away from the position in which the artist put me, to move my head exactly in the direction she did not wish me to look, and to fidget at moments when it was essential that I should keep quite still.

Here, then, began the great education, an education the fruit of which was to serve me in such good stead in later years. Other artists would drop into the studio on Chestnut street, and one woman who came was very anxious that I should sit for her. Mrs. Darach, however, pointed out that I was not a professional model, but the other lady artist was very insistent.

"Why," she said, "I know lots of girls who are earning quite good money by posing for illustrators of magazines."

I had never thought of the possibility of making an income in this way. It seemed to me absurd that people should take money for being painted. I spoke to mother about it, but she did not offer any objection, and thus it came about from Mrs. Darach I went to other artists, and slowly but surely began to form quite a connection among the artists who were in the building.

I Take Up Posing To Fill Our Purse.

I posed mostly for heads, particularly for children's heads, and at first for the lady artists. There were four in that building who used me as a model for the pictures with which they illustrated stories in the best-known magazines.

I grew in patience and the work came easy. Beyond the fact that most of the people who drew me were, as I say, women, there were one or two men artists whose names I do not remember.

When I was in full swing we decided to move to New York, and my artist friends gave me letters of introduction, one of which was to Mr. Carroll Beckwith. Mother went to New York, sending me back to Pittsburg. Even then our circumstances were so strained that it was necessary for her to get me a pass from a friend of my father. I had to go back to get Howard, my little brother. I was there for a few weeks, and we went on, by way of Allegheny, to New York.

My mother would never cease in her efforts to secure a position as designer, but in New York she had no greater success than she had in Philadelphia. The main objections which barred her in the smaller city were against her in New York.

We had secured a room on Twenty-second street—a little back room on the second floor. Here we lived and again felt the pinch of poverty. There were days when my sole meal consisted of a biscuit and a cup of coffee.

Try as she would, my mother did not succeed in securing even a minor position with a firm of dress designers. Everywhere the same answer was returned, the same questions asked: "Had she been to Paris recently? Had she similar experience with other stores?"

It was in desperation that mother remembered the letter of introduction to Mr. Carroll Beckwith. In Philadelphia my artist friends had sent me to a photographer's to secure a number of studies of my head. Armed with one of these mother called upon Mr. Beckwith. This was in December, 1900. The artist was pleased with the picture. He told her that she could bring me up to the studio, because he felt pretty sure that he would be able to give me work. A personal inspection satisfied him, and he offered me posing for two mornings every week.

"You are not the sort of girl," he said kindly, "that should go knocking at studio doors. I will give you some letters of introduction to representative artists in New York.

This he did. I remember one was to Mr. F. S. Church, and Mr. Church gave me letters to Herbert Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Hyneman and Carl Blenner. For all these artists I posed.

The work was fairly light. The poses were not particularly difficult. In the main they wanted me for my head. I never posed for the figure, in the sense that I posed for the nude. Sometimes I would be painted as a little Eastern girl in a costume of a Turkish woman, all vivid coloring, with ropes and bangles of jade about my neck and arms.

And here I would like to say something about the artists' model, because there is so much in this conception.

The question of the artists' model, the "eternal feminine," of course, like that of the stage, is a question in which many people seem to take considerable and, indeed, at times uncalled for interest.

In the case of the artists' model, it is perhaps not to be wondered at that when a girl as a model must so completely ignore all the safeguards with which society and convention have fenced in womanhood, the world should speculate as to what manner of person she is, or will presently become, nor can it altogether be considered guilty of rash judgment if it is inclined to reckon such girls as more or less outside the pale.

Now let us look at the girl alone with the artist. The law can not help her, society, convention, custom are shut outside the walls of this great room, powerless to aid or shield from the elemental passions of two human hearts. Judged by the ordinary standards and conducts of life, the thing is cataclysmal. Yet she looks and talks as lightly and unconcernedly as she takes off her hat and goes to the glass to arrange her hair, as if they were about to engage in a game of tennis. She then retires behind a screen, or into another room, to emerge presently appareled only in her youth and beauty. I am speaking, of course, of the artists' model who poses for the figure.

This picture doubtless will appeal to different people in a very different manner. Not a few will regard it as "horrible," "disgraceful," "outrageous," "the law should prevent her," and so on.

Of course, it is a big risk for any woman thus to challenge the conventions and even the instincts of her sex; and yet to do so with impunity has been found quite possible by the majority of those who have risked it. A girl with a character can keep the narrow road with much less difficulty than besets her sister in other branches of life.

It stands to reason that such exacting work as drawing and painting the figure can not be combined with philandering to any great extent, and the artist, even though flesh and blood, and he can not be much of an artist unless he is very much so, quickly gets shy of models whose idea of earning their dollar a day consists in the arduous task of sitting on his knee partaking of chocolates or smoking cigarettes.

For the girl of parts, indeed, there are few means of livelihood which offer fairer possibilities than this career of posing. It requires neither money nor influence. Like Shakespeare, she may know small Latin and less Greek. The only capital necessary is that with which Nature has financed her—a pretty face, a shapely form and a plastic, sympathetic temperament.

It is not couleur de rose all the time, of course, for, of the rank and file, but few fail to have some good times. But even for the luckiest there is the inevitable pay, pay pay—the quid pro quo.

Belying its name, sitting very often involves great muscular effort, and fainting is a common incident, especially in the long sittings required in schools and classes, and the work is at all times a great strain on the nerves.

A girl taking up sitting professionally and seriously must be prepared to make pleasure, amusement and other interests subordinate to her work.

In a sense it was my work as an artists' model that first brought me into the public eye. I do not know that to be brought into the public eye is the happiest of experiences. Wilde has said that a woman, like a country, is happiest when she has no history; for my part, I am free to confess that while the reminiscences of the past may be painful, there is a peculiar fascination and happiness in framing up the experiences.

I Marvel at the Mysteries of the Stage.

I remember in New York a reporter came down to the house to see me. It was a novel experience in those days, and one which considerably flustered me. It was the first of I do not know how many interviews which were to be my lot. Mother showed him a photograph which had been taken in Philadelphia. (It is a curious fact that I have not a single one of these pictures left, though it is not such a long time ago since they were taken.) A photograph of a pose I had made was printed in an evening paper in New York, with a complimentary caption underneath, and thence onward I saw many reporters, all of whom were anxious to get a photograph for their papers.

The Sunday American published several of them, two big pages, and it was only natural that this should be followed by a succession of offers to go on the stage.

I suppose such an experience, falling to a young girl, unused to publicity and with little knowledge of the world, would be sufficient to turn her head. But I was immensely sane in those days. I attribute this to the fact that I had read more than most girls of my age. My father had an excellent library, and I had been a most omnivorous reader. I laugh to myself when I think of the literary puzzles I tackled. I am more than astounded to realize that I not only read, but enjoyed many books which a child might reasonably be supposed to think more than a little difficult. But the efforts I made in those early days to master such classics as came my way had been a sort of mental gymnastics which enabled me to secure a sense of proportion, the one sense which spells salvation to a girl upon whom is lavished the subtle flattery of publicity. This, and my own taste for a healthy open-air life, enabled me to take a normal view of things. I have always loved the fields and the woods and every beast that walks or creeps or crawls. There are no phenomena of nature which are not beautiful to me.

So when I am asked in what spirit I approached the stage and the career it offered me, I say I approached the stage as I would a virgin forest, with a bubbling sense of happiness in the revelations which it would open to me. I was not stage-struck in the accepted sense. I never thought of the audiences and what charm I might exert over them. I did not anticipate huge triumphs in floral tributes handed across the footlights, nor did I dream dreams of laudatory newspaper notices. I was supremely indifferent as to the position I might occupy in the profession; it was enough to me that I should be one with the people of the new world, privy to their lives, their habits of thought and speech. I should be "in it."

There came offers to me from all manner of people, promising me this and that success; dazzling prospects of distant fame were held before my eyes. With the advertisement given me by newspapers I should command high salaries, I should star, I should be the most-talked-of woman in America—all these promises, light-heartedly given, came to me, and I remember that I was not impressed. I was only interested in the actual "getting there." One letter from a manager asking for my services at $20 a week would have eclipsed all other communications. I was sane enough to realize that a freakish notoriety was not desirable from any point of view.

The greatest advancement, apart from an inborn desire for enlargement of life, lay in the very material fact that the stage life would enable me to make a double income. I could pose by day and appear on the stage by night. The dollars counted horribly, for I had tasted privation and was anxious to put myself as far distant from a repetition as I could.

I do not think that my mother was overanxious for me to adopt the stage as my profession, but fate was moving me inexorably in the direction I was to take.

Every day the new life became a more tangible possibility, and when at length I entered the unpromising stage door it seemed less of a new experience than an introduction to a life with which I was already familiar.

I had a letter from Mr. Marks, who was a theatrical manager. He was very anxious that I should go on the stage and promised me that he would do all he could to make me famous. These letters used to come addressed to us, but we paid little attention to them, but afterward he wrote saying that he could get me a position in "Floradora," and some time later, through a girl I knew, I met him and secured a letter of introduction to John C. Fishell, who was at that time the manager of the "Floradora" company. From thence onward the stage became a practical issue. I overruled mother's objections, and went with her one day to Mr. Fishell's office. He had a long look at me. He was a pleasant, genial man, blessed with sense of humor, and he burst into a fit of laughter.

"So you want to be an actress?" he said, with mock solemnity. "I am running a theater, not a baby farm. "Why," he went on, "if I took you in 'Floradora' I should have the Gerry Society on my back. No, my child, I can not rob the cradle.

When I got back to the office Mr. Fishell asked me if I could dance. I said, "Yes," a little fearfully. I had learned dancing at a school in Pittsburg. He sent for a woman who came to the piano and played.

The stage manager was keen on my coming into the theater, but Mr. Fishell was not so enthusiastic and said he would let me know.

"The fact is," he said frankly, 'the only chance of your coming on the stage is for you to be a little reticent as to what your age is. If you like to do this I am willing to give you a trial; you can come to-morrow and rehearse."

They Left Me Still My Veil of Innocence.

I went home in the seventh heaven of delight.

And here let me deal with an aspect of stage life which forever excites the moralist. Has it a corrupting influence on the young? I speak of myself when I say it did not corrupt me. If being brought into contact with people who are loose of speech, or who have exaggerated views on the flexibility of morals, is corruption, then the streets of New York, Paris, London, of any great city, are unfit for the young girl.

There is a camaraderie on the stage which entails a certain freedom of speech and a certain frankness in dealing with the relationships which exist between people, but there is also the protection which comes from the destruction of illusion.

And there is, too, a very keen appreciation of duty toward the innocent. There is a code which protects the child and stands between her and knowledge of evil, and in no other branch of life have I seen such anxiety displayed to hide ugly truths from the novitiate.

Here is an example of how a girl can live in the very midst of things without fully understanding their significance.

I remember that in those early days I used to envy a sextet of beautiful girls who had a chorus number of their own. I used to stand in the wings and watch them dancing gracefully the slow movements of the number, and wonder a little ruefully whether I should ever be tall enough or skillful enough to do the work they were doing. For, in my innocence, I regarded them as the most wonderful part of the show and certainly the best paid. "for," I argued, "how could they wear such lovely clothes off the stage, and such beautiful pearls on, unless they received a salary in proportion to their charms?"

I must have mentioned my view to several people, but not one of them attempted to lift the veil which hid realities from my eyes. The stage was indeed a wonderful world, its people, a people apart. One looked at life from a new angle, and saw men and women from another plane. I was impressed by the frank egotism of the girls, a quality which is neither to be despised nor condemned, for they merely put into words all that their sisters of the other world think. They had gotten the trick of thinking aloud, and found speech an excellent and soothing substitute for thought, and one of the reasons why actresses are apparently so inconsistent is to be found in this practice.

I found it took years of study before I could disentangle the real intentions of a girl from her expressed and often vehemently expressed view. I have heard people, and men especially, who have complained bitterly of the inconsistency and deceptive powers of girls engaged on the stage.

Next Sunday Evelyn Thaw will give the history of her acquaintance with Stanford White.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed. "D'ye want a job?"

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"Dash my buttons, an' you're a likely sort of kid to get it, too. In you go. I'll pay the bill. Lord lumme, it'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. 'Ere, I'll bet you two bob 'e pays up!"

"Done! Walk in, sir. Wot'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellently, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

The boy held out his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would ha' bin just about his age. Lord lumme, I 'ope the lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes'm. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

After crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to rehearse carefully the program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacity unlooked for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all. Of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond, and would demand its earthly pedigree.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date. The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's Mews altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: "Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants. Kimberley, Amsterdam and London."

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Is Mr. Isaacstein in?" said Philip.

"Oah, yess," grinned the other.

"Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oah, yess." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught its drift yet. The gaunt and unkempt visitor was evidently burlesquing the accent of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a few seconds. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the stamp book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here?" he said at last.

"Oah, yess. You vil be funny eh?" The other smirked over the hidden humor of the situation, and Philip understood that if he would see the great man of the firm he must adopt a more emphatic tone.

"I had better warn you that Mr. Wilson, of Messrs. Grant & Sons, Ludgate Hill, sent me here to see Mr. Isaacstein. Am I to go back to Mr. Wilson and say that the office boy refuses to admit me?"

There was a sting in the description, coming from such a speaker.

"Look 'ere," was the angry retort, "go avay ung blay, vil you? I'm pizzy."

Philip reached quickly through the little arch, grabbed a handful of shirt, tie and waistcoat, and dragged the big nose and thick lips violently against the wires of the grille.

"Will you do what I ask, or shall I try and pull you through?" he said, quietly.

But the boy's ready yell brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.

With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein. The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.

Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.

"What the deuce——" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.

"He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"

Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined utterance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request. Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lend effect to Isaacstein's wit when he said:

"Is this a joke?"

All the clerks guffawed in chorus. Fortunately, Isaacstein was in a good humor. He had just purchased a pearl for 250 pounds, which he would sell to Lady Somebody for 800 pounds, to match another in an earring.

"It appears to be," said Philip, when the merriment had subsided.

For some reason the boy's gray, earnest eyes conquered the big little man's amused scrutiny.

"Now, boy, be quick. What is it?" he said testily, and every clerk bent to his task.

"I have told you, sir. I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you with regard to business of an important nature."

"You say Mr. Wilson sent you—Mr. Wilson, of Grant & Sons?"

"Yes, sir."

Isaacstein yielded to amazed curiosity.

"Step in here," he said, and led the way to his private office, surprising himself as well as his assistants by this concession.

Philip closed the door and Isaacstein turned sharply at the sound, but the boy gave him no time to frame a question.

"I want you to buy this," he said, handing over the diamond.

Cross Fire.

Isaacstein took it, and gave it one critical glance. He began to wabble again.

"Do you mean to say Mr. Wilson sent you to dispose of this stone to me?" he demanded.

"Not exactly, sir. I showed it to him and he recommended me to come to you."

Well, it mattered not. The courage of despair which nerved him the previous night came to his aid again. He would defy them all, careless of consequence.

The policeman was saying:

"It's a queer affair, sir. Did he really say he had lots more of 'em."

"Yes, yes. Do you think I am romancing? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of these stones, boy?"

Philip, with lips tensely set, was desperately cool again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting he," said the boy. "I merely wish to put my hand in my pocket. Are you afraid of me, that you hold me so fast?"

The policeman, like the rest, did not fail to notice Philip's diction. The scornful superiority of his words, the challenge of the final question, took him aback. He relaxed his grip and grinned confusedly.

Philip instantly produced his paper of diamonds and opened it widely, so that all the stones could be seen. He handed the parcel to the policeman.

"Take good care of them, constable," he said. "Judging from results, they would not be safe in that man's hands."

But Isaacstein did not hear the insult. When he saw the collection he nearly lost his senses. What had he done? Was he or the boy mad? Veins stood out on his forehead, and he wobbled so fearfully that he clutched the desk for support. A scarecrow of a boy wandering about London with thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds in his pocket wrapped up in a piece of newspaper like so many sweets. There were not any meteoric diamonds of such value in all the museums and private collections in the world. He began to perspire. Even the policeman was astounded, quite as much at being called "constable" by Philip as by the mean appearance of articles presumably of great value.

"This is a rum go. What do you make of it, Mr. Isaacstein?" he said.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. He shows a piece of his find to a jeweler and discovers he is fabulously rich, but faces the problem of selling his meteoric diamonds. London's best diamond expert becomes excited over the meteoric find.

Now Go On With the Story.

DANGER SIGNAL TO WOMEN

Is what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness and the blues. In nine cases out of ten they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, curable by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool dissolve a little saltpeter in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpeter water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table, rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterward be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

I doctored a great deal but your medicines helped me more than all the doctors. I took six bottles of "Favorite Prescription" and three of "Golden Medical Discovery." I can now sleep good at night. ACT INDIFFERENTLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

X. Y.

The heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had many girl and boy friends and they all acted nice until they all played false. Now, should I break friendship with all of them and stay home without friends?

H. H.

And grow sour, suspicious and cynical? Certainly not. Go out, and make more friends, and be quite sure that none of the blame of unfaithfulness lies at your door.

Do You Know---

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales? TERRIBLE ORDEAL SAFELY ENDED

Johnson's Bayou, La.—Mrs. L. P. Semar, of this town, who has been in a deplorable condition for years, now makes the following statement: "I was a great sufferer, for 20 years, with pains in my back, right side, headache and lower bowels, was very irregular, and also suffered terribly at times, with dizziness and faintness.

During this time, I tried six different doctors, but could get no relief.

I heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it. After having taken a course of this treatment, (6 bottles), according to directions, I feel no pain, am regular, am able to do all of my work and, in fact, feel like a new woman.

I can surely recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to all women suffering from female disorders."

Cardui is the ideal medicine for women. It is prepared especially for women, and contains ingredients which act directly on the weak womanly organs, thus helping to build up, in a gentle, natural way, the entire womanly constitution to a healthy condition.

The wonderful success which Cardui has attained, in its past 50 years of continuous use, is due principally to its merit. It has helped many hundreds of thousands of weak women. It will surely help you, too.

Try Cardui.

The Lover and the Walnut

Sometimes It's a Hard Nut to Crack—Where Violence Fails, and Only Soft Appeal and Cunning Will Bring Her Out of Her Shell and Into Your Arms!

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I KNOW a chap—a darling young chap—who's a winner at all things. Or he was until he ran face to face with the "Golden Girl." The girl who made his heart a house of pain—who made all other girls in the world look like the glass set in the brass ring you get in a "prize" candy box alongside of a blue diamond!

He has tact and sweetness, honesty and tenderness, and he's a "crack" at every game that takes personal bravery, mental courage, skill and patience. And just the sort to take a girl's eyes and heart with him every move he makes—if he'll only "act natural"! In this—his biggest game—he has still his courage, but his skill and tact, his sweetness and patience, have gone off and left him right in the spot on the highway where he needs them the most. He's trying to win the Golden Girl with a club!— like a cave man. He bullies her and he scolds her, and he tries to prove to her where she's "mad" not to love him, and he calls upon all the gods of a man in love to witness how cold her heart is! And the girl, while he's breaking his heart for her, is all tight in her little shell and she won't come out. He is still sane enough to have a sneaking notion that she loves him a little—to know that she isn't really such an icy little woman—and to wonder dimly why she is holding out in such fashion. So he agonizes and fumes and raves and goes after the nut with a sledge-hammer! And there isn't a sound from within, and the shell holds tight without a crack!

If he'd only remember the fairy story of the gnome who loved and wanted the pixie in the walnut. He pounded and toiled and sweat with his heavy stone sledge. And then he sat upon the nut and wept bitter tears that tasted salty where they ran close to his lips. Now wielding a sledge wasn't the only thing the gnome could do. He could play so sweetly on a tiny violin that even the shy tree frog would lean and listen. So he dried his tears and rubbed his face with his red coat sleeve and managed a smile, and tucking his music box under his chin he drew the bow across the singing strings and played. And lo! after a few sweet measures the crack of the nut grew slowly wider—it yawned wider to the blue sky, and out of it, into the happy gnome's heart, crept the timid pixie who lived therein.

There are women who answer only the call of the sledge-hammer—whose wild hearts leap to violence. But the Golden Girl isn't that kind. Remember the fairy story, boy. Swinging the sledge-hammer isn't the only thing you can do. You've forgotten your violin. Draw your bow across it the very sweetest you know how, and I promise you the shell will open of itself and your elf will fly into your heart. Raving and storming isn't the only strength you have. You've forgotten your sweetness, your tenderness, your cunning. Lay siege with the music of these three, and I swear the Golden Girl will glow and reach to you. Under the pressure of her two white hands the shell will yawn and yield her up.

Sometimes it's a hard nut to crack—where violence fails and only soft appeal and cunning will avail!

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us and she is one of those flattering kind; she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day right before me she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I don't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heartbroken. What shall I do?

SAD WIFE.

HEARTBROKEN, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered. Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say so right then and there? Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John; I'm so proud of him myself sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish"? And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind, is she? Well, I'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

He's All Right.

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pussycat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? You let him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and quick-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way, or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming? Cry when she's gone? Scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman, to be sure!

The Only Way.

Have cousin at the house—have her there morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, ask her opinion of men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send John in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him sit up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat; have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expects men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, smile and cajole and be nicer than ever cousin dared to be, and wach results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown-up boys, you know, just grown-up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

Same as Others.

"Say, if you were seated in the tube, and every seat was taken, and a lady entered, what would you do?"

"I'd pretend I was asleep."

Doing a Man's Part.

"What are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" replied the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

.:. Fishers of Men .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WE are all fishers of men, and by "We" I mean every one of my sex.

And it is not to our discredit. The Lord implanted in every girl's heart a longing for love that is not satisfied in the love of father, mother, brother, sister or friend. It is a longing that grows with her years, showing first in her smiling overtures as a baby to some boy and never ending till it finds satisfaction in the love of a husband and child.

She may grow old and gray in spinsterhood; she may judge man's love by the unhappy experience of some sister and decry it; she may despise the dependence that comes with love and deny it, but to the end of her days, though her tongue may scoff and her ears refuse to hear, there remains at the bottom of her heart a longing for it that is never stilled. And no woman is normal until she has known it.

We are all fishers of men. To deny it is to deny the plan of Nature. The only difference is in outward manifestations of this great inward desire. Some of us stand for life looking wistfully at the water waiting for the fish to jump out at our feet, and others secure poles early, change the bait to suit the game, and fish assiduously.

We all want love. We have always been told that it is most maidenly to wait till it comes to us voluntarily. But fish so rarely jump out of the water, and the years come and go, each one taking with it some charm that should by all rules of the game have served as bait, and we find ourselves threatened with a life-time of loneliness and heart hunger.

It is fair, then, considering how much love means, and the desolation of life without it, to suggest to nice little girls, with their hearts beating fast with alternate hope and despair, how they may use a little bait modestly and effectively.

All Are Vain.

The finest man in the world is a vain, weak creature, and it is always the finest man in the world who is blindest about the opposite sex and needs a guide to reach the altar. It was never necessary to make an effort to win the admiration of a worthless man. Very often he makes love-making his business, and consequently never has a business that will support a wife and child.

A nice little girl named Mary, who wants to win a husband and confesses to this most normal and most womanly desire, writes me:

"I am a young girl of twenty-two, and meet a lot of nice young men and go out a great deal with them. I have a host of girl friends, and while in their company I can converse with ease on almost any topic, but just as soon as I am alone in a gentleman's company it seems I have nothing to talk about, which is a very awkward position. Please advise me what topics are mostly to be discussed and whether talking about business is a boring one. I must add that I am not up to the mark on books, and consequently can not talk about them."

Thank heaven you can't! There is a big score in your favor to start with, for the girl who says pedantly to a man, "Have you read Maeterlinck's 'Pelleas and Melisande?'" or, "As Byron says: 'You remember that quotation, I am sure,' etc.," and looks with a surprised superiority when he confesses he never reads more than this newspapers and the baseball scores on the billboards, is doomed to stay on the bank forever.

Business. If he is worth while, he dotes on it, and is an enthusiast on anything that pertains to it. Don't be afraid of results if you show an interest in the most vital interest he has. And a better topic, the best of all, is to engage him in conversation about himself. It is honey on his tongue and music in his ears, and if you can hang entranced on his account of his first skates, and grow breathless with delight over his favorite way of cooking fish, you have him on your line and coming slowly and surely out of the water.

One Way.

Be a good listener. The man who was won by being talked to death is too weak to be ranked as a man. Let him do the talking. Believe me, Mary dear, the best of them like appreciation of the words of wisdom that are always dropping from their lips and turn oftenest, stay longest, and think most, of the girl who listens to their most commonplace talk as if she were hearing the music of the angels.

We are all fishers of men, Mary. But remember always that it is wise to consider the good and bad points of the fish before casting in a line. Take care that your longing doesn't magnify into a whale a fish that is only a minnow.

Vice Versa.

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door. "Stop!" said the minister; "the baby's not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit, and made the audible remark: "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? But you're a-distu'bin' of 'im!"

Higher Education.

Paterfamilias was lecturing his son on education. "Look here, my boy," he said. "I made my plie with only a common school education."

"I daresay, dad," replied the son; "but it takes a college education to know how to spend it."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading about a little kid that walked 14 miles to and from school every day," said the Manicure Lady. "I'll bet that kid will be a great man some day."

"I hope so," said the Head Barber. "He is entitled to something after he grows up, and a kid in the city would never walk one-tenth that far if he had to."

"I guess the days of great men is kind of past and gone away," said the Manicure Lady. "As dad was saying the other night, we have a lot of great men now, but when you look one of them over and compare him to the great men of the past he is a few stacks shy. The old gent says that we don't need any great men nowadays, because he thinks that everybody is getting dippy in the cities and taking nothing serious any more. He said he never liked to hear folks calling Theodore Roosevelt 'Teddy.'"

"I think the same as your father," said the Head Barber. "When I was a kid I wanted to be like George Washington but when I grew older and figured that the country had one father I stopped trying to be great and went barbering. The way I feel now, if I can make enough to get by and keep up my insurance I am satisfied."

"That's how Wilfred feels too," said the Manicure Lady. "He had a bug for a long time that he was going to be the Lord Byron of the century, but when he found out that nobody cared much for serious poetry he started in writing popular songs and says he would rather be a humble hard getting the sugar than a great genius looking around for somebody to indorse his note."

"Times have certainly changed," mused the Head Barber. "The world ain't got much time nowadays for anybody with old fashioned ideas. There ain't no dignity, no reverence, no old homesteads, no quilting bees or logging bees, no church sociables, no sleighrides. When I was a kid I would take off my cap and get red in the face if a lady spoke to me, but if a lady speaks to a strange kid now and asks him to throw away a cigarette, he will say 'Tell it to Sweeney.' I don't know what everything is coming to."

Don't Suffer With Indigestion or Stomach Trouble---Quaker Herb Extract Will Cure You

There Are Thousands of Atlanta's Best Citizens Who Have Been Cured by Quaker and Are Willing for the World to Know That It Was the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm That Did It.

The Health Teacher when here had proven to the people of Atlanta the same as he has in thousands of others, that when he came here he brought rejoicing and happiness into thousands of homes that heretofore have been misery and sorrow, not from want or poverty—no, no—but for health and strength. In some homes it was a darling baby or older child whose little life seemed to be ebbing slowly away; in many cases it was worms of some kind that a few doses of Nature's own Quaker Extract would expel, and they were made well. Some homes were sorrowful on account of a poor, weak, run-down mother, who was dragging around from day to day, at times more dead than alive—pain in the back, that tired, languid feeling, could not bear anything tight around her waist, stomach would bloat, belching, shortness of breath, dizziness, headache at times, sometimes did not care to live, and tried every treatment with no relief—but here is where the Quaker Extract shows you Quaker is in a class by itself, for it cures just these kinds of cases, and thousands of women and children are living witnesses to prove it.

The husband and father that provides for home and family the same as Mr. K. F. Horder, No. 70 Fowler street, by occupation a meat cutter at Singleton Market on Cone street, who has had catarrh of the stomach, a soreness most of the time, had like a lump in his throat that he could not get up or down, his bowels very constipated, had to take pills, pellets, salts or something all the time to make them act, should do like him. He got one bottle of Quaker Extract, used it ten days, then said: "Give me three more bottles of Quaker Extract, for it is the best medicine in the world; the pain in my chest is gone, my stomach does not bloat, my bowels are just acting fine, and it's the only medicine I ever took that just toned and seemed to build me right up."

Mrs. E. W. Gorman, who resides at Ninth street, who was laid up three months with rheumatism in arms, shoulders, back and lower limbs so bad that she never put her foot on the floor in weeks, tried every known remedy without even relief, and two bottles of Quaker Extract and two 25c bottles of Oil of Balm have cured her. She now feels like a girl—no aches or pains—and says that Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm did more for her than $100 worth of other medicine.

Now, this is the way the Health Teacher proves what he says. Quaker Remedies cure, even where all others have failed. Hundreds of people have had their hearing restored, the sense of taste and smell all brought back; people with stiff limbs and joints have all been made well. Call at Coursey & Munn's drug store, No. 29 Marietta street, for these Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. We repay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over.

REAL FIGHT FOR LINE BERTHS ON GEORGIA TEAM

Tackle Malone Returns and Will Give Henderson and Turner Royal Struggle.

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—With the presence of Quarterback Paddock, Tackle Malone and End Conklin on the field this afternoon the Georgia crop of football material for 1913 is on hand, and with to-day's workout will begin the real practice of the Red and Black outfit. The past two weeks have been spent in getting what men there have been present in good physical trim. The scrimmaging will begin at once, and by the first game, which comes Saturday against Alabama Presbyterian College, the first line-up will have about been discovered.

The return of Malone gives Cunningham an extra good tackle for emergency in Turner, and it will really be a fight for the next few days as to who will draw these two positions—Malone, Henderson or Turner. Henderson is a certainty, so it seems that Malone and Turner are to fight it out unless one of them is sent to guard, which so far has been looked after by Conyers and Brown. Brown was on the freshman team last year and lacks experience, but has the weight and is fairly fast. Conyers was first substitute in the line, and easily won his letter, and thus has a big call on a regular berth this fall.

Paddock was given a royal welcome by his teammates when he came on the field Saturday afternoon for his initial workout, and there is nothing to it except that this popular player is going to be one of the greatest players in the South before the season closes. He got a late start last year and only played in three or four games, but was then prominently mentioned for all-Southern quarter. He is light, weighing hardly 150 pounds, but is gritty and a good general at running the team.

There has not been an injury so far to any candidate, except one or two "charley horses," and Cunningham is working hard to prevent the loss of any star by this cause. McWhorter has hardly been in a play yet, but has been busy looking after the entire squad. Bob is taking it rather easy this year, anyway, since his experience of last fall, when he was more than a month rounding into form, due mostly from overtraining the early part of the season.

McClellan, who was thinking of entering college, will hardly return this year, as there is some question as to his eligibility, since he did not remain in college very long in 1911, when he played fullback on the Red and Black team.

DEAD ONES ARE DEAD ONES.

"Where are the stars of yesteryear?" quoth I unto a fan.
"The Overalls and Mordy Browns who heaved 'em o'er the pan?
Where is the Peerless Leader gone and where is Johnny Kling?
And where is Harry Steinfeldt, with his strong, unerring wing?
And where is Jimmy Sheckard gone, and where is Realbach now?"
The stranger turned and answered me, with scorn upon his brow:
"I do not know and do not care where all these gents have fled.
Perchance in some secluded spot they rest among the dead.
I do not care for ancient men who carry famous names,
For they are only dead ones now, and dead ones win no games."

GOLF IS SAFEST OF ALL SPORTS, WRITES EVANS

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—I met Mr. Baxter, of the Ridge Country Club, on the street the other day and was horrified to see that he had suffered a severe injury to his right eye. It was badly swollen and blackened and the eyeball itself was a brilliant red. He told me that the accident that resulted so painfully for him occurred at Ridge. Mr. Baxter, Mr. Scott, former city champion, and Mr. McCritcheli were playing at the Ridge. It had rained considerably the day before and part of one of the tees had been staked off. Scott drove off and his ball struck one of the stakes and hit Mr. Baxter's eye on the rebound. It was excruciatingly painful for a few days, but we are glad to say that there is no permanent injury.

Has Been Hit Twice.

It is a peculiar coincidence that two years ago Mr. Baxter was struck on the other eye by a golf ball. Surely he has had much more than his share of injuries, because it is a well-known fact that the golfer is less liable to accident than any other sportsman.

It is true, of course, that a golf ball is of a size to really find a man's eye, and owing to the swiftness with which it travels it can do a great deal of damage, but there are few accidents of that sort on record. The most serious injuries have resulted from the explosion of certain balls when being curiously cut into, and that has been a real danger.

Of the broken bones and dislocated joints, constant attendants of football and the other more strenuous games, we know practically nothing and differences at golf are not settled with the fists.

Perhaps the most prolific source of accident in golf is the tendency to stand too near a player. The golfer who stands rapidly gazing admiringly after a fine ball wriven by a player is in a good position to be struck by the next player. I always look around me when I swing a club.

Evans Cut With Mashie.

When a small boy, and carried away by admiration of another small boy's play, I was cut above the eye with a mashie. A scar for life is the result. Four stitches were necessary to repair the injury, and it was considered lucky that the blow was above the eye. A golf club is indeed a dangerous weapon, and in a difficulty with a highwayman I should at any time prefer one to a revolver. So keep your distance, Mr. Golfer, from the man who is playing, both for your own sake and his.

I heard of a peculiar accident a short time ago. On a rainy day a club slipped from the hand of a golfer in the act of playing and struck another golfer at a parallel hole. There is also a chance of injury when a club handle breaks or the glue loosens in a wooden club and the head flies off.

But, on the whole, let us be thankful that golf is a comparatively safe game and we are not as football players are.

DENVER WINS FLAG.

DENVER, COLO., Sept. 29.—By defeating Des Moines yesterday Denver won the pennant in the Western League for the third consecutive time. Post-season series games will the winner of the American Association pennant are being negotiated for by the owners of Denver, to begin October 7.

JACKETS ARE FEELING FINE AFTER GAME

IN spite of the heat and the earliness of the season, the Tech Yellow Jackets came through the fray with the Soldiers Saturday without an injury or a strain that might prove in any way severe. The usual unpleasant soreness and stiffness of joints and ligaments, of course, was very noticeable yesterday, but a bit of good old heel-and-toe walking 'cross country took most of the lameness away, and the squad reported fit and fine this morning.

The next game, scheduled for Saturday at Grant Field, is with the Charleston Citadel team, always a good, stiff contender, especially in the early part of the season. That team has been working out a week longer than the McPherson bunch, and will be in excellent shape for a hard battle Saturday, while there is no doubt that the rival of Clemson and the University of South Carolina will be inspired with plenty of ambition to trim the Jackets.

Tech Line Looked Good.

While most of the interest among the Saturday spectators centered in the performance of the backfield by reason of the new men and their excellent rating, it was noted by careful students of the game that the Heisman line was showing unusual form for a green line in the opening game.

The charging was uniformly low and hard, and the heavier Soldiers could do little to upset it. There were plenty of minor defects, naturally, and a lack of that machine-like swing and dash that characterizes the seasoned forwards. But it must have been quite reassuring to Heisman to note the manner in which the line stuck to its work and kept its cleats in the ground.

Backfield Unchanged.

The backfield probably will work through the next two games with the same personnel used against the Soldiers, at least until Gene Patten's knee permits him to get back in the going.

Preas and Johnston showed a lot of stuff, and promise to develop into A-1 backs, while Homer Cook, always a hard and conscientious performer last year, more than upheld his reputation in the opening game, and McDonald showed every bit of his regular form. Fielder, shot into the game fresh, celebrated his debut with one of the longest and most spectacular runs of the day, and showed up well while he was in harness.

Battle for End Jobs.

There already is a pretty competition on among Cusnman, Goree and Lucas for an end job, and it will be even keener when Thomasson returns to the squad. Johnston is pretty sure to get one of the positions, and Heisman will have plenty of speed and ambition to choose from in selecting his running mate.

The line-up in next Saturday's game will supply a fair idea of what the coach intends to make his 1913 machine, and by the following week the work will be pointing directly toward the big games of the season.

HERRICK BEATS HIGGINS.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Completely dazed from the start, Al Higgins, from Roswell, N. Mex., lost to Jack Herrick, of Kewanee, Ill., yesterday in the fourth round of a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Juarez arena.

Francis Ouimet's Own Story

Our Golfers Equal of Britons'

The youth who amazed the golf world by capturing the open championship of the United States and also defeating Vardon and Ray, the English champions, is going to furnish the readers of The Georgian with a series of interesting articles. Ouimet's story to-day gives his impressions of British golfers and also a comparison between the stars of England and this country. The stories will be both interesting and instructive.

By Francis Ouimet.

IN my article to-day I shall give my impressions of British golfers and compare the leading golf stars of England with those of the United States. There are thousands of people in this country, and even more throughout Europe, who believe that the British golfers are far superior to those in Uncle Sam's land.

Personally, I fail to agree with those who claim that American golfers are not every bit as good as our friends across the Atlantic. There is very little difference between our ten best golfers and the ten leading stars in Great Britain.

There are ten or more professionals in this country who play remarkable golf. When they are in their best form they are always unbeatable. I have closely studied the work of the leading professionals, and I firmly believe they are capable of holding their own with all comers.

The professionals, however, are not the only good golfers in the United States. The amateurs in this country are also sterling players and many of them are able to give a fine account of themselves against the best players in the world. Our amateur players are not quite as good as those in England and Scotland, but they are nevertheless good men.

Travers Perfect Golfer.

Take for example Jerome D. Travers. This man is a perfect golf wizard. He may always be relied upon to make a good showing. He is a cool, steady player, and does not let anything ruffle him.

"Chick" Evans is another great American golfer. He has won first place in many important tournaments and is sure to be ranked among the "headliners" for many more years.

John G. Anderson and Heinrich Schmidt are two other good American golfers. Schmidt opened the eyes of the British golfing world earlier in the year when he played in the British championships. It took H. H. Hilton, the best amateur golfer in Europe, to vanquish the gallant Worcester lad.

With such stars as those mentioned above competing for Old Glory in the big tournaments, I am sure that the American public will never have reason to be ashamed of the work of their players.

British Golfers High Class.

The golf displayed by the British golfers was of a very high class. They showed to very good advantage throughout the tournament, with the possible exception of the last few holes in the Saturday play-off, when Mr. Vardon made several serious mistakes at the crucial stage of the round.

They showed a great knowledge of the various shots, such as a slice, pull, pitch shot with run, and the cut shot. This latter shot is very effective, and is used mostly to keep the ball near the hole, especially on a keen green.

When played properly, it leaves little to do on the putting greens.

Their putting is fairly good on the whole, with the possible exception of Harry Vardon. He is lamentably weak in this department of the game, and shows a timidity on short putts such as I have never seen before. He hits the ball with a quick, jerky stroke, and is constantly afraid of missing the hole. It does seem too bad, because this really great golfer suffers on this shot.

With Ray it is different. A big, strapping chap, who hits the ball hard, getting terrific distances. The few times I have seen him play made me think that Ray was inclined to be off the line of play occasionally.

His play is very sound for all of that, and he might be considered a very dangerous man on the putting greens, as he putts boldly and for the back of the cup, being exceptionally accurate on his approach putting.

E. H. BARRETT WINS MATCH AT 37TH GREEN

THE closing match of the last tournament of 1913 at East Lake wound up with a most brilliant bit of golf, by which E. H. Barnett won the T. A. Hammond trophy, 1 up, on the first green of the course, sinking a 20-foot putt for a 2 on what was the thirty-seventh hole of the hardest match of the season. J. O. Smith, his opponent, just missed his own long putt for a 2, and was down for a par 3.

The match was well played throughout, and at no time was either contestant in the way of a commanding lead. It was a fitting finish for the best golfing season the Atlanta Athletic Club has ever enjoyed—and probably for the last big tournament that will be played on the present course, which now is being redesigned into what will doubtless be one of America's sportiest inland courses.

In the second flight W. R. Tichenor defeated W. J. Tilson, 2 up and 1 to play, in a close and well-played match.

Perry Adair defeated Scott Hudson in the finals of the third flight, 2 and 1; J. B. Pollard won in the fourth flight over E. T. Winston; and the fifth flight also developed an extra hole match between E. G. Beaudry and H. H. Albert, the former winning 1 up in nineteen holes.

Ex-President's Son After Place on Team

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 29.—Princeton football players to-day heard with interest that in a few years they may have on the Tiger team Richard Cleveland, son of the late President Grover Cleveland. Young Cleveland is a student in Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., but will enter Princeton next year. He is 15 years old and weighs 160 pounds, and is striving hard to make his class team this year. He has already distinguished himself as a hockey player.

DENIES SALE TO CUBS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 29.—Ed R. Maies, president and principal owner of the Venice team, of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, denied to-day that he had sold Pitcher Kostner to President Murphy, of the Chicago club, of the National League.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Frank Baker, the Eastern lightweight, who has done some boxing around these parts, is back in our midst again. Baker is a likely looking chap and has a good record. Frank is anxious to get on with some of our local boys and says he does not fear any of them. Baker has met such boys as Benny Kaufman, Tommy Lavelle and Curley Jordan.

