GERMAN LOSSES HEAVY IN GALICIA. CZAR'S CLAIM Austro-German Forces Lose Over 700,000 Men in Recent Campaign, According to Estimate of Russian General

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The Tonic army in Galicia has made further important gains, according to today's German official statement. The Russian forces north of Lemberg have been driven at some points over the Gnila Lipa river, upon which they retired from the Dniester.

Leading members of the nine locker clubs denied permits by the city council Monday, are now turning to Mayor Woodruff, who has shown that his closing order of last Saturday was violated, in lending considerable encouragement to the members of the clubs who were refused licenses.

The light in council on most of the clubs denied permits was led by Alderman Albert Thompson, who contended the financial statements showed that they were being operated primarily for the sale of intoxicants, and not as social organizations. He was especially insistent on the denunciation of several clubs, whose statements showed an expenditure for salaries greater than revenue derived from the sale of beer.

The following applications were denied: Central club, Atlanta club, Beatty club, Phoenix club, City club, Metropolitan, Ovals and Terrace. Those granted were the University, Club, Central, University, Ovals, Metropolitan, Ovals and Terrace.

MISSOURI LOSES SUIT AGAINST C. & A. ROAD

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 29.—The Missouri road court today sustained the demurrer of the Chicago and Alton railroad against the suit to recover $100,000 in alleged excess freight collected while the 2-cent rate and maximum freight laws are in litigation.

The decision upholds the circuit court of Saline county, and is construed by lawyers as indicating the policy of the supreme court in the suits brought by Attorney General Barker against all the trunk lines of the state to recover an aggregate of $25,000,000. The attorney general claims the state has a right to bring suit for the excess fares collected in the years the Missouri road laws were pending in the federal courts, which subsequently upheld them.

SLEUTHS OF JUNGLE SAVANNAH KEEP EYE ON MEXICANS

Arrest of Huerta and Others Followed by Vigilant Guard of Neutrality

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, June 28.—Agents of the United States government were today busily engaged all over the country watching carefully the movements of prominent Mexicans who have been active in Mexican politics and also those suspected of such activity to see that there are no violations of American neutrality.

The arrest of Generals Victoriano Huerta and Pascual Orozco at El Paso and the strict surveillance over General Felix Diaz, Montenegro, Blannet and Felipe Angeles, now living in the United States, and others, is a part of the general policy of the American government to try to prevent the setting foot of any new military movement in Mexico. Officials here feel that the revolutionary situation in Mexico ought not further to be complicated by the introduction of new elements.

In line with its policy to prevent, if possible, further revolutionary movements in the southern republic, or at least the setting on foot of any expeditions on American soil, the government purposes to prosecute vigorously violations of neutrality regulations and the prominence of the individuals or their affiliations.

Especially that others may be identified with the so-called Huerta conspiracy intensified interest here today in the investigation agents of the department of justice into the situation.

It is even intimated that citizens of one of the European belligerents are involved. It was said also that the department of justice was in possession of some evidence which seemed to connect General Angeles, Villa's right-hand man with the plot at Angeles. It was said, was to call at the state department today to deny that he was in any way involved.

General Angeles arrived here today and denied in person to the state department that he was connected in any way with the Huerta coup.

His case confers with Enrique C. Lorente, head of the Villa agency.

"General Angeles will make a statement," said Mr. Lorente after their conference, "in which he will deny absolutely that he is implicated in any conspiracy with Victoriano Huerta to launch a new revolt in Mexico, and an impossible story which General Angeles will also explain his relations with General Villa and make a statement about his mission to Washington, which is his mission."

DENNIS IS SUCCESSOR OF SMITH IN COUNCIL

Atlanta Attorney Is Elected by Council to Fill Ninth Ward Vacancy

John T. Dennis, a well-known young Atlanta attorney and member of the firm of Hewitt, Dennis & Whitman, Monday afternoon was elected to succeed Councilman Charles Whiteford Smith, of the Ninth ward, who has resigned to accept the judgeship of the Stone Mountain circuit, to which he was appointed by Governor Hightower.

Vacancies in council are filled by council pending the next constitutional election, which is held every fall. Councilman Smith's term runs until January 1, 1916. Mr. Dennis will serve in his place until that date and will be eligible to run for the full term in the election next fall.

It is understood Mr. Dennis goes in council as a supporter of Captain Cody. In the latter's race for chief of the fire department, which election is to be held by council the first Monday in July.

In addition to Mr. Dennis' election, council Monday afternoon elected the following board members:

Charles A. Bowen to park board from Fourth ward to succeed L. C. Green, resigned; Sam P. Crumhain, re-elected to cemetery commission.

