COURT CALL AT 5:30 A. M. CHAPMAN WILL PREACH TO ACCOMMODATE GIRL TO BOYS AND GIRLS

Fair Witness Goes to Work at Six So Recorder Plans Early Session

At the first blush of rosy dawn Wednesday Judge George E. Johnson will rap with his gavel on his desk at police station, calling to order the earliest session of recorder's court in Atlanta's history.

And the cause of this unearthly 5:30 a. m. court is a girl, a pretty girl—the officers say—a working girl and a material witness in the case of the city vs. Jim Rose, Jack Newell and S. V. Porter, charged with violating section 1840 of the city code, which deals with the sale of liquor.

This pretty girl goes to work at 8 a. m. and quits when the whistle blows at 3 p. m. She has only thirty minutes for lunch. And since she is a material witness for the city, pray when is she going to testify?

Why, at 5:30 o'clock in the morning, answered Recorder Johnson, when they asked him. "It will do us all good to get up early for once. I don't want the girl to lose her job, so we'll try this case and then we'll go out and get breakfast. So mind you be here."

And so they are all making their plans accordingly.

The three defendants, who are out on bond, must travel from West North avenue and from Center Hill. The latter will have to rise about midnight in order to be on time.

Judge Johnson himself doesn't have to travel from his home, 302 Louisa street, so he won't have to get up until 6 o'clock.

Officers Sneed and Vaughan, the prosecutors, say they will stay all night at the station.

Judge James W. Meade thinks he can look in from his Whitehall street residence and slumber till nearly 5:15.

Inspector George Corbett says he will have to get up at 4:30 if he wants to make it in from his home, 383 Capitol avenue before 5:30.

Attorney John A. Boykin is figuring on a jitney run to bring him in from where he lives at the far end of Myrtle street out by Piedmont park.

And the girl? Only the policemen know where she lives, and they won't tell.

GRAFANOLAS ARE OFFERED ON EASY PAYMENT PLAN

Atlanta Talking Machine Co. Has Proposition That Is Unique and Attractive

One of the peculiar elements of human nature is its predilection to spend rather than save. This has long been the subject of wide and varied discussions. Economists have written columns about it, while financiers have for years preached frugality and savings, yet each succeeding generation exhibits its identical the same weakness.

Most every one has at some time made a purchase on the basis of easy payments. After the contract has been completed, the purchaser almost invariably makes the same frank statement: they admit they are glad they entered into such an arrangement and that they are owners of the article in question, but state emphatically that if they had been obliged to first save the money and expend it in a lump sum, they seriously doubt if they would have made the purchase.

This characteristic trait of human nature is being strenuously combated by the successful sale of Grafanolas by the Atlanta Talking Machine company. Their easy payment plan is unique and attractive. By an initial payment of only 15 cents the purchaser is permitted to take home a $50 Grafanola. Then for each succeeding week the payments increase but 15 cents each week. After the twentieth week the payments gradually decrease until the last week when the payment is again only 15 cents. It is quite evident that human nature has not changed and that the habit of saving can best be taught when it is clothed in an attractive disguise. (Advt.)

A special sermon to Atlanta boys and girls will be delivered Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman at the Peachtree tabernacle. The evangelist invites parents to bring the children to hear the story of "Five Kings in a Cave." At 7:30 o'clock Dr. Chapman will preach from the text: "He shall be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world."

As a prelude to his Monday night sermon Dr. Chapman again took up the doctrine of Pastor Russell, the "Armageddonist," who spoke Sunday night at the Atlanta theater. Dr. Chapman declared that Pastor Russell holds views directly opposed to evangelical Christianity and quoted several extracts from Pastor Russell's sermons to establish the point. He quoted Pastor Russell's prediction that the millennium "will begin in 1914" and his subsequent change to the wording "may begin in 1914," as that year drew nearer. He also criticized Pastor Russell's declaration that Christ had returned to earth in 1874 as an inviolable spirit, pronouncing him false.