* * *

Jim Coffroth, the coast promoter, has decided to give Arthur Pelky a chance in his arena. Coffroth has wired Charley Miller, who is in New York, an offer to box Tommy Burns' protege next month. Pelky has already agreed to the match.

* * *

"Wildcat" Fearns strengthened his claim to the welterweight title last week when he defeated Billy Walters in a 10-round battle at Kenosha, Wis. Walters was one of the leading candidates for the title and recently held Fearns to a 15-round draw. A 20-round go between Fearns and Mike Gibbons ought to prove a banner attraction.

* * *

Gunboat Smith and Carl Morris have signed articles to meet in a 10-round go at Madison Square Garden, New York on the evening of October 9. Both men will begin active training the early part of this week.

* * *

Spider Britt, local bantamweight, left Saturday night for Knoxville, Tenn. Britt has bouts pending there with Al Smith and Kid Underwood. If Britt fights in form he should have little trouble beating both these boys.

* * *

Despite recent defeats at the hands of Charley Lee, Kid Young is still wanted by promoters. Young secured two matches last week and if he manages to win both of them he will not lack for work in the padded ring. He boxes Charlie Lee in a 6-round contest at a local theater to-morrow night and meets Mike Kelly at Athens, Ga., next month.

* * *

When Dan McKetrick sails for Paris from New York on October 4 he will take the following fighters with him: Frank Moran and Joe Jeannette, heavyweights; Tommy Gavigan and Otto Kohler, middleweights; Young Ahearn and Gene Delmont, lightweights. This is surely some collection.

* * *

A grand reception awaits Willie Ritchie when he arrives in New York. Jack Britton, Tommy Murphy and Leach Cross will be demanding fights with the champion. However, before Willie gets to the Eastern city he will probably meet a sterling boxer, Charlie White, at Milwaukee. And remember this, Mr. White has a dandy kick in his left hand that he will work overtime if he ever gets into the same ring with Ritchie.

* * *

Terry Nelson, Greek battler, writes from Chattanooga that he has started light work for his bout with Joe Sherman at Jacksonville. Nelson is also after a match with either Danny Goodman or Jimmy Murphy at Terre Haute, Ind.

KLAUS BATTLES M'GOORTY FOR 'MIDDLE' TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Back in 1908, June 4, to be exact, Milwaukee was alive with fight fans who gathered to see the bringing out of a new champion, Stanley Ketchel, who won a ten round battle from Billy Papke by a big margin. To-night in that same city another gathering of fight fans will witness Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and Eddie McGoorty go ten rounds.

The clash won't mean the bringing out of a new champion, but mighty near such a thing, for though Jack Dillon and Jimmy Clabby have a right to dispute any one claiming such honors, McGoorty and Klaus to-day hold the highest rank in the middleweight division. In short, the victor to-night, if the victory be decisive, will loom up as the man the others must beat to dispute his title.

There will be no decision at the close of ten rounds, should the battle go the full distance, for referees' decisions are barred by the laws that govern the game, but the newspaper boys will be at the ringside to tell the merits of the game.

To-night's clash carries with it international interest. Not that either of the lads hails from foreign shores, but because of their battles abroad. Both McGoorty and Klaus have fought in the far-off lands and each is known all over the world. Klaus is famed abroad for his decisive win over Georges Carpentier, the French champion, and for his victory over Billy Papke, another battle fought on foreign grounds.

Other minor bouts have been waged in France by Klaus, but these made him known to the foreign ring. His American worth has been of top-notch caliber, hence the unprejudiced scribes' reason for handing him the best in the 158-pound division.

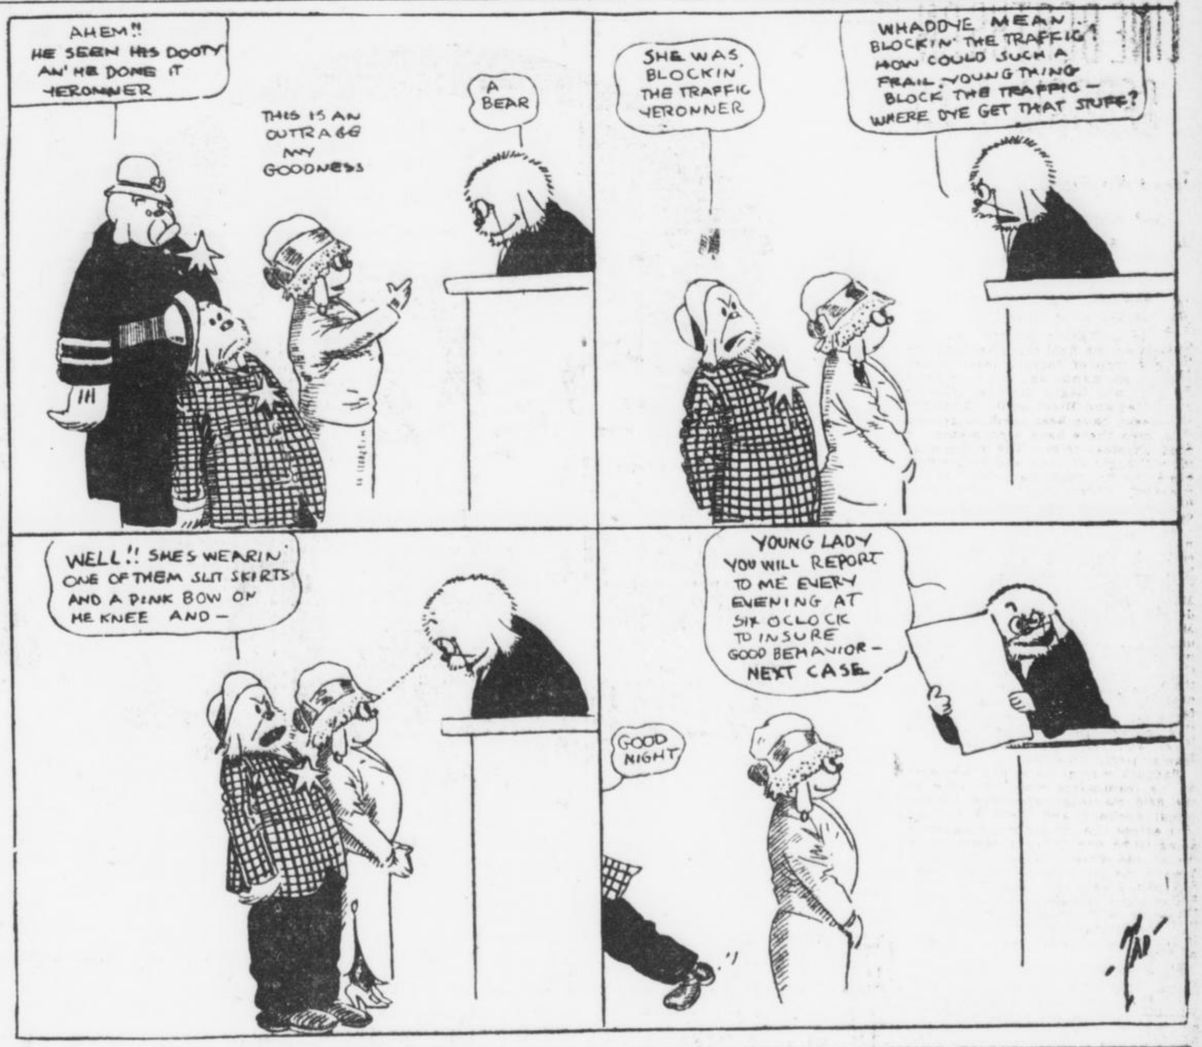
SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT



ONLY TWO MORE MEN TO REPORT IN AUBURN CAMP

By Mike Donahue.

AUBURN, ALA., Sept. 29.—With the arrival of Pitts and Lockwood it has been possible to get some idea of what the Auburn line-up is going to look like. With the exception of Taylor, the 190-pound candidate for fullback, and Christopher, who has not yet arrived, the entire squad is on the field and working hard. There are a few minor injuries that are still keeping some of the players on the side-lines, but none of them is serious.

* * *

THERE are quite a number of candidates for the places left vacant by Lamb and Meadows. The most prominent candidates for right tackle is Conisell, who is an active and aggressive player as well as a good punter. Steed and Culpepper are two other likely candidates for this place. These players are not as heavy as tackles ought to be. For the other tackle, Essinger is the most promising. He has taken on a lot of extra weight since last year and is in much better condition. He promises to develop into a worthy successor to Meadows. Cleveland a new man, knows a good deal about tackle play, and Martin, a scrub, is playing the kind of a game that is bound to win promotion. Robinson is holding down right end in his usual style, which means that ground gaining will be somewhat scarce around his territory. He has a very competent understudy in Haisten, who is a natural defensive player and is rapidly learning the offensive side of the game. At the opposite end Wynne, a last year's scrub, is playing a game not much inferior to Robinson's. He has good weight and is strongly built.

* * *

FROM end to end this is a formidable looking aggregation, but it will take a few games to find out its real ability. With the exception of Lockwood and Thigpen none of them has taken part in a real big game. Two of the places in the backfield will be taken care of by Newell and Arnold. Newell will play left half as usual while Arnold has been shifted to quarter. He is rapidly learning the business of running a team. For the fullback position there are several good, light men—Harris, Christopher, Hart, Bedez and Sparkman. They all drive hard but have not the necessary weight to carry them through the secondary defense. Kearley has been shifted to the backfield and is trying for right-half. He is being rested at present on account of an attack of charley horse. Another very promising candidate for the position is Prendergast, a new man, who has the requisite speed and weight for a first-class halfback. If he can assimilate college football rapidly enough he will be a valuable man this year.

WOLGAST PURCHASES RANCH.

CADILLAC, MICH., Sept. 29.—Ad Wolgast closed a deal with former Mayor Fred L. Heath, of Hastings, Mich., paying Heath $17,000 for a ranch near Medford, Oreg. The former lightweight champion now owns two Oregon ranches, a Michigan farm and considerable valuable live stock.

FOOTBALL

Gridiron Gossip

No revolutionary changes in gridiron practice were ordered this week in consequence of the games Satruday. The outcome of the contests had been confidently predicted and there were no surprises. Cornell, although catching a tartar in Colgate, promises to be a bigger factor in the Eastern football situation this season than for a long time. Pennsylvania apparently has a much stronger team than last year, while Yale, Harvard and Princeton all showed much promise.

* * *

Tom Shelvin, former Yale star, has joined the Blue coaching staff at New Haven. Signal practice was ordered for to-day at Yale, but there will be some secret sessions later in the week.

* * *

Every member of the Carlisle eleven was in excellent condition to-day, not a redskin having been injured in the game with West Virginia Saturday.

* * *

Kicking and catching punts will keep the Harvard backfield men busy this week. Hardwick and Willets, two of the Crimson's most dependable backs, are expected to patch up their difficulties with the faculty this week so they can get into the game.

* * *

In preparation for the Fordham game Saturday, Princeton will be sent through some stiff sessions of practice this week. The bulk of attention will be given to kicking. Captain Hobey Baker, who was slightly hurt Saturday, is improving after his rest over Sunday.

* * *

A movement is on foot to abolish secret practice. Captain Ketcham, of Yale, wrote to the captains of the Princeton and Harvard elevens offering to do away with secret practice, but the plan fell through.

* * *

Two "big nine" football elevens were well started in the battle for place in the conference, and the other seven today began more snappy work, spurred by the knowledge that Minnesota and Indiana will both be contenders for first place. Indiana piled up a score of 48 to 3 in the game with DePauw Saturday and Minnesota made 14 while the strong South Dakota eleven went scoreless. It was generally admitted that the Minnesota men did not extend themselves against South Dakota.

* * *

Coach Zuppke, of Illinois, to-day ordered his players to discard the broad stripe of orange on their stockings and to wear plain blue. The glaring stripe was too good a mark for tacklers.

White Sox to Train On Coast Next Year

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—The Chicago American League team will train in California next season. President Comiskey made the announcement yesterday. Because of the world's tour of the Chicago team and the New York Nationals there has been some doubt as to the local club's training plans.

Only a part of the Sox will make the world's tour. The rest of the team will assemble on the Pacific Coast late in February. The players who make the world's tour will join them a fortnight later.

Alabama Works Hard For Georgia Game

ANNISTON, Sept. 29.—"Red" Moore, the Washington and Lee star who is coaching the Alabama Presbyterian College football squad, is rapidly rounding his men into form for the initial clash with Georgia on October 4.

"Blondy" Archibald, Stevenson, Green and others of last year's squad are showing their old-time form and there is said to be some good material among the new students who have arrived.

Leaves Fall, Gridiron Sizzles, and Ouimet's Name Adorns Sport Pages

BUT IT IS NOTED THAT BASEBALL STILL HANGS ON

By O. B. Keeler.

THE leaves are falling, as they usually do in the fall. There is perceptible in the shaking air a muttering and a roaring of a thousand football fields. The crop of pigskin alibis already is blossoming. And interspersed is a heavy sprinkling of dope concerning a Young Person actually named Ouimet, and some older persons known (familiarly) as Vardon and Ray.

But hither and yon, or somewhere in that neighborhood, we still manage to collect an occasional earful concerning a Regular Game—a more regular game, maybe.

And we realize, in our more or less lucid moments, that Baseball still is in our midst, or a trifle to the northeastward.

The Big Series still is to play.

* * *

ALONG with other whispers comes the report of classy performances by Rivington Bisland and Clyde Wares, Southern League stars obtained by the St. Louis Browns. We note also that Elmer $7,000 Brown, ex-Billiken, held the Giants entirely hitless during the six innings he worked for Brooklyn recently. Which must have reminded Mr. McGraw (sadly) of a certain other Mr. Brown, who was wont to toil on occasions of large importance at the Polo Grounds in years gone by.

* * *

THERE was little doubt that Bisland would make good, especially after he was injected into the wrecked and ruined system of the hapless Browns. And the Browns don't look nearly so hopeless, by the way.

With Derrill Pratt on first base, Wares at second, Bisland at short and Austin at third, the tail-end contenders will have a very flossy inner defense to open the ball next year.

And that inner defense thing does help out.

If you don't believe it, try to recall some consistently-winning ball club that didn't have a good infield.

SPEAKING of the Browns, it crops up that there is a ball club without any record-breaking ability whatever—unless it is for Sliding Down the Cellar Door—which, nevertheless, is the most feared and respected record-buster of all ball clubs.

Last season the Browns stopped Walter Johnson's winning streak. This year they flagged Joe Boehling after he had copped eleven in a row. The Athletics had won fifteen successive games when the lowly Browns bumped them. They put over a tally on W. Johnson after he had traveled 56 2-3 scoreless innings.

And last Wednesday the Browns crippled Cal Brown and Stuffy McInnis, of the Athletics, in the same game.

The last instance is not mentioned ill-naturedly. It is merely chucked in as ligniappe, or good measure, to show that the habit of record-busting is strong upon the Browns.

Maybe it will be strong enough to extract them from the Cellar Class in 1914—what?

That would be pretty strong.

REVERTING for the moment to R. Bisland, Wallop Smith, now with Washington, comes to the front with a large number of ornate remarks concerning his ex-side-kick.

Smith is in St. Louis for the winter, mainly because he lives there. Following are Mr. Smith's remarks about Mr. Bisland, quoted in part, as there are space limitations:

"If Bisland doesn't make good with the Browns I wouldn't give four cents for my chance to stick with the Senators—and Griffith bought me at that. And I feel pretty confident.

"Bisland is a natural ball player, if ever there was one in this world. He is one of the fastest men in the short field I ever saw, and if he has a weakness there I failed to spot it, playing a whole season on both sides of him. He goes with equal ease to either side. Picking up bounders in deep short and shooting them over to first is pie for the kid, and the only thing he likes as well is to race over back of second, scoop one in his glove, and nail the runner by a step at first. Often and often I would get over to second as fast as I could, just miss the ball, and come up just in time to see Bizzy whipping it over."

Following which, Wallie went on to praise Bisland's hitting ability, especially in the pinches, and had a few kind words to say of his speed in starting two-ply killings or performing as middleman in the double plays.

If Hedges got all of it, he ought to raise Bizzy's pay at once.

* * *

EVEN at this distance, we can see one redeeming feature in connection with the poor showing of the New York Yankees this season.

If they had done well after their spring training excursion to Bermuda, all the other clubs would have wanted to train there in 1914.

Whereupon the scent of the onion would have been abroad in the land, whether the annual Lemon Crop was a success or not.

* * *

IT doesn't look humanly possible to avoid taking sides in the world's series row much longer. We're going to look up some dope on the situation—and some more dope, maybe—and after that it may appear feasible to let the General Public in on the deal.

How far in, is another Question.

YANKEE CYCLE CHAMP LOSES.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Donald McDougall, world's amateur title-tolder last year, went down to defeat yesterday before the superior speed of William Bailey, England's amateur cycle champion, in straight heats in their two-thirds of a mile match at the Veldrome here.

FLICKENSTEIN REAL DEMON ON MOTORCYCLE

A THREE-CORNERED match race between Tex Richards, Morty Graves and Newman Flickenstein will be one of the big features offered at the reopening of the Motordrome Tuesday night. The trio will meet in three heats, the first being a mile, the next two miles and the third five miles.

Graves' new machine is going great guns these days; Richards' famous "23" has always been considered one of the fastest in the world, and Flickenstein, who recently joined the daredevil squad in Chattanooga, has beaten both Richards and Graves.

As a result both Tex and Morty are out for revenge Tuesday night. They admit that Flickenstein can get over 90 miles and hour out of his "boat," but that doesn't seem to worry them any.

The other big event on the card is a twenty-mile race in which all the riders will compete. There should be thrills enough for the most rabid fan in this long, furious grind.

Arthur Chappelle, the world's champion motorcycle rider, is expected to arrive here to-day, and he may start Tuesday night.

Women Take Part In Baseball Riots

CUMBERLAND, MD., Sept. 29.—The baseball game yesterday at Midland between Cumberland and Midland was marked by a series of riots, and the 2,500 spectators were in frequent mix-ups, in which women proved to be even more aggressive than men.

The first wrangle occurred in the second inning when C. Loppold, of the Cumberland team, was struck by a Midland player. In the sixth inning Manager Nelson W. Russter, of Cumberland, was hit during a dispute. In the meantime a turmoil ensued in the grandstand, where women were fighting almost constantly.

Two women fought for nearly half an hour and men were unable to separate them. They scratched each other and used handbags as weapons. Four separate fights occurred in the grandstand.

Women Golfers Clash For Canadian Title

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—Play in the Canadian golf championship tournament for women began on the course of the Royal Montreal Golf Club here this morning. Miss Mabel Harrison, Miss Muriel Dodd and Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, champion women golfers of Great Britain, are prominent contenders for the Canadian title. After leaving Montreal, the three British women will go to Wilmington, Del., and endeavor to lift the American championship in the match to be played the week after next.

FODDER FOR FANS

The New York Yankees will have to hustle this week to get out of last place in the American League, for the Browns gained on them by defeating the Tigers yesterday. The White Sox began the farewell week by blanking the Ceveland Naps, who became more firmly lodged in third place.

* * *

Opinion over the merits and demerits of the Giants and Athletics is pretty evenly divided. Even among the experts each club has its defenders. George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, and a keen judge, picks the Giants, while Napoleon Lajoie, of the Cleveland Naps, one of the "old masters" of the game, picks the Athletics.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Naps, believes that poor pitching will cost the Athletics the world's championship and predicts that New York will take four straight games.

* * *

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, has come out against the ruling of the national commission that players eligible to compete in the world's series may not write baseball articles about the post-season games. One New York paper is already advertising expert stories of the games by Christy Mathewson.

* * *

When the National League season ends the Brooklyn Dodgers will make a tour of Pennsylvania and the South.

* * *

The Cardinals and Browns will play a seven-game series for the championship of St. Louis beginning October 6.

* * *

The Boston Red Sox are scheduled to play three consecutive double-headers with the Yankees beginning at he Polo Grounds this afternoon.

* * *

Milwaukee has won the pennant in the American Association and Denver in the Western League.

Gibbons and Kelly To Box at Kenosha

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, and "Spike" Kelly, of Chicago, signed articles last night to box ten rounds at Kenosha, Wis., on October 10. The match, according to the promoters, will be for the welterweight championship. The men agreed to weigh 145 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the fight.

RICHARDS ENTERS CORNELL.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Alva Richards, who won the high jump at the Stockholm Olympic games, has entered Cornell Agricultural College and reported to Track Coach Moakley. Richards competed for the Illinois Athletic Club in the national championships at Chicago last summer and it is understood that he has not severed his connections with the Chicago club.

Emory Opens Gridiron Season on October 13

EMORY COLLEGE, OXFORD, GA., Sept. 29.—Emory's interclass football team has selected October 13 as the date for the gridiron season to open. Two games will be played that afternoon, the first being when the seniors and juniors meet, and the second will be the sophomore-freshman battle.

The juniors are already down to hard work. This eleven won the 1912 pennant, and have returned every member of the team for work this year. Coach Shingler has not been out yet, owing to his accident when his arm was broken while attempting to crank an automobile.

DUNDEE VS. AZEVEDO.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Johnny Dundee and Joe Azevedo were matched yesterday to box twenty rounds on October 14 at the Vernon arena here. They will meet as lightweights.

Why Is Thaw Made a Hero in New Hampshire---as He Was in Canada?

The Answer Is Simple: People Do Not Like White Slavers and Vile Debauches of the Stanford White Type. And They Do Not Like the Friends of Stanford White That Are Now Hounding Thaw.

(Copyright, 1913.)

A newspaper filled with sympathy for the late Stanford White asks the following question:

"Is Thaw a hero in New Hampshire as he was in Canada because he is notorious, or because he is rich, or because there is genuine popular sympathy for him, or is his popularity due to the fact that he and his money are making a joke of law and justice?"

Here is the answer:

Thaw is made a hero in New Hampshire, he is applauded by good citizens, not so much because of his own qualities, Heaven knows, as BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WANT TO SEE JUSTICE DONE TO HIM AT LAST.

The citizens of the country know that he has been kept in the insane asylum—although he is not insane—through the efforts of the friends of Stanford White, who was about the vilest product of degradation that could possibly be conceived.

The people know that Thaw was declared insane by a jury for the simple reason that the jury would not condemn him for having killed such a creature as Stanford White. And the newspaper that we quote probably knows that also.

The people know that Thaw, now, at least, is not insane. They know that so far from being helped by his millions—or rather by the millions of his mother—the money actually hinders him. If he were an ordinary citizen, without wealth, and if Stanford White, the vile white slaver, had fewer powerful friends, THAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FREE LONG AGO.

The people like fair play in New Hampshire, in New York, and in every State in the Union.

That is why in every State, if the matter were left to a public vote, Thaw would be set free.

This newspaper considers the case AS IT STANDS TO-DAY.

Thaw was declared insane by a jury that would not vote to execute him for having killed Stanford White.

The law says that a man who commits a crime and is declared insane shall be kept locked up unless his sanity returns. As soon as he is sane he is to be set free.

Only the friends of Stanford White, a few newspapers that sympathize with White, and some specialists, especially paid, declare that Thaw is insane.

He is at least as sane as 75 per cent of the population. And he is not only sane, but has shown remarkable intelligence in his determined efforts to obtain freedom, in his dealings with tricky lawyers, and in his answers to judicial questions.

Inasmuch as Thaw is, or was, detained by New York State as an insane man, and inasmuch as his conduct during his incarceration and since he fled from the asylum would clearly indicate that he is sane, justice demands that he be set free—as the law provides.

Justice does NOT demand that he be returned to life imprisonment TO OBLIGE THE FRIENDS, JOURNALISTIC AND OTHERWISE, OF THE DEGRADED BRUTE WHOM HE KILLED.

Fortunately, Thaw is in the hands of a Federal judge. He is not at the mercy of any court especially chosen to send him back to the insane asylum. He is not at the mercy of the distinguished legal gentlemen who make a special point of hounding him—for excellent pay, no doubt.

He will have his day in court, and will probably not be sent back to life imprisonment in an insane asylum for having killed Stanford White, whose death certainly saved from shame, degradation and horror many helpless girls.

No civilized human being would plead the unwritten law, or put the right of an individual taking justice into his own hands above the law.

And any sane man who commits a murder for whatever reason should be punished for murder. Yet, if ever there was a killing that was justified, it was the killing of Stanford White, AND HIS MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS KNOW THAT THAT IS SO.

They know that his pastime was the pursuit and the destruction of unfortunate women. They know that he spent his money and his time in the committing of crime compared with which murder committed in anger is as nothing.

It is not a good, healthy or wise thing to have a man who has committed murder, such as Thaw, lionized, applauded and made much of. But the fault is with the degenerate associates and admirers of Stanford White who viciously pursue Thaw and create public sympathy for him.

And the fault is with the machinery of justice that in one or two instances at least has seemed afraid to deal justly with Thaw.

Far better let the man go in a proper and orderly manner, taking with him the sympathy and the thanks of those who best understood the character and the crimes of Stanford White.

Lock him up again in Matteawan, and you will not settle the question or dispose of it.

The people in New Hampshire, as in Canada, make a hero of Thaw because they do not like Stanford White, and because they do not like the idea that the associates, friends and defenders of that vile degenerate have influence enough to deprive a man of his liberty when the law says that being sane he should be set free.

Dr. Parkhurst Writes on Immortality

Many Hope Death Is End of All, but Deep Thinkers Believe This Is Only the Beginning of á Future and Better Life.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

HOWEVER occupied people may be with the affairs of this life, there are few, if any, who do not sometimes throw their thoughts forward toward a possible life to come. It is safe to say that there is more of this forecasting of another world than has outward expression given to it.

A few are hoping that there is nothing more for them after death, being more than satisfied with what they have had already. Some simply brood over the possibilities of immortality wonderingly. The most, by far the most, are trusting that the few years we pass here are nothing more than the beginning of life, its vestibule, feeling that conditions, as they exist now require something additional in order to their explanations and justification.

It is probable that there is less general belief in immortality than there was fifty years ago. When a boy, as I remember it, a man who expressed doubt in the doctrine was regarded as queer, as a mental and moral defective. Nothing, so far as appears, has in the meantime been discovered to invalidate the doctrine, and the change that has transpired in men's opinions is considerably due to the attitude of the scientists.

Scientists Have Failed to Prove We Are Immortal.

The scientists have not discovered that we are NOT immortal, but have simply failed to discover that we ARE immortal; and there is no reason why they should not have failed, for the mind, the immortal part of us, if there be any immortal part, is not a matter that scientists have any concern with, or any special qualification or equipment for investigating.

A man who knows one thing with considerable thoroughness is liable to imagine that large value therefore attaches to his opinion upon other matters, however distinct they may be from the particular subject upon which he is specially informed.

That states the precise condition of mind of certain investigators who have accomplished distinguished results in their study of matter, and who therefore consider that they are authorities upon questions of mind, spirit and immortality. Which is as unreasoning as for a mathematical genius to claim that because he is an adept in questions of quantity his opinion should therefore carry in problems of art.

What has just been said is stated, only in different words, by one of the most distinguished scientists of our generation, Sir Oliver Lodge, a man of such eminence as to have been elected to the presidency of the British Association, a body which may be defined as the organized scientific intelligence of the British Empire.

Sir Oliver, whose accomplishments in physics and chemistry have won for him such preferment, is sufficiently broad in his appreciations to realize that however far he may have carried his chemical researches, he has not thereby been brought across the frontier of the territory of mind and consciousness; that the principles and methods applicable to the study of matter do not apply to questions of soul and religion, so that the negative attitude which a scientist, as such, may occupy as toward soul, God and immortality has no bearing pro or contra upon the question of the existence of the soul, of God and of immortality.

All of this the president of the British Association has recently stated frankly and developed in detail in his presidential address delivered before that body.

Address Is Practically a Rebuke to His Colleagues.

The address is practically a rebuke to some of his colleagues for failing to realize that mind is not matter, and that so essential is the difference between them that the pursuit of scientific methods of inquiry will not carry them into the region of mind, and that for them to deny the existence of a world above matter, because they have been able to achieve so much in the world that is within matter without discovering in it a soul or a God, is a bare presumption and the exercise of intellectual arrogance.

Such a deliverance from so great an authority is a serious matter, and I wish the readers of this newspaper would give earnest attention to the contents of this article, for it has been written with a view to rebuking and correcting the careless and thoughtless thinking, of which there is so much, even among intelligent people, and that, too, in regard to questions that are of the utmost moment.

It would not be fair to the truth nor to Sir Oliver Lodge to close this article without adding that while he has not arrived at his convictions, regarding things which eye hath not seen, by the pursuit of scientific methods, he is nevertheless, and on other grounds, a firm believer in the great invisible world and in the God who is enthroned in it, as is evidenced by the two subjoined quotations from his superb address:

"It is my function to remind you and myself that our studies do not exhaust the universe, and that if we dogmatize in a negative direction, and say that we can reduce everything to physics and chemistry, we gibbet ourselves as ludicrously narrow pedants, and are falling far short of the richness and fullness of our human birthright.

"How far preferable is the reverent attitude of the Eastern poet:

"'The world with eyes bent upon Thy feet stands in awe with all its silent stars.'

"We are deaf and blind, therefore, to the imminent grandeur around us unless we have insight enough to appreciate the whole, and to recognize in the woven fabric of existence, flowing steadily from the loom in an infinite progress toward perfection, the ever-growing garment of a transcendent God."

Writes on

Misfortunes

Are You Not Better for Them? If Not, You Have Failed to Learn Life's Lesson in Self-Development.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

YOU who complain bitterly of your troubles and sorrows turn your gaze inward for a time and see what these experiences have done for you.

Are you not stronger in soul, braver in mind, and more self-reliant because of your misfortunes?

Have you not a deeper understanding of human nature, and a larger sympathy for your fellowmen through having known trouble?

If you ask yourself these questions, and if you answer in the negative then rest assured more trouble will be sent you.

Sorrows Will Come Until You Learn Sympathy and Compassion.

Just as the scholar who has not learned his lessons at school is given the same lessons over and over again, so will you be given sorrow after sorrow and trouble after trouble, until you learn the great lesson of sympathy and compassion.

First of all in thinking of your misfortunes, remember you have brought them on yourself. Not in this life, perhaps, but in former lives. We have all lived many lives; and by our thoughts and deeds and desires we have fashioned our bodies and our circumstances.

If in other lives you were wasteful and selfish and improvident and idle, you come into this life poor and without friends or influence.

It is simply your life lesson of self-development given you again to learn. Industry, self-control, economy, are the next lessons.

By patient persistence you will learn them all; and then independence and usefulness and happiness will be yours.

If you did not appreciate love and affection in your last incarnation you will be deprived of these blessings for a time in this life; but if you give freely, even though you do not receive, and if you develop every loving impulse, and ask for no return, and if you refuse to think of your misfortunes, and persist in thinking of your great privilege in being allowed to do for others, then love and affection shall come to you eventually.

Remember the words of the great Master, Christ:

"I came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Of all His sayings, this is one of the greatest and one least quoted by His followers.

How Few of Us Minister as We Might to Others.

We all seem to feel resentment that we are not ministered unto continually.

And how few of us minister as we might to others.

THREE FRIENDS.

Of all the blessings which my life has known,
I value most, and most praise God for three—
Want, Loneliness and Pain, those comrades true,
Who masqueraded in the garb of foes
For many a year, and filled my heart with dread.
Yet fickle joys, like false, pretentious friends,
Have proved less worthy than this trio. First,
Want taught me labor, led me up the steep
And toilsome paths to hills of pure delight,
Trod only by the feet that know fatigue,
And yet press on until the heights appear.
Then Loneliness and hunger of the heart
Sent me upreaching to the realms of space,
'Till all the silences grew eloquent,
And all their loving forces hailed me friend.
Last, Pain taught prayer; placed in my hand the staff
Of close communion with the over-soul,
That I might lean upon it to the end,
And find myself made strong for any strife.
And then these three who had pursued my steps
Like stern, relentless foes, year after year,
Unmasked, and turned their faces full on me,
And lo! they were divinely beautiful,
For through them shone the lustrous eyes of Love.

:-: The Wail of the Freaks :-:

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

An expression of opinion given after learning that Secretary of State Bryan was going out for two weeks with a tent show, the news being furnished by the press agent.

THE Armless Wonder gnashed his teeth and clenched his feet in rage.
"I'm through with art for good," he yelled, "I'm gonna quit the stage!
I used to headline every bill, and have my name of nights
Spelt out above the theater in big electric lights.
The Yodling Goat, the Thinking Pig, the Juggling Japanee,
And even the Eight-Legged Cow all stood aside for me.
But look at this here note I got—it makes me fairly ill—
'This week the Old Doc's Talking Act will lead you on the bill!'"

"NOW ain't that just the fiercest stuff?" the Fair Circassian cried.
"When I was told my date was killed I nearly like to died.
I've been the hit in every show from Coney to Fort Lee;
Not even the Three-Headed Man had anything on me.
But that is always just the way: You think you're goin' strong,
And spend your money free an' then some new freak comes along.
I never seen the Old Doc work, but he has put me wise
To one best bet in this perfesh: 'It pays to advertise.'"

"I'SPOSE," said the Contortionist, with a despairing sob,
"It's all because the President has gave this guy a job.
Them Socialists has got it right; it's unfair competition
For us poor freaks to play against a Cabinet position.
But still this Doc has got some act. Of course, it has its faults,
But he's a wonder when it comes to throwing somersaults.
And on the stage he's worked on most, when he has got in trouble,
And has to get out good and quick, he always does 'em double."

"CUT out the knocks," the Fat Man said: "choke off the hammer songs,
An' let a guy that's got the goods butt in where he belongs.
When tryin' to be President he couldn't land his stall,
But in this circus-midway game he's got it on us all.
I've seen him give three shows a day an' turn up fresh and bright
To sit in with the treasurer and count the house at night.
If Kipling still was on his job I'll bet the ink he'd fling
In writin' out a song like this that you mutts ought to sing:

"Oh, the Doc! Doc! Doc!
He has chased us off the block,
But we got to give it to him, so let's put our jools in hock;
All he does is stands and hollers,
But he gathers in the dollars.
He's a wiser guy than we are, is the Doc."

WOODWARD FIGHTS TO WIN CITY BOARD

Issues Summons to Polls, Asking Support in Effort to Cut Down Extravagance.

Mayor James G. Woodward issued a final call to arms to his supporters Monday, urging that they nominate W. A. Hancock, Amos Braselton and C. C. McDonald to the Aldermanic Board in the white primary Tuesday.

"I've got no ticket," he said, "but if the people will elect these men it will be an assurance that the Aldermanic Board will have a majority that will be conservative and that will work in harmony with the administration.

"I am very anxious to see them elected. With the recall we can get the others into the right line, which is to handle the people's business in a businesslike way.

"We would have saved $100,000 if the city's business had been conducted properly during the past year."

A Battle of Words.

The opposing faction is fighting just as vigorously as Mayor Woodward and the men he is supporting. Reports of a stormy word battle between the Mayor and Councilman Claude L. Ashley at a committee meeting in the City Hall the other day illustrates the intensity of the feeling on both sides. Mr. Ashley is one of Mayor Woodward's strongest supporters in Council.

"Amos Braselton will overwhelm Thomson for Alderman from the Fourth Ward," Mayor Woodward is reported to have said.

"It will be a reflection on the Fourth Ward," Councilman Ashley is said to have replied.

"I don't see why you are for Thomson," the Mayor retorted.

What Ashley Replied.

"Mr. Mayor, Mr. Braselton hasn't lived in the Fourth Ward long enough to be called a Fourth Ward citizen," replied Councilman Ashley. "He is not even a registered voter in that ward. That's why I say his election would be a reflection on the ward."

"He'd represent the ward better than it has been represented," continued the Mayor, according to the account of the argument.

"He won't have a chance to represent it at all so far as this election is concerned."

John S. Owens is contesting the nomination of W. A. Hancock for Alderman from the Eighth Ward with a well-organized campaign, and Alderman James E. Warren, of the Third Ward, is confident he will defeat C. C. McDonald for the place he now holds.

Tuesday's Complete Ticket.

Here is the complete ticket to be voted upon Tuesday:

To be voted upon by the whole city: C. H. Kelley, for Alderman from the Second Ward; James E. Warren and C. C. McDonald, for Alderman from the Third Ward; Albert D. Thomson and Amos Braselton, for Alderman from the Fourth Ward; Jesse Armistead, for Alderman from the Seventh Ward; W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens, for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, and W. Z. Smith, for General Manager of Waterworks.

To be voted upon by wards: Charles A. Alverson and J. N. Renfroe, for Council from the First Ward; C. D. Knight, for Council from the Second Ward; Orville H. Hall and R. R. Jackson, for Council from the Third Ward; R. E. George and A. W. Farlinger, for Council from the Fourth Ward; Jesse B. Lee and Dr. W. M. Ethridge, for Council from the Fifth Ward; Jesse M. Wood, for Council from the Sixth Ward; Frank H. Reynolds, for Council from the Eighth Ward; Charles W. Smith, for Council from the Ninth Ward, and Claude C. Mason, for Council from the Tenth Ward.

Tango Teacher Slain And Thrown on Rails

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—A warrant was taken out to-day for Everett Rexroat, son of a wealthy Macomb (Ill.) farmer, charging him with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, a teacher of the tango and other dances in Chicago. She was killed and her body was thrown on the tracks of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad near Wayne, Ill., last Friday night.

While the warrant for Rexcoat was being held up the police of Wheaton admitted they were searching for a Wheaton man who disappeared Saturday.

France Is Favorite In Flying Contest

RHEIMS, FRANCE, Sept. 29.—So positive were the followers of flying that France would win the international aviation trophy on Betheny Field this afternoon that it was impossible to wager any money on the three French entrants except at prohibitive odds.

The three French contestants in the big race were Pierre Jules Vedrines, M. Prevost and M. Gilbert. Each of the machines used by the Frenchmen was 160 horsepower in strength with the wings reinforced against the concussions of the motor.

Bull Moose Leader Defies Old Parties

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—"The Bull Moose party is far from dead—in fact, it is very much alive and will be found kicking strenuously when the proper time comes."

Fresh from a conference of the Progressive party leaders in New York, Representative Hinebaugh, of Illinois, breathed this defiance to Republicans and Democrats. According to Hinebaugh's estimate the Progressives will poll at least two and a half million votes.

Pope Pius, Ill, to Forego Audiences

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Sept. 29.—Pope Pius X was advised to-day by his physicans to cease holding audiences on account of the delicate condition of his health. It is explained that His Holiness is not suffering from any specific malady, but that he is showing signs of general weakness, which, it is feared, may prove the forerunner of a nervous collapse.

The Pontiff promised his doctors to forego many of his clerical duties.

DEFIES FIRE TO RESCUE SLEEPERS

Building Owned by Horse Guards Destroyed in Early Morning. Women Carried Out.

Boarders at the residence of John W. Dean, No. 107 Piedmont avenue, were forced to flee to the street in their night clothes when fire practically destroyed the house at 5 o'clock Monday morning. To the heroism of an unknown man, who discovered the fire and aroused the occupants, several roomers owe their lives.

The unknown pedestrian was passing along Piedmont avenue when a great mass of flames suddenly burst through the roof of the house. He rushed to it and broke in the front door and aroused sleepers. A great cloud of smoke enveloped him as he gained entrance, but he plunged in, entered each room and awakened the sleepers.

Carries Women Out.

It was necessary for him to carry two of the frightened women in his arms out of the burning building.

Several fire companies responded to the alarm, Company No. 4 arriving first. Difficulty was experienced by the firemen in entering the house on account of the smoke. Entrance was finally made through a window, and in a remarkably short time the flames were subdued. The fire had gained such headway and burned so rapidly that the house was almost totally destroyed, although the firemen were on the scene in less than five minutes after the alarm was given.

After seeing that all of the occupants of the house were safe, the unknown man left hurriedly, saying he was afraid of being late at his work.

Horse Guard Owners.

The house is located at the corner of Piedmont and Edgewood avenues, and is the property of the Governor's Horse Guard. John W. Dean has operated a boarding house there for some time. It was here that Mrs. L. R. Glenn, wife of the Atlanta contractor who eloped with Mrs. Iona Pidcock, wife of the Moultrie (Ga.) millionaire, remained while her husband was confined in the county jail after being brought back from Texas, where he was arrested with Mrs. Pidcock.

The fire apparently started in a closet on the second floor of the house, but the cause is unknown. It is a frame house, erected many years ago.

Panic Follows as Big Steamer Grounds

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The steamer Mohawk, of the Manhattan Navigation Company, bound from New York to Albany with 300 passengers on board, went aground six miles north of here to-day. Charles S. Kelly, of New York, was thrown from his berth and sustained internal injuries which may prove fatal.

A panic followed the accident and in the excitement another passenger donned a life belt and leaped overboard. He was rescued with difficulty.

Read Evelyn Thaw's Amazing Life Story

Because of the widened interest in the fight of Harry K. Thaw to escape recommitment to the insane asylum at Matteawan, his wife Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has become a figure of international prominence.

Her life story is an amazing document. Doubtless no more enthralling personal narrative has ever been written.

The opening chapters of this story are reprinted in this issue of the Georgian.