THIRD NATIONAL PAYS 8 PER CENT DIVIDEND

Increase From 6 Per Cent Declared by Bank Directors at Meeting Tuesday

The stockholders of the Third National bank are rejoicing over an 8 per cent dividend, declared at a meeting of the directors today in place of the 6 per cent the institution has heretofore paid on its $1,000,000 capital stock.

The action of the directors in increasing the dividend means annual payment to the stockholders of $80,000 where they have heretofore received $60,000 a year. The dividends, as in the case of practically all national banks, the paid semi-annually, so $40,000 will be paid July 1 and a similar amount the coming January.

The action of the Third National in increasing its dividend at this time is particularly significant of current financial conditions. The directors of the institution were especially gratified over the splendid showing made, and took occasion warmly to compliment President Frank Hawkins and his able corps of officers upon the excellent manner in which they have handled its affairs.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Savannah, Ga.—Your Favorite Prescription has proven a boon to me for woman's troubles. I would swell up every time I was sick, even down to my feet. My general health was very poor. I was tired, exhausted, without any ambition and often had to give up my work entirely.

Was depressed in spirits and nervous, suffering from loss of sleep. The medicine fully regulated me and I had no return to my ill health. I am the mother of nine children and Doctor Pierce's medicine helped me through my delicate state.—Mrs. S. KIRKLEY, 751 E. Anderson St., Savannah, Ga.

Health always brings with it beauty. A healthy state of the system comes with Doctor Pierce's Prescriptions. It's a medicine prepared for woman's ailments—it cures those demoralizing conditions which make a woman's life miserable.

It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription and its ingredients are printed on the wrapper.

Women are earnestly advised to take it for irregular or painful periods, backache, headache, displacement, catarrhal condition, hot flashes, salivary complexion and nervousness.

A GREAT OFFER. If you will cut this out and send 3 cents to Dr. Pierce, Institute of Medicine, Buffalo, N. Y., you will receive a 1,000-page book, bound in handsome cloth, fully illustrated, all charges prepaid.

UGH! CALOMEL MAKES YOU DEATHLY SICK

Stop using dangerous drug before it salivates you! It's horrible! You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need this dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

News And Comment in General Assembly

LABOR TO GET PASSED. HOUSE WOULD END THE YEAR. Four bills introduced by the Georgia Federation of Labor will be introduced in the legislature during the present session and representatives of the organization will stay at the capitol to press the bills to passage.

The bills are as follows: First, the anti-docking bill, second, the monthly pay day bill; third, the factory inspection bill; fourth, the public printer bill.

The first prohibits docking of employees for infractions of rules, the Federation claiming that suits for employees in certain industries are impossible to comply with, and that fines for bad work paid employees not to blame for the bad work.

The second requires that all persons employed in manual labor and clerical and mechanical work be paid at least twice a month. The Federation is very largely in favor of this bill.

The third bill is intended to make effective the child labor law enacted in 1914. It provides for two inspectors, one to be a woman, who shall work under the supervision of the commissioner of labor, inspecting all industries where child labor is prohibited.

The fourth bill creates the office of public printer, who shall be appointed by the governor and who shall be a resident of this state. He shall be bonded and aware contracts for all state printing and require fulfillment of specifications.

Louis F. Margard, of Atlanta, president of the Federation, and Ross Candler, of Augusta, chairman of the legislative committee, will represent the Federation in pressing the bills.

WAT FERRY BONES CHARTER TO PERMIT SALE OF NEAR-BEER. A bill will be introduced at the present legislative session which will remove charter restrictions on the sale of near-beer in Rome.

Under the present charter near-beer saloons are required to pay $1,000 license, secure the consent of adjoining property owners and submit to the city and are allowed to sell the liquid only in the morning. The bill would remove the percentage of alcohol must be stamped in the glass. Under these restrictions near-beer saloons have operated in Rome in several years.

Representative John W. Hale, of Floyd, who was elected anti-prohibition platform, will introduce an amendment to the city charter removing these restrictions. He is leaving the question of near-beer saloons entirely in the hands of the city commissioners.

THE FIRST OFFICIAL act of Governor Nat E. Harris, after his inauguration Saturday morning, was to sign a bill which authorized the attorney general to Clifford Walker, the new attorney general, and when Mr. Walker took the oath he took with him his mother, who is the governor's only living relative.

This tender thought by his mother by Attorney-General Walker was sent to the sentiment of Governor Harris, who took his oath of office with his hand on his mother's Bible, old and worn.