"The Second Coming of Christ" was Dr. Chapman's subject, and he paused in his address to remark: "I'd be ashamed to have Him come and find me tied up with a locker club."

Dr. Chapman discussed the hundreds of Biblical references to the second coming of Christ; and the plainness of it is prophesied, as for example in 1st 1:11: "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall soon come in like manner as you have seen Him go into heaven."

"As a matter of fact," he said, "the evangelical denominations are agreed as to His coming back, but in the manner of His coming, and the time and the attendant circumstances we differ. To me it is not a question for argument; certainly, it is not a question to divide Christians."

"No one knows when He is to come. It may be soon, but I beseech you to be ready for His coming. God pity you if you are not."

WIFE SAYS MATE TOOK MONEY FROM STOCKING

Using a pocketknife to slit open his wife's stocking and remove the money therein while she lay asleep, was one of the misdeeds attributed to G. H. Johnson, of 11 Carroll street, by Mrs. Johnson in her testimony before Recorder Johnson Monday. She said she refused to support herself and their daughter. The recorder ordered him placed on probation.

AUTOMEN WILL BOOST ATLANTA FOR HIGHWAY

Famous Johnson - Sherman Battle March Will Be Urged as Ideal Route

The Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association at an enthusiastic meeting Monday night determined to bring the proposed Chicago to Miami highway through Atlanta and to take and make plans for sending a big delegation on a special train to Chicago April 21 to attend the conference of governors of states along the proposed route.

At this conference an association will be organized to take charge of the plans for the highway and push it to completion as speedily as possible. In addition to the governors attending the conference there will be a large number of county commissioners representing counties along the route.

The Atlanta delegation will be composed of representatives of the Automobile and Accessory association, and various civic bodies of the city, and members of the Fulton county board of commissioners, all of whom will boost Atlanta to the utmost and set forth the necessity of the highway project and not afford to consider any other route than the one through this city.

With them the delegation will take a very interesting map of the famous Johnson-Sherman battle march, from Chattanooga to Atlanta, showing the topography of the route and every battle and skirmish that was fought. This route is not only the best from a topographical standpoint but also the shortest and Atlanta, but it is one that should be in the line of historic interest which would be certain to attract hundreds of tourists.

Practically every county between Atlanta and Chattanooga is strongly in favor of the highway and stands ready to build roads in keeping with the very best roads anywhere else between Chicago and Miami.

As for the counties south of Atlanta, extending as far as the Florida line, they are bidding against one another to get the highway, and are therefore certain to build very fine automobile roads.

Fulton county, of course, will do her full share and more. If the county commissioners of this county are already on record as saying they will take up the highway at any point on the north boundary of the county where it is located, and carry it through to the south boundary, it would be certain to attract many of the best modern type of road construction.

Prospects for an early completion of the entire highway from Chicago to Miami are very bright. Good roads are already built practically all the way from Chicago to Indianapolis, and from there to Louisville, Ky., while south of Louisville there are many stretches of fine roads which only need to be connected up here and there to make one continuous broad highway from the Great Lakes to the Florida coast.

LOVERS OF VAUDEVILLE HAVE NO KICK COMING ON FORSYTH THIS WEEK

Exceptionally Good Bill Presented With Plenty of Fun in Every Feature—Joseph Jefferson Headliner

In print, somehow, it doesn't arrive as being exceptionally good, but when you've seen the bill at the Forsyth this week, you'll find there's no kick coming. Even a chronic growler of those perpetual knockers—couldn't have the gall to growl that he didn't get any money's worth and more.

There is Eddie Mack and Dot Williams, dancers, who start the bill off with a swing. Their stairway dance, in which the two fancy capers up and down a flight of steps, appealed to the audience as good, but nothing like as fine as Mack's imitation in which he literally made his feet "talk."

Jack McLeod and Al Carl, a banjo player and a violinist with hair like a lion's mane, keep up the good pace set by the dancers.