The story will be continued in next Sunday's American.

FIGHT BEGINS FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS

E. E. Cox, of Camilla, First to Announce to Succeed the Late S. A. Roddenbery.

Following the funeral at Thomasville of Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, of the Second Georgia District, the fight for the seat in Congress made vacant by his death began Monday.

Colonel E. E. Cox, a lawyer of Camilla, is the first to announce. He has been active in politics for a number of years, and has been mentioned as congressional timber before.

It is certain that others will enter the race in a short time. The special election for the unexpired term will be called at an early date. The election for the full term will take place next year.

W. W. Banks, Mayor of Tifton, is a strong probability, his friends urging him to enter the contest. Mr. Banks has also been active in politics for many years.

Another probability is J. L. Hand, of Pelham, ex-Senator and a man well qualified in every particular to fill the place. He is one of the richest men in Southwest Georgia.

Roscoe Luke, Mayor of Thomasville, is being urged to enter the race, and has the matter under advisment. He is well known throughout the district. He will probably enter.

Judge J. R. Pottle, of Blakely, judge of the Court of Appeals, is another who may enter the fight. The race he won for the Court of Appeals is an indication of his popularity. He will make a strong candidate if he decides to enter.

Jesse Perry, of Camilla, secretary to Governor Slaton, is another possibility. He has shown his strength in politics for a number of years, and is very popular in the district. He was secretary to the late Congressman James M. Griggs.

H. Y. McIntosh, editor of The Albany Herald, is another strong possibility. He has been urged by his friends for a number of years to make the race for Congress from the Second District, and at one time entered the contest, but withdrew before the election.

The Second District embraces the counties of Thomas, Grady, Decatur, Colquitt, Mitchell, Baker, Miller, Early, Tift, Worth, Dougherty and Calhoun.

Monument Planned For Rodberry.

CAIRO, Sept. 29.—The executive officers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Cairo has decided to erect a monument here to the memory of Congressman Roddenbery. This place was his boyhood home.

Immediate steps will be taken to secure funds for this purpose and the mater will be presented to all the unions in the other districts, as well as other organizations and individuals.

Mr. Rodenbery's stand for prohibition was well known, not only in the Second District but in the State and Nation. The local union leaders feel that the sympathizers of the prohibition movement will rally in this cause.

Mystery in Burning Of Industrial School

The St. Paul's Parish and Industrial School, No. 241 Auburn avenue, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday afternoon, entailing a loss of about $2,500.

The institution has been supported by the board of missions of the Episcopal Church and by popular subscriptions.

JACKSON SCHOOLS FULL.

JACKSON, GA., Sept. 29.—A larger registration in the Jackson public schools has been made up to the present time than was ever known before. The total last week reached 365. Many are out-of-town pupils. The matter of a new school building is being agitated.

Edison Says People Eat Too Much Beef

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Thomas A. Edison believes the currency measure should be supervised by capable bankers and there should be four centers—at New York, Chicago, he South and Far West.

He said he would take no more vacations without work, as "vacationites" had caused his illness, and he would see that it did not happen again.

He declared Americans were eating twice too much beef for their own good.

Laughter Lured Her To Death in Darkness

WHEATON, ILL., Sept. 29.—The pretty, handsomely gowned woman whose mangled body was found on a railroad track near Wayne, Ill., was lured to her death with humorous stories and the light laugh of the man who took her into the darkness, shot her and left her body to be ground beneath the wheels of a train.

Witnesses were found who saw the pair leave a trolley car laughing over a funny story the man told. A block away, one said, the laughter ended abruptly and a single shot rang out.

Bar Mails to Bible, Organization Urges

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Declaring that the Bible should be excluded from the mails on the ground that it contains obscene and immoral matter, a body of citizens has sent a petition to Postmaster General Burleson urging him to take action.

Some of the department officials to-day pointed to the fact that the denial of the mail privileges to alleged objectionable books frequently has been the means of securing a great amount of free advertising.

Gen. Edward Moale, Civil War Hero, Dies

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Brigadier General Edward Moale, aged 73, died of pneumonia at the Hotel Stewart, where he has been since his retirement from the army. He was one of the leading military men of the United States.

It was his unique distinction to have been one of two men who heard the first gun of the Civil War fired at Fort Sumter and the last one fired at Appomattox.

Beef for Half Price May Follow Canal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Hope for a reduction of the price of beef to less than one-half of what it costs to-day has been brought to the American people by Augusto B. Leguia, former President of Peru. He says that with the opening of the Panama Canal beef could be delivered in New York for 10 cents a pound from Peru.

Increase in Exports Shown in Past Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—At the rate of more than $1,000,000 every business day in the past fiscal year have been the exports from the United States to Latin-America, according to a statement issued by the Department of Commerce. These amounted to $321,000,000, as compared with $108,000,000.

The most rapid gains have been with Argentina and Brazil.

WOMAN HELD AS $30,000 ROBBER

New York Officers Arrest Wilmington, N. C., Matron Accused of Stealing Friend's Fortune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Elizabeth VanNicholas, a leader in Wilmington (N. C.) society, was arrested at the Hotel Endicott charged with embezzling $30,000 from her lifelong friend, Mrs. Helen P. Lemassena, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Nicholas, who is a tall, well-dressed woman of striking appearance, was dumfounded when placed under arrest. She requested to be allowed to remain at the hotel under guard until the matter was cleared up, but she was taken to the station house.

The arrest was made at the instigation of Mrs. Lemassena's son, John P. Lemassena, who has followed Mrs. Nicholas through seven States during the past six months. He told the police that his mother had intrusted Mrs. Nicholas with $30,000 to invest and that shortly after this Mrs. Nicholas disappeared from Philadelphia.

Girl Tries to Join Navy to See Fiance

AKRON, OHIO, Sept. 29.—An 18-year-old girl, who gave the name of Cora Williams, tried to join the navy at a recruiting station here, but told of her sex rather than undergo the physical examination.

She said she wanted to join her sweetheart, who is in the navy.

CHILD-REARING COST DOUBLED IN 10 YEARS

Left to right, Carrie Cantrell, Mary Lee Jones and Eloris Cowan, orphans' home tots hit by high cost of living.

Head of Decatur Orphans' Home Gives Figures and Explains Situation.

The cost of rearing children in Atlanta has increased 100 per cent in the last ten years, according to the Rev. J. M. Hawkins, superintendent of the Decatur Orphans' Home. Mr. Hawkins based his statement on a comparison of the average cost of the support of the children in the home ten years ago, as shown by the records of the institution, with the present cost.

"Ten years ago," said Mr. Hawkins, "five dollars a month, or $60 a year, was adequate to support one of 'my' children; to-day it requires just twice that much, $120.

"These figures include all expenses incident to the support of the child—food, clothing and education—and incidentally many of our larger girls and boys are in college, their expenses being paid by the home.

Better Standard of Living.

"This enormous increase is due not only to the increased cost of all the necessities of life, but also to the increased standard of living. To-day we regard as indispensable many conveniences, such as water, sewerage, electric lights, telephones, and so forth, which ten years ago we did without."

Mr. Hawkins said also that it costs more to bring up and educate a girl than it does to rear a boy, and that it pays better dividends. A greater percentage of the girls "turn out well" than of the boys, although the number of boys who are successful is by no means small.

There are at present 230 children in the home from all parts of Georgia, the institution having taken care of over 2,000 children in the last ten years.

HEARST PAPERS PLAN TO FOOT UP AMERICA'S TRADE BALANCE SHEET

Estimates of What We Pay Annually to Foreigners

NO RECORDS have ever been compiled of what America pays annually to foreigners. The Hearst papers are to try to collect first-hand data covering the whole ground. Discrepancies between current estimates are most glaring—showing the need for the concrete information which it is planned to gather.

I have received estimates from the two leading foreign exchange bankers in the country—Vice President Gardin, of the National City Bank, and Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company. I append my own guess:

	John E. Gardin	Max May	B. C. Forbes
Spent by tourists	$500,000,000	$200,000,000	$225,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad	400,000,000	100,000,000	100,000,000
Interest and dividends on securities held abroad	500,000,000	50,000,000	100,000,000
Freights to foreign steamship companies	300,000,000	150,000,000	150,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	300,000,000	150,000,000	300,000,000
Insurance and miscellaneous	.....	.....	25,000,000
Sent to Canada	.....	.....	50,000,000
Totals	$2,000,000	$650,000,000	$950,000,000

As an offset must be placed the rapidly increasing sums spent by foreign visitors to America and also the money brought over by immigrants.

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The United States is getting deeper into the debt of Europeans every year notwithstanding that our excess of merchandise exports over imports has totaled $8,350,000,000 during the last twenty years.

The Hearst papers propose, if given proper co-operation, to make up America's international balance sheet, a task never before attempted.

One envelope from J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Speyer & Co., or other important banking house may contain "exports" of greater value than the whole cargo of the largest trans-Atlantic liner.

Our "invisible" payments to foreigners have been computed at all sorts of figures—from $500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 annually.

No trustworthy records have ever been compiled.

The Hearst papers hope to remedy this.

How much do American tourists spend abroad every year?

Vice President Gardin, head of the National City Bank's foreign exchange department and a recognized authority, puts the amount at $500,000,000.

Vice President Max May, of the Guaranty Trust Company, who handles an enormous mass of exchange and is looked upon as a wizard at the business, estimates the sum at $200,000,000.

My guess would be from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Take the item, "Interest and dividends on securities held abroad." Mr. Gardin allows the colossal amount of $500,000,000 annually, whereas Mr. May cuts this down to $50,000,000!

When experts differ so, surely there is need for enlightenment on a subject of such importance.

The Hearst papers invite every steamship company doing business with the United States to give, confidentially, the amount it collects for foreign and passenger service.

Insurance companies are being asked to compute how much Americans pay foreigners for insurance.

Express companies issue an enormous number of travelers' checks and other credits for use by Americans abroad, and a record of these, it is hoped, will be furnished.

Banks, banking firms and trust companies that do a foreign business will be requested to aid the work by supplying in strict confidence, of course, the amount sent abroad by them for various purposes germane to this investigation.

The Government issues exhaustive statistics covering our foreign trade in merchandise and bullion, but it throws no light on the huge payments made to foreign shipping companies on the amount spent by tourists, and by American residents abroad, on our annual bill for dividends and interest to oversea holders of our securities, or on the sum remitted by foreigners.

Did America not have to meet so serious a drain, she would, by her handsome balance of merchandise exports, gradually reduce her billions of indebtedness to European nations.

One thought forcibly impressed upon the mind by a consideration of our international balance-sheet is that it behooves our manufacturers to cast their coats and fight for a larger share of the world's custom so as to make us more self-supporting.

With our constant and rapid growth in population, it is not expected that our agricultural exports will expand. The general belief is that they will dwindle out of sight—a view I can not share, for once our farmers are given proper credit facilities and rise to the height of their possibilities, they will, I believe, astonish the world.

Meanwhile, the new tariff should help many lines of industry to compete more effectively in foreign markets, a step that will be necessary to compensate for the loss of domestic business that the lower tariff charges will entail.

The following table shows the total value of our merchandise imports and exports for the last twenty years, along with the annual balance in merchandise and also in gold and silver shipments. It should be noted that the United States has produced about $700,000,000 worth of silver and $1,500,000,000 worth of gold during the twenty years under review.

President Wilson Sees Polaire Dance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—President Wilson witnessed the "Triple Alliance Review" of Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, Mlle. Polaire and Gertrude Hoffman at the Belasco Theater.

Stewart Richardson gave a number of dances which included one representing the awakening of the world at the break of dawn. In this the dancer was barefooted and clothed only in flimsy veils to represent the morning mist and as the dance progressed several of the veils were dispensed with.

Mlle. Polaire included an Apache dance in her portion of the program while Gertrude Hoffman gave her new review.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The newspapers throughout the State are commenting nowadays rather caustically upon the wretched and uninhabitable condition of the Governor's Mansion in Atlanta.

Not only is it generally agreed that the ramshackle old barn is altogether out of date, antiquated, and insanely situated for the purpose it serves, but besides that it actually is falling down in spots!

Long ago the plastering overhead in one of the bedrooms fell down with a dull and sickening thud, and a short time before that Governor Brown, only by nimbleness of foot and quickness of eye, succeeded in jumping from under a similar precipitation of overhead ceiling in another room.

Just when the dining room may take a tumble to itself no prophet or son of a prophet will say, although the hope is universal, of course, that when it does fall, it will not bury the Executive or Mrs. Slaton beneath the wreck!

The Executive Mansion in Atlanta is a joke—and not a pretty or fascinating joke, at that!

If a Governor were not sentenced to live in it, so to speak, few of them likely would care to do so.

To be sure, its historic and honorable associations are pleasant and inspiring things to think upon—if only one could sit in the Mansion and think upon them without being simultaneously in mortal terror that something heavy, plastery and not at all nice might fall upon him at any moment and mangle him beyond recognition!

The Executive Mansion would make a first-rate fourth-rate boarding house—maybe!

It certainly isn't much of a place for a Governor of Georgia to reside!

Anent the Mansion, The Oglethorpe Echo says:

> A fortunate absence probably kept Governor and Mrs. Slaton from being injured by falling plastering in the Governor's Mansion a few days since. It's a shame that as great a State as Georgia should not have a home in which her Chief Executive could at least reside in safety.
>
> And there are others that say the same thing—many of them!

The death of Representative Roddenbery has brought forth numerous tentative candidates for his place in Congress.

Among them are H. M. McIntosh, of Albany; Judge Frank Park, of Sylvester; W. W. Banks, of Tifton; Roscoe Luke and Judge H. W. Hopkins, of Thomasville; W. A. Covington and W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; John P. Knight, of Nashville; John Donalson, of Bainbridge, and Jesse Perry, of Camilla.

And there likely will be more mentioned hereafter, as the game yet is young!

The recent Mayoralty election in Macon split the Legislative delegations, present and past, wide open.

Wallace Miller, one of the candidates for Mayor, is a member of the House, and he was bitterly opposed by Minter Wimberly, another member.

Senator McNeil favored and worked for Miller, while Roland Ellis, a former Senator, favored and worked for Smith. Walter Defore, a member of the last House, was with the Miller crowd, while Ben Fowler—where was Ben in that scrap, anyway?

When the Georgia Prison Commission was first made an advisory board of pardons, its recommendations generally were followed rather regularly. Once or twice, perhaps three or four times, Governor Atkinson, Governor Terrell and other Executives turned down the recommendations of the Prison Commission, sitting as a board of pardons, but not often. The rule was to accept the findings of the Commission as approximating the correct adjustment of the particular problem submitted, and to let it go at that!

It was not until "Little Joe" Brown became Governor that the recommendations of the Commission began to be looked upon as little more than suggestive and mildly advisory to the Executive. And even Governor Brown began by following the line of action mapped out by the Commission!

Nowadays, however, a recommendation from the Prison Commission is a step in the direction the petitioner desires—presuming it to be favorable—but nothing more. Governors have come to turn down Prison Commission awards as one of the easiest things they know!

Only Saturday, for instance, Governor Slaton turned down a majority recommendation for a pardon, and granted a life commutation instead. In doing that, he followed the recommendation of a minority opinion. No Governor considers any petition for clemency, nevertheless, unless it first has been thrashed out by the Commission.

There is no way of limiting a Georgia Governor's discretion in the matter of clemency—the Legislature could not make the Prison Commission's recommendations binding upon the Governor, if it desired to. In the matter of pardons, commutations, and so forth, the Governor is final, supreme, and altogether an arbitrary authority! The Constitution of the State gives him utterly untrammeled powers in that direction. And it is for this reason, of course, that most Governors are careful and discreet in granting clemency, in any event.

Governor Slaton has received 41 invitations to visit various State fairs throughout Georgia during the months of October and November.

And much as he would like to accept all of them, it will be utterly impossible, of course. He hopes, however, to accept a few—those that do not conflict with his official duties, at least. And that probably will mean as many as half a dozen.

"If I even attempted to accept all these gracious and kindly invitations, which I would like to do," said the Governor, "I could not do so unless it were possible for me to be in two or three places at one and the same time, and of course it isn't!

"I am glad to know that there are to be so many fairs in the State, however. It speaks well for Georgia, and it indicates a healthy condition of things.

"I believe in county fairs—and in State fairs, too! There never was one held, even though it may have lost money directly, that wasn't a success in the long run, for the indirect dividends paid by county and State fairs are great, I verily believe."

Invention Lessens Cost of Wireless

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Sept. 29.—William Burr Gibson, who recently announced that he had perfected an apparatus with which it would be possible to destroy the largest dreadnought by use of ultra-violet rays, announced to-day that he had perfected a transmitter which will allow the use of ultra-violet rays in wireless telegraphy.

Gibson claims the ultra-violet rays can be produced at a much lower cost than the electric power now used in the transmission of wireless messages.

ATLANTA DAY AT KNOXVILLE WILL BE BIG EVENT

Colonel Lowry Helps Appalachian Exposition Prepare for Large Delegation of Boosters.

Arrangements are being made for a large crowd of Atlantans to go to Knoxville October 7, which will be Atlanta Day at the Appalachian Exposition.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee, has just returned from Knoxville, where he made preparations for entertaining a large delegation of Atlantans. He praises the exposition highly.

"The exposition is a most wonderful one," said he. "It is attracting a large number of visitors and indications are that we will take an unusually large number of Atlantans there. The exposition shows the resources of the Appalachian range and the agricultural products of the Southern States.

"Knoxville has been looking forward to Atlanta Day at the exposition and is planning to receive us with true Knoxville hospitality. I think every member of the Chamber of Commerce should make the trip to Knoxville if possible. We have always been supported in everything we went after by Knoxville and we should show our appreciation by sending a large delegation to the exposition."

A large number of Chamber of Commerce members have already signified their intention of making the trip, and it is quite possible that a special train will be necessary to handle the crowd. In addition to the features of the exposition, the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce has planned a special celebration in honor of the Atlanta visitors.

Scolds Grandson on Her 100th Birthday

SUNBURY, PA., Sept. 29.—The grand old woman of Sunbury, Mrs. Amelia C. Fisher, celebrated her 100th birthday at her home here yesterday. She took part in a family reunion held in her honor, ate a turkey dinner, scolded her 68-year-old son for smoking and no; going to bed at 9 o'clock, and sang a solo.

OPEN-TOWN MEN DENOUNCED BY PREACHERS

Dr. Holderby Would Depose "Rotten" Officeholders—McConnell Says Atlanta Will Stay Clean.

Arraignment of the "open-town crowd" which would put in effect a more "liberal" interpretation of the law was indulged in Sunday by Atlanta ministers in celebration of the anniversary of the "cleaning up" of the city.

With few exceptions the pastors touched on local civic conditions, on the recent charter election, and, in one case, the election of Mayor Woodward more than ten months ago. In every instance the present conditions brought about through Chief Beavers and the Men and Religion Forward Movement were extolled.

Lincoln McConnell, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, declared the people of Atlanta, three-fourths of whom are good, would never allow a return to the old conditions. The only big mistake Atlanta ever had made and the only one she perhaps ever would make, he declared, was the election a little over ten months ago (which was about the time James Woodward became Mayor).

Dividing the "Crowd."

Dr. McConnell divided the "crowd" which wants to return to old conditions in three classes, as follows: The poor woman, for whom, he said, he had only pity; the men who want an easy access to sin, and the "dirty, low-down devils" who make rents under vice conditions. For these, he declared, he had the utmost contempt.

"There is no danger of Atlanta ever turning back to old conditions," declared Dr. McConnell, "for three-fourths of Atlanta's people are good. The present agitation is but the howling of the noisy crowd who want to live off of the profits of vice. They are as the mangy coyotes who appear to be wolves in the night. There is no danger."

In line with Dr. McConnell's remarks, Dr. Caleb Ridley, speaking at the Central Baptist Church, declared Satan certainly would despise Chief Beavers, make fun of the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement; swear that John Eagan was interested in questionable houses, and that Marion Jackson was Mary Ann. The devil, he declared also, would certainly favor Atlanta's near-beer business and would fight every suggestion to outlaw it.

Ging further than either Dr. Ridley or Dr. McConnell, Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of the Moore Memorial Presbyterian Church, declared himself in favor of the "recall of the whole gang of officeholders."

"Never," declared Dr. Holderby, "has there been more political corruption and moral rottenness among the Godless and 'open town' crowd than there now is in Atlanta, and one serious cause for it is that the church in Atlanta is not right with God. The church as well as politics needs cleaning up and when the church gets a cleaning up, and right with God, there will be no trouble in cleaning up the city."

Dr. Dunbar Ogden, in the course of a sermon on the topic, "Separated for Service," at the Central Presbyterian Church, prophesied that the present day would go down in history as the missionary century of all ages. The problem of the world, he said, is not commercial nor political, but the building of character.

Other ministers who spoke to large audiences Sunday night were the Rev. Fred A. Line, who was installed as pastor of the First Universalist Church Sunday morning, and the Rev. Robert Ivey, who became the pastor of the Georgia Avenue Presbyterian Church Sunday.

TROOPS STOP RACE RIOT; 10 ARE DEAD

Mississippi Sheriff and Two Other White Men Slain—Negroes Run Amuck.

HARRISTON, MISS., Sept. 29.—With State troops camped in the streets, this town was quiet to-day after being stirred by the worst race riot in its history. Ten persons were dead, two of them mulatto boys, brothers, who were lynched after they had felled 28 persons.

The boys, crazed by drugs, ran amuck, shooting wildly as they ran through the negro quarter. The arrival of the militiamen prevented further bloodshed in an open clash between whites and negroes.

The list of dead included Sheriff G. R. Hammett, of Jefferson County; Frank Klenstly, former constable, and Claude Freeman.

Among the seriously wounded by bullets during the time the negroes were running wild and the chase for them were former Sheriff Orrin Gillis, E. B. Appleby, a railroad conductor, and William Klenstly, son of the former constable who was killed.

Business was resumed to-day, and the presence of the soldiers was the only indication that there had been any unusual occurrences. No further trouble was feared.

The count and Miss Schweizer were married January 16, 1902.

IRISH WAR CLOUD STIRS BRITISH LEADERS

Conference of Government Heads On in Effort to Unite Home Rulers and Ulsterites.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

GLASGOW, Sept. 29.—A historic conference of far-reaching political effect began to-day among members of the British Government at Brodick Castle, on the Isle of Arran, in the Firth of Clyde.

Those present were Percy Illingsworth, owner of the castle and chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons; Premier Asquith and David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer. First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill is expected to join the party to-night.

The question under discussion is home rule for Ireland and the attitude of Ulster province, which threatens to reject home rule if it is granted and set up an independent government.

How civil war can be averted in Ireland over home rule is the biggest question now confronting the Government.

The suggestion seriously considered is the appointment of a royal commission, some of the members to be chosen by Parliament and others by King George, to arbitrate the difference between the north and south of Ireland.

The Protestants in the north refuse to accept home rule, which has been brought about through the activities of the British Nationalists, the great majority of whom are Catholics. Thus the religious question permeates the heart of the differences.

The Ulster Presbyterians declare a Dublin parliament would be a Catholic government, and they refuse to be ruled by such. On the other hand, the Catholics in Ulster will rebel against a Protestant government in that district.

The central Government is trying to reach a common ground upon which both sides can be united.

China Buys Less U. S. Cotton by $24,304,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A decrease of $24,304,000 in the value of American cotton goods sold in China in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1913, compared with the goods sold in 1906, which led the United States to undertake an investigation, has resulted in the discovery that the Chinese are making so much of their own cloth that his nation will have to find some substitute for cotton, if it wishes to stimulate a new trade. There are many cotton mills in Japan, which used $25,000,000 worth of American cotton last year. These facts are contained in a statement issued today by the Department of Commerce.

Operating expenses expanded $203,625.46, while operating income showed an increase of $77,541,332. Operating income per mile was $3,678, against $3,359 for the previous twelve months.

Mileage operated increased 2,182.

GOWNS COST $20,000; NEEDS MORE ALIMONY

MRS. ALBERT GALLATIN WHEELER

The wife of the Wall Street millionaire, from whom she is separated, is one of the light opera stars of the London stage, and is coming to New York to collect some back allimony which she declares her husband has not sent her. She says she needs it, for she has just spent $20,000 for gowns and all that goes with them.

If you happened to be a light opera singer who every now and then had to go down to the shops and drop some $20,000 or so for gowns and hats and shoes and things, and your allmony of $6,000 a year began to arrive irregularly, what would you do?

Go after the alimony, says Mrs. Albert Gallatin Wheeler, who is precisely in the condition stated in the first paragraph.

Mrs. Wheeler, who is known on the stage as Claudia Carlstedt, is the wife of the son of the man who helped Charles T. Yerkes build the tu'penny tube in London. Wheeler is a millionaire in his own right, and after he and the actress married things went as they sometimes do with millionaires and actresses who wed—that is to say things didn't go well, and they separated.

Sails for Alimony.

Mrs. Wheeler, according to dispatches from London, where she is at the present time, has just run into one of those times when it becomes necessary to furbish up her wardrobe and the furbishing has cost her the accustomed $20,000. So she is a little short of pin money, and to-day she determined to come back to New York to hunt up her husband and ask him to pay some of the alimony which, she declares, he has not been as prompt with as he might be.

In fact, Mrs. Wheeler says she needs more than $6,000 a year. Indeed, she says she once received more than that sum and believes she should receive it again, as well as the difference between what she once received and the $6,000 for as long as she has not been receiving that difference—back alimony, as it is called.

Mrs. Wheeler, merely as the sweet singer, Claudia Carlstedt, met Mr. Wheeler in 1898, and it was the old tale of the millionaire and the star. The marriage took place not long after the meeting, and there was abundant happiness for several years.

But Mrs. Wheeler had a hankering still for the life behind the footlights, and this constituted a bone of contention between her and her husband.

Returns to Stage.

Mrs. Wheeler insisted upon a return to stage life, and then the couple parted. But Mrs. Wheeler was not quite through with her erstwhile husband, for she appealed to the courts for maintenance. She asked for $20,000 a year, but the courts awarded her half that sum. Perforce content, she wended her way to London, but when the suit was about to be heard the alimony was reduced to $6,000.

Mr. Wheeler cogitated and the result of his cogitations was the settlement of a sum of money presumably large enough to satisfy Mrs. Wheeler. Mrs. Wheeler says that it was presumably large enough of a settlement for her if it were regularly paid, for she says her husband is several months behind in his payments.

U. S. Saves Money by Doing Its Own Work

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Secretary of the Navy announces a large saving in the expense of the new battleship No. 39 had been made by giving the work of constructing bronze bolts for that ship to the New York Navy Yard instead of the Steel Trust.

It amounts to about $300 a ton.

Garros Says He Can Fly Across Atlantic

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Roland G. Garros, who made an aeroplane flight across the Mediterranean, declares a flight across the Atlantic Ocean is possible.

His plan would be to divide the journey into three stages—from England to Iceland, from Iceland to Newfoundland, from Newfoundland to the United States.

Two of these stages would be shorter than his France to Tunis flight, and the third very little longer.

DUBLIN, Sept. 29.—A relief ship bearing $25,000 worth of provisions for the starving families of strikers arrived here to-day. Crowds of famished men, women and children waited on the docks for hours hungrily devouring the food after it was distributed.

LondonLancetAssails Bacon-Egg Breakfast

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Traditional eggs and bacon breakfast is assailed by The London Lancet, the foremost medical journal in England, which discusses the advisability of going without breakfast altogether.

"After a night's sleep," it says, "bodily strength, both nervous and muscular, is at its height, and work can be carried on without food."

A light breakfast of coffee and rolls is advised for the brainworker though for the manual laborer, the breakfastless plan is unsuitable.

"Never mind, sir," replied Bill, "it will be long enough before I get another."

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

A Thrilling Story of a Modern Monte Cristo

By LOUIS TRACY

(Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed. "D'ye want a job?"

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"Dash my buttons, an' you're a likely sort of kid to get it, too. In you go. I'll pay the bill. Lord lumme, it'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. 'Ere, I'll bet you two bob 'e pays up."

"Done! Walk in, sir. Wot'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellently, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

The boy held out his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would ha' bin just about his age. Lord lumme, I 'ope the lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes'm. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

After crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to rehearse carefully the program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacity unlooked for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all. Of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond, and would demand its earthly pedigree.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date. The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's Mews altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: "Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants, Kimberley, Amsterdam and London."

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Is Mr. Isaacstein in?" said Philip.

"Oah, yess," grinned the other.

"Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oah, yess." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught its drift yet. The gaunt and unkempt visitor was evidently burlesquing the accent of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a few seconds. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the stamp book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here?" he said at last.

"Oah, yess. You vil be funny, eh?" The other smirked over the hidden humor of the situation and Philip understood that if he would see the great man of the firm he must adopt a more emphatic tone.

"I had better warn you that Mr. Wilson, of Messrs. Grant & Sons, Ludgate Hill, sent me here to see Mr. Isaacstein. Am I to go back to Mr. Wilson and say that the office boy refuses to admit me?"

There was a sting in the description, coming from such a speaker.

"Look ere," was the angry retort. "Go avay und blay, vil you? I'm pizzy."

Philip reached quickly through the little arch, grabbed a handful of shirt frill and waistcoat, and dragged the big nose and thick lips violently against the wires of the grille.

"Will you do what I ask, or shall I try and pull you through?" he said, quietly.

But the boy's ready yell brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.

With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein. The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.

Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.

"What the deuce——" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.

"He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"

Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined utterance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request.

Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lend effect to Isaacstein's wit when he said:

"Is this a joke?"

All the clerks guffawed in chorus. Fortunately, Isaacstein was in a good humor. He had just purchased a pearl for 250 pounds, which he would sell to Lady Somebody for 800 pounds, to match another in an earring.

"It appears to be," said Philip, when the merriment had subsided.

For some reason the boy's gray, earnest eyes conquered the big little man's amused scrutiny.

"Now, boy, be quick. What is it?" he said testily, and every clerk bent to his task.

"I have told you, sir. I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you with regard to business of an important nature."

"You say Mr. Wilson sent you—Mr. Wilson, of Grant & Sons?"

"Yes, sir."

Isaacstein yielded to amazed curiosity.

"Step in here," he said, and led the way to his private office, surprising himself as well as his assistants by this concession.

Philip closed the door and Isaacstein turned sharply at the sound, but the boy gave him no time to frame a question.

"I want you to buy this," he said, handing over the diamond.

Cross Fire.

Isaacstein took it, and gave it one critical glance. He began to wabble again.

"Do you mean to say Mr. Wilson sent you to dispose of this stone to me?" he demanded.

"Not exactly, sir. I showed it to him and he recommended me to come to you."

Well, it mattered not. The courage of despair which nerved him the previous night came to his aid again. He would defy them all, careless of consequence.

The policeman was saying:

"It's a queer affair, sir. Did he really say he had lots more of 'em."

"Yes, yes! Do you think I am romancing? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of these stones, boy?"

Philip, with lips tensely set, was desperately cool again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting he," said the boy. "I merely wish to put my hand in my pocket. Are you afraid of me, that you hold me so fast?"

The policeman, like the rest, did not fail to notice Philip's diction. The scornful superiority of his words, the challenge of the final question, took him aback. He relaxed his grip and grinned confusedly.

Philip instantly produced his paper of diamonds and opened it widely, so that all the stones could be seen. He handed the parcel to the policeman.

"Take good care of them, constable," he said. "Judging from results, they would not be safe in that man's hands."

But Isaacstein did not hear the insult. When he saw the collection he nearly lost his senses. What had he done? Was he or the boy mad? Veins stood out on his forehead, and he wobbled so fearfully that he clutched the desk for support. A scarecrow of a boy wandering about London with thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds in his pocket, wrapped up in a piece of newspaper like so many sweets. There were not any meteoric diamonds of such value in all the museums and private collections in the world. He began to perspire. Even the policeman was astounded, quite as much at being called "constable" by Philip as by the mean appearance of articles presumably of great value.

"This is a rum go. What do you make of it, Mr. Isaacstein?" he said.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. He shows a piece of his find to a jeweler and discovers he is fabulously rich, but faces the problem of selling his meteoric diamonds. London's best diamond expert becomes excited over the meteoric find.

Now Go On With the Story.

Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool dissolve a little saltpeter in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpeter water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table, rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterward be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

In nine cases out of ten they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, curable by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "Bedfast—For Two Years"

MRS. GEORGE EWELL writes:—I know your medicine helped me wonderfully. I was so weak and nervous I could not sleep. Had a very poor appetite. Had such an aching between my shoulders and such dreadful headaches. My tongue would be heavily coated every morning and would get so dry. I am 45 years old. Have been having "change of life." I doctored a great deal but your medicines helped me more than all the doctors. I took six bottles of "Favorite Prescription" and three of "Golden Medical Discovery." I can now sleep good at night. My tongue is not coated and your medicines have removed many of my symptoms. I know if I had taken six bottles more I would have been cured. I was about bedfast for two years, now I do all my work and attend to my garden and chickens. I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicines too highly.

ACT INDIFFERENTLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

X. Y.

The heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had many girl and boy friends and they all acted nice until they all played false. Now, should I break friendship with all of them and stay home without friends?

H. H.

And grow sour, suspicious and cynical? Certainly not. Go out and make more friends, and be quite sure that none of the blame of unfaithfulness lies at your door.

Do You Know---

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales? By way of showing their admiration of the Budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Prime Minister, this girl's parents are said to have named her Budgetta Georgiana Asquitha.

Seven members of one family living in the Ness district of the Island of Lewis (Outer Hebrides) go weekly to the local postoffice to draw old-age pensions. This remarkable group consists of three brothers and four sisters, all, of course, over 70 years old, the family of John Gunn-Lionel.

TERRIBLE ORDEAL SAFELY ENDED

Broken in Health, Miserable, Suffering, For a Score of Years, Lady Came Safely Through Ordeal.

Johnson's Bayou, La.—Mrs. L. P. Semar, of this town, who has been in a deplorable condition for years, now makes the following statement: "I was a great sufferer, for 20 years, with pains in my back, right side, headache and lower bowels, was very irregular, and also suffered terribly at times, with dizziness and faintness.

During this time, I tried six different doctors, but could get no relief.

I heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it. After having taken a course of this treatment, (6 bottles), according to directions, I feel no pain, am regular, am able to do all of my work and, in fact, feel like a new woman.

I can surely recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to all women suffering from female disorders."

Cardui is the ideal medicine for women. It is prepared especially for women, and contains ingredients which act directly on the weak womanly organs, thus helping to build up, in a gentle, natural way, the entire womanly constitution to a healthy condition.

The wonderful success which Cardui has attained, in its past 50 years of continuous use, is due principally to its merit. It has helped many hundreds of thousands of weak women. It will surely help you, too.

Try Cardui.

The Lover and the Walnut

Sometimes It's a Hard Nut to Crack—Where Violence Fails, and Only Soft Appeal and Cunning Will Bring Her Out of Her Shell and Into Your Arms!

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I KNOW a chap—a darling young chap—who's a winner at all things. Or he was until he ran face to face with the "Golden Girl." The girl who made his heart a house of pain—who made all other girls in the world look like the glass set in the brass ring you get in a "prize" candy box alongside of a blue diamond!

He has tact and sweetness, honesty and tenderness, and he's a "crack" at every game that takes personal bravery, mental courage, skill and patience. And just the sort to take a girl's eyes and heart with him every move he makes—if he'll only "act natural"! In this—his biggest game—he has still his courage, but his skill and tact, his sweetness and patience, have gone off and left him right in the spot on the highway where he needs them the most. He's trying to win the Golden Girl with a club!— like a cave man. He bullies her and he scolds her, and he tries to prove to her where she's "mad" not to love him, and he calls upon all the gods of a man in love to witness how cold her heart is! And the girl, while he's breaking his heart for her, is all tight in her little shell and she won't come out. He is still sane enough to have a sneaking notion that she loves him a little—to know that she isn't really such an icy little woman—and to wonder dimly why she is holding out in such fashion. So he agonizes and fumes and raves and goes after the nut with a sledge-hammer! And there isn't a sound from within, and the shell holds tight without a crack!

If he'd only remember the fairy story of the gnome who loved and wanted the pixie in the walnut. He pounded and toiled and sweat with his heavy stone sledge. And then he sat upon the nut and wept bitter tears that tasted salty where they ran close to his lips. Now wielding a sledge wasn't the only thing the gnome could do. He could play so sweetly on a tiny violin that even the shy tree frog would lean and listen. So he dried his tears and rubbed his face with his red coat sleeve and managed a smile, and tucking his music box under his chin he drew the bow across the singing strings and played. And lo! after a few sweet measures the crack of the nut grew slowly wider—it yawned wider to the blue sky, and out of it, into the happy gnome's heart, crept the timid pixie who lived therein.

There are women who answer only the call of the sledge-hammer—whose wild hearts leap to violence. But the Golden Girl isn't that kind. Remember the fairy story, boy. Swinging the sledge-hammer isn't the only thing you can do. You've forgotten your violin. Draw your bow across it the very sweetest you know how, and I promise you the shell will open of itself and your elf will fly into your heart. Raving and storming isn't the only strength you have. You've forgotten your sweetness, your tenderness, your cunning. Lay siege with the music of these three, and I swear the Golden Girl will glow and reach to you. Under the pressure of her two white hands the shell will yawn and yield her up.

Sometimes it's a hard nut to crack—where violence fails and only soft appeal and cunning will avail!

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us and she is one of those flattering kind; she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day right before me she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I don't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heartbroken. What shall I do?

SAD WIFE.

HEARTBROKEN, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered. Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say so right then and there? Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John; I'm so proud of him myself sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish?" And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind, is she? Well, I'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

He's All Right.

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pusscat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? You let him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and quick-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way, or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming? Cry when she's gone? Scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman, to be sure!

The Only Way.

Have cousin at the house—have her there morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, ask her opinion of men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send John in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him sit up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat; have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expects men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, smile and cajole and be nicer than ever cousin dared to be, and wach results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown-up boys, you know, just grown-up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

Same as Others.

"Say, if you were seated in the tube, and every seat was taken, and a lady entered, what would you do?"

"I'd pretend I was asleep."

Doing a Man's Part.

"What are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" repited the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

.:. Fishers of Men .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WE are all fishers of men, and by "We" I mean every one of my sex.

And it is not to our discredit. The Lord implanted in every girl's heart a longing for love that is not satisfied in the love of father, mother, brother, sister or friend. It is a longing that grows with her years, showing first in her smiling overtures as a baby to some boy and never ending till it finds satisfaction in the love of a husband and child.

She may grow old and gray in spinsterhood; she may judge man's love by the unhappy experience of some sister and decry it; she may despise the dependence that comes with love and deny it, but to the end of her days, though her tongue may scoff and her ears refuse to hear, there remains at the bottom of her heart a longing for it that is never stilled. And no woman is normal until she has known it.

We are all fishers of men. To deny it is to deny the plan of Nature. The only difference is in outward manifestations of this great inward desire. Some of us stand for life looking wistfully at the water waiting for the fish to jump out at our feet, and others secure poles early, change the bait to suit the game, and fish assiduously.

We all want love. We have always been told that it is most maidenly to wait till it comes to us voluntarily. But fish so rarely jump out of the water, and the years come and go, each one taking with it some charm that should by all rules of the game have served as bait, and we find ourselves threatened with a life-time of loneliness and heart hunger.

It is fair, then, considering how much love means, and the desolation of life without it, to suggest to nice little girls, with their hearts beating fast with alternate hope and despair, how they may use a little bait modestly and effectively.

All Are Vain.

The finest man in the world is a vain, weak creature, and it is always the finest man in the world who is blindest about the opposite sex and needs a guide to reach the altar. It was never necessary to make an effort to win the admiration of a worthless man. Very often he makes love-making his business; and consequently never has a business that will support a wife and child.

A nice little girl named Mary, who wants to win a husband and confesses to this most normal and most womanly desire, writes me:

"I am a young girl of twenty-two, and meet a lot of nice young men and go out a great deal with them. I have a host of girl friends, and while in their company I can converse with ease on almost any topic, but just as soon as I am alone in a gentleman's company it seems I have nothing to talk about, which is a very awkward position. Please advise me what topics are mostly to be discussed and whether talking about business is a boring one. I must add that I am not up to the mark on books, and consequently can not talk about them."

Thank heaven you can't! There is a big score in your favor to start with, for the girl who says pedantly to a man, "Have you read Maeterlinck's 'Pelleas and Melisande?" or, "As Byron says: 'You remember that quotation, I am sure,' etc.," and looks with a surprised superiority when he confesses he never reads more than this newspapers and the baseball scores on the billboards, is doomed to stay on the bank forever.

Business. If he is worth while, he dotes on it, and is an enthusiast on anything that pertains to it. Don't be afraid of results if you show an interest in the most vital interest he has. And a better topic, the best of all, is to engage him in conversation about himself. It is honey on his tongue and music in his ears, and if you can hang entranced on his account of his first skates, and grow breathless with delight over his favorite way of cooking fish, you have him on your line and coming slowly and surely out of the water.

One Way.

