DARLEY'S ADMISSIONS ABOUT FRANK'S DEMEANOR OFFSET BY HIS EVIDENCE IN REBUTTAL

Having Admitted Frank Trembled, That He Was Pale and Seemed "Upset," on Cross-Examination Mr. Darley Said Frank Was Naturally of a Nervous Temperament and Told of Tedious Work He Did on Saturday in Preparing Financial Sheet

JUDGE ROAN REVERSES HIS RULING IN REFERENCE TO EVIDENCE ABOUT WHETHER OTHERS WERE NERVOUS

Attorneys for Defense Had Intimated That His Refusal to Admit This Evidence Was Good Ground for Appeal-Mrs. White's Testimony That She Saw Negro Lurking Near Stairway at 1 o'Clock Saturday a Feature of Morning Session

Little progress was made at the morning session Friday of the fifth day of the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan. The state showed by one witness that a negro was sitting on a box on the main floor shortly before 1 o'clock at the point Jim Conley claims he was sitting when he says Frank called him.

The state also introduced its best testimony relative to the nervousness and general demeanor of the defendant on the morning that the crime was discovered.

The witness, who gave this testimony was N. V. Darley, who also materially aided the defense by a number of points brought out on his cross-examination by Attorney Reuben R. Arnold. Considered of special value to the defense was his statement that with the time clock in the condition that it was on Sunday anyone understanding its mechanism could have made the punches for twelve hours within five minutes. The defense brought out by Darley a statement that it had been hammering home since the trial first started, namely that the elevator and its motor made much noise when running and that a saw on the fourth floor ran simultaneously with the elevator. The inference is that the defense will argue that if the elevator ran shortly after noon or even up to 3 o'clock that White and Denham, working on the fourth floor, would necessrily have heard it.

The same witness also asserted that a financial sheet gotter up Saturday afternoon was in Frank's handwriting and that it takes three hours or more to do this work.

The defense made a timely rebuttal of Darley's testimony that Frank displayed unusual nervousness following the discovery of the murder, and used Darley himself to refute, to a certain extent, his own testimony. Solicitor Dorsey, in his examination of the witness. had drawn the statement from him that the accused was nervous, that his hand trembled when he went to run the elevator, and that he was pale and was trembling when he rode to the police station. When Attorney Arnold took the witness he drew from him the assertion that Mr. Frank was of a naturl nervous temperament and that frequently he (Darley) had to take charge of affairs at the factory, prio rto the murder, an account of the accused's nervousness. Frank, declared Darley, often rubbed his hands together and was unable to do much work when he was in one of his nervous states.

Mrs. White was also an important witness in reference to Frank's nervousness, declaring that when she went into the factory at about 12:30, just after the state claims the crime was committed. Frank jumped when she spoke to him.

When court convened after lunch, Judge Roan reversed himself on his ruling at the morning session. By reversing this ruling he holds now that the defense may introduce evidence to show that others besides the accused were nervous at the pencil factory following the discovery of the body of Mary Phagan. Attorney Rosser, for the defense, had indicated in a remark to the court at the morning session that the defense would likely appeal the case on this point if the jurist held to his ruling.

Judge Roan also announced his decision in the matter of Darley testifying relative to the contrast or comparison of handwriting on the financial sheet made out by Frank on the Saturday of the murder and others made out prior to that date. Judgo Roan held that Darley would have to qualify as a handwriting expert to testify along these

STATE INTRODUCES WITNESSES. Mr. Arnold, in a discussion with attorneys for the state, made the remark that the prosecution need not fear that he would fail to introduce evidence. If the defense introduces any evidence at all, as the attorneys now think it will, it will probably introduce many witnesses and the trial will be prolonged a number of days.

At the close of the morning session Friday the Indications were that the state would not close its case until Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. Jim Conley, the state's principal witness, has not been called yet, and probably will not be until Saturday. It will take a whole day if not longer for his examination,

WATCHMAN SWEARS ELEVATOR WAS OPEN: CHANGES EVIDENCE

E. F. Holloway Angers Dorsey When He Testifies Contrary to Affidavit-Had Told Dorsey Elevator Switch Was Locked

Court adjourned at 4:58 o'clock until 9 o'clock Friday morning after a day of surprises in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, in the National Pencil factory

That the switch board which controls the motor used to operate the elevator in the National Pencil factory, where Mary Phagan was murdered, was left unlocked Saturday morning when he left the building at 11:45 o'clock, and that anybody could have entered and run the elevator up and down the shaft during the balance of the day, was the statement of E. F. Holloway, one of the factory's watchmen at the trial of Leo M. Frank late Thursday afternoon,

Although Holloway made an affidavit for Colicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, which he identified in the court room, swearing to the fact that he left the switch box locked on that Saturday, he positively declared on Thursday that he left it unlocked, and when confronted with his own signature answered, "I forgot." When Holloway took the stand he had hardly started his narrative when Solicitor Dorsey cut him short and addressed the court:

"I wish to state that I have been entrapped by this witness." The solicifor's remarks followed the statement of Holloway that he unlocked the switch box to operate the motor to cut some boards and ran the elevator up to the third floor for White and Denham, and left the box unlocked.

