The jury which will try Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan was selected Monday morning within the surprisingly short time of three hours, and the actual hearing of testimony was begun Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The first witnesses will be introduced by the state, and will testify to the discovery of Mary Phagan's body in the cellar of the National Pencil factory, and to other circumstances which go to prove that she

A large part of the afternoon will be consumed by the state in making out its case. In proving that Mary Phagan was murdered, Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey probably will introduce Newt Lee, police officers and physicians who examined the body. Indications now are that the trial will continue during this week, and probably will extend into the week following.

The jury was completed after eight panels of veniremen had been exhausted, and the last juror was the last member of the eighth panel.

Had he not been eligible, other panels must have been called. Throughout the selection of the jury, Leo M. Frank sat between his wife and his mother. He seemed confident and cheerful, frequently

The air of the court room was that of a civil rather than a criminal tribunal. The entire proceeding was free from delay or debate; and the prospect was that the trial will proceed quickly. During the entire time spent in the selection of the jury, no unusual or dramatic incident occurred in interrupt the business of selecting the twelve men before whom Leo M. Frank is to be tried. The court room was filled almost entirely with veniremen and lawyers, only a few spectators had been admitted to the room, and these few sat in quiet curiosity. On scarcely any question did attorneys disagree to the point of debate, and by the time of adjournment the jury was complete and ready to hear the testimony of witnesses.

Both the state and defense apparently are well pleased with the jury selected, and expect a quick and satisfactory hearing. The state has summoned 26 witnesses and the defense over 100, 20 or more of whom are character witnesses.

After adojurnment, Frank remained for a short while in the court room, and a dozen or more friends came forward to shake hands with him. Standing beside him were his wife and his mother.

> "I am satisfied, said Mrs. Frank, with the progress of the trial and with the selection of the jury. I have no doubt whatever about the outcome of the trial. I know that my husband is innocent and that he will be acquitted:"

EATS BREAKFAST AT COURT. About 7:30 o'clock, an hour and a half before his trial was due to begin, Leo M. Frank, the accused, was brought to the court house from the county jail by Sheriff C. W. Mangum, and was secluded in one of the back rooms. Shortly afterward a relative of accused appeared with his breakfast, and the prisoner ate it in the room adjoining the jury room.

At 8:15 o'clock, before the doors of the court room were opened, some fifty people were gathered outside, waiting to gain enrtance. CONFIDENT OF ACQUITTAL. To the relative, E. C. Essenbach, who had brought his breakfast, Frank expresed confidence that he would secure an early acquittal and be vindicated of the charge against him. After breakfasting the prisoner spent several moments opening and reading letters which he had brought with him from the jail. Emil Selig, his fatherin-law, appeared and engaged in conversation with him. At 8:20 o'clock Judge L. S. Roan, to preside over the trial, appeared in court, and repaired to the office of the deputy

NEED TO BE EXPURGATED"

So Declares Dr. Robins, in Speaking of Bible in Schools

In the course of an inspiring sermon Sunday night on "The Majesty of Christ," Dr. John B. Robins, pastor of Trinity Methodist church, took occasion incidentally to mention the recent controversy between preachers of Atlanta over the bill to require the Bible to be read in the public schools of the state. "A lot of preachers are fond of proelaiming their belief in the Bible," said "So far as I'm concerned, there is a good deal in the Bible that I don't want read in any school I'm connected with. "Take the Songs of Solomon, for instance. I have often been told that Jewish rabbis are not allowed to read them until they are forty years old, and in that connection I have remarked to some of my rabbi friends that if I were a rabbi I wouldn't read them until I was eighty years old, and then I wouldn't care whether I read them or not.

ment and fine poetry, but they need editing and expurgating before they are read to children. There are many things in the Bible that even we preachers. sorry as some of us are, take pains to

In his sermon Sunday morning Dr. Robins made the rather startling statement that the worst enemies to the cause of Christ today are the orthodox preachers and the sanctified church

"By that I don't mean." he said, "the preachers who are really orthodox nor the people who are really sanctified, but the preachers who are proud of their orthodoxy and the people who are proud of their sanctity. The orthodox preachers were the ones Christ pushed aside when He came to earth, and they were the ones, after all, who crucified Him.

"The church's greatest drawback today are the men in the pulpit who are content with orthodox opinions and are content to add nothing thereto. Christ in calling men to preach His gospel didn't call men who thought they knew enough, but men who got close to the hearts of the people."

From the seventh panel were excused and Rev. W. F. Burdette, of the northern part of the county. Dr. Connally stated that he is over age. "How do you know?" asked Judge Roan, smiling. Dr. Connally replied, "My mother told me so." Mr. Burdette was excused on the ground that he is a Baptist minister engaged in holding a revival.

From the eighth panel were excused C. W. Johnson, of 140 Gaskill, a minister; and J. M. DeFoor, of East Point who pleaded illness.

In the eighth panel was H. C. Ashburn, a member of the coroner's jury, who heard the original evidence in the case. He remained on the panel, but will be excused for cause.