Be a good listener. The man who was won by being talked to death is too weak to be ranked as a man. Let him do the talking. Believe me, Mary dear, the best of them like appreciation of the words of wisdom that are always dropping from their lips and turn oftenest, stay longest, and think most, of the girl who listens to their most commonplace talk as if she were hearing the music of the angels.

We are all fishers of men, Mary. But remember always that it is wise to consider the good and bad points of the fish before casting in a line. Take care that your longing doesn't magnify into a whale a fish that is only a minnow.

Vice Versa.

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door. "Stop!" said the minister; "the baby's not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit, and made the audible remark: "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? But you're a-disturbin' of 'im!"

Higher Education.

Paterfamilias was lecturing his son on education. "Look here, my boy," he said, "I made my pile with only a common school education."

"I daresay, dad," replied the son; "but it takes a college education to know how to spend it."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading about a little kid that walked 14 miles to and from school every day," said the Manicure Lady. "I'll bet that kid will be a great man some day."

"I hope so," said that Head Barber. "He is entitled to something after he grows up, and a kid in the city would never walk one-tenth that far if he had to."

"I guess the days of great men is kind of past and gone away," said the Manicure Lady. "As dad was saying the other night, we have a lot of great men now, but when you look one of them over and compare him to the great men of the past he is a few stacks shy. The old gent says that we don't need any great men nowadays, because he thinks that everybody is getting dippy in the cities and taking nothing serious any more. He said he never liked to hear folks calling Theodore Roosevelt 'Teddy.'"

"I think the same as your father," said the Head Barber. "When I was a kid I wanted to be like George Washington but when I grew older and figured that the country had one father I stopped trying to be great and went barbering. The way I feel now, if I can make enough to get by and keep up my insurance I am satisfied."

"That's how Wilfred feels too," said the Manicure Lady. "He had a bug for a long time that he was going to be the Lord Byron of the century, but when he found out that nobody cared much for serious poetry he started in writing popular songs and says he would rather be a humble bard getting the sugar than a great genius looking around for somebody to indorse his note."

"Times have certainly changed," mused the Head Barber. "The world ain't got much time nowadays for anybody with old fashioned ideas. There ain't no dignity, no reverence, no old homesteads, no quilting bees or logging bees, no church sociables, no sleigh-rides. When I was a kid I would take off my cap and get red in the face if a lady spoke to me, but if a lady speaks to a strange kid now and asks him to throw away a cigarette, he will say 'Tell it to Sweeney.' I don't know what everything is coming to."

"Yes; she has a natural voice, a sharp tongue and a flat nose."

Don't Suffer With Indigestion or Stomach Trouble---Quaker Herb Extract Will Cure You

There Are Thousands of Atlanta's Best Citizens Who Have Been Cured by Quaker and Are Willing for the World to Know That It Was the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm That Did It.

The Health Teacher when here had proven to the people of Atlanta the same as he has in thousands of others, that when he came here he brought rejoicing and happiness into thousands of homes that heretofore have been misery and sorrow, not from want or poverty—no, no—but for health and strength. In some homes it was a darling baby or older child whose little life seemed to be ebbing slowly away; in many cases it was worms of some kind that a few doses of Nature's own Quaker Extract would expel, and they were made well. Some homes were sorrowful on account of a poor, weak, run-down mother, who was dragging around from day to day, at times more dead than alive—pain in the back, that tired, languid feeling, could not bear anything tight around her waist, stomach would bloat, belching, shortness of breath, dizziness, headache at times, sometimes did not care to live, and tried every treatment with no relief—but here is where the Quaker Extract shows you Quaker is in a class by itself, for it cures just these kinds of cases, and thousands of women and children are living witnesses to prove it.

The husband and father that provides for home and family the same as Mr. K. P. Horder, No. 70 Fowler street, by occupation a meat cutter at Singleton Market on Cone street, who has had catarrh of the stomach, a soreness most of the time, had like a lump in his throat that he could not get up or down, his bowels very constipated, had to take pills, pellets, salts or something all the time to make them act, should do like him. He got one bottle of Quaker Extract, used it ten days, then said: "Give me three more bottles of Quaker Extract, for it it is the best medicine in the world; the pain in my chest is gone, my stomach does not bloat, my bowels are just acting fine, and it's the only medicine I ever took that just toned and seemed to build me right up."

Mrs. E. W. Gorman, who resides at Ninth street, who was laid up three months with rheumatism in arms, shoulders, back and lower limbs so bad that she never put her foot on the floor in weeks, tried every known remedy without even relief, and two bottles of Quaker Extract and two 25c bottles of Oil of Balm have cured her. She now feels like a girl—no aches or pains—and says that Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm did more for her than $100 worth of other medicine.

Now, this is the way the Health Teacher proves what he says. Quaker Remedies cure, even where all others have failed. Hundreds of people have had their hearing restored, the sense of taste and smell all brought back; people with stiff limbs and joints have all been made well. Call at Coursey & Munn's drug store, No. 29 Marietta street, for these: Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. We repay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over.

Harry K. Thaw's Recent Declaration of Love for Evelyn---

"I have lost all that is dear to me in this world. I feel I have lost the love of the woman for whom I was prepared to do anything. That is Evelyn.

"I think I have answered the question of why I made my flight from Matteawan when I have said that I have lost the dearest girl in the world."

Introductory Remarks by Evelyn Thaw

IF there are women or men in the world who do not believe that their lives would make an entrancing story they are either very humble or very clever.

"Commonplace" is a word which is expunged from the lexicon of those who write about themselves. In our arrogance—let me include myself—we imagine that our lives are so far removed from the run of lives, in respect of interest and character, as to be apart.

And we are right, even the most humdrum of us. Who can read Flaubert's "Simple Soul" without realizing this fact? There is no life that is not a fascinating study—always providing that its limner can "carry it across the footlights." The less humdrum the life has been the less skill does the autobiographer require, and it is because my own life has been out of the ordinary that I dare essay the task of putting in plain words a rough and, I fear, an amateur chronicle.

I have many friends in the newspaper world, both in America and England; unemotional men, whose friendship I value, not so much because they have been able, at times, to turn the sharp edge of criticism from my unhappy self, but because in many of them I have found a saner judgment, a larger humanity and broader views than in any other class of men I have met. And this has been an astounding thing for me. For your newspaper man, on the surface, is a man of ice; a man pitiless in his analysis, and remorseless in his search of facts. Stories which would appal and shock the average person leave him unmoved. He will go right away from a millionaire's luxurious dinner party to the morgue; cover a horse show and an electrocution in one day; interview princes and criminals in rotation, and give no indication that he is impressed by either experience.

Yet, for all his seeming callousness, when loosed upon a "story," the newspaper man is very human in his sympathies, and I have to pay a grateful tribute to some of the journalists of America for the help and encouragement they gave me in the darkest hour of my need.

It follows that among my friends of the press I have found many who are willing and anxious to assist me in preparing such a book as this, but, although with such assistance, the value of the book, as a literary production, might well be materially enhanced, I have preferred to wait the time when I might be able to write, with my own hand and for my own pleasure, the story as I wish to tell it.

I am satisfied that there will be critics who will demur at the necessity of writing the book at all. They will say, "Why rake up the past—a past which can not be of interest to anybody save the actors, who are fairly unimportant people?" My own view, strengthened by a continuous study of other lives, is that there are no unimportant people in the world. The right to write is almost as incontestable as the right to live, and there will be something in the exaggerated tragedy of the existence which was mine—a lesson for somebody or other.

I hate the cant of the writer who professes to write only for the uplifting of the race; who prepares moral nastiness that the vague "they" shall be benefited, and I disassociate myself from the suggestion that this is a book with an object—yet, as I say, there will be a lesson in this, as in every other autobiography. It would be a colorless life, indeed, which did not contain this lesson.

Here, then, is the life of Evelyn Thaw—a life without an apology; without even vain regret.

Chapter I.--My Early Poverty; as Artist's Model; as Chorus Girl

Written by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

HOWEVER anxious one may be to record one's childhood, that period of life is the most elusive.

I lived at Tarentum, on the Allegheny River, just outside Pittsburg. My father was a lawyer. "Win" Nesbit was respected from one end of the country to the other, and had a reputation which extended beyond the line of local celebrity. A charming, genial man, I have only the most tender memories of him, for he died when I was 10, and that is an age when a child begins to form the most roseate impressions of those she has marked down for hero worship.

My childhood was the happiest time of my life. That is the impression I have now. I know that I was a tomboy, very keen on prize fights (of all things in the world), and delighted in promoting combats in secluded spots between children who were very beautiful to me, but who, in the eyes of my outraged parents, were the most impossible playmates.

My mother is one of the sweetest women I have ever met. Artistic to her finger tips, her home has ever been a harmonious and beautiful thing.

I have said she was a beautiful character. She was one of those women who had her home ordered artistically and charmingly. Whether she understood me or my nature I do not know. I doubt very much whether any mother is ever entirely in sympathy with her daughter's aspirations. It has been my experience that the son has invariably been the mother's first care, just as the daughter is invariably the father's.

My Tribute to My Mother, The Best of Women.

I have a brother with whose characteristics I do not doubt my mother is much better acquainted than with mine. I do not suggest for one moment that there was any violent lack of sympathy between her and myself, nor do I say that had she understood me better my life would have run on different lines. And, if I express the opinion that my brother was the first consideration, I do not do so in an irritated or an aggrieved frame of mind. I believe that is how nature orders things, and I am quite content to accept such order without complaint, realizing that, had my father lived, my brother would probably have enjoyed the same experience in relation to myself.

I have the fullest admiration for my mother's character. She is altogether a wonderful woman. She is one of those sweet characters who could not plant a dry stick in the earth but it would blossom; who can make the prettiest things; is eminently efficient in all her household duties; the most perfect and dainty of housewives; the most trusting and believing of creatures.

But she did not understand me. To-day I am probably the greatest enigma that the world offers her. I am outside and beyond the range of her understanding. She is one of those women who are always willing to believe the best, and quite ready to fear the worst.

I can not take a convenient and lazy course and put all the blame of the friction, which at various periods undoubtedly existed, upon my ancestry. My mother and I were temperamentally different. I made matters more impossible because I was young, headstrong and willful; filled with the sublime assurance of youth, and opposed by one whose nature was so sweet and so simple that I could without any effort circumvent her most convincing argument.

I was, as I have said, born in Tarentum, in Pennsylvania, on the Allegheny River. There is a Tarento in Italy, a corruption of the ancient Tarentum, but the town namers of the United States were ever purists. When I was eight years old we moved across the river to Allegheny, and we were there two years.

The Poverty That Followed Fast Upon Father's Death.

It was while we were there that my father died. I have only the dimmest recollection of the period that followed. I realized then, with a vague sense of childish discomfort, that it was a period of trouble for my mother.

I do not know exactly in what position my father left her, but my recollection is that my mother had to pay frequent visits to court on account of my father's affairs.

At first, as far as I remember, we seemed to be in some prosperity, but afterward there was a great deal of worry. Whatever money my mother had was gone, and it was necessary for us to rent a few rooms in the house to outsiders.

That seemed a fairly easy method of keeping the wolf from the door, but, somehow, it never worked smoothly. Mother was always worried about the rent she had to pay, and still more worried about the rent she did not always get. And there were times when we felt the pinch very acutely; moments, indeed, when we did not get enough to eat.

The next move, I remember, was to my grandmother's. We went and lived with her. I think at that time we had no money whatever, and my earliest recollections of Pittsburg are almost as painful as my later recollections.

Poverty is very impatient and fretful. People who are poor find their salvation in action, and, since the woman's sphere is a limited one, and scope for initiative necessarily small, mother again rented a house, at No. 5 South Highland avenue, Pittsburg, and let out most of the rooms to other people.

I remember that my mother, my little brother and myself had to sleep in one room. There was no place for any of us elsewhere. Yet, despite all these discomforts, and all the sacrifices we made, the new house and the new arrangement did not pay any better than had our house in Allegheny.

In theory it showed excellent profits, but in practice there was the difficulty of collecting the rents, and I just remember that after a little while we had more trouble, and that the end of it was the furniture had to be sold.

It was then that a very good friend of mother's came to our rescue, and paid the man to whom we owed rent. Mother had made up her mind that she would leave Pittsburg and go to Philadelphia. She was very artistic, and she hoped to get a position as a designer. We were sent to an aunt, and afterward to a family which my mother had known in Pittsburg.

It is curious what shape memory takes of events which are of such paramount importance, and which are destined to play so great a part in one's career.

I remember that rail journey, which my brother and I took alone. How we were put in charge of the conductor, and the trouble we had with the family cat, which I insisted upon taking with me to our new home. Every conductor that came aboard wanted to put poor pussy off. It was a weepy journey for me. Finally we got to Philadelphia, and mother and another lady met us at the depot.

I was between thirteen and fourteen at the time; just old enough to take an intelligent interest in my parent's affairs. I do not remember exactly what idea I had as to our future when I went to Philadelphia. It probably was that my mother had already secured an appointment, but I found that she was living in one room in a small boarding house, and that the position of designer, the securing of which was to retrieve the family fortune, had not yet materialized.

Clever as she was in the making and planning of clothes, the people who employed designers wanted one who had practical experience on the commercial side of the business. They wanted somebody who had been Paris, who had studied and had at their finger tips the latest mode, and poor mother, with all the best intentions in the world, could not lay claim to so large and varied an experience.

The Problem of the Girl Alone With an Artist.

What little money we had began to go again. My brother was sent back to a convenient aunt living outside Pittsburg and we moved to a place in Arch street.

In a sense, this was the most momentous of our moves, from my point of view. The boarding house in Arch street marked the beginning of my independent career. Until now I had been a follower—a being whose life was directed by the whim or the circumstances of another.

Hitherto I and the rest of the world had revolved about my mother. She was in my eyes the central attraction around which animated creation gyrated. Arch street represented the period of transition; the stage during which the center of attraction slowly but surely shifted.

It was there I met a Mrs. Darach, who was an artist. She was attracted by my face, and asked me if I would sit as a model for her. The idea attracted me. It seemed to me at that time to be a wonderful thing that anybody would want to paint a picture of me. It was really a wonderful joke and I was as proud as though I myself combined all the genius of Michael Angelo and Rosa Bonheur.

I learned in that time the supreme value of patience. Enthusiasm for being painted died with an aching neck, with the yearning desires to get right away from the position in which the artist put me, to move my head exactly in the direction she did not wish me to look, and to fidget at moments when it was essential that I should keep quite still.

Here, then, began the great education, an education the fruit of which was to serve me in such good stead in later years. Other artists would drop into the studio on Chestnut street, and one woman who came was very anxious that I should sit for her. Mrs. Darach, however, pointed out that I was not a professional model, but the other lady artist was very insistent.

"Why," she said, "I know lots of girls who are earning quite good money by posing for illustrators of magazines."

I had never thought of the possibility of making an income in this way. It seemed to me absurd that people should take money for being painted. I spoke to mother about it, but she did not offer any objection, and thus it came about from Mrs. Darach I went to other artists, and slowly but surely began to form quite a connection among the artists who were in the building.

I Take Up Posing To Fill Our Purse.

I posed mostly for heads, particularly for children's heads, and at first for the lady artists. There were four in that building who used me as a model for the pictures with which they illustrated stories in the best-known magazines.

I grew in patience and the work came easy. Beyond the fact that most of the people who drew me were, as I say, women, there were one or two men artists whose names I do not remember.

When I was in full swing we decided to move to New York, and my artist friends gave me letters of introduction, one of which was to Mr. Carroll Beckwith. Mother went to New York, sending me back to Pittsburg. Even then our circumstances were so strained that it was necessary for her to get me a pass from a friend of my father. I had to go back to get Howard, my little brother. I was there for a few weeks, and we went on, by way of Allegheny, to New York.

My mother would never cease in her efforts to secure a position as designer, but in New York she had no greater success than she had in Philadelphia. The main objections which barred her in the smaller city were against her in New York.

We had secured a room on Twenty-second street—a little back room on the second floor. Here we lived and again felt the pinch of poverty. There were days when my sole meal consisted of a biscuit and a cup of coffee.

Try as she would, my mother did not succeed in securing even a minor position with a firm of dress designers. Everywhere the same answer was returned, the same questions asked: "Had she been to Paris recently? Had she similar experience with other stores?"

It was in desperation that mother remembered the letter of introduction to Mr. Carroll Beckwith. In Philadelphia my artist friends had sent me to a photographer's to secure a number of studies of my head. Armed with one of these mother called upon Mr. Beckwith. This was in December, 1900. The artist was pleased with the picture. He told her that she could bring me up to the studio, because he felt pretty sure that he would be able to give me work. A personal inspection satisfied him, and he offered me posing for two mornings every week.

"You are not the sort of girl," he said kindly, "that should go knocking at studio doors. I will give you some letters of introduction to representative artists in New York.

This he did. I remember one was to Mr. F. S. Church, and Mr. Church gave me letters to Herbert Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Hyneman and Carl Blenner. For all these artists I posed.

The work was fairly light. The poses were not particularly difficult. In the main they wanted me for my head. I never posed for the figure, in the sense that I posed for the nude. Sometimes I would be painted as a little Eastern girl in a costume of a Turkish woman, all vivid coloring, with ropes and bangles of jade about my neck and arms.

And here I would like to say something about the artists' model, because there is so much in this conception.

The question of the artists' model, the "eternal feminine," of course, like that of the stage, is a question in which many people seem to take considerable and, indeed, at times uncalled for interest.

In the case of the artists' model, it is perhaps not to be wondered at that when a girl as a model must so completely ignore all the safeguards with which society and convention have fenced in womanhood, the world should speculate as to what manner of person she is, or will presently become, nor can it altogether be considered guilty of rash judgment if it is inclined to reckon such girls as more or less outside the pale.

Now let us look at the girl alone with the artist. The law can not help her, society, convention, custom are shut outside the walls of this great room, powerless to aid or shield from the elemental passions of two human hearts. Judged by the ordinary standards and conducts of life, the thing is cataclysmal. Yet she looks and talks as lightly and unconcernedly as she takes off her hat and goes to the glass to arrange her hair, as if they were about to engage in a game of tennis. She then retires behind a screen, or into another room, to emerge presently appareled only in her youth and beauty. I am speaking, of course, of the artists' model who poses for the figure.

This picture doubtless will appeal to different people in a very different manner. Not a few will regard it as "horrible," "disgraceful," "outrageous," "the law should prevent her," and so on.

Of course, it is a big risk for any woman thus to challenge the conventions and even the instincts of her sex; and yet to do so with impunity has been found quite possible by the majority of those who have risked it. A girl with a character can keep the narrow road with much less difficulty than besets her sister in other branches of life.

It stands to reason that such exacting work as drawing and painting the figure can not be combined with philandering to any great extent, and the artist, even though flesh and blood, and he can not be much of an artist unless he is very much so, quickly gets shy of models whose idea of earning their dollar a day consists in the arduous task of sitting on his knee partaking of chocolates or smoking cigarettes.

For the girl of parts, indeed, there are few means of livelihood which offer fairer possibilities than this career of posing. It requires neither money nor influence. Like Shakespeare, she may know small Latin and less Greek. The only capital necessary is that with which Nature has financed her—a pretty face, a shapely form and a plastic, sympathetic temperament.

It is not couleur de rose all the time, of course, for, of the rank and file, but few fail to have some good times. But even for the luckiest there is the inevitable pay, pay pay—the quid pro quo.

Belying its name, sitting very often involves great muscular effort, and fainting is a common incident, especially in the long sittings required in schools and classes, and the work is at all times a great strain on the nerves.

A girl taking up sitting professionally and seriously must be prepared to make pleasure, amusement and other interests subordinate to her work.

In a sense it was my work as an artists' model that first brought me into the public eye. I do not know that to be brought into the public eye is the happiest of experiences. Wilde has said that a woman, like a country, is happiest when she has no history; for my part, I am free to confess that while the reminiscences of the past may be painful, there is a peculiar fascination and happiness in framing up the experiences.

I Marvel at the Mysteries of the Stage.

I remember in New York a reporter came down to the house to see me. It was a novel experience in those days, and one which considerably flustered me. It was the first of I do not know how many interviews which were to be my lot. Mother showed him a photograph which had been taken in Philadelphia. (It is a curious fact that I have not a single one of these pictures left, though it is not such a long time ago since they were taken.) A photograph of a pose I had made was printed in an evening paper in New York, with a complimentary caption underneath, and thence onward I saw many reporters, all of whom were anxious to get a photograph for their papers.

The Sunday American published several of them, two big pages, and it was only natural that this should be followed by a succession of offers to go on the stage.

I suppose such an experience, falling to a young girl, unused to publicity and with little knowledge of the world, would be sufficient to turn her head. But I was immensely sane in those days. I attribute this to the fact that I had read more than most girls of my age. My father had an excellent library, and I had been a most omnivorous reader. I laugh to myself when I think of the literary puzzles I tackled. I am more than astounded to realize that I not only read, but enjoyed many books which a child might reasonably be supposed to think more than a little difficult. But the efforts I made in those early days to master such classics as came my way had been a sort of mental gymnastics which enabled me to secure a sense of proportion, the one sense which spells salvation to a girl upon whom is lavished the subtle flattery of publicity. This, and my own taste for a healthy open-air life, enabled me to take a normal view of things. I have always loved the fields and the woods and every beast that walks or creeps or crawls. There are no phenomena of nature which are not beautiful to me.

So when I am asked in what spirit I approached the stage and the career it offered me, I say I approached the stage as I would a virgin forest, with a bubbling sense of happiness in the revelations which it would open to me. I was not stage-struck in the accepted sense. I never thought of the audiences and what charm I might exert over them. I did not anticipate huge triumphs in floral tributes handed across the footlights, nor did I dream dreams of laudatory newspaper notices. I was supremely indifferent as to the position I might occupy in the profession; it was enough to me that I should be one with the people of the new world, privy to their lives, their habits of thought and speech. I should be "in it."

There came offers to me from all manner of people, promising me this and that success; dazzling prospects of distant fame were held before my eyes. With the advertisement given me by newspapers I should command high salaries, I should star, I should be the most-talked-of woman in America—all these promises, light-heartedly given, came to me, and I remember that I was not impressed. I was only interested in the actual "getting there." One letter from a manager asking for my services at $20 a week would have eclipsed all other communications. I was sane enough to realize that a freakish notoriety was not desirable from any point of view.

The greatest advancement, apart from an inborn desire for enlargement of life, lay in the very material fact that the stage life would enable me to make a double income. I could pose by day and appear on the stage by night. The dollars counted horribly, for I had tasted privation and was anxious to put myself as far distant from a repetition as I could.

I do not think that my mother was overanxious for me to adopt the stage as my profession, but fate was moving me inexorably in the direction I was to take.

Every day the new life became a more tangible possibility, and when at length I entered the unpromising stage door it seemed less of a new experience than an introduction to a life with which I was already familiar.

I had a letter from Mr. Marks, who was a theatrical manager. He was very anxious that I should go on the stage and promised me that he would do all he could to make me famous. These letters used to come addressed to us, but we paid little attention to them, but afterward he wrote saying that he could get me a position in "Floradora," and some time later, through a girl I knew, I met him and secured a letter of introduction to John C. Fishell, who was at that time the manager of the "Floradora" company. From thence onward the stage became a practical issue. I overruled mother's objections, and went with her one day to Mr. Fishell's office. He had a long look at me. He was a pleasant, genial man, blessed with a sense of humor, and he burst into a fit of laughter.

"So you want to be an actress?" he said, with mock solemnity. "I am running a theater, not a baby farm. "Why," he went on, "if I took you in 'Floradora' I should have the Gerry Society on my back. No, my child, I can not rob the cradle.

When I got back to the office Mr. Fishell asked me if I could dance. I said, "Yes," a little fearfully. I had learned dancing at a school in Pittsburg. He sent for a woman who came to the piano and played.

The stage manager was keen on my coming into the theater, but Mr. Fishell was not so enthusiastic and said he would let me know.

"The fact is," he said frankly, 'the only chance of your coming on the stage is for you to be a little reticent as to what your age is. If you like to do this I am willing to give you a trial; you can come to-morrow and rehearse."

They Left Me Still My Veil of Innocence.

I went home in the seventh heaven of delight.

And here let me deal with an aspect of stage life which forever excites the moralist. Has it a corrupting influence on the young? I speak of myself when I say it did not corrupt me. If being brought into contact with people who are loose of speech, or who have exaggerated views on the flexibility of morals, is corruption, then the streets of New York, Paris, London, of any great city, are unfit for the young girl.

There is a camaraderie on the stage which entails a certain freedom of speech and a certain frankness in dealing with the relationships which exist between people, but there is also the protection which comes from the destruction of illusion.

And there is, too, a very keen appreciation of duty toward the innocent. There is a code which protects the child and stands between her and knowledge of evil, and in no other branch of life have I seen such anxiety displayed to hide ugly truths from the novitiate.

Here is an example of how a girl can live in the very midst of things without fully understanding their significance.

I remember that in those early days I used to envy a sextet of beautiful girls who had a chorus number of their own. I used to stand in the wings and watch them dancing gracefully the slow movements of the number, and wonder a little ruefully whether I should ever be tall enough or skillful enough to do the work they were doing. For, in my innocence, I regarded them as the most wonderful part of the show and certainly the best paid, "for," I argued, "how could they wear such lovely clothes off the stage, and such beautiful pearls on, unless they received a salary in proportion to their charms?"

I must have mentioned my view to several people, but not one of them attempted to lift the veil which hid realities from my eyes. The stage was indeed a wonderful world, its people, a people apart. One looked at life from a new angle, and saw men and women from another plane. I was impressed by the frank egotism of the girls, a quality which is neither to be despised nor condemned, for they merely put into words all that their sisters of the other world think. They had gotten the trick of thinking aloud, and found speech an excellent and soothing substitute for thought, and one of the reasons why actresses are apparently so inconsistent is to be found in this practice.

I found it took years of study before I could disentangle the real intentions of a girl from her expressed and often vehemently expressed view. I have heard people, and men especially, who have complained bitterly of the inconsistency and deceptive powers of girls engaged on the stage.

Next Sunday Evelyn Thaw will give the history of her acquaintance with Stanford White.

REAL FIGHT FOR LINE BERTHS ON GEORGIA TEAM

Tackle Malone Returns and Will Give Henderson and Turner Royal Struggle.

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—With the presence of Quarterback Paddock, Tackle Malone and End Conklin on the field this afternoon the Georgia crop of football material for 1913 is on hand, and with to-day's workout will begin the real practice of the Red and Black outfit. The past two weeks have been spent in getting what men there have been present in good physical trim. The scrimmaging will begin at once, and by the first game, which comes Saturday against Alabama Presbyterian College, the first line-up will have about been discovered.

The return of Malone gives Cunningham an extra good tackle for emergency in Turner, and it will really be a fight for the next few days as to who will draw these two positions—Malone, Henderson or Turner. Henderson is a certainty, so it seems that Malone and Turner are to fight it out unless one of them is sent to guard, which so far has been looked after by Conyers and Brown. Brown was on the freshman team last year and lacks experience, but has the weight and is fairly fast. Conyers was first substitute in the line, and easily won his letter, and thus has a big call on a regular berth this fall.

Paddock was given a royal welcome by his teammates when he came on the field Saturday afternoon for his initial workout, and there is nothing to it except that this popular player is going to be one of the greatest players in the South before the season closes. He got a late start last year and only played in three or four games, but was then prominently mentioned for all-Southern quarter. He is light, weighing hardly 150 pounds, but is gritty and a good general at running the team.

There has not been an injury so far to any candidate, except one or two "charley horses," and Cunningham is working hard to prevent the loss of any star by this cause. McWhorter has hardly been in a play yet, but has been busy looking after the entire squad. Bob is taking it rather easy this year, anyway, since his expe-rience of last fall, when he was more than a month rounding into form, due mostly from overtraining the early part of the season.

McClellan, who was thinking of entering college, will hardly return this year, as there is some question as to his eligibility, since he did not remain in college very long in 1911, when he played fullback on the Red and Black team.

DEAD ONES ARE DEAD ONES.

"Where are the stars of yesteryear?"
quoth I unto a fan.
"The Overalls and Mordy Browns
who heaved 'em o'er the pan?
Where is the Peerless Leader gone
and where is Johnny Kling?
And where is Harry Steinfeldt, with his strong, uncrring wing?
And where is Jimmy Sheckard gone,
and where is Reulbach now?"
The stranger turned and answered
me, with scorn upon his brow:
"I do not know and do not care where
all these gents have fled.
Perchance in some secluded spot they
rest among the dead.
I do not care for ancient men who
carry famous names,
For they are only dead ones now, and
dead ones win no games."

GOLF IS SAFEST OF ALL SPORTS, WRITES EVANS

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—I met Mr. Baxter, of the Ridge Country Club, on the street the other day and was horrified to see that he had suffered a severe injury to his right eye. It was badly swollen and blackened and the eyeball itself was a brilliant red. He told me that the accident that resulted so painfully for him occurred at Ridge. Mr. Baxter, Mr. Scott, former city champion, and Mr. McCritchell were playing at the Ridge. It had rained considerably the day before and part of one of the tees had been staked off. Scott drove off and his ball struck one of the stakes and hit Mr. Baxter's eye on the rebound. It was excruciatingly painful for a few days, but we are glad to say that there is no permanent injury.

Has Been Hit Twice.

It is a peculiar coincidence that two years ago Mr. Baxter was struck on the other eye by a golf ball. Surely he has had much more than his share of injuries, because it is a well-known fact that the golfer is less liable to accident than any other sportsman.

It is true, of course, that a golf ball is of a size to really find a man's eye, and owing to the swiftness with which it travels it can do a great deal of damage, but there are few accidents of that sort on record. The most serious injuries have resulted from the explosion of certain balls when being curiously cut into, and that has been a real danger.

Of the broken bones and dislocated joints, constant attendants of football and the other more strenuous games, we know practically nothing, and differences at golf are not settled with the fists.

Perhaps the most prolific source of accident in golf is the tendency to stand too near a player. The golfer who stands raptly gazing admiringly after a fine ball wriven by a player is in a good position to be struck by the next player. I always look around me when I swing a club.

Evans Cut With Mashie.

When a small boy, and carried away by admiration of another small boy's play, I was cut above the eye with a mashie. A scar for life is the result. Four stitches were necessary to repair the injury, and it was considered lucky that the blow was above the eye. A golf club is indeed a dangerous weapon, and in a difficulty with a highwayman I should at any time prefer one to a revolver. So keep your distance, Mr. Golfer, from the man who is playing, both for your own sake and his.

I heard of a peculiar accident a short time ago. On a rainy day a club slipped from the hand of a golfer in the act of playing and struck another golfer at a parallel hole. There is also a chance of injury when a club handle breaks or the glue loosens in a wooden club and the head flies off.

But, on the whole, let us be thankful that golf is a comparatively safe game and we are not as football players are.

DENVER WINS FLAG.

DENVER, COLO., Sept. 29.—By defeating Des Moines yesterday Denver won the pennant in the Western League for the third consecutive time. Post-season series games with the winner of the American Association pennant are being negotiated for by the owners of Denver, to begin October 7.

JACKETS ARE FEELING FINE AFTER GAME

IN spite of the heat and the earliness of the season, the Tech Yellow Jackets came through the fray with the Soldiers Saturday without an injury or a strain that might prove in any way severe. The usual unpleasant soreness and stiffness of joints and ligaments, of course, was very noticeable yesterday, but a bit of good old heel-and-toe walking 'cross country took most of the lameness away, and the squad reported fit and fine this morning.

The next game, scheduled for Saturday at Grant Field, is with the Charleston Citadel team, always a good, stiff contender, especially in the early part of the season. That team has been working out a week longer than the McPherson bunch, and will be in excellent shape for a hard battle Saturday, while there is no doubt that the rival of Clemson and the University of South Carolina will be inspired with plenty of ambition to trim the Jackets.

Tech Line Looked Good.

While most of the interest among the Saturday spectators centered in the performance of the backfield, by reason of the new men and their excellent rating, it was noted by careful students of the game that the Heisman line was showing unusual form for a green line in the opening game.

The charging was uniformly low and hard, and the heavier Soldiers could do little to upset it. There were plenty of minor defects, naturally, and a lack of that machine-like swing and dash that characterizes the seasoned forwards. But it must have been quite reassuring to Heisman to note the manner in which the line stuck to its work and kept its cleats in the ground.

Backfield Unchanged.

The backfield probably will work through the next two games with the same personnel used against the Soldiers, at least until Gene Patten's knee permits him to get back in the going.

Preas and Johnston showed a lot of stuff, and promise to develop into A-1 backs, while Homer Cook, always a hard and conscientious performer last year, more than upheld his reputation in the opening game, and McDonald showed every bit of his regular form. Fielder, shot into the game fresh, celebrated his debut with one of the longest and most spectacular runs of the day, and showed up well while he was in harness.

Battle for End Jobs.

There already is a pretty competition on among Cushman, Goree and Lucas for an end job, and it will be even keener when Thomasson returns to the squad. Johnston is pretty sure to get one of the positions, and Heisman will have plenty of speed and ambition to choose from in selecting his running mate.

The line-up in next Saturday's game will supply a fair idea of what the coach intends to make his 1913 machine, and by the following week the work will be pointing directly toward the big games of the season.

HERRICK BEATS HIGGINS.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Completely dazed from the start, Al Higgins, from Roswell, N. Mex., lost to Jack Herrick, of Kewanee, Ill., yesterday in the fourth round of a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Juarez arena.

Francis Ouimet's Own Story

Our Golfers Equal of Britons'

The youth who amazed the golf world by capturing the open championship of the United States and also defeating Vardon and Ray, the English champions, is going to furnish the readers of The Georgian with a series of interesting articles. Ouimet's story to-day gives his impressions of British golfers and also a comparison between the stars of England and this country. The stories will be both interesting and instructive.

By Francis Ouimet.

IN my article to-day I shall give my impressions of British golfers and compare the leading golf stars of England with those of the United States. There are thousands of people in this country, and even more throughout Europe, who believe that the British golfers are far superior to those in Uncle Sam's land.

Personally, I fail to agree with those who claim that American golfers are not every bit as good as our friends across the Atlantic. There is very little difference between our ten best golfers and the ten leading stars in Great Britain.

There are ten or more professionals in this country who play remarkable golf. When they are in their best form they are always unbeatable. I have closely studied the work of the leading professionals, and I firmly believe they are capable of holding their own with all comers.

The professionals, however, are not the only good golfers in the United States. The amateurs in this country are also sterling players and many of them are able to give a fine account of themselves against the best players in the world. Our amateur players are not quite as good as those in England and Scotland, but they are nevertheless good men.

Travers Perfect Golfer.

Take for example Jerome D. Travers. This man is a perfect golf wizard. He may always be relied upon to make a good showing. He is a cool, steady player, and does not let anything ruffle him.

"Chick" Evans is another great American golfer. He has won first place in many important tournaments and is sure to be ranked among the "headliners" for many more years.

John G. Anderson and Heinrich Schmidt are two other good American golfers. Schmidt opened the eyes of the British golfing world earlier in the year when he played in the British championships. It took H. H. Hilton, the best amateur golfer in Europe, to vanquish the gallant Worcester lad.

With such stars as those mentioned above competing for Old Glory in the big tournaments, I am sure that the American public will never have reason to be ashamed of the work of their players.

British Golfers High Class.

The golf displayed by the British golfers was of a very high class. They showed to very good advantage throughout the tournament, with the possible exception of the last few holes in the Saturday play-off, when Mr. Vardon made several serious mistakes at the crucial stage of the round.

They showed a great knowledge of the various shots, such as a slice, pull, pitch shot with run, and the cut shot. This latter shot is very effective, and is used mostly to keep the ball near the hole, especially on a keen green.

When played properly, it leaves little to do on the putting greens.

Their putting is fairly good on the whole, with the possible exception of Harry Vardon. He is lamentably weak in this department of the game, and shows a timidity on short putts such as I have never seen before. He hits the ball with a quick, jerky stroke, and is constantly afraid of missing the hole. It does seem too bad, because this really great golfer suffers on this shot.

With Ray it is different. A big, strapping chap, who hits the ball hard, getting terrific distances. The few times I have seen him play made me think that Ray was inclined to be off the line of play occasionally.

His play is very sound for all of that, and he might be considered a very dangerous man on the putting greens, as he putts boldly and for the back of the cup, being exceptionally accurate on his approach putting.

E. H. BARRETT WINS MATCH AT 37TH GREEN

THE closing match of the last tournament of 1913 at East Lake wound up with a most brilliant bit of golf, by which E. H. Barnett won the T. A. Hammond trophy, 1 up, on the first green of the course, sinking a 20-foot putt for a 2 on what was the thirty-seventh hole of the hardest match of the season. J. O. Smith, his opponent, just missed his own long putt for a 2, and was down for a par 3.

The match was well played throughout, and at no time was either contestant in the way of a commanding lead. It was a fitting finish for the best golfing season the Atlanta Athletic Club has ever enjoyed—and probably for the last big tournament that will be played on the present course, which now is being redesigned into what will doubtless be one of America's sportiest inland courses.

In the second flight W. R. Tichenor defeated W. J. Tilson, 2 up and 1 to play, in a close and well-played match.

Perry Adair defeated Scott Hudson in the finals of the third flight, 2 and 1; J. B. Pollard won in the fourth flight over E. T. Winston; and the fifth flight also developed an extra hole match between E. G. Beaudry and H. H. Albert, the former winning 1 up in nineteen holes.

Ex-President's Son After Place on Team

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 29.—Princeton football players to-day heard with interest that in a few years they may have on the Tiger team Richard Cleveland, son of the late President Grover Cleveland. Young Cleveland is a student in Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., but will enter Princeton next year. He is 15 years old and weighs 160 pounds, and is striving hard to make his class team this year. He has already distinguished himself as a hockey player.

DENIES SALE TO CUBS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 29.—Ed R. Males, president and principal owner of the Venice team, of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, denied to-day that he had sold Pitcher Kostner to President Murphy, of the Chicago club, of the National League.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Frank Baker, the Eastern lightweight, who has done some boxing around these parts, is back in our midst again. Baker is a likely looking chap and has a good record. Frank is anxious to get on with some of our local boys and says he does not fear any of them. Baker has met such boys as Benny Kaufman, Tommy Lavelle and Curley Jordan.

* * *

Jim Coffroth, the coast promoter, has decided to give Arthur Pelky a chance in his arena. Coffroth has wired Charley Miller, who is in New York, an offer to box Tommy Burns' protege next month. Pelky has already agreed to the match.

* * *

"Wildcat" Fearns strengthened his claim to the welterweight title last week when he defeated Billy Walters in a 10-round battle at Kenosha, Wis. Walters was one of the leading candidates for the title and recently held Fearns to a 15-round draw. A 20-round go between Fearns and Mike Gibbons ought to prove a banner attraction.

* * *

Gunboat Smith and Carl Morris have signed articles to meet in a 10-round go at Madison Square Garden, New York on the evening of October 9. Both men will begin active training the early part of this week.

* * *

Spider Britt, local bantamweight, left Saturday night for Knoxville, Tenn. Britt has bouts pending there with Al Smith and Kid Underwood. If Britt fights in form he should have little trouble beating both these boys.

* * *

Despite recent defeats at the hands of Charley Lee, Kid Young is still wanted by promoters. Young secured two matches last week and if he manages to win both of them he will not lack for work in the padded ring. He boxes Charlie Lee in a 4-round contest at a local theater to-morrow night and meets Mike Kelly at Athens, Ga., next month.

* * *

When Dan McKetrick sails for Paris from New York on October 4 he will take the following fighters with him: Frank Moran and Joe Jeannette, heavyweights; Tommy Gavigan and Otto Kohler, middleweights; Young Ahearn and Gene Delmont, lightweights. This is surely some collection.

* * *

A grand reception awaits Willie Ritchie when he arrives in New York. Jack Britton, Tommy Murphy and Leach Cross will be demanding fights with the champion. However, before Willie gets to the Eastern city he will probably meet a sterling boxer, Charlie White, at Milwaukee. And remember this, Mr. White has a dandy kick in his left hand that he will work overtime if he ever gets into the same ring with Ritchie.

* * *

Terry Nelson, Greek battler, writes from Chattanooga that he has started light work for his bout with Joe Sherman at Jacksonville. Nelson is also after a match with either Danny Goodman or Jimmy Murphy at Terre Haute, Ind.

KLAUS BATTLES M'GOORTY FOR 'MIDDLE' TITLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Back in 1908, June 4, to be exact, Milwaukee was alive with fight fans who gathered to see the bringing out of a new champion, Stanley Ketchel, who won a ten round battle from Billy Papke by a big margin. To-night in that same city another gathering of fight fans will witness Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and Eddie McGoorty go ten rounds.

The clash won't mean the bringing out of a new champion, but mighty near such a thing, for though Jack Dillon and Jimmy Clabby have a right to dispute any one claiming such honors, McGoorty and Klaus to-day hold the highest rank in the middleweight division. In short, the victor to-night, if the victory be decisive, will loom up as the man the others must beat to dispute his title.

There will be no decision at the close of ten rounds, should the battle go the full distance, for referees' decisions are barred by the laws that govern the game, but the newspaper boys will be at the ringside to tell the merits of the game.