Dr. Claude Smith, city bacteriologist, was on the stand for a while and testified that stains upon certain chips which were brought to him by city detectives. presumably cut from the second floor of the pencil factory, contained blood corpuscles. He could not say, however, that it was human blood; he only knew that it was the blood of a mammal, and under cross-examination by Attorney Rosser admitted that it might have een the blood of a mouse. Dr. Smith examined the shirt, said to have been found in the house of Newt Lee, and declared that the shirt was not soiled save for blood stains and that it appeared not to have been worn recently, as

Mary Phagan had been dead ten or fifteen hours when her body was examined by William A. Gheesling, of P. J. Bloomfield's undertaking establishment, shortly after 4 o'clock on the Sunday merning her body was discovered in the basement of the pencil factory, according to Gheesling's testimony given at the trial of Leo M. Frank during Thursday afternoon's session. Thus according to the undertaker, the little girl met her death some time between the time that she entered the factory at 12:10 o'clock Saturday afternoon and 6 o'clock of the same day, not later than 6 o'clock.

Carrying Education to the People.

There could be no surer evidence of the substantial and far-reaching service of the Georgia College of Agriculture than the large attendance at the farmers' institutes which the College is conducting throughout the State. Up to the present time more than thirty-six thousand farmers have been present at these lectures and demonstrations, about twice the number recorded during the same period last year. The audiences have ranged in size from a hundred and fifty to two thousand people, according to the population of the district. At Talbotton, twelve hundred were present and at Duluth, in an entirely different part of the State, the same number.

The State College of Agriculture is thus reaching the people. It is not merely an institution; it is vital, constructive force. It is stimulating and training not only the hundreds of young men enrolled in its immediate student body but also the thousands of mature farmers who are at work in the fields. Not only does it offer the opportunities of 'education but it also carries those opportunities directly to the rank and file.

This is true service, the sort of service that produces results for the individual and the commonwealth as a whole. Surely, an institution that reaches thirty-six thousand men within a few summer weeks, helping them to solve their problems, encouraging them in scientific and progressive methods, organizing them in a great movement that will bless the State with more varied and abundant harvestssurely, such an institution merits the public's heartlest approval and the Legislature's generous support.

A Discredited Ambassador.

Ambassador Wilson's reception at the White House has been well described as "faultlessly courteous but finally unsympathetic." The Boston Transcript observes in this connection: "The President is determined that his ambassador of the same name shall not have an opportunity to pose as a martyr before the country. The ambassador is to be given a few days in which to recover from the severe nervous strain his duties have entailed, and then his resignation will be accepted."

The sooner he is retired the better; for, his conduct from first to last has been more like that of a personal agent of the usurping Huerta than of a diplomat representing the policies and the interests of the United States. Ambassador Wilson has gone contrary to the counsels of the Taft administration, under which he was appointed, and even more so to those of the present administration under which he has been suffered, through pressure of circumstance, to tarry at the Mexican post. Whether it be true, as some reports would seem to indicate, that he had foreknowledge of the foul conspiracy against President Madero, it is clear that he has done his utmost to enlist the moral and political support of the United States in behalf of those responsible for Madero's murder. He has been a partisan of the Huerta regime, insisting that our Government extend its official recognition to .. cause that is smeared with treason and barbarity.

Such a man does not represent the principles of our Government nor the sentiment of our people. His rash interviews since reaching this country have brought upon him the condemnation even of those who were disposed to sympathize with his recommendations. He is glaringly unfit to hold the Mexican ambassadorship. The President does well to let him go, for, with such an ambassador out of the way, the United States can deal more easily and effectively with the Mexican problem.

Uncle Sam could also lend a little to the public summer vacation fund.

There seems to be nothing left to Huerta now but to assassinate himself.

Lightning made an exception in Atlanta's case and hit twice in the same place.

The One Way Out.

There is but one path of escape from the fiscal perplexities in which Georgia is now involved, and that is a thoroughgoing measure of tax reform. The State stands impoverished amid affluence. Naturally one of the richest commonwealths in all the Union, it is unable to pay its school teachers, unable to maintain its public institutions as they should be, unable to carry out scores of fertile enterprises that are clamoring for performance, unable to meet the simplest needs or to discharge the plainest duties to its citizens.

The cause and the cure for these ills are equally apparent. Our beggarly revenues are due beyond question to an outworn, slipshod system of taxation. The business of a great State cannot be conducted after the fashion of a blind mendicant who holds out his hat for alms. It is only by equalizing taxes among individuals and among counties that the State can ever hope to deal justly with itself and with its people.

To see that this is done is the Legislature's supremely important task. In fairness to all counties and all citizens, it cannot adjourn without passing some adequate measure of tax equalization; and no such measure will be adequate that fails to provide for State as well as county supervision of tax returns. It is to be hoped that the House will reconsider the course it has thus far pursued in this important issue. There are few honest differences of opinion that cannot be reconciled, if those who differ come together in frank and patriotic counsel, remembering that when public interests and a State's good name are in the balance, there is no time for prejudice or hair-splitting. The Journal would not attempt or presume to dictate the action of any member of the General Assembly but, believing as we do that the great majority if not every man of them wishes to serve the State's best and widest interests, we urge them to agree speedily upon some plan of tax equalization that will be genuine and effective.