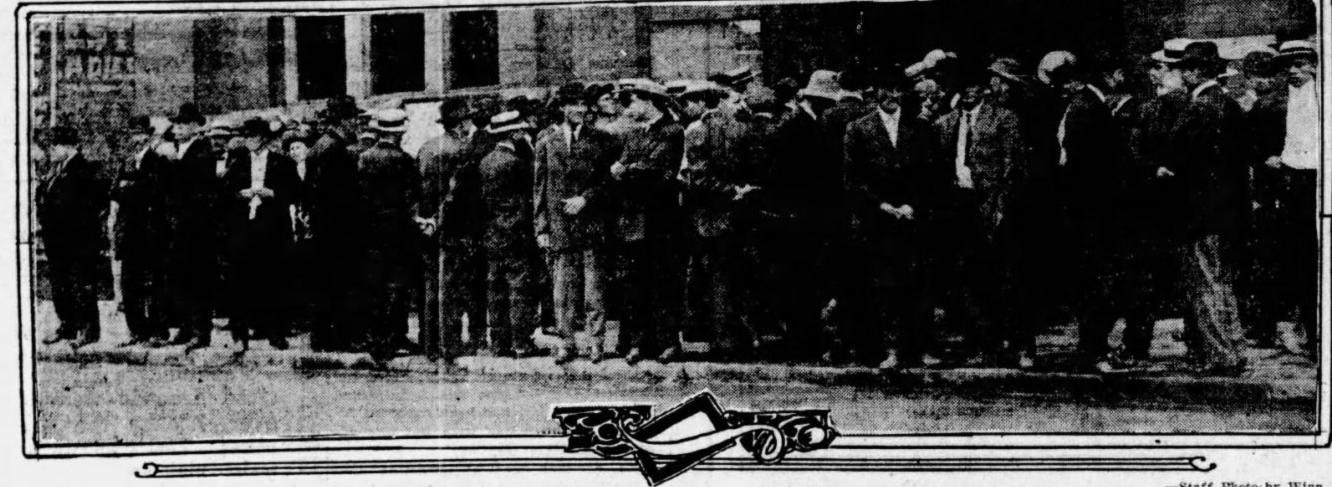

SOLICITOR CALLS CASE. After the eighth panel had been organized, Judge Roan asked the solicitor formally what case he had. The solicitor called the case of the state of Georgia against Leo M. Frank. The hour was 10 o'clock.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook at the Frank home, was called among a list of witnesses. Her husband, Albert McKnight, was called, too. He did not answer. The negress stated that she was compelled to make her famous affidavit against Frank, and that she would deny it in court. After announcing his case of the state against Leo M. Frank, the solicitor began calling the list of the state's witnesses, twenty-six in number. It was expected that others were to be called later. The list included none save material witnesses, it was said. No new names appeared on it. CONLEY NOT CALLED. They were J. W. Coleman, stepfather of the murdered girl; Mrs. J. W. Coleman, the mother of Mary Phagan; George W. Epps, a newsboy; Police Sergeant L. S. This picture shows a few of the throng that gathered in front of the old city hall, at Pryor and Hunter streets, where the Frank trial started Monday morning. The court room, which is on the first floor, has accommodations for 250 people, and during the early stages of the trial a large portion of this will not be available for the public, as 144 witnesses have been summoned. COURT SCENES AT FRANK TRIAL; HOW IT LOUKS INSIDE AND OUT

If one made his way past the crowd around the door, he was stared at. They were wondering what connection you should hold with the case. Batter your way to the door. There is a narrow lane leading up a flight of steps to the joor of the court room. It is bordered on both sides by men, their hands on each other's shoulders, waiting until the moment comes when the door is opened to the spectator. An officer keeps that lane clear.

Another officer is at the door, asking every man who enters what his business On the steps leading to the second floor are more people. Push through them and go upstairs. Here is the most interesting phase of the whole trial. LIKE A PICNIC PARTY.

The rooms are crowded with men and girls, laughing and chatting as if they were a pleasure party. There is none of the morbid curiosity of the street

These are the witnesses, young men smoking cigarettes and lounging in and out the doors, young girls, most of them from the factory, dressed in gay colared and white dresses, firing goodnatured sallies at one another.

"Are you subpoened?" they cry, "and are you, and you? Isn't this a lark?" Downstairs again to the first floor. If you can get past that suspicious individual who is guarding the door you be the envy of every man on the landing, for for you have gained entrance to the coveted court room. HOW IT LOOKS INSIDE.

But is it worth while? There is nothing sensational about this court room. In front of you is the railed inclosure which holds the judges stand and five tables and a score of chairs. Here are the lawyers. That man in the blue suit is Hugh M. Dorsey, the state's attorney. Next him is Frank

They are the ones who will be ruled out at the first panel. Others are impatient. Theirs is no interest in a murder case. They have business to attend to, a wife and children to care for.

The court room is not uncomfortable.

MOTHER SEES HER SON KILLED BY STREET CAR

Russell R. Gresham, Kirkwood Planter, Killed While on His Way to City

Russell R. Gresham, who was run down in his dairy wagon by an outgoing Kirkwood car on the South Decatur line at Whiteford avenue Monday morning about 8 o'clock, died a few hours later at the Atlanta hospital where he had been taken.

He suffered a terrible gash at his throat and was badly bruised about the face. He was rushed to the hospital where every attention was given him, but he never regained consciousness, and died about 11:30 o'clock. The accident happened about 7:45 o'clock as Gresham was driving to town, his wagon filled with produce and buttermilk. Gresham stopped his wagon several feet from the track. As the car came toward him he evidently made up his mind that he could cross the track first.

As Gresham whipped up his horse the trolley car swept on. The car struck the rear of the wagon, shattering the wheels and scattering the contents of the cart right and left.

The place where the accident occurred is not far from the store of Mrs. Lottie Gresham, the mother of the injured man. She was standing in front of the store when the car struck the wagon, and the sight threw her into hysterics.

The street car was somewhat damaged and several people on it were badly frightened. Mr. Gresham was fifty-three years of age and a resident of Kirkwood. He was a truck farmer and dairyman. Surviving him are his wife, five daughters and four, sons. The body was removed to Greenberg & Bond's chapel and the funeral arrangements will be announced

Where the Need

Outweighs the Cost.

