Booklovers' Bulletin

We know our big family of Booklovers are anxious, and want news of the campaign.

Since the middle of last week the Campaign Editor and his force have been busy receiving, stamping and stacking away answers. As the last of the answers were in by 10 a. m. Tuesday, a meeting of the Judges was called and Hon. M. L. Brittain, Major R. J. Guinn and Howard S. Cole responded and organized by electing Hon. M. L. Brittain chairman. After explaining to them the system of special stamping each set of answers as they were received, and examining those so stamped, it was decided to add one more safeguard to the sets, and it was ordered that all sets be listed and renumbered, and The Journal's private seal stamped over the number. Then the original stamp with which all the sets were stamped was destroyed in the presence of the Judges. The listing and renumbering of the sets will take several days, and then the Judges will have another meeting, examine the work, and the Chairman will receive a duplicate list of all contestants' names and addresses, with their numbers. This will be a guarantee to the contestants that no set of answers can be slipped in or counted in any way after the checking of answers has begun. As soon as this work is completed and the checking is started, we will publish two pictures a day with the correct titles. Watch The Journal for particulars, as we will keep you posted right along.

Judge Kimsey May Oppose Judge Jones in Next Primary.

Judge J. J. Kimsey, of Cornelia, has ust paid a visit to Atlanta to meet his friends in the general assembly. While he was here it was rumored that he would very probably be a candidate to succeed Judge J. B. Jones as judge of the northeastern circuit.

Judge Kimsey formerly presided over this circuit, in which he has a large following. He has made no definite announcement as to his intentions, but it is believed that he will again seek the office. Judge Jones will, it is said, most probably be a candidate for re-election.

Market in New York Closed 2 Points Up to 5 Points Off From Previous Close

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, July 25 .- As today's weather map and private advices tended to confirm rumore about rains in the western belt, including Texas, cotton opened barely steady with prices to 11 points lower. With a low barometer over Arkansas and the west, further rains were expected but as the market was considerably oversold, a later covering movement advanced prices 3 to 5 points above the opening level. The market continued steady on trade buying and a demand for August from Liverpool interests, but turned weak again towards noon on the official forecast of further showers in the southwest and detailed reports of rain, reacting back to about opening levers. A better tone developed in the early afternoon, New crops recovered about all the early loss on demand from shorts, influenced by belief that Texas rains had been insufficient.

Aside from two loads of choice Tennessee helfers, the run was badly mixed in quality and condition. These two londs were bought at the top fleure of the week by the Atlanta packer. The market has ranged reasonably strong on the better kinds, which were scarce. Plain cattle were more plentful, and prices varied, owing to quality and condition. A big percentage of the cattle were grassy and only about half fat: they were, therefore, mean and undestrable as killers. Prices ranged irregular and lower.

Tennessee lambs continue to come freely. Barely enough bogs coming to supply demand.

Speed the Vital Statistics Bill to Prompt Passage.

The bill providing an appropriation of five thousand dollars for the establishment of a State bureau of vital statistics is now before the House committee. on hygiene and sanitation. If promptly and favorably reported, it will doubtless become a law at the present session of the Legislature, thus solving one of the most urgent and far-reaching problems with which the people of Georgia are confronted. It is especially important, therefore, that the committee do its part in speeding this useful measure on the way to passage.

It is scarcely necessary to remind any thoughtful group of men, either in the Legislature or among citizens at large, of the supreme need and value of a system of vital statistics in conserving the interests of public health. All informed persons, whether physicians or laymen, know that without an adequate and dependable record of births, deaths and the causes of deaths, little or no progress can be made in campaigns against disease. If the funds now appropriated to the State Board of Health and those appropriated to kindred agencies by individual cities and counties are to yield a due return, there must be a system of vital statistics in the light of which they may be intelligently and efficiently spent. It is thus to the interest of every citizen and every home, of every county and town, especially those of rural districts, that the vital statistics bill be passed.