To-night's clash carries with it international interest. Not that either of the lads hails from foreign shores, but because of their battles abroad. Both McGoorty and Klaus have fought in the far-off lands and each is known all over the world. Klaus is famed abroad for his decisive win over Georges Carpentier, the French champion, and for his victory over Billy Papke, another battle fought on foreign grounds.

Other minor bouts have been waged in France by Klaus, but these made him known to the foreign ring. His American worth has been of top-notch caliber, hence the unprejudiced scribes' reason for handing him the best in the 158-pound division.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

ONLY TWO MORE MEN TO REPORT IN AUBURN CAMP

By Mike Donahue.

AUBURN, ALA., Sept. 29.—With the arrival of Pitts and Lockwood it has been possible to get some idea of what the Auburn line-up is going to look like. With the exception of Taylor, the 190-pound candidate for fullback, and Christopher, who has not yet arrived, the entire squad is on the field and working hard. There are a few minor injuries that are still keeping some of the players on the side-lines, but none of them is serious.

* * *

THERE are quite a number of candidates for the places left vacant by Lamb and Meadows. The most prominent candidates for right tackle is Conisell, who is an active and aggressive player as well as a good punter. Steed and Culpepper are two other likely candidates for this place. These players are not as heavy as tackles ought to be. For the other tackle, Essinger is the most promising. He has taken on a lot of extra weight since last year and is in much better condition. He promises to develop into a worthy successor to Meadows. Cleveland a new man, knows a good deal abut tackle play, and Martin, a scrub, is playing the kind of a game that is bound to win promotion. Robinson is holding down right end in his usual style, which means that ground gaining will be somewhat scarce around his territory. He has a very competent understudy in Halsten, who is a natural defensive player and is rapidly learning the offensive side of the game. At the opposite end Wynne, a last year's scrub, is playing a game not much inferior to Robinson's. He has good weight and is strongly built.

* * *

FROM end to end this is a formidable looking aggregation, but it will take a few games to find out its real ability. With the exception of Lockwood and Thigpen none of them has taken part in a real big game. Two of the places in the backfield will be taken care of by Newell and Arnold. Newell will play left half as usual while Arnold has been shifted to quarter. He is rapidly learning the business of running a team. For the fullback position there are several good, light men—Harris, Christopher, Hart, Bedez and Sparkman. They all drive hard but have not the necessary weight to carry them through the secondary defense. Kearley has been shifted to the backfield and is trying for right-half. He is being rested at present on account of an attack of charley horse. Another very promising candidate for the position is Prendergast, a new man, who has the requisite speed and weight for a first-class halfback. If he can assimilate college football rapidly enough he will be a valuable man this year.

WOLGAST PURCHASES RANCH.

CADILLAC, MICH., Sept. 29.—Ad Wolgast closed a deal with former Mayor Fred L. Heath, of Hastings, Mich., paying Heath $17,000 for a ranch near Medford, Oreg. The former lightweight champion now owns two Oregon ranches, a Michigan farm and considerable valuable live stock.

FOOTBALL

Gridiron Gossip

No revolutionary changes in gridiron practice were ordered this week in consequence of the games Satruday. The outcome of the contests had been confidently predicted and there were no surprises. Cornell, although catching a tartar in Colgate, promises to be a bigger factor in the Eastern football situation this season than for a long time. Pennsylvania apparently has a much stronger team than last year, while Yale, Harvard and Princeton all showed much promise.

* * *

Tom Shelvin, former Yale star, has joined the Blue coaching staff at New Haven. Signal practice was ordered for to-day at Yale, but there will be some secret sessions later in the week.

* * *

Every member of the Carlisle eleven was in excellent condition to-day, not a rediskin having been injured in the game with West Virginia Saturday.

* * *

Kicking and catching punts will keep the Harvard backfield men busy this week. Hardwick and Willets, two of the Crimson's most dependable backs, are expected to patch up their difficulties with the faculty this week so they can get into the game.

* * *

In preparation for the Fordham game Saturday, Princeton will be sent through some stiff sessions of practice this week. The bulk of attention will be given to kicking. Captain Hobey Baker, who was slightly hurt Saturday, is improving after his rest over Sunday.

* * *

A movement is on foot to abolish secret practice. Captain Ketcham, of Yale, wrote to the captains of the Princeton and Harvard elevens offering to do away with secret practice, but the plan fell through.

* * *

Two "big nine" football elevens were well started in the battle for place in the conference, and the other seven today began more snappy work, spurred by the knowledge that Minnesota and Indiana will both be contenders for first place. Indiana piled up a score of 48 to 3 in the game with DePauw Saturday and Minnesota made 14 while the strong South Dakota eleven went scoreless. It was generally admitted that the Minnesota men did not extend themselves against South Dakota.

* * *

Coach Zuppke, of Illinois, to-day ordered his players to discard the broad stripe of orange on their stockings and to wear plain blue. The glaring stripe was too good a mark for tacklers.

White Sox to Train On Coast Next Year

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—The Chicago American League team will train in California next season. President Comiskey made the announcement yesterday. Because of the world's tour of the Chicago team and the New York Nationals there has been some doubt as to the local club's training plans.

Only a part of the Sox will make the world's tour. The rest of the team will assemble on the Pacific Coast late in February. The players who make the world's tour will join them a fortnight later.

Alabama Works Hard For Georgia Game

ANNISTON, Sept. —"Red" Moore, the Washington and Lee star who is coaching the Alabama Presbyterian College football squad, is rapidly rounding his men into form for the initial clash with Georgia on October 4.

"Blondy" Archibald, Stevenson, Green and others of last year's squad are showing their old-time form and there is said to be some good material among the new students who have arrived.

Leaves Fall, Gridiron Sizzles, and Ouimet's Name Adorns Sport Pages

BUT IT IS NOTED THAT BASEBALL STILL HANGS ON

By O. B. Keeler.

THE leaves are falling, as they usually do in the fall. There is perceptible in the shaking air a muttering and a roaring of a thousand football fields. The crop of pigskin alibis already is blossoming. And interspersed is a heavy sprinkling of dope concerning a Young Person actually named Ouimet, and some older persons known (familiarly) as Vardon and Ray.

But hither and yon, or somewhere in that neighborhood, we still manage to collect an occasional earful concerning a Regular Game—a more regular game, maybe.

And we realize, in our more or less lucid moments, that Baseball still is in our midst, or a trifle to the northeastward.

The Big Series still is to play.

* * *

ALONG with other whispers comes the report of classy performances by Rivington Bisland and Clyde Wares, Southern League stars obtained by the St. Louis Browns. We note also that Elmer $7,000 Brown, ex-Billiken, held the Giants entirely hitless during the six innings he worked for Brooklyn recently. Which must have reminded Mr. McGraw (sadly) of a certain other Mr. Brown, who was wont to toil on occasions of large importance at the Polo Grounds in years gone by.

* * *

THERE was little doubt that Bisland would make good, especially after he was injected into the wrecked and ruined system of the hapless Browns. And the Browns don't look nearly so hopeless, by the way.

With Derrill Pratt on first base, Wares at second, Bisland at short and Austin at third, the tail-end contenders will have a very flossy inner defense to open the ball next year.

And that inner defense thing does help out.

If you don't believe it, try to recall some consistently-winning ball club that didn't have a good infield.

SPEAKING of the Browns, it crops up that there is a ball club without any record-breaking ability whatever—unless it is for Sliding Down the Cellar Door—which, nevertheless, is the most feared and respected record-buster of all ball clubs.

Last season the Browns stopped Walter Johnson's winning streak. This year they flagged Joe Boehling after he had copped eleven in a row. The Athletics had won fifteen successive games when the lowly Browns bumped them. They put over a tally on Walter Johnson after he had traveled 56 2-3 scoreless innings.

And last Wednesday the Browns crippled Cal Brown and Stuffy McInnis, of the Athletics, in the same game.

The last instance is not mentioned ill-naturedly. It is merely chucked in as lagniappe, or good measure, to show that the habit of record-busting is strong upon the Browns.

Maybe it will be strong enough to extract them from the Cellar Class in 1914—what?

That would be pretty strong.

REVERTING for the moment to R. Bisland, Wallop Smith, now with Washington, comes to the front with a large number of ornate remarks concerning his ex-side-kick.

Smith is in St. Louis for the winter, mainly because he lives there. Following are Mr. Smith's remarks about Mr. Bisland, quoted in part, as there are space limitations:

"If Bisland doesn't make good with the Browns, I wouldn't give four cents for my chance to stick with the Senators—and Griffith bought me at that. And I feel pretty confident.

"Bisland is a natural ball player, if ever there was one in this world. He is one of the fastest men in the short field I ever saw, and if he has a weakness there I failed to spot it, playing a whole season on both sides of him. He goes with equal ease to either side. Picking up bounders in deep short and shooting them over to first is simple for the kid, and the only thing he likes as well is to race over back of second, scoop one in his glove, and nail the runner by a step at first. Often and often I would get over to second as fast as I could, just miss the ball, and come up just in time to see Bizzy whipping it over."

Following which, Wallie went on to praise Bisland's hitting ability, especially in the pinches, and had a few kind words to say of his speed in starting two-ply killings or performing as middleman in the double plays.

If Hedges got all of it, he ought to raise Bizzy's pay at once.

* * *

EVEN at this distance, we can see one redeeming feature in connection with the poor showing of the New York Yankees this season.

If they had done well after their spring training excursion to Bermuda, all the other clubs would have wanted to train there in 1914.

Whereupon the scent of the onion would have been abroad in the land, whether the annual Lemon Crop was a success or not.

* * *

IT doesn't look humanly possible to avoid taking sides in the world's series row much longer. We're going to look up some dope on the situation —and some more dope, maybe—and after that it may appear feasible to let the General Public in on the deal.

How far in, is another Question.

Women Take Part In Baseball Riots

CUMBERLAND, MD., Sept. 29.—The baseball game yesterday at Midland between Cumberland and Midland was marke dby a series of riots, and the 2,500 spectators were in frequent mix-ups, in which women proved to be even more aggressive than men.

The first wrangle occurred in the second inning when C. Loppold, of the Cumberland team, was struck by a Midland player. In the sixth inning Manager Nelson W. Russter, of Cumberland, was hit during a dispute. In the meantime a turmoil ensued in the grandstand, where women were fighting almost constantly.

Two women fought for nearly half an hour and men were unable to separate them. They scratched each other and used handbags as weapons. Four separate fights occurred in the grandstand.

Women Golfers Clash For Canadian Title

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—Play in the Canadian golf championship tournament for women began on the course of the Royal Montreal Golf Club here this morning. Miss Mabel Harrison, Miss Muriel Dodd and Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, champion women golfers of Great Britain, are prominent contenders for the Canadian title. After leaving Montreal, the three British women will go to Wilmington, Del., and endeavor to lift the American championship in the match to be played the week after next.

FODDER FOR FANS

The New York Yankees will have to hustle this week to get out of last place in the American League for the Browns gained on them by defeating the Tigers yesterday. The White Sox began the farewell week by blanking the Ceveland Naps, who became more firmly lodged in third place.

* * *

Opinion over the merits and demerits of the Giants and Athletics is pretty evenly divided. Even among the experts each club has its defenders. George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, and a keen judge, picks the Giants, while Napoleon Lajoie, of the Cleveland Naps, one of the "old masters" of the game, picks the Athletics.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Naps, believes that poor pitching will cost the Athletics the world's championship and predicts that New York will take four straight games.

* * *

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, has come out against the ruling of the national commission that players eligible to compete in the world's series may not write baseball articles about the post-season games. One New York paper is already advertising expert stories of the games by Christy Mathewson.

* * *

When the National League season ends the Brooklyn Dodgers will make a tour of Pennsylvania and the South.

* * *

The Cardinals and Browns will play a seven-game series for the championship of St. Louis beginnig October 6.

* * *

The Boston Red Sox are scheduled to play three consecutive double-headers with the Yankees beginning at he Polo Grounds this afternoon.

* * *

Milwaukee has won the pennant in the American Association and Denver in the Western League.

Gibbons and Kelly To Box at Kenosha

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, and "Spike" Kelly, of Chicago, signed articles last night to box ten rounds at Kenosha, Wis., on October 10. The match, according to the promoters, will be for the welterweight championship. The men agreed to weigh 145 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the fight.

RICHARDS ENTERS CORNELL.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. —Alva Richards, who won the high jump at the Stockholm Olympic games, has entered Cornell Agricultural College and reported to Track Coach Moakley. Richards competed for the Illinois Athletic Club in the national championships at Chicago last summer and it is understood that he has not severed his connections with the Chicago club.

Emory Opens Gridiron Season on October 13

EMORY COLLEGE, OXFORD, GA., Sept. 29.—Emory's interclass football team has selected October 13 as the date for the gridiron season to open. Two games will be played that afternoon, the first being when the seniors and juniors meet, and the second will be the sophomore-freshman battle.

The juniors are already down to hard work. This eleven won the 1912 pennant, and have returned every member of the team for work this year. Coach Shingler has not been out yet, owing to his accident when his arm was broken while attempting to crank an automobile.

DUNDEE VS. AZEVEDO.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—Johnny Dundee and Joe Azevedo were matched yesterday to box twenty rounds on October 14 at the Vernon arena here. They will meet as lightweights.

YANKEE CYCLE CHAMP LOSES.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Donald McDougall, world's amateur titleholder last year, went down to defeat yesterday before the superior speed of William Bailey, England's amateur cycle champion, in straight heats in their two-thirds of a mile match at the Veldrome here.

FLICKENSTEIN REAL DEMON ON MOTORCYCLE

A THREE-CORNERED match race between Tex Richards, Morty Graves and Newman Flickenstein will be one of the big features offered at the reopening of the Motordrome Tuesday night. The trio will meet in three heats, the first being a mile, the next two miles and the third five miles.

Graves' new machine is going great guns these days; Richards' famous "28" has always been considered one of the fastest in the world, and Flickenstein, who recently joined the daredevil squad in Chattanooga, has beaten both Richards and Graves.

As a result both Tex and Morty are out for revenge Tuesday night. They admit that Flickenstein can get over 90 miles and hour out of his "boat," but that doesn't seem to worry them any.

The other big event on the card is a twenty-mile race in which all the riders will compete. There should be thrills enough for the most rabid fan in this long, furious grind.

Arthur Chappelle, the world's champion motorcycle rider, is expected to arrive here to-day, and he may start Tuesday night.

Why Is Thaw Made a Hero in New Hampshire---as He Was in Canada?

The Answer Is Simple: People Do Not Like White Slavers and Vile Debauches of the Stanford White Type. And They Do Not Like the Friends of Stanford White That Are Now Hounding Thaw.

(Copyright, 1913.)

A newspaper filled with sympathy for the late Stanford White asks the following question:

"Is Thaw a hero in New Hampshire as he was in Canada because he is notorious, or because he is rich, or because there is genuine popular sympathy for him, or is his popularity due to the fact that he and his money are making a joke of law and justice?"

Here is the answer:

Thaw is made a hero in New Hampshire, he is applauded by good citizens, not so much because of his own qualities, Heaven knows, as BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WANT TO SEE JUSTICE DONE TO HIM AT LAST.

The citizens of the country know that he has been kept in the insane asylum—although he is not insane—through the efforts of the friends of Stanford White, who was about the vilest product of degradation that could possibly be conceived.

The people know that Thaw was declared insane by a jury for the simple reason that the jury would not condemn him for having killed such a creature as Stanford White. And the newspaper that we quote probably knows that also.

The people know that Thaw, now, at least, is not insane. They know that so far from being helped by his millions—or rather by the millions of his mother—the money actually hinders him. If he were an ordinary citizen, without wealth, and if Stanford White, the vile white slaver, had fewer powerful friends, THAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FREE LONG AGO.

The people like fair play in New Hampshire, in New York, and in every State in the Union.

That is why in every State, if the matter were left to a public vote, Thaw would be set free.

This newspaper considers the case AS IT STANDS TO-DAY.

Thaw was declared insane by a jury that would not vote to execute him for having killed Stanford White.

The law says that a man who commits a crime and is declared insane shall be kept locked up unless his sanity returns. As soon as he is sane he is to be set free.

Only the friends of Stanford White, a few newspapers that sympathize with White, and some specialists, especially paid, declare that Thaw is insane.

He is at least as sane as 75 per cent of the population. And he is not only sane, but has shown remarkable intelligence in his determined efforts to obtain freedom, in his dealings with tricky lawyers, and in his answers to judicial questions.

Inasmuch as Thaw is, or was, detained by New York State as an insane man, and inasmuch as his conduct during his incarceration and since he fled from the asylum would clearly indicate that he is sane, justice demands that he be set free—as the law provides.

Justice does NOT demand that he be returned to life imprisonment TO OBLIGE THE FRIENDS, JOURNALISTIC AND OTHERWISE, OF THE DEGRADED BRUTE WHOM HE KILLED.

Fortunately, Thaw is in the hands of a Federal judge. He is not at the mercy of any court especially chosen to send him back to the insane asylum. He is not at the mercy of the distinguished legal gentlemen who make a special point of hounding him—for excellent pay, no doubt.

He will have his day in court, and will probably not be sent back to life imprisonment in an insane asylum for having killed Stanford White, whose death certainly saved from shame, degradation and horror many helpless girls.

No civilized human being would plead the unwritten law, or put the right of an individual taking justice into his own hands above the law.

And any sane man who commits a murder for whatever reason should be punished for murder. Yet, if ever there was a killing that was justified, it was the killing of Stanford White, AND HIS MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS KNOW THAT THAT IS SO.

They know that his pastime was the pursuit and the destruction of unfortunate women. They know that he spent his money and his time in the committing of crime compared with which murder committed in anger is as nothing.

It is not a good, healthy or wise thing to have a man who has committed murder, such as Thaw, lionized, applauded and made much of. But the fault is with the degenerate associates and admirers of Stanford White who viciously pursue Thaw and create public sympathy for him.

And the fault is with the machinery of justice that in one or two instances at least has seemed afraid to deal justly with Thaw.

Far better let the man go in a proper and orderly manner, taking with him the sympathy and the thanks of those who best understood the character and the crimes of Stanford White.

Lock him up again in Matteawan, and you will not settle the question or dispose of it.

The people in New Hampshire, as in Canada, make a hero of Thaw because they do not like Stanford White, and because they do not like the idea that the associates, friends and defenders of that vile degenerate have influence enough to deprive a man of his liberty when the law says that being sane he should be set free.

Dr. Parkhurst Writes on Immortality

Many Hope Death Is End of All, but Deep Thinkers Believe This Is Only the Beginning of a Future and Better Life.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

HOWEVER occupied people may be with the affairs of this life, there are few, if any, who do not sometimes throw their thoughts forward toward a possible life to come. It is safe to say that there is more of this forecasting of another world than has outward expression given to it.

A few are hoping that there is nothing more for them after death, being more than satisfied with what they have had already. Some simply brood over the possibilities of immortality wonderingly. The most, by far the most, are trusting that the few years we pass here are nothing more than the beginning of life, its vestibule, feeling that conditions, as they exist now require something additional in order to their explanations and justification.

It is probable that there is less general belief in immortality than there was fifty years ago. When a boy, as I remember it, a man who expressed doubt in the doctrine was regarded as queer, as a mental and moral defective. Nothing, so far as appears, has in the meantime been discovered to invalidate the doctrine, and the change that has transpired in men's opinions is considerably due to the attitude of the scientists.

Scientists Have Failed to Prove We Are Immortal.

The scientists have not discovered that we are NOT immortal, but have simply failed to discover that we ARE immortal; and there is no reason why they should not have failed, for the mind, the immortal part of us, if there be any immortal part, is not a matter that scientists have any concern with, or any special qualification or equipment for investigating.

A man who knows one thing with considerable thoroughness is liable to imagine that large value therefore attaches to his opinion upon other matters, however distinct they may be from the particular subject upon which he is specially informed.

That states the precise condition of mind of certain investigators who have accomplished distinguished results in their study of matter, and who therefore consider that they are authorities upon questions of mind, spirit and immortality. Which is as unreasoning as for a mathematical genius to claim that because he is an adept in questions of quantity his opinion should therefore carry in problems of art.

What has just been said is stated, only in different words, by one of the most distinguished scientists of our generation, Sir Oliver Lodge, a man of such eminence as to have been elected to the presidency of the British Association, a body which may be defined as the organized scientific intelligence of the British Empire.

Sir Oliver, whose accomplishments in physics and chemistry have won for him such preferment, is sufficiently broad in his appreciations to realize that however far he may have carried his chemical researches, he has not thereby been brought across the frontier of the territory of mind and consciousness; that the principles and methods applicable to the study of matter do not apply to questions of soul and religion, so that the negative attitude which a scientist, as such, may occupy as toward soul, God and immortality has no bearing pro or contra upon the question of the existence of the soul, of God and of immortality.

All of this the president of the British Association has recently stated frankly and developed in detail in his presidential address delivered before that body.

Address Is Practically a Rebuke to His Colleagues.

The address is practically a rebuke to some of his colleagues for failing to realize that mind is not matter, and that so essential is the difference between them that the pursuit of scientific methods of inquiry will not carry them into the region of mind, and that for them to deny the existence of a world above matter, because they have been able to achieve so much in the world that is within matter without discovering in it a soul or a God, is a bare presumption and the exercise of intellectual arrogance.

Such a deliverance from so great an authority is a serious matter, and I wish the readers of this newspaper would give earnest attention to the contents of this article, for it has been written with a view to rebuking and correcting the careless and thoughtless thinking, of which there is so much, even among intelligent people, and that, too, in regard to questions that are of the utmost moment.

It would not be fair to the truth nor to Sir Oliver Lodge to close this article without adding that while he has not arrived at his convictions, regarding things which eye hath not seen, by the pursuit of scientific methods, he is nevertheless, and on other grounds, a firm believer in the great invisible world and in the God who is enthroned in it, as is evidenced by the two subjoined quotations from his superb address:

"It is my function to remind you and myself that our studies do not exhaust the universe, and that if we dogmatize in a negative direction, and say that we can reduce everything to physics and chemistry, we gibbet ourselves as ludicrously narrow pedants, and are falling far short of the richness and fullness of our human birthright.

"How far preferable is the reverent attitude of the Eastern poet:

"'The world with eyes bent upon
Thy feet stands in awe with all its silent stars.'

"We are deaf and blind, therefore, to the imminent grandeur around us unless we have insight enough to appreciate the whole, and to recognize in the woven fabric of existence, flowing steadily from the loom in an infinite progress toward perfection, the ever-growing garment of a transcendent God."

Writes on

Misfortunes

Are You Not Better for Them? If Not, You Have Failed to Learn Life's Lesson in Self-Development.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

YOU who complain bitterly of your troubles and sorrows turn your gaze inward for a time and see what these experiences have done for you.

Are you not stronger in soul, braver in mind, and more self-reliant because of your misfortunes?

Have you not a deeper understanding of human nature, and a larger sympathy for your fellowmen through having known trouble?

If you ask yourself these questions, and if you answer in the negative then rest assured more trouble will be sent you.

Sorrows Will Come Until You Learn Sympathy and Compassion.

Just as the scholar who has not learned his lessons at school is given the same lessons over and over again, so will you be given sorrow after sorrow and trouble after trouble, until you learn the great lesson of sympathy and compassion.

First of all in thinking of your misfortunes, remember you have brought them on yourself. Not in this life, perhaps, but in former lives. We have all lived many lives; and by our thoughts and deeds and desires we have fashioned our bodies and our circumstances.

If in other lives you were wasteful and selfish and improvident and idle, you come into this life poor and without friends or influence.

It is simply your life lesson of self-development given you again to learn. Industry, self-control, economy, are the next lessons.

By patient persistence you will learn them all; and then independence and usefulness and happiness will be yours.

If you did not appreciate love and affection in your last incarnation you will be deprived of these blessings for a time in this life; but if you give freely, even though you do not receive, and if you develop every loving impulse, and ask for no return, and if you refuse to think of your misfortunes, and persist in thinking of your great privilege in being allowed to do for others, then love and affection shall come to you eventually.

Remember the words of the great Master, Christ:

"I came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Of all His sayings, this is one of the greatest and one least quoted by His followers.

How Few of Us Minister as We Might to Others.

We all seem to feel resentment that we are not ministered unto continually.

And how few of us minister as we might to others.

THREE FRIENDS.

Of all the blessings which my life has known,
I value most, and most praise God for three—
Want, Loneliness and Pain, those comrades true,
Who masqueraded in the garb of foes
For many a year, and filled my heart with dread.
Yet fickle joys, like false, pretentious friends,
Have proved less worthy than this trio. First,
Want taught me labor, led me up the steep
And toilsome paths to hills of pure delight,
Trod only by the feet that know fatigue,
And yet press on until the heights appear.
Then Loneliness and hunger of the heart
Sent me upreaching to the realms of space,
'Till all the silences grew eloquent,
And all their loving forces hailed me friend.
Last, Pain taught prayer; placed in my hand the staff
Of close communion with the over-soul,
That I might lean upon it to the end,
And find myself made strong for any strife.
And then these three who had pursued my steps
Like stern, relentless foes, year after year,
Unmasked, and turned their faces full on me,
And lo! they were divinely beautiful,
For through them shone the lustrous eyes of Love.

:-: The Wail of the Freaks :-:

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

An expression of opinion given after learning that Secretary of State Bryan was going out for two weeks with a tent show, the news being furnished by the press agent.

THE Armless Wonder gnashed his teeth and clenched his feet in rage.
"I'm through with art for good," he yelled, "I'm gonna quit the stage!
I used to headline every bill, and have my name of nights
Spelt out above the theater in big electric lights.
The Yodling Goat, the Thinking Pig, the Juggling Japanee,
And even the Eight-Legged Cow all stood aside for me.
But look at this here note I got—it makes me fairly ill—
'This week the Old Doc's Talking Act will lead you on the bill!'"

"NOW ain't that just the fiercest stuff?" the Fair Circassian cried.
"When I was told my date was killed I nearly like to died.
I've been the hit in every show from Coney to Fort Lee;
Not even the Three-Headed Man had anything on me.
But that is always just the way: You think you're goin' strong,
And spend your money free an' then some new freak comes along.
I never seen the Old Doc work, but he has put me wise
To one best bet in this perfesh: 'It pays to advertise.'"

"I'SPOSE," said the Contortionist, with a despairing sob,
"It's all because the President has gave this guy a job.
Them Socialists has got it right; it's unfair competition
For us poor freaks to play against a Cabinet position.
But still this Doc has got some act. Of course, it has its faults,
But he's a wonder when it comes to throwing somersaults.
And on the stage he's worked on most, when he has got in trouble,
And has to get out good and quick, he always does 'em double."

"CUT out the knocks," the Fat Man said; "choke off the hammer songs,
An' let a guy that's got the goods butt in where he belongs.
When tryin' to be President he couldn't land his stall,
But in this circus-midway game he's got it on us all.
I've seen him give three shows a day an' turn up fresh and bright
To sit in with the treasurer and count the house at night.
If Kipling still was on his job I'll bet the ink he'd fling
In writin' out a song like this that you mutts ought to sing:

"Oh, the Doc! Doc! Doc!
He has chased us off the block,
But we got to give it to him, so let's put our jools in hock;
All he does is stands and hollers,
But he gathers in the dollars.
He's a wiser guy than we are, is the Doc."

THIS BABY'S FATHER SENTENCED TO HANG

Little Carrie Cantrell, Pretty and Playful, Is Pet of Decatur Orphans' Home.

Unconscious of the grim tragedy that hangs over them, four little youngsters are in the Georgia Baptist Home at Hapeville and the Decatur Orphans' Home as cheerful as you please.

The mother of three of them, Mrs. Sylvia Hawkins, declares the father of the other is responsible for her having been sentenced to prison for life for complicity in the murder of her husband.

The father himself, Jim Cantrell, is in a worse plight than the woman, for he has been sentenced to "hang by the neck until dead," and only the fight for a new trial has held up the execution of the sentence.

But the four youngsters in the orphan homes know nothing of these tragic things, and little Carrie Cantrell is the pet of the Decatur institution. Her mother died a short time before her father was arrested for murder and Mrs. J. M. Hawkins, wife of the superintendent, has taken the child under her especial care.

Carrie is a golden-haired, brown-eyed morsel of humanity, thoroughly content with her new surroundings, unaware of the shadow that hangs over her.

The Hawkins children are just getting accustomed to their new life. They cried bitterly when their mother failed to appear as had been promised them Friday, but Saturday they were reconciled. Their mother was just starting her life term at Milledgeville, but what do they know of that?

Sheriff Saves Slayer From Being Lynched

WILMINGTON, N. C., Sept. 27.—The life of George N. Nance, officially declared insane, who a few weeks ago slew his wife at a hotel in Hamlet, probably was saved last night when Sheriff Homer Baldwin outwitted a mob from Hamlet, which gathered in Rockingham, where Nance was a prisoner.

A wild drive through the hills of Richmond County in a motor car got the prisoner to Hoffman, sixteen miles away, in time to catch a fast Seaboard train passing there at 10 o'clock northbound, and he was taken on to Raleigh safely.

LIE FOR PEACE, SAYS JUDGE.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—When a little lie will aid domestic peace, the husband should tell it bravely and well, is the opinion rendered by Judge George L. Phillips in the case of Mrs. John F. Grigoleit, sued by her husband for divorce.

Recall Fight Waged On Woman Official

HANFORD, CAL., Sept. 27.—The first recall election against a woman in California is being directed against Mrs. N. E. Davison, Superintendent of Schools in King County.

Thomas Rossman, once a principal in the Hanford schools, started the recall against Mrs. Davison after his certificate had been revoked.

Senators Hopelessly Split on Currency

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Such diversity of opinion respecting the requirements of currency reform exists among members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that the House bill may be reported to the Senate without recommendation, each member of the committee writing a report on the bill.

JACKSON DEFIES BEAVERS' FOES

RECALL, HE SAYS, MAY STRIKE BACK

Declares Chief Is Secure, and Intimates War on Certain Near-Beer Saloons.

Marion M. Jackson, author of the famous Men and Religion Forward Movement bulletins, in an interview Saturday, declared there was not the slightest chance to recall Police Chief James L. Beavers because of the adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall amendment to the city charter.

Mr. Jackson welcomed the adoption of the amendment on the idea that it has made Chief Beavers' security doubly sure. What is more significant, he says, is that the moral forces would enroll "to recall the man who tried to knife Chief Beavers," and he intimates that the Men and Religion Forward Movement may invoke the initiative and referendum to recall certain "near-beer" saloon permits and to forward the cause of reform generally.

Mr. Jackson's Statement.

His statement follows:

You would not sign a petition to establish a house of ill fame.

For your children, you would refuse that marked disgrace.

And all but a pitiable, blinded few in Atlanta would do likewise.

Not 500 men in this city would petition to deliver it—to turn their homes over to the tender mercies of those who believe that men have the right to live by buying and selling women, that commerce which can exist only by the seduction of girls.

But there are thousands who would be glad to enroll to recall the man who tried to knife Chief Beavers for holding his oath of office and his honor superior to the wishes of those who have gotten rich or who desire to get rich by virtue of the white slave trade and the liquor traffic and their friends.

And they would not stop with signing the petition.

They would vote.

They would so effectually retire the man who tried to dishonor his home in this way that he would go down in history as the besotted one who thought honor dead and Christianity a farce in Georgia.

Recall Was No Accident.

The adoption of the recall, the referendum and initiative was no accident.

Only another evidence that God rules in Atlanta.

One man said one thing. Another another.

None claimed or urged this greatest of weapons yet devised for clean and honest government.

But when the votes were counted, in some way somehow, those who believe in decency and happiness for all and oppose indecency and license for the few at the cost of misery for the many found themselves armed with the same measure that cleaned up Seattle.

They had the red light district in Seattle.

Mayor Gill believed in it and fostered it.

Three years ago the recall ended the disgrace. They retired Mayor Gill. The pimps and panderers had to leave. No one has petitioned to bring the criminals back.

It is significant that the right of recall is given us just one year after Chief Beavers closed our white slave market. God be thankful for this anniversary gift. It was the one thing needed.

The Chief is safe.

Fight Is Just Begun.

But the fight for clean living and right thinking has only begun. And here consider not only the recall but the initiative!

Ordinances can be prepared by the people.

And there are many thousands who will count it an honor to sign a petition to institute legislation that will make it impossible to maintain a barroom on the street that leads to the Young Men's Christian Association and the Baptist Tabernacle.

Why should the reputable people of Atlanta who spend thousands upon thousands of dollars

Diamond Necklace Torn From Throat Of West End Woman

Detectives Saturday were searching for a thief who snatched a handsome gold locket and diamond necklace from about the neck of Mrs. H. L. Crumley, No. 225 Gordon street, West End, as she was passing along Gordon street at the corner of Howell Park.

Mrs. Crumley described the thief as a well-dressed young man.

The attack occurred late in the afternoon as Mrs. Crumley was returning home from downtown. The assailant was in hiding in the shrubbery of the park, and as Mrs. Crumley, passed, leaped out, caught her violently by the arm, and with his other hand seized the diamond necklace.

E. O. Painter Case Medical Experts Ask $260,000 Fees

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 27.—For services in the cases against insurance companies to collect the $1,178,000 life insurance carried by E. O. Painter, drowned off a ferry boat here in March, medical experts demanded fees aggregating $260,000.

This startling feature was revealed in the investigation. The fees demanded were as follows: For certificates of death, $10,000; for medical advice, $100,000; for testifying in court, $150,000.

The family dispensed with the services of these medical experts.

Board Urges Ousting Of Hooper Marshals

NASHVILLE, TENN., Sept. 27.—Making public this morning the report of the probe committee investigating the appointment of members of the House as fire marshals is a move to block another extra session of the Legislature which Governor Hooper threatens to call to pass the law enforcement prohibition laws.

It is recommended that the seats of eight Republicans and independent Democrats be declared vacant, the incumbents having accepted fire marshal jobs while the former regular session was in life.

Going further, the report says: "Governor Hooper was a party and accessory before the fact to this high-handed raid on the treasury of the State, using the money as a boodle fund to reward legislators who aided in carrying out his policies."

T. R. Flays Tammany In Convention Talk

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 27.—In his address before the Progressive State convention to-day Colonel Roosevelt declared that in the elections throughout New York State this fall "the dominant concern of our people should be to prevent Tammany from obtaining complete control of the State," and that "to this the lesser issues must give way."

He argued that the predicament in which the State finds its public affairs is due to the failure of the people to elect last fall a Governor and Legislature pledged to carry out the Progressive policies.

$2,500,000 Pays Tax On Morgan Fortune

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 27.—State Comptroller Sohmer to-day received a check for $2,500,000 from J. P. Morgan & Co., as the amount of the inheritance tax upon the estate of the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

The tax does not include the value of the art collection of the dead financier which may be turned over to the City of New York, and thus escape taxation.

OFFICIALS ACCUSED BY STEEL TRUST

Wall Street Hears Bombshell Is To Be Exploded When Federal Suit Is Tried.

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—I hear that a bombshell is going to be exploded by the United States Steel Corporation by and by, and that the reputations of certain very prominent Washington gentlemen will be shattered.

The story has been whispered in bankers' and brokers' quarters for some time and I understand it is true.

Judge Gary would not discuss the subject yesterday. He has all along taken the view that as his corporation is under prosecution his lips are sealed.

From other sources, however, it was learned very definitely that detailed information has been gathered concerning the operations of certain legislators who took a leading part in instituting the Government's suit against the United States Steel Corporation.

When the time comes in court for the Steel people to present their side it is expected that the bombshell will be exploded.

The disclosures, it is believed, will be on lines similar to those made recently in connection with the attempted blackmailing of Union Pacific interests, except that the persons implicated are of much higher standing than Lamar. Indeed, the dirt-gas of one or two statesmen much in the limelight sometime ago are expected to be besmirched.

China Makes Amends But Takes Her Time

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—The three-day ultimatum given China by Japan in connection with the accidental killing of several Japanese citizens during the siege of Nanking expired to-day.

General Chang Hsun, commander-in-chief of the Federal forces in the south, waited until the last minute before apologizing to the Japanese Consul at Nanking.

Japan is still maintaining a big war fleet at Nanking and the city is full of Japanese soldiers and marines.

Garbage Driver Hurt When Car Hits Truck

H. B. Baswell, a workman on one of the city's automobile garbage trucks, was thrown from the truck and against the pavement at the corner of Peachtree and Walton streets Saturday morning. He was rendered unconscious and incurred a probable fracture of the skull.

A street car hit the truck as it stood athwart the track and Baswell, who was standing up, lost his balance. He was rushed to Grady Hospital.

NUNS, HELD IN MEXICO, BEG FOR HELP

Ex-Foreign Minister of Mexico Is Nominated for President, and Promises Progress.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Trapped in the disease-ravaged city of Torreon, Mexico, are 27 sisters of charity and nuns, unable to flee to the United States because of the bands of rebels that surround the town.

They have appealed to the State Department through Consul General Ham at Monterey, to be taken out "as soon as the railroad can be repaired or other means provided."

The 27 women are members of two orders—the Incarnate and the Incarnate Word, cloistered.

In addition there are in Torreon, Gomez, Palacio, Lerdo and other nearby towns, 111 men, 74 women and 90 children, all anxious to escape. The State Department is unable to promise them any immediate help.

President Wilson expressed himself to-day pleased with the candidacy of Foreign Minister Gamboa for President, regarding it as the elimination of Huerta. He received official notice later, however, that the Constitutionalists would refuse to take any part in the election.

Gamboa Promises Peace in Platform.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 27.—Frederico Gamboa, ex-Foreign Minister, who was nominated for the Presidency by the Liberal party to-day, announced this platform:

"If elected President of Mexico I promise to do everything within human power to pacify the Republic and build up the national finances.

"Public credit must be restored and our Government must again take the high place in the eyes of the world it formerly occupied.

"The country will be made absolutely safe for foreigners and outside capital will be invited. Education will be extended and the courts will be strengthened so that every man will be sure of public and private justice.

"The army and navy will be rehabilitated. My administration will be one of economy.

"Amnesty will be granted to former foes of the Government upon suitable conditions and an agricultural act will be established to grant homesteads to the needy."

Works Says U. S. Should Take Hand.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Sept. 27.—United States Senator John D. Works in a speech here declared it the duty of the United States to intervene and restore order in Mexico.

"Just to the south of us, almost within reach of gunshot, our men are being assassinated and our women outraged daily," he said. "What are we going to do about it? I believe a great mistake has been made, for which we are responsible under the Monroe Doctrine.

Legerdemain Artist Must Have Worked In U. S. Mint Robbery

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Robbery of the United States mint at San Francisco was admited by Treasury officials here to-day. How extensive the robbery may be is not known. So far the Government's losses total $7. This is believed due to the fact that the count of coin has been stopped pending instructions from Washington.

The $7 was taken from stacked silver $1 pieces. The peculation was discovered by a slight variation in weight of four stacks, each supposed to contain 1,000 silver dollars. Pig iron washers were substituted. Seals on these stacks were unbroken. This leads Director of the Mint Roberts to believe that the theft was perpetrated by a sleight-of-hand artist in the gang that sacked the coin.

Balls Bad Weapons In Pool Room Fight

Millard Stephens, a 20-year-old blacksmith, told Recorder Broyles Saturday that he was drunk Friday afternoon and couldn't recollect having struck three men in the head with pool balls and then fighting Policeman Steve Felder in the pool room of Dan Moss, No. 35 Decatur street.

Several black eyes and bruises on witnesses bore silent testimony to the havoc wrought by the blacksmith. When he began pelting the players with pool balls it was stated, panic ensued, and there was a general scramble for places of safety.

Judge Broyles gave him 29 days in the stockade, and held him in bond of $500 in three cases of assault and battery.

Fright Cures Hold-up Conductor of Cold

JACKSON, MISS., Sept. 27.—Genuine fright is a sure cure for hay fever, according to J. S. Stone, conductor on the Alabama Great Southern train which was held up near Bibbville early Friday morning.

"I had been suffering for several weeks with hay fever," said Stone. "This morning I haven't the slightest trace of that ailment.

"When that robber poked that big gun in my face the hay fever simply vanished. I was scared stiff, of course, and to the scare he gave me I attribute the disappearance of my case of hay fever."

Chicago in Midst of Criminal Clean-up

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—The annual round-up of burglary and hold-up suspects was on in Chicago to-day. Seventy-five men were in cells adjoining Detective Captain Halpin's office early to-day, and detectives were out searching for more.

Captain Halpin ordered that all the suspects be shown to every detective, and then if no charge could be placed against them, orders were given to them to catch the first "whizzer" out of the city.

Church Raps Taking Of Carnegie Million

JACKSON, MO., Sept. 27.—The St. Louis conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South adopted a resolution condemning the trustees of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., for accepting a $1,000,000 endowment from Andrew Carnegie.

Acceptance was vetoed by the Board of Bishops because Carnegie endowments are conditioned on beneficiary colleges being independent of sectarian control. The trustees ignored the bishops.

PRICE NOW HIGHEST SINCE 1910

Bulge Caused by Crop Damage in West—Advance Ten Dollars Bale on Movement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Cotton broke through into new high ground again during to-day's short session of the Exchange.

September, which is about to expire, closed at 14.16 and October closed at 14.05. These are the highest prices since 1910.