There is but one obstacle in the path of the bill to establish a State institution for the training and guardianship of wayward girls; and that is the question of whether funds for this purpose can be Capared.

As to the wisdom and justice of the measure itself there is no difference of opinion. It was introduced in the early days of the present session of the Legislature with the earnest indorsement of the State prison commission and the thoughtful commendation of judges in every part of Georgia. Upon being referred to the penitentiary committee of the House, it was approved unanimously. Every member of the Legislature is doubtless convinced that such an institution ought to be established, if it is practically possible to do so.

In these circumstances, the bill was referred to the committee on appropriations, and there came the rub. The State's financial problems are numerous and perplexing. In order that ends may meet, close economy must be exercised. But it is evident that economy which would sacrifice human lives and so--cial welfare would be ill-advised and, in the final sum of things, very costly to public interests.

The appropriations committee could not see its way clear to grant the amount originally asked for this purpose, but so important did the enterprise appear that it was referred to a sub-committee, composed of Messrs. Griffin, Green and Berry who are charged with determining the minimum fund with which the institution can be started.

These gentlemen have a very serious duty to perform and a very grave responsibility, for, upon their recommendation the committee's final action will be based. The question is not simply whether Georgia can afford to establish the proposed institution but chiefly whether she can afford not to establish it. The State does well to spend liberal sums of money for the prevention of disease among hogs and cattle but it does tragically ill to spend nothing for the revention of ruined and broken human lives. Not merely as a matter of pity or sentiment but mainly as a matter of justice-justice to the community as Gwell as to individuals-Georgia should establish an institution where girls who are not hopelessly, and loften not inherently, bad may be saved from the Devils of impulse or environment and made useful to themselves and their generation.

Some people manage to make a little truth go a long way by stretching it.

The Meadow Larks.

Song birds may lack that "melodious meed" of poesy they were accorded in times gone by but never was their material worth so truly esteemed or rewarded. No Lanier now praises the mocking bird as "yon trim Shakespeare on the tree" but science welcomes the little songster for its insectivorous appetite and laws are enacted for its protection. We no longer hail the lark as an "ethereal minstrel, pilgrim of the sky" but grave, bespectacled gentlemen write earnest treatises on its value to growing crops and exhort the farmer to cherish it as a trusty friend. In time, no doubt, the birds will Decome reconciled to the loss of their bards and will conclude that after all a good game law is better than a sonnet-for birds at least.

The United States department of agriculture has just issued a bulletin on the meadow lark in which Southern planters should be particularly interested. The principal diet of this bird, we are told, consists of cotton boll weevils, alfalfa weevils, grasshoppers and predaceous ground beetles; and, obligingly enough, the meadow lark will choose for its provender those insects which happen to be most numberous, and accordingly most menacing, in the neighborhood of its home. Evidently, then, the South should encourage meadow larks, for, the boil weevil has destroyed great fortunes of Texas and Mississippi cotton and is now reported to be advancing steadily upon Georgia.

It is very pleasing to reflect that Nature has made song birds the most efficient insect destroyers, as though to remind us that if we destroy her singers we shall be plagued for our lack of grace.

Dr. Soule's Service to Georgia.

A wise Athenian was once drawn into an envious law suit over a petty farm. After showing the judges that his cause was just, he quietly said: "I will not entreat you, nor do I care what sentence you pass. It is you who are on your trial, not I."

The same remark might aptly be made of those gossips who are seeking to belittle the usefulness of Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture. It is not Dr. Soule but these would-be trouble-makers who are on trial. It is they who are slandering the State through their vicious attacks on the work of a man who has done more perhaps than any other individual to promote the agricultural progress of Georgia. Dr. Soule needs no defense other than the clear record of his public service, nor could he have higher praise than that which looms from every chapter of the institution he has upbuilt.

Under his administration, the Agricultural College and all its related departments have grown in attendance, in influence, in efficiency, in power for practical good. They have become a vital force in the daily life and welfare of Georgia farms; and every dollar appropriated for their maintenance has been returned a hundredfold in benefits to the people. This great work, Dr. Soule has done with equal earnestness and modesty. He of all men would be the last to claim undue credit for what is being accomplished and he, better perhaps than anyone else, appreciate the value of his able co-workers and the responsiveness of the people themselves. But an intelligent public knows that it was his genius in organization and leadership that has counted most in making the Agricultural College what it is today.

Why is it that such a man and such a work should incur the venom of political gossips? Simply for the reason, we suppose, that successful men are always the envy of unsuccessful and that useful lives are always a target for the useless. Dr. Soule needs no vindication before the people whose State he has made his own and whose interests he has so faithfully served, even at financial sacrifice to himself But those slanderers of his good name who, like Shakespeare's "scurvy politician," "seem to see the things they do not," deserve a rebuke from every right-thinking Georgians.

A Ray of Balkan Peace.

If it be true, as the dispatches indicate, that the Powers have authorized Russia to occupy Armenia and compel Turkey to cease her recent aggressions, one of the gravest perils of the new Balkan war has been averted. So long as the larger nations act in concert, there is hope of not only confining the Balkan problem to the peninsula but of also solving that problem itself. The danger has been that Austria's ambitions would set her at cross purposes with Russia and that an open clash would come be tween the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente.

Russia is the logical peacemaker in a war that so largely concerns Slavic interests. Her diplomacy should be particularly effective with Bulgaria and Servia and, if given right of way by the other Powers, she can doubtless do much to put an end to the present strife. It is especially important for the sake of all Europe's peace that Turkey be checked in her plans to reoccupy all the territory she lost in the war with the Allies. She has already taken possession of Adrianople and threatens to seize other territory which was allotted to the Al lies in the London treaty. But if Russia is author ized to force compliance with the terms of treaty and drive the Turks back across the Enos-Midia boundary, this particular menace will vanish. It is likely, indeed, that an ultimatum from Russia would send the Turks packing.

