GERMAN DEMANDS IS EXPECTED TODAY

While Note Is Being Sent Through Gerard Kaiser Takes Occasion to Give American Shippers Another Warning

GERMANY EXPECTED TO ASK FOR MORE TIME

Believed That Berlin Will Ask That Type of Ship Sunk Be Fully Described Before Further Negotiations

(By Associated Press.)
BERLIN, May 29.—Via London, 6:25 p. m.—Germany's answer to the ultimatum note was delivered to Ambassador Gerard this morning.

The German reply avoids decisive statements in regard to the questions raised by the United States, pending a further exchange of views.

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 29.—Germany's reply to the American note regarding the destruction of the Lusitania was believed today by administration officials with kept interest. It was to be handed to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin today, who it was believed, he would immediately cable it to the state department. Unofficial information received here today said the ultimatum given to the German press tomorrow for publication. It probably will be given out for publication at the same time.

Unofficial sources said the reply would embody a proposal to the United States to defer consideration of Germany's submarine policy and the American demands until the two governments have had an opportunity to determine just what sort of vessel was sunk. It was stated that the vessel was a passenger liner, and that the American note, an auxiliary note from the British navy, and the cancelled cannon and carrying mules was an indication that the ultimatum the German government claims to have.

The reply, it was said, would be in effect an invitation to "define the terms of the ultimatum" in a proceeding with the discussion. American note had caused widespread speculation in official and diplomatic circles.

This Is the Year for The 17-Year Locusts To Be Upon The Wing

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 29.—Warning of the expected reappearance of the locusts is expected from the insect department of agriculture. Little actual damage to nurseries and young plants is expected from the insect. Scientists of the department, however, are keeping a close watch of the territory where the locusts are due to appear with a view to minimizing the damage.

While the expected brood is said not to be an important one, it covers a much wider territory than any of the other broods of locusts. It covers a territory extending from the Mississippi to the Hudson and the Mississippi, and extends to the north and south of the Atlantic coast. It is expected that the locusts will appear in this particular territory in 1918.

The Atlanta Journal.

JAMES H. GRAY, President and Editor. Telephone Department 4000 and 4000 Local and News Departments 4000 and 4000. For all other departments, ask for exchange—Main 1000.

Prez seems to be too hot to hold. Cheat up. Look back on the days when Atlanta had a winning team.

Unshakable.

Under less stable economic conditions, such an incident as the reported torpedoing of the American steamer Nebraska, following as it did the grave losses of the Lusitania's destruction, would have caused widespread disturbance in the country's financial affairs.

This confidence is based upon a broad record of assuring facts. Our exports for April were one hundred and thirty-four million dollars in excess of imports, although imports were not much below the corresponding month of 1914.

The season will also mark the graduation of the annual number of bush league ball players. If cotton can hold its own now, what couldn't it do with the war over normal conditions prevailing?

Southern Shipbuilding.

The announcement that a four-million dollar ship-building plant will be constructed at Mobile, Ala., is of signal importance to the industry and commerce of the South.

Especially are the South's interests involved in this need. By every natural circumstance, the South should have a large share of Latin-American commerce and should profit by the Canal more directly, perhaps, than any other section.

The Mobile enterprise is a notable step toward meeting these conditions. Though it does assure the building of ships, it will provide admirable means for building them; and the very fact that capitalists feel safe in investing four million dollars for this purpose augurs a good future for the ship-building industry in the Southeast.

The new plant, it is said, will occupy about fifteen acres and will be equipped for the construction of six hundred-foot vessels. It will also include an eight-hundred-foot dry dock and a marine railroad.

The warning nations have some conscience. They all make excuses for waging the war. "Money and the mob put Italy in the war," Holweg says. But what put Germany in it?

The Suffering of Northern France.

The appeal of the Georgia branch of the American War Relief Association for gifts of clothing, medical supplies or money to help the destitute women and children of northern France will doubtless meet a generous response. The plea is not in behalf of a military cause. It is simply in behalf of humanity.

Small contributions from a large number of Georgians will do much to relieve this distress. Garments for babies and children will be especially acceptable. The State committee, of which Dr. F. E. May, of Atlanta, is chairman, will be grateful for any kind of donation. Food supplies, however, are not requested. Our people were very liberal last autumn in helping Belgium at a time when they themselves were under economic strain.