The need of such action is rendered especially imperative by the fact that the House appropriations by some three hundred thousand dollars. Unless this large discrepancy between income and appropriations is somehow to be evened up, it must be evened down, that is to say the appropriations must be cut. And who will say where the reduction shall Shall we cut the already meager salaries of the school teachers?

Shall we shear the State's institutions of the bare necessities of existence?

Shall we block the progress of agricultural education and those helpful agencies which make for the development of our farms and the prosperity and independence of the farmer?

Shall we deny our children their right to efficient schools and the rank and file of the people their right to efficient, progressive government simply through a failure to enact a practical measure of tax equalization that will put the needed funds in the treasury?

Surely, no member of the Legislature is ready to assume such responsibility! Surely, none of them is ready to go home and tell his people that vital interests which lie close to their business and their hearts have been sacrificed to an antiquated tax system! And yet to this must we come, unless some means of bringing revenues up to appropriations is provided. The Senate should not concur in the appropriations bill as it now stands unless it is accompanied by another bill that will assure an income sufficient to meet the required expenditures; and there is every indication that, otherwise, the Senate will not concur.

This is the problem now before the House-and before all Georgia. Shall it be solved in a spirit of broad, practical statesmanship or left to grow more and more hopelessly entangled? Its only solution, we believe, lies in an agreement among the members of the House on an adequate plan of tax equalization. To the perfection and adoption of such a plan, every member of the Legislature should give earnest and unselfish effort.

All the world looks down on a man who is in a hole.

If you would hit the target of success you must aim before you shoot.

As mirthful a bit of reading as one could find in a summer's day is reproduced elsewhere on this page from the Albany Herald under its own caption, "A Pitiful Exhibition."

This case which the Herald so well describes might impress pathologists as a rare instance of the fossilizing effect of unrestrained spleen and prejudice; but it will doubtless strike the average reader simply as one of those Falstaffian blunders which furnish "argument for a week, laughter for a month

THE KEOKUK DAM

III .- THE POWER PLANT. BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The dam at Keokuk furnishes more power than may be found at any other water power plant in the world, and this is transformed into electric power in quite the most wonderful of power houses. Built out in the river, close to and parallel with the Iowa shore, the power house is a part of the one gigantic concrete monolith that forms the whole project, and of itself is 1,718 feet long, 132 feet wide and 77 feet high. . . .

In this giant house are to be installed thirty of the largest turbine water wheels in existence, fifteen of them being already at work. And here, at these wheels, centers the interest in the whole mammoth project. The generators revolve above the turbines, being fixed to the same shaft. The turbine and the generator together weigh more than 550,000 pounds, and this enormous weight of metal revolves at about the speed of sixty revolutions a minute. The bottom of the turbine wheel is a disk with a plane surface six feet in diameter. It rests on another disk of the same diameter, which is fixed in the bottom of the pit, and the, whole weight of more than half a million pounds revolves on this plane bearing. If it were not for perennially effective lubrication this installation would not last ten seconds, for the friction would destroy both plates.

Oil is forced in between these two disks under such pressure that a film of oil always keeps the two faces separated, and as a matter of fact the whole 550,000 pounds of the revolving part rests on the oil. But suppose something should happen to the oil pumping machinery? Should this oil film fall away, then the upper part would drop down on a set of roller bearings continually immersed in oil, which are set in the surface of the lower plate. Thus the engineers believe they have taken every possible precaution against injury to the plant by the failure of lubrication, since either method would be sufficient, and it is highly improbable that both would fail at the same time.

The turbines themselves, considered apart from the generators to which they are attached, are the largest wheels ever made. They had to be cast at some foundry in the central plain of the continent, as the railroads could not carry them over the mountains. They were cast at Akron, Ohio, and as it was the railroads were severely tested in transporting them to Keokuk. Water tanks and coal chutes between Lake Erie and the Mississippi had to be moved, the car carrying the wheel (only one was shipped at a time) had to be routed over many different railroads in order to make the journey without crossing any but the new style of concrete bridges that have no upper works across the tracks, and executive officers of the railroads had to ride with the wheel so as to give the necessary orders for moving a freight house, or some other obstruction, along the route when occasion demanded. Each turbine was a casting of iron weighing over seventy-three tons, being sixteen and a half feet in diameter and eleven and a quarter feet high.

In the power house each wheel is set in a concrete chamber of its own, a chamber built in scroll fashion with four openings, each of different size, presented to the up-stream sweep of the water, the partitions between these openings being of odd and curious shapes. They are so designed that the water coming through these openings will be swept by the curved surfaces of the inner part of the scroll chamber so that the water will attack every inch of the circumference of the water wheel with exactly the same forc. Then the water is taken off through a drain at the bottom of the chamber so that its suction power when leaving is almost as great as its power when rushing in against the wheel. In this manner the engineers have contrived to obtain for practical use a greater proportion of the energy of the water than ever before has been

The actual exertion of power on the buckets on the wheel is regulated by a system of guide vanes which surround the wheel and which are so regulated that when wide open they will expose the wheel to the full power of the Mississippi and when closed cut off all its power. These vanes are regulated by a sensitive governor, an automatic device so ingenious that when a street car stops to take on a passenger in the city of St. Louis, nearly 150 miles away, and, therefore, a little less power is required for a fraction of a minute, those vanes will close just sufficiently to cut down the power that much, opening again as the faraway street car again makes demand for power.