There is still another consideration which demands the prompt enactment of this measure. It is this: Georgia now has virtually no place or mention in the health reports compiled and issued by the federal census bureau. The census bureau collects such statistics from only those States in which there is a satisfactory system for the registration of vital statistics; and necessarily so. The only available records of this kind in Georgia are from the cities of Savannah and Atlanta. Thus it is that in those reports of the United States which deal with health records and conditions and which are read as authoritative throughout the nation and throughout the world Georgia is now conspicuous by her utter

The result of this is inevitably damaging to the State's reputation and to its material progress, for, among the first questions asked by a prospective home seeker or investor is a question of health and sanitation. No man wants to live in a community whose health conditions are doubtful or unknown and few men will risk an investment there. How then can Georgia expect to get her due share of the thrifty settlers and the millions of capital that are trending Southward, when she has no official standing whatsoever in the government health records to which people everywhere turn for guidance and information? Georgians know that they have a naturally healthful State but the important thing is that the world shall know this.

Hence from the standpoint of economic interests as well as health interests, it is imperative that a State bureau of vital statistics be estrblished with the least possible delay. A bill to this end has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Elkins and in the House by Representative Allen, of Jackson. It is a model bill, meeting the requirements of the census bureau and the government health authorities. It calls for an appropriation of only five thousand dollars, an amount really trivial compared with the far-reaching service and value it will render.

This bill will place Georgia on the health map of the nation. It will lead eventually to the saving of thousands of thousands of lives and incalculable stores of potential wealth. It is a bill in the interest of economy, of progress, of humanity-one of the most important bills, indeed, that has ever been before the Legislature.

The committee on hygiene and sanitation should do everything within its power to expedite the passage of this vital measure.

Interurban Trolley Lines.

The Chamber of Commerce did well to create some months ago a special committee on interurban railways. Atlanta's future growth depends largely on the development of her outlying territory and there are few surer means to that end than the establishment of well-considered trolley lines. The city's present connections with Decatur, College Park, Marietta and other thriving towns are an invaluable asset not only to Atlanta and to each of these terminal points but also to the intervening

The time is soon coming, if, indeed, it is not at hand when additional lines and longer lines can be profitably operated. The city should be prepared to encourage such enterprises, for, if they are undertaken with foresight and are carried to successful completion, they will prove vital factors in municipal progress. In this connection the Chamber of Commerce committee can render substantial service; in fact, it is already doing so. It is gathering statistics concerning interurban railways in Indiana and other middle-western States. The information thus secured will be very helpful as a basis of considerations and plans for projects of the same kind in this part of Georgia.

The committee is particularly interested just now in the proposed construction of an interurban electric line from Anderson, S. C., to Atlanta. This enterprise is said to have the support of large and substantial interests. If it can be consummated, it will be a distinctive advantage to Atlanta and to all the territory traversed. Certainly, it merits the investigation the committee is giving it.

Such lines, besides quickening and extending the commerce of the towns and cities they connect, add greatly to the value of farm lands. They promote agricultural progress, that basic element in the upbuilding of Southern communities. They open new lines of trade and afford new outlets for the products of the soil. Within the next few decades, we shall hear much of interurban lines in the South. Atlanta does well to take the lead in this fruitful field of development.

The Recrudescence of the Turk.

The re-investment of Adrianople by the Turks precipitates the gravest issue that European diplomacy has yet faced in the Balkan conflict. If the boundary lines agreed upon at the London conference after long and delicate negotiations are to be wiped out, the Powers will find themselves again entangled in all the differences that vexed them before that conference and at the same time they will be burdened with the divers new problems which the war among the Allies has developed. The Turkish situation was difficult enough within itself; if it revived and still further complicated at this juncture, it will become indeed perilous.

There is reason to suspect, however, that Turkey entertains no serious hopes of holding the territory which she has re-occupied. To do so would be open defiance of the mandate of concerted Europe. Her ultimate purpose in marching back across the land which has been allotted to Bulgaria and in seizing its chief stronghold is, as one observer describes it, "a try in diplomacy rather than in war." By this move, Turkey counts upon making a better territorial bargain, after Bulgaria's strength has been broken, than she was able to drive at the London conference. Though she may not be permitted to retain Adrianople, her possession of that city will lend color to her claims for more land than she has heretofore been allowed.

Upon the ability of the larger Powers to reach an agreement as to the policy they shall follow in this regard, depends very largely their future peace. It has been suggested that Russia be empowered to force Turkey to an observance of the original terms of her peace treaty. If Austria concurs in such a plan it will be quietly and speedily effected; if not, then the bars to a widespread w ... will be down.

A Plea Worth Heeding.

The Journal takes pleasure in reproducing elsewhere on this page a particularly virile and convincing editorial from Editor Thomas W. Loyless, of the Augusta Chronicle, on the injustice and inhumanity of the Georgia law which gives a mother not even a secondary right to the custody of her children except in cases where the father is dead or in very unusual circumstances.