The Japanese are probably getting tired of being regarded as the "quicker" looking or trouble on this continent and never fading it.—Washington Star.

The People and the Kings.

Whatever may be thought of Italy's warrant for entering the war, it is certain that she entered on the broad will of her people, not at the instance of her rulers or for the glory of a king. It was extremely difficult, indeed, for the Government to restrain the country's aggressive impulse during the long months of diplomatic parleying.

What a contrast to this example is presented by the course of the Teutonic empires and Turkey! The people of Germany are now unquestionably behind the Kaiser, and the people of Austria, with the exception of certain Slav elements, are undoubtedly behind their Emperor. But in the decision for war as against peace, the masses of Germany and Austria were not consulted. The rulers acted and the people obeyed.

Broadly speaking, it may be said that the present war is a struggle between these two principles—the principle of popular or representative government and the principle of absolutism. Russia accepted, each of the Allies is a nation of citizens or free self-governing, while the Teutonic powers and Turkey are each a nation of subjects.

"Austria, Germany and Turkey are autocratic monarchies, warring against three democratic monarchies and a republic. Belgium is the most democratic of all; there was more than formality in King Albert's address to his Parliament, in that he called them 'Fellow-Citizens.' Great Britain, France, and Italy are not merely countries of free speech, but of free action. The Government of none of them could act against the will of its people. It takes nothing from the clarity of the fact to say that the people of Germany and Austria are with the Government; they were not consulted, and the war was made for the purposes agreed on by the rulers of those two countries.

Years before the present war there was stir in Germany and, to an extent, in Austria as well ideas and forces of democracy which were bound to triumph soon or late. May it not be supposed, then, that the defeat of Germany in this struggle would hasten the development of her own democratic tendencies and thus eventually prove fortunate for her people? The course of human history is often so whimsical and uneven that we can merely guess the outcome or even the direction of events. But if there is one principle above all others of which we may feel sure, it is the growth of democracy among the nations of the world.

Indications are that there will be no sane Fourth of July in Europe.

Editorial Echoes

The Japanese are probably getting tired of being regarded as the "quicker" looking or trouble on this continent and never fading it.—Washington Star.

If we have to go to war we want Bill Suttive, of the Savannah Press, to be captain of our company. And you can bet when Bill steps up brandishing his sicknecness and shouts: "Follow me, my brave lads!" we are going to follow him, because we know he's going to know the quickest way to some quiet place where there's no fussing going on.—Macon Telegraph.

Oregon newspapers object to the Youth's Companion's reference to the Cello canal as "making the Columbia river navigable for 500 miles farther into the wilderness. They point out that the wilderness consists of the quickest and arches broken by populous cities. Discontent Ruins Good Looks.

Since an attractive appearance is a real asset, it cannot be too often emphasized that the features of the face are profoundly affected by a person's habitual state of mind. Long persistence in what has been called "discontent thinking" is certain to mar one's good looks.

It does this through the subtle influence which disturbing emotions exercise over the bodily processes. Not only do such emotions so affect certain muscles of the face as to give them a listless or unattractive "set," but they also cause changes in circulation and nutrition which are injurious to the appearance.

Consequently the functions themselves are interfered with, and especially as a result of impaired circulation, external indications of the interior physical trouble soon become evident.

Discontent furnishes a striking example of how adversely the appearance may be affected by the mental state. The person who constantly feels dissatisfied with his or her lot in life is certain soon or late to acquire hard lines about the mouth and eyes, while the lower lip is drawn down in a way that accentuates the general harshness of expression.

Moreover, through the unfavorable action of the state of discontent on the circulatory system, the eliminative organs, the face becomes more or less haggard and gaunt, the skin loses its clearness and radiance, and the hair, especially if it is naturally the rosy bloom of health, becomes thin and turning down slightly at the corners.

On the other hand, the cultivation of the spirit of contentment, which is the secret to making the best of things as they are, while relentlessly striving to improve them, is equally certain to affect the facial expression in a beneficial way, and to give the features the various physical organs and processes.