The prospects for a cessation of the war among the Allies is brighter than it has been since the recent outbreak. Austria is reported to have cast her influence for peace. Bulgaria is evidently ready for a truce; the Greeks and Serbs have little to lose through negotiations. It is possible, if not probable, that the war will soon be at an end.

A Brighter Prospect For Currency Reform.

Chairman Glass of the House banking and currency committee makes the cheering forecast that there will soon be substantial agreement among the Democratic members of the committee and that probably within another ten days the administration measure will be reported, altered in some of its details but in essentials unchanged. This brightened outlook for the enactment of currency and banking legislation is due largely no doubt to the tactful efforts of President Wilson. A week ago there seemed to be irreconcuable differences over this bill among certain Democrats of the committee. But following several White House conferences, the atmosphere has appreciably cleared.

It is to be hoped that no Democrat will permit his individual opinion to block the way of party principle and party duty; nor is it likely that this will be the case. For, the administration views are evidently strong enough in the committee to carry the day, if the issue is reduced simply to a question of votes. The country demands and expects an adequate banking and currency law in the near future; and to that end all good Democrats should unite.

Advantages of Growing Old BY DR. PRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane,)

Sensible people when they grow old find a great many compensations. Crossing the line of fifty, one moves up a little closer to the heart of the world. Youth is a good deal of a stranger and pilgrim in the universe. The ageing man discova ers a realness and a homliness in men and things.

Youth has no sense of proportion. He must hasten. Reforms cry out. Up and at them! He tears his shirt. Then when he gets old he begins to say, with Emerson, "Why so hot, little man?" He sees that the only dependable improvement in society is that which grows, not that which is forced. The youth's egotism; the optimism of old optimism is a kind of enlarged age is'an appreciation of the friendliness of nature. Young men are dazzled by institutions, imposed upon by organizations, overawed by the presumptuous authority of the past. Old men come to value personality more than these things. There is nothing worth while but to express one's self; it takes years of experience to realize that. Old age learns how to "come down" without "giving up," to use the words of The Country Parson." The old man quietly adjusts himself to the stubborn inevitable. Young people waste infinite effort in fuming and useless strenuousness. To youth success seems a matter of laboring hard at the oar; to the wise old man it is a matter of setting one's sails. The winds of heaven, if we get at the proper angle to them, will do more than all our muscle.

The conscience of youth is usually morbid. Many of his reddest sins and most shining virtues tone down with years. He learns tolerance. He believes less and less in prohibitions and punishments and more and more in the creative virtures such as love, courage, and lend-

To a normal old age comes a consciousness of the real joy of living, of the little things that compose life. The youngster is so whirled in high enthusiasm that he forgets or has no time to see how good life is, mere existence. Old people come back to eating, sleeping, walking breatheing, all the common ingredients of the day, not sensually, but with spiritual gratefulness.

Young men are eager for knowledge, greedy for the equipment of facts, of skill, and of efficiency. Old men have seen the weakness of these; they prefer wisdom and philosophy; they prefer the expert soul to the expert hand and mind. Love means more to old people than to young. To youth it is an adventure, to age it is the color of existence. To young persons it is a dangerous madness, to the old it a conservating, universal, ever-present force. The unwrecked personality ought to be an usually is happier after fifty than before.

'A Correspondence Between Nietzsche and Stringberg

It became known only recently that a most interesting though brief, correspondence had taken place between Friedrich Nietzsche and August Strindberg. These two strange and mighty spirits had saluted each other from a distance, had exchanged a few ringing messages and then passed on-Nietzsche to that death in life which shrouded his mind in darkness and Strindberg, urged along by the whirlwinds of his tempestuous temperament, to new sorrows and disasters. The death of Strindberg in 1912 has apparently broken the seals of silence imposed upon his own letters, and the entire correspondence, after lying buried for twenty-five years, has now been given to the public for the first time by Frau Forster Nietzsche, the sister of the dead philosopher. . . . Some time before he entered into correspondence with the Swedish man of letters, Nietzsche had made the acquaintance of Georg Brandes, the distinguished Danish critic who had called his attention to Strindberg as a mind more or less in affinity with his own. Brandes was perhaps the first European to give publicity to the thought and philesophy of Nietzsche, at that time a still unrisen sun in the firmament of modern Europe. . . . He had just completed that strange work Ecce Homo, the burning biography of his soul, in which he crowns himself with the ultimate glory of all battles and all philosophies, and sits throned in victory upon the ruins of the old morality-the anti-Christ triumphant. He is anxious that this book be given to the world in four languages at once. This is his chief motive for addressing Strindberg. . . . It is interesting to read of Strindberg's judgment upon the English literature of his day. The stony barriers of Anglican puritanism have since then been broken down by several modern writers, and yet so far as bourgeois or family literature is concerned, his judgment still holds good. But he was wrong in his belief that England would offer no hospitality to Nietzsche.-Herman Scheffauer, in the August number of the North American Review.

Quips and Quiddities

One year when the youngsters of a certain Illinois village met for the purpose of electing a captain of their baseball team for the coming season, it appeared that there were a number of candidates for the post, with more than the usual wrangling.

Youngster after youngster presented his qualifications for the post and the matter was still undecided when the son of the owner of the ball field stood up. He was a small, snub-nosed lad, with a plentiful supply of freckles, but he glanced about him with a dignified air of controlling the situation.

"I'm going to be captain this year," he announced convincingly, "or else father's old bull is going to be turned into the field."

He was elected unanimously.