Mr. Loyless presents the issue with such cogency that it is not now necessary to comment further than to say that every member of the Legislature should read and ponder this seasonable editorial.

THE NEW RURAL SCHOOL

IV .- A STUDY OF CORN. BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Conservative, full-grown farmers who have sneered at book farmers have been taught by the Boys' Corn clubs that it pays to mix a little knowledge in with the dirt when growing corn-that it increases the yield for one acre from, say, twenty bushels to two hundred and twenty. Now. even the most conservative farmer, even one whose conservatism is so grounded in kindred ignorance that he is unable to read and write, does know how to add and subtract. He does know the difference between twenty bushels and forty bushels and eighty bushels of corn to the acre. It has long been held to be desirable to teach farmers' children how to "read and write and cipher." why not also teach them how to grow corn? And why not do it at the same time they are learning these other things?

In the three preceding articles on the experimental rural school at Rock Hill, S. C., it has been shown how reading and writing and numbers are taught as an incident to practical everyday affairs, playing and gardening and cooking. To show how well done is the main work, the gardening, the teaching of the science of agriculture, it is better to take a single plant-corn-and see what the new rural school did with it. For this study of corn we will take the school in its second year, when its pupils were more in number, when they were actually farm children, brought in every day by a wagon from their homes, and taken back in the same way at night. There will be more of this second year's work in later articles. For the present, to the study of corn:

It began in the winter, began with a study of the birthplace and the home of the corn-the soil. We children felt the soil and when the teacher asked us about it, we said it was moist. Then she asked us how much water there was in it. That was a puzzler for a moment, but one of us had the wit to suggest weighing it wet and then drying it out and weighing it again. We took three pounds, and when we had thoroughly dried it, it weighed but two and threefourths of a pound. And the very smallest and youngest of us knew that a quarter of a pound of water had been driven out. The teacher told us it had evaporated, and that was a good, new word. . . .

Then she showed us something else. She put the same dried dirt in an iron vessel and set it on the stove and let it get red-hot. When it was cold again we weighed it, and we saw it had lost some more weight. Was that water, too? No, the water had all gone before. So the teacher told us about humus, that it was "organic matter" in the soil, tiny bits of leaves and sticks, and so on. We guessed that it was the humus that had been burned out of the soil, and we now knew that the soil in our garden had water in it and organic matter in it. But there was more.

The teacher asked us to look closely and we saw sand. How like little rocks the grains of sand are! How were the little rocks made? We rub two rocks together over a piece of white paper and we see-sand is made by rubbing rocks. Do we think this could happen naturally? Rocks rolling down hill, rocks rolling on the bottom of a stream, would be rubbed. We put some stones into a pickle jar, and pour in water. It was almost clear in the jar. And then we shook the bottle hard, and let it settle. Which falls first? Silt, sand or gravel? Then we went to the mouth of a little steam just after a rain and there we found silt, then sand, then gravel, then the stones, just as in the bottle. It was lots of fun, and we learned a great _. . .

Then we took four lamp chimneys and fastened them in a frame, and tied netting under the bottom of each. Unto one we put garden soil, into another sand, another clay and into the last one gravel. We poured in water and watched which one held it longest. And then we did the same thing with new soils, and put the ends in water to see which would soak it up the quickest. Now, we already knew that corn must have water, and must have it all the time in the soil, and in this way we learned all about what too much sand or too much clay would do for our garden.

We put grains of corn between damp sheets of blotting paper, and put some in a warm and some in a cold place. We knew it was a joke when the teacher told us to put some grains in damp sawdust and some in dry sawdust to see which would come up first, for we knew that in the dry it never would. We put some grains in a tin can filled with soil that had holes punched in the bottom, and some in a can of soil without any holes. We put some grains in damp paper in the air and some in a tight box.

The grains of corn that were cold, that were dry, that were too much soaked in the can without holes. that had no air, all did not sprout-"germinate" the teacher taught us to say. But those that had moisture, and heat, and air, and not too much moisture, all began to grow. We took some ears of corn and tested them for seed-planting five grains from each ear and numbering the ear so that we could see what ears would give the best seed. We will remember that we must do this whenever we plant corn, so as to get the best seed.