Only for the sake of one's good looks, it is wise to be contented.

The Rights of Man.

A book that ought to be studied by every young American, a book from which extracts ought to be made for use in the schools of our public schools, is Thomas Paine's "Rights of Man."

Because of his severe criticisms of conventional religion, in his "Age of Reason," and his other writings, Tom Paine's name used to be among the bugaboos for children, and for long held place in that dreaded and heretic trinity of "Infidels," Voltaire, Paine, and Ingersoll.

It is a clear, masterful and vigorous statement of the rights of man, and of the principles of democracy which it recommends to it. Written about the time of the birth of the United States, and dedicated to George Washington, it is a masterpiece of democracy to be found on the library shelf. It deserves a place among the books that mark the progress of the world.

It is therefore not unlikely that the fourteenth-guns of the American navy would begin firing at an enemy fleet at a distance of fifteen and twenty miles.

WHEN THE LADY AT JEAN'S FORGOT MAX

PARIS—"Look at her puffing out her chest," said the guide, cynically. "She is trying to make him believe she loves him."

We looked at her on the other side of the long dining table. Evidently she was feeling bad, and sustained a technical injury. She was using up her undeniably the eyes upon the man seated by her side on the green leather bench. As the guide had observed, her chest was puffing furmily.

THE FLEET IN ACTION---Its Guns

THE one best bet of the United States in case of war with a first-class power is the big guns of its navy. They are the most formidable objects that would stand in the way of an enemy who might attempt to invade American soil.

American authorities state that this is the best gun in any navy. They hold that this claim is not based upon pride of their own service nor patriotism, but upon known facts. There is but one bigger gun in the navies of the world—that mounted upon the Queen Elizabeth and her three sister British ships, and which has been taking a leading part in the reduction of the forts of the Dardanelles.

There is a definite way of figuring the relative power of such broadsides. A shell from the big guns of the Queen Elizabeth weighs 1,200 pounds and a broadside from the eight fifteen-inch guns of the Pennsylvania weighs 1,400 pounds and a broadside from twelve of the sixteen-inch guns of the Arizona weighs 1,600 pounds.

The great size of this fourteen-inch gun is hard to appreciate. The mere barrel of it weighs six hundred tons and would be an overload for a freight car. If it were possible to get a wagon strong enough to hold it it would require sixty horses to haul it. It is forty-eight inches across the big end of this gun barrel and the walls are four inches thick, four to five feet long and twenty-four inches across the muzzle at the little end.

American made guns have proved the best in the world. It is acknowledged abroad that the American gun has a superior range and penetration. This ability is attributed to its originality and daring, supplemented by the fact that the greatest steel works in the world have been developed in the use of this steel in such a way as to make it capable of resisting the greatest possible pressure at the time of firing.

These guns, now mounted aboard the New York and Texas, are capable of shooting across the English channel. By pointing the muzzles down the air, it is possible to drop a shell thirty miles away. This ability is not considered of any particular value, however, as an enemy ship could not be hit at such a distance. The longest range shot ever made, however, was made by the United States navy in 1912, when a shell was fired from the Texas at a distance of twenty miles.

It is therefore not unlikely that the fourteenth-guns of the American navy would begin firing at an enemy fleet at a distance of fifteen and twenty miles.

clash that meant the destruction of mighty ships would take place at ranges around six to seven miles. At that distance it should be possible to hit a battleship with regularity, and at that distance the 14-inch shells would penetrate to the main gun turrets. They would blow through eight or nine inches of armor plate, and explode in the vital parts of the vessel. At closer ranges they would go through twenty-five inches of such steel.

Every time one of these guns is fired in actual battle it would cost the government $15,000 in actual cost of the shell and the powder. The powder is a cheap. Such a shot costs $150. Shell are powder when it is fired is 370 pounds of emulsion powder. When it is fired it is 370 pounds of emulsion powder. The strength of the force set in motion would be sufficient to lift that mighty ship twenty feet out of the water. The shells would be sufficient to lift 15,000 pounds of the Washington monument. Since the cost of $4,000 to fire such a broadside in target practice is so small, it is not surprising that it is so evident that these big guns may not be expected to work very regularly.