LABOR AND FARMERS PLAN TO JOIN FORCES. The legislative committee of the Georgia Federation of Labor will hold a meeting this week with a similar committee from the Georgia Farmers' union to agree on a program of joint action in presenting legislation which both want passed.

The labor forces have a program of four bills which they are pressing at the present time. The anti-docking bill is particularly interested in one bill—a constitutional amendment providing for the initiative, referendum and recall.

The latter principle of government is one that labor stands for here and in all other states, and the federation will join with the Farmers' union in presenting the bill to passage.

ADDRESS THE SPEAKER BY THE NAME OF "BILL." When the session opened on the house on Saturday for the inauguration of Governor Nat E. Harris they had difficulty getting through the door because of the crowd of spectators who had packed around.

OUT AT STATE STREET SCHOOL, they say summer vacation classes are as joyfully attended by the children as if they were going to a picnic on a Saturday fringe.

What are you sitting there for? That's all I ever do," said McClatchey. "I don't get back into the house Friday, when crowds of nighters were packed like sardines outside of the doors, waiting to witness the inauguration ceremony."

McClatchey was due to read the resolution calling for a joint session of the house and senate, and, of course, had to get into the house before he could read the resolution there. But he associated the entrance twenty minutes ahead of time at the earnest request of a newspaper man whom he met at the doorkeepers, with strict orders to "keep everybody out" would not admit.

TODAY'S EVENING STORY

Miss Abigail's Money

"A FORTUNE divided loses prestige," Miss Abigail always had said, yet her two granddaughters had never believed for an instant that the old lady would do other than divide the Westcott millions equally between them.

Belle Rhodes and Reeva Nell, granddaughters of her two younger sisters, were Miss Abigail's only living relatives. Both having been left orphans at an early age, she had reared them together, and the old Westcott mansion had always been a home to both. There it was they had spent their early childhood and their vacations during the years they had been at school, and both girls had been married in the historic old reception hall—Belle to a wealthy globman and Reeva to a young lawyer, whom she insisted had plenty of brains.

Therefore the news that she imparted to them on the occasion of her eightieth birthday anniversary came as a complete and unpleasant surprise. Miss Abigail decreed that the Westcott millions should go to only one of them; and her terms made it merely a gamble as to which should win, and which lose, everything.

"A fortune divided loses prestige," said Miss Abigail, "and therefore the Westcott fortune shall not be divided. This is as good a way as any to choose between you. Of course, you're to use the dishes every day," she went on, "and a crack in the name of a real break I shall expect you to use Westcott money to report any breakage at once—but I'll be around every once in a while myself to see how my old dinner sets are getting on," she added grimly. "I'm pretty spry yet, if I am 80 today."

"But—Aunt Abigail!" gasped Belle, finding her voice at last, "you surely don't mean that you want us to use your valuable dishes every day, exposing them to the carelessness of servants and guests—your precious old dinner sets are getting on," she added grimly. "I'm pretty spry yet, if I am 80 today."

Miss Abigail smiled dryly. "Don't let that worry you since it doesn't worry me. I'm getting old and I've sense enough to know I can't take my things with me when I die. Nobody's going to care for my old valuables the way I always have and since they'll be broken anyhow it might as well be now as later. If you're afraid your servants will break the dishes why don't you look after them yourself? It seems to me you ought to be willing, considering what hangs in the balance. And if your guests are in the habit of smashing other folks' belongings I should advise you to choose friends of a less careless sort."

Belle, whose face had grown positively haggard, subsided, casting, however, a venomous glance at Reeva, who had spoken not a word.

Miss Abigail, watching the two from behind her big, oval spectacles, could scarcely repress a chuckle. They were so different, these cousins who had been brought up like twins. Here was Belle, who had married a wealthy man, and had everything money could buy, torturing herself with the thought that she might lose the Westcott fortune, and having Reeva, because she stood an equal chance of winning it, while Reeva, who had married a poor man, and to whom the winning or losing of her aunt's fortune would mean so much more than it possibly could to Belle, appeared as calm and unruffled as though the stake were so many pins instead of millions. Yet Miss Abigail knew that that she was far from being as indifferent as she appeared. "She's a thoroughbred," mused the old lady, "a real Westcott." She found herself hoping that Belle would break the first dish.

"Heartless old tyrant!" muttered Belle as the cousins, afraid to trust the task to other hands, were packing the dinner sets to take home.

Reeva shrugged. "After all, the money is hers. Besides, you have less cause for complaint than I. You have no children."

Belle stared at her in amazement. "Do you mean you are going to let little Jack use those dishes?" she demanded.