This represented an advance of 13 points over Friday's close for September and of 17 points for October. Other months followed.

For the movement, the advance has been from $9 to $10 per bale.

Georgia Wins Big Sum.

Georgia, heading the Southeastern States, stands to win $25,000,000 by a $10 advance in the price of middling since September 1. The bulge is caused by crop damage in the Western and Central belts. The Eastern crop is good, and these States are due to reap immense profits on large yields and high prices.

When the market closed September 1 September options stood at 12.17 and October options at 12.27. Next day the Government's sensational condition report was issued, and the market responded to the unfavorable tidings from the fields with a 70-point advance.

The bulls have been in command ever since, and September, during the time it has been the spot month, has advanced 199 points; October, 178 points. Each point represents 5 cents a bale.

News Gives Impetus.

The particular price impetus yesterday and to-day was the favorable news from Washington, where developments seem to indicate that no radical action will be taken against the cotton exchanges.

The inherent strength of cotton values, with news from the Western belt uniformly discouraging, has been realized by the trade for some time, but the fear of legislation by Congress, which would wipe out futures trading, prevented any attempt at a bull campaign and kept business at a low level.

Wild Rumor Causes Break at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—Cotton was climbing to new altitude records to-day until just at the close, when a rumor, entire uncorroborated, came from Washington to the effect that Oscar Underwood had introduced a radical bill aimed against futures trading.

On this rumor the ring went crazy. Pandemonium broke loose and every man tried to sell his neighbor. There was no support, and in the few minutes before the gong October broke from 13.98 to 13.64. The other active months followed.

New York had just closed for the week when the news came. The panic reigned only for the few minutes before the New Orleans gong.

According to the rumor, Underwood's bill is more radical than anything Senator Clarke proposed, and Clarke's bill would have wiped out the Cotton Exchange.

Miss Holmer Wins Western Golf Tourney

MEMPHIS, TENN., Sept. 27.—The Western women's golf tournament championship went to Miss Myria Homer, of Chicago, who easily defeated Miss Ruth Chisolm, of Cleveland, Ohio, in final flight at the Country Club.

READ EVELYN THAW'S AMAZING LIFE-STORY

Because of the widened interest in the fight of Harry K. Thaw to escape re-commitment to the insane asylum at Matteawan, his wife Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has become a figure of international prominence.

Her life story is an amazing document. Doubtless no more enthralling personal narrative has ever been written.

The opening chapters of this story are reprinted in this issue for Hearst's Sunday American.

The story will be continued in next Sunday's American.

OPEN-TOWN IDEA WILL BE ISSUE IN PRIMARY

But Contest Between Mayor Jas. G. Woodward and His Rivals Holds First Attention.

in trying to build up manhood among our boys and young men permit their work to be continually torn down and hampered by these saloons and the liquor traffic?

When the recall and initiative were written into the charter of Atlanta, the death warrant of these traps that are at the bottom of nine-tenths of the crime and unhappiness in Atlanta was signed.

The Chief is doubly safe.

Neither he nor those who support him are even nervous.

They are thanking God for the gift of a man and fitting weapons with which to back him.

But the powers of evil!

They are disturbed.

They say: "An accident."

If they are wise, they will admit the truth.

Centuries ago David wrote it: "The wicked plotteth against the just—

"The Lord shall laugh at him: for he seeeth that his day is coming."

"He seeth that his day is coming."

You can not win against God.

Mayor Stirs Up Political Activity.

Livelier campaigning in the Councilmanic and Aldermanic races promises a much larger vote in the primary Tuesday than was cast in the charter election Wednesday. The "open town" issue is playing but a minor part, because there are not enough candidates running on this platform.

Six contests suddenly have grown hot, and the fact that Mayor James G. Woodward is taking an active part in three of them has added greatly to the interest.

In his own ward, the Third, Mayor Woodward's fight against the re-election of Alderman James E. Warren and Councilman Orville H. Hall promises to bring out a heavy vote. The Mayor's candidates are C. C. McDonald for the Aldermanic Board and R. R. Jackson for Council. Commenting on the action of the primary executive committee in providing only one polling place in that ward, Mayor Woodward showed the intensity of his feelings in the matter.

"Two polling places were provided in that ward in the charter election," he said. "It looks like Alderman Warren and Councilman Hall are afraid to trust the people to vote.

May Urge Mass Meeting.

"If the committee does not do something I may urge the people to call a mass meeting in protest, and I may make a speech or two to let them know the truth."

J. O. Cochran, secretary of the committee, said that there never had been a precinct B in the Third Ward in a primary and that in general elections it always cost about a dollar a vote for every vote cast at precinct B.

Alderman Warren and Councilman Hall made no suggestions to the committee about voting places in the Third Ward, but Mr. Jackson went before the committee and urged two precincts.

Mayor for Braselton.

The other fight that Mayor Woodward is taking an active part in is perhaps the most spirited of the three. He is urging the election of Amos Braselton for Alderman from the Fourth Ward against Councilman Albert Thomson.

He is basing all of his fights on genuine charter reform.

Friends of Mr. Thomson charge that Mr. Braselton is not registered and that he has been a resident of the Fourth ward only a short time.

More work has been done in the race between W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens for Alderman from the Eighth ward than in any other. It is generally believed that this will be the closest race of all.

Reports of increased efforts are heard from the First ward, where J. N. Renfroe and Charles A. Alverson are running for Council, and in the Fifth ward, where Jesse B. Lee and Dr. W. M. Ethridge are contesting for a similar place. In the Fourth ward there is a pretty race for Council between R. E. George and A. W. Farlinger.

Look for Recall Move.

The other candidates have no opposition.

Mayor Woodward is anxious for the elections of Mr. Hancock and Mr. Renfroe, but he has made no formal announcement of his support of them.

Politicians declare they expect an effort to exercise the recall within a short time, especially in the case of Police Chief J. L. Beavers.

Mayor Woodward refuses to commit himself on the recall. He denied that he had given out any interviews on the subject with reference to Chief Beavers.

A published story purporting to show that an official can not be recalled except for cause is incorrect. All that is required for a recall election is for 25 per cent of the registered voters to sign a petition asking it. The preference of the voters is the one determining factor.

New Freight Ruling By Rail Commission

Georgia railroad companies must furnish consignees with expense bills showing the number of the car in which goods were originally placed as well as the car in which they are received, according to the Georgia Railroad Commission's ruling after a day's consideration. The order applies only to carload shipments, and is an amendment to rule 3 of the Commission.

The Commission allowed the Central of Georgia Railway to cancel the special commodity rates on hollow fireproof tiling from Macon, Milledgeville and Stevens, and substitute classification rates, but denied the road's request to cancel the special commodity rates on brick shipments from Atlanta, Macon, Augusta and other points to Savannah and Brunswick.

Mill Workers' Pay Has Gained Steadily

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Considerable increase in wages, combined with a decrease in working hours, has come to the million men employed in the lumber, mill work and furniture manufacturing industries of the country during the past 23 years, as shown by figures prepared by the Department of Labor.

The department's information on which its statistics were based covered more than three-fifths of the employees in the various occupations.

HOPE TO COMPLETE TARIFF NEXT WEEK

Bill to Come Before House and Senate and Go to Wilson by Saturday Next.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The Democratic members of the House and Senate conference on the tariff bill met to-day to edit the proofs of the measure.

The bill probably will reach the White House late next week under the following program:

The full conference committee, Democrats and Republicans, will meet Monday morning, the bill will be reported to the House the same day and lie over until Tuesday.

An effort will be made to pass the bill through the House in one day, reaching the Senate late Tuesday.

Wednesday will be devoted to its consideration in the Senate.

Thursday will be required for further conference on cotton futures legislation, on which the conferees were unable to agree.

The bill will be back in the House and Senate Friday, and on the next day, following final enrollment, it will be sent to President Wilson.

California Forests Devastated by Fires

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Fires are devastating the forests of Cleveland, Angeles and Santa Barbara, in Southern California, according to a statement issued by the Forest Service here.

Tejunga Canyon, near the town of Sunland, is practically burned out. Major Charles Anderson, U. S. A., retired, is reported to have been killed fighting a fire in the Sycamore Canyon. Telegrams to the Forest Service here state that emergency recruits are being pressed into service to fight the flames.

Throne for Wedding Gift; Has String to It

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—Negotiations will be completed next month to place Prince Ernest August Cumberland, husband of Princess Victoria, on the throne of Brunswick.

The Kaiser, in this wedding gift to his son-in-law, stipulated that the Prince's father, the Duke of Cumberland, must agree to refrain from any attempt to secure the throne of Hanover or to plot against the integrity of Prussian territory and must renounce all his right in favor of his son.

These conditions will make the Duke merely a private citizen.

Divorce Too Easy in Nev.; Asks Another

SAVANNAH, Sept. 27.—Divorces at Reno are so easy Mrs. Annie Schroeder will try to have hers against John Schroeder ratified by the Georgia courts.

After taking up the customary residence at the Nevada divorce capital and securing her first decree, Mrs. Schroeder has returned to Savannah. She announces that she will go into the Chatham County courts with her case in an effort to have it become legal in Georgia.

Upshaw Scores Hint Of Recall of Beavers

William D. Upshaw, in his lecture on "John and His Hat," at the Tabernacle Baptist Church Friday night, denounced the reported movement to recall Police Chief James L. Beavers.

"The success of Chief Beavers' vice crusade has gained Atlanta a wholesome reputation," he said. "A recall movement is an affront to all that is best in the life of our great and growing city.

"If it should be started in earnest all the loose and lewd crowd of the city would be found on the side against our intrepid Chief."

BRAM FORCED TO TAKE HUMBLE POSITION

Clerks in Coffin Factory at $30 a Month—His Accuser in Even Worse Luck.

Despairing of obtaining employment at anything paying more than the barest living wage, Thomas Bram, who "smiled" his way to liberty after seventeen years in the Atlanta Federal Prison, has taken a place as shipping clark in a coffin factory, for $30 a month.

Coincident with Bram's endeavor to obtain work is the story of his accuser, Lester H. Monks, Harvard man, scion of one of Boston's oldest and wealthiest families, who is struggling to earn his daily bread as a common laborer somewhere in the Northwest.

It is doubtful if any "down-and-out" man who ever trod the streets of Atlanta searched harder for work than Bram. One man offered him a place as day laborer to shovel coal. Bram was for taking the place, but his friend, Harry M. Perkerson, said no.

Hopes To "Make Good."

The weeks rolled by and promises of employment which looked bright, faded. Bram discovered an opening at the coffin factory and insisted upon taking the place. The remuneration is less than the rate of the average boarding house in Atlanta. He gets to work at 6:30 o'clock, has half an hour for lunch and gets away by 6:30 or 7 in the evening.

Bram has the opportunity of making good in a position in which many have failed, as the coffin company has found difficulty in obtaining a competent man for shipping clerk.

"I am going to make myself so valuable that they will have to pay me more," Bram said.

He commenced work Monday morning and Thursday night was taken ill. He was too sick to go to work, but only the remonstrance of a physician kept him in bed. Saturday found him at work again.

One position has been offered to Bram which he can not accept under the conditions of his parole. This is an offer from Harry Silverman to put him in charge of his rathskeller at pay of $60 per month and board. Mr. Perkerson has taken this up with the United States Department of Justice in the effort to have the parole changed so that Bram may take the place.

Strikingly coincident are the words of his accuser at the famous trial. From Prince Rupert, B. C., April 4, 1912, Lester H. Monks wrote to a friend in Boston: "A remark many men have made to me I remember well: 'Any man who really desires employment can readily obtain it.' Well, if anybody says such a thing to you, please reply that I say, 'It's not so.'"

Once Made $25,000 a Year.

Monks was making $25,000 a year in the coal business when reverses stranded him. He was a passenger on the ill-fated Herbert Fuller, his family starting him to Buenos Ayres on account of his health. It was he who charged Bram with slaying Captain and Mrs. Charles I. Nash and Second Mate August Bramberg.

The remarkable thing was that Bram ordered irons put upon himself, though denying the charge, and gave the instructions to the crew which turned the ship about and brought them to port in Halifax, N. S.

When reverses came, Monks bid his wife and children farewell and went to the West. He landed in Seattle with $3.50 and only the clothes he wore. The former Beau Brummel of Boston society slept in a Turkish bath establishment by the kindness of the man in charge.

Went Without Hat.

The only work he could find was that of a common laborer, and that was so scarce he often went for days without food. The last heard of him was August 18, 1912, from Camp 26-A, Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad, in the far Northwest.

At that time he did not possess a hat, and had not worn one for three months. He described himself as being a bit reconciled to his lot, though the drop was from $25,000 a year to less than $25 a month.

"Twelve years ago to-day I left Boston for Washington to be married," he wrote on May 7, 1912. "My prospects at that time seemed to be bright and secure, but as the late lamented Dan Daly used to say, 'Now look at the damn thing.'"

Pope Approves an Opera, Says Paper

ROME, Sept. 27.—One of the conservative papers is responsible for the statement that the newest grand opera from the pen of an Italian will have the sanction of the Vatican or of Pope Pius personally.

Don Lorenzo Perosi is the favorite composer of the Holy Father, who admires his music immensely. Don Lorenzo and the Pope have been friends since the latter's early days in Venice, and all the music so far published by Perosi has had the hearty approval of the Pontiff. Now that Don Lorenzo announces a grand opera dealing with worldly affairs, it is said His Holiness has approved of both the libretto and the music.

Drug Raids Follow Paris Actress' Death

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

Letters to the newspapers say the drug habit is enslaving thousands of French boys and girls yearly.

Among those at Mlle. Fleury's funeral were Baron James De Rothschild and Baron Colonna De Decaldi.

FAITH HEALER IS FOUND SLAIN IN HER OFFICE

Skull of Los Angeles Woman Is Crushed by Pipe in Hands of Unidentified Person.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—Mrs. R. P. Gay, a Christian Science practitioner with a suite of offices downtown, was found murdered in her offices this morning. The woman's head had been mashed with a 10-inch section of gas pipe.

The police were unable to find any clew to the slayer or his motive.

Mrs. Gay was one of the best known Christian Scientists in California. Her home was at No. 1010 West Third street, Los Angeles.

It was believed by the police that the slayer of Mrs. Gay entered her office between 4 and 7 p. m. Friday. Everyone who was known to have been in her office yesterday was being sought by the police to-day.

No one except the charwomen employed in the building could have entered the office after 7 o'clock last evening, officials of the building said.

One of the charwomen found the doors to Mrs. Gay's office open about 5 o'clock this morning. Entering she found the Christian Science practitioner prone upon the floor. Mrs. Gay had been struck on the forehead. Her skull was cut open and the lower part of her forehead was disfigured, apparently by a second blow.

The woman's pocketbook, containing a large sum of money, was lying on the desk. No attempt was made by the slayer to force open the locked drawers of the desk.

Here parents and her brother, Lemuel P. Conner, reside in Natchez, Miss.

Bluecoat Jails Goat For Eating His Pants

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—"Now what?" demanded the sergeant at the Desplaines street station as two policemen dragged in a goat.

"He tried to eat my breeches," explained Traffic Policeman McKeough.

So the offender was put in a cell.

The "arrest" was made at Halsted and Madison streets when the goat blocked traffic, refused to move on, chewed the policeman's garments when he tried to shoo it away, resisted arrest and amused several hundred spectators the while.

$250,000,000 Fund to Fight Labor Unions

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—British employers of labor have formed an organization to fight the labor unions, the London Times says. It is planned to raise a fund of $250,000,000 for this purpose.

The new organization will be called "The United Kingdom Employers' Defense Union," and in case of a contest, any member involved will be backed with its full strength.

Slayer Surrounded; Shot Down by Posse

BENTON, ILL., Sept. 27.—John Hursan, leader of the gang of foreign miners who beat two Americans to death a week ago, was fatally wounded to-day when he attempted to escape from deputy sheriffs after he was surrounded. In a statement he implicated two other members of the gang who were being sought.

The Sheriff was told of Hursan's presence here. A posse surrounded the house. Hursan refused to surrender. A bullet entered his abdomen.

Ends Life Because He Couldn't Add Right

CENTREVILLE, MD., Sept. 27.—After mortgaging his home to make up a shortage of $1,600 in his accounts as treasurer of Queen Anne County, Louis H. Perkins, 63, committed suicide.

The deficit grew out of errors in addition, it is declared, no intimation of fraud being alleged against Perkins. He left a packet of letters, in one he said:

"I have never succeeded at anything."

STATE CHAMBER WIDENS SCOPE OF ACTIVITY

Seeks 1,000 Members, Annual $35,000 Budget and National Field for Exploitation.

A campaign to increase the membership to 1,000 by November 1 has been inaugurated by the executive committee of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. In addition to securing individual memberships and the affiliation of oabrds of trade and chambers of commerce, efforts are being made to obtain the assistance and co-operation of the railroads, telegraph and telephone companies, land and development corporations and other large industrial enterprises.

Results will be reported at an executive committee meeting called by President C. J. Haden for October 6 at the Hotel Dempsey in Macon, and at that time plans for the completion of the campaign will be made. Several other phases of the work of the State Chamber also will be taken up. One of them is a suggestion to employ expert organizers to place the Georgia Chamber of Commerce on a firm financial foundation.

To Raise $35,000 Annually.

The executive committee has also announced that it intends to raise not less than $35,000 every year. The Texas Commercial Secretaries and Business Men's Association, upon which the Georgia Chamber is modeled, spends annually $51,000, and the officers of the Georgia organization are confident that Georgians will respond to the movement equally as generously.

This $35,000 will be expended in advertising the resources of Georgia throughout the United States in an effort to attract manufacturers and business men of the better class. Booklets and pamphlets will be published setting forth the advantages of the State, and a force of lecturers and investigators will be employed. It is the purpose of the organization to make the Georgia Chamber a clearing house for the most advanced thought of the day, for the development of the State of Georgia along the lines of better roads, better sanitary conditions, better agricultural methods, more manufacturing enterprises, better methods of marketing agricultural products, and methods of bringing the farmers and business men of the State to a closer recognition of their mutual interests.

25 Organizations Affiliate.

Since the second State-wide meeting of the organization in Macon on September 16, 250 Georgians have joined the chamber as individual members, paying dues of $5 a year for a term of three years, and 25 local commercial organizations have become affiliated. These include the boards of trade and chambers of commerce of Macon, Waycross, LaGrange, Madison, Sylvester, Atlanta, Albany, Americus, Columbus, Manchester, Cordele, Washington, Ocilla, Dublin, Newnan, Reidsville, Springfield, Abbeville, Kirkwood, Camilla, Pelham, Fitzgerald, Griffin, Lithonia, Decatur and Clarkesville; also the Ad Men's Club of Atlanta, the Waycross Real Estate Men's Association, the Woman's Improvement Association of Macon and the Bibb County Agricultural Institute.

In order that the people of the State may be kept in close touch with what the organization is doing, a vice president is being selected for each of the 146 counties of the State. This list is not completed, and in each case the greatest care is being taken to get for the position a man recognized in his county as a leader and a worker.

He Wrote 20,000 Letters for a Job

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—A male resident of Illinois wants a position as a clerk in the internal revenue service, and some time ago he wrote the Secretary of the Treasury stating his wishes. Since the receipt of the first letter by Mr. McAdoo 20,000 letters from residents of Illinois, asking the Secretary to give the applicant the job he wants have arrived.

An investigation showed that the applicant had 20,000 or more letters printed and the same number of envelopes addressed and stamped and then sent them to his friends who signed them for him.

BELL CENSURES SCUFFLE OVER PRISONERS

Superior Court Judge Denies Habeas Corpus, but Raps Officers. Turns Men Over to Beavers.

City detectives and constables scuffling over two prisoners in Judge Bell's courtroom early Saturday afternoon brought down a storm of condemnation from the judge. The two prisoners were Joseph Powell Smith and W. A. Cleveland, two Macon youths who are wanted in Charlotte, N. C., on charges of passing fraudulent checks and who were hurried out of Birmingham in the custody of Detective J. D. Johnson, of Charlotte.

Johnson was arrested in Atlanta Friday morning on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Jordan charging him with false imprisonment. The case was thrown into the Superior Court of Atlanta Saturday morning on a writ of habeas corpus sued out by Attorneys Gober & Jackson, of Atlanta, and Attorney G. W. Lindsey, of Birmingham, demanding that the prisoners either be released or returned to Alabama.

Judge Bell denied the habeas corpus, though expressing the opinion that the men should be returned to Alabama. It was shown that Governor O'Neal of Alabama had honored requisition papers for the two men, and also that an appeal of habeas corpus had been denied them by Judge William E. Fort, of Birmingham. An appeal had been taken, though, and bond fixed at $1,000. In violation of this the prisoners charge that they were spirited away to Leeds, Ala., by Chief Bodeker of Birmingham, two of his detectives and Detective Johnson. This was admitted by Johnson.

"The Birmingham officers are most assuredly guilty of contempt of court, but I can not see how I can legally order them returned there," said Judge Bell. "I therefore remand them to the custody of the officers from whom they were taken."

Constable Hendrix, of Justice Jordan's Court, proceeded to handcuff the two prisoners. City detectives seized the men and attempted to drag them away. Judge Bell rapped for order and reprimanded the officers for their conduct.

Chief Beavers was in court and Judge Bell asked him who had the men in custody at the time the notice of habeas corpus was served.

"The police had them in charge as representing the Charlotte Chief of Police," replied the Chief.

"Then they are remanded to your custody," ruled the judge.

INDIGESTION, GAS, DYSPEPSIA GONE

"Pape's Diapepsin" Fixes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs in Five Minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only 50 cents for a large case at drug stores. It is truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

OLD POLICIES TO PREVAIL UNDER NEW LEADER

Wickersham to Remain Guiding Hand of West Point Route and Run Georgia Road, Too.

No change in the policy of the Georgia Railroad is imminent as the result of the resignation of Thomas K. Scott as general manager and the appointment of Charles A. Wickersham, president of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, as his successor, according to a statement issued by Mr. Wickersham Saturday morning.

The new head of the Georgia will assume his duties October 1, when Mr. Scott's resignation becomes effective. Mr. Scott, it is announced by the lessees of the road, the L. and N. and the Atlantic Coast Line, will continue his connection with the Georgia road, probably in an advisory capacity, and will make his headquarters at its offices until July 1, 1914.

Remains Head of the West Point.

Mr. Wickersham announced to-day that he will retain the presidency of the Atlanta and West Point, and will divide his time between the offices of the latter road in Atlanta and the Georgia offices in Augusta. He will retain his home in College Park, though he expects his family to spend a portion of their time in Augusta.

His statement follows:

"My appointment as general manager of the Georgia Railroad, effective October 1, 1913, does not foreshadow any radical reorganization on either the Atlanta and West Point, the Western Railway of Alabama or the Georgia Railroad, nor will there be any disturbance of the existing relations between each of those properties and other companies.

"I simply will take charge of the Georgia Railroad for the lessees, and operate it to the best of my ability for the benefit of all concerned, but primarily to give the patrons the very best possible service, both passenger and freight.

"The headquarters of the Georgia Railroad will, of course, remain at Augusta and I will divide time between the office at Augusta and my office at Atlanta.

"The interests of the West Point route will in no manner be neglected and we will maintain our policy of giving first class service and adding all possible improvements, and hope to merit the continuance of the approval and esteem of our patrons.

Felicitates Scott.

"There is no intention, at the present time at least, to move my family from our present residence at College Park, though it is only natural to anticipate that the well known charm and beauty of Augusta will draw my family there for sojourns from time to time.

"I am glad to be associated with the historical Georgia Railroad, and hope that we may be successful in stimulating the already great business intercourse between not only the cities of Augusta and Atlanta, but between all other towns and cities served by the road which has always been so affectionately known to the public of which it is the servant as the "Old Reliable." However, the ill health of Mr. Scott, which has forced him to relinquish the active management, is the source of the greatest possible regret and it is hoped that he will be sufficiently restored by a rest to still enable the Georgia Railroad to have the benefit of his large ability and fund of experience."

In becoming head of the Atlanta and West Point and the Georgia Railroad, Mr. Wickersham assumes command of two of the best railroad properties in Georgia.

Outside of the Western and Atlantic, the State-owned road leased to the N., C. and St. L., the Atlanta and West Point is the greatest money-maker in the State. In 1912 its net earnings of $3,720.47 per mile stood far ahead of any other road's, with the exception noted. For the fiscal year 1913 net per mile earnings were $3,441.09.

The Georgia Railroad showed net earnings of $2,593.95 per mile in 1912, putting it fifth in the list of the railroads in Georgia in point of earnings. In 1913 per mile earnings dropped to $1,165.68.

Mr. Scott, the retiring general manager, held his position for twenty years. He has not had active charge of the road for two months, having asked to be relieved temporarily because of failing health. W. T. Ellis, secretary of the Louisville and Nashville, assumed the management of the road. Mr. Scott left with his family for Maine shortly after being relieved by Mr. Ellis, and remained there until about ten days ago.

King Balks at Cost Of the Fife Wedding

LONDON, Sept. 27.—When the marraige of Prince Arthur of Connaught to the Duchess of Fife was first arranged it was to take place from Marlborough House and to be a comparatively quiet affair. The Princess Royal, mother of the Duchess, agreed to bear the entire expense.

Later, King George insisted the wedding should be in Buckingham Palace and should take the form of a state pageant; the Princess refused to assume the extra costs, especially the military procession; the King would not, and last Friday, he cancelled the entire military arrangements.

LAWYER DENIES OFFER TO DROP MACKAY SUIT

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay and her three children, Katharine, John and Ellin (to the right), who are now in Scotland with their father; below Harbor Hill, the Mackay estate at Roslyn.

Declares Mrs. Blake Will Push Suit Against Wire Magnate's Wife, Then Ask Divorce.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Shaken to its foundations by the suit for $1,000,000 damages started against Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay by Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, wife of New York's most eminent surgeon, for the alleged alienation of her husband's affections, the social world of Manhattan is busily discussing late developments indicating that Mrs. Blake started the legal proceedings against Mrs. Mackay in the hope that it will lead to a reconciliation with her husband.

The rumor that Mrs. Blake filed the suit because of her love for her husband, thinking that perhaps the publication of her sorrow would bring him back to her, is based on a statement Mrs. Blake is said to have made to a friend that she is willing to drop the proceedings if Mrs. Mackay will induce Dr. Blake to return to his wife.

This statement, it is reported, was transmitted by the friend in question to Arthur C. Train, Mrs. Mackay's lawyer, together with a highly eulogistic statement on Dr. Blake's virtues and her love for him.

"I Only Want Him Back."

She is reported as saying:

"Dr. Blake is the best man God ever made. I lived with him for 21 years and I should know. He is a man of highest ideals. It is killing me—these things they say about the man I love. I only want him back."

Mr. Train left for Portland, Maine, where Mrs. Mackay has leased for a term of three years the home of former Mayor Leighton, shortly after Mrs. Blake's reported statement became public, and held a long conference with his client. Train and Mrs. Mackay refuse to discuss the suit, and no details of the conference have been given out.

It is not known how Mrs. Mackay and her legal advisers regard Mrs. Blake's proposal to relinquish her hope of monetary balm in return for a reconciliation with her husband, but friends have intimated that there is every likelihood of an amicable settlement before the suit comes to trial.

In direct contradiction, however, of the report that Mrs. Blake has made such a proposal, her attorney, George Gordon Battle, has stated positively that the papers in the suit will be filed with the New York County Clerk within a few weeks.

Says She Wants Divorce.

He also declared that Mrs. Blake is contemplating action for divorce from Dr. Blake, probably before the final disposition of the alienation proceedings.

He said she has plenty of evidence to proceed in the action for separation without depending upon the evidence that will be used in the action against Mrs. Mackay. The name of the latter, he asserted, will not figure in the divorce proceedings.

Mrs. Blake has been living alone for more than a year, and this fact has caused the circulation of many rumors of contemplated action for divorce and alienation of affection. In all of these reports Mrs. Mackay was named, but not until actual legal proceedings were started by the service of a summons on her attorney did her name figure publicly in the affair.

An attack on the title of "Harbor Hill," the $6,000,000 Mackay estate at Roslyn, Long Island, is planned by Mrs. Blake and her attorney, in the alienation suit.

Claim Transfer is Illegal.

This property was transferred to Mr. Mackay and W. W. Cook, as trustees, only two days after notice of the suit was served on Mrs. Mackay's attorney, and it is understood that the attack on the title of the property will be based on this fact.

"The transfer of the property," George Gordon Battle, Mrs. Blake's attorney, said, "is illegal, in my opinion, and it will be contested. Under the terms of the transfer, the estate will be held in trust under the old English system of primogeniture for the only son, John W. Mackay, who is now six years old.

"The deed of trust transferring the property was filed in the office of the Clerk of Nassau County, transferring Mrs. Mackay's rights to the property to her husband and W. W. Cook as trustees, on February 19, two days after summons and complaint in the suit for alienation were served on Arthur C. Train, Mrs. Mackay's attorney."

The suit for alienation filed by Mrs. Blake is the climax of two years of reported unhappiness and marital strife between the Mackays, in which the names of Dr. and Mrs. Blake have figured prominently.

The linking of the names of Mrs. Mackay and Dr. Blake came shortly after a visit Mrs. Mackay made to the Presbyterian Hospital, of which Dr. Blake was superintendent, and where she met the surgeon.

She took a great interest in his work, and he and Mrs. Blake were often entertained at the Mackay home. The separation of Dr. and Mrs. Blake took place about a year after Mrs. Mackay's advent in their lives.

Clarence H. Mackay is now in Europe with his three children, and Mrs. Mackay evidently expects to remain in Portland, Maine, for three years, having leased property there for that period.

This latter fact, and the circumstances surrounding Mr. Mackay's departure in June for Europe, have caused rumors that Mrs. Mackay is contemplatin divorce proceedings against her husband, and has taken up her residence in Portland for the purpose of obtaining a legal home there.

Refuses To Be Interviewed.

Both Mrs. Mackay and her husband have refused to be interviewed regarding their rumored divorce, but a friend is authority for the statement that amicable terms of separation have been agreed upon.

Mrs. Mackay is one of New York's most beautiful and prominent society women. She has been interested for a number of years in equal suffrage and social work.

Mr. Mackay is a son of the late John W. Mackay, formerly president of the Postal Telegraph Company, and assumed that position when the elder Mackay died. He is very wealthy, his father having left an estate valued at $50,000,000.

Son's Slaying Reveals A Real Enoch Arden

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Sept. 27. The slaying of Paul Townsend by the bandits who robbed a jewelry store here last week and killed two fellow workers, revealed an Enoch Arden story when Townsend's father and mother mingled tears and repledged their love over his body.

One night Townsend disappeared, and the wife, supposing she was a widow, married W. E. Bellinger, of this city. Shortly after this wedding a letter came from Townsend. Bellinger at once agreed to an immediate separation. Mrs. Townsend and her husband were remarried. When their son was killed they repledged their love.

Tango Pump Keeps Feet on the Floor

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—Tango dancing pumps have broken into visibility in Harvard Square and the additional safety spots the soles are indicative of the increased strenuousness and attendant dangers of trotting and tangoing.

The new pump is the regulation article when seen from the top, but on the sole it has three spots where rubber plugs have been inserted in the form of a triangle.

U. S. WOMEN NOT PRUDES, SAYS M. POIRET

Not Deterred from Being Stylish by Boldness in Dress, Declares Inventor of Slit Skirt.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—M. Paul Poiret, interior decorator, maker of rare perfumes, ballet costumer and originator of the present styles in women's gowns and figures, was at home to reporters at the Plaza.

"I came to America for a vacation, not to be shown off in anybody's shop window," the great couturier, who is rather a modest and gentle person, declared when he appeared after an hour's delay. "I wanted to see for myself whether American women understand my styles and how they wear them.

"I find American women very smart and—ah — well constructed. The American woman could wear any style she chooses. And she does choose. I am reported to say that American women should be bolder. But to the contrary. The women I see on your Fifth avenue even sacrifice almost too much to fashion and originality."

The originator of the tight skirt was asked if he considered slit skirts immoral.

Mme. Poiret, Par Example.

"I don't bother with immorality," he replied heatedly. "I follow only in my designing the greatest simplicity. I have no use for dresses all trimmed up with pen-wipers and little bunches of things. Simple lines show the natural beauty of the figure. But this plain gown must have one toch to turn it into a costume. Behold!"

Enter Mme. Poiret, slender and sinuous, her dark complexion guiltless of make-up. She wore a one-piece robe, almost a slip, of soft brocaded satin of a deep cream color. It had a round neck, kimono sleeves and was very long and very narrow, about her feet. The touch was a pearl, half an inch in diameter, which was suspended round her neck on a green cord which ended at her breast in a green silk tassel.

She wore green slippers of the same shade and a turban of the gown material which almost concealed her hair.

"No corsets need be worn with such a gown," continued M. Poiret as madame retired to recline upon the cushions. "A woman should not wear corsets unless she is fat, and American women do not look fat.

He Designs Hats, Too.

"Yes, I always design the hats to go with my gowns, for one can not trust the milliner to consider the gown. But I never use feathers. Why? Because no milliner can make a hat without them.

"Should the hat and dress match? The essence of smartness is to have them match or form an effective contrast. But only two colors are most sufficient."

"How should a woman choose the colors of her gown?" inquired a man reporter.

"She should choose it in the morning, as you do your necktie—to match her soul. She should consider, too, the temperature and the place where she is going. But mostly her own feelings, for there are gowns that weep, gowns that are full of mystery and gowns that sing for joy.

"But she should not wear the Poiret gown unless it becomes her."

Bulgars May Help Turks Against Greeks

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27.—There are indications that Turkey may seize upon some pretext to declare war against Greece as the Bulgar-Turco treaty, which was to have been signed Thursday, finally received official signatures to-day. This virtually makes Bulgaria an ally of Turkey, it is said.

Turkey is preparing to land troops on the Island of Chios. The other Turkish islands occupied were Mitylene and Rhodes.

20-Foot Sea Serpent Is Found in Pacific

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 27.—Another sea serpent has been discovered, according to officers of the Grand Trunk Pacific steamer Prince Albert. It was encountered by Indians at Skidegate and is said to have been twenty feet long.

The monster got hold of one of their canoes and was dispatched by one of the chiefs, who slashed it in two with a large hunting knife.

TORTURED BY UGLY ITCHING ERUPTION

Doctor Recommended Resinol. Half of a 50c Jar Cured It.

Baltimore, Md. — "My little daughter was taken with a very small spot on the back of her hand. It grew larger and caused her more trouble. When she would scratch it, it would bleed and get very ugly looking, so I doctored it myself for about a year, and at last it broke out on both knees, and when she would go to bed she would scratch, and was so tortured and suffered so from the itching, that I took her to our doctor, who recommended Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment.

Improved With First Application.

"I sent for samples and after the first application the itching and inflammation was improved, and I kept it up night and morning, and by the time the sample was gone she complained very little, so I got a 50-cent jar and before that was half gone the trouble had entirely disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. Maude Schmechel, 2737 Presbury St., Nov. 5, 1912.

Nothing we can say of Resinol equals what others, such as Mrs. Schmechel, say of it. If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, ulcers, boils, stubborn sores, or piles, try Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. The nearest druggist sells them, or write to Dept. 29-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a free sample.

BANDIT PURSUIT IS CONTINUED; FIVE JAILED

Officers Declare Loot Secured by Train Robbers May Exceed $50,000 Estimate.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA., Sept. 27.—This morning finds five persons under arrest in the Tuscaloosa County Jail under suspicion of having some connection with the $50,000 train robbery of the Alabama Great Southern express at Bibbville Siding Yesterday. Special Officer Ball, of the Alabama and Great Southern detective department, is credited with the arrests.

Despite the arrests by the special officer, many believe that the guilty parties have not been captured and the chase through the woods and swamps continues unabated. Bloodhounds have trailed down a bloody hat which is conceded to be a strong clew when strengthened by the fact that the mail clerks assert that one of the bandits lacerated his hand on a broken light globe in the mail car previous to taking flight in the runaway engine.

According to Chief of Police Bodeker, of Birmingham, and other officials on the ground, the estimate of loss at $50,000 is very conservative, and it may exceed this amount. It is known that three bags of money were taken and a large shipment of currency is said to have been billed to New Orleans. It is a further belief of the officials that the robbers were aware of the unusually heavy shipment of money on the date of the robbery.

Leiters Close Yacht, Fearing Kidnapers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter put a ban on the throng of sightseers who have flocked down to the Potomac to see their gigantic sea-going yacht Niagara.

A number of launch parties were barred by the Leiters, who are in fear of child kidnapers.

DON'T SCOLD AN IRRITABLE CHILD

If Little Tongue Is Coated, Surely Give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeits are being sold here. Don't be fooled!

The Piedmont, "A Byword"

With the Atlanta as Well as the Traveling Public, Wishes to Announce,

"FRENCH NIGHT"

After Theater

Monday, September 29, 1913

An entertainment so gorgeous in its conception as to put into the shade anything ever attempted before in Atlanta.

The Piedmont's Gala Souvenir Nights every Monday have become "A Byword," and the encouragement given us by the public has put us on the "Qui Vive" to elaborate on our previous entertainments.

The Restaurant on "French Night" will resemble the historical Gardens of Fontainebleau at the time of Louis XIV. Every lady will be presented with a magnificent flower hat and flower cane of the style of the "Directoire;" the gentlemen with high opera hats, moustaches and goatees.

Our star, "Miss Claire Garner," will on this occasion sing some French songs, including the "Marseillaise." Miss Garner, just from successful engagements at Hammersteins, New York, and the Majestic Theater, Chicago, has already won the hearts of the Piedmont's patrons.

Our Lady Orchestra will render French and all popular airs.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

A Thrilling Story of a Modern Monte Cristo

By LOUIS TRACY

(Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed. "D'ye want a job?"

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"Dash my buttons, an' you're a likely sort of kid to get it, too. In you go. I'll pay the bill. Lord lumme, it'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a bob's worth if he bursts himself. 'Ere, I'll bet you two bob 'e pays up."

"Done! Walk in, sir. Wot'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellently, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astounded the proprietor and hugely delighted the greengrocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peeping at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and the bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

The boy held out his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman, 'e does. If my little Jimmie 'ad lived 'e would ha' bin just about his age. Lord lumme, I 'ope the lad turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes'm. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

After crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to rehearse carefully the program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacity unlooked for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all. Of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond, and would demand its earthly pedigree.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date. The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's Mews altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: "Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants, Kimberley, Amsterdam and London."

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Is Mr. Isaacstein in?" said Philip.

"Oah, yess," grinned the other.

"Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oah, yess." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught its drift yet. The gaunt and unkempt visitor was evidently burlesquing the accent of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a few seconds. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the stamp book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I am here?" he said at last.

"Oah, yess. You vil be funny eh?" The other smirked over the hidden humor of the situation and Philip understood that if he would see the great man of the firm he must adopt a more emphatic tone.

"I had better warn you that Mr. Wilson, of Messrs. Grant & Sons, Ludgate Hill, sent me here to see Mr. Isaacstein. Am I to go back to Mr. Wilson and say that the office boy refuses to admit me?"

There was a sting in the description, coming from such a speaker.

"Look 'ere," was the angry retort, "Go away and blay, vil you? I'm pizzy."

Philip reached quickly through the little arch, grabbed a handful of shirt, tie and waistcoat, and dragged the big nose and thick lips violently against the wires of the grille.

"Will you do what I ask, or shall I try and pull you through?" he said, quietly.

But the boy's ready yell brought two clerks running, and a door was thrown open. Phil released his opponent and instantly explained his action. One of the clerks, an elderly man, looked a little deeper than the boy's ragged garments, and mention of Mr. Wilson's name procured him a hearing. Moreover, he had previous experience of the youthful janitor's methods.

With a cuff on the ear, this injured personage was bidden to go upstairs and say that Mr. Wilson had sent a boy to see Mr. Isaacstein. The added insult came when he was compelled to usher Philip to a waiting room.

Soon a clerk entered. He was visibly astonished by the appearance of Mr. Wilson's messenger, and so was Mr. Isaacstein, when Philip was paraded before him in a spacious apartment, filled with glass cases and tables, at which several assistants were seated.

"What the deuce——" he began, but checked himself. "What does Mr. Wilson want?" he went on. Evidently his Ludgate Hill acquaintance was useful to Philip.

"He wants nothing, sir," said Philip. "He sent me to you on a matter of business. It is of a private nature. Can you give me a few minutes alone?"

Isaacstein was a big-headed, big-shouldered man, tapering to a small point at his feet. He looked absurdly like a top, and surprise or emotion of any sort caused him to sway gently. He swayed now, and every clerk looked up, expecting him to fall bodily onto the urchin with the refined utterance who had dared to penetrate into the potentate's office with such a request.

Kimberley, Amsterdam and London combined to lend effect to Isaacstein's wit when he said:

"Is this a joke?"

All the clerks guffawed in chorus. Fortunately, Isaacstein was in good humor. He had just purchased a pearl for 250 pounds, which he would sell to Lady Somebody for 800 pounds, to match another in an earring.

"It appears to be," said Philip, when the merriment had subsided.

For some reason the boy's gray, earnest eyes conquered the big little man's amused scrutiny.