Were an enemy fleet to cross the Atlantic and attack the American fleet, a peculiar advantage would be with the latter. This advantage has grown out of the fact that the American fleet is generally in the waters, as compared with those that prevail in the North sea. The North sea, for instance, is seldom open to the American fleet. The American fleet has an enemy at a distance greater than ten miles, and British authorities have figured chiefly upon the fact that the American fleet is in the North sea. The American fleet has an enemy at a distance greater than ten miles, and British authorities have figured chiefly upon the fact that the American fleet is in the North sea.

The ships of the navy preceding the Texas and the New York carried twelve-inch guns in place of the fourteen-inch that is now the standard. Their range and penetration was almost as great, but they weighed 500 pounds lighter, could not carry the same amount of explosive and therefore did less damage. The shells of the fourteen-inch guns of the Pennsylvania weigh 1,400 pounds and a broadside from twelve of the sixteen-inch guns of the Arizona weighs 1,600 pounds. The shells of the fourteen-inch guns of the Pennsylvania weigh 1,400 pounds and a broadside from twelve of the sixteen-inch guns of the Arizona weighs 1,600 pounds.

Supplementing these big guns there is a smaller gun that would be used in the same way. This is a five-inch gun, but may be as large as seven inches. It fires a shell ranging in weight from fifty to a hundred pounds. The shells of the five-inch gun of the Pennsylvania weigh 1,400 pounds and a broadside from twelve of the sixteen-inch guns of the Arizona weighs 1,600 pounds.

The chief purpose of the smaller guns is to repel attacks by destroyers or submarines. These vessels are armored and their resistance is not great, and it is therefore unnecessary to fire the big guns on them. These smaller guns are used in the same way.

None of these guns is to be fired in the maneuvers that will be held at the place of Narragansett bay. The battleships have target practice but once or twice a year when they meet, usually off Hampton Roads, and the destroyers have target practice once or twice a year when the targets are set up far out to sea and the battleships steam past them at distances of two, three and four miles. POLICE CHIEFS HEAR ADDRESS BY BEAVERS

Efficiency of Police Department Discussed at Convention in Cincinnati

(Special Dispatch to The Journal) CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 25.—Police Chief James L. Beavers, of Atlanta, today delivered an address on "The Efficiency of the Police Department" before the annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police of the United States and Canada in session here.

"Efficiency in a police department is the first requisite for results," said Chief Beavers. "Without efficiency results are nil. There are different opinions as to what constitutes efficiency. The chief duty of a police department is not the punishment of crime, but the prevention of crime. If a police department, he said, suits until a murder is committed in some suspected gambling room or diva, then it is lacking in efficiency.

The efficient police officer, he said, should first be a law-abiding citizen himself, and should be honest and faithful and have the moral courage to do the right thing. "No reward can be a good officer, and the moral reward is twofold more than the physical," remarked the chief in this connection.

Touching on the military phase of the police department, Chief Beavers declared every police department should have enough military bearing to make a good appearance, but "should not drift too military tactics to the neglect of the duties they are expected to perform."

The trouble with most departments is most cities, the chief continued, is to require change in city administration, but fortunately civil service in many cities is some far forward-looking this evil.

This brought the chief to the subject of law enforcement, and in this connection he said: "A police department should enforce the laws as written. No police officer has a right to ignore any law because he thinks it is a bad law. He should think public sentiment is against it."

Discussing the importance of the qualifications an individual officer should possess, Chief Beavers said that the most important things for a police officer is absolute obedience to those who are in authority. The efficient officer should not allow anything but his duty to occupy his mind. He should not hang around and gossip the hours away, because the man who does this never sees much of the good around him. A thoroughly efficient man will run his temper, for an angry man about as unit, for any man who is drunk man. Many opportunities are given him to be harsh and unkind to those in his custody. He must control himself.

The chief, in speaking of the "third degree," said a police officer has a right to question any person from whom he thinks he may get information, but he should be careful and in no way browbeat.

NORMAN JOHNSON WILL GRADUATE AT DAVIDSON
Atlanta Boy Has Won Many High Honors During College Course

Norman Johnson, twenty-three years old, son of James M. Johnson, 227 North Boulevard, is to be graduated at Davidson college within a few days with high honors.