. . . And when the little grains we are watching begin to grow! What fun it is to mark the tip of the root and the tip of the stalk with a tiny pen-and-ink mark and then to see next morning how both have grown. As the grains that were in the blotting paper grew we drew pictures each day, showing the bursting grain, the tiny root and stalk, the radicle and plumule.

Spring came and we began to think of our corn in the garden. We must plant far enough apart so as to give our corn air and sun, but we don't have to plant as far apart as on the farm because we will cultivate our corn by hand and not with mules. We mark off the hills one and a half 1 et apart and make them in rows two feet apart. We are going to put five grains in each hill, for it is easier to pull up a stalk than to replant. And then, how many hills in your row? And how many grains will it take?

. . . When our corn is about six inches high we give it some nitrate of soda fertilizer, for corn must have food and this kind of food is not in our soil. We find out all about when to cultivate the corn, and how to keep a dust mulch on top of the ground to keep the under part of the soil from drying out too quickly, and many, many tnings.

We have enemies. Smut appears. We burn the infected stalk to keep it from spreading. Weeds and grass come up. We study all the different kinds of weeds and find out how many, many seed they have and how necessary it is to dig them up by the roots and get rid of them altogether. We know now that We must cultivate our corn for three reasons-to loosen the soil so that the corn can get its food and drink, to keep a dust mulch so that the water will not all evaporate, and to kill the weeds and grass that otherwise would steal the food and water from our corn. . . .

Then we find that weeds are of some good after all. They make a lazy farmer cultivate his corn when if there were no weeds he might not take the trouble to do it just for the sake of making a dust mulch. . . .

Our corn is in bloom. It has flowers. We find out that the tassel is one part of the flower and that the silk is another part, and that without both parts there will be no corn. There is yellow dust on the tassel, pollen, the teachers tells us. And a grain of that must fall on every single tiny silk to make a single grain of corn.

A Monstrously Cruel Georgia Law That Should Not Stand A Day Unrepealed

(Augusta Chronicle.)

Not so very long ago, the public stood aghast when Senator Ben Tillman's son made an aggressive effort to legally take from their natural mother his and her young children, girls of a tender age; it being the contention that, under the laws of South Carolina, the father was their natural guardian and the mother had no right to her own children, even though there was no charge, nor even insinuation, that she was unfit to

The whole country rose up in arms against such a law, and severely condemned the effort to separate this mother from her children; the very prominence of the families making it a causus celebre in the courts of that state, The Chronicle, as much as any other newspaper, took the side of the mother; and we were gratified, in common with the public generally, when the court finally ddi the best it could under this law and permitted both mother and father to have the care of their children for about an equal period of each year.

But Augusta has, just recently, furnished a similar case; similar, at least, in the fact that two young girl children have been taken from their mother-against whom there are no charges-under the guise of law; in fact, with the clear sanction of law; or, it might even be said, under the distinct command of the law, the reviewing judge clearly intimating that he was not in sympathy with such a law and that, personally, he would like to have an opportunity to rule otherwise.

Far be it from us to attempt to interfere in a domestic trouble of this or any other character-and what we have to say on the subject is entirely impersonal, and does not even attempt to discuss the merits of this particular case-but our views on this subject have not changed in the least since the famous Tillman case was before the public; nor have the public's views changed.

We would speak not so much of this case, or of this particular mother and father, but of future cases of like character and of other mothers and fathers who may agree to disagree-with the right given, by law, to the man to snatch the children from their mother's breast.

Verily, as Judge Hammond pointedly intimated, such a law is a relic of barbarism; for, as he says, while some generations ago we took away from the man the right to nold his wife as a slave, a chattel, and to beat and even murder her at will, we still left , Old Grant Rice, exhuming the dope on slang across | her without a vested right in the children which she brought into the world and nursed at her breast. It is simply unthinkable; and no such law should be permitted to remain on the statute books of any civilized state-certanily not the Empire State of the South-

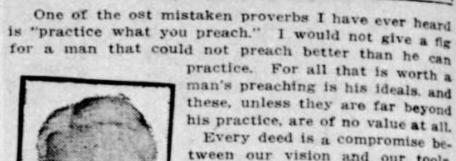

Listen to this from the reviewing judge, as defining Georgia's attitude, her deliberate policy, toward the mothers of this state, where a question of the possession of their own children is concerned-and shudder:

"The court expressly refrains from any reference to the natural rights of the mother who conceived and bore these children, who nursed them at her breast and whose heart and soul is wrapped up in them. The court refrains from discussing these natural rights because they are not legal rights-in law they do not exist. Certiorari dismissed."