"Now, boy, be quick. What is it?" he said testily, and every clerk bent to his task.

"I have told you, sir, I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you with regard to business of an important nature."

"You say Mr. Wilson sent you—Mr. Wilson, of Grant & Sons?"

"Yes, sir."

Isaacstein yielded to amazed curiosity.

"Step in here," he said, and led the way to his private office, surprising himself as well as his assistants by this concession.

Philip closed the door and Isaacstein turned sharply at the sound, but the boy gave him no time to frame a question.

"I want you to buy this," he said, handing over the diamond.

Cross Fire.

Isaacstein took it, and gave it one critical glance. He began to wabble again.

"Do you mean to say Mr. Wilson sent you to dispose of this stone to me?" he demanded.

"Not exactly, sir. I showed it to him and he recommended me to come to you."

Well, it mattered not. The courage of despair which nerved him the previous night came to his aid again. He would defy them all, careless of consequence.

The policeman was saying:

"It's a queer affair, sir. Did he really say he had lots more of 'em?"

"Yes, yes! Do you think I am romancing? Perhaps they are in his possession now."

"Have you any more of these stones, boy?"

Philip, with lips tensely set, was desperately cool again. He moved his arm, and the constable's grasp tightened.

"You are hurting he," said the boy. "I merely wish to put my hand in my pocket. Are you afraid of me, that you hold me so fast?"

The policeman, like the rest, did not fail to notice Philip's diction. The scornful superiority of his words, the challenge of the final question, took him aback. He relaxed his grip and grinned confusedly.

Philip instantly produced his paper of diamonds and opened it widely, so that all the stones could be seen. He handed the parcel to the policeman.

"Take good care of them, constable," he said. "Judging from results, they would not be safe in that man's hands."

But Isaacstein did not hear the insult. When he saw the collection he nearly lost his senses. What had he done? Was he or the boy mad? Veins stood out on his forehead, and he wobbled so fearfully that he clutched the desk for support. A scarecrow of a boy wandering about London with thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds in his pocket, wrapped up in a piece of newspaper like so many sweets. There were not any meteoric diamonds of such value in all the museums and private collections in the world. He began to perspire. Even the policeman was astounded, quite as much at being called "constable" by Philip as by the mean appearance of articles presumably of great value.

"This is a rum go. What do you make of it, Mr. Isaacstein?" he said.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. He shows a piece of his find to a jeweler and discovers he is fabulously rich, but faces the problem of selling his meteoric diamonds. London's best diamond expert becomes excited over the meteoric find.

Now Go On With the Story.

DANGER SIGNAL TO WOMEN

Is what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness and the blues. In nine cases out of ten they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, curable by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool dissolve a little saltpeter in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpeter water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table, rub a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterward be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

A Glad Relief.

"Thank Heaven, those bills are got rid of!" said Bilkins, fervently, as he tore up a bundle of statements of accounts dated August 1.

"All paid, eh?" said Mrs. Bilkins.

"Oh, no," said Bilkins. "The duplicates dated September 1 have come in, and I don't have to keep these any longer."

Grew Longer.

A farmer who was known to be very mean bought a coat for his servant boy. When the boy had the coat fitted on, the farmer remarked: "Bill, I am afraid it is a bit too short."

"Never mind, sir," replied Bill, "it will be long enough before I get another."

"Bedfast—For Two Years"

MRS. GEORGE EWELL writes:—I know your medicine helped me wonderfully. I was so weak and nervous I could not sleep. Had a very poor appetite. Had such an aching between my shoulders and such dreadful headaches. My tongue would be nearly coated every morning and would get so dry. I am 45 years old. Have been having "change of life." I doctored a great deal but your medicines helped me more than all the three of "Golden Medical Discovery." I can now sleep good at night. My tongue is not coated and your medicines have removed many of my symptoms. I know if I had taken six bottles more I would have been cured. I was about bedfast for two years, now I do all my work and attend to my garden and chickens. I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicines too highly.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ACT INDIFFERENTLY.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

X. Y.

The heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

CERTAINLY NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had many girl and boy friends and they all acted nice until they all played false. Now, should I break friendship with all of them and stay home without friends?

H. H.

And grow sour, suspicious and cynical? Certainly not. Go out and make more friends, and be quite sure that none of the blame of unfaithfulness lies at your door.

Do You Know---

Probably the most interesting string of Christian names given to any child in the United Kingdom is borne by a girl in South Wales? By way of showing their admiration of the Budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Prime Minister, this girl's parents are said to have named her Budgetta Georgiana Asquitha.

TERRIBLE ORDEAL SAFELY ENDED

Broken in Health, Miserable, Suffering, For a Score of Years, Lady Came Safely Through Ordeal.

Johnson's Bayou, La.—Mrs. L. P. Semar, of this town, who has been in a deplorable condition for years, now makes the following statement: "I was a great sufferer, for 20 years, with pains in my back, right side, headache and lower bowels, was very irregular, and also suffered terribly at times, with dizziness and faintness.

During this time, I tried six different doctors, but could get no relief.

I heard of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it. After having taken a course of this treatment, (6 bottles), according to directions, I feel no pain, am regular, am able to do all of my work and, in fact, feel like a new woman.

I can surely recommend Cardui, the woman's tonic, to all women suffering from female disorders."

Cardui is the ideal medicine for women. It is prepared especially for women, and contains ingredients which act directly on the weak womanly organs, thus helping to build up, in a gentle, natural way, the entire womanly constitution to a healthy condition.

The wonderful success which Cardui has attained, in its past 50 years of continuous use, is due principally to its merit. It has helped many hundreds of thousands of weak women. It will surely help you, too.

Try Cardui.

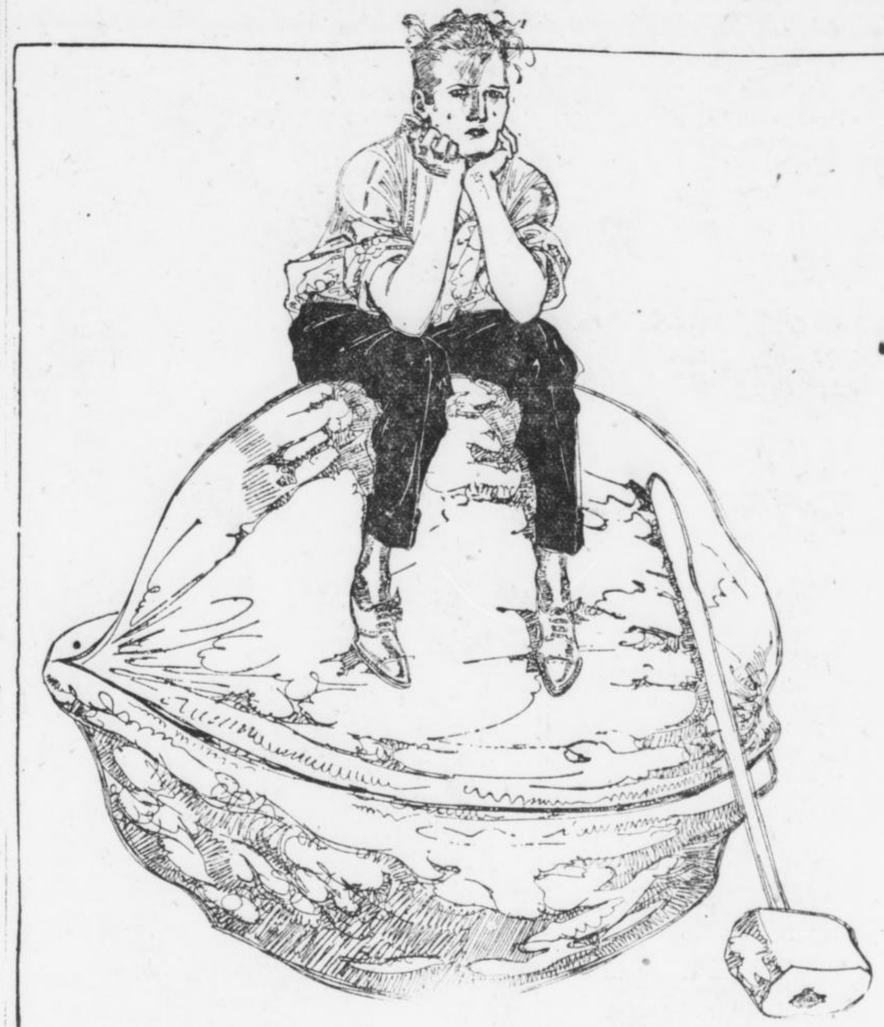
The Lover and the Walnut

Sometimes It's a Hard Nut to Crack—Where Violence Fails, and Only Soft Appeal and Cunning Will Bring Her Out of Her Shell and Into Your Arms!

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.



I KNOW a chap—a darling young chap—who's a winner at all things. Or he was until he ran face to face with the "Golden Girl." The girl who made his heart a house of pain—who made all other girls in the world look like the glass set in the brass ring you get in a "prize" candy box alongside of a blue diamond!

He has tact and sweetness, honesty and tenderness, and he's a "crack" at every game that takes personal bravery, mental courage, skill and patience. And just the sort to take a girl's eyes and heart with him every move he makes—if he'll only "act natural"! In this—his biggest game—he has still his courage, but his skill and tact, his sweetness and patience, have gone off and left him right in the spot on the highway where he needs them the most. He's trying to win the Golden Girl with a club!— like a cave man. He bullies her and he scolds her, and he tries to prove to her where she's "mad" not to love him, and he calls upon all the gods of a man in love to witness how cold her heart is! And the girl, while he's breaking his heart for her, is all tight in her little shell and she won't come out. He is still sane enough to have a sneaking notion that she loves him a little—to know that she isn't really such an icy little woman—and to wonder dimly why she is holding out in such fashion. So he agonizes and fumes and raves and goes after the nut with a sledge-hammer! And there isn't a sound from within, and the shell holds tight without a crack!

If he'd only remember the fairy story of the gnome who loved and wanted the pixie in the walnut. He pounded and toiled and sweat with his heavy stone sledge. And then he sat upon the nut and wept bitter tears that tasted salty where they ran close to his lips. Now wielding a sledge wasn't the only thing the gnome could do. He could play so sweetly on a tiny violin that even the shy tree frog would lean and listen. So he dried his tears and rubbed his face with his red coat sleeve and managed a smile, and tucking his music box under his chin he drew the bow across the singing strings and played. And lo! after a few sweet measures the crack of the nut grew slowly wider—it yawned wider to the blue sky, and out of it, into the happy gnome's heart, crept the timid pixie who lived therein.

There are women who answer only the call of the sledge-hammer—whose wild hearts leap to violence. But the Golden Girl isn't that kind. Remember the fairy story, boy. Swinging the sledge-hammer isn't the only thing you can do. You've forgotten your violin. Draw your bow across it the very sweetest you know how, and I promise you the shell will open of itself and your elf will fly into your heart. Raving and storming isn't the only strength you have. You've forgotten your sweetness, your tenderness, your cunning. Lay siege with the music of these three, and I swear the Golden Girl will glow and reach to you. Under the pressure of her two white hands the shell will yawn and yield her up.

Sometimes it's a hard nut to crack—where violence fails and only soft appeal and cunning will avail!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us and she is one of those flattering kind; she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day right before me she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I don't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heartbroken. What shall I do?

SAD WIFE.

HEARTBROKEN, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered. Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say so right then and there? Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John; I'm so proud of him myself sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish"? And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind, is she? Well, I'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

He's All Right.

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pusscat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? You let him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and quick-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way, or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming? Cry when she's gone? Scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman, to be sure!

The Only Way.

Have cousin at the house—have her there morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, ask her opinion of men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send John in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him sit up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat; have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expects men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, smile and cajole and be nicer than ever cousin dared to be, and wach results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown-up boys, you know. Just grown-up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

Same as Others.

"Say, if you were seated in the tube, and every seat was taken, and a lady entered, what would you do?"

"I'd pretend I was asleep."

Doing a Man's Part.

"What are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" replied the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

Fishers of Men

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WE are all fishers of men, and by "We" I mean every one of my sex.

And it is not to our discredit. The Lord implanted in every girl's heart a longing for love that is not satisfied in the love of father, mother, brother, sister or friend. It is a longing that grows with her years, showing first in her smiling overtures as a baby to some boy and never ending till it finds satisfaction in the love of a husband and child.

She may grow old and gray in spinsterhood; she may judge man's love by the unhappy experience of some sister and decry it; she may despise the dependence that comes with love and deny it, but to the end of her days, though her tongue may scoff and her ears refuse to hear, there remains at the bottom of her heart a longing for it that is never stilled. And no woman is normal until she has known it.

We are all fishers of men. To deny it is to deny the plan of Nature. The only difference is in outward manifestations of this great inward desire. Some of us stand for life looking wistfully at the water waiting for the fish to jump out at our feet, and others secure poles early, change the bait to suit the game, and fish assiduously.

We all want love. We have always been told that it is most maidenly to wait till it comes to us voluntarily. But fish so rarely jump out of the water, and the years come and go, each one taking with it some charm that should by all rules of the game have served as bait, and we find ourselves threatened with a life-time of loneliness and heart hunger.

It is fair, then, considering how much love means, and the desolation of life without it, to suggest to nice little girls, with their hearts beating fast with alternate hope and despair, how they may use a little bait modestly and effectively.

All Are Vain.

The finest man in the world is a vain, weak creature, and it is always the finest man in the world who is blindest about the opposite sex and needs a guide to reach the altar. It was never necessary to make an effort to win the admiration of a worthless man. Very often he makes love-making his business, and consequently never has a business that will support a wife and child.

A nice little girl named Mary, who wants to win a husband and confesses to this most normal and most womanly desire, writes me:

"I am a young girl of twenty-two, and meet a lot of nice young men and go out a great deal with them. I have a host of girl friends, and while in their company I can converse with ease on almost any topic, but just as soon as I am alone in a gentleman's company it seems I have nothing to talk about, which is a very awkward position. Please advise me what topics are mostly to be discussed and whether talking about business is a boring one. I must add that I am not up to the mark on books, and consequently can not talk about them."

Thank heaven you can't! There is a big score in your favor to start with, for the girl who says pedantly to a man, "Have you read Maeterlinck's 'Pelleas and Melisande?'" or, "As Byron says: 'You remember that quotation, I am sure,' etc.," and looks with a surprised superiority when he confesses he never reads more than this newspapers and the baseball scores on the billboards, is doomed to stay on the bank forever.

Business. If he is worth while, he dotes on it, and is an enthusiast on anything that pertains to it. Don't be afraid of results if you show an interest in the most vital interest he has. And a better topic, the best of all, is to engage him in conversation about himself. It is honey on his tongue and music in his ears, and if you can hang entranced on his account of his first skates, and grow breathless with delight over his favorite way of cooking fish, you have him on your line and coming slowly and surely out of the water.

One Way.

Be a good listener. The man who was won by being talked to death is too weak to be ranked as a man. Let him do the talking. Believe me, Mary dear, the best of them like appreciation of the words of wisdom that are always dropping from their lips and turn oftenest, stay longest, and think most, of the girl who listens to their most commonplace talk as if she were hearing the music of the angels.

We are all fishers of men, Mary. But remember always that it is wise to consider the good and bad points of the fish before casting in a line. Take care that your longing doesn't magnify into a whale a fish that is only a minnow.

Vice Versa.

During sermon time the other day a baby began to cry, and its mother carried it toward the door. "Stop!" said the minister; "the baby's not disturbing me."

The mother turned toward the pulpit, and made the audible remark: "Oh, 'e ain't, ain't 'e? But you're a-disturbin' of 'im!"

Higher Education.

Paterfamilias was lecturing his son on education. "Look here, my boy," he said. "I made my pile with only a common school education."

"I daresay, dad," replied the son; "but it takes a college education to know how to spend it."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading about a little kid that walked 14 miles to and from school every day," said the Manicure Lady. "I'll bet that kid will be a great man some day."

"I hope so," said that Head Barber. "He is entitled to something after he grows up, and a kid in the city would never walk one-tenth that far if he had to."

"I guess the days of great men is kind of past and gone away," said the Manicure Lady. "As dad was saying the other night, we have a lot of great men now, but when you look one of them over and compare him to the great men of the past he is a few stacks shy. The old gent says that we don't need any great men nowadays, because he thinks that everybody is getting dippy in the cities and taking nothing serious any more. He said he never liked to hear folks calling Theodore Roosevelt 'Teddy.'"

"I think the same as your father," said the Head Barber. "When I was a kid I wanted to be like George Washington but when I grew older and figured that the country had one father I stopped trying to be great and went barbering. The way I feel now, if I can make enough to get by and keep up my insurance I am satisfied."

"That's how Wilfred feels too," said the Manicure Lady. "He had a bug for a long time that he was going to be the Lord Byron of the century, but when he found out that nobody cared much for serious poetry he started in writing popular songs and says he would rather be a humble bard getting the sugar than a great genius looking around for somebody to indorse his note."

"Times have certainly changed," mused the Head Barber. "The world ain't got much time nowadays for anybody with old fashioned ideas. There ain't no dignity, no reverence, no old homesteads, no quilting bees or logging bees, no church sociables, no sleigh-rides. When I was a kid I would take off my cap and get red in the face if a lady spoke to me, but if a lady speaks to a strange kid now and asks him to throw away a cigarette, he will say 'Tell it to Sweeney.' I don't know what everything is coming to."

Capable.

"Is she musical?"

"Yes; she has a natural voice, a sharp tongue and a flat nose."

Don't Suffer With Indigestion or Stomach Trouble---Quaker Herb Extract Will Cure You

There Are Thousands of Atlanta's Best Citizens Who Have Been Cured by Quaker and Are Willing for the World to Know That It Was the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm That Did It.

The Health Teacher when here had proven to the people of Atlanta the same as he has in thousands of others, that when he came here he brought rejoicing and happiness into thousands of homes that heretofore have been misery and sorrow, not from want or poverty—no, no—but for health and strength. In some homes it was a darling baby or older child whose little life seemed to be ebbing slowly away; in many cases it was worms of some kind that a few doses of Nature's own Quaker Extract would expel, and they were made well. Some homes were sorrowful on account of a poor, weak, run-down mother, who was dragging around from day to day, at times more dead than alive—pain in the back, that tired, languid feeling, could not bear anything tight around her waist, stomach would bloat, belching, shortness of breath, dizziness, headache at times, sometimes did not care to live, and tried every treatment with no relief—but here is where the Quaker Extract shows you Quaker is in a class by itself, for it cures just these kinds of cases, and thousands of women and children are living witnesses to prove it.

The husband and father that provides for home and family the same as Mr. K. F. Horder, No. 70 Fowler street, by occupation a meat cutter at Singleton Market on Cone street, who has had catarrh of the stomach, a soreness most of the time, had like a lump in his throat that he could not get up or down, his bowels very constipated, had to take pills, pellets, salts or something all the time to make them act, should do like him. He got one bottle of Quaker Extract, used it ten days, then said: "Give me three more bottles of Quaker Extract, for it it is the best medicine in the world; the pain in my chest is gone, my stomach does not bloat, my bowels are just acting fine, and it's the only medicine I ever took that just toned and seemed to build me right up."

Mrs. E. W. Gorman, who resides at Ninth street, who was laid up three months with rheumatism in arms, shoulders, back and lower limbs so bad that she never put her foot on the floor in weeks, tried every known remedy without even relief, and two bottles of Quaker Extract and two 25c bottles of Oil of Balm have cured her. She now feels like a girl—no aches or pains—and says that Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm did more for her than $100 worth of other medicine.

Now, this is the way the Health Teacher proves what he says. Quaker Remedies cure, even where all others have failed. Hundreds of people have had their hearing restored, the sense of taste and smell all brought back; people with stiff limbs and joints have all been made well. Call at Coursey & Munn's drug store, No. 29 Marietta street, for these: Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $5.00, and Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. We repay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over.

Harry K. Thaw's Recent Declaration of Love for Evelyn---

"I have lost all that is dear to me in this world. I feel I have lost the love of the woman for whom I was prepared to do anything. That is Evelyn.

"I think I have answered the question of why I made my flight from Matteawan when I have said that I have lost the dearest girl in the world."

Introductory Remarks by Evelyn Thaw

IF there are women or men in the world who do not believe that their lives would make an entrancing story they are either very humble or very clever.

"Commonplace" is a word which is expunged from the lexicon of those who write about themselves. In our arrogance—let me include myself—we imagine that our lives are so far removed from the run of lives, in respect of interest and character, as to be apart.

And we are right, even the most humdrum of us. Who can read Flaubert's "Simple Soul" without realizing this fact? There is no life that is not a fascinating study—always providing that its limner can "oarry it across the footlights." The less humdrum the life has been the less skill does the autobiographer require, and it is because my own life has been out of the ordinary that I dare essay the task of putting in plain words a rough and, I fear, an amateur chronicle.

I have many friends in the newspaper world, both in America and England; unemotional men, whose friendship I value, not so much because they have been able, at times, to turn the sharp edge of criticism from my unhappy self, but because in many of them I have found a saner judgment, a larger humanity and broader views than in any other class of men I have met. And this has been an astounding thing for me. For your newspaper man, on the surface, is a man of ice; a man pitiless in his analysis, and remorseless in his search of facts. Stories which would appal and shock the average person leave him unmoved. He will go right away from a millionaire's luxurious dinner party to the morgue; cover a horse show and an electrocution in one day; interview princes and criminals in rotation, and give no indication that he is impressed by either experience.

Yet, for all his seeming callousness, when loosed upon a "story," the newspaper man is very human in his sympathies, and I have to pay a grateful tribute to some of the journalists of America for the help and encouragement they gave me in the darkest hour of my need.

It follows that among my friends of the press I have found many who are willing and anxious to assist me in preparing such a book as this, but, although with such assistance, the value of the book, as a literary production, might well be materially enhanced, I have preferred to wait the time when I might be able to write, with my own hand and for my own pleasure, the story as I wish to tell it.

I am satisfied that there will be critics who will demur at the necessity of writing the book at all. They will say, "Why rake up the past—a past which can not be of interest to anybody save the actors, who are fairly unimportant people?" My own view, strengthened by a continuous study of other lives, is that there are no unimportant people in the world. The right to write is almost as incontestable as the right to live, and there will be something in the exaggerated tragedy of the existence which was mine—a lesson for somebody or other.

I hate the cant of the writer who professes to write only for the uplifting of the race; who prepares moral nastiness that the vague "they" shall be benefited, and I disassociate myself from the suggestion that this is a book with an object—yet, as I say, there will be a lesson in this, as in every other autobiography. It would be a colorless life, indeed, which did not contain this lesson.

Here, then, is the life of Evelyn Thaw—a life without an apology; without even vain regret.

HOWEVER anxious one may be to record one's childhood, that period of life is the most elusive.

I lived at Tarentum, on the Allegheny River, just outside Pittsburg. My father was a lawyer. "Wit" Nesbit was respected from one end of the country to the other, and had a reputation which extended beyond the line of local celebrity. A charming, genial man, I have only the most tender memories of him, for he died when I was 10, and that is an age when a child begins to form the most roseate impressions of those she has marked down for hero worship.

My childhood was the happiest time of my life. That is the impression I have now. I know that I was a tomboy, very keen on prize fights (of all things in the world), and delighted in promoting combats in secluded spots between children who were very beautiful to me, but who, in the eyes of my outraged parents, were the most impossible playmates.

My mother is one of the sweetest women I have ever met. Artistic to her finger tips, her home has ever been a harmonious and beautiful thing.

I have said she was a beautiful character. She was one of those women who had her home ordered artistically and charmingly. Whether she understood me or my nature I do not know. I doubt very much whether any mother is ever entirely in sympathy with her daughter's aspirations. It has been my experience that the son has invariably been the mother's first care, just as the daughter is invariably the father's.

My Tribute to My Mother, the Best of Women.

I have a brother with whose characteristics I do not doubt my mother is much better acquainted than with mine. I do not suggest for one moment that there was any violent lack of sympathy between her and myself, nor do I say that [illegible] understood me better my life would have run on different lines. And, if I express the opinion that my brother was the first consideration, I do not do so in an irritated or an aggrieved frame of mind. I believe that is how nature orders things, and I am quite content to accept such order without complaint, realizing that, had my father lived, my brother would probably have enjoyed the same experience in relation to myself.

I have the fullest admiration for my mother's character. She is altogether a wonderful woman. She is one of those sweet characters who could not plant a dry stick in the earth but it would blossom; who can make the prettiest things; is eminently efficient in all her household duties; the most perfect and dainty of housewives; the most trusting and believing of creatures.

But she did not understand me. To-day I am probably the greatest enigma that the world offers her. I am outside and beyond the range of her understanding. She is one of those women who are always willing to believe the best, and quite ready to fear the worst.

I can not take a convenient and lazy course and put all the blame of the friction, which at various periods undoubtedly existed, upon my ancestry. My mother and I were temperamentally different. I made matters more impossible because I was young, headstrong and willful; filled with the sublime assurance of youth, and opposed by one whose nature was so sweet and so simple that I could without any effort circumvent her most convincing argument.

I was, as I have said, born in Tarentum, in Pennsylvania, on the Allegheny River. There is a Tarento in Italy, a corruption of the ancient Tarentum, but the town namers of the United States were ever purists. When I was eight years old we moved across the river to Allegheny, and we were there two years.

The Poverty That Followed Fast Upon Father's Death.

It was while we were there that my father died. I have only the dimmest recollection of the period that followed. I realized then, with a vague sense of childish discomfort, that it was a period of trouble for my mother.

I do not know exactly in what position my father left her, but my recollection is that my mother had to pay frequent visits to court on account of my father's affairs.

At first, as far as I remember, we seemed to be in some prosperity, but afterward there was a great deal of worry. Whatever money my mother had was gone, and it was necessary for us to rent a few rooms in the house to outsiders.

That seemed a fairly easy method of keeping the wolf from the door, but, somehow, it never worked smoothly. Mother was always worried about the rent she had to pay, and still more worried about the rent she did not always get. And there were times when we felt the pinch very acutely; moments, indeed, when we did not get enough to eat.

The next move, I remember, was to my grandmother's. We went and lived with her. I think at that time we had no money whatever, and my earliest recollections of Pittsburg are almost as painful as my later recollections.

Poverty is very impatient and fretful. People who are poor find their salvation in action, and, since the woman's sphere is a limited one, and scope for initiative necessarily small, mother again rented a house, at No. 5 South Highland avenue, Pittsburg, and let out most of the rooms to other people.

I remember that my mother, my little brother and myself had to sleep in one room. There was no place for any of us elsewhere. Yet, despite all these discomforts, and all the sacrifices we made, the new house and the new arrangement did not pay any better than had our house in Allegheny.

In theory it showed excellent profits, but in practice there was the difficulty of collecting the rents, and I just remember that after a little while we had more trouble, and that the end of it was the furniture had to be sold.

It was then that a very good friend of mother's came to our rescue, and paid the man to whom we owed rent. Mother had made up her mind that she would leave Pittsburg and go to Philadelphia. She was very artistic, and she hoped to get a position as a designer. We were sent to an aunt, and afterward to a family which my mother had known in Pittsburg.

It is curious what shape memory takes of events which are of such paramount importance, and which are destined to play so great a part in one's career.

I remember that rail journey, which my brother and I took alone. How we were put in charge of the conductor, and the trouble we had with the family cat, which I insisted upon taking with me to our new home. Every conductor that came aboard wanted to put poor pussy off. It was a weepy journey for me. Finally we got to Philadelphia, and mother and another lady met us at the depot.

I was between thirteen and fourteen at the time; just old enough to take an intelligent interest in my parent's affairs. I do not remember exactly what idea I had as to our future when I went to Philadelphia. It probably was that my mother had already secured an appointment, but I found that she was living in one room in a small boarding house, and that the position of designer, the securing of which was to retrieve the family fortune, had not yet materialized.

Clever as she was in the making and planning of clothes, the people who employed designers wanted one who had practical experience on the commercial side of the business. They wanted somebody who had been Paris, who had studied and had at their finger tips the latest mode, and poor mother, with all the best intentions in the world, could not lay claim to so large and varied an experience.

The Problem of the Girl Alone With an Artist.

What little money we had began to go again. My brother was sent back to a convenient a sense, this was the most momentous of our es, from my point of view. The boarding house Arch street marked the beginning of my indedent career. Until now I had been a follower—ing whose life was directed by the whim or the umstances of another.

itherto I and the rest of the world had revolved ut my mother. She was in my eyes the central action around which animated creation gyrated. h street represented the period of transition; the ding which the center of attraction slowly surely shifted.

was there I met a Mrs. Darach, who was an st. She was attracted by my face, and asked if I would sit as a model for her. The idea attracted me. It seemed to me at that time to be a wonderful thing that anybody would want to paint a picture of me. It was really a wonderful joke and I was as proud as though I myself combined all the genius of Michael Angelo and Rosa Bonheur.

I learned in that time the supreme value of patience. Enthusiasm for being painted died with an aching neck, with the yearning desires to get right away from the position in which the artist put me, to move my head exactly in the direction she did not wish me to look, and to fidget at moments when it was essential that I should keep quite still.

Here, then, began the great education, an education the fruit of which was to serve me in such good stead in later years. Other artists would drop into the studio on Chestnut street, and one woman who came was very anxious that I should sit for her. Mrs. Darach, however, pointed out that I was not a professional model, but the other lady artist was very insistent.

"Why," she said, "I know lots of girls who are earning quite good money by posing for illustrators of magazines."

I had never thought of the possibility of making an income in this way. It seemed to absurd that people should take money for g painted. I spoke to mother about it, but e did not offer any objection, and thus it me about from Mrs. Darach I went to other tists, and slowly but surely began to form quite a connection among the artists who were in the building.

I Take Up Posing To Fill Our Purse.

I posed mostly for heads, particularly for children's heads, and at first for the lady artists. There were four in that building who used me as a model for the pictures with which they illustrated stories in the best-known magazines.

I grew in patience and the work came easy. Beyond the fact that most of the people who drew me were, as I say, women, there were one or two men artists whose names I do not remember.

When I was in full swing we decided to move to New York, and my artist friends gave me letters of introduction, one of which was to Mr. Carroll Beckwith. Mother went to New York, sending me back to Pittsburg. Even then our circumstances were so strained that it was necessary for her to get me a pass from a friend of my father. I had to go back to get Howard, my little brother. I was there for a few weeks, and we went on, by way of Allegheny, to New York.

My mother would never cease in her efforts to secure a position as designer, but in New York she had no greater success than she had in Philadelphia. The main objections which barred her in the smaller city were against her in New York.

We had secured a room on Twenty-second street—a little back room on the second floor. Here we lived and again felt the pinch of poverty. There were days when my sole meal consisted of a biscuit and a cup of coffee.

Try as she would, my mother did not succeed in securing even a minor position with a firm of dress designers. Everywhere the same answer was returned, the same questions asked: "Had she been to Paris recently? Had she similar experience with other stores?"

It was in desperation that mother remembered the letter of introduction to Mr. Carroll Beckwith. In Philadelphia my artist friends had sent me to a photographer's to secure a number of studies of my head. Armed with one of these mother called upon Mr. Beckwith. This was in December, 1900. The artist was pleased with the picture. He told her that she could bring me up to the studio, because he felt pretty sure that he would be able to give me work. A personal inspection satisfied him, and he offered me posing for two mornings every week.

"You are not the sort of girl," he said kindly, "that should go knocking at studio doors. I will give you some letters of introduction to representative artists in New York.

This he did. I remember one was to Mr. F. S. Church, and Mr. Church gave me letters to Herbert Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Hyneman and Carl Blenner. For all these artists I posed.

The work was fairly light. The poses were not particularly difficult. In the main they wanted me for my head. I never posed for the figure, in the sense that I posed for the nude. Sometimes I would be painted as a little Eastern girl in a costume of a Turkish woman, all vivid coloring, with ropes and bangles of jade about my neck and arms.

And here I would like to say something about the artists' model, because there is so much in this conception.

The question of the artists' model, the "eternal feminine," of course, like that of the stage, is a question in which many people seem to take considerable and, indeed, at times uncalled for interest.

In the case of the artists' model, it is perhaps not to be wondered at that when a girl as a model must so completely ignore all the safeguards with which society and convention have fenced in womanhood, the world should speculate as to what manner of person she is, or will presently become, nor can it altogether be considered guilty of rash judgment if it is inclined to reckon such girls as more or less outside the pale.

Now let us look at the girl alone with the artist. The law can not help her, society, convention, custom are shut outside the walls of this great room, powerless to aid or shield from the elemental passions of two human hearts. Judged by the ordinary standards and conducts of life, the thing is cataclysmal. Yet she looks and talks as lightly and unconcernedly as she takes off her hat and goes to the glass to arrange her hair, as if they were about to engage in a game of tennis. She then retires behind a screen, or into another room, to emerge presently appareled only in her youth and beauty. I am speaking, of course, of the artists' model who poses for the figure.

This picture doubtless will appeal to different people in a very different manner. Not a few will regard it as "horrible," "disgraceful," "outrageous," "the law should prevent her," and so on.

Of course, it is a big risk for any woman thus to challenge the conventions and even the instincts of her sex; and yet to do so with impunity has been found quite possible by the majority of those who have risked it. A girl with a character can keep the narrow road with much less difficulty than besets her sister in other branches of life.

It stands to reason that such exacting work as drawing and painting the figure can not be combined with philandering to any great extent, and the artist, even though flesh and blood, and he can not be much of an artist unless he is very much so, quickly gets shy of models whose idea of earning their dollar a day consists in the arduous task of sitting on his knee partaking of chocolates or smoking cigarettes.

For the girl of parts, indeed, there are few means of livelihood which offer fairer possibilities than this career of posing. It requires neither money nor influence. Like Shakespeare, she may know small Latin and less Greek. The only capital necessary is that with which Nature has financed her—a pretty face, a shapely form and a plastic, sympathetic temperament.

It is not couleur de rose all the time, of course, for, of the rank and file, but few fail to have some good times. But even for the luckiest there is the inevitable pay, pay pay—the quid pro quo.

Belying its name, sitting very often involves great muscular effort, and fainting is a common incident, especially in the long sittings required in schools and classes, and the work is at all times a great strain on the nerves.

A girl taking up sitting professionally and seriously must be prepared to make pleasure, amusement and other interests subordinate to her work.

In a sense it was my work as an artists' model that first brought me into the public eye. I do not know that to be brought into the public eye is the happiest of experiences. Wilde has said that a woman, like a country, is happiest when she has no history; for my part, I am free to confess that while the reminiscences of the past may be painful, there is a peculiar fascination and happiness in framing up the experiences.

I Marvel at the Mysteries of the Stage.

I remember in New York a reporter came down to the house to see me. It was a novel experience in those days, and one which considerably flustered me. It was the first of I do not know how many interviews which were to be my lot. Mother showed him a photograph which had been taken in Philadelphia. (It is a curious fact that I have not a single one of these pictures left, though it is not such a long time ago since they were taken.) A photograph of a pose I had made was printed in an evening paper in New York, with a complimentary caption underneath, and thence onward I saw many reporters, all of whom were anxious to get a photograph for their papers.

The Sunday American published several of them, two big pages, and it was only natural that this should be followed by a succession of offers to go on the stage.

I suppose such an experience, falling to a young girl, unused to publicity and with little knowledge of the world, would be sufficient to turn her head. But I was immensely sane in those days. I attribute this to the fact that I had read more than most girls of my age. My father had an excellent library, and I had been a most omnivorous reader. I laugh to myself when I think of the literary puzzles I tackled. I am more than astounded to realize that I not only read, but enjoyed many books which a child might reasonably be supposed to think more than a little difficult. But the efforts I made in those early days to master such classics as came my way had been a sort of mental gymnastics which enabled me to secure a sense of proportion, the one sense which spells salvation to a girl upon whom is lavished the subtle flattery of publicity. This, and my own taste for a healthy open-air life, enabled me to take a normal view of things. I have always loved the fields and the woods and every beast that walks or creeps or crawls. There are no phenomena of nature which are not beautiful to me.

So when I am asked in what spirit I approached the stage and the career it offered me, I say I approached the stage as I would a virgin forest, with a bubbling sense of happiness in the revelations which it would open to me. I was not stage-struck in the accepted sense. I never thought of the audiences and what charm I might exert over them. I did not anticipate huge triumphs in floral tributes handed across the footlights, nor did I dream dreams of laudatory newspaper notices. I was supremely indifferent as to the position I might occupy in the profession; it was enough to me that I should be one with the people of the new world, privy to their lives, their habits of thought and speech. I should be "in it."

There came offers to me from all manner of people, promising me this and that success; dazzling prospects of distant fame were held before my eyes. With the advertisement given me by newspapers I should command high salaries, I should star, I should be the most-talked-of woman in America—all these promises, light-heartedly given, came to me, and I remember that I was not impressed. I was only interested in the actual "getting there." One letter from a manager asking for my services at $20 a week would have eclipsed all other communications. I was sane enough to realize that a freakish notoriety was not desirable from any point of view.

The greatest advancement, apart from an inborn desire for enlargement of life, lay in the very material fact that the stage life would enable me to make a double income. I could pose by day and appear on the stage by night. The dollars counted horribly, for I had tasted privation and was anxious to put myself as far distant from a repetition as I could.

I do not think that my mother was overanxious for me to adopt the stage as my profession, but fate was moving me inexorably in the direction I was to take.

Every day the new life became a more tangible possibility, and when at length I entered the unpromising stage door it seemed less of a new experience than an introduction to a life with which I was already familiar.

I had a letter from Mr. Marks, who was a theatrical manager. He was very anxious that I should go on the stage and promised me that he would do all he could to make me famous. These letters used to come addressed to us, but we paid little attention to them, but afterward he wrote saying that he could get me a position in "Floradora," and some time later, through a girl I knew, I met him and secured a letter of introduction to John C. Fishell, who was at that time the manager of the "Floradora" company. From thence onward the stage became a practical issue. I overruled mother's objections, and went with her one day to Mr. Fishell's office. He had a long look at me. He was a pleasant, genial man, blessed with a sense of humor, and he burst into a fit of laughter.

"So you want to be an actress?" he said, with mock solemnity. "I am running a theater, not a baby farm. "Why," he went on, "if I took you in 'Floradora' I should have the Gerry Society on my back. No, my child, I can not rob the cradle.

When I got back to the office Mr. Fishell asked me if I could dance. I said, "Yes," a little fearfully. I had learned dancing at a school in Pittsburg. He sent for a woman who came to the piano and played.

The stage manager was keen on my coming into the theater, but Mr. Fishell was not so enthusiastic and said he would let me know.

"The fact is," he said frankly, 'the only chance of your coming on the stage is for you to be a little reticent as to what your age is. If you like to do this I am willing to give you a trial; you can come to-morrow and rehearse."

They Left Me Still My Veil of Innocence.

I went home in the seventh heaven of delight.

And here let me deal with an aspect of stage life which forever excites the moralist. Has it a corrupting influence on the young? I speak of myself when I say it did not corrupt me. If being brought into contact with people who are loose of speech, or who have exaggerated views on the flexibility of morals, is corruption, then the streets of New York, Paris, London, of any great city, are unfit for the young girl.

There is a camaraderie on the stage which entails a certain freedom of speech and a certain frankness in dealing with the relationships which exist between people, but there is also the protection which comes from the destruction of illusion.

And there is, too, a very keen appreciation of duty toward the innocent. There is a code which protects the child and stands between her and knowledge of evil, and in no other branch of life have I seen such anxiety displayed to hide ugly truths from the novitiate.

Here is an example of how a girl can live in the very midst of things without fully understanding their significance.

I remember that in those early days I used to envy a sextet of beautiful girls who had a chorus number of their own. I used to stand in the wings and watch them dancing gracefully the slow movements of the number, and wonder a little ruefully whether I should ever be tall enough or skillful enough to do the work they were doing. For, in my innocence, I regarded them as the most wonderful part of the show and certainly the best paid. "for," I argued, "how could they wear such lovely clothes off the stage, and such beautiful pearls on, unless they received a salary in proportion to their charms?"

I must have mentioned my view to several people, but not one of them attempted to lift the veil which hid realities from my eyes. The stage was indeed a wonderful world, its people, a people apart. One looked at life from a new angle, and saw men and women from another plane. I was impressed by the frank egotism of the girls, a quality which is neither to be despised nor condemned, for they merely put into words all that their sisters of the other world think. They had gotten the trick of thinking aloud, and found speech an excellent and soothing substitute for thought, and one of the reasons why actresses are apparently so inconsistent is to be found in this practice.

I found it took years of study before I could disentangle the real intentions of a girl from her expressed and often vehemently expressed view. I have heard people, and men especially, who have complained bitterly of the inconsistency and deceptive powers of girls engaged on the stage.

Next Sunday Evelyn Thaw will give the history of her acquaintance with Stanford White.

BRITISH GOLF WRITER TO TRY CHICAGO LINKS

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Bernard Darwin, the noted English golf writer, is now in this city. Mr. Darwin's reputation as a writer is world-wide, but it may not be so generally known in America that he is an extremely good golfer. Mr. Darwin expects to visit some of our biggest courses and we may expect some interesting and instructive articles from his pen as a result of his visit.