Madden and Fitz Patrick present a splendid playlet, in which Madden, as a longhair, turns out to be all that the audience could wish in a piano player. Baby Hester, with some cleverly told jokes and some entertaining renditions of "Tiptoeing" and "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," Baby Hester is a golden-haired, blue-eyed miss of less than a year, who is billed as a "prima donna, monologuist, jester and a miniature Tetrastriani, who sings F. above high C."

Joseph Jefferson and company present another of the funniest skits of the year. Jefferson's splendid talent is adapted to excellent lines and this number proves one of the season's big hits.

Eddie Mack and Frank Oeth, in "The Wrong Hero," a funny, snappy skit, bring much deserved applause.

Charlie Abner and his big company, present a regular scream—a slapstick cream that "has to be seen to be appreciated."

All of which makes as good now as ever the old time expression, "It's a fine all-around bill." Fine's the word. If you're looking for two hours of fun, it's right on top at the Forsyth.

Seats for the engagement of "Lady Luxur" at the Atlanta Friday and Saturday, with Saturday matinee, were placed on sale today. This is the first musical show that Atlanta has had in several weeks, and it comes well welcomed from an engagement at the Casino in New York. The company is under the management of Charles H. Wiers, and Rick Johnson Young, who wrote the book and lyrics. William Schroeder, who composed the music; R. L. Burdette, who staged the piece; Charles S. Morgan, Jr., who rehearsed the dances, and Lady Duff Gordon, who designed and executed the elaborate costumes, all had a hand in its making.

Atlanta picture fans saw Betty Mangler, the star of the Royal Theater of Copenhagen, for the first time Monday evening, when she starred in one of her many screen favorites. In "The Celebration" now being offered at the Grand, she bears out the unusual reputation created by her roles in other pictures. She has only recently come to America, and "The Celebrated Scandal" will be her first picture attempt.

"The Celebrated Scandal" will be the picture for today and tonight, after which comes "Carlyle Blackwell" in "The High Hand," Jacques Patrelle's undying story of love and politics.

Pickaninnee Swope Banquet Dessert and Have Glorious Feast

Sweet shreds of ambrosia clinging to the hands, mouths, noses and other prominent eating utilities of five small darlings, led to the solemn Monday evening of a mysterious disappearance of a C. A. enthusiastic of a delectable desert. The twenty-five members all of the association's general membership committee, had been summoned to a "get-together" supper at the building on Luckie street at 8:30 o'clock Monday evening.

They dined well, their appetite whetted by the announcement of ambrosia and whipped cream for the hereafter. And then came the disappointing moment when the head cook yelled, "It's gone!" The ambrosia, which was in the kitchen window still, had disappeared.

It was Harrison Jones, aided by two policemen, who conducted a still hunt for the ambrosia which ended in a negro cabin in the rear of the Y. M. C. A. They found no ambrosia, but a kicked platter and an expression of satisfaction on the faces of five young negroes. The twenty-five enthusiasts dined on whipped cream sans trimmings.

ANGRY NEGRO PUTS OWN CHILD ON HOT STOVE

Fred Greer, colored, returned home Monday afternoon, quarrelled with his wife and in a fit of rage, seized a two-year-old girl baby and sat her on a red hot stove. The child was burned severely in two places, according to its mother.

She was so angered by the occurrence, that she called the police, and a cordon of officers surrounding the house Monday night arrested Greer. He is accused of being the negro who seriously wounded Officer Edwards in a pistol duel nearly a year ago.

Charlie Abner and his big company, present a regular scream—a slapstick cream that "has to be seen to be appreciated."

All of which makes as good now as ever the old time expression, "It's a fine all-around bill." Fine's the word. If you're looking for two hours of fun, it's right on top at the Forsyth.

The Fall of Przemysl.

With the possible exception of Antwerp, Przemysl is the most important capture in the war. This at least is the contention of the Allies, who believe that the fall of the Austrian fortress "opens a door to Cracow and the plains of Hungary." The Teutons themselves admit the seriousness of their loss, though, naturally, they do not regard it as a decisive stroke in the eastern campaign.