A negro, having won a dollar at a crap game, decided to spend it on having his fortune told. The fortune teller led him into a gloomy room with dirty hangings and misty red lights. She took his palm, traced it with a dollar, spread out her cards, and then said:

"You are very fond of music; you like chicken; you have won money at craps, and you have been in jail." The negro looked at her with bulging eyes and finally ejaculated:

"Mah goodness, lady; why, you jest read mah inmost thoughts!"

They were talking about improving an opportunity the other afternoon, when the secretary of the interior contributed to the conversation.

"Makes me think," he smilingly said, "of a youngster who lives in our town. One afternoon he was invited to a party, where, of course, refreshments were bountifully served. "Won't you have something more, Willie?" asked the pretty hostess, toward the close of the feast. "'No, thank you,' replied Willie, with an expression of great satisfaction, 'I'm full.' "'Well, then,' smiled the hostess, 'put some fruit and cakes in your pockets to eat on the way home.' "'No, thank you,' came the rather startling response of Willie. 'They're full, too.' " . . .

"Somehow," said the genial station official as he seated himself beside the traveler, "there are some things which lead people to appreciate our wonderful improvements for their convenience and comfort." "Oh, don't worry," laughed the jolly traveler. There are some things about your line that are always in the public eye." "I'm glad to hear that, sir. And would you mind naming them?"

That the country was prosperous during the last calendar year is clearly demonstrated in the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department made public this morning on the returns of corporations, joint stock companies or association and insurance companies. Returns were received from about 310,000 concerns, having an aggregate net income of $3,304,000,000, an increase of $400,000,000 as compared with the preceding calendar year. When it is noted that the aggregate capital stock of the companies exceeds sixty billions and their bonded and other indebtedness more than thirty-two billions one can obtain some notion of the proportion of the country's business that is conducted under corporate form .- New York Herald.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

China, republican now but still "heathen." is stamp ing out the opium traffic with a vigor never before manifested in such an undertaking. England, monarchical but Christian, is insisting that China must pay some $50,000,000 for opium that has forming drugs. Three bills are now being considered in congress which deal with the subject. One is to remedy defects in the act passed in 1909 forbidding the importation of opium for other than meddicinal purposes. Another increases the internal revenue tax on opium produced in this country for smoking purposes. The third provides for the reg. istration with the collectors of internal revenue, and the payment of a special tax by "all persons who produce, import, compound, manufacture, deal in, dispense, sell or give away opium or coca leaves, their salts, derivatives or preparations."

The object of the United States in originating the international movement for the suppression of the opium traffic was to lessen the deplorable habit of opium smoking in the Orient. Directly after the appointment of the American delegates to the first international opium commission it was discovered that this nation was itself permitting a traffic in opium and deriving revenue from it. Between 1860 and 1908 the United States had collected an aggregate revenue from opium amounting to $27,000,000. As it was not possible for the American delegates to the international commission to press the suppression of the eastern opium traffic under these conditions, an opium exclusion act was passed in 1909. This was to permit the delegates to the commission to maintain the position desired by this government for the suppression of

The opium exclusion bill of 1909 was found defective when it came to the test of practical enforcement The sudden prohibition of the importation of opium tended greatly to increase smuggling, especially along the Mexican border.

The Harrison bill providing for the registration of all persons in any way connected with the handling of the drugs, opium and cocaine, will enable the government not only to lessen the amount of smuggling, but will also be a record of the quantities of such drugs in the country and the final disposition of the same The bill provides that every person selling the drugs shall preserve the order for the sale for two years in order that it may be readily accessible for the inspection of any authorized officer. Another pending bill provides for the levying of an internal revenue tax of $200 per pound upon all opium manufactured in the United States for smoking purposes. This applies esecially to the opium made from poppies grown in this country, particularly along the Pacife coast, which might, without this restriction, become a flourishing

The bill prohibiting the importation of opium has also a section prohibiting its export. The penalty provided for any person found to have smoking opium in his possession while on board any car, vessel or other vehicle outward bound from the United States is the same as that provided for an attempt to bring, the drug into the country. This provision is in compliance with a resolution passed at The Hague by the opium commission that "It is the duty of all governments to adopt reasonable measures to prevent, at all ports of departure, the shipment of opium and its derivatives to any country which prohibits their entry." The establishment of this co-operation will materially assist all of the governments to overcome opium smuggling. Such a provision already has been adopted by India, the Crown Colony at Hong Kong and the Dominion of Canada. The similar action of other gov-

The first international opium commission was called by the United States at Shanghai, China, in 1909. The one held at The Hague in December and January of 1911-12 was also called by the United States. Twelve of the world's powers were represented then. The second Hague opium commission has just concluded. At its sittings forty governments were represented, more than twenty of which sent delegates. The American delegates, several of whom are now upon their way home, included Lloyd Bryce, minister to the court at the Netherlands; Dr. Hamilton Wright, representing the department of state; Gerrit Kellen, of Michigan, with J. Butler Wright, of the American legation at Brussels, secretary, and Gerald B. Seldomridge, of Colorado, assistant secretary.

. . . The increase in the use of opium, morphine, coca leaves and cocaine has been appalling in the United States within the past generation. In the five leading countries of Europe, including a population of about 164,000,000, less than 50,000 pounds of opium are used annually. The United States, with a population of 90,000,000, imports and consumes over 400,000 pounds annually, averaging over half an ounce per capita of the entire population. The quantity of coca leaves and cocaine consumed in Europe is even less than that of opium as compared with the United States. Over 150,000 pounds of cocaine are consumed in this country annually. A consensus of opinion obtained from a canvass of a large number of the leading physicians of the country indicates that 75,000 pounds of opinion would be ample to meet the medicinal needs of the American people as would 15,000 ounces of cocaine.