The shaft on which the turbines revolve is more than two feet in diameter and to the upper part is attached a huge wheel, which is the revolving part of the electric generation. This wheel, over twenty-five feet in diameter, having fixed to its rims coils of wound wire of miles and miles in length. This revolving field turns within the armature which is a huge rim fixed to the floor of the power chamber above, the turbine pits. The entire generator in its case is thirty-one feet in diameter, twelve feet high in the center and over seven feet high at the rim. When the plant is complete there will be thirty of these giant cheese boxes on the floor of the greatest of all power plants.

Students of physics know that the revolving field becomes a mammoth magnet by means of an exciting current and as its coils with their lines of force are cut by the coils in the armature, electricity is generated and may be carried away on wires. The electricity leaves the generator at 11,000 volts, but in a transformer a short distance away it is "stepped up" to 110,000 volts before it goes out on the transmission wires. When it reaches St. Louis or any other city where the power is to be used it is "stepped down" again to 11,000 volts. Those who are not students of physics will have to take this on faith, just as they do all the other mysteries of the electric current.

The city of St. Louis, 144 miles away, receives its power from Keokuk over a transmission line built with the most elaborate precautions against accident or interruption of current. The cables are made of nineteen strands of wire, much stronger than ever before used for this purpose. They are designed to resist a pull of 14,000 pounds, giving a wide margin of safety as compared with the load of 7,000 pounds that would be exerted were the cables encased in half an inch of ice, the temperature at zero and the wind blowing sixty miles an hour,

These cables are carried on steel towers, each one of which, on the straight sections of the line, measures seventy-nine feet in height and twenty feet square at the base, the corners of this square each carrying one leg or the steel tower bolted to an independent reinforced ocncrete foundation weighing two tons, and extending six feet into the ground.

Electrical and hydraulic engineers all over the world have watched with intense interest the successful installation of this greatest of all power plants, and they have willingly crowned Hugh L. Cooper, the chief engineer and creative genius of the enterprise. with the laurel of unstinted praise.

To have harnessed the Father of Waters is itself an undertaking of which any man might be proud, but to have done so in such manner that the highest known records of efficiency were excelled is something that will stand long in the hero stories of an engineering

Now that it has been established, beyond a peradventure of a doubt, that there was no catastrophe in Lima, Peru, as first reported, we may cease to star awake worrying about the town.

The Conning Tower

BY FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

For complete characterization we like this, from a letter written in 1896 to Daniel Gregory Mason by William Vaughan Moody: "Another Girl . . . a Californian, dating mentally from the age of Rousseau and Chateaubriand, with geysers and bursts of romanticism, not to say sentimentality; dating spiritually from the Age of Gold, or some remoter purity, some Promethean dawn, some first-foam-birth in hyperborean seas. She likes Gibson's drawings, adores 'Munsey's', and sings 'Don't Be Cross, Dear,' with awful unction."

Also, for pure charm and frank companionability, we beg to recommend a reading of the Moody letters. They are in the August "Atlantic." Moody was as fine a poet as we know of, and these letters show that he was considerable man, too. So many letters of litterateurs appear to be conscious, as though the writer had a fear or a hope that some day his most trivial communication might be published. That is the impression we cannot efface whenever we read Stevenson's letters; but there is none of that in the Moody collec-

And there were other eyes besides those of Lingo the Leareyed. For was not Susanna the Susceptible in a blue Parissienne Immodiste, there with Hugo the Hugger? And was not Bettina the Barebacked in a pink Decollette Indecente, there with Siegfried the Seeall? And was not Emma the Emulator, who would do anything anybody else did, there in a mauve Dishabille Immoralle, with Damon the Daredevil? who would do anything he wasn't arrested for. And was not Sighlo the Silent there with Vivian the Vivacious? and Tango the Tanglefoot with Editha the Ethereal? and also was not Kiddo the Kisser there with Katrina the Kissable? All to say nothing of many other males and females, besides Mrs. Society Seenothing the chief Chappron whose duty it was to see that no one did anything more indecent than anyone else. And nobly did she do her duty.

Sir: I hope I'm not too late to set myself right about that dinner-party picture in J. Street's "After Thirty" in the August "McClure's." I have had so many "How could you's" showered on me that I feel bound to speak. As a matter of fact, Street was not at that party-it was all hearsay on his part-and as I was there, and sat opposite to those people, I think I ought to know whether the lady sat on the gent's right or not. You see, Street doesn't get around to parties like that. Of course he doesn't always eat at home, but people have to draw the line somewhere, I mean to say. Yours settlingly,

THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPYS.

July 28 .- o my office and busied all the morning over petty business. Comes Will Larned and tells me of a house he hath in Staten Island that he would lease to me, but I like not living away from the town, albeit I do berate it so. So I think to move but a few hundred feet from where I am now, to be near the colege and the library, and also the Psi Upsilon fraternity house where the youths do sing so many melodick songs. To the tennis court, but there came on a great rain, the greatest ever I saw, and I did sit with Reginald Perry and muse upon the way of the world, and we talked of how the rain was good for people for that it did upset their plans, maugre their ingenuity. For Nature is more than Man. But I do feel better disposed toward Man, through greater familiarity.