Przemysl has been invested since early autumn, and until now has withstood its foes with remarkable courage and hardihood. Not until the garrison was reduced to a dwindling ration of horse flesh and was preyed upon by disease did it think of capitulation. It is noteworthy that while the Germans took Liege, Namur an Antwerp after comparatively brief sieges, the Austrian stronghold, though not really as secure and certainly no more bravely defended than those of Belgium, held out for six months. The difference was chiefly that the German siege guns of Germany and the ordinary artillery of the Russians.

With the fall of Przemysl, Austria's only remaining garrison in Galicia is Cracow, near the German border; and against that city the Russians are now preparing to hurl their vast and reinvigorated forces. Does this mark the decisive turn in the eastern war, so long as has shifted with bewildering uncertainty?

Undoubtedly, the military effect of this capture is far-reaching; its moral effect may be even more. Its significance and possibilities will not be lost on the wavering Balkan nations. As the attack of the Allies' fleet in the Dardanelles crystallized sentiment in Greece and hastened developments in Italy, so the success of the Russians in Galicia may bring Rumania and Bulgaria to a decision.

If Europe needs our cotton now, she will use two crops after peace is declared.

Georgia's Crop-Growing Lesson.

The preeminent opportunities for raising food crops in Georgia and neighboring States are summed up in this striking passage from a bulletin by the Southern Settlement and Development Organization:

"Southern farmers who practice proper methods of agriculture and soil improvement can grow more bushels of corn to the acre than can the farmers in the so-called Corn Belt of Illinois and Iowa, for the South's climate is preeminently a corn climate. Every native-born corn-grower (contact has been won by a Southerner—every one of them. Southern farmers can raise cattle, hogs and sheep cheaper than can farmers in other sections of the country, because long crop-growing seasons mean longer pasturing, less feeding and cheaper forage. Southern truck gardeners, by means of multiple farming—that is, growing from three to five or more crops a year on the same land—make much more money from each acre than the truck gardener of the East, North and West. This, the Southern farmer is able to do because of his long crop-growing season. Southern orchards produce finer fruit with more certainty than is produced elsewhere, because the South's climate minimizes frost and the South's abundant moisture makes irrigation unnecessary, so that water-logged fruit is not produced."

Georgia's yearly average of crop-growing days is two hundred and thirty-five. In the northernmost counties, it ranges from one hundred and ninety to two hundred and twenty days, and in the southern part of the State reaches nearly three hundred days. Ohio's crop-growing season averages only one hundred and sixty-five days; that of the Dakotas, only one hundred and forty; and that of Iowa varies between a hundred and thirty and a hundred and twenty days.

This interesting record shows that with proper methods and due energy Georgia farmers can excel in those branches of agriculture which now are most highly developed in other regions.

It's always an era of hard times with a shiftless man.

Looking to the South.

For permanent relief from the meat shortage, America must look to the States south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi. That is the opinion of the president of the Union Stockyards and Transit company, of Chicago, who speaks from broad and intimate observation. The day of the big cattle ranges in the West is ending. In the greater part of the North, natural conditions and economic tendencies are against the production of beef animals for market purposes. It is in the South alone, and mainly in the Southeast, that the basic resources of this industry are abundant and easily available.

Georgia, for example, has the climate and pasturage which reduce to a minimum the cost of housing and feeding cattle, and it has thousands of acres, now idle, which could be used profitably for this purpose. Moreover, it is within a comparatively short shipping distance of the great centers of demand. So with other States in the Southeast. They have the natural resources for solving a great problem of the country's food supply, and, at the same time, of increasing immeasurably their own fortune and power.

The scope and importance of this problem is indicated by the fact during the last ten years the supply of food animals has decreased while the population of the United States has grown by giant bounds. In the decade ended 1909, there was a decrease of nine million head of cattle, nine million sheep and five million hogs. In the same period, population increased more than twenty million. From 1909, the tendency continued downward until last year, when a slight increase in meat production was noted. But the gap between demand and supply is still wide.