The Georgia legislature has barely three weeks longer to remain in session, but, surely, it can spare a few hours, or a few days, of this time to the passage of a bill which will, in a measure at least, recognize the natural rights of mothers in this state. Were we a member of that august body we couldn't sleep-in view of all the facts that have recently come to light concerning this present cruel law-until we had made an effort to correct this injustice. We may not yet be ready to give to women the vote in Georgia, but we should at least give them an equal right with the father to the possession of their children; in fact, the sensible thing, the right thing, the humane thing, would be to put the burden of proof. always upon the father where he would separate mother from child, the burden of proof to show that the mother is grossly unfit and incapable of caring for her own children-and the place for such a mother is in an institution. All of which we offer without the slightest personal bias in the particular case under discussion-indeed, with much reluctance to discuss it at all-but solely is the hope of arousing the public conscience to strike from the statute books of Georgia a monstrously cruel, wicked, worm-eaten law, which makes of motherhood a mere incident and deprives it of all of its sacred rights and privileges.

The Prevailing Note In Retailing

In a recent JOURNAL advertisement we saw the following sentence:

"Not only is our merchandise of the very highest quality, but our store service is studiously polite, efficient and obliging."

This kind of retailing is what the public has a right to expect, and does expect. It is the kind of retailing that Atlanta's progressive merchants are offering to their patrons and telling them about in the columns of THE JOURNAL.

When one goes shopping in these days of progressive retailing, it is best to start out fortified with all of the available information it is possible to secure.

A careful reading of JOURNAL advertising columns from day to day, not only saves much time and worry, but shows one where one may secure highly satisfactory service and attention.

LONDONTOWN

The marriage of the German emperor's daughter recalls an amusing little incident which happened on the occasion of the first wedding the kaiser ever attended. This was the wedding of King Edward and Queen Alexandrathen, of course, prince and princess of Wales-in 1863, when the future kaiser was a little boy of four. A very troublesome boy he was, too-a sort of Royal Figidity Phil; and for this reason he was placed at the ceremony between his two uncles, the *dukes of Cambridge and Edinburgh, who had been told off to keep him in order. The service was a very long one, and little Wilhelm began to fidget, whereupon he received sundry nudges and whispered admonitions from his uncles. Theroughly exasperated, the naughty little boy suddenly knelt down, and bit the calves of both his uncles' legs to such purpose that they were hard put to it not to cry out with the pain and suddenness of the attack.

All sorts of stories are going the rounds of the clubs concerning the forthcoming Versailles ball. One is to the effect that several of the most likely men to take part in the quadrilles absolutely refuse, in spite of the almost tearful entreaties of their lady friends to shave their moustaches off for the occasion. The moutache does not go well with a powdered wig, and would be a great chronological error.

There has been a great slump in the profits of the gaming houses that are still opening London. Until the police took action, running a gambling den was a gold mine to the proprietor, but the activity of Scotland Yard has, it is thought, frightened away most of the gamblers and "pigeons" who were anxious to have a flutter. Visitors to London who may be staying at West End hotels should be chary about making new acquaintances, as the "runners" of gambling-house proprietors are known to be on the look out for possible dupes.

News has reached London to the effect that the state of health of the czarina has given rise to happy expectations in the royal circle.

Finn Winner In His Fight Against Club

Mike Wanted New Faces to Keep in Pennant Fight and Owners Balked at Spending Coin-Finn Is to Stick

Sir Michael Finn, pilot of the Mo. bile ball club, and the directors and owners of the club have just conclud. ed a most stormy little interview in which Mike finally won out. The trouble started some days ago and for a time it looked as if it would result in Finn being beheaded, but the directors finally awoke to the fact that he is a bit too valuable and decided to hold to him. And a wiser move could not have been made.