It is thus shown that more than five times the amount of opium and ten times the amount of cocaine required for medicinal purposes is being consumed in this country each year. The excess is consumed by thousands of men and women who have become addicted to the drug habit. As a result, additional criminal classes are being created. The habitual use o drugs is more harmful in its effects than the use of alcoholic liquors. It is spreading with a rapidity which menaces the welfare of the entire nation. Usua. ly the victims have formed the habit innocently and unconsciously, but having once become a drug slave reform is almost impossible. In most of the states some sort of legislation has been enacted looking toward the lessening of the ease with which the habit-form ing drugs can be secured by irresponsible persons. These laws are poorly enforced in the main and little care is given to means of preventing the establishment of the drug habit.

The great majority of drug victims acquire thell taste through patent medicines, the careless use of drugs ordered in the beginning by a physician, or from taking medicated "soft drinks." Patent medicine manufacturers, who use cocaine and morphine in theil compounds, sometimes claim that these drugs los their effect by being combined with other ingredients Expert chemical tests prove this to be untrue. The habitual use of a medicine containing only a small quantity of either drug may, if continued, result in the establishment of an unconquerable habit. Cocaine is sometimes used as a snuff and its victims may begin to acquire a desire of it by using some of the cartarrh cures so numerous upon the market.

A physician's examination of over 600 morphine cases indicated that more than 90 per cent of the victims used the drug hypodermically. The instrument is usually used first by a physician to check some acute pain. Afterwards the patient, seeing how easily he was relieved, begins to use the instrument himself. In most parts of the country a hypodermic syringe may be purchased by a fifteen-year-old boy as easily as a pocketknife.

MAY TURN AWAY GIRLS AT COMMERCIAL SCHOOL

President of Board of Education Pleads for Funds for English-Commercial School

The board of education faces the serious possibility of having to turn away about 100 girls who wish to enter the English-Commercial High school this year, lack of space in the present quarters making it impossible to accommodate the students.

At the meeting of the board of education last week a special committee was appointed to take into consideration ways and means of providing additional accommodation; but owing to the lack of funds the outlook is not encouraging. The committee is composed of W. R. Daley, president of the board: W. M. Slaton, superintendent of the schools; Marcellus M. Anderson and Dan Green. They now are investigating the situation, and will make a report to the board Wednesday afternoon at a special meeting of the board.

The English-Commercial High school has grown in a phenomenal manner since its establishment a few years ago. Approximately 300 girls are already entered for the fall term, and Mrs. Wise, the principal, has informed the board that nearly 100 more will have to be taken care of, in all probability. in commenting on the situation. Colonel Daley said: "It is a shame that a city of the size of Atlanta will make no provision for that many girls who desire schooling. We have urged council to give us more funds, but, though we earnestly presented the matter to their attention, both in January and June, we have received not a dollar except for the current expenses of the school.

"The location of the school at present is not only insufficient from the standpoint of space, but it is dangerous. The girls are housed in two antiquated, dilapidated and unsafe houses below the level of Washington street. The buildings were erected many years ago for residences, and have not even the modern conveniences. They are insanitary, poorly ventilated and dangerous to health, but we have neither space nor money to remedy the situa-

"We have a lot on which to erect a propriation from council, and unless we do I do not know what we are going to do with that property.

"The Commercial High school, at first, was a branch of the Girls' High school, necessary to separate it from the Girls' High school, and the old Episcopal rectory beneath the Washington street viaduct and another house just back of it | the senate: was rented. The school has now outgrown these quarters, and the overflow must be turned away unless some provision can be made for the girls."

Two Songs One day I wrought a little song.

For henor and for gain; I labored on it ever long With care and skill and pain.

But when within the market-place

To sing it I made bold, It brought me not one gladdened face, Nor any fame nor gold,

Another day I wrought a song. For love of singing sweet, And oh, the quickly hasting throng! And oh, the dancing feet

New Frock of Pale Pink Satin

This charming afternoon frock shows a bodice and peplum of net, embroidered in rose color dots and edged with deep points of lace. Brown satin is used for the girdle. The shirred hem of the straight skirt is of pink satin. This is a season of parasols and the woman who understands their charm is seldom without one when she is out-of-doors. From the gingham ones that are used in the garden in the morning to the elaborate ones. like the one in the picture, which match afternoon frocks, they are all interesting. This one is of embroidered net edged with lace, like the bodice, and it is mounted over pink satin, shirred and puffed loosely into place. The big hat is of black straw, trimmed with red roses.

There is no doubt but that the excellent work being turned out by the Mobile and Chattanooga clubs has been largely due to the grand work of the veteran receivers yet the three youngsters above mentioned have also shown up in the grandest possible form and right now are ripe for a trial in the bir snow. Street and Schmidt have served their time in the majors, having learned the art of catching while in the big ring, while Gibson, Chapman and Mayer are yet kids at the game and have a lor All three of the Southern's star kid receivers were last season called to the big show for a trial, but owing to their youth and inexperience were shifted to Strings were kept on the bunch and with the start of the 1914 season ther may again be with the major clubs. All season Mayer and Gibson have been going in grand fashion and have more than once attracted the attention of major leage scouts. It was shortly after the start of the season that Chapman was secured by Atlanta, and this put him a bit late in getting started. but right now he is moving at a pace that will carry anybody to the big ring. He is working the pitching in amazing ly good fashion and is beginning to hit And above all he can peg to the bags GIBSON IS YOUNG.