This condition bears vitally on economic and social interests. It enters largely into the cost of living and standards of living. It affects millions of households. By using its resources to increase the supply of food, the South will exert far-reaching influences on the business and, perhaps, the character of the nation.

Before the South can think of feeding the nation, however, it must be prepared to meet its own wants. Before the Georgia farmer can enter the enticing fields of exportation, he must supply his own household's needs. We must solve immediate problems and grasp the opportunities at hand before we can deal with those which loom vast upon the horizon. Some seasons ago an investigator found that the average farm home in Georgia was producing for each member of the family less than two eggs a week, less than two-thirds of an ounce of butter, only two-thirds of a pint of milk a day, and one-third of a hog, one-twelfth of a beef and one-hundredth of a sheep a year. In the same year, the State's money from cotton lacked nearly forty million dollars of paying its bill for foodstuffs bought in distant regions. That is the urgent problem which Georgia must attack with all the care and energy at its command. Let the Commonwealth become self-sustaining as regards food necessities, and it can then make its wonderful resources felt in every market of America and the world.

There is cheering evidence that the present year will witness the most abundant and most varied production of foodstuffs in Georgia's agricultural record. Certain it is, that every prudent farmer is preparing to raise his own corn and, if possible, his own wheat, his own forage, his own peas, potatoes and other vegetables, and he is preparing to raise his own meat. One autumn of such results will advance the interests of the State ten years, and will present an argument of prosperity so convincing that Georgia will never return to a one-crop system of farming. Having learned to supply its own needs, the South will then turn with confidence and enthusiasm to a larger development of those resources from which the nation's meat shortage must be filled.

1915 Opera, a Great Opportunity

(Augusta Chronicle.)
About as big an error of judgment as could have been conceived was that of the man who intimated, some months ago, that the Atlanta Music Festival Association had made a mistake in its decision to bring Metropolitan Grand opera down south this spring.

Everyone realizes the value to the whole south of the Atlanta opera season as an institution. That it is a great force for general culture and musical development throughout the region, as well as a source of deep and unique pleasure to those who can afford to enjoy its offerings, none can doubt. And that the south's love for the splendor of this most elaborate, expensive and wonderful of musical enterprises has already given her a large prestige in the musical world who keep in touch with its periodicals know full well. But the point is that the undertaking of the present season is a thing of keenest value in this regard, and its success a matter of crucial importance to all Dixie.

What could be more significant to a watching world of art than the fact that the south, reputed to be in a state of depression, is the only section of the country, outside of New York, willing to support Metropolitan opera? The success of the enterprise will indelibly stamp this section as the greatest field for musical endeavor and musical appreciation in the United States. For the success of Atlanta opera is only achievable through the love of music in the breasts of a whole people, and not the support of a few millionaires, to the lack of a limited set of millionaires. The true promise of such a reputation can be properly estimated only in the light of those prophecies which hail America, as the future home of the world's art.

The path chosen by the Atlanta people was one of infinite wisdom, for it was the only way to act wisely by giving their action the stamp of the most enthusiastic and vigorous approval.

"The average popular novel shows on the novelist's part an ignorance of his trade which reminds me of a New England clerk."

RESCUING MINERS

BY FREDERICK J. HARRIS.
A FEW weeks ago newspapers all over the country recounted the rescue by the trained forces of the United States bureau of mines of forty-two miners who were trapped by an explosion in the mine of the New River and Pocahontas Consolidated Coal companies of West Virginia.

To the casual reader, the details of the New River disaster were much like those of the numerous others that frequently take place. There was a terrific explosion, the cause of which was unknown, the mine with poisonous gases, destroyed its ventilating system and buried alive 164 men. Forty-seven of these were rescued, the average reader, a rather small percentage to save. In point of fact, that any of the miners were brought out of that poison chamber alive is little short of a miracle, and what is more, it is a triumph of modern mine rescue methods which is of the utmost significance, both from a humanitarian and from an industrial point of view.