29.-Bought this day a fine pair of tennis shoes, paying 24s, therefor, and put them on for my game with E. Behar and the sole of one of them did come off in the middle of a set and I did break my raquet, too, and he beat me, but I doubt not he would have done so anyway, what with my lack of skill. Then Will Beebe and I did play against E. Henderson and R. Perry and they did beat us, too, but were hard put to it, and that match I did enjoy better than any, and Mistress Hilda Hedley did watch us from her window, and grieved greatly, methought, at our being overcome. So home, very late to dinner, and laboured all the evening, and so to-bed.

THE MUSICAL CITY

by its noise, by the ugliness of its sounds.

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.) That our civilization is yet but half baked is proved

It is characteristic of the savage that he loves crude sounds. He beats the tomtom. His war songs are harsh yells. His talk is composed of grunts and clicks. His songe are wild and formless croonings. As man advances in culture he invents melodies; still farther along he makes harmonies sequences, applying mathematics to tones, their relation and duration, and bring the art of express. ing sentiment in sound up into the realm of intelligence and creative genius. The progress of the race is measured by the span from the crazy sun dance of the savage to the Beetnoven symphony. But we have not yet felt any serious pressure toward making street sounds musical. Iron-tired trucks still rattle over cobblestones with din and thunder. Street cars roar, screech and clang. Subway trains suggest nothing but the orchestras of hell, and elevated trains the cacophonies of angry harpies. Icemen, peddlers, newsboys, barkers and old clothes men call their wares in tones as rough or as piercing as possible.

Vocal advertisements seem to aim to attract attention, even as biliboards, electric signs and street car advertisements, by the impact of their impudence and their annoying quality upon the spirits of the When we shall have learned that the concord of pleasing sounds is a necessary food to human beings. and that to reduce the friction of daily life to music would add to the joy of existence, we shall order things differently.

First, we shall eliminate all clash of metal upon metal. Any sort of racket will be regarded as a punishable offense against the public peace. The streets will be paved with noiseless asphalt.

Horses will be banished from cities, or become scarce Auto motors will be used exclusively for transportation of both men and goods. Each motor will be equipped with a silencer. Some genius will invent a device to render mute the trains that run on steel tracks. Probably the only reason this has not already been invented is that nobody cares. We are half barbarous, and love noise. The necessary sounds of warning in the steets will be made musical. Would not people learn to jump aside at the melodious blast of a bugle as well as by the horrible honk of a hooting horn or the irritating jangle of an alarm bell? And why should not an automobile play a Wagner motif upon a sweet-sounding instrument?

Then newsboys might learn a picturesque Times motif, or Tribune, or News, or Globe motif. The peddlers might be compelled to sing their wares in tuneful lay. Fire engines might have a brass band phonographic attachment that would peal forth stirring martial music as they sweep through the streets.

Then the whole city, with its intense vitality, would be as a great orchestra and chorus, lifting human souls to beauty and courage, sending forth all day melodies and harmonious paens, instead of the howls and crashes of a witches' Sabbath.

Ugly city sounds come from three sources-the imperfection of roads and vehicles, warning by discord, and advertising by startling and offensive noise. The city of the future will add to human happiness by changing all these to beauty and music.

"A Pitiful Exhibition."

(Albany Herald.)

Who can say that Wilson and Clark and Underwood; Houston, Burleson, McAdoo and McReynolds; Justices White and Lamar, Senators Bacon, Smith, Bryan, Wile liams and Simmons, and scores of others are not werthy of the best traditions of the old south?-The High School Quarterly (Athens, Ga.)

In what way is Mr. Bryan "worthy of the best traditions of the old south," or even of the rather uncertain traditions of the new? He was born in Illinois and resided there until he reached the age of twenty-seven, then removed to Lincoln, Neb., which has been his home ever since. Moreover, he has never shown anything like marked friendship for the south or the southern people and occasionally in former years even exhibited some measure of hostility, as when he refused to vote for Crisp, of Georgia, for speaker of the house on the ground that he was an ex-Confederate soldier. This must be an error that through some oversight escaped correction at the hands of the editor .- Macon Telegraph.

There's a savory morsel for you! It could have appeared on just one editorial page in Georgia. Had we been blindfolded and backed up in stygian darkness, we could have given it proper credit without a moment's hesitation.

The Macon Telegraph, has made itself the laughing stock of the state by just such puerile sallies as the above. The Macon paper's stubsorn refusal to see any possibility of good in the Wilson administration in general, and its daily barking at the heels of William J. Bryan in particular, have led it into a chronic case of the "sillies" of which the Bingville Bugle would be ashamed, and for which there seems to be no cure.

by any possibility fail to understand that the Bryan to whom reference is made in the quoted extract from the Athens High School Quarterly is Senato. Nathan P. Bryan, of Florida. The writer in the Athens publication mentions, first, the president, the speaker of the house and the house leader. In the next group he names four members of the cabinet. Then he mentions the Louisianian and the Georgian who are members of the supreme court of the United States. He next names five senate leaders-Bacon and Smith, of Georgia; "Bryan," of Florida; Williams, of Mississippl, and Simmons of North Carolina. These, mind you, are all southern men. Had the writer of the paragraph intended to include Secretary of State Bryan in his list, he would have placed him among the cabinet officers, and not in the list of senators. As it was, he placed the Florida senator, whose name happens to be Bryan, where it belonged.