Catcher Frank Gibson, of Nashvilla is just twenty-three years of age and has been at the professional end of the game but three years. It was while member of the Dallas Texas league club last season that he attracted sufficient notice to be drafted by the Detroit Tigers. At the time he was picked up by Detroit, Catcher Oscar Stanage was a holdout and it was believed Gibsor would get a chance to fill in Stanger shoes. However, Stanage came into the fold a bit later and this caused Gib son to be let out to Nashville. With Nashville Gibson is going great. He is hitting in the .300 class and throwing to the bags in great style.

He possesses a good head and Detroit has already decided to pull the string when the time comes. Walter Mayer, who is at present with the Barons, came into prominence while in the Blue Grass league. He was picked up by the Chicago White Sox and farmed out to Birmingham. It is most likely that he will be recalled for work in the American league with the star of the 1914 season. Mayer has be working most every game for the Bar ons and his good headwork has been largely responsible for the climb the Baron club. Harry Chapman, the third member the star youngster brigade, is a member of the Atlanta crew. He learned to play ball out west and last season was nabbed by the Cincinnati club. He sat little win or loss for the teams in the upper division counts for a lot, and it is best to take every win you can get. There is no use in holding off with the idea that the team will get started when the final home stay is begun. A game in July counts just as much as a game in August or September, and tends to cause a great deal better feeling among the

Just what is lacking in the Atlanta ball club is a mystery. Som say it is a weak pitching staff; others claim the outfield does not play the proper kind of defensive game, while Memphis writers state that the club has lost its spirit and the players are not getting along with Billy

WAS NO DISSENSION.

Concerning the charges that the players and manager are not get ting along in harmony, nothing is known here. When the team left town everything was rosy, and if any internal trouble has arisen it has been since the club hit the road. When last here it was evident that all the players had the greatest respect for Billy's ability as a leader, and Billy was a great believer in the players he has assembled to fight for a pennant for Atlanta. It seems hardly possible that any big trouble could have come up during the short time the team has been on the

The friendship among the Cracker players is of the very best. They all get along together in the best fashion possible, it being impossible to get together eighteen professional ball players who would like each other any better. You never hear charges of one throwing down the other, or any other petty quarrels. They all believe each is working for the best interest of the club, and any inkling that there is internal trouble has never been suggested.

To turn out the best possible work it is positively necessary that every member of the club work his hardest for the success of the team-You can't play for individual records and give the fans good baseball. Just such work as this has ruined more than one good ball club, and will continue to do the same thing just as long as tried. The cause must be looked upon as a common one, and all players must at all times do their best to win games.

The present losing streak cannot be accounted for in any way except a temporary slump due to the hot weather down in New Orleans, Memphis, Montgomery and Mobile. Atlanta, you know, is like a seashore resort when compared with this quartet of cities, and to jump from here and play good ball in a hotter clime is almost out of the question. The work of the club upon the next home stay will tell the tale and show just what has been the trouble.

to arrive sooner or later, but it still seems to be a trifle discinted to see the old flag triumvirate, Giants, Pirates and Cubs, broken up with a strange entry in the hunt.

For tweleve years these three clubs have ruled the National plain. first it was Pittsburg; then it was New York; then it was Chicago, and then New York again, but always it was two of these or three of these fighting it on to the wire, with the others nowhere.

TRADITION PASSES

But now tradition passes. That double blow in the portcullis earlier in the week put the final skids beneath the hopes and dreams of Cub and Pirate. Both woke up Wednesday morning sixteen games from the Land of Plenty, out of the race, with nothing left but a reassembling of the spring training clan for 1914.

Each has a chance to finish second, and Pittsburg may land that well up, but first place is now beyond all reach. Baseball is baseball, and the dope is replete with ungainly kinks, but a 200 point or thereabouts margain on the edge of August is too close up against the miracle run to be given 1913 GIANTS.

McGraw undoubtedly has a better club now than he has drawn for three years. In fact, his present array is probably the best ball club he ever led. He has the pitching, the batting, the fielding and the speed. The general combination is beyond all reach, if there is anything

Of his last 50 contests, McGraw has won 42 and lost 8. This clip_is enough to break up any race.

It isn't hard to find the answer. To his 1912 outfit the Giant leader has added Burns, a fine outfielder, and Demaree, a fine young pitcher. And to further boost affairs. Fletcher is not only fielding brilliantly, but leading the team at bat, while Snodgrass is playing far beyond old form and is next to Fletcher with the war club, well above such steady swatsmen as Larry Doyle and Chief Meyers.

Add to a pennant winning club two stars and great improvement in two old regulars and the answer is fairly well apparent to the naked eye.

The rickety trip of the Athletics through the west has stirred up a rumble that perhaps after all Mack's team may be headed off. The only trouble is that about the time this rumor gets well under way the peevish Athletics rise up and tear off about ten straight. They manage to get trimmed here and there, but they also manage to keep the gap open, with no one to be rated as fairly close.

Hans Wagner recently whiffed four times in one afternoon, thereby proving that sooner or later Old Doc Time steps in to collect.

There will be time enough for Congress to investigate the baseball trust when Walter Johnson begins to pitch every other day. If this isn't unlawful restraint of trade there never was a monopoly.

They say Connie Mack and McGraw are lucky. - So were Alexander, Caesar and Bonaparte-lucky to know where to go and get the talent and how to handle it after the collecting had been accomplished.

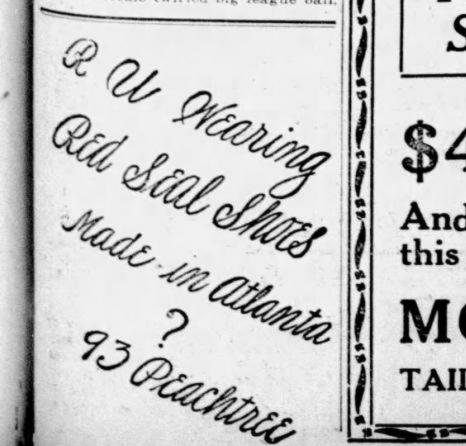

Griff picked up Washington in seventh place and he has his team up there fighting among the leaders, but not a regular on his club came from a rival team. Moeller, Shanks, Foster, Morgan, Boehling and the rest were all gathered in from outside quarters.