There was a little occurrence during the National Amateur Championship at Garden City that attracted a great deal of attention at the time and has resulted in frequent discussion and much misunderstanding since. As the various versions of the story that has been floating around do not agree with my information, I think it fair to both parties in the matter, who were entirely innocent of any thought of wrongdoing, to make public the explanation that was given to me at the time. To properly understand the circumstance it is necessary to know that the officials were visiting any infractions of rules with severe punishment.

DURING the qualifying round a young player teed his ball from the wrong position, entailing a penalty in medal play of one stroke. Not realizing this at the time, he put his score of three actual strokes for the hole upon his card, and the record was inadvertently transferred without correction to the bulletin board. Thereupon the player himself called official attention to the mistake he had made, and he and his partner were both disqualified. The decision rather emphasized the fact that a player not only had to avoid breaking rules himself, but that it was equally incumbent upon him to see that his partner was equally guiltless.

AT the ninth hole (the eighteenth of their match) in the eighteen-hole match play round between Paul Hunter and Mr. Ullmer the latter found a bunker off his second shot. The hole and therefore the matche was practically Paul's. Nothing short of a miracle could have given Ullmer the hole under the circumstances. His caddy entered the bunker, set down his bag and grounded a club. Paul, although the hole was his to all intents, labored under the impression that a suggestion was technically proper to avoid penalty. He had absolutely nothing to gain. Ullmer, a very honorable young player, when the suggestion of rule infringement was made, picked up his ball and shook hands, and the match was supposed to be over. When he reached the clubhouse and casually mentioned the circumstance, he was told that there was no rule against a caddy entering a bunker and grounding a club. The matter was then laid before the officials, who agreed to call it a tie, and the play-off next morning resulted in a victory for Paul on the fifth extra hole.

Tom McCarey has called off the bout at Vernon, Cal., on October 14 between Leach Cross and Joe Rivers. He has also barred the Mexican from boxing at his club again. Rivers, who had a suspended sentence of 30 days hanging over his head for automobile speeding, was arrested again in Los Angeles for the same offense. McCarey has become disgusted with Rivers' action.

Because Sam Wallace, manager of Leach Cross, demanded better terms than a guarantee of $3,500, with a privilege of 20 per cent of the gross receipts for Leach to box Ritchie at the Garden A. C., Billy Gibson, manager of the club, wired Ritchie an offer of $10,000 to meet Johnny Dundee. The champion will probably accept the offer.

OH, MR. MACK! A. SHAFER SURE CAN HIT HOMERS

BASEBALL is full of curiosities, one of the oddities of the 1913 campaign being that on the Polo Grounds this year the opponents of the Giants have made more home runs than were manufactured by the McGrawites. The players that invaded Gotham rid their systems of 22 loop-the-loop smashes, while the Manhattan representatives punched out 19 round-trip clouts.

It would be well for the Athletic pitchers, during the coming world's series, to keep a watchful eye on Arthur Shafer, as the Californian, a player Mack was after before he was gathered into the McGraw fold, has been the Giants' most active manufacturer of home runs on their home lot this season. Shafer secured five homers, all off right-handers. Larry Doyle, who won the Chalmers car offered to the National League's most valuable player last season, has made three homers at the Polo Grounds this season, one of these, procured off Otto Hess of the Braves, coming with the bases full.

The list of the homers made at the Polo Grounds by National League players this season follows:

Giants—19.

Murphy May Not Get Ritchie Go

Tommy Deserves Chance at Title

By W. W. Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—Some people of an optimistic turn appear to think that a November championship match between Ritchie and Tommy Murphy is as good as arranged. There is still some fogginess in regard to the date, it being said that Ritchie will not be in a position to tell when he will meet Murphy until he has reached New York and learned just what his Eastern and Middle Western bookings are.

This means that the affair with Murphy, which will be as near to a legitimate world's championship as anything that could be arranged in these recent days, will have to take a back seat until Ritchie has appeared in a few pot-boilers in New York, Milwaukee and elsewhere, and at that there is uncertainty as to whether Murphy will get the chance he is entitled to after all.

However, when Ritchie reaches New York it will be up to Manager Jim Buckley to attend to Murphy's interests. Buckley has been fuming for quite a while over the way his sterling little fighter has been sidetracked by Tom, Dick and Harry, and he will have a few pertinent things to say to Ritchie.

JIMMY CLABBY and Sailor Petroskey are in the full swing of training for their contest at Coffroth's Eighth stret arena on the night of October 3. Clabby, who is located at Milletts, is an object of interest to local pugilistic fans, as this will be his initial appearance in a San Francisco ring.

In Australia Clabby was pronounced the neatest and most effective American boxer that ever visited that district.

From all accounts he mingles good punching force with his different styles of glovemanship, so Sailor Petroskey is apt to receive rougher treatment from the clever Indianan than he did from Bob McAllister.

The Clabby-Petroskey match will be followed by other middleweight bouts, and it is more than likely that Frank Klaus and Eddie McGoorty will be inmates of local training camps before many weeks. It is Jim Coffroth's plan to pair off the middleweights until a world's champion stands forth.

A NEWS dispatch says that Jim Griffin will be honored to the extent of being permitted to referee a preliminary event in New York. This is an intimation that a preliminary in New York is equivalent to a championship bout in San Francisco. If Jim accepts that invitation he will lose friends at this end.

ANOTHER dispatch telling of Freddie Welsh's journey East says Freddie has announced that he will have "a few small battles on the way." Some of the sports here who know Freddie and Harry Pollok are wondering whether the wire should have read "A few small bottles."

Tinker After Sallee And 'Koney' for 1914

CINCINNATI, OHIO, Sept. 27.—Joe Tinker, in an interview to-day, stated that he is after Konetchy, the big Cardinal first-sacker, and "Slim" Sallee, the star southpaw of the St. Louis Nationals for his 1914 team.

Tinker declared that he has the highest personal regard for Hoblitzel, but he does not adapt himself to the first base play he advocates and which he wants, and he believes it will be best for Hoblitzel to go to St. Louis and Konetchy to come here. He declared he has as trading material Pitchers Suggs and Benton and Infielder Egan, and possibly Outfielder Bates, besides some youngsters.

Doyle Injured; May Be Out of Big Series

BROOKLYN, Sept. 27.—The supporters of the New York Giants in the world's series got a double shock here to-day when they learned that Captain Larry Doyle has been injured in an automobile accident and Outfielder Fred Snodgrass had sprung a "charley horse." Doyle may not compete in the world's championship.

Doyle received his injury as he was driving home in his automobile. Pitcher Fromme, of the Giants, was a passenger. Doyle became bewildered by the fog and steered the machine into a tree. He was thrown out on his right shoulder. Fromme escaped with only a slight shake-up.

Doyle did not realize until this morning that his fall had possibly injured him seriously. A physician said the right arm was dislocated or the shoulder-bone possibly broken.

STAR COACHES TRAIN CITADEL FOR TECH GAME

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 27.—The Citadel eleven, which plays Tech at Grant Field next Saturday, will make up in coaching whatever is lacked in the way of heady material. The head coach is George C. Rogers, '08, who played on the famous Citadel team of '09, which tied University of Georgia. In looking after the backfield Coach Rogers is assisted by "Billy" Cogswell, Auburn quarterback of '11. In the line: James Stoney, crack Sewanee guard, an all-Southern forward, will take the work. Fortified with three good instructors the Blue and White is hopeful of making a good stand against the rushes of the Yellow Jackets next week.

Of the team that held Tech to a 20-6 score at Hampton Park last year, but six will appear on Grant Field this season. Returning are Wallace, end; Alexander and Bruner, tackles; Woods, center; Folger, halfback; and Scaffe, guard. While the line is in fair condition, there being only an end and a guard to be located, the backfield has been shot to flinders. Martin, the forward-pass artist, who was rated the leading hurler in Dixie last year, has gone to University of Pennsylvania; Gibson, halfback, and McFadden, fullback, have also been lost to the team, so that the great problem facing the coaches is how to get out a backfield fit to cope with the heavy line that the Jackets will put out this season.

In Folger, the Citadel has a halfback of more than average ability, and it is probable that the coaches will build the offense around him. The squad has been practicing for some time, the opening of college has brought out a squad of about 35 or 40 men; and the weeding out process is going on daily.

It is probable that the line will put up a good game, having played through a season last year against such teams as Georgia, Clemson, Tech, Carolina, etc. The backfield, however, should be green, though fast, as it will be a hard task to fill "Robbie" Martin's shoes, half of the Citadel's touchdowns last year having been scored on his accurate shooting of the forward pass.

Elliott Dent Plans 'Unique Feature' on World's Series Days

Elliott Dent, Cracker pitcher, has completed arrangements for his world's series detail report in the convention hall at the Kimball Hotel starting October 7, and continuing until the last game of the big series has been played.

Dent plans to run a unique feature on each day of the world's series. The first day of the series will be known as "Crackers' Day," all the old-time Atlanta players being admitted free. Seats will be reserved for the players. Dent will personally talk on the most important plays as they are received over the wire.

The directors of the Atlanta ball club will also have a day set aside for them. Dent also plans to stage a "Red Headed Day," the first ten sorrel tops getting to the convention hall first being admitted without charge.

MOTOR DEMONS WILL RIDE HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

JACK PRINCE announces that motocycle racing will "come back" at the local saucer next Tuesday night with the finest card of events ever staged here. The riders have been showing their wares in Chattanooga for the past two weeks.

There will be a number of new faces at the meet Tuesday night. A dare-devil named Flickenstein, who hails from Denver, will compete. He was the hero of the last meet held in Lookout City, giving the speedy Tex Richards the time of his career.

Prince is also after Arthur Chappelle, the world's champion. Chappelle is a big card in Atlanta and he will try to get here in time to race Tuesday. If he doesn't he will surely compete in the next set of races which will probably be a week from Tuesday.

The "Wise" Chap Has His Place; It's a Laugh for You When He's Wrong

GEORGIAN SPORTS COVERED by EXPERTS

DEMAREE TO BE PITCHING HERO OF 1913 CLASH

Giant Youngster or Shawkey, of Athletics, Likely to Shine in World's Series.

THE absorbing topic of baseball discussion, now that the major league pennant races are virtually over, is: Who will be the pitching hero of the 1913 world's championship series between the Giants and Athletics?

By one of the singular quirks of fate, the fans of New York and Philadelphia are firm in the belief that the youngest pitcher on the respective teams will be the hero of the impending clash.

Al Demaree, serving his first year as a regular on the Giants' pitching corps, bids fair to lead the National League hurlers in the winning percentages, and it is the fond hope of steadfast New York enthusiasts that "Steamer Al" will pitch wide circles around Chief Bender, Eddie Plank and a few of Mack's sensational young box performers.

Buttonhole any Philadelphia fan, and he will bet money, marbles or chalk that Bob Shawkey, the juvenile of the Mackian staff, will outpitch such established stars as Mathewson, Marquard and Tesreau in the big series.

Christy Mathewson, Bill Dineen, Ed Walsh, Mordecai Brown, "Babe" Adams, Jack Coombs and Joe Wood are generally considered the greatest world's championship pitchers of modern baseball history. Bill Dineen was the first to gain fame as a pitching hero in the inaugural world's series between American and National League teams in 1903, when the Boston Americans nosed out the Pirates in their memorable encounter of eight games. Dineen, now an American League umpire, was the greatest right-hander of his time.

Dineen Humbles Pirates.

Pittsburg had won three of the first four games, Dineen grabbing off a victory for the retreating Bostons in the second tilt. Dineen succumbed to Phillippe in the fourth clash. Old Cy Young saved the Americans by beating Kennedy in the fifth game.

Dineen thrashed Leever in the sixth, and Young performed the same operation on Phillippe in the seventh. In the eighth and deciding game, Dinen routed Phillippe and the Pirates and secured for Boston the world's championship. The score was 3 to 0. In this critical clash Dineen struck out Wagner with the bases congested.

Mathewson still holds the record of three straight shut-out triumphs over the Athletics in 1905. He beat Eddie Plank, 3 to 0, in the first game, and blanked Andy Coakley, 9 to 0, in the third game of the series; and shut out Redskin Bender, 2 to 0, in the fifth and deciding game.

Ed Walsh pitched Fielder Jones' Chicago White Sox to victory over the Cubs in 1906. Walsh won two games, including a 3 to 0 shut-out that took all the vim out of the Chancemen and made them easy picking in the final game.

"Babe" Adams, then practically an unknown, twirled three straight victories for Pittsburg over Detroit in 1909, winning the world's series for the Pirates. The youngster's performance was sensational in the extreme. He yielded only eighteen hits in the three conflicts, struck out eleven slugging Tigers, and walked only six batsmen.

Coombs Wins Three Straight.

Jack Coombs, of the Athletics, equaled Adams' record of winning three straight in the 1910 series, but he was lucky. Although he beat the Cubs every time he toiled against them, Chance's men slammed Coombs' offerings viciously. Nothing but superb support and the ability of the Mackmen to make plenty of runs enabled Coombs to survive three victories in succession.

That stoic redskin, Chief Bender, was the premier twirler of the 1911 series between the Giants and Athletics. He contributed two triumphs to the Athletic cause. He lost one game, though. He gave sixteen hits in the trio of encounters.

TESREAU WINS FOR GIANTS.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 27.—Big Jeff Tesreau helped the Giants put the National League championship in cold storage yesterday. McGraw's men defeated Brooklyn 4 to 2. Allen and Brown did the slab work for Brooklyn. Tesreau held the Dodgers to 4 hits.

SUTTON PLANS TO CHALLENGE WILLE HOPPE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—In spite of a long string of defeats within the last few years, during which time he has striven manfully to gain his lost 18.1 and 18.2 balk line billiard titles, George Sutton, the Chicago veteran, soon will be ready for another assault on William Hoppe, of New York, holder of both world's championship emblems.

No challenge has officially been made to Hoppe by Sutton, and George may have to wait until the champion has crossed cues with Slosson, Morningstar, Demarest, Yamada or possibly one of the French masters before getting his chance, but he will be taken on by Hoppe in due time, and when the two clash, Sutton intends to be in prime condition for the engagement. That he will need be, none familiar with the wondrous skill of Hoppe will deny.

Sutton Was Ill.

Though it may not be generally known, the real reason for Sutton's indifferent showing in the last few years has been ill health. From a world's champion and holder of the 18.2 balk line average record of 100 flat, the big fellow fell suddenly to the ranks of the "ex," or "would-be champs," where he has steadfastly remained, though a persistent challenger for the title and the highest honors of the game.

Sutton proudly points to 1907, when, before his system broke down and he became afflicted with a malady akin to diabetes, he beat Slosson, Hoppe, Morningstar, the late Jacob Schaefer and Hoppe again, all in one year. A "50" average at 18.2 was nothing for George in those days, though he has been repeatedly beaten when seeking the 18.2 crown with "25" or thereabouts.

Sutton, however, is again a well man. For more than three years he has adhered to a strict diet, and this, together with the benefits derived from drinking mineral water on his farm in Michigan, has completely restored his health. His nerves are strong, and his eyes and complexion clear, while he has regained his lost weight entirely.

This summer, while not working in the fields or doing chores around the barnyard, Sutton has been practicing hard across the lake. Those who have seen him in action declare he is going great guns, and that he is reeling off big runs and averages, just like the Sutton of old.

But George has one fault, and it is a bad one, that may keep him from the championship many more moons if it is not corrected. He insists on practicing alone prior to a big match, and it is not in the records where billiardist, boxer, tennis player or any other particular experts ever won a championship by employing such a training method. Sutton must heed the advice of his friends in the future and choose a real opponent, one his equal, such as a Calvin Demarest or George Slosson, for a series of games before he can hope to defeat a general like Hoppe in match play.

Showed Some Fine Form.

Sutton was almost well last winter, and as a result showed some fine flashes of form. In fact, he came within a very few points of winning the 18.1 title, then held by Ora Morningstar, at Pittsburg and lost, with an average of better than "15," which was going some in match play at the open style of game.

But you have got to give it to George for trying, and who knows that his persistency may not be rewarded during the coming championship season?

Much Wood-Sawing But No Real Action Before Kavanaugh's December Meeting

SOUTHERN TREATS DIXIE LEAGUE WITH DIPLOMACY

By O. B. Keeler.

ONE thing about that new Dixie League and its parents—you gotta give 'em credit.

They're going right ahead, sawing wood, and saying a good deal about it, too.

Well, you remember when the American League started — no? Doesn't make any difference. It did start. And there was a lot of what-Sherman-said-war-was.

But it sticks in our craw that the American League is very much with us to-day.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding which, this is not by way of being a declaration of a Declaration of War by the said Dixie League progenitors. Not by a long slide.

* * *

THE Dixie League is sawing its wood in a commendably peaceful and peaceable manner. It is in correspondence with the president and directors of the Southern Association of Baseball Clubs, and it is not threatening to tear up the earth or otherwise gum the situation in Southern baseball.

THE GEORGIAN has been supplied, very courteously, with a full set of information concerning recent and pending correspondence and negotiations between the new league and the old.

Some of the information can not be made public just now, but it may be said that the officers of the Dixie League are pursuing the plan of effecting an agreement with the Southern League by which continuous baseball may be played in six Southern League ball towns, the Dixie League being the sole baseball occupant of two more towns, viz, Shreveport and Little Rock.

The Southern League cities in which the application of this plan is sought are Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Memphis, Chattanooga and Nashville.

THE agreement, submitted by the Dixie League for the consideration of President Kavanaugh and the Southern League directors provides, briefly, that the new league be maintained in Class A, under the terms of the national agreement, whic hwill require the consent and approval of the Southern League in order to gain that of the national commission.

In short, it is the ambition of the new league to present baseball of a quality comparable to that now played in the Southern, with the ultimate aim of improving both by proper competition, increasing the interest throughout the season, and winding up with a post-season series for the Southern championship, conducted in all respects similarly to the world's series between the National and American Leagues.

THE latest development in the progress of events was the publication in a number of newspapers of a theory that the placing of another club in six of the eight Southern League cities would reduce the classification of the Southern League to Class B, by reason of a suppositious division of the population, on which the league ratings are based.

The Dixie League, through W. J. Bacon, its president, and H. N. Pharr, the secretary, has just mailed to the officers of the Southern League a reply to these assertions. They maintain that the question is not one of population, but of attendance, and seek to show that the attendance would be increased by the introduction of a new league, continuous baseball in six of the cities, and the added spur to the fans' interest.

This, they assert, was the result in the cities of the major leagues which support two big league clubs.

* * *

AN imposing lay-out of statistics also is called to the attention of the Southern Leaguers, adduced to show the huge increase in the population of the Southern League cities since the Southern League was organized, with the patriotic statement that no other section of the country can boast such a percentage in growth in the same time.

* * *

AND now about the attitude of the Southern League, on which so much depends.

The attitude, after a close scrutiny of the files in the case, appears to be one of courteous diplomacy.

That is to say, President Kavanaugh, the Southern League directors, and the club magnates are giving a pleasing imitation of Messrs. Talleyrand, Richelieu, et al.

They are diplomating, as it were.

* * *

THE down-to-the-minute status of the case, so far as we can get it, seems to be voiced in a letter from President Callaway, of the Atlanta club, who, in reply to a bulletin sent all the league magnates, suggests that the invitation be extended the promoters of the Dixie League to appear before the board of directors of the Southern Association and present their argument in favor of the agreement.

Mr. Kavanaugh has selected Mr. Calloway's reply as a good sample of the opinion entertained by the other magnates, and has informed the new league's officers that the next meeting of the board of directors will be about December 15.

And there the affair stands.

AS to editorial comment, we have this to offer:

The situation doesn't appear ripe for editorial comment.

Vardon and Ray Will Play at Brookhaven As Well as East Lake

Since the announcement that Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the famous British professional golfers, would play in Atlanta October 11, it has been arranged to keep the visitors here two days to give them the opportunity to play over the Brookhaven course of the Capital City Country Club.

The schedule now includes morning and afternoon rounds of 18 holes at the East Lake course of the Atlanta Athletic Club, the opponents of the British cracks being Stuart Maiden and Willie Mann, the club professionals. The following day morning and afternoon rounds are to be played at Brookhaven with the McKenzie brothers, professionals at that course.

The tour of the English players in this country is attracting much attention. At Buffalo, N. Y., yesterday they defeated John Harland and J. O. Wilson, local professionals, in two matches. The first game resulted: Vardon, 71; Ray, 72; Harland and Wilson, 77 each. The second match: Vardon and Ray, 71 each; Harland and Wilson, 76 each.

CARDS SECURE CATCHER.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—Manager Huggins, of the St. Louis Nationals, to-day announced that he had secured Catcher Pat O'Connor, of the Kansas City Association team. The St. Louis Americans had the first claim on O'Connor, but they waived in favor of the Philadelphia Americans.

ILLINI LOSES HARDINGER.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., Sept. 27.—Illini to-day is mourning the loss of Paul Hardinger, huge guard on last year's freshman team. Hardinger was fully convinced he would battle with his old teammates, but he changed his mind after a talk with his father and now Paul is on his way to join the Maroons.

Cubs and Sox Join In War on Scalpers

CHICAGO, ILL., Sept. 27.—Ticket scalpers will have trouble obtaining reserved seat tickets for the city series baseball games if the efforts of President Murphy and President Comiskey are successful. President Murphy, of the National League club, at whose grounds the first game will be played, announced that he would use every means to prevent tickets falling into the hands of the scalpers, and said that President Comiskey, of the White Sox, would use the same system he had last year.

"The record of every ticket going out of this office will be kept and the names of the purchasers will be filed," said President Murphy. "If any tickets fall into the hands of the scalpers we will know where they got them, and the names of the purchasers will be given to the press for publication."

The system used by President Comiskey is much the same.

As the first game is to be played at the Cub park, the third and fifth will also be played on the West Side, while the second, fourth and sixth will be played at the White Sox park. If a seventh game is necessary, the place of playing the final game will be decided by the flip of a coin.

Globe Girdlers Book Six Games on Coast

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Dan Long, the former manager of the San Francisco club, of the Pacific Coast League, who is en route to the world's series, stopped off here and arranged for six Western dates of the world's tour of the Chicago Americans and the New York Nationals. Representing Sacramento, Oakland and San Francisco clubs, he secured the following allotments:

November 12, at Sacramento; November 13, Oakland; November 14-15, at San Francisco; November 16 (morning), at Oakland; November 16 (afternoon), at San Francisco.

Long predicted that these six games, with the three to be played at Los Angeles, would [illegible] the tourists $20,000 toward expenses.

Ferns Hands Walters Lacing at Kenosha

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Billy Walters tried hard to tame Wildcat Ferns in their ten-round battle at Kenosha last night, but it wasn't in the make-up of the former naval station star to carry out his aims.

Ferns handed the local boy a neat little lacing, which Billy won't forget in a hurry. Though the loser, Walters put up a game battle and lost no admirers. In the fourth round Ferns opened an old cut over Walters' left eye and blood flowed freely thereafter. The flow of the claret somewhat blinded Billy. Ferns was too good for the Chicago battler and his punches carried with them the most effect.

Walters stood up gamely to his licking, never backing away an inch, and the entire battle was give and take on both sides. It appeared when the fighting began that Walters had trained himself stale and this he proved during the encounter.

BRAVES AND PHILLIES SPLIT.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The Phillies and the Braves split a double-header here yesterday. The second game was a slugging match, Boston winning 10 to 9. Although the Phillies got 13 hits off Tyler, he went the entire distance, while Seaton and Brennan divided slab duties for the Phillies.

CHAMP. IN CHICAGO TO-MORROW.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Willie Ritchie, world's champion lightweight pugilist, will be in Chicago to-morrow, according to a telegram received to-day. Ritchie, who is on his way from the coast, wired from Ogden that he would arrive in Chicago on the Overland Limited at 9:30 to-morrow morning.

Barnett-Griffith Win in Semi-Final For Hammond Cup

E. H. Barnett and W. H. Griffith worked their way into the semi-finals of the T. A. Hammond Trophy golf tournament at East Lake yesterday by defeating R. T. Jones, Jr., and C. G. Lippold, their opponents in the second round of the championship flight.

In the second flight the matches went to the finals, which will be played off by W. J. Tilson and W. R. Tichenor. This pair defeated, respectively, G. W. Adair and C. J. Hoditch, the club champion losing, 4 down and 2 to play, and Tichenor gaining his match by default after working his way up to it by defeating Will Markham in a desperate contest that went nineteen holes.

CALLAHAN WILL BE SORE BOSS IF JOHNSTON HITS

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Do you know what it cost the Milwaukee club to allow Russell Blackburne to join the White Sox? Or rather what they lost because the White Sox had an option? No? Well it cost them $15,000 and it was in good, hard cash. Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, was the man who was willing to separate himself from that amount of coin in order to make the ex-White Sox a member of his team.

One of the Dreyfuss scouts looked Blackburne over very carefully and he reported that Russell was the lad they were seeking for that Pirate infield, and $15,000 was offered; but it could not be accepted because the White Sox had an option. You can wager that Mrs. Alice Havenor, the owner of the Milwaukee club, was a most nervous woman on August 15. That was the last day upon which the Chicago team could exercise its option.

JIMMY JOHNSTON, the outfielder secured by the Cubs from the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast League, is a much discussed ball player these days. Johnston was also a former Southern League star.

If Johnston hits for the Cubs, Manager Callahan, of the Sox, will have many regrets and will probably be a pretty sore boss. But Callahan is certain that he will not. Callahan had the first crack at the coast wonder. Cal turned it down. Then President Murphy secured him in the draft. Callahan is quite certain the youngster will field all right. He isn't convinced that he will run the bases with the stars of the big show, despite his wonderful record in the Coast League. But he is positive that he will not hit.

NATURALLY a manager must have something to base that opinion upon and it was what Johnston failed to show last spring that caused him to reach that conclusion. Johnston looked a bad hitter then when he was getting a base hit. If he fails to stick with the Cubs, the Sox manager will be there with the "I told you so."

If Johnston comes through and does as well in the National League as he did in the Coast League, what Cal will say will never make its way into a newspaper. Certainly in none that circulate through the mails. You can wager he will be a sorely disappointed man.

ATHENIANS RUN SIGNALS, WITH NO SCRIMMAGES

No Candidates Will Be Awarded Jobs Until Actual Showing Next Week.

ATHENS, GA., Sept. 27.—Signal practice, with some real plays; more punting and goal kicking were the features of yesterday's practice. Forward passing still is receiving considerable attention and it is now an avowed policy of Cunningham to make this play a major factor in the battles of the Red and Black this fall. McWhorter is one of the surest and best passers in the South, and it now remains to develop the ends in receiving his swift shoots.

Nothing towards picking the team has been done so far and not until after the fierce scrimmage of next week will any position be allotted. There are from two to four good men candidates for practically every place on the team, and nothing but actual work will decide who draws the assignment. Captain McWhorter at half and Henderson at tackle are the only sure guesses of the squad.

A WIRE from Paddock yesterday announced his arrival for today and he will be immediately sent in at quarter the first afternoon out. He is acquainted with the style of play used by Cunningham, has been keeping in training all summer and only has the signals and plays to learn in order to be ready for a game.

McLellan, who played fullback on the 1910 team and has been connected with the Juvenile State at Center, has decided to re-enter college, and if he does his presence will boost the chances of the Red and Black considerably. He is a big, rangy fellow of 180 pounds and his past experience will make him a handy addition to the squad. He probably will be on the field early next week.

MCKINNON, freshman center of last year, seems to be the find so far in the search that is being made for an effective punter. "Mack" was given the task of booting 'em down the field yesterday and had spiral after spiral sailing at a clip that excelled anything yet seen on Sanford Field. The hole that this youngster might plug at center is being handled by Delapierriere, so in the regular line-up he has been sent to end and on receiving forward passes has shown that he knows how to hug the horsehide.

Martin, halfback on the Lehigh eleven of 1911, has entered the university, but is not eligible to play this year. He will be next year if he remains in college. Henry Collier, the premier Tech hurler of a few seasons past, also has matriculated and will do service on the mound after his second year in college.

KETCHEL WINS DECISION.

DENVER, Sept. 27.—Steve Ketchel, of Chicago, was given the decision over Stanley Yoakum, of East Las Vegas, N. Mex., here last night at the end of ten rounds of fierce fighting. The decision was popular.

Why Is Thaw Made a Hero in New Hampshire---as He Was in Canada?

The Answer Is Simple: People Do Not Like White Slavers and Vile Debauches of the Stanford White Type. And They Do Not Like the Friends of Stanford White That Are Now Hounding Thaw.

(Copyright, 1913.)

A newspaper filled with sympathy for the late Stanford White asks the following question:

"Is Thaw a hero in New Hampshire as he was in Canada because he is notorious, or because he is rich, or because there is genuine popular sympathy for him, or is his popularity due to the fact that he and his money are making a joke of law and justice?"

Here is the answer:

Thaw is made a hero in New Hampshire, he is applauded by good citizens, not so much because of his own qualities, Heaven knows, as BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WANT TO SEE JUSTICE DONE TO HIM AT LAST.

The citizens of the country know that he has been kept in the insane asylum—although he is not insane—through the efforts of the friends of Stanford White, who was about the vilest product of degradation that could possibly be conceived.

The people know that Thaw was declared insane by a jury for the simple reason that the jury would not condemn him for having killed such a creature as Stanford White. And the newspaper that we quote probably knows that also.

The people know that Thaw, now, at least, is not insane. They know that so far from being helped by his millions—or rather by the millions of his mother—the money actually hinders him. If he were an ordinary citizen, without wealth, and if Stanford White, the vile white slaver, had fewer powerful friends, THAW WOULD HAVE BEEN FREE LONG AGO.

The people like fair play in New Hampshire, in New York, and in every State in the Union.

That is why in every State, if the matter were left to a public vote, Thaw would be set free.

This newspaper considers the case AS IT STANDS TO-DAY.

Thaw was declared insane by a jury that would not vote to execute him for having killed Stanford White.

The law says that a man who commits a crime and is declared insane shall be kept locked up unless his sanity returns. As soon as he is sane he is to be set free.

Only the friends of Stanford White, a few newspapers that sympathize with White, and some specialists, especially paid, declare that Thaw is insane.

He is at least as sane as 75 per cent of the population. And he is not only sane, but has shown remarkable intelligence in his determined efforts to obtain freedom, in his dealings with tricky lawyers, and in his answers to judicial questions.

Inasmuch as Thaw is, or was, detained by New York State as an insane man, and inasmuch as his conduct during his incarceration and since he fled from the asylum would clearly indicate that he is sane, justice demands that he be set free—as the law provides.

Justice does NOT demand that he be returned to life imprisonment TO OBLIGE THE FRIENDS, JOURNALISTIC AND OTHERWISE, OF THE DEGRADED BRUTE WHOM HE KILLED.

Fortunately, Thaw is in the hands of a Federal judge. He is not at the mercy of any court especially chosen to send him back to the insane asylum. He is not at the mercy of the distinguished legal gentlemen who make a special point of hounding him—for excellent pay, no doubt.

He will have his day in court, and will probably not be sent back to life imprisonment in an insane asylum for having killed Stanford White, whose death certainly saved from shame, degradation and horror many helpless girls.

No civilized human being would plead the unwritten law, or put the right of an individual taking justice into his own hands above the law.

And any sane man who commits a murder for whatever reason should be punished for murder. Yet, if ever there was a killing that was justified, it was the killing of Stanford White, AND HIS MOST INTIMATE FRIENDS KNOW THAT THAT IS SO.

They know that his pastime was the pursuit and the destruction of unfortunate women. They know that he spent his money and his time in the committing of crime compared with which murder committed in anger is as nothing.

It is not a good, healthy or wise thing to have a man who has committed murder, such as Thaw, lionized, applauded and made much of. But the fault is with the degenerate associates and admirers of Stanford White who viciously pursue Thaw and create public sympathy for him.

And the fault is with the machinery of justice that in one or two instances at least has seemed afraid to deal justly with Thaw.

Far better let the man go in a proper and orderly manner, taking with him the sympathy and the thanks of those who best understood the character and the crimes of Stanford White.

Lock him up again in Matteawan, and you will not settle the question or dispose of it.

The people in New Hampshire, as in Canada, make a hero of Thaw because they do not like Stanford White, and because they do not like the idea that the associates, friends and defenders of that vile degenerate have influence enough to deprive a man of his liberty when the law says that being sane he should be set free.

Dr. Parkhurst Writes on Immortality

Many Hope Death Is End of All, but Deep Thinkers Believe This Is Only the Beginning of a Future and Better Life.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

HOWEVER occupied people may be with the affairs of this life, there are few, if any, who do not sometimes throw their thoughts forward toward a possible life to come. It is safe to say that there is more of this forecasting of another world than has outward expression given to it.

A few are hoping that there is nothing more for them after death, being more than satisfied with what they have had already. Some simply brood over the possibilities of immortality wonderingly. The most, by far the most, are trusting that the few years we pass here are nothing more than the beginning of life, its vestibule, feeling that conditions, as they exist now require something additional in order to their explanations and justification.

It is probable that there is less general belief in immortality than there was fifty years ago. When a boy, as I remember it, a man who expressed doubt in the doctrine was regarded as queer, as a mental and moral defective. Nothing, so far as appears, has in the meantime been discovered to invalidate the doctrine, and the change that has transpired in men's opinions is considerably due to the attitude of the scientists.

Scientists Have Failed to Prove We Are Immortal.

The scientists have not discovered that we are NOT immortal, but have simply failed to discover that we ARE immortal; and there is no reason why they should not have failed, for the mind, the immortal part of us, if there be any immortal part, is not a matter that scientists have any concern with, or any special qualification or equipment for investigating.

A man who knows one thing with considerable thoroughness is liable to imagine that large value therefore attaches to his opinion upon other matters, however distinct they may be from the particular subject upon which he is specially informed.

That states the precise condition of mind of certain investigators who have accomplished distinguished results in their study of matter, and who therefore consider that they are authorities upon questions of mind, spirit and immortality. Which is as unreasoning as for a mathematical genius to claim that because he is an adept in questions of quantity his opinion should therefore carry in problems of art.

What has just been said is stated, only in different words, by one of the most distinguished scientists of our generation, Sir Oliver Lodge, a man of such eminence as to have been elected to the presidency of the British Association, a body which may be defined as the organized scientific intelligence of the British Empire.

Sir Oliver, whose accomplishments in physics and chemistry have won for him such preferment, is sufficiently broad in his appreciations to realize that however far he may have carried his chemical researches, he has not thereby been brought across the frontier of the territory of mind and consciousness; that the principles and methods applicable to the study of matter do not apply to questions of soul and religion, so that the negative attitude which a scientist, as such, may occupy as toward soul, God and immortality has no bearing pro or contra upon the question of the existence of the soul, of God and of immortality.

All of this the president of the British Association has recently stated frankly and developed in detail in his presidential address delivered before that body.

Address Is Practically a Rebuke to His Colleagues.

The address is practically a rebuke to some of his colleagues for failing to realize that mind is not matter, and that so essential is the difference between them that the pursuit of scientific methods of inquiry will not carry them into the region of mind, and that for them to deny the existence of a world above matter, because they have been able to achieve so much in the world that is within matter without discovering in it a soul or a God, is a bare presumption and the exercise of intellectual arrogance.

Such a deliverance from so great an authority is a serious matter, and I wish the readers of this newspaper would give earnest attention to the contents of this article, for it has been written with a view to rebuking and correcting the careless and thoughtless thinking, of which there is so much, even among intelligent people, and that, too, in regard to questions that are of the utmost moment.

It would not be fair to the truth nor to Sir Oliver Lodge to close this article without adding that while he has not arrived at his convictions, regarding things which eye hath not seen, by the pursuit of scientific methods, he is nevertheless, and on other grounds, a firm believer in the great invisible world and in the God who is enthroned in it, as is evidenced by the two subjoined quotations from his superb address:

"It is my function to remind you and myself that our studies do not exhaust the universe, and that if we dogmatize in a negative direction, and say that we can reduce everything to physics and chemistry, we gibbet ourselves as ludicrously narrow pedants, and are falling far short of the richness and fullness of our human birthright.

"How far preferable is the reverent attitude of the Eastern poet:

"'The world with eyes bent upon Thy feet stands in awe with all its silent stars.'

"We are deaf and blind, therefore, to the imminent grandeur around us unless we have insight enough to appreciate the whole, and to recognize in the woven fabric of existence, flowing steadily from the loom in an infinite progress toward perfection, the ever-growing garment of a transcendent God."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Misfortunes

Are You Not Better for Them? If Not, You Have Failed to Learn Life's Lesson in Self-Development.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1913.)

YOU who complain bitterly of your troubles and sorrows turn your gaze inward for a time and see what these experiences have done for you.

Are you not stronger in soul, braver in mind, and more self-reliant because of your misfortunes?

Have you not a deeper understanding of human nature, and a larger sympathy for your fellowmen through having known trouble?

If you ask yourself these questions, and if you answer in the negative then rest assured more trouble will be sent you.

Sorrows Will Come Until You Learn Sympathy and Compassion.

Just as the scholar who has not learned his lessons at school is given the same lessons over and over again, so will you be given sorrow after sorrow and trouble after trouble, until you learn the great lesson of sympathy and compassion.

First of all in thinking of your misfortunes, remember you have brought them on yourself. Not in this life, perhaps, but in former lives. We have all lived many lives; and by our thoughts and deeds and desires we have fashioned our bodies and our circumstances.

If in other lives you were wasteful and selfish and improvident and idle, you come into this life poor and without friends or influence.

It is simply your life lesson of self-development given you again to learn. Industry, self-control, economy, are the next lessons.

By patient persistence you will learn them all; and then independence and usefulness and happiness will be yours.

If you did not appreciate love and affection in your last incarnation you will be deprived of these blessings for a time in this life; but if you give freely, even though you do not receive, and if you develop every loving impulse, and ask for no return, and if you refuse to think of your misfortunes, and persist in thinking of your great privilege in being allowed to do for others, then love and affection shall come to you eventually.

Remember the words of the great Master, Christ:

"I came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

Of all His sayings, this is one of the greatest and one least quoted by His followers.

How Few of Us Minister as We Might to Others.

We all seem to feel resentment that we are not ministered unto continually.

And how few of us minister as we might to others.

THREE FRIENDS.

Of all the blessings which my life has known,
I value most, and most praise God for three—
Want, Loneliness and Pain, those comrades true,
Who masqueraded in the garb of foes
For many a year, and filled my heart with dread.
Yet fickle joys, like false, pretentious friends,
Have proved less worthy than this trio. First,
Want taught me labor, led me up the steep
And toilsome paths to hills of pure delight,
Trod only by the feet that know fatigue,
And yet press on until the heights appear.
Then Loneliness and hunger of the heart
Sent me upreaching to the realms of space,
'Till all the silences grew eloquent,
And all their loving forces hailed me friend.
Last, Pain taught prayer; placed in my hand the staff
Of close communion with the over-soul,
That I might lean upon it to the end,
And find myself made strong for any strife.
And then these three who had pursued my steps
Like stern, relentless foes, year after year,
Unmasked, and turned their faces full on me,
And lo! they were divinely beautiful,
For through them shone the lustrous eyes of Love.

:-: The Wail of the Freaks :-:

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

An expression of opinion given after learning that Secretary of State Bryan was going out for two weeks with a tent show, the news being furnished by the press agent.

THE Armless Wonder gnashed his teeth and clenched his feet in rage.
"I'm through with art for good," he yelled. "I'm gonna quit the stage!
I used to headline every bill, and have my name of nights
Spelt out above the theater in big electric lights.
The Yodling Goat, the Thinking Pig, the Juggling Japanee,
And even the Eight-Legged Cow all stood aside for me.
But look at this here note I got—It makes me fairly ill—
'This week the Old Doc's Talking Act will lead you on the bill!'"

"NOW ain't that just the fiercest stuff?" the Fair Circassian cried.
"When I was told my date was killed I nearly like to died.
I've been the hit in every show from Coney to Fort Lee;
Not even the Three-Headed Man had anything on me.
But that is always just the way: You think you're goin' strong,
And spend your money free an' then some new freak comes along.
I never seen the Old Doc work, but he has put me wise
To one best bet in this perfesh: 'It pays to advertise.'"

"I'SPOSE," said the Contortionist, with a despairing sob,
"It's all because the President has gave this guy a job.
Them Socialists has got it right; it's unfair competition
For us poor freaks to play against a Cabinet position.
But still this Doc has got some act. Of course, it has its faults,
But he's a wonder when it comes to throwing somersaults.
And on the stage he's worked on most, when he has got in trouble,
And has to get out good and quick, he always does 'em double."

"CUT out the knocks," the Fat Man said; "choke off the hammer songs,
An' let a guy that's got the goods butt in where he belongs.
When tryin' to be President he couldn't land his stall,
But in this circus-midway game he's got it on us all.
I've seen him give three shows a day an' turn up fresh and bright
To sit in with the treasurer and count the house at night.
If Kipling still was on his job I'll bet the ink he'd fling
In writin' out a song like this that you mutts ought to sing:

"Oh, the Doc! Doc! Doc!
He has chased us off the block,
But we got to give it to him, so let's put our jools in hock;
All he does is stands and hollers,
But he gathers in the dollars,
He's a wiser guy than we are, is the Doc."