"Certainly. I intend to play the game according to the rules she specified that we are to use no other dishes until the first one is broken and the contest is over."

"That's so," she said, and she felt much better as she thought of three-year-old Jack sitting his porridge from Miss Abigail's delicate ware. She selfishly reflected that the whole of her Westcott fortune would bring her a standing that hair of it could never have brought. She began to see what Miss Abigail had meant when she said that a fortune divided loses prestige.

The weeks that followed were miserable ones for both cousins. Belle, who had never done any housework, now found herself chained to the kitchen, and she dismissed her butler, because she was afraid to trust him with the serving, and was obliged to eat short her social activities because she dared not entertain guests. She circulated the report among her friends that she was in retirement, owing to an attack of nervous prostration. Nor was this report far from true, for at the end of the week the very thought of the dinner sets was enough to throw her into a fit of hysterics.

Nor was life any easier for Reeva. In spite of her feeling that the odds were with her childless cousin, she was determined not to desert defeat without having made every effort. She found herself staring, her heart in her mouth, whenever her husband raised a cup to his lips, and when little Jack ate she sat beside him, and would catch any dish he might let fall. Needless to say, appetite was not at its best, and Reeva's own hand trembled whenever she touched the precious dishes. Reeva's own hand trembled whenever she touched the precious dishes. Reeva's own hand trembled whenever she touched the precious dishes.

Reeva turned on him almost angrily. "Do you mean that you would give up the Westcott fortune without an effort?" she demanded. "Why, think what it would mean to us to win! We need money, Bert. And Belle and her husband have everything, the grasping pigs! I'm going the night for that money to the last ditch!"

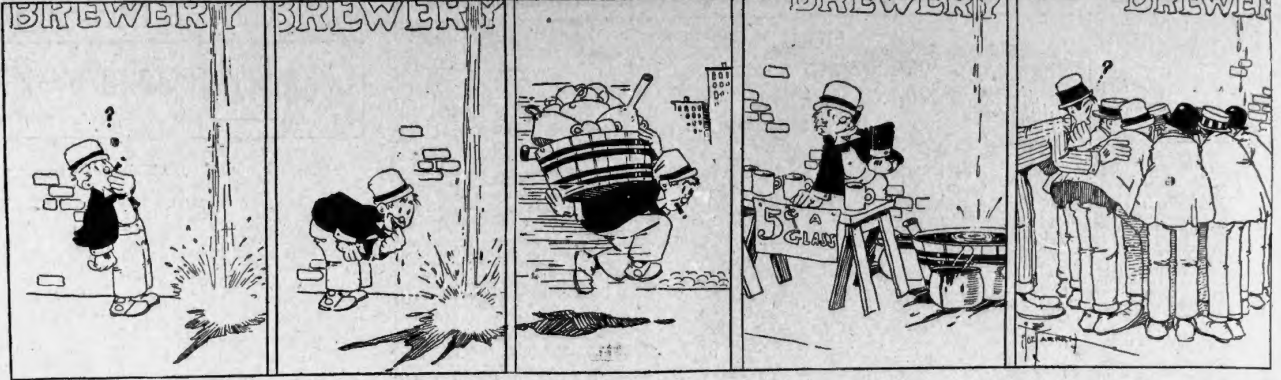

One day something happened to change her mind. Little Jack pushed a plate off the table at breakfast, but his mother, caught it before it struck the floor. Almost hysterical at the thought he had given her, she jerked him from his chair and spanked him soundly, and when she let him go the child, his eyes big with fright, ran away sobbing and hid.

And then Reeva saw things in their true light. She recalled other times lately when her baby had looked at her with fright in his big eyes, and had edged away as she drew near; and remembered that her husband had grown very quiet and tired looking in the past weeks. "I'm killing the old lady," she said to herself. "I'm ruining my health and making us all miserable." She sat very still, thinking. Then, deliberately she took up a cup and threw it to the floor, where it crashed into a hundred atoms. "Good-by, Westcott fortune!" she said, "I'm free, the first time in weeks she felt free and happy."

A moment later Miss Abigail appeared in the doorway. "I was just going to see you," Reeva informed her gaily. "I broke one of your cups just now on purpose." And she explained who Miss Abigail took off her spectacles to wipe the mist in her eyes. "I'm proud of you," she said. "You're a star!"

Reeva turned on him almost angrily. "Do you mean that you would give up the Westcott fortune without an effort?" she demanded. "Why, think what it would mean to us to win! We need money, Bert. And Belle and her husband have everything, the grasping pigs! I'm going the night for that money to the last ditch!"