The trouble between Finn and the owners of the club is said to have arisen through the fact that the directors would not purchase a few needed players for the Irishman. Mike fully realized that injuries and sickness had badly crippled his bunch and that new faces would be needed to keep the club up in the pennant race and so he went right after them. And when he failed to get hold of them the trouble came There is no better manager in the Southern league than this same Michael Finn and to let him out would be sulcide for Mobile. Mike does not have to manage a ball club to make a living and this he doubtless told the Mobils officials and a settlement was made Sice going to Mobile Mike has put the Alabama city on the baseball map and at very little cost. He has the knack of getting good players at little cost And in that way he has saved the Mobile association a bunch of money only to be threatened with dismissal when he asks for new players so as to keep a good position in the pennant fight The Mobile club right now is no the best in the league, yet it is a good ed faces will be right up in the ning when the last man is out takes a first division club to draw Mobile and the directors are making mistake when they don't go out and get the needed players.

A Tariff of Cotton Futures

talk of a tax of 50 cents being levied on every bale of cotton sold or handled through the cotton exchange at New York. I have never had much experience with this exchange but in recent years I am led to believe that without the New York cotton exchange the southern cotion planters would lose millions of dollars that they are now making on account of this exchange being in existence. The cotton crop of the world is of far more importance than many people think, and I never realized until the shortage last year of how much importance this crop was to the country. It is making the south the richest agricultural section on earth and the cotton planters as well as everyone who lives or is interested in the southern states should do every thing in their power to keep in existence or maintain the New York cotton exchange. The people who produce this crop and handle it, the ones that it supports and helps are not affected but little by the operation of this exchange just so long as it exists and they let alone the dabbling in futures. No sane man with a small amount of capital will undertake to deal in cotton futures. It is intended for the rich and to protect the manufacturers and also to keep a stipulated basis or price on our cotton crop that we can depend on year by year or at least twelve months in advance of the time the cotton crop is made. This is a big thing connected with the exchange. A man knows positively just what he can sell or get for his cotton, even before he plants it. The manufacturer knows exactly what he can afford to contract to supply his s yarns, goods in finished form, hosiery and things of that kind, and when he makes his yearly contracts if he finds he is stuck or will lose this money the cotton exchange is the place that will enable him to hedge his contracts and put himself in a position where he knows positively just what he can do. It has saved thousands of manufacturers and enabled them to carry out their contracts or supply goods at the price they have contracted for and the small margin that the exchange charges for this protection is only a drop in the bucket compared to the protection it gives the outside world.

The planter especially is benefited by it more than any one, but there are but few of them that realize this. You do away with the cotton exchange and the planters of this country would find themselves in a position where it would be a hard matter to sell their cotton at all. No buyer is going to buy a lot of cotton unless he knows positively what he can get for it, and the buyers all being posted in this respect and knowing positively beforehand every day just how the market is they know exactly what to pay for this product. If there was not a certain market price every day on cotton when it was forced on the market and people bought it they certainly would buy it way down low, so as to be on the safe side or would not touch it at all. buyers would always be gambling in an uncertain way and the producer would be the one to suffer. As it is now every buyer knows exactly where he is at all times. If a tax of 50 cents per bale was levied on every bale of cotton handled through the cotton exchange the farmers will eventually be the ones that will have to pay this tax, and while I am not as well posted on this subject as I would like to be I can readily see that it would be a great injury placed upon the farmers of the south if this bill should be passed and eventually I believe it would cause the price of every bale of cotton to depreciate at least $5 per bale. I for one am willing to let the matter stay as it is and I believe the farmers of the south would be wise to do likewise. Naturally if the congressmen in Washington are being written to daily by their supporters all over the south to see that this bill is passed they want to do, of course, what their supporters wish them to do and many will naturally try to pass it when they themselves know that it would be an injury, and i believe the farmers of the south are making a mistake to attempt to

This tax if enacted would put the cotton exchanges out of business Dispose of the cotton exchanges in America and you rob the farmer of the only official price making medium upon which he can depend upon absolutely as to ascertaining the actual value of his product from day to day. Wire or write your congressman and senator at once to use every effort to defeat the Clarke bill, known as the tax bill on cotton contracts.