The death toll taken by our mining industries constitutes one of the most serious industrial problems in the United States. Hundreds of miners every year lose their lives, and only a small percentage of the accidents are due either to their own carelessness, or to that of their employers. A coal mine is an underground labyrinth, often miles in extent, filled with mysterious and deadly forces. Many of the explosions and fires are due to the carelessness of the miners, who unnecessarily risk their lives in their daily work.

For many years the bureau of mines has been perfecting methods and apparatus for rescue work in coal mines. It has brought from Germany and other European countries the latest types of oxygen tanks and has been successful in establishing a rescue service. It has sent its trained men all over the country, teaching miners how to rescue and resuscitate their fellow-miners. Above all, it has sought to establish a more scientific method of procedure to be used at all disasters.

In the case of most mine explosions the immediate result has been something close to a panic. Miners have rushed in to the aid of their comrades without proper preparation and have often lost their own lives. Such a case occurred at Hamblin, Wyo., not many years ago when an explosion occurred in a small mine where sixteen men were at work. Forty others rushed to their assistance and all of them were killed by a second explosion. Their bones are sealed up in the mine today.

All the teachings and efforts of the United States bureau of mines have been directed to overcome these conditions and to go about the work of rescue in an orderly and scientific way. The New River disaster these methods were put into force almost without a hitch. It is probable that every man was saved who possibly could have been saved, and it was conclusively demonstrated that courage, combined with scientific methods, can greatly reduce the mortality of mining disasters.

In all of the disasters at which experts of the bureau have been present, the rescue work has been organized, only 100 men who had been employed were brought out alive. That forty-seven should have been rescued is a triumph, and it is a credit to the bureau's methods of the bureau have become.

When word of the explosion at New River went humming over the wires, the nearest car of the bureau of mines was several hundred miles away. Furthermore, the rescue work was hampered by the fact that the mine was several hundred miles away. Everything else was abandoned by the railroad companies, however, and the rescue work was hampered by the fact that the mine was several hundred miles away. Everything else was abandoned by the railroad companies, however, and the rescue work was hampered by the fact that the mine was several hundred miles away.

Upon reaching the mine, the rescue men did not rush in. In the first place, it is useless to rush into coal mines unless you are familiar with it; and in the WASHINGTON, March 22.—(Shortly after the adjournment of congress, a certain southern senator walked up to Representative Finley, of South Carolina, and began to talk to him about the fact that he had to have two more clerks added to his committee at the last moment.

"Why do you want more clerks now with congress adjourned?" asked Finley. "They would just draw pay and have nothing to do until next December."

"Well, you see," explained the senator, "I was going to have them during the summer, but I had to have them now because of the fact that I had to have two more clerks added to his committee at the last moment."

The people of Buenos Aires maintain great style even in death. La Recoleta is their fashionable burying ground. It is a miniature city built of marble and granite. Its spires and towers and minarets stand in the air like the steeples and towers of the greater city around it. One is for the living and the other for the dead.

Paved walks lead through the blocks of tombs, and on every side there are stone angels in prayerful attitudes and bronze and marble statues of the dead. As one passes along the silent avenues a Father Time leans upon his marble scepter and holds up an hour glass in his right hand.

The manner of burial here is different from the usual custom in this country. Instead of burying the dead in the earth, it is put on a bier, and the bier is carried to the tomb. The bier is carried to the tomb by a funeral procession, and the bier is carried to the tomb by a funeral procession.

LIEBMAN
REAL ESTATE AND RENTING
17 WALTON ST.

now actively in business. Clark Howell, editor of the Constitution, will act as toastmaster.

There will be only three formal speeches. They will be delivered by Governor Statton, by General A. J. West, who himself is a veteran, real estate agent, and by Major John S. Cohen, of The Journal.

It will probably be the largest gathering of real estate men ever held in Atlanta, and the historic feature of the occasion will lend it special significance.

There will be a good time all around, and nothing has been spared for the enjoyment of the guests.