But the Telegraph, blinded by prejudice so narrow that it both fails and refuses to see, is oblivious of all else save that the hated name of Bryan appeared in the High School Quarterly's list of southerners "worthy of the best traditions of the old south." Wave a red flag at a bull, and he inquires not whether the rag be silk or calico. Its color alone interests him. The Telegraph, likewise, when the name of Bryan is mentioned in its hearing, or printed where its editor can read, pauses not to inquire or to reason. It immediately opens its ever handy bottle of venom, and proceeds to smear it thickly on its editorial page. It beats a comedy reel at the movies, and yet, it's pitiful to behold.

Appropriations in Georgia

"Not that we may appear approved,

"But that you may do that which honorable,

"Though we be as reprobate." --- 2nd. Cor. 13;7.

Not attacks.

Facts.

Some appropriations in Georgia:

$10,000.00 agriculture.

$10,000.00 carrying out pure food and drug act.

$ 5,000.00 for cattle tick eradication and protection of live stock.

$15,000.00 to developing live stock and exterminating the cattle tick.

$ 6,000.00 to manufacture and distribute hog cholera serum.

$20,000.00 horticulture and entomology.

Nothing for wayward and delinquent girls-for their protection, development and culture-

Later, if-

Maybe, next year-

God pity them!

THEY CANNOT WAIT.

These are girls-not hogs, nor cows, nor fields which may be replaced.

Once lost, these-?

And crime claws-

Hell reaches out for them, even while you talk.

Seventy-five girls-

Only those under sixteen known to us-others-scores are in the state, sinking because there is no place.

Care for prisoners is required by the laws of Georgia and of God, as well as appropriations for sick cattle and hogs. And if the State's wards—we will not call them prisoners—be as they are, these girls, what will you do with them?

In the chaingang?

With the hardened prisoners of the prison farm?

You could not put them in your reformatory for boys.

WHAT OF THESE GIRLS?

The Prison Commission says:

more valuable than our cows and hogs.

"No place for them in Georgia."

Agriculture. Pure food.

Tickless cattle.

Choleraless hogs. These are much to be desired; they should be cultivated and sought. But you know these girls. You would take care of them. They are Georgia's shame! Other states take care of girls. Why not Georgia?

Of the JONES-MILLS BILL providing a reformatory for girls, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY said:

"It was referred to a sub-committee to plan for the creation of a home and to make such changes in the measure for an appropriation that could be granted."

Cutting $45,000 from the $75,000 appropriation asked, the sub-committee reported back the Bill carrying an appropriation of $30,000, for action by the whole committee.

The Penitentiary Committee had previously recommended the Bill without a dissenting vote. All recognize the need.

And if money can be obtained for the cultivation of hogs, cattle and fields, surely it can be found for this-the saving of girls.

NOT AN ATTACK.

A fact:

We believe that the Committee on Appropriations will find a way. While taking care of beasts and spraying bugs, you will not neglect and destroy our girls.

You can protect both.

You will.

The market became extremely apathetic soon fter the opening with no noteworthy changes, save a 1 point gain in Baltimore & Ohlo, and half point advances in Canadian and Illinois Central, these being offset by some pressure upon Union Pacific and Northwestern. Southern and Southwestern stocks declined he government's cotton crop report and adices from agricultural centers pointing to furher serious damage to corn. Chesapeake & Missouri Pacific and Illinois Central delined over 1 point, the last named establishng a new low record. Heaviness became more onounced after foreign buying stopped. The unexpected announcement by the treasiry department of its purpose to make large eposits of government bonds at western and outhern centers in order to expedite the move pent of crops, imparted some strength to to ay's very full stock market, even though it failed to excite more than passing interest in anking circles.

OPENS TOMORROW Georgia State Sale BEGINS TOMORROW MORNING At Augusta, Ga., Nos. 832-838 Broad street, on a plot of ground with a frontage of 67 feet by 273 feet deep, running through to Ellis street, making one of the largest stores in the city, also in the state, will be opened on Saturday, August 2nd, Store No. 148, and in commemoration of the advancement that the Kress business has made in the State of Georgia since Store No. 5 was opened within a block of the new store at Augusta in 1898, or not fifteen years ago, we feel that the people of the State of Georgia should participate in the celebration of this opening and have arranged for a Georgia State Sale beginning Saturday, August 2nd, and ending Saturday August 9th, in all Georgia Kress stores. For these seven days the buyers of the New York office have furnished more than twenty-five special items of exceptional value, which will be placed on sale at advertised hours, some of the articles not being advertised in the newspapers, while others will not be displayed in the windows. Consequently, those who fail to visit the Kress store during the week are likely to miss some of the best values.

Some of the merchandise has been bought to sell at prices which will interest all patrons, the values which have been sent out for this sale surpassing anything that has been before attempted and will make the seven sale days the most profitable events which the tens of thousands who daily visit Kress Stores have enjoyed in a long while.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BED TIME By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Love is a beautiful, wonderful thing. great earth.