Johnson is a graduate of the Boy High school of Atlanta and studying for the Presbyterian ministry. He is president of his class at Davidson and has taken the sophomore, junior and senior medals for oratory at Davidson. He is also president of the ministerial band, a group of young men of the college who are devotees to the ministry.

During the summer Mr. Johnson will be mission work in Virginia, later entering Union Theological seminary at Richmond, Va.

Besides his collegiate honors, Mr. Johnson is also the possessor of athletic honors and records. He won his "17" establishing the jump record at the school and a crack tennis player.

THEATERS

Tonight is the last performance at the Forrest of the stage's most startling production, "War Wives," which has set the nation in a fever and has taken Atlanta in its grip. Press and public pronounce it the rarest dramatic treat the vaudeville stage has ever produced. It headlines an illustrious program of vaudeville, of which the celebrated comedienne, Marion Yagle is the extra-added attraction, supported by a stunning company of six dancing beauties.

James Thompson and company in "The Burglar's Union"; Steffy Berko, a musical treat; The Three Du-Fo-Boys dancing oddities and new songs; Stanley and LaBrack, offering comical sketches; Charles Chaplin, and the Robert DeMonte company of gymnastic artists, compose the remainder of the bill.

Movie lovers will be afforded the pleasure this afternoon and tonight at the Grand theater of witnessing the screen drama of the renowned film Claire, who appears in the Jesse Lasky production, "The Wild Goose Chase." One of the most alluring film productions ever completed. "Claire" is the product of such stage successes as "The Quaker Girl," "The Girl from Iowa," "The Famous Attraction," and "The Wild Goose Chase" is a production especially for her varied talents.

CONLEY'S DEPOSITION MAY BE TAKEN IN COUNTY JAIL
Attorney in Suit for Mary Phagan's Death Will Also Get Frank's Statement

James L. Key, attorney for Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, who is suing the National Fencil factory for damages for the death of her daughter, is making arrangements to take depositions from Jim Conley and Leo M. Westmoreland. These depositions are to be used as evidence when the case comes up for trial two months from now.

Mr. Key said it "suited his purpose" to examine Conley at the county jail instead of at the Bellwood convict camp, and to this end he has written a letter to Warden Girardeau asking the warden to bring Conley to the jail Wednesday. This is the last day of Conley's term, and Mr. Key wants to get the deposition before the negro is freed.

Warden Girardeau Saturday morning said he had not received any letter in regard to this, and said he thought he would have to have court order to bring Conley to the jail for the deposition. Mr. Key said he thought permission from the county commissioners could be obtained, if necessary, to allow Conley to come to the jail to make his deposition there, and be released from the county jail.

GREAT HELP TO A SICK WOMAN
This Lady Says, "I Cannot Find Words to Express How Thankful I Am to Cardui"

Jonesville, Va.—"I certainly appreciate what Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done for me. I was suffering from weakness, and I felt that it was a greater help than anything I could have taken.

I had often read of Cardui, but had little faith in it. My husband urged me to try it, and now I cannot find words to express how thankful I am. Cardui is wonderful medicine, and I feel that it was a greater help than anything I could have taken.

I had scarcely no pain or suffering at all, and I feel I owe it all to Cardui. I know that no woman would make a mistake in using Cardui at that most critical time. It will save them so much suffering.

It is my sincere desire that this statement may be seen and read by all sufferers who suffer as I did. I am telling all my friends and acquaintances of the great cure I have received.

If you suffer from any of the ailments so common to women, give Cardui a trial. Thousands of women have voluntarily written, to tell of the great benefit that Cardui has been to them. Why shouldn't it help you, too? Try Cardui.—(Advt.)

TO CONCESSIONAIRES
At 12 o'clock noon, June 1, the Board of Park Commissioners will receive bids on Lakewood Park for a period of five (5) years under the following conditions:

FINANCE SHEET AGREED ON; CARRIES $5,134,703

Lines Being Drawn for Old Factional Fight When Budget Reaches Council

A June budget was adopted by the finance committee Friday, but the lines being drawn for the same old factional fight when the measure reaches council.