Yours very truly,

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

McRae, Ga. Wil you tell me what is best to do for our chickens? It looks something like sorehead, sores on the ear lobes, gills, around the eyes and nose. They seem to suffer a good deal. Eyes closed entirely. We had one that way and killed her and carried her off and buried her deep, about two weeks ago, and a few days ago another one we noticed had some sores and seemed weak and seemed to be suffering. I got some carbolic ointment and covered the sores with it and the eyes opened in a litle while, and in one day all seemed to be well, but you could tell they were not well. am afraid it is roup. My husband says he noticed, he thought, a little discharge at the nose. We take them away from the flock as soon as we notice the sores. We only have about twenty-five in the yard, about 50x100. Plenty of shade and I give them fresh water every day and clean out the porcelain pan. It is a high, sandy lot and dry, I try to keep the fowl house cleaned out often, not once a week, though, but think it would be better. We give them a mash in the morning of corn meal and wheat bran and in the afternoon the mixed feed. I think it is called the Gem Scratch feed, and I try to keep them something green to eat. We gave them (a good while) in the mash Hessie's Panaca and we tried Magic Poultry food and tonic. We do not false any chickens, just keep hens to lay and have one rooster. They are nearly all Rhode Island Reds. - If it is roup I do not want to get close to them, as I believe people catch lots of disease that way. I have catarrh and kinder think that is what started it, as we had some chickens about twenty years ago which had roup and I doctored them faithfully, but do not remember What I did for them, and don't remember that one ever got well. Just common tar will cure sorehead right does not cost too much to doctor Thanking you in advance, I am. MRS. A. M'M.

ANSWER. From the description given your chickens evidently have a slight touch of roup or a summer cold. If treated now it will be no trouble to relieve them without much loss. By the use of Conkey's roup cure or permanganate of potash given in the water regularly and feed plenty scratch feed and also a mash once a day with some good condition powders mixed with it this will get their systems in good working order and will enable them to throw off a cold and it will not go into roup. At this season of the year nearly all young chickens have more or less cold, and it is best not to doctor too much, as it keeps their systems upset when they are given a lot of medicine. By the use of good antiseptics in the drinking water it will usually keep the disease from spreading as contaminated water carries a disease from one bird to another.

It would be best to separate all of the well birds from the others, and put them in a fresh, celan yard with a clean house and allow them to sleep where they can get as much fresh air as possible. Many chickens contract colds from sleeping in close quarters during hot summer and coming out in the damp atmosphere early in the morning with their feathers wet it makes them easy to catch cold. Therefore, they should roost as near in the open as possible.

When chickens are well fed they can throw off by their own strength a slight cold, and it will not hurt them, but if they should be in a weakened condition a slight cold will go into roup and it will cause more or less trouble. This is one reason why people should keep their birds fat and in good growing condition at all times. When this is done they are not subject to diseases and if they should happen to catch a slight cold it seldom ever hurts them. I do not think you need be afraid of the trouble, as by taking it in time you can soon save them.

Blood Disorders Gone to Stay. A few doses of that wonderful blood purifier, S. S. S., will start activities in the cellular tissues of the body and soon show decided changes in the skin. The skin is but a fine network of tiny blood vessels, and the specific action of E. S. S. is declared to be a pronounced stimulation of the activity of these cells. Certain it is that in a surprisingly short time any skin eruption shows a most remarkable change; it begins to dry up; the skin scales off in tiny flecks, and soon a layer of clear, healthy and firm tissue results. The reason for this is in the peculiar stimulation of S. S. S., which enables

POISONING FROM FOOD

Every Bite May Poison -- All Could Be Methuselahs If We Did Not Shorten Life by Self-Poisoning.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system. This is termed Autotoxemta, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition result. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and bowels, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste. Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and with the consciousness that your health is safeguarded against any indiscretion in eat-

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. No other liver medicine is equal to it; don't take the inferior substitute that may be offered. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. 25c. If yours cannot supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage prepaid .- (Advt.)

NEED PODOLAX

When folks get along in years, their daily life and their daily habits are not so active as they used to be. The body is apt to "let down" somewhat and feel that it is entitled to a wellearned rest. But it's not so; you mustn't permit it. Most important of all, keep your liver working right up to the mark-and do it with a gentle but positive stimulant like PODOLAX -not with mere physics, (which don't ouch the liver at all) nor, on the other hand, with dangerous calomel or violent saline purgatives. Your bowels no longer have the elasticity of youth; they can't recover quickly enough from the exhaustion which violent purgatives are certain to cause.

PODOLAX is particularly fine for elderly people because it increases the flow of the liver's secretions and thus enables the liver to HELP ITSELFgently, healthfully, positively. You'll like PODOLAX; it will give a new edge to your appetite, new tone to your stomach and splendid regularity to your daily habits. Get a bottle at your druggists; take a little at bedtime tonight. Tomorrow you'll be glad you got acquainted with PODOLAX.