Peter Rabbit was finding this out. Always he had been happy, for happiness had been born in him. But the happiness he had known before was nothing to the happiness that was his when he found that he loved little Miss Fuzzytail and that little Miss Fuzzytail loved him. Peter was sure that she did love him, although she wouldn't say so. But love doesn't need words to make itself felt, and Peter had seen it shining in the two soft, gentle eyes of little Miss Fuzzytail. So Peter was happy in spite of the trouble that old Jed Thumper, the big, gray stabbit who was the father of little Miss Fuzzytail, had made for him

H: had tried very hard, very hard indeed, to get little Miss Fuzzytail to go back with him to the dear old briar patch in the Gren Meadows, but in spite of all he could say she couldn't make up her mind to leave the Old Pasture, which, you know, had been her home ever since she was born. And Peter couldn't make up his mind to go back there and leave her because-why. because he loved her so much that he felt that he could never, never be happy without her. When Atlanta Women Buy CRACKERS

If every housewife in Atlanta would look into the Supply-Rooms at the BLOCK Bakeries, she would have fresh faith in BLOCK Crackers and Biscuits.

What would she see?

Just this: The finest of materials and the first grade of ingredients all ready for making into BLOCK Crackers.

Then, if she would look a bit further, she would see how these fresh and perfect materials are handled---the skill, the care, the perfection of detail that enter into the whole process.

I She would find absolute cleanliness and rigidly sanitary methods. She would see that BLOCK products are evolved with fastidious care at every step---from mixing to packing.

Ring the Bell! Start the Wheels!

It's the jingle of the merchant's cash register bell that starts the factory wheels going.

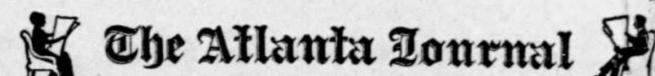

GOODS THAT MOVE ARE GOODS THAT KEEP THE BELL RINGING. Goods of merit with which the public are made familiar through advertising make the merchandise of perpetual motion from factory to consumer.

Retailers are successful to the extent that they can anticipate public wants. Profit lies in moving popular demand.

Demand sets in for the article made familiar by newspaper advertising, and merchants are quick to co-operate by pushing the local demand along.

It will pay manufacturers to spend their money where a market can be centralized and where local merchants will take hold of distribution with enthusiasm and intelligence.

Merchants and manufacturers interested in local advertising for nationally distributed articles are invited to write to the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York.

Ten-Mile Final In Big Event At Motordrome

Two Big Races in Which All Riders Will Participate and Special Match Race Feature Friday's Program

The Atlanta sweepstakes with the final heat ten miles is the big feature offered at the motordrome for Friday evening. This time it looks as if Jack Prince will win out in his fight against old J. P., which will enable him to get away with two races this week something that in the past has been unheard of. On the card for Friday evening every class of motor fans will find plenty of enjoyment. There is the big motordrom purse of three heats and the final; special match race between Harry Glenn and Shields, and the Atlanta sweepstakes with two two-mile trial heats and a ten-mile final in which five riders will participate.

The big spill at Cincinnati a couple of nights ago has caused the promoters of the local track to take extra precaution to again test out the local track and see that it is in fine shape. The riders here are all nervy enough, but they wish to know that they are riding upon a safe track as the local saucer has been proven.

In the race for the motordrome pursa there will be three heats of one mile each with three riders in two of the heats and four in the other. The final will be for two miles with the five riders who made the fastest time in the trial heats. Then will come the special match race between Glenn and Shields. This will be for two miles, the best two in three heats. After that will come the big sweepstake event. The two trial heats will be for one mile with the final going ten. This will bring five riders on the track in each heat and make it ex-

JULIAN MURPHEY_

Custer's last stand is going to have nothing on the attempt of the Atlanta club to finish right up in the front rank of the Southern league. Bill Smith has determination in his eye and he is out to do the tight

When the road trip was finished it looked rather bad for the local outfit but when it is considered that the club plays six series on the home lot right at the close of the year it is not half bad. You know many a pennant has been won at the tail end of a season and the Cracker crew is out to begin climbing with the big series here this week and after holding its own on a short road trip come home for the final spurt.

TEAM APPEARS STRONG.

The team as it now stands looks fairly strong. Of course Alperman is to be missed. He would be missed on anybody's ball club. Yet the addition of Holland and Holtz and the rounding to form of the hurlers and increased hitting by the batters don't make it look as bad as some would have you think. Harry Holland of course is no Ty Cobb but he is a promising young ball player who appears able to fill in a hole at a critical moment.

Ahead of the Atlanta club at the present writing are two clubs that should be shoved down the ladder a bit to their normal position and these are Montgomery and Mobile. Both are good ball clubs, there is no use in denying that, yet they are not one bit superior to the hard hitting crew now working in Atlanta. The only respect in which they have it over the Crackers is teamwork and ability to get along with each other.

The Birmingham club right now stacks up as one of the very best in the league. At the start Molesworth was weak but the addition of McDonald and Kniseley and the rounding to form of his hurling staff has served to make his club most formidable and it can be stated that Moley is going to be right in the running until the last man ts out. And Atlanta should be in there right with the Barons.