A. W. Farlinger, chairman of the committee, and Alderman C. C. McDonald refused to sign the sheet on the ground that the anticipated $172,000 more revenue than was placed in the sheet by the chairman and the committee's followers of the mayor, and any council fight they make is expected to have the added strength of the mayor's veto if the sheet is passed over their protest.

However, the mayor, in a fight on the budget, will not have the support of Councilman E. H. Inman, who has generally sided with him. With Alderman C. H. Kelley, Mr. Inman led the committee in anticipating more revenue until the sheet was balanced and the $82,600 increase for the school department and small appropriation for much street and sewer work were left untouched. Councilman Inman and five other members of the committee agreed to stand together in fighting for the sheet. They are Alderman Kelley, Councilman Seawright, Councilman Bagdale. Two members of the committee, Johnson, of the sixth, and Maddox were not at the meeting.

The total amount of the appropriations for all purposes made in the budget is $5,134,703, an increase of about $200,000 over the total appropriations of the January budget.

Council meets a week from next Monday and on that date the budget will be submitted. In the meantime copies of the sheet have been ordered mailed to each member of council in order that it may be studied by them, and an effort will be made to have it passed at the meeting at which the sheet is submitted.

The Troublers Of ATLANTA

"When Ahab saw Elijah, Ahab said--
"Art thou he that troubleth Israel?"
"He answered--
"I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalam."'
---I Kings, XVIII, 17-18

God gave Ahab position and power. Ahab misused both. He betrayed his trust. Elijah only told the truth. The public official, Ahab's sin, and not the prophet of God, was to blame for Israel's shame.

The facts are not different today. Back of the negro shot in the bar, the boy killed before the door of the Owls' club, the man dead at the library door, and the one slain last Sunday morning--

Back of these, contributing to them, Atlanta's shame, are locker clubs and saloons, behind which stand the complacent public officials who granted them permits to break the law.

The citizen who begs the Mayor and Council to Refuse to license law-breakers to break the law is not responsible for the trouble, but those public officials who, entrusted with power, in spite of the law of Georgia, license them to sell intoxicants in defiance of law.

These trouble the city. Then much has been said of men misrepresenting Atlanta and her spirit of hospitality.

But does one represent Atlanta truly when he sends to the law-makers of Georgia an invitation to make use of the law-breaking facilities of a corporation in the capital of the state?

Is it Southern hospitality, or an insult to our guest and a slur upon Atlanta to invite one to make use here of those things which the law of Georgia defines as blind tigers?

Grant that Tolstoi, Eliot of Harvard, the Emperor of Germany, the Czar of Russia, English leaders, William Jennings Bryan and other great thinkers are hopelessly provincial in advocating total abstinence--

If your state has forbidden the sale of liquor, does it--

DO THE CAPITAL OF GEORGIA GOOD to have public officials from the highest to the lowest, and leading citizens showing contempt for the law of your state within the walls of clubs where guests from other countries or states may hear men sneer--

"The law--it matters not--here you can get what you want to drink?"

Do those who beg them to desist-- Or, do they, who thus encourage law-breaking, cause trouble to our city and state?

Centuries ago, Elijah asked--

"How Long Go Ye Limping Between the Two Sides?"

"If the Lord be God, follow Him; but if Baal, then follow him."

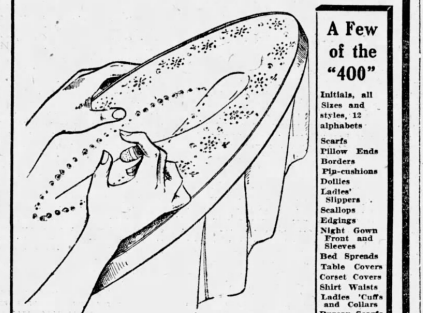

You only lame yourself trying to straddle a fence, striving to walk with one foot in the camp of God, the other with the hosts of hell, an impassable barrier between.

You cannot do it. And if you follow Baal--if you choose lawlessness, sin, when worry and agony come, as they will, to you and yours, blame not the Church of the living God for proclaiming Truth, but know that, when you turned your back upon right and left the law of God, you began trouble for you and your house.

Choose God. Tomorrow, come to His Church.