In the early afternon there was a return to the day's lowest prices of the day, the market weakening under growing belief that Texas may have had more rain than earlier private advices indicated. (By Associated Press.)
NEW ORLEANS, July 28.—Cotton futures opened steady, 1 point down to 5 points up, compared with the last prices of Saturday. Cables were better than due and the weather map indicated very little rain in the western half of the belt overnight, although good rains were noted in the eastern belt. Crop accounts were conflicting and bulls claimed that drouthy conditions still prevailed over a part of Texas and Oklahoma, while the bears contended that no section of the cotton region was actually suffering for want of moisture. After the call the market had a good tone and at the end of the first half hour of business prices were 5 to 7 points over Saturday's close

At the highest the trading months were 8 points over Saturday's last quotation. Moderate buying served to hold prices up. There was little short selling until toward noon, when reports of many bales of new cotton at today's point and the claim that picking would be general over a large part of that state before this week is over stimulated offerings from the bear side and the marked eased off under | STOCK GOSSIP the pressure, standing at noon at a net advance of only 1 to 2 points.

The Poultry Show For Atlanta the First Week in December

HE management of the Southern International Poultry association will again this year put over at the auditoriumarmory another great poultry and pigeon show. The past two shows conducted by the Southern International Poultry association were undoubtedly two of the most remarkable shows ever held in any section of the country, and made for Atlanta and the southern breeders a reputation national in scope, and gave to the south an advertisement that no estimate in dollars and cents could possibly be placed upon its actual value. The poultry interest of the south today would not be what it is at present had it not been for those two great shows, and while the work and expense has practically been placed upon a few people, the two shows held by this association have gone down in history and made for Georgia a reputation that will never be forgotten.

The third annual show, which will be conducted at the auditorium-armory the first week in December, 1913, will probably be the most important of any show ever conducted by this association. It will be national in scope, liberal in view and conducted for the benefit of the people.

Hundreds of eastern and western breeders who realize the importance of exhibiting at this show will be in Atlanta. The southern breeders have at last realized the necessity and importance of being represented at this great show, and Atlanta will see again this year another poultry show such as will not be conducted anywhere within hundreds of miles of this city during the coming sea-The management of this show realize the importance of keeping shows up to the highest standard and are leaving nothing undone to make the third annual show go down in history as one of the greatest events this country has ever seen. There are but few people who know it, but last year Atlanta conducted probably the third largest and best poultry show cooped in the United States, and the management of this association does not intend to stop until some day Atlanta can coop the largest poultry show ever cooped in the United States. It can be done, and the spirit of this section of country is inclined in that direction, and will never stop until these things have been possible and put over in actual reality right here in Atlanta.

The opportunities offered and the benefits derived from a national poultry show such as the Southern International Poultry association show cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, and there are but few people who realize the actual value these great shows are to a community or to the industry; but, at a great expense and lots of work, the management of this association has conducted these shows, and will continue to do so. The poultry industry means to the south a stepping stone to something far greater, and as these products are of so much more importance, and the opportunities offered are so great throughout the entire south, it is known that only through the holding of annual exhibitions are the best possible means of keeping this industry in the front and to the stage it should be. Hundreds of letters have already been received from many eastern and western breeders signifying their intention of making large displays at this national show during the first week in December, and the southern breeders who do not take advantage of this opportunity and leave no stone unturned to get business will miss a chance of a lifetime to put dollars in their pockets that many a shrewd eastern and western breeder will avail himself of. The chances are here for every one who will make an effort, and it is through their efforts that success is obtained; and when one allows the great opportunities offered them to pass unnoticed, they are the ones who fail to receive the benefits offered them. If you have not already made arrangements to make a large display at this coming show, you should by all means get in touch with the secretary and prepare yourself to receive some of the benefits that are offered you through the Southern International Poultry show at the auditorium-armory the first week in December, 1913. The man who always pushes his business and is on the alert at all times to make a dollar for himself is offered opportuniage of the chance that presents itself ties here that do not come every day, and it is up to him to take advan-

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

Your very truly,

H. H. M'C.

Charlestown, W. Va. Will you be kind enough to give me, who wants to learn, the good points of Rose Comb Rhode Island Red chickens? I mean the show points as to color (light or dark), feathers and general conformation. I will be very grateful to you for this information.

ANSWER.

If you are breeding Rhode Island Reds or any other standard variety of chickens you cannot successfully do so or accomplish very much without the use of a Standard of Perfection which I can furnish you for $2. This book gives the exact color, shape, etc., that is required for all standard varieties of chickens, and it is poultryman's Bible that he must guided by if he ever accomplishes his desires in life.

The proper color for a Rhode Island Red is a rich brilliant red in the male bird. The shade of color in neck, back, breast and body should be as near one uniform shade as possible. The tail colorings should be a rich black, and as much black as possible should be produced in the wing feathers, but not enough to show on the outside when the feathers are folded. A rich scheen having the appearance of being polished or varnished should show on the entire outside color of a male. The richer the better. No black or smut should appear on the under surface color in any section of the bird. The females should be a rich red in color also with same color tail and wing markings as the male. It is almost impossible to get females that will hold their color as when they are laying the oil disappears from the plumage and they will fade in color. However, by carefully reading the Standard you will get some idea of what color you must breed for to get your birds to stand requirements and produce the kind that is required to win and will sell for the highest prices.