ALREADY AFTER HOLLAND. Some few old time fans appear a bit peeved that Harry Holland, a youngster, should have been signed by the Crackers when the team 18 weakened by the loss of such vets as Alperman and Bailey. But just take a tip to the effect that Holland is just as good a player as could have been secured to plug in the gap on the infield. This boy is a real ball player.

In making the statement that Holland is a finished ball player and is sure to be heard from some day I am not furnishing my own opinion but those of baseball scouts who are paid big salaries by major league teams. These scouts are all believed to be good at judging the ability of a young player and every one of them have been after Holland and only Wednesday one major league team offered $3,000 for the young collegian. And this before he had ever put on a Cracker uniform. Suppose that doesn't look half bad.

Brilliant Young California Player Has to Default Owing to Illness

CHICAGO, Aug. 1 .- In a brilliant tourney, featured by unexpected victories of two "dark horses," and a thrilling match between Clarence Griffin. of California, and Heath Byford, of Chicago, the western tennis championship meet at Lake Forest has reached its semi-finals. Friday Griffin will play William Blair, of Lake Geneva, who turned one of the big upsets of the tournament in downing John Adams, of Minneapolis.

John Strachan, who was ill, defaulted his match to L. Harry Waldner, the Chicago veteran. Waidner meets Joe Armstrong, of St. Paul, in the semifinals. Armstrong eliminated Walter T. Hayes, runner-up in last year's tourna-

Armstrong's brilliancy perhaps outshone that of any of the other five players in the fifth round, but it was only slightly superior to that shown by young Griffin and Byford. Summaries: Fifth round:

L. Harry Waidner, Chicago, defeated John Strachan, San Francisco (default). Joseph J. Armstrong, St. Paul, defeated Walter Hayes, Chicago, 6-4, 7-5. Clarence Griffin, San Francisco, decareful fight with Bud Anderson, the feated Heath Byford, Chicago, 4-6, 6-0, William Blair, Lake Geneva, defeated John Adams, Minneapolis, 6-4, 6-4.

Valdosta Gets Season's Best to hold it. Jack Britton, who has beaten him, would take it away if they met.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 1 .- In probably the best game played on the local field this season Valdosta defeated Americus, 2 to 0.

The game was full of sensational fielding by both teams, four fast double plays were pulled off, one by Americus and three by the locals. Medlock hit, a three-bagger to right and scored when Utter lost the ball in a small patch of weeds in the field corner of the

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Feed, Live Stock and Poultry.

ROBABLY there is no one thing that has kept the south from breeding or producing more poultry and live stock than for the want of feed, or for the high price that has to be paid for food to produce them with. It is impossible for any man to buy high priced western feed and put it into poultry or live stock and make a profit out of it. This has kept many a breeder from entering the business and has put thousands of breeders out of business that have undertaken it. It simply cannot be done and until this food is produced on the farm and converted through live stock into cash this industry will never prosper or amount to much in the south until we see this time come. Therefore, we will always be largely dependent on the west the section that makes a specialty of producing food products of all kinds simply because they can supply Georgia and all the other southern states with most of their food. On the other hand as much if not more pounds of food products can be produced on Georgia acres as on any other lands in the world. Yet, we will not raise this food. we prefer raising cotton instead and continue to make the western farmer rich. I don't believe this state of affairs will ever change unless the boll weevil forces it on us. It has become a habit and second nature for Georgia to buy a large per cent of her feed and I guess we will always continue to do so. Yet there is a great demand in this country for live stock, pouland eggs of all kinds and if it could be raised on Georgia grown ted the farmers could not help but convert it into a much larger per cent of profit with less labor and less worry than they can possibly make out of cotton. Hundreds of people have failed to make any money out of poultry simply because they could not afford to buy the highericed feed and sustain them and sell their products in competition with the western products that were grown with home grown feed. and notwithstanding the western breeder could pay the commission and freight rate and then offer his products at less than we can do so. The ame thing has practically applied to meat products until recently. They have become so high now that anyone can, by supplying at home even part of our food products, make a handsome profit out of stock and then buy a part of his feed simply because we have in cotton seed meal and hulls the best and cheapest finishing food to make sood beef with ad milk and butter that was ever grown. But, when it comes to making a profit out of hogs, horses and poultry by feeding them exclusvely western grown feed it is out of the question. It cannot be done and only for fancy, which is limited, can a man in the south make a wofit out of poultry and hogs and have to buy all of their feed. When the statistics are carefully looked over it looks like a shame that this state should send out of its borders every year the amount of money that we do for food products of all kinds, and it is a dismace to the state to continue year by year to let this amount in-Prease instead of decrease which it is gradually doing. We must grow more food and diversify our crops and take better care of our land which we could do if we kept more live stock and poultry, and by starting this work even in a small way and increasing y ar by year a change would come to us almost before we knew it and find this state with an abundance of feed that would be converted into cash if there was some way possible by which we could once get the people intersted and get them in a habit of growing more feed than they have wer done before. To notice every day the train load after train load food products coming into Georgia and the cars going back empty person that notices this cannot help but see this wasteful method growing every day to such an extent that it is alarming, and as the words show during the last three years our state spending more and nore for these things it is becoming a serious question that some etfort should be made to change mat-
